STEWART'S
Home Made Bread,
 THE BREAD MY DADDY LIKES.
 Daddy is evidently not one of those back lords of creation who believes that woman's place is in the home—and only there. His taste in a wife is an up-to-date woman who will prove herself a real companion. He knows that if she is a slave to her kitchen she can't enjoy the poise or have the interest in world affairs that a little extra leisure would make possible; and so he is pleased to eat MRS. STEWART'S HOME MADE BREAD—the loaf with the home made flavor.
 The smiling, well-nourished kiddie doesn't look as though suffering because mother is progressive enough to buy good bread made by a bread specialist, instead of wearing out her life in the kitchen.

CHAPTER IX. THE FULLNESS OF JOY.

And he moves aside; but, with a low cry, she holds out one trembling hand, and the next moment is lying nestling, trembling and hiding, upon his breast.

With half-murmured words, with his hand caressing her hair, he soothes her.

"Have I frightened you, my darling—my own?" he whispers.

"Yes—no," she says at last, raising her face for a moment, but resting it again upon his breast. "Was I frightened? Yes; it was so strange—so strange to hear you say that. I felt as if I cannot tell what it was. Yes, it frightened me, for then I saw myself, and knew that it was true."

"That what was true, my Jeanne?"

"That I loved you," she answers, looking up at him, her eyes shining solemnly through her tears.

"You love me, my darling!" he says, trembling in his turn in the presence of the pure and spotless soul.

"Yes, do I not?" she says. "Tell me whether I do. But—write—just say that again."

"I love you, Jeanne!" he says. She lets her head fall with a long-drawn sigh.

"And I love you, do I not? Tell me how you know that—that you love me."

"I know it, darling, because my heart speaks out plainly; I know it, because, although I only saw you for a minute that winter's night, I carried your face, your eyes, the very curve of those dear lips home with me, and hugged them to my heart in my solitude, though I strove hard to put them from me. I know it, because I used to watch for your passing, and knew when you were near without having seen you with my actual eyes; because, Jeanne, though I fought against the feeling, I never heard your voice but it rang down deep in my heart; because when you were not near me I was wretched, and when you were near me, I was wretched that I could not hold you in my arms as I do now. And you, Jeanne; can you say that? Ah, no!"

"No," she says, softly, "because I did not know what love was. I know what I felt, and yet I cannot tell, not even now. But I was restless and unhappy when you were not near, and happy when you were; then something seemed to sing within me; and once—once when you held my hand and called me by name, in the boat—her voice breaks, and her eyes fill with tears—"I felt that I must come to you—that that I could not move away! Was that love?"

And what does he say? What can he say? Not one word, for the fullness of the joy which strikes and keeps him silent. But, bending his head, he takes her face in his hands; lovelier now than it was five minutes past, and kisses her twice, thrice on the lips. And Jeanne, Jeanne, unshrinking places her soul in his hands, and gives him, with purest sweetest trust, kiss for kiss.

And thus they narrowly escape being found by Master Hal, who comes trotting down the lane, shouting: "Jeanne—Jeanne! Mr. Vane! Are you lost, like the babes in the wood?"

CHAPTER X. REPULSED.

Jeanne starts from her lover's side like a frightened fawn at Hal's voice, with her hand upon the arm which had been around her waist a minute ago; but the pressure of that hand! how different it was to the light, feather-touch which it had been when they started, and how close it was pressed to his heart.

Surely Jeanne has never lived till now—has awakened at last—has awakened into a glorious world of love and joy!

Hal tramps by their side whistling, quite unconscious of the momentous change which has taken place in the lives of his companions, and so they reach the Gate House.

"All safe!" says Hal, looking up at the old red building. "Never come home but I expect to see it reduced to ruins by some one of uncle's experiments. You'll come in and try a little of uncle's black bottle of old whiskey, Mr. Vane?"

"Shall I?" whispers Vernon. "Shall I come in and tell them?"

Jeanne hesitates a moment; then she looks up, her eyes beaming with love, and with a soft little flush on her face.

"No," she says, softly, "not to-night; I want to have it all to myself—to my very self for one night!"

"Run on and get the door open, Hal," says Vernon; then, as the boy disappears, he takes her in his arms.

"Good-night, my darling, my own, good-night. Will you—can you give me one kiss?" and as he bends, Jeanne, innocent Jeanne, puts her arms around his neck and draws his face down to hers and kisses him; then she breaks from him and flies across the courtyard.

He sees her turn on the threshold and waves one white hand, and then the door closes, and the night seems to have suddenly grown dark. He turns and strides away, but not home; no four walls will contain his happiness as yet, and he goes down to the cliffs and stands gazing out to sea, with Jeanne's sweet, innocent face dancing on the waves, Jeanne's voice in the breeze, and such unspeakable joy in his soul as he had thought the world could never give him.

"Oh, my darling," he murmurs, "and have I found you at last when I had given up in despair; have I found the one thing all my life has been set upon, a true, pure, trusting love—for love's sake and mine alone? Oh, Jeanne, my child—woman, my own!"

And as he spoke, Vernon Vane, the grim, cynical recluse, seemed to change; the hard, stern features softened and grew young, the cold eyes gleamed brightly, the rare smile lit up the handsome face, and remained there. If love had awakened Jeanne and called her into life, it had given new life to Vernon Vane.

And Jeanne—well, Jeanne was afraid—actually afraid to face the homely scrutiny of Aunt Jane, she felt that her story was written on her half-parted lips.

"I am so tired, Hal, tell them," she said, and slipped by him up to her own room.

Then the new Jeanne went to the glass and looked at herself—looked till she grew crimson, and covered her face with her hands.

"He loves me—he loves me!" she cried, sinking on her knees, and laying her head upon her hand.

"Oh, let me think of it—how he said it. I love you, Jeanne, I love you." But for why should he? I am such a simple, poor, miserable girl; and he! oh, it cannot be true—it cannot be true; and yet, I love you, Jeanne, I love you! He said it, and it must be true!

Jeanne fell asleep repeating these magic words which she had heard for the first time, and they were in her ears when she awoke. The happy sleep long, let poets say what they may to the contrary, and the sun was streaming through the diamond casement window ere she stole downstairs with a talltale blush on her face, and the light in her eyes which Vernon Vane's kisses had called there. To Jeanne, there seemed a new light over the earth, that filled it with a new beauty; she was half persuaded that the birds, flitting from elm to elm, were rejoicing in her joy.

"Well, child," said Aunt Jane, looking up from the coffee cups. "I thought you were never coming down. Were you so very tired last night? What did you do to—dance?"

"No," said Jeanne, hiding her flushed cheeks behind her cup; "there was no dancing, aunt, I think."

"You think!" echoed Aunt Jane. "Bless the girl! don't you know? Well, you don't look any the worse for your gay doings. And Mr. Vane was there, after all? He is getting quite sociable. Which of the girls did he fall in love with—ah! Maud or Georgina?"

"I—I don't think with either, aunt," stammered poor Jeanne.

"Hum! too soon, I suppose. I've kept your breakfast warm for you, and now I must go. Bless the girl, what a color she's got," she added, and as she passed, she bent down and kissed the sweet, upturned face.

Jeanne would her arms around the old lady's neck.

"Aunt," she murmured, hesitatingly.

"Well?" said Aunt Jane.

"No—thing," replied Jeanne, exasperatingly.

"What is it you want? something, I'll be bound. What is it, child?"

"Nothing in all the world!" exclaimed Jeanne, fervently.

Aunt Jane stared, murmured "Bless the child!" again, and bolted off to her dearly-beloved kitchen, and Jeanne was left with her secret untold! She finished her breakfast, and being a healthy girl, although in love, made a hearty one, and then went dutifully to the piano; but scales were not to be thought of this morning, for every one of them went to the tune of "I love you, Jeanne!" and before five minutes had elapsed, she had caught up her hat and was out in the garden. There was room there to think and realize; besides, she could see from the arbor the corner of the road which Vernon Vane would pass.

What would Aunt Jane say to him when he came? Suppose they said "No!" At this terrible idea Jeanne turned pale—for a moment; what should she do if they said "No?" Suddenly there came the clatter of the horses' hoofs upon the road, and Jeanne was wondering who it could be, when they suddenly ceased, and a man's footsteps were heard coming around the garden path. Now he was here, so near, Jeanne grew tired and shy, and drew back within the arbor to gain time; the footsteps grew slower, then ceased, and Jeanne, with a sudden dread, lest he should go again, arose and sprang to the opening and almost into the arms of Clarence Fitzjames.

The surprise and disappointment were so keen that she stood speechless for a moment, then she held out her hand and stammered a good-morning.

As she did so, something in his appearance struck her with a sense of strangeness. He was dressed as usual, with the scrupulous care for which his valet was famous, but it was not his faultless attire, but himself, that was different to the usual languidly nonchalant honorable. As he took off his hat, hurriedly, Jeanne saw that he was, marvelous to behold, flushed and excited, and the hand which grasped hers and pressed it closely was hot and feverish. Still stranger, his voice, usually so low, and melodiously indolent, was quick and earnest.

"Good-morning, Miss Bertram!" he said. "I have surprised you; you thought it was your brother, perhaps? I hope—I am not unwelcome?"

Jeanne smiled, and also stared, as he answered: "I am glad to see you. Did you ride over?"

"Yes," he said. "Yes—may I come in?"

Jeanne stood aside, and sat down, looking at him. Yes, certainly he was changed.

He sat down for a moment, then got up and stood at the door, wiping his forehead, and looking around the garden with what seemed an effort to regain composure.

"What a pretty place!" he said, at last. "I have never been in this part of the grounds before. Is this your arbor—do you often sit here?"

"Yes, very often," said Jeanne. "It is pretty, isn't it? Did you see Aunt Jane, Mr. Fitzjames, or uncle?"

"No," he said. "I—the fact is—I looked in the drawing-room and came straight through into the garden. I thought I should find you here."

Jeanne laughed softly.

"I had kept quite still you would not, perhaps?"

"I should have been very sorry," he said. "For I came to see you—that is, of course, I should have kissed you."

Jeanne smiled and stole a glance at him. His handsome face—for it was handsome enough now in his earnestness—was still flushed, and his white hand, as it pulled at his mustache, trembled.

"It is very hot," he said, suddenly. "You rode fast," said Jeanne. "I heard your horse galloping."

"Yes, I came over at once," he said; "I wouldn't wait for breakfast."

"Oh," said Jeanne, rising, "why didn't you tell me at once. Will you come and get some?"

"No, thank you, no," he said quietly. "Don't trouble, don't go; indeed, I couldn't eat any yet. Don't go; it is so cool and—comfortable in here."

Jeanne sank back again, and he came and sat opposite her, fidgeting with his white driving gloves, and looking unwell. The usual cool and self-assured Fitzjames as it was possible for one man to look unlike himself.

"Yes, I rode over," he said, breaking a pause, during which Jeanne had sat listening for those other footsteps; "I rode over because I couldn't walk."

Instinctively Jeanne glanced at his legs.

"I mean," he said, "I couldn't waste the time, and I wanted to see you at once."

Mr. Harding's Constitutional Innovation.

The announcement by President-Elect Harding that after he takes the reins of office next March, the Vice-President—who happens to be Hon. Calvin Coolidge of Massachusetts—shall sit in his Cabinet, but by virtue of his office, presages a very important and necessary change in American constitutional practice. It is probable that Governor Cox, had he been elected President, would have come to a similar decision with regard to his associate, Franklin Roosevelt. It so happened that on both the Republican and Democratic tickets, the candidate for Vice-President was an abler man than his chief; but this is merely a coincidence; the change would have come in any event.

Undoubtedly the circumstance that has chiefly influenced Mr. Harding and his advisers was the deadlock that occurred after the severe illness of President Wilson left the United States Cabinet to all intents and purpose headless for months. Hon. Mr. Lansing, Secretary of State, solved the problem by calling Cabinet meetings in his capacity as senior member of that body; but when the President became convalescent, he took the stand that during his illness the Cabinet should have ceased to function as a cognate body, and dismissed Mr. Lansing for having violated political etiquette and constitutional usage.

The decision of Mr. Harding, if accepted as a precedent, will prevent such a sorry and disruptive controversy in the future. The Vice-President will ipso facto become chairman of the Cabinet-Council in case of the prolonged illness of the President, just as he would were the Chief Executive to die.

There are many other reasons why the office of Vice-President should be relieved of its present anomalous and hollow character. Though that functionary presides as Speaker over the Senate, which has enormous powers of revision over the decisions of the Executive branch, especially on international matters; in no sense does he constitute a link between the Senate and the Executive. There has been no link of any kind; this despite the fact that under the American parliamentary system a Speaker is allowed much more personal initiative than under the British system. In the House of Representatives he is to all intents and purposes the house leader who directs the order of business. It is needless to expatiate on the advantages in facilitating discussion of the Peace Treaty, that have accrued had Vice-President Marshall, as Speaker of the Senate, been qualified as Cabinet member to announce the position of the Executive and his advisers on many vexed points.

The new plan will also make for continuity of policy in case of the death of a President. Owing to the existing conception of the Vice-Presidency as a cipher, the men who have in the past been unexpectedly elevated from that office to the Presidency, have been obliged to preside over Cabinets made up of men who regarded themselves as of much greater weight and importance. This was particularly true of Andrew Johnson, who succeeded Lincoln, and in a lesser degree of Chester A. Arthur, who succeeded Garfield. Only the fact that Roosevelt was an abler man than the martyred McKinley, and of very aggressive personality, enabled him to overcome this handicap. Indeed, the history of Roosevelt illustrates the established conception of the Vice-President as an insignificant functionary. Interests opposed to his policies as Governor of New York State hoped to check his career by jockeying him into the office of Vice-President, then regarded as a political tomb. The chance crime of an assassin confounded their intentions. In resolving that the office shall no longer be esteemed a political tomb, President-elect Harding has taken a wise forward step.—Saturday Night.

GREEK OFFENSIVE FAILS.

LONDON, Jan. 13. The assertion that the Greek offensive in the direction of Brussa, a Minor, has failed, is contained in a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. under Wednesday's date. The situation in Smyrna is serious, it is declared, and it is probable that the new Greek Commander-in-Chief will be recalled.

sume responsibility for governing the nation without money even to pay the clerks in the different departments.

APPROVE OF READING.

LONDON, Jan. 13. The entire press of India including that of the Nationalists, warmly welcomed the appointment of Lord Reading as Viceroy of India, says a despatch from India. The newspapers editorially express confidence that Lord Reading will succeed in bringing peace and prosperity to the country.

POLICE AMBUSHED--TWO KILLED.

LIMERICK, Jan. 13. A number of members of constabulary from Ennis were ambushed today near Cratloe, County Clare. A volley was fired into their lorry from both sides of the road. A sergeant and one constable were killed. The attacking party escaped.

BRITAIN PROTESTS.

ATHENS, Jan. 13. The British Minister, Lord Granville, has entered a protest with the Greek Government over the action of certain sections of the Greek press in printing editorials condoning the attempt to assassinate Venizelos, made by two Greek officers in Paris last August when the Premier was attending to peace adjustment matters in that city.

Sherlock Holmes Superseded.

A few years ago the idol of the reading public, or at least that section of it which was given to the detective style of literature, was Sherlock Holmes. To-day Sherlock Holmes has been put on the shelf and Malcolm Sage has taken his place. The author of Blindie appears in a new light in some of his recent works. In "John Dene of Toronto" he has given to the public Malcolm Sage and now that detective achieves fame in a volume all to himself. "Malcolm Sage-Detective" (Jenkins 7-8). This work is by the author-publisher--Mr. Herbert Jenkins himself--the creator of the greatest Cockney since Sam Weller--Blindie. The book consists of an absorbing series of yarns in which humour is linked with tragedy in a style peculiar to H. J. Its reception across the Atlantic sets a notable example to us on our side. Sage with his office staff, Miss Gladys Norman (Secretary) Thompson (Assistant) and William Johnson (junior) will amuse and instruct.

A Modern Book.

The sages of to-day are fond of averring that the modern type of book is light and frivolous and has nothing to it. This is not so. The modern book to suit these troublous times has to be light and airy on the surface but nevertheless it combines solid instruction with whole-hearted enjoyment. Such a book is "Patricia Brent-Splinter" (Jenkins 2-8). Though it appears to be light the theme is one which is powerful in its deep magnetism. Once you pick up the book, you don't readily lay it down. The amusing adventures of the heroine a "guest" at a London boarding-house, surrounded by other guests who are feline to the highest degree she launches into a "make-believe" engagement for 'one night only' with Col. Lord Peter Bowen. The latter conscious of the charms of Patricia is loath to drop the matter and remains engaged to Patricia. The other characters, Lady Tamara, (Lord Peter's sister) Miss Brent, (Patricia's sole surviving relative) Mr. Triggs and Geoffrey Elton make the book a complete success.

Finger Rings Dangerous

According to the Seattle representative of the Shipping Board, finger rings constitute a fruitful source of accidents to shipyard workers. "If you wish to avoid accidents," says this authority, "leave them off when you go to work. Within thirty days two men have lost fingers as a result of accidents for which their rings were responsible and more than twenty less serious mishaps have been reported which were due to the same cause."

MOLASSES!

We guarantee the quality of all the Molasses we have in stock. As a matter of fact, not for years has the quality been as good as that we now have, but as an additional precaution every puncheon leaving our premises is carefully tested by our master-cooper.

While the situation is generally regarded as weak, it must be remembered that there is a shortage in the importation this year of approximately 4,000 puncheons, while the new crop prospects at Barbados are regarded as none too bright.

Our stock consists of genuine Number 1 Choice Grocery and Fancy grades in puncheons, tierces and barrels, and we can readily look after the Trade's requirements.

When Lovely Woman Stoops to Smuggle.

When woman sets out to reform various "abuses," it is interesting to observe that she invariably side-steps smuggling. It is difficult to convince, even a member of the W.C.T.U., that it is illegal and wrong to defraud the Government in the matter of duty on a beaded blouse or what she is pleased to call a "perfectly adorable" afternoon gown. Women who invariably pay street car fares and contribute to the anti-tuberculosis cause have been known to resort to fantastic manoeuvres, in order to avoid a dollar of duty. "Getting things past the Customs officer" is one of the most enjoyable pastimes of the woman whose home town is Sarnia, Windsor or any other border community.

If there is an unloved woman, now residing in the County of Essex, Ontario, it is Mrs. Martha Ogilvie, special Customs officer, who recently examined many fair shoppers, returning from Detroit, and obliged them to enrich the Customs to the extent of thousands of dollars. Loud and long were the walls of the shoppers, who considered themselves despoiled and to have in their possession articles of American manufacture, upon which no duty has been paid. Isn't that an un-Christian task for the last week of the year--and how can any reasonable and humane Government expect every Canadian woman to pay her duty?--Saturday night.

THE OPERATION FAD.

When something hurts, our well known docs, the doc prescribed his pills, or liniments, or liver pads, or compound juice of squills; but now he'd take his saw or axe, to cure us of our ills. There was some sense in being sick in brave old days like those, for then the tired and footsore hick in illness found repose; what time the doctor, summoned quick, prescribed the proper dose. I often sought the village doc, when I had ache or smart, and he would give me pills of chalk that nearly broke my heart; but never did this healer talk of sending me apart. He gave ten drops of melted wax--much virtue in it lies; and stuff that tastes like carpet tacks, and pills of giant size; but never did he shake an axe before my shrinking eyes. But now when to the doc I trot, because of ache or pain, he prods me in the tender spot, and says that pills are vain; he wants to lay me on a cot, and split my form in twain. He says, "Oh, thunder!" and "Oh, pshaw!" when I old methods name; he says there ought to be a law against that ancient game, he wants to take his cross cut saw, and push it through my frame. I have about a hundred ills and cannot have them healed, because, while I will swallow pills, I won't be sliced or peeled; I won't be cured of mumps, or chills by tools the surgeons wield.

For your health's sake we offer Nature's answer to Constipation, "LES FRUITS." ELI'S--dec9,11

A Fair on the Frozen Thames.

On January 14, 1905, says an old chronicler, there began a frost which lasted till March 22. The natural result was a small famine in the following summer, grain being ten times the usual price. The next recorded instance of a great frost was in the early days of January, 1855, when the Thames was frozen over and people walked on it from London Bridge to Westminster. In 1834 there was a continuous frost for seven weeks, the ice on the Thames being eighteen inches thick and coaches were driven on it for hire. Rows of tents and sheds were put up, making a regular fair where every kind of goods could be bought. There were also all sorts of amusements, such as ball-battling, cock-fighting, horse-racing and puppet shows, making a proper carnival on the ice. King Charles II. visited the fair, and had his name printed by a press which an enterprising printer had set up there. This man printed anyone's name for sixpence, adding the words—"London: Printed by G. C. Croome, on the ice on the River of Thames, January 31, 1854." The Thames was also frozen over in 1716, 1740, and 1789. In 1814 a hard frost began, but after Frost Fair had lasted four days on the Thames a sudden thaw came and many traders lost their tents and goods.

Obituary.
DANIEL MONROE.
With the passing of the late Daniel Monroe the city has lost one of its best known and most highly esteemed citizens. Mr. Monroe was also a business man of no mean capability and for over a quarter of a century was associated with the firm of Parker & Monroe. He passed peacefully away yesterday morning after an illness of short duration. The deceased was a native of Moira, County Down, Ireland where he was born 74 years ago, and was a brother of the late Hon. Moses Monroe, the late Judge Monroe, and Mr. J. H. Monroe. He came to this country when a very young man associating himself with his brother Moses in the firm of McBride and Kerr. In 1875 he severed his connection with McBride & Kerr and in the following year became a partner in the firm of Parker & Monroe, retaining an active interest in that business until some 15 years ago, when he retired. A strong believer in home industry, Mr. Monroe invested largely in the many undertakings that his employment for our people and his name looms largely as a shareholder and director in most of the industries that have been instituted during the past 35 years. Up to the time of his death he was President of the Colonial Cordage Company, (Ropewalk) and through his initiative and that of his brother Moses this industry had its birth. Though strict in business Mr. Monroe had a very lovable and charitable disposition and contributed largely to every deserving charity. He was a staunch member of the St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and one of its trustees for many years. He was also a member of St. John's Lodge A.F. and A.M. In 1882, the deceased married Miss Isabel Stott, who is a sister of Messrs. James and David Stott of this city and who survives him. His three children predeceased him. The funeral takes place from 203 Gower Street at 3 p.m. to-morrow. To the bereaved wife the Telegram extends sincere condolence.

Annual Meeting of St. John's Lodge, No. 5.
The annual meeting of St. John's Lodge, No. 5, S.U.F., was held in the Odd Fellows' Hall on Wednesday evening, Jan. 12, Worthy Master R. LaBrew in the chair. The meeting was an extraordinarily large one, in addition to the regular quota of local members there were visitors from No. 56, Clifton Lodge, Pouch Cove, as well as P.M. Harnum, of No. 1 Queen Alexandra Lodge, Heart's Delight. During the course of the evening some very inspiring addresses were given by the representatives of both Lodges. The reports of the Secretary and Purser, shows that the past year was an exceptionally good one, both numerically and financially. After the adoption of the reports, the Lodge was honored by an official visit from the Grand Lodge for the purpose of installing officers for the ensuing year. Worthy Grand Master Curran, assisted by Worthy Grand Chief Officer Rendell, and the W.G. Secretary, Withycombe, who also acted as Marshal of Ceremonies, then proceeded to install the officers, as follows:
W.M.—W. T. Lever.
Chaplain—A. James, P.M.
C.O.—G. Cook.
S.O.—H. Hynes.
Secretary—H. LeGrow.
Purser—J. Harnum.
Q.M.—H. Buchanan.
L.O.—W. Duffett.
Committee—Bros. McGillivray, P.M.; Rendell, P.M.; Burridge, Squires, Jenkins and Batten.
Immediately after the installation, the Worthy Grand Master gave his usual congratulatory address, followed by the speeches of thanks from the newly-elected officers to their brethren for conferring such honors on them. The newly-elected Master then gave the speech of the evening, full of optimism for the coming year, and making a special appeal to the brethren for that unity and oneness which alone can make the ensuing year a record for the Society. He also extended a message of hearty good will to the members assuring them that with their co-operation he would do his utmost to attain the desired result. He ended his address by extending on behalf of the Lodge, a hearty vote of thanks to the Worthy Grand Master and officers of the Grand Lodge for their services during the evening, and an invitation to

at the Royal Stores

When this Store is taking stock, the Advertising Department is treated somewhat like an alien enemy, but after several years of this sort of experience, we manage to bear up and even look cheerful.

And we've learnt to go "on our own" and hunt up the good things that inevitably come to light after stocktaking.

This is how we came to find the wonderful bargains listed on this page.

Notice to the Public!

Since Re-starting business in 1919 I have been warned that there would be a scarcity of

First-Class Material.

With a view to ensuring a supply to meet my customers' requirements I have during that period made heavy purchases of costly goods to an extent, owing to the general depression, in excess of my needs.

In order to capitalize this stock and incidentally to provide employment for my staff of workmen, I have decided to make a large sacrifice by reducing the price of my Suits and Overcoats until this stock is sold out.

With the exception of a few super-quality Cashmeres and Overcoatings I propose to offer the whole of my stock with

A Discount of from Fifteen to Twenty-Five per cent. for Cash.

At these new figures profit is practically eliminated and in some instances an actual loss will be incurred. This, however, cannot be obviated if I am to achieve my threefold aim—to dispose of my stock, find employment for my staff, and to induce my customers to renew their normal patronage, which may have felt imperative to curtail owing to the necessarily high costs.

Trusting to be favored by an early call where your commands will receive my prompt and careful attention.

Wanted Them Pressed.

(From the Boston Transcript.)

A visiting clergyman was conducting an experience meeting at a colored church in the South, and a woman arose and bore witness to the preciousness of her religion as a light bringer and a comfort giver.

"That's good, sister," said the minister. "But how about the practical side? Does your religion make you strive to prepare your husband a good dinner? Does it make you look after him in every way?"

As he paused, he felt a yank at his coat-tails and heard the colored deacon whisper ardently:—"Press dem questions, doctor, press dem questions. Dat's my wife."

"Well," called back the Old Grouch, as he made his way down the aisle toward the nearest exit, "if they live on garlic, they ought to live alone."—The American Legion Weekly.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

DO YOU CALL THIS GIVING OR SPENDING?

RUTH CAMERON

Some days ago I wrote about the woman who has not been an equal economic factor in the earning of it (I consider that not only the wife who works outside the home, but any wife who keeps a home and brings up children without service, is an economic factor in the household and deserves as her own right a share in whatever surplus there is), the men have a certain right to spend this money in the way they like best.

By the way, I have a right, after spending money sensibly on the things they want their wives to have, to fatter themselves that they have been generous and to expect gratitude for having been generous.

As Much Use as a Gold Crown.

I know a man whose wife had been so scrimping herself of clothes in order to give her children every advantage, that she really did not have a decent looking suit or afternoon gown to wear to the social functions which she greatly enjoyed. That man had a streak of good fortune and was able to give his wife a handsome Christmas gift. Did he give her the suit or the afternoon gown that would have meant so much to her? He did not. He gave her two beautiful negligees—exquisite, trailing things of lace and chiffon that she had about as much use for in her busy life as the housemother of a home in which there were three children and no service, as she had for a gold crown.

He gave them to her because he loved things like that himself. She was the sort of woman who would never admit to anyone that she was disappointed in a gift, but her friends could not help knowing what a trial it must have been to her to see the money that would have bought her a dress she sorely needed, spent in that way.

It is an old story to say that when you buy a gift to please yourself rather than the person you give to, you are not truly giving. But it is just as true to say that it was the first time it was said—and apparently there is still need to say it.

I suppose where the money belongs strictly to the husband and the wife has not been an equal economic factor in the earning of it (I consider that not only the wife who works outside the home, but any wife who keeps a home and brings up children without service, is an economic factor in the household and deserves as her own right a share in whatever surplus there is), the men have a certain right to spend this money in the way they like best.

Sausages of All Kinds.

To those who only know sausage as an occasional breakfast accompaniment to wheat cakes, the fact that there are 1,700 varieties of this form of nourishment may be something of a surprise.

All nationalities love certain national dishes, and some form of sausage seems included in the cuisine of every country. China makes sausages, and very good ones, from the eastern point of view, although they might not find favor with an European palate. Germany is pre-eminently a sausage-eating nation. We also find that great quantities of this delectable food are consumed by the people of Latin countries. In Italy and France they are eaten more as a relish than as a dish, and the non-day meal often commences with thin slices of cold sausage, flanked with a few olives and a pat of fresh butter. Sausages in France are associated with certain festive days and a kind of blood sausage is always served at the Christmas dinner.

Neither is sausage a modern fad, born of economy and the utilizing of meat scraps. The town of Koenigsberg, Germany, in 1558, celebrated the national dish by making a bologna sausage over 500 feet long. But sausage has gone a great deal further back than that.

Gaul was divided into three parts, says Julius Caesar, and the great commentator goes on to sing praises of "The sausages of Lucania," which were made of "fresh pork and bacon, minced with nuts of the store pine, flavored with pepper, cummin seed, bay leaves, pot herbs and gorm" a recipe that reads like the fourth line of a sonnet. Sausages were luxuries in those days, and, indeed, up to comparatively modern times, for pepper and the different spices they contained were very expensive.

The fact that foreigners when they come to this country, bring the love for the national form of sausage with them is responsible, undoubtedly, for the large variety of sausages manufactured here. If we have a national sausage, it is fresh pork variety, but sausage known to foreign consumption can be found here. In short, we provide sausages for all nations.—Ex.

Important Question.

"I wish to marry your daughter," said the young man to the girl's father.

"Does she love you?" asked the father.

"Yes, sir. And I love her."

"Well, that, of course, is the first necessary condition, but there are a few more questions I must ask. Have you made any shopping tours with her lately?"

"No, sir."

"Ever been in a department store and asked the present price of women's suits and hats?"

"No, sir."

"Know anything at all about the cost of provisions?"

"Only that which I have learned from the talk of others."

"Well, young man, my advice to you is to take a trip of investigation. I don't know what your present income is, but after you've learned for yourself just what these clothes she wears are costing me, if you come back and say that you can support her in the style which she has become accustomed to lately, I'll give my consent!"—Detroit Free Press.

Didn't Know Adam.

The wit of Sir Francis Burnard was as spontaneous as it was inextinguishable.

On one occasion, at a reception, a beribboned guest came up and greeted him warmly. With a puzzled look, he did not reciprocate the recognition.

"Ah," said the stranger, "I see you don't know me from Adam."

"My dear fellow," was the reply, "I didn't know Adam."

Once he appeared before the Income-Tax Commissioners to protest against what he resented as too liberal estimate of his income. In reply to searching inquiries, he was a little hazy about particulars.

"Surely," said the presiding Commissioner, "you must keep books."

"No, indeed," said Burnard. "I don't keep books. I write them."

"A story he delighted in related to a driving tour to which some Bohemian friends treated themselves," says Sir Henry Lucy.

"On their way they put up at Stony Stratford. One of the visitors passed a sleepless night, the bed being shared by entities who did not contribute to the hotel charges.

"When he came down to breakfast next morning he remarked, ruefully, 'They may well call this Stony Stratford. I was never so much bitten in my life.'

Congressman Edward T. Taylor, of Colorado, when he was a member of the legislature of that state secured passage of a bill regulating the grazing of cattle on public lands and carrying severe penalties for its infraction. The day the new law went into effect Taylor's office was thronged with clients seeking him to defend them for violating his cattle grazing law.

Charles of Austria Has Hope.

The return of Constantine to the throne of Greece has raised the hopes of other deposed monarchs, and especially the hopes of Charles, the deposed Emperor of the dissolved Austro-Hungarian Empire. Austria has been shorn on all sides, and is now a comparatively small country of about nine millions of people, and especially poor, because the parts lost contain most of the natural resources that were the source of wealth of the old empire.

Charles hopes to see Austria and Hungary re-united and himself again seated on the throne. Such a re-union is most unlikely. The Hungarians are a distinct people, and have been once again set up as an independent nation, they are not likely to submerge their independence in an arrangement that under the old regime was always irksome, and to the mass of the people, very unpopular.

Austria is largely Teutonic, practically a German country, but the peace treaty forbids her uniting with Germany. Charles hopes that the Austrians will re-establish the throne and call him to it, and that the Allies will consent on the ground that such an arrangement would tend to prevent German annexation.

Since being deposed Charles and his family have been living in a rented castle in Switzerland. Charles was born on August 17, 1887. He is a grand-nephew of the late Emperor Francis Joseph, who was on the throne when the war commenced. He died on November 21, 1918. The Emperor Ferdinand whose murder at Sarajevo on June 28, 1914, was made the excuse for the attack on Serbia by Austria backed up by Germany, was brought on the world war.

LONDON, Dec. 21st, 1920. GERMANY AND DISARMAMENT. The persistent attempts of the German Government to evade its responsibility under the disarmament clause of the Treaty of Versailles and the Protocol are causing keen anxiety in official circles here, even to the extent of making allowances for Germany in other domains. Thus, while new arguments that she need not dismantle and not destroy her concentrated fortresses. She bases her position on the grounds of cost and efficiency. But dismantled fortresses are no longer a menace, as the German Government during the late war permanent works deemed obsolete and consequently emptied of their fixed artillery, into first class hotels and pivots for the general offensive front, demonstrated again and again—e.g., at Verdun. That is the General Nollet and the International Commission, and if necessary the Ambassadors' Council, are expected to answer this new German appeal, as obviously inspired by General Speckl, with a peremptory reply. They are also going to insist on Germany's observance of a passage for Allied warships through the Kiel Canal stipulated by the Treaty.

LONDON CHIMES. For some time the tunes "Tom King" and "The Kiel Row" and the fact that among the homes of City men have not been on the bells of the Royal Exchange. The explanation came one day last week when a party of journalists were invited to Gillett and Sons' famous bell foundry at Letchworth, in the southern outskirts of London, to hear the Exchange bells tested and returned. The brand new bells weighing seven tons-altogether were seen mouth upward on a foundry floor, and the head of the bell with great agility "conducting" a performance of the old tunes. City has heard for so many years that to show the superiority of a system of tuning known as the Simpson principle. The bells in the world, it is claimed, now turned out in Britain. They made of pure copper and tin in proportion of, roughly, 75 per cent of the former. The old bells were mixed with other metals in the team, with results "deplorable" in the bell world. The tones emerged out of the new bells were literally true and resonant, and compared with the harsh tones of the bells from Rochester which have come in to be tested. Most of the bells of the city are out of tune. The bell expert says—a thing one had often suspected when trying to sleep within radius of a church tower. Bells now hung not on the old picotte beams but in metal frames engineering lines. This makes re-tuning easier and helps to give good and even ringing. To return to the Exchange bells, the Exchange authorities have a Chimes Committee which have long been disquieted by the disharmonies of the bells and the conservatism of the bell ringers. In this instance despised of scientific progress, and have now got the first set of properly-tuned bells in London. Enlightened bell-tuning has been applied to the new industry of chiming house clocks, with the result that the Germans who excelled in this branch are now behind the times—or tines.

JUTLAND AND JELICOE. Amateur and semi-professional critics of naval affairs have been in their element discussing the long-delayed Jutland papers just officially issued. The ordinary observer seems content to wait until he has studied what he wishes for himself, and probably then the opinion generally held since the issue of the most unhappy original despatch from the Admiralty will remain the same—that the men fought splendidly, but that in some way their chiefs were outmanoeuvred. There will be no widespread disposition to censure Admiral Lord Jellicoe for missing the opportunity for making Jutland an even greater Trafalgar, and the fact that Nelson's position as Britain's chief naval hero in popular estimation remains unshaken is sufficient on that head. The papers as they stand, though unusually voluminous, do not tell all that many desire to know, and probably no official papers ever did. They do not fully answer, for example, a question that has been put with increasing insistence during the past few weeks as to whether the Admiralty were hampered by the Admiralty, either immediately before the battle began or when the German ships had withdrawn beyond the safe screen of their minefields. Yet that is a question to which the friends of both the Admirals' principally concerned—Lord Jellicoe and Beatty—will desire a definite reply.

MEDICAL STUDENTS RAISE MONEY. London hospital students' forays in search of subscriptions to the depleted funds of the hospitals are now carried on as an organized campaign in streets, theatres, and restaurants. So far, the Tube railway stations have been found to be most profitable "pitches," and High Street, Kensington, during the shopping hours of the early afternoon, proves the best of them all. As a student said, "If you stand in the front of the queue with the box under the noses of the people as they come away from the booking office with their change in their hands, you nearly always get it all." The dance clubs, I am told, are strangely disappointing, one of the most fashionable only contributing $40 in the course of the evening, although another, not nearly so exclusive, raised over $400 in under an hour. Incidentally, it must be pleasant for the collectors to have a good excuse to go to dance clubs, instead of grinding up anatomy.

CIGARETTES IN THE BATH. The habit of an early morning cigarette is widespread, and I know any number of people who declare that they cannot start the day without a pre-breakfast smoke. A West End of London tobacconist is trying to make capital out of this, and in his window advertises long and amber cigarette-holders to ensure "a dry smoke in the bath." I suppose the joys of the early smoke may well be marred if the cigarette is flavored with soap. Will some inventor now come along with a patent shaving mirror to facilitate that some of matutinal luxuries, a shave in a hot bath?

FOR LUCKY CHILDREN. The display of toys at the big shops is more wonderful this year than ever. The London child has half a dozen fairlands to choose from. Everything is on a magnificent scale. The soldiers fight over stretches of country with transport and auxiliary services all complete, the trains run long journeys through every description of scenery, the bricks construct whole villages instead of single houses or castles. A whole forest scene has been put together in one big shop to display the attraction of the "Taran" monkey, who is outsting the teddy bear from the nurseries. Another is so full of such fascinating creatures as polar bears and elephants that the notice: "For lost children and property apply at the enquiry office" must be very necessary.

LONDON'S UNEMPLOYED. The spectre of unemployment is with us and London takes its full share. According to the official returns there are over half a million men out of work in the country and probably the true figure is nearer a million. With factories closing almost weekly and further short time being worked even when they remain open the year closes very dimly for a large section of our population. The Government relief works are not ready and private charity has to be depended upon. The leading municipalities are sending a deputation to the Prime Minister to ask for Treasury help to the struggling local authorities that are finding it impossible to deal with the flood of unemployment out of their own resources. This is the solution for which the poorer London boroughs are continually asking. The London official figure is 300,000 unemployed in the London area—and this is only the number on the "official" register, at the labour exchanges. There are many thousands of workless, especially women, who are not on the register for various reasons. An analysis of occupations shows that unemployment is worst in the transport industries. General labourers and factory workers come next, then building and construction workers, and engineers and ironfounders. In London the Government schemes, so far as they have gone, have not yet made any difference. Dilution on building is still in the air, and although work has begun on the new arterial roads in Hackney and one or two boroughs, very few men are employed, as yet. A large proportion of the unemployed are skilled workmen, for whom navy work is unsuitable and economically wasteful.

Another War Coming On Bronchitis!

The campaign last year against Bronchitis was so successful that the public is fully determined to renew hostilities against this formidable foe this winter. People are going into action armed with the world's mightiest and most destructive weapon—Buckley's Bronchitis Mixture. The perils of bronchitis, colds, etc., are driven out of their strongly-entrenched position, and thousands of victims are relieved in a most miraculous manner. It is positively wonderful the way this remedy does its work. The demand for it is phenomenal—over 6,000 bottles being sold in thirty days in Ottawa last winter. Buckley's Bronchitis Mixture is not a syrup, but a scientific mixture guaranteed to relieve the worst case of bronchitis, coughs, colds, hoarseness, asthma, influenza, etc. Join in this fight for humanity. Don't hesitate. Buy a bottle to-day. 75c. at any druggist's. Your money refunded if you are not satisfied. Accept no substitutes. Sold in St. John's by any of the following druggists: T. McMurdo & Co., Ltd.; M. Connors, Avalon Drug Co., E. J. Samson, Peter O'Hara, Kavanagh's Drug Store.

The Premier of Italy.

The madcap poet, D'Annunzio, is making much trouble for his own country and threatening to disturb the peace of Europe. Burning with 'intemperate zeal for his beloved Italy, he seized the eastern Adriatic port of Fiume to prevent it falling, he said, into the hands of the new Southern Slav kingdom, and after an arrangement had been made between that country and Italy, D'Annunzio refused to obey the Government of his own country and held on to the city, thus throwing into Italy the unpleasant task of enforcing the arrangement by force of arms. Italy has had to make war on her own subject and his ill-advised followers. This is a trying task for the Government of which Giovanni Giolitti is Premier, but the latter will, no doubt, prove equal to the duty thrust upon him. He is a man with wide and varied experience in national affairs, and has behind him the majority of the Italian people. In 1882, he was elected to the Italian Parliament over which from that day to this he has exercised great influence by reason of his strength of character and his gift of speech. He has thrown his influence for the most part on the side of the advanced party, becoming leader of the Radical group in 1901. Seven years after entering Parliament he was taken into the cabinet as Minister of Finance, and in 1902 he was called upon to form a ministry which held office for two years. From 1901 to 1903 he was Minister of the Interior, one lasting from 1903 to 1906, and the other from 1906 to 1909. Once more he is the chief adviser of the crown and is laboring with success to re-establish his country and adjust her affairs to the conditions created by the war and the return of peace.

SWEAR OFF TOBACCO

"No-To-Bac" has helped thousands to break the costly, nerve-shattering tobacco habit. Whenever you have a longing for a cigarette, cigar, pipe, or for a chew, just place a harmless No-To-Bac tablet in your mouth instead, to help relieve that awful desire. Shortly the habit may be completely broken, and you are better off mentally, physically, financially. It's a easy, so simple. Get a box of No-To-Bac and if it doesn't release you from all craving for tobacco in any form, your druggist will refund your money without question.

MUTT AND JEFF

LOOKS LIKE A MERRY CHRISTMAS FOR MUTT AND JEFF AFTER ALL.

—By Bud Fisher.

Harbor Grace Notes.

Mr. G. Taylor, representing Messrs. T. & M. Winter, St. John's, was in town for the past couple of days on business. Mr. Taylor is a native of Carbonear, but for a number of years have been residing in St. John's. His many friends were pleased to see him once again.

The outgoing train to the city on Tuesday morning last, was delayed quite a while near Tilton, owing to leaving the track, and did not reach the city until late in the evening. A number of young folk who were here from college spending their Christmas holidays, were passengers, among them being Messrs. James Quintin and Alfred Simmons, Misses Sadie Strong and Violet Simmons for the city; Misses Maggie Garland and Mary Davis for Littledale; Miss Frances Casey for North River to resume her teaching again, and Miss M. Whiteway for the city to resume work.

For the last few days we have been only getting one train a day on account of the heavy snow banks along the line. These are trying times for the train hands, who have to cope with a difficult situation.

Mrs. Frances Collis, who had been ill for some time, passed away last night at the home of Mrs. Fannie Noel, Cochrane Street. Mr. Athelstan Collis, popular singer and talented musician of this town is a son of the deceased lady. The body will be conveyed to Trinity, where interment takes place. To the sorrowing family the town extends sincere sympathy.

The funeral of the late Mrs. George Nicholas took place this afternoon, interment being made at the Church of England cemetery. The town extends sympathy to those who are left to mourn.

Schooner Minnie Maud, Capt. John Shougarue, left port this morning for St. John's to bring back some provisions, etc., to her owner Mr. E. Simmons.

The many friends of Mr. D. F. Mean-ey, who has been ill for the past week or more, will be pleased to know his health is much improved, and will soon be able to attend to his duties again.

Elks Open Club Rooms.

Celebrate With Successful Dance. The new rooms of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, St. John's, Lodge No. 1, were formally opened in the Smallwood Building last night by a concert and dance. Over 200 members of the Order attended, accompanied by their wives and lady friends. Emblems of the Order set in evergreens formed the principal decorations of the hall, and presented a very fine effect. The concert was of an exceptionally high order, the programme being as follows:

- 1.—Instrumental Selection—Mr. G. Christian.
- 2.—Song—Mr. W. L. Woods.
- 3.—Violin Selection—Mrs. (Dr.) Murphy.
- 4.—Recitation—Mr. P. Halley.
- 5.—Song—Miss Elsie Herder.
- 6.—Instrumental—Tait Trio.
- 7.—Song—Mrs. P. Grace.
- 8.—Song—Mr. F. E. Moore.
- 9.—Instrumental—Mr. G. Christian.
- 10.—Song—Mr. K. Trappell.

After the concert dancing was begun to music provided by the Jazzoid Orchestra, and continued until an early hour this morning. The supper, which was served shortly before midnight, was an excellent one and full justice was done to it. The committee in charge of the affair have good reason to pride themselves on the results of their efforts to provide a thoroughly enjoyable evening. On Monday night a Ladies' Auxiliary will be formed in connection with the Elks, and a dance of even larger proportions will be held in the near future.

High Prices Hit Public.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,—The late Food Control Board, when in authority, made an honest effort to protect the public from the profiteer in the matter of food stuffs. Is the public awake to the fact that greater profits are now being made on the various necessities of life than at any time during the war, and nothing is being done about it? Take the case of bakers' bread. In 1918-19 flour sold at $18 per barrel and the ordinary loaf retailed to the public, cost 16 cents. To-day the same brands of flour are selling for $14 the barrel with a reduction in the cost of labor, yet we find the bakers' bread still selling at 16 cents per loaf. This is a small matter but it takes tens of thousands of dollars out of the pockets of the consumers in a year.

One might also mention milk, eggs, beef, mutton, butter, tobacco, etc. The cost of producing these articles has declined at least twenty-five per cent, but there has not been a corresponding decline in the retail price to the consumer.

There seems to be no one interested enough in the public to bring about a readjustment of prices. The only thing for the people to do is to patronize only the stores that sell at the reduced rates.

Yours truly,
CONSUMER.
St. John's, Jan. 13th, 1921.

Betrayed Herself.

He looked despairingly into vacancy. "I have had my misgivings," he said, in a dull, passionless voice, "but now I am sure. Your laughs shows me you are utterly heartless."

She turned pale. "Heavens!" she cried in terror; "did I open my mouth as wide as that?"—Stray Stories.

Train Service Changed.

An announcement by the Government Railway Commission intimates a change in the schedule of the train service for Carbonear and that on and after Monday next for the winter months the regular daily 6.00 p.m. train from St. John's and the 4.15 p.m. train from Carbonear will be cancelled. The regular daily morning train from each end will however run as usual, and on Saturdays there will be both morning and evening trains.

Do You Remember the "Bear"?

For years people have been accustomed to "look for the "Bear" when buying Rubbers.

The "BEAR" is the trade mark found on every pair of "Bear Brand Rubbers" which were sold by us.

The Bear Brand gained a fine reputation for service among Rubber wearers.

Owing to the existing high rate of exchange in the United States, we now have our Rubbers manufactured for us by the Columbus Rubber Co. of Montreal, thus saving from 15 to 20 per cent. on the cost price. This Company is closely associated with the Bear Brand Factory in Connecticut, U.S.A.

Columbus Rubbers are equal in every way to the "Bear Brand." They have a reputation for high quality, style and workmanship. There is no brand that can surpass them for service.

In buying "Columbus" Rubber Footwear, you get the advantage of sterling quality combined with a decided advantage in price.

Therefore insist on getting "Columbus" Brand Rubbers

Can You Play Nurse?

Really, of course, it is through no desire to shirk our woman's work that so many mothers and wives always feel a certain reluctance to play the role of home nurse. It is because they know that in normal times it is far better to entrust our own health and the health of our families to women who have had the special intensive training in nursing. So if we possibly can we employ a nurse or send the patient in question to a private room at the hospital, or if we cannot we call in the district nurse, where there is one in the neighborhood, or commit the dear ones to the hospital wards, knowing that far better care will be given there than we could possibly give at home.

Something Necessary.

But women recently saw that there are times when this twentieth century way of doing things does not work. There are times when there are not enough nurses and there are then the woman who has thought the days of home nursing were part of an age that is passed has suddenly to pull her wits together and show that she is a member of the adaptable sex.

In a contagious or infectious disease the fight is if not half over at least well in hand when the home nurse puts into practice what she knows of household and personal hygiene. That is why even novices who last year and the year before tried their hand at home nursing proved their helpfulness. They knew that perfect cleanliness in the sick room is essential, that they themselves should wear washable fresh cotton or linen frocks, and they knew that the sick room should be frequently and thoroughly ventilated. At least the doctor didn't have to stop and instruct them in these things.

What You Should Know.

Now that we have had our lesson, let's be prepared next time. For there are other things that are important in this matter of home nursing. Don't let another month go by without learning these things: how to use a fever thermometer, how to change bed sheets without causing discomfort to the patient, how to life or change the position of a patient without running the risk of straining yourself or the patient, how to administer soft food, the proper way to fill a hot water or chopped ice bag, and the few other things that the home nurse is asked by the doctor to do.

How to get this information and training? It is the simplest matter in the world. If you can't attend lectures or demonstrations on the subject get an up-to-date book on the subject and read it carefully and then practice the various simpler activities it describes.

Mrs. Gladstone's Cheque

Mr. Edward Bok, for twenty-five years editor of the American "Ladies' Home Journal," got Mrs. Gladstone to write for him, and paid her £3,000 for some articles.

Then came an amusing episode. To quote Mr. Bok's autobiography: "I received a letter from Mr. Gladstone expressing the opinion that his wife must have written with a golden pen, considering the size of the honorarium."

"But," he added, "she is so impressed with this as the first money she has ever earned by her pen that she is reluctant to part with the cheque. The result is that she has not offered it for deposit, and has decided to frame it. Considering the condition of our exchequer, I have tried to explain to her, and so have my son and daughter, that if she were to present the cheque for payment and allow it to pass through the bank, the cheque would come back to you, and that I am sure your company would return it to her as a souvenir of the momentous occasion. Our arguments are of no avail, however, and it occurred to me that an assurance from you might make the cheque more useful than it is at present!"

Lord Northcliffe intimates in his book that the Prince of Wales is likely to choose a bride from within the circle of the "blood" royal. Before he can do this a royal decree must be repealed. This measure prohibits any descendant of King George II., except those who are the issue of princesses married into foreign houses, from contracting marriage before the age of 25 without the assent of the King. "After that age they may marry whoever they please, providing they give 12 months' notice to the privy council and have not the disapprobation of Parliament."

Resolution that United States in restoring the League of Nations was rejected by majority at last night's session of the League of Nations. Jones, Ray Gushue and Wood led the affirmative. C. Morris J. Bursey, Freeman the negative. Every member present in the debate and much in the affirmative.

Respective speakers contented in her address, took and could not have taken United States to go part from Europe; she been so. The chief of Washington—Jefferson Monroe was one of the speakers in the political arena of Europe. Let the people to themselves and the old world do likewise. This was not the nation's religion of America prospered under this policy. Diplomacy has nothing to do with the killing of European statesfields of the war-torn nations. Mrs. Alas, the League had been brought to forced down her throat in such a manner as suspicion. Woodrow Wilson, idealistic, unsophisticated, he was—was and the fingers of Lloyd George and Orlando in America. With an eye of Nationalist intervention of Versailles, so they could not be satisfied. League, and ordered the policy. This latter, the League scheme several direct contradiction to the policy, raised to the reservations were made. Case of Article 10, which the United States to send force orders of the League, was modified to such as to leave to Congress the not of American boys to other nations. Mr. Woodrow Wilson declared that he must not with no reservations at all. The Senate, rep people—it was a new on the many issue—stans and so the matter stand. It was proposed to accept the Treaty of Versailles, the League of Nations. The League of Nations was not ratified. It was regrettable, was of little value, as the League of Nations speaking about the League of Nations was a terrible conditions seen to-day. On all sides, there is trouble of one another. In Europe there was depression and America was not to-day. The League of Nations was not to-day. In the League of Nations, in peace and war, had by entering the war, the consequent responsibility in the upbuilding of and it was such, unchristian of her to with union much expressed by the League of Nations. A genuine peace which was to uphold which was by the nations to secure the peace of the world and not come in the persistent aloof, pulling her. GENERAL MOTORS IS GOOD "BUY" FOR BEGINNERS.

With a High last April of $42 per share, and intrinsic value greatly increased since then; with cash dividend of $1.00 per share per year still maintained; with a recent inventory greatly reduced; with its recent $27,000,000 new financing, and with J. P. Morgan and the Du Ponts in control—
GENERAL MOTORS is unquestionably a good purchase on margin at current price levels and we cheerfully recommend it to our clients as being one of the few motor issues with an extremely bright outlook. Beginners may open an account for as low as 5 shares if desired, but don't neglect to get some while low prices prevail. Present quotation $16.50.
