The Imprisoned Heiress —OR— The Spectre of Egremont.

CHAPTER XVI.

"I will not go, however, until I see him," she murmured. "I will not betray mamma's secret, but I must see Lionel. What shall I do?"

A glance at the curtained windows decided her. With a feet step she crossed the floor, raised the heavy damask curtains, and stepped into the embrasure of the window.

The curtains had scarcely fallen to their former position when the door of the room softly opened and a head peered in. Aimee could see it through the edge of the lace drapery bordering the damask which concealed her, and she could hardly repress a shriek at the sight.

It was not the head of Lord or Lady Egremont, or of any one she had ever seen.

It was unmistakably the head of a man, with flaxen hair, cut close and surmounted by a cloth cap. Aimee saw that his face was covered with a mask, an article she had never before seen, and which terrified her exceedingly.

This strange head moved about as if surveying the room, and the next moment the door opened wider, a bulky form entering the apartment.

The door was then closed. Aimee shrank back farther into the recess, fearful lest the terrible being should discover her.

She remembered the words of the countess, that if she ventured outside her own rooms, or betrayed the secret of her identity, a horrible fate was in store for her.

Perhaps, thought the innocent maiden, this terrible object, with its pink, immovable face, its wide, ghastly mouth, its cavernous eyes, was her enemy, from whom she had been all her life so carefully guarded.

How she wished now that she had heeded the warning of Lady Egremont.

But the masked intruder did not approach the windows, although once or twice poor Aimee thought his eyes encountered hers.

He crossed the floor, peered into the bedroom, and then boldly entered the inner chamber.

Aimee slightly moved her position, continuing to watch him, lest he should spring upon her unawares.

The next movement, however, seemed to her decidedly trivial.

He went to the dressing-table, upon which lay a profusion of scent-cases and trinkets, and took up a cut-glass carafe, which was filled with drinking water. Taking off the tumbler that covered it, he took from his pocket a small vial containing a colorless liquid, which he commenced pouring into the carafe, holding the latter up against the light.

This operation was somewhat retarded by his constant glances at the door, but was finally accomplished to his satisfaction, and he then restored the article as he had found them.

Then with an audible chuckle, this strange being swiftly crossed the floor to the hall, looked out cautiously as if to assure himself that no one would intercept him, and then drew his head back with a muttered malediction.

He instantly reclosed the door, and looked about him, as Aimee had done for a hiding-place.

How the young girl's heart throbbed then.

He took a step toward the window in which she was secreted, and then darted toward the other, which was nearer the door, and enounced himself behind the curtains.

With difficulty, Aimee repressed the shriek that arose to her lips.

She believed that the masked intruder was there for no good purpose, but whether he meant harm to her—or to Lord Ashcroft, she could not decide.

She scarcely dared to breathe lest he should hear her.

A few minutes thus passed, and then the door opened, and Lord Ashcroft appeared on the threshold.

He had lingered in the corridor to bid his sister good-night, and to be of good courage, and he now paused until he had heard her lock her door, and then entered his parlor.

He did not sit down immediately, but walked to and fro, unconscious that two pairs of eyes were fixed upon him—one pair that might have belonged to an angel beaming love upon him, the other pair glowing like a demon's with hatred.

His lordship did not look as happy as his evening's tête-à-tête with his betrothed would have warranted. On the contrary, he looked sad and troubled, and Aimee's heart sympathized with him.

He seated himself by the fire at length, and covered his face with his hands.

Aimee divided her attention between him and the object of her fears.

Lord Ashcroft sank into a reverie, and the maiden soon observed the fluttering of the curtains at the other window, and then saw the masked intruder step down from his seat and steal toward the door.

His feet were encased in twick flannel stockings, and his movements were very still, so it was scarcely to be wondered at that Lord Ashcroft was not aroused.

He opened the door softly, glided into the corridor, and then closed the door behind him.

The faint noise made in closing it attracted Lord Ashcroft, and he raised his head and looked in that direction.

Seeing no one, and hearing nothing more, he easily persuaded himself that the sound was only a fancy on his part, and he did not cover his face again.

Leaning back in his chair, he thought of the specter he had seen in his room, and wished that he might see it again. He had thought of it continually since his visit to the portrait-gallery. Although condemning himself for what he deemed his folly and unreasonableness, the saintly beauty of the "specter" had inspired him with a distaste for the material charms of the heiress, and more than once he uttered the vain wish that he had lived a century before.

One thing he had resolved upon—to obtain, if possible, a copy of Lady Jasmine's portrait.

Whether the ghost had really appeared to him, or whether he had simply experienced an extraordinary illusion, he knew not. That the apparition was a living, breathing girl, he had scarcely suspected. And yet he had felt no fear at beholding what, as he was half inclined to believe, was the ghost of a murdered lady—nothing of that fear ghosts are popularly supposed to inspire.

The romance in his nature had been raised into activity and charmed by an occurrence that seemed to him so unparalleled, and he now mused:

"I wish she would appear to me again—the Lady Jasmine."

Aimee heard the faintly-expressed wish, and a flush stole into her cheeks and a happy look into her innocent eyes.

"The glorious embodiment of more than my wildest dreams!" continued Lord Ashcroft, sighing.

There was a fluttering of the curtains, and she stood before him, yet at a little distance.

More than ever ethereal and angelic as she looked, there was a glow and flush about her, a steady luster in her dreamy eyes, and a tender smile about the lips, that made her appear as if born of some lovely sunset or sunrise, instead of being the apparition of the dead.

If Lord Ashcroft had been touched and charmed by her in her sad and distressed mood, he was absolutely entranced now.

He feared to move or speak lest he should frighten from him the lovely vision. His gaze, though full of wild surprise, was so expressive of admiration and delight, that Aimee's eyes drooped with sweet confusion, and she moved uneasily.

"Do not go!" cried Lord Ashcroft. "Stay a little longer, I beseech you!"

The maiden lifted her head, put up her hand with a warning gesture, and then approached the table by which he sat, laid her little miniature portrait upon it, and retreated to her former position.

The young nobleman was bewildered by this movement, but put out his hand and grasped the picture.

His delight on discovering what it portrayed may be imagined.

He looked at it earnestly, and said: "Aimee! Yes, she might well have been 'beloved'!"

He pressed it to his lips, then put it in his bosom, fastening the ribbon to it around his neck.

The maiden smiled beamingly upon him, pleased because he seemed to prize her portrait, and then her sweet tender voice said:

"I am not a specter, Lord Ashcroft. I am not the Lady Jasmine. I am only Aimee."

"Only Aimee!" repeated his lordship, still further bewildered.

"Yes, that is all!" she assented. "I look like the Lady Jasmine, but I am flesh and blood. See!"

She glided toward him and placed one tiny hand upon his own.

He prisoned it in his strong clasp, assuring himself by its trembling, bird-like flutter that it was a human hand.

Recovering his self-possession, he released the tiny hand, arose to his feet, and addressed her courteously and smilingly.

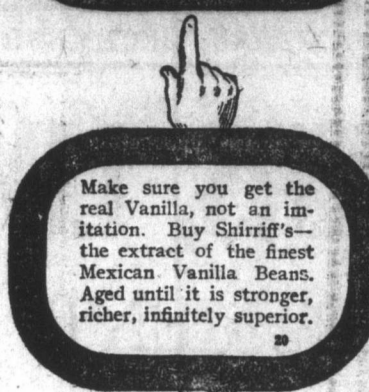

"I see how mistaken I have been. Despite my better judgment, I fancied you a specter. I suppose you have been tempted, by your resemblance to the Lady Jasmine, to enact a little masquerade. You must allow me to congratulate you upon your success. Are you visiting at Egremont?"

Aimee was too embarrassed for a moment to reply. In fact, she hardly knew how to answer without imperiling the secret she did not herself understand.

"N-no. I am not visiting here," she replied, truthfully enough.

Fashion Notes

POSES ON FURS.

This winter every smart woman is wearing on her fur stole or wrap a posy of real or artificial flowers.

Some curious materials are used to make the latter blooms. Very clever reproductions of lilies, for instance, are composed of white fur. Pink camellias, orange nasturtiums, multi-hued sweetpeas and quaint miniature Early Victorian nosegays are formed of velvet, ribbon, leather, suede, tinsel, or feathers.

A composition resembling porcelain is also used to make attractive buttonholes.

Most of the artificial posies are realistically scented.

The fashion for wearing artificial flowers has extended to footwear. The latest evening shoes are ornamented with mammoth blossoms of crinkled silk.

Points for Smart Women. "Skeleton" shoes of silver or coloured tinsel braid are fashionable evening footwear.

The newest dressing or rest gown is a very richly-coloured affair, being made of multi-hued chenille-patterned georgette lined with silk.

Smart "house woggles" this winter are in jumper-coat design expressed in cashmere in Jacquard designs.

100,000 Pounds for a New Cruiser

The Appropriation Bill authorizes the Government to spend £100,000 towards the cost of an additional cruiser for the New Zealand Navy, making the naval expenditure £120,000 a year.

During the debate Mr. Wilford, leader of the Opposition, said the Singapore base was essential for safety, as the Japanese were steadily moving their base towards Australia and New Zealand.

Mr. Massey, the Prime Minister, said he had not forgotten the services of Japan in the war, but New Zealand must do her share towards the defence of the Empire. War would come whether New Zealand liked it or not.

New Zealand responsibilities now ranged from Nauru Island to the Ross Sea, and the British Government asked the Dominion to take control of Samoa.

Zinovieff Letter is Declared Authentic.

Admiral Jellicoe Retires -- Lady Astor's Portrait in Westminster Causes a Dilemma -- Lloyd George's Oratory Still Commands Attention.

ZINOVIEFF LETTER AUTHENTIC.
LONDON, Dec. 10.
Prime Minister Baldwin stated in the House of Commons to-day that the sub-committee of the Cabinet, after examining all evidence put before it, had come to the unanimous decision that there was no doubt the Zinovieff propaganda letter was authentic.

THE LIBERAL AMENDMENT.
LONDON, Dec. 10.
The Liberal Parliamentary party's official amendment to the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne will express regret that the speech does not mention the Conservative proposals for dealing with unemployment problems and that it foreshadows the introduction of tariffs and preferences which will increase the burden of taxation, raise prices and increase the cost of living, hamper industry and reduce employment.

NEW GERMAN MAN-OF-WAR.
KIEL, Germany, Dec. 10.
The first German man-of-war constructed since the war is nearing completion here; a small cruiser 6,000 tons and is to be launched in the spring.

THE SILVER TONGUED ORATOR.
LONDON, Dec. 10.
Those who heard the debate in the House of Commons last night on the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne, though differing in political complexion, are practically agreed that in holding the attention of the House Lloyd George has had little if any of his power, whether the popularity in the country is overclouded or not.

AIRPLANE DISASTER.
SAN DIEGO, Cal., Dec. 10.
Three Navy airmen dead, two missing and three badly burned was the result of a tail spin and drop into the ocean of a United States Navy airplane at the entrance to San Diego Harbor this morning.

THE ASTOR PORTRAIT.
LONDON, Dec. 10.
An amazing dilemma has arisen over the disposition of Lady Astor's portrait which hangs on one of the staircases of the House of Commons; The picture was presented to Parliament by Lord Astor with the approval of a former Government, but Parliament has found it undesirable as a matter of principle that pictures or statues of living persons should be displayed there.

WILLIAMS HAS IMPERSONATOR.
FREDERICTON, Dec. 10.
Harry D. Williams, charged with the murder of his two half-nieces, Cynthia Foster, 14, and her 10 year old sister, Nedra, at Fosterville, appeared in the police court at 1 o'clock this afternoon, before Judge Walter Limerick, together with his impersonator, William Henry Chamberlain, ex-convict, who was arrested in the city while intimating he was Williams and was remanded for preliminary hearing on Tuesday next at 10 a.m.

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

DOES THE OFFICE BOY WRITE THEM?

I often wonder what members of the manufacturing department write the directions that go with various articles for household use.

Sometimes it seems to me it must be the office boy. But perhaps I libel him. Office boys are frequently quite bright.

I know who I think ought to write them. Some woman with enough intelligence to know what women would want to know about them and enough literary capacity to be able to say clearly on paper what she means.

She should first be told to do the thing she is to give the directions for, and then to translate her experience into directions. And she should be specially instructed not only to tell the steps to take, but also to tell the hazards to avoid and the difficulties that are likely to arise.

Those Hateful Tasks.

I have just been doing one of those long dreaded but inevitable household tasks. I have rewicked an oil stove. I dug the directions out of the little pigeon hole into which all such documents are carefully put (I used to be one of those people who look vainly all over the house for directions when the time comes that they are needed but I reformed two or three years ago much to my own and family's joy) and set about it. The directions were much better than most things of the sort. But I think they could be improved. For at one point in the proceeding you have to exert a heavy pressure. It doesn't seem right to you that it should be so heavy and you hesitate and think you must have done something else wrong. Now there is where the writer of the directions should say: "You will have to press very hard." Then you would know that you were doing the right thing.

Let a Woman Tell Other Women.

If I were getting any article out on the market for women's use, I should certainly engage an intelligent woman to tell other women what they ought to know to get the best use out of it. I might let the advertising man re-write her copy if necessary but she should furnish the substance of it.

Another idea along this line that I have long had is for a cook book to be written by a woman who knows a great deal about cooking, in collaboration with a woman who knows nothing about it. The first woman would supply the knowledge and the second the ignorance. The first would supply the recipes and the second would try them out, asking the questions that would naturally come to a woman who was learning to cook, and the other would answer them and put the answers into the recipe:

"What do you mean by 'washing the butter'?" "How do you 'reduce cold consommé' so that it shall be jellylike in consistency?" etcetera.

Not For the Born Cooks.

Doubtless the beginner would make some failures, and warnings from these would be incorporated in the book. Once when I was very young I made a new dish right three times running and the fourth time spoiled it. Out of that experience I achieved this piece of philosophy: "You never really know how to cook anything until you have spoiled it once."

Oh yes, I know there are certain born cooks who lead charmed lives and never spoil anything. But this cook book would be for the opposite kind of people—the kind who are pretty sure to do the wrong thing unless they are warned away from it.

Wesley Y. M. L. C.

Quite a few members braved the elements on Tuesday evening last to attend the weekly debate of the Wesley Young Men's Literary Class. The following was the Resolution debated: "That circumstances sometimes justify a departure from the Truth." The set speakers were: Affirmative, T. H. Davis and E. Bursey; Negative, W. Whitemarsh and J. Rooney.

The affirmative contended that modern times and methods plus world conditions sometimes demanded guile for guile, nay that under certain extreme circumstances it was absolutely essential to the welfare of mankind that the truth be departed from at the moment. They cited the Diplomatic Service, Spy System in warfare, the use of bluff under extreme circumstances during rebellion in order to avoid bloodshed. The affirmative warned the meeting that the negative would no doubt exaggerate. They the affirmative were not contending that deceit should take the place of truth, that we should be always liars, that we should be dishonest, weak and immoral; but that under certain circumstances which only came at rare intervals, under exceptional circumstances only, is one justified in departing from the truth.

The negative side argued: That truth is the standard of life, the foundation of every virtue. Truth is a principle of right and that even a liar will admit that the truth is Right. Truth is what the Saints and Martyrs died for. That a departure from the truth is a lie. That a lie is an evil and a sin. That a liar is in danger of losing his soul. Evil and sin cannot be justified under any circumstances. To be untruthful is to be immoral and weak. Immorality cannot be tolerated under any circumstances.

Both sides of the question were well debated by the set speakers and also by several speakers from the floor. On the vote being taken the negative side won by a small majority. The next meeting of the Class will be held on Tuesday, December 16th, at 7.45, and the subject of the debate will be Resolved: "That a man is a creature of his environment." A large attendance of members is requested at this meeting, and all visitors will receive a cordial welcome.

Suit Arises From Burning Smyrna

TEST CASE TAKEN AGAINST INSURANCE COMPANY FOR $2,000,000.

LONDON, Dec. 3.—Whether the Smyrna holocaust in 1922 during the hostilities between the Turks and the Greeks was the result of an act of war or was an accidental one, which might occur in any Eastern city, is a legal point upon which hinges the disposition of the suit brought by the American Tobacco Company against the Guardian Assurance Company for $2,000,000, representing insured property destroyed, which came up for trial in the commercial court to-day.

The action is in the nature of a test case to determine the liability of insurance companies arising out of the fire, and it is estimated that it is all the sum of nearly $20,000,000 is involved.

Counsel for the plaintiffs in opening the case took the position that the fire was an ordinary accidental one, coming entirely within the provisions of the ordinary commercial fire inurance policies, but that the blaze was later fanned by the wind and gradually spread until it eventually destroyed a large portion of the city.

Jarvis Will Command Lipton Yacht

SIR THOMAS VISITED THE CANADIAN FINANCIER IN TORONTO JAIL.

TORONTO, Nov. 30.—Aemilius Jarvis, sr., famous Canadian yachtsman, has promised Sir Thomas Lipton that he will take command of Lipton's yacht which will be entered for the America Cup classic off Sandy Hook in 1928. Jarvis is now serving six months in jail following his conviction on charges of conspiracy to defraud the Province in connection with the sale of bonds handled by the Jarvis firm for the Province of Ontario. The interview between the two yachtsmen, who are friends of long standing, took place at the jail farm Saturday. It lasted about two hours. Sir Thomas stated afterwards that he had Jarvis' word of honor that he would sail the challenger in 1928. Lipton added that he had tried many times to get Jarvis to sail his yachts in the International Races. The class of yachts to be built for Lipton's next effort to wrest the America Cup from the United States was discussed Saturday morning. Lipton said that the schooner class of craft was favored at present, but no decision had been made.

Lipton said that nothing could convince him that his friend was guilty of the offence for which he is in jail.

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—John Westwood, secretary to Sir Thomas Lipton, to-day denied the report that the British sportsman had arranged with Aemilius Jarvis, sr., of Toronto, a prisoner at the jail farm there, to act as skipper of his next America's Cup challenger. Mr. Westwood said he was "authorized to state that there is no foundation whatever in the report." He said that Sir Thomas had seen Jarvis but had made no arrangement with him.

MAY McAVOY TRIUMPHS IN EMOTIONAL APPEAL.

Picture lovers will find a real treat in "Everything For Sale," in which May McAvoy, lately elevated to stardom by Realart Pictures is being shown to-day at the Majestic Theatre. May McAvoy has won her spurs because of an ability to gain from a role its last modicum of heart interest; because of a face that is marvelously expressive, and a personality which is at all times simple and natural. In fact perhaps the nicest thing ever said about this little miss is that "one does not think of the actress at work—but of a real girl and her trials and tribulations as revealed on the screen."

Miss McAvoy's recent releases have given her parts of more or less "typical significance." "Grisel" of "Sentimental Tommy" was a wistful Scotch child; "Jeanne" of "A Private Scandal," a shy French refugee.

To show that the star's range extends far beyond this type of work, Realart is now presenting her in "Everything For Sale," a modern society drama with an underlying motif of appeal to ninety-nine people out of one hundred.

Miss McAvoy appears as Helen Watnwright, a girl fresh from finishing school who is confronted with the age-old problem of marriage for love—or for money.

The heroine's reactions to this important question are made especially entertaining by a series of intensely dramatic episodes, including an exciting sequence in which the hero was actually battered into unconsciousness by the buffeting he received against wave-swept rocks.

Readers are invited to read the Majestic advertisement in which the cast and a synopsis of this great picture is published.

MILLEY'S

The Bible in a New Dress

And Very Ugly and Unnecessary—Garden of Eden a "Park."

"The Old Testament," of which the first volume (Genesis to Esther) in a new translation by Dr. James Moffatt, Professor of Church History in the United Free Church College, Glasgow, is published, is the outcome of a continuous effort that is being made to persuade the people that they do not understand the language they learnt at their mother's knee—an assumption we believe to be the direct contrary of the fact. The further assumption that the Bible will be read more than it is if it is put into—as Dr. Moffatt is pleased to characterize his translation—"effective and intelligible English" is also, we believe, entirely without foundation. We have never heard of anyone who wished to read the Bible and was repelled because he could not understand it.

Noah's Ark a Barge!
And has any child been discovered who found a Noah's Ark "unintelligible?" Yet Dr. Moffatt will have it a barge. Imagine a child crying for its Noah's Barge. And is there anything particularly obscure or difficult to realize in a "Garden of Eden"? Presumably so; at any rate, Dr. Moffatt proceeds to make it perfectly intelligible by calling it a "park."

Take a couple of familiar passages and see how Dr. Moffatt makes them "effective":

Old Version. The beauty of Israel is slain upon thy high places: how are heroes, alas! fallen the mighty fallen!	Dr. Moffatt. On your battlefields the slain are lying and heroes, alas! fallen low.

Saul and Jonathan were lovely and pleasant in their lives, and in their death they were not divided.	Saul and Jonathan were lovely and loved in life or in death.
--	--

In each of the above-named verses in the old Version there is a sentence which has become part of our common, daily speech. Yet Dr. Moffatt has found them unintelligible and cut them out.

Yapid.
Of course if there really are people who can accept this singularly rapid rendering of the organ-music of the great Hebrew books as "more effective and intelligible," and, as Dr. Moffatt hopes, also "more interesting perhaps and less obscure" than the "Version" authorized by James I., there is nothing more to be said.

But it will be a Spartan choice. For of the stately and fragrance of the "English tongue" into which the Authorized Version was rendered more than 300 hundred years ago to the delight of successive generations scarce a fragment or a trace survives in Dr. Moffatt's translation.

Why does not Dr. Moffatt "translate" Shakespeare? Presumably that also is no longer "intelligible," since the "Swan of Avon" and the old translators of the Bible flourished and wrote at the same time.—Daily Mail.

Rebecca West in Vienna

Miss Rebecca West has been to Australia and describes her experiences in the Sunday Times. The first article is headed, "So This is Peace." "Vienna," she says, "is a lugubrious city. It must in the past have been a wonderful city. How wonderful one realized at a performance of 'Der Rosenkavalier' at the Opera, which must have made the stars sing together, so marvellous was it that imperfect man should have produced anything so perfect. But to-day its streets are shabby, and full of languid gossip about misery. The great tragedies are over, of course; starvation, suicide, and so on have cleared the boards of the absolutely resourceless. But there are still an abundance of stories that make the gooseflesh come."

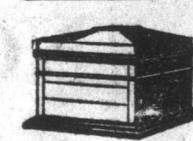

"There was a Civil Servant's widow I heard of, such an elderly lady as in this country would have her little flat in West Kensington, and be very happy at five o'clock with her tea and locket and purring pussy. Nowadays her pension amounts to thirty shillings a month. She is an inmate of an old lady's home. Twice a week they have a little, just a little, frozen meat. Alas, for the great men that dream Caesarian dreams in a non-Christian age! At the end of the alteration to the map is not the one intended, and it works out cruel hard on Aunt Matilda.

"But even more dreadful, because destructive of one's hope in the future, is the helplessness of the people. They strike one in the streets as supine-spirited and lifeless.

"The chief economic hope of Austria lies in the development of its tourist traffic, which ought to be easy. Yet Austrian inefficiency drives away the traveller. The railway stations of Vienna are filthy, their organization artless and involved. The trains are often vile, in a way that is not to be excused on the plea that much rolling-stock has gone in payment of re-

at regular intervals, it is given fresh impetus by the bursting of additional charges.

For use as defence against raiding aircraft, the inventor says that batteries of the rockets could be sent upwards in the form of a barrage. The pellets burn themselves over a city.

When one visits Austria one perceives that the true Utopian is the believer in oligarchies. For they may far more justly be described as pleasant in themselves, but unable to endure the stresses and strains of reality. Many types of mind are far happier in this sort of community than they ever could be under a democracy; the unimaginative man who was a Civil Servant or Army officer in pre-war Austria must have known the contentment of a well-tended child in its nursery. But the concussion of international disaster ends all that.

"For if one knocks down a wall there is nothing left but scattered bricks; but if a structure consisting of living units is subjected to the same force, its dispersed units will reassemble and find some new way of cohering again into a communal body. The latter process has happened in more highly democratized Germany. But in Austria one sees, at the moment, only scattered bricks; but such beautiful, sun-mellowed, mossgrown bricks that one cannot help preferring the spectacle to that of Germany."

The Death Rocket

A new weapon of offensive and defensive warfare has been developed in the form of a "death rocket" designed to throw out a flaming shower of molten metal miles above the earth's surface.

The inventor is Mr. Ernest Welsh, of North Ferris, Yorks, and his experiments with medium-sized rockets are said to have proved that each shower, bursting high in the air, can cover an area of 100 square yards, and can ignite any object within that region. The experimental rockets, it is claimed, can climb to a height of five miles.

The rocket contains a destructive charge of seven hundred pellets, a regulating charge, a detonator, and a propelling charge. When it is set to be sent aloft, it rests in a diagonal launching cradle, somewhat similar to those used for ordinary "sky-rockets." When the fuse is lit, the propelling charge sends the rocket soaring out of its cradle. Thereafter,

Why This Official Silence?

In a press report sent to the Twillingate Sun by Mr. J. J. Miffen, J.P., concerning the grounding of the S.S. Prospero on Green Island, the writer makes the following disconcerting statement:—"As usual, the life boats were in a shocking and disgraceful condition." From other unofficial sources we have learned that this description errs on the side of moderation, and to have said that some of the boats were useless, would have been nearer the mark.

We have no reason to doubt the above comments, and we cannot deny or confirm them because, officially, we do not know the actual state of affairs. When the railway accident happened at Manuels River, we demanded an immediate enquiry conducted by disinterested parties. Before the Telegram had gone to press, news came of the grounding of the Prospero in a dangerous place with 116 souls on board. Previous to these misfortunes a run off had occurred at Topsail Pond and the cars went over the embankment. No one was killed or injured because, as chance would have it, the carriages were empty. Previous to that was the run off near Port aux Basques, when one man was killed and another seriously injured. We heard of an enquiry held in this case by Magistrate Soubry, but that is all. We heard of an investigation into the Prospero accident, but as to the result, we are in the dark, and consequently the public are in the dark as well.

A Magisterial enquiry, it is said, will be held in connection with the Manuels affair, but why the delay? In England a Coroner's Jury would have sat immediately, and every attempt made to ascertain the causes of death at a time when evidence material to the case was obtainable. Here, such procedures are conducted some considerable time after the event, when much of the evidence is hearsay, and in consequence of the time that has elapsed, is often conflicting.

We do not wish to hold anyone in particular to blame for these accidents; they may be due simply to unavoidable circumstances, BUT THE PUBLIC ARE ENTITLED TO KNOW THAT THEY ARE.

We ask those authorities who have charge of the public service—in these cases, the Railway Commissioners—whether they are aware of the various rumors that have been circulated concerning these accidents, whether any purpose is served by not informing the public of the findings, and whether they are not entitled to a full knowledge of the facts.

The public look to the press to furnish a faithful account of events. They also depend upon it to watch their interests, and to see that nothing is left undone to safeguard their lives, their property and their rights. In the cases referred to, the necessary explanations have not been forthcoming, and it is time that they were. At present there is considerable misgiving as to the condition of rail and coastal services. If it is warranted, the public must be informed of the facts in order that they may govern themselves accordingly. If there is no cause for alarm, then it is high time that a statement to that effect was made and confidence restored.

Everyone is aware that the Government received from their predecessors a heavily encumbered estate, and that considerable time must elapse before all the necessary improvements can be effected, but a sphinx like silence in such matters is only interpreted as official indifference, or it results in unfair criticism of innocent parties.

This is not our first reference to matters connected with the railway service nor will it be the last, if the present state of affairs is allowed to continue. It is a public utility, and the high salaries paid to the officials are only justifiable provided they give full value for the money. The taxpayer is beginning to have his doubts on the matter, and is wondering whether efficiency is the only qualification taken into account when increases are given and promotions made. Is it any wonder that they conclude that someone is being sheltered by this cloak of silence?

The Hospital Commissions Regulations

Elsewhere in this issue will be found the official instructions relative to the sending of patients to the city for hospital treatment. The necessity for such regulations has already been fully dealt with by the Telegram, and there is no necessity to refer to the matter further than to say that we hope that the regulations will be strictly and impartially enforced.

Labrador Boundary Delegation

The Prime Minister, Hon. W. S. Monroe, Hon. J. R. Bennett, Colonial Secretary, and Hon. W. J. Higgins, K. Something New in the City

Yesterday the building formerly occupied by the Anglo-Telegraph Co. was the scene of great excitement, when the latest improvement on the wheel of fortune, was installed. It is an electric wheel and is the first of its kind to be seen in St. John's and as the necessary permission has been obtained, it will be run to-night for the first time. This wheel is so arranged as to give prizes to two individuals after each spin; one person gets a book of tickets on an "Easy Piano," which will be on exhibition at the building where the raffle is being carried on. The other person gets a five dollar bill. We understand that this piano is to be drawn for on the 23rd December, thus enabling the lucky winner to have it in his home for Xmas. It is under the auspices of the S.U.F. and all are assured of a square deal. A look at this wheel is well worth the money spent.—Adv.

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

Dec. 10th.—Waked very betimes this day from the horrors of a nightmare in which I did imagine that I had gone puzsle-mad and had cut up my dress trousers to make a jigsaw puzzle from them. The cause of it I think, that I did remain up late the night before rousing my head with a crossword puzzle that did determind efforts to solve it, and am determined to waste no more time over the silly things. So up and abroad, and meeting Mrs. Povey on Water Street, she to hold me a while in discourse and do tell me how the cause of women's suffrage in this country is progressing and the women do expect the vote to be given them at the next session of Parliament. But Lord, if this do come to pass I foresee a difficult time for candidates in the next election albeit I doubt much if many of the women throughout the country care much whether they have a vote or not. By despatches out of England, news of the British Government, they to build the naval base at Singapore, which is a good thing being that there is not in all the eastern seas, a coaling station and docks that will take in them the big ships that are now in course of construction. I do see by my evening sheet how the watch have brought to the city a man that was selling German bonds, and will have to stand his trial for it. But what do amaze me is that people do invest in these things with hope of big dividends when it do stand to reason that if big dividends are to be obtained, on these bonds, they would be sold too rapidly abroad to make it necessary to have them brought for sale to Newfoundland.

O'Mara's New Drug Store

Much favorable comment has been passed on the new premises of P. O'Mara, Druggist, situated at the corner of Brennan and Water Streets, and adjoining the store occupied by him for a number of years. It is constructed of concrete moulded with sufficient ornamentation to give a pleasing effect without impairing the durability of the structure. Special attention was given to lighting and interior layout. The whole reflects great credit on the contractors, Messrs. Kennedy, and is a monument to the enterprise of Mr. O'Mara. The store fixtures, also of local workmanship, call for more than passing comment. They were made by the Horwood Lumber Co., and in many particulars excel the most expensive imported furnishings. The back of the fixtures is of the best quality cedar, the top sections of shelving are made movable so that they can be adjusted to hold containers of any height or size. The fixtures themselves are of polished mahogany, and the bottom sections are fitted with sliding doors and nests of drawers. The panels enclosing the windows are fitted, also with sliding doors on ball-bearing rollers. The dispensary at the rear is also locally made of mahogany, and fitted with figured glass panels present a very neat appearance. A complete programme of refreshments were served, bringing to a close a very profitable and pleasant evening.

Studio Recital

An interesting event took place on Wednesday evening when Eleanore News, L.T.C.M., held a criticism class for her pupils in singing. "The Importance of breath control," and "The Interpretation of Songs," were discussed, and the chief difficulties of the different members of the class pointed out. Eight of the pupils then sang numbers by Brahms, Cherubini, Morley, Franz, Mendelssohn, Dr. Arne, and modern American composers. After the programme refreshments were served, bringing to a close a very profitable and pleasant evening.

YOUNG BOATSWAIN LOSES HIS LIFE IN TRYING TO REPAIR DAMAGE.

For sometime past much anxiety has been felt for the safety of the schooner Eather-Hankinson and her crew of seven men. She left Cadiz on October 25th, bound for Little Bay Islands with a cargo of salt, and nothing had been heard until yesterday, when Messrs. A. B. Rendell and Company, received a message from Capt. Collett, stating that the vessel had been abandoned and that six of her crew were rescued and landed safely at Montserrat. The Eather-Hankinson, a single, and belonged to Kingville, B., and apparently he lost his life in an attempt to protect the lives of his companions. The Eather-Hankinson was a vessel of 292 tons net, built in 1917, and owned by A. S. Rendell & Co.

Close Season for Caribou

At a meeting held last night, the Government approved of the regulations of the Game Board, ordering a close season of three years for Caribou. The new law becomes effective January 1st, 1925. The reports of the supervisors, wardens and guides to the Game Board show that the migration of the Caribou from one part of the country to the other has largely ceased but whilst there are a considerable number of animals located in some parts they seem to be in pockets where they are easily slaughtered. The regulations were thought necessary to prevent their entire extinction. The reports show a rapid increase of moose but there is reason to fear that many are being slaughtered. The free use of fire arms in the various logging camps is said to be responsible for some of the unlawful destruction. There are also grave complaints against the use of wire snares for taking fur-bearing animals. As it has been found that being cheap to erect, traps do not trouble to collect or destroy them when the season is over. The consequence is that many females have been found rotting in the snares, whilst the young have starved to death. It is probable that legislation to prevent this practice will be enacted, but it will be made difficult to conflict with the snaring of rabbits.

Steamer Home Has Propeller Trouble

The management of the Railway received a message last night from the captain of the S.S. Home, stating that the steamer had arrived at Port Saunders with some of the rivets in her propeller loose. Published by Authority

TO RELIEVING OFFICERS, STIPENDIARY MAGISTRATES, AND OTHERS:—

The expenditure of public money upon hospitals and similar charitable institutions, the care of outside patients, and transportation to and fro, has grown to alarming proportions. Disregard of instructions as to the sending of patients to St. John's from the Outports has not only increased the expenditure, but has caused inconvenience to the authorities, and unnecessary suffering for the ailing. Room in the hospitals has not at times been available for patients arriving here, and it has been found necessary to send to boarding-houses to await their turn for entering a hospital, many who would have been better cared for at home during the period of waiting. These and other considerations have made it advisable to state the facts, and to repeat and add to instructions.

It is the policy of the Legislature and Government to limit, as closely as possible, the expenditure of public money in the case of the sick in public hospitals, and their transportation to and fro, to provision for those patients only who are unable to pay for their own care, and whose natural protectors are unable to pay for them. The aid given is a charity for the sick and helpless, and it should only be accepted consistently with self-respect. Those who are able to pay in whole or in part for their own treatment are expected to do so. Parents are expected to pay for the care of children, and children for the care of parents, wholly or partly, where they are able to do so.

Only Relieving Officers, or Stipendiary Magistrates, acting in lieu of such Officers, have authority to treat in the public wards of hospitals.

Where a Relieving Officer resides conveniently near he alone has authority.

Where by reason of the remoteness of a Relieving Officer, and the nature of the malady, delay until such Officer could be called would seem to a Stipendiary Magistrate to be undesirable, such Magistrate may act in lieu of a Relieving Officer, but Magistrates are requested to observe as far as possible the rule that dealing with the sick at public expense is specially the province of Relieving Officers.

Clergymen and others whose attention is drawn to persons asking treatment at public expense are requested to refer such patients to Relieving Officers or Magistrates in their order (wherever such reference can be made without danger to the sick), and to refer to Mr. Bartlett only in instances in which no Relieving Officer or Magistrate is near enough to deal with the matter adequately.

It is desired that the discretion of sending forward patients shall be exercised wherever convenient by Relieving Officers and Magistrates only, in the order named, except as provided in the next following paragraph hereof.

Except in "Emergency cases," as herein defined, no patient may be forwarded by Relieving Officers, Magistrates or others, at public expense, unless permission has been first asked and obtained of Mr. Lewis Bartlett, Public Health Officer, St. John's. Patients suffering from serious accidents, or from appendicitis, or whose condition requires immediate surgical attention, may be forwarded without the prior consent of Mr. Bartlett, but he must be immediately notified by telegram of the coming of the patient, and of the ailment thereof. Every such instance will be strictly inquired into, and unless it is the condition of the patient made the forwarding thereof without prior permission reasonably necessary, the person forwarding will be considered to have acted without discretion, and be held liable to pay the cost incurred.

When application is made to forward a patient for hospital treatment, a Relieving Officer, or Stipendiary Magistrate, as the case may be, should, before complying, satisfy himself that the patient, or the person liable for the care of the patient, is not able to pay the expense of treatment, and that such expense should be a charge upon the Colony, and if it seems to such Relieving Officer or Magistrate that the financial and physical conditions of the patient call for treatment at public expense, a Doctor, where one is conveniently near, should be asked to examine and report whether hospital or other treatment is necessary or expedient. The certificate of the Relieving Officer, or Magistrate, as the case may be, that the case is one for treatment at public expense, and the report, if any, of the Doctor upon the patient's condition, should be forwarded to Mr. Bartlett, with application for permission to forward the patient. When it seems desirable to telegraph for Mr. Bartlett's permission, the telegram should indicate the effect of the Doctor's report. If a Doctor is not conveniently near, then a Relieving Officer or Magistrate, or other person intervening on behalf of the patient, should state to Mr. Bartlett as fully as possible the nature of the ailment complained of.

These regulations have, of course, nothing whatever to do with transportation or treatment in hospitals of patients the charges for whom will be paid by them or their friends. But in respect of such patients, as the hospitals are frequently overcrowded, application to Mr. Bartlett to ascertain if a bed can be obtained, will be promptly replied to.

J. R. BENNETT,
 Colonial Secretary.

Every Woman's Ambition

is to turn out a good Christmas cake. No effort is spared in getting things ready. Careful women, however, do vote most pains in selecting the ingredients, for unless the right shortening is used, the cake will be a failure. Crisco is more economical than cooking butter, and far superior. For a successful cake, be sure to use CRISCO.

Forty-Five Years in the Service of the Public--The Evening Telegram.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

EVIDENCE OF AUTHENTICITY DEMANDED.

LONDON, Dec. 10. The resumption of the debate on the King's Address to Parliament tonight brought out in the House of Commons a revival of the recent election campaign conflict over the famous Zinovieff letter, which urged revolutionary activity in England.

Prime Minister Baldwin previously had said the Cabinet Sub-committee which examined the evidence placed before it in connection with the letter had concluded unanimously that the document was authentic. John Clines, who was Lord Privy Seal in the late MacDonald Cabinet, in the course of a general attack on the program of the Government of Stanley Baldwin, demanded that the House should be afforded a view of the evidence on which the Sub-committee arrived at its decision regarding the authenticity of the letter. He said the Zinovieff document did so much to secure Mr. Baldwin his huge majority in the recent election that the Premier ought not to object to an independent investigation. Sir John Simon, one of the leading Liberals in the House lifted the debate out of the rut of party politics by raising the question of the Franco-American debt conversations.

FAMOUS FINANCIER DEAD.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10. August Belmont, the famous financier and sportsman died to-day after an illness of twenty-four hours. His death was attributed to Cellulitis and Septicemia.

TRANS-ATLANTIC PASSENGER RATES INCREASED.

MONTREAL, Dec. 10. An increase in trans-atlantic passenger rates affecting first class, second class, and west bound third class accommodations will come into effect on December 15th, it was officially announced by local steamship lines to-day. The new tariff has been adopted by all trans-Atlantic lines and will be operative at the Atlantic ports both in Canada and the United States. The increased cost of operation and falling revenues due to restricted immigration are given as the reasons for the change. First class rates it is announced are increased by $5 to $15 according to the type of vessel, although on some first class ships there will be no increase. Cabin steamer rates are increased by $15 and the second class by $10 to $12.50 according to the steamer.

CHANCELLOR'S STATEMENT CAUSES UNEASINESS IN WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10. Uneasiness was aroused in some official circles here by the statements attributed to-day to Winston Churchill, the Chancellor of the British Exchequer, that his Government would insist on proportionate payments to it on the occasion of a common creditor making payments to the United States. The treasury was silent on the Churchill remark, but it gave evidence of surprise at the turn taken in the events because of a likelihood that such a declaration might cause delay in the prospective settlement with France. Meetings between Secretary Mellon and Ambassador Jusserand with respect to the French debt have been wholly informal thus far, and nothing approaching definite terms has been discussed, but even in that stage it was indicated that an expression from the British of such a character could mean only that France would pause to consider.

NELD, VESSEL LOST AND BOATSWAIN DROWNED.

MONTREAL, Dec. 11. The loss of the British schooner Eather Hankison, loaded with salt from Cadiz on Oct. 9th for St. John's Nfld., was yesterday reported when the Greek schooner Chalamos brought in six of crew rescued after the distressed vessel had been drifting rudderless and sailless for six days. The boatswain, Peter Slaney, was drowned while trying to rig a new rubber for the schooner.

CHURCHILL'S DECLARATION ACCLAIMED.

LONDON, Dec. 11. Winston Churchill's declaration in his first speech as Chancellor of the Exchequer that the Government considers it essential that any payments made by Great Britain's debtors in Europe to the United States should be accompanied simultaneously by a proportionate payment to this country please the press and the populace immensely without regard to party or the size of their pocket book. Every morning newspaper displays an account of the speech prominently, more than any thing else in the day's news. The Chancellor did not mention any debtor nation by name but almost every newspaper speaks of France whose emissaries have been discussing the debts subject in Washington.

AGED PRESIDENT RE-ELECTED.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 11. Samuel Gompers, aged 75, was re-elected President of the Pan-American Federation of Labor at the closing meeting of the Labor Congress here. The next session will be held in Washington in 1926. Mr. Gompers was in a state of great feebleness when he left for Laredo.

ROADMAKERS STRIKE A BONANZA.

VICTORIA, B.C., Dec. 11. Road gangs constructing a two mile cut off on the road from Stewart and Hyder up to Oremier mine have struck a new bonanza about two miles out of Stewart. While doing some blasting some of the richest quartz ever seen in the north was exposed. Assays of $800 a ton have resulted in a rush from Stewart and Hyder. The sides of the road are all blocked out as claims.

OPENING OF FEDERAL PARLIAMENT.

OTTAWA, Dec. 11. January 29 appears as the likely date for opening the Canadian Parliament, with February as the day for the delivery of the speech from the Throne.

THE CHRISTMAS CAKE

Every woman puts her best effort in the making of the Christmas Cake, but what about the ingredients? Unless the best shortening is used, a successful Christmas Cake is impossible. Crisco is highly recommended for cakes and pastry and we have every reason to believe that Crisco deserves its great reputation. Let us include a few cans of Crisco with your Christmas groceries

Surprise Party

A very pleasant event took place last evening at the home of Capt. S. R. Winsor, when a number of relatives and school mates met to offer a surprise party to Miss Irene Winsor in honour of a very interesting event which is anticipated in the near future. Lunch was served, after which one of the cousins was supposed to present the gift and as jolly good sports they drew lots and cousin Roland Winsor was the "Jonah," who in a very able manner performed the pleasing function. The gift consisted of a beautiful silver tray, salt and pepper shakers, silver butter shell and knife. The recipient although completely taken by surprise very pleasantly and appropriately thanked the donors for such a token of their goodwill. Those present were:—J. and Mrs. Whiteway, Capt. W. C. Winsor, M.H.A., and Mrs. Winsor, Capt. S. R. and Mrs. Winsor, Mrs. Bessie House, Miss Jesse Hann, and Mrs. Harry Carnell; Misses Elfreda Winsor, Alma Whiteway, Ina Whiteway, Hazel Whiteway, Margaret J. Spurrell, Rhyan Curtis, Bertha Roberts, Rebecca Andrews, Elsie Andrews, Ena Winsor, Netta Winsor and Ena M. Winsor; Messrs. Thos. Butler, R. Clarence Winsor, Wilbur Winsor, Roland, and William Roberts. Music and indoor games were happily indulged in, and after singing Auld Lang Syne the joyous party dispersed after midnight. R.C.W.

A beautiful frock of orange net is used over satin in two tones of orange.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

HOME TRAINING THE GREAT FACTOR IN A CHILD'S LIFE.

Proper home training is the great asset in a child's life. A large number of the young go on the downward path owing to the negligence and the carelessness of indifferent parents. Too much freedom and liberty, a fear of correcting them when wrong, yielding to them, when firmness and authority should be exercised, and encouraging them in wrong-doing by being blind to their faults. When children see that they can fool and bamboozle their parents, they soon become masters of the situation, rule the house, even at a very early age, and the parents have to obey them rather than command them. Unfortunately, the good old home training of years ago, is in too many homes, a back number, a thing to be regretted and deplored. The age we live in is one, with its many temptations and pitfalls, of pleasure and vice, that is surely and swiftly drawing many into the vortex of destruction.

"A great deal of the future of a child depends on the authority stand its parents take," stated Dr. J. W. Bridges, professor of psychology of McGill University, speaking on psychoanalysis, at the weekly luncheon of the Montreal Kiwanians in the Windsor Hotel.

"Drastic administration of authority tends to create in the child a stubbornness which will eventually make him 'jump the traces' and chase his own life. This is a perfect example of mental conflict. In regard to mental conflict, it was the impression of the ancients that such a conflict was a struggle of environment and the conventional ideas of youth to dominate the direction of his life.

"Psycho-analysis is not synonymously psychology as some will believe. It is merely a study of the conscious and unconscious mind. The primal impulses of man are said to be 'hunger, love and fear.'"

"The cynic and the sentimentalist are closely related. For instance, sentiment and romance may be dominant in a man's spirit, but if he is fooled in love he becomes a cynic, the cynical attitude becoming superior."

The luncheon was attended by about 300 Kiwanians and their wives and was presided over by Robert A. Willis.

AN EPIDEMIC OF SICKNESS AMONG THE CHILDREN.

The attendance in many of the schools here, especially in the primary departments, have been considerably reduced, owing to an epidemic of measles, colds and chicken-pox. In some classes, one-half of the registered pupils are affected with some of the above diseases.

STRINGENT RULES FOR CATHOLIC TEACHERS.

The Catholic School Commission has sent the teachers a document dealing with absence from class. It says, one, two or three days absent, no pay. A week half pay. A longer period, salary may be obtained on producing a doctor's certificate, and going through a lot of "red tape" business at headquarters of the Commission. Such regulations seem to be a bit drastic but, like everything else, the abuse of the freedom enjoyed brings punishment. Last year in the Western District of the Commission, six thousand dollars ($6,000) had to be paid in substitute salaries. The lady teachers were principally the ones absent. One case was cited, where a lady teacher was absent for weeks, supposed to be on the "sick list," yet she was seen at skating parties, dances, and sleigh drives. Hence, the stringent regulations.

BOTH SAILORS' CLUBS DID GREAT WORK THIS SEASON.

Both the Catholic and Protestant Sailors' Clubs did great work, for the hardy toilers of the sea, during the season just closed. Over 80,000 seamen in 1216 ships entered Montreal in 1924, constituting a record. At the farewell concert given at the Sailors' Institute, the Chairman announced that owing to so many calls being made on the Club this year, that there was a deficit of $2,700. He hoped that some generous persons would help to wipe out the deficit. The Catholic Sailors' Club expended $40,000 on renovations to its building at the corner of Common and St. Peter Streets. The many fine concerts given weekly at both Clubs, the large attendance of sailors and citizens, the large daily attendance of seamen at both places, the large amount of money deposited for safe-keeping, the amount of reading matter distributed at both places, the large amount of letters written, and in many other ways the seamen were helped while in port, proclaim a great object lesson and testify that the weary mariners found a real home with kind and sympathetic managers at both Clubs, whose one and only object was to make the rest in port a happy, contented and a pleasant one. It's no wonder that the men said, "God bless Hitchen Bell and Dr. W. H. Atherton for their great and noble work in our behalf."

MIRVARD'S LINIMENT FOR SPRAINS AND BRUISES.

A NUN MEETS WITH AN ACCIDENT

Sister Marie Leopold, of the Hochelaga Mother House of the Sisters of Jesus and Mary, slipped between the platform and the station at Strathmore, a near suburb, and the wheels of a passenger train of the Canadian Pacific Railway passed over her. She lost both feet, and is, at present, at St. Joseph's Hospital, Lachine.

ECONOMY AND THE REMEDY.

The Canadian Railroad Magazine says:—The Ottawa Citizen, oftener than any other important paper published in Canada, sees things sanely. Its editorials go to the root of things, while not always propounding a remedy.

Here, for instance, is a recent statement that is packed with truth. It is in answer to those who preach economy as the remedy for all social ills:

"People practiced economy in the critical war months because the nations were living in a state of siege. But there is no siege in Canada or elsewhere at the present time. There is no shortage of goods or produce, nor is there any lack of labor to produce more. Every year the Canadian people produce about three times as much as they consume. The productive machinery of Canada is adequate for double the present output. Obviously Canada is not a poor, poor country."

The cry of economy is as fallacious as the cry of production that preceded it. At the close of the world war we were told that if everybody produced all would be well. According to Lord Haldane, "such was the unanimous appeal made to the worker by all the highest authorities in the world of industry and finance. And he obeyed it to the best of his ability, but only to find a year or two later that the warehouses were choked with goods which they could not sell, and that his services were no longer required."

The workers were fooled that time. They are in a fair way to be fooled again if they pay any attention to the same "authorities" who speak of the need of universal economy. What would be the immediate result of such economy? All those who could lessen their purchases would do so. Selling would stop in some degree and the numbers of the unemployed would be augmented.

No. Whatever angle you view it from the present system of production cannot be saved. The world can't go on forever split in two classes, one doing the work when it gets the opportunity, the other owning everything, doing nothing and only permitting industry to operate when it affords them a profit.

THE BUSINESS OF AN UNCLE.

It's the business of an uncle, which I've frequently expressed, To buy the toys and candies which the youngster like the best. And although the daddies and mothers must at times some joys refuse, An uncle's proper function is to give 'em what they choose.

It may be a mother's duty now and then to mutter "no." And a wise and proper father should not every sweet bestow. But with nephews and with nieces every uncle worth his salt Should disdain all such restrictions and be generous to a fault.

Now I know the uncle business. In these very prosperous times He should always, on his visits, take a pocketful of dimes.

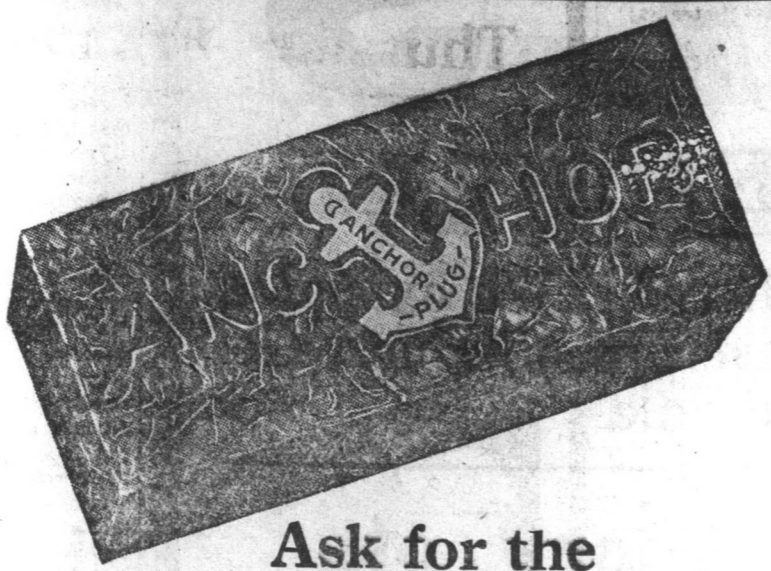

And of course if there is something which the parents have denied, It's an uncle's job to buy it just to keep them satisfied.

It's the duty of the parents to be strict and very stern. And to teach those little rascals all the lessons they must learn. But an uncle's job is different. He's another sort of man. And the business of an uncle is to spoil 'em if he can.

A Close up on Russian Conditions

Between Rykoff president of the Council of Commissars, on the one hand, and Emma Goldman on the other, we are getting a first hand view of public affairs in that bedeviled land.

Rykoff in a recent survey of the present Russian economic situation practically admits failure. As he puts it they have "bent the stick too far and too fast in combatting private trade." In other words he admits, what many already are convinced of, that state industry, or government ownership and operation, to put it another way, is a rank failure.

Co-operative and state organization which replaced private industry in Russia has in all instances failed to meet the requirements. "We have only included," says Rykoff in speaking of his budget, "such items of expenditure as we can meet from our state income, without resorting to paper money. We have not sufficient money for such urgent need as education, health and the like."

In going into details Rykoff states that in metal production the year's output is only 66 per cent. of the pre-war figures, and he sees no way of increasing the metal output as Russia has not the money for big undertakings, such as railway building. Therefore, he says, "we must rely on our home markets and especially upon the peasantry, to furnish us with revenue." Of course the poor farmers will be pillaged. They always have been under the Bolshevik regime.

So much for M. Rykoff and the dismal financial picture he paints. Let us now turn to Emma Goldman, who as a very troublesome person was deported some years ago from the United States and went to Russia thinking that at last she had reached the haven of all her desires. However "Red Emma" awoke to Russia's real condition and is now in England, seeking asylum, safe from the Bolshevik. At a recent dinner given in London, attended by many British notables, that is the British way, Miss Goldman gave an address concerning the Bolshevik regime. Miss Goldman was deported from the United States in 1919 as an undesirable alien and made her way shortly afterwards to Russia where she spent two years among the people, whose language she speaks.

In the course of her remarks Miss Goldman said that she wished to explode the preposterous theory that the present Russian government represents the workers of that country. The oppressed masses in that country, she said, were being silenced as they never were under a Czar and all ideals had been discredited by the ruling forces.

"It is superstition," she said, "that confuses the revolution with the ruling party to-day. There are thousands in prisons and concentration camps in Russia, not for opposing the government, but for opinions sake. To call the present Soviet government a worker's experiment is the most preposterous lie ever told. The party in power has emasculated the revolution. It is slowly undermining all that is best in Russia."

Miss Goldman then went on to read to her hearers, many of whom had apparently favored the "great experiment," a lesson. She said that the time had come when British Communists should be warned of the Russian failure. "Unless you understand," she said, "the mistakes of Russia in the past seven years, it is likely there will be repetitions elsewhere. One hears remarks that the Communist party is so small in Great Britain. Remember it does not require many people to destroy things, but it takes a good many people to build things up."

Tanks for Divers

Modern salvage enterprises demand greater and greater ranges in deep-sea diving, and the depths to which the diver can descend is limited by the pressure of water his body can sustain without risk of collapse, improved form in diving suits and accessories are being continually devised.

Few of these, however, increase the diver's range of operations by more than a few fathoms, and the maximum depth to which even the most expert diver can go remains at about 200 feet.

Actually men have gone to as great a depth as 300 feet, but under such conditions no work could be attempted. Moreover, the men who made this record were permanently incapacitated as a result.

A new apparatus has little in common with the usual type of diver's outfit. It resembles a small U-boat turret, which by means of a double telephone can be kept in constant communication with the surface, and which is provided with movable arms and legs to accommodate the limbs of the diver. The arms and legs are surrounded by sleeves made of a very tough aluminium alloy.

Such a diving tank enables the diver to descend or rise at will by admitting or discharging water, replacing it with compressed air from a battery of six cylinders. One diver descended 530 feet in the course of tests, although at this depth the pressure amounted to 225lb. per square inch.

Why it Rains

The Scientific Side of Popular Wet Weather Fully Explained.

Seeing how much water it is surprising how little about it. We know that from the seas, and that, in it returns to the seas. But pens in the meanwhile?

Very few people can give a convincing answer to this question. Really it is all a matter of nature.

Air has a capacity for holding moisture. This it takes in the form of vapor evaporated by the sun on the surface of the sea, or of rivers.

But air can hold only a certain amount of water-vapor. It depends on its temperature. If, therefore, the temperature is saturated with vapor, sudden cooling will cause the vapor to get rid of some of its moisture.

Now air is full of water-vapor. There are millions of them to the cubic foot everywhere. They are the superfluous vapors. Thus clouds are formed. When the clouds become heavy down comes the rain.

Wettest And Driest

A great deal of rain does not immediately reach the earth. Falling from high clouds into air which is warm to absorb it, and so absorb the vapor.

If the temperature of the air is lower than the freezing-point the vapor condenses in the form of the particles which reach the earth in the form of snow or sleet. The thickness of snow is a fact. There is much air in it. A fall of one foot is roughly equivalent to a fall of an inch of rain.

To cover an acre of ground an inch of rain requires one million gallons of water.

The soft hail we get in winter is simply snow unmixed with rain. It is quite distinct from the hail which sometimes accompanies storms. This is made up of ice which has been ascending and descending the clouds for some time before it falls to earth.

Hailstones as big as eggs have fallen in the British Isles. Taking the average of a year, July 26 is the wettest day of the year, and August 11th is the driest. This is a point to remember when holiday season comes around.

Clouds Act As Blankets

The average rainfall in Great Britain ranges from twenty to forty inches a year, though in some districts it is higher—the Lake District, for example; there the rainfall is as much as 135 inches. In parts of America as much as 460 inches fall annually.

What we call mists and fogs are simply clouds which form near the ground. Town fogs are much denser than fogs in open country. owing to the immense number of particles contained in towns.

The air over towns is full of dirt and grime. Something like 1,000 tons of soot fall annually on London alone.

Have you ever wondered why starry nights are cooler than cloudy ones?

Here is the answer. Clouds act as a kind of blanket. They check the earth from giving up its heat, after the sun has gone, and the heat which it received during the day.

Dew is deposited when the air is cooled to the point where the ground condenses as a result of the earth cooling at night. Dew does not form if there is a strong wind blowing, for the air then is not in contact with the ground. Dew is deposited when the air is cooled to the point where it is cloudy.

TILLY BROOKE, HOLDER OF THE BEST HARNESS TIE FOR A MILE THIS SEASON.

New York, Dec. 4.—Tilly Brooke, holder of the best harness tie for a mile this season, 1.59, and winner of every race in which she was entered on the Grand Circuit, last year, was sold for $18,000 to the G. Elbs, of Rochester, N.Y., at the second day's session of the annual Glory auction.

The mare was consigned by G. Elbs, of Rochester, N.Y., and was first bid for $5,000 by the Hummer, who rapidly raised the bid to $12,000, the hammer falling finally at a record price for a trotting-bred mare for breeding purposes. Tilly Brooke is by the sire, Justice Brooke, out of Stokes, sired by Peter the Great. Several years ago the Walden Farm paid $21,000 for Guy Arden, to which Tilly Brooke will be bred.

AFTER ELECTION.
To-day I met James Leatherhead—I had not seen him for a while; he passed me by with stately tread, he did not note my bow and smile. I called to him, "Oh James, see why I do you play this a r t i c l e game?" He said, "Your face familiar is, but I do not recall your name. My time is precious, gentle hick, I cannot gossip on the street with every Harry, Tom and Dick that I may peradventure meet. I've seen your features once or twice, but where or when I do not know; in my large life you cut no lot, so on your bootless errand go." This Leatherhead but lately ran for office of a high degree, and then I seemed a useful man, and he kept chasing after me. Then, when I met him on the pike, he'd fold me in his fond embrace, and cry, "Well, well! So help me Mike, it's good to see your honest face! It's good to meet a worthy skate, as in my toilsome path I struggle; you know I am a candidate? I'd be elected county judge. Now let me lean upon your neck and breathe these tidings in your ear: The foeman is a moral wreck, so vote for me—your duty's clear." Since he was victor at the polls he's all swelled up with shoddy pride; as down the village street he strolls, he does not see me where I slide. He does not answer when I nod, my charming smile he does not note; so when he runs again I'll prod his high ambitions with my vote.

Communist Entertainment in London

LONDON, England, Dec. 4 (Can. Press).—When the 7th anniversary of the Russian Communist revolution was celebrated here by M. Rakovsky, Russian Soviet Charge d'Affaires, and Mme. Rakovsky, at a reception, money for decorations was lavishly spent. The guests entered a palace of cream and gold, laid out with carpets inches deep and set out with splendid furniture of the French Empire period upholstered in beautiful gold silk. Electric candelabra with hundreds of lamps shed illumination. Few of the women wore evening gowns, the favorite dress being a blouse or jumper and skirt. Some of their male escorts were in evening dress but the majority came in lounge suits. The most unusual aspect of the affair was in the reception hall, where 12 men in workday clothes, red handkerchiefs prominently displayed, first met the guests.

When the Pacific Becomes the Mediterranean

AN ARCHITECT AS PROPHET.

Ramsay Traquair, Professor of Architecture at McGill University, Montreal, dons a prophet's robes in Scribner's Magazine, and vividly forecasts the days when the Pacific shall be another Mediterranean—the mother of a new ocean commonwealth—the richest and greatest of them all. It is a stimulating article.

"The civilization of which we are the modern representatives began in the eastern basin of the Mediterranean Sea some six thousand years ago," he says. "It is the oldest culture in the world with a continuous record, for it is now accepted that the earliest history of China does not carry us back further than some four thousand years, or that of India perhaps three thousand one hundred. Yet at least six thousand years ago there existed in the Island of Crete, and on the shores of the Levant, a nation of mariners, traders, and pirates with a civilization as high as, if not higher than, that of contemporary Egypt or Asia.

"The Creteans and the Phoenicians handed this culture to the Greeks. Under the Romans it filled the entire basin of the Mediterranean, and spread even to distant Britain. So it descended without serious break to our ancestors. Our own civilization is simply an expansion of that old culture to fill the Atlantic. Through all its history it has been founded on a sea, with the lands which lie round about it; its characteristics have been endurance, energy, and power of expansion.

India and China.
"The principal civilizations outside Europe have been those of Egypt, Mesopotamia, China, and India. These were land civilizations founded on great navigable rivers such as the Nile, the Euphrates and Tigris, or the Ganges. Two still remain, India and China; the rest have disappeared. Such civilizations seem to follow a regular development. They may rise to considerable heights of culture, but they tend to become conservative and stationary.

Only One Sea Culture.
"Their people do not travel and do not love foreigners. They rapidly attain a stable constitution; then, contented and stagnant, they may remain at that stage for many centuries, as did ancient Egypt or China. This is a condition repugnant and foreign to our own restless race.

"Though there have been many such stationary civilizations and many attempts to found great land empires, yet there has never been but the one sea culture, our own; for the sea culture grew in strength, not by isolation but by its power of absorbing into itself every people with whom it comes in contact. The ancient Creteans would indeed have been astonished had they been told that, six thousand years later, their cultural descendants would live on both sides of the Atlantic; yet such are we, and we may feel confident that our culture will not disappear, whoever may carry it on.

Stationary Civilization.
"Of all the land civilizations only two survive—India and China. We are often warned of what dreadful things may happen when these countries 'awaken' and flood the world with their millions. But this is to picture all peoples as restless, and as quarrelsome, as ourselves. It may be doubted whether the racial tendencies cultivated by so many centuries of stationary life can be quickly overcome and altered. In all the centuries of her power Egypt never expanded further than Syria; the powers of Mesopotamia only reached at furthest stretch to the shore of the Mediterranean before they fell; India has been the helpless victim of one invader after another. The expansion which means life to our sea race seems dangerous to those otherwise stable land empires. They can only hold together so long as they cling to their river valleys, for the difficulties of communication over the intervening mountain ridges prevent permanent expansion.

"But the result is that a valley nation is difficult to conquer and finds it difficult to conquer others. England never would have conquered India had not that country been very disorganized, and even then she did it from the sea. Napoleon failed to conquer the valley people of the Volga.

Colonizing the Seas.

"But Europe steadily colonized the sea, she surrounded the Atlantic, then, crossing the American continent, she came, in the sixteenth century, to the Pacific. At the same time that Balboa passed westward from Darien, a Portuguese squadron entered the Pacific at Malacca. So, in the first decades of the sixteenth century Europe penetrated to the two ends of the world. Being Europeans and seafarers, they did what no one had done before, they joined the two ends together; Magellan crossed from America to Asia in 1521. After all the centuries of Chinese civilization it was a Portuguese sailor who first crossed the Chinese Ocean, and by so doing he established a European claim on that ocean.

"The succeeding four centuries saw the rapid discovery and colonization by Europe of the Pacific shores, First Spain and Portugal, then Spain alone, then Holland, England, and America have taken up this work, but the Pacific is not yet an enclosed sea.

Problems of the Pacific.
"For the European colonists of the Pacific still look eastward or westward to America or Europe. They do not look toward the ocean itself. Up to the end of the nineteenth century the Pacific was not a unit, or the centre of a civilization, as was the Atlantic.

"But, in the beginning of the 20th century Japan asserted herself as a Pacific power, and a new situation arose, in which the Pacific was to appear as a unit, the possible seat of a civilization independent of Europe or of the Atlantic. This is the problem of the Pacific, and in considering the future of that ocean the questions before us are, shortly: How long will it be before the Pacific is no longer a mere dependency on Europe or America, but the centre of a culture of her own? and, What nation or race will dominate that culture?

"The Pacific forms a great circular basin, closed to the north, excepting for the narrow Bering Strait, more open to the south where the islands of Oceania nearly span the gap between New Zealand and America. It measures about 5,000 to 7,000 miles in diameter, with trade routes of 4,500 to 7,000 miles, as compared with routes of 3,000 to 5,000 miles on the Atlantic."

Johnson then held his own head and shoulders under the water until life was extinct.

This was the testimony given at the inquest into the tragedy that has shocked the neighborhood.

Tearfully but without faltering, the 12-year-old son Henry Johnson, who seemed to realize he was temporarily at the head of the remaining family, told the story. It was corroborated as far as possible by neighbors, as well as by Dr. Sutherland, the coroner, and Chief A. Poole of the Maple Ridge police.

The jury brought in the verdict of "murder and suicide while temporarily deranged."

Obituary

FRISCILLA COURAGE, (at 70).

On Wednesday, Nov. 26th, Friscilla Courage, wife of Capt. Abel Courage, entered into rest. Three years ago she went to St. John's and underwent treatment and improved somewhat until October, when she was again stricken with very severe attacks of heart trouble. Those who visited her from time to time were often misled as to the seriousness of her condition, by her words of cheer and desire to be around. She was 63 years of age, and leaves to mourn a husband, five daughters, viz., Mrs. John Pollock and Miss Bertha Courage, St. John's; Mrs. M. F. MacLeod, St. John, N.B.; Mrs. J. W. Clouter and Myrtle at home, and four sons, Roland, Steward S.S. Bivria; Solomon, S.S. Home; Leslie, S.S. Sebastopol; and Fred at home; also two brothers Roy and James Russell, Boston, Mass.; Mrs. J. Greening, Pt. Blandford. She will be greatly missed by relatives and by the poor to whom she was a good friend. Her remains were laid to rest in the Methodist Cemetery, the funeral service being conducted by Rev. H. G. Coppin, who spoke from John 14th Chap., "Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God believe also in Me." At the graveside "Abide With Me" was sung. Then all that was mortal was left to rest, "until the day break and the shadows flee away."

Wesley Barry and Ben Turpin at the Nickel

A PERFECT DUO OF MOVIE ENTERTAINERS.

The most perfect duo of entertainers seen in a long while, namely Wesley Barry and Ben Turpin are starred in to-night's bill at the Nickel Theatre. The former appears in the famous George M. Cohan success "George Washington, Jr." whilst the latter will be seen in the latest Mack Sennett comedy "Asleep at the Switch."

"George Washington, Jr." is a rapidly moving comedy-drama of society life in the highest political circles of our capital. Its brilliant parties, the lavishly dressed women, the polished senators, foreign diplomats and noblemen give enough promise of a highly spiced interesting picture.

But in addition to all this there is Wesley Barry, the intangible young actor, who never fails to win his way into your heart before the picture fades off the screen.

The story deals with the long drawn out feud between Senators Belgrave and Hopkins, political enemies for many years and always opposing each other on principle. Senator Belgrave's son is George, who has styled himself "George Washington, Jr." because he follows to the letter the traditional truthfulness of our first president. George returns from prep school and spends his time studying the life and letters of his hero. He firmly decides to devote his life in carrying out the maxims and ideals of the father of our country.

The remainder of the story we will leave for you to see when you witness this picture at the Nickel to-night.

Short Parliaments

The shortest Parliament in English history was summoned on September 30th, 1399, for the purpose of deposing Richard II, and was dissolved the same day after fulfilling this task.

The Parliament which Charles I. summoned in 1625 failed to please that exacting monarch, and was dismissed after five months, whilst the Barebones Parliament, named after one of its members, lasted a similar period. The Parliament of 1701 lasted a month longer.

The briefest Parliament of recent times was the one elected under Gladstone's premiership in December, 1886, and which lasted only until July, 1886. The shortest since then was the Parliament lately dissolved at the instance of Mr. Ramsey MacDonald.

Master-Elect James Entertains Brethren

Following the regular weekly meeting of the Royal Oak Loyal Orange Lodge, No. 22, held in Victoria Hall last evening, Worshipful Master Geo. James entertained the Brethren to a light spread in honor of his election to the Chair. The members of Royal Oak were present in goodly strength as an appreciation of the invitation of their Worshipful Master, and to do him the honor due his exalted position in the Lodge. Among the visitors were Past Masters S. R. Penney (Leeming Lodge), C. T. James ("Royal William" Lodge); Bros. S. G. Bartlett (Leeming) and Pelley ("Royal Standard").

Tables being spread with succulent viands the brethren assembled around the festive board and ample justice to the good things provided, the hour being spent in speech and song. The toast list was as follows:—
THE KING—Prop. W. Bro. James; Resp. "National Anthem."
NEWFOUNDLAND—Prop. Bro. P. G. Butler; Resp. W. Bro. C. T. James.
Recitation—Bro. Joseph Bonnell.
LOYAL ORANGE ASS'N.—Prop. W. M. W. Bro. R. Simmons; Resp. Bro. M. Williams.

Song—Bro. Thos. Noseworthy (Jr.).

GOD SAVE THE KING.

Worshipful Master James made a capital Chairman and the speeches breathed of a deep fraternal and loyal spirit, and were of a most instructive nature. Following the proceedings a collection for charitable purposes was taken up, netting a substantial sum, which was taken in charge by the treasurer.

Royal Puppy Love Stirs all Holland

Princess Juliana Enamored of Jewish Cantor on Visit to Amsterdam—Poses as Young Jewess.

BERLIN, Dec. 3.—The fifteen-year-old Princess Juliana, daughter of Queen Wilhelmina of Holland, has fallen a victim to a flapper passion for a Jewish cantor of Amsterdam. Court diplomats and leaders of the realm have not been so terror-stricken since the day Holland decided to stay out of the war.

Princess Juliana had gone to Amsterdam during her holiday from school, accompanied by a lady-in-waiting. Endowed with youthful curiosity, she escaped from her chaperon and wandered into a synagogue where Gabriel Alaro, a widower of thirty with two children and eyes and hair that would put Valentino to shame, was chanting the services.

The Princess was thrilled, so much so that she returned the next day and the next. She sought to disguise herself as a pious Jewish girl and managed to intercept the cantor when services were over. She told him how his voice had been an inspiration to her and intimated that she would adore the role of best pal and severest critic.

But, alas, the man who guarded the synagogue doors was one of those suspicious natures that make the world so difficult for temperament and romance. He didn't believe the enthusiastic girl was Jewish—in fact he recognized her from newspaper pictures, which his job as doorkeeper gave him ample opportunity to study.

This evil genius of young love communicated with The Hague, Court emissaries descended upon the Princess Juliana and dragged her home. She protested that she and she alone must help the cantor study so that a new Caruso might be given to the world. But Queen Wilhelmina sniffed and placed her daughter under the surveillance of an army of tutors.

The whole story has been common knowledge in Holland and has been verified, but no newspaper throughout the land has yet dared to print it.

INTER CLUB BILLIARDS.

B. L. S. Leading by 440 Points.
In last night's games of the inter club billiard tournament, played at the B.I.S. rooms, the Clubs again divided the honors, but on the total scores the B.I.S. added 97 points to their lead, bringing it up to 440 points.

The first players to string off were A. Sellars (Masonic) and S. Constantine (B.I.S.) and an interesting game resulted. At the very beginning Sellars took the lead and at the hundred mark was 100 points ahead. After this Constantine got a run, and soon was on a level with his opponent. For a time both players passed and re-passed each other and they tied at 298. Here Sellars made a 36 break, which was followed by a 19 and a 17 by Constantine, who was 342 when his opponent was 344. Sellars then made the necessary six, and the final scores were: Sellars 350; Constantine, 342. The breaks were:—

A. Sellars (Masonic)—350—16, 12, 13, 12, 10, 10, 11, 12, 13, 10, 10, 15, 36—190.
S. Constantine (B.I.S.)—342—16, 13, 20, 11, 12, 12, 10, 11, 14, 11, 10, 19, 17—176.

At the Masonic rooms Sellars defeated Constantine by 61 points.

The second pair to play were N. Wadden (B.I.S.) and H. Dickinson (Masonic) and this also proved an interesting game. At the beginning of play Dickinson got the balls run-ning and when he had reached the century mark was leading by seventy points. Here, however, his luck turned and for the balance of the game he could not get the balls to run. Wadden on the other hand had matters practically in his own hands, and he gave a fine exhibition. He soon overtook his opponent and after passing him increased the lead to 105 points, the final scores being Wadden, 350; Dickinson, 245. The breaks were:—

N. J. Wadden (B.I.S.)—350—12, 24, 23, 22, 14, 10, 31, 14, 22, 14, 23, 15, 10—234.
H. W. Dickinson (Masonic)—245—10, 13, 10, 15, 12—50.

FOOTBALL COACH LEFT $4,500 TO HIS WIDOW.

DEDHAM, Mass., Dec. 4.—The late Percy D. Haughton, famous Harvard and Columbia University football coach, left an estate consisting of $70,000 in personal property, and real estate valued at $4,500. Under the terms of the will, which was filed in the Norfolk County Probate Court, Wednesday, his widow, Mrs. Glendolyn Houghton, is the sole beneficiary.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF THE PRO. BOXERS AND WRESTLERS.

Sid Terrell, the little Ghetto lightweight from the East Side of New York and Sammy Mandell, who learned boxing from the soldiers in the wartime army camp at Rockford, Ill., have been tentatively matched for a 15 round battle here next February, in which the lightweight championship may be decided.

This bout would nominate beyond any dispute the runner-up to Benny Leonard. And then if Leonard should confess his inability to make the lightweight limit any more, the winner would be recognized as champion. Leonard at present appears to be far above 125 pounds, and, in a show-down he might follow the example of Johnny Dundee, who confessed he was no longer a feather-weight and vacated the title.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Tex Rickard is ready to out-gamble any of the California promoters who, encouraged by the passage of a new California boxing law, attempt to bid against him for Jack Dempsey's new fight. Rickard's press agent sent out a typed state paper Wednesday in which he said Rickard plans to toss Dempsey and Tom Gibbons into the famous old dog-pit of Madison Square Garden for a sequel to their fight, at Selby, Mont., as the grand finale of the Garden.

"Before Kearns left for California recently, he told me that if Tom Gibbons should beat Kid Norfolk decisively when they meet next week, he would have no trouble making a deal because Dempsey wanted to fight his last fight for me. The last show in the Garden will be put on May 5, and

TENSE, GRIPPING, HEART-STIRRING EMOTIONAL DRAMA
Suspense that mounts from scene to scene, and holds you fast in its fascinating grip—
A story of the hour—of how a man thought everything had its price—even a woman's soul—written by the distinguished writer, Hector Turnbull—

SEE IT AT THE MAJESTIC TO-DAY!

Fox Comedies
Helen Wainwright is a young girl who has been given a conventional, finishing-school education and is now expected, by her worldly minded aunt, to make a rich marriage with Lee Morton, a hard young millionaire who believes, with Mrs. Wainwright, that money can buy anything that he wants. He wants Helen. At first the girl is somewhat dazzled by his attentions, but soon she realizes that she does not really love him, but her childhood pal, Donald Scott, now a poor young architect. Helen's fight to give her heart where she chooses rather than sell it in the marriage market makes a story of strong dramatic appeal.

However, he was soon calmed by the finding of a $500 bill in his hen-house. The thieves, evidently, were reckless with their money as well as with chickens.

The following day two men drove up and inquired if he had any pullets for sale, he replied that he had sold all the chickens he intended to sell, having received $25 apiece for twenty birds but a day before.

A Record Gas-Pipe

A steel tube, 1 1/2 in. in diameter and 210 miles long, which, when completed, will be one single piece, is under construction between Beaumont, Texas, and the natural-gas fields near Shreveport, United States.

That a jointless tube of such tremendous length is possible is due to the fact that every junction between sections is sealed by oxy-acetylene welding. Ordinarily they would be joined together by screw couplings. This pipe line, which will carry natural gas to Beaumont, crosses two rivers, many creeks, and runs underground through four States.

AT THE DRY DOCK.—The sealing steamers Seal and Terra Nova came off dock yesterday, and the S.S. Prospero and schrs. Olive Moore and Cecil Jr. went on for repairs.

The Labrador Boundary

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—When you spoke of the line drawn due north from Blanc Sablon to the fifty second parallel of north latitude as being the western boundary of Newfoundland and Labrador, you were partly right. It is indeed part of the western boundary. The rest of the western boundary begins further west on said parallel at a point where said parallel cuts the divide between the waters which flow into the Atlantic and those which flow into Hudson's Bay and Hudson's Straits. The fifty second parallel was evidently chosen because it most nearly approached a former northern boundary of the Province of Quebec. The "head waters of the River St. John" was once the point from which that northerly boundary was drawn in a westerly direction. The fifty second parallel was a more definite boundary. The Charter of 1680 gave the Hudson's Bay Company rights on all the land drained by all the rivers, lakes, sounds and streams which emptied their waters into Hudson's Bay and Hudson's Straits. That land and these rights were bought by the Dominion of Canada, and a part of them given by the Dominion to the Province of Quebec. We claim that all of the Labrador Peninsula north of the fifty second parallel together with a three-cornered piece south of the parallel and east of a line drawn due north to it from Blanc Sablon, was given to Newfoundland, with the exception of that part previously granted to the Hudson's Bay Company.

As to what constitutes the entrance of Hudson's Straits there are three possible interpretations. In the first place there are, strictly speaking, two entrances. The first is where the Straits enter the Bay. This is not admissible in our case, because the Hudson's Bay Company was given rights in the Straits. The other two points are Cape Chidley on the east of Ungava Bay, and Cape Walsingham on the west. Cape Walsingham was Sir William MacGregor's choice, and, as a scientist, Sir William was right, for there the Straits really begin. From a lawyer's point of view, however, Cape Chidley would most probably be the entrance; because the legal definition of a term is that in which it was commonly understood when it was written. Among my grandfather's effects I found evidence which makes me believe Cape Chidley is the point.

The most valuable part of Newfoundland and Labrador, as far as we can discover, lies in the Southwest corner—about Hamilton Inlet. Great water-powers, immense timber resources and, I believe, valuable minerals are to be found there. It is to be hoped that no pulling of wires by those who have already concessions there will induce our legislators to part with this valuable property. I would like to see the matter fought out before the Privy Council. Most of the delay we have suffered and a great deal of the expense to which we have been put have been caused by the Quebec people, who, in my humble opinion, have been bluffing and are now trying to get by conference what they feel they will lose in court.

Yours truly,
WARWICK SMITH.

Nucleus of English Fox Farm

LONDON, Dec. 4 (Can. Press)—Twenty pairs of silver foxes, just arrived from Canada, are now in spacious wire partitions at Little Baldon, six miles from Oxford. They are to be the nucleus of an English silver-fox breeding industry. Captain A. S. Robertson, a man of much experience in this industry, which is a valuable one in Canada, brought them over and sees no reason why this industry should not flourish in England.

The 40 pioneer foxes seem comfortable enough. They vary from almost-black to a light silvery grey, and the dark ones are paired with the light ones, to obtain the exact shade of silvery grey which is most favored for their furs by fashionable women.

Captain Robertson says he could not afford to lose one. A list of prices for pelts gives as high as £134, while the average price for a pelt is £50. The wire netting which encloses the foxes goes down two feet in the ground, so he thinks there is not much danger of one of these valuable animals escaping into the open country.

Skeletons of Franklin North Pole Disaster

FOUND IN THE ARCTIC CIRCLE.

Copenhagen, Dec. 4.—Knud Rasmussen, the Danish explorer just back from three years in the Arctic, believes he found the skeletons of some of the members of the lost Franklin Expedition in King William's Land. He says it was possible to identify them by the remnants of their clothing and shoes.

The expedition, headed by Sir John Franklin, started out in 1845. It found the North West Passage but none of its members lived to tell about it. Sir John died in 1847 and the rest of the party, 129 men, died trying to get back after their ships were lost in the ice.

For years their fate was a mystery, but finally due to the efforts of Franklin's widow, who impoverished herself to fit out search parties, the last record of the party was found, telling of their decision to desert the ships and strike out across country. Some of the bodies were found, and Rasmussen told of seeing the party toiling on, losing men at frequent intervals.

Rasmussen believes the men might have saved themselves by going to live with the Eskimos until they could work their way back to civilization. There have been many tales of blond Eskimos reported from the north and the explanation has usually been that these are descendants of some of the lost men of the Franklin Expedition, but Rasmussen scots this version that any were saved.

Work Done by Women

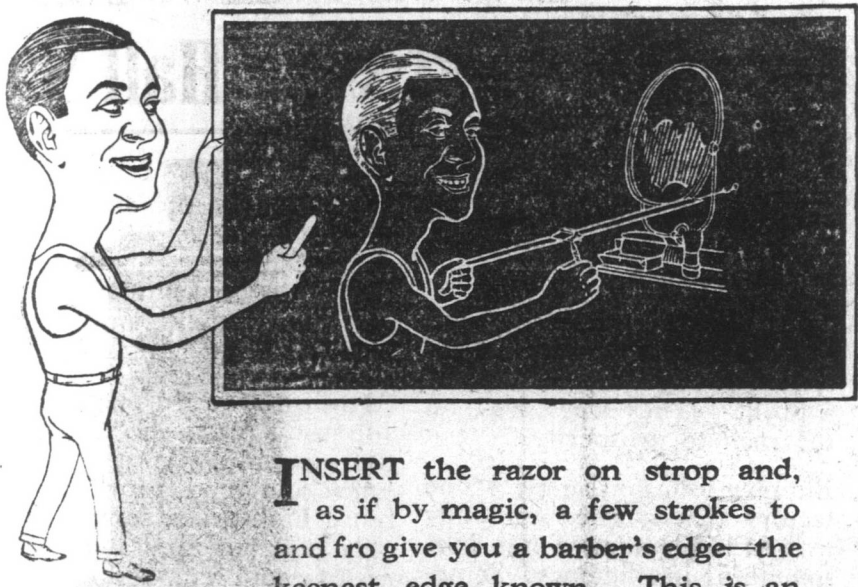

OTTAWA, Dec. 3 (Can. Press)—The Journal has a sympathetic reference to the editorial column to the work done for women in England by Mrs. Wintingham in Parliament. Mrs. Wintingham's work to Lady Astor are quoted as follows: "I recall how we have worked together for temperance, for equal citizenship, for women police, for franchise, for better protection children, and for social hygiene generally. Even though I am no longer a member of the House I shall what I can from the outside to work for the reforms I have so much heart in."

"This is a formidable list," says the Journal. "The fact that several of these important phases of social reform had never been tackled until the advent of Lady Astor in the House of Commons is evidence that men are liable to miss the value of progressive legislation affecting the standing and well-being of women and children, and that there is a real need for women in the Parliamentary councils of the nation."

"Lady Astor and Mrs. Wintingham together have worked for the removal of gross injustices to women and children. Offhand one would think that in these enlightened days their task was easy—but men are—perhaps unconsciously—prone to consider only the interests of men or to get a wrong view of the demands of women. Strangely enough the most progressive and radical among the men legislators oftentimes are to be found among the die-hard Conservatives or old-fashioned Tories when it comes to legislation affecting women. "Mrs. Wintingham's disappearance from the House of Commons may handicap the movement, but, even if Lady Astor were removed also, there is no reason to believe that the breach would not be filled by other women, and there is every assurance that the storming of the male strongholds of parliamentary privilege will eventually succeed."

The Vicar's Visits.

NO USE FOR HYPOCRISY.

The Rev. J. H. White, vicar of St. Mary's, Tyndall's Park, Clifton, Bristol, addressing members of the Church of England's Men's Society on parochial visiting, said it would not be correct to receive him in anything short of the best room.

"And though the eldest daughter may walk the street without a vestige of sleeve upon her arms, it would be shocking were her mother to be found with her own rolled up engaged in honest toil. "Where the company gathered round the fire is discussing the theatre or the Turt, there is no occasion, on the entry of the vicar, to switch on to hymn tunes or foreign missions. The clergy are apt to get rather overfed with these somewhat threadbare subjects.

"There should be no occasion, on the entry of a clergyman, to cover up the decanter with an antimacassar or to throw cards out of sight, so as to appear deeply interested in a church family newspaper."—Daily Mail.

Grown Up

Child, child, child!
What have they done with thee?
Where is the little child
Who laughed upon my knee?

My son is straight and strong,
Ready of lip and limb;
'Twas the dream of my whole life long
To bear a son like him.

He has griefs I cannot guess,
He has joys I cannot know;
I love him none the less:
With a man it should be so.

But where, where, where
Is the child so dear to me,
With the silken-golden hair,
Who sobbed upon my knee?

Land Held Two and One-Half Centuries

CHANGES HANDS IN MONTREAL.

For only the second time in nearly three hundred years, the strip of land situated between Cote Des Neiges Road and the car lines leading up to Westmount Boulevard, has changed hands, says the Montreal "Star."
Passing along Cote des Neiges Road to-day one notices that a broad expanse of the city below, heretofore obstructed by the wall built over two hundred years ago by the Gentlemen of Saint Sulpice, has now been thrown into view. For many years there have been complaints about the presence of this old wall, but it stayed on. No doubt residents of that section of the city will now rejoice with its disappearance, although the new houses being constructed on the property will blot out at least part of the picture.
The property which has just been purchased by the Newton Dakin Construction Company has been in the hands of the Sulpicians since 1657, and belonged previously to that, to the Montreal Society.
The "Societe de Montreal," as they called themselves, was a party of high church people in Paris, who received the island as a grant from the King in 1640, and raised money to send a governor and settlers here, as well as missionaries to convert the Indians.
Seven years later, the town and island of Montreal was in danger of being abandoned. Many of the members of the Society were old and others lost interest in their colony. It was then, in the year 1650 that the Gentlemen of St. Sulpice accepted charge of Montreal. Before making the actual settlement in 1657, four Sulpicians were sent to Montreal to take charge of the seignoury and the Church. Until that time the Jesuits were the only religious order that had been here and there had been no parish, and all the registers were kept in Latin. On the arrival of the Sulpicians a parish was formed, with Gabriel Souart as its first rector.
Later the Society of Montreal made a definite donation of all its rights to the Seminary of St. Sulpice, who received the grant of the whole island with the understanding that they would bring out settlers. The Act of taking possession was drawn up and ratified by Louis XIV., and the Sulpicians actually took possession of the island on the eighteen of August 1663, and all the land was divided under seignourial tenure.
By degrees tenants bought over their land from the seigneurs, and became free-holders, although many farmers throughout the province still prefer to pay their rent of five or ten dollars a year, rather than buy the farms which are worth perhaps as much as fifty thousand, many of them more.
Now the Sulpicians have parted with another section of their property which still extends over a large territory west of Guy street.

Russian Warship Disarmed

And Admiral Removed by French Government.

BIZERIA, Tunis, Dec. 5.—The squadron of General Baron Peter Wrangel, who was the head of the anti-Bolshevik campaign in the Crimea, which has been lying in Bizertia Roads since December, 1920, was disarmed to-day. All the guns, torpedo tubes and other armaments were removed from the two battle-ships, two cruisers, nine torpedo boats and four submarines comprising the squadron. Part of the crews were dispersed, while the remainder have been given shelter in the French Naval Barracks at Sidi Almez.
A Soviet Commission recently was appointed by the Moscow Government to come to Bizertia and demand the return of the war craft to the Soviet Government. A threat by Admiral Exelman's Port Admiral of Bizertia and Commander-in-Chief of the French naval forces in North African waters, that he would have the Russian Commission thrown into the sea if it called on him, resulted in the Admiral being removed from his post by the French Government.

Is Your Child Undernourished?

Your child may not be sick, but unless he is a noisy, rollicking, romping youngster—full of activity, energy and life—he is probably undernourished.

Undernourishment does not mean lack of sufficient food. It means in the food—elements in the food—elements that promote energy and growth.

Brick's Tastless

contains these needed elements in just the right degree and it is rich in vitamins—that mysterious "something" that makes children grow and keeps those of advanced years fit and energetic.

LONDON PAPERS REPORT BASE-BALL IN CRICKET TERMS.

London.—When the Giants and White Sox played their first exhibition baseball game in London last month, some of the newspapers sent their golf reporters out to do the story of the proceedings. Most of the journals, however, conferred the assignment upon their cricket writers. It was in the momenclature of cricket that all of them reported to the populace upon what they had seen.

Each and every one of them pitted the poor batter because his bat was so small and the fielders' gloves so large. One writer compared the bat to a bismontide, and the gloves to suet-puddings able to absorb every ball that came within reach.

But what most struck the British reporters in this "unfairness of the allocation of the armor" was the catcher's "coat of mail" was the umpires "triple wadding around the chest." Only the batsman was "subject to complete disarmament."

The Manchester Guardian reporter found baseball "monotonous," and the veteran golf chronicler of the Morning Post adjudged it a slow game, bravely setting down that opinion in full expressed knowledge that there is no more certain way to make an American really angry. The game that one of them found monotonous and the other slow was won with a ninth inning rally, and among the fielding performances had been a triple play.

Nearly all of the British reporters expressed admiration for the fielding end of the baseball business, the speed and accuracy of the running, catching and throwing appealed to them greatly. But the batting, and especially the laws governing four balls, failed to impress them as very interesting. One man seemed grieved to learn that the batter not only misses as many as he hits, but that "when he connects he is hampered by a rule which makes all strokes to the right of mid-off or the left of mid-on technically foul." Mid-off and mid-on are cricket field markings comparable to the third and first base-lines. The writer seemed to be further distressed by the fact that the area within which the batter can make a counting shot is inconveniently plastered with fieldsmen, who are so fast and efficient that they rarely miss anything reachable, and as rarely throw a yard wide of their mark.

This business of foul and fair balls stepped her in a flood of words. "All of the hitting has to be done well in front of the wicket," wrote one. "Anything that goes, in cricketers' language, toward point or square-left or behind the wicket does not count. The result is that the achievement of scoring is excessively difficult because the fielders, armed with suet-pudding gloves, can be relied on to stop or catch everything that comes to them, and 'the round' which the battling side must cover is a very large one. The only hope is to slog the ball out of the grounds."

Perhaps the most striking novel thing about baseball to the British mind is the amount of talking and shouting and howling that go with the game. How a pitcher can pitch with Hugley Jennings razzing him from the third-base line and the crowd yelling remarks of a not particularly complimentary nature, is a little more, seemingly, than the quiet, peaceful Briton can understand. Nor does he find it easy to comprehend how a batsman can be so insensitive as to be able to do his job with the catcher chattering away on a line of intentionally irritating remarks.

That the Giants and White Sox will succeed in their aim of implanting baseball in Great Britain no native believes. To the majority of the English it seems to be a slow, monotonous game. It does not last three days like a cricket match, with several hundred runs and time out for tea and lunch. But nevertheless and notwithstanding, they do find it slow.

FIGHTING FOOLS.
There are fools and fools in the fight craft upon whom we shower praise for their gluttony within the fistic circle. Men fight for love, for honor and for money. Some fight for all three. To ward off assault, of course, man will battle, as will animals. But then it is in the defensive mood, and self-defense is the greatest instinct in man.
We like the man who fights for the love of fighting, providing, of course, he does not provoke battle. The braggard is not a likeable person; the trouble-hunter always meets his just deserts. So we sift out the various kinds of Fighting Fools and discover among them strange and wonderful men.
There are, for instance, men like Kid Williams, Johnny Buff, Ad Wolgast and Bob Fitzsimmons. Here are four distinct types in the field of fighting. Men actuated by a strange fighting complex. Fitz loved to fight beyond the measure of his endurance and so did Wolgast. From the day Bob Fitzsimmons left Cornwall and strayed to far-off Australia and thence came to America, fight was in his blood. There is no doubt of that.
It was an instinctive impulse in his being. This ungainly person with the gigantic shoulders, the crushing punch and the awkward shiftness and skill that amounted to real boxing science, loved his fight every minute of the time he lived. We see him mounting higher and higher in the pugilistic firmament, reaching finally, the very pinnacle and then, realizing Father Time was about to halt his pugilistic activities, poor old Fritz could not resist the last impulse, the instinctive demand from within him to engage in one final combat.

And that was the tragedy of it! The end of a great and mighty Fighting Fool!
Bill Lang, an Australian, who sought the laurels Fitz once had held, knocked Ruby Roberts out in Sydney in 1909 in twelve rounds and with the defeat went the passing of a once noble fistic hero.

Or Ad Wolgast much might be written. He had that strange ability to throw off defeats without mental anguish and the vitality to keep on and on. But his end, like that of Fitz, was a sad one.

Ad to-day is but a misty shadow of the man who whipped Nelson. He was a Fighting Fool who is now paying for his folly.
Wolgast was a Fighting Fool who should have ended his career at its peak. Once he started on the decline his fall was rapid. And yet we cannot criticize this marvel of the ring for his unwillingness to stop aside while yet the laurel was green upon his brow. How few of us recognize the turning roads of destiny!

Kid Williams, another champion; Johnny Buff, still another, are Fighting Fools. We use the present tense for these are still at it. Williams is trying to regain the bantamweight crown. The little Baltimore Flash can flash as of yore but he can no longer flare for extended periods. His limit is a few rounds.

The smell of resin, the sound of stamping feet, the sight of shifting arms, and flailing fists magically draw Williams into the ring. A master craftsman in his time, he possesses to-day an uncanny skill and a power behind his punches.

What a fate, what a glorious one if he should remount his throne!
Johnny Buff not very long ago staged a remarkable fight in New Jersey and, as he put it, "did his comeback in fine style." Since then he has won several important battles in his attempt to regain his crown. There is a considerable stretch of the pugilistic highway for Johnny to trudge over before the final turn in the road.

This road may not be the road along this pugilistic thoroughfare, may be Johnny will go full of fighting as only a fighting man fight.

Why does a Fighting Fool cease his toll, leave well enough alone and turn a easy chair and the fire side or the fields of endeavor?

Surely they know that history ever repeats itself and that the defeated champions who live a us and have passed the fighting are numbered by just ONE!

Yes, they know that and they not—because they are Fighting Fools.
MARINE SETS WORLD RECORD.
LIMA, Peru, Nov. 27.—Capt. Jackson, U.S. Marine Corps, set a world's record here recently in Pan-American Rifleman's match by 100 consecutive cartons and points. Sergt. Morris Fisher, 95 out of 100 from a kneeling position. Stephen Monahan, Chicago, leads in the free-position match, 98 and 95.

FACTORY FOR SALE

FOR five years Worthington travelled the highways and byways, setting his nets in the currents of business. And his catches were increasing in size and importance.

The clear head and steady hand of Johnson, his partner, put his orders through the factory for a profit. They were well on the road to prosperity.

But now Johnson is gone. The factory that worked smoothly under his guidance has lost something in efficiency. Someone must take his place.

Worthington decided to come in off the road and to hire someone to take the orders—to reap where he had sown. But the new man didn't seem to have any luck, so Worthington got another idea. He would spend half of his time inside and the other half on the road.

The latter scheme didn't seem to work either. The books showed losses week after week. Down, down went the business, and shortly the "Factory for Sale" sign was hung out.

Someone could have taken Johnson's place—no man is indispensable. Worthington knew of a good, proved man—but a high-priced one. "If I only had ten thousand dollars cash I could tempt him," Worthington had said. But he didn't have the ready money, the business went to smash and he had to start anew.

Business Life Insurance would have saved this business, as it has saved others. Ask us to send you our booklet which tells all about it.
