The Mystery of Rutledge Hall

OR

"The Cloud With a Silver Lining"

CHAPTER I.

"No, she is a sensible girl," rejoined Lady Eva. "Handsome as she is, she could not have expected such good fortune. Men do not generally care to marry girls who have no antecedents, neither family, nor position, nor money."

"But Sibyl is so beautiful, mamma."

"Yes; but that alone is not sufficient," Lady Eva answered. "She is too silent on the subject of her family not to wish to hide something."

"But one does not marry a woman's family—one marries herself," remarked Stephen, coolly, from the depths of his arm-chair.

"But one likes to know whom one is marrying," Lady Eva returned quickly. "Mr. Rutledge is so hopelessly in love that he does not consider the matter sufficiently, perhaps, and Miss Nell is a very lucky girl."

"How lucky, indeed?"

"To marry so well," Lady Eva answered, relapsing into her usual languor, but glancing keenly at her son nevertheless.

"To marry a man she dislikes," Stephen said contemptuously.

"Why should she dislike him?" Lady Eva said, plaintively, frowning a little.

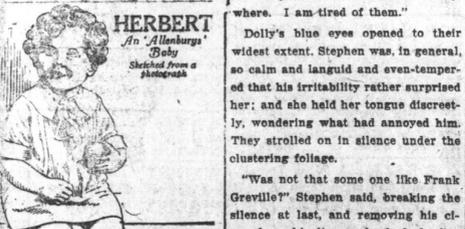

"I know no reason; but that she does so is almost evident," Stephen replied calmly. "Dolly, some more sugar, if you please."

"I have seen nothing to make me suppose she dislikes him," his mother rejoined.

"Have you not, madre? Where have your eyes been?"

"I saw that she was flirting with Frank Greville," Lady Eva said, putting down her empty cup. "But that, of course, would be absurd. He is some years her junior. Mr. Greville would not hear of it, and Frank could not marry without his father's consent. Besides, Mr. Greville has other views for his son."

"Frank is hardly likely to let those views prevent him from falling in love," Stephen replied.

her's cigar was burning redly in the twilight, when Dolly suddenly quickened her pace.

"There is Sibyl on the second seat," she said, hurriedly. "She is resting, I suppose."

"Yes, that is Miss Nell," Stephen responded, hastening also; while Dolly raised her voice and called out gaily: "Sibyl, Sibyl!"

"There was no answer, and the lady on the seat did not turn her head toward them.

"She has gone to sleep," Dolly said, laughing, as they hurried on; but the next moment, when they reached the seat, they found that she was not asleep; but evidently a prey to some overwhelming fear or agitation, which made Dolly run to her pityingly and put her arms round her.

"Why, Sibyl, what is it, dear?" she asked, gently; and Miss Nell rose, looking around her with wild terrified eyes.

Even her intense pallor and convulsive agitation could not conceal the wonderful beauty of Dolly Daunt's governess. Her features were perfectly regular and purely Greek in outline; her eyes, now wide and wild and fearful, were "darkly, deeply, beautifully blue;" in stature she was tall and queenly, and the graceful form which stood swaying to and fro was clad in soft dark robes which fitted it to perfection.

"What is it, Sibyl?" Dolly repeated. "Are you ill, Oh, Stephen, she will fall!" the girl cried, in distress.

"She has been frightened," said Stephen, in a low voice, giving the falling form the support it needed. "There is nothing to fear now, Sibyl," he added gently.

At first the gentle words seemed to have no significance, for the girl stared at him wildly; but the next moment she murmured something unintelligible with pallid lips, the convulsive movements of her hands ceased, and her head fell back on Stephen's shoulder as she fainted away.

CHAPTER II.

One of the largest houses in the High Street of Ashford was a substantial gray-stone building situated midway up the street and divided from it only by a tall iron railing and a narrow strip of grass. This residence, known by the name of the Gray House, was occupied by Dr. Arnold, who was, as his father had been before him, the principal medical man in the town, the increase in the size and importance of which made the present physician's position a far more important and remunerative one than his father's had been.

The Gray House stood in the heart of the town, and it was a large, roomy old-fashioned house, extremely comfortable, and not without a certain picturesqueness of its own. The hall door, approached by broad stone steps, was in the centre of the building, and opened into a wide flagged hall, on either side of which were the sitting-rooms, while a glass door at the other end opened into a charming old-fashioned garden, which led into some fields beyond. The surgery and consulting-rooms had been built at the side of the house, and were approached by another entrance.

The dining-room at the Gray House was on the left-hand side of the hall, and faced the High Street. It was a large low-ceiled room, with three long narrow windows overlooking the patch of grass before the house, a sunshiny, melancholy room, a charm about it notwithstanding, or perhaps because of its melancholy. The furniture was old-fashioned, but extremely handsome; there was quaint old sil-

lence for some minutes, then Dolly spoke, with just a suspicion of timidity in her sweet girlish voice:

"Do you think Sibyl will marry Mr. Rutledge?" she asked.

"If he asks her, I dare say she will," Stephen answered, hurriedly, some painful feeling making his voice rather husky and strained. "For goodness sake, drop the subject, Dolly! I am tired of it. For the last month Miss Nell's matrimonial chances have been the subject of conversation everywhere. I am tired of them."

Dolly's blue eyes opened to their widest extent. Stephen was, in general, so calm and languid and even-tempered that his irritability rather surprised her; and she held her tongue discreetly, wondering what had annoyed him. They strolled on in silence under the clustering foliage.

"Was not that some one like Frank Greville?" Stephen said, breaking the silence at last, and removing his cigar from his lips as he looked after a man's figure hurriedly disappearing in the direction of the lodge.

"I did not notice," Dolly answered. "It would not be Frank though, Stephen, because he has not been here this afternoon."

"He may have met Miss Nell in the grounds, and remained with her."

"Shall we go down the covered walk, then?" Dolly suggested. "We shall meet Sibyl, if she is still out."

They turned into a walk leading from the avenue to a more retired part of the grounds, which was so favorite a walk of Lady Eva's when she was able to be out that it was generally called "My Lady's Walk," and one or two pretty garden-seats had been placed there for her convenience. The young people were walking slowly, still arm in arm, and the tip of Step-

Call for Drastic Naval Economies

Drastic naval economies are being ordered by the Admiralty to meet the cost of the new cruisers and other boats.

This is revealed by a remarkable official letter made public by the Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth. It says: "The rebuilding of the Fleet which has become necessary is throwing a very serious burden upon the financial resources of the country, and it is incumbent upon the Admiralty to scrutinize with the utmost severity every detail of its expenditure and contribute in every possible way to the restoration of the economic position of the country."

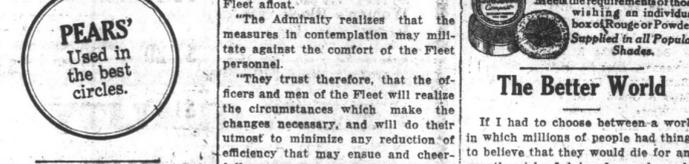

"The strength of the Empire depends not only upon its armed forces, but upon its general prosperity. Collapse of world power and prestige would follow as rapidly upon bankruptcy as upon loss of military power."

"Every effort will also be made to effect economies in the administration of the Admiralty establishments, dockyards, etc. ashore and in the Fleet itself."

"The Admiralty realizes that the measures in contemplation may militate against the comfort of the Fleet personnel."

"They trust therefore, that the officers and men of the Fleet will realize the circumstances which make the changes necessary, and will do their utmost to minimize any reduction of efficiency that may ensue and cheerfully accept any inconvenience or discomfort which may accompany them."

Fighting the Death-Watch Beetle

OUR TIMBER-EATING PESTS.

In an unusually interesting article in the August "Pearson's Magazine," Professor Maxwell-Lefroy, of the Imperial College of Science and Technology, South Kensington, tells of a body of entomologists who are constantly fighting insect menaces.

Regarding the death-watch beetle, which attacks the wooden beams of cathedrals and churches, and which has already cost this country many hundreds of thousands of pounds for renovations, Professor Maxwell-Lefroy writes:—

"The egg of the beetle is laid on the surface of the wood or in cracks in the wood; the grub, on hatching out, tunnels into the wood for nearly three years, after which it bores its way to the surface, leaving but a thin layer of wood between itself and the outside of the beam. It then changes to the chrysalis, and a few weeks later becomes the adult beetle, which comes out of the wood in the following spring for the purpose of mating."

"From the above it will be seen that out of the four stages of its life-history the beetle is fairly easy to get at in three, viz. the egg, the chrysalis, and the adult."

"Chemical means are used for its destruction in the application of a fluid which is sprayed on to the beams in the spring, killing the adults and eggs lying at the surface. The fluid used is of such a character that it penetrates the wood, depositing a poisonous substance capable of killing the grubs when they bore their way to the surface."

"Besides Westminster Hall, many other buildings, including St. Paul's Cathedral and Middle Temple Hall, have been successfully treated."

"In addition to chemical treatment, a beetle has been found whose business it is to feed upon the death-watch. This most welcome creature is at present rather scarce, and so attempts are to be made to breed it in numbers and to see how far it will go towards exterminating our timber-eating pests."

WHAT IS SAN-O-SPRAY

Certain filthy and pestiferous insects have for many years been the bane of households, hotels and institutions. While most of us have become accustomed to them because of their general prevalence and the difficulty of destroying them, there is now no need of tolerating them any longer. Since the discovery of SAN-O-SPRAY, it is very easy to rid the premises of Cock-Roaches (water bugs), Bed-Bugs, Moths, Flies, Mosquitoes, Ants, Fleas, Weevils, etc., by applying SAN-O-SPRAY to the retreats of these pests.

Just Folks

By EDGAR GURNEY
DARK DATA.

Life has laughter in it. Smiles and songs of gladness. But the care-free minutes stay not constantly. Cares must come to vex us. Burdens we must bear. Problems grave and perplexing. As through life we fare.

Life has hours of duty, days of trial, too. Ugliness and beauty. Age has wandered through hills to climb and follow. Where our feet may rest. After pleasure, follows many a cruel test.

None forever dancing. None forever sad. Yesterday's romancing. Was a joy we had. Now our hearts are aching. With the hurt of grief. Shall we, God forsaking. Falter in belief?

God was in our pleasure. God was good to give. In the joy He measures. God is seen to live. Shall He then desert us In our time of fear. When our hearts are aching. Will not God draw near?

Pain and joy are blended. Ever, through the years. Life, until it's ended. Runs through smiles and tears. And the God who gave us joys which slip away. Sends His love to save us. When we meet dismay.

Gossip and Home

NEW COLOURS.

Some new colours are in vogue in the season. The shades of coral, shades of fast dyes, wonderful new reds is coming out. It is predicted that this, too, will run itself to give. It is policy to get it early, as dead rose tint has much to commend it. Blue, of course, is with us. One firm is making speciality of a shade between sage and a royal; other firms periwinkle blue will hold their own.

A New Decoration.

The newest decoration in vogue is a coat of white, with a label of back jet, pierced by a silver arrow. This is quite a change from the single arrow which we have seen so long.

Original Garments.

Some of the new three-piece suits of to-day are quite consisting of a cambric, blue and petticoat, they are often in imitation of georgette and crepe, the usual shape used with a pleated overdress—all front—actually added on a cambric-knecker. Such a gown should be in the same tone as dress with which it is worn, certainly one dare not wear more with some of the newest.

Cleaning White Shoes.

If you mix blanco or white with milk in order to clean shoes it will not rub off in the war. This is a good plan to use with baby's white shoes, which are often responsible for spilling of suits.

Drying Herbs.

If you wish to dry your own pick them clean of decayed put into a sieve, cover with paper, and leave in the sun slow-oven, turning them often as quickly as possible, rub through the sieve, and put in paper or hermetically-sealed bottles.

Apple Cooking.

Apples frequently turn a dull unattractive colour in the oven. When this is the case, the juice of a fresh lemon will restore the colour but also the flavour of apples used in dings or pies or stewed by selves.

Hiding a Dust Bin.

Dustbins can never be decent and are generally very much reverse. The best way to hide is to put up trellis work round spot on which it stands and plant quickly-growing creeper to cover trellis. This will transform the while ugly corner of the garden to a picturesque miniature of a zinc dustbin look better if the painted dark green all over avoid unpleasant smells from dustbin, rinse it frequently with pail full of water to which has added a little carbolic.

New Waterproofing

A French oil for waterproofing tar, cloth, paper and other materials is a mixture of eight parts of asphalt and four of castor oil, with part of sulphur chloride stirred in. Though this forms a jelly, off hydrochloric acid, it liquefies being kept tightly covered a few days, and the acid being then neutralized with barium carbonate, gives a less solution on filtering. To make varnish, nitrocellulose is dissolved in the liquid after the addition of benzene.

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR CORNS AND WARTS.

Some Light Dinner Dishes

In the summer time it is a mistake to go in too much for large week-end joints. When served frequently these joints begin to pall. All the more is this the case when a good deal of cold meat is left over. This entails extra labour on housekeepers—a thing to be avoided as much as possible during the summer. No doubt most people like something substantial for dinner on Sunday, a day of the week when, as a rule, all the members of the family are able to be at home.

The cooking of lamb and veal dishes make a welcome change from the usual roast. These can be recommended not only because they provide something entirely different from a joint, but because they are easily prepared and do not require a large fire for cooking. Such considerations are, of course, of the greatest importance in the warm weather. For a concluding course to a light dinner, the red currant sweet described is quite reasonable and very refreshing.

Lamb Cutlets With Tomatoes.
Take from six to eight lamb cutlets as required, four tomatoes, a finely chopped onion, some stock, pepper and salt. Trim the cutlets; and fry them in a stewpan in their own fat. Remove from the pan and fry the onion; then add the tomatoes cut in thick slices. Add a very little stock, return the cutlets to the pan and season with pepper and salt. Put on the lid and allow the cutlets to simmer very slowly at the side of the fire for an hour and a half. If necessary during cooking, add a little more stock. When ready dish the cutlets on a hot ashtray around the edge in a neat border and keep hot. Sieve the tomatoes, and if desired a little thicker, a small amount of moistened cornmeal may be added and allowed to boil. Coat the cutlets with the sauce, and dish a pile of freshly boiled green peas in the centre.

Veal Olives.
Procure some fillet of veal, 1 1/2 lb. or 2 lb. as required, and cut it into neat slices suitable for olives. Take a slice of bacon for each piece of veal. Make a forcemeat with a teaspoonful of butter, or chopped suet will do. Add a pinch of powdered thyme, a dessertspoonful of finely chopped parsley, pepper, salt, a little egg or milk to bind. Place a piece of bacon on each piece of veal, then spread on some of the forcemeat, then roll and tie. Fry the olives very lightly in the stewpan, then add half a pint of brown sauce, thicken with stock. Put on the lid and allow to simmer very gently for two hours. If stock is used, thicken with a little flour before dish, and, if necessary, add a small amount of brown sugar. Remove the strings, pour the sauce over, and serve with baked tomatoes or freshly boiled green peas.

VEAL HOT-POT.
Take 1 1/2 lb. of fillet of veal, and cut it into neat slices. Chop one or two onions, and wash, pare, and cut into thick slices six or eight potatoes. Have 1/2 lb. of sliced bacon. Arrange all these things in layers in a casserole with seasonings. Leave the potato for the top. Now add fully half a pint of hot stock. Put on the lid and bake the hot-pot in the oven for two hours and a half. If liked, the potatoes may be slightly browned by removing the lid for a short while.

Red Currant Shortcake.
Strip the currants from their stems. Take 1 lb. of them and allow to lie in layers of sugar overnight. Crumble into 1/2 lb. of flour 1/4 lb. of butter, add one tablespoonful of castor sugar, half a teaspoonful of baking powder, a pinch of salt, and sufficient egg to make a firm paste. Knead, cut in two, and line a plate with one piece, now put in the fruit. Cover and ornament neatly, brush with water, sprinkle with fine sugar and bake in a moderate oven until of a pretty golden color. Serve as a teacake or a dinner sweet. If used as the latter, custard sauce flavored with sherry may accompany the sweet.

They Paid the Price

The corporation of the city of Glasgow wanted to purchase the Whistler portrait of Carlyle and in due course waited on the master of the gentle art of making enemies about the price (1,000 guineas). They admitted it was a magnificent picture, but "Do you not think, Mr. Whistler, the sum a wee, wee bit excessive?"

"Didn't you know the price before you came to me?" asked the master, with suspicious blandness.
"Oh, yes, we knew that!" replied the corporation.
"Very well, then," said Mr. Whistler in his suave tones, "let's talk of something else." And so there was nothing else of interest to detain the corporation they paid the price and made an excellent bargain.

Boy Saves Two Lives

Wonderful gallantry of a Lad of Eleven.
Wonderful gallantry was shown by a Middlessex boy, Leonard Griggs, 11, who rescued two other boys, Will and Jack Harris, aged 12 and 10, from drowning in the River Lea at Enfield lock. I was about 100 yards from the river, playing with a friend, explained young Leonard, when I heard a shout for help. I ran for the river, throwing off my coat, knickers and shirt as I ran. I then had on only my shoes and stockings. I did not dive in because I was afraid that by the time I came up it would be too late. I jumped in (the water is 10 feet deep at the place), caught hold of the boy Jack first, got him to a shallow part near the bank, and then went back and caught hold of Will. My friend Albert Horton helped me to pull them both out of the river. As we were going home a man came along in a motor-car and gave the two boys a lift. I did not tell him what I had done, but the other boys did and he came back and gave me 5s. 6d. Leonard, who is the youngest of a family of 10—nine boys and a girl—has been able to swim for three or four years.—News of the World, Aug. 16.

MOTHER'S PIES.

A large red placard was displayed upon the wash-house door; "The kind of pies your mother made—come in, eat three or four." James Doodad viewed it with disdain, and muttered, through his face, "That beanery gives me a pain—let's seek some other place." We walked a block and found a joint that Doodad said would do, and there proceeded to amuse our works with Irish stew. "My mother was a splendid dame," said Doodad, while he ate, "and she was wise to every game that called for pomp and state. No social circle was too high for mother to adorn, but when she deigned to make a pie, our heartstrings all went to tears. We children ate with streaming eyes, the pies and would compound; such fool-proof, gutta percha pies I never since have found. She was a mother fond and dear, her absence makes me ache; but I regard with dread and fear such pies as she would make. I know it's treason why I say the women of the past would jar the bakers of to-day, and make them stand aghast. My memory has taken wings to days of long ago, when pies were thick and clammy things, with tough and soggy dough. I see my mother, calm and wise, and full of grace and charm; but when she turned to making pies she was a false alarm. Away with sentiment, say I, where truth may be concerned, and when my mother made a pie, the crust was always burned."

How to Slay a Grudge

"I forgive you once, and I won't forgive you again." This is what we heard one brother say to another who had unwittingly broken his chisel for the second time. He would not listen to an explanation. "You shall not use another of my tools," he continued. The next day he wanted to borrow a book from that brother. But before he asked for it he remembered he had said he would not lend his tools any more. He said to himself: "Well, I don't care if I did. He owes me something for breaking the tool, so I will think of breaking the tool, so I will just ask for the book." And he did. "Certainly you can have it and keep it as long as you want it," replied the brother without one bit of grudge in his heart. The effect was good, for the very next day he asked his brother to go with him into the tool room, and there he said, "You can use any of them if you wish, only please be careful not to break them." The grudge had disappeared.—Christian Herald.

The Oldest Death Sentence

The oldest death sentence extant is found in the Amherst papyrus containing the trials of state criminals in Egypt, about 1300 B.C. The criminal in this case was found guilty of magic, which his judges state "was worthy of death, which he carried out, and he killed himself," apparently by stabbing, as in the Japanese harakiri, which is also of very ancient origin. Among less civilized peoples 'drowning' would seem to have been the earliest method of legal punishment, for about 450 B.C. the Britons killed their criminals by throwing them into a quagmire. Of other than capital punishments the oldest recorded comes from Chaldea, where it was enacted some 2,000 years ago that when any one named a slave "the hand that thus offended should pay him each day a measure of corn."

Opening Ceremonies at Corner Brook

PRIME MINISTER MAKES PLEASING ANNOUNCEMENT.

On another page of this issue will be found an account of the events which took place at Corner Brook on Monday in connection with the official opening of the Newfoundland Power and Paper Mills, and we trust to publish the balance of the article to-morrow. There are many matters bearing on this momentous event in the industrial history of the Colony to which at a later date we hope to refer, but for the present we wish to call attention to two only, which are referred to in the speech delivered by the Prime Minister at the official dinner.

In a manner which could not be mistaken the Hon. Mr. Monro expressed the hope that the positions in this great enterprise would in course of time be filled by Newfoundlanders, who had already shown their aptitude for the paper making industry in the mills at Grand Falls. In this sentiment we feel certain the whole country will heartily concur, and while we quite realize that at the moment Newfoundlanders may not be obtainable to fill the positions calling for men highly skilled in the trade, we submit that every opportunity should be afforded, particularly by the educational authorities, to enable them eventually to fill these posts. Further as regards those positions which they are capable of filling, there should not be one occupied by men from outside if the services of a Newfoundlanders are available. From conversations held with some of the leading officials of the Company we are led to believe that they are aware of the justice of such views, and are willing to do everything possible towards that end.

An announcement was made by the Prime Minister to the effect that the three members of the Highroads Commission, namely, Hons. S. Milley, W. J. Ellis and Mr. D. M. Baird had intimated their desire to take no remuneration for their services on the Board during the year.

Such a decision, animated by a high public spirit, is most commendable, and is an example to many others whose zeal for the public welfare must be stimulated by it. These gentlemen with the Chief Commissioner, Mr. T. A. Hall, have been unsparing of themselves and have tackled with courage and enthusiasm the many difficult problems with which they have been faced since they first undertook their responsible duties, and already their labours are producing excellent results in the roads which under the direction of Mr. Cochius are being extended in many directions, and if but a small portion of the high praise which is generally being expressed by the public regarding the work reaches their ears, they will realize how great a service they are performing, and we feel certain that in this appreciation they will have their reward.

PEPPYS BEHIND THE SCENES.

August 26th.—Up betimes and abroad, the weather grown fine again and indeed becomes mighty hot, but am troubled more by the high wind which blows the dust everywhere and makes my eyes water. Comes Povey to see me, and would have me go with him on a picnic this afternoon, which I promise to do. He tells me a droll tale of an old lady that did watch him taking some gasoline at garage and did then go to the garage man and asked him if he could supply her with some gasoline—to clean the gloves that she wore. Anon home and do announce to my wife that I have promised that we shall picnic with the Poveys this day, at which she flies into a great rage and would have me explain how I dare make plans without consulting her. Indeed, I did never see her in such a rage before, and did think she had arranged some other manner of spending the day. Bob Lord, 'twas only the contrariness of the wretch, for after beating me for night a half, he tells me that we shall go on the picnic. Methinks, that the only way to be in the right with a woman is to admit that you are in the wrong. The Poveys coming for us anon in their motor coach, we to Seal Cove Bridge, where a most pleasant afternoon, albeit the flies and ants do swarm over everything, to my great discontent. Stopping at Bowring Park on our return, do meet with Dr. Parsons, that I have not seen this long time, and he makes me known to Mr. George Frampton, the great sculptor. He little like what I did imagine him, being mighty broad of shoulder and clean shaven, yet do wear his white hair a little long and his hat has a round crown much like artists do affect. A mighty pleasant gentleman and most interesting in discourse. He much interested in his statue of "Peter Pan" that he erects in Bowring Park, and is a replica of that which he did set up in Kensington Gardens, London.

Magistrate's Court

Two stowaways named Martin and Murphy, given in charge by Capt. Simmons, charged with stowing away on S.S. Muncester, from St. John's to Boston, were each convicted and fined $25.00 or in default, 30 days' imprisonment. A man charged with selling spruce beer overproof, was convicted and fined $10.00 or in default, 30 days' imprisonment. The evidence in the case showed that two ladies and a gentleman visited the store of accused and each ordered a glass of the beer, which they purchased a bottle, a portion of which was consumed on reaching home. They became intoxicated as a result. Later, a bottle, which contained a portion of the beer, was taken to the police station for analysis, which later showed to have contained 9 per cent. alcohol by volume.

Three Stowaways Arrested

Three young men named Strickland, Sears and Peters, who were caught by trainmen yesterday at Whitebourne attempting to steal a ride on a freight train, bound across country, arrived in town by the shore train at 12.45 to-day. Sergt. Nugent who was in waiting, arrested all three and took them to the lock-up. The above men stowed away on the S.S. Muncester about three weeks ago, but as the captain of the ship did not wish to press for punishment they were discharged.

DEBT SETTLEMENT PROPOSALS CAUSE SURPRISE.

LONDON, Aug. 27. Considerable surprise, not altogether pleasurable, has been aroused here by the terms of the provisional settlement of the French debt to Great Britain, but the people are waiting to see whether the forthcoming Anglo-American negotiations will bring a prohibitory influence on the composition of the Anglo-French debt.

Fishery Reports

A report from the collector at Fortune Bay, Mr. J. F. Staple, dated August 18th, states that from English Harbor to Mose Ambrose 6,486 qts. of fish have been landed to date. The report states that good fishing weather prevails, but a number of fishermen are giving up the voyage and proceeding to St. Pierre to work as there is very little doing at the codfishery. In the vicinity of Spaniards' Bay and Island Cove skiffs are averaging from one to two quintals a day, taking fish with trawls. In Port de Grave the trap fishing has been a failure. Hook and liners are doing very little, but there is good prospect with trawls. On the West Coast particularly from Channel to Port aux Basques the fishery prospects are very good, but owing to dogfish being plentiful hook and line fishermen are very much hampered.

Aged Resident of Knight St. Found Dead

An aged resident of Knight Street, in the person of Mr. Ulrich Knight, a retired printer, was found dead in his home yesterday morning, by Sergt. Long and Const. Kenny. Mr. Knight was last seen alive on Monday evening when he went to the Empire Steam Laundry stables to secure a bottle of water from Mr. H. Hanlan. It was not until yesterday that the cause of the death of Knight Street became anxious as to his whereabouts. About 10.20 a.m., Messrs. Mitchell, Myrick and W. Murphy visited his home, and finding the kitchen door barred, they proceeded around to the front of the house, and upon looking through a broken window, into the kitchen, saw him lying on the floor. Myrick, realising that something was wrong, immediately informed his father, who in turn notified police headquarters. Sergt. Long and Const. Kelly arrived on the scene about ten minutes later, and upon forcing the door of the house, they found the body of the man lying on the floor. Alongside was found his coat, vest and collar, which would indicate that having locked the door for the night, he was about to retire. Dr. Anderson was called and on examination pronounced death due to natural causes.

Men Law Cannot Touch

Ambassadors to Foreign Countries Are Privileged.

Great Britain's ambassadors to foreign countries of the first rank are paid £2,000 a year by way of salary, and a special allowance, varying according to the capitals in which they reside, to cover the expenses of entertaining, which are invariably heavy. Indeed, an ambassador needs to be a wealthy man, as he frequently has to dip into his own pocket in order to maintain his prestige at the Court to which he is accredited. One of the best-known ambassadors is said to spend $100,000 a year of his own money in this way. In most cases Britain's ambassadors live rent free, the Government having provided them with residences.—They are also exempt from taxation, and have their own mail-bags, which may not be examined either by post office or customs officials. With certain exceptions they are allowed to import and export goods for their private use without paying the usual duty. Incidentally, their official residences are regarded as British territory. In the country in which he is representative the ambassador is practically immune from municipal jurisdiction. This immunity extends to his wife, his children and the servants of the embassy. Only in the case of some particularly serious offence, such as treason, can the ambassador be arrested, and in this event he may claim the right to be placed under guard in his embassy, instead of being confined in prison. One of an ambassador's main qualifications for his important task is tact. Not only is it his business to maintain the prestige of his country, he must be careful not to ruffle the feelings of other ambassadors, and must take no part in political affairs. These may not seem very arduous duties, but steering clear of difficult situations occupies a considerable portion of an ambassador's time, and not a little of his ingenuity. In other days Britain's ambassadors frequently received princely presents on leaving a foreign court. One ambassador to Russia, for example, was given a parting gift of a large sum in cash, while another received jewels to the value of $25,000. To-day an ambassador counts himself lucky if he receives nothing more substantial than a series of complimentary dinners and a column or two of praise in a foreign newspaper on the manner in which he has discharged his difficult duties.

Lost Explorer Returns

LIVED ON TAPIR FLESH AND CATERPILLARS. Mr. G. M. Dycott, the British explorer, with regard to whose safety anxiety was expressed some time ago owing to lack of news when on his journey through unknown parts of central South America, has returned with his companions to England, says Reuter. He has brought with him various specimens of rare animals and a series of pictures of previously untouched volcanoes and rivers. Mr. Dycott explained that he and his party were lost for some time and were perplexed as to their whereabouts. They managed, by a combination of luck and judgment, to find a way out of the forest land to waterways. During this period the party lived largely on tapir flesh, a particularly tough meat, and large, fat caterpillars.

Tale of a Goat

The contraction of the word Government in an official telegram led to the rural collector of the Enniskillen Rate Council disobeying an order. The telegram which was opened by his wife, read: "Meet Local Govt. Insptr. at Enniskillen." Knowing that he was negotiating for the purchase of a goat, she misread the word "Govt." for "goat," and as it was a long journey to Enniskillen he did not trouble any more about it.

The Indian Mutiny

The Indian Mutiny was the great revolt of the Bengal native army in 1857, which led to the transference of the Indian government from the East India Company to the Crown in 1858. The immediate cause of the mutiny was the great disproportion between the number of British and native troops in India, which gave the Sepoys an exaggerated notion of their power. Its immediate causes were a series of circumstances which promoted active discontent among the British. One of the immediate causes was the greased cartridges. In 1857 the Minto rifle was introduced into the Indian army. The cartridges were greased and one end contained the powder in a paper case. Before loading the powder was released by tearing off the end of the cartridge, and this was done with a knife, and the practice among all soldiers common was to bite the end of the cartridge. Whether Hindu or Mohammedan the fat of cows and pigs are anathema. It was easy for agitators to persuade the Sepoys that the new cartridges were greased with the fat of animals sacred to the Hindus or forbidden to the Mohammedans, and that the British Government was thus engaged in a deep-laid plot for forcing them to become Christians by first making them outcasts from their own religion. No precaution had been taken to grease the cartridges with a neutral fat, such as that of sheep and goats. The low-caste natives employed in the arsenals knew what grease was actually being employed, and taunted the Brahman Sepoys with the loss of caste that would follow their use of the cartridges. Refusals to accept the new cartridges were soon heard in the Bengal army. The agitators, who had their own reasons for fomenting mutiny, rose to the occasion, and in the first months of 1857 the greater part of the Bengal presidency was seething with sedition.

Hints for Your Home

Patent leather that has been scratched should be treated with a mixture of olive oil and jet-black ink. Paint over the scratches with a fine brush, repeating the process two or three times if necessary. When washing up put a piece of lemon skin into the bowl. It will prevent the water, remove all traces of the smell of fish, onions, and so on, and put a fine gloss on the china. Carpets may be brightened and cleaned with warm water into a quart of which two raw potatoes have been scraped and allowed to stand for ten minutes before straining. Rub the carpet with the fluid. Tiled hearths should never be washed with water, as this causes the enamel to split. Dip a cotton cloth in turpentine, and rub the tiles until they are clean. Polish with a soft cloth. To keep cut flowers fresh, place a small piece of common soda in the water in which they are kept. To brighten and hold the colour of cotton material it must be hand-washed carefully the first time it is washed. Put a tablespoonful of salt into each quart of water. Use the same quantity of vinegar in the rinsing water. A soft, clean cloth wetted with paraffin or ammonia will remove soot marks from woodwork. To fumigate a room, drop vinegar very slowly upon a hot iron shovel. When mixing blue in hard water, add a cupful of milk to a tub of blue water. This will prevent the linen from bluing unevenly and becoming streaky. A marble placed in the jam when boiling acts as an automatic spoon, obviating the necessity of stirring. Cheap ones will be hard enough for the purpose, and with care will last quite a long time. When amber beads or ornaments require cleaning they should be washed in milk. Before applying polish to range or cooker remove all grease spots with a rag dipped in turpentine, or a pad of old cloth dipped in soot. An occasional application of furniture polish helps to keep the woodwork back of clothes brush or hair brush in condition. The brush must be perfectly dry when this treatment is applied. Tea should be kept in an airtight tin in a cool place. Coffee should be purchased in small quantities, freshly ground. Goat Furnishes Milk and Churn About 70 miles northwest of Mount Sinai—where, as you remember, Moses received the Commandments—is a butter factory, the machinery of which has not been improved since this day. It consists of a bag of goat skin suspended from a tripod of poles. The Bedouin women partly fill the bag with goats' milk and then have plenty of time to discuss the neighbors as they patiently rock the bag until the butter is separated from the whey.—Popular Science Monthly.

RADIO SALES.

The retail value of radio receiving sets and parts to be sold in 1925 is estimated at $500,000,000, compared with a value of $50,000,000 for sets sold in 1922, according to a survey of the radio industry just completed by the Copper and Brass Research Association. In 1923, it is pointed out, there were hardly 100,000 radio sets in use. In 1924, the number had increased to 2,000,000, and by the close of this year it is estimated that 5,000,000 sets will be in service. These figures illustrate the remarkable expansion in the radio industry during the past four years.

Public interest in radio has gained rapidly and apparently has continued unabated, according to the association. Only a year ago the demand was far in excess of the manufacturers' ability to supply. At that time home-made sets exceeded the factory-made, and there was a corresponding large retail market for radio parts. The last year has been the beginning of stabilization in the industry. The trend is now away from the home-made set toward the set purchased as a complete unit.

The present rate of manufacture, according to the survey indicates that 1925 production will be 2,000,000 sets, in which the consumption of copper and brass will be about 7,600,000 pounds. These metals are used for aerials, ground connections, coils, condensers, tube sockets, panels and miscellaneous parts.

Radio, it is added, now appears to be as universal in its appeal and as much a necessity as the automobile so there is no reason to look for any falling off in sales in the next few years. The radio purchaser is not only a good customer for tubes, batteries, plugs, jacks and other parts, but almost generally he is ready, after using a set for a year or two, to scrap it and replace it with another which has a more stylish cabinet or a newer "hook-up" or more tubes.

GENERAL PETROLEUM.

Increased production, particularly of heavy and crude, and accumulation of fuel has forced erection of additional storage exceeding 3,375,000 barrels in southern California.

General Petroleum Corporation is building 2,280,000 barrels of this total, including a 1,800,000-barrel reservoir at Watson refinery headquarters for all the big operating companies; also five 80,000-barrel steel tanks at Vernon, and another of the same size at Wilmington.

General Petroleum is dismantling 197,000-barrel tank farm at San Pedro on the point above the short end of the government breakwater, its original terminal, and moving these tanks to points where the oil can be more efficiently handled. Its present terminal is on Terminal Island. One 10,000-barrel steel tank is to be shipped to Ketchikan, Alaska.

Balance of new storage planned includes four 125,000-barrel and two 80,000-barrel tanks for California Petroleum; two 1500-barrel tanks for Shell of California and at least half a dozen 80,000-barrel tanks for Union Oil company. Standard of California past year completed at El Segundo, its refinery site, a 3,500,000-barrel reservoir, the largest ever constructed.

10,000 Miles in Air Route

It has been decided by Imperial Airways, who have tendered for the operation of an aeroplane mail between Egypt and India, that a technical party shall be sent to survey the whole route of the proposed service, which runs for about 2,500 miles between Cairo and Karachi, writes the Air Correspondent.

The survey will be conducted solely from the point of view of the commercial operation of this link in the high-speed air line which, it is intended, shall run in stages for 10,000 miles from England to Australia.

Cockleshell Voyaging

"Cockleshell voyaging has become very popular during recent years and many men have set out on all manner of hazardous trips over wide and lonely oceans in craft so tiny that London Bridge to Barking Cross could, with safety, appear to be quite a long way around the world in the unmarvellous, a mere yawl and no larger than the majority of North Sea fishing boats," says a writer in the Nautical Magazine.

"There was the champion tennis player who crossed last year from New York to Nice braving Atlantic weather in a 30 ft. cutter, and now a Toronto gentleman with his wife and two children, in a 25 ft. cutter, has just returned from the Mediterranean, down the Red Sea, and around the world. "Most people would contemplate such a voyage in anything less than a steel screw steamer of appreciable burden as nothing less than a gamble with death, but to a man who understands small craft it is not so full of danger as it appears. Among seamen it is a well-known fact that many a tiny sailing craft has weathered a gale unscathed, coming safely over the edge that have battered the upper deck fittings of many a big freighter to so much scrap iron.

"The reason for this is clear enough when one realizes that the bigger and stiffer vessel offers considerable resistance to wind and sea, and therefore suffers far more than a small cockleshell of a boat bobbing about on a cork and drifting before the sea instead of driving into it. That is the secret of successful seamanship in small vessels, for although a heavy sea may smash a concrete pier yet it cannot smash a cork bottle, and in the same way it is powerless to over-ride a seaworthy vessel however small provided she is tight against inroads of water.

"The open fishing dories which for days and nights are adrift on the Newfoundland Banks seldom come to any harm, and in the same way the fish carrying schooners—the smallest craft regularly crossing the Atlantic—nearly always come safely through the gales that delay liners and batter big cargo boats to pieces. A 30 to 40 ft. cutter properly rigged and riding under reduced canvas will ride out the worst gale that ever blew, and what is more, she is not likely to ship water since she rises immediately to every lift of the sea.

"Nevertheless the men who face these lonely voyages in such tiny craft are of high calibre. Their worst trouble comes not from gale and storm but from long periods of calm when the monotony of tummerable lonely watches in the narrow confines of a small sailing boat becomes unbearable; when day follows day and finds them in much about the same position, under the pitiless heat of a tropical sun, living on rations of not very generous proportions and with no immediate possibility of more. That is the real drawback to cockleshell voyaging."

Rare Jewels of 5,000,000 Rubles Value Discovered

MOSCOW—Hidden in a secret vault in the residence of former Prince Felix Youssouppoff, a treasure in art, antiquities and rare jewels valued at 5,000,000 rubles was discovered recently by a watchman.

The residence of the Prince is now a museum, and it is believed that the watchman's discovery is only a small part of the hidden treasures of Youssouppoff, who formerly was one of the richest men in Russia.

Prince Youssouppoff is known in America for his unusual suit last year against Joseph E. Widener of Philadelphia to recover two Rembrandt's Philadelphia art connoisseur obtained in 1921 in London. Youssouppoff on the stand here said he had made an agreement for eventual repurchase, with interest, but Widener disagreed.

There was a suggestion of a repurchase clause with a proviso against resale within ten years. Widener told the Court he desired to leave the pictures, at his death, to the American public in memory of his father, P. A. B. Widener.

When Youssouppoff sold the pictures for about $500,000 it was said he was in financial straits. He had brought the pictures out of Russia by a ruse—painting a landscape over the Rembrandt portraits to mask their value.

It was in the residence where the treasure horde has been discovered that Rasputin, who had such a hold on the Czarina, was slain. It has been established that Prince Youssouppoff was implicated in the powerful monk's death. Rasputin was lured to the home on the pretext of meeting a woman and was killed. His body was put in the Neva River under the ice and recovered a short time later.

Oceans Without Fish

There is a stretch of the Pacific off the Chilean coast that has no fish in it. It is not quite bare of life, but there are so few fish that fishermen avoid it entirely. A cold Antarctic current strikes the coast in this part, but that does not seem sufficient reason for the absence of fish life, for the cold seas, both north and south, teem with fish.

A similar phenomenon is found in the deeper waters of the Black Sea, but here there is a reason, for the lower waters are said to be poisoned by sulphurous gases rising from the bottom.

An Explorer's Ordeal.

Colonel Fawcett, the well-known South American explorer, tells of dead rivers in the heart of Brazil. He and his companions nearly died of hunger on one such river. Not only were there no fish in the water, but there was no game on the banks. Yet when they reached a spot where this dead river entered another stream, fish and game were found at once.

We get a similar phenomenon in parts of British North America. One creek teems with trout and the next is as dead as bath water. The writer has fished two Scottish burns in Inverness-shire which joined together to form one river. The one coming from the north yielded four dozen fish in one day; the other had hardly a trout in it. The keeper's explanation was that the second stream was the shallower of the two, and consequently froze solid in winter. He may have been right.

Rabbits like a sandy soil, partly because it is well drained, partly because it is easier to burrow in. But you will often see two valleys separated only by a low ridge of hill in both of which soil and vegetation seem similar, yet one is populous with rabbits and the other empty.

Birds are equally odd in their likes and dislikes. There is a wood in a certain river valley which seems an ideal home for birds. The trees are chiefly beech and fir, and there is a splendid undergrowth, with a wide opening in the centre through which the brook flows. The valley sides are high and steep, giving good shelter from storms. The wood should teem with bird life, yet the only birds that visit the place regularly are a few wood pigeons, and the only ones that nest there a pair of kestrel hawks. The wood has long been known as The Birdless Grove.

Mystery Moors.

As every keeper knows, there are coverts where pheasants will not thrive, and moors where grouse cannot live. In the matter of hares, the case is even more puzzling. In parts of South Downs hares are so plentiful that almost anywhere you may see two or three, or even a dozen, lopping along; on another range of chalk hills hares do not exist.

An explorer who has been travelling through Canada, along the northern edge of the forest country, speaks of having passed through a great stretch of territory where all the trees were either dead or dying. So far as he could see, there was no reason for this odd phenomenon. In this area there were many lakes. When the party fishes they caught a few fish, but all were old and large. There did not seem to be any small fry.

It was the same with the game. The few animals left were all full-grown. There were no young. It was, he said, as if this great tract of country was slowly dying, and that for some strange cause all vegetable and animal life was doomed to disappear.

Amazing Air Stunt

DIVE OF FOUR THOUSAND FEET

An amazing dive at 100 miles an hour to what seemed certain death was one of the final thrills of the air race meeting that concluded at Lympne recently. Captain Frank Courtney, one of Britain's most daring pilots, was giving an exhibition of stunt flying, and had just completed a series of loops when he was seen suddenly to nose dive to earth from a height of 4,000 feet.

A gasp went up from the large crowd in the enclosure as the machine, with the engine still running at full speed, disappeared behind the trees at the far side of the aerodrome. Ambulance men, club officials, and the club surgeon hurried to the scene, for it seemed impossible that the airman could have escaped. But a moment afterwards there was the roar of an aero-engine and Captain Courtney shot up over the hangers and dived and rolled above the heads of the astonished crowd.

New Horrors in War

Early in September, the American Navy will test a new invention called the "death stroke," guaranteed to spread death and destruction over a radius of twenty miles. Righteous critics say these horrible inventions make for peace. They claim that when war becomes horrible enough men will be afraid to fight. History does not bear them out. In the old days of bow and arrow fighting, total casualties in warfare were light. But when gunpowder came along, people said: "This will make war too terrible and perhaps end it altogether." But it didn't. With gunpowder there were more wars and more casualties than ever. And then came high explosives, shells, shrapnel and machine guns. Again it was predicted that war had become too terrible to be waged. The Great War was the answer to that. The truth is that the first bullet in war is killing. And the better equipped a nation is to kill, the more confident it is about going to war. There was enough downright hell in the last war to scare humanity into perpetual peace if humanity is ever to be scared into it. But humanity was not scared into perpetual peace.

And no amount of "death strokes" or "death rays" will ever do it. The one way to end war is to get warlike instincts out of the human system.—Vancouver Sun.

From the Ancient Greeks

"To throw dust in one's eyes" is a saying derived from the ancient Greeks. Epaminondas, wishing to surprise the Lacedaemonians, is said to have caused 1,000 cavalrymen to advance in front, kicking up a great dust which the wind blew into the faces of the enemy, thus blinding them to a flank movement he was executing with a view to taking the coveted heights in the rear.

Furs are so supple this year, that some coats are made with reversible brocade linings.

The Gentle Bloodhound

No real reason exists for the common belief that the bloodhound is a fierce animal, ready to tear the person whom it may be tracking to pieces. It is, on the contrary, rather noted for its gentleness, even seeming timid, unless especially trained to attack. The origin of the breed, according to Count Le Couteux de Cantoux, the greatest living authority on the subject, is from the St. Hubert of St. Hubert's abbey in the Ardennes. It dates from the earliest ages, and the breed certainly existed in the time of the Gauls. As regards the name bloodhound, the Count Le Couteux believes that when fox hunting in something like its present form was instituted it was found that the sleuthhound was not fast enough for the purpose, and the present foxhound was evolved from various material, and about this time it became usual in speaking of the bloodhound of the country to call him the bloodhound, meaning the hound of pure blood (as might be said of a blooded horse), to distinguish him from the new hound or foxhound. There is only one breed of pure, genuine bloodhounds, and that is the English.

By Ruth Cameron.

A WISE CLOTHES PHILOSOPHY.

Surely never on this subject just recently. She was admiring a very smart, colorful little frock in a shop window. "I think I will get one of those for a utility dress," she said, "they are so becoming and so useful."

The woman who was with her said: "Yes, they are good looking; but, my dear, I have seen dozens of them already. I am afraid they are going to be awfully common."

Said the woman I admire: "Well, what of it, I don't let it bother me if a thing is common if it's good in line. If it's got bad lines or a fussy style in the first place and then gets copied I'll grant you you get to hate it. But if it's good and simple I don't care if it is copied. If it's attractive and becoming to me I buy it."

Better Uses For Time And Money.
"I'd like to be exclusive if I had the time and money, but it takes an awful lot of both and I need them for other things. So I just try to keep away from things that are fussy or cheap and get things that are simple and becoming and let it go at that."

Don't you think that's a pretty good clothes philosophy for those of us who do not have the time and the money to make clothes our career? I do.

Some Interesting Stamps

Egypt has been using stamps over-printed with the inscription, The Egyptian Kingdom, March 15, 1922. These will soon be displaced by stamps with new designs. A picture of the king will appear on some of the stamps and a vignette of the pyramids on at least one denomination.

Many commemorative stamps have been issued in honor of men and events. Future generations will be interested especially in these anniversary stamps because of the story behind them. Italy has a set of three stamps commemorating the death of Mazzini. Sweden will have a stamp commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Universal Postal Union.

But Not To Others.
Of course to some people the quantity production is an offense in itself. But I heard a woman whom I much like speak her mind most sensibly

Little Jack Rabbit

by David Cory

on the lollypops grow in many a row
"Yellow, and pink and red
They jinkle and crinkle,
And winkle and jinkle
Aloft in their leafy bed.

"Wait a minute," cried the Big Brown Bear, as the little rabbit looked. Oh so wistfully up into the Lollypop Tree. "I'll climb up and pick you a dozen. And up he went, scramble-jamble, ramble, bramble, and when he had filled his big fur overcoat pocket down by came, bramble, ramble, jumble, scramble.

"Open your knapsack," he laughed, sitting down on the big wooden bench. "Take some home to mother. That's the way to please her. Always remember her when you're away, and always help her when you're near, and never make her shed a tear."

"I won't, I promise you," cried the little rabbit.
And he never will, I'm sure. Little Reader. He knows that Lady Love is always doing something for him, just like your dear mother and mine. Let us always try to fill their lives with sunshine. Mothers don't come by the dozen. No stree. They just come one only.

By and by the little rabbit told the Big Brown Bear, as he must hurry home. "Well, goodbye, and be a good boy, and never mother dear amony," hummed the old bear, speaking in poetry. Maybe he was thinking of his own dear mother. Who knows?

Down the Shady Forest Trail hopped the little rabbit, the lollypops clinking in his knapsack and his red-striped candy cane swinging from his left paw. Hippierty hop, clipperty clop, My how fast he could go, first on his pinkie and then his big toe!

All of a sudden he met Billy Cooon under the Beechnut Tree. Billy Cooon was fond of Beechnuts? Well, I should answer yes three times. Nothing he liked better.

"Hello, hello, stop awhile. Every nut will bring a smile."

"Haven't time," answered the bunny boy. "Mother may want me to go on

"Open your knapsack," he laughed, sitting down on the big wooden bench answered when he shouted, "Mother!" Dear me, I hope nothing dreadful has happened to Lady Love, his pretty bunny mother.

"Where has she gone?" the bunny boy asked himself, and just as if she had heard the question, the pretty canary bird twittered:

"She went out an hour ago
In her dress as white as snow."

"Did she say when she'd be home?" asked the anxious little rabbit.
"No, she never said a word," Replied the little yellow bird.
And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

Double Shift No. 5 Reserve Mine
FIRST TIME IN TWENTY YEARS.
Reserve Mines—(Special)—No fewer than four mines of the British Empire Steel Corporation on this side of the Harbor are double shifted—that is, both night and day gangs of men are hoisting coal both night and day with two eight hour shifts of miners steadily at work. The mines affected are Nos. 22, at Birch Grove; 1b, near Dominion; and Dominion No. 1.
The fourth mine, No. 5, at Reserve was double shifted, Friday night, for the first time in over twenty years. The move is taken as a good omen by the miners.

A Famous Doctor

ON "THE OVERGROWTH OF SPECIALISM."

Dr. J. Basil Hall, M.Ch., F.R.C.S., President of the British Medical Association, Honorary Consulting Surgeon, Bradford Royal Infirmary, delivered to the Academy of Medicine in Toronto, an address, printed in the British Medical Journal, which, although spoken to medical men, will interest the lay public keen upon our doctors being all-round men rather than specialists. There must, of course, be the latter, but Dr. Basil Hall's views as to the overgrowth of specialism are to the point.

"Specialism has become a necessity in our modern scheme of medical practice, but surely it behoves us to be careful lest our profession becomes nothing more than a community of craftsmen, each in his own watertight compartment with little or no general knowledge of the problems which lie outside it."

"There is a growing tendency—I am speaking of England—to think that special practice confines a man's usefulness in life to one narrow sphere. It is said, not infrequently, that a specialist is an individual who knows everything about his own particular subject, but nothing about anything else. That definition may be only a cynical sibe, but I cannot help thinking that it might become a sober truth, and I would urge that the attainment of a high degree of any ability can only be reached by those who realise that wide general knowledge must be the foundation upon which all professional eminence can be built."

"To be content to learn one thing, and one thing only, is surely a poor ambition. It may bring wealth and worldly success, but it very rarely brings real greatness. "Everything of something, but something of everything, is surely the motto which all of us should adopt."

"Specialism may be a great art, but it may be very soul-destroying. It may bring great wealth and notoriety, but it is a poor thing to live for itself alone."

Dr. Basil Hall, after quoting cases of eminent men of all-round ability, added:

"When I was a very small boy—I was taken to a great exhibition in the Old Cloth Hall in Leeds. It was not long after Nasmyth had invented the steam-hammer; and I still remember watching a man regulating a model of that wonderful invention. He was cracking Barcelona nuts with it! I was too young at that time to appreciate the wonderful scientific accuracy of the machine; but I do remember thinking that I would crack them equally with my teeth."

"What is the real reason for this modern desire to adopt extreme measures? Is it the love of something new; the love of a great idea; and—yes, I am afraid that I must also add—the ambition for the notoriety of specialism as the lay public conceives it—a miraculous gift which enables a man to do something bigger, and incidentally more expensive, than his neighbour."

"It is not easy to draw the line between reasonable and extravagant methods; but surely there is much in the surgical practice of to-day which is purely theatrical. Moreover, our concentration upon technique is leading our sense of the supreme importance of cultivating clinical wisdom and judgment; the shrewd estimate of the vital capacity of our patient, and the great principle that we should never forget that the greatest artist is he who does the least possible to secure the desired end."

"The surgeon who can grasp essentials, and who is gifted with "vision," because he has viewed Nature from a broad standpoint, lives in the memory of future generations. His work remains because he has studied the great essentials of life. The other obtains a passing notoriety on account of his perfect technique. It is all very pretty, and attracts the eye for the moment, but it lacks that sterling quality which marks real genius. Genius is not a heaven-sent gift. It is the infinite capacity for work—capacity for using our brains in the study of everything which enters into our existence."

True to the Pole

The needle of the compass does not always point directly north. It is subject to daily and yearly variations, as well as those which require centuries to complete. The needle is, however, "true to the pole," although it shifts thus every hour in the day. It does so only in obedience to the laws which control its action. Variations which are constantly taking place in the terrestrial magnetism produce corresponding changes in the needle.

MISERABLE AND ALWAYS IN PAIN

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Dependable Help to Mothers

Fort Greville, N.S.—"I took your medicine for a terrible pain in my side and for weakness and headaches. I seemed to float all over, too, and my feet and hands were the worst. I am the mother of four children and I am nursing my baby—the first one of four I could nurse. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before the baby's birth, so you can see how much it helped me. I cannot praise it too highly for what it has done for me. I took all kinds of medicine, but the Vegetable Compound is the only one that has helped me for any length of time. I recommend it to any one with troubles like mine and you may use my letter for a testimonial."

Mrs. ROBERT McCULLAV, Fort Greville, Nova Scotia.
Before and after childbirth the mother will find Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a blessing. Many, many letters are received giving the same sort of experience as is given in this letter. Not only is the mother benefited, but these good results pass on to the child.

No harmful drugs are used in the preparation of this medicine—just roots and herbs—and it can be taken in safety by the nursing mother. 98 out of every 100 women reported benefit from its use in a recent canvass among women users of this medicine.

Weapons of Race of Men

PEKING, Aug. 22.—Stone implements and weapons of a race of people who lived thousands of years ago among sand dunes on the shore of a lake since swallowed up by Gobi desert, and who discovered the eggs of the dinosaur countless ages before these were introduced to the civilized world by Roy Chapman Andrews two years ago, have been found far in the interior of Mongolia by the Third Asiatic Expedition of the American Museum of Natural History. Mr. Andrews, leader of the expedition, disclosed in Peking yesterday.

proved by the fact that they neatly bored the shells and made ornaments of them, Mr. Andrews said. They used for the same purpose, the shells of a gigantic ostrich, long since extinct.

In this discovery, Mr. Andrews believes his expedition has uncovered traces of the earliest type of man yet discovered. He has named the "dune like" dwellers of Shaharack Ussu using the name of the site of the find. "In these dune dwellers," he said, "we believe we have found the earliest type of man in his development from the ape."

Mr. Andrews, who has been in Peking for several days, was on the eve of his return to the expedition, which he left about three hundred miles northwest of Kalgan, the original jumping-off point for the expedition in Northwestern Chihili Province, China.

Weather Baulked Arctic Explorer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(Canadian Press)—The unusual weather conditions in the Arctic which caused abandonment for this year of the MacMillan expedition plans to explore the polar sea, were described by the National Geographical Society last night as apparently only a manifestation of nature's complexity in producing the current summer.

"A look at weather records with a view to finding whether this is a 'queer summer' as some laymen assert," said a statement issued by the Society, "does not show much that is abnormal in the general weather situation, but it does show what a complex matter of cross-currents go to make up the world's weather."

"MacMillan, pushing up the coast of Labrador in June found more ice than had been present at that season in the memory of oldest sealing skippers. At the same time, however, the temperatures over the entire United States" was from one to six degrees over normal. Furthermore, since January, except during a part of May, this excess of heat had been marked over the whole United States. In some regions and in some months the average ran as much as 12 degrees above normal and the areas of excess temperature extended well into Canada."

Geometry

Plato is said to have written over his door, "Let no one ignorant of geometry enter here." To-day such a restriction would reduce his visiting list. Perhaps outside the professional mathematicians he would have no one at all. All the artists, the philanthropists, the historians, to say nothing of those ladies and gentlemen of leisure whose critical faculties are so importantly developed nowadays, would certainly be absent and, worse still, would suffer very little at their exclusion.

Yet, going back into the centuries for guests, a distinguished company might have been assembled of those who without being famous merely for mathematical studies, were known to have understood and loved the subject. The Greek philosophers would have been there in a body, Alphonso X., Omar Khayyam, Albert Durer, Leonard da Vinci, Descartes, Pascal, Napoleon and Lewis Carroll.—Exchange.

End of the Bob in London

RUMORS SAY CHANGE IS COMING THAT REQUIRES GROWING OF THE HAIR.

LONDON, Aug. 15.—Hairdressers with a clientele of women who have their hair shingled, always evade the question whether shingling is going out of fashion.

There are rumors in the West End, however, that a change is coming which will require shingled locks to grow again. Confirmation of this is said to have been obtained in Paris, where wax mannequins at exhibitions all carry a small knot of hair at the back of the head, creating the belief that hairdressers will be besieged for contrivances with which to add to the locks of those who are shingled while they grow their own hair to the required length.

The Art of Overlooking

The art of remembering is a blessed art, but the art of overlooking is quite as important. And if we should take time to write down the origin, progress, and outcome of a few of our troubles, it would make us so ashamed of the fuss we make over them that we should be glad to drop such things and bury them at once in eternal forgetfulness.—Christian Globe.

A True Profession

Housewifery is a profession, sometimes monotonous, always exacting, often exasperating, and frequently wearying. But, with all its routine and drudgery, it is creative and executive, admitting of humor, of a laugh and a cry, of rush and quiet, of thought and impulse. It is a profession inspired by love and duty, not wages.

TO-NIGHT'S GAME.

The contesting teams at St. George's Field to-night will be the Star and C.L.B.

FELDIANS SPORTS AT ST. GEORGE'S FIELD.

The Feldians Athletic Grounds Association held what proved to be a successful and enjoyable Field Day at St. George's Field yesterday afternoon. The attendance was large, but not nearly as large as the programme would warrant. The programme of sixteen events, was competed by representatives from the S. B. C., M. G. C.A., C. L. B., and Feldians, and in this connection, competition was keen as a splendid trophy, the gift of Sir John Crosbie, depended on the result. The St. Bon's track team once again upheld their previous record on the Athletic field, having scored the most points for the day, a total of 57; the M.G.C.A. scored 55 points, C. L. B. 20, and Feldians 5. St. Bon's are thus entitled to the trophy for one year. The various events were run off without a hitch, there being no noticeable delays, which met with the popular approval of all present. After each event the prizes were presented by Mrs. Frank Bennett, who congratulated the victors on their prowess.

The one mile walk, relay race, field regatta and football sixes, were the feature events of the day, and caused lots of excitement for the spectators. Ronald O'Toole ably upheld his laurels when he crossed over an easy winner in the three mile turf race. Gover Stone finished second, one lap to the rear, with Jake Ralph third. During the afternoon the Mount Cashel Band was present and rendered stirring musical selections under the direction of Mr. Arthur Bulley. The presence of the band was an added attraction and helped greatly to lighten the proceedings. The Committee, and all those who helped to make the afternoon the success and enjoyment that it was, are deserving of every congratulation.

During the afternoon delicious teas were served by the ladies of the Parish. Amongst the victory from St. John's were, Hon. W. J. Higgins, K.C., Sir Michael Cashin and Mr. W. R. Neal. A programme of field events were run off during the afternoon, under the direction of Lieut. Somerton, C.L.B., which proved very enjoyable. The events and winners follow:—

T. A. DEFEAT C. Y. M. C.

The football game last night between the T.A. and C.Y.M.C. teams drew a small attendance of spectators to St. George's Field, and although the T.A. team won by 4 goals to nil, the score was no real indication of the game. Mr. W. Thistle acted as referee, replacing Mr. Coultais, who was absent.

Winning the toss the C. Y. M. C. decided to occupy the western goal, having the advantage of the wind. For the first few minutes play was confined to T.A. territory and a couple of shots were sent to the goal, which were, however, well handled by Daly, the T.A. goalie. Three corners, which were given against the T.A., were cleared from danger by the backs. The T. A. now brought play to the other end of the field and several shots were sent to Coombs, who cleared in fine style. The game progressed in this manner for about 20 minutes without any scoring, but at this juncture Furlong brought the ball west, passed to Bailey, who in turn sent it along to Nikosey, who registered the first goal. Shortly after this the T.A. had another tally to their credit, when Bailey beat Coombs with a nice shot.

After about five minutes of play in the second half, the T.A. got their third goal, when Furlong prevented the ball from going over the back line, and putting it across the goal, Williams banged it in. The C.Y.M.C. now appeared to give up hope of winning the game and settled down to defend their goal. This made the game very uninteresting as the ball was for the greater part of the time over the line. However, it had the desired effect for some time as no goals were registered, although one was scored but was declared off-sides. After about twenty-five minutes of playing the final goal was recorded when Thomson sent in a shot that was too hard to save. Shortly after this the full time whistle sounded, leaving the score 4 to 0 in favor of T. A.

Harmony Arrives

HARMONY ARRIVES WITH CREW OF ILL-FATED "BAY-ESQUIMO."

S.S. Harmony, Capt. Jackson, arrived from Hudson Bay ports yesterday morning, bringing the officers and crew of the s.s. Bayesquimo lost during the latter part of July, shortly after leaving Port Burwell. The Harmony brought only a small cargo of furs, fish and oil, as many of the ports coming south were not called at. In addition to the Bayesquimo's officers and crew, the ship has three other passengers, one of whom is a merchant from London. The other is the lady school teacher at Makovick and the third is a son of a Moravian missionary whose home is in the West Indies. There are thirty members of the Bayesquimo's crew and the following officers: A. Stafford, R. Patterson, Wm. Milne, E. P. Turner, H. C. Bolton (chief engineer), G. A. B. Davidson, Fred B. Bercham, Lay Mize (chief steward), D. McElroy (cook). Both steward and cook were former members of the Harmony's crew. In addition the ship carried 40 passengers, Rev. Mr. Atkinson and wife and Rev. S. M. Stewart and Rev. Mr. Jenkinson. The Bayesquimo left Montreal July 7th and called at Cartwright. Leaving there the ship proceeded north but had only made 60 miles when ice was encountered. Off Cape Chidley it was close packed and the ship became jammed. After considerable delay the ice slackened up and Port Burwell was reached. Supplies were landed and the ship sailed again on July 22nd. At 10 a.m. on the following day the ship was again in heavy ice and it was discovered that she was making water rapidly and sinking by the head. Pumps were set going, cargo was jettisoned and a message sent out to the S. S. Nascoptic Boats were then put out and provisioned and at 7:30 p.m. the ship abandoned. Three hours later she disappeared. It was bitter cold and the shipwrecked people who were crowded on a pan of ice made preparations for the night by erecting tents. Smoke signals and flares were started, and an anxious vigil was kept until 7 a.m. next morning when the Nascoptic "hove" in sight. The company were quickly on board the rescue ship which then brought them to Port Burwell. Here the officers and crew were quartered for three weeks and three days. The captain in the meantime made his way south by s.s. Meigle and proceeded to Montreal. The Harmony left Port Burwell on August 18th, and called at Hebron on the way south. The officers of the Bayesquimo are proceeding to their homes in England and Scotland by to-day's express.

Norma Shearer in Big Role

PLAYS DEBUTANTE AND DEMI-MONDRAINE IN "LADY OF THE NIGHT."

Molly graduates from a reformatory. Florence, a cultured society girl, leaves her convent. Both fall in love with the same young inventor. And what happens next is said to make Monta Bell's new picture, "Lady of the Night," which is at the Nickel Theatre to-night, an amazing human document.

Norma Shearer's Triumph. Molly, daughter of a convict, and Florence, daughter of the wealthy and aristocratic judge who sent Molly's father to prison, are both played by Norma Shearer. Each role calls for an entirely different portrayal, as widely separated in the emotional scale as the two worlds in which these girls live. Miss Shearer's work has been acclaimed as one of the most notable screen achievements of the year.

She has the support of an exceptional cast with Malcolm McGregor, playing David, the inventor, who loves both girls; George K. Arthur, as a Bowery fashion plate; Fred Emmetson, as the judge; and Dale Fuller and Betty Morrissey.

MUTT AND JEFF — THE LITTLE FELLOW COMMANDS ADMIRATION IN THE MOVIE STUDIOS. — By Bud Fisher

Thomas Meighan at the Majestic To-Day

There is always a high spot in the production of a motion picture—a scene or something that stands out. The property department furnished the thrill for Thomas Meighan and his company recently when $20,000 in money was scattered on the street in a scene in "The Confidence Man."

Meighan who plays the sharper in the picture and his confederate, Laurence Langford, had the twenty thousand in yellow backs to carry on their confidence game. They seemed perfectly at home handling the money but the spotlights who hunt for the windows and doors were closed by the ever cautious cashiers who heaped the money to prevent any possibility of a bill blowing out of the set. It was a day of thrills and who breathed easy until the twenty thousand was back in the safe.

"The Confidence Man," with Virginia Hill playing opposite the star, is showing at the Majestic Theatre to-night.

Larry Wheat, who played with Meighan in "The Bachelor Daddy," "Back Home and Broke," and others, also in the cast.

The story, which ran as a serial in the All-Story Weekly, brings the "good luck" star to the screen in the role of a clever confidence man type crook. He goes to a small town to make a stock deal, gets in right with the people of the village, gets his victim's money and prepares to skip when the "higher up" arrives from New York.

From this point on the story steps right along. It keeps you guessing what's going to happen next, whether you will be exposed if he'll reform and marry the pretty young girl he has fallen for.

What does he do? That's the question that's being answered all this week at the Majestic Theatre. And be sure in for an hour and a half of pleasing entertainment when you see in "The Confidence Man."

Make your appointments, "By Divine Light," at the Majestic next week.

United Church School

FOR MUNDY POND.

The Residents of Mundy Pond Road met at a public meeting, Aug. 26th, at 7 p.m. for the purpose of establishing a school in this vicinity. The Rev. J. Johnson, of George's Street United Church, acted as Chairman and addressed the gathering on the necessity of educating the children. He introduced the Rev. Dr. Curtis, of Methodist Education, who outlined the policy to be adopted in inaugurating a regularly constituted school and promised to supply the school with the required number of desks, a stove and blackboard. A committee of five was then elected to deal with matters that shall arise in future. The names of the Committee are as follows:—Jas. Butler, A. G. Sayer, Willis Burke, John Mercer, and Best.

At the Star Movie

The patrons of the popular Star last evening were treated to a big surprise, when, in addition to the Kesspie Kid, the Management presented the "new" sister, in a talking and acrobatic number, and the house "rocked" with applause. She is like her sister, little wonder, and those who did not see her last evening should do so this evening. To-morrow night is the much talked of attraction—Professor Kesspie in super-human feats of strength. In the corridor, last evening, were exhibited the high rocks which are to be broken on his chest, and some people could not believe it possible for a human being to bear them on his breast; not to speak of having them broken by sledge hammer. However, this will be proven to-morrow night and needless to say, curious and large audiences will be in attendance.

You don't need to spend those few dollars on an Accident Contract if you can see beyond that one little word—PERHAPS.

It is true you may never have had an accident, but "perhaps" is always there. Without a policy you are gambling with your life, and yourself and your dependents may suffer severely for your "taking the chance."
