The girls have little to do with selecting their husbands. The men nearly always fix that up among themselves. A bold warrior sees a girl whom he loves in another tribe. He rides up at night, finds out where she is sleeping, dashes up to her tent, snatches her up in his arms, puts her before him on the horse and sweeps away like the wind. If he happens to be caught he is shot. If he is not, the tribe from which he has stolen the girl pays him a visit in a few days. The dertish, a priest of the tribe, joins the hands of the young man and the girl, and both the tribes join in the merriment.

Several rolls of cloth and clothing and all the money in the drawer (fortunately not a large amount) are missing.— Mr. John Calder's store was next opened by prying open the back door behind and it may yet throw some light on the matter, as it was marked. All the change was here scooped in and a few light articles. The store attacked was Mr. E. J. Smith's. Here the outside door was broken in, but as there was a dog inside it is supposed that the robbers did not like to venture further. They were evidently looking for money and light articles, and so were probably on foot. -Transcript.

Read the following extract from the letter of s missionary in China:

DEAR SIRS:—I ought to have acknowledged long ago the box of Pain-Killer you had the goodness to send me last year. Its coming was most providential. I believe hundreds of lives were saved, under God, by it. The Cholera sppeared here soon after we received it. We resorted at once to the PAIN-KIL-LER, using as directed for Cholera. A list was kept of all to whom the Pain-Killer was given, and our native assistants assured us that eight out of every ten to whom it was prescribed, recovered.

Believe me, dear sirs, gratefully and faithfully yours,
