The farmer's Corner. Ashes and Iron for Flowers

The observation of practical and experimental gardeners seems to confirm the fact that, to procure by illient colors in forces in forces. brilliant colors in flowers, it is necessary to supply the soil with an abundance of ferruginous constituents and silica. The latter supplies a matertial (says S. E. Todd in one of his foreign exchanges) which is of that brilliancy of the petals and the dark grass luster of the leaves. That, if potash be added, or the That, if potash be added, or the past. ground be dressed round about the growing flowers with unleached wood ground should be dressed round about the growing flowers with unleached wood growing flowers with the properties of the pr ashes, an increased brilliancy will guarantee to his patrons immunity from legal appear in every petal and leaf.

Any person who cultivates only a few flowers in pots, or on grassy lawns, or on spacious parterres, may readily satisfy himself of the exceedingly useful part the foregoing materials play in the produc- B A K E R Y ! going materies play in the production of beautiful flowers. Even white flowers, or roses that have petals nearly white, will be greatly improved in brilliancy by providing improved in brilliancy by providing pared to supply iron, sand and unleached ashes for the roots of growing plants. Ferruginous material may be applied to the soil when flowers are growing, or where they are to grow, by procurble with the soil when they are to grow, by procurble with the soil when they are to grow, by procurble with the soil when the soil w ing a supply of oxide of iron, in the form of the dark-colored scales that In Tarts, Puffs, Apple, Mince, Beef and when the metal is hammered by the blacksmiths.

Iron turnings and iron filings, which may be obtained for a trifle at No. 1 CONFECTIONARY, most machine shops, should be worked into the soil near flowers; and in a few years it will be perceived that all the minute fragments will have been dissolved, thus furnishing the chicest material for painting the gayest colors of the flower garden. When there is an excess of vegetable mould in the flower bed, and a deficiency of silice or and the deficiency of silica or sand, the flower will never be so rich in color, not so brilliant, as they would be were a liberal dressing of sand, or, were a liberal dressing of sand, or, sandy loam, worked down into the bed, where the growing roots could reach it. If wood ashes can be obtained readily, let a dressing be spread over the surface of the ground about half an inch deep, and raked in RICHARD H. GREMLEY.

a crop, it decomposes very slowly and we fail to get the whole benefit of it for the first crop and may lose some of its value. But when it is made completely available before it is applied, the first crop is enabled to appropriate all that it wants and the surplus remains for the next crop. To get the greatest benefit from it, therefore, manure for shallow-rooted plants, such as wheat, oats, etc., should be applied near the surface and mixed with the soil by harrowing, just before the seed is sown, so that the young plant can reach its food when it will do it the most good. and we fail to get the whole benefit food when it will do it the most good. For deep rooted grass feeding plants, as the various roots, potatoes, etc., the manure should be covered with rist.

BEE KEEPING FOR BOYS.—Boys on the farm can lay up a nice little sum of money every year by keeping a few stocks of bees. Quinby, the C. RICHARDSON, best authority on bees that ever lived in this country, says that a stock of bees is better than a hundred dollars at interest. If they are properly taken care of, there is no doubt of large that they are properly taken care of, there is no doubt of large that they are properly taken care of, there is no doubt of large that they are properly taken care of, there is no doubt of large that they are properly taken care of, there is no doubt of large that they are properly taken care of, there is no doubt of large that they are properly taken care of, there is no doubt of large that they are properly taken care of, there is no doubt of large that they are properly taken care of, there is no doubt of large that they are properly taken care of, there is no doubt of large that they are properly taken care of, there is no doubt of large that they are properly taken care of the large that they are properly taken care of the large that they are properly taken care of the large that they are properly taken care of the large that they are properly taken care of the large that they are properly taken care of the large that they are properly taken care of the large that they are properly taken care of the large that they are properly taken care of the large that they are properly taken care of the large that they are properly taken care of the large that they are properly taken care of the large that they are properly taken care of the large that they are properly the large that the large that they are properly the large that the large that they are it. Ten dollars a stock is a very reasonable estimate of profits from a well conducted apiary. The lessons in nature that the care of bees could inculcate, would almost pay for all the trouble experienced. Every farmer's boy, old enough to take care of them, ought to have a stock of bees in a movable-comb hive, to commence with. If the father possesses the requisite knowledge to direct in the care of this stock, it might be the foundation of a substantial fortune.—Bee Keeper.
