"Flatterers" OR The Shadow of the Future.

CHAPTER XXI IN WHICH MR. HURST MAKES AN AWKWARD DISCOVERY.

"If it is any pleasure to you to hear it, I will say I consider our arrangement quite perfect. If you had seen my brother before you came, which is impossible, but you know what I mean, you would understand how different he is now. And in pastry, too, the change is astonishing. Time after time Rebecca used to send up crust that really might have been tossed over the roof with less injury to itself than the tiles. Now, you can testify, Miss Grey, our dinners are not disgraced by such cookery. And why? Ah! Rebecca knows better than to let her fire out when I'm near! And Gilbert's spirits are so improved, too. Why, I heard him laughing yesterday. What was it at, Miss Grey?"

"Only a line from Horace in the paper I was reading." "And you could pronounce it properly?" "I tried." "I envy you. What a muddle I used to make of those foreign bits. First I hopped them, hoping he wouldn't miss them, but he always did. Then I spelled them out, but that didn't answer. But I labored to amuse him. I used to get bits from the comic papers, and say, 'Here's something so droll for you to hear, Gilbert,' and I would tell him the funniest jokes, and yet he hardly ever laughed. But I said to him last night, 'Gilbert, Miss Grey is quite valuable. Worth much more than the salary I can afford her. But rather than lose her I would work for a poor gentleman's fancy repository.' So if ever you require a little rise, Miss Grey, tell me, and I'll manage it."

But Miss Grey had no intention of asking for a rise. The light admission she carried off now to her store well-ed the total to thirty-six pounds; and that would afford Christmas boxes for a long while to St. Clair's. The money outlay of her present life was next to nil. The fatal loan advanced by her mother, was repaid, for Jacob Cheene had sent her, in six notes, the residue of her six thousand. Now she, who had longed to be in some ways lavish, must only be so in coin less limitable than gold, must spend youth and energy in brightening this home that the waves of her self-will had cast her into, and for lack of nearer interests must beat the bounds of this narrow domain till, perhaps, she grew into an old maid like Miss Jean Hurst. Well, she thought, rather than have been wed and then waked up to find herself bartered for metal that rang false, her lot was one she would have chosen open-eyed, for it was by no means despicable, from its lowliest function of improving pie-crust to its worthier of lifting some gloom off Gilbert Hurst's career.

In this last direction her powers waxed stronger week by week. As summer waned, day only seemed to break on Gilbert Hurst with the first sound of Sydney's voice. Her presence transformed his life. Did he ask himself "How?" Well, by countless womanly intuitions; by the contact of a most animated, intelligence. If, by aught else, the time to formulate other influence had not come. It was yet hidden, unsuspected, but—growing. September took Sydney for her first let her fire out when I'm near! And Gilbert's spirits are so improved, too. Why, I heard him laughing yesterday. What was it at, Miss Grey?"

"Only a line from Horace in the paper I was reading." "And you could pronounce it properly?" "I tried." "I envy you. What a muddle I used to make of those foreign bits. The money outlay of her present life was next to nil. The fatal loan advanced by her mother, was repaid, for Jacob Cheene had sent her, in six notes, the residue of her six thousand. Now she, who had longed to be in some ways lavish, must only be so in coin less limitable than gold, must spend youth and en-

Quite early, when the sun was showing a copper-colored disk behind an autumn haze, Sydney set out to the railway station. Footsteps had already brushed the dew-spangled cobwebs from the path by the poplars. The white gate stood open. Outside was Mr. Hurst. He heard the first fall of her foot, and his face lighting up with that full expressiveness that made his deprivation seem incredible, asked, yet he hardly ever laughed. But I said to him last night, 'Gilbert, Miss Grey is quite valuable. Worth much more than the salary I can afford her. But rather than lose her I would work for a poor gentleman's fancy repository.' So if ever you require a little rise, Miss Grey, tell me, and I'll manage it."

"Thank you," he said, "but my memory is only canine. I was my cousin's godson, and came holiday-making to Capel Moor till I learned every nook about the place. I was to have been her heir, but she changed her mind." "Oh! What made her do so?" Sydney exclaimed, with more impulse than discretion. "Common-sense. In those days I had a notion I could carve out what fortune I liked. Our worthy cousin took me at my own estimate, and left her little property to the one she thought would want it most."

Natural, this, yet Sydney couldn't help feeling that, as events had disposed themselves, it was something like leaving a managing magpie in charge of a disabled eagle! Then she chid herself for this ungracious metaphor, and made amends.

"Perhaps it does not signify, Mr. Hurst, which had the money. Your sister delights in using it for you." "Poor Jean!" he answered, with a smile that had sadness in it. "Her small estate is eaten up by one pensioner. When I was young I was arrogant, I fancy. I've fallen on lines that take that sort of nonsense out of a man, Miss Grey. Poor Jean!"

That reiteration was the nearest approach to complaint Mr. Hurst ever made over his own and his sister's relative positions. But Sydney, looking up shyly, saw how the grave serenity of the whole face betokened mastery of strong passion and will rather than the placidity of inborn composure, and the pity that welled up within her was less for "poor Jean" than for Jean's brother.

"Mind," he said, as they reached the valley through which the coming train was sounding like distant wind, "there are the roots of a tree across the path a little way on. Don't forget them if it's dusk when you return."

"Thank you; but it will not be dusk. I shall be home at six." "Good-bye. We shall be wanting you. Good-bye till then." He lifted his hat. His words were grateful to her. At the Dale, her adieu were differently phrased. She could have shaken hands for short farewell, but one of Miss Hurst's super-refined rules restrained her. "I tell my brother it makes him look ridiculous to stand with his hand extended, and the person who is going, perhaps, never noticing it. So I advise him only to bow. I spare his feelings in all these little ways, you know." So, with "Good-bye," Sydney let him turn back, standing some seconds to watch with what perfect ease and certainly his tall form took the homeward way. Wynstone regained, Mr. Hurst heard footfalls pattering near the door.

"Who is it?" he asked, stooping, for the steps were of a pyram, and a juvenile treble responded: "Please sir, me." "And what may 'me' be wanting?" He was always gentle with children. No one in Capel Moor feared the blind gentleman. "Oh, if you please, sir, it's some foxes' gloves mother have sent the lady."

"What lady? Miss Hurst?" "No, sir; the young lady, if you please, as come by yesterday and give mother sixpence 'cause she've sprained her wrist."

"And you don't know her name?" "No, sir; but, if you please, she's the pretty lady." He took the flowers carefully indoors, and summoned Rebecca to put them in Miss Grey's room. Miss Hurst met the flowers en route, and learned their story from her brother. The little messenger's adjectives, how they escaped repeating. "It would be Ruth Jones, I expect. Miss Grey likes the road past their cottage, and she's a person that, I've no doubt, poor people would take to."

An opinion of which penniless Mr. Hurst entertained no doubt whatever. Arrived at Stillcote Upton, and Mr. Cheene's dwelling, Nancy, in stiff lilac print, her carotid locks skewered away under a white muslin helmet, ushered Sydney through what has been Miss Ambler's shop, but was now promoted to the dignity of a private sitting-room up-stairs, splendid with American cloth, to the lodger's apartment, which, rehabilitated by druggist and curtains, polished windows and fresh paint, looked quite an elegant apartment but five shillings a week more lettable than three months before.

Suggestions of replenished purses filled the air. Jacob, in his Sunday suit, was waiting for her. The odor of excellent coffee, prepared by Miss Ambler's hands for Mr. Cheene's visitor, blended with the scene of a gorgeous nosegay, and a scheme to make this day as festive as possible was effectively carried out, with only a few minutes unprevented collapse. "I have worked you too hard, Jacob," Sydney said, anxiously, when Nancy having stumped off with the breakfast, she fetched her father's office stool, and seated herself at the old clerk's feet; "you are thinner and paler. You are tired with all our talking."

"Tired with pleasure, then, Miss Sydney, and that never kills." "I had not need kill you—our one friend—my father's and mine." "No fear. If it could, it would have done it these last few weeks." "Were the people glad, then?" "Glad isn't word enough, Miss Sydney. They were nearly dazed with delight, some of them."

Then he told her how the few score pounds here, the few hundreds there, had come like a gift on those who had thought their savings lost. How some could not believe their luck till hard cash proved their glad surprise no dream. (to be continued.)

Large and Small Alike

A trust company is not—as is sometimes assumed—an organization conducted for the sole benefit of capitalists. It is a financial corporation to serve all the people in the efficient management of their securities, estates and trusts. If your estate is small, there is all the more reason why it should be cared for by a reliable administrator such as The Royal Trust Company.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

"LOST AND FOUND" AGAIN. It's a long time since we have had one of our "Lost and Found" columns, isn't it? I am afraid the Letter-Friends who have sent in lost ads for it, have lost their faith in me as well as the poems they want found. But I have not forgotten them. I have just been waiting to get enough queries to fill a column. I have them to-day, and some more. "What Has England Done?" "Could you possibly obtain a copy of a poem written as an answer to criticism on England's part in the war," writes one Letter-Friend. "The title is: 'What Has England Done?'" "Could you please find out for me the authorship of the following:

"Thus you for yourself grow no fleece, oh sheep." "Oh that I were where I would be. Then would I be where I am not. But where I am there I must be. Where I would be I cannot."

"I wondered if you would help me in finding an old book for children? My mother had a copy of this book which had been hers from childhood. It was destroyed in a fire and I would like to have a copy before my little boy is old enough for stories. It was a Brown book and on the rear cover was a picture of a little girl with buttons down her dress and the old rhyme 'Rich man, poor man,' etc. In the book was a story about a colony of ants and a piece of poetry about a little girl who had gone shopping for her dolly. This is all I remember of the contents. I would gladly pay postage on a most dilapidated copy if someone has the book and no longer needs it."

"Do you know the satirical poem 'A Fool's Prayer'?" The last line is 'Oh Lord, be merciful to me, a fool.' Also the satire about a Mrs. Partington who mops the Atlantic ocean? Also the missing lines of 'A Soul's Soliloquy'?" "To-day the journey is ended, been absent only twenty-five days. As the Britons did not send the hostages they promised, Caesar undertook a second invasion." In the following spring he forced Caswallon, a native chief, to submit to him, and to promise a yearly tribute to Rome, and then withdrew his legions once more to Gaul, having spent four months in the island on this occasion. The chief result of these visits to Britain was that they made the island and the civilized world better known to each other.

Caesar's Two Visits to Britain. Julius Caesar, the celebrated Roman General, first invaded Britain in B.C. 55, when he embarked two legions (12,000 men), set sail from Portus Itius, between Calais and Boulogne; and arrived the following day to find swarms of Britons already armed to prevent his landing. He sailed about seven miles along the coast, and disembarked near the place where Deal now stands, though some believe that he landed at Hythe. His troops were encamped, in which the Britons were overcome. This is said to have happened on August 28; four days later, however, a storm shattered the fleet, Caesar lost many men in his conflicts with the Britons, and having accepted a promise of hostages from them, he prudently returned to Gaul, having Formal Reply of Dail Eireann.

Playing With Phrases," Says Lloyd George---Danger in Prolonging Negotiations---Former German Vice-President Assassinated.

ERBERGER ASSASSINATED.
BERLIN, Aug. 26.
 Erberger, former Vice-President and Minister of Finance, was murdered to-day. He was assassinated near Offenbach, Baden, where he was sojourning with his wife. His body contained twelve wounds. Herr Erberger had been in Baden-Grisbach, where he was taking the cure in company with Deputy Diez, for a foot tour of the Black Forest. An hour later the two men were confronted by two men who separated them, and then shot Erberger into Herr Erberger, who was killed instantly by shots in the head. Deputy Diez also was wounded.

SINN FEIN'S REPLY.
LONDON, Aug. 26.
 The British Government's peace proposals were laid before Dail Eireann, which rejected them unanimously, but is willing to negotiate on the basis of "Government by consent of the governed." Eamon De Valera in his reply to Mr. Lloyd George, Irish Premier, the letter proposed that Great Britain and Ireland appoint representatives with plenary powers to negotiate details of this peace. "We have not sought war, but if war be upon us we must defend ourselves, and shall do so," says Mr. De Valera's letter. "We long to end the conflict between Great Britain and Ireland," he adds. The text of the letter, which bears date of August 24th, is: "The anticipatory judgment I made in my reply of August 13 has been confirmed. I laid the proposals before your Government before Dail Eireann, and by unanimous vote it rejected them. From your letter of August 23 it was clear that the principle we are asked to accept was that of geographical propinquity of Ireland to Great Britain imposed a condition of subordination of Ireland's interests, as she conceived them, and of the length and persistence of effort made in the past to compel Ireland's acquiescence in a foreign domination, imposed a condition of acquiescence of that domination now. I cannot believe that your Government intended to commit itself to a principle of sheer militarism, destructive of International motive and of the world's peace. If the nation's right to independence is denied, when more powerful neighbors covet its territory for military or other advantages, it is supposed to be an end to liberty nor any small nation claim the right to separate existence. Holland and Belgium can be made subservient to France, Portugal to Spain, if nations have been forcibly annexed to an empire are denied their title to independence. There can be no birth of freedom for them. In Ireland's case to speak of her seceding from a partnership she has not accepted, or an allegiance which she has not undertaken to render, is fundamentally false. Just as the claim to subordination to British rule is fundamentally unjust, so can we, as representatives of a nation, lend countenance. If our duty is to betray our nation's honour and the trust that has been reposed in us to be made the issue of war, we are conscious of our responsibility to the living, as we are mindful of the dead. We have not sought, but we seek war, but if war be upon us, we must defend ourselves and shall do so, confident whether our defense be successful or unsuccessful, that no body of representative Irishmen or Irish women will ever propose to the nation the surrender of its birthright. We long to end the centuries long quarrel between Great Britain and Ireland. If your Government impose its will upon us by force and, antecedent to negotiations, insist upon conditions that we surrender our whole national position and make negotiations impossible, the responsibility for continuance of the conflict rests upon you. Only on the basis of the broad guiding principle of Government by consent of the Government can peace be secured, peace that will be just and honourable to all and fruitful of concord and conducting to amity. To negotiate such peace the Dail Eireann is ready to appoint its representatives and if your Government accept these principles, proposes to invest them with plenary powers to meet and arrange with you for its application in detail. I am, Sir, faithfully yours, (Sgd.) EAMONN DE VALERA.

L. G.'S REPLY TO DE VALERA.
LONDON, Aug. 26.
 Prime Minister Lloyd George, replying to-day to Eamon De Valera, in alluding to the demand for the recognition of Ireland as a foreign power, says De Valera, "is playing with phrases to suggest that the principle of Government by consent of the governed, compels recognition of that demand on our part, or that in repudiating it we are straining geographical and historical considerations to justify a claim to ascendancy over the Irish race." The Prime Minister warns De Valera that owing to "action being taken in certain quarters," it is dangerous to prolong negotiations. Therefore, while willing to make every allowance, he cannot, he declares, prolong a mere exchange of notes, but says he will be happy to meet De Valera and his colleagues again. Lloyd George points out that the States of the South African Union enjoy no such range of rights as is offered Ireland in the Government's proposals in which, he says, "we consider to fulfill your wish that the principle of Government by consent of the governed should be the guiding principle."

AFTER THE SPATS.
 We've had our troubles, Ma and I,
 But countin' all that's come and gone
 An' all the times the fur would fly,
 Somehow we've still kept lovin' on;
 An' whether she or I was wrong,
 We never kept our grouches long.

We've watched the youngsters quarrel, too,
 An' wrangle as they played their games,
 They've scuffled, as children often do,
 An' called each other dreadful names;
 Yet when each little spat was o'er,
 They were as lovin' as before.

We've lived our years as man an' wife
 About the way most people do;
 Some days have brought us bitter strife,
 Yet always we have smiled it through;
 An' though some angry words have passed,
 We've never let the quarrel last.

There's no divorce court needed here,
 There's nothing now can go amiss;
 Our tempers are not so severe,
 But they'll soften with a kiss.
 Like children, when the spat is o'er
 We're just as lovin' as before.

LOCAL TRAVELOGUES.

Week-End Notes on Holiday Rambles.

(L.C.M.)

ARTICLE I.

About a year ago the writer finished his last notes of travel, and now he begins the publication of a few more. Those published last year were in reference to foreign travel, but these about to be published now are in reference to our own land—the land we all love, but so few of us know; and the land so many of us misunderstand; and not a few, misrepresent. There may not be much in these notes; but much of it, they will contain the writer's best, and are meant for the comfort of the people. For some of the things will appear under the name of the writer; and to the picture will be given as Salmonier, we do not know.

SALMONIER.

Although Salmonier is quite near the capital, and can be reached daily, the writer had never really visited the place. But for long years had done business with its people, and from them had learned much of the history of its early days—and a little of its folklore. It was, therefore, with keen interest that I recently found myself on the spot; and for the first time beheld its scenery, and scanned its landscapes. The harbour—if harbour it may be called—is formed by the deep indent of an arm at the head of St. Mary's Bay; and it extends for several miles; but the beautiful river which runs into the harbour, has such a gradual estuary, that one appears as a continuation of the other. These features lend an attraction to the surroundings, which at once captivates the tourist, and makes him pay tribute to the beauties of the spot. The entire scene is primeval, and although the hand of man has made much impression upon it, there is still that rustic semblance which belongs to nature, and to nature alone. The rich foliage of the hills, on either side of the long indent, stand out in bold, and yet in fascinating relief, to the dark current which lies between them; and the visitor scarcely knows which to admire the most, the beaches, hills, or waters. The hills, or perhaps we had better say slopes, represent the things that stand, while the waters may be taken as a figure of those things which abide not. The one is solid, and like the "everlasting hills" of which the sacred writer speaks, they stand fast forever; the other is shifting, restless and uncertain; but they both serve their divine purpose, and daily teach the one great lesson—the lesson of creation, and creator's authority.

LARGER POPULATION NEEDED.

It is no wonder that men sought such a place to make a home; the wonder is that more men have not sought such a place, and that the population of Salmonier is not larger than it is. In our rambles along our coast line we have seen a few places which have caused us to ask ourselves the question why men settled there, but such a locality as Salmonier presents an inviting prospect, and instead of asking why men settled there, we reverse the question by asking why more people have not made homesteads along its shores. True it is that there have been many mistakes made in the pioneering of Newfoundland, and because of these mistakes, our population has not increased as it should; but if all the places colonized afforded the shelter, or the waterfront, or agricultural advantages, as

SOME INSIDE INFORMATION.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—

"Let none presume to wear an undeserved laurel."

I have no desire to usurp the credit due to others. In order that the public may know, and in order that we may have a complete record of the initial stages of the formation of the Newfoundland Amateur Athletic Association, I am, with your permission, going to put in your paper a few facts concerning the Sports held Wednesday afternoon, which were so successful from a sporting and financial standpoint. Coming as they did after the Methodist Guards Comrades Sports, which, in my opinion, were the most successful sports up to that time, over held here, it was wonderful that they could be followed the following week by another sports which, without any amusing items, or without anybody behind it like the Methodist Guards Comrades, which has behind it the well deserved sympathy and support of the Methodist Church, and in fact citizens of all denominations, equalled, if not surpassed, them in attendance and interest. This was clearly shown when in spite of, at times, a heavy rain fall, very few left the field but stayed on till the last even was finished. The receipts, which were not augmented by the sale of ice-cream, candies, etc., by pretty young ladies, were in the neighbourhood of eight hundred dollars, which was exceptionally large. It clearly shows that when the public realize the importance and necessity of a good undertaking they are ever ready to support it, and in spite of the fact that it was run under no patronage whatsoever. The Public will remember that last year John Bell was here as Newfoundland's representative to compete in the ten mile road race at Halifax. For some reason or other he failed to finish the course which was a great disappointment to these of his friends and supporters, who believed he should have come in among the first runners. Bell himself was greatly disappointed. When he came back Mr. Harvey Thomas a sporting enthusiast with considerable training in caring for athletes, took Bell in hand and Bell has been under his management ever since. He was anxious that Bell should have another chance. After the formation of the A.A.A. he approached me on the subject, but I did not know Mr. Thomas then as I do now, and thought that he should interest someone who was more conversant with the facts. I had had nothing whatever to do, last year, with Mr. Bell. Mr. Thomas persisted, and at last interested Mr. P. Grace, and Mr. Grace formed a Committee of which he was Secretary, Mr. Harry Phelan, Chairman and Mr. Burke Treasurer. The idea was to get up a race between Charley Cyr. of Montreal, and Bell, for the purpose of raising funds to send Bell to Halifax. The idea was developed to include other events. Mr. Grace who is Secretary of the Sports that I thought it should be run under the auspices of the A.A.A. I thought that that would be a good idea, and developed the idea by making it a National Sports. As the Mayor and Councillors had just passed over the Parade Ground, I intended to open the Sports which he kindly consented to do. I was asked to meet the Committee last Saturday night, which I did. The programme, and other arrangements were finalized at that meeting, which lasted till three a. m. the next morning. Mr. Grace was leaving on his holiday and hence the late hour. On Monday with the consent of Mr. Phelan, the Chairman, I was put Chairman and Mr. Phelan Vice Chairman, and under that management the Sports were conducted.

There are a few features in connection with these Sports that I should like to emphasize. They were the first which might be called National Sports. They were held under the auspices of the Newfoundland Amateur Athletic Association and were the first thing, outside the Concert when it was formed, that the Association ever attempted. That they were so successful shows the sympathy the public has with the movement. The measurements and times were official. Mr. Wm. Noel of the Department of Agriculture and Mines gave a signed certificate of the correctness of the distances. The experienced gentlemen with stop watches kept the time of the different events. After the contestants had lined up, four judges, Mr. Harold Rendell and to the strains of the C.L.B. Band, which under Captain Morris gave their services free, and during the afternoon, witnessed the proceedings, paraded round the field and had come to the centre of the Grand Stand where the committee, judges and officials were also assembled. Mayor I. C. Morris from a stand in the field facing the Grand Stand addressed the Association and its objects and saying that it was necessary to preach a gospel of the soul, and exhorting the contestants to strive manfully and wishing them all success, he declared the Sports open. The Sports then commenced, and were so keenly watched that in spite of the rain practically all the spectators kept their seats till the close. The papers have given an account of the events, the prize winners and their times. The National Anthem brought these most successful Sports to a close.

The Victor Ludorum was won by Mr. Fred Phelan, brother of the Vice-Chairman, Mr. T. Butler being second. As Mr. Phelan is an outstanding football and baseball player, he must be acknowledged as the best all round athlete in Newfoundland for 1921.

The B.I.S. Athletic Association, of which Mr. Phelan is a member, won the most number of points, the newly formed Methodist Guards Old Comrades Association, of which Mr. Butler is a member, coming second. The A.A.A. is presenting a shield to be completed for annually for the greatest number of points scored by an Athletic Association and the B.I.S.A.A. has the honour of being the first winners. The Sports held a meeting the night of the Sports and as the receipts were so large decided to send to Halifax three other besides Bell, and these were F. Phelan, T. Butler and H. Skirving, who won the mile. By a curious coincidence, at everything in this country is run on denominational lines, it so happens that these three men belong to the three leading denominations in the province could hardly be more popular, Phelan being the representative for the B.I.S., Butler for the Methodist Guards and Skirving for the C.L.B. So everybody is happy. I regretted my old association, the C.E.I., did not score nor the Total Abstinence which is to me a mystery. Being much sorer people they ought to have the leading Athletic Association of the Country. Everything turned out in our favour, even the rain keeping the crowd in the city. Only one thing more is wanted, and that is that our representatives carry off some trophies from the Halifax Sports, and, believe me if they do the welkin will ring when they return.

This letter may be long but it describes an historic event and therefore I crave your indulgence.

Yours sincerely,

W. B. AYRE.

WEARINESS.

Oh, my life seems gray and dreary, in rebellion off I stand, for my soul is sick and weary of my task of pounding sand. In rebellion off I'm signing, calling on the name of Mike, when the idle rich go flying in their autos, up the pike. Why must one forever labor till his brain is turning sour, while his giddy, gilded neighbor hits up sixty miles an hour? Oh, the auto horns are sounding, and the cut-outs make their noise, and my share of sand I'm pounding with the sad, downtrodden boys. Pounding sand while others gambol where the ocean billows low, pounding sand while others ramble down some sort of Rotten Row. But, you say, the rich have sorrow, every standard brand of grief, and they'd give a lot to borrow my capacity for beef. And of rubles quite a number they would give, with great delight, if they could enjoy the slumber that enshrouds me every night. I have all I'm really needing, so you say, to ease my woe, and I am not pinched for speeding every time I let her go. I am sound and hale and hearty, honest toll accounts for that, while the idle, loafing smartys sags around in rolls of fat. I'm encouraged by your spilling, so, with weapon in my hand, I'll forget that weary feeling and continue pounding sand.

The B.I.S. Athletic Association, of which Mr. Phelan is a member, won the most number of points, the newly formed Methodist Guards Old Comrades Association, of which Mr. Butler is a member, coming second. The A.A.A. is presenting a shield to be completed for annually for the greatest number of points scored by an Athletic Association and the B.I.S.A.A. has the honour of being the first winners. The Sports held a meeting the night of the Sports and as the receipts were so large decided to send to Halifax three other besides Bell, and these were F. Phelan, T. Butler and H. Skirving, who won the mile. By a curious coincidence, at everything in this country is run on denominational lines, it so happens that these three men belong to the three leading denominations in the province could hardly be more popular, Phelan being the representative for the B.I.S., Butler for the Methodist Guards and Skirving for the C.L.B. So everybody is happy. I regretted my old association, the C.E.I., did not score nor the Total Abstinence which is to me a mystery. Being much sorer people they ought to have the leading Athletic Association of the Country. Everything turned out in our favour, even the rain keeping the crowd in the city. Only one thing more is wanted, and that is that our representatives carry off some trophies from the Halifax Sports, and, believe me if they do the welkin will ring when they return.

This letter may be long but it describes an historic event and therefore I crave your indulgence.

Yours sincerely,

W. B. AYRE.

WEARINESS.

Oh, my life seems gray and dreary, in rebellion off I stand, for my soul is sick and weary of my task of pounding sand. In rebellion off I'm signing, calling on the name of Mike, when the idle rich go flying in their autos, up the pike. Why must one forever labor till his brain is turning sour, while his giddy, gilded neighbor hits up sixty miles an hour? Oh, the auto horns are sounding, and the cut-outs make their noise, and my share of sand I'm pounding with the sad, downtrodden boys. Pounding sand while others gambol where the ocean billows low, pounding sand while others ramble down some sort of Rotten Row. But, you say, the rich have sorrow, every standard brand of grief, and they'd give a lot to borrow my capacity for beef. And of rubles quite a number they would give, with great delight, if they could enjoy the slumber that enshrouds me every night. I have all I'm really needing, so you say, to ease my woe, and I am not pinched for speeding every time I let her go. I am sound and hale and hearty, honest toll accounts for that, while the idle, loafing smartys sags around in rolls of fat. I'm encouraged by your spilling, so, with weapon in my hand, I'll forget that weary feeling and continue pounding sand.

There are a few features in connection with these Sports that I should like to emphasize. They were the first which might be called National Sports. They were held under the auspices of the Newfoundland Amateur Athletic Association and were the first thing, outside the Concert when it was formed, that the Association ever attempted. That they were so successful shows the sympathy the public has with the movement. The measurements and times were official. Mr. Wm. Noel of the Department of Agriculture and Mines gave a signed certificate of the correctness of the distances. The experienced gentlemen with stop watches kept the time of the different events. After the contestants had lined up, four judges, Mr. Harold Rendell and to the strains of the C.L.B. Band, which under Captain Morris gave their services free, and during the afternoon, witnessed the proceedings, paraded round the field and had come to the centre of the Grand Stand where the committee, judges and officials were also assembled. Mayor I. C. Morris from a stand in the field facing the Grand Stand addressed the Association and its objects and saying that it was necessary to preach a gospel of the soul, and exhorting the contestants to strive manfully and wishing them all success, he declared the Sports open. The Sports then commenced, and were so keenly watched that in spite of the rain practically all the spectators kept their seats till the close. The papers have given an account of the events, the prize winners and their times. The National Anthem brought these most successful Sports to a close.

The Victor Ludorum was won by Mr. Fred Phelan, brother of the Vice-Chairman, Mr. T. Butler being second. As Mr. Phelan is an outstanding football and baseball player, he must be acknowledged as the best all round athlete in Newfoundland for 1921.

CHIROPRACTIC--The Master-Key to Health.

THE REAL ISSUE

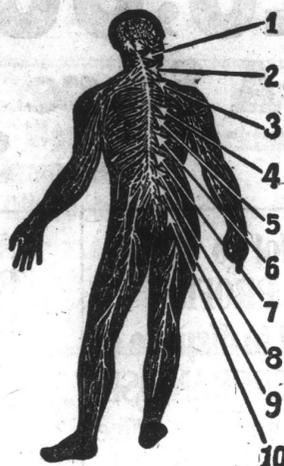

There is just one thing about Chiropractic that sick people are interested in and that is "Will it make me well?" My friend, the common, everyday citizen enjoys the same privilege of opinion that I enjoy. I may argue with him from now till eternity on the merit of the premise upon which Chiropractic is founded. These things we may never agree upon; yet if we both see health come to our mutual friend after he has suffered for years, and if we learn that he has been regularly visiting his Chiropractor, there can be no argument between us on the fact of what it has done for him. Witness this thing often enough and the matter of the Chiropractic premise is a lost issue. My friend may still believe that surgery, medicine, mental suggestion or diet are excellent things, yet he cannot deny that Chiropractic is effective. We find that all our arguments have meant wasted effort and lost time; but the one thing worth while, the only thing that he, as a sick man is concerned about, is that Chiropractic brings health. Whether the Chiropractor followed one curriculum or another is no longer an issue. My friend visits the Chiropractor for just one reason—to regain his health.

How can my friend satisfy himself that Chiropractic is effective, often where everything else has been tried? Let him investigate our National record and the record of his local Chiropractor. Our National record shows us the leading drugless healing system to-day, while in 1894 we had not been born. Our National record shows that we are legally recognized in over half the states in the Union, because your neighbor and mine demanded Chiropractic service. Why this rapid development? Because millions of sane, straight-thinking, common people found themselves getting well under Chiropractic adjustments.

Just as sick people everywhere are interested in the one question "Will it get me well"? So is the Chiropractor interested in the one issue of getting you well. He knows that his greater service to humanity in the future depends on his restoring health to you. You say "Will Chiropractic make me well"? Our answer is our record of growth and this growth is exactly proportionate to the health Chiropractic has brought.

It is your duty to your family and to yourself to become acquainted with this great health science.

Arrows show where Nerve pressure is found in the following disorders:—

1. Slight subluxations at this point will cause so-called headaches, eye diseases, deafness, epilepsy, vertigo, insomnia, wry neck, facial paralysis, locomotor ataxia, etc.
2. A slight subluxation of a vertebra in this part of the spine is the cause of so-called throat trouble, neuralgia, pain in the shoulders and arms, goitre, nervous prostration, is grippe, dizziness, bleeding from nose, disorder of gums, catarrh, etc.
3. The arrow head marked No. 3 locates the part of the spine wherein subluxations will cause so-called bronchitis, felons, pain between the shoulder blades, rheumatism of the arms and shoulders, hay fever, writers' cramp, etc.
4. A vertebral subluxation at this point causes so-called nervousness, heart disease, asthma, pneumonia, tuberculosis, difficult breathing, other lung troubles, etc.
5. Stomach and liver troubles, enlargement of the spleen, pleurisy, gall stones and a score of other troubles, so-called, are caused by subluxations in this part of the spine, sometimes so light as to remain unnoticed by others except the trained Chiropractor.
6. Here we find the cause of dyspepsia of upper bowels, fevers, shingles, hiccoughs, worms, etc.
7. Bright's disease, diabetes, floating kidney, skin disease, boils, eruptions and other diseases, so-called, are caused by nerves being pinched in the spinal openings at this point.
8. Regulations of such troubles as so-called appendicitis, peritonitis, lumbago, etc., follow Chiropractic adjustments at this point.
9. Why have so-called constipation, rectal troubles, sciatica, etc., when Chiropractic adjustments at this part of the spine will remove the cause?
10. A slight slippage of one or both innominate bones will likewise produce so-called sciatica, together with many "diseases" of pelvis and lower extremities.

NORTH SYDNEY LONGSHOREMEN HAVE GRIEVANCE.

A strike of the local Longshoremen took place yesterday, and as a result the term schr. Russel M. Zinck, loaded with a cargo of 300 puncheons of molasses which she brought here from Barbados Saturday, is now at Sydney unloading.

Yesterday the first hitch between the Longshoremen and the shippers was when a schooner unloading a cargo of fish and oil at the terminus could not be discharged. The men started work, but when they found that a man named Hare, who was not a member of the union, was at work, they immediately informed the agents of the vessel, the Farquhar Trading Co., that unless Hare was at once discharged they would quit work in a body. This request was not granted, Hare being kept on the job, and after the men had left the scene three other non-union men were employed and have ever since been engaged in transferring the cargo to cars in waiting on the siding.

The second hitch took place yesterday afternoon when the Longshoremen working on the molasses-laden schr. Russel M. Zinck stopped work. They objected to two members of the crew from handling the freight. One was a winchman that Capt. Zinck said was conversant with the working of a new winch recently installed, and the other was only doing minor work. However, the men said that it was a violation of the rules and insisted on having the men removed. This the Farquhar Trading Co. refused to do, contending that as the union men were satisfied in allowing members of the crew of the fish schooner to assist, they should not object to only two men working on the Zinck. Both sides were obdurate, and the captain decided to go to Sydney and discharge what molasses is required there, when he will return to finish discharging here by a crew of non-union men. The local copcon say they are willing to do the work.

The union men, who receive 60 cents an hour for day work and 80 for night, contend that if they allowed a breach of the rules to apply in one case, that the various shippers would naturally take it for granted that their rules were no good whatever; that it would be making favors which all would look for, and for this reason say they will not recede from the step taken.—N. More Vandalism.

Complaints are numerous from residents of the Waterford Valley concerning vandalism, which has been going on in their gardens for some time. The palings of the garden fences are broken, trees are pulled up, the roots and flower beds are trampled on and ruined. Efforts should be made to effect the arrest of those responsible for these depredations.

Replies to Employers' Association.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—On behalf of the Longshoremen's Protective Union I shall thank you to publish the enclosed reply to the communication of the Employers' Protective Association of the 19th inst.

Yours very truly,
JAMES CAUL,
Secretary L.S.P.U.

August 25th, 1921.

The Employers' Protective Assn.,
City.

Dear Sirs.—On behalf of the Longshoremen's Protective Union I beg to acknowledge receipt of your communication of the 19th inst. I am directed to point out that when the question of remuneration of the worker is discussed from a purely materialistic attitude, and when conclusions are drawn from such a basis as laid down in your communication, it is not at all surprising that there should be social and industrial unrest. In justifying the contention that a reduction in wages should take place, the principle reason advanced may be summed up in one word—business. In other words that the consideration of man as man may have its proper time and place, but it must not be allowed to interfere with the advancement of business and personal gain. A man might grind and crush the poor, pay starvation wages to labour, and yet stand justified by the principles of this system.

When a body of men—many no doubt of education and intelligence—urge as a reason that wages are governed by the economic law of supply and demand, they place the wage earner on the same level as the beast of the field, and if this false and irreligious axiom were once accepted as the determining factor, there remains the sole solution of lessening the number of workmen in a manner similar to that used in reference to cattle. Malthus when he put forward the theory that the earth was over-peopled, and that an artificial reduction of the human race should take place, would have had his declining years brightened had he known that men in this supposed enlightened age would be advocates and exponents of his theory!

The right of a wage earner to a living wage does not at all depend upon such a fluctuating and accidental indicator as that of supply and demand. It is a natural right, and being natural, is prior not only in time, but also in importance to social and economic laws, to laws of commerce and trade, which must necessarily be secondary outgrowths. This natural right is a right which takes precedence over other considerations, excepting a similar right which the employer has to a remuneration, which will enable him and his family to live in reasonable and modern comfort according to their position in life. The Union recognizes the importance to both employer and employee that the continuance and welfare of industry should be consulted. Beyond these concessions, however, there can be no question of profits until a living wage has been paid to the employee.

Concerning the specification of the term "living wage," it may be comprehensively determined as "sufficient to support the wage earner in reasonable and frugal comfort"—a wage, which when all reasonable expenses have been paid for family maintenance, the worker should have a plus left to provide for days of unemployment and sickness. It is only by acknowledging this natural right to a living wage and the consequent duties which such involves upon employer and employee—for right and duty are co-relative—that proper relations between the two can be maintained. And a solution to the present problem, which is in its very essence at variance with such a fundamental and basic principle as natural law, can tend neither to aid the individual, or give relief to the present troubled state of affairs of our country, to which you apparently attach great importance, but only augment and aggravate the causes which produce such evil effects. The adoption of the theory, which you have enunciated as a basic principle, and which was first propounded by English economists, is the main cause of the vast social discontent to-day so widespread.

Before asserting that your position is erroneous, it would be well to prove the correctness of the minor statement of the premises, viz., that, granting a living wage is justifiable, it is interrogated are the members getting such a wage? There are approximately 400 steam boat labourers. Of this number about 280 obtain employment in loading and discharging steamers, and even those do not earn sufficient from the amount of work performed to furnish the common necessities of life. There are about 1800 fish wharf men, and of that number about 300 are permanently employed, whilst the remaining 1500 manage to procure from two to three days' work a week. Turning aside from the probability of a small reduction amongst a certain class of our Union men employed by you—for there is a possibility of room for discussion upon such a topic—were conditions of employment such as would afford permanent work, and viewing the few statistics given above, can one paying any heed to logical deduction or practical foresight, with

W. L. GRANT, M.A., Principal.

When you treat of your employees it should not be as a commercial asset, as a puppet for your designs, but as an integral member of society, who possesses a rational soul similar to yours, one who is subject to human aspirations, hopes and fears as you are, and not as an entity, to whom you may dole out, with a stunted hand, a wage which will only keep body and soul together, and at the same time keep your business running on progressive lines. This sets forward the essence of our contention; it is based upon natural right; it has its root set in principles promulgated and accepted long before the problem of supply and demand—from which you so insistively draw your conclusions—had begun to agitate the minds of man, long before commerce itself had grown to such a power, that it could distort the outlook of man in relation to his fellow creature. Assured that we are arguing from a correct premise, convinced that supply and demand

Wage Question Discussed.

MAYOR MORRIS ADDRESSES UNION.

The wage question and other matters affecting the labor situation were fully discussed at a meeting of the L. S. P. U. last night. Before the meeting, Mayor Morris, who was present, addressed the Union and in a logical manner placed both sides of the question before the men. With his close knowledge, through actual contact with the labor situation, the Mayor was well qualified for the task. He appealed to the men to refrain from rushing to any rash conclusions, for he was sure the employers would treat them fairly. At the conclusion a hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mayor Morris for his splendid address and the interest he has taken in the men's welfare. The business of the meeting was then proceeded with when the communications received from the Employers' Association were read and a discussion on the matter took place. The general feeling expressed was, that the proposed reduction did not correspond with the drop in the price of food-stuffs, but the men were willing to meet the Employers as far as possible, and as the reduced wage scale comes into effect on Monday, the Union's Executive was empowered to meet the Employers' Association, and if possible arrange a settlement. It is probable that this conference will take place this afternoon. Final action will be decided at a special meeting of the Union which has been called for to-night.

Saints and C. E. I. Draw.

In an exciting football game the C. E. I. drew with the Saints on St. George's Field last evening. The C. E. I. did not have their regular lineup and had to play substitutes, amongst whom were included the veteran, Fred Harris, and Ern Churchill, official referee. Mr. Jas. Irvine controlled the game in his place. There was little or no combined play during the game but some excellent individual work was occasionally seen. No scoring was done in the first half, but in the second half Winsor and Sawyers each scored twice for their respective teams.

TRINITY.

As I write I have before me the "Visitors Book" of the Parsonage at Trinity; and as it takes me back to nearly six years ago, it appeals to me as sufficiently interesting to entitle it to honourable recognition, and to be given first place in connection with my notes of this week. This book, like the majority of books of that date, is substantially bound: every sheet of its paper bears the watermark of Britannia in outline, in a three inch circle, surrounded by the royal crown, together with the words and date, "Somerton and Son, 1816." This, evidently, was a guarantee of a good quality of paper in those days, for the one hundred and fifty pages of the make up of the book, are of the best hand made linen paper, such as is found in all the Church registers of a hundred years ago.

On the outside of the cover is a square of roan leather with an ornamental border and large lettering—"Visitors Book, in heavy gold leaf printing; and at the top of every page of the book, are the words—Date, Name, Residence.

It was purchased at the shop of George Boake, Stationer to Dr. B. National Schools, York House, 31 Strand, London. It was presented to the Parsonage in 1825, when Rev. William Bullock was the parish priest of Trinity. The person who presented it, wrote on the fly-leaf, as follows:—
"Dear Sir, Will you kindly put your name at the top of the first page of this book as its custodian, together with that of Mrs. Bullock, and permit me as the donor to place my name here. Then followed the name, which has so faded, that it has successfully defied all my efforts to decipher; hence the donor must, I fear, remain unknown for ever,—for which I am sorry."

There is nothing very deeply interesting in this book, other than it takes us back to the times that we have often heard the old folks tell about; to men and women who were leaders in Church and State in their day and generation; and whose names and actions as therein recorded, give us a glimpse of social duties fulfilled by those to whom those duties were very important, and who long since have passed to their eternal rest. In compliance with the request of the donor of the book, Rev. William said Mrs. Bullock wrote their names at the head of the first page of the book.

The first visitor at the Parsonage after the book was ready for duty, was C. F. Bennett, St. John's. At first sight I thought this was Charles Fox Bennett, I wonder was it? I think it must be too far back for him. However, whether it was Charles Fox Bennett's signature or not, the name takes me back in memory to my early boyhood days, when the Charles Fox Bennett that this signature has reminded me of, was a candidate for political honours in Trinity Bay. He was addressing the electors of Trinity in the old Court House, whilst I, as a small boy, was in a corner just inside the main door.

Mr. Bennett, at that time was deeply interested in the copper mines of Green Bay. He assured the voters that he was essentially one of themselves. He said:—"Men, I am a working man, as you regret from the far end of the room some one asked, 'What did you ever work at?' Mr. Bennett replied 'I am a miner.' Again, the same voice replied 'Yes, you're an under-miner. I don't think he voted for Mr. Bennett."

The next person of great importance to write his name, was Frederick Bullock, H.M.S. Snap. The "Snap" wintered in Trinity that year, and was safely moored, by being frozen in the harbour ice at Rosey Cove, N.W. Arm. Frederick Bullock was in Command of the "Snap," on which his brother Rev. William Bullock had been a Lieutenant before he began his training for Holy orders.

Three other names of officers of the "Snap" also appear in the book as visitors to the Parsonage during the winter, viz: Doctor James Lindsay, Mr. E. Slade, and Mr. G. Williams. It was a gay winter in Trinity, and mutual regrets were felt and expressed when, with the spring, the good ship "Snap" left to patrol other parts of the coast.

In 1827 Archdeacon Coster, the Bishop of Nova Scotia, Judge Des Barres, the Governor, High Sheriff Buchanan, Major Campbell, and Robert Vignome were among the distinguished visitors.

In 1829 I find the autographs of Thomas Tucker and Sheriff Stubb, St. John's; and John Stark, Harbor Grace. Whilst George Garland's name appears in 1827, that of John Henry Garland first appeared in 1828, and then once or twice a year for several years after that date. The name of Garland is still remembered in Trinity with deep and grateful respect.

The last person to bear the honoured name in our midst, and to confirm the claims upon our gratitude, was Mrs. (Garland) Cooksey; whilst the most beautiful of the mural tablets in the mortuary Chapel, is the offering of grateful Trinity to the memory of George Garland, who died in 1833, aged 40 years.

The signatures of Judge Brenton, and Judge Des Barres, Robert Slade, James Slade, Rev. G. Dodsworth, Rev. William Nesbitt, and Rev. A. Coster grace the pages of 1839; whilst those of the Bishop of Nova Scotia, Archdeacon Coster, Mr. Inglis, Rev. W. William (Wesleyan Minister), The Governor, James Crowley, Esq., Major Griffiths, Mr. Brooking and others appear in 1838. The signatures of Benjamin Sweetland, Mrs. Sweetland, Trinity; and Messrs. Milfin and Gayler of Bonavista are the only ones of 1834.

Then, I think, the book must have fallen down behind the desk, and was not found again for seven years, as no entries appear from 1836 to 1843.

In 1843 I find the signatures of Judge Des Barres and H. A. Emerson; and in 1844 the only signatures are those of Rev. H. T. Fitzgerald, Henry Laidly, Esq., Lisbon; and P. C. Hopburn, Trinity.

In 1849 The Bishop of Newfoundland and David Candow, J.P., of Tickle Cove, Bonavista Bay registered; whilst the signature of Thomas Dunn, St. John's is the only one under 1850, and that of Rev. J. Vicars, St. John's during 1855. On January 30th 1856 the following persons paid their respects to the parson—George Darling, Capt. Purvis, (R.N.) H.M.S. Argus, Alexander Bremner, and William S. P. Lockyer; and on August 20th 1857, Capt. Payne (R.N.) H.M.S. Bastick, Lady Bannerman, Rev. Benjamin and Mrs. Smith, F. B. T. Carter, The Roman Catholic Bishop, The Bishop of Newfoundland, and Rev. Mr. Peley of Heart's Content, constituted a distinguished party.

The year 1858 is represented by the signatures of J. W. Marriott, Doctor Winter, Mr. Haddon and Judge Robinson.

In 1864 the name of Capt. Orlebar, of the survey steamer, "Margaritha Stevenson" appears for the first time. Those of us who attended the old Colonial and Continental School, under James Collis, at that time, have many a time remembered the dignified and hearted Capt. Orlebar, who never failed to visit the school, when in port; and to him we owe the pleasure of many a half-holiday, and other indications of his kind interest in us. He held a License to act as Lay Reader, which License was gladly endorsed by the clergyman of the parish; or, in mission he found himself on a Sunday; and not only in Newfoundland but also in Cape Breton, I have heard of him conducting services in some of the living part of an extensive mission. He was most highly respected by all who knew him—may he rest in peace. This review will be continued next week.

Mr. Richard Hiccock and his bride spent a week in Trinity with his mother, at the old home, where we were glad to have the privilege of meeting them, and the opportunity to assure them of our deepest interest in their welfare. They have gone back to Grand Falls, and to a home, which we have been told, is in every sense very beautiful. Bon voyage!

The Hon. A. Mews joined his wife and family in Trinity last week, and is enjoying the rest and quietude of Trinity, such as is not only delightful in the present, but such will also re-fill the storage batteries of physical and mental energy, for use during the depressing days of winter and spring.

Mr. Gates an Inspector of the Royal Bank of Canada, paid an official visit to Trinity last week. This was his first visit to Trinity, and he will also re-fill the storage batteries of physical and mental energy, for use during the depressing days of winter and spring. Mr. Gates also appears in the book as visitors to the Parsonage during the winter, viz: Doctor James Lindsay, Mr. E. Slade, and Mr. G. Williams. It was a gay winter in Trinity, and mutual regrets were felt and expressed when, with the spring, the good ship "Snap" left to patrol other parts of the coast.

Miss Evelyn Lockyer of Harbor Grace spent a week with friends and relatives at Trinity East and Trinity.

A party made up of Mrs. Pittman, Mrs. Mews and Hon. A. Mews, in charge of Mr. Eriksen, motored to Port Union, Bonavista, on Monday one day last week. They saw the sights of the respective towns; met several old friends, and made some new ones, and returned delightfully pleased with the trip. This was a part of Mrs. Pittman's 58th birthday programme.

Mrs. (Dr.) Levisconte of King's Cove, together with her sister, Mrs. White, and Miss White of Catalina, paid a short visit to Trinity on 16th instant. We were glad to have the pleasure of meeting them, and to be assured that they are interested in the Trinity items of Saturday's Evening Telegram. Doctor Levisconte is a Trinitarian.

The schooner, Cecil M. Beck, Captain Whately of Belleoram, landed 195 tons of coal last week, for Mr. Joseph Morris, and left again for Sydney.

Miss Somerton left last week for Montreal.

Mr. M. Parsons, representing N.F. Boot and Shoe Co., registered at Garland Hotel last week.

Mr. Edward Somerton of the Royal Stores' staff, Grand Falls, is spending his holiday with parents and friends in Trinity.

Master Harry Mott, very reluctantly, left Trinity last week, and returned to St. John's by the Susu.

Mr. John Joffile, Methodist School Teacher at Old Perlican, came to Trinity by the Prospero, registered at Garland Hotel, and went by train to Musgrave Town on a visit to friends.

Mr. Lawrence, representing Brandram, Henderson Co., and Mr. Fullerton, representing the Imperial Oil Co., registered at Garland Hotel last week.

Whilst taking a party of observing passengers from the Prospero, around Trinity last week, it was pleasing to hear such remarks as:—"What a clean town." "How nice to see a town where people believe in the use of paint and lime." "I am sure, I should like to live here."

Miss Guy, who has been teaching at Bonne Bay, is spending the summer at her home in Trinity.

Mr. Nicholas Ryan, Rev. Fr. Dwyer, Mr. John Hennesbury of Bonavista, and Mr. Daly of Melrose, registered at Garland Hotel on Sunday last.

The annual Flower Service—in memory of departed souls—was held in connection with St. Paul's congregation on Sunday last. The day began with a celebration of Holy Communion at 8 o'clock in the Mortuary Chapel. The building was filled with a devout congregation, made up of representatives of nearly every family of St. Paul's congregation, and constituting the largest number of communicants that, to date, have met there for the Saviour's own and only service. This is but one of the many proofs of the increasing love for the Chapel Services, and of the fruit-bearing of the lesson taught by its appointments.

At 3 o'clock an open air service was held in the cemetery, at which a stranger remarked: "I did not think there were so many people in Trinity." After the prayers, hymns and address by the rector, the people were asked to follow to the grave of William Pittman, who was the first person buried in the Cemetery, forty years ago. There, as the congregation stood around the grave a short address was given on the life and death of Mr. Pittman: the hymn, "For all the Saints who from their labours rest," which had been sung at the burial forty years ago, was sung again; all recited the Creed and joined in the Lord's Prayer.

Then all the people followed the officiating priest to another part of the cemetery, and stood around the grave of a little child, little Louise "Woolridge," of Dunfield, the last person buried in the cemetery. These two persons—the first and the last buried there, represented the seven hundred bodies in the whole cemetery, and as the prayers were said, and the hymns were sung by all the people, each person thought particularly of his or her own loved ones then in God's care, and asked of God for them, a share in every blessing that He has reserved for them in "the Paradise of waiting souls." The rector conducted all the services, and his sermons at morning and evening services in the Parish Church, were in harmony with the special services of the day. The Chapel was beautifully decorated with flowers and evergreen, whilst the graves in the Cemetery were lovingly marked by profusion of flowers. Mrs. W. W. White, the Mortuary Chapel organist had charge of the music. It is deeply interesting to notice the gradual increase of Christian charity taken in the upkeep of the Cemetery, and in the annual Flower Service, year by year. We thank God, and take courage.

Mrs. Benedict, Mrs. Fallon, and Mrs. Herder, of St. John's, are registered at the Garland Hotel, and they are thoroughly enjoying the many good things that Trinity always provides for its visitors—including the weather which is most generally, always fine, sometimes—W.J.L. Trinity, Aug. 27th.

Rectorship Accepted.

The Hon. R. Watson, Churchwarden of St. Thomas's, received a cablegram last evening from the Rev. Ernest Charles Earp, of Holy Trinity Church, Hull, England, stating that he accepted the invitation to become Rector of St. Thomas's Parish, and that, subject to the Bishop's decision, he proposed leaving for St. John's on October 7th. Gold Fails.

Another chapter in the long succession of fruitless searches for pirate gold has failed in the return, empty-handed, of an expedition to the mystic South Seas, which went in quest of the hundred million dollars of Peruvian treasure said to have been buried there.

Only a few cannibal bones hidden beneath a native altar rewarded the expedition in its search for heavy sea chests of treasure.

With the sailing yacht Genevieve, formerly owned by W. K. Vanderbilt, tied up again off South Brooklyn, waiting to turn her nose once more toward the Society group on a second quest for the gold, Capt. James T. Houghton, formerly soldier of the Rainbow division, who was wounded in France, is registered at the Harvard Club, New York. To a group of children he told the story of the hunt, which he acted as surgeon.

The hunt for the buried gold centers on the island of Tubai, a reef about fifteen miles across and also the most northern one of the Society group. Acting on a lead obtained from an aged sea captain who had sailed the seas in the most romantic days, a Captain Brown, of Augusta, Me., the expedition spent three weeks digging and blasting on the island. Only after every possible hiding place had been searched did the treasure seekers decide to give up the quest and return to New York to bolster again with the aged mariner.

Some of the promoters of the expedition, which was financed by the sale of stock shares to persons who were caught not only by the sentimental appeal of a treasure hunt, but also by the chance of making an enormous profit, have returned to Augusta with the hope of obtaining new leads that will take them to the treasure.

Captain Houghton, in describing the search for the heavy sea chests believed to be buried somewhere on Tubai, said the treasure seekers had left the island "looking like a battlefield in France."

"Some of the promoters still believe there is something in Captain Brown's tale and are preparing to make another search in doujouns and Australian gold dust," he said.

Girls' Industrial Home.

SUPPLYING A LONG FELT NEED.

If the contributor who wrote in Tuesday's Telegram commenting on the need of a Reformatory, meant his remarks for the Government of this country, he is perfectly justified in making them, for this is about the only so-called civilized country, the Government of which makes no attempt to mitigate the condition of unfortunate and those mentally deficient.

But a few facts regarding work done on these lines by a few women, who long have realized the need, may enlighten your correspondent and the public generally.

After many unsuccessful attempts to gain help from the Government, in the spring of this year an Association was formed to start and maintain an Industrial Home for Girls, and through the generosity of the Jensen Camp Committee, the Staff House at the Camp was offered as a loan to commence the work. The Home was opened in April with two girls (little more than children), who had been in the Penitentiary for shelter and protection, and who were absolutely friendless and homeless. Since then three more girls have been added to the Home, and if friends will only grow as the Home grows, we hope to give all these unfortunate girls a chance to make good.

Judge Morris has assured us of his sympathy and co-operation in the work, and we trust in the near future these girls will be sentenced to a term at the Industrial Home instead of the Penitentiary. It behoves the citizens of any community to help an Association which seeks to safeguard its growing boys and girls from such a menace as these uneducated, friendless girls may become.

Will the public not help this cause by generous donations, and small amounts from all in sympathy will be equally appreciated. Donations can be sent or left with Mrs. (Rev.) E. W. Forbes, Treasurer Industrial Home Association, Gower St., City—Com.

Household Notes.

Fat in which food strongly flavored with sage has been cooked can be used for frying fish without detecting any taste of the sage.

If a photograph is somewhat faded use a glass of a bluish tinge in the frame. This seems to bring out the picture more clearly.

Run a thread through the pieces along the edge of letting before washing it. After it is ironed pull out the thread and the pieces will all be in place.

A delicious pudding sauce is made as follows: Stir 2 tablespoons of sugar into ½ cup apricot pulp. Fold in 2½ cups stiffly whipped cream and chill.

Your bread crumbs will be quite fine if you first thoroughly dry all scraps of bread, run through the finest cutter of the food chopper and then through the flour sifter.

LONDON GOSSIP.

THE KING AT GOODWOOD.

LONDON, July 18th, 1921. The King has definitely decided to attend the races at Goodwood this year for the first time since the war. He will be the guest of the Duke of Devon and Gordon from Monday, 20th, until Friday, July 29th. The King does not propose to accompany the Duke on this occasion, but it is said that the Prince of Wales may be present, as he has not yet been seen at Goodwood. The Duke of Richmond is inviting rather a large party to meet His Majesty on the occasion, and this will be composed entirely of those personally known to the King, and will be largely of a family character. The Duchess of Devonshire is likely to act as hostess for her father once more on the occasion. The rooms set apart for the King at Goodwood House are all situated on the ground floor, and command beautiful views over the park, with the great park in the distance. They are magnificently furnished. King Edward rarely allowed Goodwood Meetings to pass without his presence. The present King, however, by his absence has not been so in his attendances.

A COUGH EPIDEMIC.

A very large number of Londoners are suffering from catarrhs of the throat as the result of the present drought. There is nothing new in the epidemic, which is due to dust getting into the nose and throat passages, and a fall of rain probably do more to subside it than an army of doctors. Whooping cough cases are numerous in many parts of the country, and the more common cases being the chief sufferers. A leading doctor is attending some of the cases.

ARMY AND FOREIGN SERVICE.

Service in India or elsewhere abroad in the cavalry has lost its attractiveness, and there has been an unprecedented exodus among senior cavalry officers whose units are warned for overseas. General officers in this branch are very concerned because this sort of thing reacts, and it is becoming exceedingly difficult to find young officers for the cavalry, and, when found, to train them in the "articles" of department, which, in the past, were one of the foundations of discipline in the British Army.

THE ALTAR OF PRIVATE PROPERTY.

The offices of the Russian Trade Delegation now occupy a large part of the block of buildings in Great Queen Street between Kingsway and Lincoln's Inn Fields. The shop at the east corner, which was for many years an antique dealers who specialised in Dutch plates and brass is now being fitted up as a showroom for Russian wares. There is a press department here which is strictly concerned with trade affairs. It is curious to see this outpost of Soviet Russia in the one spot in London where private property is most anciently and deeply entrenched. The Russian officials and clerks when they look out of the windows gaze at an old brick mansion that still straddles its dark arcade over the pavement. This is the office of Messrs. Farrer, the solicitors to half the nobility in England, and down in the vaults below there are two floors of them, and they date from the time of James I., are muniment chests and ancient boxes and coffers containing deeds and treasures more curious than those in Countess's strong-room. The strangest thing I saw there in a visit I was privileged to make some years ago was a very long, narrow box of ordinary deal bearing the identification "D. of W." This box contains the supply of flags which the Dukes of Wellington use to sustain their right to the estate of Stratfieldsaye. It is their pleasant duty once a year to hang their flags in St. George's Chapel, Windsor. To wave a flag in an ancient chapel for a fair estate seems it certainly must seem so to the Dukes of Wellington the pure poetry of private property. Half a dozen Lord Chancellors who did great things for private property lived or worked in this mansion, and their arms are displayed outside, and in the great room on the first floor that looks out on the gardens the charter of the Bank of England was signed. The two forces thus of Communism and of private property face one another in the lists of Lincoln's Inn Fields, and (as the recent advices from Russia seem to show) private property has not only a past.

"GOING ON."

Opinions are very much divided on a difficult question of dance etiquette. There are many young men at present in the rather smarter set who often accept three or even four invitations for one evening, and only stay a short time at each house before going to the next. This habit is now spreading to the more exclusive houses, and not a few hostesses, regarding it as deliberate rudeness, are threatening not to invite any guest who does so. The "habit" however, was reached last week when, at the house of a certain young Countess, one of the guests, the wife of a Baronet, actually used her hostess's telephone to ring up a band and ask it to come at once to her own house. The West End at the moment is discussing little else.

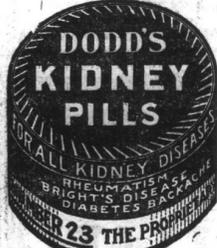

THE NEW METROPOLE.

The Metropole, which opened recently in the last of the London hotels commandeered during the war to put on its peace paint. The Metropole, like its neighbour the Victoria, suffered a drab transformation as the Munitions headquarters; the big room where the retransformation was celebrated today was the place where Mr. Lloyd George held engineering industry together and stagger the Germans with guns and shells. It is now the cafe oasis in tones of sunset yellow, not without a hint of apricot pink. You can feed here in surroundings of the utmost splendour. The decorations throughout show an interesting departure from the old mahogany and marble style. The "star" room is the restaurant des ambassadeurs, in the angle of the hotel towards the Thames. The idea is to give the effect (according to lyrical description circulated to-day) "of an opalescent glow such as fills the sky at the dawn of a summer morning." At any rate, those of us who in the bad old days used to follow the little girl guides in brown holland warren rubbed our eyes this afternoon on entering the place of opalescent dawn.

The new Metropole has had a very large sum of money spent upon it—it has been one of the sights for some time to see the workmen hanging outside and cleaning its dingy face and its full of the newest notions in the way of luxury and colour. Owing to labor troubles the hotel is opened a little late for catching this season's Americans and other foreigners. In the speeches to-day the importance of fine big hotels as "shop windows of commerce" was insisted upon. There was also a strong plea from Sir Francis Towle for a special hotel licence presumably to free the great hotels from public-house restriction and to discriminate in the Continental manner between the places where you live and those where you merely drink.

LEGITIMISATION OF CHILDREN.

Ministers have resolved to propose a very important alteration in the law effecting the legitimisation of children, bringing the English law into line with that which has long prevailed in Scotland, giving to illegitimate children the status of legitimacy by the marriage of their parents. Sir John Baird as Under Standing Committee on the Children of Unmarried Parents Bill a clause enacting this law, but with special provisos. It would be provided that where either of the parents between the date of the birth and the date of their marriage to one another has been married to any other person, any children who by virtue of the subsequent marriage become legitimate shall for all purposes of succession (whether to property or to any title or dignity) be deemed to be younger than any children of the previous marriage and that no child thus made legitimate should be entitled to succeed or to take any property, real or personal, settled by a person other than his father or mother by any disposition prior to the date of such marriage unless such child would have been entitled to succeed to or take
