THE MITCHELL TRIAL.

The last act in the tragedy, by which the unfortunate Mr. McLean lost his life, is now swiftly and surely drawing to a close. Mitchell has received a fair trial, occupying from Wednesday morning until nearly six on Thursday afternoon last, before an impartial Judge and Jury, and it has resulted in his being sentenced to expiate his crime on the gallows, on the 22nd of December, next.

Parliament is further prorogued until the 23rd of November. The Rev. W. H. Hearts will preach in Providence Methodist Church next Sabbath evening. BEAR FAT.—Mr. H. A. Parker, Toronto, has a dozen Leaningham Pippins, produced by one tree, which weighs 9 lbs. 6 oz.

A horse attached to a wagon ran away one day last week, and dashed through our streets in a manner that was more exciting than satisfactory—particularly to the owner. ENGINE MEETING.—Firemen are requested to be on hand at the engine house to-morrow evening at half past six o'clock, p. m. sharp, to thoroughly overhaul the engine. A full attendance is urgently requested.

A HOUSE POTATO.—The farm of T. D. Burdick, Esq., Q. C., has the credit of producing the largest potato we ever heard of. It weighs four pounds. It looks as if the entire hill of potatoes had embraced each other with the determination to stick fast in one united whole and thus beat the world.

Yesterday was an important day in the United States. State elections were held in Ohio, Indiana and West Virginia. The two first are doubtful States, and in consequence, are the objects on which a great deal of the electioneering machinery of both parties has been brought to bear.

Her subject was a landscape entitled "A View of the Annapolis." The painting is a very fine one, and well deserved the award of the Committee. Miss Brown has executed a number of paintings of great merit during the last few years. TORBROOK.—A meeting was held on the evening of Oct. 2nd, in the Baptist meeting house at Torbrook, on behalf of the Canada Temperance Act.

The exhibition held in St. John, New Brunswick, was a grand success. The city was crowded with visitors. The show of live stock was a fine one, particularly in horses. Our sister Province cannot compare with us in the matter of fruit, it is not their "fort" as Artemus Ward would say.

At the same time the two Bents and Gould were each sentenced to five years imprisonment in the Maritime Penitentiary at Dorchester for the crime of sheep stealing. In delivering sentence the Judge was justly severe upon the culprits, and his remarks upon the offences committed by the prisoners, and the lawless course of life pursued by them, were well calculated to impress them, with the desecraved of their sentence.

'I shall not marry,' Lillian said with tears; 'I shall never marry.' 'I am wrong to talk to you like this, returned Poppy wistfully. You ought to marry; Jocelyn being dead, it is right you should seek to find in marriage a home and safety.'

'But he is not dead; how can you tell he is dead?' Lillian said passionately. 'In that little while that we were in the house together, before we went the second time to the Werringtons, he spoke of Spain, and said that there was war there, and that that would suit him.'

'I have no faith in republics,' he said; 'so I think I shall join Don Carlos.' 'I did not like to tell you this, Lillian; but I believe that he went and that he has fallen in battle. You know it is a cruel war.'

'This talk of Spain was one of the things Poppy had withheld in her narrative. 'But could he not write from Spain?' cried Lillian. 'Perhaps not, if among the Carlists; and it may be he died too soon.'

Miscellaneous.

Britain's Progress. Since 1865 the population of the United Kingdom of Great Britain has increased from 29,801,008 to 31,505,043. Ireland has decreased by a quarter of a million. Prussia has increased by 1,000,000. The population of the United Kingdom has increased from 69,000 to 100,000. The criminal returns show that in 1878 with a half million more people there were 1,354 convictions for serious offences and in 1879 with a half million more people there were 1,099. In Ireland, with a diminished population, the convictions were respectively 2,061 and 2,307. Out of 2,000 persons committed for trial in Scotland 2,000 were convicted; while in Ireland the proportion is 4,363 to 2,307. As to the other indications of progress in civilization, we may note that whereas, taking an average, each inhabitant of England and Wales received 284 letters in 1865 and 371 in 1879; in Ireland the increase is from ten to fifteen; while the average receipt of newspapers is ten per head for England and Wales, and only five for Ireland. The money in savings banks averages about £2 2s. 6d. per person in the United Kingdom, and about 16s. in Ireland.

Boils.—Boils, as most people are aware, are great plagues; not only from the severe pain which accompanies them, but also from their frequent recurrence for weeks, or even months, after having once been cured. They are generally in themselves of no great consequence, except when, from their size, the softest core, or slough, which is formed by their very large, and its separation causes much constitutional excitement, as in a carbuncle, which is only a very large boil; or when, from their size, they are very large, and its separation causes much constitutional excitement, as in a carbuncle, which is only a very large boil; or when, from their size, they are very large, and its separation causes much constitutional excitement, as in a carbuncle, which is only a very large boil.

A New Stove Polish. I would like to ask if it is generally known how useful linseed oil is on stoves—especially cooking stoves and iron kettles? It is original with me, and I like it so much that I want to give a method of using it in the kitchen. I wash the stove and funnel perfectly clean, then I put some oil in a tin basin, boil a few minutes, and apply with a cloth white hot. The room should be kept free from dust until the oil hardens, which may be half a day on a stove that is kept hot. If put on where the fire comes next to it, it will burn off but to all other parts it will give a black, glossy look, and is much cleaner than blacking, and will last a long time. New kettles should have an application outside and inside, and it is a sure preventive of rust. I have a new teakettle that rusted badly till I applied the oil. I prefer to apply the oil while the stove or kettle is hot, as it seems to harden much quicker. No matter how hot, if not a burning heat.—Maine Farmer.

PICKLES, PRESERVES AND WINE.—I feel a sense of duty neglected to give a call for the sisters to write for the Household department; so this afternoon I take my pen to tell of some of my busy hours for the past few weeks. Have made some sweet toms to pickles after the following recipe, which is very good. Take seven pounds of tomatoes ripe, three pounds of sugar and one quart of vinegar, one ounce each of cinnamon and cloves. Place the tomatoes in layers, sprinkling the spice between. Boil the vinegar and sugar together and strain over the fruit. Do this for three successive mornings, putting in the fruit the last time to scald but not boil. I also have made some ripe cucumber pickles, which are a little different. Take large ripe cucumbers, cut them and scrape the seeds out, put them into pieces, boil in alum water until you have a lump as large as a walnut is sufficient. For a two gallon jar full two quarts of vinegar, four pounds of sugar and whole spices, cinnamon, cloves and allspice to the taste. Boil the vinegar and sugar together and strain it before putting in the spices, and pour it over the cucumbers. When cold tie it up closely and set away for a week or two, and they are delicious.

Various Views of the Jersey. Below in the hall Lillian found Luffin waiting for her. 'I will walk home with you,' he said quietly. 'When they were out on the moon-lit road, he stopped a moment and, lifting his hat, looked upwards at the clear sky, from which the clouds had been swept away by the shining power of moon and stars. 'The storm has passed,' he said, 'the clouds are fast departing, the awakened day will be bright; we must not grieve.' Her short day has been dark and stormy indeed, returned Lillian softly. —Not many miles from New Bedford a small company of colored brethren decided to take up a collection.' The presiding officer ordered to pass the hat himself, and in order to encourage the others he put in a ten cent piece. After the collection, during which every hand had been in the hat, the president approached the table, turned the hat upside down, and not even his own contribution dropped out. He opened his eyes in astonishment and exclaimed: 'O' goodness, but I've been less for them cents I started with! The case called for urgent action. The presiding officer demanded the restoration of the ten cent piece. But nobody came forward. After an impressive pause a brother remarked, solemnly: 'Dar' hearts to be a great moral lesson our' hear to somehew.'

The Sentinel advises the removal of the seats from the park, because hugging is done on them. Great heaving, as it comes to this? Are the dearest rights of the American citizens to be bridged in this summary manner? Let us call the attention of that powerful paper to a clause in the Declaration of Independence, which asserts that 'all men are created free and equal, endowed with certain inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.' When the framers of that great declaration of independence were at work on that clause, they must have had in view the practice of hugging in the parks. Hugging is certainly a pursuit of happiness. People do not hug for wages—that is, except on the stage. No man is obliged to hug. It is a sort of spontaneous combustion, as it were, of the feelings, and has to have proper conditions of the atmosphere to make it a success.

Parties who object to hugging are, of course, and have been satiated, and are like a lemon that has done duty in circus lemonade. If they had a job of hugging they would hire a man to do it for them. A man who huggs a little naturally, and who huggs on a back seat in a park, or an evening, with a fountain throwing water all over little cast-iron cups, has probably got a soul, but he hasn't got it with him. To the students of nature there is no eight more beautiful place to see a flock of young people take seats in the park after the sun has gone to bed in the west, and the moon has pulled a fleecy cloud over her face for a veil, so as not to disturb the worshippers. As couple, one male and the other a female, will sit far apart on the cast-iron seat, for a moment, when the young lady will try to fix her cloak over her shoulders, and she can't do it, and when the young man will help her, and when he has got it fixed he will go off and leave one arm around the small of her back. He will miss his arm, and wonder where he left it, and go back after it, and in the dark he will feel around in the other hand to find the hand he left. Suddenly the two hands will meet, they will express astonishment, and clasp each other, and he so glad they will begin to squeeze, and the chances are that they will cut the girl in two, but they never do. Under these circumstances a girl can exist on less breath than she can when doing a washing.—Peck's Milwaukee Sun.

'My wife has just presented me with five boys in six days,' said Black Bill, entering a magistrate's office, taking off his hat and shaking the perspiration from his brow. 'That is a record for a man,' said the magistrate, 'and you are a fine fellow. 'Yes, gen'leman, he went on, 'de finest child I ever seed. An' 'ese jes' got a twenty dollar gold piece right heah ter gib de man who can guess what I be named him. Ter keep y'er from spraddin' de whole universe ob names!' I'll state dat it's a Bible name.' 'Abraham?' guessed some one. 'No, sah.' 'No, sah.' 'No, sah.' 'Job?' 'Guess ag'in.' 'Nodometer?' 'Keep er comin'.' 'Ahmelech?' 'Try me ag'in.' The guessing ceased after a time, and finally Bill said: 'I be named that by Judas Escartur.' 'What?' said the magistrate. 'Judas betrayed our Saviour.' 'Can't help it. Dat's de boy's name. Judas he been slighted. Nobody heber had de immortal courage ter name a child for dat man. But dat ain't de main reason why I named him Judas. I see de Bible ter stain me in givin de child de name.' 'How does the Bible sustain you in desiring to perpetrate that name?' asked the magistrate. 'In remarkin' ob Judas, it says dat it would hab bin better far dat man ef he hadn't been born.' 'Well?' 'An' considerin' how many moufs is opened up in de world, I think de boy would hab a side of meat, it would hab never fur dat boy ob mine ef he had better been daylight. I knows what I be thinkin' on!' I take de Scripture from de references. In de future, ef I finds de boy he made an improvement on himself, den I'll change his name ter Jissel.—Valley Weekly Chronicle.

'See here, George,' said an irritable old man to his son, 'I'm tobe that your teacher says you're the worst in school. What have you to say to that, sir?' 'I have only to say, sir, that she has often told me the same thing, and always winds up saying that I'm exactly like my father.' 'Aunt Diana was dividing a piece ob mince pie among de boys, when Pete, who had crumby pulled de cut's tail, asked for his share; de ole woman replied, No, Pete you am a berry wicked boy, and de good Book says dar an no piece for de wicked.' 'What is that which never asks any questions but requires many answers?' '—The street door.' 'A boy 'out at elbows' was asked the cause, and replied, 'I laughed in my sleeves till I burst them.' 'A gentleman airing his quotations said proudly to a friend over a game of billiards: 'When Greek meets Greek, then comes the talk of war.' 'Yes,' answered the other, 'and when you meet Greek you—don't understand it.' 'No class, a police-magistrate is reported to have said, 'put more real meaning in your vocations than pick-pockets.
