NICHOLS GUILTY
Of Housebreaking to the Second Charge of Which He Pleads Guilty.

NO MORE STATEMENTS PERMITTED
Such As Attorney Bleeker Made Concerning the Jury

IN SLORAH MURDER TRIAL
As It Was a Reflection Upon the Police Unwarranted—No Blame Attached to Attorney.

This morning in the territorial court Justice Dugas said that the statement made by Attorney Bleeker at the close of the Slorah murder trial, to the effect that the jury had received information outside of court, had been fully investigated and found to be without foundation. This was, he said, a reflection upon the police for which there was no occasion, and while he did not think that Attorney Bleeker had made the statement with any other end, in view than that of taking every possible advantage for his client, at the same time, in the future such statements would not be permitted till the proper proof of their truth was in evidence.

George Nichols, who was found guilty yesterday afternoon of housebreaking, was on trial this morning on a second charge of a similar nature, being charged with having broken into the house of Clarence Temple between the 30th of September and the 15th of October, and stolen groceries to the value of $14.95.

After the jury had been impanelled the prisoner stated that inasmuch as he could not find one very important witness he would plead guilty.

The case of Robert Riddle, charged with having sold wood under false pretenses from below Moosehide on the 6th day of November last, was next called.

Mr. Labbe testified that he had made arrangements with Riddle to go with him to Moosehide to look at 75 cords of wood. He had gone with Riddle's partner, Frank Rowne, and had agreed to buy the lot at $4.50 per cord, and that he had received a bill of sale to the wood, and had paid them $245.25 on account. The balance of the amount to be paid was deposited with Andy McKenzie to be paid over upon the receipt of the crown timber office for stumpage being presented. This receipt had not been presented, and on the 8th of the month he had again visited the wood piles, and had found the teamster of Sonnikson and Henry hauling the wood away. A visit paid to Sonnikson & Henry developed the fact that the wood was claimed by that firm. A warrant for Riddle's arrest followed. There was some other wood in the vicinity; some that had been cut in '98, which the witness did not see at the time he visited Moosehide, and this wood, he said, was not claimed by Sonnikson, although he claimed to have acquired title to the 75 cords purchased by the witness.

These facts were brought out by the cross-examination of Attorney McKay, who appeared for the defense.

The case is on trial this afternoon, and is the last of the jury cases to be heard at this sitting. The great accumulation of cases which had gathered before the second courtroom was prepared is fast being cleared from the calendar, and the last of them will be contained in the peremptory list for the second week in December.

Next week, being the last week in November, there will be no court held.

Justice Dugas has called upon the commissioner's office to prepare a complete list of English-speaking people within a reasonable distance of Dawson.

The object of this list is to ascertain the number and residence of those eligible for jury duty. It is presumed that the list will be made up at once.

There has been more or less delay in the commencing of criminal cases by the prisoners not being on hand promptly when court was called, and this morning Justice Dugas ordered the issuance of an order to the effect that hereafter an order for the appearance of prisoners at a certain hour should be sent to the police headquarters the afternoon previous to the day they are required. It is only fair to the police to say that it is through no fault of their's that prisoners have not been on hand promptly when wanted, but rather to the fact that under the arrangement of men detailed for various duties it requires a little longer notice than has been possible to give under the old way.

As there will be no court held next week it is very probable that George Nichols will receive his sentence not later than tomorrow morning.

Numerous Fires

The fire alarm which was rung yesterday afternoon was from a burning chimney in the two-story frame building at the corner of Fourth avenue and Third street. The hose from the chemical engine was unreeled and carried to the roof but was not needed, as it was found that a few shovelsful of snow thrown into the chimney were all that was necessary to put out the fire.

The business part of Dawson was startled shortly after 5 o'clock this morning by an alarm of fire which was the result of a call from a tailor shop between Germain's restaurant on Second avenue and Third street.

The fire started from a defective flue and resulted in some damage to the roof. Some of the boards were torn off when the chemical engine was turned on and the fire quickly extinguished. The damage was trifling, although very serious results would undoubtedly have followed had the fire made any considerable progress before being discovered.

The firemen complain this morning that the alleyway between First and Second avenues is being partially blocked by fire wood and logs, which would, in a serious case of fire, greatly impede the progress of fire apparatus.

Just before 12 o'clock today fire was discovered in one of the upstairs rooms of the Savoy, where a carpet had become ignited by being in close contact with a stovepipe. An alarm was rung, but the department was immediately afterward notified that a bucket of water had done the required work.

Shortly after noon today another alarm of fire was sounded and the department responded for a blaze in T. C. Healy's warehouse on Fourth street, near Third avenue.

The cause of the fire was, as usual, the same old defective flue which has cost so much money and work in the past. As in the case of the fire last evening, but little damage resulted, and that was to the roof. The warehouse contained about $40,000 worth of goods.

Reform Holds Good.
The tidal way of reform which was mentioned several days ago and which is vividly apparent in the police court, shows no sign of ebbing. Where drunks were formerly marched to the police court in flocks and herds, now a week passes at a time without even a symptom of a dark, brown taste being seen. Even the old standbys who were formerly familiar figures in the "guilty, yer honor" box, have not been seen for fully a month; their absence indicating that at last they are adhering to their oft repeated promises to never do it again. Yet he who would offer a reward for the man who will refuse a drink is in little danger of losing his money.

St. Andrews Ball.
All arrangements are practically completed for the St. Andrew's ball a week from tomorrow night and nothing remains to be done but await the advent of the glorious occasion. The partitions will be removed from the down stairs of the Savoy and all the space will be thrown into one large dancing hall. Tickets are selling much more rapidly than the management anticipated they would and from a financial as well as from a social standpoint the success of the big undertaking is assured.

Many Are Going Out.
A large number of Dawson people are preparing to start over the ice for the outside between the 1st and 15th of the next month. Many who calculated on spending a portion of the winter outside and who were not able to get away on one of the last boats, will make the trip out over the ice and return by the same route in February or March. The three-fourths of the people going out now expect to return before navigation opens. Thus far not over a half dozen people have started, but many are preparing to go soon. In the course of two or three weeks there is no doubt but that the trail the entire distance from Dawson to Whitehorse will be in fine condition.

Many Shots Fired.
By actual count 15 shots were fired in the northern end of the city a few minutes before 10 o'clock last night. An extended investigation failed to throw any light on the matter as to who was doing the shooting or for what purpose it was being done. What object any one can have in puncturing the atmosphere at that time of night is not clear.

Robbery Charged

Two small wage cases were heard by Magistrate Scarth this morning.

Frank Quinn, who was up yesterday afternoon on the charge of vagrancy, was allowed to go, having, through the agency of a friend, secured employment which he promised to assiduously follow.

Believing himself to be the owner of $180 in gold dust, Andrew Fostrom "ha tank ha hafe a hale jumpin' gude name" last night at the Standard theater, where, with one of the box rustlers, he hid himself to a box and purchased a drink. Having handled gold dust before and knowing how it evaporates like spilled kerosene in frequent weighings out for payment of small bills, he sent his poke, which he alleges to have contained $180 in dust to the bar with a waiter who was instructed to purchase $25 in "chechako," which amount Fostrom evidently calculated to expend in enjoying the evening. On the return of his poke "ha tank it luke pooty small" with the result that he took it down to the bar and had the contents weighed, which act, he alleges, showed the poke to be a little upwards of $80 shy the amount it should have contained. Fostrom charges the waiter with having robbed him. The case will be tried this afternoon.

WHAT ARE THE CONTRACTORS DOING?

Postmaster Has Had Vacation Lasting Six Weeks.

CAUSE FOR DELAY LEARNED.

Mail For Lower River Points Has Been Held at Skagway—Probably Arrive Here Soon.

Fortymile, Nov. 22. — People of Fortymile want their mail. What in the world are the contractors doing with it? The trail has been good for the last two weeks. Make a howl through your paper. No mail for six weeks. THE COMMITTEE.

(The above telegram which was received at the Nugget office shortly after the noon hour today, admits of but one construction, namely: The people of Fortymile are anxious to receive their mail. Several calls at the office of Mr. Barley, the recently arrived division superintendent of the C. D. Co.'s mail business, failed to find that gentleman in, but a visit to the postoffice revealed the information that the contractors for carrying the mail on to lower Yukon points are and for some time have been ready to start with mail as soon as it is received here from southern points. With the two consignments which have thus far arrived since the close of navigation there has been no mail for lower river points, which mail has probably, at the instance of the Canadian inspector located at Skagway, been held at that place until the trail was known to be in good condition for its transportation. However, it is expected at the postoffice here with the next mail to arrive; and if it does, it will be forwarded on down the river without delay. At present there is only local mail on hand for down river points, only a few pounds for either Fortymile or Eggle having been collected. As soon as the consignments for lower Yukon points begin to arrive regularly from the outside, mails for below will leave Dawson on schedule time, which is every two weeks.

THE NEWS V. THE FRENCH.

Using a local politician as a buffer the News a few nights ago took occasion to make certain covert thrusts at the French Canadians of the Dominion. Following its usual tactics of refusing to fight in the open the News gratified its own spleen by making the aforesaid politician responsible for certain statements, which by suggestion and inference amounted to a practical accusation that the French Canadians constitute the unprogressive element of the Dominion and their rapid rise to power and influence constitutes a menace to the advancement of Canada's material welfare.

In its issue of last night the News was forced to publish a letter over the signature of the man whom it had used as a club with which to berate the French, in which letter the author repudiates every sentiment attributed to him by the News, denies that he ever spoke of "unprogressive French," and leaves the News to shoulder the responsibility of the entire matter.

Now it is due for the News to make another of its long drawn out explanations and apologies. How it didn't mean to say anything; was merely quoting somebody else; had no opinion on the matter; in fact didn't know anything at all about it; is very sorry that the affair occurred; will promise hereafter to be good and will never let any such thing happen again, etc., etc. This is the regular thing with the News and if it doesn't happen this time it will be contrary to all precedent.

It will be interesting to note, however, if any such transparent subterfuge will be accepted by the great mass of intelligent French Canadians. We doubt it very much. The intent of the article is too clear—the insult is too plain to admit of explanation. None satisfactory can be made.

A PETTY SPIRIT.

The News had a great to do last night over the fact that the Nugget published on the preceding evening a statement from Susie Vernon amounting to a practical admission that she had perjured herself on the stand during the taking of her testimony in the Storah case.

Now, as a matter of fact, the News on the same evening published almost identically the same story, only the News, with its usual ignorance of what constitutes news, killed its story by tucking it off in a corner where no one could see it.

The Nugget published the story under the caption, "Perjury Admitted." The News labeled its article "Susie Vernon Tells a New Story." The difference in meaning between the two is so slight as scarcely to constitute a distinction. The fact as the News had it, that "Susie Vernon tells a new story," carries with it the inference that one or the other of her stories must be false and hence is equivalent to a charge of perjury. We have no idea that the News will be able to comprehend even so simple a line of reasoning as the above, but we will hope that possibly we may for once be mistaken.

The conclusion which the News draws out of the matter would be laughable were not the circumstances as serious as they are. The Nugget is accused of toying with the life of a man who has been convicted by a jury and sentenced to death by hanging. We fail to follow.

Nothing that could be said or done can possibly add to the severity of the sentence which has been imposed. The only effect possible from Susie Vernon's peculiar actions since the trial would be a re-opening of the case, which would give the man another chance for his life.

With this phase of the matter the Nugget has nothing to do. The Nugget is a newspaper first, last and all the time, and publishes the news while it is news. We are not concerned with establishing the guilt or innocence of men charged with crime. Our business is to furnish the public with the facts in such cases as they develop from time to time. When we have done that our duty ceases.

The petty spirit of spitefulness manifested by the News in its issue of last evening was occasioned by the knowledge that the Nugget is besting the News right along. That's all.

Misunderstood Patriotism.

Professor Alfred B. Adams, of New York, was a soldier in the civil war and took part in the Red river campaign under Maj. Gen. Nathaniel T. Banks.

"At one place," he said recently to one of his classes, "we surprised a southern garrison and took many prisoners. They were guarding a mountain of cotton bales which were intended for shipment to Europe on account of the southern government. Gen. Banks promptly confiscated the cotton and transferred it to his flotilla. Each bale was stenciled 'C. S. A.' and over this the northern soldiers with marking brushes wrote in huge characters 'U. S. A.' I was on guard at the time, and one of my prisoners, a handsome, bright eyed young southern officer, said, 'Yank, what's that writing there?'"

"I looked proudly at him as I replied: 'The United States of America over the Confederate States of America. Can't you read—U. S. A. over C. S. A.?'

"He looked at me quizzically. 'Thank you,' he said. 'Do you know, I thought it was United States of American Cotton Stealing Association.'"

"The next question he put to me I didn't answer." — Saturday Evening Post.

The French Workmen.

The French workman is the creature of the street for the sense of the joy of life and the creature of the home and the workshop for the sense of the hardship and sometimes of the sorrow. Fashioned as he is in this way, two outside forces contend for the possession of him. The question of questions is, "Will he take his guidance from the recognized agencies within the law or from the agencies of revolt?" The state, and also, as we have seen, the church offers him all sorts of bribes and bonuses to consent to work in their way. They recognize his trade and self help societies. They try to get him to the altar as a devotee and to the urn as a voter. But he has heard of Utopias, and he longs to have one more struggle for absolute perfection at short notice, though he may have to lay down his life in the attempt.

The key to modern French history is to be found here. Every political movement has to be a compromise between the aspirations of the faubourg and the world as it wags. The French workman has been bred in the belief in revolution as a recognized agency of progress and by instinct and habit he loathes second best. The old order offers him the churches, the thrift and benefit societies, co-operation, insurance against accidents, education, technical and other—the old political economy, in a word, and the paternal state. The new whispers socialism, the commune, anarchy sometimes and with these the barricade.—Richard Whiteing in Century.

Careful of Their Voices.

Adelina Patti has led a life of self-denial for the sake of her voice. As a young girl she never had any of the pleasures which fall to others. Parties, dancing and fun of every kind were denied her. Her father and her brother-in-law, M. Strakosch, who was also her impresario, were in constant fear that she would fatigue her voice. One can imagine how bright and lovely a child Patti was, how eager her delight in innocent pleasures, yet pleasure had to be foregone. As to girlish flirtations until she married the Marquis de Caux at 24 the little diva had been kept almost like a nun at home and knew absolutely nothing of the world. The pleasures of the table were not for her. She used to eat only plainly cooked meat and toast, so that even the slightest indigestion would not impair the clearness of her voice.

On ordinary days, when Patti has to sing in opera at night, she dines off beef and potatoes and baked apples at about 3:30 p. m., for beef is said to give force and applies smoothness to the voice. After dinner the prima donna fasts until she sings, taking between the acts of an opera homeopathic doses of phosphorus and capsicum, both of which are beneficial to the throat. If tired a cup of buillon is prepared for her.

Patti never speaks a word on the days when she has to sing. Nor does Mme. Albani, who otherwise takes less care of her voice than the diva and fears only indigestible food, salmon, nuts and such like. Both declare they never even "look" at tea, which hardens the vocal chords. Between the parts of a concert or opera Albani drinks a glass of claret. She believes implicitly in the virtues of a cold bath.

Melba says: "I can eat anything, talk all day and my voice is never affected." But, then, Melba's voice and her whole physique are singularly strong and her nerves are of the steadiest. Jean de Reszke, whose throat is not strong, and who suffers from changeable climate, and complains of the heat of theaters behind the scenes, is chary of his fine tenor notes. He scarcely ever goes into society nowadays, restricts himself as to diet and pins his faith to bicycling. Nothing, he firmly believes, is so beneficial to the vocal chords as to take a quiet morning spin in fresh country air.

Sims Reeves, throughout his whole professional career, was sedulous in nursing his voice. Before singing he always sucked a lozenge, in which he much believed; it was "home-made"—of glycerine, lemon juice and gum arabic. Jenny Jind avoided fatigue of all kinds, and whenever she had to sing she partook at intervals during the day of a soup prepared with chicken broth, cream and barley, which was supposed to be softening to the voice.—Ex.

COMPASS AS A PROSPECTOR

Peculiar Antics of the Needle on Lynn Canal.

Rich Body of Ore Causes Variation of Several Points—The Vein Located.

As announced recently, the U. S. R. C. McArthur is in the north to discover the cause of the compass deviation at Battery point, down the canal. The origin of the trouble has been discovered, according to the Dispatch of Juneau. Capt. J. G. Davis, the mineralogist of that city, first brought the attention of the government to the magnetic disturbance at Battery point, and also along Gastineaux channel, where for a long time captains of vessels running to Alaska have noticed a serious deflection of the compass at a point about opposite Sheep creek, as at this point they take their course from the lights of Treadwell and Juneau.

Not much attention was given to it, and some then thought it might be from the large amount of tailings, containing magnetic iron, that are discharged into the channel from the mines at Sheep creek.

Dr. Bauer, chief of the magnetic department of the coast survey, has charge of the investigation. Upon reaching Juneau he called upon Mr. Davis, who piloted him on the steamer Thistle to the location where the compass begins to cut up capers. The boat was then run up and down the channel, by the point of attraction, and the compass showed a variation of six and one-half degrees. Then the boat turned with the bow to it, when the needle swung immediately with the point directly to the place, but when disturbed it would break away and swing backwards and forward, under the double attraction of the earth's north pole and Alaska's north pole, until, by what seemed almost human preference, it would finally back to our own north pole and there remain. In the further testing of the magnetic power of the location the marked 88 degrees—90 degrees being a perpendicular—beyond which it cannot go. This gives a pretty correct conception of the force of the attraction.

On Battery point a large deposit of ore has been discovered as a result of the investigations, and undoubtedly a deposit, in the form of a lode, runs under Lynn canal, along through Douglas island, with a very large body of it at or near the surface just below the Treadwell powder house, and nearly opposite Sheep creek, which deposit causes the magnetic disturbance.

She Was Superstitious.

"Superstition has not entirely died out, and often is found where least expected," said a conductor who runs into Galveston, in telling of an incident of his latest trip. "This was brought out very plainly yesterday. A well dressed, intelligent looking woman, a woman whose appearance and speech indicated that she was highly educated, was the one who exemplified this.

"At a station where we wait about 10 minutes the incident occurred. We stopped as usual, and I left the train and went to the ticket office to speak to the agent. While there I noticed this woman as she was leaving the ticket window to board the train, having just bought a ticket to the next station.

"As she went out on the platform she bought a daily paper from the news agent, and, just glancing at it, saw that it was dated Friday, August 17, whereupon she rushed back to the agent and asked that he cancel the ticket and refund her money, saying that upon the receipt of a letter that morning she had decided to visit a friend at the next station, but had forgotten that it was Friday, and, as she did not care to travel on that day, said she would wait until the next, and asked that her money be refunded or the ticket be extended.

"She was getting her money back just as I left to go on the train. She waited until Saturday, and no doubt has been thinking ever since of the great danger she escaped."—Galveston News.

Queer Vocations.

There can be no better illustration of the truth of the moss-grown expression that "one-half the world does not know how the other half lives," than is found in the discoveries made by a number of census agents of this city. Occupations that were never known to exist have been unearthed by these questioners, and have given the students of odd jobs and unique livelihoods food for much thought.

For instance, a man's sole business is the making of monstrosities. He turns out sea serpents and mermaids as readily as the tailor cuts a pair of trousers.

One of the census takers in East forty-fifth street found a professional spanker. His advertisement in a German paper said: "Unruly and wayward boys disciplined at parents' residences."

There was discovered close to Fort Greene park, in Brooklyn, a man named Brenner, with a sign reading: "Cockroach killer to the United States navy." The cockroach killer made his reputation when he removed 21 barrels of cockroaches from the old, wall-sided Pensacola. He does it with a sort of paste and is an expert.

Another queer occupation discovered is conducted by a man who "calls people." His chief customers are those who have to get up at unusually early hours, such as bartenders, policemen, motormen and the like.

The woman whose business it is to collect corks, and who is said to make $10 a day, is another queer one on the long list of oddities. She gathers all the whisky, champagne and mineral water corks, through a number of employes, and sells them to the firms that originally cut them.

Close to Bellevue hospital is a woman who sells bottles. The poor who go to the dispensary for medicines usually fail to take bottles along. The "bottle woman" sells for 1 or 2 cents each glass bottles of all sizes, ranging from the half ounce vial to the one big enough for the horse liniment.

Still another odd business is that of an east side firm which is down in the books as an "ejection company." The firm does nothing except get rid of tenants.

Up on Broadway, near Fifty-seventh street, is a man whose business it is to bite off dogs' tails. He says the animals must be of an age at which their tails are tender. He doesn't believe in a knife, because every dog's tail has a worm in it, and the only way to remove it is to bite the tail off.

A man named Kelly charges $2.50 for destroying bad trees, a woman in Harlem trains college men for plays, three firms furnish clean jackets for bartenders and charge them from 50 cents to $1 per week. Even the women on the east side, who make a business of lighting fires on holidays, are remembered in the list.—New York Cor. St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

To India by Rail.

All that is wanted is an agreement between Britain and Russia as to Afghanistan. Already the enterprising Muscovite has extended the scope of the Trans-Caspian railway to such a degree that Russian cars are actually running well inside Afghan territory. Kushk, an Afghan frontier town, is practically in Russian hands, and a light railway is already under construction to famous Herat.

This is the situation on Afghanistan's northern frontier. On the south British India is apparently not less active. The Beloochistan railway system, terminating at Gulistan Karez, on the Afghan border, is to be extended, and already work is being pushed forward in order to connect Kandahar with the Indian railroad system.

In Central Asia Russia is actively engaged in surveying and constructing. When this is completed all that will remain in order to make it possible to go by train from Calais to Bombay will be to link up the chain between Herat and Kandahar—an insignificant distance of 585 English miles.

That link being made, and the Central Asia railway finished, London to Bombay will mean that the only chance for seasickness will be on the 21-mile strip of channel between Dover and Calais.

By the Straits of Gibraltar and the Suez canal the distance is 6500 miles, and the time occupied by the fastest peninsular and Oriental steamer is 21 days.

By the land route, allowing the average approximate speed to be 25 miles an hour by the express trains, the journey would occupy only 11 days, four hours over a distance approximately estimated at 6700 English miles. This speed is on the average considerably exceeded even on Asiatic railways, and, of course, doubled on European lines.

Two changes of cars would be necessary on the journey from Calais—at the frontier on entering Russia, and at the Indian frontier. This would be occasioned by the fact that the Russian lines have a gauge nearly a foot wider than the rest of European railways.—London Mail.

What Ruled the Engineer.

The old engineer had finished grooming his engine for the night's run and was whiling away the half hour before train time in swapping yarns with his fireman. It was his turn at a story. After puffing reflectively on his pipe for a moment or two, he said, half questioningly: "I don't believe we've ever run over anybody, Big, since you've been in the cab.

"But it isn't the running over that scares you," he continued, "though that is bad enough. It's the coming so all fired close to it and missing that takes the tuck out of a man. After you once hit anything the worst you can do is to plow right along, but when you see a man on the track and blow your whistle and shut off steam and put on brakes and then the man turns out to be deaf or drunk or something of the kind, and you know you can't help striking him, then's the time you wish you were running a steamboat or a fire engine.

"The closest shave I ever had was when I was pulling the president's special up to Albany. We were trying to make a record run. We had passed the Poughkeepsie bridge and were doing better than a mile a minute when I saw a man walking down the track toward us. The fireman blew the whistle, but the man never budged from between the rails. As we got closer, I saw he was walking with his head down and paying no attention to what was going on. I shut off steam, jammed on the brakes and reversed her, but we slid along at a pretty fair gait. He never stirred until just as the engine was going to hit him. Then he jumped out of the way, grinning up at me and put his fingers to his nose.

"Get after him," I yelled, but before the fireman could climb down from the cab the man was running down the track for all he was worth—and that wasn't more than 30 cents. We didn't have any time to spare, so we hustled on again, and I've been trying ever since to decide whether our friend was drunk or crazy, or had a darned peculiar idea of humor. Anyway, I wish I'd had a little more time. I'd like to have taken a chance at him with coal shovel."—New York Mail and Express.

"All the Sky."

A lady went to read to a woman's club at a social settlement in Chicago, and she chose for the subject of her reading "The Vision of Sir Launfal." But no sooner had she got within the door than she was seized with the idea that her selection had not been a wise one. The weary, unresponsive faces offered little promise of appreciation.

"I'm almost afraid you will not enjoy what I am about to read to you," she said, with very honest apology, as she rose to address them. "Much of this poem is about the country, and it is very likely that some of you have never been in the country, and so do not care about it."

When she had finished, the women came to thank her, and among them was one who ventured upon a timid reproach. "How could you think we would not understand about the country?" she asked. "It was the easiest part of the poem to understand—that part which was about the country. We knew perfectly what was meant."

"Then you must know the country. Probably you have lived in it." "No, I've not lived in it, but I know what it is like. There is a vacant lot next to us, and sometimes you can't speak for the colors in it—and there is a row of trees and all the sky!" That is what she said, word for word. That was her simple and exquisite epitome of nature's message.—Youth's Companion.

The Boy Lied.

Danny, who is an errand boy in a broker's office, got a job in the same office for his chum Harry. Danny set himself the task of making Harry appear to the best advantage during the probationary period of his job, and he found it necessary sometimes to use means that were only justified by the end, says the New York Commercial Advertiser.

Every afternoon Danny had to run with messages from one of the exchanges to the office, a distance of half a mile. When Harry came Danny had to "break him in" to do this. The first day that he made the trip from the exchange Harry staggered into the office, gasping with his eyes starting from his head. For a moment he couldn't speak. The broker looked at him in astonishment, and said:

"You ran pretty fast, didn't you? How long did it take?" "Four minutes and 17 seconds," Harry panted, looking at the clock. "That's pretty good time," said the broker. "No, sir," said Harry. "Not very good. Danny says he does it every day in a minute and a quarter."

Wart as a Barometer.

William Creiger, of Northville, Mich., is a human barometer. He has a large wart on one of his cheeks, and during the dry weather it is small and rather dry. When a storm is coming 20 hours' notice is given Mr. Creiger by this wart swelling to two or three times its normal size. During the late drouth Mr. Creiger was the object of much prominence, as everybody wanted to know when rain would come, in order to save their corn and potatoes. The day before the rain did come the wart began growing larger and Creiger was sure the drouth would be broken, and it was. He is looked upon as better than the government guessers of weather probabilities.—Ex.

SMALL BOY'S CLOSE CALL

Would Ape Sour Doughs by Not Wearing a Coat.

Was Found Wandering Around on the Klondike River With Nose and Cheeks Frozen.

Yesterday morning a small boy whose name, as nearly as it was possible to ascertain it, is Willie Wilson, had an experience with Jack Frost which will probably last him while he lives.

He lives with his parents somewhere near the Klondike bridge, and was sent by his mother with a note to a neighbor's. Willie, like other small boys who know all about many things without being told, set off on his errand in his shirt sleeves. He did not reach the house of the neighbor, but was found on the ice of the Klondike near the shore, running about in a circle, and crying with the pain of cold.

The boy, who is about twelve years old was taken to a near-by grocery store where it was found that his nose and one cheek had been severely frozen. After his immediate needs had been cared for by rubbing his nose and cheek with snow till the frost was drawn, and he had got warmed through, he was sent home.

There are numbers of small boys seen on the streets daily who would do well to take warning from this boy's experiences, and during the present cold weather remain near their own firesides.

About That Butter.

Yesterday a Nugget representative visited the room where the butter which recently figured in the police court is being packed by J. and T. Adair, and witnessed the process to which it is subjected before being placed on the market.

The butter, which was originally shipped to the A. C. Co. by an outside packing house, is put up in tins, some of which, in fact a great many, were defective and allowed the small amount of brine which is always to be found in tins containing butter, to drain off, and this resulted in rust stains and rancid butter in the tins which leaked.

This, however, in no way affected the contents of the tins which did not leak, and it is this which is being repacked and placed upon the market.

It may be asked by many, and certainly was asked by the Nugget man, why, if the butter was all right, it was being taken from its original packages and then put up in different form for home consumption.

The explanation given, is this. The condition of the contents of the tins cannot be known till the top is removed and an examination made, and when this is done the inside wrapper has been muscled and the tin practically destroyed, at least, so far as its sale is concerned, so that repacking is the only thing possible.

In the room where the work is being done by a number of experienced butter makers, there are a number of flat wooden trays. The butter which examination has proved sweet and in good condition, is placed in the first of these, where it is worked over. After this it is removed to the next tray, where it is reworked in water. In the next tray it is worked again and salted, the first washing having removed the salt.

After this it is laid upon a working board where after the water has been worked out thoroughly, it is moulded in bricks of two pounds and wrapped in printed wrappers, bearing in addition to the star stamp of the Yakima Star Creamery, the words, "Packed by J. & T. Adair, Dawson." Then it is ready for packing in new boxes preparatory to being sent to the retailer.

Some curiosity was expressed as to what became of the other butter—that which had been spoiled or damaged, and of which considerable was in evidence. The question brought forth the information that it was to be converted into soap. Not the common red labeled variety whose odor is a familiar as that of hot water and steam on Monday, but a fine toilet article, nearly, if not quite, as valuable as fresh butter.

An Eldorado Kick.

Complaint comes from Eldorado that the new road which the government at great cost lately constructed along a portion of that creek is being obstructed in places by dumps. Particularly is this, it is said, the case on claim No. 3, where the road has been made the foundation for a big dump. At present the inconvenience is not apparent for the reason that much of the travel is now along the bed of the creek; but in the spring the fact that the road is being thus blockaded will greatly obstruct and in one or two places practically prohibit teaming on that creek.

Bowling Match.

A grand bowling match for the team championship of the Yukon is now on, two parts of a series of three meets having been played at the Reception alley yesterday afternoon, the third and decisive meet to take place this afternoon at the same place. The respective teams are Alex Swartz and Herman Knapp against Rainbow and Harwood. The individual score as the result of the first ten games was as follows:

Swartz, 370; Knapp, 283; Rainbow, 296; Harwood, 270; the team record being S. and K., 653; R. and H., 566. The second ten games, the individual score was: Swartz, 274; Knapp, 346; Rainbow, 360; Harwood, 327; the team record being: S. and K. 620; R. and H., 687.

Each team having won an inning, betting is even as to the result of the last ten games, which will complete the match, this afternoon. Each team has admirers, who are backing their favorites with coin of the realm.

Flue Inspector Needed.

Now that the mercury has passed the 40 below zero mark the tinnabulations of the fire bell will probably be heard on an average of once each day as long as the very cold weather continues. Many of the fires, in accord with Dawson's past history in that respect, will be started by defective flues, which, of course, have not been inspected even by the owners during the past year or more. Like the Arkansas man, they didn't need the flues inspected in mild weather and now it is too cold to inspect them and draw the flues if repairs are found to be necessary. An official flue inspector could be well and advantageously employed in Dawson for the next several months.

Collecting Back Dues.

The new officers of the local camp of the Arctic Brotherhood are taking hold of their work in a manner which foretells prosperity and growth for that institution. This week the members of the board of trustees are out on a collecting tour in order that the exact financial standing of the camp may be ascertained. It is probable that a series of social entertainments and dances will be given by the camp during the winter. Many new members are being taken into the order which is all that is suggested in its name.

Write Address Plainly.

The local postoffice people experience considerable difficulty on account of the fact that many letters and other mail are insufficiently directed. For example, many letters intended for Grand Forks or Caribou are simply directed, "Grand Forks, Canada," or "Caribou, Canada," the "Yukon Territory" or "Y. T." being omitted. As there is another postoffice called Grand Forks in Canada; also another Caribou, many letters intended for delivery in the Yukon doubtless never reach their destination. Residents of this country are, therefore, requested to notify their correspondents to exercise proper care in directing their mail.

Nichols Sentenced.

Contrary to the expectations of some, George Nichols was sentenced today. He plead guilty to the second charge and was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary in that case, receiving no sentence whatever for the first offence, as the jury recommended him to the mercy of the court. The limit of the sentence he was liable to was 28 years.

A Careless Woodman.

The break in the telegraph line between Caribou and Bennett was repaired yesterday afternoon and for a short time everything worked smoothly when another break occurred which was this morning found to be due to a wood-chopper having fallen a tree across the line about five miles above Dawson. The fellow had the manliness and honor to notify the Dawson office of the location of the break early this morning when Lineman Johnson went out and made the necessary repairs.

The Weather.

Unofficial thermometers all over town this morning registered all the way from 40 to 47 degrees below zero. The lowest point reached at the official weather station at the barracks was 38.5 below zero.

COMING AND GOING.

The Yukon council is due to meet this evening.

Dawson Aerie, No. 50, F. O. E., will meet Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. A full attendance is desired. Installation of officers.

The large gray horse of fire hall No. 1, is laid up with a sore foot. The animal never lies down in his stall, and a few days since dozed while standing and cut one of his fore feet with the sharp calks on the shoe of the other.

When the thermometer registers the present kind of weather it is said that it would be impossible to keep water running through the fire hose for more than two hours at the outside and probably not so long as that.

T. C. Healey was the winner in the Regina Club billiard match last night, having defeated his opponent, R. M. De Gex by 20 points. The contest was a handicap of 100 to 85, and the score at the close stood 100 to 80. The average was 89 as against 71.

Judging from the state of the weather today, and the number of white tipped proboscis seen on the streets, the crowd at the hockey match this evening will be made up principally of those whose ardor is sufficiently warm to overcome the inconveniences due to a thermometer whose tendency seems to be towards Moosehide. A great many have been heard to say they were going if all the thermometers in town broke.
