DEATH WAS HIS BRIDE.

Two Hours After His Wedding Seymour

Cotton Passed Away. Berlin, Ont., Oct. 22.-Seymour Cotton, a young Englishman, 25 years of age, died at Sheffield, Waterloo county, Monday, two hours after he had been married to Miss Lizzie Stud-iman, his sweetheart. Until two days before his marriage he had been in the best of health. He had been to Rockton Fair with his fiancee, and both were looking forward to the wedding. Cotton had made his home for some years with Mrs. Studiman, the mother of the bride. Last Friday he complained of feeling ill, and a physician was summoned, who told him that he was suffering from appendicitis. On Saturday he was worse, and Miss Studiman decided that if he was to die she would like him to pass into the great beyond as her husband. A minister—Rev. Mr. Culp—was sent for, and on Saturday evening at 6 o'clock the dying man and the weeping girl vowed to love each other until death parted them, In two hours the final parting

Wheat and Pork Prices Cause Consider. able Comment Among Farmers. There was a fairly good market this morning of all commodities excepting grain. The rise in the price of wheat all over the world in the past few days has had a tendency to prompt farm?

ers to hold back their grain and await a further advance. This practice often follows an advance in prices, but as there was a drop on Chicago Exchange yesterday, the local buyers expect to see a great influx of both wheat and oats. Farmers today were anxiously inquiring of buyers the latcil appointing Sir Richard Cartwright, est quotations. The price offered this the market either way. BIG MONEY BANKED BY COOPER. Birmingham, Mich., Oct. 22.-Tom Cooper, the bicycle rider, took a holiay in Birmingham last week. This play a pool match as a testimonial to mother on a three months' trip to billiards in the afternoon. is learned that there was a sadness in connection with the visit, the sister having died a few days before Mrs. Cooper arrived. Tom has banked about $12,000, and claims that he will demand big money next season from the persons in whose interests rides. Cooper gets $15 per week for using a certain kind of chain on his racing wheel; $10 per week for using a saddle; $1,200 per annum for the tire and $2,400 per annum for riding the remainder of the wheel. NEW JERSEY CYCLE LAWS. The State laws of New Jersey governing wheelmen are such that no ridpossibly find fauit with them. In addition to good roads and guide boards, there are uniform laws governing wheelmen: Cities, townships chase handicap, Mr. W. C. Hayes' and boroughs have the power to pass ordinances regulating the use of bicycles on public highways and other ghfares. Wheelmen are compelled to carry lamps, the light of which may be seen 100 yards distant. The local authorities may upon any special occasion grant permits to any body to ride at any specified time upon any portion of any street at any rate of speed, etc., thus permitting road races being held without interference. The law provides a fine of $5 for each offense of riding on the sidewalks, and prohibits local authorities from making any ordinances inconsistent with the State law. Another good is that which makes it unlawful for anyone to throw broken glass, bottles, metal, loose stones or earthen-ware on public highways, that would serve to injure cyclists, pedestrians, vehicles of any kind, or animals. Five llars' fine is the penalty stipulated. It is also unlawful to use stones of larger size than one inch and a half for paving highways, under a penalty of $20 fine.

There was a break in the price of wheat in the Chicago and New York markets yesterday. The Liverpool market was weak and lower. The decline in the west was slow, and prices seemed to go down under pressure as if by manipulation. December wheat closed 3 1-8c lower at 75 1-4c. Winnipeg, Oct. 22.-Wheat sold yesterday at provincial points all the way from 66 to 70 cents. It was rumored at the Exchange that a well-known Portage grain man had made $15,000

The prices given are what are paid the evening the young people enjoyed by regular grain dealers. When the big milling companies get "scrapping" at any particular point there telling what may be paid. At several points 70 cents was paid, and at one, or two, in a scrimmage between rivals there was instances of as high as 80 cents being given. As a matter of fact, all prices prevailing in Manitoba are above the export value.

port of the speaker's observations of various local insects. Mr. Dearness said that on every occasion that had offered the opportunity he had put in a plea for such modification of our school curriculum of studies as would provide for education of the observing faculties of our school children. Training to observe facts and to relate causes and effects not only affords good mental discipline, but it is of the highest practical value. Properly conducted, nature's study is therefore very valuable. For the purposes of such study local geography and the phenomena of weather, and plant and insect life furnish the very best material. The flower and the insect appeal powerfully to the child's problems that the greatest observers and thinkers have not answered yet there are others that even the little kindergarteners find a pleasure in studying. Mr. Dearness said that in the United States an experimental station had been established in nearly every State in the Union with one or more trained workers, and $15,000 was expended annually at each station. Illustrative of the work to be done in the schools, Mr. Dearness exhibited a SYMPTOMS-Moisture; intense itch- case showing the life history of the ing and stinging, mostly at night; army worm, which had been prepared worse by scratching. He spoke against the use of technical names, and then briefly outlined the course of study advisable for the school use. Messrs. Dr. Bethune, Rev. Mr. Fyles, J. S. Pearce, John Law, J. H. Bowman and Inspector Dearness spoke in favor of the scheme. A paper on "The Importance of Agricultural Study to the Fruit-Growing Community," by Rev. Fyles followed, and was discussed by Messrs. JOHN CAMERON, President and London, Thurssday, Oct. 22, 1896.

Death of Dr. Bergin, M.P. Dr. Bergin, Conservative M. P. for Cornwall and Stormont, died this morning at his home in the town of Cornwall from injuries received through falling downstairs four weeks

The deceased made a brave fight for life, but the best medical skill could not save him. Dr. Bergin was born in Toronto on Sept. 7, 1826, so that he was in his 71st year. He graduated in medicine at McGill College, and practiced at Cornwall. During the Trent affair he raised a company. In 1869 be was promoted to be lieutenant-colonel of the Stormont and Glengarry battalion, and in 1885 he was appointed surgeon-general to the forces employed to put down the Northwest re-

Dr. Bergin had a long parliamentary career. He was first returned for Cornwall by acclamation in 1871, and since that time he has been a prominent figure in the House of Commons. By his death, a bye-election will have to take place. There is every reason to believe that a Liberal will be elected to fill the vacancy. Dr. Bergin for years held the constituency almost entirely on his personal popularity. He was a genial, kindly-souled man, who had not an enemy on either side of the chamber.

Another sign of the times is the re-Sarnia, which have been shut down from the new field at Bothwell

Manitoba's Crops

Premier Greenway, of Manitoba, has issued a statement over his own signature, showing that the total wheat yield for Manitoba this year is 14,371,-806 bushels, an average of 14.5 per acre. This report is based on the latest replies from correspondents, as yield is much smaller than that of last year, but the price for the crop of 1896 is so much higher that the farmers will be at comparatively little, if eids the farmer, and correspondingly keep the Banner up to a high point Ontario have ever heard of it. It is a most cheering prospect for the furapids and waterfalls, down which the water dashes in its rush towards developed resources. the numerous lakes along its course. Very often these lakes are dotted with islands, and frequently the river flows between rocky bluffs from 80 to 100 feet high. The scenery is ever fresh in variety, and there are constant surprises for the tourist. In this river, as well as in all our northwestern rivers, trout are plentiful. The new for long does it run in any one direction. Here is a characteristic description of the stream below Calm Lake: "At 10:15 another portage was reached, the river contracting to thirty yards, falling six feet abruptly and rushing off into a very swift and noisy rapid. The portage is about 300 yards long, and we completed it at would be wise, if possible to bring | 10:30. For the next mile the river is like a canal, running due west, with a high steep bank of rock on the right, cut at one point by a deep notch that looks like a closed-up channel. Below it is a small lake, out of which the river flows in a northwesterly course in swirls and eddies, forming a bay upon the east side and turning again towards the west. At the bay a deep depression extends towards the northeast, which has the appearance of an old river bed. The general urse of the river from Calm Lake this point is northwest; and then for several miles it runs southwest." Canoeing in such a stream must supply excitement to even the most daring paddler. Mr. Blue says he cannot conceive of a finer canoe route, a result of threshing operations. The so varied is the scenery and natural beauties along this fine stream. Here is a story about a remarkable echo, heard at Shoal Lake:

"The wooded slope of the lake, curvany, disadvantage. About Newspapers. From the Printer's Register. Exphemeral circulations, as well as experimental newspapers, should be guarded against. We have known of newspapers started by ambitious men, which seemed to go with a rush, and which, unable to get fair-paying advertising, collapsed and died in the height of their apparent prosperity. The cause was not far to seek. The guides in empty canoes, each one advertisements were taken at rates to standing upright, and uttering wild which no reputable newspaper could way. We have known of newspapers which supplied to advertisers sworn statements of their "circulation" on given days and given weeks. But it was not a genuine circulation. It was not a circulation paid for by persons who wanted the paper and paid for it. It was obtained by a wholesale distribution of papers by news-boys, continued only for the time when the alleged record was in progress, and then dropped to a few hundreds. The papers were dumped on the doorsteps of residences, in many cases in twos, and threes, and halfdozens, and in some instances whole bundles were thrown over backyard fences by boys too dazy to distribute them. Thousands or circulations secured in this way are of positively secured in this way are of positively no value to the advertiser, who ought to know that a paper for which a man will not pay the smallest coin of the realm is in little demand or favor. THE WEAK THE DISEASED Made Strong and Healthy Through

Every drop of the Sarsaparillian Resolvent communicates through the blood, sweat, urine and other fluids and juices of the system the vigor of life; for it repairs the wastes of the body with new and sound material. Scrofuls, consumption, syphilis, uncured and badly treated venereal in its many forms (send ten cents for illustrated book, "Radway on Venereal"), glandular diseases, ulcers in the throat, mouth, tumors, nodes in the glands and other parts of the system, sore eyes, strumous discharges from the ears, and the worst forms of skin diseases, eruptions, feversores, scald head, ringworm, sait rheum, erysipelas, acne, black spo's in the flesh, tumors, cancerous growths, female complaints, and all weakening and painful discharges, night sweats, nocturnal losses, and all wastes of the life principle are within the curative range of this Wonder of Modern Chemistry, and a few days' use will prove to any person using it for either of these forms of diseases its potent power to cure them. If the patient, daily hecoming reduced by the wastes and decompositions that are continually progressing, succeeds in arresting these wastes and repairs the same with new material made from healthy blood, and this the Farsaparillian will and does secure, a cure is certain, for when once this remedy commences its work of purification and succeeds in diminishing the loss of once this remedy commences its work of purification and succeeds in diminishing the loss of wastes its repairs will be rapid, and every day the patient will feel himself growing better, and stronger, the food digesting better, appetite improving and flesh and weight increasing

SCROFULA FROM BIRTH Dr. Radway—Dear Sir,—It is with pleasure I take my pen in hand to inform you of the great cure effected by your medicine called Sarsaparillian Resolvent. I have a girl three years old last September, who has suffered with scrofula ever since she was two years old. In fact, the doctor told us she was born with it. We had our best local doctors with her, and it seemed like all hope was gone, for they told us if the disease settled on her lungs she could not be cured. This frightful disease seated or seized upon her lungs severely. I began to think that our little girl could not live long, our physician's medicines doing no good. In the meantime I received a copy of your medical publication, called "False and True," which you sent me. After seeing the accounts of so many cures effected by your treatments. I at once resorted to them, and by the time she used one bottle she was most well. The ulcers that were making their appearance on her body are entirely gone and her lungs almost healed, or, at least she has quit coughing. She has begun on the second bottle, and I believe by the time that she uses all of it she will be well. She had a very bad cough. I am yours with respect, SAMUKL S. BARKER.

"LIFE A EURDEN."

Dr. Radway—Dear Sir,—For a long time past I have been suffering in the most distressing manner from a long train of symptoms, which have baffled the skill of all medical men down here, and which I feared, if not arrested in their progress, would terminate in the total prostration of my strength. Loss of appetite and desire for stimulating and artificial means of sustenance at irregular times, want of healthy sleep and consequent depression on arising in the morning, rendered life quite a burden to me, until a friend induced me to try your medicine. So I got a bottle of Radway's Sarsaparillian and a box of Radway's Pills an 'took them according to directions. I soon fou d relief. I got three boxes and three bottles more, and I am in better health than ever before. I remain your humble servant, ever before. I remain your humble servant, ARTHUR D. WRIGHT. Unionville, Mich.

A BATH IN ELECTRICITY.

The Lates: Brilliant Idea to Make Pathing a Sybaritic Dream.

Of all the wonders of electricity the electric light bath, which is about to be introduced, has peculiar qualities of

In a marvelous room, which looks more like a page from the "Arabian Nights" than anything in ordinary life, the bather will recline on a couch of plate glass, while incandescent lamps will glow like weird, huminous insects whose radiance will be reflected from lustrous surfaces. For on every hand there will be mirrors of the finest quality, in which the electric light bather may see himself reflected from every possible position. But the occupant of this novel bath room will not be a modern Narcissus, for the mirrors are but to lend efficacy to the bath by reflecting the lights.

Marvelous as it may seem, the electric light bath is not at all visionary, for its inventor, John Harvey Kellogg, a knife or pair of scissors, which she of Battle Creek Mich has not only has concealed in the back part of her of Battle Creek, Mich., has not only dress, and with which she releases patented his idea and constructed a the right hand with the left by cutprivate bath house, but is now making arrangements to place the new knot on her wrist and the iron ring.

The interior arrangement of the new electric light bath is a cabinet, with sides, ceiling, and floor constructed she will be powerless entirely of mirrors. Penetrating these reflecting linings at every foot of their surface are incandescent electric lamps that flood the apartment with bles may also be manipulated in the a pure and limpid light. It is supported by tall legs of oak, and provided with a heavy glass top, on which the bather rests. Beneath this top, fitted, in the lower woodwork of the couch, are 100 more electric lamps, so set that their light directly strikes the bather's body from beneath. In this room of heat, light, reflection and refraction, nothing is left to chance. The innumerable lamps are so fixed that there is not a particle of the light or heat but what is utilized. Where some of the reflections fail to reach the body of the bather on the first radiation, they continue to reflect from mirror to mirror, until the couch is finally reached.

By this peculiar arrangement of light and heat conveyed to the bather in such quantity that every pinpoint of his flesh receives an equal amount, er temperature than is possible either by a Turkish or Russian bath.

The effect on the skin, too, is powerful, and the carbonic acid, of the skin is eliminated with much less action. Perspiration is induced in four minwith a temperature of 80 degrees Fahrenheit, whereas to induce perspiration in the Turkish bath there must be a temperature of 100 degrees Fahrenheit for five and a half minutes. Notwithstanding that the temperature of the room is much lower by the light bath, the surface and internal temperature of the bather at the time perspiration begins is one degree higher than when undergoing the Turkish treatment. The bath of light is also superior to either the Russian or Turkish bath in the matter of elimination of carbonic acid from the skin. Up to 5 per cent is the average for the light bath, wafle with the Turkish bath the inghest percentage is 4.07, and with the Russian bath 3.96.-New York Journal.

The Fay Mysteries

A Correspondent Who Thinks He Knows All About It.

A visitor who witnessed the Fay performances at the Grand Opera House supplies the following as an explanation of some of the feats performed by the lady:

"The first trick, the one in front of the cabinet, where Miss Fay is seated with two gentlemen is easily explained. The banjo, flowers, etc., and playing on the guitar, are manipulated by the lady's right hand. Her right arm is entirely free, but this cannot be detected from the auditorium, as the three persons in front of the cabinet are covered right up to their chins. The gentleman sitting at Miss Fay's right does not hold her hands with his left. She places her hands on his, and while his attention is being drawn off momentarily her right hand is removed, and when the performance is over, and before the curtain is removed, the right hand is again placed gently back on the gentleman's

The Case of Mrs. Large, Late Japanese Missionary, Still Pending.

Revelations of Degradition Among

British Columbia Indians. At Brampton yesterday the second day's session of the Methodist Women's Missionary Society was held. Two letters were read from Mrs. Large, a returned missionary from Japan, asking that definite and positive action be taken in reference her relation to the work in Japan, and enclosing a certificate of good health. There was also read another letter from Mrs. Large calling attention to ence to her salary, and claiming that as she was not on furlough in the ordinary sense she was entitled to full salary, and not merely to the threequarter salary allowed missionaries on furlough. No action was taken relative to Mrs. Large's communications and the matter will come up later, and will probably provoke a discussion. On motion of Mrs. Strachan, second ed by Miss Hawley, it was decided to send two more missionaries to Japan, and also to undertake work in Fukui Rev. Mr. Raley, missionary at Kitamaat, B. C., spoke most feelingly of the degradation and sufferings of women and girls among the barbarous Indians there. So hard was their lot he said, that it was even yet a com mon thing for mothers to destroy their female infants in order that the little ones might not grow up to drag out a miserable existence, despised by their fathers, ill-treated by their husbands, and the victims of sensuality and hardship. He and Mrs. Raley had cared for from 25 to 30 children in a temporary home. The results were most encouraging. This mission gets a grant of $200 a year. The hospital at Port Simpson, B. C.,

M. S., assembled at the home of Mrs. Robt. Freene, Mt. Pleasant avenue, Tuesday afternoon, when a very interesting meeting was held. Mrs. Fife, presilent, occupied the chair. An excellent programme was rendered, consisting of answers to question drawer, information from Watch Tower, and musical selections; also an admirable report by Mrs. Guest, delegate from London West Auxiliary to the recent branch meeting. Refreshments were then served by the hostess, after which a delightful social hour was spent. LICENSE HOLDERS' CONDOLE. At a special meeting of the License Holders' Protective Association yesterday, Mr. E. B. Smith, in the chair, it was resolved to prepare a letter of condolence for the widow and daughter of the late Mr. Daniel Dewar, the president of the association. A committee was appointed to procure suitable floral designs. It was also decided to go to St. Marys by special train to attend the funeral.

-A bicyclist had a narrow escape at the corner of Wellington and King streets at noon yesterday. The street railway repair wagon was coming of Pring and Gladys Legg, as maids down Wellington street, ringing a of honor, completed a very charming gong, which caused both the bicyclist and two young men driving a buggy up King street to look that way. The bicyclist headed right into the horse attached to the buggy. The front wheel of the bicycle was broken, and the rider badly shaken up. Miraculously he escaped without a mark although right under the horse's feet.

-Mr. J. W. Fetherston, organist at the First Methodist Church, met with a very painful accident on Monday evening, which caused his confinement ever since. He wheeled into a friend's house just previous to the entertainment in the church, and, hastily leaving the house, jumped off the doorsteps. His foot caught between the slats of the walk, and he fell forward with such force that the shoe was torn completely off. Mr. Fetherston's leg and hand were severely cut and bruised. The principal tendon below the knee was badly strained. Doubtless Mr. Fetherston owes his immunity from a broken leg to the fact that his shoe came off. -A very pleasant evening was spent on Tuesday at the Slater residence on Maitland street, the occasion being an oyster supper given by Mr. Ed. Slater and Mr. James Dewar to celebrate the mpletion of their four years' appreniceship at harness making with J. Darch & Sons. After a few hours spent in games, etc., the foreman, Mr. James McCormick, was called to the chair, and on behalf of the firm presented the young men with their tificates, and on behalf of the employes with a handsome solid gold pin, an emblem of their trade, and a token of esteem in which they are held. Although greatly surprised, the recipients were themselves very much pleased. A toast list was gone through.

On behalf of the business replies were made by Messrs. W. F. and J. K. Darch, W. Morrison, Geo. Hutchinson, Southcott, H. Borbridge and the chairman. Some good songs were sung by Joseph Stalen, Mr. James McCormick Mr. Bradly and others. A hearty vote of thanks was given to the ladies for the sumptuous spread. THE YOUNG LIBERALS

The Young Liberals should rally in force on Friday evening at the Oddfellows' Block, to cast their votes for the candidates of their choice. The with him in regard to his poor health, vice-presidents of the wards and the major portion of the executive have yet to be chosen. There are so many cannot make a mistake in voting for any of them.

TWO FIRES. At 1:45 this morning the alarm was telephoned to the fire hall that Labatt's brewery was on fire. It proved to be in a one-story frame building at the brewery, used for roasting malt. The building was almost gutted, and the damage amounted to about $300. While the men were on their way to blaze, and sent in an alarm from box 16. It is not known how the blaze

Last year it saved the city something in relief, but with the prospects of much employment this winter on the sewers it is not likely that city relief work will be necessary. It would be a good idea to have a municipal wood-pile, to which able-bodied applicants could be referred by the inspector. For tramps especially it would be an excellent thing.

GRAND STAGE PRODUCTIONS. The productions of "Faust" and 'Richard III." which John Griffith, the young Canadian, will present during his engagement at the Grand Opera House, are said to outrank any former attempts at staging these plays. Last season his presentation of the former was the best London ever had; but this year it is pronounced by the press of Toronto and other cities to be the finest the young star has ever given. Of the latter play it is said that the mounting is the most elabo-rate with which the play was ever staged this side the water. "Faust" will be the bill Friday evening, and "Richard III." on Saturday evening.

ANNA EVA FAY. Another large audience greeted Anna Eva Fay at the Grand Opera House last night, and was amused and puzzled. Miss Fay introduced a new feature-lifting a table with her hands pressed flatly upon the surface. The committee of the audience—Messrs. W. Eacrett and C. Stockwell—examined her fingers and found no ring there, while a silk handkerchief was placed over the table to preclude the idea of a staple being used. The cabinet manifestations were repeated, and proved entertaining and bewildering. The "somnolency" act brought out the usual number of questions—personal and public. In answer to one of the latter, Miss Fay replied that the Ontario Government would not be defeated at the next election. If her answer be not the inspiration of prophecy, it is at least a token that Miss Fay is a shrewd observer of public affairs. She also informed the audience that Queeen Victoria would reign

Glory - Glory - Glory

Though we have an immense store, an immense stock, and immense facilities for buying in the right markets, we are not in business for the glory of the thing. No wideawake merchant is. Though our method of treating the public brings us glory and praise continually, we want to make money—we must make money—and to do so we scour the markets of the world twice each year to bring to London just such go ods as the public want. The experience of years has brought us to the same old conclusion—that our plan of giving the highest up value for the lowest down price is the only sound way of holding patrons and winning new ones. We like to show what we mean by high-up quality. We'd prefer to show you in the store, but will give the next best thing by giving it in print, hoping to see you at the store later.

ODD SIGNS IN LONDON.

ing to Be. The American's first visit to London brings to his notice, if he be at all observant, many peculiar signs. Here are a few seen by a Mail and Express reporter last summer: Englishmen are noted all the world over as prolific letter writers. In fact, little personal attention is paid to business when it is possible to write a letter and say what one ordinarily should say verbally. Attached to the heavy doors of four-fifths of the most successful business houses in the English capital is a highly-polished brass plate, on which is inscribed:

: DO NOT RING THE BELL :

UNLESS AN ANSWER IS REQUIRED. Directly under this plate is an opening for dropping letters "that do not require an oral answer." On the Strand within a stone's throw of the Bank of England, is a well-known tradesman who has a "richly" huge blue sign in his window which tells the busy throng outside

YANKIE CYDER SOLD HERE.

It may be considered a joke, this sign, as a party of Americans who inquired earnestly believed, but the tradesman took the matter quite seriously when the subject of the sign was broached, and then remarked:

"Hi am er blooming blighter hif another chap didn't soy the same thing t'day. 'E told me 'ow to spell Yankee, but 'ang me hif it 'asn't escaped me memory. Hit will 'ave to do now, though." Ice is a particularly expensive luxury anywhere in Great Britain, but nowhere is this fact more noticeable than in London. What little ice is used comes from Norway. The novelty of a brawny ice man with a red shirt and a cigar in his mouth swinging an ther, provision merchants. The liabil- axe and smashing the frozen stuff regardless of expense as they do here, is yet new to the English "stopping-off place." Because of its value it comes necessary to out the ice into the required sizes by means of a saw. Sawing ice is as common a sight to the average Londoner as sawing wood to an American. London adheres to the old original way of dissecting its ice. Stuck outside a public-house just off Piccadilly Circus the following sign was displayed last week:

PROFESSIONAL ICE SAWER :

Oats were the principal feature of today's market. They formed the bulk of receipts, and in them also the most interest was taken. The demand was much stronger than for some time and came from all quarters. The feed men seemed to be all out of stock, and by the way millers bid they appeared to be in the same fix, while shippers determined not to be shut out, formed another factor in the activity in bidding. The Balance to Go Into the Regimental Fund_Will Be Compelled to Turn Out-Officer's Opinion.

There are many young men in the city who would "soldier" provided there was anything else in it besides drill and glory. Those at present in the Seventh Battalion joined at the time the agreement existed that all the pay for their annual drills would go into the company fund. This rule, however, has been set aside, and now every member of the battalion who has put in the requisite number of drills will receive two-thirds of his pay. which will be $4, and the remaining $2 will go into the regimental fund. The company inspection will be held Nov. 3, 4 and 5, and the battalion inspection on Nov. 6. After this the men will be paid their money. One of the officers said this morn ing that all the members would be compelled to turn out to put in the drills between now and the inspection, even if it became necessary to a corporal's guard after them. He said he fully approved of compelling men to put in their drill, because there condition, or Canadians will lose by was no reason other than lack of interest and dilatoriness for their absence. They knew what was required of them when they enlisted, and that if there were any sufficient reason why they could not attend they could procure a discharge at any time. He said further that the idea of putting all the money into the regimental fund had never met with favor here, and had been very unsuccessful. The men seemed to lose sight of the fact that every cent of the officers' pay, amount ing to nearly $500, goes into the regimental fund, which is used largely to maintain the band. When $400 for bandmaster's salary is taken out of this there is very little left. The $2 om every man will be utilized for regimental extra expense, such as Some officers expressed the idea that even $4 would be a benefit to some of the members of the battalion, many

It sold immediately down to 73 1-2 cents, and rallied slowly to 73 7-8 cents, then started on a rapid and nervous decline to 72 1-2 cents. Various influences contributed to the weakness, chief among them, however, being the tightness of the money market and traders seeing no immediate prospects of relief sold freely. Stop loss orders were less abundant. Cables showed a decline and Northwest receipts were heavy

CHAPTER XVI.

How glorious stand the Valiant, sword in hand. In front of battle for their native land! Force and right rule all things in the world; force arrives first, then

Justice is truth in action. It was into this thundery atmosphere of coming conflict, of hopes and doubts, of sundering ties, and fearful looking forward, that Richard and Katherine Hyde came, from the idyllic peace and beauty of their Norfolk house. But there was something in it that fitted Hyde's real disposition. He was a natural soldier, and he had arrived at the period of life when the mere show and pomp of the profession had lost all satisfying charm. He had found a quarrel worthy of his sword, one that had not only his deliberate approval, but his passionate sympathy. In fact, his first blow had been struck for American independence in his duel with Lord Paget; for that quarrel, though nominally con-cerning Lady Suffolk, was grounded upon a dislike engendered by their antagonism regarding the government of the colonies. It was an exquisite April morning when they sailed up New York Bay once more. Joris had been watching for the Western Light—and when she came to anchor at Murray's Wharf, his was the foremost figure on it. He had grown little stouter, but was still a splendid-looking man; he had grown a little older, but his tenderness for his daughter was still young and fresh, and strong as ever. He took her in his arms, murmuring, "Myn Katryntje! Myn Katryntje! Ach myn Kind! Myn

Hyde had felt that there might be some embarrassment in his own case; perhaps, some explanation or acknowledgment to make, but Joris waved aside any speech like it. He gave Hyde both hands; he called him "myn on!" He stooped, and put the little lad's arms around his neck. In many a aind and delicate way he made them feel that all of the past was forgotten but its sweetness.

And, surely, that hour Lysbet had the reward of her faithful affection. She had always admired Hyde, and she was proud and happy to have him in her home, and to have him call her "Mother." The little Joris took pos-session of her heart in a moment. Her

Katherine was again at her side. She had felt the clasp of her hands; she had heard her whisper "Myn moeder!"

upon her lips.

They landed upon a Saturday, one of those delightsome days that April frequently gives to New York. There was a fresh wind, full of the smell of was a fresh wind, full of the smell of the earth and the sea—an intensely blue sky, with flying battalions of white fleecy clouds across it—a glor-ious sunshine above everything. And people live, and live happily, even in the shadow of war. The stores were full of buyers and sellers. The doors and windows of the houses were open to the spring freshness. Lysbet had heard of their arrival, and was watch-ing for them. Her hair was a little whiter, her figure a little stouter, but her face was fair and rosy, and sweet

In a few hours things had fallen naturally and easily into place. Joris and Bram and Hyde sat talking of the formation of a regiment. Little Joris leaned on his grandfather's shoulder, listening. Lysbet and Katherine were unpacking trunks full of fineries and pretty things; occasionally stopping to give instructions to Dinorah, who was preparing an extra tea, as Batavius and Joanna were coming to spend the evening. "And to the Elder and Janet Semple I have sent a message, also," said Lysbet; "for I see why not anger should be nursed, or old friendships broken, for

Katherine had asked at once, with eager love, for Joanna; she had expected that she would be waiting to welcome her. Lysbet smiled faintly at the supposition; "she has a large family, then—and Batavius—and her house. Seldom comes she here, now."
But, about 4 o'clock, as Katherine and Hyde were dressing, Joanna and Batavius, and all their family, arrived. In a moment, their presence seemed to diffuse itself through the house. There was a sense of confusion and unrest, and the loud crying of a hungry baby, determined to be at-tended to. And Joanna was fulfilling this duty when Katherine hastened to meet her. Wifehood and motherhood had greatly altered the slim, fair girl of ten years previous. She had grown stout, and was untidy in her dress, and a worried, anxious expression was continually on her countenance; for, though Batavius kept an eye on the children, there were five of them beside the baby—fat, rosy,roundfaced miniatures of himself, all having a fair share of his peculiar selfish traits, which each expressed after their individual fashion.

Hyde met his brother-in-law with a gentlemanly cordiality; and Batavius, who had told Joanna that "he intended to put down a bit that insolent Englishman," was quite taken off his guard, and ere he was aware of his submission, was smoking amicably with him as they discussed the proposed military organization. Very soon Hyde asked Batavius "If he were willing to join it?" "When such a family a man has," must have some prudence and considerations. I had been well content 'Aye, has he. That's what women with one child; but we must have our Politics and rebellion is the same number-there is no remedy. And I return the outfit, and a warrant has am a householder, and I pay my way "Well, father, I shall not turn rebel." and do my business. In attempting to remove the substance it leroke off. The operation was repeated every day with the same result, the supposed sliver breaking off each time. Forrest, who was sent for, found a grain of wheat lodged in a corner of the eye with a sprout on it half an inch in length. The sprout was what the parents had been pinching off every day as it grew, thinking it a green sliver or splint. The eye is get-

BAREFOOT BABIES.

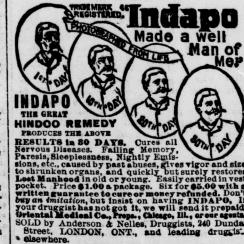

Physician's Interesting Experiment With His Family of Boys and Girls. Cleveland Leader.

"I chanced to be present," remarked a trained nurse to a group of professional friends, "when a little girl three years of age, just returned from the west, was being put to bed. It was the last day of August, and I noticed that she was suffocating in a heavy, high-necked, long-sleeved flannel shirt, becides the full cotton outfit; and this would, I know, be generally accepted as quite the proper and rational way to prepare a little child for a long journey. To me it seemed little less than cruelty.

"On the other hand, I was watching with great interest a little child nine months old who had never had a shoe or stocking on or had its little feet covered in any way during the day. Whenever the weather is chilly the nurse gives them an occasional brisk rubbing, but argues that since its feet have never been covered they are no more sensitive than the hands, and it is true that the little one has never had a cold. During the hot weather, too, it was dressed in comparative comfort, which, translated neans as little clothing as possible." "One of the leading specialists in children's diseases in America, a most distinguished man, by the way, never allows his children to wear shoes and stockings except when out of doors in midwinter, until they are five or six years old. All through the spring and summer they may be seen in park and public garden, walking about with their nurse, exquisitely frocked, but barefooted. Later comes the long country rambles, and even in the winter they never wear shoes in the house. The result of this expriment in his own family has proved more sician, and the general ruggedness and vigor of the children is his most powerful argument when using the whole weight of his influence to prevail upon other parents to go and do likewise. "It is to be hoped that saner notions in regard to dressing children in hot weather may in due time percolate all classes of society, and that those who would hestate before the barefoot idea may at least go so far as to unburden their children of that heavy weight of clothing which is more productive of colds and weakness than all other causes combined."

THE ENGINEER'S STORY.

Mr. Ross Is Always Particular at the Shoebottom Crossing.

Donald Ross, Stratford, the engineer on the train that killed the Hayes at Shotbottom's crossing on Saturday night, says he has recognized this particular crossing for many years as being a dangerous one, and is always careful to give all the signals on approaching it. On Saturday night the atmosphere was foggy, and Mr. Ross had his hand on the whistle lever long before reaching the whistle post. He gave the signal promptly, and also remembers the bell being When the train was about twenty feet off the crossing he saw a burgey dash onto the track at a speed that led him to believe that the horses were being urged. He also noticed the vehicle was closely covered, and in an instant the engine struck it fairly and squarely, cutting the rig in two and carrying the seat, top and occupants about 50 feet up the track, where they were hurled to one side. The accident occurred exactly at 10:42. Proceeding on to Granton, Mr. Ross got leave to come back, and did what he could to arouse the neighbors, and have the bodies guarded until the coroner's arrival. He believes death was instantaneous. The scene was a ghastly one. Miss (Hayes' body did not appear to have been mangled. Her eyes were wide open, and a strange smile wreathed her features. The young man's countenance was not so asant to look upon, his face being somewhat distorted by the injuries received. Mr. Ross and his fireman, Frank Adams, expect to attend the inquest at St. Marys.

TWO WAYS OF WRITING. The London papers are discussing the introduction of vertical writing into the schools. The system has been in use in Hamilton schools for a considerable time. It has its merfts-and its demerits. The tendency to rounder, more open characters, but unfortunately so far as we have been able to ascertain it tends to writing with finger movement alone That, as any person having much writing to do, knows, is a grave disadvantage. If the system is to be come permanent and successful, it will be necessary for the pupils to be taught hand and arm movements in writing. Perhaps it is foolish to try to turn out all pupils as tools are turned out to templet; individuality must be recognized. We fancy there is a happy medium which any good teacher can easily strike. - Hamilton

Neighbors Generally Think It Was Suicide

The Doctors Incline to the Theory

Awful Injuries - Things That Point to Suicide-The Deceased was Queer in Mind.

"He killed himself." That is the conclusion of Belmonters generally, and the neighbors of the late William Rogers, who was found on Monday at noon lying on the floor of his own home, with five bullet holes in his head and body, and his throat cut almost from ear to ear. From the statements made by the neighbors, there is hardly any doubt that the man committed the rash act while temporarily insane, but it is difficult to understand how so many wounds could be self-inflicted.

An Advertiser reporter yesterday noon spent a couple of hours at the scene of the tragedy, and learned the true state of affairs. THE HOUSE. is a little frame one on con. 9, of South Dorchester, just a little east of the town line. In the house are five rooms. The front door opened into a large general purpose room, and opening off this to the east side are two bedrooms, the north one being occupied by Rogers, and the south one by his housekeeper. Off the large room to the south is a large kitchen, and in this room the unfortunate man took his life. Back again to the south of this kitchen is an apartment used as a lumber room. which opens out into the yard, directly in front of the barns. The place had a snug appearance, and if there were no signs of fabulous riches, there was an equal absence of the signs of abject poverty. The fields without had borne a plentiful harvest, and the barns and stock seemed to be in a good state of preservation.

The reporter entered by the front door into the large room, where half a dozen of the neighbors had gathered to do what they could. The room was warm, and had just been scrubnot with the greatest success. He was ushered into the north bedroom, a small chamber, containing the bed, two trunks, a chair, some clothing belonging to the deceased. Upon the bed, covered with a white sheet, lay

His hands still bore the blood marks, and his hair was ruffled, as on the fatal morning. THE BLOOD STAINS.

In the bedroom where the body lay were only a few blood marks, as though they had fallen from a wound some blood stains. There were some larger marks here, as though the man had stood. They lead from this into the kitchen, off the big room. cut, the blood had spurted out over the dishpan that hung on the wall by the window. The corner of the bench ooked as though a razor had been placed there by a very bloody hand. The half-square marks of the widely opened razor were very plainly seen. The looking-glass, which is broken at the top, bore more evidence that the leed was done by the man's own hand. On the right lower corner was a large bloody impression or a man's left hand, corresponding in size with Rogers', just as though the poor fellow had eaned over with the razor in his right hand while he held the glass with the left hand to see where he was cutting. JAMES LEGG'S THEORY. Mr. James Legg is a brother-in-law of the deceased, and did all in his power to make things perfectly plain. When he was asked how he accounted for so many wounds he said: "My impression is that he tried to cut the jugular vein first, and bleed to death. From the marks on the throat, he apparently out his throat a little, but as it did not bleed profusely he went infrom the trunk, thus getting the blood in the box and on the floor, while he would have sufficient blood on his hands to smear the pockets of his pants when he put his hands into them for the keys to unlock the box. When he had got the revolver he re-turned to the kitchen and gave his throat a deeper gash. It is then presumed that he shot himself in head twice, but seeing that this did not end him quickly enough he hastily fired the last two shots, one of which grazed the apex of the heart. Dropping the blood-stained weapon on the table, he fell upon the floor and expired where he was found by his housekeeper.

When she got there he was nearly through. She stood talking to him and after a few minutes' conversation he dropped on his knees and held his head up. Then, taking his throat and holding up the sharp knife, he made a motion of cutting his throat, and passed the knife along in front of his neck a few inches away. Mrs. Smith said to him: "Oh, Will, don't let the devil tempt you to do anything like that!" He looked at her strangely and said: "All right. No, I won't. I wouldn't harm a hair of your head, and I won't do anything rash, either. Mrs. Smith added that Rogers was very religious, and would often request her to read the Bible to him. Mrs. Smith is a little Englishwoman, and very intelligent. To further questions regarding the

On Saturday he was husking corn in the barn, but on Monday morning brought it into the kitchen in the wheelbarow, but for what reason she did not know. On Monday morning they arose about the usual time, and after breakfast Mrs. Smith asked him to let her have $10. Rogers gave her the money, and cautioned her to be back by noon. She left the house at 10 o'clock to deliver the money to her husband, as he wished to attend a sale that day. She took the money to dead herself, and ran across the street cut his throat!"
