soar to the realms of the bright and the blest, Where the mourner is still, and the weary at rest rise to my glories, while thos must remain In the duck vale of tears, to reproach and to pain.

And hence, though my heart swells exultant to die, And visions of glory unfold to mine eye, The bosom that struggles and pasts to be free Full cleaves to the dust with affection for thee.

I dread not another, more foud and more fair, When I am forgotten, thy fortunes should share : O ! find bat a bosom devoted as mine, And my heari's tondest blessing for over be thine

I fear lest the streke which now rends us apart From the faith of thy Saviour should sever thy heart Lest, seeking in anguish relief from despzir, The vein world should lure thee to look for it there.

BuilD ! should it tempt thes awhile to resign A freesure so precious a hope so divine; Should the light of his glory be hidden from thee, In the hour of thy darkness, O think upon me !

Remember the hope that colivers me now 'The' the dames of the conflict are cold on my brow; Theefaith that has nerved me in transport to see The hour of my doom, though it tears me from thee.

ON THE DEATH OF A FRIEND. O where is that dear spirit fled

So fraught with love and grace? And must we number with the dead That cherish'd form and face ?

Yce, they have pass'd; and we are left, With sought but Memory's aid, To steal from all that death hath reft. As intage not to lade.

And yet we would not call thee back

To mix again with woe, To feel what now we feel-the rack Of grief that lays us low.

No. no, layed shade-already there, Where are no scenes like this, Thou hast exchanged a world of sare For never- ending bliss.

WHAT IS LIFE. What is life ? "Tis a delicate shell, Thrown up by Eternity's flow, On Time's bank of quicksands to dwall,
