

UNIONS OF LONDON MEMORIALIZE BECK TO SUPPORT ACT

Labor Men Ask Hon. Adam Beck to See That No Changes Are Made.

EACH SENDING LETTER

Personal Request Being Made to Secure Passage of Workmen's Compensation Act.

Members of the local Trades and Labor Council are opposed to any change being made at the manufacturing request in the new workmen's compensation act, which Sir William Meredith has prepared, and which will be presented at the next session of the Ontario Legislature. While the new act is not exactly what labor wants, the members feel that it is the best measure advanced so far, and they are opposed to having any changes made in the recommendations made. Each of the members of the local council is sending the following letter to Hon. Adam Beck, stating the wishes of the labor men of the city:

To the Hon. Adam Beck:
Dear Sir,—The Trades and Labor Council of London, representing organized labor in London, ask most emphatically that the recommendations of Sir William Meredith for a new workmen's compensation act in Ontario be passed without fail at the next session of the Ontario Legislature; that you give the measure your undivided support.

We are entirely opposed to any change which would rob the workers of Ontario of the minimum justice proposed by the commissioner.

The workers of Ontario have suffered too long already under the grave injustice of the present liability laws in Ontario.

The workers of London expect the Legislature to carry this measure without fail. Yours, truly,

PREMIER WHITNEY DECIDEDLY BETTER

Toronto, Jan. 24.—A bulletin issued at 12 o'clock says Sir James Whitney is decidedly better. He is much less delirious, and took a good breakfast.

LONDON RESIDENTS WORK IN COAL YARDS

All Conditions of Men Handled Their Own Fuel Because of Strike.

[Canadian Press.]
London, Jan. 24.—The fact that 10,000 coal carriers are on strike in London today was brought home to the citizens by a severe cold wave.

Many residents decided to follow the recent example of the citizens of Leeds, and carry on the work until the strike was broken.

Private motor cars, taxicabs, wagons, carts, wheelbarrows and even perambulators, were drawn up in dozens at the various coal yards, where their owners themselves loaded them with coal with which to replenish their cellars. About 100 medical students loaded and unloaded many tons of coal to the various hospitals, while hotel employees in gold-braided uniforms, chauffeurs, fatigue parties from several of the guards' regiments, tradesmen, and even women were among those working in the coal yards.

The strike is not expected to be prolonged, as some of the employers have already settled.

ARMORIES WERE THREATENED.
Windsor, Jan. 24.—Fire, believed to have originated from an overheated furnace, threatened Windsor armories at an early hour this morning. Good work on the part of the fire department saved the building. Damage was $500.

GRAND TRUNK DECIDES ON SPUR TO TRACK

Extension Will Be Laid To the Harris Property, East of City.

The Grand Trunk Railway has agreed to build a two-mile extension to the Harris farm, on which the new running track is to be located.

Work on the new track is to be undertaken within a short time, according to authoritative information which reached The Advertiser last night. Funds sufficient to equip the property as one of the finest mile tracks in the country will be available, it being stated that practically all the necessary capital has been subscribed.

London will be on the "big time" of the racing game. The same horses that appear at the big Canadian and American tracks will be brought to the city, and some are sanguine that a summer meet will be undertaken.

The Grand Trunk authorities have had the extension under consideration for some time at Montreal.

NO ELECTION TRIAL WHILE HOUSE SITS

South Bruce Protests Cannot Be Held Until After the Prorogation.

[Canadian Press.]
Toronto, Jan. 24.—Until the House at Ottawa is prorogued, there will be nothing doing in the South Bruce election protests. In the meantime, R. E. Trux was to remain in his seat at Ottawa representing the Liberal interests.

W. H. Price, counsel for W. B. McGill, the Conservative candidate, explained this morning that under the election act there could be no trial of the charges while the House is in session. The sitting of the House on the 15th came too soon for charges to be properly prepared and disposed of, and now the House is in session the member attacked could plead privilege.

CLIMBED LADDER DOWN SIDE OF LINER MAJESTIC

President Wilson's Daughter Thus Reached New York Earlier.

[Canadian Press.]
New York, Jan. 24.—Mrs. Francis Bowes Sayre, daughter of President Wilson, with a rope around her waist, climbed a ladder down the side of the White Star liner Majestic at quarantine today, and boarded the revenue cutter Manhattan, which brought Mr. and Mrs. Sayre up the harbor to the city. The Majestic reached quarantine last night, but did not dock until this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Sayre were returning from a honeymoon trip to Europe.

CAMPBELL PAID MURDER PENALTY IN BORDEAUX JAIL

Negro Kept His Composure and Slept Well Before Execution.

HE WANTED TO SPEAK
Sheriff Refused His Request—Jealousy the Cause of the Crime Committed.

[Canadian Press.]
Montreal, Jan. 24.—William Campbell, colored, was hanged this morning in Bordeaux jail for the murder of George Muir, on Aug. 14. Jealousy was the cause of the crime. Appeals against his sentence were made but failed.

The execution, which was the first to be held in this jail, which was only recently built, went off without a hitch.

Arthur Ellis was the hangman. Campbell was wanted in Cincinnati for the murder of two women settlement workers there.

SLEPT WELL.
Campbell, who slept well during the night, spent some time after awakening with Father Garceau, the prison chaplain.

WANTED TO ADDRESS CROWD.
When at 7:45 the doomed man was notified that his time had come, he showed no nervousness, but took his place in the procession leading to the gallows with head erect. While his arms and legs were being pinned he seemed to sway, but recovering his composure in a moment, asked the executioner if he might address those around him. Ellis referred the request to Sheriff Lemoine, who refused it.

ISSUED CRUCIFIX.
After the black cap had been affixed Father Garceau pressed a crucifix to Campbell's lips. When the rope had been arranged, Ellis stepped smartly back, and waving the priest aside, kicked the lever releasing the trap upon which Campbell had stood.

Campbell was pronounced dead five minutes after the drop.

GUARD FAINTED.
Some excitement was caused when Campbell shot from sight by a guard fainting.

In a signed statement, Campbell protested his innocence, claimed that he had been the victim of a "frame-up" by detectives, and solemnly warned colored men to keep away from white women.

GUELPH AND PARIS BOARDS OF TRADE FOR MORE ZONES

Mayor of Royal City Stands Shoulder to Shoulder With London.

CARRY FIGHT FURTHER

Paris Delegates Will Agitate for Change Before Associated Boards.

At a meeting of the Guelph Board of Trade on Wednesday, the communication from the executive of the London board regarding the proposed Western Ontario zone for the parcel-post system, was considered and favorably commented upon. President Thorpe strongly urged that it be supported, London having royally supported Guelph in winter fair matters. The matter was referred to a special committee.

Secretary Gordon Philip, of the London Board of Trade, had received a letter from the secretary of the Brantford board stating that the matter will be considered there.

The discrimination in favor of Toronto under the proposals of the post-office department has been keenly resented in London and throughout Western Ontario, and the whole question will be very thoroughly gone into at the meeting of the associated boards of trade in Toronto next month. The executive of the London board has sent out copies of the strong resolution passed here along with a map showing The Advertiser's proposed Western Ontario zone, and the agitation for the proper recognition of this great district seems bound to produce results.

Paris Favors Western Ontario Zone.
Publicity Commissioner Philip is in receipt of a communication from the board of trade of Paris, Ontario, stating that at the last meeting of that board, a resolution was passed favoring the establishment of a Western Ontario zone in connection with the parcel-post system about to be inaugurated. Their representatives on the associated boards of trade will be instructed to support such a resolution when the matter is brought up there, and they ask London delegates to do likewise.

Still Receiving Letters From Those Who Were Victimized.

William Ferguson and Charles Fair, two fake subscription men, who flim-flamed about 2,000 Londoners, and were recently deported from Saranac to Port Huron, may be brought back to London.

Chief of Police Williams in communication with the Sarnia chief of police told the latter of the great number of people who had been "buncoed" by the fakirs in this vicinity, with the result that the Sarnia chief will attempt to have the men extradited back to this side of the border.

The local police are still receiving letters from citizens who fell for the subscription men.

Village of Lambeth Must Extend Limits

The village of Lambeth has flourished to such a remarkable extent of recent years that the owners of property have found it necessary to extend the limits of the corporation.

A petition is now in circulation among the taxpayers, asking that a large area be taken into the limits and that the boundaries be considerably enlarged.

One of the petitions is being circulated by Dr. Roy Routledge and there have been no refusals to sign.

In Notable Message to Board of Governors He Declares That Means of Financing Are In Sight—Time to Choose Sight

HARMONY REIGNS AND WORK ON BUILDING NOT FAR DISTANT

A notable contribution to the Western University situation came to the board of governors recently in the form of a letter from Chancellor R. M. Meredith. In resigning the chairmanship of the board of directors, the chancellor submitted his views on the exact position of affairs, and as he says himself, "took stock." His conclusions are regarded by the governors as stimulus to the work of reconstruction.

From The Inspiring Message of Chancellor

The result of that stock-taking was that we found we had, in truth, little more than a university in name.

Anxious and careful consideration has convinced us of the existence of a real need; and I am satisfied that no matter what opposition there may be, and no matter what mistakes may be made, that need, in time, will bring to London a large efficient university.

There are doubtless those who expected the Western University, when it became a public institution, to grow like Jack's beanstalk, in a night; forgetting that such a growth would be likely to die in a day.

It must be remembered that a university is not a thing of a day or a year; it is a thing to be built with a view to a life rather of centuries, increasing in quality and quantity to meet the needs of a higher education of the years to come. The momentous character of the undertaking must be grasped, the great labor and difficulties involved in it must not be overestimated, but they must be met, and if met unprepared for, may be disastrous.

Earnings were out of the question. Even a million dollars would provide for, at most, but $50,000 a year, and the University of Toronto has an annual grant from the province of nearly ten times that sum, and that is only part way towards paying its current expenses. And even if $50,000 a year would have been enough, where would $1,000,000 be had for the purpose?

Endowment was also out of the question. Even a million dollars would provide for, at most, but $50,000 a year, and the University of Toronto has an annual grant from the province of nearly ten times that sum, and that is only part way towards paying its current expenses. And even if $50,000 a year would have been enough, where would $1,000,000 be had for the purpose?

Private subscription from year to year, that hand-to-mouth method which had been in force before he university became a public institution, would be as inefficient as, and more precarious than, the earnings from students; besides being unjust to those who might be inclined to subscribe. Being a public institution, why should one person, more than another, voluntarily pay for its support?

But we have, I hope, almost succeeded; and dare, I trust, within measurable distance of maintenance, to a considerable extent out of the public funds. Once we are assured of our daily bread as it were, we shall be out of the woods; there ought to be then nothing to hinder us in running the course that is set before us. Without it our doors would be closed.

Once assured of long life, we can fairly and confidently ask the inhabitants, and some of the municipalities of Western Ontario, and especially those of the city of London, voluntarily to provide a home for the university fitting for all time to come; and enough to create an endowment fund large enough to bring the university within the Carnegie foundation group, so that it may be on a par with the best of the other universities.

My scheme, as you know, would be to seek a very substantial grant for these purposes from the province, the city of London, and the county of Middlesex, as well as from those who have the means and inclination to aid in building up such institutions, and the public generally, every one of whom, in this district, should have a real interest in the welfare of the institution; and very many of them a direct benefit from it. There may be municipalities, and individuals, who would contribute to the cost of a separate building of the many that may be needed; and to be named in their names.

Sites are by no means wanting, one then better than any other I know in Canada, another almost as good; and the university has power to "expropriate." With the prospects which we now have of provincial, as well as civic, grants for maintenance, there seems to be no reason why the site should not be secured. If we are not quite out of the woods in these respects, we are so near the edge that the way out can be lost only through some folly, a thing which ought to be carefully guarded against, for too often in all things human there have been slips betwixt cup and lip.

Success a Certainty.

Anxious and careful consideration has convinced us of the existence of a real need; and I am satisfied that no matter what opposition there may be, and no matter what mistakes may be made, that need, in time, will bring to London a large and efficient university.

There has been but one lowering cloud upon our horizon in this respect; but that unfortunately has been, and worse, still continues to be, a threatening, and to me, an unacceptable one.

The best proof of the need of a university here would have been a stream

THE HOLLOW OF HER HAND

By GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON
Author of "Graustark," "Truxton King," Etc.

Slowly the girl crept out of bed, confused, bewildered, stunned.

"Where are my own things? I—I can not accept these. Pray give me my own."

Mrs. Wendall checked her.

"You must obey me, if you expect me to help you. Don't you understand that I have had a bereavement? I cannot wear these things now. They are useless to me. But we will speak of all this later on. Come, be quick! I will help you to dress. First, go to the telephone and ask them to send a waiter to these rooms. We must have something to eat. Please do as I tell you."

Standing before her benefactress, her fingers fumbling impotently at the neck of the night-dress, the girl still continued to stare dumbly into the calm, dark eyes before her.

"You are so good. I—I—"

"Let me help you," interrupted the other, deliberately setting about to remove the night-dress. The girl caught it up as it slipped from her shoulders, a warm flush suffusing her face, a shamed look springing into her eyes.

"Thank you, I can—get on very well. I only wanted to ask you a question. It has been on my mind, waking and sleeping. Can you tell me anything about—do you know his wife?"

The question was so abrupt, so startling, that Mrs. Wendall uttered a sharp little cry. For a moment she could not reply.

"I am so sorry, so desperately sorry for her," added the girl plaintively.

"I know her," the woman managed to say with an effort.

"If I had only known that he had a wife," began the girl bitterly, almost angrily.

Mrs. Wendall grasped her by the arm.

"You did not know that he had a wife?" she cried.

The girl's eyes flashed with a sudden, fierce fire in their depths.

"God in heaven, no! I did not know it until—Oh, I can't speak of it! Why should you be interested in hearing it?"

Mrs. Wendall did not regard the girl's set, unhappy face. There was a curious light in her eyes that escaped the other's notice—a light that would have puzzled her not a moment later.

"But you will tell me—everything—a little later," she said, strangely calm.

"Not now, but in many hours, I can promise. First of all, you must tell me who you are, where you live—everything except what happened in your father's land. I don't want to hear that at present—perhaps never. Yes, on second thoughts, I will say never! You are never to tell me just what happened up there, or just what led up to it. Do you understand? Never!"

The girl stared at her in amazement.

"But I—I must tell someone," she cried.

CUT THIS OUT

Famous Specialist's Recipe for Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises.

If you know someone who is troubled with head noises, or catarrhal deafness, cut out this formula and hand to them, and you will have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. Recent experiments have proved conclusively that catarrhal deafness, head noises, etc., were the direct cause of many cases of deafness, and that salves, sprays, inhalers, etc., merely temporize with the complaint, and seldom, if ever, effect a permanent cure. This being so, much time and money has been spent of late by a noted specialist in perfecting a pure, gentle, yet effective tonic that would quickly dispel all traces of the catarrhal poison from the system. The effective prescription, which was eventually formulated, and which has aroused the belief that deafness will soon be extinct, is given below in understandable form, so that anyone can treat themselves in their own home at little expense.

Secure from your druggist 1 oz. Parmit (Double Strength) about 75c. Take this home, and add to it 3 pint of hot water and 4 oz. of moist or granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

The first dose promptly ends the most distressing head noises, headache, dizziness, etc., and the hearing rapidly returns as the system is invigorated by the tonic action of the treatment. The direct cause of the deafness, dropping in the back of the throat are other symptoms that show the presence of catarrhal poison, and which are quickly overcome by this efficacious treatment. Nearly ninety per cent. of all ear troubles are directly caused by catarrh, therefore there are but few people whose hearing cannot be restored by this simple home treatment. Every person who is troubled with head noises, catarrhal deafness, or catarrh in any form, should give this prescription a trial. There is nothing better.

Important: In ordering Parmit always specify that you want Double Strength; your druggist has it or he can get it for you; if not, send five to the International Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine St., Montreal, P. Q., who make a specialty of it. Adv. J. 6, 10, 17, 24, 31

But I would not consider it, not for an instant. I had had enough of the stage. I am really not fitted for it. Besides, I am qualified—well qualified—to be a governess. But that is neither here nor there. I had some money—perhaps forty pounds. I found lodgings with some people in Nineteenth street. He never came there to see me. I can see plainly now why he argued it would not be well, he used the word 'wise.' But we went about in a motor—a little red one. He went about in a motor—a little red one. He told me he loved me. WESTERN ONTARIO MEN TALK PLAINLY BEFORE THE HOUSE

E. W. Nesbitt, of North Oxford, Shows How Farmers' Interests Are Neglected.

FAVORS MANUFACTURERS

Millers and Railways Would Not Be Hurt By Free Wheat Law.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Ottawa, Jan. 23.—E. W. Nesbitt, the outspoken Liberal representative of North Oxford, said some frank things in a plain way on the naval question, the tariff and the cost of living to his fellow-members of the Commons today.

In the first place, he said that he was not surprised that the Government should have dropped the naval bill. The people did not like it, and the Government had come to realize this. Germany had not been encouraged by the refusal of Canada to send the ships, but if Canada had sent the ships Germany would have been red to greater efforts. The Germans were human, and they had the ability and resources to extend their navy to almost any degree. It would be folly to encourage them to do so. The people did not want thirty-five millions sent out of this country, but they did want a permanent naval policy brought down without delay.

What the Farmers Want.

Men had been out of employment in Canada in 1907-8, but who then heard any outcry against the high cost of living? He doubted that the cold storage raised prices, though it tended to equalize food prices throughout the year. The Government proposed to help the farmers by giving them a million dollars' worth of farming instruction a year. In Ontario the farmers knew how to farm. What they required was better transportation and an open market. He did not consider that the free food proposal was intended to extend to such classes of foods as were the luxuries of rich men. In his part of the country there would be no objection to the removal of the duty on cheese. With milk and cream going into the United States duty free there would be less cheese manufactured in this country.

Manufacturers Are Heard.

He had been charged by the Finance Minister with stating that the high cost of living commission was a rotten commission. "I said it," he remarked, "and here repeat that it is a farce. The farmers of the west ask for free wheat. Why does not the Government give them what they ask? Where the manufacturers ask for anything they get it, but when the farmers ask for anything this Government refuses."

Free wheat wouldn't hurt the millers of the transcontinental railways. Both the millers and the railways were well able to look after themselves. To reduce the cost of living the Government would have to do more than give free food.

There were other things which should be dealt with to solve this problem. The manufacturers might require some protection, though many of them are now able to successfully compete in the open markets of the world. It was not the Government's duty to protect them. There was now no competition among many lines of manufacture in Canada. It was about time that the Government made up its mind that it could no longer coddle the farmer with statements that he was benefitted by protection.

Farmers Able to Compete.

Canadian farmers knew that they were able to compete with the farmers of other countries in the markets of the world. The Canadians who raised and sold made cheese for the English market knew this. Times were hard in the west, and would be harder with the farmers unless the Government did something. The men on the land were told to go into mixed farming. They might as well try to fly as to do this without wider markets being provided, and the wider markets could be had for the asking. Unless wider markets were provided, many of the smaller farms of the west would shortly be deserted.

No Reference to Shipping Disaster.

The shipping disaster on the Great Lakes was referred to by N. Lewis of West Huron, who said he was surprised that there had been no reference to disaster in the speech from the throne. It was the greatest calamity that has ever occurred on the Great Lakes, where traffic has so grown that in 1911, 23,778 ships with 8,275,120 tonnage, passed through the Soo canals. On Nov. 9, twelve steamers had been wrecked not far from Goderich, and of these eight disappeared utterly. A hundred and ninety lives were lost. The storm was so severe that one new boat of 505 feet length had been turned bottom up. It was snowing heavily at the time, but had the harbor of Goderich been properly equipped, had all the boats been equipped with wireless and had a hurricane call been sounded, not a vessel nor a life would have been lost, as all could have been warned to shelter in time. There was ample time.

Neglect in Notifying Ports.

The weather bureau knew of the approach of the storm, but at the inquiry it was explained that there had been neglect in notifying the ports of the approach of the storm because there was no telegraph in operation at that time of the night. Since the disaster telephones had been used all night. It should be compulsory on lake boats to carry wireless, and captains should be compelled to seek shelter when warned.

Importance of Goderich.

In 1909-10 Goderich had handled one-third of the grain traffic from the west, and was the only lake port which competed with Buffalo. He wished to impress the House with the importance of Goderich, in the hope that it would be made a harbor of refuge, in fact, as well as in name. Some of the banks in Ontario had raised their interest on loans from six to seven per cent. He thought that where banks did this they should be worse than before. Remember, I make this broad statement after putting ten years of my time on this one disease and handling it. If meaning a quarter of a million cases of this dreadful disease. Now, I do not care what all you have used, nor how many doctors have told you that you could not be cured—all I ask is just a chance to show you that I know what I am talking about. If you will write me TODAY, I will send you a FREE TRIAL of my mild, soothing, guaranteed cure that will convince you more in a day than if I or anyone else could in a month's time. If you are dissatisfied and discouraged, I dare you to give me a chance to prove my claims. By writing me today you will enjoy more real comfort than you had ever thought this world holds for you. Just try it and you will see. I am telling you the truth.

Customers who have been through our stock this season and are watching for this final clearing, will realize what an opportunity this reduction affords, as with our increased output in this section, stocks carried this season have been much larger than ever before, and therefore the assortment left for clearing is better and bigger than that of any previous sale. But remember there are only 75 in the whole collection, and every comforter is marked at exactly one-quarter less than yesterday's price, which we consider was excellent value, but the end of the season is near and stock-taking also. A double reason for this sale. Besides, all are new, fresh goods, good sizes, and well fitted with pure down and in first-class condition. HAWAIIAN ISLANDS TO CONTROL PACIFIC

Half Million Dollars to Be Spent in Fortifications.

[Canadian Press.] Washington, D. C., Jan. 23.—An extensive system of land fortifications for the Hawaiian Islands is proposed in the annual fortifications appropriation bill, reported to the House today. The bill would provide $450,000 to build fortifications as a part of the war department's plans to establish a strong military post supplemental to the Hawaiian naval base. At the request of the department, the measure would give congressional approval of the transfer of 45 field artillery pieces to the insular possessions. The guns have been sent to the Philippines and the Hawaiian Islands during the past year by the department, without waiting for authority from Congress.

Major-General Wood, chief of staff, told the appropriations sub-committee that fortification of the islands was an urgent necessity in order that the naval base might be strengthened and maintained as a protection to the Pacific coast and the Panama canal. Secretary Garrison outlined the war department's plans to the committee.

Centre of Five Routes. "The Hawaiian Islands," said General Wood, "are really in the centre of all the Pacific trade routes and whoever holds them will exercise very great influence, if not control in time of war, on the Pacific trade."

General Wood presented a statement of the garrisons which the department plans to place in the works on the island of Oahu, near the city of Honolulu. It called for 15,665 men and 565 officers.

GROOM AGED 78, BRIDE SEVENTY-TWO

Brantford Man Takes Second Campanian in Life at Milton.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Brantford, Jan. 23.—Age cuts no figure when Cupid lets his arrow fly. This is shown by the marriage at Milton on Jan. 21, by Rev. W. L. Martin, of Mansfield, Ont., of Miss Elizabeth H. Chisholm, aged 78, of George Haddley, aged 78, of Arthur street, this city. The bride and groom, making an aggregate of 150 years. This is not Mr. Haddley's first venture in the troubled waters of matrimony. He was married in 1860 to Miss Swift, of Kewlinston, the Episcopal Methodist Church at Oakdale, passing away on Oct. 19, 1912. On Feb. 23, 1910, they celebrated their golden wedding with the record behind them of 50 years of a happy union, and which nearly 40 years were spent in this city.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Chatham, Jan. 23.—The case against Mrs. Mae Atkinson, who was charged with abducting her daughter when she went to Detroit recently, was not proceeded with today. Mrs. Atkinson, her husband and daughter will go to London to live with her mother.

Wesley McCubbin, who was charged with taking Mrs. Atkinson away from the city for immoral purposes will not be prosecuted, as he agreed not to molest the happiness of the Atkinsons. Bail money which had been put up by Mrs. Atkinson was returned, and if they are good the case will be dropped.

Two Doctors Said He Had Consumption.

DR. WOOD'S
NORWAY PINE SYRUP
CURED HIM.

Mrs. John Eliff, St. John's West, Ont., writes: "My little boy was very bad with whooping cough and severe cold. I went to two doctors with him, and they said he had Consumption. I could get no relief for him, he would cough all night long, with a dry hacking cough. I was persuaded to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and was surprised to see the little bottle did him good. I have had five bottles, and they cured him, he rests well at night now, and is well and hearty. If he gets a cold we always give him Pine Syrup and he is soon better. I did not think I could be so thankful to a medicine. Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup saved him from being a consumptive."

Too much stress cannot be laid upon the admonition to all persons affected by the earlier stages of throat and lung trouble, as failure to take it at once will cause many years of suffering, and in the end that terrible scourge "Consumption."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is without an equal for all affections of the Throat and Lungs. Price, 25 and 50 cents. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

SHILOH

BLOODHOUNDS ON TRAIL OF BANDITS

Train Robbers Held Up Passenger Train And Got About $100.

[Canadian Press.] Packers, Ala., Jan. 24.—Railroad detectives and deputy sheriffs early today, with bloodhounds, began search for three men who looted the mail and express cars of a Southern Railway passenger train near here, and after starting the locomotive and the two cars on a wild run, disappeared on horses. The train ran without a guiding hand at the throttle to Larkinsville, Ala., 19 miles away, where it stopped when the locomotive went dead. The robbers obtained a sum estimated at $100 by blowing the express car safe. Their search through the mail car failed to produce anything, as only second-class mail matter was in the pouches. No attempt was made to molest passengers. Those who ventured out when the train was halted were sent back by a pattern of bullets.

"UNDERWORLD KING" FOUND MURDERED

Body of John Williams Was Lying at Foot of Stairs of Montreal House.

[Canadian Press.] Montreal, Jan. 24.—Horribly cut about the forehead, and with evidence of having been badly beaten up about the face, the body of John Williams, a one-eyed man of about 30, known as "The King of Montreal's Underworld," was found lying at the foot of a flight of stairs of a Polish boarding-house, last night. A heavy hammer discovery near a man is believed to be the weapon which caused his death, and Edward Quinn, together with a number of Poles, are held in connection with the supposed murder.

ARBITRATION AWARD WAS NOT SATISFACTORY

[Canadian Press.] Vancouver, Jan. 24.—In connection with the terminal scheme, the Canadian Northern agreed last week to pay $300,000. The plan was that the city would expropriate it if necessary, and the railway would reimburse the corporation. Against the action of the city officials, the Canadian Northern declined to accept the figure of $300,000, but demanded arbitration which has resulted in the owners of the lots getting an award of something over $1,000,000. This the Canadian Northern declines to pay, and wishes to appeal, but Mayor Baxter announced today that before the city would allow this, the city being the nominal appellant, the railway would have to pay approximately $300,000 over to the owners, and the appeal could deal with the balance. The mayor charges the railway with unnecessarily delaying a settlement.

BISHOP'S STUDENTS WILL OPEN MISSION IN LONDON

American Priests, Who Studied Under Right Rev. Michael Fallon, to Have Two Weeks' Mission.

Tomorrow at high mass in St. Peter's Cathedral, Rev. Geo. J. Nolan, O.M.I., of Buffalo, N. Y., and Rev. P. J. Phelan, O.M.I., of Boston, Mass., will open a two-weeks' mission for the Catholics of the city. Both these men are exceptionally able speakers, Father Nolan in particular being recognized as one of the cleverest orators in America; he will be remembered in London for his powerful sermon on the occasion of the consecration of Bishop Fallon. Both missionaries were students under Bishop Fallon.

The first week's mission, which is for women only, will open formally tomorrow evening when Father Nolan will answer the question: "What doth it profit a man to gain the whole world, and suffer the loss of his own soul?" At high mass the sermon will deal with the question: "What Is Meant by a Mission?"

During the mission the sermons will treat of the great eternal truths, of death, of hell and of heaven. These subjects will be handled from a non-controversial point of view, and a cordial invitation has been extended to all the citizens of the city to attend. There will be services daily during the entire week, both night and morning.

SAYS MILK INSPECTION IS SECONDARY NECESSITY

Chairman of Board of Health Characterizes Dr. Hill's Statements As "Tommy Rot."

"Tommy rot," is Dr. F. L. Burdon's characterization of the statement made by Dr. H. W. Hill, of the Institute of Public Health, that tuberculosis in hogs is caused largely by skinned milk from infected cows, fed to them when they are young. Dr. Hill, after inspecting several cases of tuberculosis in hogs slaughtered at the Dominion Abattoir, stated that the remedy for diseased meat, lay not in meat inspection, but in adequate inspection of the milk supply. Impure milk was the cause of much of the tuberculosis among hogs, he said.

Dr. Burdon takes exception to this reason. He says that all animals are more or less liable to tuberculosis. "Even chickens frequently have it," he said, "and I don't see how the testing of the milk supply is going to do away with the necessity for meat inspection."

SMALLPOX AMONG MEXICAN REFUGEES

Nearly 5,000 at Ft. Bliss, Texas, Ordered Vaccinated—No Danger of Epidemic.

[Canadian Press.] El Paso, Texas, Jan. 24.—Several cases of smallpox were discovered among Mexicans with the Federal soldiers and refugees from Ojinaga, Mexico, at Fort Bliss today. The 4,900 or more Mexicans were ordered vaccinated. The physicians said there was no danger of an epidemic. The refugees were isolated.

Unofficial reports were received in Juarez that General Refugio Velasco, the Federal commander at Torreon, Mexico, was having difficulty in maintaining discipline among his troops, and was expecting an attack by the rebels. A report that some of the soldiers had mutinied and had left Torreon was not credited by General Benavides, rebel commander at Juarez.

POTATO REGULATIONS SLIGHTLY MODIFIED

[Canadian Press.] Washington, Jan. 24.—Regulations issued recently prohibiting the importation of potatoes from Canada and Europe to guard against the introduction of potato blight, as a token of esteem before leaving the farm and coming to Winnipeg to spend their remaining days. The chairman for the evening was Mr. Wm. S. King, and the addresses were read by Mr. Linklater, after which she presented a gold-headed umbrella to Mr. Mitchell; to Mrs. Mitchell a set of silverware, and to their son, Alfred, a well-filled basket. The guests, all assembled in the dining-room, where tables were tastefully decorated for the occasion, and set with a sumptuous repast. They were then returned to the drawing-room, where readings, games and speeches were enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell made a suitable reply to the address and presentation, and the guests departed to their homes, after joining in singing "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

The address was presented by the following ladies: Mrs. Chandler, Mrs. Dickson, and Mrs. McCormick.

CAMP LIKELY TO BE HELD AT GODERICH

Local Officers States That They Have Not Yet Heard Anything From Ottawa.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Windsor, Jan. 23.—It is probable that the Essex Fusiliers will camp at Goderich again this year, but the final decision will not be made for several weeks. Lieut.-Col. Wieghe has received notice from Ottawa that the plans for a $25,000 addition to the armories have been approved. The officers' mess of the Twenty-first Regiment have elected the following officers: President, Major Isaac; chairman of band committee, Lieut.-Col. Casgrain; chairman regimental committee, Major Robinson; chairman sports committee, Lieut. Foster Abbey.

Local officers, asked by The Advertiser if anything had been heard from headquarters regarding the location of the 1914 camp, stated that nothing had been received. It is regarded as quite likely that the camp will be held at Goderich.

TURNBERRY HOLE AGAIN APPEARING

[Special to The Advertiser.] Wingham, Jan. 23.—More startling developments are expected in connection with the strange sinking of the earth in Turnberry Township. Recently, at great labor and expense, the big hole in the roadway was filled, and now there is another hole bigger than the first in area, but not in depth. The filling, which was put in, has sunk six feet, and over it there is two feet of water which is coming up from beneath.

Many fear that it is only a matter of a day or two when the whole of the filling will be washed out. The earth at the ends of the big hole is also giving way, making the pit longer than it was before. The people in the district are very anxious over the matter as, besides any danger that there may be, there is much inconvenience to traffic and it means a big expense.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JAN. 24.

Good morning, Senator Beattie!

What has become of Ma Pankhurst and the girls?

Some people are irresistibly funny who have no sense of humor.

None would congratulate the major more heartily than his Liberal friends.

Because she goes to church every Sunday she isn't necessarily a good cook.

Some people are wondering if Mr. Beck bought a return ticket when leaving England.

As a weapon for holdouts, the Federal League will prove a bonanza for a lot of ballplayers.

Practicing the tango would wreck a china shop quicker than the biggest and maddest of bulls.

An heir to the French pretender is born. Pretending seems to be a drug on the market, unfortunately.

The world sowed $89,000,000 in aeroplanes last year. The crop of widows was quite satisfactory.

If Faust had another chance, he would probably exchange his eternal future of a dozen newly-laid eggs.

L'Esperance, Conservative member from Montmagny, Que., doesn't want any navy. Mr. Borden seems to be Barkus.

Flammation, the French scientist, says the Garden of Eden lies at the bottom of the Indian Ocean. Sounds kind of fishy.

Mexico seems to have quieted down. The reason is probably that no one has had anything to eat since a week ago Tuesday.

If a man inherited some bank stock and the bank failed, he would be a sort of innocent bystander sufferer of the double liability.

A couple named Lusty have just celebrated their golden wedding, but what else would one expect from persons of that name?

There are 12,318,000 telephones in use in the world, and some people who love to listen, wish all of them were on one party line.

Every city with its own zone seems to be the fairest solution of the parcel post problem. Such an arrangement would, no doubt, satisfy Western Ontario.

A man steals a few pounds of coal from a railway. He is sent to jail. The state keeps him warm, but lets his family perish of cold. What's the answer?

What may not be ahead of any young man who reads of Strathcona's life, which starts in bleak Labrador and ended in the comfortable homage of the empire.

Corsets for life were given an Ohio New Year's baby by town merchants. Poor child! Her sisters in the kindergarten will insist her for lacing e'er she can lisp her A, B, C.

"I have never tasted an intoxicating beverage," says John D. Rockefeller, Jr., "neither has my father, and my grandfather never did." Then, keep an eye on the next generation, Johnny.

A citizen whose shoes must hurt, writes to The Advertiser complaining of the noise made by boys leaving school near his home. The only counsel that can be given is to move, because the boys are not likely to.

The old empire builder explored, cut the forests, tamed the savage and pushed the frontier ahead of him. In his rough life there was little immediate compensation and the romance ripened years after he had gone through it. Service was what called him, and service is what calls the Empire Builder of today.

THE BONDS OF EMPIRE.

UNITED Empire, the organ of the Royal Canadian Institute, does not seem to take kindly to the idea of the complete autonomy of the British dominions. Discussing the subject of emigration, it seems to favor an imperial citizenship, under which British subjects would have free access to all parts of the empire, and it says that "those who have cherished the ideal of an undivided empire-state cannot easily transfer their allegiance to that of a commonwealth of states, bound only by ties of interest, sentiment, and loyalty to the crown."

This old idea of centralization dies hard. It seems difficult for some people to realize that an empire can exist without a controlling central power and a uniformity of law. But communities in different sections of the globe, with a diversity of interests and of ideas, cannot be bound together in this way. The attempt to do it has always resulted disastrously. The sentimental bond of loyalty, with the fullest freedom in local matters, is the only tie that can bind the varied dominions of the British Empire. Anything else will tend to separation rather than to unity. The sooner this fact is recognized by all parties the better for imperialism. This view is one strong plea for opposing the thin end of the wedge presented by a centralized navy.

DOES IT WORK BOTH WAYS?

If the Hindu question in British Columbia is to be decided on principle, Ontario has its problem of exclusion also.

If it is not considered good British practice to allow the Hindu to do white man's work in British Columbia, why should the Chinese be permitted to do white men's work in Ontario? In their own antiquated fashion the Chinese do a great deal of the laundering work in this province, and if they were not in Ontario there would be more work for the white man and the white woman. As a race they add little to the community, although they are inoffensive enough, it is true. They do work cheaply and compete with white labor, and their methods of living are not always all that could be desired. The Advertiser has no enmity toward them. It would protest against unfair treatment of them, and does not believe they should be annoyed. But Ontario's labor unions have as well-established a right to demand their exclusion as British Columbia has to demand that the doors be closed to the Hindu. The only difference is that the Hindu as a British subject has the prior sentimental claim.

THE MEDICAL NOVELIST.

THE recent death of Dr. Weir Mitchell, of Philadelphia, has closed the active career of one of the few men noted for their pre-eminence alike in science and in fiction. The number has never been great; for there seems to be something antagonistic in the two departments of mental activity. The one deals with facts, the other beliefs; the one is concerned with reality, the other with imagination. But there have been, and always will be, men who while studying the actual can express the results of their study in the language of romance. The literature of the United States gives three striking examples in Oliver Wendell Holmes, W. A. Hammond, and S. Weir Mitchell.

Dr. Holmes, the senior of the trio, is very seldom recalled outside of Boston as a scientist, though his earliest work, and his most useful, from a practical point of view, was in the line of medical research. But he sprang so rapidly into prominence as the writer of "The Autocrat at the Breakfast Table," and the demand for literary work of that kind became so great, that his energies were naturally turned in that direction, and he is known today chiefly as the author of a charming series of table talks, some interesting novels, and lyrical poetry that of its kind has not been excelled.

Less widely known is the name of Dr. Hammond, of New York. Physicians may remember him for his radicalism as surgeon-general of the United States during the civil war, and by his more enduring work as an alienist. But he wrote a number of interesting novels, though they were possibly more attractive to the physician than to the general reader. The medical side of the author showed out too plainly; and one gets the impression that they were written chiefly as a recreation.

Dr. Mitchell was the most voluminous writer of them all. It is said that a bibliography of his medical writings show something less than two hundred titles; while his novels exceed in number those of both Holmes and Hammond. In some of these he seems to sink the physician entirely in the novelist, while in others there are clear evidences not only of his medical studies, but of the lesson he desired to teach. Physicians can best judge of the permanence of his reputation as a medical man. But we are inclined to think he will be remembered longer as the author of "Hugh Wynne" than as the apostle of the "rest cure."

In Mitchell, as in Holmes, the evident motif is the educational. To point out the physical and moral defects of humanity; to show how the state of the body can affect not only the mental but the moral nature; to suggest the rules for a cleaner and healthier life; to indicate wherein human delinquencies are often the result largely of external influences for which the culprit is not altogether responsible; to lessen the spirit of intolerance and bigotry which can find no excuse for sin, and no kindly thought for the sinner; to awaken a broader sympathy of man for his brother man; these are the work of men with the intellect and heart of the best type of the medical novelist. The world needs the lessons they teach; and humanity will not only be charmed, but uplifted by these voices crying in the desert of selfish commercialism and no less selfish sectarianism.

That proposed Ridout street subway would do much to relieve street car congestion and every piece of property south of the Grand Trunk tracks would become more accessible and, therefore, more valuable. That street railway, the Grand Trunk and the city should share the cost, which would not be as great as the amount often paid for less desirable "boons." South London can secure the subway by going after it.

LOVE-MEASURING MACHINE.

LOVERS beware! A French scientist has invented an instrument by which the intensity and the sincerity of love may be measured. By means of an electrical apparatus delicately adjusted it will be possible to test the honesty of a man's courtship. In this manner the heiress will be able to learn whether it is herself or her cash that Algernon is after. Also father (or is it mother) will be able to tell whether that youth is coming around with a purpose or merely trifling with the affections of Little Bright Eyes. It will not be necessary to create an awkward situation by buttonholing a man in the porch and inquiring as to his intentions. He will be invited to submit to the test, and if he fails to register high he will be expected to warm up a bit or move on. Mrs. Newlywed, who is suspicious anyway, can have the test applied to husband at regular intervals instead of getting on his nerves with a continual "How much do you love me?" If it will clean out a few flirts of both species and rout the philanderer it will prove a grand invention.

PICQUART'S DEATH.

FROM France comes the news of the death of General Picquart, perhaps the most heroic figure of the Dreyfus case. It was Picquart's evidence, coupled with the activities of Clemenceau and Zola, that brought about the rehabilitation of Dreyfus. Picquart insisted upon telling the truth despite the most powerful influences brought to bear to make him give evidence against Dreyfus. He knew that it meant social ruin and physical peril, but he did not swerve from his determination to see that justice was done the Jewish officer. When he was thrown into prison at Paris, he fully expected to be assassinated, and warned the public that some morning his dead body would be found in the cell labelled "Suicide." He was not even friendly to Dreyfus, and is said to have held pronounced anti-semitic views. Nevertheless, he fought bravely to clear the name of the victim of the fiercest exhibition of race hatred in a century. Picquart's name will stand out clear in one of the blackest episodes of modern times.

THE "NOES" HAVE IT.

THE gentlemen who write the headlines are having a great run on the word "No" just now. For instance, in the Advertiser of yesterday morning appeared the following captions: "No revision of the tariff this session." "No action toward navy." "No reduction in debt."

The Borden Government promises to give Canada the greatest display of inaction in the country's history.

LEGAL CHANCE.

[Cleveland Plaindealer.] No one is getting married in Wisconsin since the eugenic law has gone into effect. They may have to pass a special splinter and bachelor tax law to offset the effect of the other one.

TRY THIS.

[Ladies' Home Journal.] She—No, George; I am afraid I cannot marry you. I want a man who possesses a noble ambition; whose heart is set on attaining some high and worthy object.

He—Well, don't I want you?

She—Oh, George! I am yours.

SPORT NOTE.

[Chicago News.] With three big leagues the discovery of the world's baseball championship henceforth will be a matter of still greater difficulty.

ROCKABY BABY.

[New York Sun.] Rockaby, baby, See it is late, Put up your Euclid Homer can wait Fashion your verses No more tonight, Finish your treatise When it is light. See how your biceps Bulge with the strain, Wrestling with father, Boxing with Jane. Be your dear slumbers, Ever so deep Sweet dreams of Darwin Lighten your sleep.

HIS FIRST WORDS.

[Detroit Free Press.] All day long she longed for his return, that she might tell him. At last she heard his step coming up the garden walk, and she rushed to let him in.

"Oh, John!" she cried. "The baby can talk."

"No!" he said.

"Yes!" she shouted, throwing her arms about his neck. She had never seen her look more fetching.

"He can talk!" He can talk!" she cried, and led the way to the nursery. "The baby was sitting up in his cradle, wide awake."

"He only knows one sentence, but he has been saying it all day," she said.

"Oo goo booda wah," said the baby distinctly.

The father drew a breath of wonder.

"Great Scott!" he breathed, "how does he know that at his age!"

And for three weeks he insisted on buying all the drinks, no matter how large the crowd was.

THE CURSE OF POLITENESS.

[Detroit Free Press.] He took another spoonful of soup just to make sure, but, being the politest of men, he didn't say anything.

"What do you think of the weather we're having?" said his wife as she toyed with her spoon, preparatory to beginning.

"We certainly are having it," he replied, and took another spoonful just to make doubly sure.

But even then he didn't say anything.

It is difficult to describe how polite he was. "It wasn't such bad weather that we had last week, either," his wife continued, still toying with her spoon. "But there was so much of it!" he answered, and took another spoonful just to satisfy himself beyond the shadow of a doubt.

But still he made no comment whatever.

His wife took a spoonful.

"How odd!" she remarked. "The cook has served us the washing bluing instead of the soup!"

He flung the spoon at the picture of the three hung-up ducks over the mantel piece.

"Hang politeness!" he cried.

THE DARKNESS.

The darkness has been very kind to me; She has shut out the white flame of the world.

Hidden the sun of sorrow when it hurried Its beam on me, and I was lost in light!

She brought the velvet healing of the night.

Which was frantic with the starling day, Till round about me her great spirit lay.

A waveless ocean, drowning my dismay.

The darkness has been very kind to me; Like a still prayer thought by a lonely nun

Her quiet is; the day's griefs, one by one, Drift to the shore of long-forgotten things.

And hushed are the loud earth's old echoes, Deep in her bosom, deep, Oh, very deep,

I hide my head when her first shadows creep; And sink at last within the pool of sleep.

SHIPPING HOUSES.

[Guelph Mercury.] A number of houses were shipped from Quebec to Guelph this week, and are now being re-erected here. The cellars will be sent later.

RIDGETOWN'S BOAST.

[Ridgetown Dominion.] Clinton boasts that the members of its town council weigh 1,672 pounds. That's nothing. Ridgetown's town council weighs a ton or better.

The Auction Wedding.

One of the small papers published an item this week which was a weird mixup of an account of a wedding and an auction notice. The most interesting part of the item follows:

"William Smith, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Smith, and Miss Lucy Anderson were disposed of at public auction at my farm one mile east in the presence of seventy guests, including two mules and twelve head of cattle."

The parties, averaging 1,250 pounds on the hoof. The beautiful home of the bride was decorated with one silky ruse, one feed grinder and two sets of work.

They were, one sheep, who, carrying a bunch of bride's roses in her hand was very beautiful. She wore one light spring wagon, two crates of apples, three racks of hay, one grindstone of moustine, and a trimmings with about one hundred bushels of spuds. The bridal couple left yesterday on an extended trip. Terms spot cash."

In the Wake of the News.

A New Jersey man set his barn on fire to call guests to a banquet. He probably had pawned his dinner bell to buy the banquet.

The climate in the garden was as balmy as July.

According to Uncle Abner.

Along about next August the perspiring public will be referring back tenderly to that dear old-fashioned winter.

A fellow can't really be a regular man of the world until he can call every bartender in town by his first name.

A wife's last weapon to silence her husband is usually a bundle of love letters he wrote her before they were married.

A conductor is always optimistic about making up lost time, but the engineer is somewhat of a pessimist.

The Auction Wedding.

One of the small papers published an item this week which was a weird mixup of an account of a wedding and an auction notice. The most interesting part of the item follows:

"William Smith, the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Smith, and Miss Lucy Anderson were disposed of at public auction at my farm one mile east in the presence of seventy guests, including two mules and twelve head of cattle."

The parties, averaging 1,250 pounds on the hoof. The beautiful home of the bride was decorated with one silky ruse, one feed grinder and two sets of work.

They were, one sheep, who, carrying a bunch of bride's roses in her hand was very beautiful. She wore one light spring wagon, two crates of apples, three racks of hay, one grindstone of moustine, and a trimmings with about one hundred bushels of spuds. The bridal couple left yesterday on an extended trip. Terms spot cash."

In the Wake of the News.

A New Jersey man set his barn on fire to call guests to a banquet. He probably had pawned his dinner bell to buy the banquet.

The Standard Oil Company is backing a string of five and ten-cent stores. Uncle John D. always said to save the pennies.

J. P. Morgan asked: "Who can unscramble eggs?" J. P. Morgan, Jr., seems to be the guy who knows how.

Col. Lil Russell says beauty is absolutely necessary to success, but President Wilson has not found it so.

Orville Wright has invented a stabilizer for aeroplanes, which sounds more hoarse than aeronautic.

A snow shovel in the hand is worth a dozen New Year's resolutions in the mind.

Cleveland hen has laid an egg with 1914 on it—probably meaning $19.14 a dozen.

Lucky Adam.

He had no fear of microbes, for they camped not on his trail, The law never worried him a bit, because there were no jail.

He owed no tailor's bill, because he didn't dote on style.

The cost of living was a joke at which he would smile.

He worried not about the trusts, nor yet the power of wealth;

There never was a single thing the matter with his health.

He had no furnace fire to stoke and no hard coal to buy,

The climate in the garden was as balmy as July.

NOTE OF OPTIMISM

of students filling its classrooms; overcrowding, such as the University of Toronto experiences, and is unable to cope with. In the five years that have elapsed since the Western University became a public institution and under our government, there has been no substantial increase in the number of its students. With facilities for five times the number in arts, the attendance cannot really be said to be more than in numbers—a beggarly half-hundred.

Are Citizens Loyal?
The means were afforded; indeed I have little doubt that more per student has been expended in teaching, in the Western University during those years, than is the average of other universities; and yet even the citizens of London have chosen to send their children to other universities at a cost of hundreds of dollars a year each.

There is little use in shouting for a university in London, if its first needs, that which will do the most good, students, are persistently withheld from it. It is quite fair to ask those who are how they expect the governors of the university to obtain means for its support in the ground that there is a public need of it, and a public demand for it, if they persistently, and at great cost to themselves, continue to do that which affords the strongest argument and proof that there is neither need nor demand? How can it be expected that the governors can continue the department of education that the Western University should be accepted as a school for the special university education of the highest class of school teachers, when London's citizens do not accept it as sufficient for the ordinary university education of their children?

Beanstalks Die Quickly.
There are doubtless those who expected the Western University, when built as a public institution, to grow like Jack's beanstalk, in a night; for—getting that such a growth would be likely to die in a day. It must be recognized that a university is not a thing of a day or a year; but, from the beginning, is to be built with a view to a life rather of centuries, increasing in quality and quantity to meet the needs of higher education of the years to come. The momentous character of the undertaking must be grasped, the great labor and difficulties involved in it must not be overlooked; but they must be met, and, if met unprepared for, may be disastrous. That some substantial headway has been made may be shown in a few words.

Having concluded that the need existed, and that, instead of closing them, the university's doors should be opened wide, our real difficulties began.

Where was the money to come from? Earnings were out of the question, they would provide for not much more than the "greasing of the wheels."

Endowment was also out of the question. Even a million dollars would provide for most, but $50,000 a year, and the University of Toronto has an annual grant from the province of nearly ten times that sum, and that goes only part way towards paying its current expenses.

Even if $50,000 a year would have been enough, where could $1,000,000 be had for the purpose?

Private subscription from year to year, that hand-to-mouth method which had led in the force before the university became a public institution, would be as inefficient as, and more precarious than, the earnings from students; besides being unjust to those who might be induced to subscribe. Being a public institution, why should one person, more than another, voluntarily pay for its support?

Out of Public Funds.

There was but one source out of which the institution could be always officially maintained; and that source was, and is, the public funds. Being a public educational institution—and such an institution of the highest kind—like all other public schools, it ought to be maintained out of the taxes paid by the public.

But that contention was met by the objection that the province had long been committed to the capitalizing scheme of one great university—to become perhaps the greatest in the world—for the whole province; that university being the University of Toronto at Toronto.

To reverse, or even to make any inroad upon, such a policy was naturally a difficult task; and one which could, at best, be hoped to be made successful only after a long and persistent struggle, and the accumulation of all the evidence available to prove that that one university could not fully satisfy all the needs of higher education throughout the province; that there is already a real need of at least some modification of the scheme.

Hope is in Sight.

But we have, I hope, almost succeeded; and are, I trust, within measurable distance of maintenance, to a considerable extent, out of the public funds.

Once we are assured of that, assured of our daily bread, as it were, we shall be out of the woods; there ought to be then nothing to hinder us in running the course that is set before us. Without it our doors should be closed.

Until assured of continual maintenance it would, in my judgment, have been more than unjust to ask for any voluntary aid. There are enough educational institutions erected only to be torn down, in time, for want of means to carry them on. To add another would be an extremely short-sighted proceeding.

Once assured of long life, we can fairly and confidently ask the inhabitants, and some of the municipalities of Western Ontario, and especially those of the city of London, voluntarily to provide a home for the university fitting for all time to come; and enough to create an endowment fund large enough to bring the university within the Carnegie foundation group, so that it may be on a par with the best of the other universities.

The Means of Financing.
My scheme, as you know, would be to seek a very substantial grant for these purposes from the province, the city of London, and the county of Middlesex, as well as from those who have the means and the inclination to aid in building up such institutions, and the public generally, every one of whom, in this district, should have a real interest in the welfare of the institution; and very many

ADVOCATE PRINCIPLE OF LAND TAXATION
Secretary of Tax Reform League
Says Present System Is All Wrong.

"Safety First" is the motto you see everywhere on the railroads," said Sydney Thompson, beginning his address on the single tax, in the city hall last night, "but what about the shacks and rickety tenements, these veritable fire-traps that we have in our cities, and why do we not follow up the 'Safety First' motto in demanding safer and more sanitary factories?"
Mr. Thompson, who is secretary of the Tax Reform League of Eastern Canada, pointed out that present day systems of taxation encourage the lazy man, the speculator who performs no productive or useful labor, but who is a parasite reaping the benefit of the improvements made by his neighbors. The taxation of land values, Mr. Thompson said, would be an effective remedy for the state of affairs.
ADD SINGLE TAX B(oi)Ma't ta aa
Natural monopolies, it was pointed out, would be considered the same as land values. Thus street railway and other public utility franchises would not escape taxation.
One great advantage of taxation on land values is that such a tax cannot be evaded. An income tax, for instance, can be and is often evaded.
Mr. Thompson outlined the history of the single tax movement in this country, and explained the work of the Tax Reform League, through its lectures, and educational bureau, its press bureau, and its publishing department, which issues a monthly, "The Square Deal."
Reference was made to the system of taxation in operation in Vancouver. That city, it was pointed out, is known as a single tax city, but Mr. Thompson said it does not assess its land high enough. In Manitoba farm improvements are exempt from taxation.
Tax On Land Values Only.
The single tax, it was made clear, is a tax on land values, not on land. Land values depend largely on population, and the use made of or the demand for land in a certain vicinity. Single taxers think that such land should be taxed at the same value whether it is built upon or not. They are opposed to a business tax. The Tax Reform League aims to keep the single tax movement a non-political one, said Mr. Thompson.
John A. Cottam, a vice-president of the league, presided, and spoke of the injustice of penalizing a man for improving his property.
Among those present, who took part in the discussion, were ex-Ald. E. H. Johnston, vice-president of the league; W. E. Saunders, George Moran, W. G. Stewart, W. B. Lawson, William Scarrow and Claude Sanagan.
Mr. Thompson's arguments were received with quite apparent favor.

LONDON G.T.R. ENGINEER HAS NARROW ESCAPE

James H. Rhynd, a Grand Trunk engineer, residing at 533 Ontario street, this city, had a narrow escape from death at Hamilton Friday, while assisting in uncoupling an air hose between his engine and a baggage car.
Passenger train No. 78 from Toronto, in charge of Conductor J. McLaughlin and Engineer Rymal, of Toronto, stopped at the junction cut just west of Hamilton in order to allow the pilot engine to couple on before proceeding into the Stuart street depot. The train baggage car was unable to break an air hose connection and Engineer Rhynd went to his assistance.
Not knowing that Rhynd was between the car and tender the engineer of the pilot engine backed into the train, pinning Rhynd between the cars.
The injured man was immediately taken to the depot where medical attention was summoned. It was found that he had received a number of bad scalp wounds, and it was also thought that internal injuries had resulted. Mr. Rhynd was removed to his home on G. T. R. express No. 15. When an Advertiser reporter called at the house last night he was reported to be resting easily.

The Mendelssohn Choir of Toronto, as in previous years, is again proving a real sensation in musical circles, not only on account of the great variety and general excellence of their programs, but also on account of the rare opportunity offered the lovers of good music, of hearing such noted artists as Mr. Reed Miller, one of the foremost tenors of the time, and Mr. Horatio Connell, a baritone with an enviable reputation both in Europe and America. Miss Mildred Potter, a contralto who occupies a leading position among concert singers of the United States, and Miss Florence Hinkle, soprano, who, on account of her great success in Toronto on previous occasions needs no introduction. In order to give its patrons the privilege of this opportunity, the Canadian Pacific Railway will have a special rate of $2.95 in effect, good going on the Toronto express, leaving London at 12:40 noon, and good returning on any regular train the following day. There will, however, be a special train leave Toronto immediately after the choir concert, making fast time to London, in order that business people will not lose any more time than necessary on the trip. Tickets and information at the city ticket office, corner Dundas and Richmond streets. W. Fulton, agent.

WILL INVESTIGATE GIRL'S DEPORTATION
Servant Girl Turned Back at the Border.

ALONE IN NEW YORK CITY

Without Being Able to Speak a Word of English, Young Girl, Bound for London, Is in Serious Plight.

Controller J. P. Moore received a telegram Friday evening from the Immigration Department stating that the case of the Greek servant girl, being brought to London, who was turned back at Niagara Falls by the Canadian immigration authorities, will be investigated immediately. The girl was accompanying Mrs. Louis Pernokis, of this city, and her six children, who were returning from a trip to Greece. They were met at New York by George Pernokis, the brother-in-law of Mrs. Pernokis, after resting one day in that city, proceeded to Niagara Falls. Here the immigration officers refused to admit the girl, saying that in order to comply with the regulations she should have proceeded to the border immediately on landing in New York. The girl was sent back to New York, while the rest of the party, being residents of Canada, were allowed to proceed to this city.

Louis Pernokis, on learning the facts, immediately placed the matter in the hands of the firm of solicitors of which Controller Moore is a member. He telegraphed the department at Ottawa for an explanation, and received a message Friday night to the effect that the matter would be promptly investigated. What is to become of the girl in the meantime is causing Mr. Pernokis considerable worry, as she cannot speak a word of English.

ZEPHYRS OF HUMOR FOR A WINTER SEASON

CIRCUMSTANCES ALTER CASES

MRS. O'MULLIGAN lay very ill in bed and was not expected to live. All the members of the family were called to her bedside. They stood round, looking mournful and taking a sly inventory of the furniture.

"Mike," said the old mother, "you'll remember to give that dresser to Bridget?"

"I will that," I'll remember, sure. Faith, that a memory she has!"

"How generous she is, the dear creature," murmured Bridget, weeping and wondering what else she was going to get.

"She is, indeed," said the rest of the family.

"And, Mike, there's the horse for Tim; don't forget the horse for Tim." "No, mother; aye, isn't it wonderful, now? Conscious and reasonable to the last!"

"And mind you give my gold watch to Pat, Mike; I've wound it up for him and it's keeping good time. And there's the pig for you, Mike, and the cow for Kathleen, and the chest of drawers for Larry—"

"Aye, it's marvelous, indeed. Her memory is perfect to the end. She doesn't forget one single thing!"

"And, Mike, remember Donovan, the grocer, and pay him the fifteen pounds we owe him."

"Don't listen to her! Don't listen to her!" yelled the family. "She's raving! She's raving!"

BOUND TO GRUMBLE

THEY still talk at Pentonville about the prisoner who always grumbled at everything. He was sentenced to death, and as he went down the stairs from the dock he grumbled: "Silly old duffer. What did he want to keep me waiting three weeks for?"

"The van was waiting, and he grumbled about having to ride in 'a grumbling baby-hutch like that,' and demanded a taxi."

Being in the condemned cell, he could order what he liked, and he had a steak. As soon as he got his knife into it he grumbled at "this 'ere confounded foreign meat' again."

At night he complained of his mattress, and by day he grumbled at his cell. At last the hangman called and got him in position, plumed, and said soothingly: "Now you're all right."

"I don't know about that," replied the grumbling prisoner. "This blooming plank don't seem any too safe to me."

NOT SURPRISING

MR. UPTON SINCLAIR, the American author, became famous through his exposure of the methods of Chicago beef packers, was in this country for some time recently, but he has now returned to the States.

While over here he was telling a story of a game of cards in the Wild West. A tenderfoot, looking on, saw one of the players deal himself four aces from the bottom of the pack. The tenderfoot whispered indignantly to another onlooker: "Did you see that?"

"What?" asked the other.

"That swindler dealt himself four aces!" the tenderfoot hissed.

"What?" was the astonishing reply. "Wasn't it his deal?"

HER THREAT

A CERTAIN young couple who were married some months ago never had a cloud to mar their happiness until recently. One morning the young wife came to breakfast in an extremely sulky and unhappy mood. To all her husband's inquiries she returned snappish answers. She was in no better frame of mind when he came home that evening for dinner, all of which mystified the young husband.

Finally, late in the evening, in reply to his insistent demands to know what the matter was, the wife burst into tears and replied: "Henry, if ever I dream again that you have kissed another woman I'll never speak to you as long as I live!"

NOT RELIABLE

"No, I never take my wife to the theatre. Pieces I haven't seen before might be improper, and anything I go to a second time is sure to be."

TRAVELER'S TACT

A YOUNG man who had just been engaged as commercial traveler by a Canadian firm was warned that the great fault of his predecessor had been want of tact. The young man started out, and, in the course of his employment, orders began to come in at a quite unprecedented rate.

The climax came when a big order was sent in from a firm with whom the wholesale house had had a bitter quarrel, ending in a total stoppage of business.

The traveler's employers sent for him on his return and asked him how he had managed that particular miracle.

"I used tact, sir," was the reply. "as you warned me to. When I got to Mr. B's shop he came up and asked me what firm I represented. Remembering the circumstances, I handed him my card and said, 'Why, these blooming idiots!'"

YOUTH'S LIGHTNING CALCULATIONS

THE president of a Canadian college said of youth at a tea: "I find youth modest, almost over-modest. I don't agree with the accepted idea of youth that is epitomized in the anecdote."

"According to this anecdote, an old man said to a youth: 'My boy, when I was your age I thought, like you, that I knew it all; but now I have reached the conclusion that I know nothing.'"

"The youth, lighting a cigarette answered carelessly: 'Hm! I reached that conclusion about you years ago.'"

GENEROUS

MISTRESS (engaging cook): "I can't pay you all the wages you want, but I'll give you all my coat-off clothes to wear."

FAIRLY CAUGHT

IN the university town of Dorpat, in Russia, a prosaic, plodding farmer complained to a justice of the peace that he had been defrauded by the defendant of twenty roubles—about three pounds.

"I bought a cow from him—he is a peasant, your honor," he explained, "and I first paid for the animal and then asked him to drive it from the market-place into my yard. This he agreed to do. Well, when he had the cow close to my barn he refused to budge a step farther unless I paid him twenty roubles, saying that he had received nothing from me. This was a barefaced lie, because I paid him the money a few minutes before."

"Where are your witnesses?" asked the judge.

"Witnesses! I have not a single witness. What are the witnesses for? Doesn't he know right well, the contemptible cur, that I paid him the money?"

"You must not call him names!" interposed the judge. "Did he pay you the money?" he asked the defendant. "I never saw the color of it, your honor. Why, if he had paid me, do you think—"

"That will do!" exclaimed the judge. "The plaintiff's claim, unsupported by witnesses or evidence of any kind, cannot succeed. He seems an honest fellow, though, and has evidently lost his twenty roubles. Let us get up a subscription for him. I will head the list with five roubles. Won't you give something, too?" inquired the judge of the defendant.

"That I will," was the eager response, "with a whole heart! Will three roubles do? Here's the note."

The judge took the three-rouble note, examined it critically, looked suspiciously at the giver, and said: "You dare to utter false money in an imperial court of justice! Have you any more notes of this description? This is a very serious matter indeed. Where did you get this forged money?"

The man turned very white, gave a series of explanations that contradicted each other, muttered and floundered about from lie to lie, till at last in despair he cried out: "If you want to know the whole truth, here it is! This forged note belongs to the plaintiff. He did pay me twenty roubles for the cow, the rascal, but he paid me in forged notes and that's one of them! It all amounts to just what I said, that he didn't pay me at all, and it's he that must go to Siberia for uttering forged notes, not I. I am as innocent as the babe unborn!"

But the perjured defendant was as fond of being as good as any to be found in the empire of the Czar. He had been cleverly tricked by the judge.

NOTHING DOING

TEACHER (setting subject for composition): "What would you do if you suddenly came into possession of fifty thousand pounds?"

Tommy (speaking aloud): "Nuffink! Abso-bally-lutely—nuffink!"

LOYAL TO HIS MATE

TWO men were shooting, little knowing that a policeman was watching them from behind a hedge, for his suspicions were aroused. Suddenly he darted out into the open and came upon them.

"I want to see your licences," he exclaimed.

Immediately one of the men ran away as hard as he could go. Convinced now that his suspicions were correct, the policeman pursued him up hill and down dale for about a couple of miles. At last he caught him and again demanded the licence. To his surprise it was instantly produced.

"What on earth did you make me run all this way for if you've got a licence?" cried the police-officer angrily.

"Cause my friend hadn't got one!" was the reply.

And father did—that's the wonder of it!

AND THAT WAS ALL

MAUD: "Well, how did he propose? Just tell me all about it."

PHYLLIS: "Er—when he started he was on his knees, and—er—er—when he finished I was on them."

WHY TRADE SLACKENS

BUSINESS was slack, but Jones, the barber, hearing a customer's footstep, immediately busied himself with the razor-strop.

His spirits dropped, however, when informed that the man wanted nothing more than to have his hair trimmed.

"Shave yourself, don't you, sir?" he inquired as he snipped the hair round the customer's ears.

"Yes, how did you know that?"

"No barber would turn out a job like that in these hard days. Besides, we might as well shave up shop if everybody shaved themselves."

"Perhaps," murmured the customer indifferently, adjusting the towel round his neck.

Jones snipped and cut in silence, but after a few moments broke out again in an aggrieved tone of voice: "You're in business, ain't you, sir? Well, suppose no barbers ever bought anything of you, how would you like it?"

"Shouldn't mind," answered the customer off-handedly. "I sell mouth-organs!"

The barber finished hurriedly and in silence.

ANTICIPATED

HE was full of zeal for the temperance cause and was holding a series of lectures in a workman's hall. But the audience were very unkind and kept interrupting. So much so that at last he hired an ex-prize-fighter to keep order. That night the orator contrasted the contents of home-life with the squalor of drunkenness.

"What is it we want when we return home from our daily toil?" he asked.

"What do we want to ease our burden, to gladden our hearts, to bring smiles to our faces and joyous songs to our lips?"

He paused for effect, and in the silence could be heard the voice of the keeper of the peace.

"Mind," he said, "the first bloke that says 'beer,' out he goes with a bang."

HE TOOK CHANCES

THE judge in the wild and woolly West had declared that he would stop the carrying of firearms in the street. Before him appeared for trial a tough youth charged with getting drunk and firing his revolver in a crowded street.

"Twenty dollars and costs," said the judge.

"But, your honor," interposed counsel for the prisoner, "my client did not hit anybody."

"Why, you admit that he fired the gun?"

"Yes, but he fired it into the air," explained the lawyer.

"Twenty dollars and costs," repeated the judge. "He might have shot an angel."

HE DIDN'T MIND WAITING

A CANADIAN, wishing to know his fate at once, telegraphed a proposal of marriage to the lady of his choice. After spending the entire day at the telegraph office he was finally rewarded late in the evening by an affirmative answer.

"If I were you," suggested the operator, "I'd think twice before I'd marry a girl that kept me waiting all day for my answer."

"No, no," retorted the man. "The girl who waits for the night rates is the girl for me."

SOMETHING CHEAP

MRS. WIGGINS had "run in" for a minute to talk over the latest news of the village with her friend, Mrs. Hopkins.

"Do you know," she said, "they tell me that old Mr. Magee only subscribed two shillings to the minister's salary. That doesn't seem possible, does it?"

"To anybody that knows Silas Magee real well, it does," replied Mrs. Hopkins. "You haven't lived in this town all your life, Mrs. Wiggins, and you don't know what Silas is capable of. Why, I remember once when he was a young fellow, going to singing school with the rest of us, we got up a picnic."

"One of the girls spoke up and said she'd bring some chicken sandwiches. 'I'll bring some sultana cake,' says another."

"I'll fetch some jelly and buns," says somebody else; and so it went on till we had most everything we could eat promised. Then one of the boys, who had no sisters, said he would bring the coffee. That gave Silas his chance. He'd been sitting by, listening to it all, and now he spoke up real brisk, and says he: 'I'll bring the water for the coffee!'"

"No, Mrs. Wiggins. I ain't surprised a mite at his subscribing only two shillings. The surprising thing is that it wasn't one."

MADE IT CLEAR

LAWYERS have a way of making things so clear that no one but a lawyer can understand them. A distinguished member of the profession was recently probing a witness.

"My good woman," he said in a clear, distinct voice, "you must be specific; you must give an answer, in the fewest possible words of which you are capable, to the plain and simple question whether you were crossing the street with the baby on your arm and the omnibus was coming down on the right side and the cab on the left and the brougham was trying to pass the omnibus, and you saw the plaintiff, between the brougham and the cab, or whether, and when you saw him at all, and whether near or not near the brougham, cab, or omnibus, or either, or any two, and which of them respectively—or how was it?"

"Yes, sir!" ventured the witness in utter confusion.

MISSED

HE was a countryman on a visit to London, and one evening he dropped into a suburban music hall, where the "star" turn was a Mexican knife thrower.

Being ignorant of the Mexican's intentions, he stared hard when a colored lady with a repulsive countenance stood up in front of the board.

The Mexican walked majestically across the stage, and after several flourishes, threw a knife which whizzed past the lady's ear and stuck in the board, quivering, within an inch of her head, at which the countryman fell back in his seat with a gasp, exclaiming: "Good Heavens, he's missed!"

A SLIGHT MISTAKE

BROWN is a very good fellow, but alas! he has one bad habit. It is that of never reaching home until the small hours of the morning.

Mrs. Brown hit upon a plan. If she could not persuade him out of the habit perhaps she could frighten him out of it.

Consequently, when he reached home one night he was confronted by a tall, white-shrouded figure, which glided up to him.

"Wh-wh-what's that?" gasped poor Brown.

"I am the family ghost," replied a sepulchral voice.

Brown heaved a sigh of relief. "Great Scott!" he said. "How you frightened me. I thought you were the misus."

MAKING SURE

Lion Tamer: "What's that?"

Onlooker: "That you take the tiger out first!"

How the City Looked Fifty Years Ago; Business and Home Life of Early London

SOME REMINISCENCES OF CITY ASSESSOR GRANT

Suppose there had been moving picture cameras away back in 1869 and one of these days you were to drop into the movie show around the corner and see the streets and buildings and the frame houses of London that early day, what a contrast it would be with the substantial, well-built, modern city of London that you live in today.

A Londoner who vividly recalls London of '69 is Mr. Stephen Grant, assessment commissioner. In that year Mr. Grant as a young man left his native town of Birr, in his native county Tipperary, Ireland, to come to London, where he has since resided.

In those days where the new city hall is to be built and where the McCormick biscuit factory still stands was a wood market. The McCormick factory of that day stood next to the First Presbyterian Church, about 476-478 Park avenue. There was a hay market in front of the site of the London Club, on Queen's avenue. Perrin's factory was a frame building on the east side of Richmond street, near where the Grigg House is today. On the site of the Dominion Savings building was Reid's crockery.

Artillery Barracks.
Baxter's woodyard was where Sir George Gibbon's residence is, and on the east side of Wellington street, between Dufferin and Central avenues, was the artillery barracks. The infantry barracks was on the north side of Victoria Park. On the south side of the park was a cricket field. All was surrounded by a stump fence made of large stumps said to have been dug out by soldiers on fatigue drill. Subsequently James Guttridge, ex-policeman, was given permission to draw the stumps away and for a long time they were piled at the corner of St. James' and Adelaide streets.

Bank Sites Unchanged.
The Merchants' Bank, the Bank of British North America, the Bank of Montreal, and the present postoffice, except for subsequent additions, occupy the same sites as in 1869. The customs house building was then in course of construction by a contractor named Dunnett, and the customs offices were temporarily located in the second floor of the Carling Block, then the finest building in London.

Same Old Station.
The Tecumseh House and the Grand Trunk station, says Mr. Grant, remain unchanged since 1869, and at that time the station presented a very fair appearance.

S. H. Graydon was mayor in that year and A. S. Abbot was city clerk. William

MR. STEPHEN GRANT, CITY ASSESSOR.

Robinson was city engineer, and John Blair and John Fraser were tax collectors. Richard Wigmore was chief of police, and William Baskerville was sergeant of police. L. Lawless was postmaster, and L. Lawson police magistrate.

Court in City Hall.
The police court rooms were in the old city hall, where the assessment offices were located until recently. The police station was where the Licensing Inspector J. W. McCallum's office was, and the police cells were where the private office of the manager of the Royal Bank is now. When the prisoners were unruly, however, they were taken down in the cellar, where there were additional cells.

Prince Arthur's Visit.
The old fair grounds north of Central avenue, east of Richmond street, and west of Waterloo street, was opened in the year '69 by Prince Arthur, the present Governor-General, who was entertained by the city at Ald. Glackmeyer's house. Mr. John A. Cotnam, and the offices of the Bradford Society. Where the old Chapter House, now used as Daly's tea warehouse, stands today was a market on Bathurst street, now the residence of garden kept by one Edward Penny.

Lake Horn.
Where the creek runs south of the C. P. R. station was Lake Horn, now nearly filled up, and covered by the C. P. R. yards. Lake Horn was the skating rendezvous for the "sixty-minners" and there was a covered skating rink over part of the lake.

Market fees were collected. In those days, there were heavy grain and pork markets. James Gibson, three feet nine inches in height, collected market tolls and counts councils went together, and abolished, the one the market fees, and the other the toll gates on the county roads leading to the city.

The city hospital was on the corner of the old Bank of Toronto Chambers and this was the Red Lion Hotel and the Mansion House. Where the wholesale warehouses stand on the west side of Richmond, a few doors further south, was a music hall, owned by the Holman Opera Company.

The Churches of '69.
There were two Anglican churches, St. Paul's Cathedral and Christ Church, besides St. John's Chapel at Huron College, the old material of which was built into the present schoolroom of the Church of St. John the Evangelist.

Bishop Cronyn was the head of the Huron Diocese and Bishop Helmuth was then dean. Rev. G. M. Innes was rector of St. Paul's. There were also Sunday schoolrooms in the suburbs, in which services were conducted by the students of Huron College. There were two Methodist churches, the North Street Church, now the First Methodist, and another church on Queen's avenue, and another church on Pall Mall street. There was also a Wesleyan New Connection Church on Clarence where the present Salvation Army Citadel is, and the old Bible Christian church on Horton street, now used as a contractor's shop. In addition to these there was a little Methodist mission on Wellington street, Methodist Church site and Christ Church of England. Out of this little mission and the Bible Christian and New Connection Churches grew the present Wellington Street Methodist Church, following the union of the various Methodist bodies. There were four churches, the First Presbyterian, then called Proudfoot's Church, St. James' Presbyterian Church, known as the Beehive Church, occupying the building now held by the First Church of Christ, Scientist, St. Andrew's Church, a frame building on the present site, and around which was a cemetery, and a Galle church further down the street, east of St. Andrew's.

No Street Cars.
There was only one Roman Catholic Church, St. Peter's Cathedral, fronting on Richmond street, on the site of the present building. Bishop Walsh was head of the Diocese of London, and the vicar-general, Brueyre, was also resident here. At his death his remains were interred in a vault underneath where the altar of the cathedral is today, and there they still lie. Father Stone and Father Watters were the cathedral priests.

In those days there were no street cars, not even on week days, and Alexander Calder ran omnibuses on Dundas street, from the market square east to Egerton street, and on the Hamilton road east to Egerton street. Covent Garden Market today occupies the same site as then. Where the Dominion Bank stands on the corner of Dundas and Rectory streets was the entrance to the English Cemetery, which extended east to Salter's Grove, now Queen's Park. The old Methodist Cemetery was on the site of the Gorman-Eckert spice factory on Rectory street.

LONDON CHICKENS ARISTOCRATS OF POULTRY WORLD

Forest City Has Become One of Greatest Fowl Raising Centres of The Continent.

London, Canada, has long been recognized as the real centre and hub of the fancy poultry interests of this fair Dominion. In fact, all over the continent London breeders, exhibitors and judges are known and appreciated for their skill and ability in producing the very finest specimens of the various breeds, and their fairness and sportsmanlike conduct as exhibitors and their expert knowledge and unimpeachable integrity as judges in awarding the honors.

Way back in the eighties there were a coterie of chicken men here whose names are familiar wherever a fancy chicken has ever been raised or put on exhibition.

The Western Fair poultry building, which stood near where the C. P. R. yards are now, was a mecca for the fanciers, and was each year a source of great attraction to visitors to the fair.

Poultry Fashion Change.
As in other things, fashion changes in poultry, and many of the breeds that were most popular at that time have been relegated to the background. An occasional breeder, who has not been stamped by the modernists, still goes on to the old favorites, and sometimes makes a name for himself by prize list in some of the big modern shows.

Undoubtedly some of the new composite varieties are grand fowls, and have been produced by scientific skill and unremitting labor by men who have devoted time and talent to induce old Mother Nature to produce something better than has been. And there have succeeded.

Many of the old-time thoroughbreds, though somewhat neglected for the time being, and out of fashion, have rare good qualities, and so much of the beauty of form and color that they occasionally have a revival and create much interest and pleasure when staged at the exhibitions.

Some Old-Timers.
At the head of the list of old-timers, of course, is Mr. William McNeill, "Uncle Billie," to every fancier, and beloved by the whole tribe; Dr. J. S. Niven, J. H. Saunders, Dr. J. S. Niven, Robert McCurdy, John Aitken, Hugh Wyatt, Harry Tozer, the late Allan Bogue, David Bogue, of London, G. and J. Bogue, of Strathroy, Richard Oke. These are some of the local men who "made the show," and whose names invariably decorated the prize list as big winners.

The newer generation has such well-known and popular breeders as Fred Andrews, John Pringle, Frank Dullmage, M. J. Kiley, John McDonald, George Vaughan, Walter C. Young, W. J. Slessor, Horner Trebilcock, Robert Thomas, James McCormick, William Moore, A. Flawn, A. Hockin, Jack Nash, E. J. Liddicoat, J. W. Jarvis, Charles Spiran, E. and O. Bogue, and many others, who have won his fowls at the "big show" at Guelph and elsewhere.

If one can win at London he can win anywhere is a well-known saying.

From Paris comes this creation in millinery for the coming spring season. It is a model of picot straw with satin crown and ostrich fancy.

and the Western Fair and Thanksgiving Show here set the pace for quality for the exhibitions in other towns and cities all over the country.

Hobby Good For London.
This quiet, unobtrusive hobby of raising and showing fancy poultry has given London and its environs much beneficial advertising, as a product of something useful and beautiful, in quality hard to beat, and of great commercial and domestic value.

HOLD FAST TO THE GOOD THING.

The changeable poultryman seldom succeeds. He thinks his neighbor's breed better than his own, and straightway drops the breed he knows, and has to do the learning of character and habit all over again. It is just another step to try another variety, and soon his houses are filled with a non-descript collection of feather dusters in which he takes neither pleasure nor pride—and he soon chucks the whole game. The man who holds fast to one good variety, and constantly studies and works for its improvement in show points, egg productiveness and general all-around good qualities, is the happy and proud poultry raiser, and he soon makes a name for himself and his birds that spells success with a capital S.

It is the same with appliances and methods of feeding and management. If your house and fixtures are handy and comfortable, why change? If your system of feeding is a success, why change it all for a more notion that someone has a better way? Perhaps that other way would not suit you or your flock, and having proved the good thing in your own particular case, stick to it. Let the other man do the changing. Life is too short for any of us to try to do what all the others are doing. You have one favorite breed, one method of care and feeding, and one system of management. Why change all is working smoothly? Your ways of doing things with your poultry are all right for you. If you want something new, try putting more thought and effort into your year's work with your chickens. Have your own plan and follow it. Don't jump into what is unknown, and you will save time, labor, money and disappointment.

Why won't the old hen lay? Here is a record of the doings of some White Wyandottes that were hatched in June, July and August, and also the doings of some Barred Rocks.

No. 8, at one time laid 17 days without missing a day, and at another time ten days without missing.

No. 13, at one time laid 15 days without missing a day, and at another time 10 days without missing.

No. 11, began laying February 19th and has the following record: February 7, March 18, April 19, May 21, June 21, July 20, August 21, September 14. Total 153.

No. 12, began laying February 17, February 8, March 21, April 21, May 18, June 21, July 21, August 21, September 21. Total 153.

No. 23, began laying February 19, February 7, March 18, April 23, May 22, June 24, July 20, August 22, September 21. Total 153.

No. 28, began laying January 7th, January 10, February 17, March 18, April 20, May 26, June 21, July 23, August 22, September 28. Total 178.

Barred Rocks as Layers.
Here is an egg record of 13 Barred Rock pullets for one year, starting to lay at 6 months old; November 1912, 130; December, 283; January, 1912, 226; February, 226; March, 227; April, 217; May, 222; June, 281; July, 188; August, 148; September, 122; October, 24. Thus making a total of 2,365, or an average of over 181 eggs per pullet.

GETTING EGGS IN WINTER.
Let you a complete egg record of your flock? If so, we will be glad to get the figures for publication. Let us have as many details as possible of your system of feeding and care. Address "Poultry," Advertiser office.

The following hints may prove seasonable and helpful. Try them out unless your own system is a better one, and let us know how they work out.

Make the fowls exercise—exercise is the best health giver. A good way to make them exercise is to keep about eight to twelve inches of litter (straw, hay, chopped corn fodder) on the floor all the time and into this throw all the grain and let them dig for it. If they're hungry enough they'll dig. If they don't dig, the probabilities are, they are not well, and to get them up in condition you had better give them a good mash once a day for a week or so. The mash I am using for this purpose is bran, wheat, corn and oats ground fine, and to this I add beef scrap, a little salt and good poultry powder or tonic.

The Feed.
The feed should be varied and should consist of all the feeds secured by the hens in the summer, or good substitutes. Give them grains in the litter and let them dig for it. Give them green feed. This is the hardest to substitute; chopped clover or alfalfa will help some; potato peelings are fine but one doesn't usually have enough; cabbage and mangels can't be beaten; sprouted oats are excellent. A substitute for bugs and worms is easily secured; green ground bone fills all the requirements. It should be fed at least twice a week. Beef scrap is the most convenient substitute for bugs and worms as it can be put in feed boxes and left before the hens all the time. They will not eat too much of it. If kept dry beef scrap will keep for years. Keep grit, charcoal and crushed oyster shells before them all the time. And don't forget the fresh water.

Age of Hens.
Don't expect to get eggs from old hens. They're seldom worth their keep after they're three weeks old unless they are particularly fine in Standard points, then it would be well to keep them just for breeders. Three years should be the limit and many keep only pullets for egg producers.

In feeding remember the three kinds of feed—grains, green feed and meat. The grains should be any kind and all kinds; the green feed should be as stated and the meats should be green bone or beef scrap.

It is just as easy to give your chickens right care, after you get started in the right direction, as to give them un-

the requirements. It should be fed at least twice a week. Beef scrap is the most convenient substitute for bugs and worms as it can be put in feed boxes and left before the hens all the time. balanced care. Wheat is considered the best egg producing cereal, and yet all wheat would be over-doing the grain feed. All beef scrap and nothing else wouldn't do. Neither would all green stuffs. Give them all three, and with eggs at their present prices there is big money in chickens. The price of eggs is higher in proportion.

The man who says: "There is no money in chickens" is the man who hasn't been able to make his chickens lay. The man who gets half as many eggs these days as he has hens knows "there is money in chickens."

DEAN INGE AND WAR.
Dean Inge, preaching in St. Paul's on Christmas Day, said:
"We modern Europeans are not warlike people. Warlike nations like the Turks do not make these elaborate preparations. The true fighting man trusts to his own right arm to protect him when the time comes. It is the old, rich, timorous nations who laboriously guard themselves against enemies of whom there is no sign in any quarter."

Durborough, On Great Mexican Battle Field, Tells of Hundreds Dead, Prisoners Murdered, Hand-To-Hand Fighting, Starvation and Deadly Disease.

[BY W. H. DURBOROUGH.]

Staff Special.
Ojinaga, Mexico, Jan. 18.—Striven with the dead and wounded of the seven-days battle that has been raging at Ojinaga, the battle field presented a gruesome appearance today when I made a trip under escort to the federal outposts about five miles out of town.

After the fierce attack the rebels made on Ojinaga New Year's Eve, in which they advanced almost to the federal trenches and were repulsed with heavy losses, the fighting was mostly at long range until the last day of the siege, when, during the early morning, the rebels made a complete change of position of their troops and artillery.

Rebel Generals Ortega and Natera left the river bottom, to the east of the town, and allowed no press men to accompany them on their new move.

I crossed the river early and camped in the federal trenches. A high wind was blowing and the dust, which is several inches deep here in most places, was so thick that at times you could not see ten feet ahead.

After leaving the change of position of the rebels, the federal sent about 2,000 cavalry out of Ojinaga and threw out a line from their trenches in the town to within a short distance of the camp the rebels had just left. Firing had been kept up all morning by both sides on the south end of the town.

About 3 o'clock the rebels made a charge on the federal camp of the federal. Then the fighting really began in earnest. The entire federal cavalry column charged the advancing rebels and it was first one side and then the other charging and retreating.

The fighting was fierce for four hours, and when the battle dust and smoke cleared away it was found the rebels had retreated to the mountains about fifteen miles away.

The loss of life was heavy on both sides, as the constant rain of shrapnel, shell and rifle fire was very effective. From personal observation I would say that the rebels in the closing day's battle had 500 killed and 200 wounded, and the federal 250 killed and 150 wounded.

GENERAL SALAZAR'S COMMAND CAPTURED 47 REBELS UNDER MAJOR COMA AND THEY WERE ALL EXECUTED TODAY.

Cd. Luis Cuitia, Chihuahua, was seriously wounded during the battle and died today in the Red Cross hospital at Presidio.

Don Luis Terrazas III was wounded in the foot and was taken to the Red Cross Hospital on the American side.

REFUGEES CROSSING THE RIO GRANDE RIVER FROM MEXICO TO PRESIDIO, TEX.

The sights at Presidio on the United States side of the River Rio Grande are at once picturesque and pitiful. Just imagine thousands of refugees camped along the roadside and in the river bed. Children and women half-naked. Little or no food except what is supplied by Major McNamee's United States troops. Wounded Mexican soldiers, rebel and federal, all wrapped in bandages and lying around camp fires. Red Cross nurses hurrying to and fro doing the best they can for wounded men, starving people and sick children. Uncle Sam's soldiers keeping a watchful eye over all.

To add to the horror of the war side of it, smallpox has broken out in the refugee camps. One case, discovered at the camp, developed a malignant form, and the patient died the next day.

More cases have since been reported and quarantined. Major McNamee is doing everything in his power to prevent the spread of the disease. Every man, woman and child in and around Presidio was vaccinated today. Dr. George H. Chandler is in charge of the medical department here.

On my trip to the outpost this morning I saw fires in every direction and found that the federal were burning the bodies of the dead that fell in the week's fighting.

The federal captured today what is supposed to be one of General Villa's autos bound for the battle field from Chihuahua with 30,000 rounds of ammunition. Major Croz Rosa, in charge of the auto, was killed and his body brought to Ojinaga.

are represented either in a mine or on the surface. At 7 p.m. the night shift begins. Another set of men with gangs go down and remove the loose minerals. The miner points out to those who are to look for the dangerously loose rock, and the trapper shift boss in his turn orders the timbermen where to put the strong supports for next day's crushing. Many deaths are due to the "misfire" holes which explode under this process. One set of men is for ever pumping, as the mine would be swamped in a couple of days otherwise. There is always several feet of water at the bottom. At the end of the shift a special surveyor, employed by the mine, goes down and measures how many fathoms of stone have been broken in a particular drive or stop.

According to the nature and density of the rock, and the corresponding labor varies from twenty to forty shillings.

Keep Them Poor.
The policy of mine-owners is to keep these workers poor and dependent. Until the Great Strike the miner had no resort and no redress. Gold, by whoever possessed, holds a powerful sway, even over the government of a country. In order to choke complaints a bylaw was made in Johannesburg that mine employees can be discharged at 24 hours' notice. A man with a (generally numerous) family to support will think twice before airing a grievance, which will receive for only answer "Very well. Go and get your time" (dismissal and pay up to shillings).

And Foot. In Bad State. Inflamed and Festered. Could Not Sleep. Completely Cured by Cuticura Ointment in Short Time.

Middle La Hava, N. S.—"My sister scalded her leg and foot very badly with a pan of boiling water. She suffered very much and her leg was in a bad state. The skin was red and inflamed and it festered. She suffered dreadful pain. She scalded it in the evening and could not sleep that night and could not bear to have anything near it.

"We tried — and then some — but everything seemed to make worse and she just screamed with pain. I told my mother about Cuticura Ointment and we got a box immediately and bandaged up her foot and leg. Two applications made quite a difference and we kept on using it and in a short time her leg and foot were completely cured." (Signed) Miss L. Parks, May 17, 1913.

date). If he lives in a hut on the mine property, this has to be vacated at the same short notice. It is a universal belief among these toilers of the deep that the surveyors of fathoms are warned against exceeding a certain limit in their calculations. A miner acquaintance, of unusual strength of will and determination, anxious to leave his family independent when his time came to be pensioned off for phthisis, had long had doubts about the accuracy of the returns in his particular case.

False Measure and True.
My friend determined on a plan. At the end of a month, having crushed nearly twice the usual amount of rock, he received a check for fifty pounds. Instead of cashing this, he engaged a private surveyor to go down with him and measure his fathoms. The mine captain came up when they were descending.

The Things That Matter.
Similar reports come from other mining districts: from Durham and from North Monmouth, where the suffragists have had meetings so crowded with women as to astound the men of the locality who knew their habits. In North Monmouth a miner came up after one of the meetings and said to the speaker: "I think even you women can't know all the good you're doing. You are speaking to us at last about the things that matter. You've set the women, and the men, too, thinking of things most politicians never talk about—real things!" In another place a miners' official begged the speaker to come and address a men's meeting at the pit-head on the subject of pit-head strikes, because the subject having been used as an illustration of the need of the woman's point of view, it had made so deep an impression on the audience.

One can fancy a contemptuous "Anti" crying, "Exactly" these women want to share in co-opting-making, and they baffle of Baths!" But one remembers that so did Florence Nightingale, and that the roots of imperial property are set in the homes of the people. Working men know this, and in a Lancashire constituency where the suffragists had been especially active, organizing opposition to an anti-suffragist member, a working man spoke of the inmates which the women had given to movements for industrial and social reform, and added: "I only hope that the women will maintain their interest when the vote is won and the real work begins. It's work only women can do."

A Movement of Workers.
This, then, appears to be the immediate future of the women's movement of working women and that the sympathetic attitude of labor men, particularly of organized labor, is a proof of the much greater confidence working men have in their women than middle-class men have in their women. This is making middle-class women think very seriously, and ponder how much the general slackness of members of Parliament, even when they profess to be favorable to women's suffrage, is due to the fact that the majority of them are still middle-class men, with the attitude of their class towards women.

And middle-class women are asking themselves what they can do to move these men to change their attitude. Unless some constructive policy of adaptation is evolved to meet the growing needs and consciousness of women, nothing is more certain than that the suffragists' meetings (described by a hostile journalist as discussing "fringe politics") were full of matter of vital concern to women. They came in their hundreds, and are described as sitting with shining eyes fixed on the speaker, drinking in every word that was so well directed at a woman's heart, and they crowded up afterwards to beg the speakers to come again, and to tell them they had opened a new world to women.

The Awakening.
There are now millions of shrewd, kindly, experienced women of the working classes who are coming into the women's movement with all the practical wisdom and the ideal of social service characteristic of women at their best. An enormous amount of this awakening has been the work, direct or indirect, of the suffragists. In the recent by-election in South Lanark men and women alike marvelled at the swift ignition of the women's minds by the spark from the suffragists. It has not been the custom for the masses of women in Scotland to take part in elections or go to public meetings, and in South Lanark they came timidly at first. Many of us, even in England, have known the kind of homely woman who says, over her shoulder: "Politics? Me? I've too much work to do to fiddle with politics." Or the still more outspoken macon who declares: "If there is any little thing the men can do without a woman to help 'em, I say let 'em do it!"

But the state of mind which so expresses itself is going fast. The women in South Lanark soon learned that
