The Will

There comes a time in the life of every man when he must leave his worldly possessions to the care of another. In anticipation of this, therefore, the first obligation resting on an individual who is possessed of property is the making of a will, and this should be done before the capacities become impaired by time or the ravages of disease. THE MONTREAL TRUST COMPANY will act as Executor for Estates large and small. It is thoroughly equipped to efficiently and economically undertake the administration of Estates and will carry out the intentions and desires of the Testator, bearing in mind at all times the best interest of the Estate.

Wealth and Beauty at Stake!

CHAPTER XXI.

"So I will," she says, abandoning her high and haughty resolves, her coldness and disdain, without a second thought, all other feelings overcome by and submerged in her sudden, passionate yearning for a sight of her husband's face. "Let him be angry with me, or blame, or punish me if he likes! It is his right, the best right in the world, to make me obey him, my own dear, married love!" she whispers to herself, trembling in mingled hope and fear.

She will confess all her faults to him most humbly, she resolves; she will ask his forgiveness, if she has wronged him—ay, on her knees, if he bids her; she will conquer his anger and his coldness by the meekness of her obedience, the warmth of her love; she will ask him to kiss her and tell her she cannot know sleep or rest estranged so cruelly from him.

So she softly knocks at his door, and, finding there is no response—ah, cruel Dallas, to have fallen placidly asleep while she is in such unrest and wretchedness—gently turns the key in the lock and tries to open the door.

Even the sound of his voice will comfort her; even to hear him say, "Good-night, Yolande," in pleasant tones will be happiness.

She tried to open the door, but it is bolted on the inside, and the lock, being an old one, rattles.

"Who is there?" Dallas calls, sharply, in a half-awake and very cross voice.

Yolande's first impulse is to fly from the door and be silent; then comes over her again the renewed longing to speak to him.

"It is I, dear—Yolande," she answers, in very unsteady, husky tones, and she is terrified to hear him leap out of bed, muttering angrily, and pushing the chairs about as he searches for his dressing-gown.

"Oh, it's no matter—never mind! Oh, please don't disturb yourself, dear!" Yolande calls in subdued tones, in an agony of regret and shame and vexation at her own sentimental folly.

But her exclamation only has the effect of making Captain Gyne excrete first his slippers, then the fender, as he strikes his foot against it. Limping violently across the room, he unbolts the door with ill-tempered haste.

"What on earth's the matter?" he demands. "What is wrong Yolande, what o'clock is it? What do you want?"

"Nothing, dear," Yolande says, deprecatingly, wishing almost that the ground might open and swallow her up. "Only I did not know you were asleep, Dallas dear. I would not have disturbed you if I had thought you were asleep."

"What is it? What is the matter, for Heaven's sake?" Dallas cries impatiently, shivering. "Just as I was in my first sleep, too! What are you sitting up for until this hour?" he asks more crossly, as he perceives that she is still wearing her dinner dress, with her warm vicuña shawl wrapped around her.

"Because I could not go to sleep, Dallas," Yolande replies tenderly, laying her little ice-cold fingers on his hand, glowing with life and warmth, "until I asked you to forgive me if I wronged you, and to be friends with me—oh, my darling!"

"Good gracious!" Dallas exclaims, in wrathful accents. "Is it possible you woke me up in the dead of night and disturbed me in this manner for such infernal nonsense? I wish to goodness you had one ounce of common sense! You behaved most improperly to me last night—whatever time it is—and I told you that your conduct would make our separation final if you did not alter it! You didn't choose to alter it, so you must take the consequences!"—and he yawns violently and shivers again, being, in fact, in that sleepy condition of mental confusion and irritability in which a member of the nobler sex can not reasonably be expected to be sanely in word or deed, having been unduly disturbed by the wife of his bosom.

"Oh, Dallas," Yolande pleads, with a stifled cry, clinging to him, "don't speak so cruelly to me! Oh, my love, I could bear it no longer—I grew so miserable and desolate and nervous, thinking of the poor old earl's death, and I thought I should like to speak to you for a minute, not knowing you were asleep, dear."

"If you are nervous, why didn't you have your maid to sleep in your room?" Dallas asks, curbing, freeing himself from the clasp of her arms. "I can ring for her now if you wish. It is past twelve, I see, and, of course, in a country household like this everybody was asleep long ago; but that doesn't matter, I suppose."

"No, no, I don't want Pitta! I would not disturb her on any account," Yolande says, hurriedly, shrinking away, but gazing at him pitifully.

"I wish you had been as considerate for me," Dallas rejoins harshly. "You should have gone to bed long ago, and not have sat up giving away to superstitious fancies!"

He tells himself that it is only right to reprove her sternly for such childish behavior, and to give her a smart reminder that she has forfeited her right to worry and disturb him, since, by the decree of her severe, foolish jealousy, they are to be strangers.

And then, although he feels a pang of misgiving at the sight of the wan young face, the large dark piteous eyes gazing longingly after him from the gloomy background of the huge dimly-lit room, he shuts the door, and leaves her alone—alone, to weep through the livelong night, to sit there in the cold and darkness, when the candles burn out about two o'clock. The desolate, timid girl, a stranger among strangers, sick and faint with nervous terrors, apart from her father's misery, crouches in an armchair, wrapped in her shawl, until.

"Cold winds wake the gray-eyed wren."

Then, to preserve appearances, Yolande takes off her pretty black-lace and amber-satin dress, which she put on with such innocent pleasure and vanity, and wrapping herself in a warm flannel dressing-gown, creeps shuddering into the snowy depths of the huge ice-cold bed.

There, in spite of cold and misery, she falls into a deep sleep of exhaustion. Pitta wakes her at half-past eight.

"I have caught a bad cold, I think, and don't feel well enough to go down this morning, Pitta," she tells the maid, who acquiesces, with a glance at her young mistress's swollen eyelids. "And, after breakfast, you must pack my trunks, Pitta." Yolande continues, with a vain attempt to speak clearly and pleasantly. "I shall return to London to-day."

"I thought you would," Pitta says to herself.

"Captain Gyne and I arranged it last night," she goes on, in a business-like tone, "and decided that it was better I should go back to Ruland Gardens, and stay there until he can leave Pentreath."

"I wonder when that will be," Pitta thinks indignantly. "When that Miss Murray goes, I suppose! Oh, the falseness of men! And she hasn't a bit of spirit, poor little thing, to stand up for herself! Catch me putting up with a husband like that!"

The Turn of the Year.

THE GARDENER WHO LOOKS AHEAD WILL FIND MUCH WORK TO DO THIS MONTH.

There is no more opportune time than the present to secure ripe parsley sprigs for curing. Parsley for preserving should be gathered during a dry spell. When properly dried with some heat, they will keep their flavor for months.

The best dried parsley is, however, a poor substitute for freshly gathered leaves. There is no reason whatever why a continuous supply should not be had all winter. It is an easy matter to lift the roots from which the leaves have been gathered and give them a fresh start.

If the work is taken in hand now, a crop can be obtained even in the most severe weather. The roots can either be potted up or planted out in a frame. If the first method is adopted, ten-inch will be a good size of pot to use.

There need not be too much drainage, as very little watering will be required. A light soil should be used and a compost of leaf-mould with an equal quantity of garden material will be found about right.

Where Delay Is Bad Policy. Lift the roots as carefully as possible, and insert nine or ten in the pot. A good watering should be given to settle the soil, and the pots stood outside till October. They will then want to be removed to a cool frame or pit and kept free from frost.

If grown out in a frame, the same soil should be used, and the roots dibbled in about four inches each way. All available air should be allowed; in fact, the lights are better entirely withdrawn till protection from frost is necessary.

The lifting of shallots is really a simple matter; but often the crop is left too long in the ground, with the result that many a root is spoiled. When leaves begin to turn yellow, nothing is gained by leaving them in the bed. Spread out the bulbs on a dry walk for a few days before putting away, and store in an airy place in nets if possible. Bulbs of any kind will soon decay in damp when stored.

In gathering the potato crop, don't fall into the common error of allowing tubers to lie in the sun too long. It is essential that early potatoes be thoroughly dry before storing, but to expose eating potatoes to the sun until they turn green is foolish.

Only roots which are intended for seed should be subjected to this treatment; several days' exposure won't be too long in their case. They can then be placed in a frost-proof place.

Tomatoes Need Air. Clear off the early pea breaks, and, with only a rough forking over, leeks will reveal in the soil. If the weather is at all dry, see that the bed gets well saturated after the planting. Nothing hinders leaf growth so much as shortage of moisture after transplanting.

Bugs In The Bean Stalks. Black bugs, the sworn enemy of the bean family, account annually for many a good crop. There are thousands of bugs in the bean-stalks at present; you cannot fail to see them, for they cling closely together right up the stalk.

This insect is known as the dothira fly, and is extremely difficult to keep in check. Nipping off the top is not an absolute cure. The only way of dealing with the pest is to apply soapy water each night.

If in addition to this application, water be forcibly applied, either by means of a hosepipe or strong syring, the plants can be kept in a healthy state.

Don't forget that even old fruiting trees suffer from lack of moisture. If trees are carrying anything of a crop at all they will want water; and at this is applied now, both tree and fruit insistently respond. It is a mistake to think that established fruit trees are entirely self-supporting.

Milk that often makes butter and cream unnecessary

You'll discover a new delight in cooking—a new economy, too—when you try Libby's Milk. Just as Miss Lone Wyse of Chicago did.

What she says is especially interesting, since she has had more than ordinary success in cooking. She writes: "Libby's Milk is wonderful for cooking use especially, so rich it often makes it possible to eliminate expensive butter and cream entirely—in muffins or cream soups, for instance."

A rather startling statement to be sure. But consider this fact about Libby's Milk:

7 1/2 teaspoons of butter fat in every can

There are 7 1/2 teaspoons of pure butter fat in every 16 oz. can of this milk. And it's this substance in cream and butter, you know, that makes them great enrichers: Libby's Milk is so rich in butter fat because, first, it comes from selected herds in the finest dairy sections of the country—those favored localities where nature has made of shady hills and green, well-watered valleys ideal pasture lands, and where men specialize in raising cows that give exceptionally rich milk.

Then, at our condenseries in the heart of these famous dairy sections, we remove more than half the moisture from this fine milk, making it double rich.

Nothing is added to it; none of its food values taken away. But to bring it safely to you who live, perhaps, many hundreds of miles away we must seal it in air-tight cans and sterilize it.

This, then, is Libby's Milk—just the finest cow's milk in the land, made double rich!

Have richer dishes—tonight!

Thousands of women are using this richer milk now—getting better results from old recipes, finding new joy in cooking, and saving money, too.

Get a can of Libby's Milk from your grocer today. Try it tonight in place of ordinary milk—in a soup for instance, a sauce or dessert. See what wholly new richness it gives to your cooking. And what delicious flavor.

Write for free recipe folder!

Upon request we'll gladly send you a copy of a new folder containing recipes sent us by good cooks who use Libby's Milk.

A Charming Woman is Healthy

Good looks mean good health

Health gives the only true and lasting beauty to the complexion. Perfect digestion and assimilation of food are necessary to ensure perfect health. For relieving ailments of the digestive powers—such as biliousness, constipation, sick headaches, flatulence—Beecham's Pills have proven their worth to countless thousands of women for many years past. They are convenient, gentle in action and positive in their excellent results.

"I wonder when that will be," Pitta thinks indignantly. "When that Miss Murray goes, I suppose! Oh, the falseness of men! And she hasn't a bit of spirit, poor little thing, to stand up for herself! Catch me putting up with a husband like that!"

England Bars

Divorce Details.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—(A.P.)—British newspapers soon will cease to carry detailed reports of evidence given in divorce cases.

The House of Commons Committee, which has been considering this question some time, recommends that newspapers be permitted to publish only the statement of the petitioner, the defence, the judge's summing up, any points of law which may arise during trial and the jury's findings and judgment. The names of witnesses may be given, but not their evidence.

The committee also recommends that the scope of a bill carrying these suggestions should be widened to include the prohibition of reports of matter that is indecent in all proceedings before a judicial bench.

A gentleman was cleaning out his desk the other day and tearing up his old letters, when his valet, a son of Erin, who happened to be in the room said timidly:

"Sure, sir, an' yo might gimme wan o' them letters."

"What do you want it for?"

"When I left Oireland, sorr, I promised my old mother in Cork, to write her a letter. But she can't read, an' I have never learned to write; so if you will just let me send her one o' them old letters ya have no use for, it will make her proud as proud."

The gentleman gave the faithful son a patent medicine anti-fat circular, which was duly posted.

Meeting of British and French
Premiers to take Place.

The Sable Island has been Refloated--The Turkish Government Ratifies Lausanne Treaty--Russia Claims Sovereignty Rights in Wrangel Island.

WIN WILL MEET POINCARÉ.

LONDON, Aug. 23. Beginning the fulfillment of further steps of lengthy notes on the relations issue, Premier Baldwin has met to meet Premier Poincaré up-urn of the former from his visit. The British Premier has not only asked his French colleague an appointment, but will make it quietly through second parties readiness to discuss whole relations problem in light of French's latest note.

FEDERAL GOVT. WILL TAKE NO FURTHER STEPS TO PREVENT STRIKE.

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 3. Official notice that the Federal Government would not intervene in the Anthracite wage negotiations, to prevent stoppage of mines, was to-day reached at Atlantic City by the United States Coal Commission. Both sides were told would go no further in an effort to enforce peace, since refusal of negotiations, which was taken intervention last week, merely served to precipitate another

THE WRANGLING OVER "WRANGLER."

MOSCOW, Aug. 23. Russian Minister Tchitcherine has sent a note to the British Government protesting against the raising of the British flag on Wrangle Island by explorer Stefansson, as Wrangle was incorporated into Russian territory in the years 1821-24. The note states that Russia built lighthouses on the island and undertook other work, and in 1815 formally notified the United States and other governments that the island and territories along the coast of Alaska constituted integral parts of Russian territory. As during the war period no Government recognized Russia's claim. The note

SAYS THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT REGARDS RAISING OF THE BRITISH FLAG A VIOLATION OF RUSSIA'S SOVEREIGNTY.

SABLE I. REFLOATED.
HALIFAX, Aug. 23. The Sable I., which struck a submerged wreck on Aug. 14th, and was subsequently beached near Lamaline, was refloated to-day.

THE IRISH ELECTION CAMPAIGN.

DUBLIN, Aug. 23. In the election campaign there is an absence of violence, which usually characterizes all Irish elections. This is regarded as a change of political conditions, but it is also partly due to the fact that Republicans are now professing to stand for law and order. Polling Day is next Monday and has been proclaimed a public and bank holiday.

STRIKERS IN CONTROL.

VERA CRUZ, Aug. 23. Virtually under control of committee of strikers which has taken over direction of police, order is being maintained. No trains are running and no public utilities in operation, but stores are kept open.

ESCAPES FROM CHINESE BANDITS.

HALIFAX, Aug. 23. Darcy Weatherbee of Halifax, who was captured by Chinese bandits while attempting to explore overland route from Burns to Pekin, about two months ago, has escaped from his captors and is being escorted by Chinese troops to Tai, according to a Telegram received by his brother in Halifax last night.

TURKISH ASSEMBLY RATIFIES LAUSANNE TREATY.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 23. The Turkish Grand National Assembly at Ankara to-day ratified the Lausanne Treaty with the Allies. Two hundred and fifteen of two hundred and thirty-five votes cast, were in the affirmative.

PREMIER KATO REPORTED DEAD.

TOKIO, Aug. 23. It is unofficially reported here that Baron Tomosaburo Kato, Premier of Japan, is dead. He has been seriously ill.

TREATY RENEWED.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23. The Treaty Arbitration between the United States and Japan, which had expired by limitation, was renewed to-day for a period of five years without change.

CABINET MEMBERS UP ON SERIOUS CHARGE.

SOFIA, Aug. 23. Eleven members of the late Stamboulsky Cabinet now under arrest, will be tried on charges involving the death penalty, including bribery, incitement to riot, and murder. Minister of Justice Simloff has announced. The Stamboulsky Government was overthrown in June and Stamboulsky himself was killed during an alleged attempt at escape.

GERMANY VIEWS FRENCH REPLY AS UNFAVOURABLE.

BERLIN, Aug. 23. The German press generally regards French reply to British reparations note as unfavorable. It is regarded as making no further progress towards the solution of the problem.

ATTEMPTED MURDER ON THE HIGH SEAS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23. Story of wild fight in the stokehold of steamship Munamar, as she lurched northward through Tuesday's squall was recounted when the vessel made port with one man at point of death, another in frons. Knives and monkey wrenches were the weapons, and Alfonso Rido, fireman, who was worsted by Adolpho Mohojo, a water tender, bore ghastly evidence of the fury of the fight. His left arm is almost severed at the shoulder, one of his lungs punctured and his head badly cut. Mohojo escaped with a few bruises. The men were engaged in some trifling argument which resulted in their seizing monkey wrenches. They were separated before either was seriously hurt. They met again however in a passageway, and Mohojo who had armed himself with a knife resumed the fray. Rido fled to the deck pursued by Mohojo, and falling near the rail was literally slashed to pieces. Rido it was said would probably die.

Mushroom Seaside Resorts.

It is surprising how many seaside resorts have come into existence within living memory. Seventy years takes us back to 1853. Where then were Blackpool, St. Anne's, Southport, Llandudno, Colwyn Bay, Barmouth, Weston-super-Mare, Bournemouth, Littlehampton, Bognor, Folkestone, St. Leonards, and Hove; East Coast resorts like Clacton, Felixstowe, Brightlingsea, Gorleston, Cromer, and a dozen more; and such places as Whitby and Scarborough?

Of some of these there was not even the beginning. The populous garden city of St. Anne's, with a rateable value of hundreds of thousands of pounds, was not begun. It was just sandhills. Bournemouth had not a thousand inhabitants, whereas now it is a county borough. Bognor disappeared and leaves no trace except a few cottages occupied by fisher-folk. Hove was not, though Brighton was a place of repute. Weston-super-Mare is an old town, but has developed into a watering-place within the last thirty years. Ilfracombe was a tiny fishing village less than fifty years ago. Colwyn Bay did not exist, and Llandudno was very tiny and almost unknown outside Wales. St. Leonards and such places as Bexhill had no existence, any more than had any part of either Hastings or Folkestone outside the areas of their ancient ports.

Even Scarborough was very small, and Whitby solely concerned with its fishing trade. Cromes has risen out of nothing at all really, although legend says that the old town and the old church are beneath the waves, and When Starfish Are Startled.

Did you know that a starfish has legs? Probably you have never thought about it, but if you want to find out for yourself, put one in a pool of water and watch what happens. In a few minutes it will begin to move, and you will notice it scrambling over stones and sliding up any rock that may happen to be in the way.

This is the moment to snatch it up and have a look at the hundreds of little legs it keeps curled up inside, ready to poke out of holes in the skin when required.

A starfish also has eyes in the tips of its rays, and one particular kind possesses eyelids which open and shut.

Another curious fact about the starfish is that if one of its rays is cut off another one grows, and if the little creature is cut completely in half, each half will throw out new rays, so that in a few weeks two starfishes appear instead of one.

Some starfish have a habit of breaking into pieces of their own accord when alarmed. Even a shadow will cause them to give a shudder and break into bits.

More starfish have a curious habit of protecting their eggs when first laid. They heap them together in a small pile and then bend their rays downwards so that they stand on their tips and form a kind of cage or table.

Good Recipes.

Pepper Hash.
Take two and a half dozen green peppers and remove the seeds from half of them. Chop fine and mix with two hard heads of cabbage, chopped, and two dozen onions. Mix well together and put into a stone crock or wooden bowl. Sprinkle with a large cupful of salt, and let them stand twenty-four hours. Drain as dry as possible, pressing out the water. Put a gallon of cider vinegar in the preserving kettle with a cupful of brown sugar, half a cupful of white mustard seed and half an ounce celery seed. Heat to the boiling point and pour scalding hot over the peppers. Just before pouring on the vinegar, stir through the pepper mixture one cupful grated horseradish. If kept in a cool place, this pickle will be crisp and savory.

Berry Roly-Poly.
Chop to a fine powder a quarter of a pound of best suet with a very little flour and blend with a scant quart of flour sifted with one teaspoon of salt and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Add also one half a cup of grated bread crumbs and mix to a soft dough with equal parts of milk and cold water. Roll out in a sheet, cover with any variety of berries and sprinkle liberally with sugar. Grate over a dusting of grated nutmeg and roll up like jelly roll. Pinch the edges of the paste together and steam about one hour and a half. Serve with a hard sauce. A rich baking powder dough may be substituted for the suet crust, but it is not so rich.

Scotch Oatcakes.
(Sent by Tullihallan, N.S.)—Put two and one-half handfuls of fine oatmeal into a bowl with one teaspoon of sugar and a pinch of salt. Pour over this one quarter pint of boiling water, in which one ounce of butter or dripping has been melted. Mix well, turn out on a board and knead well into a round flat cake. Roll out very thinly, dusting the rolling pin and board well with oatmeal to prevent it sticking. Pinch round the edges with finger and thumb to shape, then cut into four. Fire on both sides on a hot griddle, then bake in a slow oven for an hour or to suit in front of the fire on a toaster to make crisp.

Strawberry Acid.
For E.C. N.S., sent by W.O. N.S., who sends kindly, several other recipes, saying "You will find them very, very nice. I have made them." Dissolve four ounces of citric acid in half a gallon of water and pour it over two gallons of ripe strawberries. Let stand twenty-four hours, then drain liquid off. To every pint of juice add one and a half pounds of loaf sugar, boil, let stand three days and bottle. A few spoonfuls in a glass of water makes a delightful drink. Be careful not to have over-weight of acid as it is poisonous.

Strawberry Beverage.
(For E. C. N.S., sent by Busy Bee, Ont., who says: "This makes a delicious drink, and is an original recipe.") Use five equal quantities of white wine vinegar and water; let stand twenty-four hours then strain through cheesecloth; measure juice and use pint of sugar to each pint of juice. Boil juice twenty minutes before adding sugar, which gives better results if heated in oven when juice is boiling. Boil twenty minutes after adding sugar, which gives better results if heated in oven while juice is boiling. Boil twenty minutes after adding sugar.

White Cakes.
(For R. V. Sack, sent by "Young Housekeeper," (St. John's)) One cupful white sugar, three-quarters cupful sweet cream, two and one-half teaspoonfuls baking powder, one heaping cupful flour, one teaspoonful lemon extract, whites of three eggs, beaten until stiff. Bake in a loaf and cover with one-half cup cream and whites of one egg, beaten together until stiff, add one teaspoonful sugar and one-half teaspoonful lemon extract.

Plants Keep us Healthy.
The plants growing in pots which we use to decorate our rooms play a great part in keeping us fit, especially in hot, dry weather.

The roots of the plant dig deeply into the soil and spread themselves in every direction. Their mission is to collect water, which is pumped up into stem, leaves, and flowers by means of a mechanism more efficient than anything the engineer has been able to design.

When it reaches the foliage this moisture is given off into the atmosphere, which it makes fresh and cool. A single plant may give off into the air from a pint to a quart of water in twenty-four hours.

Plants also serve to keep the air pure. We take in oxygen from the air and breathe out carbonic acid gas. Plants, however, take in this gas and give out oxygen.

"Lumberman" Condemns Export of Raw Timber

Editor Evening Telegram:
Dear Sir,—I am more than ever convinced that you are making such a mistake as to spend a large amount of money in shipping out of the country. By all means give Mr. H. J. Crowe all the argument possible to use up the lumber in sawn wood and as pulp or other thing else, so long as he makes it in this country, but should he be allowed to ship wood out of the country at the present lot of Government cut is cleaned up.
In the past all governments given away all available lands to prospectors and grubbers to others, and the people living in the country who have mills cannot receive enough to keep them going, and they are lashed for cutting on those lands by speculators. Meanwhile the land is rotting on the stump or is destroyed by fire. The Government is feeding our able-bodied men might by this means be kept themselves, but they have to be at the silent mills and the owned by outside proprietors.
I have two steam saw mills own, each of them capable of 25,000 feet a day, and both are idle. My three sons who have years of war service have to leave their home and country to a living in America. It is a little short of a crime.
There are hundreds of miles of virgin forest all round us but dare not touch it, because it is up by some party in order to pile out of it some day. The Government would be justified in them work the lands or give them I do sincerely hope that you keep this thing hot and stop wood from going out of the in its raw state, and that the Government will take steps to operations on the part of those are impeding the coars of progress.
I am, yours faithfully,
LUMBERMAN

Invitation.

Should you ask me gentle ladies How to pass a pleasant evening, I would tell you come to Bay Bulls. See our football dress and robes. Should you ask what other features Can we give for your enjoyment, I would tell you, hear our singers, Our sweet singers, at our concert, And to strengthen you for dancing, We shall have a splendid supper, Cakes and candies, bread and butter, Meats so tender, pickles spicy, All spread out on snow white napery, And then after in the twilight With the music playing sweetly, You may dance the light fantastic Fox-trots, waltzes, one-steps, lancers, And some old time stately measures, Wherefore gentlemen and women, Come to Bay Bulls sure, on Sunday And enjoy a pleasant evening.

Magistrate's Court.

(Yesterday) A drunk and disorderly was released. A Danish seaman arrested for vagrancy was granted his freedom on the promise that he would secure work to-day. An assault case between an old man named O'Flaherty and a Government official occupied the attention of the court at a considerable length. The case was dismissed. Three city youths appeared in the Juvenile Court charged with stealing implements from a motor boat belonging to a fisherman of the Battery. Each of the accused were convicted. One was fined $10.00 or 30 days, and the two others $25.00 or three months. A young man for assaulting a woman of the same settlement was bound over to keep the peace in the sum of $100.00. Two young lads named Smith and Williams who were captured by Sgt. Walls at Bay Roberts were brought back to the city and charged with the larceny of $20.00 cash, stolen from a West End store. This case was held over pending further investigation.

Secret of His Success.

One of the most noted, successful and richest men of this country in a recent article said, "Whatever I am and whatever success I have attained in this world I owe it all to my wife. From the day I first knew her she has been an inspiration and the greatest helpmate of my life." Health is the first essential of every woman who wants to be a successful wife and to hold the love and admiration of her husband. If a woman finds her energies flagging and dark circles appearing under her eyes, she has backache, headaches, nervousness and "the blues," she should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the medicine which holds the record of helping 98 out of every 100 women who try it. There's nothing better.

Personal

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Ryan returned home by the S.S. Monaco yesterday, after a very enjoyable three weeks' visit to friends in New York and Montreal. Mrs. Florence March, daughter of the Rev. Dr. Cowperthwaite, arrived by last evening's express on a prolonged visit. She has been a resident of Boston for several years, where she has practised her profession as a trained nurse. Rev. H. L. Pike and Ernie returned from Canada by the Manoia yesterday. Miss M. J. Mars, sister of Mrs. W. R. Warren arrived by the Manoia yesterday on a visit. Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Pratt, who were on a holiday trip to Canada returned by the Manoia yesterday. Sir F. T. McGrath, who was at Deer Lake with the House of Assembly Party, has gone on to Canada, and will take passage to England on business connected with the Labrador Boundary dispute.

Life in Sydney Far From Ideal.

MINE AND STEEL WORKERS IN BAD SHAPE, CANON SCOTT REPEATS.

QUEBEC, Aug. 14. (C.P.)—On his return from Sault Ste. Marie, where he was attending the Soldiers' Reunion Week, Rev. Canon Scott was interviewed last night by the Canadian Press relative to his position with reference to the steel workers' strike at Sydney, N.S.

"I have just returned and found both letters and newspapers awaiting me," he said. "It is illuminating to know the fact that I confused the coal miners with the steel workers has been seized upon by the Sydney press as an opportunity of side-tracking the real issue."

"What I called for was a thorough investigation of the whole situation in the mines and steel works at Sydney by men whose character, position and ability will carry weight with the people of Canada. It is impossible for Canada to become the nation she should if labor and capital are to be perpetually at daggers drawn. We must get into our industrial relations the same spirit of comradeship which Canadians had in the battlefields."

"Nothing but a complete investigation can satisfy the Canadian public and, oddly enough, the need for such an investigation has been acknowledged even by those in Sydney who are attacking me."

"Rev. C. K. Whalley, rector of St. George's Church, Sydney, in a sermon preached August 5, deprecating the criticisms of labor conditions in Sydney by Rev. Mr. Hamlin, goes on to say: 'Those of us who are living here are very much aware that industrial conditions here are very far from ideal; quite aware that a real and impartial investigation by competent observers of the whole situation is perhaps the one real hope that we have of that which we all so ardently desire—industrial peace in this area.'"

Not Living Wage.

"The Sydney Post of August 8, in a leading article, says in part: 'In industrial conditions are far from what they should be at the Sydney steel plant; there are some classes of steel workers, and likewise of mine workers, who are not getting a living wage. There is a vast room for betterment in the housing accommodation at the collieries. A modern plan of co-operative plant committees has yet to be worked out in order to establish cordial relations between the high officials of the British Empire Steel Corporation and its employees.'"

"These quotations are first-hand evidence," said Canon Scott, "of the need that the conditions of the miners and steel workers at Sydney should be inquired into. About 50 per cent. of the steel workers are only paid under 35 cents an hour, with eleven-hour day shifts. This is not good enough for Canada. The resolution wherein the steel workers gave up the fight was pathetic in the extreme. 'Justice demands the fullest inquiry into the rightness or wrongness of the struggle.'"

Sapiro no Magician.

"The governments of the Western provinces having decided against the formation of a wheat pool—largely because practical experience showed men could not be secured to risk their reputations in an experiment doomed to failure—a hurry up call has been sent to Aaron Sapiro, West's newest association of legislation suggesters and a couple of publicity-seeking newspapers. Mr. Sapiro understands the value of organization in marketing. He should be able to give the Western grain growers valuable advice as to reducing costs if they will get together and follow his advice. But the evident expectation that Sapiro magic can be employed to control world wheat prices to the benefit of the Canadian farmer promises to lead to nothing but disappointment. Following is the opinion of an experienced Western wheat grower who has closely studied marketing problems in his own interests:

"Wheat is grown all over the known world. Marketing wheat cannot be controlled by any one country. Farmers never have held together solidly and there will always be competition. I believe in organization and would support any such effort where there is a show for success, but the idea of controlling the wheat market is nothing but a myth."

"There is a difference between wheat and fruit. Wheat can be grown in all parts of the country whereas fruit can only be successfully produced in limited areas. This means that to organize, it is only necessary to get the fruit growers of a certain area together and control output to the requirements of the market. Everything can be handled from a central office and the office is posted as to the needs of every market opened for the sale of such fruit as is being offered. Only enough fruit is shipped to meet demand."

"But suppose the Alberta farmers form a wheat pool and say they will not sell unless they get a certain price? The markets of the world wanting wheat will look to other countries and

MILNARD'S LINIMENT FOR DAN-DRUFF.

Why Motorists Race.

IN THE CAUSE OF KNOWLEDGE, LIVES ARE RISKED AND FORTUNES SPENT IN THIS DANGEROUS SPORT.

When the excitement of a big road-racing event, such as the French Grand Prix, has died down, the prosaic motorist sometimes wonders why all this energy is devoted to what appears to be nothing more than a form of sport drawing disproportionate returns in the way of gameness.

It is quite true that, so far as the actual participants are concerned, the appeal of motor-racing has an irresistible attraction, and many of its devotees are men who have grown old at the wheels of racing-cars. But, contradictory as it may seem, mere speed is only a kind of by-product in a racing programme.

Quite recently British-built cars finished first, second, and fourth in the classic Continental road race over a distance of five hundred miles, beating all the best makes of foreign vehicles. The winner's time averaged out at over seventy-five miles an hour. A truly astounding performance for a car with a nominal rating of 18 h.p.

A Little Line That Counts.
But what did the victorious team gain in return for the huge sums of money spent in building the special cars and engaging highly-paid professional drivers and an army of mechanics, to say nothing of the costs inseparable from taking the whole outfit across the Channel?

First of all, they won the Elms Ribband of motoring for Great Britain, so adding to the prestige of the manufacturers of the winning cars. But the real value of their success is now being determined by serious examinations of the dismantled components of the over-stressed racing-cars. Hanging round the walls of their research laboratories are weird-looking charts, utterly incomprehensible to the lay mind, but having a most important influence upon future designs, not only of racing cars, but of those prepared for the everyday motorist.

After days spent in making abstruse calculations, aided by elaborate scientific instruments, a single line representing an efficiency curve will be lengthened or altered slightly on one of the charts. That simple little line has been extended perhaps only by one-eighth of an inch. Yet, to win so small a result, three drivers and three mechanics have risked their lives by tearing round a dangerous course, smothered with dust and oil, for six or seven hours on end, at speeds up to a hundred miles an hour. And, besides all the nerve-shattering experiences of the actual race, one must remember the dangers of practice work, often greater than those of the race itself.

As precious metals are refined in the heat of the furnace, so are motor-car designs perfected by racing. To quote an oft-repeated axiom, "The racing-car of to-day is the touring-car of to-morrow."

Of course, when one looks at the weird forms of some of the latest types of stream-lined racers, with their beetle-backed bodies and wheels almost entirely enclosed in wind-resisting covers, the well-known axiom appears to lose some of its meaning, for it will be years before motorists adopt the ultra-stream-lined car.

Put to the Test.
But on going more deeply into the matter, we see that the engines, gear-boxes, axles, and other parts differ but slightly from orthodox car design, and such modifications as have been adopted to give extra efficiency will certainly be turned to account at a later date in the designs of touring models.

When applied to touring-cars these modifications will produce more power for a given engine size, a very important matter with regard to taxation. Less fuel, too, will be required to produce the same power. Thus, running costs will be reduced, perhaps enormously.

And what of reliability? Are these marvellous racing-cars capable of sustained effort? They are not intended to be models of reliability, except over comparatively short distances; but during these abnormal tests every fibre of metal in their construction is stressed to within a few degrees of its limit of endurance. If the metals used in these cars stand up satisfactorily under the strains produced by racing speeds they are certain to withstand long periods of ordinary service.

The normal light touring-car of to-day, with its miniature engine rated at about 10 or 12 h.p., could easily outclass the racing-car of a few years back, not only in respect of reliability but in speed as well.

Racing has been responsible for wonderful examples of the metallurgist's art, and the frail-looking component parts of our motors to-day are immeasurably stronger than the cumbersome masses of metal used for similar articles in the past.

With all the improvements in scientific instruments and testing machines one might be led to think that metals could be tested to destruction without risking valuable lives in motor-racing; but it would be difficult to conceive any form of testing apparatus capable of hurling a car along a road at over one hundred miles an hour, or registering the shocks it sustains when bounding over a rough patch on its surface, and of recording the actual behaviour of the engine in all conditions. Therefore, racing must continue until the speeds attained are too high for ordinary roads.

promoters will insist on a further limitation of engine capacity, until the speed peak is again at the maximum.
Some people argue that racing would be more useful if ordinary touring models only were allowed to compete; but whilst the value of such trials is already recognised, the highest speeds alone produce the conditions from which the maximum of technical value is obtainable.

There is more than a remote possibility that before long the motoring public will become familiar with a touring model developed exactly on the lines of the Grand Prix racer. Meanwhile, the everyday motorist owes a great deal of gratitude to the men who risk so much to make motoring the pleasure and benefit it is to the rest of the community.

SIDE TALK.

By Ruth Cameron.

GET RID OF THE HUSKS.

It was a hot day, the sort of day when desultory chatter is all the exertion one cares to make in the line of conversation. My neighbor's son, a lad of 12, joined his mother and me on the beach.

"I've just been reading a dandy story," he declared, "it was all about a man . . ."

My heart sank. "Now," I thought to myself, "we are in for one of those wordy, garbled tales that are so hard to follow and so uninteresting second hand." But to my surprise, the boy summed up for me in a few carefully chosen words the plot of a most interesting story and he did it so well that I forgot the heat in listening.

After he had left us for a plunge in the breakers I expressed my surprise and pleasure to his mother. "Few grown ups could have done that better. What an unusual gift he has for narration."

She Wanted Some Credit.

"If it is a gift she remarked dryly, 'please give me the credit for presenting it to him.'"

And at my look of inquiry she added: "I suppose you think it strange that I should appear to detract from the compliment you have paid him, but people sometimes fail to realize that traits they admire in a child have doubtless been drilled in with pains and patience by someone at home. Only yesterday the mother of a really disagreeable boy said to me petulantly: 'I don't know what you would do if you had a high string boy like my John to bring up. Your boy has a naturally easy going disposition.' I think I'm the best judge of how natural my boy's 'easy going disposition' is."

"However that's another story. About this matter of narrating well, I determined that my children should not grow up into bores like Coleridge's notorious wedding guest. And so I have taught them to see the point of a story and to take it out and present it neatly like the kernels from a nut. We practice sometimes, evenings, telling stories or anecdotes to each other."

Wasn't that a fine idea?

Grown Ups Need It, Too.

As I thought of it afterward it seemed to me that that mother has given a unique and valuable gift to her children. One which many of us would do well to cultivate even though we are no longer children. Watch yourself and see how many useless shells and husks you can strip from the meat of the facts you are presenting.

One very common "husk" is this, told by Mrs. M.: "The bell rang and when I went to the door and a man was standing there and he said: 'Is this Mrs. M.' and I said: 'Yes, this is Mrs. M.'"

Who else could it be! And yet this absurd preliminary marks many a related incident.

"As I Was Saying To The Wife."

Another superfluous comment is furnished by the man who always advances any opinion with: "I was saying to the wife yesterday . . ." One gets the idea that all his opinions are first "let out on the wife" (an expression that I detect) and the fact adds nothing to his statement.

Unless you are particularly adept at drawing wistful pictures, avoid elaborate descriptions of your new frock. "A lovely, flame colored, clinging fabric," gives a more vivid idea of an evening gown than one would get, lost in the masses of "ruffles up here, and ruffles across there, and funny little what-you-call-ems trimming the girle."

If you would enjoy the reputation of clever raconteur, watch yourself for these redundant and verbose habits of speech.

As my neighbor's son would say: "Make it snappy!"

Germany Gets Russian Grain.

Hamburg, Aug. 22. (A.P.)—Russia has exported 600,000 tons of grain so far this year, according to statistics compiled here, whereof Germany has taken over two-thirds.

Before the war Russia exported about 2,000,000 tons of grain. The entire exports for this year are estimated between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000 tons.

Fads and Fashions.

The founce below the knee breaks the severe straight line most successfully. Many frocks are adopting this form of the circular founce.

There is a possibility that the fur-and-cloth coat will be seen this fall. The blouse is made of the fur and draped skirt of heavy cloth.

Pleatings, panels and ruffles are prominent in the fashion world. Many of the waistlines are normal, and the silhouette continues to be slender.

Ghost Portrait in a Cathedral.

What is the explanation of the ghost portrait of Dean Liddell, the famous Oxford cleric, long since dead which has appeared glowing on the walls in Christ Church Cathedral, Oxford?

The ghost portrait is not "similar" in appearance to the head of the dean. It is an actual likeness.

Other markings on the cathedral walls resemble dead officers of the church. One is said to reproduce the face of a chorister and another the face of a verger. A marble tomb erected in the reign of Charles II. carries the impression of a bearded face.

Two Theories.

Scores of people are visiting the cathedral having read the description of the wall ghost of Dean Liddell in the daily papers. Many of these visitors were from the States.

Every person who is astounded after inspecting the outline on the wall and comparing it with the sculptured statue of Dean Liddell outside the cathedral.

Two explanations of the phenomenon are offered. The first is the easy solution of coincidence. Damp stains coming through the plaster of the wall have formed the head and facial outline of the dean say the people who hold this theory, but it is remarkable that the stains should trace the portrait of Dean Liddell on the wall immediately below a window dedicated to his memory.

The second explanation is that of super-normal influences. This can only be investigated properly by the Psychological Research Society. Many Oxford people believe in this explanation.

Occult Origin.

Many spiritualists are convinced that the ghost portrait has an occult origin. They declare that it is planted there by "thought impressions," either the thought impressions of some one who has "passed over" or of a dead person who has been in that habit of attending services in the cathedral.

An official of the Psychological Research Society discussing the problem said:

"It seems to me, as the portrait has taken time to develop, that it is caused by damp stains, and that the likeness to the dean is simply a coincidence. If the portrait disappeared suddenly and reappeared, I should say that there was evidence of the supernatural."

The idea that the ghost picture has been faded cannot be entertained by any reasonable person who inspects it carefully, as I have done, and who talks with the staid and elderly servitors of the cathedral.

RETROSPECT.

As I sit before my shack, old and jaded, gray and bent, I am always looking back to the years unwisely spent; and I view my winding track, seeing things that I lament. Could I live my life again, all vain follies I'd eschew; and I would not swipe a hen or compound illicit brew; ah, the grief of ancient men when their sinful past they view! All the wrangles and the fights of my dark and stormy past, all the tricks on other nights, come to torture me o' nights; and to make me stand against. Oft I strive to recollect noble actions I have done, actions wise and circumspect, actions shining like the sun, and it spurns me to detect and to round up even one. For my recollection sticks to the things I would forget, to the dark and sinful tricks that an old gent must regret, and my care-worn conscience kicks till it's reeking with its sweat. Happy is the gray haired guy who can sit before his door, looking with a placid eye on the well spent days of yore, all unable to deny deeds that make his spirit sore.

Ayr Dealer's Death.

A POPULAR TOWNSMAN.

Many in town and district would learn with regret of the death of Mr. James Scullion, dealer, the sad event taking place with tragic suddenness at his home, 53 King Street, Ayr, recently. His wife had occasion to go out, leaving her husband in the house alone. In her temporary absence—she was only away half-an-hour—Mr. Scullion had gone to the kitchen where there is a gas cooker, with the object, it is presumed, of boiling some water. What exactly happened can only be conjectured, but it is surmised that in turning on the gas he was seized with sudden illness and was overcome with the fumes. The pan with the water in it had been placed in position over the burner. On her return Mrs. Scullion was shocked to find her husband seated close to the cooker, with his head resting upon it, and evidently in a state of collapse. Dr. White was summoned with all speed, and did everything he could to restore animation, but without avail.

Deceased, who was 53 years of age, was a well known and popular figure in town. Despite a somewhat gruff manner he was a kindly hearted man, and always ready to help the underdog. For many years he was closely identified with sport, and the turmoil of the market place and the race-course appealed to him. He invariably kept a good stepping horse, and he was in his element when showing off its paces. The funeral, which took place to Ayr Cemetery, was largely attended.

Much sympathy has been expressed for his widow and family in their sad bereavement.—Ayrshire Post.

A Natural Consequence.

No one knows better that Lord Birkenhead to tell a good story. One that he is fond of relating concerns a predecessor of his in the Lord Chancellorship, whose dinners to the Bar were notorious alike for the scarceness of the meat and the scantiness of the wine.

On one occasion (says Lord Birkenhead) he was entertaining a select company of legal luminaries, when he became aware that a section of the party at the end of the table remote from where he was sitting was showing signs of unusual conviviality.

"They seem rather jolly down there," said the pleased Lord Chancellor to his neighbour, "I wonder what it's all about?"

On His Own Side.

Sir Henry Robinson, Bart., who served for over forty years in various administrative posts in Ireland, tells some good stories of the happy-go-lucky methods of Irish hotel proprietors.

Thus, the landlord of one famous house, much resorted to by English tourists, when making out a guest's bill, would say:

"How much whisky did ye drink since Thursday last? Will I put ye down for a bottle or maybe a bottle and a half?"

"Certainly not," the guest would say, "I never had any at all."

"Then I'll put ye down for a bottle of claret, will I?"

"Do nothing of the kind. I've had not nothing but a little ginger stout occasionally.

"Well, we'll make it a dose each, eh?"

Amazing Appetites.

Our forefathers seem to have been mighty men, who thought nothing of riding 100 miles a day or of performing feats of pedestrianism from which we would shrink. Is it possible that we are becoming more feeble because we do not eat enough?

Even fifty years ago meals were far more hearty than they are now—none has only to read Dickens to realize this. Our grandfathers would have felt starved on the diet that most of us find sufficient.

But if we go back a few centuries we find appetites that seem amazing. Louis XIV. of France, who had the reputation of being a very moderate trencherman, used to breakfast off four cutlets, a whole chicken, four or five eggs, and some ham.

The records of a dinner given by Henry VIII. show that each guest consumed nearly half a stone of food. The fish course alone included sole, salmon, pike, barbel (now considered quite unfit for food), mullet, and sturgeon.

Catherine de Medici offered her guests a feast in 1545 at which the roasts alone—there were a dozen other courses—consisted of peacocks, bustards, pheasants, capons, herons, swans, cranes, geese, hares, rabbits, deer, pigs, quails and ducks.

Dining With a Donkey.

An Italian is creating a sensation in Rome by treating a donkey as his companion. He has even taken it to a restaurant to dine with him. The lucky animal enjoyed four cocktails, two portions of asparagus, some "fruit" cheese, and three apples.

A barber in Toronto has a unique pair of pets. They are walking perch, natives of India and Egypt. If its home stream dries up, this fish will flop across the land to the next water supply. It has been known to travel eighteen miles in this way.

The barber's pets often leave their aquarium and take a "constitutional" to the shop door. They wriggle along by means of their fins, just as a seal would.

Scientists often "chum up" with unlikely friends. One experiment with a flea, which became quite attached to its owner, whom it would never bite.

Lord Avebury had a pet wamp which is now preserved in the British Museum. It would feed out of the scientist's hand.

Living Through Fire.

Nature devises amazing ways of enabling her children to survive extraordinary hardships. None of her inventions has more wonderful powers of endurance than the seed by means of which plant life is carried on.

You may suspect certain seeds of hours to a temperature of 100 degrees below freezing point, you may heat them until they are hot enough to burn your hand, yet they will not lose their vitality.

In America huge fires sometimes race through the forests, destroying mile after mile of giant trees. Where the fire has passed there remain nothing apparently but charred stumps and flame-scared, smouldering soil.

Yet within a few months the whole district will be green with the first leaves of tiny seedling trees.

When tests were made recently to discover the heat at ground-level during a forest fire, it was found that it was from 1,000 to 1,500 degrees Fahrenheit. The fire moves so quickly that this intense heat lasts only for a minute or less at any spot.

Various tree seeds were then tried to see what heat they could resist. It was found that fir cones could withstand a temperature of 1,200 degrees Fahrenheit for eight minutes without losing their vitality.

Singing to the Jury.

An odd method of settling lawsuits is practised by some of the remoter tribes of Eskimos.

When two natives wish to settle a dispute, each collects his family and friends to assist him. The parties meet at an agreed time in the biggest hut in the village, and proceed to sing literally at each other.

The plaintiff's party chant a series of rough verses insulting the defendant and everything that is his. Then comes the rival party's turn, and for the next hour or so they are allowed to sing at their enemy, putting their insults into some sort of metre.

The old man of the village act as judge and jury, and the verdict is given to the side which, in the opinion of the aged experts, has comprised the largest amount of insult into the best verse and the most noise!

Co-Operation in Poultry Marketing.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 22.—As the result of a co-operative marketing scheme among poultry raisers of southwestern Manitoba, a car load lot of 2,600 live hens has been sent to Montreal, and if the experiment shipment proves successful further car lots will be dispatched. The initial shipment was assembled by A. C. McCulloch, of the poultry division of the Dominion Livestock branch, assisted by T. T. Clyde, also of the department, with the object of proving whether or not the shipment of old birds, alive, to distant markets is practical. The birds were shipped in a car specially fitted for the transportation of live fowl. Mr. McCulloch states that it was found that the poultry raisers of the southwest section of the province, realizing the necessity of cutting old hens, and poor egg producers, if they are to secure the best results from their efforts, displayed such a desire to take part in the shipment that hundreds of birds have already been secured for the next car lot.

A Petrol Brush for Cleaning Clothes.

As is well known, brushing with a brush dipped in petrol, benzine, or similar substance is a most effective way of cleaning clothes, provided the spirit into which the brush is dipped is not itself made dirty in the process. To obviate this possible difficulty, a brush has been invented which is combined with a container for the spirit. A simple valve device allows the petrol or benzine to flow gently down the bristles as the brush is used. Made of a white metal alloy, the container is polished, is fitted with a screw-stopper, and is leak-proof; the whole appliance is as convenient to handle as an ordinary clothes-brush. Apart from the convenience of this device, there is no loss owing to evaporation from an open dish into which an ordinary brush would be dipped, while the price is little higher than for a brush of equal quality without the container.

PECULIAR FACTS AND FIGURES.

A new gunpowder has been invented which is smokeless, flashless, and waterproof.

The worker bee lives six months, the drone four months, and the female bee four years.

The Thames at Charing Cross contains a proportion of salt water for several hours at each high tide.

Although some kinds of fungus are imbued with a deadly poison, no insect or bird ever falls a victim to them.

In the last ten years, 10,000 men and women have been killed in accidents in London streets, and over 100,000 have been injured.

Finger-prints of criminals are sent by telegraph all over Italy by a simple invention, involving the use of from 300 to 400 numbered squares.

In a Surrey school on the Downs within twenty miles of London, not one out of sixty pupils had seen a tramcar, a bridge, or a running stream.

Rosewood and mahogany are plentiful in Mexico that many copper mines are timbered with rosewood, and mahogany is used for locomotive fuel.

A fish found in Brazil has neither a tail fin for propulsion nor a back fin for balancing it; it swims at great speed by means of a rippling movement of its large, lower fin.

A record of safety in railway travelling was established last year, when only five passengers were killed in accidents out of a total of 1,188,479,000 carried by the railways—or one in 200 millions.

London has several underground rivers, one of them being known as the Tigris. This is supposed to have been a ditch, widened by Canute to enable Danish vessels to sail round the fortifications of the Thames to Kennington.

What is a Royal Commission?

This is the name that we give to a special committee appointed to inquire into some matter of public interest. Conditions of labour and of the housing of the poor have both been subjects of inquiry by commissions.

For such a purpose Parliament sometimes appoints a Select Committee or a Statutory Commission (which has legal power to summon its witnesses and hear them on oath) or some Department of the Government, such as the Ministry of Labour, may hold a Departmental Committee.

Another method is for either House of Parliament to petition the Crown to issue a Royal Commission to some representative body of persons to conduct the inquiry.

They would not be paid, though under special circumstances compensation is allowed. Expenses would be borne by vote of Parliament, and clerical assistance, typewriters, and you use the right amount of sugar in proportion to the amount of pectin. Too little sugar makes tough jelly, while too much will make it soft.

The addition of about a half cupful of small seedless raisins to a panful of fudge is appreciated for the fruity flavor they give, and for the fact that they counteract the cloying sweetness.

Straw braid will bend more easily without breaking and will lie more smoothly on the hat frame, if, before sewing it on, you draw it through a cloth dampened with water and wrung dry.

Red raspberries often turn an unsightly looking purple when they are mixed with whipped or flavoured cream; when they do so, squeeze in a few drops of lemon juice, and the red color of the fruit will return.

Cocoa tapoca cream is an unusually good dessert. To one pint of boiling water add one pint of milk; bring to boiling point and add three-quarter cupful of instantaneous tapoca and one-quarter cupful of cocoa mixed with two-thirds cupful of sugar and a few grains of salt. Cook until the tapoca is translucent; add one-quarter cupful of marshmallow cream, chill, and serve.

THE COMMON PATH.
Oh, I shall travel out to-day
And tread a well-worn lane,
I shall walk a long-familiar way
Out there and back again;
But though I know the path I go,
To-day, perchance, I'll see
Somewhere a new-born rose aglow
To cheer the heart of me.

I know the men that I shall meet,
I know the women, too,
I've met them all upon the street,
They're old but ever new;
And it may be a child shall smile
At me along the way,
Or someone, e'er I've gone a mile,
A cheerful word shall say.

Perhaps the sun shall light a tree
With some new touch of flame—
Although this path is old to me,
It's never just the same;
And I may meet a stranger there
Who'll ask the time of day,
Or hear a hand upon the air
As soldiers march away.

I know the buildings, one by one,
The corners where they turn,
But always as I wander on
There's something new to learn:
And when I leave my door behind,
Whatever the day may be,
There's always something new to find
And something new to see.

Celebrated Soprano Soloist at the Nickel.

MISS MARGARET FREER FAMOUS THROUGHOUT AMERICA.

Miss Margaret Freer, celebrated Soprano, who commences an engagement at the Nickel to-day, has had an enviable career in the world of music. Miss Freer has sung for the Edison Disc Re-creation Record and Columbia Record and although we have not heard her before on a local stage, many people will remember hearing her in their favorite selections on the Gramophone. One of her famous ballads for the record is "I Know What It Is to Feel Lonesome" and many others too numerous to mention.

Miss Freer has sung in all the principal cities of Canada and America, and her beautiful voice has won fame for her in every city in which she has appeared. Her selections for her opening are: (a) "My Heart At Thy Sweet Voice"; (b) "Love Sends a Little Gift of Roses"; (c) "Kiss Me Again." Miss Freer will sing each afternoon at 4 and evening at 9 o'clock.

British Columbia Tourist Traffic Worth $30,000,000.

Victoria. — British Columbia has reached the peak of the biggest tourist season in her history, and it is estimated that as a result of the enormous travel and the expenditure of transients while in the province this summer will be worth at least $30,000,000 to B. C.

With the tourist season just nicely under way, representatives of Vancouver commercial organizations, estimated that $10,000,000 had been brought into that city alone as a result of the tourist business. Victoria is sharing bounteously in the tourist development and as an indication of the growing volume of this business, three new ferry steamships have been added to the fleets plying between Vancouver Island and the Washington state mainland.

The tourist business in this province has been referred to as a gold mine, but no gold mine ever yielded as heavily as the tourist crop is doing this year. Last year the total mineral production of the province was approximately $35,000,000. If the $30,000,000 estimate of the amount of money brought into the province and left here during the season by tourists is an accurate one, the tourist business may be rated as among the three biggest industries of British Columbia.

Advertising Pays.

Persistent advertising in the territory where most of the travel originates—in eastern centres of population, on the prairies, and latterly in Southern California—is regarded as responsible for the rapidly swelling tourist tide into this part of the country. The increased use of the motor car as a means of holiday travel has been another important contributing factor and there are many cars touring British Columbia highways carrying number plates of California, Florida, Colorado and other distant states. When the provincial government completes the link in the trans-provincial highway between Hope and Princeton it is expected that the motor travel from the Canadian prairies will be enormously increased.

Railroads Co-operate.

The railroads are assisting with national advertising, and in almost every city in the province organizations have been formed, supported largely by the municipal governments whose function it is to distribute literature advertising their particular communities from the scenic, climatic and other standpoints of interest to the tourist and prospective permanent resident. The provincial government has been asked to set aside an annual grant of $500,000 a year for publicity purposes, but no action has so far been taken.

The Pacific Northwest Tourist Association, which acted for the province of British Columbia and the states of Washington and Oregon, backed financially by the three governments, collapsed this year as a result of the refusal of the Oregon Senate to appropriate the required amount. Oregon has now initiated a publicity campaign of its own on an extensive scale, and Washington and British Columbia are expected to act accordingly in order that the momentum created by the former organization may not die.

British Columbia's experience is that the majority of the tourists return year after year and that a large proportion of them form the intention while touring the province of vice.

Clinching an Argument.

Carlton, the well-known comic conjurer, was arguing with a fellow member in his club the other day. The subject of the argument was which sense is the more to be valued—the sense of taste or the sense of smell. Carlton said "taste," the other man plumped for "smell."

"Use me a double whisky," he commanded. The waiter brought it. Halting the glass to his lips, Carlton swallowed the contents at a gulp, and then, with an eloquent gesture in the direction of his opponent, passed over the empty glass with the laconic remark:

"Now smell it!"

working on this case for years," said Mr. Easton, "but they have always met with a put-off like my letter from the Dutch Consul. There is no record in New York of a decision in New York in favor of the heirs, but there is no record of a decision against them. The thing has hung fire for lack of documents.

"I have now got the documents," he added, tapping his portfolio. "People in the States have been on the wrong tack. Many of the American claimants trace back to Annika Jans' third marriage. That is too remote a claim. The Webbers are the only people who can prove this thing."

There is an estate. That is proved by the trustee's declaration that they will give an accounting only to the bona fide heirs. The difficulty so far has been to distinguish the genuine from the spurious claimant. Mr. Easton's importance in this genealogical mystery is that his researches have narrowed the field down to the Webbers.

Is No Visionary.

Mr. Easton is not a visionary. There are few people who would show so calm a pulse as he, in a matter involving nearly 700 millions of dollars. He displays none of the fever usually associated with a gold rush. He works steadily at his trade as an interior decorator, but all his spare time, and energy is devoted to the unravelling of this 200-year-old mystery.

(We have received a communication which would make it appear that some of the descendants are or were at some time resident in Nfld.—Ed.)

"Billy," said the teacher, "what does c-a-t spell?"

"Don't know, sir," said Billy.

"What does your mother keep to catch mice?"

"Trap, sir."

"No, no, what animal is very fond of milk?"

"The baby, sir."

"You stupid, what was it that scratched your sister's face?"

"My nails, sir."

The teacher by now was somewhat out of patience and gave one last and final try, exclaiming, "Do you see that animal on the fence? Then tell me what does c-a-t spell?"

"Kitten," sir.

FUSSY WITH YOUR TRY-ON?

We care not a jot, because we are fussy too. We won't let a suit go out of our shop that is not just so in every seam and line, every pocket and button. We realize that our reputation as tailors depends upon your personal satisfaction.

Wallace Silverware.

Is your Table Silver as good to-day as when you bought it?

Have you noticed that at the parts most exposed to wear, the silver has become worn?

Do you think this condition of your Silver is in keeping with your idea of a well appointed table?

Then why not, when you decide on replacing your old ware, give place to it with the "Wallace" Brand, the Silver that refuses to wear and is guaranteed without time limit.

Start with the Tea Spoons and gradually complete your Set with the one pattern—there are several for you to choose from and the price is very moderate.

Tea Spoons cost $5.00 for a Dozen.
