Road to Pekin Reported to be Practically Open Again.

Foreign Ministers May be Heard From at any Moment-Their Mysterlous Silence Still Un.

London, July 22, 4. am.—Sir ChihChen-Loh-Feng, the Chinese minister in London, took the unusual step yesterday of paying a Sanday call at the Eorgism Office (Ab. Lond, Salishur, Foreign Office. 'A's Lord Salisbury was absent, the visit was without special result. Sir Halliday McArtney admitted that communication had been practically reopened with Pekin, and that Messages from Sir Claude MacDonald, the British minister and the other foreign envoys might be expected almost immediately. He said he hoped the trouble would soon be over, since the Chinese government was doing its utmost to overcome the difficulties and to control the lawless element. In his opinion the Americans had taken the most common sense view of the situation, and he insisted that China ought not to be misjudged, Against the suspicion that Li Hung Chang had any but a sincere pacific object in view, he protested warmly, declaring "that all stories about the perfidy and treachery of Earl Li were absolutely baseless.' With regard to the prospects in the southern provinces, the secretary admitted that there might be small outbreaks, but he said they would not be serious, and that Europeans would be quite safe in the treaty ports. The long silence he explained as "due probably to the rebels, who have cut the wires and blocked the roads." Thus, according to the secretary of the Chinese legation, a few days more should bring a solu-

Nevertheless, no one in England be-Nevertheless, no one in England be-lieves that the alleged despatches and edicts are anything but subterfuges to hide the real situation as long as pos-sible, and to avert retribution by sow-ing discord among the powers. From Shanghai comes the report that the Empress Dowager and the court are going to Hsian-Fu, in the province of Shan-Si, to which the large stores of tice are sent, and that when these ar-rangements are completed the remaning viceroys will declare against foreigners. According to the Cha Foo correspondent of the Baily Mail the fall of Tien Tsin has so disheartened the Chinese that they are seeking terms of peace. He says that several attempts have been made to send message that the control of the control sages to Pekin, but so far without any known results, and adds that rumors are again current that the Russians are reaching Pekin from the north. It is impossible to confirm or deny these statements, but either one might ex-plain China's efforts to gain time. Li Hung Chang's visit to Shanghai, seems to be a complete failure. Ex-cept the Chinese customs officials, no one has visited him. Sheng, the the Taotai (chief magistrate), gave the consuls a cordial invitation to meet him at luncheon, but all declined. The Shanghai correspondent of the Daily Express pretends to have authority for the assertion that Great Britain will repudiate any credentials Li Hung Chang may bring from the Empress Dowager, and adds:—"Russia, however, is willing to make "Russia, however, is willing to make terms with Li Hung Chang, whose real mission is to sow dissension among the powers. The British, German and American representatives were resolute against receiving him." The Shanghai correspondent of the Daily Mail declares that the Chinese of Single are thoroughly frightened by officials are thoroughly frightened by the fall of Tien Tsin, and desire to open negotiations. "Therefore," he contin-ues "although all are aware of the horrible Pekin massacres, every official down to the humblest retainer, has been sworn to secrecy under the penalty of wholesale executions

Shanghai rumors at hand this morning. One is that Prince Tuan has been abducted, and that the Empress Dawager is again supreme. Another is that the notorious Kang Yi, president of the board of war, has been appointed Viceroy of Canton. The Ten Tsin correspondent of the Daily News says the allies have issued a proclamation.

Want to be Extricated From Their Present Difficult and Dangerous

Position. Washington, D. C., July 23 .- Presi dent McKinley has received what pur ports to be a direct appeal from the Chinese Imperial Government to use his good offices to extricate that government from the difficult and dangerous position in which it has been placed as a result of the Boxer uprising and the ensuing hostile attitude of the great powers. Although the exact text of the appeal made by the Emperor of China to France, as outlined in the cable despatch of yesterday, has not been made known here, it is believed that the address to the President is similar in terms to that communication. In this case the communication was made through Minister Wu to the state department. Thus far a final answer has not been returned.

The Washington administration determined to keep aloof from any movement that would unnecessarily entangle the Government of the United States in Chinese affairs. It is the intention of the administration to withdraw our forces, military and naval, after the Americans in Pekin have been relieved and wash its hands of Chinese affairs, looking only to the preservation of such privileges as it has a right to retain for Amer-

London, July 23.-The War Office has London, July 29.—1 the received the following from Lord Roberts: Preteria, July 22.—Little, temporarily commanding the third brigade, reports that on July 19 he came in contact, near Lindley, with De Wet's force, which broke through Hunter's cordon. The fighting lasted until dark, when De Wet's force, being repulsed, broke into two parties. Little's casualties were light. He buried five Boers. Hamilton and Mahon continued their casuard. ton and Mahon continued their castward march yesterday, and should join hands with Pole-Carew to-day, near Ersten Fa-briken Station A body of the enemy wrecked a train carrying sick between Krugersdorp and Potchefetroom July 19.

BEATEN OFF AGAIN. London, July 22.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Roberts:—"Pretoria, July 22.—The Boers Roberts:—"Pretoria, July 22.—The Boers made a determined attack yesterday to destroy a post at Rail Head, 13 miles east of Heidelburg, which they attacked with three guns and a pom-pom, and surrounded. They were, however, beaten off after a sharp engagement before reinforcements summonded from Heidelburg had arrived." A SCANDAL COMING.

Manchester, July 21.—The London correspondent of The Guardian hints at a vest scandal over the condition of Lord Roberts' army in the Transvaal. Whole commands, it is said, are sick, and men are falling asleep on the firing lines, becoming easy prey to the Boers.

SURGEONS SCORED. New York, July 21.-R. I. Pierson, New York, July 21.—R. I. Pierson, of New Orleans, who went to South Africa to act as a scout for the British army, returned on the St. Louis. He had a bullet wound in his right leg and some strong opinious regarding the poor hospital corps. "The medical attention that one receives out there," he said, "is certainly enough to make the blood boil. It is disgraceful. The teach is beginning to come out now, but not make the blood boil. It is disgraceful. The truth is beginning to come out now, but not all is out yet. The surgeons down there range in age from eighteen to twent-one years. They wear cuffs and look pretty. If a case comes that is too much trouble to handle they order the patient sent to some other hospital. Little they care whether they die on the way."

WITH THE BOERS: WITH THE BOERS:

Lorenso Marquez, July 21.—A despatch from Machadodorp says that heavy artillery firing has been reported from the neighborhood of Middleburg, where it was reported that Boers have prepared to retire upon the approach of the British. Among the prisoners passing through Nooit Gadacht this week were a number of Canadians captured at Greylinstad. Four German officers who have been acting as President Kruger's military advisers have just arrived, having military advisers have just arrived, having received orders from Berlin to proceed to active service in China.

Public School Trustees of Wied. sor Have no Object to Separate Schools but They Want Bishop McEvay to Settle the Matter One Way or the Other at Once.

Detroit Tribune.

If some definite move is not made before the next meeting of the board of education with reference to the proposal to establish separate schools in Windsor, the matter will be made the Windsor, the matter will be made the subject of inquiry by some of the Pro-testant trustees, who will endeavor to find out what stand testant trustees, who will endeavor to find out what steps have been taken and what further action is contemplated. The Protestant trustees state they are in no sense antagonistic toward their Catholic confreres. The former say that if Catholics desire separate schools, it is a matter that concerns only themselves, and that the Protestants will be quite ready to come to an amicable arrangement with reference to a division of the school property and other matters in connection with a separation, but what is objected to is Bishop McEvay keeping the board of education in a state of uncertainty and mild turmoil by intermittent announcements that he intends establishing separate schools, which he fails to follow up with definite action.

"It's just like this," said a Protestnite action. "It's just like this," said a Protest-ant trustee, "we're tired of the 'fig-uring' that's going on. If the Cath-olics want separate schools they are 'welcome to them, and if they don't, we are quite willing to continue the present arrangement, but in the inter-est of all, the matter should be defi-nitely satiled at once."

nitely settled at once.' THE BISHOP'S EDICT. Detroit Free Press:—A letter from Bishop McEvay was read at all ser-vices held in St. Alphonsus Church yes-Bishop McEvay was read at all services held in St. Alphonsus Church yesterday. The letter informed the members of the congregation that it was the intention of his lordship to have St. Alphonsus and St. Francis schools and ask the hearty co-operation of all good Catholics. The letter stated that it was the wish of the bishop that the charge be brought about without any objections from members of the congregation. Following the letter was a petition, which will be presented to the Windsor school board, asking that body to give the two schools to the separate school board. The petition recites that the present staff of teachers will be retained and that the school rate will not be raised on the supporters of the separate schools. As the cost of running the schools at present is about $2,000 per annum in excess of the school rate paid by Roman Catholics, the bishop must mean by his letter that the deficiency will be made up by himself.

THE WEST ELGIN FARCE.

What a farce that West Elgin in vestigation was? Did the commission find out who engineered the crooked work? Did it find out where the money came from that paid the scoundrels? Did it find out anything we didn't know before? What value have we received for all this farcical inves

In the West Elgin case there has been a conspicuous absence of effort to bring the offenders to justice, and although the crimes were committed eighteen months ago not a single detective has been put upon the trail, nor a single criminal put bahind the bars.

FACTS ABOUT PEKIN.

For mine centuries, says the London Daily Express, Pekin has been an

In 986, under the title of Nanking, or "Southern Capital" it was made the headquarters of the invading Khitan

Tariars. A century later it was recaptured by the Chinese, who reduced it to an ordinary provincial city and rechristened it Yenshanfu. In 1151 Tartar hordes of the Kin tribe took possession of the city, elevated it once more to the rank of a metropolis, built a royal residence within it and called it Chungtu, or "Central Capital."

Seventy years afterwards the Kin Tartars were driven out by Jenghiz Khan, who followed the example of the Chinese in 1080 and reduced it to a mere town.

Following Jenghiz, in 1280 came the great Kubla Khan, who rebuilt the city, called it Yenking, or "Great Capital," and held his court there in great magnificence.

t remained an imperial city under this title and under the Chinese names of Tatu and Khanbalik until 1368, when a Chinese succeeded the Tartar dynasty, and the modern City of Nankin, on the Yank Tse Kiang, became the capital. In 1403, however, Yung Lo transferred his court to the old city of the Khans, and rechristened it Pekin, or "Northern Capital," and the capital of China has remained ever since.

The modern city consists of the "Nui Chring," or inner city, and the "Wai Ch'ing," or outer city, of which the former is more generally known as the flartar city. The city walls are 30 miles in circumference, vary from 30 to 50 feet in height and from 15 to 40 feet in breadth at the top, and enclose an area of 25 square miles.

The Imperial city or "Hwang Ch'ing" is enclosed within the walls of the Tartar city, and within this again is the "Tszekinch'ing"-the Purple Forbidden City, in which stands the Imperial palace,

Entrance to Pekin is gained by means of sixteen gates, each of which is surmounted by a galleried tower, so constructed as to enable the city guards within it to direct their fire upon any point.

The foreign legations, where one of the most appalling tragedies since that of Campore is now being played outperhaps is already concluded-are sit wated in the right hand lower half of the Tartar City, the British Legation being immediately to the right of the great centre gate leading from the Ohinese through the Tartar to the imperial city.

The mormal population of Pekin is about a million and a half, but these figures have been greatly swelled during the last few months. There are probably not far less than two million people in the city at the present, time, of whom the "foreigners" number thousand all told.

THOUSANDS, RULING MILLIONS

More than any other modern nation Great Britain has had experience of dealing with huge-subject populations on an economical basis. In Egypt for instance, her "army of occupation" is only 5,000 men, and her civil ians of all classes only add another 14,000 or so-barely 20,000 to balance, administer, and control a native population of nearly ten millions. The proportion works out as one Britisher to five hundred natives. Compare the French occupation of Algeria, says a contemporary. Algeria has a native population of some three and a half millions policed by some 30,000 French troops, supported by 250,000 French civilians. Proportion, about one conqueror to ten conquered. At the same

Including civilians, there is not in our Indian Empire more convicted of crime in this province if | than one Britisher to 3,000 natives. If we ruled in the East as France rules for evidence at the trial not upon the lin the South, we should have to dump down on Indian soil three-quarters of quiry, but upon such witnesses as the population of these islands. These instances serve to throw some light on the terrific problem threatened by the possible break-up of the Chinese were set upon their tracks, and the re- Empire. If China proved as difficult, say, as Egypt, to rule, Europe would need to fling into the country 700,000 men, military and civilian; if it turned out to be as easily managed as India has been of late years, 150,000 men would do. Our own share of either number would not be small, for, in he event of China going to pieces, we have practically bespoken the valley of the Yang-tse river, which is said to flow for over 3,000 miles through one of the most densely-thronged parts of the Celestial Empire.

Attempts to Counteract John Scott's Exposure of Spiritaalism

Recently Published - Claims that Scott Himself is Somewhat of a Fake Performer.

Daniel McCoig, of this city, has handed the Planet a copy of a monthly magazine called The Sermon, which contains the following reply from Rev. B. F. Austin to John Scott's recent exposures of spiritualism in the Christian Guardian:

About three years ago there appeared in Toronto a Mr. Venner, who peared in Toronto a Mr. Venner, who professed to be able to give clairvoy-ant readings and to be a spiritual medium. He came to a family, of spiritualists and sufficiently impressed them with his honesty and ability to secure a groom from them for his "readings." He advertised in the parent and secured for a time a numpers and secured for a time a num-ber of patrons who paid him money ber of patrons who paid him money for what he now admits were not clairvoyant readings—but simply facts gleaned in some covert way which he palmed off upon them for "spiritual communications." His business increased, and to use his own expression in an interview I had with him yesterday, the place became "too hot for day, the place became "too hot for him" and after a few days he skipped out. His landlady was minus her rent and his victims their money, but all of them richer in experience.

He was not, he now confesses, a me-dium, but a conjuror and trickster. Recently the same man, but now as Mr. John Scott, approached a prominent spiritualist in Thoronto, and confessed himself "hard up" and designed at the second secon sired aid in getting up a seance, but meeting with no encouragement and being a consideration, he next appears in the role of Guardian dorrespondent and Simon-pure exposer of Spiritualistic Phenomena. His face and name adorn the last issues of this "Christian" organ.

Mr. Scott desiring money and the Christian Guardian, supposedly representing that charity which thinketh no evil, being desirous of a club with which to cudgel the spiritualists, a bargain is soon struck, and the Guardian editor becomes the accomplice of Mr. Scott, better known in some circles as Mr. Venner, in misrepresentcles as Mr. Venner, in misrepresent-ing and belittling spiritualism. And ing and belittling spiritualism. And so we have some eight or ten columns in the Guardian from Mr. Scott's pen under the heading, "Experiences in Spiritualism," in which an attempt is made to show that the cheap fakirism and conjuring practised by Mr. Scott is the sum and substance of spiritualism, or in other words that slight of hand and legerdemain and hocus-pocus trickery of the sort described by Mr. Scott was sufficient to deceive Sir hand and legerdemain and hocus-pocus trickery of the sort described by Mr. Scott was sufficient to deceive Sir Wm. Crookes, Alfred Russel Wallace, Professors Zoeliher and Fechner, of Leipsic University, Epes Sargent, Dr. Joseph Cook, Judge Edmunds, Camille Flammarion, Professor Hyslop, Dr. Hodgson, and hosts of other celebrities in science, literature and divinity.

Desirous of knowing something of Mr. Scott's personality and ability as an investigator of spiritualism, I called upon him at his home in Toronto, and had a brief interview, and invited him to my house to see my exhibits of slate-writing and other phenomena and to give me, if he could, any explanation other than that of psycography. He came to see me and spent several hours in an interview and in the presence of my family and Mr. Howard, of Toronto, admitted he was the Mr. Venner above referred to.

5.6 It is quite evident that the Guardian editor is much more intent on stabbing in a back-hand way the spiritualistic movement in Toronto, than in presenting to its readers the than in presenting to its readers the results of real investigation of our results of real investigation phenomena by reputable men such those I have mentioned—several whom have spent from fifteen twenty-five years each in person vestigation and under test contheir own houses. Their names ar are accessible to all who seek light an truth, yet when the Guardian would present spiritualism to its readers it employs Mr. Scott to draw a caricature which the Guardian editor styles "Experiences in Spiritualism," and "Exposures of Spiritual Mediums," and on this libel of a religious body it seeks an adverse judgment from its readers.

Why does not the Guardian editori-Why does not the Guardian editorially discuss spiritualism? Why does it open its columns to foes of spiritualism and shut out friends of spiritualism? Because, while such a discussion would be in the interests of truth and righteousness, it would open the eyes of multitudes of Methodists to the truth and beauty of spiritualism, and the Christian Guardian is not set. and the Christian Guardian is not set for the defence of the truth, but for the defence of Methodism. ARE NOT SUICIDES' GRAVES.

"I can tell you the true history of those graves in the south corner of the cemetery" said Chief Young this morning. "The old Potter's field used to be on the south side of the Gravel Road, at Indian Creek. In the fall of the year 1864, a train on the old Great Western was wrecked at Baptiste Creek, west of the city. The coaches were laden with emigrants and the loss of life was appalling. Wm. Mitchell, of the Post Office can tell you about the accident as he lost his palling. Wm. Mitchell, of the Post Office can tell you about the accident as he lost his leg in it. His father and several members of the family were killed. A great many of the dead were brought to Chatham and interred in the Potter's Field, at Indian Creek. When the Maple Leaf Cemetery was pur-chased, these dead were removed to the southern corner of the cemetery. At least the greater part of them were, but not quite all. These are the graves which look so lonely and bare in that open corner of the

UNDER COMPULSION.

The License Commissioners had to Back Down in the Aberce n License Conditions.

It is said the West Kent License Commissioners acted under compulsion in revoking the proviso made in granting a license to the Aberdeen Hotel, to the effect that the proprietress should not sell beer made by the Walkerville Brewing Company. It appears that the company complained to the Ontario Government and the Provincial License Inspector made an investigation. He reported the facts to the department and the result was, that an intimation came from Toronto that such provisos in licenses wouldn't go. The commissioners, however, were somewhat slow in moving to revoke the condition and in the mean-time the Walkerville company intime the Walkerville company instructed their Chatham solicitor, Fred Stone, to notify the commissioners that actions for damages would be commenced against them, personally, on the ground of injury to the company's business. Before this notice could be formally served, however, a meeting of the board was called and a motion passed to notify Mr. Bechard that he could buy his beer where he pleased. Whether the action will go on or not now in the face of the license commissioners' backdown remains to be seen. The company have not further been heard from, but it is understood they expressed their intention of carrying the case to the courts in any event.

Rural Dean M. Cosh Detends The Missionarles Against the Charge

That They Are at the Bottom of the Trouble in China-An Able Sermon.

Last evening the Rev. Robert McCosh delivered an exceedingly eloquent sermon on the Chinese situation. He took as his text, "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace but a sword: Mr. McCosh said, "These words are found in the commission which Christ gave to his disciples. There seems to be apparently a conflict between this passage of scripture and others passages which speak of the reign of Christ' as a reign of peace. The prophet Isaiah seven centuries before the advent of our Lord frequently speaks of his birth and ministry. In the ninth chapter of his book, he calls Christ the Prince of Peace. Zachariah, the father of John the Baptist, in speaking of Christ gave to his disciples. There seems Christ the Prince of Peace. Zachariah, the father of John the Baptist, in speaking of the advent of our Lord says, "Whereby the day spring from on high hath visited us to give light to them that sit in darkness and the shadow of death and to guide our feet into the way of peace."

We have the anthem of the angels on the night of Christ's nativity "Glory to God in the highest; on earth peace goodwill towards men."

Then again Christ himself said to his disciples, "My peace I leave with you, My peace I give unto you." These and other passages that might be quoted speak of the answers indicates a disposition not to move the relief expedition on reign of peace and seemingly conflict with the words contained in your text. How are they to be harmonized? There are two kinds of peace in this world, the peace of Christ and the peace of the world, and wherever the reace of Christ correct in contact with he peace of Christ comes in contact with ace of the world the result will be rouble and opposition. The apostles were to be living pro were not to be governed by the laws and maxims of the world. They were to proclaim Christianity as the only true religion. They did not aGsk for a clace in the temple of the gods of this world, and they refused to bow the large to any late the false mode of the tests against all forms of evil. to any of the false gods of this world, and they refused to bow the knee to any of the false gods of this world, no matter how popular and exalted they might be. They could not live such lives and fulfil their divine mission without meeting with persecution and bloodshed. This was just what our blessed Lord meant when He said, "I came notato send peace, but a sword."

It has been charged by some that the missionaries in China were responsible for the the present trouble in that land. But those who make this charge simply manifest their ignorance. It is true that some of the missionaries may not have shown the wisdom of the serpent. They may have been too hasty in asserting their rights, and asking their governments for reparation and protection. But this is not the cause of the present trouble in China, (The feeling in China is not anti-foreign missionaries but anti-foreigners. The war between China is not anti-foreign missionaries but anti-foreigners. The war between China and Japan revealed two things, the military strength of Japan, and the military weakness of China.

The great powers of the world, such as Great Britain, Russia, France and Germany, had previous to the war pursued a very cautious course in their relations to China. Impressed, as they evidently were with the enormous population of the country, and convinced that if this population were handled by military authorities, China could furnish a military organization that could successfully resist the combined forces of the world. Immediately after the disastrous defeat of China aggressive measures were at once begun by the powers above mentioned, and these aggressions have

"LOST AND FOUND"

The carelessness of the shopping public is marvellous. You begin to feel after awhile that people who are so thoughtless don't deserve to have anyhing. We never receive handkerchiefs at the "Lost and Found" desk unless a very handsome one is brought to us and we accept it under pro est. Neither do our customers often incuire for hem, possibly because they think they dropped them in the street.

Umbrelles are among the articles most frequently lost. Sometimes on a rainy day the desk looks like a bargain counter of umbrellas.
Surange as it may seem, posketbooks see third in the list of articles most ften lost. There is never a day in nich from one to eight pocke books lo not either find their way to the desk are reported as lost in the store. A woman came the other day to say that she had given the baby her pursa wished us to make search. It is seldom that a purse is pieced up that ices not contain one or two rings and ome other small pieces of jewelry. Many capes, -jacke's and furs are A customer once reported hat she was afraid of pickpockets and so had taken off her handsome diamond watch, and was carrying it in her hand. Unfortunately she had laid it down somewhere and couldn't find it.

Gloves and veils are frequently picked up and parcels innumerable. Garters seem to have a fashion of getting away from the wearers, and sometimes a stray bustle finds its way to the desk: Customers when they miss something usually go to the counter where they think they left it. If they don't find it there they are prone to insinuate that the girl behind the counter got it.

Now, it is an astonishing fact that customers seldom find anything. The superintendent is surprised when an article is brought to the desk by a shopper. It is the clerks and the little cash girls who turn over anything that they may find. It is my experience that our girls, who have small salaries, are constantly exposed to emptation and every day see pretty things they would like and cannot have are almost invariably honest.

Conscience plays strange pranks sometimes. Only last week we received through the mail a box of jewelry. There were trinkets of every kind in it, rings, breastpins, chains, bracelets, lockets, in all enough to stock a countrestore. Every piece had been removed from its card, and there was no name or message. It was re-cognized as belonging to our jewelry department, but how so much got away without being missed remains a mystery. Such a quantity could hardly have been taken by a regular shoplifter. One theory is that some one in the department took it and afterward acknowledged the theft at confession and the priest ordered the jewelry returned to us. We have had several cases of that kind. On another occasion we received a oox of expensive handkerchiefs. Within was a card. It read: "I am afraid the innocent will suffer, so I send these back to you, although I know you don't need them and I do. Whenever any one asks at the desk for any article they have lost in the store we ask for a description. It would be amusing if it were not annoying to see how indignant the average woman gets at this question. She con-siders it an imputation that she is not monest, and she often resents it in the lost energetic manner. Altogether the life of the man in charge of the "Lost and Found" desk is by no means pleasant.

ILLIAM GORDON

Lost His Scalp Fourty-four Years Ago. "There is an old fellow living near Grenada, in my State," said a Memphis man at one of the hotels, "who was scalped by the Indians back in '56. I saw him fecently when I was down in his neighborhood looking after the title of some farm properly, and was greatly interested in his story. He is now about 70, tough and gnarled as a tree, and the mark of his horrifying adventure consists of a curiously ridged and indented scar, about four inches across on the top of his head "He says he was one of a party of emigrants who had taken what was then known as the 'Framont overland trail,' for California, and while passtrail, for California, and while pass-ing through southern Kansas he and two other young men left the main party to ride after some antelopes. They were intercepted by Indians and his two companions killed. He himsel was shot in the back and fell off his horse senseless. The firing was heard by the other emigrants, and a rescue party drove the savages away. reanwhile, they had scalped this young man, and when picked up the was at first supposed to be dead. was carried back and the next day turned over to some eastbound travelers, who took him to St. Louis. He told me it was over a year before the wound began to heal, but, of course, his memory may be at fault as to particulars. The wonderful part of it is that he recovered at all in those days, when skin grafting was practically un-known. He used to hide the scar with a toupee, or patch wig, but at present he is entirely bald and wears a tight-fitting cap. "I dare say he is the only man in the world who ever survived such an ordeal. His forehead, by the way, is curiously wrinkled in vertical lines, and his eyebrows are raised out of the natural position. That was what first attracted my attention to him. He says it was caused by the healing of

Charles Colby, of Harwich, Passes Away in His 101st Year

Charles Colby passed away in his 101st year, at the old homestead, 18th Con., Harwich. Mr. Colby was one of the oldest residents of this section of the country and his death was due to old age. Mr. Colby was born in the State of Maine and was a resident of Harwich for over half a century. He never took an active part in politics, but his tendency was Liberal. He was in religion a Universalist. Eight children were born to him, five sons and three daughters, but the sons alone survive. They are all now aged men. They are: Theodore, of Rockford, Ill.; Julius, Iowa; C. D. Colby, Blenheim; Horace Colby, Chatham, and Jacob, on the homestead, Harwich. The daughters, who have all passed away, are the late Mrs. John Remington, of Harwich, and the late Mrs. Frank Webb, of Iowa. The funeral of the late Mr. Colby, will take place Sunday, when the remains of Mr. Colby will be laid beside his wife in the family burying ground on the farm. The pall-bearers will be six of the great-grandchildren of the deceased: Willie Adams, Clifton Whittington, Wilbert Remington and Willie Remington, of Harwich, and Harold Colby and Ed Lampman, of Chatham.

LORD ROBERTS' SCALP

The Irish Picnic at Ericau on July 25th Cliques in the War Circles Which are Arxious to Take it.

London, July 23. - Lord Roberts is ow warned that the time is approaching when, instead of being critic, he will be exposed to relentless criticism for allowing traitors and perjurers to go unpunished, for feeding spies, and for paying excessive prices for farm produce to burghers who are ready at a moment's notice to take up arms afresh and leave their families to be supported at the cost of the military There are so many bickerings and jealousies among the military co-etries and their social allies in Mayfair that allowence must be made for the reign of discontent with Roberts. There is "Wolseley's gang," military and social, which is watching for a and social, which is watching for a chance to discipline and humiliate Lord Roberts; there is also the Aldershot circle with a large annex in Devonshire, which is devoted to the fortunes of Buller and is striving to promote them at the expense of "Bobs."
Moreover, there are smaller coteries of the friends of Methuen, Gatacre, Colville and others, and these are centres of criticism and disaffection whenever Lord Roberts' work is re-

A STORY OF LOVE AND WAR.

-BY MARY J. HOLMES.

Author of "Lena Rivers," "Edna Browning," "Tempest and Sunshine," Etc., Etc.

"I could not prize the love i nad w No. Arthur: I have told you once that you are only my brother, just as Nettle was my sisted. Believe me. Arthur, I cannot give you what you ask." She spoke gently, kindly, now, for she pitied the young man whose sincerity could not return. He was not her equal either physically or mentally, and the man who won Maude de Vere must be one to whom she could look up to as a superior. Such a one she would make very happy, but she would lead Arthur a wretched, miserable life, and she knew it, and would save him from herself, even though there were many kindly tender feelings in ther heart for the young lieutenant. She saw that he was angry with her, and as further convergation was useless. she left him and repaired to her room, the windows of which overlooked Het-

And there until daylight the noble girl sat watching lest her unwelcome visitors of the previous night, failing to find their victim, should return and insist upon another search. As Maude de Vere said, she had held a loaded pistol at the head of both Federal and Con-federate, when her uncle was sick, and the house was beset one week by one of the belligerent parties and the following week by the other. She was afraid of nothing, and Tom Carleton, so long as she stood his sentinel, had little to fear from his pursuers. But she could not ward off the fever which for many days had been lurking in his veins, and which was increasing so fast that when the morning came he was too sick to rise, and lay mouning with the pain in his eyes and complaining of the heat, which, in that dark corner of the close cabin, and on that sultry summer morning, was intolerable.

"Mighty poorly, with face as red as them flowers in your ha'r, and the veins in his forehead as big as my leg," was the word which Hetty brought up to Maude de Vere the next morning, and half an hour later Maude, in her pale buff cambric wrapper, with her black hair shining like satin, went down to Hetty's cabin and stood beside Tom

He was sleeping for a few moments, and the drops of perspiration were standing on his forehead and about his lips. He was not worn and emaciated, like the most of the prisoners and re-fugees whom Maude had seen. His complexion, though bronzed from exposure, had not that peculiar grayish appearance common to so many of the eturned prisoners, while his forehead was very white, and his rich brown hair, damp with the perspiration, clung about it in the soft, round curls so na-

There was nothing in his persons appearance to awaken sympathy on the core of ill-treatment, and yet Maude felt herself strangely drawn toward him, guessing with a woman's quick perception that he was somewhat above many whom it had been her privilege to befriend. And Maude, being human, did not like him less for that. On the contrary, she the more readily brushed away the flies which were alighting upon his face, and, with her own handkerchief, wiped the moisture from his brow, and then felt his rapid

"He ought not to stay in this place," she said, and she was revolving the propriety of boldly asking Squire Tun-bridge if he might be removed to the house, when Tom awoke and turned wonderingly toward her.

He knew it was Maude de Vere, and tion, making him wonder where he had seen somebody very like her,

"You are sick," she said to him kindly, as he attempted to rise on his elbow, and fell back again upon the squalid bed. "I am afraid you are very sick, but you are safe here,-that is,yes,-I know you are safe. None but something in her face rivited his atten-fiends would betray a sick man."

She spoke rapidly, and Tom saw the bright color deepen in her cheek, and her eyes flash with excitement. She was very beautiful, and Tom felt the influence of her beauty, and tried to draw the ragged quilt over him so as to hide the coarse, gray shirt Hetty had given him, and which was as unlike the immaculate linen Tom Carleton was accustomed to wear as it was possible to

"You are Miss de Vere, I am sure," he said, "and you are very kind. I shall not tax your hospitality long. I hope to go on to night. Don't stay here, Miss de Vere, you must be uncomfortable. It's hotter here than in Massachosetts."

"You are from New England, then?" Maude asked, and Tom replied: "From Boston.-yes,-your people hate us most of all, I believe," and Tom tried to smile, while Maude an-

"It makes no difference to me whether you are from Maine or Oregon. You are sick, and have come to us for succor. I'll do what I can to help you." With the last words she was gone, her tall, lithe figure bending gracefully under the low doorway, and the rustle of her fresh, clean garments leaving a pleasant sound in Tom Carleton's ears.

"A sick Yankee down in Hetty's cabin,—a Beston one at that, with his Wendell Phillips notions, and you want house, the house of a Southern gentle-man who, if he hates one of the dogs worse than another, hates the Massa-chusetts kind whose women have nothing to do but to write Abolition books about our niggers. No, indeed; he shall not come an inch, and by the Harry I'll his camp fever and his Boston airs. Needn't talk. See if I don't do it, and I'll have Hetty strung up and whipped for harboring the villain. Treason under my very nose, and a Yankee, too! Go away,-go away, I tell you. I won't hear you. I hate 'em all for the cussedness there is in 'em."

This was Squire Tunbridge's reply to Maude de Vere, who had told him of Tom Carleton, and asked permission to have him moved up to the house. Nothing daunted, Maude went close up to him, and her beautiful eyes looked straight into his as she said:

"Think if it was Arthur sick among his enemies They were kind to him. he says, and remember Nettie, too, Had she lived she would have married a Northern man. You liked Robert, and Nettie loved him. For her sake let this man be brought to the house. He will die there, where it is so close," "Serve him right, for coming down here to fight us; wish they were all dead. How are you going to get the rascal up that confounded hill? Can he walk?" Maude had gained her point, and with

Mrs. Tunbridge, who had a soft, kind heart, she hastened to make ready a large, airy chamber, somewhat remote from the rooms occupied by the family and their frequent guests. It was not the best room in the house, but he would be safer there than elsewhere, and Maude made it as inviting as possible, by pulling the bed out from the corner to the centre of the room, covering the plain stand with a clean white towel, and the table with a gaily col-ored shawl of her own. Then, with Hetty and one of Hetty's sons, she started for the cabin, followed by the Squire himself. Since the war began he had not seen a Yankee, and curtosity as much as anything took him to Tom Carleton, whom he assailed with a string of epithets, telling him "to see what he'd got by making war on people so much better than himself. enough for you," he continued, as, assisted by Hetty and Claib, Tom tried to walk up the winding path, with Maude in front and the Squire in the rear. "Yes, good enough for you, if you die like a dog, and I dare say you will. Fevers go hard with you Bunker Hill chaps. Claib, you villain, you are let-ting him fall. Don't you see he hasn't strength to walk? Carry him. you ras-

"For thunder's sake, Hetty, take that gray, niggery thing off from him," the Squire said, pointing to the coarse shirt Tom had thought so nice, when he exchanged it for his dirty uniform. "If you women are going to do a thing, do decent. Arthur's shirts won't fit him, I reckon, for Arthur ain't bigger than a pint of cider, but; mine will. Fetch him one, and for gracious sake souse him first in the bath-tub. He needs it bad, for them prison pens ain't none the neatest according to the tell."

In spite of his aversion to the Bos ton Yankees, the Judge had taken the ordering of this one into his own hands. and it was to him that Tom owed the refreshing bath which did him so much good, and abated the force of the fever which nevertheless ran high for many days, during which time Maude nursed him as carefully as if he had been her brothers Arthur was absent when the moving occurred, but when he found that it was done, and the Yankee was actually on inmate of his father's house, he concluded to make the best of it, merely remarking that "they would be in a pretty messs if the story got out of their harboring a prisoner.' The Judge knew that, and in fancy he saw his house burned down, and upon him terribly, antil a new idea occurred to him. Maude, as everyone knew, had been talking of going back to Tennessee, and what more nat-ural than for Paul Haverill to send an escort for her in the person of some cousin or other who was foolish enough to fall sick immediately after his arrival. This was a smart thought and as that very day at least a dozen people called at the Cedars, as the Judge called his place, so the dozen were told of "John Campa" sick abed up stairs, "kind of Cousin to Mande, and sent to see her home, by her Uncle

"Right smart chap." the Judge said. feeling amazed at the facility with which he invented falsehoods when once he began. "Been a guerrilla there in the mountains, and done some tall fighting'. I recken."

This was the Judge's story, which his auditors believed, wondering, some of them, why the visitor should occupy that back chamber in preference to the handsome rooms in front. Still they had no suspicion of the truth, "John Camp" was accepted as a recitty, and kind enquiries were made after his welfare, as, day after day, the fever ran its course, and Mande de Vere bent over him, bathing his forehead, smooth-ing his pillows and brushing his hair, her white flugers insinuating queer fancies into his brain, as, half unconscious, he felt their touch upon his face and saw the soft eyes above him-

At first Arthur had kept aloof from Tom, but as the latter grew better, he yielded to Maude's entreaties and went to see him. feeling intuitively that he was in the presence of a gentleman a well as of a superior. He could not dislike him, for there was something about Tom Carleton which disarmed him of all projudice, and many a quiet, friendly talk the two had together the all-absorbing topic of the day.

"He is a splendid fellow, if he is a Yankee," was Arthur's mental verdict, "and fine-looking, too,—finer a hundred times than I," and then there crept into his heart a fear lest Maude should think as he did, and, ere he was aware of it, he found himself anxiously jenlous of one who was at his mercy, and whom, if he chose, he might have removed so easily

CHAPTER XXX.

Tom Carleton was able to start on his journey westward. Twice he had left his room and joined the family below. making himself so agreeable, and adapting himself so nicely to all the Judge's crotchets that the old man confessed to a genuine liking for the Yankee rascal, and expressed himself as unwilling to part with him. He had inquired into his family history, and, to his infinite delight, found that the elder Carleton, Tom's father, was the very lawyer whose speech years ago had been in-strumental in sending back to bondage the Judge's runaway negro, Hetty's husband, whose grave was out by the gurden wall, and whose wife and sons had rendered so different a service to the lawyer's son:

Tom's face was scarlet when he thought of the difference, and remem-bered how his father had worked to prove that the master was entitled to his property wherever it was found. The Judge suspected the nature of his thoughts, and, with a forced laugh, said, good-humoredly:

your father was, I see, Well, young man, times change and change with them. Old man Carleton did me a good turn, for Seth was worth two thousand dollars. I never abused him nor gave him a blow when I got him back. I only asked him how he liked freedom as far as he had gone, and he didn't answer. He seemed broke down like, and in less than a year he died. He was the best hand I ever had, mor'n half white. I cried when he died. I'll be hanged if I didn't. I told him to live and I'd set him free, and when I saw how his eyes lighted up I made out his papers on the spot, and brought 'em to him, and he died with 'em in his hand, held so tight we could scarcely sget 'em out, and I had 'em buried with him in his coffin.

"Thank you, mars'r. God bless you for letting me die free, but it's come too late. I would worked for you, mars'r, all the same if you'd done this before I wanted to be a man, and not a thing,

"These are Seth's very words. I've got 'em by heart, and I said them so much that I began to wonder if free dom wasn't better than slavery. But, bless you, my miggers was about all I had. I couldn't give 'em up, though I used to go out to Seth's grave and think how he bugged the papers to the last and wonder if the clause all men are born free end equal didn't mean the blacks. But the pesky war broke out, and drove all this from my head I hate the Yankees—I hate Lincoln. I hate the whole Union army, though I'll be blamed if I can hate you. Got a wife Polly was proud, and it hurt her very much to have folks hinting that she had been jilted by Rob Müler. had been jilted by Rob Müler.

Before he went away, a year and a admirer, and their friends had daily expected to hear of their engagement.

But in June Rob had been sent by the firm which employed him to look after its copper mine in Michigan.

Before he left Rob had said to her:

Before he left Rob had said to her:

"I shall be back in a year, dear—a year from to-day—and then I shall want an answer to a question I will ask you. Polly, will it be a favorable one?"

And Polly had murmured: "I will wait for you, and shall miss you very much, and be glad when you come back." And Rob had just time to crush her hand in his big, strong one before their friends bore down upon them. And so they parted.

their friends bore down upon them. And so they parted.

Polly sat before the fire so engrossed in thought that she did not hear the bell ring, nor was she aware of the presence of anyone until she heard her own name. Jumping up, she was confronted by a tall young man, who held out his hands to her eagerly.

"Bob" she said flowusly: and then out his hands to her eagerly.

"Rob," she said, joyously; and then she thought of his wife and her manner changed. She ignored his outstretched hands and said, coolly: "How do you do, Mr. Miller?"

"Why, Polly, what does this mean?" said Rob; but Polly kept silent.

"Polly, are you not glad to see me?"

"The letter which I sent you last June, when I was in the hospital in Michigan. When I went away did I not say I would be home in a year to ask you-well, never mind. I am too Long got ahead of me. Since I late. Long got ahead of me. Since I was too ill to come, I wrote, thinking that you at least would answer my letter. But you are not glad to see me, so I will go. Good-bye, Polly."
"Rob, where is your wife?"
"Wife" he repeated, puzzled. "I came for her, but find she is promised to another."
Polly began to gry softly. This was Polly began to cry softly. This was too much. What could Rob do but take her in his arms and soothe her, while she told him that she thought he had forgotten her, that she didn't love Mr. Long, and—here she hid her face on his coat—that she did love him? And then, when she looked up, what could Rob do but kiss the lips so near his ewn?

By and by, when everything had been explained, Polly said: "Well, what about Mr. Long?"
"Hang Long," promptly replied Rob. But Polly crossed to her desk and wrote a kind little note to Mr. Long telling of her engagement to "Mr. Robert Miller." And the next month, when the pret-ty marriage took place in the little church, one of the handsomest presents bore the card of James Long.

TRUE STORY OF WHITTIER

et's Letter and Souvenir Sent to Klyda Richardson Steege tells in St. Nicholas a true story of the poet Whit-The nursery was bright and tier. cheerful, she begins, and the two children were happy as they listened to a kind voice reading to them. Every day the same old favorites were told or read to the little listeners, who were never tired, but always asked for more. The stories were all about fairies and elves, or boys and girls who had distinguished themselves, or brave soldiers and noble heroes. And the poems were everything in the world from Mother Goose to Shakespeare, But the greatest favorite of all the verses were those which told about Barbara Frietchie. You surely know them, and how when she, though old and gray and feeble, refused to take down her flag, and said as the soldiers marched through Frederickstown: Shoot, if you must, this old gray head, Rut spare your country's flag," she said.

And then how General Stonewall Jackson treated her, and how her flag waved the whole day long over the heads of the passing soldiers, not one of whom uttered a word against it, or its brave defender.

In the old nursery, the children loved this poem, and through it the author, one of the greatest and best of men. as well as a poet of whom our country is justly proud. They talked very often of Mr. Whittier, and at last, one of them evolved, with great labor, from her childish brain, a little verse. It was of little value, no doubt but she was a small child. The answer to the enigma was the Quaker poet's name, and so writing a timid little letter, the child inclosed this first literary attempt and mailed it to Mr. Whittier.

Then followed several days of suspense and anxious waiting. "Would Mr. Whittier think it very strange that she had written and would he call her very foolish?" It was strange how much she cared, but she was the kind of child who always did care about her own schemes rather too much for her own happiness.

At last, one morning, the postman brought a letter for this little girl. Written in violet ink on thin paper, this is what it said: Amesbury, 4th mo. 20th, 1877.

My Dear Young Friend: I thank thee for thy little letter & the ingenious Word Enigma, which is certainly very nicely done.

When Peeling Onions. The pungent odor of the onion is due to a sulphurous oil, which volatilizes rapidly when the tissues of the vegetable is broken in any manner, and especialy affects the delicate membranes surrounding the eyes. This effect, however, can be easily avoided by sticking a small pared potato on the end of the knife with which the cutting is done. A chemical affinity, which cannot be readily explained, but which is none the less satisfactory in its working, attracts the fumes, and their presence is not manifested to the operator till the potato has reached a certain degree of saturation, when it can be readily replaced by another.

WHEN PEELING ONIONS.

The pungent odor of onions is du to a sulphurous oil, which wolatizes rapidly when the tissues of the vege-table is broken in any manner, and especially affects the delicate mem-branes surrounding the eyes. This effect, however, can be easily avoided by sticking a small pared potato on the end of the knife with which the the end of the knife with which the cutting is done. A chemical affinity which cannot be readily explained, but which which is none the less satisfactory in its working, attracts the fumes, and their presence is not manifested to the operator till the potato has reached a certain degree of saturation, when it can be readily replaced by another.
