"KYRA,"
OR,
The Ward of the Earl of Vering.

CHAPTER XX.
"Mine That Was Once."

Then she rose, and glided to her glass, and stood before it, calmly, eagerly, examining the picture it presented to her.

"I am beautiful still," she murmured, with a lovely smile. "Through all the agony of those three years I have kept the beauty he praised and loved. Oh, my Percy! Mine that was once; mine that I threw from me as a swine spurns the gambs in his trough! Mine that I have kissed—mine own! And you shall be mine again, or I will die! Who is this child—this girl—this beautiful savage? What's it to me that you found and recovered and are molding her to your fancy? She shall not come between us, I swear! Is she more beautiful than I am? Has she ever held you by the magic of a glance and a smile, a touch, as I have? No! She cannot come between us, though she may have chanced to cross your path. She shall not stay there, for I will sweep her from it! I will draw you to me. Who shall separate or divide us, my Percy, my hero, my love?"

Utterly exhausted, she threw herself upon her bed, and lay there, devoured and absorbed by the passion that had dominion over her; and when at last, sleep took pity on her and closed her eyes, the vision of a tall, lithe, woman-child, beautiful as an houri, rose before her, and taunted and scorned her, so that, even in sleep, there was no peace for Lillian Devigne.

CHAPTER XXI.
K y r a.

We left Kyra standing over her prostrate foe, the center of an astounded and dismayed mob of peevishes in the bud and baronets' daughters. A scene of confusion ensued that utterly puts to shame our poor powers of description, but when, at last, the horrified schoolmistresses learned in full the enormity of their new and strange pupil, their anger and reproaches knew no bounds—at least, they would have known none but for the vanquished Lady Mary, who, in her defeat, showed unmistakable signs of her nobility.

"Certainly, there is only one course open to us," declared Miss Clementa, addressing the tall, unabashed offender, with stern and almost hysterical emotion. "Such—yes, I must use the word, terrible as it is—such savagery cannot be tolerated in a select and

Indigestion Resulted From Bad Case of Inactive Liver

Experience Proved That Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Were Exactly What Was Needed.

If every sufferer from indigestion would study his case as did the writer of this letter the great majority would find sluggish action of the liver and bowels to be the cause of trouble.

It is then an easy step to finding a cure, for there is nothing like Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to awaken the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels. With these organs performing their natural functions the system is thoroughly cleansed of all poisonous waste matter and the process of digestion is no longer impeded.

Mrs. W. L. Jones, Hill Spring, Alta., writes: "I have often thought I would write and tell you how much I appreciate Dr. Chase's medicines, especially Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I suffered terribly from indigestion and did not know what was the cause. I got to using Dr. Chase's

"You are both naughty, cruel girls to behave so badly!" she said; "but I am glad you have told me the whole of this shocking occurrence! And, Miss Kyra, I think, in consideration, we will recall our intention of communicating with the earl," etc., etc. "Now, salute each other, and return to your studies."

Kyra, with downcast eyes and pale face, dropped the graceful posture she had been taught, but Lady Mary caught her in her arms and kissed her.

"You stupid thing," she whispered, "that is not the way to make friends! What a strong, awful savage thing you are! But you'll be my friend now, won't you? Give me a kiss!"

Kyra looked at her for a moment, with a startled, almost frightened face; then her eyes filled, her lips quivered, two great drops rolled down her lovely face, and she stooped and gave the first kiss of her life.

"There!" sighed Lady Mary, putting her plump arm round Kyra's strong waist. "There, now we are friends! And you, girls, if you don't all love Kyra from this moment, you are no friends of mine! Expel her, indeed! Why, they shouldn't have done that if she'd thrown me out of the window, as I deserved!"

Then, as she and Kyra passed away out of hearing of the rest, she whispered:

"Ah, ah! I know your weak spot now, my dear! It is the earl! Is he very terrible? Are you very frightened of him? You must be, for your face changed for the first time since you have been here! There, there!" she added, quickly, with something of an evasive intention, "I won't worry about him; but, remember, we are friends from to-day; and, if you want any help, now, or at any other time, come to Mary Darlington!"

It was no meaningless offer: Lady Mary was as good as her word. From that day the dark Indian girl and the delicate granddaughter of a duke were the Jonathan and David of their sex. They were seldom apart in work hours or playtime; in the former, Lady Mary was as anxious for Kyra's intellectual advancement as Kyra herself, Lady Mary would often scamp her own task to assist her new friend in hers; when playtime came, it was Kyra who turned instructress and assistant. It was she who taught Lady Mary how to use the miniature gymnastics on the lawn, to swing in the wooden dumbbells round her head, and lift a ladies' weight.

Kyra and Lady Mary often took rides in company; and one day, when out riding together, they turned their horses in a new direction, and found themselves in what seemed almost a wild country, though it was, in truth, nothing but a London suburb, not yet polluted by the builders' bricks.

As they were riding slowly, side by side, Lady Mary chattering about all that she would do and see in the life that was opening to her in the gay world, and Kyra listening and wondering, they passed a small sidewalk, overhung with trees.

At the moment of their approach, two gentlemen came out of the shadow into the morning sunlight, and so suddenly that Lady Mary's horse, a rather timid quadruped, shied slightly.

Kyra put out her hand to quiet it, and for the moment the two girls pulled it up.

Two gentlemen, the cause of the little confusion, naturally looked up.

As they did so, the elder of the two, a tall, thin, cadaverous-looking man, with the American type of countenance, uttered an exclamation, and clutched his companion's arm.

"Poker! That's her!" he exclaimed.

Then, in an excited way, he swung his companion round.

"Look count, see those gals on horseback? Tell me if you know them?"

But the girls had ridden on, and the friend shrugged his shoulders, with a slight laugh.

"No, not I. Some school misses out for a morning canter. Why, Jackson, you seem quite smitten!" And they walked on.

They were not quite strangers to the reader, for they were Count Hudspiel and Mr. Jackson, United States Commissioner.

CHAPTER XXII.
The Savage Transformed.

What a charm there is about a beautiful and well-bred woman! She is as an exquisite musical instrument and a glorious picture in one. She is full of that sympathy which expresses itself not by the ordinary vulgar use of words, but by glances, tones, movements—by thoughts, as it were. And, then, how thoroughly in accord is she with you at each and every hour. Nothing in her jars on you; nothing about her brushes your fur the wrong way. You feel consoled, comforted, soothed by her presence; her voice comes to you refreshingly, like a cool draught on a hot day; her glance, so sweetly serene and placid, says so plainly: "Do not fear; I call for no exertion on your part; I make none on my own. I am sympathy itself. Rest and be at peace."

"All this was Lillian Devigne, added to a loveliness that was akin to angelic.

Did Lord Percy do wisely or foolishly in extending his forgiveness and offering his friendship in lieu of the love that had once bound them?

He asked himself the question the morning after his ramble in the woods, when he sat over his chocolate, but he forgot to answer it when Lillian Devigne appeared, calm and lovely, dressed with the most exquisite and simple of tastes, and greeting him with the little smile and half-lowered eyes that a man likes to see in the woman when she addresses him.

There was no trace of the life in her that morning, no sign of the storm that had raged within her bosom, and tossed her on the bed on the preceding night, as a wave of the Atlantic is dashed and broken on a rock. No; as he looked across at her, he might almost have fancied that he had dreamed that little scene on the balcony, and was the fool of a sleep phantasy.

Fresh, and cool, and lovely, she sipped her coffee, and talked to him over his paper. And yet there was something in her voice, a delicate inflection, that seemed to hint at a humility and meekness before him that was dangerously fascinating. When a woman says, by word and look, "You are my master," to a man, it nearly always ends in his being her slave, and she his mistress.

Before she had entered the room, Percy had almost decided to make his excuses, and return to Vering; before she had been there ten minutes, he had forgotten his doubts, and was led away from any sense of flight.

No, he would not be a coward. He would stay, and accept her—friendship.

The Park was a pleasant place to stay at, a Liberty Hall, in which the guests did pretty much as they liked, so that they showed up at the eight o'clock dinner.

They made up riding, walking, sketching parties, just as they pleased. Percy was not fond of parties, and, having two of his horses from Vering in the stables, used to take a daily ride about the hills and dales alone, thoughtful and meditative, forgetting, sometimes, to return to lunch, but appearing at dinner to the minute, looking like a prince, stalwart and handsome, with the Vering bearing and hauteur clinging to him, and fitting him like a glove.

Lady Paceywell never troubled him with questions as to his day's proceeding.

"I am only too glad to get him, my dear," she said to Lillian one afternoon. "He is so eccentric that, if he were at all worried, he would fly back to that great place of his, and we should lose him—and that would be a great loss for Sir William, for he thinks there is no man like him."

All this Lillian knew quite as well as Lady Paceywell, but she possessed ignorance and interest combined, and for a time avoided, rather than sought, a meeting with the man upon whom all her thoughts were set.

Pains in the Side, Chest, or Back, Aching Muscles Cured Quickly

Even Doctors Marvel at the Penetrating Power of Good Old "Nerviline."

Pains anywhere—in the chest, neck, side, back or muscles—they are always a discomfort. If the inflammation is severe, the pain will be intense. If allowed to continue, complications will follow. Physicians say one of the best remedies is "Nerviline"—it can't help curing, because it penetrates through the sore tissues, carrying healing properties that destroy every symptom of pain.

In cases of colds, sore chest and pleurisy, there should be a good hand-rubbing with Nerviline, and, of course to prevent the trouble coming back, it's advisable to put on a Nerviline Vicious Plaster, which, by absorption through the skin draws out all congestion.

For general household use, for curing the ailments of the young and old, for destroying all pain, outward or inward, nothing can excel Nerviline, thousands testify to this effect.

For nearly forty years Nerviline has been a renowned and trusted remedy in thousands of homes where practically no medicine is needed. Nerviline is safe to use. For children's coughs, colds and sore throat nothing can be used with more certain results.

Get the large 50c. family size bottle to-day. It is more economical than the 25 cent trial size, and is sure to keep down the doctor's bill and cure a host of minor ills that arise in every household. All dealers sell Nerviline.

The Burden of Sacrifice

TWO MEN—A CONTRAST.
This is a story of two men and how the war has affected them and changed their lives and made or smashed their fortunes.

The story of these two men is nothing new; it is being enacted among hundreds of thousands of other men. But, as the wife of one of these two men observed, "It's a strange world."

One of the men was a professional man. It had cost long years of study and apprenticeship and much money of his parents to make him a professional man. His school and university years cost about £1,000; his articles of clerkship, examination fees, text-books, and the cost of his living during the five years of his indentures cost at least another thousand pounds. Professional men are debarred by archaic rules from advertising. Unless they have a host of connections, or can afford to buy a practice or partnership, they must wait for patients or clients to come in from the void. Marriage, home, children, are solaces of other workers that they can only look for in early middle age. It was so with this man. It was only in the fourth year of his practice that he began to be able to repay his mother the advances she had made, out of a slender income, for his maintenance during the five years of his apprenticeship and the first three years of his practice, and it was not until the tenth year (the fifteenth since he was articulated to his profession) that he was able to marry, at the age of thirty-four. By taking work home and keeping his average working day to fourteen hours he was able to rub along with a clerk and an office boy, and his net income was about £400. Most professional men will agree that this was a very fair progression and quite an average return for fifteen years' specialized toil and a capital expenditure of two thousand.

The other man of this story was his clerk. His age was twenty-four, he was unmarried, and no worldly responsibility sat on his broad shoulders. Life to him was "not 'art" a bad thing. He could leave the office daily at a regular hour and think no more of it. His work and cares were his care, his employer's, not his. He had made no outlay, either with capital or time, for his calling. In fact, as he often said, it was only a "fluke" that he was a clerk. He had just "taken what came along," and sometimes he thought of "chucking it up" and going into an engineering works. He had always had an amateurish taste for mechanics. "But any old thing for change and adventure."

And then the war came. The professional man stuck to his office for a time. There were plenty of younger men, he argued to himself. He had only just built up a practice after all those years of work and all that sunken money. He had only been married two years. It meant the smash-up of his professional career, his home, everything. His clerk refused to enlist, so why should he? But the calls went out for men, and more men, and more men—and he enlisted. He discharged the clerk and the office boy, shut up the office, disposed of his home, and put his wife and two infants into cheap furnished lodgings, with only her separation allowance to live on.

The other man was very annoyed when his employer did those mean things. "It's hot-headed chaps like him make it bad for all of us," he said. "Why couldn't he keep quiet and mind his own business? A nice mess he's gone and made of that." The clerk sought another situation; but employers were becoming shy of engaging broad-shouldered young applicants; men, and more men, were being appealed for by the Army. Compulsion loomed. People were rude to him in the streets; women were particularly offensive in some of their questions. He had no excuse—not even a badge. Suddenly the his harassed mind occurred the flimsy amateur knowledge of mechanics. He remembered the jolly young munitioneer he met one night at a music-hall who told him that the work was "as easy as kissing the back of your hand." So he presented himself at a munition works, and was accepted at three times the salary he had earned as a clerk. He breathed in fresh safety again. He was exempt, indispensable, and proudly badged.

At that very hour the other man stood with his fellows at the bottom of a ditch of reeking clay. Flakes of sleet eddied down from the grey streak that was all he could see of the sad sky of Flanders. Under the water that he stood in was clay that sucked at his cold feet like a quicksand, and somewhere under that again was a German mine, and he and his fellows knew that the mine was there, but knew not when it would explode. The dank air that puffed into the trench was foul with the aroma of the enemy's last poison-gas attack and fouler still with other terrible odours. Near him protruded the leg of a defunct German, exposed by a trench slip that day that had killed two men. It was the hour when the enemy, with clockwork regularity, commenced their daily "strafe"; when "Minnie" bombs tumbling like porpoises in their flight, thud into parapets and bury live men when they explode; when shrapnel crackles overhead; when "whiz-bangs" leap like devil's crackers; when high-explosive shells fall like bursting astroroids. So the other man had to trust into a mine a letter he had read a dozen times and turn to his ordeal.

This is an extract from the letter. "Whom do you think I met yesterday in a 'bus in the Strand? Your late He patronized poor me at—, and in-clever Wilkins magnificently arrayed, formed me that he is making eight pounds a week! He has become a member of 'The Union.'"

"He is looking awfully well and strong—you know what a broad-shouldered fellow he always was. I asked him what he was doing with all that money, and he told me that he is having a splendid time, but that he is still saving quite enough (oh, how I wished that I was a man and could kick him!), to be able to put by enough to get free articles with a firm of solicitors in part payment of salary as clerk and eventually open his own practice. I couldn't help asking him how he reconciled it with his conscience that he was not in the Army. He said that his conscience had always been against war. I asked, if that were so, how his conscience allowed him to make munitions? I told him, almost rudely, that I hoped he would be combed out. He laughed scornfully and assured me that there was little fear of that.

"Well, it's a strange world. But, despite all my loneliness and heartache, and the sleepless nights when I pray for you, dear, and the absurd pinches and devices I am put to, to feed and house and clothe myself and the bairns until my man comes back, I am still glad and proud that you went—out, oh, I do wonder what all of you out there are going to say to the Wilkinsons when you come home again."

Speech Which Got Socialist Into Trouble.

Dr. Karl Liebknecht Was Too Outspoken to Suit Authorities in Berlin.

The following is the text of the speech delivered by Germany's foremost Socialist leader, Dr. Karl Liebknecht, on the Imperial Palace grounds at Berlin during the May Day bread riots, when he was arrested by the authorities.

"Comrades and friends, some years ago a witty Socialist has observed that in Prussia we Germans have three great rights, which are: We can be soldiers, we can pay taxes, and we can keep our mouths shut. The Socialist who made this observation has made it with a grim humor, but to-day the humor of it must be disconnected from it; it is all too grim. Especially in these days this observation is too true. To-day we are sharing these three great Prussian state privileges in full. Every German citizen is given the full privilege to carry a rifle in any manner. Even the boy scout has been incited to play the ridiculous role of a soldier. They have thus planted the spirit of hate deep in his youthful soul. Meanwhile the old Landstrumer is forced to perform forced labor in invaded countries, in spite of the fact that under the laws of the imperial constitution he cannot be called out for any other purpose than for the defence of the Fatherland.

"As for the second privilege—his right to pay taxes—in this respect the German citizen is, up to the present time, far ahead of his brothers in foreign lands whom he is engaged in exterminating. And yet more privileges of this kind are awaiting him in the days to come—after the end of this war. The high taxes which the German people have so far paid are insignificant compared to the great burden which he must carry after the war, and for which his masters are daily preparing him with such touching delicacy of patriotic sentiment through the medium of the official press.

"The new Germany has the unquestionable right of maul halten (holding his tongue). Recently our official press has been flooded by authoritative and pharisaic exhortations to soldiers' wives, that they must, for God's sake, not complain so much about the scarcity of food. Keep your mouth shut when hungry, keep your mouth shut when your children are hungry, keep your mouth shut when your children want milk, keep your mouth shut when your children cry for bread, keep your mouth shut and write no letters to the front!"

Outside of Germany these remarks might sound like the stock phrases of a professional agitator, but not so in Germany, at least not in these days. I carefully watched for the effect of these remarks all about me, and I saw no pair of dry eyes.

"In a recent issue the mouthpiece of the Pharisee, the 'Munchener Neuesten Nachrichten,' complains thus (reading from a clipping):

"Our soldiers do not always receive from their dear ones at home the best encouragement to hold on. A soldier on furlough, who, before obtaining his leave, had performed his duty to his Fatherland unflinchingly, and went through many hardships with good humor, but, however, after a visit home, returned to the front with a sad face, worrying day and night about his dear ones and the pretended scarcity at home."

"Pretended scarcity certainly is palatable, especially when one is reminded of the fact that our police is weighing the bread, that the butter is out of the market; that fat, meat and margarine have reached a price that is beyond the probable reach of the working man!

"Another well-nourished Pharisee exhorts in the columns of the 'Nord Allg-Zeitung' by asking, 'Where is scarcity to be found?' and no doubt after having partaken of a good dinner, he preaches with these words: 'We must teach ourselves at home how to manage, to get along in our homes with as little as possible.' But, of course, in large families with children, the small earnings of the bread-winner being now totally absent, this sum must be replaced by the creation of a relief fund so that there may be no serious want.' Exactly, but under no circumstances must the people complain of hunger. It annoys the soldier terribly and cripples his fighting power. Therefore, do not write complaining letters to the front. In other words you wives of soldiers hide the truth from your husbands, in fact, lie to them."

"The old proverb says: 'The mouth speaketh out of the fullness of the heart.' And, if her children's stomachs are empty it is hard for the wife not to mention the fact to her far-away soldier husband that it is hard to provide his children with food while he is offering his life for his country. But if it is not found possible for your masters to prevail upon you to 'keep your mouths shut,' then they resort to a more practical means. They have a very simple means of stopping these annoying complaints. The Prussian censor is now supervising these letters of wives at home to their husbands at the front. They simply do not allow this objectionable correspondence to go through. Poor and unfortunate German soldier! He deserves pity! At the command of the militarist government he has gone into the enemy country, and at the command of the government, he must steel from other nations. He is required to perform difficult services. The sufferings that he endures are past description.

"About him everywhere shells and bombs sow death and destruction. His wife and children at home are suffering want and hardship; she looks about her and finds her children crying for bread. She is desperate, but she must not appeal nor complain to anyone. She must hold her tongue and suffer inwardly. But how can she silence her children. She must not even share the sympathy of her husband at the front, because that cripples her soldier-husband's fighting powers. Her soldier-husband must 'hold on' and 'steal' in the land of her neighbors. He must hold on and 'suffer' because the capitalists, the hurrh patriots and the armor-plate kings have willed it so. Everyone must keep his or her mouth shut, for the war-profiteers must make money out of the want and misery of the wives and their husband-soldiers at the front.

"By a lie the German working men were forced into the war, and by like lies they expect to induce him to go on with the war!"

Doctor Liebknecht had scarcely finished this last sentence when, as if by magic, a sudden excitement broke out. Near the spot where the doctor and his friends had been standing the crowds surged back and forth. At this point Doctor Liebknecht was arrested, and is now awaiting trial by court martial on a charge of treason.

The EASTERN TRUST COMPANY

WE GO ON FOREVER.
Just two reasons why the Eastern Trust Company can administer an Estate better than a personal executor or administrator.
1.—It has nearly twenty-four years' experience, and its existence is perpetual, neither does it cost any more to employ the Company than an individual. The Company affords the Estate absolute security. It has a paid-up capital of $1,000,000.00 and a reserve of $250,000.00. The Estates held in trust to December 31st, 1915, amount to $15,036,532.85.
2.—In the event of the death of a personal executor or administrator, your Estate must look around for a substitute. The new administrator is unfamiliar with the business and confusion is often the result. The death of any officer of this Company does not break the continuity of the policy of administration.
While the Company administers over Fifteen Million Dollars worth of Estates, it also does a very large business in executing Trusts of all kinds and acting as Financial Agents of all descriptions. We can give fullest satisfaction in the collection of rents, interests, mortgages, dividends, etc.

Municipal Matters

We are sorry to see that we have incurred the displeasure of the Mail and Advocate for our remarks last Friday on Municipal matters and the coming election, particularly as our object in making them seems to have been misunderstood by our esteemed contemporary. We should have thought the title alone which we gave to them would have made our meaning clear. Allowing for that misunderstanding, we appreciate the force of much of what the Mail says. At the risk of becoming tiresome, we will briefly explain our view once more: the importance of the subject and the imminence of the election must be our excuse. We think most people will share our pleasure when the matter is definitely set at rest on Thursday next.

We think it necessary to emphasize two things. In the first place, this is not an ordinary election: the circumstances are quite exceptional. Only the omission of the Legislature last winter to extend the power of the Commission has made it necessary that any election should be held at this time, when for many reasons it is to be regretted that it must take place at all. This being so, it seems to us very desirable that matters should be left as far undisturbed as possible. What purpose is there in electing it may be, quite a new Council, under the old law and perhaps under the old system, when it is shown that both the law and the system will be radically changed next year, and possibly still another election become immediately necessary? We do not, as the Mail seems to think, stand for "Mr. Gosling and the Big Six;" we do favour the Commission and the status quo. There is a great difference between the two.

But in the second place, if we are willing to alter the status quo, is it not reasonable to ask for good and substantial grounds for the alteration? Every elector should demand them, and it was the purpose of our observations to point this out. We stated what we considered those grounds to be, and indicated particularly the most important of them, the subject of finance—whence and in what manner the revenue of the city should be derived and how it should be expended. We may be pardoned for still thinking this a more important matter than the flushing or otherwise of certain catch-pots. For one who really has the welfare of our town at heart it is disappointing and annoying to hear the oratorical changes rung on themes of no importance whatever. Despite the inconsequence of the whole election, if Mr. Kelly or any other candidate would give evidence of his ability to deal with any of the many matters that lie at the root of civic government, and if we considered his proposals better than those of the Commission, we should give him our unhesitating support.

We are charged by the Mail with inconsistency in crying for candidates and then "deriding" those that have offered themselves, outside of the commissioners. Our conscience is not much troubled on this point. Three weeks ago there was not a single candidate in the field. Mr. Kelly then announced his intention of standing for the Mayoralty, and shortly afterwards Mr. Gosling and the six Commissioners entered the lists. There was general satisfaction that they had done so, and we ourselves, so far from asking why others did not come forward, explained that it was natural few should wish to oppose them. Others have opposed them. We have not derided these gentlemen, having the greatest respect for each of them. We have merely criticised their propaganda as any aspirant to public honours must expect to be criticised. We are not conscious of having treated them unfairly; if there is any danger of unfairness it is to the Commissioner. The Court does not ask counsel to sit down before he has finished his argument.

Dr. Grenfell and the Reporters

We have received from Mr. Sheard, of the Grenfell Institute, a copy of the following letter to Dr. Grenfell from the Montreal Star:

"The Montreal Star," Star Building,
Montreal, Canada.
June 12, 1916.
Wilfred T. Grenfell, M.D., C.M.G.,
St. John's, Nfld.
Dear Sir,—
I greatly regret the error which occurred in your speech published in The Star of May 23, and shall hasten to make the correction you request.

The Star does not usually fall into such an error, but in this instance through an unfortunate misunderstanding, we had no reporter at this meeting and were forced to reproduce, what seems to have been an erroneous report from the morning paper.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) C. F. CRANDALL,
Editor.
Certified to be a correct copy.
The International Grenfell Association,
A. SHEARD,
Secretary and Business Manager.

This reminds us very much of the common plea of a defendant in a slander case that "I only repeated what every one else said." It may exonerate the Star from direct responsibility, but shifts it to the other paper (we understand the Montreal Gazette), which was enterprising enough to have a reporter on the spot, but unfortunate enough to have a very bad one. Perhaps we shall some day learn from the Gazette how Dr. Grenfell's lecture came to be so badly reported. It is, however, pleasant to know that no misunderstanding now exists here on this particular matter.

Archbishop Returns.

His Grace Archbishop Roche, who was on a prolonged health trip to the United States, returned to the city by the express train Saturday evening last and it gives us great pleasure to note that His Grace's health is very much improved as a result of his trip. He was accorded a hearty welcome on arrival, being met at the railway station by Rt. Rev. Mons. McDermott, V.C., and Rt. Rev. Mons. St. John (Torbay), all the priests of the city, Parishes and Rev. Frs. O'Callaghan, of Burlin, and Galway of West Virginia, as well as by representatives of the Christian Brothers and a large gathering of R. C. citizens, including Hon. J. D. Ryan, M. P., Cashin, P. T. McGrath; Capt. G. T. Carry, and Lieut. Burnham, Nfld. Regiment; the Presidents of the R. C. Societies and others. A whole-hearted welcome was manifested on all sides, because immediately His Grace detained rousing cheers were given by the entire assemblage and reciprocated with a typical kindly smile from the good Archbishop. After making his way through the crowd, he boarded Mr. G. McGuire's motor car, accompanied by Mgr. McDermott and Rev. Fr. McGrath, who acted as Chaplain to His Grace during the trip, and proceeded to the Palace followed by Hon. J. D. Ryan's car containing Mgr. St. John and Rev. Frs. Renout (St. Patrick's) and Kitchin (St. Joseph's). Other clergymen and citizens present were conveyed to the Palace in other cars. Archbishop Roche was pleased and impressed with the cordial welcome he received and intimated how pleasant the journey across country was made for him through the kindness of Mr. H. D. Reid. His Grace was accompanied from Port aux Basques to North River in the car "Terra Nova" by Rev. Dr. Whelan, who was with him in New York earlier in the season for several weeks.

S. A. Visitor.

Colonel Jacobs, the Men's Social Secretary for Canada and Newfoundland, will arrive in the City by today's express.

The Colonel is an old friend of Newfoundland, having paid several visits to the Island some eighteen or twenty years ago.

He is one of the oldest Salvationists associated with the movement in Canada, having spent over thirty three years in the service. During that time he has filled many varied and important positions.

It was during his term of Chief Secretary for Canada and Newfoundland that he paid annual visits to St. John's, and many of the older Salvationists and friends remember his eloquent and fiery addresses delivered by him.

Since then he has filled the important position of Chief Secretary for the Men's Social Work in Great Britain. It was while he occupied this office that the Colonel came in touch with the lower strata of humanity and by his toll and energy many a poor unfortunate was lifted out of despair, and given a fresh start in life.

Since the Colonel has taken the oversight of the Social Work in the Dominion, the work has gone forward with leaps and bounds.

Not Facts at All.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—My attention has been called to a letter written by Mr. W. A. O'D. Kelly in Saturday evening's papers. He gives what he calls 'facts' in relation to the practice of the Sanitary Staff.

It almost seems unnecessary to state that his 'facts' are not 'facts' at all.

It is true that an idea was entertained at one time that the night soil might be dumped at once into the sewer by means of the pots, but after experimenting one night in one place, it was abandoned, because it necessitated an arrangement for flushing which we could not see how to supply.

Mr. Kelly says that the practice under instruction of the Board is for full carts to be brought to a convenient spot and the contents baled out. This is quite untrue.

No instructions were ever given for any such method of disposal. Complaint was received by the Board that this had been done by some of the Sanitary men in two instances. They did so without authority and were threatened with suspension if it ever occurred again.

Mr. Kelly states that numberless complaints have been made about these stop hoppers. This is also untrue—a few complaints have been received of misuse or inattention on the part of the Sanitary Staff, and I think one or two requests have been made for their removal when the adjacent houses had connected with the sewers. Otherwise no complaints have been received.

Quite contrary to this, the people living in the localities where they have been placed, have continually expressed their satisfaction at the improvement in their surroundings. The contents in every case were such as formerly was to be found in the drains. There was practically no offensive odor—not nearly so much as used to be exhaled by the side drains, nor anything particularly objectionable about them.

I see Mr. Kelly is very much worried because the cats jump into the hoppers. I suppose they go there after the scraps which they used to gather from the side drains.

Here and There.

And as for the children—is it not a thousand times better for them to have clean side-walks and clean dry drains in front of their doors than the reeking dirt which they used to have to play in?
Yours truly,
W. G. GOSLING.

HENRY BLAIR

The Woman Who Sways the Kaiser.

AN AMAZING ROMANCE OF A GRO-CEE'S DAUGHTER.

This American Woman's Influence Over the Kaiser and His Wife Alarmed His Ministers—It Was She Who Inflamed the Hatred of England Which Has Consummated in the War.

When Esther Lea first opened her eyes on the world in New York more than seventy years ago he would have been a very bold prophet who had predicted that the infant so modestly cradled would one day be a Princess in her own right; that she would have an Empress for grand-niece, and that, far more than any other woman of her time, she would mould the history of the world in her clever hands.

Such a prophet would, indeed, have been laughed to scorn; for Esther's father was then serving customers behind the counter of his modest grocer's shop in Front Street, New York; and had only just been able to move his family from its upper rooms to a more comfortable home in College Place.

Esther had thus neither birth nor wealth to start her on any career of ambition; she seemed, indeed, as far removed from the glittering circle of Royal Courts as from the planet Mars. But the child had the still more valuable dower of beauty and a clever brain, which has carried many a child even more obscurely born, to the dizzy heights of power.

Before Esther had turned her back on her school-books her beauty and her charm had drawn many a lover to her feet; but the grocer's daughter would have nothing to say to any of the prosperous young business men who would so gladly have made her wife. She had already set her heart on a very different sphere, and would say jokingly to her mother: "I shall be a great lady some day."

A Princess as Husband.

She had just reached the verge of young womanhood when her father, having accumulated a small fortune, died; and his widow carried off her three beautiful girls and her son to Stuttgart to complete their education—thus unconsciously playing into the hands of Fate.

In the Wurtemberg capital the arrival of the three "American beauties" caused no little sensation; and it was not long before the eldest of them found a husband in Baron von Waechter, a handsome and courtly diplomatist, who, within a few months of his wedding day, was sent as Ambassador to Paris, to which city, Mrs. Lea and the rest of the family quickly followed her son-in-law.

Thus Esther's opportunity had come at last. She was now in the first radiant bloom of her beauty—"a tall figure of mingled statelyness and grace; a little head, with a coronal of glorious brown hair; eyes blue as violets and dancing with the joy of life, illuminating an oval face with the daintiest features, dimpled cheeks, and a rosetud of a mouth."

Such is the enthusiastic picture drawn of her at this time; and one cannot wonder that even in Paris, that city of fair women, the American girl should be hailed as a new revelation of female loveliness.

Nor was it long before her retinue of lovers included the Prince of Schleswig-Holstein, who, although a widower who had seen more than sixty years, was a strikingly handsome man, and still so susceptible to the charm of beauty that he lost his heart at first sight of Esther's loveliness and gave her no peace until he had made her hismorganatic wife.

The grocer's daughter, although she was but the "left-handed" wife of a Prince, had thus early found entrance to the closely guarded inner circle of Courts; and as Countess von Noer (a title conferred on her by her husband) was welcomed by the highest society of the Continent. But the Prince was not long destined to enjoy his new-found happiness. Indeed, within a year, he left a widow and his entire fortune.

For a time the Countess made her home in Vienna, where she became so popular with Franz Josef and his Court that he created her Princess von Noer in her own right.

It was not likely, though, that a woman so lovely, so gifted, and so well gilded should long remain unclaimed, and almost before she had discarded her weeds we find her standing again at the altar—this time with the young and handsome Count von Walderssee, a soldier of considerable gifts and charm who stood high in the favour of the Emperor William and Bismarck.

Arranged the Kaiser's Marriage.

The grocer's daughter had now the ball of fortune at her feet. She had become a power—in a position, through the old Emperor's admiration of, and affection for her, to influence Prussia's policy at home and abroad.

In order to make her position unassailable strong she now set to work to arrange a marriage between the young Prince William (the Kaiser of to-day) and the Princess Augusta Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, grand niece of her first husband, a girl to whom she had been more than a mother. And so cleverly did she "pull the strings" that one day in 1881 she saw her devoted "child" (as she called her) blossom into a future Empress at the altar.

She had already succeeded so well in winning the devotion of Prince William that he invariably addressed her as tante (aunt). Now that he was, in fact, her nephew, wedded to a wife who was passionately attached to her, the future Emperor became still more devoted to her.

"It is really absurd," wrote a lady of the Court at this time, "to see what a fuss Prince William makes of the American Countess. He is her shadow; often spends several hours daily in her company; and I really believe consults her as to what he shall wear, eat and drink!"

But it was when William came to his throne in 1888 that the Countess' power reached its full scope. Her influence over the young couple was so great that it alarmed William's ministers, and drove his mother, the Empress Frederick, to despair. "I can do nothing," she wrote. "William is the veriest puppet in the hands of this clever and designing American woman. He takes no step without consulting her first; and he follows her advice rather than that of his wisest ministers. What is worse, from my point of view, she estranges my son more and more from me, and makes him oppose my slightest wishes."

Responsible for the War.

To his subjects his slavish devotion to the Countess was for years an ever falling cause of amusement; and at one time, "I must ask Aunt Esther," was a catch-phrase throughout Germany.

It is said by those who profess to know that ever since his accession to the throne the Kaiser's policy has been inspired and directed more by the grocer's daughter than by all his ministers combined.

It was she who counselled the daring and historic step of "cropping the Pilot"—dismissing Bismarck and taking the reins of Government into his own hands. With the "man of iron" out of the way she could rule the Emperor as she willed—he had been her only rival and obstacle.

It is she who has invariably encouraged his autocratic rule; has fed his vanity until it has turned his brain; and has inflamed the hatred of England which has culminated in the most devastating war of all time.

Apart from her political mischief-making, however, the Countess is a lovable woman, with a large heart and a boundless charity; and she has never lost her affection for the land which gave her her obscure birth.

She still retains traces of the beauty which once dazzled Europe; and although her hair is white as driven snow her figure is as erect and queenly, and her complexion almost as clear and brilliant as when, at first sight of her loveliness, the princely widower lost both head and heart half a century and more ago.

The Call.

It came to the boy on the farmland. When the sunset was tinting the west; Was it brooklet or zephyr or night-bird? That whispered the mighty best? What matter? He turned from the hillside And followed where stern duty led; The boy of the plough is a soldier now Whom Freedom has reared and bred.

It came in the gay, crowded ballroom. Through the beat and the crash of the band; Was it sob of a harp or viola That murmured the great command? What matter? One heard and departed And travelled a toilsome way; The youth of a dance is the man of the lance, A soldier made in a day.

It was not for the hate of the foe, It was not for the sake of the gain, That our lovers have answered the bugle, That our sons lie asleep with the slain. God's call came clear as the dawning To stand for the right and the good, The call to the strong to avenge Freedom's wrong. They heard and they understood. —Lillie A. Brooks.

Brides.

By GEORGE FITCH.
 Author of "At Good Old Shvash."

"A bride is a young woman who is about to cease thinking of floral bells, wedding presents, and handsome clothes, in order to fix her frenzied attention on wash women, dirty dishes, dust on the piano, and the price of beefsteaks.

This is because the bride is a young woman who has just been or is about to be married. Being a bride is a very joyful and popular experience, and is written about profusely, but getting over being a bride is not embalmed in literature very much, except in letters to mother.

A bride is a beautiful vision in silk and chiffon with a long veil and a bouquet and a sad father in a new dress suit whom she has to propel to the altar by the arm. It takes about six weeks and $1,000 to make a first class bride who will cause any excitement among the society editors, and families who are about to have a bride do not generally buy a new automobile that year.

Brides are fragile and delicate to look at, but as a matter of fact they are very durable. A bride goes to three receptions and two teas and a box party each day for a month before her wedding, and spends her spare time standing while dress-makers hang clothes on her, yet very few brides are trundled up the church aisle in wheelbarrows. On the other hand, the young man who plays the solo part in the responses usually comes to the church in a state of col-

Your Boys and Girls.

The system of delivering milk in bottles is a conceded improvement in a great many respects over the old system of measuring it out from a can as it may be wanted, but a manifest weak point of the new method is that no means of carrying the bottle is offered except the questionable one of carrying them by grasping the bottles by the neck.

Any contamination on the hands is immediately transferred to the bottle and thence to the milk. Of course, the milkman has a wire basket in which to transport the bottles, but in transferring them to and from this the bottles are necessarily handled in the manner outlined above.

It will be readily seen that the desired results of the improved system are thereby defeated to a great extent, in a few cases this condition has been aet by wrapping the neck of the bottle with a piece of wax paper, held in place by a string. This effect is taken care of in a simpler way by a newly patented bottle closure, which not only protects the fluid contained in the bottle, but at the same time encompasses the entire top of the container in such a manner that contamination of the surface surrounding the opening of the bottle is prevented.

Plainness Unadorned

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

Opposite me on the car the other day sat a rather plain woman. She had harsh features and she wore thick glasses. And how do you suppose she was dressed? A suit of a light color and striking cut, a yellow silk blouse, a flower-garden hat, a string of blue beads and a white fur!

Can you imagine any combination of clothing more unfortunate for that type of woman?

Poor lady, she probably knew she was plain and thought to alleviate that plainness by the elaborateness of her toilet. And instead she only called attention to it and made it infinitely worse.

It takes a Pretty Woman to Wear Fussy Clothes

It takes a very pretty woman to wear clothes of that sort and yet everywhere you see plain women who make the mistake of dolling themselves up in fussy clothes.

It's just as foolish as it is to try to hide the bad lines of a gown by a slather of trimming.

Plain people look best in plain clothes.

I longed to get hold of that woman and put her in a plain tailored suit, preferably dark blue, a simple white blouse, and a close hat, carefully selected to suit the lines of her face. She would not have been pretty even then, but she would have been a much more agreeable object to look at.

What strange ideas people do have about the kind of clothes that become them!

White is Not Becoming to Most People

For instance, white is popularly considered a universally becoming color and every young girl is supposed to look her best in her simple white dress.

And yet not one girl in fifty looks as well in white as she does in the right color.

I went to a graduation the other day and marvelled that among twenty graduates there was not one thoroughly pretty girl.

A day or two later I saw those same girls at a reception. They were dressed in afternoon dresses of various colors, and several looked attractive and one or two thoroughly pretty. And then it came to me that before they had been handicapped by white dresses.

Black is Sometimes Less Trying Than White

Conversely, black is not half so unbecoming as it is popularly supposed to be. A black gown generously relieved by white about the throat is becoming to almost anyone, and the right kind of black in a hat is often easier to wear than white.

Bright colors are the most trying and yet people who wouldn't think of wearing black unhesitatingly wear such trying shades as rose and cerise.

We can't all be pretty, but we can all be as pretty as we can. And I think "Know thyself" means know your style and the colors you can wear as well as your other powers and abilities.

Trying to Smash France.

It is not in the expectation of eventually winning the war that Germany continues to hammer so persistently and furiously upon the defences of Verdun. It is peace, not victory, she is fighting for, and the less favorable the reception of her attempts to bring the Entente Powers to consider peace the more desperately she must fight. There is no chance for a settlement imposed either by her arms or by her diplomacy. She will have to bow to terms dictated by her adversaries. Of course, she will continue to do everything to win or to put it out of the power of the Allies to make the terms very onerous. As her military resources are still tremendous, she can inflict great damage before she is brought to submission, and that she means to do.

Particularly is she determined to deal as many and as disabling blows to France as she can deliver. When the war is over and she herself is in a state of exhaustion it would be to her advantage to have France in the same state of debility. So while she may, she is doing all she can to batter down the power of France and destroy as large a part as possible of the young manhood of that nation. Crushing defeat would not be without its consolations if it left her relatively as strong towards France as she was before the war began. In that event she would have the satisfaction of still being a danger to France and of feeling that France was too weak to be longer highly valued by Russia as an ally. If she should ruin France in the war the object of her fighting would very largely be accomplished, no matter at what cost to herself. Her first use of peace would be to intrigue with Russia. That she could ever induce Russia to trust her again would seem improbable, and it must be rendered more improbable by such a conclusion of the war as will ensure to Russia all the legitimate objects Russia aimed at in the Near East and as will leave France strong.

It is much to be hoped that Britain's strength in the field will soon be so great as to overwhelm the forces opposed to it and take the brunt of the fighting off France for a while. We may be sure that loyalty to France and chivalrous regard for her as a brave and devoted ally will not be wanting in Britain. In good time she will put more of her now mighty army into offensive action against the foe. It is no less a matter of sound war policy than of sympathy and loyalty that she do so as soon as the

"I wish you'd tie this ribbon at my throat for me," she said sweetly. "I can't see how to do it without a glass."

"Of course, I'll be delighted," gurgled Algy, and his trembling hands grappled with the strings.

After an unsuccessful effort of five minutes' duration he blushed furiously, and stammered: "I don't think I can manage to tie the knot properly."

Phyllis laid a pretty hand upon his coat cuff. "Suppose, Algy," she whispered coyly, "you call in a minister to assist?"

A moment later he was trapped for all time.

TWO KINDS

The lad who'd prosper well, and rise, to work will blithely walk, and toil with vim, nor keep his eyes forever on the clock. "The Boss's interests are mine," he to himself will say; but the worthless swab loafs on his job, when the Boss has gone away. The youth who'd reach a higher place, his duties does not shirk; the cheerful smile upon his face shows that he likes his work. In earning trust and confidence he takes a keen delight; but the worthless oaf begins to loaf when the Boss is out of sight. The chap who gets the good fat check when his week's work is through, is he who always is on deck, when there is work to do, who toils as bravely when alone as when the Boss is near; but the worthless, runt neglects his stunt, should the Old Man disappear.

FOR THE KIDNEYS
 What They Do

DAVISVILLE, ONT.
 "I had trouble with my Kidneys and Bladder so I got a sample of Gin Pills and followed directions. I got better after the first dose and I kept taking them for a month. One day, Mr. Simpson, of this town, told me about the trouble he had with his kidneys, and I recommended him to try GIN PILLS, and gave him one to take. The next day, he bought some for himself, and both he and his wife have derived great benefit from them." HERBERT H. BAUER.

If Subject to Colds Here is Good Advice.

Don't load your stomach with cough syrups. Send healing medication through the nostrils—send it into the passages that are subject to colds and Catarrh. Easy to do this with Catarrhose, which cures a cold in ten minutes. Even to the lungs goes the healing vapor of Catarrhose—all through the bronchial tubes, nostrils and air passages—everywhere a trace of disease remains will Catarrhose follow. You'll not have colds, nor will you suffer from sniffles, bronchitis or throat trouble if Catarrhose is used. Get it to-day but beware of dangerous substitutes meant to deceive you for genuine Catarrhose. All dealers sell Catarrhose, large size, two months treatment, costs $1.00; small size, 50c.; sample size 25c.

To Detect Bad Meats.

Smoked meats and fish are bad when they are flabby to touch and have a rancid, sour smell.

Glassed meat products are bad when they have a rancid sour smell and when the color differs from the fresh product.

Good fresh pork is solid, has pure white fat and pink flesh. Do not buy pork that is soft and yellow.

Remember that lamb and mutton should be firm, close grained and light red in color, with fat that is white and hard.

Beef should be of a rosy red color, with cream colored, firm elastic fat and scarcely moist when touched with the finger, do not buy wet flabby beef that is purple.

All shellfish should smell fresh and the shells should close firmly when put in water or touched with the finger. Shellfish should be alive when cooked.

Fresh veal is red (unless milk fed, when it is light) with firm white fat between the muscles and surrounding tissues and scarcely moist to the touch. Bad veal is soft, mushy, stocky and has a very red tinge, while the fat has a grayish lead color.

Fresh fish should have red gills, moist bright scales and clear eyes, and should be firm and rigid when handled. Stale fish is flabby has dull scales and eyes are sunken and covered with a film (the gills are pale or of a greenish color) and the flesh has a bad odor. All lumpy fish should be rejected as the growth may be cancer.

To detect decomposing meats in cans before opening inspect the ends; if they bulge, discard the can. This bulging is due to accumulated gases of decomposition that push the ends outward by force of pressure. Leaking and rusty cans should be discarded. Canned meats should be the same as when freshly prepared. If the meat is putrid exposure to heat will make it possible to detect the foul odor.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

LONDON, June 25. A British official statement issued to-night reads: Yesterday hostile aircraft again were active. A reconnaissance by six machines which attempted to cross our lines, was attacked by our scouts and driven back. One of our aeroplanes descending from a height of nine hundred feet attacked with machine gun fire some horse transports and caused a stampede. During the night our trenches about Givency, westward of Messines, were bombarded intermittently. Northeastward of Arras our patrols brought in two prisoners. Today our artillery has been more active than usual along the whole front. The hostile batteries retaliated by bombarding our positions about Attuville wood; Ransart and Ypres. Northward of the Hohenzollern Redoubt the enemy sprang a mine, a short distance from the front of our trenches. No damage was done. Later reports show that the hostile gas attacks westward of Messines, reported yesterday, was a bombardment with gas shells.

ST. PIERRE BULLETIN.

PARIS, June 25. On the left bank of the Meuse fierce artillery activity continued from Arcourt Wood, Hill 304, and Deadman. We repulsed a German grenade attack against our positions of Hill 304. On the right bank of the Meuse the battle continued desperately all night. In the western part of the front, our vigorous counter-attacks enabled us to recapture in the region of Hills 321 and 520 a large part of the lost ground and to drive back the Germans within reach of Thiaumont work which they still occupy. A struggle developed, particularly violent, at the outskirts of Fleury village between Fumin and Chenois woods. We regained by counter-attacks all the elements of trenches that the enemy had captured from us during the night of the 21st to 22nd. According to last information over six German divisions were engaged in the offensive actions on the right bank of the Meuse yesterday.

On the left bank of the Meuse the day was rather quiet apart from the district of Hill 294, where our positions were bombarded continuously. On the right bank there was intense bombardment of our lines in the sector of Hill 321 northeast of Froide Terre Hill and in the Chenois Chapitre woods. The struggle continued this morning on the outskirts of Fleury village, in which the enemy managed to occupy a few houses. No change on other sectors of the right bank. Elsewhere the day was quiet.

AIRCRAFT ACTIVE.

LONDON, June 25. A British official issued to-night, says: Yesterday, hostile aircraft again were active. A reconnaissance of six machines attempted to cross our lines. They were attacked by our scouts and driven back. During the night the trenches about Givency and westward of Messines were bombed intermittently. To-day our artillery has been more active than usual along the whole front.

FRENCH COUNTER-ATTACKS.

PARIS, June 25. Counter-attacks by the French last night north of Verdun resulted in their gaining some of the lost ground, the War Office announced to-day. Portions of the trenches west of Thiaumont redoubt, were taken by hand grenade fighting, and result in some progress being made in the village of Fleury.

THOUSANDS OF SICK WOMEN

Helped Every Year by Common Sense Suggestions Given Free by The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co.

For forty years women suffering from all kinds of female ills have been writing the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. of Lynn, Mass., for advice.

Thus they receive common sense suggestions drawn from a vast volume of experience, and thousands of sick women have been saved from untold suffering, as letters like the following clearly show:

Newark, Ohio.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me a well woman. Your Sanative Wash is just the thing to overcome female weakness. I have told young mothers as well as older ones about your remedies, and what they have done for me. I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved my life, as my health was very bad when I wrote you, but now I can do my own work and have not had a sick day since I began taking your remedies. I keep the Compound and Liver Pills on hand all the time."—Mrs. GEO. THOMPSON, 24 Sherwood Court, Newark, Ohio.

Why don't you write for free advice? Address Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass.

ing continued, the War Office announced to-day. All these attacks made and exemplary regularity. These repeatedly with strong forces, were repulsed. The British have developed pronounced artillery activity along a part of the Franco-Belgian front. They hold from LaBassee Canal to Somme, the War Office announced. British are continued uninterrupted all last night. Violent engagements north of Verdun are reported, the Germans repelling all attempts by the French to regain recently lost ground.

RUSSIAN OFFICIAL.

PETROGRAD, June 25. In the region of Alloukist we effected a Coup de Main against the German trenches. The enemy, attempting a counter-attack, were repulsed by our rifle and machine gun fire. In the region of Zublino the enemy's attacks were repulsed by the united and effective efforts of our infantry and artillery.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE KADI.

PETROGRAD, June 25. The capture by the Russians of the town of Kadi, Galicia, across the Bukowina River, at the foot of the Carpathian mountains, is announced to-day by the War Office.

BUKOWINA OCCUPIED.

PETROGRAD, June 25. Occupation of the entire Austrian crown land of Bukowina is announced to-day by the War Office. Possession of the province is completed by the capture of the town of Kimpolung, at the foot of the Carpathians. More than 2,000 prisoners were captured.

ITALIAN OFFICIAL.

ROME, June 25. The Italian War Office has given out an order issued by Lieut.-General Cadorna, Commander of the Italian army, in which he says great concentrations of forces have been effected recently with admirable promptitude measures, besides containing and arresting the enemy offensive on the whole front have rendered possible a counter-offensive action which is now successfully begun. Such satisfactory results prove the perfect working of the staff service.

ULTIMATUM FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, June 25. A peremptory demand that Carranza repudiate the attack on American troops at Carrisal, and immediately release all captured American soldiers, and that failure to comply with the demand undoubtedly will result in "gravest consequences," is foretold in Lansing's recent note to the "de facto" government.

REFUGEES LEAVING MEXICO.

WASHINGTON, June 25. The navy transport Buffalo, carrying a full list of refugees from Toluca, Tolucaampo, and other west coast ports in Mexico, sailed north, presumably for San Diego. After reaching her northern destination and discharging her passengers, the Buffalo will return down the west coast and pick up another load of refugees. The report said that Mexicans were leaving the west coast towns for the interior. Three more naval vessels have been ordered to Vera Cruz by the navy department.

The War Week by Week.

By OBSERVER.

While the events of the past week have been striking enough in themselves, they are rather indications of activities that are fast working up to a climax, or a number of climaxes. Further Russian successes are more or less offset by German gains at Verdun, with the balance, however, well in our favour. With few reports to show exactly what is happening in Italy, these two fronts provide the only material for anything like definite comment.

The Germans have now followed up their capture of Fort Vaux by that of Fort Thiaumont, some distance nearer Verdun, and commanding the important approach of Fleury. But as in the case of Vaux, where the number of the captured French garrison amounted only to 700, the French seem here again to have relied upon their most powerful ally, brutal arithmetic. Thiaumont was attacked with a fury remarkable even in this holocaust. We are told that four or five divisions were engaged in the infantry assaults, and that nearly half the number must have been lost. Fifty thousand men is a terrible price for so small a gain. The German object in the persistent, even increasing, effort to take Verdun will perhaps only become clear when they have taken it (an event which we must by no means think inconceivable); but that of the French is plain enough. It is to kill as many Germans, with the loss of as few French, as possible. In this they are succeeding well. Verdun is to them merely a geographical area, but it is likely enough that they may decide, if it becomes necessary, to make a supreme effort to save it. At present they realise clearly that the Germans are capable of taking any place they choose, if they are willing to pay a high enough price for it in human lives. Hence their defence, time and again, of attacked positions by the smallest possible numbers, well posted with machine guns, which inflict enormous losses and, when it has to be, surrender to the enemy.

Intense fighting proceeds at Ypres, and there has been a recrudescence of activity in Champagne, which we need not regard too seriously. Much attention is being devoted to Ypres in the press by reason of the now famous "interview" of Sir Sam Hughes with Lord Kitchener in which he appears to have advised that the Ypres salient was altogether too costly to hold, and for which he has been strongly and justly criticised. At any rate the Allies' military command seem to consider the position one of extensive importance, to be held at any cost. It is a high compliment to the Canadians that they have been selected for this great task. Ypres and Verdun are two of the first arguments in the question, now freely mooted, whether or not a great Allied drive is shortly to take place in the West. Expert opinion is divided, with perhaps the best inclining to the negative. The enormous strength of the German fortifications, the shortage (hitherto at any rate) in shells, the impossibility of flanking movements, the absence of any real evidence of British concentration, and the necessity and difficulty of the all-important surprise in attack—these are some of the grounds for discounting the idea that such an offensive is pending. There is no sign yet that the Allies will depart from the plan with which they are generally accredited, that of making the British and French the anvil for the Russian hammer. Let us now see what the hammer has been doing lately.

Most of the blows have fallen, with telling effect, in Bukowina. With astonishing rapidity the Russians have moved south from Czernowitz over a distance of sixty miles or more in little more than a week. There seems no doubt that they are driving an Austrian army before them, which was divided from its fellows when Czernowitz was taken. This is of the utmost importance, for the Russians aim far less at reconquering territory than at splitting up and destroying the Austrian armies. The prodigious number of prisoners taken attests to the success of their endeavours. It is estimated that some 350,000 Austrians in all have already been lost, or more than one third of their total effectives known to be engaged. At least two German and four Bulgarian divisions are known to have been hurled to their assistance in Galicia and Bukowina. This province seems now to be dominated entirely by the Russians, and a way opened to them across the Carpathians. There is a danger that they may permit their line to become too attenuated, but it is lessened by the very speed of their pursuit, which has allowed the Austrians no time for concentration.

Further north, which is perhaps an even more important locality, Russian progress has for the time been arrested. Easily the most vital point on the line is Kovel, before which the Germans are stiffening their resistance. Failure of the Russians here may prevent further advances against Lemberg, but should they succeed, they will have no alternative. This will both endanger their line and permit the Russians, still further north in the Pripiet marshes, to begin an advance which the nature of the ground forbids at present. Such an advance would have to follow defiles between long stretches of marshy ground, which defiles are now commanded by the Germans. Kovel is certain to become the ground of a huge battle, the event of which may profoundly affect the war.

The Italians seem to be recoiling upon the Austrians, who have been compelled to relax their pressure, and we trust we shall soon here of definite advances in the Trentino and possibly at other points. In Greece the Allies has cleared and the Allies have carried their points. The election, set for August, will almost certainly result in the return of Venizelos, and this may well mean Greece's participation on our side. But whether or not, the safety of the army at Salonika is now assured. Aggressive operations on its part are not yet likely; it is exciting a powerful enough influence in preventing Austria and Bulgaria from detaching troops to Bukovina. The drama of the next few weeks will be a momentous one, with Russia as the protagonist.

Women as Brave As the Men

THEIR STRUGGLE SHOWS A MARKABLE SPIRIT.

Talk of the bravery of men, but where can you find a finer spirit than among the half-sick women who are fighting and struggling to do their duty against terrible odds of ill-health, and who will not give up?

One woman in every three is struggling against weakness. Most of them are not exactly sick, but, oh, how miserable!

The burden and misery of it all has its foundation in the blood which is thin and watery. The red cells are too few. The very stream of life is reduced in vitality. Weakness and inevitable ill-health are the certain result.

Every ailing or weak woman can quickly regain her health in this very simple way. By using the system with the nutrition that comes from rich red blood, a quick change for the better will result. To accomplish, take two chocolate-coated Ferreroze Tablets after each meal. You'll feel better immediately for the simple reason that Ferreroze renews the blood. It gives you vim, vigor, endurance, restores a tired, worn-out system very quickly.

You'll feel like new all over once you get Ferreroze working through your blood. It puts color into faded cheeks, brightens the eye, quickens the step, brings back that wonderful feeling of youth.

One of the finest things Ferreroze does is to make you eat lots and digest it as well. With keen appetite, sound sleep, strong nerves and lots of nourishing blood you're bound to regain robust health. Any sickly girl or ailing woman that Ferreroze won't make well must be incurable. There is a secret power in Ferreroze and it is worth a trial at all events. Fifty cents per box, six for $2.50. At all dealers in medicine, or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co. Kingston, Ont.

Household Notes. Bananas are more digestible baked than in their natural state. Never water flowers while the sun is shining on them. If you do the leaves will become scalded, curl up and drop off. Chickens should have a clean, sunny house, plenty of fresh water and mixed grains if you would have them healthy.

Strands of raffia are good for tying vines and shrubbery in place. It is never economy to buy cheap eggs or meat. Only the best is good food. A good sandwich filling is made of hard-boiled eggs combined with finely chopped sweet peppers and moistened with mayonnaise. The small pin feathers that are so hard to clean from very young chickens can be wiped off with a damp cloth in much less time.

It is wrong to put shoes near a fire to dry. The heat is bad for the leather. Fill damp shoes with paper and stand them where it is warm. A convenient way to boil macaroni is to put it in a wire basket. Immerse this in the kettle of boiling water. When the macaroni is done lift it out. WINARD'S LINIMENT CURE COLDS, ETC. 231-233

U. S. STERN NOTE TO MEXICO.

WASHINGTON, To-day. A demand for the immediate release of American troops taken prisoners at Carrizal, coupled with the stern notification that the United States expects an early statement of the purpose of the Carranza Government, was telegraphed to Mexico City to-day by Secretary of State Lansing. The note disclosed that the State Department received yesterday a communication from the de facto government stating the Carrizal fighting was the direct result of orders to attack American soldiers moving otherwise than toward the border, which were personally issued by General Carranza to General Trevino, but later communicated to General Pershing. In reply, Secretary Lansing requires the de facto government to transmit a definite statement as to the course of action it has determined upon through the usual diplomatic channels, and not through subordinate military officers. The Mexican communication is construed, Secretary Lansing states, as a formal avowal of deliberately hostile action against the forces of the United States now in Mexico and a purpose to attack without provocation whenever they move from their present position, despite the friendly mission on which they are engaged and which is reaffirmed in the American rejoinder. General Carranza is required to place his record before formally, and a plain intimation lies behind the restrained language of Lansing's communication that force will be met with force. Apparently, however, the Washington Government has determined that the de facto government shall not establish the responsibility before the world of a war forced upon the United States.

LONDON BUDGET.

LONDON, To-day. The Russians have conquered the whole Austrian crown land of Bukovina. The Austro-Hungarians are making their way toward the Carpathian passes. Kimpoling in the southern part of Bukovina has been occupied by the Russians. The Austrians have fallen back toward that town and Jokobany to the northwest and have evacuated the heights south of Betrometti and Ulzovic. Along the River Pruth, the drive toward plomea, the Russians have captured Wilshoff and Tolnouoff. The Austrians have lost heavily in men made prisoners and in war stores left behind in their retreat. In Volynia, Petrograd records the capture of a redoubt near Czartorysk and the repulse of attacks southeast of Lutzk and an advance north of Radziviloff, while Berlin reports putting down Russian attacks to east of Vladimir, Volynsk and west of Dubno. Heavy fighting continues throughout this entire region. The French, during attacks on Saturday night, recaptured from the Germans, trenches west of the Thiamont redoubt northeast of Verdun; also made some progress in the Village of Fleury, according to a War Office communication. Sunday saw no infantry activity in the Verdun region, but the bombardment on both sides of the Meuse continued without interruption. There was also pronounced artillery activity between the British and Germans on the British position of the Franco-Belgian line.

KOVEL THE KEY.

LONDON, To-day. The greatest battle in the present series on the Russian front is developing at the so-called Lutsk salient, according to latest despatches from Petrograd. New places named in the official communications would appear to indicate that the Germans have made a slight impression on the salient already. The key to the whole situation is the Kovel Junction, and gigantic efforts are being made by the Germans to safeguard this vital point. They are massing every available unit there to counter the Russian thrust. On the direct road to Svidnich the Russians are within twenty-one miles of the junction but for ten days they have been held at that position. The Germans have made even greater efforts to check the indirect approach to Kovel by the southern flank, where for the past week the issue has hung in the balance at Lokatchi, the apex of the whole salient. Latest war maps show the Russians are no longer at Lokatchi, the Germans having forced them back from three to six miles on both sides of the road which leads to Vladimir Volynsk. The Russians, according to still later accounts, have won back some of this ground.

CRUISER AND DESTROYER TORPEDOED.

PARIS, To-day. The Ministry of Marine announces the Italian auxiliary cruiser Citta Di Messina and the French torpedo boat destroyer Fouché were torpedoed in the Strait of Otrante. The Citta Di Messina, which was being escorted by the Fouché, was the first victim of the submarine. The Fouché later attacked the under water boat, which submerged and disappeared; shortly afterwards the Fouché herself was torpedoed. Almost all the crew were saved.

ON THE BRITISH FRONT.

LONDON, To-day. An official statement from the British headquarters issued last evening, says: Last night, after a short bombardment, a raid on our trenches northwest of Loos was driven off, leaving three dead on our parapet. North of the River Douve a party tried to cut our wire but was driven off leaving two dead. To-day our artillery continued to be very active along the whole front. Mutual artillery actions have taken place at many points, the heaviest shelling being about Neuville St. Vaast, south of Wally and north of the Ypres Menin Road. About Thiopal Wood and Hamel the enemy did a considerable amount of shelling with trench mortars as well as artillery. Near Hullock a hostile demonstration was destroyed by our artillery. Since yesterday evening the enemy has blown up four mines, two of them opposite Hullock, one south of Bethune on the LaBassée Road, and one north of Neuve Chappelle. No casualties were caused by these mines. We destroyed five kite balloons this afternoon.

SELBORNE RESIGNS.

LONDON, To-day. Earl Selborne has resigned the Presidency of the Board of Agriculture, according to an official announcement to-night. He will make a statement to the Lords on Thursday. The general belief is that Lord Selborne resigned because of the Government's Irish policy. He has been a strong opponent of the Home Rule policy. Other Conservative resignations from the Cabinet are rumored.

GERMANS SHORT OF MEAT.

LONDON, To-day. According to a despatch from Berne given out by the Wireless Press to-day, Adolph Von Barocki, President of the German Food Regulation Board, threatens to make Germany a vegetarian nation until September. He announced on Friday, the despatch says, that he was seriously concerned about the consumption of meat, and for two or three months probably will adopt this course. The German newspapers, it is added, were allowed to report Herr Von Barocki's statement, but were forbidden to comment on it.

IRISH REBEL PRISONERS.

DUBLIN, To-day. An official statement has been issued by the military government regarding the prisoners taken in connection with the recent rebellion in Ireland. The number at present interned in England is 1,614 men; five women were convicted under the Defence of the Realm Act. 150 men and one woman were released from Richmond Barracks, Dublin, and in England 1,100 men and 71 women.

SITUATION MAY DEMAND JOINT SESSION.

WASHINGTON, To-day. After conferring to-day with President Wilson, Secretary of State Lansing announced that he would have an important statement on the Mexican crisis for publication to-morrow morning. Ranking Democratic and republican members of the House for Foreign Affairs, committees will be summoned to a White House conference to-night. It is understood the advisability of a joint session of congress to hear a statement by President Wilson is under consideration.

MORE STEAMERS SUNK.

LONDON, To-day. Lloyds announces the French steamer Beranthis reported sunk, with five officers and 50 men saved. The sinking of the Italian vessel Saturnina Fanny 1,568 tons gross, is also reported; 17 men have been landed.

EASTERN TROOPS TO MOBILIZE FOR MEXICO.

NEW YORK, To-day. Major General Leonard Wood, Commander of department in the East, received tonight from Secretary of War Baker an urgent appeal to start for the border at once some militia organizations under his jurisdiction. The emergency is considered so important it was said the Governors' consent and Medical examination of men would be waived. It is intimated that some state troops for the East would entrain to-night.

BRITISH CASUALTIES.

LONDON, To-day. An unofficial casualty list covering the weeks' casualties on all the British fronts gives the number of officers as 329, of whom 115 were killed, and that of the men as 7,732, of whom 1,487 were killed. This makes the total number of casualties for the past week 8,070, of whom 1,602 were killed.

THEIR OWN PETARD.

MILAN, To-day. News from Switzerland states that the French air raid on Karlsruhe had a terrible effect in spreading a panic in Germany. More than 120 persons were killed. Many of the victims were attending the Hagen Circus, when an aeroplane appeared. Several bombs intended for the railroad station fell in the midst of the spectators. Some 115 dead were carried out and more than 200 wounded.

AT VERDUN.

PARIS, To-day. In a night attack the French captured part of a German trench between Fumin and Chenois Woods, in the Verdun sector. A German attack west of Thiamont was repulsed, according to an official statement issued by the French War Office to-day. A heavy artillery duel is in progress west of the Meuse.

ITALY COMES BACK.

ROME, To-day. A general retreat of the Austrians in the Trentino district over a sector of about 20 miles in extent, is announced in an official statement issued by the Italian War Office to-day. The statement says that the Italians are pressing the pursuit vigorously.

GERMANS NEAR VERDUN.

PARIS, To-day. The Germans are now three-quarters of a mile from the French lines immediately in front of the fortress of Verdun, but no operations have as yet been undertaken elsewhere to relieve the pressure on the citadel. The official statement issued by the French War Office last night says: No important event beyond the usual cantonnade to record on the rest of the front. This is taken to show that the French command is viewing the situation as a strategic whole and looks on the tactical success of the Germans on the right bank of the Meuse as of but momentary significance. Exhausted by the murderous fighting of the past three days the enemy has been forced to pause for breath. Under cover of the fog and twelve inch shells with which he has surrounded the French lines, the Germans spent yesterday strengthening their new gains and elaborating plans for a further thrust with the object of working around Souville by the north-west from Fleury. The French artillery, however, gave their foe no rest. From Froide Terre, Belleville St. Michel and Souville the French guns concentrated a terrific fire on the German lines and preparations were made to resist the impending onslaught and to counter attack at the right time. There were indications that the Germans were preparing to attack also on the left bank of the River. They apparently aim to push forward their lines there in correspondence with their advance on the right, and so prevent the French from transferring reserves across the river.

Colonel Hadow Praises Our Regiment.

Extract of Letter From Colonel A. L. Hadow, the Officer Commanding the Newfoundland Regiment in France, to His Excellency the Governor, Dated June 3rd, 1916.

"I am extremely pleased with the state of the Regiment at present. The officers are very keen and hard working and I am receiving the most loyal support from them.

We have lately come out of the trenches and are now once more in billets near the trenches, and officers and men are hard at work on working parties both by day and night. We are well up to strength being over 900 strong."

THE LEADING SERIAL AT NICKEL TO-DAY.

Another most attractive program has been arranged for the Nickel Theatre to-day which includes the third instalment of "The Strange Case of Mary Page." The chapter is entitled "The Web" and is highly interesting from start to finish. Edna Mayo and Henry Walthall are in the leading characters and their acting is very creditable. "The Bubbles in the Glass" is a delightful three-act drama by the Thanhouser Co. in which Haris Gordon is featured. It is an unusual story wonderfully produced. "An Oriental Spasm" is a comedy riot with George Ovey the great English funmaker. Bert Stanley will sing another comic song.

The feet of young chicken can be easily skinned by pouring boiling water over them; they can then be skinned and boiled, and you will have a delicious broth.

Vegetables that can be cooked the day before serving and reheated without loss of flavor are the following: String beans, tomatoes, asparagus, spinach and potatoes that you intend creaming.

Instead of mixing cocoa with boiling water to dissolve it, try mixing it with an equal amount of granulated sugar and then pouring it into the boiling water or milk in the pot, stirring all the time.

Colored print dresses are quaintly embellished by rollover collars of white muslin with colored hemstitched border.

La Milady's Boudoir.

Even weak women who are not robust enough to take the daily bath will find an alcohol sponge bath strengthening and helpful. Taken just before the daily nap, it tends to give light and refreshing slumber. If one cannot take it at midday, to take it at night before retiring will cause one to sleep well, even if the bedroom is not any too cool.

To take down and brush the hair lightly, to rub the tired feet lightly with a little alcohol and water or diluted lemon juice, afterward wiping this off and applying powder, these things will also make the nap more comfortable. But more important is the habit of being able to get through all of the work and worries of the day, when one would sleep.

Physical relaxation is taught by many nowadays but mental relaxation is not often heard of. So I counsel my readers who find it hard to sleep when they wish to, and especially in the day time, to learn how to shut out of mind, as by a door, all the puzzling, fretting, worrying thoughts, the burdensome, grinding work thoughts, and retain only in the consciousness the thought of peace and rest.

Let the mind fill itself with images of something pleasant, whether it is some of childhood's recollections, of a flower or a bird, or a pleasant scene of memory of trickling water or flowering tree or herb. Think and dwell upon this pleasant, restful image and watch carefully that the work thought does not slip back once more into the foreground. If the mind is taught how to relax and to let go in this way sleep may be successfully wooed by all, even as Madame Bernhardt woos it, if only for a matter of a few minutes' rest.

Another aid to the hot weather siesta is the rather small thin hair pillow to use as a substitute for the feather cushion. The head should never be too high, that is, for the normal and healthy woman. To stretch out flat upon the back is found by many to be soothing and restful. Many like to lie upon the floor in Summer finding there some little draught and play of air.

HEAD WAITER: Yesir, we are a bit old fashioned, as you say—but we find people like it so long as we make them comfortable. I haven't heard no complaints on that score.

GUEST: Good beds and good food, eh!

HEAD WAITER: Excellent beds and good wholesome food—comfortable Gas Fires and 'ot water in every room in the 'ouse.

GUEST: Gas Fires, eh! That doesn't sound old fashioned.

HEAD WAITER: No, sir, it don't. But we 'ad to move with the times, sir, and it's our business to give people what they want. If you'll excuse me, sir, that 'ave been 'ere all my life. I find that our people mostly want 'ot baths, 'ot water, well cooked food, good fires, good beds and no fussing. We couldn't do that with coal—not satisfactory as I may say. So we puts in gas—everywhere. We cooks by gas, we lights by gas, we 'eats the water by gas and we 'as Gas Fires. So you can 'ave a 'ot bath in ten minutes if you want it, sir, a fire in your bedroom and whatever you like to order for dinner, sir, punctual to the minute.

GUEST: That sounds top-hole—but where's the old-fashioned part come in?

HEAD WAITER: It don't come in, sir, so far as that's concerned. But there's the 'ouse, the furniture, the pictures—and if I may say so—the 'omeliness of the place.

GUEST: (a trifle bored) Well, well I'll have that hot bath right away—if you'll get the bathroom ready.

HEAD WAITER: The bathroom is ready, sir, always. There's plenty of 'ot water, you'll find clean 'ot towels in the 'ot cupboard in the bathroom and the Gas Fire lighted in your room.

GUEST: Right O!—and dinner at 8 sharp, please!

HEAD WAITER:—What'll you 'ave, sir—a nice sole, leg of mutton and sweets?

GUEST: Well, if that isn't troubling the cook too much—I'm rather late, I'm afraid.

HEAD WAITER: No trouble at all, sir. You see, sir, our kind of comfort means comfort for us as well as our people. We don't 'ave no coals to carry, no fires to make up, no bathrooms to attend to—This 'ere gas, if I may say so, saves money and time, and—

GUEST: You may say so at dinner time, please, I'm off to have that bath... (ascends stairs slowly)... Decent old boy, though he does talk a lot, and a real nice place. Thank heaven, I've struck a decent billet at last! (The bathroom door bangs sharply).

Societies Celebrate St. John's Day.

Saturday was the anniversary of the birthday of St. John's. In accordance with their purpose of celebrating it by Divine service on the nearest Sunday, a number of the Protestant societies met yesterday afternoon at the British Hall, whence they proceeded to the Church of England Cathedral. The Societies represented were the Nfld. British Society, Royal Oak and Leeming L.O.L., St. John's Lodge, No. 5, S.U.F., and Lodges Dudley and Empire, S.O.E. Beautiful weather favored the procession, which was headed by the C.L.B. band. A special form of service was held at the Cathedral. Psalm cxlii was chosen, a chant of appropriate solemnity. His Lordship the Bishop read the Lesson, and Rev. J. Brinton the collect for St. John the Baptist's Day and prayers for the King and all in authority, the sailors and soldiers and the sick, wounded and prisoners. Rev. Canon White preached the sermon, taking as his text St. Paul's famous words: "A citizen of no mean city." After first treating the history and progress of St. John's from its foundation onwards, he strikingly enlarged the application of the meaning and duties of citizenship to the fuller life of the world. He dwelt upon the subject of the war, showing how it had widened our narrow ideas of fellow-citizenship. It was a sermon which impressed itself strongly upon the minds of his hearers, and will be carried in their memories. The collection, as previously announced, was taken in aid of the Patriotic Fund. A very large number attended the procession and service, and the societies are to be congratulated on their inauguration, so auspiciously carried out, of a celebration which they hope to repeat every year. To Mr. Goodland, President of the British Society, belongs the credit of conceiving and putting into effect the idea.

Corpus Christi at R. C. Cathedral.

Yesterday being the Feast of Corpus Christi High Mass was celebrated in the forenoon and the annual procession in the afternoon. At 10.30, 12 (noon) and 2.30 p.m., the joy bells pealed merrily. The cathedral grounds showed a profuse display of bunting and flags fluttered to the breeze from the towers of the Cathedral, whilst the facade of the sacred edifice was artistically dressed.

The procession, which began at 2.30, was exceptionally long and witnessed by a multitude of people. Those who took part in the procession were the school children, sodalities, officers of the adult and juvenile branches of the T. A. and B. Society, Star of the Sea, Mechanics, B. I. S., Knights of Columbus and Holy Name Societies as well as the C. C. C. and T. A. Bands. Vespers were held in the Cathedral after which the procession wended its way to the Presentation Convent. Squads of C. C. C. members and Volunteers acted as guards of honour.

The route of march was also lined with cadets and soldiers under command of Major Kent and Capt. Grady, respectively. His Grace Archbishop Roche carried the Host, and other clergy who participated in the procession were Rt. Rev. Mons. St. John, Rt. Rev. Mons. McDermott, Rev. Drs. Kitchen, Carter and Greene and Rev. Frs. Renouf, Sheehan, Pippy, Nangle and Ryan.

At the Convent and again at the Cathedral His Grace the Archbishop, assisted by Rev. Dr. Kitchen and Fr. Renouf, imported Benediction.

The entire ceremony was most impressive and edifying, the snow-white costumes of the children combined with their beautiful singing, including that of the nuns, adding to the solemnity of the occasion. Very imposing also was the sacred music rendered by the bands present.

"MEASLES."

Hundreds of children are suffering from "Measles" at the present time, and one has to be very careful in trying to avoid the complications that often follow them.

A heavy "Cough" is very prevalent during the present epidemic, and "Pneumonia" is the great danger. Avoid this by keeping a bottle of "Stafford's Phoratoxine Cough Cure" on hand.

The Bi-shop at St. Thomas's.

The Lord Bishop of Newfoundland occupied the pulpit at St. Thomas's Church yesterday morning, and preached a most interesting, instructive and impressive sermon. His Lordship explained in a very simple manner the duties of the clergymen on visiting the sick room, when he shall say: "Peace be unto this House." He strongly condemned the action of some people in criticizing sermons and impressed upon the congregation to be at "peace within themselves." A large number of volunteers under command of Lieut. Gerald Harvey attended the service. The music of the Organist, Mr. Stirling, and the singing of the choir were nicely rendered.
