

SCIENTISTS GO TO PACIFIC ISLAND TO STUDY ECLIPSE

Thousands Are Gathering At Catalina For Eclipse

Professor H. R. Kingston Explains Conditions of Coming Sun Phenomenon.

HOW TO VIEW IT
Will Be Visible in London Late On Monday Afternoon.

Following is the third of a series of articles written for The Advertiser by Professor H. R. Kingston, of the University of Western Ontario, who is now in Catalina Island to study the total eclipse of the sun, which is expected to occur on September 10. Professor Kingston gives advice on how Londoners should view the eclipse, which will be in evidence in this city between 3 and 5 p.m. on that date.

By PROFESSOR H. R. KINGSTON.

Avalon, Catalina Island, Cal., Sept. 7.—Everyone is familiar with the daily westerly motion of the sun and the moon. This motion, however, is only apparent motion caused by the real daily rotation of the earth on its axis in the easterly direction. But the moon does have a real easterly motion around the earth, making the complete circuit in a little over 27 days. Now, one does not need to be an astronomer to verify this. Any one may convince oneself in an evening or two by noting carefully the position of the moon with regard to one or two stars at any time, and then again an hour or two later on the following evening. It will be plainly evident that the moon moves quite rapidly eastward amongst the stars.

If we continued our observations we should find that the moon travels entirely around the sky and comes back to its original position in a little less than four weeks. Now it happens that the monthly path of the moon lies very close to the plane in which the earth travels in its yearly motion around the sun. The upshot of this is that usually the moon passes each month a little above or below the sun, but at least twice a year it must pass directly between the sun and the earth. It then cuts off some or all of the sun's light, and casts a shadow on the earth, producing a partial or total eclipse of the sun.

Generally the eclipse is only partial, but now and then the moon comes centrally across the sun's surface and produces a total solar eclipse, provided that the moon is not too far away from the earth when it comes. (The distance of the moon from the earth varies as the moon's path around the earth is an ellipse.) The great shadow cone behind the moon is rather small back here at the earth, as we are near the tip of the cone. As the moon moves along at the time of a total solar eclipse, its shadow cone sweeps across the surface of the earth, but being very narrow it darkens only a very small portion of the earth's surface at any one time. In North America only one or two places are hit by the shadow cone, and these take place away in the far north. Hence we have on this continent four or five opportunities in 100 years to observe a total eclipse of the sun. When we realize further that the greatest possible duration of a total solar eclipse is less than eight minutes, we can understand something of the reason that astronomers travel long distances to study this rare event.

Thousands to View Eclipse.
Thousands of people are coming out here to Catalina Island to see this wonderful spectacle on Sept. 10, and when we arrived we were very glad to find that our reservations had been made six weeks ago, as the hotels are full and are saying, "No more reservations till after the eclipse."

The path of totality of the eclipse of Sept. 10 begins out in the North Pacific Ocean and passing southeast strikes the coast of North America a little south of Los Angeles, crosses Mexico, and ends south of the West Indies. It is about 105 miles wide here at Catalina.

CHAS. E. WHEELER IS NAMED TO HEAD ORGANIST SOCIETY

Prominent London Musician Is Elected President of Canadian College of Organists.

OVER ALL DOMINION

Charles E. Wheeler, F.C.C.O., organist and choirmaster at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, has been made president of the Canadian College of Organists.

This signal honor was conferred upon Mr. Wheeler at the annual convention of the College, held Tuesday and Wednesday of this week at the college headquarters, 14 Elm street, Toronto, when out of a gathering composed of organists from all parts of Canada, he was chosen to head the association.

Interesting Account.

The new president who returned to the city yesterday brings back a most interesting account of the convention.

Over fifty members, guests and visiting organists were present at the opening session of the convention, Tuesday afternoon. No formal papers were read but instructive discussions were held, concerning the work both of church and moving picture organists. Among those who spoke were Dr. Ham, Dr. Halsey of Montreal, the retiring president, Dr. W. T. Terrier of New York and others.

The meeting was followed by an interesting tour of various churches and inspection of organs in the city. Among the churches visited were Westminster, St. Paul's, Metropolitan, Old St. Andrew's, St. Martin's. The fine instruments in these churches were tried by various organists and the members derived much pleasure from this tour.

At 7 p.m. the annual dinner was held at the Old Mill Inn on the Humber River. Fifty-four members and guests were present. The evening was spent in a most enjoyable manner, with toasts were drunk to the king, to the College of Organists, to the president and finally to the ladies. The toast called forth several witty speeches by way of reply.

Elected President.

At the council meeting on Wednesday, at which Mr. Wheeler was elected president, the following were elected: President, Dr. Albert Ham, F.R.C.O., Toronto; vice-presidents, Dr. Healy, Toronto; Dr. P. J. Halsey, F.R.C.O., Montreal; Dr. Tatter, C.O., Toronto; Dr. H. A. Fricker, F.R.C.O., Toronto; W. H. Hewitt, Mus. Bursar, Toronto; registrar, L. G. Stirling, London; secretary-treasurer, H. G. Langlois, Mus. Bach, Toronto.

On Wednesday afternoon, members and their wives and the visiting organists were received at Government House by the Lieutenant-Governor, Mr. and Mrs. Cockburn, and entertained at a garden party in the beautiful grounds.

At 6:30 p.m. a special evening song was sung in the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, under the direction of Dr. Healy, who is retiring president of the college. The convention closed with a splendid organ recital at the Timothy Eaton Memorial Church. It was decided, on the conclusion of the convention, that the next annual meeting would hold their next annual meeting in Ottawa, September 1 and 2, 1924.

TROLLEY JUMPS TRACK AND SMASHES AUTO

Street Car Causes Little Excitement at Richmond Street Crossing.

Pedestrians in the vicinity of the Tecumseh House were given a thrill at twelve o'clock today when a trolley jumped the tracks and crashed into a large sedan standing at the curb, completely demolishing the rear fender.

The derail safety switch is installed here to prevent cars running into the gates when a train is passing and after the accident the switch was turned but the crossing watchman declares that he did not turn the switch. Both he and street railway officials are at a loss to know how the derail became opened.

The street car though of a comparatively light type plowed through the bricks between the tracks and cut a deep gash in the pavement. The "baby" of the family was pulled back into service without very much difficulty by an Ottawa way car.

AT BEAUTIFUL AVALON.

Prof. H. R. Kingston of London, who is now at Avalon, Catalina Island, Cal., to witness the total eclipse of the sun on September 10.

Island, and it takes the shadow just 169 seconds to pass. Totality begins here at 5:44 minutes and 23 seconds after 12 o'clock noon, Pacific time, that is, 5 minutes 27 seconds before 4 p.m. London (Eastern) time. On either side of the path of totality the eclipse will appear as a partial eclipse. However, at no place outside the path of totality, no matter how close to the path it may be, will darkness occur or the stars peep out to view or the coronal display be visible. Only in the path of totality will this marvelous spectacle be presented. At London, Ont., the eclipse will begin at about 3:12 p.m., and end about 5:05 p.m. At the middle of the eclipse at London the moon will cut nearly half way (about 45 per cent) across the sun's surface. While not spectacular, a partial eclipse is well vividly so the observer the fact of the moon's actual motion. But one should be very careful to use smoked glass, and in no case try to view the sun with the naked eye.

On our arrival here today I learn that altogether there will be about 40 people in the eclipse parties on Catalina Island. Besides the Terrier Observatory party, there are here also astronomers from Washburn Observatory of the University of Wisconsin and from Goodsell Observatory of Carleton College, Northfield, Minnesota.

Lick Observatory on Mount Hamilton is sending a well-equipped party to Catalina Island. Also, the University of Chicago is sending a party to Ensenada, Mexico, and Mount Wilson Solar Observatory is making extensive preparations at San Diego.

Great Interest Shown.
Catalina Island is a splendid summer resort and is crowded with tourists at the present time. It is reached by a delightful sail of two hours from the port of Los Angeles. Also, a hydroplane maintains a passenger service between Catalina and Los Angeles. Our party is most comfortably accommodated at one of the hotels, whence we go daily to the eclipse camp, about four miles from town, at an elevation of about 1,300 feet.

Great interest is being taken here in the coming eclipse and deep are the regrets of those who are obliged to leave for home before it occurs. Dr. Frost, the director of our expedition, gave a lecture tonight on the eclipse before an audience that packed the church.

We have had a delightful trip, with practically perfect weather all the way. This week we have visited the University of Washington at Seattle, the University of California at Berkeley, Leland Stanford University at Palo Alto, and Lick Observatory on Mount Hamilton.

Weather conditions here are almost perfect, only four out of thirty-seven days since work was commenced at the camp being unfavorable. Thus the chances of a clear sky for the eclipse are exceedingly good. May the weatherman smile his very best when the critical moment arrives on Sept. 10!

before the bad weather set in. The building is now being plastered and the work is proceeding rapidly. Workmen are also engaged in putting on the roof covering, the roof slab having been placed in position some time ago. When this is completed the school will be completely closed from the elements, and the only work remaining will be in the interior.

The four-room addition to the Boyle Memorial School is also nearly finished and ready for occupation. The work has reached about the same stage as in the Trafalgar School.

Today's meeting of the London Kiwanis Club was unusually large, and excellent turn-out of the members themselves was augmented by a number of Ki-Y boys who were the guests of the Kiwanis luncheon in the Tecumseh House, where they were royally feted. Just before they

Associated Press Despatch.

San Francisco, Sept. 7.—The priceless oil masterpiece "The Entombment of Christ," which was stolen recently from the Crocker Art Gallery at Sacramento, has been received by the San Francisco Police, accompanied by an unsigned note reading: "God has forgiven me. You will find my body in Stow Lake."

The painting was received by the chief in today's mail. The wooden panel of the picture had been broken, but the painting itself was not harmed. The masterpiece was the work of Giulio Reni, an early seventeenth century Italian artist.

scheduled to meet at 3 p.m. to decide whether a full acceptance of his settlement terms could be given. For the mine operators, a practically complete acceptance of the government's peace proposals had been guaranteed, and the governor was expected to have the union's decision this afternoon. The operators group agreed on behalf of the employers to grant a 10 per cent increase to the anthracite workers, to establish the full eight-hour day, to recognize the union, and to concede the principle of collective bargaining for the four things which Governor Pinchot asked.

However, John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and his associates in the conduct of the negotiations were still holding out on the two principal demands of the union which are unsatisfied by the governor's proposals. They asked the check-off system for collection of union dues, by which the employers would be required to hold out of payroll the amount owed the union by each individual miner, and they asked that day workers in the anthracite region, who number nearly 100,000 men, be given more than a 10 per cent increase in pay.

CANNOT CLOSE THEATRES.

Paris, Sept. 7.—The National Federation of Entertainments decided this morning that it would be unable to accept the government's offer to close theatres and other places of amusement close to day as a sign of mourning for the Japanese disaster. The federation contended that to comply with the suggestion would throw too great a burden on a single class of business. It was decided, however, to call an urgent meeting to consider measures for the assistance of the sufferers.

NOT SURE OF NEED FOR NEW SCHOOL LANDS

Value of Site On Oxford and Adelaide Streets Doubtful by Board.

Doubt is expressed by members of the board of education regarding the need of purchasing, for school purposes, the block of land at the corner of Adelaide and Oxford streets, offered to the board for $19,500 by F. W. Daly.

The property, which consists of four and three-fourths acres, is the same on which the board some years ago took an option for $12,000, for which the city council refused to vote the money. The option was, therefore, allowed to lapse. Since that time the property has increased in value, and if not purchased by the board will be put on the market for building lots.

Chief Inspector Greer today said he was not sure the board needed this property, but it would be carefully considered. He considers it is a little too far in towards the city to be of much real value as a school, as the pupils from that district are attending the Ryerson and St. George's institutions. The bureau staff photographer on the property in question would mean the establishment of a new school section.

While the Ryerson School is undoubtedly overcrowded, St. George's is one of the least crowded in the city, and pupils from the district that would be served by a new school at the corner of Adelaide and Oxford streets, are comfortably housed at present.

If a new school were contemplated, the logical position for it would be either southwest or northeast of the Ryerson School where it would take care of the school population in a crowded district.

DECLARES KIWANIS HAVE TURNED CLUB INTO GAMING DEN

Rev. J. Agnew Provides Novel Twist to the Weekly Luncheon Program.

HAS LOTS OF FUN

Claiming that the club had outraged the bounds of common decency in allowing a respectable organization such as the Kiwanis Club of London to be turned into a common gaming den, where gambling was carried on behind shuttered windows and barred doors, Rev. J. A. Agnew with a vigorous assertion to this effect launched a terrific assault on the otherwise calm water of today's regular meeting of the association.

Amid loud clamors from the members who declared themselves sufficiently "hard-boiled" to be enjoying the game in progress, Mr. Agnew demanded a hearing, and such was accorded him by the president, Bevan Hay.

Jones Brothers Boosters.
These unusual developments followed the plans laid for the meeting by the six Jones brothers, who were in charge of the "boost." They instituted a game whereby the members with a sufficient amount of luck were to be able to win "Two Dollars a Minute," thus being the slogan of the day.

When the protest was called forth, Sam O'Meara, who was "croupier," pulled on his coat and stalked wrathfully from the table, asserting the meanwhile that "it's only a bit of fun, John."

Following a hurried investigation by the president, however, it developed that Rev. Mr. Agnew would give complete sanction to the proceedings if the winners would consent to donate all their winnings to the Ki-Y boys' work.

Captured Winnings.
To this point in the proceedings, Mr. Hay and Rev. Mr. Agnew maintained the stern demeanor of righteous investigators. Here, however, the joke got beyond them, and amid much mirth they were forced to concede that the whole affair had been a deep-rooted plot on their part to capture the sum of $60, the amount of the day's boost for the boys' work.

The six Jones brothers handled the day in splendid style. The Ki-Y boys were the guests of honor. They were given a five-minute talk by Mr. Agnew, and each was handed a box of chocolates on leaving the luncheon. In charge of the meeting were Floyd, Lebert, Norval, Stuart, Frank and Sidney Jones.

CONSTRUCT ART ROOM AT ST. GEORGE SCHOOL

Capt. W. H. Robinson and S. R. White Build Addition in Spare Time.

A new art room has been added to St. George's School at no expense to the city, according to Inspector V. K. Greer, who stated that during the summer holidays, Manual Training Inspector S. R. White and Captain W. H. Robinson, superintendent of works, had gone to work and with material at their disposal had fitted up a room in the above school to be used for this purpose.

Tables, benches, cupboards, etc., were all installed by the two men in their own time, and no expense whatever incurred. The teacher for this work in St. George's School is already a member of the staff, and therefore no outsider will be brought in. All classes taking art will now be instructed in the most economical room in any of the city's schools.

LEAGUE AWAITS OUTCOME OF TILT WITH MUSSOLINI

Work Suspended Until Italian Premier Replies Regarding Council's Incompetence.

SITUATION TENSE

Special Cable to The Advertiser. Geneva, Sept. 7.—All work of the League of Nations was temporarily paralyzed today, pending the outcome of the council's test of strength with Mussolini. Both sides in the dispute over the league council's competence to interfere in the Greco-Italian quarrel were on their positions, awaiting word from Rome.

Premier Mussolini has been advised of the action taken yesterday when the council made recommendations to the council of ambassadors at Paris regarding a proposed investigation in the Janina assassinations and payment of reparations by Greece.

The council left, as an open issue, the question of its own competency and delegates agreed the situation—pending a reply from Mussolini—was too tense for this to be discussed. No one doubts but that the league has its back to the wall, fighting for its very existence.

The assembly marks time, and cannot proceed with other business until it learns whether the council is to survive the attack of the Fascist premier, who has boldly declared it incompetent to adjudicate the present dispute in which Italy's dignity and honor, Mussolini says, is involved. If Italy permits the recommendations to the ambassadors to be acted upon; something which late advices from Rome indicated she might not do; the situation may yet result in a peaceful settlement of the dispute that threatens the league's life.

GIRL STOCK JUDGES WANT TO VISIT FAIR

Prize-Winning English Quarter Would Like To Come To London.

Efforts are being made to bring to London for the Western Fair, at the request of the girls themselves, four English girls, winners of the Sir Henry Thornton agricultural scholarships, who have been judging stock in the classes at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, where they received very high marks and much praise.

The girls, Joan Moore, 14; Ivy Townsend, 15; and Emma Absalom, 18, are the first winners of the scholarships offered by Sir Henry Thornton, when he assumed the position of chairman and president of the Canadian National Railways. The prizes, including a trip to Canada, were offered for the all-round girls in the Federation of Young Farmers Clubs in England, the examinations of which are very difficult, and call for a thorough understanding of agriculture and live stock.

Misses Moore, Townsend and White are gold medalists, having won honors at the big English stock fairs for judging, while Miss Absalom has won high honors in beekeeping and horticulture.

The girls themselves made the request that they be allowed to attend the Western Fair, which opens here on Saturday, and have asked, if possible, to be allowed to give an exhibition of English judging.

The matter will be placed before the Western Fair board by a representative of the Canadian National Railways in the hope that the visit may be arranged.

TWO MEN ARE FINED FOR VEGETABLES THEFT

Peter Smith, Vagrant, Provides Some Comedy at Police Court Session.

Harold Moffatt and Leonard Winley were fined $10 and costs in police court today for stealing vegetables from the Ontario Hospital grounds. They pleaded guilty a week ago. Two other young men, who were arrested with them, were fined yesterday.

Peter Smith, vagrant, and colored, was dismissed after he had provided a little comedy in court.

Smith admitted he was a vagrant, a loose, idle, disorderly person, living without employment, and without visible means of maintaining himself. "What am I going to do with you?" the court asked. "You're going about the country without any money."

"How you know Ah haven't any money?" interrupted Smith. "You just said so," the magistrate replied. "Where would you go any way, if I let you out?"

"Where does anyone go when they gets off the road," retorted the dusky hobo.

"Well, you can go," concluded the court, advising Peter to keep far from temptation in his wanderings in search of the elusive job.

FOUR ROSE LIVES
POWDER BLAST

Twenty-Seven Persons Are Injured—Fifteen Probably Fatal.

ROCKS COUNTRYSIDE

Associated Press Despatch.
South Amboy, N. J., Sept. 6.—Three men and a boy were killed and twenty-seven persons were injured, fifteen probably fatally, by an explosion of thousands of cases of smokeless powder which was being transferred from barges to freight cars on the banks of the Raritan River tonight.

The explosion, caused by a fire which started on one of the barges, rocked the entire countryside, blew automobiles upside down on the road nearby, and enveloped everyone within a hundred yards within a sheet of flame.

The powder consisted of a shipment of 165,000 cases belonging to the Atlas Powder Company and was being transferred from barges to freight cars for shipment.

Captains commanding the barges said that sparks from a cooking fire on one of the barges blew across the river, igniting several other barges and finally the freight cars.

A second explosion, which illuminated towns for miles around, blew the cars to pieces, and timbers were scattered for hundreds of feet, endangering the lives of all in the neighborhood. Other box cars which caught fire were hooked up to engines and rushed, flaming, through the heart of the town, getting them away from the powder supply, which had already been loaded on barges.

The entire fire department of South Amboy was rushed to the scene, and engines sent to nearby cities for additional apparatus. Just before the engines arrived, several other box cars of powder exploded, sending the total number to six. The explosion and two of the barges were enveloped in flames within a few minutes of the first explosion, the cause of which has not been ascertained.

Several automobiles which had been traveling on the highway when the explosion occurred were blown completely over, and their occupants, several of whom were said to be seriously injured, thrown to the ground.

Winston Taylor of Newark, the first man who lost his life, was burned to death by the first explosion. He was thought to have been standing on one of the box cars which blew up. The yards are the property of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

ESKIMO WOMAN
PROVES HEROINE

Noice, Relief Expedition Leader, Recounts Story of Fortitude.

DREAMED OF COMING

Following is the fourth installment of the exclusive story of Harold Noice, commander of the Wrangel Island relief expedition, who returned to Nome, Alaska, August 31, after his dash into the Arctic in the hope of relieving four white men and an Eskimo woman marooned there since the fall of 1921.

By HAROLD NOICE, Commander of the Wrangel Island Relief Expedition. Copyright.

Nome, Alaska, Sept. 6.—The Arctic has added many illustrious names to the scrolls of the great, but most of these have been men. To these must be added the quaint name of Ada Blackjack, a little Eskimo girl, who came to live by her own efforts on an uninhabited island and at the same time provide food for herself and a dying companion, whom she

Only the night before we rescued her she dreamed she heard the whistle of a boat and when she heard our whistle that morning, as she was cooking her meager breakfast of tea, dried duck and seal oil, she could hardly believe she was not dreaming.

The fog too added to the unreal quality of the scene, as she was cooking her meager breakfast of tea, dried duck and seal oil, she could hardly believe she was not dreaming.

When the little party found they would not have food to last them through the winter, an attempt to reach Siberia was determined upon. Ada made new clothing for the men and did her utmost to send them away as completely equipped as she could. Knight, who was already developing symptoms of scurvy, was to remain with Ada, while Crawford, Maurer and Galla were to make the attempt. The shore party left January 28, 1923, leaving Ada and Knight to their long and lonely vigil—a vigil to the end of the world.

Untiring Nurse.

The day after the boys left a severe gale sprang up, and when she tried to tell me of this she sobbed and I thought her heart was breaking.

At first Knight was able to get about, but one day he fainted. It was not long until he took to his bed, and to the end little Ada was his untiring nurse.

Ada set out to get food. Day after day she would visit her traps and carry home the catch. But Knight's condition rapidly became worse, and he could not spend much time attending him.

But gradually the long winter passed and the ice broke up. The boys returned from the south, and other game became plentiful.

Knight passed out on June 22, and Ada was left alone, except for the kitten, now grown to a cat, which the boys had brought with them from Nome.

Ada had a curious habit of looking over the Eskimos as a race, but she was not averse to them, and she felt that she was a part of them.

When the motion to adopt the report was moved by Trustee Smith, Trustee Campbell protested against the motion, as being contrary to the recognized custom of the board in fixing salaries when the estimates are prepared. He urged the board to stick to the estimates.

Chairman Udy and Trustee Warner expressed themselves in the same manner.

When the motion was put, the following voted for the adoption: Trustees Smith, Silverwood, Rowe, and Casselman. The following were opposed: Trustees Campbell, Willmott, Mrs. Hunt and Warner. Chairman Udy cast the deciding vote in the negative.

Monday, Friday of next week were set aside as holidays for the public and secondary schools, in order that the pupils and teachers might be able to observe the anniversary of the founding of the city.

Trustee Silverwood, seconded by Trustee Campbell, presented a report embodying the enrollment figures for the three schools under his jurisdiction, to-wit: South Collegiate, 319; East Collegiate, 228; total, 1,320. This showed an increase of 40 pupils over 1922, when the enrollment was 1,280.

ESKIMO WOMAN
PROVES HEROINE

Noice, Relief Expedition Leader, Recounts Story of Fortitude.

DREAMED OF COMING

Following is the fourth installment of the exclusive story of Harold Noice, commander of the Wrangel Island relief expedition, who returned to Nome, Alaska, August 31, after his dash into the Arctic in the hope of relieving four white men and an Eskimo woman marooned there since the fall of 1921.

By HAROLD NOICE, Commander of the Wrangel Island Relief Expedition. Copyright.

Nome, Alaska, Sept. 6.—The Arctic has added many illustrious names to the scrolls of the great, but most of these have been men. To these must be added the quaint name of Ada Blackjack, a little Eskimo girl, who came to live by her own efforts on an uninhabited island and at the same time provide food for herself and a dying companion, whom she

Only the night before we rescued her she dreamed she heard the whistle of a boat and when she heard our whistle that morning, as she was cooking her meager breakfast of tea, dried duck and seal oil, she could hardly believe she was not dreaming.

The fog too added to the unreal quality of the scene, as she was cooking her meager breakfast of tea, dried duck and seal oil, she could hardly believe she was not dreaming.

When the little party found they would not have food to last them through the winter, an attempt to reach Siberia was determined upon. Ada made new clothing for the men and did her utmost to send them away as completely equipped as she could. Knight, who was already developing symptoms of scurvy, was to remain with Ada, while Crawford, Maurer and Galla were to make the attempt. The shore party left January 28, 1923, leaving Ada and Knight to their long and lonely vigil—a vigil to the end of the world.

Untiring Nurse.

The day after the boys left a severe gale sprang up, and when she tried to tell me of this she sobbed and I thought her heart was breaking.

At first Knight was able to get about, but one day he fainted. It was not long until he took to his bed, and to the end little Ada was his untiring nurse.

Ada set out to get food. Day after day she would visit her traps and carry home the catch. But Knight's condition rapidly became worse, and he could not spend much time attending him.

But gradually the long winter passed and the ice broke up. The boys returned from the south, and other game became plentiful.

Knight passed out on June 22, and Ada was left alone, except for the kitten, now grown to a cat, which the boys had brought with them from Nome.

Ada had a curious habit of looking over the Eskimos as a race, but she was not averse to them, and she felt that she was a part of them.

When the motion to adopt the report was moved by Trustee Smith, Trustee Campbell protested against the motion, as being contrary to the recognized custom of the board in fixing salaries when the estimates are prepared. He urged the board to stick to the estimates.

Chairman Udy and Trustee Warner expressed themselves in the same manner.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 7, 1923.

Hard Work and Clean Friends.

A young man from London who was acquitted at one trial for bank robbery is now in Detroit, where he is alleged to have admitted shooting a man during a robbery.

His own story is that after leaving London following his trial he went to work at his trade. As long as he stayed there he attended to business.

But he did not stay; he found time for striking up the acquaintance of a gang that stole cars and sold bootleg whiskey. It was not very far from that to the raiding of gasoline stations. This amounted to plain robbery, with a gun along always to shoot if necessary to do so in order to get away.

The succession of events were very similar to those of other cases where a man quits honest work for a dishonest course.

It seems hard for the world to learn that lesson; the facts gather in a lot on that same score. The first step may look not so very serious—it is taken and is perhaps successful; the second step is always there, tempting and daring the victim to come on and take the bigger chance for the bigger game. At the end there is a revolver crack, a dead man and a police cell. Any man who has gone through the mill will turn back in his best hours and tell the young men "Don't start."

Hard work and clean friends is a safe course.

How Fast We Do Work.

The International Association of Public Employment Services has been in session at Toronto. Their discussions are at least interesting, whether they accomplish anything or not.

One speaker asks why the steel industry, for instance, has on its payroll 441,560 names in January and only 292,469 in October.

The answer to such a question is plain—in January there were orders on the books, and men were wanted to fill them. By October the orders had fallen off, therefore the men were let out to look for work elsewhere, or wait until the steel business picked up again.

At all such gatherings there is always the speaker who deplores the fact that boys are not to be found learning trades today as they used to be. There is not the call for tradesmen, so it would be a waste of time for a boy to learn some of the old trades. The metal working industry has all changed. How often, for instance, is there a call for the old-fashioned machinist, the all-around man, skilled and competent? He is probably making use of some part of his skill today on a quantity production job that any man could learn in a month.

Our system of competition for trade is hard and relentless; it speeds up ways and means until they hum and throb and belch out goods away beyond the ability or willingness of people to buy them up. Then, when the warehouses are filled the human element is turned off to shift in other directions.

We are developing a mania for producing faster and greater than the world can absorb.

Why Is Slang Used?

A writer in the Manchester Guardian deals at length with "slang," condemning it as the enemy of sincerity and as "teaching a whole generation to suppress its natural instincts for worship and reverence."

He starts with the phrase "highbrow," claiming that is a massed attack to bring the better things down to a lower level. That word is not often used here now, and is generally regarded as the conception of an average person for something he considers a little too deep for his mentality.

The Guardian writer even takes the words "sob stuff," tracing them, with their twin phrase, "reaching right down into the heart," to the literature used by moving picture promoters. In a way "sob stuff" is very expressive. We have a type of writer who seeks to write in such a way that the tear valves will respond. The word "sentimental" would not cover the field, neither would "fake pathos." When a person says "sob stuff" the whole story has been told.

Slang comes and slang goes. "Cut it out" replaced "stop it" for a while. "They canned him" likewise came into use for the sad old phrase "he was discharged." "They pinched him" is more popular than "he was placed under arrest," and "some person got next to his wad" conveys the cheerless news that his pocket was picked.

We pass baseball parlance up as hopeless. It is new every day, and the phrases that the inventive minds of a crowded bleacher turns out in an afternoon could neither be fully recorded nor understood. It is a language all its own, not a dead language, but so facile with wins or losses that it cannot be rehearsed. It is a gift about four months long.

The young man who is called upon to pay an extra street car fare says "he was nicked" for the amount; the man who takes his car to the garage says he "was fined $5.00." The late-at-night man who took off his shoes and yet failed to get in unnoticed says "puss-footing is a lost art."

Why do we do it? Can any person tell? Is it that our life and conditions are changing so rapidly that our old vocabulary has no words to interpret our ideas, or is it that the superficial way in which we are inclined to regard many things formerly taken seriously has extended its influence to our method of communication?

No one will condone slang, and yet how few are free from an occasional lapse into its grip.

Let the Work Go On.

The National Railways for the first eight months of 1922 earned $17,575,114 more than in the same period last year.

This veritable "devil-fish of a railway" seems to thrive on the "Whisper of Death" menu.

All the people of Canada ask now is that the Montreal Star, and all the fine, choice haters of the National Railways it represents, will get off the track, off the platform, and keep away from the premises entirely.

Their absence is more to be desired than their friendly advice.

The Worker Rides to Work!

The cartoonists and the jokesmiths and those who write weighty financial opinions have all had their fling at the workingman who drives his own car to work.

The fact that it may be a used car, or that he may have been ingenious enough to make it himself makes no difference. This man, a mere worker, drives to work, and therein lies a great economic crime.

Well, why shouldn't he? Where is the fault in the situation? If he is a good worker, commanding good wages, able to buy a car for cash or on installments, why shouldn't he drive to work?

It would be perfectly all right were he to wait for a crowded street car and hang on the back steps for five or six miles—yes, that's democratic, and indicates that the man is keeping, or being kept, in his proper place.

And he can do the same thing again at night. Get in with the crowd and make another dreary five or six miles, filled up with stops and starts. People might even sympathize a bit with him, and politicians would weave their full dinner pail speech about his lot and habits.

But when the man lifts himself out of that crush and drives comfortably to and from work, the cartoonists get busy, the paragraphs dip their pens deep, and the economist writers go into a trance on the reason for all our troubles.

If a man who works hard at some useful occupation is not entitled to ride to work in his own car, then who is?

It Has Happened Before.

Already the poor work of trying to stack up one nation against the other in the Greek-Italy trouble is proceeding.

This is an old game and has been played by the war makers for ages.

One despatch tells Jugo-Slav sentiment is all with the Greeks in this question, while another says that France is much inclined to side with Italy.

Thus national sentiment and national hatred is being made and directed, while the great mass of the people have no cause to quarrel.

The old diplomats are working in the old way. The world war to them meant nothing, and the voice of the people is not yet being heard.

Note and Comment.

A Greek restaurant keeper who serves macaroni on his table must be straining his national conscience to the breaking point.

FUTILITY.
I've done my best—when that is said I've only said the half! My best—what is it anyhow? Ve gods, it is to laugh! Me—what am I? and you? Alas! A butterfly, a blade of grass, An ant, a speck, a hopping flea Who ask the gods to laugh at me.

You've done your best—you've been so true,
You've tried to heed the call;
You might have done much worse, had you
Not tried to do at all!
But what are hours? And what are tears?
And what are smiles? And what are fears?
We come—we live—we strive—we
And all our best is just to try!

THE HIGH COST OF PRIDE.
A man's pride shall bring him low; but he that is of lowly spirit shall obtain honor.—Prov. xlii, 23.

There is no fault more expensive than pride. It forfeits favor and wins dislike. Other men resent a neighbor's self-complacency because it interferes with their own.

Whatever just claims he may have to merit are discounted by a too evident sense of it.

If he really has no claim at all, or but a very small one, a haughty spirit exposes the nakedness of his defects.

Pride increases the power of little slights to give us pain, and lessens the power of real approval to give us pleasure.

It is never satisfied with the applause. Someone in the front row did not clap—someone in the gallery did not cheer—why was that?

Were they sneering secretly? Pride enlarges our assets in imagination, but diminishes them in reality.

The man who thinks too much of himself has less thought and force to give to his work.

Let us consider the High Cost of Pride.

Is it worth the price?

SUNDAY VISITORS.
Editor of The Advertiser:
Sir,—I wish there could be some way of getting people who know when they are not wanted without offending them. For the last three weeks we have had company at our place on Sundays. During the week we had the thing that means, with the extra cook and maid, and a good rest, as many hours as we could get. On Sunday we were about all in. The day was not arrived. They were going to spend the day with us; they had not hinted they were coming; it was that old game of surprising the people, and the surprise was that my wife and daughter had to spend the whole day in the kitchen getting something ready to eat.

I know of another case across from us, where the family was getting ready to go to church on Sunday morning, when visitors came in. They stayed quite plainly that they didn't want to

Your Health: Why Banishing Fear Will Add Years to Life

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.

Just now I saw a little gray bird alight on a post, not more than five feet from where I am writing. I paused in my work, keeping perfectly still, to watch him.

His eye was so keen that the tiniest movement attracted him. His hearing was so acute that the slightest sound caught his ear. His feathers were smooth and glossy. He was so full of energy that to keep still for four seconds was impossible.

He hopped up and down, turned around, dipped his head, snapped his bill, twisted his neck, and performed feats which would do credit to a renowned athlete.

The state of health of that little bird is the result of a simple, perfectly regulated life. He never stays out at night. He never remains in bed in the morning. He never goes out on a spree of any sort. He has out-of-door life all the time, never poisoning himself by an evening in a vilely ventilated place. He eats when he feels like it and keeps trim by constant exercise.

Of course, human beings cannot live as the birds do. They have the demands of society and the problems of domestic support to consider. But the fact is, we could live more as the birds do, if we only thought we could. We get all fussed up over trifling things. Instead of hopping away, or taking flight, we sit down and listen to the gossip of some social hawk. Perhaps we join in the flight of the hawk who goes soaring in great circles over the neighborhood, seeking to discover everything going on in the community. We watch the hawk, in sudden swoop to catch in bill and talons some helpless social rabbit or chicken. When the hawk's work is finished there is left nothing but bones and tendons.

We live in fear of the social hawks. We do this, that and the other thing for fear we may be swooped down upon if we do not conform to the hawk rule.

Fear is the curse of all existence. It is a bane of animal life as it is of human life. But animals deal with this problem better than we do. Most of them run away from terrifying things. We human beings are afraid, but also we are afraid to run.

Because we are afraid we cringe, we hold our natural impulses in subjection, we suffer such shock of our delicate nerves that all our functions are disturbed.

The bird laughs at the thing he fears. He flies over it—he rises above it.

REPORT CROPS GOOD IN QUEBEC PROVINCE

Statistical Bureau Optimistic Over Outlook If the Fine Weather Continues.

Special to The Advertiser.

Quebec, Sept. 6.—The provincial statistical bureau issued at noon today a bulletin which shows the condition of the crops in the various regions of the province, based on reports received from official agronomists of the department of agriculture. In general, the 1923 crop will prove to be a good one providing fine weather persists and allows the ripening of certain cereals in the lower part of the province.

There are certain counties in the northern and lower sections of Quebec where the crop will not be as good as first thought, but in the eastern townships and the district of Montreal the crop will be about the average.

CLAIM TOKIO SUFFERED 612 SHOCKS IN QUAKE

Three Hotels in Yokohama, With Occupants, Hurled From Cliff.

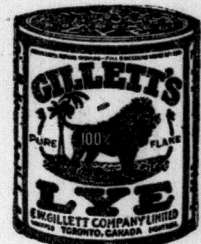

Special to The Advertiser.
Washington, Sept. 6.—Latest cables and wireless messages from the scenes of Saturday's shocks, showed Tokio suffered 612 shocks in its three days' cataclysm. 250,000 houses were destroyed, mostly by fire. Yokohama suffered more severely than the capital, with scarcely a building except the banks, left standing. Three hotels were hurled from a cliff, carrying their occupants to a terrible death. The Oriental Palace Hotel was swallowed in a crevice, only the top story and a half remaining visible.

BOARD KEPT COST OF SCHOOLS WELL INSIDE ESTIMATE

Financial Statement For Seven Months Shows Board Living Within Its Income.

DETAILED FIGURES

A financial statement of receipts and expenditures of the board of education for the first seven months of the year, prepared by Treasurer Bell, shows that the various departments of the board are so far well within the estimates struck at the beginning of the year.

Several large expenditures have been incurred, but in no case is a deficit likely. The report, which will be referred to the budget committee, goes into detail, giving both estimates and actual expenditures up to July 31 last.

Estimates of receipts for the year for the public schools were $51,027.34, and to the end of July, $31,242.53 had been received, allowing approximately $20,000 to be collected in the remaining five months.

Public school expenditures were estimated at $52,340.27, while at July 31, $34,846.86 had been spent. The largest items in the expenditures were teachers' salaries, $25,761.79; interest on debentures, $11,551.33; sinking fund, $8,457.04; fuel, $5,315.39; salaries, $61,333.55; London South Collegiate, salaries, $19,560.72; fuel, $1,593.64. An overdraft of $18,708.21 from 1922 is also included in the expenditures.

At the Technical School, receipts were estimated at $38,062.29, and so far, $21,999.50 has been collected. Disbursements were fixed at $36,368.23, and at July 31, $26,764.15 had been spent. Of this, salaries accounted for $48,394.64; fuel, $3,975.18; interest, $7,391.92; sinking fund, $3,320.82.

On the equipment account, the estimates called for an expenditure of $5,100, while $4,151.93, including an overdraft from 1922, has been spent. But this deficit will be taken care of by the maintenance surplus for the same year.

Children's Day At Aylmer Fair Outstanding Success

Special to The Advertiser.

Aylmer, Sept. 6.—The feature offering of Children's Day at the Aylmer Fair was the parade of the school children representing the various schools of the district. Forming up in Aylmer Park, at the rear of the postoffice, the children, led by their respective teachers, paraded to the exhibition grounds and before the audience on the grandstand, where judging and awarding of prizes took place.

On reaching the grounds, exhibitions of fancy drills and physical exercises were given and, to judge by the great amount of applause given the participants, it reached the hearts of the onlookers and was just what they most desired.

Jaffa School, S. S. No. 21, under the direction of Miss Green, was awarded first prize for the best drill. Kingsmill School, No. 15, in charge of Miss Caverley, came second, and Mount Salem School, in charge of Miss Gardner, came third.

Mount Salem was awarded a prize for the school coming the greatest distance and also for having the largest number of pupils, while Jaffa School was given first prize for having the neatest appearance both in the procession and drill.

Vernon McDonald of Tillsonburg was successful in taking the majority of prizes in the fruit class, while second honors were won equally between Mrs. Bert Thompson of Aylmer, and L. L. Skilling of St. George.

Winners are as follows:

Members of the board of education have extended their compliments to H. B. Beal, principal of the Technical School, on the efficient manner in which he has undertaken to look after the interests of the pupils of that institution by conferences with the parents.

More than 200 parents of children have been interviewed by Mr. Beal, with a view to selecting the courses best suited for the pupils' needs in after life, and with a regard for their inclinations. This is a decided step forward in local educational circles, and as such should be of mutual benefit to school, pupil and parent.

CITY HALL BALL TEAM TO TEMPT FATE AGAIN

Will Take the Field Tonight Against L. and P. S. Ball Tossers.

Some people—the Famous City Hall Players, as an instance—win the doughnuts as gluttons for punishment. Not content to shrink into oblivion after their defeat the other evening, they take the field tonight against such stars as the London & Port Stanley Railway. The result is a foregone conclusion.

Manager MacNamara's crew are more optimistic today, however, and were vastly cheered by the announcement from Inspector Phipps that "Charlie" Turner would not be umpire again. There seems to be a wide difference of opinion in municipal circles as to the collector's methods in this capacity, and in order to forestall possible trouble in the crowd tonight, the management of the twilight league has deemed it wise to change referees.

Also pitchers and catchers and left fielders. No change has been made at third base at a late hour this afternoon. "Jimmy" Bell says that there is no better team in the city than the city hall club. Some people believe him. Thousands don't.

The troops will mass on the front—the federal square—a famous site for famous players.

Mayor Wenige is taking a lively interest in the exploits of the members of the United States and the team. "Cricket is certainly an interesting pastime," he observed this morning, glancing over the score—28-21. "I'll try and be on hand to night and get some pointers. I don't know a great deal about cricket."

The city hall squad and the boys from the storage yard will consolidate their forces tonight. A special meeting is being held this afternoon, when the two managers will endeavor to pick out the best players on each team to play the rail men.

Curtain rises at 8 p.m.

ENTER INTO TRAINING FOR THE PRIESTHOOD

175 Ecclesiastics Begin Studies at the Quebec Grand Seminary.

Special to The Advertiser. Quebec, Sept. 7.—With the usual impressiveness, but marked by no special ceremony, one hundred and seventy ecclesiastics, who are to study theology to become priests, were admitted to the Quebec Grand Seminary this morning. Out of that number sixty-one were new theological students, which is a little over the usual quota, showing that there is a little decrease in the number of those attracted to the service of the altar. There were ecclesiastics from all parts of Canada, from the United States and from Newfoundland. The length of the course varies from three to four years, after which the theological students are conferred the order of sub-deacon and finally ordained priest.

CONTINUE PUBLICATION OF BRITISH LABOR PAPER

Plymouth, Sept. 7.—The Trades Union Congress, by a large majority, decided to continue The Daily Herald, the labor organ, for another three months.

Announcement was made recently that owing to financial difficulties The Daily Herald would cease publication on September 30, unless the trades congress decided that its life should be prolonged. In this connection, it was stated that during the past year the congress has spent $28,000 on The Herald. The Herald, a short time ago, stated that its circulation had never exceeded 300,000, whereas it required a circulation of 500,000 to be kept going.

PRISONERS' WAGE PLAN FINDS SOME INDORSERS HERE

All Right as Long as Convicts Cannot Compete Against Union Labor, Say Lawyers.

MUSTN'T UNDERSELL SCHOOL IS CROWDED

Prison reform measures recommended by the Canadian Bar Association yesterday are regarded in varying lights by local barristers. The proposal to allow wages for prisoners is generally indorsed if it is found possible to employ a system that would not work against the advantage of organized unions.

If the Canadian Bar Association's wage suggestion is carried out, a jobless citizen would be able to procure good positions in any jail by the simple expedient of breaking a window or punching a passkey in the face. He would be arrested, tried, convicted, and would get a highly remunerative job in a penitentiary. But, as J. M. Donahue, local solicitor, pointed out, it is hardly reasonable to suppose that any normal man would resort to such methods of securing employment.

Richard Ivey of Ivey, Elliott & Ivey, barristers, had not studied the proposal to any extent, but he did not think the suggestion was the "proper thing." Jail sentences were imposed for the purpose of punishing violators of the law and not to provide for the purpose of paying wages for convict labor would be satisfactory. J. M. Donahue, however, looks at the proposition from a different angle.

Favors Wage Plan.
"I've always been in favor of wages for prisoners," Mr. Donahue said, "so long as there is no competition with legitimate union wages. I am vigorously opposed to the system of letting a man in four walls without giving him an opportunity of contributing to the wealth of the country."

"But wouldn't that policy cause many jobless men to commit crime so they could get jobs in a jail?" he was asked.

"That wouldn't be a proper choice for any normal man to make," Mr. Donahue said. "My opinion is that the only way the system could be worked out to everyone's advantage is for the prison authorities to give convicts union wages if the work they are doing is likely to compete with the products of organized workers. This plan is in operation in many American states."

"I believe it is possible to inaugurate a system of prison wages that would be in harmony with organized unions. Or if this could not be accomplished, it is possible to reimburse prisoners engaged in organized occupations. There is room for improvement in the handling of convicts and every measure designed to benefit them should be instituted."

Must Not Underseil.
E. W. Flock would not hazard an opinion regarding the Canadian bar's recommendation for prison reform, but he agreed with J. M. Donahue that the only difficulty in the way of prison wages was the problem of avoiding competition with other trades.

"The question has come up again and again," he said. "There was a scandal in Kingston penitentiary regarding the making of binder twine. It was shown that the products of prisoners had come in competition with the outside industry. This was obviously unfair to legitimate binder twine employers and employees. If prison wages are to come into effect the prisoners' productions must not be allowed to sell under the prevailing retail price."

LAWYER COMMITS SUICIDE.
Associated Press Despatch. Canadian Press Despatch. Moose, Sask., Sept. 7.—F. G. D. Quirk, lawyer, committed suicide in his office when two provincial police officers visited him in regard to his possession of an army rifle. When the officers questioned him, Quirk withdrew to an inner room, drew a revolver from his desk and shot himself through the right temple. He died instantly.

ATTENDED VETERINARY CONVENTION.
Dr. W. Wilson has returned to this city after attending the 49th annual meeting of the Ontario Veterinary Association, which was held in Toronto, September 4 and 5. Dr. Wilson was reappointed a member of the educational committee of the association. During the meeting a very interesting paper was read by Dr. Schofield on "Sweet Clover Ensilage Poisoning." Some important changes in the veterinary science practice act were also presented and adopted. The meeting was well attended.

FILES AN APPEAL AGAINST AWARD IN SALES TAX SUIT

Toronto Firm Takes Exception to Findings of Mr. Justice Kelly.

Canadian Press Despatch. Toronto, Sept. 7.—Retail merchants and others will watch with interest the progress of the appeal set down at Osgoode Hall by Versailles Sweets Limited, Toronto, from the judgment delivered and the penalties imposed by Mr. Justice Kelly in the proceedings taken by the attorney-general for Canada, on behalf of the king, in connection with the federal sales tax.

Mr. Justice Kelly penalized Versailles Sweets Limited $75 for failure to collect and pay the sales tax, $75 for failure to take out a sales license, and $10 for failure to take out a manufacturer's license. As to these amounts, the judge stated that his disposition of the case was not to be taken as a precedent.

NEW INVENTION OF COL. LAWLESS AID TO SWIMMING

Local Military Man Perfects Apparatus For Use in Water.

TESTS SUCCESSFUL

A swimming apparatus which, according to the inventor and many people who have tried it out, will surpass all makes of modern water wings and life belts now used, has been recently perfected by Col. W. Lawless, D.S.O., of this city.

For two years Colonel Lawless has been working to perfect his new apparatus to aid in the teaching of swimming and supplant the cork life belts now used on all ships.

Colonel Lawless is a well-known swimmer and diver, and in teaching swimming he has found that the water wings generally used by beginners did not permit free action of the arms and legs, that they would prove to be absolutely useless in the deepest water, and that could be fastened on quickly and easily.

Form Buoyant Support.
The new type of wings form a buoyant support between the elbow and shoulder. They are made of rubber covered with canvas and inflated slightly with air. When in use they enable the bather to swim in any position without the head sinking below water. They have been tried out by many Londoners this summer and have been pronounced by all to be of great aid to the novice swimmer.

Colonel Lawless has secured world patent rights on his invention, and hopes to reap great success when they are introduced in the United States and Canada.

Colonel Lawless has made several experiments with his invention. He has found that a larger variety will support a 200-pound weight, and can be used for military purposes. He himself has swam across water 100 feet deep carrying an army rifle, and so great is the buoyant support, the swimming sleeves afford that the rifle could be fired from the water.

Are of Great Value.
Used in the teaching of swimming, they are of great value. Colonel Lawless said a person using the new form of water sleeves could learn to swim in a week, a lifeguard to whom he was talking the other day said that he would be of great assistance at public swimming pools and other bathing places where a person not knowing how to swim could slip the sleeves on and render help in the case of a drowning accident.

Colonel Lawless has pitched a summer camp at Pond Mills, and it is there that he has perfected his swimming sleeves, and has carried on his experiments. Tomorrow morning he is to try them out on some of the children of the city.

MINERS REJECT TWO PROVISIONS OF PINCHOT PLAN

Leaders Claim Wage Increase Must Be Included in Contract Made.

WANT CHECK-OFF

Special to The Advertiser. Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 7.—Union chiefs representing the striking anthracite miners today drew up recommendations rejecting two provisions of the Pinchot peace plan.

A full scale committee will pass upon these suggestions in a meeting at 1 p.m., and upon their decision rests the outcome of the present strike, which has completely tied up anthracite mining.

The union leaders maintain that no contract can be negotiated until the settlement of the strike unless it embodies more than a 10 per cent increase for day laborers and the union check-off. If the scale committee sanctions this program, the indications are that the present negotiations may break down, and the strike will continue until some new outside solution is advanced, for the two parties get together on their own account.

NEW INVENTION OF COL. LAWLESS AID TO SWIMMING

Local Military Man Perfects Apparatus For Use in Water.

TESTS SUCCESSFUL

A swimming apparatus which, according to the inventor and many people who have tried it out, will surpass all makes of modern water wings and life belts now used, has been recently perfected by Col. W. Lawless, D.S.O., of this city.

For two years Colonel Lawless has been working to perfect his new apparatus to aid in the teaching of swimming and supplant the cork life belts now used on all ships.

Colonel Lawless is a well-known swimmer and diver, and in teaching swimming he has found that the water wings generally used by beginners did not permit free action of the arms and legs, that they would prove to be absolutely useless in the deepest water, and that could be fastened on quickly and easily.

The Million Dollar Doll

By C. N. AND A. M. WILLIAMSON.
Authors of "The Lightning Conductor."

An Awkward Situation Arises; the Strollers Meet Sheridan's Aunt.

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY.

Miles Sheridan, made wretched by his wife's infidelity, is attempting to facilitate her obtaining a divorce by creating a scandal about himself. To this end he has secured $20,000 to Juliet Divine, a beautiful show-girl, known as the Million Dollar Doll, if she will take a yacht trip with him. Juliet is unable to go herself, but greedy for the money, she persuades Jossie Desmond (Terry), her lovely and unbelievably innocent half-sister, an exquisite counterpart of herself, to go in her stead, masquerading as the Million Dollar Doll. Ever since a kindness Miles did in her childhood, Terry has made him her Dream Prince, and now she is grateful for the opportunity of serving him.

Betty Sheridan, Miles' wife, is in love with Paul di Salvano, a handsome Italian. Eustace Nazio, a wealthy Greek, who does not know of Terry's relationship to Juliet, is in love with the younger girl.

Mrs. Harkness, Miles' old servant, prepared to hate the Million Dollar Doll, is won over by Terry's sweetness and charm. Miles has stipulated that he will have nothing to do with the girl on the voyage, but already his resolve is wavering. He does not recognize the lovely girl whom he befriended so long ago, but he is surprised to find the notorious Juliet Divine so girlishly charming. In order to make the scandal known, he appears at Monte Carlo with the girl.

CHAPTER XLIX. A Queer Viewpoint.

They turned the corner between the Casino and the Hotel de Paris, and were on the upper of the two terraces, where the crowd mostly only congregated between eleven in the morning and the hour of dejeuner.

Through the group of palms behind the marble bust of Berioz, they could see the romantic shape of the rock where Hercules landed, the gray towers of the ancient stronghold of the Grimaldis, and the huge modern bulk of the Prince's Museum. To the left, far away floated the mountains of Italy, behind and above the olives and pines of green Cap Martin, and straight in front was the sea, so deep blue that it seemed to have drunk the color from a paler sky.

On chairs shaded with huge umbrellas, close to the Casino, a number of men and women in summer clothes sat beside little iron tables drinking mineral waters for a "cure."

On green benches near the terrace balustrade sat more men and women gazing out to sea, watching a couple of hydro-aeroplanes, or studying little books of the systems they meant to play at roulette. And along, the grav-

Are You the Woman You Were Meant To Be?

Every woman was meant to be healthy, happy, and fill her sphere in life to the best of her ability; but, alas, how few have the health or physical endurance to live up to their ideals! Over-ambitious, many of them develop nervousness, irritability, headaches, backaches, irregularities, and often more serious ailments, which retard their progress in life. Women in this condition should turn to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a root and herb medicine which has been proven to benefit 98 out of every 100 women who try it. Let Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound make you well and strong, and the woman you were meant to be.—Adv't.

eled promenade—brown in shadow, gold in sun—strolled many more men and women.

Some were young and handsome and smartly dressed; girls in tennis frocks, men in flannels. There were marvelous middle-aged women, clinging to the ragged edges of their youth with the aid of Poiret or Lucille; middle-aged men, once soldiers or statesmen, now resigned to fate, as their wives' escorts; but the majority were dull, dowdy creatures, whose sole mission in life was a burning interest in their own food, luck at play, or other people's millions or scandals.

Everyone stared at Sheridan and his companion, and many looked after them when they had passed. Suddenly, from the group of water-skiers under the sun-umbrellas, a lean figure rose up, and came hurrying forward; the figure of an elderly woman in black, with a tiny Pekinese tucked under one arm.

"Why, Miles!" she shrieked. "It can't be you!"

Terry glanced at Sheridan. His face flushed. He was not pleased with this meeting. Why not? she wondered, since they were on parade together, for all the world to see?

His hat was off, and he stopped with evident reluctance. The girl, in her inexperience, did not know whether she ought to pause also, or walk slowly on. But the decision was snatched from her.

"And, of course, this is dear Betty!" upon the girl a smile which suggested the lady in black went on, bestowing in a flash a great rush of teeth to the head.

A thin, knuckly hand hung with old-fashioned rings, reached out for the small, white-gloved one carrying Juliet Divine's gold-mesh bag, and she dropped the bag on the gravel.

Miles stooped to retrieve the glittering thing, and Terry felt that he was glad to stoop just then. It was his hat, she thought, and she had to thank him for it. But they were only small thoughts. She could not read the big ones.

"I wouldn't have recognized you, my dear," from the Miles said, "when you married, but photos never do us justice, do they? They look older, and don't show our color."

"Now, do come and sit down and tell me all about yourselves; how you got here and how long you're going to stay, and everything. I'm ordered by my Mendocino doctor to take the Vichy cure, which you know they give at Monte Carlo now, as well as at Vichy itself. So I'm obliged to drive each morning—though, of course, quite against my principles, as I don't approve of Monte Carlo."

Her stream of words had given Miles time to recover himself, and for Terry to realize that this must be the aunt of whom Mrs. Harkness had spoken. The girl guessed that Sheridan would have preferred to let the lady hear the truth about the situation from Harky, rather than let it should burst upon her in this sensational way.

"Terry's cheeks were no longer red. She had a sensation of physical sickness, and the blood drained from her face to her heart."

"This is not Betty, Aunt Caroline," Miles had at last a chance to explain. "His aunt did not let him finish. 'Oh, my dear boy, I must apologize,' she said. 'I'm so near-sighted, and I don't like wearing glasses except when I read. You're on the Riviera by yourself, then, and this young lady is just a friend you have met on the terrace.'"

"Now I look closely, she's not at all like Betty's photograph, though she's very charming, and I should like you to introduce us. If she's an American, I dare say I know some of her people, though I've lived mostly in France and Italy the last few years; my dear little Peke is such a bad sea traveler."

Miles hesitated for a second. When his aunt heard the scandal (she was sure to hear it in a few hours or days) she would be righteously indignant with him for daring to introduce a girl of Juliet Divine's type.

But to ignore the request would be a slap in the face for his companion, and strangely he found that he preferred to insult Miss Caroline Sheridan rather than hurt the girl. This was a queer viewpoint. But there it was!

Redtail the Hawk Discovers the Nest of Jack the Gray Squirrel.

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Redtail the Hawk makes it his business to know all that is going on in the Green Forest. At least he tries to know all that is going on. Those wonderful eyes of his, looking down from up in the blue, blue sky, can see much that others would fail to see. But once in awhile he misses something. It happened that he missed the building of the new summer home of Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel and Mrs. Happy Jack. He missed it because he had been busy elsewhere during the days when the new home was being built. It was just as well for the builders that he did it. It might have been hard work for them to dodge him had he tried to catch them at that time.

It was a week after the new summer home was completed that Redtail discovered it. He was circling above the Green Forest, and finally swung around so that he looked straight down into a certain big beech tree. He knew that tree very well, so you can guess how surprised he was when he discovered in it a great mass of twigs and leaves.

"Ha!" exclaimed Redtail to himself. "That is new. That gray rascal Happy Jack Squirrel has a new summer home. No one else could have built that. I shall have to keep an eye out. Yes, sir, I shall have to keep an eye out. I've tried a good many times to catch that rascal, but always he has managed to dodge into a hole in a tree. I ought to be able to catch either Happy Jack or Mrs. Happy Jack here, for now I will know always where to look for them. Their old home was more or less of a secret, but this is no secret at all. I can watch this from so high up that they will never notice me. My how good a Squirrel dinner would taste. It is a long time since I have had one."

Then Redtail circled off and went hunting in quite another direction. You see he was clever, was Redtail. "I'll keep away from here for awhile," said Redtail as he flew along. "I'll let them think that I haven't found out about their new home. If they are not bothered or frightened for awhile they will grow careless. I never knew it to fail. Just leave folks alone and they seem to forget to watch out for danger. Happy Jack and Mrs. Happy Jack are foolish folk. They didn't really need a summer home. By building it they are simply inviting me to catch them. I'll accept the invita-

THE DAILY SHORT STORY

LOVE AND ROMANCE.

By CORONA REMINGTON.

It's dreadful not to be the least bit in love; not even to have anything hanging around to fall in love with; and to see everywhere couples looking at each other with that how-I-adore-you, darling - how could I live-without-you expression on their faces. On every side, my fiancée, my girl, my husband, my wife. Everybody had somebody - except Violet Ramsdale.

Then came John Hodges. He walked into her life as easily and unexpectedly as well, as most lovers do. The minute she saw him she knew—she absolutely knew he was going to propose to her. She could feel it in every bone of her body.

"I'm mighty glad to meet you," he said, grasping her hand, warmly. There was something so spontaneous and out-going about his nature that no one could help liking him, nor feeling liked by him. Success was written all over him.

"Ch, but it fits you so beautifully," he whispered.

"I'm glad you like it," she said, after a moment. "Yes, you may call me that."

For the girl all life had changed. The sun seemed to shine with a new significance — the flowers bloomed just for her. Life was so important now, so real, so unreal, could she be the same girl? Surely not.

Hodges took her here, there and everywhere. Each evening they went together, and often lunch time found them seated across the table from each other in some quiet little restaurant. He wooed her impetuously, sent her flowers and brought her candy.

"You're so good to me," she said, gratefully, one evening, as he was rising to go.

"How could anyone help being good to you?" he asked. "You're so — so absolutely adorable."

Violet flushed and trembled. He was going to propose—she knew. What should she say? What should she do?

"Violet, I—I love you."

He was drawing her into his arms. His eyes looked big, almost startled, so close to hers. "You lovely thing," he said reverently, kissing her.

It was over, the experience of her life, the one for which she had been waiting so long. She had been wooed and won—and kissed. That night, after he had gone and she had retired, she stared at the dark ceiling, and lived over the blissful evening. She didn't want to go to sleep. She could see for a moment even endure the idea of shutting out all those thrilling memories with sleep? Sleep was for those who were bored and unhappy.

Then in going over his every word for the fortieth time, it occurred to her that, after all, he had not really proposed—that is, he had not actually said the words—but of course he meant it. Did he mean it? The rest of the night was not so pleasant, and by the time she finally fell asleep she was glad that she had only let him have two little kisses.

The next morning she was decidedly uneasy, and she remembered now a slight feeling, not exactly of mistrust, but perhaps more a feeling of not complete trust, that she had always had when she was with him. But it was so sweet to be loved, and she had been so lonely.

"What makes you so quiet and solemn today?" asked her employer, Jim Foster. "You don't seem a bit like your happy little self."

Violet flushed and looked down at her typewriter.

"I don't believe it's anything," she said shakily.

"Well, if you need any help or advice, Violet, remember Jim Foster's right here."

She flashed him a grateful look, and turned to the jangling telephone.

"This is John, darling," came the voice over the wire. "I'm so sorry I have a business engagement, and can't get down to take you to lunch today. So, so sorry, my dear."

So she went alone at noon and chanced to go to a dainty little tea-room with any agent of the Canadian National Railways.—Adv't.

feel all the lonelier. She had been sitting there a few minutes when she recognized the back in front of her as John's own well-tailored back. He was leaning across the table talking to a pretty girl.

"You know I love you," she heard him say, in a low tone, and in her horrified mind Violet could see his eyes glowing as he had when he had kissed her the night before. She jumped up and hurried out of the tea-room unobserved.

"Why, what's the matter, Violet?" her employer asked, as she rushed into the office. "You haven't been gone ten minutes, and you look as if you'd seen a ghost."

"Oh, nothing, nothing, nothing!" she whispered, bursting into tears.

"Well, there's only one place for you, and that's right here."

He held her quietly in his arms, and stroked her soft hair.

"You know," he was saying gently, "you need a man like me to shoulder your woes, and when you are tired of running around with that heavy heart, I'm going to propose to you, dear. I've been watching you, though, and I believe in letting a girl have it out. Sooner or later you'll find out he's not the kind for you, else I'm very much mistaken in him or it."

It was not romantic, this second proposal of hers, but it was so comfortable, and so good.

"I'm through," she answered, meekly, a moment later. "I've found out, but I would have had to have that first experience to be able to appreciate you. I know now there's a big difference between love and romance; but there's a whole lot of romance that isn't love."

"Right you are, but our's shall be both," he promised, happily.

Make the Rinso liquid first

Do not put Rinso direct from the package into the tub. Mix half a package of Rinso in a little cool water until it is like cream. Then add two quarts of boiling water, and when the froth subsides, you will have a clean amber-coloured liquid. Add this liquid to the wash tub, until you get the big lasting Rinso suds. Then soak the clothes clean.

Rinso is as splendid for the regular family washing as Lux is for fine fabrics.

When You Can Be Well, Why Be Sick?

Why Suffer Delay and Grow Worse?

Enjoy Life—Health—Happiness

To Have No Back Pains, No Nervousness, No Kidney Disease, With Plenty of Life, Energy and No Blood Disease, Is the Wish of Every Young, Old or Middle-Aged Person.

To you—if you are sick—if you suffer—if you are afflicted with any ailments of MEN—if you are worn out, tired or failing, if you need medical advice—if you are not in perfect health—if life is a dragging, miserable existence—if you lack energy, vim and vigor that make life worth living, to you—rich or poor—young or old—you need my treatment at once.

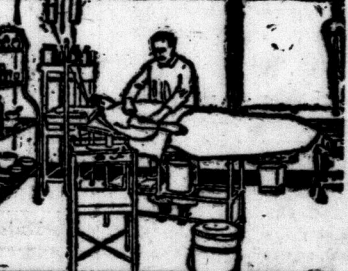

Nerves and Blood Are Life
The lack of nerve force is found among men of all ages. This is true with men in all walks of life, from the day laborer to the mechanic or professional man. Merchant and clergy are alike sufferers—no man is exempt from the ailment who has rebelled against nature's laws—so if you have the result of overwork, dissipation, sedentary habits or worry, and your vital organs are disturbed, remember, delay in seeing the right doctor makes it more difficult to overcome the symptoms, and you might reach an incurable condition beyond relief if you delay too long.

My Equipment
Is composed of the latest and best known agents in Electrical, Surgical and Mechanical Apparatus, and I am prepared by the knowledge of their uses and the experiences in prescribing them so as to get the greatest uniform results from them.

I Am Prepared to Give You
Sursum, Bacterin, Vaccines and any and all forms of treatment of this character that have been tried and proved a success.

YOUNG MEN—THINK OF YOUR FUTURE

How about it—are you qualified to face life—are you doing more and getting more out of life than you are? Find out if you don't know already, what is dragging you down. No one can violate nature's laws and succeed. I have helped thousands physically, mentally, morally. I believe I (as I have thousands of other men), can help you. Just be frank and tell us your troubles. Let me help you to regain and maintain your health.

NO PAIN, NO LOSS OF TIME FROM WORK BY SCIENTIFIC METHODS

MY EXAMINATIONS ARE SEARCHING. MY TREATMENT IS SCIENTIFIC. MY CHARGES ARE REASONABLE. DO NOT LET MONEY MATTERS NOR FALSE PRIDE KEEP YOU AWAY.

MIDDLE-AGED MEN

Constitute a large part of my practice. At this time of life a most important physiological change takes place and men feel the need of an experienced doctor for men to not only treat them at this critical period but as well to advise them as to what to do and what to avoid to regain health, strong nerves and a sound body once more.

The Dangers of Bad Blood Overcome by SCIENTIFIC METHODS

SKIN ERUPTIONS—ECZEMA, ACNE, PIMPLES, ETC.—ARE NATURE'S WARNING.

OLD FRIENDSHIPS

An old friend isn't a friend one has of, as friendship seems to think. He (or she) is a friend whom one has

A LA MODE!

For Late Summer Days and Early Autumn

Late summer means new between-season hats. And nowhere have we seen more becoming ones than the soft, furry, velours which were just today lifted from their tissue paper wrappings.

Velours, in pokes, demurely drooping, or jaunty, up-titling brims, indescribably youthful in their effect. Attractive embroideries in contrasting chenille or ribbons. But newest of all are the intriguing chapeaux of softest velour, with leather facing in a contrasting shade.

Predominant in fall shades—and most apt to catch the wayward fancy!—are the varied browns of the autumn woodlands.
Here are chestnut, labad, cocoa with its alluring tinge of red, pheasant brown and amber in many warm and glowing shades.

No smarter nor more useful style there is, nor one better suited for wear between the waning of one season and the approach of the next. Just picture yourself, smartly clad in a tailored English suit, with a leather-faced velour hat and the important accessories of gloves, handkerchief, and
bag. It is a combination you will find irresistible for the coming cool days of autumn! Second Floor.

MUSCOLINI REFUSES TO CONSIDER COMPROMISE

ITALIAN PREMIER STANDS
BY HIS ORIGINAL DECISION

Mussolini Emphatically Declares That Italian Government Will Never Consent to Arbitration by League of Nations—
Claim Nation's Honor Is At Stake.

INTER-ALLIED COUNCIL AWAITS WORD

Associated Press Despatch.
Paris, Sept. 7.—"The ambassadors' conference can reach one of three conclusions," said Premier Mussolini in discussing with Le Matin's foreign editor the negotiations for settlement of the Greco-Italian dispute.

"It may be decided that the culprits were Albanians and not Greeks," the premier said. "That is a pure hypothesis and very unlikely. In that case certain parts of my ultimatum can be modified, and Greece held responsible in a lesser degree, which the conference can exactly do."

"The second conclusion is that the Greeks did commit the murders. If it is a decision there can be no doubt but that the conference would be entirely in agreement with my demands."

"The third possible conclusion is that not only Greeks but Greek officials were responsible."

In that event the premier said, he supposed his demands "would be increased and completed by supplementary penalties."

Rapping out each word sharply, Mussolini then asserted: "Nothing will make me recede from my position or accept a compromise at the expense of the nation's honor. We will not admit that the offense to Italy by the crime committed against our officers can be discussed and judged by the assembly at Geneva, and allow me to say that I believe you would do the same in our place."

COUNCIL AWAITS WORD.

Associated Press Despatch.
Paris, Aug. 7.—The Inter-Allied Council of Ambassadors, after a lengthy session this morning adjourned until 3 p.m. to await definite word whether Italy is prepared to accept the mediation of the council in the present Greco-Italian dispute. All further discussion, it was said, are contingent upon Italy's reply.

During the morning session the ambassadors discussed the advisability of sending a commission to the scene of the massacre of the Italian boundary mission to conduct an investigation and report upon the responsibility for the crime.

The French government favors attempting to settle the Italo-Greek question by every possible means before appeal is made to the League of Nations, and thinks the ambassadors' council is the most authoritative body to deal with the crisis. It is expressly pointed out, however, that the French viewpoint embodies no implication of the league's incompetence, but owing to the opinion expressed among the smaller nations that the league's prestige would be greatly affected should it fail to settle the question, the French would keep the supreme test from the league and recommend it only as the last resort.

TO MAKE EVERY EFFORT TO BRING IN SETTLERS

Canadian National Railway
Vice-President Outlines
Colonization Policy.

"It is the intention of the Canadian National Railway to use every possible instrument in its power to bring Canada and in the British Isles, not only to bring desirable people into this country, but to take care of them after they arrive."

At the Transportation Day luncheon of the directors of the Canadian National Exhibition, W. D. Robb, vice-president in charge of colonization, development and other departments of the Canadian National Railway, thus outlined the policy which the railways have in mind, and intended to follow in the matter of colonization and immigration along the lines of the system.

According to Mr. Robb in his address on this day, the railways, since the advent of the present management, have been planning an active and effective campaign to deal with the important need of Canada for greater population.

"The policy," he said, "of the Canadian National Railway must, of necessity, be regulated by that of the Dominion government and Canada's ability to absorb and assimilate newcomers."

Mr. Robb further stated that he believed the solution of Canada's immigration problem may not so much in the endeavor to bring people into this country, but in making Canada and conditions here so attractive that people would come of their own accord.

U. S. AIR DREADNOUGHT
HAS SUCCESSFUL FLIGHT

Dirigible ZR-1 Makes Second
Flight in Perfect Order.

Special to The Advertiser.
Lakehurst, N. J., Sept. 7.—The super-dreadnought of the air, the dirigible ZR-1, made its second flight here last night. It was dragged out of the hangar by 400 men, rose slowly into the air as the sun was setting, and after swinging into a wide arc, returned for a landing at 7:40, gleaming in the electric lights strung over the field.

Officers at the United States naval air station were enthusiastic over the flight and declared the dirigible could not have done better. All six engines were tried out during the trip, and every detail of the mechanism was in tiptop condition when the ship landed. Weather conditions were ideal for the trip. Commander Weyerbacker, in charge of the ZR-1 construction, and Commander McCarty, flight commander, who were aboard the dirigible as it gracefully swung out in the direction of the sea, announced they would advise the navy department in their official reports that the latest addition to naval aeronautics was prepared for any sort of trial. The flight consisted of two flights, principally intended to note adjustments of the controls and ballast manipulating apparatus and also to afford the navigators and ground crew further opportunity for practice in handling the ship. All details went through according to schedule without a hitch.

LAWSON AGAIN LEADING
VICTORIA GOVERNMENT

Associated Press Despatch.
Melbourne, Australia, Sept. 7.—Victoria's new government has been formed with Hon. H. S. Lawson as premier and minister of agriculture and water supply. The new ministry includes W. Allan as minister of lands and immigration, in place of D. Oman, who had that portfolio in the former Lawson administration. Sir Arthur Robinson is again attorney-general and solicitor-general, as in the late ministry.

JAPANESE PARLIAMENT HOUSES IN RUINS.
Among the state buildings destroyed by the earthquake, flames rapidly destroyed the greater part of the Japanese parliament buildings. Due to the flimsy construction of the buildings in the Jap capital and the lack of water the flames raged the city from end to end unchecked for hours.

E. V. Buchanan Talks On the Rumanian's Scheme for Keeping
Montreal Harbor Open.

GOOD IF FEASIBLE

Plans of Dimitrie J. Joanowicz, Rumanian inventor, to keep the harbors of Montreal and Quebec open for winter navigation are labeled "fantastic" and "far-fetched" by E. V. Buchanan, general manager of the public utilities department.

Mr. Buchanan's opinion was supplemented, however, by the remark that if by any chance Joanowicz's invention should prove to be all he claims, it would mark an evolutionary step in the history of navigation. It would also eliminate one of the biggest problems met with in the operation of hydropower plants.

"In the winter ice forms on the surface of Niagara causing a great deal of trouble when it comes into the power house," Mr. Buchanan said. "If Joanowicz's invention is as great as she thinks it is this difficulty may be overcome. But I am inclined to think his ideas are impracticable."

"I understand the inventor wants $2,000,000 for his plan. Well, if it can really keep the harbors open in winter it will be worth many times $2,000,000. The St. Lawrence, Baltic and Stockholm harbors would be affected. But I do not take much stock in these evolutionary inventions. All the big discoveries of the world were the work of men who added improvements until a perfect instrument or invention was developed. The Rumanian's plan may be the germ of an idea for immense improvement along that line. I don't think it will work as it is."

Mr. Buchanan instanced a somewhat similar claim made by an inventor who believed he had invented a device to divert fogs on steamship routes. The scheme seemed feasible on paper but nothing ever came of it.

At the present time a method is being used in hydro-electric plants by which compressed air is blown through the water keeping it in a state of agitation and thus preventing freezing. Mr. Buchanan could not say whether the method had proven successful.

"It will be interesting to learn how the Rumanian's invention turns out," Mr. Buchanan added. "Personally I don't think it is the splendid thing it seems on the surface."

QUEBEC PUBLIC WORKS
REACH TOTAL $5,000,000

Special to The Advertiser.
Quebec, Sept. 7.—Apart from some 60 steel bridges, which are being built in all parts of the province, the provincial department of public works has now in progress works on public buildings estimates at a cost, when completed, of over $5,000,000.

OUTLINES DEMANDS

Special Cable to The Advertiser.
Rome, Sept. 7.—"The rights of the little nations cannot include murder of the representatives of great nations," Mussolini said to the Matin correspondent.

"Our inquiry has revealed sensational circumstances in connection with the assassination of our representatives in Paris proceeded with the murder of the representatives of great nations," Mussolini said to the Matin correspondent.

"The first one is very improbable, but I like to consider it. It is that the Albanians, and not Greeks, committed the murders. In that case our ultimatum to Greece would be modified, as the only responsibility of that country would be a territorial one."

"The second conclusion might be that the Greeks were responsible for the murders, and that case my demands must be accepted in their entirety."

"The third conclusion might be that the Rumanians were responsible. In that case my demands will be increased."

BRITISH DOMESTICS LEAVE TO ACCEPT CANADIAN WORK

Associated Press Despatch.
London, Sept. 7.—One hundred and fifty domestic servants left Liverpool today on the steamer Montclair for Canada. Most of them possessed $250 or more and had been offered good positions in the Dominion at $10 a week, including board.

On the same ship 100 orphan boys and girls between the ages of 13 and 16 years sailed. They are being sent out by the Catholic Emigration Society.

INSURANCE FIRMS
IN CANADA SUFFER
LIGHTLY IN QUAKE

Principal Business in Tokio and Yokohama Carried by Native Companies.

ENGLISH FIRMS HIT

Special to The Advertiser.
Montreal, Sept. 7.—While absolutely no official information is available as to actual losses, the likelihood seems to be that losses among Canadian and American insurance companies in connection with the Japanese earthquake will be very light, according to information gathered in communication with leading insurance authorities in Montreal.

In regard to life insurance losses, the opinion is general among life assurance men that companies from this side will be only lightly affected. The massed population in Japan, which is bound to be the great sufferer, did not do business with American and Canadian companies. The latter confined their business almost exclusively to the foreign residents of Japan and the better class of Japanese.

Owing to the much more condensed population in Japan, an enormous death toll can be amassed in a case like this, over a very small area, but that death toll will be principally amongst the poorer classes, who if insured at all would be covered by Japanese companies. As regards fire insurance, the position appears to be even more certain.

"I stand for economy and retrenchment," continued the mayor, "but not to the point of inefficiency. It is true that the city council expenditure this year is about one-half mill in excess of last year, but Ald. May must not forget that we are also taking care of a deficit left over from 1922, of which he was a member."

Ald. May Voted.
Mayor Wenige this morning made a hasty review of city council activities since the earthquake, and reported to The Advertiser that Ald. May had voted for the following:

1. The British survey of several city departments.
2. The Western University grant of $55,000.
3. The registry office, amounting to $70,000.
4. Vote to retain the Carling street juvenile court premises, a needless expense with the court in the city hall.
5. The Technical School debt of $70,000.
6. The Western fire debt of $20,000, for which no funds were available.
7. The $5,000 guarantee for the Western fire against possible shortage.

"Now, I am not opposed to certain of these expenditures," the mayor explained. "But I am just pointing out to the voters of ward one that here was ample opportunity for Ald. May to register a negative vote if he felt that the citizens' money was not being wisely expended. I note, incidentally, that he declined to vote either way upon the superannuation proposal for the late assessment commission. He did not care to make a decision one way or the other."

WOMAN DIES FROM BURNS
WHEN STOVE EXPLODES

Canadian Press Despatch.
Pembroke, Ont., Sept. 7.—Mrs. M. Patterson, wife of Matthew Patterson, local pump house keeper, died here yesterday from injuries received when the stove on which she was preparing breakfast exploded. She was alone at the time, so nothing definite is known as to how the explosion occurred.

BRITISH CONSUL DIES.

Associated Press Despatch.
Shanghai, Sept. 7.—British vice-consul Haigh at Yokohama was killed in the earthquake, says a British naval wireless received here. The wife of Surgeon-Commander William Haigh, who was in charge of the Yokohama naval hospital, also was killed, but the remainder of his staff and their families escaped.

MAYOR REBUKES
MAY'S RIDICULE
ABOUT TAX RATE

Wenige Declares He Has Practiced Economy in Civic Administration.

REVIEWS ACTIVITIES

Mayor Wenige today delivered a stinging rebuke for Ald. John T. May, who yesterday ridiculed his worship's proposed 30-mill tax rate for 1924, and charged that Mayor Wenige and his associates this year have not been practicing the doctrines of economy and retrenchment.

"The mayor has practiced economy and retrenchment this year to the best of his ability," his worship stated. "And I have exercised the same judgment as I would in my own business. I would ask if Ald. May would do the same for the city as for his business?"

Can Be 30 Mills.
"I say that the tax rate for 1924 can be 30 mills. Of course, Ald. May or the other members of the council cannot have it so if they do not choose to."

Mayor Wenige charges that Ald. May is not abiding by the wishes of the majority of the electors of this city. He cites an instance—the new city hall issue.

"Ald. May opposes the wish of the people who want their new city hall on the McCormick site," Mayor Wenige challenged. "What is his attitude in this respect? We find that during the past year, as in 1922, he is using the construction of a hall on the corner of Ridout and King streets, about a half block from his place of business. Is that why he wants the city hall on the county site? Because it would be near his store?"

Had Many Opportunities.
"If Ald. May was so anxious to have retrenchment he had the opportunity many times this year to vote accordingly. Take, for instance, the issuance of $70,000 Technical School debentures, which move I vigorously opposed, we find that he voted for this. He did not follow the advice of the mayor, who felt that here was one instance where it would be safe to retrench."

"I stand for economy and retrenchment," continued the mayor, "but not to the point of inefficiency. It is true that the city council expenditure this year is about one-half mill in excess of last year, but Ald. May must not forget that we are also taking care of a deficit left over from 1922, of which he was a member."

I note, incidentally, that he declined to vote either way upon the superannuation proposal for the late assessment commission. He did not care to make a decision one way or the other."

Wenige, and in fact a majority of the council, insist that the people will never vote to purchase the road unless a definite purchase price is established and there is concrete assurance that this price will not be changed after the election and they have sanctioned the deal.

In addition to this, the people of London must be given a good idea of what it will cost to rehabilitate the road and place it on a paying basis. This will require further time and effort and action is urged at the city hall and by all involved in the enterprise.

Would Popularize Canada's Authors By Organization

FORM ASSOCIATION

Former London Writer Declares
Too Much Americanism in Canadian Life.

Organization of the magazine and novel reading public into the Associated Readers of Canada has been commenced by Hopkins Moorhouse, noted Canadian author, and former Londoner.

Mr. Moorhouse, who was in the city this week, is devoting his time and energy to the gigantic project of selling Canadian periodicals, novels and short stories to Canada. His plan is to educate the public to an appreciation of their own literature, to cultivate a national consciousness, and to dissipate the universal tendency toward literary creations of the United States. In a word—to make it worth while for the Canadian author to stay in Canada by stimulating domestic demand for his work.

Mr. Moorhouse's prime object is to organize the reading public into the Associated Readers of Canada. Members of this association will be asked to subscribe to Canadian magazines and patronize Canadian authors. It is also interested in promoting a demand for Canadian news and special newspaper features.

Mr. Moorhouse outlined his ideas to The Advertiser.

The late editor of the Canadian Bookman in authority for the statement that less than 1 per cent of the books sold in Canadian book stores are by Canadian authors. Less than 1 per cent!

"The sale of a new Canadian copyright novel is considered 'good' if it reaches 5,000 copies. The average is nearer 3,000. A literary book of verse may sell 500 copies."

"Some of the larger Canadian newspapers have a monthly bill for customs duties on books, imported from the United States, $300. Comic 'strips,' colored pages, stories, verse and what not, come in never-ending streams, to be used as 'features' in our daily press. It is practically all American. I have seen references to 'our president' and 'our flag' (Stars and Stripes) in Canadian papers—syndicated material!"

In business methods 'modern' means 'the cat's paw.' Our advertising models are found, of course, in the United States.

"Where did the Canadian 'dapper' come from? Jazz?"

"Where do our young people get their slang? Go where they foregather and listen to them tell the world it's the cat's paw. You'll hear the very latest Americanisms. 'In short'—

"If the United States suddenly sank into the ocean during the night and left Canada high and dry, imagine the pickle Canadian people would be in! They would wake up with a shock and realize that they are dependent upon the United States for daily inspiration!"

An American magazine too tactless to be read by the Canadian. We would fight over the baby of Paul Whiteman and his orchestra—or grand opera gems! Think of the frantic newspapers with their twisted—stale stories dangling in mid-air. Guests' daily verse missing and Walt Mason gone! No more signs, trying to get out papers along the telegraph wires! Gump would never call again and no more of der doggedated stenographers' mail der ding-busted languishes!

Public Has Solution.
"But this can be done without penalizing the Canadian reader. A Canadian literature can be legislated into existence nor a Canadian magazine made by eliminating competition. Many American magazines and books meet Canadian tastes. Let us enjoy these favorites but also give the Canadian product more support because of the handicaps of increased cost in the isolation of the hands of our own public, which is a loyal and level-headed people."

"All this is the average result of 9,000,000 people living in close harmony with 110,000,000, both English-speaking and facing similar continental conditions. The bond of fellowship between Canada and the United States is in the blood of the people and will never be severed."

"It is not a question of becoming anti-American. We need American stimuli, and welcome them. But, having looked at the facts in the face, it remains for us to ask ourselves, as Canadians whether we are satisfied to be, quite so completely, a tributary nation in our own land."

The Associated Readers of Canada. Mr. Moorhouse added, is organizing with the definite object of encouraging Canadians to do more reading of good literature in general, and particularly to direct attention to the necessity of a wider reading of Canadian periodicals and books.

"Our plans are the outcome of much careful thought and experiment over a period of years, and we are assured of the support of educational leaders, practically every patriotic organization in Canada, literary societies, university alumni, school teachers, Canadian Clubs, service clubs, every author, artist and musician in Canada, the leading writers, poets and Canadian publishers. No live Canadian citizen in any walk of life can fail to approve of what we aim to accomplish."

"We plan to put into practical operation a unique home library service for our members where the mail goes in Canada, circulating thousands of the best-selected Canadian books in Canadian homes, no matter how isolated. Thereby we hope to so familiarize the Canadian public with Canadian literary achievement that when they go into a bookstore to buy a new book they will know who are our Canadian authors and something of what their work is like."

"Imagine the gaps in Canadian life through loss of a thousand subtle influences by which Canadians are Americanized today. Some of these influences are not objectionable, some certainly are!"

"By absorption of Canadian artistic talent as rapidly as it develops

RUTH CHAPTER PLANS RECEPTION TO OFFICERS

Arranges For Handkerchief Shower At Home of Mrs. George Logan.

Ruth Chapter, O. E. S., is planning a reception and banquet to be held in the chapter rooms, Ulster Hall, on Wednesday evening, September 19, when the guests of honor will be the newly-elected grand officers, who are also members of the chapter. They are John C. Dodge, Mrs. Bert Logan and Miss Blanche Rowe. Mrs. W. R. Thompson has been made convener of the reception, preliminary plans being made at this week's meeting of Ruth Chapter. Another important piece of business at this meeting concerned arrangements for a handkerchief shower to be held at the home of Mrs. George Logan, Dundas street, on Tuesday evening, September 18, in aid of the chapter bazaar, on the last Wednesday of October. Mrs. E. M. Insley is convener of the shower. There are also several eucubes being planned to raise money to be used in connection with the bazaar. The report of the matron, Mrs. Oliver Brady, on proceedings at the grand chapter meeting, was also a feature of this meeting. Ruth Chapter patrol will have charge of a refreshment booth in the new manufacturers' building at the Western Fair under the convener-ship of Mrs. W. R. Thompson. Proceeds from the booth will be used to purchase uniforms for the patrol.

W. C. T. U. DINING HALL OPENS AT FAIR TODAY

Exhibitors Are Already Demanding Meals From This Popular Eating House.

The members of the local W.C.T.U. have been busy all this week, preparing to serve hundreds of Fair visitors with hot meals throughout the coming week. The W.C.T.U. dining hall, located under the grandstand at the fair grounds, will be open today to serve exhibitors, who are now busily engaged erecting their stalls. Yesterday was spent in making the well-known W.C.T.U. puddings, which are always part of the bill of fare at this popular dining-hall. Mrs. J. Goodman, the Fair superintendent, and Mrs. Lyons, who has charge of the dining-hall, are exceptionally busy, as is their excellent corps of helpers. Mrs. H. W. Paddell, president of the union, is another energetic worker. Even as early as yesterday, people began calling on the W.C.T.U. for meals to be served.

Just Suppose Dorothy Dix Discusses the Fairy Prince as a Husband

Suppose You Had Married Your Ideal Man. His Good Looks Would Breed Jealousy; His Caveman Tactics Would Give You a Black Eye; and His Romantic Lovemaking Would Never Stock the Family Larder.

There comes a time to every married woman when she looks across the table at the man to whom she is united in the holy bonds of wedlock, and wonders what made her do it—when she speculates sadly upon what life might have been if only she had married her ideal.

Well, madam, suppose you had married the Fairy Prince of your girlhood dreams. He would have been very handsome, tall, and slim, and straight and lithe; far different from the fat, tubby, bald-headed gentleman who is your yoke-mate. Your ideal certainly would have been easy on the eyes. It would have been a joy to your esthetic sense to contemplate his godlike lineaments, and as you heard the murmur of admiration that always greeted his appearance you would have felt a thrill of pride.

Or would it have been jealousy instead of pride that agitated your bosom?

Few women are afflicted with astigmatism when a good-looking man is in sight. Nor can they resist making fools of themselves over him or a fool of him. So the wife of an Adonis has her work cut out for her. She has got to meet all comers, and defend her title of wife, no matter how she is handicapped by age, weight or lack of nimbleness on her feet, and the only way she can win out is by putting more punch in her flattery, and giving more of a wallop to her adulation than younger women do.

Without doubt it is a great thing to have a living picture in the house, but real works of art come high—especially when they are portraits of romantic looking men. The pleasure a woman experiences in owning one of these is slightly dampened by hearing everybody draw invidious comparisons between them and say: "Is THAT his wife? Do you mean to tell me that magnificent looking man is married to that little frump of a woman? You would have thought he would have picked out somebody in his own class!"

No, my dear, you would not have been better off if you had married your handsome Fairy Prince. The unromantic little man who is your side partner may not be much to look at, but he's mighty comfortable and wise with. There's a lot of peace and rest in having a husband that other women are not trying to get away from you, and it's a heap more soothing to a wife's nerves to have her husband burn incense before her than it is for her to be on the jump keeping the punksticks alight before him.

Perhaps your ideal was the caveman. Every woman dreams of marrying a strong, masterful man who will be hard and cold to all the balance of the world, but wax in her hand. Every woman dreams of being wooed by a human cyclone, and being dragged off to his two-by-four furnished flat by the hair of her head.

And when matrimony gets dull, and flat, and commonplace, and she is so bored that she is about to yawn her head off, she looks at the meek little man that turns his paw envelope over to her without opening it, and wipes his feet on the mat before he dares enter his own door, and she thinks how many thrills there would be in matrimony if only she had married her ideal he-man instead of the weak sister she did.

Certainly there would have been more thrills in it if she had gotten her ideal caveman—also more black eyes, and barrels more of tears. For there isn't any such animal as the man who is a raging lion abroad and a lion at home. It's the other way about. Nor is any wife, in these days, going to stand for a master as long as the train is still running to Rembrandt.

Cavemen and sheikhs are fine in novels and moving pictures, but for real, comfortable, everyday living, there is nothing like a good, thoroughly domesticated, housebroken husband.

Perhaps your ideal was a man of the artistic temperament. A poet and a dreamer. A man whose soul is set on the higher things of life. A man who would make love to you in beautiful language, and discourse to you by the hour about souls. A man who would help you to psycho-analyze yourself, and find out why you thought what you thought you thought, and feel the way you believe you feel.

A man who would wander away into the woods with you on beautiful spring days, and lie at your feet and tell you that your eyes were just the color of bluebells, and that you would sit entranced by the fire on winter nights while you played him stormy Russian music. How different your ideal is from the business man to whom you are married, who doesn't know a thing about poetry, but is a wizard in the hardware trade; who thinks you need a dose of liver medicine when you have vague yearnings in the spring, and who thinks that the way to show a woman that you love her is to make life soft for her, instead of palavering over her.

Reflect, sister, that the wives of poets and dreamers mostly live on shabby back streets and have to fight it out with the butcher, and that, after all, there are few better ways of love-making than to say it with checks. You may pine a little for romance as you roll around in your limousine, but you'd long a lot more for a limousine if you had to hoof it with romance. After all, as we complain of our husbands and wives, how different your ideal is from the bargain counter and we had a second chance, don't you suppose that most of us would find ourselves going back home with the same old bunch of goods?

Your Home and You

INTERESTING WINDOWS.

One day last spring, as I walked down the street of one of our great cities with a discerning friend, we passed a tall house that had an air of charm and likeableness, although it was in most respects exactly like all the others in the row. It was a solid block of brick or stone buildings, each with an attractive entrance, but otherwise bare facades filled with windows. I spoke of this particular house, and my friend, glancing at it casually said:

"It must be a studio."

"Why?" I asked.

"Oh," he answered, "only artists and some few architects know what an interesting effect is given by small-paned casement windows, opening vertically instead of horizontally, as the ordinary double-hung window does. Look at these other houses—there is no suggestion of home, of beauty, of artistry. You can quite well imagine that the rooms behind these windows are uninteresting also. They may not be, of course, but certainly the windows tell you nothing."

"Now look at our studio facade. The windows are of the casement type, opening outward. Their panes are tiny, charming, imaginative. They make the outside of the house look quite as you know the inside must look—full of interesting persons and things. If I were going to remodel or even merely alter a house, the first thing I would do would be to take out every double-hung window and put in casement windows. They will fit in the same openings, and the change can be made with very little labor and no serious expense."

"These casement windows may be obtained so that they open inward, but they are not as weather-proof as those that open outward. The wind and rain cannot blow them open or leak in through them. Above all, they have individuality and beauty as well as practicability."

Breakfast Dish For September

Smothered Liver.
Take any liver you can get, beef, calf's, pig's, sheep's or deer's, cut into slices with salt pork in the proportion of one pound of pork to two pounds of liver, peel and slice four large onions, arrange in layers in a pan, pork in bottom, then liver and onions. Pepper liberally, cover tightly, put the pan in a large cooking pot and let it come to a boil slowly. Cook for three hours. The liver will be tender and juicy. Note that no water and no salt are used in this dish. Put only in the cooking pot in which the panful is boiled. It cooks in its own juice. There is no more appetizing dish for a hungry man than this. Four onions to the two pounds of liver and one of pork. Remember. If you happen to have any sage, thyme or summer savory, a sprinkling will be an improvement.

Answers to Food Questions
Answers to readers' questions regarding diet will be given by Winifred Stuart Gibbs, food specialist, writer and lecturer on nutrition. Questions should be accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped envelope, as only those of a general interest will be answered in this column; others will be answered through the mail. Address: Winifred Stuart Gibbs, 37 West Twenty-ninth street, New York City.

Will you tell me just what is meant by protein? Also, is the protein in vegetable foods just as good as it is in meat?—H. L. A.

Tell you the complete story of protein food would make a book on physiological chemistry. I take it that all you care to know is the practical value of protein in the diet. The first thing to remember about protein is that it is the only one of the five food principles that supplies nitrogen, and nitrogen is absolutely essential to life. Therefore protein food is relied upon for sustaining the body in all growth and life processes. The great examples of protein foods are meat, milk and eggs. As to your second question, the protein in animal foods is quite different chemically from vegetable proteins. For quick digestion and assimilation there is no doubt that the former supply more nearly the needs of a body that is demanding quick and perfect upbuilding. Don't misunderstand this; our good old friend Mixed Diet is just as important as ever; the quick building up best supplied by animal proteins is only part of the story, the other part being that of the fruits, vegetables and cereals. But our immediate subject in hand is this one type of food, the protein group, and it is this group alone that we are discussing.

Would you kindly give me the correct diet for my boy? He'll be 5 in September. At present we seem to be having trouble with him because of indigestion. He has had, when 6 weeks old, and we have thought this weak digestion might come as a result, as I had flu when nursing him.—Mrs. T. B.

The child should weigh about 35½ pounds, and measure about 48½ inches. As to diet I can give only suggestions for perfectly normal conditions. As all diet from normal health must be watched by a physician. Here is a diet plan:

Breakfast.
Main Dish—Poached egg or scrambled egg with minced bacon (small slices) or bacon alone or codded egg. Cereal—Rolled oats or flaked cereal (other days omit).
Bread—Toast, one slice, with 2-3 pat of butter.
Beverage—Milk, one glass.

Dinner.
Main Dish—Lamb chop or portion of chicken or roast lamb, 1 slice, or beef cake, broiled.
Vegetable—Chopped spinach, two tablespoons, or puree of corn or string beans or cauliflower. Any of above to be accompanied by two tablespoons of potatoes, mashed or baked.

RECIPE FOR POTATO PANCAKES.
Two cups grated potato.
Two eggs.
Half teaspoon salt.
One tablespoon flour.
Few grains of pepper.
The potato should be peeled and kept in cold water over night, drained and grated in the morning. Beat the eggs separately; mix all the ingredients, brown in thin cakes in butter. In winter serve with meat, in summer serve with tomato or brown sauce.

To test the temperature for roasting meats cut a small slice in the meat and insert a thermometer. Rare meat requires an internal temperature of 131 to 149 degrees F. medium, 149 to 158, and well-done meat must have a temperature of 158 to 176 degrees. For hamburger steak purchase a piece of bottom round and have it ground or grind it yourself.

Dessert—Junket or custard, two tablespoons.

Supper.
Main Dish—Poached egg or summer squash or creamed asparagus tips (nine) or baked potato or steamed tomatoes with rice (one heaping tablespoon).
Bread—Two slices with butter.
Beverage—Milk, one cup.
Dessert—Gelatin or prune whip or floating island or sliced peaches or baked apple.

NUTRITION NUGGETS.

The addition of a small quantity of sugar to bread dough will hasten the growth of the yeast plant and the "raising" of the bread.

In making fruit gelatin pudding be sure to cook pineapple before combining with other fruits in the jelly, otherwise the mixture will not set. One suggestion for selecting food properly is to divide your food allowance into five portions, spending one part for milk and milk products; one for fruits and vegetables; one for meat, fish or eggs; one for bread and cereal foods; and one part for sugar, butter, tea, coffee, chocolate, and flavorings.

Poor, tea that can be sold at a low price is extravagant in use. A good tea like "SALADA" makes more cups to the pound, and is therefore really economical.—Advt.

STEN TO ME' DRAWS WELL-FILLED HOUSE

Popular Musical Comedy At Grand Theatre Gains Favor of Audience.

"Listen to Me," with its second lot to the city, drew an excellent house at the Grand Theatre last night. One or two of the principals have been replaced, the lines have been touched up, the dancing a trifle red, but in the main the show is the same as that which quite distastefully gained favor last season. Barbara Bronel, whose dancing was a sensation of the 1922 presentation, has given way to Peggy Earle, latter fitting nicely into the role of Mary Picklefest, as well as the other dances which the character is for.

Farguerite Williams might be considered better than the Betty Dawn of last year in the role of the red-haired girl. It is fortunate that McGee has been retained as "nowball." The role of "Tillie the upper" is a little more into the background of this year's performance. Last year it was a decided role, managing it well.

The settings and costumes, one of the strongest drawing-cards the show possesses, have apparently lost nothing in a year of travel.

"Listen to Me" has already played a number of large audiences at Grand. It remains here today and tomorrow. It is sufficiently attractive to warrant three more good houses.

At the Movies Last Night

"The Girl of the Golden West."

"The Girl of the Golden West," the feature picture at Allen's, is a stirring though not gaudy drama of the days of '49, when the riffraff of the world had gathered in Southern California on the discovery of gold.

The Methuselah Quartet, billed as "Four True Israelites from the House of David," proved a novel feature at Allen's last night. Each of the singers was garbed in a natty summer costume, but what attracted most was their luxuriant beards and long-flowing hair. The unusual actors performed well and their renditions of "Carolina Mammy" and other southern love songs were good. They also used some clever by-play of the modern stage, and their banter being their Biblical appearance, in fact they took so well with the audience that they were forced to reappear for two encores.

In conjunction with the act a short picture was shown, entitled, "Inside the House of David," and Shiloh, and other houses on the estate of recent "King Ben" fame were shown.

"Luck."

Unfortunately John Hines' new picture, "Luck," is stamped with mediocrity. Apparently having started out with no particular ambition, it can hardly be called a failure, but from a fairly decent start it descends into a series of rubber-stamp events, and becomes nothing more or less than an elongated comic. "Luck" could scarcely pretend to be of the same class as the last John Hines' picture shown here, "Sure Fire Flint."

But in spite of this drawback, and the one redeeming feature, that (whatever its other faults), "Luck" is not slow and long-drawn out, the bill at Allen's manages to be entertaining.

The vaudeville bears most of the burden, although the short screen features are each worth seeing. The vaudeville opens with two acrobats, who make a short act a very spectacular one. Their big feature is spinning in mid-air, while held by the teeth, a stunt which Lillian Lettzel made famous the last time a circus visited the town.

Lillian Lettzel made a favorable impression upon the afternoon audience. Her act is pretty and unusual. Its three sections are each of distinct variety.

The headliner depends more upon the susceptibility of the audience than upon skill. In its undertakings to provoke laughter it seems quite successful.

"The Victor."

Silver-sheet offerings of well-to-do young men who win fame and the hearts of their beloved by forsaking their harum-scarum lives for the rope arena, are becoming rather common nowadays. Some of them are fair and others are flukes, but "The Victor," now showing at the Patricia, is a good portrayal of the aforesaid plot.

Herbert Rawlinson can usually be depended on to furnish a hour of interesting amusement and he makes the most out of his opportunities in "The Victor." Another star in the role might not be so pleasing, but Herbert is quite an acceptable person to deliver the K.O. when his "sweetie" is in the front row to see him win, shortly after throwing him down cold because he is a "common pugilist."

lunch was served. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson left later, amid showers of confetti, on a motor trip to Hamilton and Toronto. The happy couple will reside in Windsor.

COWLES-PLETSCH.

Special to The Advertiser.
St. Thomas, Sept. 6.—A pretty wedding took place Wednesday at 2 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. August Pletsch, 81 Alma street, when their daughter, Annie Katharine, was married to Thomas Edmond Cowles, Detroit, Mich., son of Mrs. T. O. McKnight, Gravel road, St. Thomas. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Curley officiating at the ceremony. The lovely young bride was prettily frocked in gray canton crepe with cut steel beads, small gray French model hat and she carried an arm bouquet of Sweetheart roses. Miss Frances Balantine of Mount Clemens was the bridesmaid and wore a gray dress, gray hat and carried Sweetheart roses. Mr. John Doerr, brother of the bride, attended the groom.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride, which was prettily arranged with a profusion of pink and white roses. Mr. and Mrs. Benn left on a wedding-trip to Buffalo and Niagara Falls and other points, and on their return will reside in Detroit.

SMITH-FERGUSON.

St. Thomas, Sept. 6.—A quiet but very pretty wedding took place on Labor Day, when Rev. H. E. Thorne of Alma Street Presbyterian Church united in marriage Hermon Wilbur Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Smith of Detroit, and Evelyn Ferguson, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fergus Ferguson, 29 Woodward avenue, this city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. E. Thorne, who was assisted by Miss Catherine Clark, who was a becoming suit of navy blue and carried a shower bouquet of pink roses. The groomsmen were Thomas McCulley of this city.

After the ceremony, a wedding dinner was served.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold barpin, and to the groomsmen gold cuff links.

GARSDIE-LITTLE.

A pretty autumn wedding took place at Kensal Park Baptist parsonage, London, at 4 o'clock on Monday, August 27, when Jessie Burns, youngest daughter of the late Thomas Little of Liverpool, England, was united in marriage to Robert Charles Garsdie, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Garsdie, Pipe Line road. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. W. Young. The bride, who was attended by Mrs. Edith Smith, looked lovely in a navy blue tricot suit, with gray hat and shoes, and wore a corsage bouquet of Ophelia roses and lily of the valley. The groom was attended by Mr. Gordon Smith of London. Following a delightful luncheon, held at the home of Mrs. Alfred Thompson, the happy couple left amid a shower of confetti for Sarnia, Detroit and Toronto.

CLARKE-MILLS.

Trinity Church was the scene of a pretty wedding yesterday afternoon at 8 o'clock when Beatrice Ida, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Clarke, was married to Frederick J. Clarke, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Clarke, also of this city. Rev. M. Hale performed the ceremony.

The church was fragrant with summer flowers and palms, and the ceremony took place under a graceful arch of white blooms. As the wedding party entered the church, the wedding march was played by Miss Adeline Chambers. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely gown of white canton crepe, fashioned with a circular skirt.

6% First Mortgage Sinking Fund Gold Bonds

Dated August 1st, 1923

Due August 1st, 1948

Principal and semi-annual interest (February 1st and August 1st) payable at the holder's option in Gold at any branch of the Royal Bank of Canada in the City of New York, or in Sterling at the Royal Bank of Canada, London, England, at the fixed rate of $4.50 3/4 to a sterling. Coupon Bonds in accordance with the provisions of the Act in relation to the registration of securities as to principal and interest.

Redeemable as a whole or in part at the Company's option on any interest date on 60 days' notice at 105 and accrued interest.

TRUSTEE: Montreal Trust Company, Montreal.

CAPITALIZATION		Authorized	Issued
First Mortgage 6% Bonds due 1948 (this issue)		$5,000,000	$2,500,000
Seven Per Cent Cumulative Preferred Stock		1,500,000	1,500,000
Common Stock — shares of no par value		25,000 shs.	25,000 shs.

THE COMPANY was formed to acquire the Ottawa & Hull Power & Manufacturing Company and to provide funds for extensions to the properties acquired. Increasing demand for power necessitated additions to the Company's plants and equipment.

PROPERTIES: Two power plants owned and located on the Ottawa River at Chaudiere Falls, immediately adjacent to the cities of Ottawa and Hull, which upon completion of additions now under way, will have an installed capacity of 40,000 h.p. In addition the Company controls through stock ownership a power capable of 60,000 h.p. development. This power is 50 miles from Ottawa and is located in the Province of Quebec, as are both the other plants owned.

SECURITY: These bonds are secured by a First Mortgage on the entire fixed assets of the Company, now owned or hereafter acquired, comprising hydro-electric plants developing 40,000 h.p. The funded debt of the Company per developed horse-power is one of the lowest in Canada being approximately $62 per h.p.

EARNINGS: The net earnings of the Ottawa & Hull Power & Manufacturing

Company Limited for the year ended December 31st, 1922, according to the audit of Messrs. P. E. Ross & Sons, available for interest amounted to $238,729.48, or more than one and one-half times the interest charges on this issue. As this financing provides for the installation of a third unit of 9,000 h.p., which will be disposed of through competitive bidding, the net earnings should show material increases. The following estimate of net earnings available for interest is based on the actual results to date and from the increased revenue to be received from additional power to be taken under existing contracts:

1922	$270,000
1924	300,000
1925	325,000
1926	350,000

After this date, earnings should show material increases due to the Company's interest in the Ottawa River Power Company.

TERRITORY SERVED: The territory served, which includes the cities of Ottawa and Hull, is a rich residential and manufacturing district and is a centre of the lumber, pulp and paper industries, where there is an increasing demand for hydro-electric energy, both for domestic and industrial purposes.

We offer the above bonds as, if, and when issued and received by us, subject to the favorable opinion of our counsel.

WOULD POPULARIZE CANADIAN AUTHORS

our big friendly neighbor to the south—intentionally, but no less effectively—is completing dominating Canadian habits of life and thought."

Lacks Canadian Market.

The Canadian author, Mr. Moorehouse explained, is forced into exile by lack of a Canadian market. That means lack of Canadian magazines sufficiently strong financially to pay more than a pittance for exclusive product; lack of populated centers large enough to support numerous bookstores; lack of distribution channels for reaching a scattered population; lack of publicity and thereby apathy upon the part of the Canadian public; lack of the habit of reading among the people at large.

"A Canadian story as approved by the American editor and sensationalized by the American motion-picture director, is a distinct type—just as there is the Western type, the underworld type and so forth. It is full of beautiful white snow, wilderness scenery, half-breeds and whiskey-runners, dog-trains and mounted policemen who can wear wrong uniforms and salute at the wrong time without being one whit less handsome. Because Curwood did such excellent work in this field is no reason why his imitators should saddle it on us as 'Canadians' to the exclusion of all else.

"No country can achieve national consciousness if it remains tongue-tied. Native voices must be cherished in every branch of art to give expression to native characteristics and environment. The other day a policeman rode into the asylum with an unfortunate prairie homesteader who could recite every word in a medical almanac—the only reading he had been able to find.

"Is it any wonder that whole sections of our people are becoming atrophied intellectually? Are we to be a virile, thinking people or a heterogeneous mixture of ignoramus? Are we to become conscious nationally at all? Not unless we cultivate our own channels of expression in literature and art, music and drama, whether spoken or of the moving-picture screen.

Mr. Moorehouse stressed the necessity of securing whole-hearted public support if the venture of which he is the director is to succeed. He believes a country's writers, artists and musicians—its novels, biographies, histories, poetry, songs, drama and moving pictures—are a national asset, which is not to be gauged by yardstick or bushel measure.

"Although we admire our cousins for their cleverness and enthusiasm," Mr. Moorehouse concluded, "Canada is still Canada, with ideals of her own. We have our own lives to live. If it is our destiny to cement in brotherhood all English-speaking peoples, will we not fulfill it more effectively the more Canadian we remain?"

"It is not a question of becoming anti-American. We hope to make it possible for Canadian authors to stay in Canada, and write exclusively of their own country, and for their own public."

FRANCE WILL MOURN FOR JAP SUFFERERS

Elaborate Performances To Be Given in Paris To Gain Funds.

By WILLIAM E. NASH.

Special Cable to The London Advertiser and Chicago Daily News. Copyright.

Paris, Sept. 7.—Elaborate special performances will be given soon in the movies and the music halls of Paris for the benefit of Japan's earthquake and fire sufferers. The proceeds will be donated to aid in the rebuilding of Tokyo and Yokohama.

Meanwhile today has been declared a day of national mourning. In a proclamation issued by Premier Poincaré, flags will fly at half-mast throughout the day, and tonight the official theatres, such as the Opera Comique, will remain dark.

"France has a special reason for sympathy," says the Paris Press. "The Japanese character resembles the French character in many respects, in intelligence, in finish, in vitality, in stoicism, in endurance. Despite the Asiatic tactfulness of the Japanese our two races understand each other well. Moreover, our political interests coincide. The Japanese influence in the Pacific is a good counterpoise to the ambitions of Great Britain and the United States. France neither can, nor will, dominate that ocean herself. Therefore she is anxious to see the power there evenly divided."

Japanese as a rule retire much earlier than Occidentals, even when a tea-house celebration is going full blast and the sake cups are circulating freely.

SEALED TENDERS, addressed to the undersigned and indorsed "Tender for an extension to western wharf at Pelee Island, Ont.," will be received at this office until 12 o'clock noon (daylight saving), Tuesday, September 25, 1923, for the construction of an extension to the western wharf at Pelee Island, Essex County, Ont.

Plans and forms of contract can be seen and specification and forms of tender obtained at this department, at the office of the District Engineers, Royal Bank Building, London, Ont., Equity Building, Toronto, Ont., and at the office of the Pelee Island, Ont. Tenders will not be considered unless made on printed forms supplied by the department and in accordance with conditions contained therein.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted check on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Minister of the Public Works, equal to 10 per cent of the amount of the tender. War Loan Bonds of the Dominion will also be accepted as security, or War Bonds and checks if required to make up an odd amount.

Note—Blue prints can be obtained at this department by depositing an accepted bank check for the sum of $5.00, payable to the order of the Minister of the Public Works, which will be returned if the intending bidder submit a regular bid.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Department of Public Works, Secretary.

P. C. Larkin, Canadian high commissioner at London, and Mrs. Larkin left recently from Quebec for England on the steamer "Montrose."

Miss Marguerite Clarke was chosen by popular vote as the "Queen" of the Norfolk fair in Simcoe, Ont., this month.

Henry Barnet, who is one of the attractions on the midway at the C.N.E., is proud of his 694 pounds of bulk. As a contrast he picked up two full-grown midgets in his arms who are also entertainers in their own way.

Peggy Worth, movie star, has sailed for London to appear in a production, which she will accompany back to America.

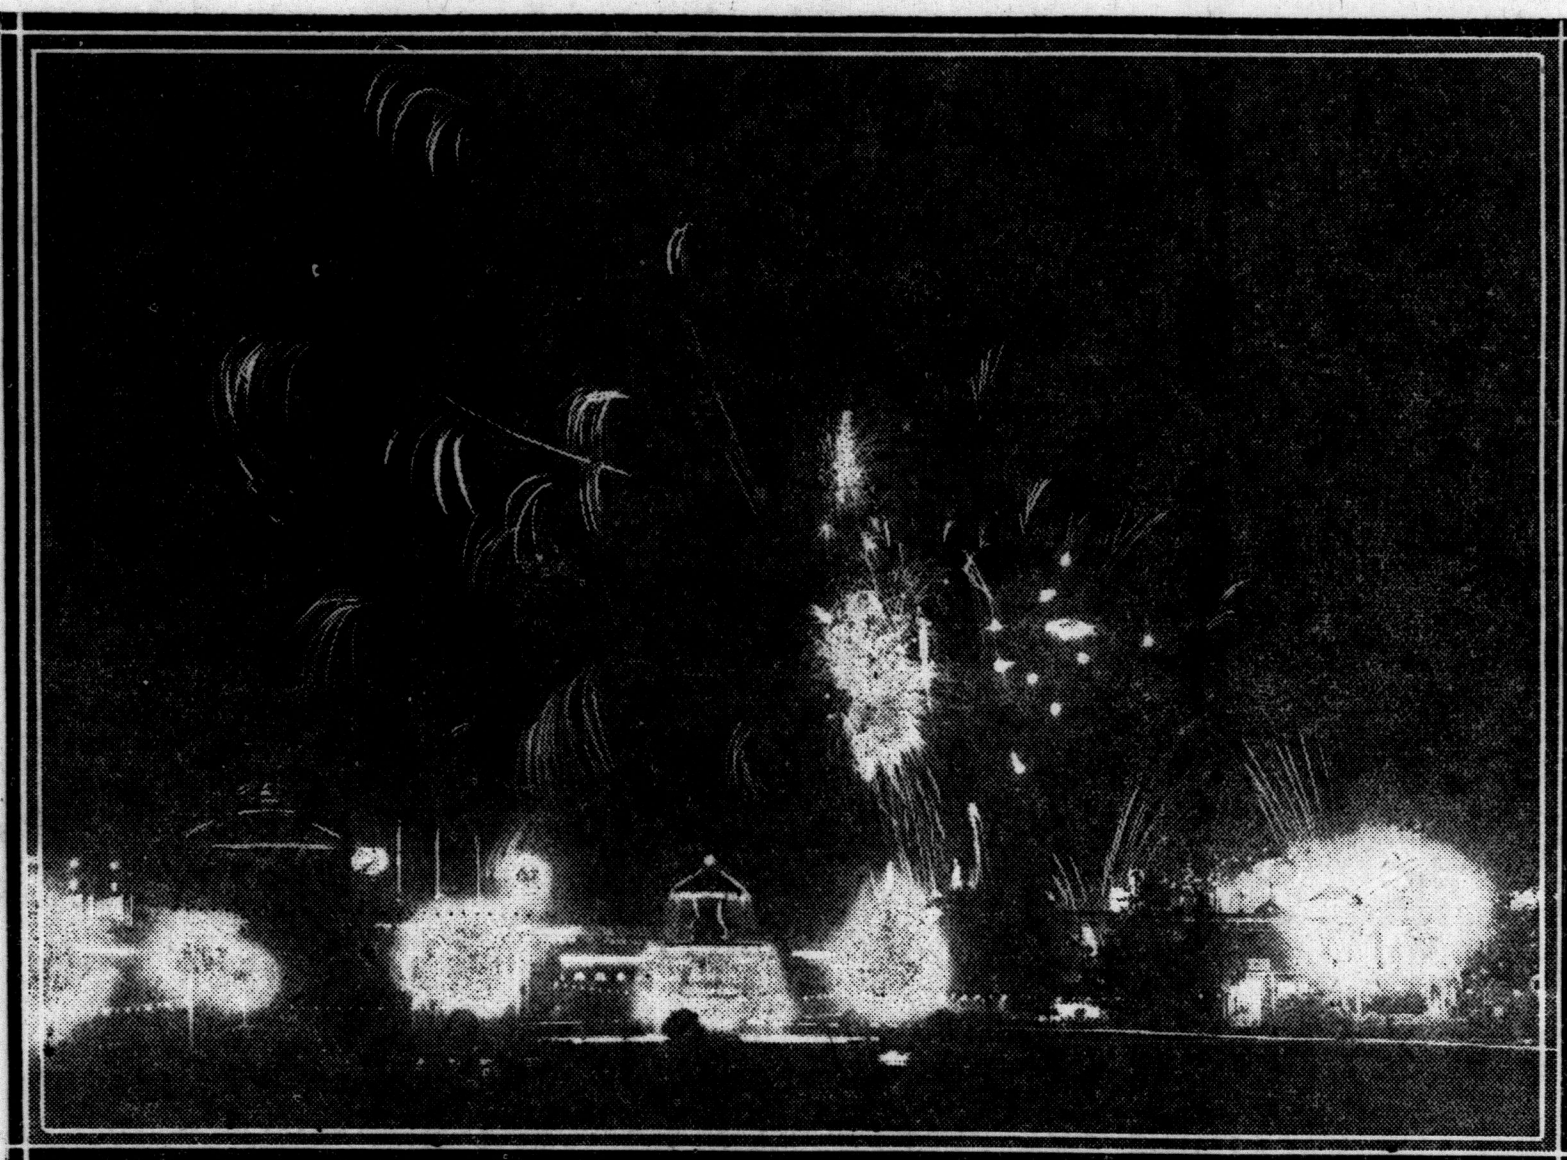

Hubbie says she is an expert at boiling water. She is Miss Fern Oakley, formerly of the Zeigfeld Folies and an ex-Torontonian, who is visiting her home town with her husband, J. W. Crosby, of New York.

"A friend in need is a friend indeed." Even dogs sometimes enjoy a drink at a fountain.

Miss I. H. Hatt won the high jump at the recent meeting of the Women's Athletic Association at Bromley, England.

This gorgeous lighting effect is produced at the Canadian National Exhibition during the fireworks display before the grandstand.

It is all in the day's work says this photographer, who has selected this location to secure a picture of the progress of a memorial in Virginia.

Sergt. John W. Adkins, U.S.M.C., is acclaimed to be the world's greatest long range marksman. He never shot a rifle before he became a "leatherneck" five years ago.

Miss Eileen Snyder will represent her home town of Syracuse at the Atlantic City pageant.

This advanced sport costume is worn by Miss Allentown, who represents her vicinity in the Atlantic City beauty pageant.

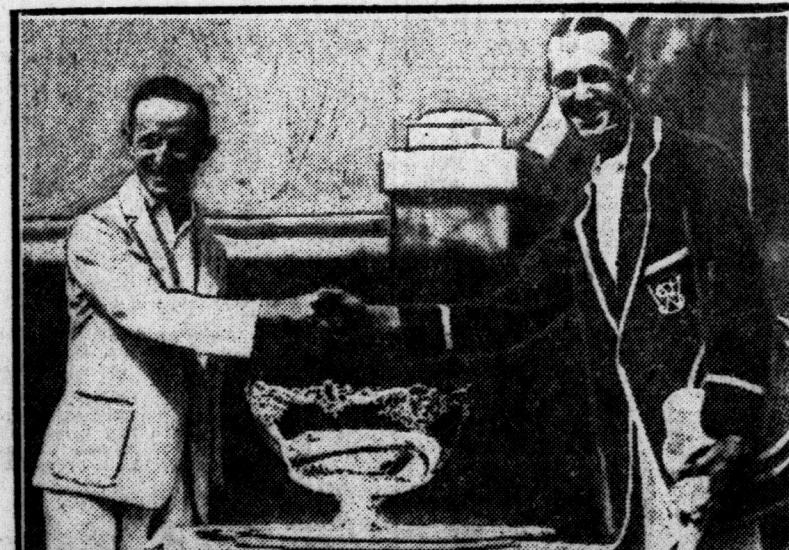

William B. Leeds is the only son of the late Princess Anastasia, who died recently in London. He is seen with his bride, Princess Zenia, second daughter of the Grand Duke of Mik-hailovitch of Russia.

Thousands of children lined up to cheer the Prince of Wales while he passed through the village of Nairn to open a bazaar.

Jim Jeffries, former heavyweight champion, has about completed his work on evangelism. He will soon start on his tour as a lecturer on "The Unification of the White Race."

J. O. Anderson, the Australian Davis Cup captain, is seen shaking hands with "Bill" Johnston after their match, which the former won.
