THE NEW BOARD OF EDITORS.

THE REVIEW is with this number beginning another perilous era in its existence, as in spite of much past experience, and much wholesome advice on the part of the old Grads an almost brand new board of editors are in charge. 'Tis useless however, to quarrel with the past and it only remains for the less experienced to labour the more heavily and as a place on the staff of THE REVIEW is always sufficient guarantee of ability there is little doubt but that the paper will for the ensuing year be ably conducted and regularly issued. Of the retiring editors Mr. C. H. Bradburn, for the past six months the chief, will be much missed, as will also be the services of his confreres.

JUNE CONVOCATION.

It is a matter for honest congratulation of the "all round" sort that this good old event has, in spite of University Statutes to the contrary, not become obsolete. There were many reasons in favour of retaining it as the closing act of the college year and, with Final men, of their college days. Some of them were perhaps sentimental, but it was of that sentiment which binds and retains and from amongst our graduates forms a class, an exceedingly desirable class, of benefactors. Some reasons too, are more apparently practical, e.g., the regulations and terms of the Benchers of the Ontario Law Society. Whatever they are, however, and whatever may be their individual worth there is no doubt that in the retaining of the June function, quiet and stripped as it was, the authorities are realizing the hearty wishes of a large body of Trinity men, so large, indeed, that it might almost be termed the whole of that body, as also of the great undergraduate mass looking forward in hope to some day "Tackling the Tiger." The hope still lingers that some day the whole affair may once more be restored, with its pomps and vanities, its gold cloth and esquires' medals, its songs and bon mots and its ices and ladies.

THE CRICKET CREASE

As spring follows spring, so regularly are heard low murmurings and occasionally more noisy outbursts about the state and condition of the crease. The dandelions assuredly have long obtained a firm hold in spite of many years of men armed with the knife and headed by the professional and a few of our enthusiasts. But the grass grows thinner and thinner in spite of many dandies cut and withered, so much so, that long rest is needed each April and May to allow the turf to thicken a little. A month of play elapses, and the crease falls into disuse for the summer, and here is probably found one reason of its poverty, for as the summer editor sweats copy and pores over proofs, his mind is sore distracted by the hum of machinery. On looking out a horse mower is in evidence also a self dumping hay rake, and where the grass should be well cared and regularly cropped, are seen long windrows of hay. Now hay growing does not improve a lawn any more than rattling mowing machines do editorials and, as the editor resigns himself to the situation and trusts that a mid-summer number requires but few leaders, he might well end with a "kick" against the agricultural tendencies of the times and hope that the coming years will take better care of what is naturally a pretty piece of sod.

THE PROPOSED UNIVERSITY CORPS.

The military spirit in our Universities and Colleges is ever present, sometimes smouldering and dormant, but ready to burst into patriotic flame if occasion should arise. The movement for the organization of a corps to be composed entirely of College and University men has met with a reception so cordial from both dons and undergraduates as to surprise its originators, and the instant response to the request for signatures to the service-roll seems to indicate that if authorized by the government the new corps will have a "waiting-list" longer than the muster-roll. Some account of the various steps taken and of the exact status quo may be not uninteresting.

In March last some forty ex-members of the late University Rifles (which was at first an independent company and was then for many years known as K. Co., Q.O.R.) met in the Military Institute to discuss the possibility of some corporate action with regard to the Queen's Jubilee. It was decided to do two things, to replace the memorial window to the men killed at Ridgeway, which had been destroyed by the fire in Toronto University some years ago, and to make an attempt to resuscitate the University Rifles. The latter scheme was held to be one containing the possibility of great usefulness to the Militia Service of Canada and, therefore, to the Empire—as being a most efficient nursery of officers for other corps. A small committee was therefore appointed under the chairmanship of Professor Ellis of the School of Practical Science, and by a sub-committee of this committee a report was drawn up, after a great deal of careful investigation. This report was submitted to and unanimously adopted by, first the committee and then the full meeting of ex-members of K. Co., among whom the idea had originated. The gist of the report was that a battalion of four companies was recommended, No 1 Co'y to be recruited from the School of Practical Science, and to be a company of engineers, Nos. 2, 3, and 4, to be from the other Colleges and Universities, the whole to wear the rifle uniform, to form one battalion, and to be a part of the Toronto Garrison. It was heartily resolved to invite the co-operation of every student body in the city, and as has been already said the enthusiastic response was surprising. A deputation was sent to Ottawa early in May, armed with, first, service-rolls fully signed; second, petitions from the governing bodies of the Colleges interested, promising goodwill and support to the scheme; and third, petitions from graduates of the different Colleges, largely signed, from all the leading towns and centres in the Province. The reception and hearing given the deputation by the Government were decidedly encouraging, though on account of the unfortunate illness and absence of the Honourable the Minister of Militia no final decision has as yet been made. A subscription list of $2,000 to $2,500 must be secured as an evidence of bona fides and permanency before authorization need be looked for.

The Colleges from whom the battalion will be filled if formed, will be the School of Practical Science, Trinity University (Trinity College, Trinity Medical College), Toronto University, both Medicals and Arts men, Wycliffe College, Knox College, Victoria University, and probably others. It appears as if four companies would be quite too few to accommodate the number anxious to enlist, so that it will doubtless soon be necessary to expand, but the limits indicated seem for the present to be wisely determined upon. It will apparently be necessary to distribute the uniforms and accoutrements among the different institutions interested, in fairly accurate proportion to the strength of the undergraduate body of each institution, and this may mean some temporary disappointment in some quarters. The cordiality and unity which always characterize men wearing the same uniform will easily neutralize any such transient difficulty. The shortness of the session of Parliament and the overpowering interest taken in the Diamond Jubilee, have made it impossible to get any appropriation placed in the estimates for this year. It is hoped, however, and expected that not later than the spring of 1898 the scheme will be well floated, and that by the autumn of that year the new corps will be in full working order, a most important contribution, from one of the most loyal circles in the most loyal quarter of Greater Britain to the service and defence of a Monarch and an Empire so devotedly loved and so efficient in working out the Divinely appointed destinies, not of her own subjects only, but of all mankind.

COUNTING.

Count right and you can make your figures prove anything. Evidently this was the principal acted upon when the Honourable, the Minister of Education was compiling (or was having compiled) "the names of the federated and affiliated institutions and the number of their instructors and students," as given on page 10 of his "Address delivered on moving the second reading of a Bill re the University of Toronto in the Legislative Assembly of Ontario, on April 1st, 1897." The list as a whole makes curious and interesting reading, so much so that one might be tempted to think that it was an April Fool hoax, were not the question one of granting direct aid to a large amount annually to the University already named, and were not this table made to form an important part in the argument in favour of such a course. On the main question nothing more need be said by any believer in Trinity than would properly be said by any other taxpayer—that, if the money is really needed, and if the theory of Government control be admitted, the Government must supply the money if the Legislature votes it. As to the need, there may be difference of opinion, but with the present ridiculously low fee and the waste of teaching power on non-matriculated and occasional students, to mention nothing else, it is fairly an open question whether the need was as great as the Minister has, with his accustomed plausibility, made it to appear.

In the list already referred to, it is found that there are thirteen affiliated and federated institutions with 2883 students. Add to these latter the 957 said to be enrolled in University College (?) and you have a total of 3840, which the Minister makes in paragraph 1, page 11, "nearly 5,000, looking to it (the University of Toronto) for the hall mark by which their professional standing is to be determined." Fancy a hall mark for students at the Veterinary College, the School of Pharmacy, and even the Dental College, when none of them has a course extending over more than two years and their students take no lectures at all in University lecture rooms! Verily, they do "look" afar off! What possible advantage in the way of culture do the students of the Ontario Agricultural College derive? It might pertinently be asked, when that institution (valuable in its own way, one is free to admit) is situated in Guelph, and the University with which it is affiliated is in Toronto.

But it is in the case of Trinity Medical College, the Ontario Medical College for Women, and the Toronto Conservatory of Music that the most glaring abuse of arithmetic and deduction has been made. Of course, they are affiliated with the University of Toronto, but affiliation with other universities has also been obtained by them—notably with Trinity, before they ever thought of any other place. The students of all three come to Trinity, as a rule, for their degrees, so that it is to our University, if to any, that they "turn their thoughts daily in order to take in the spirit by which it is animated," and not to Toronto. Who has heard in recent years of a student from Trinity Medical College taking his degree at Toronto? One great reason for their not doing so is that Toronto will not allow the men from Trinity to compete for honour standing on equal terms, if at all, with its own men. A fine "spirit," truly, and a great contrast to that displayed by Trinity, whose degrees have been for years past eagerly sought after by Toronto men in such large numbers. As fine a spirit, again, as the Senate of Toronto displayed some years ago when it tried, through its late Vice-Chancellor and the former Minister of Education, to prevent Trinity Medical College from getting this very privilege of affiliation which the present minister glories in and makes so very much of. In truth time changes! And yet it is only about two years ago since the official newspaper reports of the Toronto Senate meetings gave the public to understand that "double affiliation" (that is affiliation with Toronto and some other university) was undesirable and that Trinity Medical College was to be defiliated. At about the same time the application for affiliation with Toronto, put in by the Conservatory of Music was very near to being refused altogether, but was granted only on the condition that it should have no representation upon the Senate so long as it maintained its affiliation with any other university. Another illustration this of the University of Toronto's, "representing the Catholicity of education in the broadest sense of the term."

To the veteran Dean of Trinity Medical College, who has displayed such remarkable ability, zeal, and ardour in the cause of independent medical education in competition with a state-endowed and state-subsidized school it must be eminently satisfactory to have it thus set down in cold print that his college is the largest (barring the musical schools) of the affiliated institutions connected with the University of Toronto. It must please him also to recollect that this is not the first time, either, that his opponents have had to admit, directly or by implication, that he and his college are a power in the land. As to Knox, Wycliffe, Victoria and St. Michael's, it would be interesting to find out how many students of those mentioned in the minister's list are actually arts men in the strictest sense of the word and not divinity or literary students only. In the case of the last named, it is almost impossible not to suspect that a good many of the 120 with whom it is credited are only schoolboys and not university students at all. Such at any rate is true of both the College and the Conservatory of Music. The merest fraction of the students at these institutions goes up for university degrees, or even for the preliminary examinations. But supposing that they do seek after a degree; it has been already pointed out that Trinity is the Alma Mater of the great majority of students from the Conservatory of Music: and it is noteworthy that this flourishing school has 765 pupils enrolled as compared with 550 at the College of Music which is affiliated with the University of Toronto alone.

If the gentlemen of Her Majesty's loyal opposition had been doing their duty, they would have asked Mr. Ross to explain the discrepancy between his "nearly 5,000 who daily turn their thoughts towards the University" and the "1,478 altogether examined by the University of Toronto for standing in the subjects taught in affiliated schools and colleges as well as in the University itself" on the other. Indeed, take away the 1,044 who presented themselves in arts alone and the matter becomes still worse—only 434 out of "the nearly 5,000 look to the University of Toronto for the hall mark by which their professional standing is to be determined." Trinity, then, by fair inference from the minister's own showing in his table, does as a matter of fact impress her hall mark on the 260 students from Trinity Medical College, the forty-one of the Ontario Medical College for Women, and such of the 765 from the Toronto Conservatory of Music as seek university standing. About the other affiliated institutions, Trinity is not concerned, but, from what has been said, it really does seem as though the deductions drawn by the Honourable the Minister of Education are, as the French say, suspectes.

OXFORD LETTER.

In answer to a request from one of the editors that I should write an Oxford letter for THE REVIEW, I shall try to tell briefly some of the things which may possibly interest its readers.

Canada, and Trinity especially, are quite well represented at Oxford. Dr. John Carter, the well-known Secretary of the Christian Social Union and an old Trinity man, has been here ten or twelve years. He is doing a splendid work here and all the Canadians are proud of him. Wethers Powell and Trenholm, whom many Trinity men will remember, are both members of the Cowley Community which has its headquarters in Oxford. I have just had a call from both of them, and they wish to be remembered to all old Trinity friends. Browne of '95 is reading Theology here at St. Stephen's House. Hamilton, late of Trinity College School, is at Christ church. Rev. H. A. Dwyer, an old Trinity man in the Divinity Class of '95, is reading for the new Oxford degree of Litt. B., and is doing some original Shakespearian work. Bickford, who matriculated at Trinity about '93, has been at Lincoln College for the last two years. Among the other Canadians are Grant, a son of the Principal of Queen's, Kingston, who is at Balliol, and Biggar, of Toronto University, at New College. There is some talk here at present of forming a colonial club to join together men from the different parts of the Empire and to spread the Imperial ideas which are being advanced so enthusiastically at present in certain political circles. We are very eager to have Hon. Wilfred Laurier come here while in England in connection with the Diamond Jubilee Festivities. I wrote him yesterday, asking him if he would address a meeting of Oxford undergraduates, on Imperial Federation. He would receive a splendid reception if he came, and the address would have special significance in England at the present time.

A few words on sport at Oxford. In our inter-Varsity contests with Cambridge we have this year been unusually successful. There are five contests yearly between the two universities which the newspaper reporter loves to style, "The Battles of the Blues." Any man chosen to represent Oxford against Cambridge in these five events gets his "Blue" and is ever afterwards Oxford Blue—an honour much more coveted and admired by the average undergraduate than any success in the "Schools," as the examinations here are styled. The boat race, cricket, athletics, Rugby and association foot-ball comprise the events, all of which we have won in succession for, I believe, the first time in the history of inter-Varsity sport.

Oxford's supremacy in the boat race was well maintained this year. It was a good race, but the Oxford boat was in no danger at any time during the race. I was in London at the boat race and was quite astonished at the intense interest London's millions took in the inter-Varsity struggle, one of the popular evening dailies even appearing on "blue" paper, in honour of the event, while cabs and carriages, horses and drivers, ladies and street arabs displayed the dark or light blue, according as their sympathies directed.

The sports were held in London before 6,000 people. H.R.H., the Duke of York, being among the spectators in the royal pavilion. Cambridge's record in athletic contests is much better than in boat races, they leading Oxford in Athletic wins. This year excitement ran high, as the teams were almost perfectly matched. Having succeeded in winning the University three miles at Oxford, I had the honour of representing Oxford in the three miles in London. To show how close the struggle was.—As I was stripping for my event, the last on the programme, there were five more events. Oxford had to win four of them to get the sports, and one was a certainty for Cambridge, so it was very doubtful. Each university had won four events when the bell rang for the last race, which my partner succeeded in winning for Oxford to the great relief and delight of us all.

Besides winning University medals for the Varsity whites and three whites, I hold for one year a beautiful silver challenge cup, presented by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales and others in 1860 for annual competition. I fear I must not trespass any more at present on THE REVIEW'S space. Eight Week is coming on at the end of May, when the supremacy of the river is decided after a week's contest.

Possibly I shall write you a letter describing Eight Week and the system employed on the Isis.

HUBERT CARLETON, '93,

BRASENOSE COLLEGE, OXFORD, May 9th.

NO GREATER LOVE.

A SKETCH.

Jack Carlyle and the Rev. Douglas Leigh were friends. No one knew why, but it was probably on the principle that like repels like. They were totally different in looks, the young priest being slender, fair, almost spirituel; the other magnificently muscular and, as women expressed it, "magnificently dark."

The Rev. Douglas Leigh had long since begun to lean upon his friend, to look to him for advice. His idealistic schemes had to meet with Carlyle's approval ere taking in his mind any aspect of materialistic reality; these schemes were often still further made feasible by Carlyle's purse which was at the disposal of his clerical friend.

Jack Carlyle in his turn leaned upon the less stable character of his confidant. He liked to study the gradually deepening character, to admire the utter absence of worldliness, and to sympathize with the aspirations and ideals of the young divine. He had no special belief in anything except "the Eternal Goodness"; his creed was his life, nor was it any the less pure than the doctrinal code of the Rev. Douglas Leigh. He occasionally attended the large and fashionable Saint Jude's Church, over which his friend presided as Rector; he loved the music, he loved the quiet restfulness of the place and, above all, he loved the beautiful talks—he would not call them sermons—with which Leigh exhorted his people. Beyond this he made no religious pretensions.

Mary Foxton glanced up and down the long street as far as she could see ere settling down amid a pile of cushions on the cosy window-seat. The rain was falling softly and the street lamps flickered in the chill light of the late November afternoon. Within, the scene was one of homely cheerfulness: a bright wood fire glimmered in the grate and a kettle steamed on the hob. A low Turkish table covered with snowy white, on which glistened a dainty Sevres set, stood on the bear-skin rug. There was no sound in the room save that of the wind and the rain and the sharp crackling of wood. The ruddy flames rose and fell, lingering upon the costly bric-a-brac and curios, and were reflected in the polished oak floors partly covered by rich rugs. Curtains of Tyrian purple interwoven with soft greens, brilliant yellows, and deep crimsons, hung before the entrances; African spears, glistening shields, and exquisite water-colours stood out in strong contrast against the panelled walls; an open piano, books carelessly tossed upon the divans and floor gave to the room a delicious air of Bohemian comfort. The tall brass lamp shed a mellow radiance through the rose-coloured shade, and the atmosphere was cloyed with the fragrance of roses and heliotrope.

Miss Foxton yawned and, placing her jewelled hands behind her head, lay back among the cushions in dreamy content. A sudden ring of the door bell caused her to start, and a faint blush crimsoned her cheeks as the maid announced Mr. Carlyle and the Rev. Mr. Leigh.

"Mother has a head-ache, so I will have to dispense the tea" said Mary sweetly as she took her seat at the small table.

The clatter of china and the jingling of spoons sounded wonderfully suggestive of warmth and good cheer, and the two callers began to realize that November rains are chill, and November winds rather penetrating.

"Muffins or bread, Mr. Leigh? I remember Mr. Carlyle prefers bread." Mary passed the plate with a smile, but did not notice the flush that overspread Leigh's face at the latter part of her remark. "She remembers his tastes," he thought with a strange throbbing pain. But the merry raillery and good-natured badinage of the next half hour soon dispelled all thoughts of preference.

Regretfully they made their adieux and stepped out into the night and the rain.

They walked along in silence for some time, and then Leigh's arm slipped through that of his friend and he said nervously, "I have a confession to make, Jack, and you are the only one to whom I can open my heart."

The Rev. Mr. Leigh paused and Jack replied "Go on, Doug, I also have one to make to you. Fire ahead."

"Well, Jack, I'm in love, and I thought I'd tell you before asking the noblest little woman in the world to be my wife. Can you guess who it is?"

He did not feel Jack's arm tremble nor could he see the white, set face as he answered without a tremour in his voice, "It is Mary Foxton." But he did feel the warm hand-clasp, did hear the deep, rich tones saying fervently, "I wish you luck, old boy."

They had reached Carlyle's home and were standing at the foot of the steps, "Come, now for your confession I must hurry home to the mater."

"Mine is a short one," replied Jack. The lamp-light shone on his handsome face and dripping cape, as he took Leigh's hands in his own, "I'm a fool," he broke out laughingly and hurried up the steps. The door closed and in a few moments he stood in his library, his head sunk upon his chest, his damp hair clinging to his temples.

"I'm a poor fool" he exclaimed bitterly, "but it will be easier for me to bear than it would be for him."

A week later Carlyle had left America to live a life of lonely sacrifice in a distant land. In six months Mary Foxton and the Rev. Douglas Leigh were married, and the respected Rector of Saint Jude's lived for many years his life of luxury and happiness, preaching of a love, a sacrifice, and a death of which he knew nothing.

LABORATORY.

Samples of the minerals erythrite and celestite have recently been received by Dr. Montgomery, from localities in Hastings and Peterboro' counties. Erythrite is a red compound of cobalt and arsenic, while celestite is the sulphate of strontium, a substance used in the production of red lights.

During the past few weeks Mr. A. A. Macdonald, B.A., has been working in the mineralogical laboratory upon various gold and silver ores, chiefly from mining claims in this Province. He has found a sample of ore from the Sultana mine, in Western Ontario, to assay six ounces and thirteen pennyweights of gold per ton, which would have a value of about $133. Mr. Macdonald has been availing himself of every opportunity to acquire a practical knowledge of assaying and blowpipe analysis.

AT OSGOODE HALL.

The following Trinity men appear as successful in their respective examinations at the Ontario Law School, and are receiving much well-deserved congratulation:—

Final Year—Honours—C. S. MacInnes, '92.

Passed—G. C. Heward, '93; M. S. McCarthy, '93; E. C. Cattanch, '94; E. C. Clark, '94; A. S. Boddy, '93; J. M. Hall, '93; E. C. Wragge, '93; W. Rein Wadsworth, '94; W. M. H. Nelles, '94; J. S. L. McNeely, '93.

First Year—Honours—H. C. Osborne, '96.

Passed—W. Ridout Wadsworth, '96; C. W. Bell, '96; A. B. Colville, '96.

JUNE CONVOCATION.

Convocation did meet after all, in spite of many fears. There was no great public functions, tea was not served under the oaks, there were no old time jests, the Latin collects were heard in stillness, and the virtues of graduates were unsung by the popular voices, so also were the good old ditties of "Too much beer" and such ilk. Even "Metagona" was unheard. The meeting was held in the library on the evening of June 28th, the vice-chancellor occupying the big red chair which had been carried up from the hall for the occasion. Dr. Jones having read the supplicats presented the candidates and Miss P. O. McNeely and Mr. C. H. Bradburn knelt on the blue velvet cushions which usually grace the chapel and arose Bachelors. Mr. E. C. Senkler received his degree in Arts in absentia, several degrees in medicine and music being similarly conferred. A few students and a few visitors composed the assembly, and if things were allowed to pass off quietly, they doubtless did so both nicely and well.

There seems to be big money in college athletics. Yale, during the year 1896, received from all sources for athletic purposes—that is to say, from voluntary subscriptions, gate receipts, and so on—$59,739.36; Harvard about (for the report of the graduate manager of athletics is not yet public property) $50,000; Pennsylvania, $46,959.78; and Princeton, $46,615.81. This gives a rough total of $203,314.95 taken in in one year by the athletic sports of four leading American colleges.

Convocation Notes.

EDITORS.

A. H. YOUNG, M. A. THE REV. H. H. BEDFORD JONES, M. A.

In consideration of a grant of $100.00 a year this space is set aside for the use of the Convocation of the University. Copies of the REVIEW are sent free to associate members who are not graduates, and to Headmasters of High Schools and Collegiate Institutes.

W. H. White, M.A., Lecturer in Classics, Trinity University—Charles Dickens.

H. Montgomery, M.A., B.Sc., F.S.S., formerly Professor of Geology and Mineralogy in the State Universities of Utah and Dakota, and President of the North Dakota State University—(1) The Story of the Creation (Illustrated); (2) The Mines, Mills, and Minerals of the Black Hills (Illustrated); (3) North American Man in Prehistoric Times; (4) Minerals: Their Occurrence, Study, and Uses; (5) Mining; (6) The Teaching of Science in the Common Schools.

H. C. Simpson, M.A., Lecturer in Physical Science, Trinity University—(1) The Alchemists; (2) Byron.

N.B.—In the case of subjects marked with an asterisk, a guarantee of probably $5.00 will be required for the magic lantern used to illustrate the lectures.

TERMS FOR THE LECTURES.

The terms upon which the lecturers have agreed to lecture are:—

(1) At least two weeks' notice shall be given a lecturer of the date upon which his lecture will be required.

(2) The lecturer's expenses shall be paid.

(3) The proceeds of the lectures, over and above the expenses, shall be absolutely at the disposal of the organization under whose auspices the lectures may be given, as the lecture scheme is not intended to make money for the University or for Convocation.

(4) When the lectures are given under parochial auspices, or under those of any Branch of Convocation, it shall be understood that the lecturer is to be allowed, at the close of the lecture, to set forth the objects of Trinity University and to make an appeal on behalf of Convocation.

A paper called Dixie, which is published in Atlanta, Ga., says that thirty thousand negroes have been graduated, at a cost of one hundred millions of dollars, from colleges for negroes which are supported by Northern money in the South. It also says that there are many thrifty, prosperous negroes in the South who are doing well; but it declares that very few of these thirty thousand college graduates are to be found among them. It says the college graduates find it hard to make a living, because in trade and in the professions for which higher education might be supposed to fit them they have to contend with race prejudice and to compete with educated white people. It finds that they do not succeed (except in rare cases) as lawyers or doctors, and it thinks that it would be an "unspeakable boon" for the Southern negroes if the money that supports colleges for them were devoted to the establishment of industrial training-schools in which they might learn to work to advantage at industries at which they would have a fair chance.

AN OLD COLLEGE CHUM.

HE PAYS A VISIT TO THE BISHOP OF NAGANO.

"Yes," the bishop remarked reflectively, "as you say, Jones, we had some delightful times at Trinity together."

"I should think so!" the new-comer assented. "We did have larks! What days about town! And what nights at college!"

The bishop moved uneasily in his chair. Then he glanced at the bishopess and the two bishopinas. "My dear," he said, wriggling inside his black apron, "it is very hot in here. I think I will take Mr. Jones out in the garden a little."

The Bishopess' face expressed sincere relief. Mr. Jones' talk tended not to edification. She, too, glanced at the bishopinas. "I would, Edward, if I were you," she answered. "Perhaps Mr. Jones smokes. He might like a cigar." She threw out the hint in the firm voice of one who implies that tobacco within the house was not permissible at Bishopstow.

"Ah, you don't smoke now, then?" Jones put in, with a note of surprise. "Well that's odd. Given it up? Must have cost him a wrench, though, Mrs. Dodds. Never saw him at Trinity without a short briar-root in his mouth, bar chapel or lecture. Did I, Dodds?"

The bishop rose solemnly, stood for a moment by the open window, with his episcopal legs in a studied attitude of episcopal doubt, and then led the way into the garden. It was a beautiful Japanese night; semi-tropical moonlight lay pale green upon the floor of the veranda; fireflies flitted in and out; the scent of large white flowers was heavy on the air. Jones thought it all beautiful. He had only arrived at Negano that morning, and had come straight up to Bishopstow to make his first impression of the country under his old friend's roof and his old friend's auspices.

The bishop selected a sequestered spot at the furthest end of the veranda, placing a long deckchair for Jones, where he was least likely to be overheard by the two bishopinas.

"Yes," he continued, in a bland professional murmur, "we have a Great Work here, and I feel that abstinence from all appearance of evil is a necessity of my usefulness."

John Jones lighted a cigar. Its smoke blew towards the bishop. "Capital tobacco one gets here," Jones remarked.

The Bishop sniffed it regretfully. "It has a delicious fragrance, I will admit," he answered with reluctance.

Jones leaned back in his chair and watched the fireflies as they flitted. The air was balmy. "Ah, what times we had at Trinity!" he went on reflecting. "What times we had there, Dodds! Do you remember that saucy little girl who used to sell flowers at the corner near the Grand? Polly Peach, they called her. And then the bonfire. Do you remember our bonfire on the night of the Diamond Jubilee? How you and the Freshmen piled up the sidewalk and some coal oil in the avenue and remarked that you didn't care a something-or-other for the dons, and made a jolly good blaze, and were almost sent down for it?"

The bishop hesitated. "I have some indistinct recollections that there was a bonfire," he allowed at last dubiously.

"Was a bonfire! Why, my dear fellow, you were all but sent packing for it. You can't possibly forget. You were let off on the ground that most of the other men were much more drunk than you; you were just sober enough to light the pile in the avenue while the other men wanted to pile and light it against the chapel."

The bishop's face was rigid with terror. Just then a cry rose on the air from a cottage not far off—a weird, shrill cry, as of women wailing.

"What's that?" Jones asked, with a start.

"Saved! saved!" The bishop gasped with joy. He remembered that Jones had had typhoid at college, and lived ever after in bodily dread of zymotic diseases.

"That" he replied, in very calm and measured tones, "is —only a native wake. The women are wailing and keening after their kind over one of their people who has died in this epidemic. I regret to say, owing to our imperfect sanitary arrangements, such scenes are too common. We grow, perhaps, to disregard them with almost unchristian lack of sympathy."

"Epidemic? What epidemic?"

The Bishop stretched truth as far as it would go. "Smallpox," he answered, in an unconcerned voice. "Very bad here at present. They are dying by thousands—the whites and browns especially. It attacks new-comers most of all. People of florid complexion and full habit of body, fresh out from Canada are almost sure——"

Jones rose in horror. He was fresh-colored and full-blooded. "Is it all over the country?" he asked, with marked eagerness.

The bishop gave a dramatic pause. "Not in Negasaki," he answered slowly. "Negasaki is quite wholesome. There's a train to Negasaki to-morrow morning."—Rosland Sport, June 20, 1927.

[No wonder History becomes much entangled when an account such as this should so soon be written of Trinity's part in the Jubilee Celebration. It is needless to say that there was a bonfire regularly prepared, duly lighted, and properly burnt.—Ed.]

The young bachelor who skips about the pleasant paths of society has in his large acquaintance many young married women, a few years his senior, who take a half-motherly interest in him and his affairs. He counts them as among his best friends, as indeed they are, being in a position to extend him many small favors and perhaps some large ones. He goes to their houses with as much freedom as to a relative's, takes meals without previous invitation, and regards the house as a place where he can resort when in need of either entertainment or sympathy. He knows scores of younger women, but his relation with them is of quite a different character. When calling he may desire one puff of a cigarette or the comfortable leisurely smoking of a cigar, he may even look longingly at a large easy chair without accepting its suggestion of comfort, lest it betray him into an attitude of too great relaxation. Conversation with the girls of his acquaintance, to be successful, must be sprinkled with compliments and peppered with originality. His soul turns with fond recollections to the homes of his married friends, where he can be absolutely natural and, if he likes, lazily selfish in conversation.—Illustrated American.

The following is respectfully submitted for the consideration of the gentlemen of the second year: Prince Moritz of Saxe-Altenburg, who is a man about sixty-seven years old, enjoys the reputation of being the most utterly blase man in Europe. Although in perfect physical condition, he has been in the habit of staying in bed for weeks, not because he was ailing, but simply because there was "nothing worth getting up for."

When Dr. Whewell, master of Trinity College, Cambridge, was a tutor, he once invited a number of his men to a "wine"—as the entertainments of those days used to be called. Noticing a vacant place, he said to his servant, "Why is not Mr. Smith here?" "He is dead, sir," was the reply. "I wish you would tell me when my pupils die!" was the indignant answer.

Freshy—"Professor, is it ever possible to take the greater from the less?" Professor Potterby—"There is a pretty close approach to it when the conceit is taken out of a freshman."—Indianapolis Journal.

Daily newspapers are now published by students in ten colleges and universities in the United States—Yale, Harvard, Cornell, Princeton, Brown, Stanford, Tulane, University of Pennsylvania, University of Wisconsin, and University of Michigan.

SPORTS.

CRICKET SEASON, 1897.

Our XI. did not play as many matches as usual this year, owing to the difficulty which is always encountered, but this year was even greater than usual, of making fixtures so early in the season as we are compelled to play our matches. Parkdale failed to put a team against us. Stanley Barracks, who were ambitious enough to wish to try their powers against our First, instead of as heretofore, our Second XI., could not agree to dates in May. Rosedale gave us only one game, and Varsity—Alas! Oh where were they? We trust we have not yet played our last cricket match against our old rivals.

A new feature, however, and one of the most pleasant events of the year was the visit of the R.M.C. IX., from Kingston. Strenuous efforts should be put forth to make this match an annual event, and provision should be made by the incoming Executive for a journey to Kingston by our XI. next year to return the compliment. We are somewhat indebted to the Cadets. Yes, considerably somewhat!

On the whole this year's XI was well up to the average. The scoring was not so heavy as last year, yet of the seven matches played only two were lost, one to the School by two runs, and one second match against the Toronto Club, which latter, by the way, it seems rather a pity to keep on the cards, as it is almost invariably lost, being played immediately after exams.

MATCHES PLAYED.

- May 15th, at Rosedale—Rosedale 40, Trinity 95. Won by 55 runs.
- May 18th, at U.C.C.—Trinity 96, U. C. C. 38. Won by 58 runs.
- May 19th, at Port Hope—T. C. S. 56, Trinity 54. Lost by 2 runs.
- May 22nd, on Campus.—Trinity 216, R. M.C. 66 and 34 for 4 wickets. Won by 150 runs on first innings.
- May 24th, on Campus—Toronto 97, and 25 for 7 wickets. Trinity 129. Won by 32 runs.
- May 27th, at Hamilton—Hamilton 102 and 49. Trinity 109 and 22 for 2 wickets. Won by 7 runs on first.
- June 25th, at Toronto—Trinity 85, Toronto 230. Lost by 145 runs.

T. C. S. ROVERS' TOUR.

Below will be found the list of matches played by the Trinity College School Rovers, with the batting and bowling averages. The result is one of which the Rovers may feel justly proud, and for heavy scoring probably no touring eleven has so good a record. It is the intention to keep up the Rovers' tour, and make it an annual event. The members of the touring eleven were all Old Boys from Trinity College School, Port Hope, and the fact that out of their number, there are four who have played on international teams, and two others who have represented Ontario against Philadelphia, speaks well for the old school. In all matches 1,105 runs were scored from the bat, and, including extras, 1,180; giving an average for each of the 45 wickets that fell of 24.4. The committee who managed the tour consisted of D. W. Saunders, W. W. Jones, D. R. C. Martin, E. S. Senkler, E. M. Watson.

MATCHES PLAYED.

- July 2nd—V. Toronto—T. C. S. Rovers, 138 for six wickets; Toronto, 40. Won by 28 runs (and 4 wickets).
- July 3rd—V. Hamilton—T. C. S. Rovers, 242 for seven wickets; Hamilton, 115. Won by 127 runs (and 3 wickets).
- July 5th—V. Guelph—T. C. S. Rovers, 126; Guelph, 52 and 22 for four wickets. Won by 70 runs.
- July 6th—V. London Asylum—T. C. S. Rovers, 301 for five wickets; innings declared; London Asylum, 152 for six wickets. Drawn
- July 7th—V. Chatham—T. C. S. Rovers, 179 for seven wickets; Chatham, 77. Won by 102 runs (and 3 wickets).
- July 8th—V. Detroit A. C.—T. C. S. Rovers, 200; Detroit, 46 and 47 for six wickets. Won by 154 runs.

Of the above members Messrs. Cooper, Rogers, White and Senkler played on the Trinity XI. this year, while Messrs. Martin, A. F. R. and D. R. C., and Jones, W. W., represented us in former years.

LAWN TENNIS.

Part of the old courts was levelled and sodded at the beginning of May, affording one much improved court. It is to be hoped that steps will be taken at the beginning of next term by the incoming Executive to keep this court in repair, and not allow it to fall into the disgraceful condition of the old ground. Also that it will be found possible to add another court next year, and to revive the tourna-ment which has not been held since '93.

THEOLOGICAL AND MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

The time having come for the acknowledgment of the help so freely given to the Association in its endeavours to raise a sum sufficient to build a church at Nagano in Japan, the field of missionary labour allotted to one of our old graduates, the Rev. J. G. Waller, '89, THE REVIEW is heartily pleased to publish the results hereinafter given. The project, it will be remembered, is the first fruits materially speaking of the gathering at Epiphany-tide, also far as possible, of all the past and present members of the Divinity class of this College, the gathering being under the auspices of the Students' Theological and Missionary Association. It was the first of its kind. Its then success was remarkable. Its meetings, devotional and otherwise, did much to reunite the old ties so frequently pushed aside by the great work of life. Nor was the enthusiasm allowed to spend itself in vain, as the Nagano project soon demonstrated. This was the happy idea of the Rev. T. C. S. Macklem, of St. Simon's, Toronto, and so zealously has it been taken up that within six months four-fifths of the required amount are in the hands of the treasurer. This result is all the more creditable from the fact that the expenses of the matter have been but slight, but little literature, such as printed appeals, etc., having been used. The original scheme was very simple, viz., that twenty men should endeavour to raise $50 each. In some cases, of course, it could not be realized and so the amount was divided among two or more. The results, however, are most gratifying, and it is hoped, and that not without good reason, that but a short time will elapse before the remaining $200 have been gathered in, and the Divinity men of the College shall be free to look ahead to the next Epiphany meeting and to some new project for the coming year.

COST OF A COLLEGE EDUCATION.

Princeton University has issued a statement showing that the cost of attending its classes in average cases, does not exceed $500 per year, including clothes, railroad fares, and incidental expenses. In the first class that was examined it was found that seven of the men who graduated with the highest distinction of magna cum laude reported an average expenditure of $442.68. Only one man spent more than $500 in one year; one got through at an average cost of only $267.50 per year, and for the last three years four of the seven expended $400 or less annually. At Princeton the second honourmen are given the distinction cum laude. In this class there were twenty-four that graduated last year, and the average expenditure was $423.12½. The highest expenditure for one year by any member of the thirty-one honourmen was $700, and one-third of the whole number actually got through their four years at a cost of less than $400 per man per year.

These statistics cover, however, only the cases of honourmen who are not usually counted amongst the more extravagant or even ordinarily so, sets. To their honour their ranks are well sprinkled, indeed sometimes largely filled with men whose financial position causes them to set a higher worth upon those treasures of the intellect that forever outshine the gloss of more material fortune. And so it may safely be assumed that the average expenses of a college year at Princeton is considerably in excess of $500.

Leland Stanford Junior University has received a magnificent gift, in works of art, from one of its original trustees and most interested patrons, Hon. Thomas Stanford, of Melbourne, Mr. Leland Stanford's brother. About five years ago, he conceived the idea of sending to the university a collection of pictures of Australian scenery by an Australian artist, so that American art-students could form as perfect an idea as possible of the bush, the lakes, the forests, the mountains, the plains, and the rivers of that region. He retained one of Australia's most celebrated artists, Mr. J. W. Curtis, and gave him carte blanche, with instructions to devote himself entirely to Australian scenery and do his best work. Mr. Curtis worked four years and produced fifty fine paintings in all. These will be placed in the art department of the university museum, and, with the dozen or so already there, will make a superb gallery of view of Australian life and scenery.
