FINED FOR TAKING PIT-PROPS.

The Government recently took action against Kenneth Barbour, Isaac Barbour and Edward Green for the larceny of pulpwood at Port Blandford within the past month. Arraigned before Judge Morris they were fined $10.00 each and the payment between them of $90.00 costs and the immediate return of the pieces of pulpwood taken, or in default 30 days imprisonment.

Mr Hector Dawe, of Coley's Pt., arrived from Boston, Mass., by Monday night's train.

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 26.—The railroad, trolley, telephone and telegraph services were seriously affected and many roads made impassable by the snowstorm that swept western Massachusetts Saturday night and Sunday morning. Automobiles were stalled in deep drifts in many places.

NOTES ON ROAD WORK

Work on the new road running along the east side of Mr. John Bishop's mill, and leading from Water Street to the Railway Station, was commenced on Wednesday. This road was petitioned for by the citizens of Bay Roberts West, Coley's Point and Country Road about three years ago. The road will be 20 ft. wide and will be a great convenience to the people living in the afore-mentioned sections.

The Guardian has always been a strong advocate for more roads running east and west and north and south through the centre of the town, which would tend in opening up land for building purposes.

Work on the roads throughout this section started on Tuesday last. The Cross Road is receiving attention again, and the uneven surface which has remained in this condition for the past two or three months, much to the annoyance and inconvenience of drivers of vehicles is being levelled off. The roads in the outlying sections are in bad condition, and many ruts, protruding rocks and bridges need attention. All road work, we understand, has been taken out of the hands of the Bay Roberts elective Road Board, and placed in the hands of certain other persons. Why this has been done, and whether there was justification for doing so, and whether the precedent established is a proper one, we do not know. We are more or less in the dark regarding the doings of our local parliament.

We congratulate our friends of Spaniard's Bay on the splendid road and retaining wall constructed the past summer around the church hill. The work—well, really the road—is well done, and credit on the men responsible for the job.

We hope those hundreds of ruts which we see that ruts are filled in and protruding rocks removed from the surface of the road. The material used is an all-important thing, because on it depends whether you are going to have a nice smooth clean road for walking or driving over, the year round. Look at the condition of some of our roads repaired during the past summer. The late period of wet weather turns them into a mud puddle, which makes them almost impassable. This is due to the kind of material spread over the surface.

It should not be forgotten that it is everybody's taxes that are being spent on our roads, and the work should be done as efficiently and as good as possible, having regard to those who travel by foot as well as those who travel by carriage, cart or motor car. How doctors manage to get around in their cars at all seasons, night and day, to visit the sick beats our comprehension.

A greater pride and interest than seems at present apparent should be taken in our roads. Men should not only work for the few dollars that road work brings, but they should be interested enough to think out ways and means of making that particular part of the road which they have charge of the best possible. Our experience is that you cannot beat the beach sand and gravel mixed with a proportion of pit sand for road purposes.

OBITUARY

There passed peacefully away on Sunday, November 25th, at 3 p.m. Vera M. Crossman, daughter of Thomas and Minnie Crossman, 8 Prescott St., St. John's.

After receiving her education, she entered the office of the Eastern Trust Company, where she worked faithfully, until ill-health compelled her to resign.

It was the writer's privilege to have the most intimate friendship with the deceased young lady and it could truly be said, "to know her was to love her." Her mind was always directed toward the beautiful things of earth, flowers, music and nature.

Possessing a remarkable intellect, her conversation was, at all times, edifying and inspiring. Throughout the time of her illness, those who visited her with the hope of cheering her, always came away with the consciousness that the sufferer had been the one who shed the most happiness. She rarely spoke of her pain, but delighted those around her by her ready flow of enjoyable chat. Of an appreciative nature, the least remembrance sent by her friends was a source of great joy, and the smallest bouquet of flowers always called forth words of gratitude.

With her, the bond of friendship was a most sacred tie and those who could call her friend, alone realized how high was her "code of honor."

She always spent her holidays in this town, where she made many friends, whose hearts are saddened by her passing.

Lived, loved and prized

While here on Earth below.

Gone from us—remembered— Safe home with Jesus now.

On Sunday, Nov. 25th, at 3 p.m. the Angel of Death called her to the Great Beyond, and peacefully she heard the summons and passed on.

The funeral took place from her late residence on Tuesday and was very largely attended. After a short service at the home, at which the hymn, "Peace, perfect peace" was sung, the procession wended its way to the C. E. Cemetery, where interment took place. The service at the Chapel and graveside was conducted by Canon Jeeves and the Rev. J. Britton. The Cathedral Choir, of which deceased was a member, was present and chanted the Psalms. At the close of the service the choir sang the hymn, "On the Resurrection Morning." Evidence that the deceased young lady was highly esteemed was given by the fact that a second hearse had to be engaged to convey the floral tributes.

Beside a large circle of friends, left to mourn are, father, mother, three sisters and three brothers, to all whom deepest sympathy is extended.

As we contemplate her brief life, we are moved to wonder why one of the brightest should be called away in the bloom of youth. But we know that the all-wise Father, who sees beyond our tears, wanted our darling in Heaven and called her to Himself.

We are groping still in the dark— She has entered the portals of light, And is walking the Heavenly ways.

BELL ISLAND CLOSING DOWN

It has been officially stated that after November 30th there will be a complete close-down at the Bell Island mines. This will mean that almost 1100 men will be out of employment. A petition is being circulated on the Island, asking the Government, in place of distributing relief, to come to the Company's assistance and by some arrangement provide for the operating costs, until a market for the ore is forthcoming.

 George was gone, then; he might receive some letter of explanation perhaps, when he returned to London; but the chances were that he would never see his old friend again.
 "And to think that I should care so much for the fellow!" he said, lifting his eyebrows to the center of his forehead.
 "The place smells of stale tobacco like a tap-room," he muttered; "there can be no harm in my smoking a cigar here."
 He took one from the case in his pocket; there was a spark of fire in the little grate, and he looked about for something to light his cigar with.
 A twisted piece of paper lay half-burned upon the hearth; he picked it up, and unfolded it, in order to get a better pipe light by folding it the other way of the paper. As he did so, absently glancing at the penciled writing upon the fragment of thin paper, a portion of a name caught his eye—a portion of the name that was most in his thoughts. He took the scrap of paper to the window, and examined it by the declining light.
 It was part of a telegraphic dispatch. The upper portion had been burnt away, but the more important part, the greater part of the message itself, remained.
 "alboys came to last night and left by the mail for London, on his way to Liverpool, whence he was to sail for Sydney."
 The date and the name and address of the sender of the message had been burnt with the heading. Robert Audley's face blanched to a deathly whiteness. He carefully folded the scrap of paper, and placed it between the leaves of his pocket-book.
 "My God!" he said, "what is the meaning of this? I shall go to Liverpool to-night, and make enquiries there!"

JOURNAL OF REV.
 HENRY GORDON
 CARTWRIGHT, LABRADOR

 Tuesday, Mar. 25th.
 Considerably limp, we crawled out of our hole at daylight. During the night one of my snow-shoes fell in the fire and was destroyed, so that now I was completely crippled. For a time I tried using John's pair but found them too small for my feet, and raised several sore blisters on my toes. I then made them up. It only remained for me to handle the dogs and komatik, and let the others go ahead. Will had climbed a tall tree and sighted a land-mark he knew, and we had decided to strike a bee-line through everything. The men cut their way with axes as they went. It was very tiring work keeping the komatik on top of the snow and nudging it over fallen trees. At last about 10.0 we struck into a big lake and Will knew where he was. Crossing the lake we took a cut path through the woods, and were able to ride for the first time since we started. By 3.0 we had reached the very welcome shelter of the Chaulks' house at Pearl River. A complete change of clothing, and a good wash and feed, made me, at any rate, feel more like a man again. I found our lady school-teacher installed here, and was delighted to find her better than I had feared. She has put in a hard time of it, but has come through very pluckily. I do not think I will send a girl on this route again. The long distance travelling on an open komatik is too hard for them. Evensong, 7.30.
 Wednesday, Mar. 26th.
 Made a start about 8.0, and crossed the bight to Mulligan. Visited the Campbells, then went on to North West Islands for midday. Left here about 12.0, and made a very fair run into North West River. I was not long before I was revelling in Mrs. Paddon's hospitality. Sam Pottle, with whom we had travelled in company for several days, was in hospital dangerously ill. I gave him the Sacrament during the night. Mrs. Paddon did not think he would last till morning.
 Thursday, Mar. 27th.
 Owing to Sam's critical condition I decided to postpone my visit to the head of the bay until the beginning of the week, and stay on at the hospital over the week-end. During the day I was busy paying visits. This place still continues to grow. It was rather objectionable having to regale various folk with details about the deaths of their relations in Sandwich Bay.

Stall's Books

Rev. T. Albert Moore, D. D., General Secretary of the Dept. of Social Service and Evangelism of the Meth. Church of Canada, who visited Newfoundland in Sept., 1917, in connection with the Social Congress, says:
 "Stall's Books on Avoided Subjects have been standard works for such a long time that it seems almost unnecessary to say a word in their behalf. I believe they have accomplished great good, and are written with care and delicacy, at the same time with sufficient frankness or the modest discussion of these delicate subjects. They are safe books for general reading, especially if from the various books there is proper selection for the youth or adult man or woman, as the case may be."

 Continued my visits. Weather fine and warm. Looked in at the school seventeen children hard at work. About noon, Mr. Parsons arrived from Rigolet bringing the nurse with him. Mr. Clark also arrived about the same time. Crossed the river after dinner and visited the French Post, Mr. Thevenet, manager. Had supper with the Ewings and enjoyed a good yarn with Mr. Parsons.

A Girl Guide Commissioner's Duties.
 The duties of a Commissioner are very clearly laid down by Headquarters in Rules & Regulations, and if these are carefully read, no one can question the great responsibility of Guiding.
 The Division and District Commissioners are appointed by the County Commissioner who is approved and appointed by Headquarters, and on her shoulders rests this responsibility.
 These Commissioners are for propaganda work and for suitable supervision and help in their respective Districts. They should faithfully conform to all Rules laid down for their particular County and although they are under the County Commissioner they are entirely responsible for the work which is done in their District.
 The Commissioner, I think should if possible have a Company of her own to start with. She then goes through the routine work, familiarises herself with all Guide work, its difficulties, disappointments and delights—the latter outweigh all else.
 She can study character and get an insight into the home lives of those under her care. She realises perhaps what an effort is needed to keep ahead of her Guides; how necessary it is to vary in work as well as in play. She will see how wonderful is the change which comes over a child after she has become a Guide—how the whole character may be influenced for good, and what a powerful handle we have in our Guide drill and games. The one teaches obedience and self-control, the latter "thought for others."
 Some Commissioners are apt to make mistakes by zealous visiting of Companies.
 Do not worry your Captains by frequent visits. Your duties lie in propaganda. It is for you to find suitable persons to take up the work, set a Company going on sound lines and give your Guides a free hand. Have officers' meetings for general instruction and business, but leave them alone with their own little Company unless for a special visit, or when they ask you to visit them.
 In the Yorkshire W. R. (South) we Commissioners take all enrolments. This gives us an opportunity of meeting and speaking to all Guides, gives the Guiders the chance of talking over her work, and makes the enrolment a much more impressive ceremony.
 The Rules notify "that a Captain may enrol her own guides," so if a change is made it must be discussed with the officers. Carefully explain why a Commissioner might take the enrolments, and a vote taken before any decision is made. This plan of course may only be possible where there are plenty of Commissioners and where the distances are not too great.

CENSUS RETURNS TO DATE

The revised Census Lists show a population for Newfoundland of 259,259; for Labrador, 3,774; total: 263,033. In the district of St. John's West there are 25,739 people and in St. John's East 28,419. The correct figures for the city proper have not yet been checked up.
 Fort Worth, Texas, Nov. 22—Dr. F. A. Cook, who first gained fame by his denied discovery of the North Pole, passed to a cell in the Tarrant County jail here today under sentence of fourteen years and nine months in the Federal penitentiary, at Leavenworth, Kansas, and a fine of twelve thousand dollars, with what was said to have been the most stinging denunciation ever heard in a Texas court room ringing in his ears.

Hard Work Means Success

There never was a goal worth getting but you must work to attain. You must suffer and bleed for it, cling to your creed for it. Fail and go at it again.
 Success is no whim of the moment, no crown for the indolent brow. You must battle and try for it, offer to die for it. Lose it yet win it somehow.
 The Pathway to glory is rugged, and many the heart-aches you'll know. He who seeks to be master must rise from disaster. Must take as he giveth the blow.
 There's no royal highway to splendour, no short cut to fortune or fame. You must fearlessly fight for it, dare to be right for it, Failing, yet playing the game.
 The test of man's merit is trouble, the proof of his work is distress. Much as you long for it, man must be strong for it. Work is the door to success.

RULES FOR Making Cod Liver Oil For the Guidance of Manufacturers

- 1st. The manager in charge of factory must see that the livers are fresh; that all brown or poor livers are thrown out; that there is no gall bladder attached to any livers.
- 2nd. The good livers must then be washed in a tub of clean fresh water.
- 3rd. The pan in which the livers are boiled must be perfectly clean inside, before any livers are placed in it.
- 4th. Before you start to boil any livers, you must have sufficient steam.
- 5th. Turn on the steam, and use as much as you need to have or the quantity of livers you have in your pan. Boil until the white cum floats off (which will take about thirty minutes.) Don't forget to stir the livers, and see that those in the bottom and those around the sides are brought into direct contact with the steam all the time.
- 6th. Turn the steam off, and allow all to settle, not exceeding five minutes, according to capacity of liver boiler.
- 7th. Then you dip all the oil you can get, which is the finest white oil. Put this oil in a cooling tank made of galvanized iron, and let the oil remain there till next morning. Don't forget to put a training cloth over the cooling tank before you put any oil in, so that it will catch any bits of blubber; allow to remain 12 or 14 hours or longer if possible, then dip from cooling tank and strain through double calico bag, inside bag to be one inch smaller all around; then strain into a tin shut under the bags, the cask to be at the end of the shut with a funnel, to lead oil into casks, which funnel to be covered with cheese cloth.
- 8th. When you have dipped the finest oil from the top of the liver boiler pan, take all the blubber from the pan while it is warm. The oil from this blubber is not fit for medicinal purposes.
- 9th. Then clean your liver pan with warm water and washing powder. Have it bright and clean for the next boiling.
- 10th. Every bag, cloth, tank, funnel and pan, must be washed thoroughly with warm water, soap and water. Soda must not be used. The best results for medicinal oil can only be obtained by the use of tin barrels. Wooden packages generally make the oil dark, and destroy its fine flavor. Keep all oil in barrels in a cool place, and covered from the sun.

- Filling Fish may be branded as Scotch Cure without the Crown Brand.
- No drowned, stale, or scaleless herring can be used as Scotch Pack, nor herring in half frozen state.
- The root cause of light salting is to come as near as possible to the pleasing of the palate of the consumer; and if we bear in mind that over three-fourths of all Scotch-Pack Herring are consumed as a tonic before the mid-day meal, just as they come out of the barrel, without any fire cooking, we can see the reason at a glance for the right salting. The herring is dressed by the head and the tail being cut off, the main bone taken out. It is then cut into squares of about one inch, and is served with vinegar and other condiments. This gives power to the stomach to digest the following meal and keeps the consumer in the best of health.
- People with bad stomachs please note that the art of cooking and eating right is just as essential as the art of curing; and based on the best medical directions, and with the chemical analysis of the constituent parts of herring as a food ever kept before the consumer, we need not be surprised that the people who eat most herring are the most healthy and efficient.

BIG WORLD EVENTS: THEIR SIGNIFICANCE.

by William Banks.

Is Britain to abandon the Free Trade policy which has existed practically since 1846, in favor of Protection? That is the question to be decided on Thursday, December 6. The Government's decision to appeal to the country without loss of time is characteristic of the British idea of electioneering. It would be difficult to imagine such a decision in any other country of the Empire. New political alignments followed quick upon the announcement that a general election was coming. Lloyd George and Mr. Asquith were reconciled, and will lead the two Liberal wings as a united party in defence of Free Trade. If the Government wins a number of changes will be made in the Cabinet, because some members do not agree with Mr. Baldwin's protectionist policy and Austen Chamberlain and Lord Birkenhead, are named as two of the new members. It is reported that the Labor party, under Ramsay MacDonald, will practically ignore the tariff question and make its real fight on its proposed levy on all fortunes or incomes of over 5,000 pounds. In following the campaign, it may be of assistance to readers to bear in mind that the government proposes to apply revenues on the Protectionist tariff to subsidies for the relief of agriculture, the development of cotton growing within the Empire and a reduction of duties on tea and sugar. There is to be no duty on eggs, butter or cheese and other foodstuffs except the few fruits and specific articles mentioned some time ago. The question of increased preference to the overseas Dominions stands over until after the elections.

It is only a little more than a year ago since the last elections were held. Then over fourteen million people, or about eighty per cent of those on the lists, cast their ballots. This, despite the fact that there was no real issue and very little excitement in the campaign. The Conservatives were then returned to power with a majority over all parties of 79. At dissolution for the present election, the standing of the parties in the House of Commons was as follows:

Unionists.....	342
Labor.....	144
United Liberals (59 Asquithians and 59 Lloyd Georgians) 118
Other parties.....	7
Seats vacant.....	4
Total.....	615

Of course, there will be as many surmises and guesses as to the results as there are people to make them. The danger to the hopes of any one of the parties is that the voters may swing to one of the others in a determination to give it a clear majority. The fact that the government had such a good majority at the time of dissolution, does not count for so much in Britain as it would here. The British elector has a way of voting on principles rather than for party. The nearest approach to an election on issues such as those now before the people was the first election held in January, 1910, when Joseph Chamberlain's tariff reforms were the bone of contention. At that time the House of Commons included the Irish Nationalists. The result of the vote gave the tariff reform Unionists 273 seats against 275 for Free Trade Liberals, 40 for Free Trade Laborites, and 82 for Free Trade Nationalists. The Liberals, with the aid of the two last named parties, were able to retain power. In the December elections of the same year the figures were Liberals 273, Labor 42, Nationalists 84, Unionists 272. The Labor and Nationalist members supported the Liberal. There are many observers in Britain who believe that the Baldwin proposals will carry, giving various reasons for their views, one of them being in the form of the question, "What is the alternative?"

The proposal from Germany itself to leave the Rhineland and prob-ly the Ruhr to France, gives a new angle to a situation that daily becomes more complicated. It is not aided any by the restrictions which France insists upon for the suggested allied conference into Germany's ability to pay reparations. The United States will not take any official part in this probe. It has really resolved itself into a plan for the appearance of Germans before a commission restricted to a certain line of action, these Germans to give their views as to the ability of their country to complete the terms of the Versailles Treaty. For the moment Britain has no interest in the matter, her wobbly attention being concentrated on the elections at home.

There does not seem to be any good ground under international law for quarrelling with Holland over the return of the former German Crown Prince to his native country, or the return of the Kaiser should he also go there. As a matter of fact the Dutch people would probably be mightily relieved to get rid of their unwelcome guests. There was a good deal of talk in Britain and other allied countries at one time of trying the Kaiser. Hanging was also predicted as his punishment. He might have been brought to trial had he elected to stay in Germany, but having fled to Holland, whatever plans the allies had in regard to him came to a halt. Indeed there has always been a feeling that the Kaiser's own actions let the allies out of an awkward predicament. There has yet to be adduced evidence convincing enough to warrant the assumption that the monarchy has any show of resurrection in Germany. The fiasco in which Ludendorff and Hitler were the mountebanks, rather inclines one to take the other view.

Announcement from Italy that a young Swiss doctor engaged in research work there has discovered a remedy for pneumonia and other lung diseases is interesting, and it is hoped will be fully confirmed. Especially since the flu epidemics began to play havoc in the world, pneumonia has been a deadly foe to humanity. The accomplishments of medical research workers during the last few years has been such as to warrant the belief that most of the deadly diseases will find science able to fight them with reasonable hope of success. In the meantime it is becoming increasingly obvious that money expended on research work is a good investment for the human race. What has been done in the case of insulin for diabetes is a proof of that. It is gratifying to find that Dr. Collip of the University at Edmonton has also received his share of recognition and financial reward in this connection, and will be able to continue his research work under more favorable circumstances.

China goes from bad to worse. Some missionaries have been killed in West China and others forced to leave their stations. British officials have also been attacked as well as those from European countries. The real trouble is of course that the country is torn with dissension, a succession of civil wars following upon intrigues for power in the central government having added to the chaos. Matters have got to the point where a conference of the powers, with action in view, seems to be inevitable. Such a conference has been suggested on several occasions, but the nations which would take a leading part have been so distracted by events nearer at home that nothing has yet been done. For the sake of China itself it almost seems as if outside force would have to be used to compel the restoration of order. It is a fine point this the interference of outsiders in the affairs of another country. But all the powers have special interests in China, and few of them could allow the present state of anarchy to continue.

Premiers King of Canada, and Warren of Newfoundland, who took a prominent part in the Imperial Conference proceedings, have been honored in several places in Britain. Both will probably regard the official luncheon by the City of Edinburgh and the conferring of honorary degrees by the great University of that city, as the most pleasurable distinction conferred upon them. Representing as they do countries that are very close together, with many interests in common, it is natural that a firm friendship should have been formed between the two.

Apart altogether from the political beliefs of the people of the two countries they represent, the people generally will regard with pleasure the distinctions which have been conferred upon them, because it is in this way that one nation shows honor to another.

Lord Lovat, who was chairman of the Empire Forestry Commission which recently held a session in Canada, says in a recent review of that meeting, that the forest resources of the Dominion are not inexhaustible. He urges redoubled exertions to protect them against fire and also to secure replacement. This has been so often told to the people of Canada and the American continent in general, that some of them have, perhaps, become weary of it. But those who realize the tremendous importance of forestry to their efforts in a good work. There is still too much reckless cutting and inexcusable loss by fire in the forests of the American continent.

A WORD IN FORTY-EIGHT LANGUAGES

THE learned Louis Berger was one day walking in Paris when he recognized his old barber who had been reduced by misfortune to selling nuts in the street for a living. "Oh sir, if you could only tell me something to do!" said the poor man. Berger was touched, and after a little thought he tore a leaf from his memorandum book, wrote for a few moments, and handed it to the man saying: "Take this to a printing office, and have a hundred copies struck off. Here is the money to pay for it. Get a license from the prefecture of police, and sell them at two cents a copy, and you will have bread on the spot. The strangers who visit Paris cannot refuse this tribute to the name of God, printed in so many different ways." The barber did as he was bid, and was always seen at the entrance of the exposition selling the following handbill:

WOMAN MURDERED by THUGS

Mrs. Mayme Bigham, aged 81, of Buffalo, was shot to death when five bandits entered her husband's drug store Sunday night, November 11, and she turned the combination of the safe and opened the door of the safe and Mrs. Bigham was slain by a lock. Mrs. Bigham who entered the store by a rear door which had been left unlocked. When the intruder shouted to the couple to throw up their hands, Bigham complied, but his wife kicked the door of the safe and closed it and turned the lock. As she reached over the desperado pulled the trigger. Mrs. Bigham toppled over—dead.

SCISSORS LEFT IN BODY

A supreme court jury at Syracuse, N.Y., awarded Mrs. W. J. Smith on Nov. 13, $7,000 against Dr. Harry Bardick, local surgeon, who was sued by the woman on a charge that he left a small pair of scissors in her body after an operation a short time ago. The husband who also sued for his wife's doctor bills, was given $1,500. Dr. W. L. Wallace, leading Syracuse surgeon, testified during the suit that he removed the scissors at a second operation some time later.

Existing Evils

For a long number of years the people of this country have been placed in a sad condition because time and again designing and unscrupulous men have taken advantage of them. In no other walk of life has this thing been more manifested than in the public or political life of the country. It is well known that we have one of the richest little countries under the blue skies of heaven, and if its affairs were half-decently managed, its resources exploited in a business like manner for the benefit of the people as a whole, and the public service managed economically and efficiently, the 250,000 of its population would be able to live like princes.

The wealth of the sea, the mines, the agricultural land and the forest is well-nigh inexhaustible. But there are so many evils contributing to the lack of proper development of all these things in the interests of the people generally as against the interests of the few, that we are not reaping by any means the annual harvest that we should be reaping. At the root of certain evils may be mentioned greed, selfishness, lack of knowledge, and last but not least, prejudice. Prejudice rules to such an extent, and in so many ways, that we regard it as one of the most important of the many evils existing in Newfoundland.

We suppose among the many prejudices traded upon, that of sectarianism, or denominationalism excels all others. Knowledge, merit, ability, sincerity, activity, vision and any other qualifications possessed by an individual have got to give way to the evil of sectarianism. And no field of activity is this more apparent than in the realm of politics. Men have traded on this so long that it has been one of the strongest factors, in our opinion, in bringing Newfoundland to the place she is in today.

The pity of it is that the thing does not originate and develop only with the politician. Leaders in churches, we fear, as well as the politician, are sometimes active in propagating and keeping alive this feeling of prejudice, with the result that men are selected to manage the important affairs of a country for us other reason, and with no other qualification, other than that they happen to be members of one denomination or another.

This is an awful commentary on our present-day civilization. We collect sums of money and send it to Christianize the heathen, while we refuse to recognize and practice Christian principles ourselves. The large bulk of the people, if left to themselves, would act in a sane, proper and practical manner, but there are generally to be found men who will take advantage of and trade upon the prejudices of their fellow-men for no other reason under heaven than their own selfish advantage. Then there has been the easy and delightful pastime practised by so many of creating a prejudice in the minds of the fishermen against the merchants. "Down with the Merchants" was once the most popular or all cries. But any sensible man knows that instead of broadening the breach between the fishermen and the merchant, they should be pulling together for the common good. We are speaking now more particularly from a business standpoint. Class cries, class legislation and group politics is not conducive to the common good. Only by unity and cooperation, and a united effort to reduce taxation and find additional and more profitable markets for our fishery products will a solution of our difficult problems come. No man then can merely be a spectator. All-fishermen, merchant, laborer, mechanic and farmer—must unite in one supreme effort to come together and discuss our problems on a common platform and from a common standpoint. If this is not done disaster is bound to overtake us, and that quickly.

THE BRITISH ELECTIONS DEC. 6th.

Throughout the world, but more particularly throughout the world-wide British Empire, great interest is centered in the forthcoming elections which will take place in Great Britain on Thursday next, Dec. 6th. The chief question for the 17,000,000 electors to decide is as to whether the policy of Free Trade will continue while so much unemployment exists, or whether England will adopt what practically all other countries have adopted, the policy of a Protective Tariff, which will mean, so its promoters claim, employment for the unemployed.

A Protective Tariff is really the policy on which the Conservative Party, led by Stanley Baldwin, is appealing to the country. At present it looks as if public sentiment is favorable to Protection. The two hitherto separated wings of the Liberal Party have combined under the leadership of H. H. Asquith with Lloyd George as his first lieutenant. Asquith is 71 years old, and Lloyd George is 60. The Liberal Party is defending Free Trade, and are staking all on this, the chief plank in its policy.

The Labor Party, which made such a splendid showing in the last general election, is led by Ramsay MacDonald, who insists that the Party stand by a levy on capital which, he says, will be made only once for the reduction of the National debt and relieving unemployment. Austen Chamberlain, Lord Birkenhead and Sir Alfred Mond and a host of others will be engaged in the battle. Behind the scenes are men who will no doubt exercise a wonderful influence on the result. Men like Lord Burnham, Lord Riddell, Lord Beaverbrook and Lord Rothermere, proprietors of newspapers and periodicals, are also playing important parts in the campaign. The latter is a brother of the late Lord Northcliffe, whose papers reach 80 per cent. of the British reading public.

Premier Baldwin is a fine type of the English gentleman. He is not an orator like Lloyd George, but nevertheless he speaks well, and is greatly liked for his sincerity. He has served in the House of Commons as a member for the Bewdley division of Worcestershire since 1908. The standing of the parties at the dissolution of Parliament was as follows:— Unionists 342 Labor 144 United Liberals (59 Asquithians and 59 Lloyd Georgians) 118 Other parties 7 Seats vacant 4 Total 615

On Thursday an accident, which almost resulted in a fatality, occurred, when little Gus Hambling, son of Mr. J. Hambling, fell over the wharf of C. & A. Dawe. But for the effort of the captain of the schooner Esther Hankinson, it is probable that the little lad would have lost his life.
