A Millionaire; —or— Countess Westleigh

CHAPTER XLIII.

They were away on their bridal trip until the spring was smiling and laughing over meadow, hill and dale; even over dear old London, which on the afternoon they entered it shone as brightly and as gayly as if it had got up a special sunset to welcome them back.

I think both of them would have liked to have driven from Charing Cross Station to a quiet hotel in a hansom; but fate had decreed that they should possess a great name, a huge house in St. James' Square, and a tremendous carriage which the butler had, of course, sent to meet them. Fortunately, it was an open carriage, and so not much inferior to a cab; and probably in all London there was not a handsomer or a happier young couple than the Earl and Countess of Westleigh, who, sitting side by side, and sometimes hand in hand, looked out at the familiar streets and the throngs of people as the horses dashed along.

"Are you glad to be back, dearest?" he asked, after awhile, and as they neared the quieter Pall Mall.

"I was just asking myself the question. Don't you think the people can see you are holding my hand, Vane? I'm sure I noticed a lady smile as I passed her. I'm—I'm not certain whether I am or not. It has been such a lovely time," she sighed, happily, "but then it will always be a lovely time while you are near me, dear."

"Better be quiet," he said, threateningly, "or I shall feel in duty bound to kiss you, and then we shall lose our characters with the servants, and probably be seen by a policeman and taken in charge. Anyway, if we don't like it we needn't stay long. We can go to Westleigh or Barton, or Vale Hall, for instance."

"Yes," said Nora, in a slightly graver and more thoughtful tone. "Vane!"

"Well?"

"Do you think—No, I won't say it—I can not!"

"Now, what's the matter?" he demanded.

It was the first time since their marriage—their "real" marriage—that he had heard a note of apprehension in her voice. "What is it? Oh, I think I can guess!"

"Never mind, dear. And yet—Ah, yes! It is better to speak out. We are never to have a moment's concealment, are we, Vane? Do you think that any one will—will know me—remember me?"

Her voice had sunk to an almost inaudible whisper.

He looked at her long, and as steadily as his passionate admiration would permit him.

Happiness had wrought a great change in her. Her face was fuller; her wonderful eyes brighter, shining with a great joy; the dark hair was long, and bound in a great coil at the back of the shapely head. She was dressed, not gorgeously, but richly, and in perfect taste. The tone of her voice had altered, grown sweeter, softer.

"Be at rest!" he said, quietly, but emphatically. "No one—no one—would know you."

They were silent for a moment or two, and in that moment or two, there was a block in the street, and the carriage came to a stand-still.

Two gentlemen came down the steps of the fashionable club opposite. They were arm in arm, and talking cheerfully. They were the Baby and Lord Clenham. At sight of the couple in the carriage they stopped still and raised their hats.

"Halloo, Vane!" exclaimed the Baby in delighted accents. "Oh, I'm awfully glad to see you back!"

Vane shook hands, then he looked at Nora.

"My wife!" he said, introducing her.

The light was full on her lovely face, grown suddenly a little pale. The two men looked at her in silent admiration for a second, then raised their hats again and bowed, and the Baby, whom beauty could always draw by a single hair, moved round to her side of the carriage and talked to her.

"Any news?" asked Vane, but of the alert.

Clenham shrugged his shoulders. "N-no; not much." He related some; then he added: "Oh, you've heard about Lady Florence, I suppose?"

"No," said Vane, with a glance at Nora, who he saw was listening.

"She's married—married to Count Serge, the Russian. You remember? Great match; but, by George, I don't envy her! Serge is jealously personified, and they say that she won't be permitted to cross the Russian frontier for at least twenty years. Can't bear her out of his sight. Rather a bore for the divine Florence, I should think. You heard of the sensation her picture made? Read it in the papers, of course?"

Vane nodded. "Yes."

"Tremendous jump up for—what's his name?—Serge Tyers. Everybody raving about him. Might have been the lion of the season; but somehow he seems to have preferred to sulk in his den. Nobody has seen anything of him for months past. Well, the street's clear, and we mustn't keep you. I shall have the honor of calling upon Lady Westleigh very shortly."

As he and the Baby went off, the latter exploded into ejaculations of admiration.

"Clenham, that is the loveliest woman that ever lived—and, I'll wager, my life, the sweetest!"

"For once, Baby, I'm afraid I can't contradict you," retorted Clenham, sententiously.

"You see," said Vane, in a low voice, as the carriage rolled on and Nora sunk back—"you see? You are safe—quite safe, dearest."

Love a Conqueror —OR— WEDDED AT LAST!

CHAPTER I.

Shirley obeyed instantly. Started as she was at the terrible change which had passed over her mother, she did not lose her presence of mind. She dropped the window to let the chill wind blow upon the pale pinched face, and forced some of the cordial through the white lips. For a moment she thought that this must be death, and became ill and fainted herself at the thought of her mother's condition, and the impossibility of obtaining assistance; but in a few minutes the death-like pallor vanished, and the invalid's breathing became more regular.

"It is nothing," she said feebly, and tried to smile into the startled anxious face bending over her. "I am better, Shirley."

Trembling now in every limb, and almost entirely unnerved, Shirley sank upon her knees by her mother's side, half supporting her; and Mrs. Ross put both her feeble arms round the girl's head and drew it close to her breast.

"Mother—oh, mother!" Shirley said, trying to stifle the great choking sobs which rose in her throat; and Mrs. Ross drew her closer and rested her own hand on the girl's soft chestnut hair.

"Shirley—my darling!" her mother whispered tenderly. "No—do not move, child. Let me hold you; head upon my breast a little while it does not tire me. It makes me think of the days when you were a happy little baby, with big eyes and such rings of curly hair, Shirley!"

"Yes, dear," the girl said firmly enough, although even her lips whitened in the effort to retain her calmness.

"Can you be very brave, dear, and let me tell you now what I have to tell?"

"But, mother, it will tire you!" the girl opposed. "And you need all your strength now. Let us wait."

"Dear, I dare not wait," Mrs. Ross said tremulously. "There may not be time."

"Mother—there was no mistaking the heart-broken anguish in the girl's voice—"mother, not now—I cannot hear it—not now. We will rest at Boulogne."

"No—I must go on, Shirley, I insist"—and in her eagerness the dying woman lifted herself up and stood resting her hand upon her daughter's shoulder—"I insist on going on. You hear me? I will not stay—I will not rest anywhere until I reach London. Shirley, you promise?" she added, as she sank back again exhausted.

"Yes, yes, mother; I promise," the girl said earnestly; and once more she drew her mother's head upon her shoulder and supported her tenderly in her arms.

The train sped on. The gray October twilight would soon spread over the face of the earth; in the stations through which they passed lights were beginning to glimmer, while the trees on the roadside now stood up grim and ghost-like. There was a lamp in the carriage; and Shirley closed the blinds to shut out the gloomy landscape, which looked so dreary under the falling rain and lowering sky.

"We shall soon be there now, mother," Shirley said cheerfully. "It seems absurd to say so, shut up in this carriage; but I think I can smell the sea already."

"Do you, dear?" her mother said, with a faint smile, remembering how often she had fancied that she could smell the heather and wild thyme of the Scotch moors when the sea and land lay between her and them.

"It is wet, but there is not much wind," Shirley continued. "We shall not have it rough, dear."

"I dare say, not, Shirley, darling"—and Mrs. Ross's eyes went wistfully to her daughter's face—"will you listen now? I feel much stronger. Let me tell you what I have to tell."

"There is not time for anything now," Shirley said cheerfully. "These lights mean Boulogne station, dear. We stop here for a few minutes, you know, to set down any travellers for Boulogne; then this nice good-natured train takes up right down to the boat. Do you really feel stronger, mother?"

"Really, Shirley. The sea air, you know!" Mrs. Ross replied, smiling a little. "Will you collect the wraps, dear? And don't you think you had better give me a dose of that nice mixture of Dr. Lejeune's before we get out?"

The train glided into the Boulogne station and set down some of its passengers there. There were a cheerful sound of voices, a bright glimmer of lights, and quick foot-steps hurrying by; then the train left the station again, and went slowly along the quay to the boat. The masts of the ships in the docks and harbor rising grim and ghost-like in the gray autumnal twilight, their lights glimmering feebly through a haze of fog and mist.

CHAPTER II.

Shirley had dreaded beyond all things the change from the train to the boat; but her mother seemed to have rallied wonderfully during the last few minutes. With the assistance of Shirley's arm, she alighted from the train and walked firmly enough across the short space to the boat; but there her strength failed.

The sight of the ladder—for the tide was rather low and the vessel below the level of the quay—terrified her in her weakness and debility, and she stood still, clinging to Shirley trembling and faint. But even then her eagerness to continue her journey made her try to dissemble.

WILLIAM FREW.

The Crimson Rambler.

BY MUTH CAMERON.

I have just received a letter on the borderland between the pathetic and the amusing. The evidently sincere distress of the writer emboldens me to write upon a subject that does not often appear in print. By the way, let me mention that I do not see any reason for the bated breath with which you speak of this subject. "A bed bug," says Elbert Hubbard, "is all right except in its official capacity." Of course, no one likes to meet the "crimson rambler" (as some delicate person has named him) in his official capacity, but that is no reason why we should not openly discuss this way to exterminate him.

My reader friend says that her little boy has been sleeping in the living room this summer, that in some way "crimson rambler" were brought into the house and have infested the living room. She has tried very hard to get rid of them. She says: "It is quite a serious matter at any time but in one's parlor—you may imagine. I have prayed about the matter, so believe it is best to write to you. Have used gasoline."

Let me tell you my experience. You notice I am not ashamed to say that. Almost every housekeeper, no matter how good, has "crimson rambler" brought into her house once or twice in her lifetime. Now, it is no reflection whatever on her housekeeping if some member of the family gets one of these creatures on his clothes in the trolley, or if the unwelcome guests smuggle themselves in in the washing (that was my experience). And yet whenever the thing happens the unfortunate housewives act as if they were disgraced, and refuse to speak of the fatal subject above a whisper. To return to my experience, my reader friend says she used gasoline. So did I and it did no good, but that was because I used it spasmodically. One day I sprayed the bed and left the closet untouched, the next day vice versa. Then one day, I started on a thorough campaign. I bought an atomizer, such as one uses to spray one's throat (forty cents) and a gallon of gasoline. With these I went to work and sprayed every nook and corner in the room, including the picture moulding, the cracks between the base-board and the floor, etc., etc. Then I sprayed every piece of furniture, inside and out, including the bureau drawers; then the closet, taking every garment out and looking it over thoroughly. The bed and mattress, of course, received special attention.

The campaign took one helper and myself the whole of one day, but it was time saved in the end, for I never found a live "crimson rambler" after that day.

The atomizer is important. It throws a strong stream which penetrates into the cracks. Remember to air out thoroughly before fighting a match in the room. I suppose I should admit that the plague had not progressed far before I made this stand. This treatment might not avail if the "crimson rambler" had got a good head start. I have since been told that an excellent treatment for a serious case is to burn sulphur or some powerful disinfectant in the room. Several people have told me that this is most efficacious and does not hurt the paint, but at present I am not able to recommend it from personal experience. And I must say I hope I never shall be.

Fashions and Fads.

The vogue for plaid continues. Small hats seem to be preferred. Fur scarfs are longer and wider. The most becoming of veils is of blue.

Flowers adorn some of the newest hats. Sashes are as much in favor as tunics.

The barrel muff is gaining in popularity. The corsage bouquets seem to grow larger.

The chignon waists in all shades are fashionable. There is a tendency in evening gowns to glitter.

Hats are not worn quite so far down on the head. The new dances call for short skirts and full ones.

Sweaters are dazzling with their vivid brilliancy of color. Street costumes of velvet grow more and more elaborate.

One does not see many ostrich plumes on the smartest hats. The blouses of wash tulle are very inexpensive and durable.

Negligés of chiffon, crepe de chine or net are fur-trimmed. Fur stoles are of good length, with diagonal or oval-shaped ends.

Many small furs are made of mole-skin, ermine and chinchilla. Lingerie is fashioned of Japanese silk, crepe de chine or entirely of lace.

The combination of flowers and fur in some of the hats is most charming. Some of the evening slippers show a narrow line of fur about the top.

One of the newest Parisian fads is the petticoat to match the figured vest.

The bishop sleeves of transparent material are much used on afternoon frocks.

The smartest shirtwaist this fall is washable, but it must not be starched. The sleeves of the strictly tailored suits show little or no fullness at the armholes.

Reindeer Have Escaped.

The efforts of the Interior Department to propagate the raising of reindeer in the Peace River country have not been attended by much success.

The animals have stampeded and taken to the tail timbers.

Fifty were brought from Labrador the suggestion originating with Dr. Grenfell. It was thought they would be of utility for transportation and domestic purposes. A report just received states that twelve died en route and twenty-six broke away from the corral last year and eight this year. Only four remain.

Efforts are being made to catch some of the deserters and place them on an island.

It Will Have to Do Things

"The aristocracy of the future—the privileged class—will probably be composed of healthy, handsome, not wildly intelligent persons," says Miss Cecily Hamilton in the Daily Mail.

"In the beginning no privileged class has founded its claim upon birth; in the beginning—so far—every privileged class has founded its claim upon achievement. The first war-lords and the first merchant princes started life on a par with their fellow: it was only their descendants who looked back with pride on their parentage. And the rule seems to be that when an aristocracy, in the course of generations, comes to rely on its birth, it ceases to achieve, the world in general has no further use for it, and, sooner or later, abolishes it."

"The eugenist is backed by human experience when he works for the creation of his form of over-man. But he will do well to remember that, if his super-healthy class is to count, it will have to do more than be born and be stout and well-looking. It will have to be bred for more than beauty. It will have to be bred for more than beauty. In short, it will have to do things. For, if it does not, the people who can be they pale, be they pock-marked, be they hairless, be they hideous—will arise and do things to it!"

OTTAWA, To-day. The return on Sunday of Premier Borden from his holidays in the south was followed by a series of cabinet meetings, directed especially to a preparation of the sessional programme. The legislation to be considered included the Naval question Bill and one respecting Trust and Loan Companies, Revision of Merchant Shipping Act, a consolidation of the Railway Acts and certain amendments designed to increase the autonomy of municipalities.

LEEDS, To-day.

Asquith's speech at the meeting of the National Liberal Federation was eagerly awaited, because it was expected to throw light on the question of how far negotiations for a settlement of Home Rule by agreement had been successful. It disappointed those who were sanguine of a peaceful issue. I should be deceived myself, he said, if I said that I saw at this moment a prospect of agreement, but it cannot occur with those who say time is being or has been wasted. The Prime Minister declared there was no foundation for the statement that on this or any other matter the Cabinet was divided. With regard to possible settlement by consent, he held it should be carried on beyond the reach of the electorate or Parliamentary necessity, otherwise the other question would continue to be the football of Party politics to the infinite injury of both Ireland and the United Kingdom as a whole. It was in this spirit said Asquith, that he took upon himself to invite not a conference of party leaders, but free and unprejudiced interchange of views and suggestions. There was no reason to despair, regarding the acceptance of the invitation by the leaders of the Opposition. "The Government was not going to make either its own initiative or suggestion of others any surrender of principle, but it had closed any door on a reasonable way to peace. There was no ground whatever, he declared, for a demand made by the Conservatives for a general election. It could not be fought on the single issue of Home Rule, and could not result in a settlement of the question. So far as he was concerned he would not advise any such course, the Government was determined to give Home Rule to Ireland and was not going to be frightened or arrested by the menaces of civil war. The Prime Minister also disapproved some pronouncement from him indicating a prospect of decrease of vast expenditure for armaments, concerning which much dissatisfaction has been expressed among Liberals recently. He and every one of his colleagues in the Government, he said, lamented the huge diversion all over the world of National wealth into non-productive channels. A military, which out of wantonness or levity, in a burst of vain glorious rivalry, added as much as a pound to expenditure for that purpose was committing a National crime. They could not plead guilty to that reproach, they were charged with a solemn trust and in its performance it was their duty to maintain a vigilant watch on what the rest of the nations were doing and be constantly ready to see that the problem could be met by co-operation of great powers of the world brought about by demands of the people.

Roofing As Attractive in Price—As in Color

You'll admit this roof looks attractive—in distinctive colors of red or green. But for most home builders its chief attraction lies in its remarkable economy. Let's begin with its first cost. NEPONSET Prosulate Roofing costs less to buy than good shingles. Greatly reduces the cost of repairs. No shingles to split, crack or "curl up." Remember, the shingles of today aren't the shingles of 20 years ago. NEPONSET Prosulate Roofing makes a water-tight blanket. And best of all, resists fire—is "spark-proof." Its protection from fire-hazard alone is worth all its cost. Its first cost is its only cost, too. Can you afford NOT to have NEPONSET Prosulate Roofing on your roof?

NEPONSET
Waterproof Building Products

Roofings	Building Papers	Wall Board
NEPONSET Roofings are a fire protection, leak-proof and long-lived. Anyone can lay them. NEPONSET Paraffin Roofing is for general use. NEPONSET Prosulate Roofing is an ornamental roofing for dwellings. Attractive colors.	If NEPONSET Waterproof Building Papers are built into walls and floors, the building will be warmer, will cost less to heat and will last years longer. Recommended by architects, engineers and building owners everywhere.	NEPONSET Wall Board is a fireproof product which takes the place of lath and plaster. Comes in sheets 32 inches wide. Remember, it is the only wall board with waterproof surface that requires no further decoration. Anyone can put it up.

Reactionary Measures.

Yesterday we made a protest against any further increase in the number of members of the Legislative Council. In its political complexion that chamber is already overwhelmingly Morristic. During the last four years he has already had the selection of ten members, and before he selected any one of the ten, he experienced no difficulty in the session of 1909 in putting his legislative measures through the Upper House. The proportion of the Morris men to the Bond men there is about 3 or even 4 to one. There is therefore no reason to justify an increase of the nature that is usually advanced for an enlargement of membership of an Upper House. Sir Edward Morris has never experienced any difficulty in that Chamber in regard to legislation. The only pretext that could be advanced for such a course is most reactionary and absolutely undemocratic and illiberal. That reason is to find seats in the Legislature for two candidates defeated and discredited at the polls. That gives rise to the question whether Newfoundland is to be governed by reactionary ideas or democratic ones. Is the Legislative Council to be used as a tool to flout public opinion? A custom has long been in vogue here for the holders of portfolios to be members of the House of Assembly. Are we to hark back to the days before Manhood Suffrage to find a precedent for the holder of a portfolio to be kept in the Legislative Council? The present Minister of Agriculture and Mines were turned down by their constituents a month ago. The course in vogue here is to appoint new men from the members elect. This has not been done. Apparently Sir Edward Morris fears the opening of two more seats. He distrusts the people. He is doubtful of the return of his candidates under the circumstances. He apprehends a reaction to the base sectarian cries which were utilized to give him the majority he holds for the present in the House of Assembly and he sees he must find that majority. He is already in a minority with the general body of voters in the country, and he does not trust them. Like Micawber he is waiting for something to turn up, and in the meantime he has his eyes on the Legislative Council as a means of holding on to the Government and keeping down the people.

"The Merchant of Venice."

This Shakespearean drama was produced last night at the Casino Theatre by the pupils of Field-Spencer College before a large and appreciative audience, amongst which were His Excellency the Governor and suite. The play in its entirety was an excellent production. The stage settings were really good and from the rising of the curtain until the last scene the audience were captivated. The impersonations of the different characters were very creditable and spoke commendably of Miss Sterling who trained the students and who was mainly responsible for the success of the play. The cast and characters were:

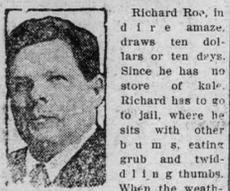

Scene:—Partly at Venice, and Partly at Belmont.

Duke of Venice, Lillian Gosse; Prince of Morocco, Leonore Lillie; Antonio, a Merchant of Venice, Edith Ellis; Bassanio, Suitor to Portia, Vera Hay; Gratiano, Salanio, Salario, Saleria, Friends to Antonio and Bassanio, Louise Saunders; Adria, Willie; Ethel Stangle; Gertrude, Mathieson; Lorenzo, in love with Jessica, Olive Hayward; Shylock, a Jew, Gladys Farnham; Tubal, a Jew, his free Florenca Grant; Launcelot Gobbo, a Clown, May Holden; Old Gobbo, Father to Launcelot, Doris Rennie; Leonardo, Servant to Bassanio, Jean Stevenson; Balduccio, Servant to Portia, Eva Hall and Owen Edwards; Portia, a rich Hebrew, Beata Blackall; Nerissa, her Writing-maid, Alice Lewis; Jessica, daughter to Shylock, Johanna Buel;

A Photograph.

Clerk, Cecile Hayward; Magnificoes of Venice, Elsie Young and Lily Wakeley; Attendants, etc., Mary Willis, Marguerite Murray and Ella Steele. The proceeds of the affair are to be devoted to the Field-Spencer Association funds.

Richard Roe.

Richard Roe, in dire amaze, draws ten dollars or ten days. Since he has no store of dollars or ten days, Richard has to go to jail, where he sits with other prisoners and twiddles his thumbs. When the weather throws a fit, Richard and his comrades sit, calm and cozy in the jug, snug as insects in a rug; thrice a day the jailer comes, bringing bread and shred plums, coffee, bacon, things like those, for the bunch of Richard Roes. And the men outdoors who work—mason, painter, baker, clerk—must supply the bed and board for the gray and grassy horde. Men who wear away their lives to support their kids and wives, must contribute of their rocks that they earn by grievous toils, to supply the beef and ale to the loafers in the jail. When this country's managed right, such things won't disturb the sight. There will be some better plan, and the idle, worthless man will not be a stifling weight on the ones who pay the freight. Man must give his money's worth, or be hustled off the earth.

SMITH-SMYTH.

The wedding of Miss Agnes Smyth, daughter of Mr. Thomas Smyth, Governor Street, to Mr. Patrick Smith, a prominent merchant of Witless Bay, took place at the home of the bride's parents on Wednesday evening, in the presence of a large circle of friends. The bride was attended by Miss Katie Smith, sister of the groom, and Mr. M. McGettigan supported the groom. The ceremony was performed by the Rt. Rev. Mons. Roche, V.G. After supper the happy couple drove to "Balsam Place," where they will spend a few days before leaving for their new home at Witless Bay. The Telegram extends congratulations.

The wedding of Mr. William Basset, King's Bridge, St. John's, and Miss Amanda St. Croix, of St. Vincent's, took place in the R. C. Church on Sunday, Nov. 23rd. The bride looked charming in a suit of blue tulle; the bridesmaids were Miss Maggie Ryan and Miss Mary E. Gibbons, and Messrs. Albert and Vincent Halleran supported the groom. After the ceremony which was performed by the Rev. St. O'Driscoll, the happy couple drove to the home of her brother where a reception was held. The bride and groom leave by the Portia for their future home King's Bridge. We wish them many years of wedded life filled with all the happiness this world can afford.

Obituary.

ST. VINCENT'S.

Word has been received here that Mr. J. T. Hennessey, late of St. John's and for many years an employee of Bowring Bros., died at Brooklyn, N. Y., on November 12th. Deceased left here twenty-five years ago. He is survived by a widow, son and daughter. High Mass was celebrated for the deceased and the remains were interred in the Holy Cross Cemetery.

MRS. JAMES A. LOUGHLIN.

Word was received in the city yesterday from Flat Island, P. E. I., to the effect that a very respected member of that community had passed away on Wednesday night, in the person of Mrs. James A. Loughlin. The deceased contracted a serious illness a short time ago, and rapidly grew worse, till she came on Wednesday. On Sunday night her son, Mr. Charles Loughlin, of the Bank of Nova Scotia, this city, received a telegram that his mother was dangerously ill. Accompanied by his maternal uncle, Mr. Thistle, he left on Monday morning and arrived at his home a few hours before his mother's death. In the death of Mrs. Loughlin, the community of Flat Island has suffered a great loss. A loving mother, an energetic church worker, a kind and generous ever ready to lend a helping hand to the poor and needy, and to extend her sympathy to the sick and afflicted, she leaves behind her a husband and nine children, as well as a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

WINTER NORTH.—According to reports brought along by the S.S. Kyle, winter is set in North, particularly on the Labrador Coast, with unusual severity. There is considerable snow all along the coast and to a depth in places of from ten to twelve feet. Gales and blizzards were frequent during the past fortnight while the weather was so cold that the temperature was down to zero. There is ice formed in the bays and harbors and everything points to a very severe winter.

Long 'Phone Message by Wireless.

Berlin, November 22.—The transmission of wireless telephonic communication over a distance of nearly 4,000 miles, from Neustadt-Am-Ruebenberg, in Hanover, to New Jersey, was accomplished on October 27 by a German wireless company, according to Rear-Admiral George August Esmann in a report to-day to the German Shipbuilding Society.

The message was sent and received in the middle of the afternoon in spite of the daytime being most unfavorable for wireless communications. The two stations are over 800 feet high. Earlier attempts had proved that clearly emitted tones were audible and finally a spoken message was transmitted and distinctly received.

Emperor William and Prince Henry of Prussia have taken a great personal interest in the experiments.

Lord Kitchener

May be the Next Viceroy of India.

Bombay, November 22.—That Lord Hardinge, Viceroy of India, has decided to resign at the first of the new year was reported persistently in Government circles to-day.

It is regarded as probable that Lord Kitchener, the present British ruler in Egypt, will be appointed to succeed Lord Hardinge.

A strong revolutionary spirit among the Indians has developed within the past two years, and the government regards the situation as one requiring a strong man.

A number of men are now under arrest at Calcutta as the result of the discovery of a bomb factory.

Oldest Pugilist.

London, Nov. 22.—George Brown, a survivor of the prize-ring of three quarters of a century ago and undoubtedly the oldest living pugilist, will celebrate his 90th birthday to-morrow at his home in Brighton. Brown was one of the seconds in the famous international championship fight between Sayers and Heenan more than 50 years ago. After quitting the ring he followed the races for many years. To-day he is not only in good circumstances but good health for his years. His memory is wonderfully retentive and remarkable accurate with regard to the fighters, dates and ring incidents of half a century and more ago.

Baseball Champions.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Sluagh."

A baseball championship is a prize which is won for New York, Philadelphia and other great cities by residents of Wahoo, Gresham Hill, Honolulu, Havana, Cuba and elsewhere.

To win a championship is a great event. Whenever a Chicago team ends the season in front, Chicagoans are as pleased as if Chicago really had something to do with it. The loyalty with which a citizen can cheer natives of Tennessee, Sauk Center, Kalamazoo, Montreal, Dublin and elsewhere as they battle fiercely against patriots from California, Kansas, Germany, Texas and miscellaneous points for the championship of New York City is affecting in the extreme. Baseball is the great destroyer of local prejudice and when a local player rams a home run through the scoreboard no one stops to look up his voting place before rising to give him feverish acclaim.

A baseball championship is supposed to settle the relative baseball excellence of New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia and other overgrown towns, but in reality it does no such thing. It exhibits the daring of Fresno, Cal., the long-headedness of Benjd. Ill., the true eyes of Knoxville, Tenn., and the throwing arm of Jackson's Corners, Mass. Half a million fans yell and read devotedly in the interests of their baseball team as it wins the championship of the world, but when the season has closed where are their idols? Do they cluster about the streets and cafes of their admiring city cording up large bales of friends and glory? No indeed. They are back in Wichita, Burlington, and other remote points, running barber shops, shoe stores and chicken ranches among the boys with whom they went to school in their extreme youth.

A baseball championship is a fake, a delusion and a snare. It stands for nothing except the superior lung power of the man who man the grandstands in the winning town. So long as citizens of Chicago can play against their home town on the New York team and the champion swat-ter of the league can make home runs for Chicago against New York, which educated him at the cost of $12.57 per term in its public schools, we decline to persevere with anxiety over the result. Let us have home made champions and not heroes imported at great cost for a few seasons only. This would not only increase the excitement in our metropolis, but it would give the little towns a chance.

No Further Extension at Grand Falls With Present Tariff.

Special to Evening Telegram. LONDON, Nov. 27. The following is a short summary of the Anglo-Newfoundland Development Company's results for the past year, just made public. The net profit, after payment of debenture interest, and providing a sinking fund are equal approximately to 2 1/2 per cent on the share capital. No dividend is paid to the shareholders. The directors' report states, further, that the output of the mills has increased during the year, and that the removal of American duties on pulp and paper should affect the Company favourably, ultimately, by opening a new market, but that no further extensions of the Company's operations will be made during the continuance of the present Newfoundland tariff.

Haldane on the United States.

Special Evening Telegram. LONDON, To-day. The Thanksgiving dinner of the American Society here was noteworthy because of the pronouncement of the British Government and an endorsement of the Monroe doctrine by Viscount Haldane, Lord High Chancellor. Lord Haldane proposed the President and the United States. I recently made a visit to the United States, he said, and came back not only with vivid recollection of the cordial welcome I received, but with deep sense of high ideals the British and American nations held in common. Referring to the President, he said, before he became President, Mr. Woodrow Wilson was a thinking man and a moralist. In studying his career I cannot fail to be impressed by his detached character and find that he has not ceased to be a thinker and a moralist, because he has become the holder of a great office. We see in him the aspiration and ideals expressed in his nation to the world. It is not only his expressed declaration that the policy of the United States is not one of conquest or annexation. The world looks to the United States with its enormous position and possession to carry on its traditions without adding to its possessions. That is our course also, nor is it the cause that when the States intervenes in any matter it is done for its own advantage. It was not so with Cuba to whom the States restored independence. England itself has the same thing in South Africa, where we gave back liberty to those with whom we fought. Speaking of the Monroe Doctrine, he said the States considered herself responsible for liberties of smaller nations of the hemisphere.

Grave Results Are Feared.

LONDON, To-day. Advice received here from Durban are symptomatic of grave results, likely to follow the embitterment produced in the minds of South African Ministers by the speech of Baron Harding, Viceroy of India, at Madras, on Wednesday, in which he sympathized with the passive resistance of Natal Indians against invidious and unjust laws, and demanded impartial inquiry into those. The Viceroy's speech is variously explained here as an unfortunate indiscretion, and the result of grave feeling in India calling for such outspoken sympathy. Little doubt exists in minds of those who have studied the situation that it will encourage Indians in Africa to violent resistance.

McMurdo's Store News.

FRIDAY, Nov. 28, 1913.
The sudden and apparently unprovoked coming of winter makes special increased care of the complexion and hands necessary. As usual, a good start is half the battle—if you right to keep face and hands just right throughout the coming cold season, begin to attend to them now. A little Cream of Lillies used judiciously every night, and the use of Cream of Lillies Soap at the toilet will go far to solve this problem. Many persons, ladies and gentlemen have been using for several years past this strong combination against frost and winter winds and have by its aid proved invulnerable. Cream of Lillies, 25c. a pot; Cream of Lillies Soap, 20c. a cake; 50c. a box of 3 cakes. At both our stores.
Do not forget that we have Nox Cold cream. It is one of the best cold cures. Price 25c. a bottle.

Governor Visits Dock.

His Excellency the Governor and Mrs. Davidson, attended by Major Davenport, visited the Dock premises at noon to-day, and after viewing the Manchester Commerce, from which several of the large plates are now removed, were met by Mr. R. G. Reid, who conducted them to the new "Fuel Economizer and Smoke Consumer" recently invented by Mr. A. G. Shearer, who demonstrated to them the working of the apparatus. His Excellency and Mrs. Davidson manifested great interest in this device, and expressed their appreciation and hearty congratulations to Mr. Shearer on his invention, which he has now brought to perfection. The effect of the compressed air on the flame is almost instantaneous.

Letter to the Agent for the Fraser Engine.

Dear Sir—Many thanks for your letter in the Herald last night, comparing Fraser and FERRO Engines and in pointing out so many points of advantage that FERRO's have over those of Fraser's. We don't like to put it quite as strongly as you do, but we say, that it has a speed of about half as fast again. We like truth and don't like to boast. You seem to think that your engines are more up to date, but we are willing to leave this to be judged by the user and by the public, when we say, that FERRO Engines are made by a factory which employs over fifteen hundred men, and among those, the most expert staff of men in the world. The FERRO factory is the largest in the world devoted to the manufacture of marine engines, and over sixty thousand (60,000) FERRO'S are now in use.

We are glad you say that the Fraser engines are not in the same class as FERRO'S, and we assure you we don't want to be. You say that you meet with no opposition from FERRO'S, and we can quite understand this; every FERRO is an advertisement in itself, and we are selling more and more FERRO'S every day for this reason.

I am glad you speak of burning Kerosene in your engine. Gasoline engines? And do you not have to take off the cylinder and fit an adapter to do this (extra charge $20)? Our FERRO'S are sent out guaranteed to burn Kerosene and need no adapter, because they have been made for this service, without extra charge.

The FERRO is, as you say, a nice light weight motor, this is owing to the best materials being used; Fraser is of course much heavier and slower, so we think it is a light weight speedy motor the fishermen want for his trap skiff, it is light to hoist aboard and launch, and of course does not take up so much room in the boat, while being a simple engine, it is easier to understand and does not get out of repair as often. The fishermen who know the FERRO'S best, are the men who uphold them most. Forty thousand (40,000) FERRO'S are now in use. Three years cost less than an average of Sixty-five cents (65c.) last year for repairs.

We note that you would get no prestige for towing a FERRO in, but "First catch you FERRO" and don't try to find "foemen worthy of your steel."

Many thanks for your kind letter of recommendation.
A. H. MURRAY,
O'Dwyer's Cove,

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.
An astonishing story of a strike among the Lords of the Admiralty is told in this week's Truth. It seems that Winston Churchill brought the strike upon himself by interfering in a personal grievance on the part of a junior officer. The incident having been reported to Whitehall, through the usual official channels, the Sea Lords respectfully remonstrated with their Chief, and the remonstrance not being favorably received, resigned in a body. Apparently this had the desired effect, for the affair has evidently blown over.

The suggestion that the Prince of Wales should attend the official opening of the Panama Canal is under consideration by King George. According to the Liverpool Courier such recognition of the international importance of the event would be popular in the States, and help to obliterate some of the ill-feeling caused by the British Government's decision against participation in the Panama-Pacific exhibition.

OTTAWA, Nov. 27.
The new cruiser now being built for the Customs Department service, will be launched at Southampton on December 11th. She will be called the Marguerite, the Christian name of the Duchess of Cornwall. The cruiser is under contract to be delivered at Halifax in a year. She is a steel twin-screw boat and will be used in patrol service in the Gulf. She will be very fast, and armed with two six-pound quick-firing guns. There has been a great deal of smuggling and poaching done in the Gulf, which it is expected the new boat will put an end to.

LONDON, Nov. 27.
The following is a short summary of the Anglo-Nfld. Development Co.'s results for the past year, just made public. The net profits, after payment of debenture interest, and provision of sinking fund, are equal approximately to 2 1/2 per cent. on the share capital. No dividend is paid to the shareholders. The directors report states, further, that the output of the mines has increased during the year, and that the removal of American duties on pulp and paper should affect the Company favorably, ultimately by opening a new market, but that no further extensions of the Company's operations will be made during the continuance of the present Newfoundland tariff.

A Veteran of the Franco-German War.
James Kelly Burke of the Irish Brigade.

(By H. F. Shortis.)

After crushing the power of Austria at the Battle of Sadowa, the Prussian Prime Minister, Bismarck, devoted his whole time and attention to pick a quarrel with France, being well informed by his paid emissaries to the French capital as to the true state of the army, financial standing, as well as to the internal bickering of those in power, and the machinations of the many secret societies, to overthrow the second empire of the Napoleons.

In 1870, the opportunity arrived. Spain was in a state bordering upon anarchy, and Napoleon having a claim upon that country, through his wife, the good and virtuous Eugenie (formerly Countess de Teba), wished to place his own nominee upon the throne of Charles V. The Emperor William of Prussia, through Bismarck, insisted upon a Prince of the House of Hohenzollern being placed there. Relations became strained, and Bismarck, knowing the true condition of the French Army, neglected no opportunity to precipitate the war into war. Napoleon through his ministers or advisers took the bait, and notwithstanding all the warnings, prayers and exhortations of the great and venerable Adolphe Thiers, who, with tears in his eyes begged the Senate to ward off the danger, because France was not prepared.

"All were for war except Monsieur Thiers. Who said they required some time to prepare."

It was to no purpose. Marshal Le Boeuf was Minister of War, and he represented to the French people that France could place over a million men in the field at a moment's notice. These figures existed only on paper, and when opportunity commenced, he could place only two hundred and fifty thousand men in the field. LeBoeuf's wife was a German, and, of course, did the needful to make known to her countrymen the contents of her husband's private despatches. The army started for the front, the bands playing the Marsellaise, amidst the thundering shout of a "la Marseillaise!" They crossed the frontier. Then came the battle of Saarbrücken, Woerth, etc., with terrible reverses to the French arms which culminated in the ruinous one of Sedan, which hurled Napoleon from the throne, and sent him into exile and an untimely grave. The great Marshal Duke of Magenta, McMahon, was all but mortally wounded, and the charge of the army was given to General Winffren. Every school boy knows the rest of the public was formed with Thiers at its head, surrounded by Jules Favre, Leon Gambetta, Etienne Arago, etc., and every nerve was strained to quell the communists at the private pacify the Germans by paying the enormous indemnity demanded by the Emperor William. McMahon quickly subdued the enemies at home, and the patriotism of the French people quickly handed forth the milliards of francs demanded by Bismarck.

During the commencement of the war, here in Newfoundland, each country had its sympathisers and partisans ran high; betting was indulged in to a great extent, and quite a large amount of money changed hands. While all this was going on, a young man, actuated by the natural love of his forefathers, to be foremost in a place of danger, engaged a passage on the steamship Ariel, Captain Hagen, and started for St. Pierre. Few, any, knew of his departure, or his future field of action. This youth was James K. Burke, of St. John's, well and favorably known by all our citizens. He left St. John's on Sept. 2nd, 1870. From St. Pierre, he took passage for Granville, France, and was ordered to Bourges where he underwent instructions in drill, etc., and received his uniform of the Irish Company (McMahon's), which was attached to the Foreign Legion. The company was ordered to Orleans, and incorporated with the army of the Loire, under General Aurelie Depaulin. Then was gained the one and only victory of the French and Orleans was re-taken from the Germans under Von Der Tann. Mr. Burke's company was then transferred to the Army of the north under the brave but unfortunate Bourbaki, which fought several bloody battles around Belfort, in which Burke participated, and was severely wounded in charging the German Landwehr, the French being commanded by General Rebiliard.

Varicose Veins and Itching Piles

Usually Arise From Same Cause—Relief and Cure Effected by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Nearly everybody knows of Dr. Chase's Ointment as the most effective treatment for piles or hemorrhoids that medical science has been able to compound. So much suffering and misery arises from this ailment that one is not long in telling his friends when he has found an actual cure. This accounts for the enormous sales of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

This letter tells of relief from the suffering of varicose veins by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Many suffer from this trouble not knowing the comfort to be obtained by the use of this great soothing ointment. Mrs. R. J. Evans, 137 Munro street, Toronto, writes: "We have used Dr. Chase's Ointment for years. I have been troubled with varicose veins, and find it the only thing that gives relief. For every purpose when a soothing, healing ointment is needed there is nothing so good as Dr. Chase's Ointment." 50 cents a box all dealers or Edmanon, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Out of eight hundred men, only twelve answered the roll call, Mr. Burke being one of them. The Irish regiment was commanded by Colonel Dwyer and the brave and heroic Captain Martin Walker Kerwin. By the overwhelming forces of the Germans, Bourbaki's army was driven into Switzerland, but not before a company of Chasseurs a battery, and the remnant of the Irish Brigade, kept the hill to cover the retreat, until the Germans sent a flag of truce, and each guard shaking hands, agreed to grant the honors of war. The Irish went to Besancon, arriving there on the 17th March, and the influenza epidemic that was then presented each soldier with green ribbons, shamrocks, etc., and after attending Mass, a great entertainment and got cooped up in Metz when the old Mr. Burke went to Paris, thence to Boulogne and took passage for Dover, arriving safely at Liverpool, via London. He crossed the Channel to Dublin in one of the famous Holyhead boats, but once more returned to Liverpool, whence he sailed for Montreal in the well-known Manly Caspary and came on to St. John's Nfld. in the same ship.

With the limited space at my disposal this is the brief history of a Newfoundlander who entered foreign service, and fought through one of the greatest wars in the world's history. It is true Sir Henry Pym fought through the Peninsula war in the early part of the last century, but Sir Henry was amongst his own people, and as I have heard the old ship face death in many forges as an armed cruiser. James Kelly Burke went voluntarily and remained till the end. He was there when Bazaine got cooped up in Metz when the old war-horse Chaganier and Carrobert performed wonders to release the army by the terrific and bloody battle of Gravelotte. He crossed the hand of the Duke of Magenta as well as that of Garibaldi. With little means, but indomitable pluck, he travelled France and fought her battles in all directions, meeting the approval and respect of his superiors. Think over it, readers! Could any but a brave man risk so much hardship, face death in many forges, all for a country and a people with whom he was not personally connected. There is something grand and heroic in the action of the youth of Terra Nova. Ireland deservedly boasted of her heroic sons the Dwyers, Kerwins, O'Tooles, etc., etc. Her poets and her writers vied with each other in immortalizing them in song and prose. The Dublin Nation newspaper teemed day after day with just praise of heroic sons—the successors of the heroes of Fontenoy; but the heroic son of Terra Nova was overlooked or identified with the countrymen of his forefathers. But while the "soldier of fortune" received few references from the newspapers at large, the commanders of the great French nation did not forget his services in their time of need.

I have read the certificate of James Kelly Burke, signed by the general de division, Ireland. I have perused his appointment, signed by Carnot, and I have seen and perused the certificate as to his conduct, pluck and heroism, signed by the distinguished son of Ireland and brave soldier of France, Captain Kerwin, whose name was known and revered in all countries, and here it is—

DUBLIN, 8th, 1871.
"I have much pleasure in bearing testimony to the good conduct, soldierly qualities and general behaviour of James Burke of the Campagnie Irlandaise during his term of service with me."
(Sgd.), W. W. KERWIN,
"Captain Commanding."

I have seen Lord Lyon's document addressed to all parties, whom it may concern, to allow James Burke to proceed to England and afford him every assistance and protection of which he may stand in need. This document was signed by Lord Lyon, as Her Majesty's Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to the French Republic, etc., etc., and is printed on parchment with the Royal escutcheon and is of the most elaborate nature. The medal received by Mr. Burke is in the form of a Cross and is a splendid piece of workmanship.

Who can now say Newfoundland cannot boast of her heroes on the battlefield? When the services of Henry Pym were rewarded by knighthood and great monetary considerations, Mr. Burke's through were practically overlooked. I firmly believe that were the late Monsieur Des Isles in Newfoundland then, such would not have been the case, because the Consul would have instantly perceived by unquestionable documentary evidence that France did not possess a firmer friend or more heroic defender in her difficulties than she did in the humble subject of this true sketch, James Kelly Burke, of St. John's, Newfoundland.

It must have been a consolation to our heroic fellow-countryman know, ere he passed to his reward, that his moral remains would rest amongst those of his ancestors and great-grandfathers on the sacred ground of Bellvidere, and the Newfoundlander upon viewing his resting place will reverently raise his hat and breathe a prayer for the repose of his soul. Requiescat in pace.

Municipal Elections.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—I with very large number of citizens, were very pleased to note that the name of Mr. Gosling is mentioned as a probable candidate for Mayor at the Municipal election next June.

Mr. Gosling's splendid letters on "Municipal Reform," which appeared in your progressive paper some months ago, struck a responsive cord in many a heart, and while there was not much public endorsement of Mr. Gosling's views, still I believe that the sentiments contained therein represent the views of a large portion of the citizens of St. John's.

I am not so much inclined to blame the Councilors as the "system" for our civic mis-government; it is useless to expect good government from a half dozen men who are working in their spare time or more properly speaking "time they cannot spare."

Give us a "commission" composed of three or four men at a decent salary, who will devote their whole time to the work and run the city on business lines. I believe the republication of Mr. Gosling's letters would be very beneficial at this time.

Yours, etc.,
CITIZEN.

Florizel Back Again.

The Red Cross Liner Florizel, Capt. Smith, arrived at an early hour this morning from New York and Halifax. She left New York on Saturday last at noon and made a good run to Halifax, where a delay of over a day was occasioned by getting freight aboard. The Nova Scotian port was left at 3 p.m. on Tuesday and strong head winds were continuous all the way to this port. On Wednesday night a terrific gale was experienced with a blinding snow storm. The ship brought a full general cargo, a small mail and the following passengers in saloon:—
 From New York—J. H. O'Brien, Mrs. P. J. O'Connell and infant, L. Sherman, R. Birkin and six second class.
 From Halifax—J. Gardner, A. Shill, C. H. Kinch, J. P. Barnes and five second class.

The engraving is from the painting by J. H. F. Bacon, A. R. A., by Royal Command, and has been presented by Dr. W. Seymour Armstrong who intimated when here, returning from St. Anthony Hospital, that as His Majesty had laid the foundation stone of the building by electric current, on Coronation Day, the engraving would be a suitable adornment for its walls.

Youthful Inebriate Causes Disturbance.

Between six and seven o'clock last evening a youthful inebriate created a scene near the King's Bridge. He was half crazed from alcohol and began to tear off his clothing, challenging any one and every one to fight. He was about to mix up with a Forbyman, who would certainly have given him what he was looking for, when Const. Crocker came along and arrested the disturber, bringing him to the police station in a sledge.

Coban Arrives After Stormy Passage.

The S.S. Coban, Capt. McPhail, arrived in port from Sydney at 11 a.m. to-day with a cargo of coals to the Reid Newfoundland Company. The ship left Sydney Wednesday morning at five o'clock, and encountered boisterous weather all the way. She steamed along in the teeth of a north-east gale accompanied by blinding snow squalls. When off Cape Race at 4 p.m. yesterday a large two masted schooner was sighted bound inward. The vessel had been "hove to" during the storm and was running to some harbor for the night. She also passed the S.S. Beatrice on this side of Bay Bulls, which ship was steaming very slowly. On the whole the passage was one of the stormiest felt for some time, and the deck hands complain of the intense cold of last night.

And Why It Get--A Wo

"There seems no hope of the in any near future," says a Chronicle, in an important article a serious thing for the St. John's municipalities in this land-purchasing, housing, and sewer developments, canals, or station—all these depend on cheap capital, without which we are hampered and some made impossible. A Scramble for Capital.

And Why It Is So Difficult to Get-A World of Borrowers.

"There seems no hope of cheap capital in any near future," says the Daily Chronicle in an important article. "It is a serious thing for the State and for municipalities in this country to have to purchase, housing, transit and power developments, canals, or other enterprises—all these depend closely on cheap capital, without which all must be hampered and some made quite impossible. The financial difficulties over Irish land purchase are only a foretaste, we fear, of what may be experienced in almost every province of constructive statesmanship. The situation is one in great measure beyond the control of governments; but it is obvious that the preservation of credit's price and a slackening in the rate of armaments are essential in order to mitigate the worst extremities with which we are threatened."

The Reasons Why

The Chronicle then points out the failure of certain Colonial loans, and explains why capital is so short and hard to get.

The failure of the recent New Zealand Government loan (92 per cent.) which was left with the underwriters is only the latest example of a tendency which has been gathering force for some time. The underwriters concerned in the issue of Colonial loans have agreed (as they temporarily agreed three months ago) that for the present they will issue no more. The fact is, they cannot, so loaded are they with scrip left in their hands. "What is the explanation of this attitude on the part of the public which ten years ago would have jumped at such terms as have lately been offered, and twenty years ago would have thought them incredible? There are no doubt some more or less temporary causes—a not unfounded conviction that the Dominions are over-borrowing, and an unusual absorption of capital in home industry consequent on the trade boom.

World's Demand for Capital

"If the Dominions resort to economy and if the trade boom subsides, conditions may in a year or two be somewhat eased for the Colonial borrower. But the main explanation is not so temporary as these, and is not confined to Colonial as contrasted with home issues, nor to Government investments as opposed to industrial. It is to be sought rather in the world-wide phenomenon which Lord Milner the other day called the 'scramble for capital.' The world's demand for capital seems steadily and even rapidly rising in relation to the available supply; and the rates of interest normally expected and obtained by investors are rising also.

New Country Demands.

"The accumulation of capital in this country does not mean a cheapened supply of it, because it has to meet not only a home demand but a world-demand, and the world-demand is outstripping the world-supply. Certain artificial barriers restricted this tendency, notably the Trustee Act; but the addition of Colonial securities to the list of those in which trustees may invest went far to break this down. To-day there is (in addition to our own trade boom, which occupies profitably an utterly unprecedented amount of British capital) an enormous demand for capital from half a dozen "new" countries which are undergoing rapid development, including not only our principal Dominions, but Argentina and Brazil, to which must now be added Russia.

War and Armaments.

"The demand is not only from State Governments, but from municipalities; and not only from municipalities, but from public utility companies and industrial enterprises of numberless kinds. It is practically all met from only three sources—France, Great Britain and the Low Countries (Germany and the United States having still enough to do to find their own capital, without exporting much elsewhere). It is remarkable, on the whole, that these three sources succeed in financing the rest of the world so well as they do; but it is not surprising that the strain tells.

"A great addition to the strain is the vast increase during the last decade of the world's expenditure on war and armaments. The Boer War, the Russo-Japanese War, and latterly the Tripolitan War, and the two Balkan Wars, have meant the non-reproductive expenditure of enormous capital sums. These, of course, are usually borrowed from the great banks in the course of a war; and at the end of it the financial situation remains very abnormal until loans have been successfully floated to pay them off. All the Balkan combatants were financed in the main from Paris; and the bankers of that centre, the greatest international lending centre in the world are at present considerably embarrassed. Unhappily the Balkan wars not only were costly in themselves, but have left costly legacies. "The additional yearly expenditure on armaments, which they have caused the various Powers to initiate this year, much reach a total in the neighborhood of 50 millions; while the immediate strain, for the first few years is far heavier. Nor do we see a limit to the process, which powerfully contributes to make capital dearer," concludes the Chronicle.

"Syrup of Figs for Constipated Child"

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little stomach, liver and bowels.

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs," that this is their ideal laxative because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless, "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleaning" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

The Wind.

I am the Wind! Make way! I have rushed through the dark back places Where the dust of ages lay. I have breathed into weary faces With a breath from the Heart of Day. I have whispered of unknown graces To the dwellers in Earth's dark places. I am the Wind! Make way!

I am the Wind! Stand by! I must toss and hustle and hurry Where the leaves of the forest lie. I must fetch and bustle and carry From the ground to the roof of the sky.

I have never have time to tarry. There are numberless things to carry. I am the Wind! Stand by!

I am the Wind! Ah, me! I have sobbed with the children's crying. I have laughed at the height of their glee. I have lived with the sad and the dying. I have rocked in the arms of the sea, And I know there is reason for sighing. For I thrill with the children's crying. I am the Wind! Ah, me!

Healthy and Unhealthy Lighting

Gas, it may be said, vitiates the atmosphere. True. But it also helps to purify it. Its purifying power is greater than its vitiating power. Electricity does not vitalize, nor does it purify. Hear what three eminent men have said—

Much evidence has lately been adduced to show that gas is more useful than the electric light in promoting efficient ventilation of air. It is for this, amongst other reasons, that gas is being frequently substituted for the electric light. The latest example is, perhaps, the Society of Medical Officers of Health, which has recently installed gas on its premises, after experience with the electric light.—Dr. Jameson B. Hurry.

He would merely add that no member who had experience of their meeting room under the old conditions could deny the improvement that had taken place since gas had been substituted for the electric light and the new system of heating and ventilation had been installed.—Dr. Reginald D. Field, before the Society of Medical Officers of Health.

I have in my mind's eye, at the moment, a hall which, in the old days, was lighted by gas, and in which a large audience could, with comfort, sit through an hour's lecture, or with pleasure through a three hours' dinner, but which with the march of civilization, had its illumination changed from gas to electricity, the latter being employed, with all the latest improvements to effect the lighting under the best conditions, with the result that any large gathering within its walls leads to a state little short of asphyxiation.—W. J. Lewis, Professor of Chemistry at the Royal Naval College, Greenwich.—nov8,11

Household Notes

Alcohol will clean the piano keys. The leg of beef is very fine for soups and meat salads.

Fried banana laid on a bed of rice makes an excellent luncheon dish.

Sausages should always be pricked with a fork before they are cooked. If cream or milk has turned slightly sour, stir in a pinch of baking soda.

Cabbage is delicious when boiled tender and chopped, then served with cream sauce.

To preserve jellies perfectly, cover each jelly glass with a coating of hot paraffine.

A painter's small brush is the best thing for removing dust from rattan furniture.

If your eyes trouble you, try bathing them regularly with hot water at bedtime. When cleaning the oilcloth, try using a little skimmed milk in the water instead of soap.

Embroidered lines should be ironed on the wrong side and on a thick, soft ironing blanket.

To draw the fire out of a burn, moisten it with water at once and then cover it with baking soda.

If onions are held under cold running water while being peeled, they will not move one to tears.

Cheese is very nourishing and wholesome when prepared with macaroni, potatoes or bread crumbs.

Wash and rinse cut glass in water that is not very hot and of the same temperature for each operation.

Plain sausage is delicious served with butter melted and flavored with a little chopped parsley poured over it.

When kitchen towels wear thin, stitch two of them together around the edges and diagonally across the center.

Brown sugar is a very delightful sweetening for cereals. It gives them a much richer flavor than granulated sugar.

Cold tongue will be entirely skinned if cold water is run over it for a minute after it is thoroughly cooked. When hot grease has been spilled on floor or table, you can prevent its spreading by pouring cold water on it at once.

If undershirts shrink uncomfortably, it is possible to save them by knitting a sufficient length to cover the bare spots.

Cane chair seats that have sagged may be tightened by washing the seat in hot soapsuds and letting it dry in the open air.

When travelling, try pinning your dress to the curtain of the berth with safety pins. It will not be wrinkled in the morning.

A lump of charcoal in the ice box will keep the box free from odors and will absorb impurities. It should be changed often.

Delicious gelatine can be made with the juice of canned strawberries. Add the juice of an orange to the strawberry.

HOW EYESTRAIN CAUSES EYE DISEASES.

Eyestrain is the first cause of most eye diseases. It produces irritation and congestion and a consequent general weakness of all the nerves and muscles of the eye. In this way any eye disease, such as Cataract, Optic Nerve Paralysis, Ulcers, Glaucoma, Granular Lids, etc., may be produced. Any of these diseases, if neglected, may result in blindness. The best time to treat the eye diseases is in the "eyestrain stage." If you are having any trouble whatever with your eyes, no matter how slight, consult us.
