Damage to the extent of at least $400,000 was done by a storm in the Niagara fruit belt on Sunday.

Nathaniel Howby, who kept a jewelry store in Alvinston several years ago, died in Detroit last week.

The Baroness Macdonald, widow of the late Sir John A. Macdonald, died at her home in England last week.

Isaac Reville, a farmer, aged 66, residing on lot 22, con. 10, Euphemia, committed suicide by hanging himself in his barn.

The Canadian customs returns for the past five months show an advance of twenty-three millions over the same period in 1919.

The township has a larger crop of potatoes than this season, even in any year in the recollection of the oldest inhabitant.

Arrangements are about completed for the taking of the Dominion census in June of next year. Twelve thousand enumerators will be engaged in the work.

In the referendum campaign a year ago the prohibitionists urged the people to vote "No," four times "No." For the coming campaign they will have to change the appeal, if a newspaper despatch from Ottawa gives the correct information. This states that the question to be submitted will be: "Shall the importation of intoxicating liquors into the province be forbidden?" Prohibitionists will ask the people to vote "Yes" to this question, and the "Noes" will be in the red column.

A London paper says: "To the Red Cross societies of Newbury and Mosa falls the honor of equipping the first memorial cots in the London Day Nursery, the donation of $63, recently received by the board of management, being sufficient to set up two new cots in the crèche. These will bear, on small brass tablets, the names of Sergeant Fletcher and Pte. Geo. Gray, townsmen, who gave their lives in the cause of the empire and whose deeds are thus commemorated in the comforting of little children."

MEMORIAL SERVICE

An interesting and impressive service was held in Tait's Corners Presbyterian church on Sunday, Sept. 5th, in memory of the late Miss Sadie Lethbridge, a missionary from the congregation to the people of Honan, China. Service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. John McKillop, assisted by Rev. Dr. Stalker, Rev. Dr. Fraser Smith of Henken, Rev. W. L. Nichol of Parkhill and Rev. Dr. McElroy. Dr. Fraser Smith, who addressed Miss Lethbridge at the time of her designation, paid a touching tribute to her character and worth as a missionary. The sermon of the afternoon was delivered by Rev. Mr. Nichol, her pastor at that time, who bore strong testimony to her good work and self-sacrifice, taking as his text the words contained in Matthew 26-10: "Why trouble ye the woman, for she hath wrought a good work upon me." He also read a letter of condolence and regret at not being able to be present from Rev. Dr. R. P. McKay, Foreign Mission Secretary.

Suitable music was rendered by the choir, assisted by Mrs. W. G. McCallum, who also sang as a solo "Twill Not Be Long." The church was tastefully decorated with white tinted gladioli contributed by local friends and the missionary society of First Presbyterian church, London, where the late Miss Lethbridge's brother is organist. The large congregation present was evidence of the love and esteem in which Miss Lethbridge was held by friends from both far and near.

A North Caldwell, N. J. man says that after getting arrested because his cow had strayed into neighbors' cornfields, he fitted the animal with auto goggles, on the glasses of which he painted rail fences so that whenever she raises her head she sees a fence in front of her and continues grazing.

Self-Control
Here's to the man who holds his peace
When provocation's strong;
Who shuts his mouth and keeps it shut
When a word would set him wrong;
Who grips his temper firm and fast,
Nor loses self-control—
Though he's tempted sore to vent his wrath
And silence scars his soul!
Here's to the man who holds his tongue
When you'd like to make him swear;
Who listens to all your stinging words
With a cool, provoking air;
Who keeps his grip on his rising wrath
When his temper's really bad;
Whose self-control you can't disturb!
Say! Doesn't he make you mad?

Fallacies in Feeding Beef Cattle.

Cattle feeding is a business that must be viewed from many different angles if one makes a success of it. What is termed success in cattle feeding is the same as in any other business pursuit, viz., a financial gain or making money out of the business. Different types of feeders must of necessity be handled differently to get the best results. There are mature feeders of the better beef type. The calves or baby beef of the same type. The low grade or scrub adult or baby beef type. Each of these different types and grades must be handled differently.

Most people ignore the scrub in the feed lot. But as long as they are raised they must be fed out or go to the shambles unfitted. Nearly all dairy bred cattle are scrubs in the feed lot no matter how well bred they are in the dairy make fact babies. In this article I wish to speak of the best grade of feeders of the more mature kind. Say, two-year-olds or better, and with these as well as all other sizes or grades, have them of uniform size, shape and color as possible, for several reasons. First, they will feed better because there are no small ones or underlings for the larger ones to fight and abuse, each being better able to take their own part. Then, if of the same size and color, they look better to everyone, including the commission man and the buyer, and everyone interested will work harder to get the best price, and if the cattle are worthy, to make them top the market. He knows it is to their interest to do so. And a buyer will pay a little more for a nice even bunch.

Now after you have your feeders, and if not of a uniform size I would advise dividing the feed lot and sorting them up as best you can as to size, if they are to be dry-lot fed. But if they are to be summer-fed in pasture then let them all run together. I like summer feeding on pasture best, as it saves a lot of work. There is no manure to haul out and it is distributed over the pasture better than it can be done by hand or a spreader, and much easier and cheaper. The most essential things about summer feeding are plenty of good leguminous pasture, water, grain, salt, shade and a rack full of good hay.

Now, in starting to feed one should be very careful. Don't try to get them on full feed too quickly. Better be a full month or longer than to get some of them off feed and perhaps scouring. For if so, they will lose more in one day than can be put on in the next week. Cattle rightly started while on good pasture, will gain faster on the same amount of feed than dry-lot-fed cattle. And here again you save the labor and expense of putting up the hay they eat. I like the self-feeders after the cattle are on full feed. It is

The Welfare of the Home

Play Lessons for Little Children.

By MARION FLORENCE LANSING, M.A.

When the older children of the home and neighborhood go back to school in the autumn, the mother is often taxed to find occupations which will fill in the gap for the active two-, three-, or four-year-old who misses their companionship. This is just the time to delight his heart and satisfy his unconscious desires and needs by starting him on a set of simple play lessons. For these the mother needs no elaborate materials or school-room training. She can find in her own home and experience both the tools and the skill for their use.

Every mother lives over with her children the experience of each human being in discovering and adapting himself to the world about him. Let her pause and take thought of a few of the common facts with which her child must become familiar. One is an appreciation of the relative sizes of things. Think how you would feel if you had never consciously entertained the idea of size and it suddenly dawned upon you one day that two objects which had seemed alike yet vaguely unlike, differed in that one was slightly larger than the other. You would have a new testing rod with which to try out the world. Give a child that idea with a nest of boxes, with a set of books graded by sizes, with blocks, with spoons, with tin pans. Any set of objects in series will be the materials for a group of play lessons for which the words "large" and "larger," "small" and "smaller" are the keys.

Along with size comes length and height. Following size comes shape, taught most easily by sorting out all the blocks of a kind or all the beads of a kind from the usual boxes of blocks and wooden beads which are to be found among the playthings of most children. They all love to pick out shapes by touch, finding in a group of objects hidden under an apron in the mother's lap the twin of an object they hold in their hands, then, when they have the idea, doing the same from piles of their own making. They are interested in likenesses and differences. This interest is, indeed, at the bottom of most play suggestions for little children. Through it we start the child on the training of his sensibilities. In discovering differences and noting them and in performing operations which make note of them through touch or sight, the child is developing these powers which are at the moment awaiting development.

Other plays with duplicate spoons or blocks introduce the idea of matching things, selecting one and finding its twin. Then we come to sorting and here are opportunities for a variety of plays. Mix from the kitchen supply closet brown, white, and speckled beans; provide three receptacles into which to sort them. Make a play set from your button box. Children's delicate finger-tips are quickly susceptible to differences in texture. Go to your piece bag and cut squares (patchwork size) of cotton, flannel, velvet, corduroy, burlap, chambray, leather and silk, to be sorted into pieces by each kind, first by touch and sight, then by touch alone. Color plays come in a natural sequence, employing at first only the primary colors, red, orange, yellow, green, blue and violet.

The whole secret of home education for little children is for the mother to meet awakening instincts and powers with play supplies and play suggestions. "The A B C of things," says Froebel, "must precede the A B C of words." Nothing the little child is learning is beyond his mother's experience. To meet his needs she has only to get his viewpoint and travel with him the road of investigation and appreciation of the interesting world about him.

Poultry.

Plymouth Rock or Rhode Island Red pullet does not complete her first year of egg production until about twenty months old. A hen already a year old can complete another year of egg production in one year. The first six months are approximately the period of development and represent only expense. While the pullet may lay more eggs in her first laying year the hen does not have to be hatched and grown an expensive feed before she is ready to lay. Farm poultry keepers need more hens that are good for two and three years of profitable laying. This does not mean the kind of hens that linger around for three or four years without paying their board.

Concrete floors will be more warm and dry if a couple of inches of clean sand are placed between the floor and the straw litter. Garden loam is not a substitute for sand. The loam is soon changed to dry dust and the scratching of the hens will keep the air in the house full of dust. This is unhealthy for the birds and the poultryman who must care for them.

Financial Notes

Official confirmation of important oil discoveries on the Mackenzie is contained in a special despatch received from Vancouver. According to this, President C. O. Stillman of the Imperial Oil Company, states that oil of an excellent quality has been tapped at Fort Norman, and that the content of this oil is heavy in gasoline. President Stillman says in part:

"What we have uncovered at Fort Norman is oil of a grade that cannot be beaten anywhere in America. So far we have not had time to make an analysis in our own laboratory, so that I cannot tell accurately what the oil will run. But samples tested in Edmonton by other parties showed very high gravity, somewhere in the neighborhood of 60. This is the character of all the world is looking for, as the gasoline content is very high; and you know that at the present time the world is tremendously short of gasoline."

Victoria—Organization of the Kootenay Pulp and Paper Company, Limited, has been completed and a provincial charter issued. The new company is capitalized at half a million dollars divided into 500,000 shares, and will have offices in Nelson. The directors and officers consist of the following: President, Dr. L. E. Borden; Vice-president, Carl G. Sampson; H. E. Bill, Secretary. The other directors are: L. A. Austin, Alex. Currie and E. G. Matthew. Others expected to take an active part in the life of the company are G. W. Brown and W. J. Siebert, pulpwood experts.

It is the object of the company to carry on the business of pulp, paper, timber and lumber manufacturing, the proposed site of the plant being at Grohman Creek. Montreal interests have purchased the Dryden Pulp and Paper Company of Dryden, Ont., a large producer of Kraft pulp and paper, from its English interests. The English interests will retain their holdings of the $1,500,000 6 per cent. bonds now outstanding. A new company will be formed.

Cutting Down Home Waste.

People of average means can hardly afford in these days to keep servants. Households which formerly kept two or three now get along with one maid. Many maids with half a servant, sharing her with a neighbor. Not a few housewives have been driven to the necessity of doing their own cooking and sending the washing to a laundry.

This has meant a great deal of discomfort, but there has been an incidental gain, says a Philadelphia newspaper. Waste is enormously reduced. Servants make nearly all the waste of a household. Many housewives, deprived of "lady help," have been astonished to observe a shrinkage of their food bills, notwithstanding the present doubled and trebled prices.

When a domestic establishment employs half a dozen servants the waste is enormous. Nearly always in a house run on that scale the butler and cook "stand in" with the butcher and grocer, and their rake-off increases with the amount of food they throw away. Recent investigations by the New York health department proved that the average family living in a private house, with one or more servants, throws away a pound and a quarter of perfectly good food every day.

It was found that the average apartment house family throws away only one-fifth as much—largely, doubtless, because such families reduce domestic service to a minimum.

In the tenement districts of New York one garbage can usually suffices to hold the food refuse of twenty families. But in the "private house district" it was found that 163 families had 175 garbage pails, or more than a pail apiece.

Examination of the 175 pails revealed eighteen pounds of bread and rolls, fifty pounds of meat, thirty-five pounds of potatoes, sixteen pounds of cereals and large quantities of perfectly edible fresh vegetables. Always the amount of food waste varies directly with the number of servants employed. As a matter of fact, the full garbage pail sends hitherto has been regarded in this country as a manifestation of prosperity. Not until recently have people begun to think that possibly this was a foolish idea.

A Grave in Flanders.

Darkest and stars and brooding of the sea,
You bring no peace to me;
No dreams nor any visions strange and new,
Dreams, visions were of you,
Here's lover, vanished from my sight,
Leaving to me the night.
Here in the darkness, by the brooding sea,
I thought my secret thoughts most secretly;
Dream of the baby of my dreams, like him,
O wondrous life when growing tall and slim;
Yet in his eyes' gray deeps a hint of mine,
And his mouth matching my mouth's curving line.
But in a grave in Flanders o'er the sea
My lover lies, that dream, and all of me.

You will like Lantic fine!

For BAKING. For pound, tea and sponge cakes, coffee cakes, angel cake, layer cakes, fruit cakes, cocoanut cakes, pork cakes, nut cakes, short cakes, macarons and biscuits, crullers, rolls, buns—ALL cakes—Lantic creams quicker with the butter—because it's FINE.

For BEVERAGES. For tea, coffee, cocoa, lemonade, pop, beer, orangeade, lemon pop and fruit punch—in fact for all home-made beverages—use LANTIC. There will then be no wasted spoonful left at the bottom of the cup or glass—because it's FINE.

FINE in granulation—finer than all other sweeteners in actual use—finest in results obtained. "Fine" has many meanings to the Lantic user! In snowy glistening crystals of pure cane sugar—all sugar and nothing else—Lantic brings you concentrated sweetening. And because each crystal is fine and even, Lantic dissolves at once—it instantly delivers its great sweetening power without hesitation. Of course it goes farther. Of course it costs less. Of course you will like it fine.

In PRESERVING late fruits such as pears, plums and peaches, it eliminates the danger of over-cooking, which robs fruit of its natural color and shape, and some of its flavor.

In BAKING, Lantic creams quickly with the butter—which makes the cake light and dainty. Creaming need not be tedious.

In CANDY-MAKING fine granulation gives candy a soft velvety quality. Most of the highest grade chocolates and finer candies are made with Lantic. The exquisite "velours" of the best chocolate creams comes from Lantic fineness.

In TEA or COFFEE, in fact in all beverages (hot or cold), every Lantic crystal dissolves at once, yielding readily the full sweetening of the purest cane.

THE RETURN OF THE SAILING SHIP

REAPPEARS AS RESULT OF GREAT WAR.

High Price of Coal and Initial Cost of Steamer Are Responsible for Change.

The sailing ship is reappearing in these post-war days, says the London Daily Telegraph. Cheap coal in plentiful supply, widely distributed over the world's seas in our invaluable sailing stations, was driving the sailing ship off the seas in the years which preceded the outbreak of the war.

Any one who stood on the cliffs at Dover overlooking "the Piccadilly of the Sea" was surprised as well as delighted at the rare moments when a vessel came into view with a suit of white sails instead of one or two funnels belching out black or brown smoke. The sailing ship, which for so many generations had added a picturesque element to the lonely wastes of waters, was thought to be dying, and was indeed dying. The change over to steam was almost complete because wind, varying from hour to hour, could not compete with the steady application of the reliable power obtained from coal.

Utilitarianism had all but finally triumphed by sea, in spite of all the protests of old sailors, who urged that we were losing a fine and irreplaceable training school in seamanship, courage and resource, and the appeals of men with artistic feelings who hated the sight of the "floating boilers."

War changed conditions. Rebellion against the tendency of the times was hopeless; it was all a question of economics, and the slow moving sailing ship, with its large crew drawing high wages, was condemned. Not much more than 5 per cent. of our shipping on the eve of the war kept alive the memories of earlier generations of seamen.

And then came the great catastrophe, from the effects of which we are still suffering. During the period covered by the submarine campaign, the sailing-ship, liable to be beached and thus to fall an easy prey to the enemy, was condemned as an anachronism. Even the slower steamers were regarded as an inconvenience, not only because they remained longer in the "danger zone," but because they could be overhauled by the swifter types of submarines, and possessing little capacity for quick "zig-zagging," had small chance of escape.

Almost everyone was convinced that the thing we should have to aim at in the future was speed, and the Admiralty responsible for the safety of shipping, urged that all new vessels of the cargo-carrying classes should have higher horse-power. Everything seemed to suggest that the sailing ship was not only dead, but damned.

The poets were too preoccupied to sing of the close of an era in ocean transport full of romance and interest, and to deplore the triumph of the smoke-mitting vessels of the new age.

The prophets and the exponents of economics failed to take any account of the coal miners and other workers, and particularly the former, who had ideas of their own as to the hours they should work and the wage which they should be paid. Peace—or what was described as peace—dawned; the cost of coal soared higher and higher, and production decreased.

Less Coal, but Higher Prices. Though only 12,000,000 tons of coal were used by shipping last year, as compared with 21,000,000 in 1913, the charges rose from anything between half a guinea and 6s. to as much as £5 a ton, and even more than that proposterous sum was paid in the Port of London. That rise was partly artificial, being due to a vagary of the Coal Controller, who decided that shipping should be penalized to the apparent advantage of the domestic and industrial consumer. He forgot that in the end the consumer has to pay.

But that is a side issue. The substantial fact was that it became apparent that bunkers could never be cheap so long as the high wages in the coal-mining districts continued, and therefore shipping people, not only in this country, but abroad, began to think in terms of sails once more.

Scandinavian ship owners had always remained more faithful to the sailing ship than the ship owners of other countries, and soon their vessels began to visit our ports, having been equipped with motor engines. That development opened up fresh possibilities of competition with the steamer, for under those conditions a sailor, on losing the wind, could continue her passage by turning round her screw, thus combining the economy of sails with the speed of mechanical power.

Sailing Ships Cost Less.

Sailing ships, which are for the most part constructed of wood, have always been far less costly to build than steel ships with engines, and the disproportion is greater to-day than ever it was, owing to the height to which wages in the engineering and steel shipbuilding industries have leaped during the last seven years, and thus it has happened that these two classes of workers, the coal miners and the engineers, have given a new tenure of life to the sailing ship, which will resist the buffeting of the sea for fifty or more years—twice as long as an ordinary steamer will last.

Hawkins was a greedy, self-seeking fellow, who expected to benefit by his rich uncle's death. The latter had not failed to observe the nephew's character, however, and when in his death-bed he sent for Hawkins. "I haven't forgotten you, George," he said; "got you down in my will." At the funeral Hawkins invested in an expensive wreath and attended to hear the will read.

Wasteful Making of Railway Ties

In our timbered districts, the waste in making hewn or "axed" ties is causing much interest. This is a very wasteful practice, and is one to which government agents have been repeatedly calling attention.

The awakened interest in the subject is due, no doubt, to the growing market for jackpine lumber and the consequent operations of the small mills, which are sawing ties along some of the northern railway lines and also shipping lumber to the cities.

The appearance of a woods where logs have been taken out for this purpose presents a contrast to an area where the ties have been hewn in the bush. On the former areas, all trees large enough to produce ties are cut and logs are taken down to a minimum top diameter of probably six inches. When the tree is down and bucked, all the wood material goes to the mill. For ties hewn in the woods, the tie-maker is paid at a rate per tie. Naturally, he will use only the most easily converted trees, consequently, the trees which would entail much work in removing limbs are left standing.

If a tree is a little larger than is necessary to make a good tie, he discards several feet of the butt (the very best wood material). To make the tie he scores it on two faces, and the chips

None to Spare.

The skipper of a small steamer which ran up and down the Clyde managed one day at low tide to get his vessel on a bank of mud.

After he had exhausted his entire vocabulary in describing the tide, his erring steamer, and his still more rotten crew, he leaned gloomily over the side to wait with what patience he could muster for the tide to rise again.

Very soon he saw a girl approaching the river swinging a bucket in her hand. Obviously she was coming down to get some water, and the wrath of the skipper flamed up anew. Leaning farther over the side, and shaking his fist at her, he said:—"My lassie, if you tak' one drop o' water till I get afloat again I'll warm yer ear for!"

The Larger the Better.

As a rule, it is the new father who is the bore, and the visitor who tries politely to stifle his yawns while the baby is nursed. But the dame who called upon Mr. Jones after the birth of his first reversed the usual order of things.

She was full of advice. She told him what to do and what not to do. How to sing to it, how to talk to it, what toys to give it, what school to send it to, what religion it should follow, and what profession to adopt.

Mr. Jones was just about to ask her advice regarding the color of its coffin when she suddenly jumped up and said she was sorry, but she really must be going.

"Really?" murmured Mr. Jones faintly. "Yes, I really must. Good-bye! I expect your baby will be much larger when I see her again."

"Yes," said Mr. Jones. "I sincerely hope so."

FREQUENT HEADACHES

A Sure Sign That the Blood is Watery and Impure.

People with thin blood are much more subject to headaches than full-blooded persons and the form of anemia that afflicts growing girls is almost always accompanied by headaches, together with disturbance of the digestive organs.

Whenever you have constant or recurring headaches and pallor of the face, they show that the blood is thin and your efforts should be directed toward building up your blood. A fair treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do this effectively, and the rich red blood made by these pills will remove the headache.

More disturbances to the health are caused by their blood than most people have any idea of. When your blood is impoverished, the nerves suffer from lack of nourishment, and you may be troubled with insomnia, neuritis, neuralgia or sciatica. Muscles subject to strain are undernourished and you may have muscular rheumatism or lumbago. If your blood is thin and you begin to show symptoms of any of these disorders, try building up the blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and as the blood is restored to its normal condition every symptom of the trouble will disappear.

There are more people who owe their present state of good health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills than to any other medicine, and most of them do not hesitate to say so.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

To Each His Own.

(A Philosophy of the Road)

You roll along in limousine, I suffer the dust you fling. As over the footpath I blithely fare, where the glad-heart vapors ring; Riding is good, and I like not dust, but this I tell you true: For all your cushioned and careless ease, I would not change with you!

You glance through a window casually, and note that the trees are green; Questioning, I joy in the woe nest hid midst the hedgerow's sheltering screen; An instant you see the squirrel's poise, on the trunk of a grand old tree; I stop for a friendly argument, and he shares my nuts with me!

You fret at the tricksy, sun-shot shower that dims your crystal pane; I stand bliss-bound in the fragrance loosed by the fingers of the rain? You catch a glimpse, as you whirl along, of the wide sky's blue and white; I thrill to the sweep of its loveliness, its marvelous breadth and height!

To some engagement you hurry past, with small thought of the way; I loiter on, from friend to friend, at the close of a toil-filled day; You ride, over rather a bore some road, as swiftly as may be; I walk, in a wonder-world—and yet, you would not change with me!

Forty-Eight Years in "Canada's Western Empire"

Colonel John S. Dennis, C. M. G., who rode the plains of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba 48 years ago, when Indians and buffalo were plentiful, knows more about "Canada's Western Empire" than any other man. He killed and ate the buffalo, narrowly escaped being scalped by Indians on at least one occasion, suggested and built in Alberta the largest irrigation system in North America, recruited thousands of British and Canadians in the United States during the recent war and not only volunteered for but saw service with the Canadian Expeditionary Force in Siberia.

Now the four western provinces of Canada have a population of 2,600,000, the buffalo are to be found only in parks in the Canadian Rockies and the Indians are on reservations. There are nearly 20,000 miles of railway in the four provinces, or one mile for each 125 persons; and of 225,000,000 acres of good agricultural land, but 35,000,000 acres are at present occupied and cultivated. Of the balance, 190,000,000 acres, some 30,000,000 acres lie within fifteen miles of these railway lines waiting for settlers. "Think of it," says Col. Dennis, "and the world crying out for food." His view is that while Canada has won a standing among the nations by her work in the recent war so that to-day the name "Canadian" is recognized as distinguishing a citizen of a progressive and virile country, Canada's share in the great struggle has involved her in financial obligations which can only be met and discharged by increasing her population and developing her vast natural resources which, while ample security for many times her war debt, must be made productive of wealth through development.

Between 1905 and 1914 about 2,500,000 people settled in Canada, the largest proportion in the four western provinces. They left Great Britain, the United States and other countries for their new home, and Col. Dennis believes that 500,000 each year may follow them until these provinces have a total population of 10,000,000. Canada, he further believes, is destined to be "the keystone in the arch of the British Empire."

A Sagacious Mouse.

Mice have been making inroads up on the family ladder and wardrobe, and so the head of the family set a trap, the bottom of which was simply a piece of tin in which the manufacturer had left little slits, or openings, about a half inch wide, parallel with each other and extending the full length of it. When in the morning he found a single mouse rushing wildly from wall to wall of its cage, he lifted the trap from its hiding place and laid it on a thick rug in front of the door, where a fire was burning briskly. Then, although he had no intention of being cruel he entirely forgot that the creature was in danger of being roasted alive.

When he returned the mouse had actually built a barrier ten or fifteen times the size of its body between itself and the fire. With its teeth it had cut away the fuzz on the surface of the rug through the slits in the bottom of the trap, and had heaped this material together into a veritable wall of defense until it entirely filled the trap.

BITS OF HUMOR FROM HERE & THERE

India's Products.

At a school examination the examiner asked one child:

"What are the products of our Indian Empire?" The unhappy infant began nervously to reel off the list she had got by heart: "Please, sir, India produces curries and pepper and rice and citron and chillies and chutney, and—and—and—"

"Yes, yes," said the examiner, impatiently. "What comes after all that?"

Another infant's hand was raised. "Well, you tell her what comes after that."

"Please, sir, India-gestation."

They were discussing it—it with a capital "I." The only thing that counted in the whole wide world. In other words, the new baby.

"Have you settled its name yet?" asked the visitor.

"Yes," replied the fond mother. "And you should have seen the trouble we had! It's so difficult to get a really good and appropriate name, don't you think?"

"How did you settle it?"

"Well, I got a book on nomenclature and read it all through."

"Whatever that?" exclaimed the visitor.

"Oh, it's a book giving thousands and thousands of names for children to be christened. It's in two volumes, and I don't believe a single name was ever invented that is not mentioned. We've decided on John."

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1920

One of the ways to keep a town looking well and likely to evoke complimentary references from visitors is to keep the streets clean of rubbish or other impediments, cut the weeds on vacant lots and back streets and burn the refuse. A few people of tasteful habits and industrious methods cannot accomplish this, but the enforcement of law on non-compliers and encouraging those who take pride in natural or acquired beauty will do much to aid it. One unkept boulevard or general untidiness will do more harm in killing out a spirit of improvement than folks have any idea of. One law should apply to all and those who are slow to act should be gently prodded by a hint or two.

So long as people on the farms and in the small towns continue to send their money to the mail order firms to enrich the big cities, just so long will the young men and women continue to follow. The steady drain of trade from the home towns has much to do with the constant drain of population from the rural sections.

The most for your money is to be had at Eddie's Economy Store.

A COMPARISON

St. Thomas Times-Journal—A correspondent of the Times-Journal, in a letter in today's issue, points out that, while a man must serve years of apprenticeship before he is permitted to drive a locomotive, and must undergo repeated tests to show that he is fit to continue as such, anyone, without examination as to fitness, is allowed to operate an automobile. The comparison is a timely one. The rapid increase in the number of automobile accidents shows the necessity of protecting the public against the incompetent and careless automobile driver.

"Say," said the irate visitor, "you had something about me in your paper that has gotta be corrected." "If the item was wrong," the editor replied smoothly, "we shall cheerfully do as you request." "I told one of your reporters I saw a beautiful gold-finch perched on a twig just outside of my bedroom." "Well—" "And when the item came out in the paper it read 'goldfish'." "That isn't so bad." "Oh, isn't it, though? Well, ever since it was in the paper friends of mine have been handing around our house thinking I had a private supply of something to drink in my cellar."

Examples For Other Boys to Follow

In the public life of Canada and of the United States, the farm or the printing office often, if not generally, has the call. Prime Minister Meighen was born on the farm and spent his youth and early manhood plowing, hoeing, and peddling milk, and on the other side of the line, whether Republican or Democratic win, the next president will be a man who began life as a printer's devil, and worked his way up to the editorial chair. Moral for the boys: If you can't be a farmer, make your start in a printing office.—Orilla Packet.

Camouflaging

"Hiram," said the farmer's wife, "what makes you say 'By gosh' so much and go round with a straw in your mouth?" "I'm getting ready for next summer boarders that's comin' next week. If some of us don't talk an 'act that way they'll think we ain't country folks at all."

NEED OF THE AVERAGE TOWN

Probably the greatest need of the average town or village of Eastern and Midland Ontario is a better community spirit. Living in a town or village is much preferable to existing amongst the noise and bustle, with the attending inconvenience of congestion that is so prevalent in the cities. Yet within this the cities are growing larger and more influential, while the smaller places are struggling for their very existence. The spirits of the people who have often in the past been broken and their enthusiasm shattered by sectional affairs. In the past party politics had a great influence in keeping the citizens working at cross purposes.—Port Hope Times.

Why His Jaw Dropped

"There isn't much I don't know about the English language," boasted the long-haired man in the club. "I'll test you," replied a friend. "I'll dictate a paragraph to you." With an assured air the booster seized his pencil, but his jaw dropped as he heard the following: "As Hugh Hughes was hewing a yule log from a yew tree, a man dressed in clothes of a dark hue came up to Hugh and said, 'Have you seen my ewes?' 'If you will wait until I hew this yew tree, I will go with you anywhere in Europe to look,' said Hugh."

Middlesex county has always been known as the home of good crops, but it is doubtful if she has ever produced a better crop than this year. The grains that have already been harvested have seldom been beaten, while roots, corn, potatoes, and all garden stuff give promise of a record yield. We cannot understand anyone having any desire to live outside of good old Middlesex.

W. D. Evans of Rosetown, Sask., was here last week and bought the producer gas engine which formed a part of Glencoe's discarded electric lighting plant. The price paid was $475. Rosetown is discarding steam power for its electric plant and will experiment with producer gas, for which the Western coal is said to be particularly well adapted. Mr. Evans has since bought the dynamo for $1,000. With the exception of the buildings and ground, the old plant is now pretty well disposed of. A splendid opportunity is offered for the establishment of a live industry in these premises.

FARM BUTTER AT FAIRS

Hints for Farmers' Wives With Dairy Exhibits.

Flavor in Butter of First Importance—Firmness Also a Strong Point—How to Cure and Pack in Best Condition for Showing.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

"To show or not to show," that is the question many a woman thinks over as the time draws near for the holding of the annual fair.

There are some who would not miss the event, and make entries in many classes; while others are rather timid about exhibiting, especially if they are doing it for the first time.

Let us take the exhibiting of butter. Sometimes a woman goes home from the fair feeling rather hurt because some neighbor took more and higher prizes than she did. She thought that her butter was good, but the other must have been considered better by the one who was acting as judge.

There are times when a judge has to mark very closely to place the prizes.

Score cards are not used at all of our fairs, nor do all judges use the same score card, but the one proposed by the National Dairy Council reads as follows, as regards points awarded:

Flavor	45
Texture	15
Incorporation of moisture	10
Color	10
Saltiness	10
Packing	10
Total	100

The flavor of the butter is a very important point to consider. It should be clean and sweet without taint of any kind.

An objectionable flavor, no matter how slight, would prevent one receiving a full score. Some defects in flavor are more serious than others, but many of these could be avoided by taking a little more care.

The care in the stable and in the separator room is just as important as the churning or the holding of the butter afterwards.

A judge should find two lots of butter with the same total score would give the higher place to the lot with the better flavor.

The texture of the butter is another point that is taken into consideration. Butter should have good body—firm and waxy.

You have cut butter that looked good and remained firm on the plate, but you have also seen that the opposite to this—butter that had a greasy appearance, the drops of moisture large and milky, and it became soft when left in the plate for a short time.

The judge comes across just as great contrasts when going through the exhibits and he scores accordingly.

To secure good texture it is necessary to make use of suitable temperatures and to work the butter in the right way. Cool the cream immediately after separating and churn it at the present time has mild clean flavor, close body and light saltiness.

The color of the wash water should be such that it will not make the butter too hard or too soft for working. Work the butter by pressing it carefully and evenly. A sliding or cutting motion will tend to make the butter greasy. Overworking should also be avoided. Butter is worked to make it compact and to distribute the salt and moisture evenly. When butter is cut the surface should be close and the drops of moisture should be clear and very minute.

The color of the butter should be even and bright. If the butter is not worked enough the color will be uneven, although this is not noticeable at the time of working.

If the butter is too soft, the salt should be mixed through it, and the butter placed where it will come to a proper firmness before working. By doing this it will score higher for both texture and color than it would if worked in the soft state. The salt in the butter should be evenly distributed and thoroughly dissolved. It is better to have the butter salted very lightly than to have it oversalted. The popular butter at the present time has mild clean flavor, close body and light saltiness.

The finish or packing should also be considered. In fact, the judge will notice the appearance of the exhibit before he has had time to draw out a plug of butter on his trier. Let the prints be well made—solid, even, with clear-cut corners and the papers wrapped neatly.

Butter tins and boxes require a lining of parchment paper, and crocks should be in good condition, free from cracks or breaks in the glazing. The top of a large package should be smoothly finished and covered neatly with parchment paper.

Butter for exhibition should be made two days or more before the fair to give it time to become set. It should be kept in a clean cool place on the farm, and be brought to the fair in the best possible condition.

Butter made and cared for in this way will score higher than it would if made the morning of the fair, as is sometimes the case.

Do not feel discouraged if you do not secure the prizes that you hoped to win. Try again, remembering the little rhyme which says,

"Good, better, best, never let it rest, Till your good is better, and your better, best."

The Accomplice

By JANE GILL

PART III.

Caroline's voice stopped them again. "I was going to buy a farm with that money."

Jack laughed insolently. "Take care," he said, "and we'll consider this the first payment."

"Anyhow, you've got my money," said Caroline, wistfully, "and you didn't even put the tramson in for me."

David, hand on the door, looked back anxiously.

"The tramson's blown out of the front door," Caroline explained, "and I thought you'd help me put it back. I can't get it back alone."

"I'm sorry," Jack began.

Caroline didn't let him finish. "It seems fairly enough to do what you have done to me," she reminded him. "But, don't you see, the sheriff may turn up any minute. Paul protested. Caroline ignored this.

"And you're a man and I'm only a girl. I earned part of that money myself, teaching and teaching's hard work."

"Now, look here," David cried, coming a step toward her, "you've got to understand why we're borrowing your money."

She steeled her heart. "They're horse thieves," he reminded her. "I must keep remembering that."

Aloud she said, "I don't want to understand. I want that tramson put back."

"All right," said David, promptly, and walked to the hall.

Paul and Jack stood aghast. "Great Scott, Dave!" cried Jack, "are you crazy? We can't do for that."

"We can," said David. "Come here and help."

He stood on the chair and Paul lifted the heavy tramson up to him. Scarcely had he fitted it into its place when there was a sound of men's voices—men piling into the yard.

The desperate look came back into the faces of the boys and the hand of David went to his revolver.

"Quick!" Caroline whispered. "Quick! Come with me! They won't find your Quaker!"

"We're not afraid," David whispered back, revolver in hand. "Let 'em come on."

For five years Caroline had marshaled boys in her Latin class, and she did not give up now. "Come," she renounced authoritatively.

David shook his head. "I'll fight," he said. "I'm not going to be hidden away by a woman."

The voices were very near now.

"Because I ask you," Caroline begged.

And suddenly David yielded, and she was shutting the pantry door on the three of them just as there sounded a peremptory knock.

She went to the kitchen door. The sheet had turned to a heavy, clinging snow that blew into the kitchen as she opened the door. Two men came in, stamping the snow from their feet, shaking it from their clothes. It was the sheriff and Peter Helm, standing before her and blinking at the kitchen light.

She closed the door behind them with a hand that was unsteady and tried to hide her nervousness behind a smile. "Why I thought you were all over to Carrington arresting the Staley boys!" she exclaimed.

"There is some of us still here," the sheriff explained. "We split up forces and I come over here," his eye was shrewdly upon her, "because we heard reports of them being seen over this way. A man come into the store at the corners a little while ago and he said he saw some one who might have been the Staley boys comin' toward your place."

"My goodness!" cried Caroline. "Suppose that even now they are hiding in the barn or in the woods across the road?"

"We couldn't get you on the phone from the corners," said Peter Helm, "and we wondered whether your wires mightn't be cut. I wouldn't put it past 'em." He shook his head ominously.

"Mercy!" cried Caroline. "But maybe it was only the storm. The storm often puts the phone out."

The sheriff and Peter Helm both looked doubtful.

"But if that man saw them coming," went on Caroline, "wouldn't they have been here before this? Don't you suppose that this very minute they are getting further and further down the road?"

Peter Helm turned to the sheriff. "Maybe she's right," he ventured.

The sheriff was noncommittal.

"Could you get us some oil for our you more good than to have them in jail and not get a cent?"

"We wouldn't be arresting them, mister," Peter Helm explained half apologetically. "There was a chance of my getting either my money or my horses. But what chance is there with them getting away as fast as they can."

"I don't wonder they want to get away," Caroline broke in hotly. "I'd want to get away, too, from all these men whom I had thought to be my friends, and who never lifted a hand to help in time of trouble. And I hope those boys do get away, and I hope they get a fresh start among new people and better friends than you are, and I'd like to think that even now, while I am detaining you here and talking and talking to gain time, that they are getting farther and farther down the road."

The sheriff gave a little start. "By gum!" he said. "That's just what they are doin', gettin' farther and farther down the road!" He opened the door, "I know," agreed Peter Helm; "but he hesitated at the door, uncomfortable over Caroline's harangue. But Caroline closed the door behind them.

Silently three figures came out of the pantry. From his pocket David took the wallet and laid it without comment, on the table.

"Oh! but you'll need this," said Caroline. "You'll need this to get away."

"We don't take money from our friends," David told her gravely. "We didn't know we had any friends before."

"Look here!" Paul broke out. "Tell us how you knew? How did you know that that was the way we felt and use?"

"I didn't know when I first started," Caroline explained. "As I talked it just came to me."

"And how did you know the way we felt about the old place, kind of silly over it, as if it were a person?" Jack demanded.

"I don't know," said Caroline. "I just knowed you'd understand." David said gently, "especially about how we'd like to start all over again, and pay the mortgage. At first we didn't care what we did, but we do care now, only there isn't any chance."

"There is a chance," said Caroline, "if you'll only take it."

"What do you mean?" David demanded. "What chance is there?"

Caroline picked up her wallet. "I have more money than this," she said. "It's in the bank. I was going to buy a farm, only I got distracted because there only seemed to be treacherous farmers. But you aren't. I know you feel about it just as I do. Suppose I buy your farm from Peter Helm; suppose you return his horses to him—you heard what he said about letting you off if he got his money or the horses back—then suppose you work the farm for me, and we'll all be partners, in the end."

"You wouldn't trust us," David began, incredulously.

Contemptfully Caroline waved away the idea.

"How soon will we begin?" he demanded.

Woman's Interests

Making and Baking a Pie.

A housewife famed for the delicious quality of her pies, was once viewed by a bride, jealous to emulate her friend's skill and provide her husband with his favorite dessert in all its perfection. So here is the formula, and why not? It is taken from an old cook-book dated 1879:

"For each double-crust pie take one-and-one-half cups of pastry flour, sifted, and one-fourth teaspoon of salt. With a silver fork or tips of the fingers work into the flour one-half cup of lard until the two are thoroughly blended. Add a very little cold water, only sufficient to bind the mass so that it may be rolled out without adding any more flour. About four tablespoonfuls should suffice. Turn the dough out on a floured board, give it a few quick turns and divide in two nearly equal portions, reserving the smaller of the two for the top crust. Roll and fit the lower crust to the pie-pan. Avoid stretching, but allow it to come well over the edges. There should be just enough for the purpose."

Any fruit pie requires a cup of sugar, speaking approximately, and juicy fruits, such as berries or cherries, will require a well-rounded tablespoonful of flour for thickening. Apples require neither flour nor water. The flour and sugar should be measured, not guessed at. Some cooks, but not all, are good guessers, and it is better to be safe than sorry. A standard half-pint measuring cup graduated into quarters, thirds, and halves should be in every kitchen cabinet.

The flour, sugar and fruit may be all stirred together, or placed in separately. With apples put sugar on top, and lots of butter, not forgetting a sprinkle of salt. Add the latter also to fruit pies.

Roll top crust, not too thin, and place loosely over the pie. If drawn tightly it will pull away from the edge somewhere in baking, since pastry shrinks under the action of heat. Press firmly at the edges but do not pull. Moistening the edges may assist in preventing burning out of juices, but it also makes the crust hard. If carefully pressed together and not broken anywhere the juices will not trouble. Or a strip of clean white cloth may be bound around the edge. Another device is to place a small paper funnel in the top crust to allow the steam to escape, since the gashes made with a knife for this purpose often close in baking. Bake carefully in a moderate oven. It is extreme heat which causes the juices to burst through the crust. When the bottom of the tin hisses under the moistened finger the pie is done. Brushing the top crust with milk is sometimes considered an improvement. It gives it a delicate brown, flaky appearance when baked.

If you have long ago mastered the art of pie making and want to try your hand at some of the French pastries, learn to make puff paste. This requires patience, time and care, but the woman who likes to bake finds it fascinating.

Wash the hands, mixing bowl and a wooden spatula, first in hot water then in cold. Fill the bowl with cold water, put a half pound of butter into the water and work with the spatula until the butter is soft and easy to mold, then remove, and pat it gently until it is perfectly free of water. Have the room, butter and flour as cool as possible. Sift two cups of flour and a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt together and mix with cold water to a soft dough. Remove to moulding board and knead until the dough is elastic. Cover it and let stand five minutes, then roll out into a rectangle a little longer than it is wide. Pat the butter into a similar shaped rectangle and place it exactly in the middle of the lower half of the paste. Fold the one for this purpose you are sure your silver forks are not taken for kitchen use.

What Makes Fog.

London is famous for its fogs. Why? Because, for one reason, London is a city. Cities make smoke, and smoke makes fogs.

Doubtless London fogs are much thicker and more prevalent nowadays than a century ago. The city is much bigger, and there is more smoke.

A fog is formed by the condensation of moisture upon smoke particles and dust particles suspended in the atmosphere. The more smoke and dust, the greater the liability to the formation of fog, each particle furnishing a nucleus for moisture when conditions are right.

Thus, as a city gains in population, fogs become more frequent.

Butterflies Flee Drought.

Certain butterflies maintain themselves precariously in our rainy climate, writes a correspondent of The London Times, and are periodically reinforced by immigration from overseas. Unlike the regular immigration of birds in spring, these movements of butterflies occur at no fixed intervals—some almost annually and others after varying lapses of years. Though butterflies are emphatically creatures of the sun, few species will endure great drought, and there seems little doubt that the excursions of their countless swarms, which occasionally furnish the seafarer, are due to the oncoming of heat and aridity in their country of origin, which deprive them of moisture and their prospective young of green food. Even the drought of an English July will sometimes drive the common blue and small copper butterflies from the toasted pastures and send them wandering through shady gardens with their watered lawns, and the vast clouds of butterflies which are sometimes seen crossing the Mediterranean from North Africa, or the English Channel from the coast of France, are exiles driven by thirst, seeking cooler lands.

In England the most regular of these butterfly immigrants is the large and beautiful species known as the painted lady. This has never been discovered asleep in hiding in this country during the winter, like the peacock butterfly and other members of its tribe; nor does it pass the winter here in any other of the stages of a butterfly's transformation. There is good reason to believe that it never winters with us, and that the painted ladies which usually appear in May or June are immigrants from the Continent. We see them banking in dry footpaths, often returning to the grass spot again and again, or else feasting on clover blossoms ripe for mowing. In due course they lay their eggs on thistles, and after a few weeks' growth as caterpillars and a short period of quiescence as chrysalides, the butterflies of the new generation are on the wing in August and September. The pink-flashed brown of their marbled and broad wings is often much richer than that of their parents in June, for in them it was often bleached by travel and fierce forenoon sunshine to a light reddish tan. Beautiful indeed are these native painted ladies, as they circle at the autumnal scabious heads, or the daisies ranked in the garden, and their end is a mystery. If they seek some dark hiding place, like the rest of their tribe, it has never yet been discovered; all we know is that they do not reappear in early spring, as their kindred do.

A Successful Wife.

Women, who are now taking their places in all branches of work, sometimes seem to forget, if ever they knew it, a far more practical and vital art to them, and one which can be almost universally practiced—that of wifehood.

To be a successful wife is perhaps the most difficult art in the world, and demands intelligence, sympathy and usefulness, especially in the case of people with small incomes.

Let us consider the essentials of a model wife.

She must be good to look upon. If she is not pretty she can be dainty, neat, and well groomed.

She must be a good and prudent housekeeper, and be able to cook, even if she can afford servants.

She must have tasteful ideas about house decoration, making her home a nice place of rest and comfort.

She must be a companion to her husband. Sympathy is not enough. She must be able to discuss work, literature and politics intelligently with him and his friends.

She must be comradely and comfort always, and critic when required.

She must be a devoted mother, realizing to the full the responsibility resting with her, of giving to her country moral, healthy and helpful citizens.

And with all these duties, she must never be for a moment without love.

Cold Causes Stale Bread.

Prof. J. R. Katz, of Amsterdam, has been trying to discover what makes bread grow stale. He has found that low temperature is the chief cause. Bread kept at 140 degrees F. was quite fresh at the end of forty-eight hours; but when the temperature was reduced to 122 degrees the bread began to grow stale, and continued to increase in staleness down to about three degrees below the freezing point. Beyond that the staleness grew less until at the temperature of liquid air the bread had again become perfectly fresh. It is suggested that bread can be kept fresh by placing it in a fireless cooker immediately after it is removed from the oven.

Other Way Round.

He was a very small boy, and the apples he was eyeing were very large. He eyed them for ten minutes, longingly and faintly, while the greengrocer bustled about serving customers. Now he edged near the tempting basket. Now he edged away again. And at last the greengrocer thought it time to intervene.

"Now then, Tommy," he exclaimed, "what are you doing?"

"Nothin', eh?" replied the small boy.

"Well, it looks to me as though you are trying to steal these apples."

"You're wrong!" retorted the nipper. "I'm trying not to."

6,000,000 WORKMEN VOTE AGAINST REVOLUTION THROUGHOUT ITALY

Mills Seized by Metal Workers Will be Field as Experiment, While All Others Will be Turned Back to Employers.

Milan, Italy, Sept. 12.—By a vote of 6,000,000 to 400,000, Italian labor to-day decided against an immediate revolution throughout Italy.

The vote was taken at the session of the Confederation of Labor here, after continuous debate for sixteen hours.

The mills, plants and factories that have been seized by the metal workers will be held, however, as an experiment.

Negotiations with the employers for worker representation on the boards of directors which control industries will be entered into at the beginning of the week. It is likely that these negotiations will continue for several weeks.

The decision not to carry out the seizures throughout Italy also carried, and it was ordered that all factories other than those in the metal trades be turned back to the employers. This, perhaps the greatest decision in modern economic war, was rendered against a background rich in history.

The session, at which speakers advanced the most aggressive of modern views that embraced the tendencies of the workers all over the world, was held in a great room in a monastery that was erected before Columbus discovered America. Telegraph, telephone and wireless connections were made in rooms that were built when a man thinking that the world was round was merely a harmless lunatic. The scores of nations that awaited the word of the conference were non-existent in the day that the meeting hall suggests.

For a time the decision seemed to hang in the balance. The men of more radical tendencies pleaded for a complete seizure. The most commanding voice in the decision rendered was that of Signor Dragona, the labor leader, who has recently returned from Russia. He told the delegates that he had come back from Russia fully convinced that Bolshevism cannot be allowed to flourish on Italian soil, and that the only real danger a revolution would bring would be a danger to the workers themselves.

The Government has remained neutral. Soldiers, however, are being rushed into the city. They are coming in motor trucks, as the railroad workers have refused to haul trains carrying them or carrying munitions. In the occupied metal plants the Red flags are flying. The workmen do an eight-hour shift of work, and then stand guard for four hours.

TO SELL GERMAN SHIPS IN LONDON

Forty former German liners, totalling nearly 400,000 tons, including the Emperor, the Kaiserin and the Prinz Friedrich Wilhelm, were offered for sale by Lord Inchape, in behalf of the Government.

Most of the vessels have been managed by British companies in behalf of the Reparations Commission. They have now been definitely allotted to British ownership. The proceeds of the sale will form a part of the German indemnity.

Experts, who expect low prices, in view of the present falling rates, say the Germans are bound to complain that the British Ministry of Shipping threw the liners on the market in a slump period instead of during a boom.

Prussian Harvest Half That of Last Year

A despatch from London says: The Prussian harvest officially is estimated at considerably less than that of last year, according to a wireless despatch from Berlin.

KING'S SON HELD PRISONER FOR HOURS

Irish Sympathizers Practice Joke on Royal Family.
A despatch from London says: Prince George, youngest son of King George, was kidnapped Monday night by a party of Sinn Feiners and held prisoner for several hours in a deserted cottage on the outskirts of Balmoral Woods. The kidnappers departed without harming the Prince, leaving a note, which read: "This is but the beginning; the end will come if MacSwiney dies."

This became known for the first time on Friday. Details of the kidnapping are still a mystery. Balmoral Castle is being guarded by sleuths from Scotland Yard.

The Prince and a man-servant were captured by a party of masked men at about 7.30 o'clock in the evening, as they were returning from a day's fishing. They were hurried to an empty cottage and there locked up, and it was not until several hours later that it became known at Balmoral Castle, where the Royal family is vacationing, that the Prince was missing. The King and Queen immediately organized a search party consisting of Castle servants. The Royal guards were aroused and Scotland Yard notified.

The entire neighborhood was thoroughly searched and the two prisoners made no attempt to harm the Prince. The Royal family is much disturbed, fearing that the kidnapping was the work of Sinn Fein sympathizers among the Castle servants, and that therefore they might be able to carry out the threat in the note should MacSwiney die. It is felt in some quarters, however, that it was merely a rough practical joke on the part of Irish sympathizers and will not be followed up.

It is the third occasion in the history of the Exhibition when the million mark has been reached in the matter of attendance, the first occasion being in 1913, when the million was passed by a few thousand odd.

500 DEAD AND THOUSANDS HOMELESS AS RESULT OF ITALIAN EARTHQUAKE

Many Towns and Villages Wrecked and Much Suffering to Inhabitants for Want of Food, Medicine and Shelter.

A despatch from Rome says:—Italy is again suffering from an earthquake disaster, the extent of which has not yet been measured. It is known, however, that hundreds of people have been killed and thousands injured. Many small towns and villages have been wrecked, and although assistance is being hurried from all parts of the country to the afflicted area, there is much suffering for want of food, medicine and shelter for the people.

"Every earthquake disaster is for Italy like a lost battle," said ex-Premier Luzzatti, after the Avezzano catastrophe, and this is now repeated in Tuscany. Though not so great, the present disaster recalls the distant tragedy at Messina.

Barco, a town of 9,000 inhabitants, was virtually destroyed by the earthquake of Tuesday, as was also Fornaci, nearby. Sixty-five dead have already been identified and laid out in the small picturesque cemetery, which was destroyed open by the earthquake. Barco was the birthplace of the poet, Giovanni Pascoli.

One of the gravest difficulties encountered is the fact that the earthquake caused an enormous displacement of earth and rocks which obstructed the roads, destroyed the wires and all other means of communication. First aid has been improvised with the local means of establishing medical posts wherever possible.

King Victor Emmanuel, accompanied by Queen Helena and Princess Yolanda, passed through the smaller villages which suffered disaster from the earthquake. In these places, the inhabitants were afflicted perhaps to a greater degree because of the impossibility of providing for the outlying districts promptly.

Under such conditions an average man may live 30 days and recover. In addition, they have had their mouths washed to prevent septic condition, their backs rubbed with methylated spirits and their limbs massaged to promote circulation. Lying quiet, with their minds at rest because they are resigned, even eager, to die, it is not surprising that they have lived so long. It is possible the stronger among the strikers may continue living and suffering for weeks. If they ceased strike now, probably all, including MacSwiney, could be restored to health by giving them only mothers' milk, like new-born babies.

500 DEAD AND THOUSANDS HOMELESS AS RESULT OF ITALIAN EARTHQUAKE

Many Towns and Villages Wrecked and Much Suffering to Inhabitants for Want of Food, Medicine and Shelter.

A despatch from Rome says:—Italy is again suffering from an earthquake disaster, the extent of which has not yet been measured. It is known, however, that hundreds of people have been killed and thousands injured. Many small towns and villages have been wrecked, and although assistance is being hurried from all parts of the country to the afflicted area, there is much suffering for want of food, medicine and shelter for the people.

"Every earthquake disaster is for Italy like a lost battle," said ex-Premier Luzzatti, after the Avezzano catastrophe, and this is now repeated in Tuscany. Though not so great, the present disaster recalls the distant tragedy at Messina.

Barco, a town of 9,000 inhabitants, was virtually destroyed by the earthquake of Tuesday, as was also Fornaci, nearby. Sixty-five dead have already been identified and laid out in the small picturesque cemetery, which was destroyed open by the earthquake. Barco was the birthplace of the poet, Giovanni Pascoli.

One of the gravest difficulties encountered is the fact that the earthquake caused an enormous displacement of earth and rocks which obstructed the roads, destroyed the wires and all other means of communication. First aid has been improvised with the local means of establishing medical posts wherever possible.

King Victor Emmanuel, accompanied by Queen Helena and Princess Yolanda, passed through the smaller villages which suffered disaster from the earthquake. In these places, the inhabitants were afflicted perhaps to a greater degree because of the impossibility of providing for the outlying districts promptly.

Under such conditions an average man may live 30 days and recover. In addition, they have had their mouths washed to prevent septic condition, their backs rubbed with methylated spirits and their limbs massaged to promote circulation. Lying quiet, with their minds at rest because they are resigned, even eager, to die, it is not surprising that they have lived so long. It is possible the stronger among the strikers may continue living and suffering for weeks. If they ceased strike now, probably all, including MacSwiney, could be restored to health by giving them only mothers' milk, like new-born babies.

H.R.H. Makes 3-Weeks' Stay in Bermuda

A despatch from London says: The Prince of Wales is due to reach Bermuda on September 14. He will leave Bermuda on October 3, and arrive at Portsmouth on October 11.

Fire Prevention Day Saturday, October 9.

The Governor-General has, by proclamation, set aside Saturday, October 9, as a day on which to specially emphasize the great loss which Canadians, individually and collectively, are sustaining through destruction by fire of both natural and created resources.

At a time of high building costs and acute scarcity of material, we are burning buildings at a criminal rate. Our fire loss of last year, viz., $23,500,000, or approximately $290 per capita, was the highest per capita in the world.

Not only is this a complete loss of national wealth, but its replacement creates increased competition for available building supplies, thus enhancing prices for new building. How can we hope to overcome the housing shortage when, in Ontario alone, last year 5,804 dwellings were damaged or destroyed, causing a loss of $1,753,332? There were also 744 frame barns destroyed, at a loss of $1,189,906, of which $557,735 was uninsured.

Lightning damaged or destroyed 1,102 buildings in Ontario, involving a loss of $506,885, of which $212,778 was not covered by insurance. None of these farm buildings were equipped with lightning rods, whereas but two buildings protected, by lightning rods were damaged, and these to the amount of $22 only.

Matches were again responsible for the largest number of known fires, 1,148 in Ontario, originating therefrom. Practically every fire due to matches is the result of carelessness. Public education and a recognition of personal responsibility are essential to a reduction of the fire waste. It is particularly essential to interest the younger generation, through the Canadian teachers, in the efforts being made towards a reduction of the fire loss.

Fire Prevention Day will give a splendid opportunity for bringing this subject to the attention of pupils and should produce good results.

LORD MAYOR OF CORK MAY DIE

Must Consent to Eat or Any Day May Bring Death.
A despatch from London says:—"The low condition" of Terence MacSwiney, hunger striking Lord Mayor of Cork, continues. Father Dunne, his chaplain, just stated. The young man is in extreme pain, but is calmly conscious and his mind is clear.

MacSwiney has completed his twenty-ninth day of abstinent fast. "The fact that the prisoner is taking water," added the physician, "indicates him to be in a considerable degree."

To Undertake Trans-Canada Aerial Flight

A despatch from Ottawa says:—The first cross-Canada airplane and seaplane flight is expected to be made in the last week of September. A seaplane will fly from Halifax to Vancouver and from that city to Vancouver. The journey will be completed by airplanes, flying in relays. The seaplane will be piloted by Colonel Leckie, and the names of three of the airplane pilots who will take part in the flight have been announced. They are Captain G. A. Thompson, of Winnipeg; Captain J. B. Home-Hay; Captain D. C. Carruthers, of Kingston, Ontario. All three are flyers with excellent records overseas. They have been provisionally selected for the trip and it is likely that three or four other names will be announced in the course of a few days. There will also be another seaplane pilot named to act as reserve pilot on the first leg of the journey.

THE LATE MRS. FERGUSON

There passed peacefully away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Archie Purcell, on Friday, August 27, one of the most highly respected by-ones of Moss township in the person of Nancy McLean, widow of the late Donald D. Ferguson, aged 71 years, 4 months, 24 days.

She was a daughter of the late Donald McLean, weaver, and was born on April 3, 1849, on the farm now owned by Dan McLean.

She was too retiring to be much in the foreground, but her kind, unassuming manner, her forbearance, her readiness to spend and be spent for others, her wise and considerate judgment, made her a strong tower in the community.

When sickness and trouble was in a home she was always ready to help with kindness and a word of comfort. She was the second youngest of a family of thirteen, of whom Mrs. Effie Livingston of Alvinston is the only surviving member.

On March 31st she suffered a paralytic stroke; then, on April 2nd, she suffered of flu, from which she seemed to rally; then was moved to the home of her daughter, where she suffered two more. All that loving hands could do was done for her restoration, but her Heavenly Father ruled otherwise and she passed peacefully away.

She was laid to rest on Sunday, August 29, in Alvinston cemetery, Rev. Mr. McIlroy conducting the funeral services.

The high esteem of her many friends was evidenced by the large gathering at the house, and also at the cemetery. She leaves to mourn the loss of a dear mother, Mrs. Klause of Detroit, Malcolm and Duncan of Sarnia and Mrs. Purcell of Moss.

"Well done, good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Six nephews acted as pallbearers—Duncan P. Campbell, Neil A. McLean, James McKinley, Angus A. Campbell, Dan McLean and Dan Livingston.
