The President Shot Down While Shaking Hands With His Would-Be Murderer---Mr. McKinley's Marvelous Coolness and Self-Possession.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 6.-Just 24 crack of a revolver rang out loud and sours ago the newspapers blazed forth in striking headline type "The Proudest Day in Buffalo's History." Today plete silence like the hush that follows they are telling in saddened tones, to ence that ensues after the discharge of a bombshell. President McKinley, the nation's chief executive and the titude, only partially aware city's honored guest, lies prostrate, paused in the silence of surprise, suffering from wounds inflicted by a cowardly assassin, while his life hangs in the balance. Out on enacted. John C. Milburn, president of the Pan-American Exposition, with tearful faces and heart, torn by conflicting hopes and fears, sits the faithful wife, whose devotion is known to all the

Tonight a surging, swaying, eager multitude throngs the city thoroughfares, choking the streets in front of the newspaper offices, scanning the bulletine with anxious eyes, and groan-Ing or cheering in turn each succeeding announcement as the nature of the nessage sinks or buoys their hopes.

The Awful Act.

It was just after the daily organ recitals in the splendid Temple of Music that the dastardly attempt was made, and the would-be assassin carried out the work without a hitch.

The president, though well guarded by United States secret service detectives, was fully exposed to such an attack as occurred. He stood at the edge of the dais upon which stands the great pipe organ at the east end of e magnificent structure. The president was in a cheerful mood, and was enjoying to the full the hearty evidences of good-will which everywhere met his gaze. Upon his right stood John G. Milburn, of Buffalo, president of the Pan-American Exposition, chatting with the president and introducing to him specially persons of note who approached. Upon the president's left stood Mr. Cortelyou.

THE ASSASSIN. It was shortly after 4 p.m., when one of the throng which surrounded the presidential party, a mediumsized man of ordinary appearance and plainly dressed in black, approached as if to greet the president. Both Secretary Courtelyou and President Milburn noticed that one of the man's hands was swathed in a bandage or handkerchief. Reports of bystanders differ as to which hand. He worked his way amid the stream of people up to the edge of the dais until he within two feet of the president. President McKinley smiled, bowed and extended his hand in that spirit of geniality the American people so ed to the rear of the building by ex-well know, when suddenly the sharp position guards, where he was held

THE PRESIDENT WOUNDED. There was an instant of almost coma clap of thunder or momentary silstill, a look of hesitancy, almost of bewilderment on his face. Then he retreated a step while a pallor began to steal over his features. The mulwhile necks were craned and all eyes turned as one toward the rostrum, where a great tragedy was being

THE MISCREANT SEIZED. Then came a commotion. With the leap of a tiger three men threw themselves forward, as with one impulse, and sprang toward the would-be assassin. Two of them were United States secret service men, who were on the lookout, and whose duty it was to guard against just such a calamity. nation.

It was a few moments after 4 p.m., while President McKinley was holding a public reception in the great Temple apart of Music on the Pan-American nds, that the cowardly attack was ground, his weapon was wrested from his grasp and strong hands pinioned his arms. of President McKinley. AFTER THE FIRST SHOCK.

After the first shock of the assassin's shots, he retreated a step. Then, as the detectives leaped upon his assailant, he turned, walked steadily to a chair and seated himself, at the same time removing his hat and bowing his head in his hands. Nevertheless, the outer garments were hastily loosened, and when a trickling stream of crimson was seen to wind its way down his breast, spreading its tell-tale stain over the white surface of the linen, their worst fears were confirmed. Toronto, Sept. 6 .- When news of the attempted assassination of President McKinley reached Toronto, it was immediately posted on bulletin boards throughout the city and at the exhibition grounds. There were many American visitors at the exhibition grounds, who had seen President Mc-Kinley at Niagara Falls earlier in the afternoon, and it was almost impossible to persuade them at first that the report was not a canard. The utmost indignation was felt on all hands. Mayor Howland said: "On the the-ory that it is the deed of a crank the question will occur, 'How can prominent men be protected from such incidents? Are they equally exposed in all parts of the world?' It seems probable that while many half-demented men may be at large in every country, the-tendency of their disorder to result in violent acting may be influenced by the surrounding temper of the country and times. Goldwin Smith, who has been outspoken against American as well as British imperialism, said the shooting of President McKinley was an act which was entirely useless from whatever point it was viewed. Should the president die, he would be succeeded by Mr. Roosevelt, and it was very well known that the vice-president was chosen without reference to his capacity for the high office of president. succession of the vice - president had always proved a dangerous thing in America's politics.

AT THE FALLS. When it was announced at Niagara Falls that President McKinley had been shot down by the cowardly hand of an assassin, the greatest excitement prevailed. Nothing but utmost sympathy was heard on every side for the popular president, with the hope that he recover. Many Canadians had crossed the river to get a look at the honorable gentleman, who had only left the Falls about an hour before, where he been visiting, and came to Canada as close as he could by driving out to the center of the bridge at the falls. news of the shooting of President Mc-Kinley caused a tremendous sensation, and when confirmed, a feeling of deep gloom and profound sorrow spread over the city, for Mr. McKinler's ae-lightful personality had endeared him to the citizens of Washington, apart from the official class, in a degree that rarely had been equaled. It was some time before the full force of the blow was realized. The people were stunned and they could not respond at once, and fully comprehend the exent of the great disaster that had fallen on the country and themselves. The special newspapers began to appear. The telephone system of the city was simply paralyzed for a time, and so many were the calls upon the newspaper offices and upon the cials who might be supposed to have knowledge of the details of the shooting that the operators were over-

AT THE WHITE HOUSE. A reporter for the Associated Press carried to the White House the first bulletin announcing the shooting of the president. It was recalled with great satisfaction the fact that when the president left Washington he was in the most robust health and excellent spirits, and that he bade all an affectionate farewell. It was recalled also that Mrs. McKinley said this circumstance had much to do with the president's own condition later on. When he left here he was accompanied by Mrs. Mckinley. Secretary Cortelyou, Dr. Rixey, and Mrs. McKinley's nurse. The force at the White House since the president's departure has been in constant

He was formerly editor of a paper of an Anarchistic principle, which bore the name of the Firebrand. The information results of the society ceived by the local police from Buffalo is to the effect that the plot to kill the president was organized among the members of the Free Society, and that the Buffalo prisoner was chosen by lot to commit the crime.

Today's Developments.

THE PATIENT IS STRONG. Buffalo, Sept. 7 .- President McKinley naintains a good measure of his strength, and those who watch at his bedside hold higher hope for his ultimate recovery. The shock from the wounds inflicted upon him by Leon F. Czolgosz seems to have been less than was anticipated, and that is regarded as highly favorable to him.

CRISIS IS TO COME. It is admitted that the crisis in his condition has not yet come and that there is the gravest danger until it has been safely passed. Several bulletins came from the chamber of the wounded president during the night, and early hours of the morning, and they all indicated a spirit of hopeful-The president rested weil, there were no alarming conditions of temperature or pulse and the spirits of the sufferer were strong and cheery. in her sorrow, and the physicians in attendance feel but little concern on her account. At the request of the president, whose first thoughts were of her, she was told that he was not seriously wounded, and when she saw him he had rallied from the operation and was suffering but little pain. She was reassured by their meeting and was content to leave his side during the night and rest herself.

The surgeons who operated on the president are in constant attendance with a corps of the most skilled nurses obtainable, and the sufferer is the recipient of every care which their skill and science suggest. They have not publicly discussed the case other than to issue brief bulletins from time to time, but it is understood that they BELIEVE THE PRESIDENT WILL RECOVER,

He went to his bunk early, and was soon asleep. He seemed without regret and undisturbed by the prospect of punishment for his crime.

The police machinery of the entire country has been set in motion to expose the plot against the life of the president, if plot there was. The detectives of this city and every other department in the country have joined hands with the great secret system of the Federal Government, and if ingenuity, skill and energy count, the secrets of the crime will be ferreted out. Czol-gosz insists that he alone planned the crime which may rob the United States of its ruler, but that statement is not accepted as true. There is a belief that he was aided by others in

The Shooting of President Mc-Kinley.

The details of the shooting of President McKinley, on Friday afternoon, in the Temple of Music, at the Pan-American Exposition, in Buffalo, are briefly told. The President was approached in the crowd by a stranger who, while shaking Mr. McKinley's hand, points a revolver and fires two The would-be assassin, who was promptly arrested, is thought to an organized association of The official report states that one bullet struck the President apper portion of the breast bone, glancing, and not penetrating; the second penetrated the abdomen five inches below the left nipple. this country. The experience of the United States shows that successful and unsuccessful attempts at the assassination of men in high place, belong as much to countries with Republican as with monarchical institutions. The assassination of President Lincoln was followed in course of time by the "deep damnation of the taking off" of President Garfield; and the first year of the twentieth century now opens with the shooting of President McKinley. The assassination, or attempted assassination, of three presidents of the United States within living memory cannot but provoke deep reflection.

It is difficult to suggest any complete remedy or method of prevention in regard to these frequent attacks on he lives of rulers. Men in high places must, of course, be reasonably guarded in every practical manner. Punishment, without panic, must be meted out to all such assailants: but, after all, what can be done with the man, half crank, half fanatic, to whom notoriety and devotion to some halfbaked theory or alleged principle are as the very breath of the nostrils? One abiding remedy, of course, is to create in every possible way a sound public opinion on these matters, by showing the wrong of such anarchist attacks, and also their utter uselessness in the way of effecting any of the final ends the anarchists profess to have in view. Some way ought to be found of dealing with avowed theoretical murder clubs, such as the Anarchist Society at Patterson, New Jersey; but what way? That is a question more easily asked than an-

In the event of President McKinley's death, the constitution provides that the Vice-President shall assume the Presidency for the remainder of the unexpired term. "The Finger of Destiny."

The New York World says:

No. there is a much higher and better fate in store for Canada. Canada is not suffering from "the millstone of an obsolete form of government," but is a much better governed country than the United States.

Canada is a northern country, and will always be peopled by an active, energetic people. "The great flood of immigration to America," referred to. would not benefit Canada. The people of Canada are for the most part English, Irish, Scotch, German, and French: while the people of the United States have very many other nationalities. Are not the nations referred to, when blended, likely to produce as fine a people as the world contains? And should not the descendants of these nations be better in Canada than in the old lands, by reason of the improvement an increased opportunity for prosperity and development will bring

Take the Provice of Ontario, and compare it with any State in the United States Union. Are the ideals of life and government here not quite equal to those of the best State in the Union? In how many States is there the same confidence in the Administration of justice? In how many is the standard of education as high? How many have finer churches or better clergymen? and what State makes better provision for the care of its deaf and dumb, its blind, insane, and helpless of all kinds? What State has sounder banks, or abler bankers? And so you may safely go on through the list, and you will find by comparison in all the essential matters that go to make a good, reliable, solid people Canada will not need to shrink from the review. The native Americans, the traveled Americans-and there are none travel benefits more-are a very good people and equal to the best; but they have too large a foreign element to average up as well as the Canadian people. The New York World asks why do so many of her own people come "over the border" into New England or New York, to work? There may be something in what an American merchant It has been said that one loses nothing said when employing a traveler. Price of Coal.

The coal dealers of Ottawa have joined together to charge $7 for every ton of coal which they sell to the pub-

They assert that they cannot sell for less, and pay the charges for their supplies which are made by the mine owners and railway companies.

The mayor of Ottawa is skeptical on this subject. He finds that in former years, when coal was selling at the pit mouth for about the same amount as is now charged, coal was sold in Ottawa at a dollar a ton less than at the present time. He finds, further, that whereas in previous seasons coal dealers advertised in the newspapers. and endeavored, by close figuring, to get more business, this year they are united in avoiding advertising, and not one of them will sell a ton of coal less than $7. It looks very like a combine?

This view is further emphasized by the declaration of a leading mine owner in one of the best coal producing regions in New York and Pennsylvania, from which the overwhelming proportion of Canada's coal supply is obtained. He indignantly repudiated the view that the mine owners make big profits out of coal. He asserts that this year but $3 25 is charged at the pit mouth for stove, chestnut and egg sizes, and he leaves it to be inper and grow? Why does she get so ferred that the carrying companies Ottawa, at all events-over 100 per cent on the original cost of the coal to take it to the consumers.

Is this a true statement of the case? It ought to be easily capable of proof or disproof. And if any remedy can be devised it ought to be provided, if not this year, before another season's supplies have to be procured.

When this matter was brought before the Ottawa City Council, there was an evident indisposition to investigate it, and some of the aldermen deemed it necessary to burden the inquiry with a demand that the cost of marketing other commodities should be inquired into at the same time. It is to be regretted that a question so important to the average householder in Canada should be clogged in this way. The coal question is a matter standing by itself, and if it is honestly investigated, it should not be difficult to show whether or not the statement is correct that the consumers are being unfairly treated, the blame could be placed on the right shoulders, and the people could adopt such means as they deemed best to meet the situation. Neither the coal dealers nor anyone else interested in their business can be unfairly treated by an honest inquiry into why coal costs so much to reach the householder.

On Being On Time.

With the extension and perfection of machine industry, we have an increasing emphasis placed upon the value of the time of the employe. More account is made in a manufacturing firm today of a tardiness of ten minutes than was made a decade ago. It is important that it should be so. The more accur ate the account that is kept regarding hours of labor, the greater likelihood of obtaining a shorter working day, which means more time for recreation.

But there is another side. The question arises does the more accurate account taken of time mean a greater promptitude in meeting appointments? If there is a difference now, compared with ten years ago in this matter, that difference is imperceptible. How often are meetings called for a certain hour, only to find the majority of members absent! In many instances such meetings are postponed owing to inability to form a quorum. In fact, it is too frequently the case that a meeting called for eight o'clock does not settle down for business till a quarter-past or halfnast eight What does this mean? Alfred the Great.

The commemoration of the thousandth anniversary of the death of King Alfred the Great, a sketch of whose career appears elsewhere in this issue, takes place this fall in Great Britain. Great preparations are being made for this event. In the course of a very few weeks, a colossal statue of this early king, the work of the noted sculptor, Thornycroft, is to be unveiled at Winchester, England. Winchester was the ancient capital of Alfred's West Saxon realm, and the spot where his dust has lain since his death; besides, it was the scene of the work of a great portion of his life.

Outside of purely academic circles, the celebration on this side of the Atnotice in the public and high schools of our Dominion. In the rush of modern life, when the interest of the majority of people is confined to current events, as mirrored from day to day in the daily newspaper, we owe to our schools the credit of rescuing from oblivion records of the deeds of heroes who belong to the historic past. Ideals are the guiding stars of youth, and the most should be made of every opportunity to impress upon the youthful mind the noble lessons to be learned from exemplary characters who have long since lain down their burdens.

Could not some fitting commemoration be held by our schools? The celebration will take place in England during the third week in September. Why could not some day or a part of a day during that week be set apart for the purpose, and devoted to special exercises of a patriotic nature? A talk by the teacher on that early epoch of English history, which is chiefly concerned with the Danish invasions, would

We sincerely hope that this millennary will not be permitted to pass without some fitting tribute from our Canadian schools.

BUSINESS IS ACTIVE IN CANADA

Good Reports Received From All Quarters

From Bradstreet's Weekly Review of the State of Trade.

Business at London has been more active this week. There is a little more grain coming out of the hands of the farmers, but the receipts are not likely to be very large till the country fairs are over. There is an increased demand for fall and winter goods from the jobbers, the retailers foreseeing a good season's business ahead. Payments this week have been fair and are likely to improve materially when the grain movement increases.

Business at Hamilton this week, according to reports received by Bradstreet's, has been showing considerable expansion. The conditions of trade have been improving steadily with progress of harvest operations throughout the country, and the indications now are for a very large turnover for the fall and winter trade. Payments satisfactory for this time of the year. The exhibition and the autumn millinery openings attracted many buyers to Toronto the past week and trade showed great activity. Liberal orders have been placed for the fall and winter trade. Reports of the prospects for the immediate future are uniformly encouraging and the outlook for large turnover the next few months is and winter trade increase. Values of staple goods are well maintained. There has been considerable activity in trade at Montreal this week. Retailers are now anxious to be well prepared for the early fall business which is expected to be good as a result of the good crops, and a good many orders are coming to hand. The jobbers are well pleased with the prospects for increased business in the Northwest. There is a good demand for mone'v and rates are steady. At Quebec little change is noticed in wholesale circles from that of the preceding week. Remittances fair for the season. Reports from the Gaspe Coast are to the effect that the cod catch has been the best in five years. The demand is brisk. As the trade of the coast depends largely on the fishing industry, the outlook is bright and business is generally in a very healthy condition.

At Winnipeg this week business as reported to Brandstreet's, is more active. Jobbers are booking large orders for the country trade, the crop results naving stimulated the demand for staple goods for the coming season at many points throughout the province. The trade conditions are greatly improved. Railway traffic is heavy and will increase soon as the season's crops come on the markets more freely. Payments have been fair, and will improve very much later on. There is a good demand for money to move the crops and rates are steady. Trade at the Pacific Coast centers as shown by reports coming to Brad-street's is a little better. Mrs. Peltier Hurled 200 Feet While Her Husband's Body Stayed Windsor, Sept. 6.—Following is a fuller account of the tragedy near this city which was briefly mentioned in yesterday's dispatches: Jacques Peltier and his wife, who resided on a small farm on the Cabana road, Sandwich South, were instantly killed at 9 o'clock this morning at the Dougall road crossing, one mile south of Windsor, by No. 17, west-bound fast Michigan Central express. The horse met the same fate and the buggy was smashed to fragments. Mr. and Mrs. Peltier set out from their home, which is about three miles from the scene of the accident, about 8:30 o'clock. They were taking chick-ens and butter to Wade Hill, the colored hotelkeeper, whose house is near the Windsor Driving Park The unfortunate couple were riding in a covered buggy drawn by one horse, a faithful animal, but slow, the neighbors say. A short call was made at Cousineau's hotel, half a mile from the railway crossing. When they left there the top of the buggy was up, but the sides were not on, so that the view would not be impaired.

The hopital trust met yesterday afternoon at the city hall, the members present being: Trustees McCormick (chairman), Beck and Gilmour, and Superintendent Balfour.

The meeting lasted over an hour, the main portion of the time being taken up with a discussion of the letting of the contract for the year's supplies of drugs, laid over from last meeting. The following resolution, moved by Mr. Gilmour, was carried:

"That Superintendent Balfour prepare a list of drugs required at the hospital, and Mr. Beck get an expert in values of same to set opposite each drug the prevailing current values of each at the present time; and that tenders be asked for at once on same, stating the percentage over or under-said scheduled prices at which tenderers will undertake to supply the same.' Dr. Balfour suggested the paying with where goods are delivered by wagon each day. $ whatever cause, be it the Hessian fly or rust, is about to make further and more pressing demands on the experimental departments of the Ontario Agricultural College. Hitherto the efforts of the experimental department have been directed chiefly towards discovering the most profitable of existing varieties of fall wheat and the best way of handling them to bring about the best results. In Australia, after long experimental work, a rust proof variety has been developed. Apropose of the subject President Mills of the Ontario Agricultural College speaks as follows: "Something along the same line must be attempted here. By hybridizing and selection the college must develop a wheat that will as it is impossible to secure even disbe proof against rust in Ontario. We must go farther. The Dawson Golden Chaff is a good yielder, but it does not suit the miller; Turkey Red suits | row being the best implement for this the miller, but it is weak in the straw, and so far as a rule has not given heavy yields. I use these varieties merely for purposes of illustration.

What we must endeavor to do is to develop something entirely new that will meet the requirements of both miller and farmer." Owing to climatic variations the task that President Mills is assuming is no light one by any means. It has been shown that, for instance, wheat that is rust proof in Australia i.; not rust proof in Sweden. Again, the Dawson Golden Chaff which is considered by many as the state of New York. The question arises as to whether the infusion of new blood, so to speak, into grain in order to make it compatible with its climatic environment would not be most beneficial. Great results have been accomplished by infusing new blood into live stock, and it is thought something of a similar nature might be done in the case of cereals. The matter having been submitted to Professor Lockhead, of the Agricultural College staff, he

A new grain, or one new to a locality will give better results than an old variety which has been allowed to deteriorate. Parasites.

The Hessian fly is sometimes severely attacked by insect parasites, several species occurring in this country. They are sometimes quite effective in keeping this pest in check, and the periodical appearance and disappearance of this insect is largely due to the rise and fall of the number of its enemies, the periods of greatest prosperity with the parasites following close upon the rise in numbers of the Hessian flies. This relationship terminates with the exhaustion of the supply of flies and the starvation of the parasites. Some attempts have been made to introduce especially prolific parasites from Lurope. We must be thankful that these insects in the accomplishment of their purposes accidentally assist us in

There are dangers and barren places, and a great solitude in spite of love and companionship, and many marchings and lurking foes, and grim rocks. and fierce suns, and parched wells, and shadeless sand wastes in every life to make us quail often, and look grave always, when we think of what may be before us. Who knows what we may see when we top the next hill, or round the shoulder of the cliff that bars our way? What shout of an enemy may crash in upon a sleeping camp; or what stifling gorge of barren granite-blazing in the sun and trackless to our feet, shall we have to march through today?—Dr. Maclaren.

Jefferson's Ten Rules of Life

The following rules for practical life were given by Dr. Jefferson, in a letter of advice to his namesake, Thomas Jefferson Smith in 1825. (1). Never put off till tomorrow what you can do today. (2). Never trouble others with what you can do yourself. (3). Never spend your money before you have it. (4). Never buy what you do no want because it is cheap. (5). Pride costs us more than hunger, thirst and cold. (6). We never repent of having eaten too little. (7). Nothing is troublesome that we do willingly. (8). How much pain have those evils cost us which never happened. (9). Take things always by their smooth handle. When angry, count ten before you speak; if very angry, count a

More Real Women Needed.

It is as necessary for women to reculate their lives as men. No single rule of life is more far-reaching than that of old King Alfred: "Eight hours eight hours for recreation." But six hours of real work will accomplish more than eight hours of dilly-dallying; six hours of genuine sleep are better than eight hours of restless dreaming; and six hours of active, whole-souled play will do more good than hours of trivial "pottering" around." Never forget that the same elements, in mind and physique, that will make you a good and successful professional woman, will, if a change

Make yourself a woman, a real woman, not a puppet or a scarecrow. We need more real women, more real men, in our twentieth century civilization.—Cyn-thia Westover Alden, in the September

Business Makes the Face.

A man's occupation or condition has a good deal to do with making his facial expression. Intellectual pursuits, like studies or the scholarly professions, when occupied with temperance and moral habits of life, brighten the face and give a person a superior look. Magnanimity of nature, or love of studies, will make a bright, glad face; but, contrary to this, a man may have a face that does not please anybody, because of a love of self to the exclu sion of all others, notwithstanding his learning and worldly shrewdness. Soldiers get a hard, severe look; overworked laborers constantly look tired; reporters look inquisitive, mathematicians look studious. Judges become grave, even when off the bench; the man who has had domestic troubles looks all broken up. An example of the ludicrous side of this subject 's to see a third-class lawyer stalking around a police court looking as wise as an owl. The business makes the face, I say. There is the butcher's face, the saloonkeeper's face, the beggar's face, the ministerial face, the lawyer's face, the doctor's face, all so distinct, each from the other, and singly, that one seldom fails to recognize se callings showing through faces. And what city boy cannot re-cognize a genuine farmer on the street as a farmer the moment he sees him?

Idleness.

My boy, you are entering by sloth into the most laborious of existences. Stop while yet there is time, and save yourself; otherwise it is all over with you. Labor is the law, and whoever repulses it as a bore must have it as a punishment. You do not wish to be bone in a stratum of rock enough to a laborer, and you will be a slave. Ah, you do not care for the honest fatigue of men, and you are about to know the sweat of the damned; while others sing you will groan. You will see other men working in the distance, and they will seem to you to be resting. The laborer, the reaper, the sailor, the blacksmith, will appear to you in the light like the blessed inmates of Paradise. You want fine black cloth, polished shoes, to scent your hafr with fragrant oil, to please creatures and to be a pretty fellow; you will have your hair close shaved, and you will wear a red jacket and wooden shoes. You want a ring for your finger and you will wear a collar on your neck; and if you look at a will go in there at 20 and come out at 50 years of age. You will go in young, red-cheeked, health, with your sparkand you will out again, broken, bent wrinkled, Ah, my poor boy, you are on the wrong road, and indolence is a bad adviser, for robbery is the hardest of labors. Take my advise, and do not undertake the laborious task of being an idler .-Victor Hugo.

Physical Training.

a mental one, the health and tone of the brain are entirely dependent upon the condition of the heart, stomach, lungs, and other bodily organs. The ability of these organs to do their work and properly nourish the brain and nervous system, must either be inherited or acquired. It is the chief province of physical culture-or physical training, I prefer to call it—to improve the condition of the vital organs. This is effected through the exercises of the muscular system. The muscles comprise about 46 per cent of the entire weight of the body, and are constantly consuming oxygen and giving off carbonic acid. The amount of oxygen consumed by the body as a whole depends upon the activity of the muscles. Thus, if the amount is represented by one the person is lying down, it will be increased to three and thirtytwo hundredths when he is walking at the rate of three miles an hour, and by seven when he is running at the rate of six miles an hour. The first effect, therefore, of active exercise, is to increase respiration; that is, to make one breathe faster. This tends to quicken the action of the heart, so that it pumps the blood more rapidly through the body. But blood and lymph are, to the bones, muscles and nerves, and other parts of the organism, what food is to the body as a whole. They strengthen and nourish the various parts, and make them increase in size, power and efficiency. The heart, lungs and stomach, in return, are repaid for their efforts by an increase in their functional capacity; for it is a law of physiology that every bodily organ strengthens and enlarges in proportion as it is exercised, and shrinks and becomes enfeebled if it be comparatively unattended to and unemployed. Thus for work, eight hours for sleep, and it is possible, through the influence of the will of the nerves and muscles, to start up increased chemical action in different parts of the body, and in that way attract it to an increased supply of blood. In this way, it is possible to develop and strengthen different parts of the body or different parts of the brain. If the brain is used excessively it will rob the muscles of their just share of the body's nutriment; or, if the muscles are over-developed, it will tend to impoverish the brain. In both

The Youth for College.

For the great majority of men, a college course is of inestimable value. For a minority it is worse than useless. How shall a boy determine to which of these classes he belongs?

A good college offers a student three things: theoretical knowledge of principles connected with his business, breadth of general culture, and friendships that are of service to him now and hereafter. If he appreciates these things, and can take them seriously a college is a good place for him. If he cannot thus appreciate at least one of them, he would better not go to col-None of these things can be played ing with. They must all be achieved by sity.

ory is a short and easy way for the attainment of practical skill, he is gravely mistaken. It is quite apart from practical skill, and its results show themselves more in the later stages of the student's development than they do when he first goes into the office of the shop. The theory of mechanics or of physics is not to be studied by lectures and experiments. It means know-ledge of analytical geometry and the differential calculus. The theory of chemistry is not to be learned amusement in the laboratory, but by attention to dry principles, which require the utmost exactitude of application. The theory of political economy is not to be learned by the reading of entertaining books and maga-zine articles. A student who would really master it must understand the principles of law and of ethics, which are more difficult than those which he meets in the routine of ordinary business. Those so-called theories which are easily acquired and glibly recited are met, in practice, with a contempt which is well deserved .- Arthur Twining Hadley, president of Yale Univer-

THE COUNTRY STORE.

Canadian Reminiscences for The Advertiser, by Rev. W. W. Smith.

In early times settlers had to buy A merchant, to get along, had to be some things they could not grow or produce for themselves; and therefore there had to be stores and storekeepers in those days, as in these. In the Eastern Townships, the English-speaking part of Quebec province, they are called traders.

As it was impossible to do a cash business, the profits-at least the nominal profits-had to be considerable. In a store I served a year, we put onethird on drygoods and hardware, and one-fourth on groceries, over the cost price. Brown sugar was 121/2 cents a pound, or nine pounds for a dollar. Young Hyson (green) tea, a dollar a pound; unbleached cotton, 121/2 cents a yard. Long credit was necessarily the rule; for the farmers only had money when, once a year, they sold their grain. As a general rule, every storekeeper bought wheat for the millers in the towns. After harvest was the promised time to pay up store-bills. but it often happened that there were balances left, that had to lay over until after another harvest. And there was a continual financiering going on between the farmers and the banks. The farmer would get $100 or sometimes $200 (rarely more), from the Gore Bank, woman you will be beaten. And you Hamilton, or from the "Commercial," of Kingston (or a branch), and get a neighbor to "sign" with him. The 6 ling eyes, and all your white teeth and per cent was taken out of the amount, and the term was three months; often renewed for another three months. A farmer once asked a neighbor to "sign" with him. The farmer had no prospect of paying till "after harvest," and that was many months away. But our neighbor was ingenious. Said he, "You see, I'll get the money out of the Gore, and when it's due I'll get the money out of the Commercial, and put it in the Gore, and when that's due. I'll get it out of the Gore, and put it into the Commercial; and by that time my wheat'll be threshed and I can pay it all up." But the other farmer would not go into this wild-cat banking.

A box of gun-flints on the counter; a barrel of vinegar behind the stove, the iron hoops bright-polished by boys continually sitting on it. And four or five men, always sitting on the counter, discussing politics and neighborhood news. And when, near evening, the horses hitched to the opposite fence were headed homeward, the same effect was produced as the delivery of an individual mail-bag at every farm, so faithfully was the news carried!

THE BABY INCUBATOR

One of the Displays at Buffalo, and How Its Model Nursery Works.

Gaustics show that only about twenty five per cent of the infants prematurely or weakly born live ordinarily, but by means of the baby incubator of teday the lives of about eighty-five per cent are saved. The baby incubator exhibited at the Pan-American Exposition is in a special building on the Mall near one of the entrance gates, and while it is in the nature of a concession, or in other words an exhibit, it has proved to be of great an exhibit, it has proved to be of great interest to visitors. In a large room, well-lighted, are a dozen incubators, each of which consist of a glass case in a metal frame, and supported on metal legs. In each is a small woven-wire cot carefully padded. Fresh air is admitted by a large pipe from outside the bullding. The air passes first through an antiseptic fluid, which destroys any germs that may be lurking in it. It also passes through cotton, which filters out any physical impurities. The air is then warmed and is finally introduced into the chamber where the baby lies. A pan of warm water keeps the atmosphere humid and the amount of moisture is registered by a small hygrometer at one of warm water keeps the atmosphere humid and the amount of moisture is registered by a small hygrometer at one side of the incubator. The air enters at the bottom of the case, strikes a shield below the cot, and is deflected downward until it meets the warm current of air heated by a Bunsen burner placed outside the case. The temperature is automatically regulated by a thermostat. At the side of each case is a small boiler which holds about two gallons of water. Through the proper introduction of cold water the circulation is controlled in the pipes that heat the incubator in the same manner in which it is done in a house heated by hot water. A centigrade thermemeter in front of each incubator gives the actual temperature all the time. Each infant is swathed, German-fashion, and they can be clearly seen through the glass deors and sides of the various incubators. The infants are sent by the physicians of Buffalo, and are given over to the care of the institution. They are weighed, clothed, and placed in the incubator. They are usually under five pounds in weight en admission.

The babies are taken out of the incubators every two hours to be fed by the nurses who live in the building.

At the rear of the incubator room is a model nursery. A miniature elevator takes the infants to the upstairs quarters to be fed. Most of the babies lie with their eyes closed, and practically the only sign of life is the occasional flutter of one of the tiny hands. In accordance with the European custom the boys are distinguished by blue ribbons, and the girls by pink. The infants at the exposition are not from institutions, but are from private families, so that the names of the little patients are carefully kept from the public. Above each incubator is a card on which is given the child's initials, the date of its birth, its admission to the incubator, the circumstances that make artificial care advisable, its weight and any other detail of significance. The incubator was invented about sixty years ago, but it never came into general use until 1873, when incubators were installed at the Paris Maternity Hospital. Both Berlin and London have permanent institutions similarly equipped and in successful operation—Scientific permanent institutions similarly equipped and in successful operation.—Scientific

But the conflict should be conducted in a generous spirit. No sect on earth has all the truth there is, and every sect has some truth which mankind needs. If the contest is marked by a noble rivalry to get nearer to eternal facts we shall climb higher and have a wider prospect with every advancing century. It would be tyrannous Respect for Another's Opinion—The World to insist that we should all eat of the same cereal, but no more so than to insist that we must all think the same thoughts, either in the sphere of re-ligion or anywhere else.

The Catholic is brought to his knees by the rich ceremonials of his church. The Quaker protests, and sits in silent self-communion in his homely meet-ing house. Both are in search of the same thing, the love of God, the sweetness and strength of the Christ. When they meet, therefore, on the sidewalk, let them respect and love each other, like pilgrims who travel toward the New Jerusalem by different routes. There are many roads to heaven, and f we are honest in our desire to get there we cannot go far astray. God ministers to every man according to his temperament, but not to all alike. The one thing needed, without which no man can be safe, is honesty of purpose. How many things you believe is of secondary importance, but the sin-cerity of your belief and your everyloyalty to your belief are of infinite consequence. Brains may reach a thousand and one differing conclusions, but in spite of them all the great heart of humanity may be one. An orchestra is made up of various instruments, but if you shut your eyes that you may not see the drum or the violin and listen simply to the grand harmony which results the soul is subdued and worship is easy. The world would not be better i there were only one sect, but it would be a good deal better if we loved and respected each other more. What the world craves is not more thinking, but more love. Christ represents a principle, not a theology, and his whole life can be summed up in the simple phrase, "Love one another.'

REV. Q. EWING'S ARRAIGNMENT

The Southern Lynchers Placed In the Category of Murderers.

The Negro as an Economic Factor-" Do Not Want to Get Rid of the Negro'-Lynched Because of an Alien Race.

[In view of the fact that such summary treatment of the negro as lynching and burning at the stake has assumed proportions likely to disintegrate the nexus of civilization in the Southern States, unless order be soon established, we publish the following powerful indictment of the negro lynchers, which was part of a sermon recently preached by the Rev. Quincy Ewing in the St. James Episcopal Church, Greenville, Mississippi. The sermon has been widely commented upon by the press of both Canada and the United States. Mr. Ewing, it will be seen, takes a very humana and common-sense view of the matter. Negroes, as human beings and as citizens of the United States, are entitled to have and exercise all the rights of humanity and all the privileges of citi- do frequently commit. zenship equally with white men. The Boston Herald's comment on the utterances of this great divine are as follows: "Quincy Ewing's is such a voice, surprising, even startling, in its high, full note of righteousness and patriotirm, because it is so conspicuously alone. From the far South, from the lowlands of Mississippi, comes this lofty ringing of godly defiance of the us; lest they should negroize our polisatanic braggardism of Tillman, and tics and our government; lest they the calculating, selfish demoralization of Gorman, and of all their abettors in the prostitution of American liberty." -Editor.1

THE SERMON.

"If some one were to declare in Boston that there were more Massachu setts murderers in Massachusetts outside than inside the state penitentiary. or that the great majority of Massa chusetts murderers were not hanged. or imprisoned, or brought to trial, or arrested-who would doubt that a very untrue and foolish thing had been said; that an absurd slander had been ut-tered against the fair name of Massachusetts? But if some one were to stand up in Greenville today and declare that there are more Mississippi murderers outside than inside the state prison; that the great majority of Mississippi murderers are never hanged, or imprisoned, or brought to trial, or indicted, or arrested, or forced to flee from one country to another, or seriously bothered in any way-if some one were to stand up in Greenville and say that, who could be sure that he had said an untrue thing?

Who could truthfully declare that an absurd slander had been uttered against the state? Who could fairly deny that but the simple truth had been spoken? Who could be so blind and so dull as to contend that the men of all colors and races who have been hanged, or imprisoned, or tried, or arrested, or fined, or bothered, for murder, have not been outnumbered during the past ten years by the men of one race, and that race the one to which we belong-by the men of one race, who have met together in bands and crowds, and deliberately slain their fellowmen, setting aside all the forms of law and making of themselves murderers as clearly as he who lies in am-bush and sends a bullet through the heart of his foe?

It is not denunciation, understand, to say that every lyncher is a murder er-just as surely a murderer as any one who ever dangled from a gallows. That is not denunciation; it is but a statement of fact in thorough accord with the law of the State of Mississippi And the fact is not altered by what the lyncher may think of himself or what his friends may think of him. He is a murderer in the eyes of Almighty God, unless God Almighty sits blind or asleep upon his throne while the lyncher does his devil's work. He is a mur-derer-supposing there is no God, mighty or unmighty; and the lyncher is hardly to be expected to suppose anything about any sort of God-he is murderer, because the law of the State of Mississippi has no other name

Let me pass to another fact, which I suppose nobody will dispute; this, namely, that white men do not lynch white men in the State of Mississippi, or so rarely as to create no problem for us to consider. Our moral and legal problem is created for us by the spectacle of white men engaged again and again in the lynching of negroes. It is safe to say that the lynching of white men by white men would not be tolerated in this state; some way would speedily be found to put a stop to it; the unhappy people who are loud now in applause of lynching would be equally loud in condemnation of it if lynchings of white men by men were at all frequent

What is the explanation of this fact? Is it that we don't want the negroes here, that they are in our way, that we want to get rid of them, and lynch them in order to show them that we don't want them here, in order to make it so hot for them that they will get out of the state, and give us more room; more room to black our boots, to nurse our babies, and cook our dinners, and clean our houses, and sweep out our stores, and drive our wagons, and labor in our oil mills and sawmills and compresses, and pile dirt on our levees in July sun, and plow our fields, and dig our sewer trenches, and plant and pick our cotton? Is it that we want more room to do these things ourselves, or want to replace the negro by some other race of people better qualified than he to do these things? Nay, this explanation could not explain; we are not trying to get rid of the negro, we are not longing to pick our own cotton, or black our own boots, or pile dirt on our own levees; we don't want him to leave us; we are not anxious to replace him with any other race of people. We want the negro to stay with us; his virtues appeal to the intelligence of our pockets, if not to the humanity of our hearts. The dullest of us knows that the great bulk or raw material of the state's wealth is produced from year to year by negro labor. The bread we eat, the summer trips we take, the houses we live in, the tailor-made suits and silk dresses we wear, the money we put into missionary boxes to Christianize yellow people in China and Japan, point all, or nearly all, directly or indirectly, to negro labor; to negro men and women, to negro grandfathers and grandmothers, and little children, picking our cotton or gathering our corn, while we work or sit under cover, and fan ourselves, or have ourselves fanned by electricity—and com-

No, we don't want to get rid of the negro. He tried to get rid of us, I have been told, some years ago, by getting away from us in this country; and steamboats were not allowed to land in front of this town to take him away. I have been told that shotguns in the hands of white men forbade him to leave Washington county to seek a nore congenial environment in Kan-

We don't want to get rid of the negro; he is our wealth producer; yet we lynch him; murder him with as little sense of the law's offended majesty as would possess us if we were killing a rattlesnake or a rabid dog.

Do we lynch the negro because he has invented some new, stupendous crime that white men have no taste for, because he is prone to indulge in many crimes that civilized white men have outgrown? Nay, the negro has not invented any new crime; he is not lynched for any one crime only; he is again and again, for crimes that white men have not outgrown and

A white man suspects a negro boy of putting Rough-on-Rats in his drinking water. He gets up a party of his friends and asks them to the house of that boy and murders him. There is no mob to avenge this murder. We do not read that the murderers were ever tried, or indicted, or arrested, or bothered in any way.

Do we lynch negroes or sanction the lynching of them in Mississippi lest they should get the upper hand of should forge to the front ahead of us, and thrust us into the backward place now occupied by them? Do we lynch them in order to keep them down and backward? Do we lynch them because we fear them? If that is the reason, of his intellect and character, is destined to lead and rule, and the black man, by reason of the natural inferiority of his intellect and character, to follow and serve? Can the thinking white men of Mississippi in this day afford to confess to themselves even that they are afraid of negro domination? Can they afford to acknowledge themselves such ridiculous cowards? Can they afford to admit, that, dealt with justly, deal with in simple obedience to the laws of the state, the negro will rise to the top of things political, and hold them writhing and

For none of the reasons suggested is the negro lynched in Mississippi. He is lynched for the very simple reason that in race he is an alien to the people who lynch him, and by reason of the law, as respected and administered, their underling, powerless to appeal to the law for protection. Replace the negro in Mississippi by any other race of aliens, make them also underlings. and as certain as the sun shines they would be lynched just as the negro is. And this means that the same essential spirit is dominant in Mississippi—in Mississippi of the twentieth centurythat was dominant in Europe in the dark ages, that ruled in France more than five hundred years ago, when the pious Louis canceled a third of the claims held by the Jews against Frenchmen for the benefit of his soul; that ruled at Verdun, where the Jews mad with agony, huddled together in a tower of refuge, hurled down their children to the howling mob, hoping thus, vainly, to satiate the greed for Jewish blood; essentially the same pirit that five hundred years ago ighted a fire for every Jew in whole French provinces, and dug that trench at Chinon, and raised that pile where nearly two hundred Jewish men and women were burned together, burned because fundamentally they were not Frenchmen by religion, not Frenchmen by race. Alas! alas! that we should do such boasting of our civilization putting to shame the centuries gone; such boasting of our progress, our freedom, our democratic ideals, our enlightened laws; such boasting, while we hark back to the dark age to copy its standard age. dards and methods; such boasting, and we are not yet enlightened enough to from trampling under bloody feet the law we boast of: not yet masters sufficiently of the passions that fasten the fangs of one brute in the throat of another not of his kind, that we are able to treat with simple jus-tice, to deal with, even according to the forms of law, the members of an alien and weaker race dwelling among us by our own will, surely, as much as

Start Early to Save.

There is an increase in the general belief that a young man must, from the very outset of his career, commence to lay away for the future. It is now common sense that a young man who at thirty is earning only a bare living is weak or a fool. He must be amassing capital. It may be in the form of a bank account, paid-up life insurance policies, stock in the company with which he is connected, or some other, or a profit-paying in-terest in some business. Salaries are increasing to give the individual this necessary margin which he may save or invest. The young man starting out in life must recognize this point. If he can make but a bare living where he is, he must change. He must get over the margin, or face an old age of poverty Old men are not drawing salaries, and the old age pension system has not yet been adopted in Canada. The young man must fight for a large salary. He is fighting for it. Hence salaries have risen and must continue to rise.-September Canadian Magazine.

KING ALFRED AND HIS WORK FOR ENGLAND

The Thousandth Anniversarv of His Death.

Will Be Observed Throughout Great Britain This Fall.

The Remarkable Career of the Wise Monarch Under Whom England Prospered.

The thousandth anniversary of the death of King Alfred the Great is to be celebrated this fall. King Alfred, according to the best of authorities, died in October, 901. Great preparations are being made in Great Britain for the commemoration this unusual anniversary, and it is believed that the same feeling of regard will extend throughout not only the British Empire, but also the English-speaking world. King Alf- great warrlor who overcame their anred was a hero who belonged to the whole Anglo-Saxon race, wherever that race is to be found. He has created an ideal type of goodness and greatness which that race has learned

[Advertiser Special.]

Great Britain, prolific as she has been in bringing forth great men, has produced few of that purely national type in which category King Alfred may be placed. Many, in fact the majority, of great Englishmen have been identified to such an extent with parties that their conduct has been largely a matter of controversy. Milton, great as he was, was identified with Puritanism-a great religious movement; examples of British statesmanship might be mentioned which illustrate the idea of exceptional force of will and intellectual gifts-examples which fall short of a place in the parquette of national adoration simply from being too closely associated with the partisan embroilments of their day. The "time spirit" had too great a hold on them, and pre-vented them from being men of all time. Not so of the Saxon Alfred. He was a hero who belonged to the whole nation; more than that, he belonged to the whole race, and doubtless the special commemoration about to take place will find a hearty response among especially the more scholastic circles of the United States. RESULTS OF HIS WORK. Very little is known of the details of what becomes of our oft-repeated boast of race superiority? our oft-uttered conviction that the white man, by virtinker is that he should see ahead of of the natural, inherent superiority his own time, and give direction to mea's ideas that succeeding genera-tions may follow and profit by. The characteristic of a man of action is that he should discern the actual needs of the time, and should reveal source of strength to meet the exigencies of his day. In other words, he should so handle the conditions which lie around him as to leave his country better than he found it. It will be seen by this that King Alfred was more man of action than thinker. The Right Hon. James Bryce, speaking of this early king, says that "Alfred was not a great thinker. Whether he could have become one cannot be known, for he wriggling in subjection to the bottom? time for study and still less for meditation. He was a man of action, and, as a man of action he was a with elements of true grandeur about him. He had a courage which never blanched, and a practical wisdom which raised him above all his contemporaries and enabled him to discern the needs of his people. He had a constancy which pursued its aims with undeviating zeal, and a patriotic sense of duty which secured for him the ununded trust of his subjects.'

MAN OF LOFTY IDEALS. He was essentially a man of lofty deals. "So long as I have lived," wrote Alfred in the latter part of his life, have striven to live worthily." He long-ed when death overtook him "to leave to the men that came after a remembrance of him in good works." A thousand years have served only to ladd veneration to his name as an indica cerned his desire has been attained. The historian Freeman speaks of him as the most perfect character in history. Politically and intellectually his sphere of action may seem small to justify comparison with the few who are looked upon as the world's greatest men but when we consider the moral grandeur of his life, that truly altruistic spirit, which caused him to undergo all manner of hardship and exposure to danger, solely for the good of his peo-ple, the institution of a comparison with other great characters in history need not be approached in an apologetic

THE EXPULSION OF THE DANES. When Alfred the Great became king of the West Saxons, the paramount kingdom in England at the time, there was little that savored of what we now "imperialism." England was divided into a number of smaller kingdoms or states, much the same way as Ancient Greece was divided. Parenthetically, it might be noted that the idea, "In union is strength," seems to be purely modern. It remained to Alfred to concentrate the dissipated strength of the island, and to endeavor to expel the Danes who had got a foothold on English soil. Hosts of these enemies, fighters fiercer and more practiced than the Saxons, were swarming over the Northern Sea and landing on coasts of England, penetrating the country along the courses of the rivers, so far as their vessels could float, then marching across it, sometimes in bands, sometimes in armies, carrying slaugh-ter and destruction wherever they pass-ed. Such was the fast have Saxon monarch, a task in which patience, tenacity and valor in the end triumphed. Though the Northmen were not expelled from the whole of England, their formidable leader was compelled to make peace, to embrace Christianity, and to confine his followers to the northeastern part of the island A notable feature with the campaign against the Danes was that it was caron partly on their own element the water. Ships were built, and manned, and more than once the Danes were defeated at sea or prevented from been credited with being the founder of the British navy. Probably it is too much to attribute to him; however, the British admiralty authorities have decided to name an ironclad shortly to be launched "King Alfred."

REBUILDING A KINGDOM. When the intermission of strife permitted it, the king devoted his time trying to rebuild the shattered fabric of his West Saxen kingdom. Among his first acts were the drawing up of laws and the providing for their proper administration. In the words of Dr. Bryce: "To revise the old laws and issue new ones, with the consent of his LATE D. L. MOODY'S ABLE SUCCESSOR.

Rev. G. Campbett Morgan, Late of London, Eng., Preaches to Large Congregations in New York City-The Man and His Work.

Bryce: "To revise the old laws and issue new ones, with the consent of his wise men, the germ of the medieval great council, and, later, parliament, was comparatively easy. To secure upright administration and restrain the tyranny of the powerful was far more difficult; but he labored at it in a difficult; but he labored at it in a way which won the undying gratitude of the people. The other part of the task was to light up afresh in England that lamp of learning and literary culture which had been extinguished by the storm of northern invaston in Northern had burned so For the last few Sundays the Rev. G. Campbell Morgan, of London, has been in the pulpit of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church. This is the church of which the Rev. Dr. Hall was pastor. thumbria, where once it had burned so brightly." Alfred was himself a close student. His spare moments were spent in the study of Latin, and with his knowledge of the language so laborious-It was known as "Dr. Hall's Church," when he was living. Next to the Brick Presbyterian Church, of which the Rev. Dr. Henry Van Dyke was pastor ly won, he translated into English several books, which, having survived the darkness of the seventh and eighth centuries, were prized by his contemporaries. He founded monasteries and until he accepted a chair in Princeton, the Fifth Avenue is the most aristocratic Presbyterian congregation in New York. Financially, it leads the schools, and enticed learned men from Continental Europe to rule over and Brick Presbyterian congregation. Like teach in them. His own writings have a majority of the churches in New York, the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian been termed the beginnings of English prose. To him has been ascribed the honor of being the founder of Oxford University. This is, however, legendary, inasmuch as Oxford did not lay within his West Saxon dominions. Church has been "on vacation' during the summer. A few weeks ago those of the congregation who remained in town prevailed upon the Rev. G. Camp-bell Morgan, who is following up the late Mr. Moody's work at East North-THE VERDICT OF CONTEMPORfield, Mass., to run down to New York and preach every Sunday until the One way to estimate a man's worth is to ascertain the verdict of his con-temporaries. The first two Sundays on which the London evangelist occupied the pupit the church was crowded in spite of New York midsummer. This was quite surestimable qualities. The newness, if that was the reason, has worn off. If there was any curiosity to hear Mr. Morgan, it has been satisfied.

Sunday, Aug. 18, was about as un-propitious as any that New York has had this season. The skies hung low had this season. The skies hung low and drizzled lazily from daybreak until midnight. The percentage of humidity was greater than that of the temperature. And all this had been preceded by three days of heat. Sunday found the city limp. There were several good, worldly reasons why peo ple who remained in town should make the day one of rest. Rev. G. Campbell Morgan was up for another selmon, however, and I went over to see how the sticky, nasty, dreary day would oprate on the crowds of previous Sun-

Every pew on the main floor of the big auditorium was filled. The great galleries which encircle the interior, save that portion occupied as the or gan loft, were packed. Nearly two thousand people were present. fanned with fans, hymn books, straw hats, or anything that would create a wind. The ensemble was a study. I saw many men there whom I met in Wall street, Broad street, and in Lower Broadway during the week. There were many strangers, also. One can tell them at this time of the year. Here and there in the back pews were Salvation Army people, men and women. There were several Japanese "citizens." There were all ages, and several were there whose names are un der the titles of novels.

At five minutes past eleven o'clock, a tall, angular man of swarthy complexion, mactlent jaws, high cheek bones and thick black hair, came through the door which used to open for the ponderous form of that intellectual giant, Dr. Hall. This was the Rev. G. Camp. bell Morgan. Most of the fans and hats shut town. The London evangelist is, perhaps, not as tall as he looks. Angularities give the impression of height. But he seems as whom he resembles in some He has Lincoln's nose, and features. to quote Richard Watson Gilder on Those cheeks that hold Like some harsh landscape all the sum-mer's gold.

There is nothing in his maner, speech gesture, not a single word which he utters, that would lead you to think that he ever saw London. In argument his voice runs along the nasal line. He clinches it on the back palatial; sometimes this comes dang rously near the guttural of the barnst) ming tragedian. It is the only thing about him which nears the dramatic, for he is remote from anything stagey. He is the only man I ever saw in the pulpit who brings into his prayer any other attitude than that of humility This requires an explanation. He gesticulates frequently in his supplications as he does in his discourse. On this occasion he had his bands benin 1 him. crossed before him, cace on his hips, and once he struck out with his right hand. In this attitude of prager also has the rocking motion. He tiptoes, falls back on his heels, and, hav ing secured his equilibrium, he tiptoes again. There is no working up to the finish. The "Amen" comes quick cial long and deep breathing exercises are practiced. These, too, are care-fully adapted to each individual case and sharp His text is read in the most matterof-fact way. And then, if the church reader will pardon a description which the worldly reader will quickly under-stand, he is off. His text was the first two verses of the twelfth chapter of Hebrews. As soon as he had read them he put up the first and second fingers of his right hand. For the moment, I confess that it reminded me of the significance of two fingers on the stock renewed free by the Canada Motor Company. A variety of medicated in-

"There are two points in the text which I want you to bear in mind-the race and the goal," he said Then the gesture disappeared, and he warmed up to his argument. > But that was the only time in his discourse when the London evangelist came any way near veering from earnest manner. Not once did he indulge in flight. Not a single sentence did he which was not clear and simple. But his forcible directness frequently made a picture. An example:

"There," leaning over his desk and pointing to the baptismal font, he said, is the starting place. There," he said, pointing down the main aisle. "is the track. There," pointing up to the great window of colored glass in the east end of the sanctuary, "is the goal. Never mind what the people on either side of the course are saying. You are not making the race for them."

There was no peroration. He quit as began, at once, and I think the audience was a trifle startled when he said, almost in the same breath of the last words of his discourse:

Please sing hymn 1,015-"'God is the refuge of his saints.'"

Classed Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets With Other Remedies But Changed His Mind Since.

Mr. James Beatty, of Kilworthy. Ont., tells a typical story of how he first came to know Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets for what they're worth. He had been sick and ailing with Dyspesia for some time. He had tried different treatments and various medicines all to no purpose. His stomach had broken down, his food was no use to him, and his whole system of course got out of order.

He saw an advertisement in a Toronto paper one evening, in which the reasonableness of the treatment known as Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets appealed to his sense of conviction. Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets act on the only sound principle in the treatment of Dyspepsia-Rest to the Stomach.

If a man can't digest his food be-cause his stomach is tired out, how is he going to get better unless his stomach can be rested? But how can his stomach be rested and his food go cu being digested? Mr. Beatty found it formers to do their best. To attempt the eight clever Tillers which made

I asked the clerk did he keep them in stock, but they had run out of them. He told me that he would send for them, but I told him it was not necessary, as I thought it would be like other patent medicines. I found different. I went to Dr. Campbell's and got them there. They made another man of me. At Youngstown, Ohio, on Aug. 18, a great ladel of molten metal was over-turned at the steel plant, killing four men and dangerously burning at least a dozen more. Details of the accident were not telegraphed, but enough was reported to show that the fault lay in the mechanism of the ladle.

The Princess of Wales has written as follows: "There are so many good and pleasant people in the world to speak and write about that it is unnecessary to speak or write about the unpleasant ones." The Duchess of York has answered: "I think by far the most unpleasant person is the one who in-

The Duke of Connaught's answer is to this effect: "There are three kinds of unpleasant people in the worldthose who, whenever they meet you, look at you sadly and say: 'Ah, wretchedly ill you are looking, to be sure;' those who are always inviting themselves to dinner; those who never think about inviting you to dinner. Prince Adolphus of Teck, now the Duke of Teck, says: "Perhaps the most objectionable of all men is the one who will persist in wearing a frock coat with a little round hat; the next most offensive to me is the man who calls you 'old fellow' when he has only known you a few days." The Princess Christian writes: "The most objectionable woman in the world to me is the one who finds everyone in the world but herself objectionable, and who, while 'picking holes' in her friend,' persists in calling her that poor woman.' HON. DAVID MILLS

Expresses Himself in Regard to the Attempted Assassination of President McKinley.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Ottawa, Sept. 7. - Hon. David Mills, being interviewed by your correspondent in regard to the attempted assassination of McKinley, said: "The people of Canada will feel profound serrow at the attempted assassination of Mr. McKinley, and that sorrow will be increased if the attempt proves fatal. Mrs. McKinley is in an extremely delicate state of health, and the president has no doubt been very anxious on her behalf. It will not be surprising if the shock which she will receive from the attempted assassina tion of her husband should prove fatal.

"The people of Canada cannot do otherwise than sympathize with the neighboring republic at this third case of assassination in the line of their presidents. Mr. McKinley, I believe, has been a very conscientious and honest public man. He has endeavored to administer the government of the United States honestly, and on lines which he believed were best in the public interest. We have in this country every reason to believe that he has been actuated during the whole period of his presidency with feelings of friendship towards the British Empire, and has endeavored to promote a friendly understanding between two peoples, and Canadians cannot have other than most friendly feeling towards him. It would have, no doubt, been more gratifying to us if a broader view had been manifested in dealing with some of the unsettled problems between the republic and this country, but upon that subject at the present moment it is our duty to be silent, and to do no more than express our profound sorrow at the great act of wickedness of which the president is the victim.'

Governor-General Makes a Curious Excuse

For Not Having Included London in Royal Itinerary.

Matter Will Again Be Laid Before His Royal Highness, Who May Not Be Able to Come.

The letter that Major Maude referred to in his telegram of yesterday was received by the mayor this morning. It indicates that there is little chance of the duke coming to London, but as he says the matter has not been finally settled and a change may be made when the royal party arrives in Canada. The letter is as follows:

Dear Mr. Mayor: "His excellency has seen some statenents in the press which lead him to believe that the city of London is expecting a visit from their royal highlesses the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York.

"His royal highness has recently notified by telegram his inability to visit your city and though his excellency proposes to lay the matter again before his royal highness for his consideration in Canada, his excellency is of opinion that you should be notified at once that there is some doubt as to whether their royal highnesses will be able to proceed so far west as London during their visit to the various cities of Western Ontario. And believe me, my dear Mr. Mayor, yours very truly "(Signed) F. S. MAUDE."

Major Maude's intimation that the governor-general learned through the press that Lendon expected a visit is rather odd in view of the fact that the list on the cards sent out by the committee at Ottawa included London, and the specification that none but London addresses were to be delivered here.

Mayor Is After Million Dollar Beet Sugar Factory.

A Concern Organized by Influential Men in Toronto Wants Good Location.

London will not be behindhand in making a strong bid for the sugar factory that Toronto capitalists propose to erect. The chief requisites which are essential duct may be assured, good transportation facilities for hauling in beets and distributing the finished products. It is acknowledged that London possesses these, and Mayor Rumball, Ald. Parnell and others who have interested themselves in the subject do not propose to let this be overlooked.

The company, which has a capital of $1,000,000, and includes among its directors Hugh Blain, Robert Jaffray and W. J. Gage, of Toronto, and William Hendrie, of Hamilton, has been incorporated, to undertake the manufacture of beet sugar. The location of the factory has not yet been definitely fixed, and the directors will be guided in their determination by the local conditions, which must be favorable for the beet sugar industry.

London's fitness for its location has apparently been recognized by the gentlemen of the company. Some time ago'their representatives made proposals to the mayor and Ald. Parnell regarding the establishment of a factory here. The idea was to have a certain amount of the idea was to have a certain amount of the stock subscribed here. This morning they received a letter from the company's agents, which is as follows:

"We shall decide within a few days where we shall locate our factory for the manufacture of heet sugar. Can you say

If so, the matpany can be carried out? If so, the matter would have to be taken up very vigorously and closed within the next few days. ORDER APPEALS TO YOUNG MEN.

Some Facts About the Remarkable Growth of the A. O. U. W.

This year the Ancient Order of United Workmen is not only maintaining its proud position as one of the best fraternal societies in the world, but is reaping the results of occupying such a position by gaining largely in membership and correspondingly in wealth. Increased wealth and membership means to this order a greater capacity for fulfilling the aims of its founders, to do good to all classes of men, business men, professional men and artisans, and to improve the lot of those dependent upon them in case of death. There are several reasons for its description. to the success of the industry are suitable order appeals particularly to young sons for its remarkable success. The soil, that the farmers are prepared to men, and of the thousands who have grow beets so that a supply of raw pro- recently joined, a very large percentage are under 30 years of age. is undoubtedly due to the fact that the order is managed in a most economical manner. Its system of insurance is complete and cheap, and it has an enviable record for a clean-cut, progressive administration. Its funds are not used to pay high-salaried officials -its capable members are elected to honorary positions—nor are they expended upon booming the order. own members increase its membership at no cost to the society, and a per capita fund of $1 pays all current expenses. Thus the officers of the order are able to pay back to the insured nearly the whole of the income, retaining only enough to maintain a sufficient reserve fund. For instance, in Ontario, where the membership is now nearly 42,000 in good standing, some $70,000,000 of insurance is carried, and last year the order paid to the

DEATH OF VERY

OLD RESIDENT.

Alexander Macdonald Had Resided in City for 55 Years.

'Alexander Macdonald died at his home, 346 Colborne street, last even- reported as being present on opening ing after an illness extending over day. some seven years. He was a resident of this city for 55 years. The deceased was born in Perthshire, Scotland, and would have been 86 years of age in December next. On arriving in America he lived for one year at Chippewa, Ont. Thence he moved to Huron county, and finally to London. For several years he was a fireman on the lake steamers. He took up his residence in London in 1846. In 1860 he was married in this city by the late Rev. Dr. John Scott. His wife, two sons and two daughters are left to mourn his loss. One son, Archibaid, lives in Dakota, while James lives at home, being an employe of the G. T. R. One daughter, Mary, lives in Detroit and Flora in New York. The total assessment of No. 2 ward, including West London. Shows a gain this year of $241,550, of which $233,434 is in the city ward and $8,116 in West London. The total population is three less. The value of real estate shows a gain of $271,473; personal property shows a gain of $88,100; but incomes are $118,023 less. This is expected by the fact that assessments that have hitherto been made under the heading of income have been transferred to personal property. was married in this city by the late body leaving here on the morning train personal property.

SATURDAY AT THE WESTERN. Elastic

Preparations for Citizens Day Are Going on Apace.

All Departments of the Big Fair More Complete This Year Than Ever Before.

Out at Queen's Park the preparations for the great Western Fair go on apace. The main building is almost filled, and is beginning to assume the aspect which it will present to the thousands of visitors next week. All day long heavy drays and lighter delivery wagons have driven through the King street gate, bearing the musical instruments, manufactured abhorrent crime was committed for Highest and Lowest Temperatures et food, articles of merchandise and private exhibits, which go to fill the main building and the structure devoted to special departments. The secretary's office is a busy place, a constant stream of exhibitors, concessionaires and others having business there passing through it. Monday the fair will open in earnest, and the directors expect it will be the biggest citizens' day on rec-ord and one of the best of the week. With school children and the workers free to attend, the directors' expecta-tions should not be disappointed. Every department will be in full swing and the entire programme will be presented. Allie Holman, the genial director of the ring attractions, announces that the performers engaged are arriving and making preparations for carrying out their various parts on the programme. In addition to the large bill already booked, which will eclipse those of any former year, the management this morning engaged Monsulla and Russell for a daring aerial act, called "A Slide for Life."

The agricultural, herticultural and dairy buildings are practically com-plete. The horticultural showing is the finest ever shown, and the space allotted is all too inadequate. With the incoming on Tuesday of the fruits and London Opera House, in "My Uncle cut flowers, the exhibits will be crowded to a disadvantageous extent. In the butter, cheese, and dairy classes the exhibits are an improvement in both quantity and quality over former years. In grains both wheat and oats make service at St. James' Church, South pigger showing, and are of better quality than last year, while other grains are up to the average. Only in roots and vegetables is there a falling off. Very little stock is in yet, but to-night and tomorrow the cattle will arrive, and by Monday space will be at a premium. The same conditions prevail in speaking of the equine exhibit. Two small rings for judging cattle are being erected.

Many changes will be noticed by visitors, and all of them are improve-ments. Handsome flower beds have been placed near the Dundas street entrance. The massive iron gates have been painted black, with silver trimmings, and across the top of them a row of lights satisfied that the kidney had not been across the top of them a row of lights has been strung. All the refreshment stands and dining halls are ready for business.

Sergt. Crawford is in charge of the police arrangements. He will have under him about twenty special constables, of whom fifteen will be detailed to patrol the fences around the grounds. In addition, three members of the local force will be on duty in the horse ring in front of the grand stand, while the local detectives will be in the crowd on the outlook for wrongdoers Every citizens who takes a pride in the fair and realizes its manifold advantages to the city should turn out next week and assist in its success.

The royal visit to Canada is to be celebrated on a scale of rare magnificence. That which will probably be the most popular and the most lasting part of all the celebrations will be the issue of the Royal Welcome Number of the Montreal Star, which we hear is going to be something very fine as a souvenir to send to friends and to preserve at home as a memento. The Royal Welcome Number of the Montreal Star, although only mooted a day or two ago, has already created an enormous demand. The edition will be eagerly looked for.

PRESIDENT McKINLEY

Maintains a Good Measure of His Strength.

TOPIC OF TALK IN OLD LONDON. London, Sept. 7.—The attempt upon the life of President McKinley is the sole topic of conversation in London today. In the street the people are say-"It is awful," which reference is ing, quite sufficient to identify the subject that is uppermost in the minds of all. Bulletins are eagerly awaited, and great relief is expressed at the satisfactory progress so far maintained. "England prays for McKinley," printed in great black type across the front page of the Evening Star, and all the journals express the hope of the English people that the presi-dent will recover. The Sun says: "The mere wantonness." Westminster Gazette's leading editorial is entitled "An Insensate

Crime. The St. James' Gazette says: "The problem of dealing with such monsters is among the most difficult society has to face today. We are almost inclined to regret the escape of the would-be assassin from lynching."

VICE-PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT. Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 7 .- Vice-President Roosevelt left here at 10:02 a.m. in the coach Grand Isle. His car was guarded by city detectives, and was locked. Cards of intimate friends were refused. Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 7.-Vice-President Roosevelt passed through Rochester at 11:35 this morning on his way from Burlington, Vt., to the bedside of President McKinley. The vice-president was in a private coach, the "Grand Isle," which, with the engine, formed the train. A stop here was made only long enough to oil the engine. The curtains of the coach were tighty drawn, and there was no sign of life therein, except that at either end of the coach stood a colored porter, who refused admittance to all. A SUCCESSFUL OPERATION.

Milburn Residence, Buffalo, Sept. 7. Two of the physicians and trained nurses are with the president constantly. All others were excluded from the sick chamber this morning, as it was found the distinguished patient could not be restrained from speaking to those who entered the room. Quiet and absolute freedom from the least excitement are considered extremely essential. Even Mrs. McKinley has not seen him today. She was in the sick room last night after the president had recovered from the effects of the operation. She displayed wonderful pluck and nerve and is bearing up bravely. It is probable that she will see the president later in the day.

The operation upon the president last night lasted almost an hour. Ether was administered. A five-inch incision was made where the ball entered the abdomen, and its course was followed until the physicians became touched or the intestines perforated, and that it had lodged probably in the do no harm for the present. The intestines were lifted out through the incision and carefully examined, and the utmost confidence exists that there was no injury. The physicians were exceedingly gratified with the result and pronounced the operation a com-

THE CABINET AT BUFFALO. Buffalo, Sept. 7.-All the members of the cabinet are either here or on their way hither except Secretary of State Hay. Secretary Gage, who received the news yesterday afternoon while en route to Colorado, arrived this morning. Senator Hitchcock, who was at Keene, N. H., hired a special train, which took him to Albany. There he caught the limited over the New York Central. Postmaster-General Smith and Secretary Root also arrived this morning. The latter came direct from his home at Southampton, L. I., acompanied by his physician. Secretary Wilson was here with the president. Secretary Long telegraphed that he was on the way. The members of the cab-inet, who had arrived, called at the Milburn residence this morning. Each expressed relief when informed that the ball had not touched a vital spot and could not necessarily prove fatal. MESSAGE FROM KING EDWARD.

Today's Bulletin.

Buffalo, Sept. 7.-11:20 a.m.-The rapidity of the president's pulse does not anduly alarm the physicians. Dr. Rixey says that the president has always had somewhat erratic pulse, and its sudden rise this morning was not unexpected. The president is conscious and is calm and collected, although some-what drowsy from the effects of the ether administered to him yesterday. Buffalo, Sept. 7-11:30 a.m.-The fear of the president's physicians is that aseptic poisoning will set in, and it is for symptoms of blood-poisoning that they are now watching. The bullet lodged in the muscles of the back, and the physicians decide that for the present is of secondary importance. The bullet took a downward course, but neither the intestines nor the kidneys were injured. Of this the physicians are confident. If inflammation should appear in the neighborhood of the place where the bullet is believed to have lodged, the Roentgen ray will be used to locate the bullet, and the doctors do not think there would be difficulty in extracting it. Chicago, Sept. 7.—When given a description of the president's wounds by the Associated Press today, Dr. John

B. Murphy, whose reputation as a surgeon is world-wide, said: "The present location of the bullet which entered the president's abdomen is of minor importance. The danger lies in the wounds in the posterior walls of the stomach."
were seated four ladies from Aylmer,
Buffalo, Sept. 7-1:17 p.m.—The following bulletin was issued by the president's physicians at 12 o'clock (noon): There is no decided change in the president's condition since last bulletin. Pulse, 136; temperature, 102; respiration, 28. Buffalo, Sept. 7.-The revolver with which President McKinley was shot was turned over to Supt. of Police Bull today by Captain Wisser, to whom it had been turned over by the soldier who recovered it.

Five valuable rings were stolen yesterday afternoon from a Queen's avenue boarding house, and a man boarding at the house has disappeared and is suspected of the theft. He gave his name as Leonard Crewe, and said he traveled for a hardware house in Washington, D. C. He is described as 30 years of age, 5 feet 7 inches in height, with dark hair and eyes, rather good-looking, and having a small hole in the flesh just below the left jawbone. The rings were: One 34 carat diamond ring; one band ring, with 7 pearls; one small gold ring, with 2 amethysts, and 2 small rings, with bangles.

Rat Portage, Sept. 7 .- Towns, the English oarsman, today defeated Jake Gaudaur by five lengths and won the championship of the world. The day broke with the best weather since Wednesday. Referee Galt went over the course at 11:15 a.m., while all the steamboats in the vicinity and the bells in the town shricked and pealed a welcome. The race was called for 11:45 a.m. At 11:30 Gaudaur left the boathouse

This Sensation of a Sciatica Victim Released by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Boiestown, N. B., Sept. 2.—(Special) -The case of William A. Brown, of this place, cured of that terrible disease, Sciatica, by Dodd's Kidney Pills, has aroused keen interest all through New Brunswick. Mr. Brown is in perfect health and no trace of his old lameness remains. His statement reads as follows:

"I had Sciatica so bad in my back and hip that at times I could not walk without suffering awful agony. Pains would shoot through my back with a sensation similar to running a knife through it.

"I began taking Dodd's Kidney Pills and before I had used up the first box I was completely cured. "I think Dodd's Kidney Pills are a wonderful remedy.

"I declare I think if I met Aunt Johanna now I would give her an animated and graphic acount of the burglary, quite in the language of dear, kind, motherly Mrs. Hobbs. I would call her Mrs. 'Obbs': I would speak of the burglar as the most dreadfullest-looking person I had ever 'set eyes on'; I would speak of my wet stockings the night I ran over the snow in my house-slippers by assuring her they was that soaked you could have 'wringed them out'; and I would tell her also that Mrs. Jolly, Mr. Hobbs' daughter, who keeps the Blackbird at Guildford, has invited me to spend a week at that small, old-fashioned inn.

"Oh! Aunt Johanna, I really wish I could talk to you this morning; but there you are at Cannes, sunny Cannes, in the sweet, soft South, where the blue-eyed spring flowers come and take the places of the crimson blossoms of the autumn, with no winter between them, no bare woods and frozen ponds, and bitter piping winds, and snow-covered fields."

It was a very bright and sunny Christmas Day, however, this of which we write. It was piercingly cold, and every twig was white with frost; the snow covered the country, and the roads were hard, but the sun shone, and the frost sparkled, and the Christmas bells rang loud and clear; people with smiling faces, and wearing their Sunday gear, went along gaily towards theh quaint little Norman edifice, which we will call St. Martha's, and which stood at the extreme end of the village street.

As Elsle passed into the church yard she was conscious of being the center of attention. There were several people exchanging Christmas greetings, and as Elsle came along she heard these words distinctly whispered:

"That's the young lady that took the ruffian by the collar and dragged him all the way to the police office at 12 o'clock on Wednesday night. She don't look to have the strength."

distinctly whispered:

"That's the young lady that took the rufflan by the collar and dragged him all the way to the police office at 12 o'clock on Wednesday night. She don't look to have the strength."

"She's Irish."

Perhaps the fact of her nationality accounted for Elsie's supposed feat of strength, for the young woman, who received the information from another young woman, said "Oh, indeed!" in a perfectly satisfied tone when she heard the tale.

Eisie blushed and smiled and felt inclinto deny the possession of the amazonian strength imputed to her; but instead sne passed into the prettily-decorated church and when the service began she forgot this world and its troubles for a space.

When the rector, a thin, sallow gentleman, who had got into the habit of preaching to his congregation exactly as if it were composed of small children under ten—when the rector began his sermon, and told his hearers little stories about a sailor and an undutiful son who ran away, and a good old woman who kept a sweet shop and was never known to tell a lie. Elsie looked about and thought of things outside St. Martha's and people more actually intelligent than the Rev. Edwin Evans.

One glance she gave, and for the first time, to the Raby pew. He was not in it. No; he—that is, Owen Hammond—was not at church for all the shining of the sun and the ringing of the bells on that sad, glad Christmas Day. Not at church? No, certainly not at church. Ah, me! how empty the church felt—how empty the whole world felt of anything worth living for! Happy girls in the surrounding pews, happy girls with loving fathers and fond mothers, gay brothers, affectionate sisters, and joyful homes of their own!

"It would not be a bad thing to die," thought Elsie, "if indeed one could go to the thought Elsie, "if indeed one could go to the thought Elsie, "if indeed one could go to their own!

"It would not be a bad thing to die," thought Elsie, "If indeed one could go to heaven. And yet, first of all, I should have liked to taste some of the sweets of this mortal life. I am shut out in the cold."

Tears stole all unknown to herself into those speaking eyes of hers—stole, gathered, dropped heavily upon the book she held in her hand. The Rev. Edwin Evans saw her weep, and he thought that the pathetic tale he was telling respecting the old lady who kept the sweet shop and never told a lie caused what a poet perhaps might have called "those pearly tears."

tears."

In reality Elsle was not attending to the sermon as perhaps she should have done. She was herself so truthful that she scarcely needed to be reminded by the Rev. Mr. Evans of the beauty of truth. and the ugliness of falsehood. While she seemed to listen to the somewhat cut-and-dried remarks she was contemplating the coral berries of the holly branches, the whiteness of the lovely Christmas, the whiteness of the lovely Christmas roses that decorated the pulpit front and the altar railings. She was thinking of holly branches and the mistletoe that in all probability adorned the large cheerful rooms in the hospitable Yorkshire mansion to which she had been invited to spend the remainder of them? Not, surely, at the police depot, in the snug home of the excelent Hobbs family, not at the Blackbird Inn at Guildford; but either of of the excelent Hobbs family, not at the Blackbird Inn at Guildford; but either of these homes of kindly folk, belonging to the class which Miss Johanna Courtely would have called "vulgar people," would be safe from rufflan burglars.

Elsie felt that if she were compelled to return to Coome Hill House, with nobody to protect her save Jetty, she should become thoroughly ill and unnerved.

At last the Rev. Mr. Evans brought his Christmas Day sermon to a close. Them, soon after the organist played a lively Christmas Day sermon to a close. Then, soon after the organist played a lively voluntary, and the happy folks who had homes of their own streamed out of the church smiling, cheerful, exultant, Elsie had no home worthy of being called such in all this wide, wide world. She went out with lowered head and subdued air. She did not know how much the cheeres out with lowered nead and subdued all. She did not know how much the absence of that good-looking but reckless heir to mortgaged acres—Mr. Owen Hammond—had to do with her feeling of utter deso-

There were several fine carriages of ounty folks waiting in the village street, and Elsie was struck by one, a large, and eliste was struck by one, a large, handsome carriage, upholstered in claret cloth. The servants were in claret and gold, with powdered wigs. The horses were dark bays, splendidly caparisoned. A coronet decorated the panels of this carriage, which was thrown open, cold as the day was. A woman's splendid head half reclined amid the cushions. half reclined amid the cushions. Elsie had never seen that fine face so close to her before, and now it was positively smiling at her with the kindlest sympathy in the large, brilliant gray eyes. Was she mistaken? No; the lady raised herself on her elbow and signed to Elsie to approach, which she did, blushing furiously, for she knew that the claret-colored carriage, the bay horses, the footmen in powder and gold lace, the tiny, white toy terrier asleep on the seat, claret-colored carriage, the bay horses, the footmen in powder and gold lace, the tiny, white toy terrier asleep on the seat, composed the equipage of the Right Hen, the Earl of Chase, and that the lady with the splendid head who had signed to her to approach was none other than the Countess of Chase.

"Miss Carew, is it not" asked the countess, with a winning smile.

"Yes, your ladyship." returned Elsle, bowing her graceful head modestly.

"You will think that I am an odd woman," said the countess, "to interrupt a young lady to whom I have never been properly introduced as she walks out of church, "but you really must forgive me. I heard late last night about the burglar trying to get in and your shutting him in and escaping at twelve o'clock on a snowy night. What a heroine you must be! And then I heard that your friends had gone abroad, and had positively left you to spend thhe whole of the holiday alone in that ghostly old place Coome Hilf House! Is that true?"

"Quite true, Lady Chase."

"Then, may I ask, are you staying there now?"

"No, Lady Chase: Miss Phillipson is way at Blackheath pursue."

there now?"

"No, Lady Chase; Miss Phillipson is away at Blackheath nursing a sick uncle, and she cannot return. I could not return to Coome Hill House!"

"Then is the tale I have heard correct? Pardon me for seeming inquisitive, but they say you are positively living at the—"

You May Well Be Alarmed At Loss of Flesh and Weight

An Indication of Wasting Disease, of Exhausting Nerve Force and Declining Strength and Vitality.

Note Your Weight, and Test the Flesh-Forming, Tissue Building Effects of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food-The Results Will Surprise You.

Can you imagine a more severe test of any preparation than that of adding firm flesh and increasing the weight of the body? It is possible, of course, to add fat by the use of fish oils, but the tissues created by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food are firm and natural. The blood is thoroughly enriched and the nerve force replenished. Pallor and weakness give place to a healthy complexion and strength of mind and body. Languor and discouragement are driven out to make way for vigor, new hope and confidence.

It might be worth your while to make a test of this great food cure as a builder of flesh and muscle. Note your weight when beginning the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and watch the gradual increase week by week. At first the increase may be slight, owing to the wasting process, which must be stopped. Then, naturally and certainly the whole system is built up and perfect health and vitality restored to every part of the body. Especially during the hot, withering weather of summer is this preparation found to be of inestimable value in keeping up vitality and preventing heart failure and nervous collapse.

Waterside, N. B., Sept. 6.-W. C. Anderson, of this town, is a remarkable he has been trying to find a cure for his trouble, and for years he has been tasting the bitterness of disappointment. But he tried again, and now at last he has succeeded.

His trouble was Kidney trouble, by no means uncommon in this province. Indeed, some physicians go so far as to say it is the most prevalent malady in Canada. At any rate, it was the affliction of Mr. Anderson.

Five different doctors have attended Mr. Anderson in his time. None of them touched the root of his suffering. The amount of medicine Mrfl Anderson has swallowed would doubtless surprise that gentleman himself could he one year ago, Mr. Anderson told his friends he had found a sure cure at last. The Story About a Glut of Peaches in Essex Is Without Foundation.

Toronto, Sept. 6.—A reporter today met Mr. A. McNeil, of Walkerville, Essex county, at the fair and asked that gentleman whether the dis-patches from Windsor last night in reference to the glut of peaches Essex was true. Mr. McNeil said, in substance: "I do not see how more errors could be crowded into a simple paragraph. We have only one-quarter the usual quantity of peaches or grapes from the simple fact that two years ago three-fourths of all the trees and vines were killed by frost, and there has not been time to replace them with bearing stock. The local demand thus far has absorbed all the fruit, but now there will be some shipments. I am not personally interested in the matter, as all my trees were killed at the time mentioned, but I know the conditions perfect-

Windsor, Ont., Sept. 6.-The report circulated yesterday that the peach crop of Essex county is so heavy that no market can be found for more than a small part of it, and that prices are only a guarter of those of last year, is said to be entirely wrong. The crop, demand and prices are up to the average. Prices at Leamington and Kingsville range from $1 50 to $2 50 per bushel. The only time prices have ever reached four or five dollars was when the Niagara crop was a complete failure, a few years ago.

THE SOLE OF COMFORT

VOUR foot sole is curved and soft.

Your shoe sole is flat and hard.

Walking with such a foot sole on such a shoe sole, is like sleeping on a plank, instead of on a mattress.

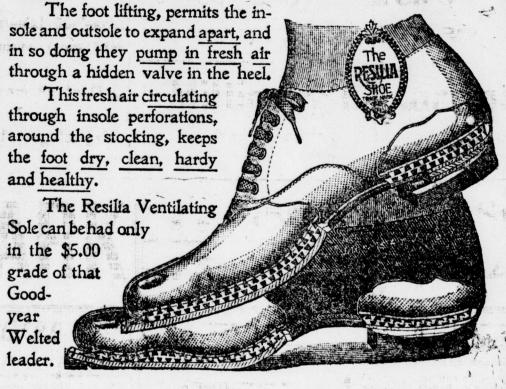

Cut open an old shoe at its most comfortable stage, and you will find its insole shaped by wear, to ball and heel, great toe, and

You will also find it burnt up and eaten, through accumulated sweat, which must have gnawed the foot, when it so ate the leather.

The Resilia Sole, is placed between insole and outsole, instead of the usual scrap leather filling.

It is an elastic spring centresole, which collapses and shapes up round foot-curves like an old shoe, the first moment it is borne upon.

The foot sinking into the sole, at the very time the ball of the foot spreads, makes the shoe a size larger inside, when the foot needs most room.

KILLED 80 NATIVES

German Sailors Avenge a Massacre in the Matthaias Islands.

Victoria, B. C., Sept. 7 .- Information regarding the operations of the war-ship Cormorant, which was recently dispatched to the Matthias Islands to punish the natives for the massacre of Herr Mencker and three or four others forming a party of German scientists, is received from Brisbane through the arrival of the steamer Miowera.

The massacre of the little party oc curred some six or seven months, or even longer, ago, particulars of the cruel manner in which they were killed being published soon after. The Cormorant, when sent to investigate the affair, met with strong op position. Her crew were compelled to fight a pitched battle, and the result was most disastrous, the natives sustaining a loss of 80 killed and 15 cap-tured. After they had been thoroughly subdued the captured were taken to Herbertshe, German New Guinea.

A DELIGHTFUL MUSICAL TREAT.

last night, especially those who were lovers of vocal music, enjoyed a treat market they are immediately copied by of unusual character. Among the soloists were Madame Marie Hooton, who possesses a rich contralto voice. convince purchasers that it is the best. After each of her appearances she was heartily encored. Perhaps her most admired selection was "The Oak and the Ash," dating back to the year 1620, and it may be here remarked that the idea of the whole programme was the reproduction of the old glee and ballad music of England. Mr. Dan Price excited much enthusiasm by his spirited rendering of Sir Walter Scott's "March! March! Etrick and Teviot-dale." Mr. Edward Branscombe, with much artistic feeling and dramatic ex- | selling so fast. pression, gave an old song, "The Low-land Sea." A marked feature of the solo singing was the beautiful song by Master Harold Davis, "The Lark Now Leaves." There must be something in the climate and voice-culture of England that produces the quality of tone in these wonderful boy-soprano voices. One cannot imagine the sing ing of an angel being more beautiful, But the great specialty of the concert was the unaccompanied part singing in glee and madrigal. No such sington, and others. Among the subjects ing, with its exquisite shadings and to be considered will be child-saving, modulations, has previously been heard in London, and we trust the result may be the revival in Canada of this class of music. Very delightful was ity organization, etc. A large the fine tenor solo, "The Clown's attendance of those engaged Song," by Mr. William Fell; words in charitable work is hoped for, from Shakespeare, the musical setting by J. L. Hatton. The concealed chorus gave an added effect. This afternoon, at 3 o'clock, the Westminster Abbey Choir will give a sacred recital in St. Paul's Cathedral, which will doubtless be an inspiration and guidepost to all lovers of real music.
