CIHM  Microfiche  Series (Monographs)

ICMH  Collection de microfiches (monographies)

回

Canadian Institute for Historical Microreproductions / Institut canadien de microreproductions historiques

Technical and Bibliographic Notes / Notes techniques et bibliographiques

The Institute has attempted to obtain the best originai copy avaiiable for filming. Features of this copy vihlich may be bibliographically unique, which may alter any of the images in the reproduction, or which may significantiy change the usual method of filming are checked beiow.

Coioured covers /

Couverture de couleur
Covers damaged /
Couverture endommagée

Covers restored and/or iaminated /
Couverture restaurée etou pelliculée
Cover title missing / Le titre de couverture manque

$\square$
Coloured maps / Cartes géographiques en couleur

Coloured ink (i.e. other than blue or biack) /
Encre de couieur (i.e. autre que bleue ou noire)

Coloured plates and/or illustrations /
Planches etou illustrations en couleur

Bound with other material /
Relié avec d'autres documents

Only edition avaiiable /
Seule édition disponible

Tight binding may cause shadows or distortion along interior margin / La reliure seriée peut causer de l'ombre ou de la distorsion le long de la marge inténeure.Blank leaves added during restorations may appear within the text. Whenever possible, these have been omitted from filming / II se peut que certaines pages blanches ajoutées lors d'une restauration apparaissent dans le texte, mais, lorsque cela était possible, ces pages n'ont pas été filmées.

L'Institut a microflimé ie meilieur exemplaire qu'il iul a été possible de se procurer. Les détalls de cet exemplaire qui sont peut-etre uniques du point de vue bыllographique, qui peuvent modifier une image reproduite, ou qui peuvent exiger une modification dans ia méthode normale de filmage sont indiqués ci-dessous.

Coloured pages / Pages de couieur

Pages damaged / Pages endommagées
Pages restored and/or laminated /
Pages restaurées etou peilicuiées
Pages discoloured, stained or foxed /
Pages décoiorées, tachetées ou piquées
Pages detached / Pages détachées
Showthrough / Transparence

Quality of print varies /
Qualité inégale de limpression
Includes supplementary material/
Comprend du matériel supplémentaire
Pages wholly or partially obscured by errata slips, tissues, etc., have been refilmed to ensure the best possibie image / Les pages totalement ou partieilement obscurcies par un feuillet d'errata, une peiure, etc., ont été filmées à nouveau de façon à obtenir ia meilleure image possible.

Opposing pages with varying colouration or discolourations are filmed twice to ensure the best possible image / Les pages s'opposant ayant des colorations variables ou des décolorations sont filmées deux fois afin d'obtenir la meilleure image possible.

Additional comments /
Commentaires supplémentaires:

Pagination is as follows: [2], [i]-1ii, [2], liii-1iv, [1]-160, [2], 161-332, [2], 333-356, [2], 357-423, [v]-xiii, [1]-8, [2], [9]-74, $[2], 75-298,[2], 299-342,[2], 343-477 \mathrm{p}$.

This item is flimed at the reduction ratio checked below /
Ce document est filimé au taux de réductín indiqué ci-dessous.

The copy fllmod here has been reproduced thenks to the generesity of:

National Library of Canada

The imeges eppeering here ore the best quelity poscible consldering the condition and logibillty of the original copy and in keoping with the fllming centract epeciflentions.

Original cepies in prinsed peper covers are fllmed beginning with the tront cover and ending on the last pege with e printed of lilustrased impres. sion, or the back cover when appropriate. Ail other original copies ere filmed beginnlng on the flrse page wish o prinsed or lliustrated impression, end ending on the lest page with a printed or lliustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shoil contain the symbol $\rightarrow$ (meening "CON. TINUED"), of the symboi $\nabla$ (meaning "END"). whichever applies.

Meps, pletes, charts, etc., may be filmod as different reduction retios. Those soe large so be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hend cornor. loft to right and $80 p$ so battom. as meny frames as required. The following diegrems lilustrate the mothod:

L'oxemplaire filmd fut reproduit grice it to otndrosith de:

Bibliothique nationale du Canada

Les Imeges sulventes ont dth reproduitss avec it pius grend soin, compte tenu de ie condition ot de le netretd de loaxemploire filmh, st sn conformitd avec ies conditlons du contret de filmege.

Les exemplaires origlnaux dont la couverturs en papler eas imprimde sont filmbs an commengent per le promier plet et en terminant soit par le dernldre pege aul comporte une empreinte d'Impresalon ou d'lllustrotion, soir par le sscond plat, selon le ces. Tous lev autres exemplaires orlginoux sont fllmbe en canmongant par le premidre pege qul comporte une empreinte d'Improssion ou d'iliustration of en zorminanz par le dernidre pege qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivents appareitre sur ie dernidre image de cheque microfichs. ssion te cas: io symboie $\rightarrow$ slgnifle "A SUIVRE', it symbole $\nabla$ slgnitic "FIN".

Les certes, plenches, rabieoux, etc., peuvent otre fiimbs des raux de rdducsion difftrents. Lorsque ie document est trop grand pour dtre reproduit en un soul clichh. il est filmot partir de l'engie supdrieur geuche. de geuche droise. ot de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'Images nbcessaire. Les diegrammes suivents iliustront is mdthode.

micRocopy resolution test chart

(ANSI and ISO TEST CHART No. 2)

zayal Canadian Eattian
 bu

3ssurd far Gubarribera anty thraugh the

PK 5:3
だ́
1900

Royal Canadian Edition Limited to One Thousand Sets

ADVER'TISEMENT' TO 'THE FIRS'I' EDITION

WHEN the Blitor of the following volumes pullisherl, athout two years since, the work called The dintiquerry, he ammomed that he was for the hast time intruding upn the public in his present calpeity. He might shelter himself moder the , ien that every inmmonoms writer is, like the celebrated Junins, only a phantom, ama inat, therefore, althongh an apparition of a more benign, as well as mueli memer, description, he camot be bomd to plead to a clarge of incomsistency. A better apology may be foumd in the imitating the confession of honest Benelict, that, when he said he would die a muchelor, he did nut dhink he shomld live to be married. The best of all womld be if, as has eminently happened in the case of some distinguinhed contemporaries, the merit of the work shonld, in the ceader's estimation, form an excise for the Author's breach of promise. Withont presming to hope that this may prove the case, it is only further neces. sary to mention that my resolution, like that of Benediet, fell a sacrifice to temptation at least, if not to stratagem.

It is now about six monthe since the Author, through the mellim of his respectable publishers, receivel a parcel of papers containing the outlines of this marative, with a perminssion, or mather with a request, eomeched in highly flattering terms, "hut the might be given to the public, with such alterations as she: 1 he fimm suitable. ${ }^{1}$ These were, of emurse, so numerons th. besides the suppression of mames and of inei dents afpmenting tom minh to reality, the work may in a grent pir lably es " "wing the comse of these changes - and the mottoes for hiter have been selected witho. any reference to th. primell date of the incidents. For these, of courne, the Falitor is respmasille. Shme others oceurred in the original materials, but they are of little esmenepnenere, In print of minute aecuracy, it may the stated that the lrimge over tho Forth, or mather the Avomilh (or Black Liverer), wiser the lmmete of Aberfoil, had not ant existeme thirty gears agin. It dhes not, however, become the biditor th the the lirst to puint ount these errors; and he takes this mibliv opportunity to thank the mink win nul maneless corresinindent, to whon the realer will awe the principul share of any amsement whicib he mav lerive firma the fillowing pages.

[^0]
ADVERTISMOMENG

Iat Itrember 1817.

INTRODUC'IUN 'TO ROB ROY

WHLS the Anthor progested this firther meromedment on the putionee of an indulgent pullic, he wans nt some lows for a title, a gousl mune being very nemily of as muelh consequence in literatme as in life. 'Tho title if Roh Mry, wis suggestend ly the late Mr. Comstable, whone sagnaty and experience foresuw de germ of puplarity which it inchudel.

No introdnetion can be more nupropriate to the work than some accome of the singular chmmerer whose nane is given to the title-page, and who, through goul report mid bud report, has maintained a wonderfinl degree of ingportance in pupmlar recollection. Ithis enmot he aseribed to the distinetion of his birth, which, thongh that of a gentlemme, had in it nothing of high destimation, and gave him little right to command in his clan. Neither, though he lived a busy, restless, and euterprising life, were his frats eymal to these of other freebooters who have been less distinguishend. He owed his finme in a great measure to his residng on the very verge of the Highlands, mud playing such pranks in the beginning of the 18th centmy as are nsinally nseribed to Robin Hond in the midille ages, imil that within forty miles of (ilasesw, 1 great commercinl eity, tho seat of a learned miversity. 'I'lus a charmeter like lis, blemeing the wild virtues, the subtle policy, mil minestraned license of ${ }^{\prime \prime}$ an Anmerienn Indian, was flomrishing in Scothnd during the Angustan age of (lueen Amme und fienpe I. Aldison, it is prokable, or Pope, would have heen considerably surpwised if they had known that there existed in the snme island with them a persona $a_{-}$of Roh Roy's pecoliar hatits and profession. It is this strong contrast het wixt ti) (ivilised and en': ated moske of life on the one silte of the .aghland line, and the wild and lawless adventures which were hahinally mulertaken and aehieved by one who dwelt on the oppnsite side of that ideal boundary, which creates the interest attached to his name. Hence it is that even yet,

Far and near, through vale and hill, Are faces that attest the same, And kindle like a fire new stirr'd At sound of Rob Roy's name.

There were several advantages whieh Rob Roy enjoyed for sustaining to advantage the character which he assmmed.
The most prominent of these was his descent from, and comnexion with, the Clan MaeGregor, so fannus.s for their misfortnnes and the indonitable spirit with which they maintained themselves as a clan, linked and banded together in spite of the most severe laws, exeented with minearl-of rigour against those who bore this forbidden sumnme. Their history was that of several others of the original Highland clans, who were suppressed by more powerful neighbours, and either extirpated or foreed to secure themselves by renoming their own family ap pellation and assmuing that of the conymerors. The peeuliarity in the story of the MacGregors is their retaining with such tenaeity their separate existence and mion as a elan muder eireumstanees of the utmost urgency. The history of the tribe is briefly as follows: - but we must premise that the tale depends in some degree on tradition; therefore, excepting when written documents are quoted, it must be eonsidered as in some degree dubious.

The sept of MaeGregor elaimed a deseent from Gregor, or Gregorius, third son, it is said, of Alpin King of Seots, who flourished about 787. Hence their original patronymie is MaeAlpine, and they are usinally terned the Clan Alpine. An individual tribe of them retains the same name. They are accounted one of the most ancient clans in the Highlands, and it is certain they were a people of original Celtic descent, and oceupied at one period very extensive possessions in l'erthshire and Argyleshire, which they imprudently contimed to hold by the coir a glaire, that is, the right of the sworl. Their neighbours, the Earls of Argyle and Breadalbane, in the meanwhile managed to have the lands ocenpied by the MacGregors engrossed in those charters which they easily obtained from the Crown; and thus constituted a legal right in their own favour without much regard to its justice. As opportmity occurred of amoying or extirpating their neighbomrs, they gradually extended their own domains by usurping, under the pretext of sum royal grants, those of their more mucivilised neighbours. A Sir Duncen Camphell of Lochow, known in the Highlands by the name of /momerche Dhu uren ('Murvaichd, that is, Black Duncan with the Cowl, it being his pleasure to wear such a heal-gear, is said to have been peeuliarly successful in those acts of spoliation npon the Clan MacGregor.
'The devoted sept, ever finding themselves iniquitonsly driven from their possessions, defended themselves by foree, and occasionally gained advantager, which they nsed eruelly enough. This conduct, though matirral considering the comutry and time, was studiously represented at the capital as arising from an untamable and innate ferocity, whieh nothing, it was said, could remedy save cutting off the tribe of MacGregor root and branch.
In an Aet of Privy Council at Stirling, 22d September 1563, in the reign of Queen Mary, commission is granted to the most powerful nobles and chiefs of the clams to pursue the Clan Gregor with fire and sword. A similar warrant in 1563 not only srants the like powers to Sir Jolin Campbell of Glenorchy, the deseendant of Dunean with the Cowl, but discharges the lieges to reeeive or assist any of the Clan Gregor, or afford them, under any eolour whatever, meat, drink, or clothes.
An atrocity which the Clan Gregor eommitted in 1589, hy the murder of John Drummond of Drummond-Frnoch, a forester of the royal forest of Glenartney, is elsewhere given, with all its horrid circumstances. 'The clan swore upon the severed head of the murdered man that they wonld make common cause in avowing the deed. This led to an Let of the Privy Conncil, directing another ernsade against the 'wicked Clan Gregor, so long continuing in blood, slaughter, theft, and robbery,' in whicis letters of fire and swemb are denomeed against them for the space of three years. The realer will find this particular fact illustrated in the Introduction to $A$ Legend of Montrose, in the present celition of these Novels.
Other oceasions frequently occurrel in which the MaeGregors testified contempt for the laws, from which they had often experienced severity, hint never protection. 'Though they were gradually deprivel of their possessions and of all ordinary means of proenring sulsistence, they could not, nevertheless, be supposed likely to starve for famine while they had the means of taking from strangers what they considered as rightfilly their own. Hence they becane versed in predatory forays, and accustomed to hoodshed. Their passions were eager, and, with a little management on the part of some of their most powerful neighlumrs, they could easily be 'hommded ont,' to use an expressive Scottish phrase, to commit violence, of whieh the wily instigators took the endvantage, and left the ignorant MaeGregors an undivided portion of blame and pmishment. This policy of pushing on the fierce clans of the Highlands and Borders to break the peace of the comitry is accounted by the historian one of the most dangerous practices of his own period, in whieh the MaeGregors were considered as ready agents.
Notwithstanding these severe denunciations, which were acted upon in the same spirit in which they were conceived, some of the clan still possessed property, and the chief of the name in 1592 is designed Allaster MacGregor of Glenstrae. He is said to have been a brave and active man; but, from the tenor of his confession at his death, appears to have been engaged in many and desperate feuds, one of which finally proved fatal to himself and many of his followers. This was the celebrated conflict at Glenfruin, near the south-western extremity of Loch Lomond, in the vinity of whieh the MacGregors contimed to exercise mueh authority by the coir a glaive, or right of the strongest, which we have already mentioned.
There had been a long and bloody feud betwixt the MacGregors and the Laird of Luss, head of the family of Colquhoun, a powerful race on the lower part of Loch Lomond. The MacGregors' tradition affirms that the quarrel began on a very trifling subject. Two of the MacGregors being benighted, asked shelter in a house belonging to a dependant of the Colquhouns, and were refused. They then retreated to an out-house, took a wedder from the fold, killed it, and suppel off the carcass, for which (it is said) they offe. ed payment to the proprietor. The Laird of Luss seized on the offenders, and, by the summary process which fendal barons harl at their command, had them both condemned and executed. The MacGregors verify this account of the feud by appealing to a proverb corrent amongst them execrating the hour (. Wult thu m cartyril ghil) that the black wedder with the white tail was ever lambel. To avenge this quarrel the Laird of Madiresor assembled his clam, to the number of three or four humdred men, and mardhed towards Lasss from the hanks of Loech Long, by a pass called hiaid na Gael, or the Highlandman's Pass.

Sir Hmmphrey Colynhoun received early notice of this ineursion, and collected a strong force, more than twice the number of that of the invaders. He had with him the ge tle-men of the name of Buchanan, with the Grahams and other gentry of the Lennox, and a party of the citizens of Dumbarton, muder command of 'lobias Smollett, a nagistrate or bailie of that town, and ancestor of the celebrated author.
The parties met in the valley of Glenfruin, whielı signifies the Glen of Sorrow, a name that scemed to anticipate the event of the day, which, fatal to the eomunered party, was at least equally so to the vietors, the 'babe miborn' of Clan Aipine having reason to repent it. 'The Mac(iregors, somewhat diseomraged by the appearance of a force much superior to their own, were cheered on to the attack by a seer or sccond-sighted person, who professed that he saw the shromls of the dead wrapt around their principal opponents. The clan elarged with great fury on the frout of the enemy, while John MacGregor, with a strong party, made an unexpeeted attack on the flank. A great part of the Colquhouns' foree consisted in cavalry, which could not act in the boggy ground. 'They were said to have disputed the field manfully, but were at length completely ronted, and a merciless slaughter was exercised on the fugitives, of whom betwixt two and three hundred fell on the field and in the pursuit. If the MacGregors lost, as is averred, only two men slain in the action, they lad slighlt provocation for an indiscriminate massacre. It is said that their fury extended itself to a party of stndents for clerical orders who had imprudently come to see the battle. Some donbt is thrown on this fact from the indictment against the chief of the Clan Gregor being silent on the subject, as is the historian Jolnston and a Professor Ross, who wrote an accomt of the battle twenty-nine years after it was fonglit. It is, however, constantly averred by the tradition of the country, and a stone where the deed was done is called Lerk-n-Mhimisteir, the Minister or Clerk's Flagstone. The MacGregors impute this crucl action to the ferocity of a single man of their tribe, renowned for size and strcugth, called Dingald Ciar Mohr, or the (ireat Monse-coloured Man. IIe was Machregor's foster-brother, and the chief committed the yonths to his charge, with directions to keep, them sately till the affray was over. Whether fearful of their escape or incensed by some sarcasms which thcy threw on his tribe, or whecther out of mere thirst of blool, this savage, while the other MacGregors were engaged in the pursuit, poniarded his helpless and defenceless prisoners. When thic chieftain, on his return, demanded where the youths were, the Ciar (pronounce? Kiar) Mohr drew ont his bloody dirk, saying in Gaelic, 'Ask that and God save me!' The latter woris allude to the ex elamation which his victims used when he was murdering them. It would seem, therefure, that this horrible prort of the story is founded on fact, ${ }^{1}$ though the number of the youths so slain is; probably exaggerated in the Lowland accounts. The commonn people say that the blood of the Ciar Molir's victims cun vever be washed off the stone. When MneGregor learnt their tite he expressed the utmost horror at the deed, and uphtrailed his foster-brother with having done that which would oceasion the destruction of him and his clar. 'This homicite was tlie miestor of Rob Roy and the tribe from which he was ilescended. He lies buried at the chureh of Fartingal, where his sepulchre, covered with a large stone, ${ }^{2}$ is still shown, and where lisis great strength and courage are the theme of many tralitions. ${ }^{3}$

MacGregor's brother was one of the very few of the tribe who was slain. He was buried near the field of battle, and the phee is marked by a rude stone, called the Girey Stone of Mactiregor.

Sir Hunphrey Colquhoun, being well monnted, escinpel for the time to the castle of Banochar or Bennachra. It proved no

[^1]sure defenee, however, for he was shortly after murdered in a vault of the enstle, the family annals say by the MaeGregors, though other aecounts eharge the ded upon the MacFarlanes.
I'his battle of Gienfruin, and the severity which the victors exercised in the pursuit, was reported to hing James VI. in a manner the most unfavourable to the Clan (iregor, whose general rliaracter, being that of lawless though brave men, could not much avail them in such a case. Tlant James might fully miderstand the extent of the slanghter, the widows of the slain, to the number of eleven score, in deep mouming, riding npon white palfreys, and each bearing her husband's bloody shirt on a spear, appeared at Stirling, in presence of a monareh peculiarly accessilile to such sights of fear and sorrow, to demand vengeance for the death of their husbands, upon those by whom they had been made desorlate.
The remedy resorted to wats at least as severe as the cruelties whieh it was designed to pmish. By an Aet of the Privy Couneil, lated 3d April 1603, the name of MacGregor was expressly abolished, and those who had hitherto borne it were eommanded to clange it for other surnames, the pain of death being denomiced against these who should eall themselves Gregor or MaeGregor, the names of their fathers. Vinder the same penalty all who had heen at the conflict of Glenfruin, or aecessory to other mamuding parties charged in the aet, were prohibited from carrying weapons, except a pointless knife to eat their victuals. By a snhserpuent Act of Comecil, 24 th June 1613, death was denomuced against any persons of the tribe formerly called MacGregor who should presume to assemble in greater mumbers than four. Again, by an Act of Parliament, 1617, Chap. 26, these laws were contimed, and extended to the rising generation, in respect that great numbers of the children of those against whom the Acts of Privy Comeil had been directed were stated to be then approaching to matmity, who, if permitted to resme the name of their parents, would render the chan as strong as it was before.
The execution of those severe acts was chiefly entrnsted in the west to the Earl of Aggle and the powerful clan of Campbell, and to the Larl of Athole end his followers in the more eastern Highlands of Perthshire. The MacGregors failed not to resist with the most determined enurage ; and many a valley in the West and North Highlands retains menory of the severe contlicts, in which the proseribed clan sometimes obtanined transient alvantages, and always sold their lives dearly. At length the pride of Allaster MacGregor, the chief of th: alar. was so much lowered by the snfferings of his people tha s resolved to surrender himself to the Farl of Argyle, with his principal followers, on condition that they shonld be sent out of Scotland. If the unfortunate chieffs own accomit be true, he had more reasons than one for expecting some favonr from the Earl, who had in secret advised and encomaged him to many of the desperate actions for which he was now called to so severe a reckoning. But Argyle, as old Birrell expressen hinnself, kept a Highlandman's promise with them, fulfilling it to the ear mind breaking it to the sense. MacGregor was sent muler a strong guard to the frontier of Fughand, and heing thms, in the literal sense, sent out of Scothand, Argyle was julged to have kept faith with him, thongh the same party which took him there brought him back to Edinburgh in custonly.

MacGregor of Glenstrae was tried before the Court of Justiciary, 20th January 1604, and fonnd gnilty. He appears to have been instantly conveyed from the bur to the gallows; for Birrell, of the same date, reports that he was hanged at the Cross, and, for distinction's suke, was suspended higher by his own height than two of his kindred and friends. On the 18th of February following nine more of the MacGregors were executed, after a long imprisonment, and several others in the beginning of March.

The Earl of Argyle's service, in conducing to the surrender of the insolent and wicked race and mune of MacGregor, notorious linmers and malefactors, and in the in-bringing of MacGregor, with a grent many of the leading men of the clan, worthily executed to denth for their offences, is thankfully acknowledged by Act of Parliament, 1607, Chap. 16, anil rewarded with a grant of twenty chalders of victual out of the lands of hintyre.

The MacGregors, notwithstanding the lette., of fire and sword, and orders for military execntion repeatedly directed against then by the Scottish legislature, who apparently lost all the calmness of conscions dignity and secmrity, and could not even name the outlawed clan withont vituperation, showed no inclination to be blotted ont of the roll of clanship. They submitted to the law, indeel, so far as to take the mames of the neighbouring fanilies amongst whom they happened to live, nominally becoming, as the case might rember it most convenient, Drmmonuls, Campbells, Grahams, Buchanams, Stewarts, and the like; but to all intents and purposes of combination and mutual attaehment they remainel the Clan Gregor, mited wgether for right or wrong, mad menacing with the general vengeance of their race whomsover committed aggressions ugamst any individmul of their number.
'l'hey continued to take and give offence with as little hesitation as before the legislative dispersion which had been attempted, as appenrs from the preamble to Statnte 1633, cliapter 30, setting forth that the Clan Greror, which had been sinppressed and reluced to quietness by the grent care of the late Fing James of etermul memory, had nevertheless broken out again in the eomities of Perth, Stirling, Clackmaman, Menteith, Lemox, Angus, and Mearns; for which renson the statnte reestablishes the disabilities attached to the clan, an! gruints a new commission for enforeng the laws against that wicked and rebellious race.

Notwithstanding the extreme severities of King James I. and Charles I. against this mufortmate people, who were renderel farious by proscription, and then pmished for yieling to the passions which hat been wilfully irritated, the MacGregors to a man attached themselves during the Civil War to the cause of the latter monareh. I'heir harrlis have aseribed this to the native respect of the Maefiregors for the crown of Scuthand, which their ancestors onee wore, and have appealed to their armorial bearings, which display a pine-tree, crossed saltire-wise with a naked sword, the point of which smpoorts a royal crown. But, without denying that sneh motives may have had their weight, we are disposed to think that a war which opened the Low Country to the mids of the Clan (ilegor wonld have more charms for them than any inlucement to espouse the canse of the Covenanters, which would have bronght the n into contaet with Highlanders as fieree as themselves, and having as little to lose. Patrick MaeGregor, their leader, was the som of a distinguished elief. named Dumean Aharach, to whom Montrose wrote letters as to his trusty and special friend, expressing his reliance on his devoted loyalty with an assurance that, when once his Majesty's affairs were placed upon a permanent footing, the grievances of the Clan MacGregor shonld be redressed.

At a subsequent period of these melancholy times we find the Clan Gregor chaming the immmities of other tribes, when smmmoned by the Scottish Parliament to resist the invasion of the Commonwealth's army in 16i.31. On the last day of March in that year a supplication to the Kinin and Parhament, from Cahm MacCondadac Vich binen and Bnen Macdomdadie Bnen, in their own mane and that of the whole name of MacGregor, set forth than, while, in obedience to the orders of Parliament, enjoining all chans to come out in the present service nuder their chieftains, for the defence of religion, king, mad kingdons, the petitioners were drawing their men to gnum the passem at the head of the river Forth, they were interfered with by the Earl of Athole and the Laird of Buchanan, who had required the attendanee of many of the Clan Gregor upm their arrays. 'This interference was doubtless owing to the change of name, whieh seens to lave given rise to the chain of the Barl of Athole and the laird of Buchanian to master the MacGregors muler their hanners, an Murrays in Jomehanams. It does not appear that the petition of the Mac(iregors to be prmitted to come out in a borly as other clans recrived any tuswer. But npon the Restoration, Kiing Charles, in the first Seottish Parliament of his reign (Statute 1661, Chap. 19:), annulled the varions acts against the Clan Gregor, , med rextored them to the full use of their family name, and the other mivileges of liege suljeets, setting forth, is a reason for this lenity, that those who were formerly designed MaeGregors had, during the late troubles, condncted themselves with such loyalty and affection to his Majesty as might justly wipe off all methory of fomer misenrriages, and take away all marks of repronch for the smme.
It is singular enongh that it reems to have aggravated the feelings of the noneouforning l'reslyterians when the peunlties which were most mijustly imposed mon themselves were relaxed towards the poor MacGiregors: so little are the hest men, any more than the worst, able to judge with impurtiality of the same measures as applied to themselves or to others. lyon the Restoration [Revolntion] nu influence inimical to this nnfortunate clan, said to be the same with that which afterwards dictated the Massacre of Cilenoe, nccasioned the re-enaction of the penal statntes against the Maediresors. There are no reasons given why these highly proal acts should have been renewed; nor is it alleged that the clan han been guilty of late irregularities. Indeed, there is, some reason to think that the elanse was formel of set purpose in a shape which shomld elude observation; for, though containing, conclusions fatal to the rights of so many Seottish subjeets, it is neither mentimed in the title nor the rubric of the Act of Parliament in which it oceurs, and is thrown briefly in at the elose of the Statutes 1699, Chap. 61, entitled, 'An Aet fur the Justiciary in the Highlamds.'

It dues not, however, appear that after the hevolution
the nets maninst the clan were severely enforeed; and in the latter lulf of the 1sth century they were not enforeed at all. Commissioners of supply were named in Parlianent by the proseribed titlo of Maefireror, mind decrees of courts of justice were 1 mounced, and legal leeds entered into, under the same nippellative. The MacGregors, however, while the huvs continued in the statute book, still suffered muler the deprivation of the name which was their lirthright, and some attempts were made for the purpose of alopting another, Mac.llpine or Grant being propered as the title of the whole clan in future. No agreenent, however, conld be entered into; and the evil was submitted to as a matter of necessity, mitil full relress was obtained from the Bratish Parlinment by an aet abolishing for ever the peini statutes, which had heen so long imponed upon this ancient race. This statute, well merited by the serviees of many $a$ gentleman of the clan in behalf of their king aned comintry, was passed, and the elan proeeeded to act upon it with the same spirit of ancient times whieh had made them suffer severely monder a depmivation that would have been deemed of little consejnenee by a great part of their fellow-subjects.
They entered into a deed recognising John Murray of Lanrick, Esal: (afterwards Sir John MacGregor, Baronet), representative of the fanily of Glenearnoek, as lawfully dessended from the ancient stock and blood of the Lairds and Lords of MacGregor, and therefore aeknowledged him as their ehief on all lawful wecasions aml cennses whatsoever. 'This deed was subseribel by eight himidred and twenty-six persons of the name of MacGregor capable of hearing mins. $\Lambda$ yrat many of the clan during the hast war forned themselves into, what wis called the Clan Alpine reginent, raised 11 1799, muler the command of their Clief and his brother Culonel MacGequr.

Having briefly noticed the history of this clan, which presents a rare und interesting example of the indelille claracter of the patriarchal system, the Anthor nust nuw offier some notices of the individnal who gives name to this volmue.
In giving an areomit of a Highlander, his pedigree is first to be considered. 'That of Ruh, Roy was dedneed from Ciar Mohr, the Great Monse-entomred Man, who is aeeused by tradition of having shain the young stulents at the battle of Glenfrinin.

Without puzaling ourselves and our readers with the intricacies of Highland remealogy, it is enongh to say that, after the denth of Allister Mac (iregor of Clemstrae, th:c clan, discouraged by the mremitting persechtion of their enemies, seom not to vol. iv - $b$

xviii INTHODUC'ILON 'IO ROB ROY

have had the means of phacing themsel ves muler the command of a single el ef. According to their places of residence and inmmediate descent, the several families were led mad slirected by Chiefthine, which, in the Highland acceptation, signities the head of a particnlar branch of a tribe, in opposition to Chief, who is the leader and commander of the whole name.
'The fanily and Ilescendmits of Dugald Ciar Mohr lived chiefly in the mountanins between Lach Lomond and lach Katrine, and occupied a goorl deal of property there, whether by suffermice, by the right of the swori, which it was never safe to dispmte with them, or by legnl titles of varions kinds it would be useless to inquire and muneeessary to detail. Enough, there they certainly were; a people whom their most powerfinl neighbours were desirons to concilinte, their friendship, in peace being very necessary to the quiet of the vieinage, and their assistance in war equally prompt and effiectnal.
Rob Hoy MacGregor Cambell, which last name he bore in consequence of the Acts of Parliament nholishing his own, was the younger son of Donald MacGregor of Glengyle, said to have been a lieutenant-colonel (probably in the service of James II.), by lis wife, a daughter of Camplell of Gleufilloch. Rob's own designation was of Inversnaid ; but he mpears to have acpuired a right of some kind or ather to the property or possession of Craig loyston, a domain of rock and fevent lying on the east side of Loch Lomond, where that beautifnl like stretches into the dusky momitains of Gleufalloch.
'Ihe time of his birtl is uncertain. But he is said to have been active in the seenes of wir and phunder which succeeded the Revolution; and tradition aftirms him to lmve been the leader in a predntory incursion into the parish of Kippen, in the Lemnox, which took place in the yeur 16:1. It was of almost a bloorless character, only one persom losimg his life; but from the extent of the depredation it was long distinguisherl by the name of the Hersliip (or devastation) of Kippen. ${ }^{2}$ The time of his death is also nucertain, but, as he is said to lave survived the year 173:3, and died m n ned man, it is probmhle he may have been twenty-five uhout the time of the Mership of Kippen, which would assign liis birth to the unidlle of the lith century.

In the more quiet times which succeeded the Revolution, Rob Roy, or Red Rolbert, seems to have exerted his active talents, whieh were of no mean order, as a drover or trader

[^2]in cattle to $n$ great extent. It may well he suppowed that in those days no lowland, much lens English, Irovers ventured to enter the Highlands. I'ls cattle, which were the staple commodity of the momitains, vere escorted down to fairs on the borlers of the lowhmids y a party of Highlanders, with their arms rattling nromm th m, who dealt, however, in all honour and gourl faith with cheir Southern enstomers. A froy, indeed, would sometimes arise, when the lowlandmen, chietly Borderers, who lui! to supply the Finglish murket, nsed to dip their lomnets in the next brook, and, wrapping them round their hands, oppoee their congels to the maked broulsworls, which hod rot ulvays the superiority. I have heard from aged persons who had been engaged in such affrays that the Highanders insed romarkahly fair play, never using the point of the swi I ar less their pistols or daggers; so that

> With sifl thwack l many a ungg, Hard.

A slash or two, er heu head, as ensily accommodated, and, as the trale "if hen fit to inth purties, trifling skirnishes were not all 111 inmirnpt its harmony. Indeed, it was of vital interes-... the Hiwhlanders, whose income, so fir as derived from the is estanes, deprended entirely on the sale of hlack cattle; and a sagaci ns nud experienced dealer benefited not only himself but his ui As and neifllwours hy his speeulations. Those of Rob han wem for several years so successful us to inspire general comble see wel raise him in the estimation of the comtry in which $h_{1}$ revided.
His importance was nermeet !y the death of his father, in consequence of which ho - eed to the management of his nephew Gre Mar ir dilengle's property, aund, us his tutor, to sued influentor there ${ }^{2}$. 11 mid following as was due to the representative of Mmalif ( ar. Sneh influence was the more uncontrolled the fanily of the MacGregors seem to have refused athertin. Maf(iregor oi Glencarnoek, the ancestor of the present Ewan MacGregor, and asserted in kind of independence.

It was at this time hat Roh Roy acquired min interest by purchase, wadset. or otherwise to 1 if property of Craig Roystom already mentioned. He was in particular favour during this prosperous period of his life wit': his nearest and most powerfal neighbour, James, first Duke of Montrose, from whom he received many marks of regard. His (irace consented to give him nephew and himself a right of property on the extates of C engyle muld luvermmid, which they had till then only heti us h indly tenmits. The Duke, almo, with a view to the interent of the country and his own estate, supported our ndventurer hy loans of money to is considerable minomit, to enable him to carry un his speculations in the cuttle trude.

INTHODUCIION 'IO ROM ROS'

Unfortunately that species of commerce was mul is lintble tu sudden fhectuntions; mul Rob) Roy was ly a sudilen depression of marketa, and, as a friendly tradition mids, by the lmad fieth of a perther muned MuelDonild, whom he had imprudently received into his contidence and entrusted with ne comsiderable st:m of money, remberel totally insolvent. He nlsw:omded, of course, not empty-handed, if it be true, ns stated in an milvertisement for his apprehension, that he had in his possession sums to the amount of f 迤内 sterling, obtained from several noblemen and gentlomen muler pretence of purchasing cows for them in the Highlands. 'I'his mivertisement appenred in June 1712, and was several times repented. It fixes the periol when Rob Roy exchanged lis commercial adventures for speculations of a very different complexion. ${ }^{1}$
He appears at this perion first to luve removed from his ordinary dwelling at lnversmaid ten or twelve Scots miles (which is donble the number es Kinglish) farther into the Highlands, and commenced the hawless sort of life which he afterwardx followed. 'The Dise of Montrose, who coneeived himself deceived and cheated by Mac(iregor's conduct, employed legna means to recover the money lent to him. Rol, Roy's lanfed property was inttached by the regular forn of legal procedure, and his stock and furniture made the sabject of arrest and sale.

It is said that this difigence of she haw, us it is called in Scotland, which the Eughish more duutly term distress, was used in this case with mucommon severity, nud that the legal satellites, not usually the gentlest persons in the world, had insulted MacGregor's wife in a manter which would have aroused a milder man thai he th thoughts of mbomuled vengeance. Sli: was a whana of fieree and langhty temper, and is not mulikely to have distathed the officers in the execoltion of their daty, and thes to have incured ill-treatment, though, for the sake of hamanity, it is to lec lopped that the story sometimes told is a pupular exagreration. It is certain that she felt extreme anguish at being expelled from the banks of Loeh thonoud, and gave vent to her feelings in a fine piece of Thom fugitive is thought to have fommed his first phace of refuge in (ilen Dinelhart, under the Earl of Braminlmue's protection; for, thongh that fimily had been active agents in the devtra.tion of the Musiregores in former times, they luil of late years sheltered a great muny of the mune in their whl poweswions.

[^3]fingmasic, still well known to amnteurs liy the mame of 'liul Koy's Jament.'
 fire as to alford hime, meerrling to the Ilighland phrave, woond and water-the shelter, manely, thint is affiorded by the forests nud laker of min inueessilile comutry.
The grent men of the Highluals in that time, bevides heing anxionsly ambitions to kecp in what was callen their 'foliowing,' or military retainers, were nlso devirons to lave nt their disposal men of resolnte charneter, to whom the world mind the world's haw were bu friendx, mill whin might at times ravage the hands or destroy the temmits off a fenhal enemy, withont bring. ing remponsibility on their putroms. 'I'se strife hetween the names of Cmuphell and Gmhme, diming the civil ware of the 17th century, hail heeln stumped with mutual loss and inverorate enmity. The denth of the great Murpuis of Montrose on the one side, the defent at luverlichy und wruel phanlering of Lorn on the other, were reciprocel injuries mot likely to be firg itten. Roh Roy was, therefore, sure of refuge in the comintry of the Cmuphells, both as having nissmued their mume, as commeeted by his mother with the finmily of Gilenfialloch, and ns mu chemy to the rival honse of Montrose. 'Ihe extent of Argyons ponsessions, and the power of retrenting thither in my energency. gave grent enconragment to the bohl schemes of revenge which he lime adopted.
This was nothing short of the mmintennice off a predatory war ugainast the Dike of Montrose, whom he emsidered as the anthor of his exchusim from civil society, ann of the outhery to which he lund heen sentenced ly letters of horning mud enption (legul writs so-catlen), ats well as the stizure of his goods and arljulication of his landed property. Against his (irace, therefore, his temants, friemls, ulliss, anil relatives he disposed himself to emphy ayry means uf ammanee in hix power a and though thix was a cirede sulficiently extensive for netive depredation, Rob, who professed himeself a Jiacolite, took the liberty of extending his sphere of operatimis against ull whom he chose to emsider as friendly to the revolutionary soverment, or to that most obnoxions of measures, the L'inin of the Kingrdmes.

xxii IN'IRODUUCIION 'IO ROB ROY

Under one or other of these pretexts all his neighloners of the Lowhands who had anything to lose, or were muwilling to eompound for seenrity ly paying him an ammal smu for protection or forbearanee, were exposed to his ravages.

The eountry in whieh this private warfare or system of depredation was to be carried on was, until opened up by roads, in the highest degree favouralle for his purpose. It was broken up into narrow valleys, the habitable part of whieh bore no proportion to the huge wildernesses of forest, rocks, and precipiees by which they were encircled, and which was, moreover, finll of inextrieable passes, morasses, and natural strengths, moknown to any but the inhabitants themselves, where a few men acquainted with the gromed were eapable, with ordinary address, of battling the pursuit of numbers.

The opinions and habits of the nearest neighbours to the Highland line were also highly fivourable to Rob Roy's purpose. A large proportion of them were of his own clan of MacGregor, who elained the property of Balquidder and other Highland districts as having been part of the ancient possessious of their tribe, though the harsh laws, under the severity of which they had suffered so deeply, had assigned the ownership to other families. The civil wars of the 17th eentury had acconstomed these men to the use of arms, and they were peenliarly brave and fierce from remenbranee of their sufferings. 'The vicinity of a emmparatively rich Lowland distriet gave also great temptations to incursion. Many belonging to other clans, habituated to contempt of industry and to the use of arms, drew towards an muproteeted frontier wheh promised facility of phouder; and the state of the comtry, now so peaeeable and quiet, verified at that time the opinion which Dr. Johnson heard with donbt and sinspieion, that the most disorderly and lawless districts of the Hishlands were those which lay nearest to the Lowland line. There was, therefone, now difficulty in Rob Roy, deseended of a trile which was widely dispersed in the conntry we laive deseribed, colleeting any number of followers whom he might le able to keep in action and to maintain hy his proposed operations.

He himself appears to have been singularly abapted for the profession which he propsed to exercise. His stature was not of the tallest, hat his person was menmmonly strong and compact. The greatest peculianities of his frame were the breadth of his shonlders, and the great and amosi disproportioned length of his arms; so remiarkable, indeed, that it was said he could, without stooping, tie the garters of his Highland hose, which are plased two inches below the knee. His comntenance was open, manly, stern at periods of dauger, but frumk and cheerful in his hours of festivity. His hair was dark red, thick, and frizzled, and curled short aromul the face. His fashion of dress showed, of course, the knees and nuper part of the leg, whieh was described to me as resembling that of a Highland bnll, hirsute, with red hair, and evincing museular strength similar to that animal. 'Jo these personal qualifications must be added a masterly use of the Highland sword, in which his length of arm gave him great advantage, and a perfect and intimate knowledge of all the recesses of the wild country in which he harboured, and the character of the varions individuals, whether friendly or hostile, with whom he might come in contact.

His mental qualities seem to have been no less adapted to the circumstances in which he was placed. Though the deseendant of the bloodthirsty Ciar Mohr, he inherited none of his ancestor's feroeity. On the contrary, Rob Roy avoided every appearance of cruelty, and it is not averred that he was ever the means of umecessary boodshed, or the actor in any deed which could lead the way to it. His selemes of plmuler were contrived and execnted with equal bolduess and sagacity, and were almost minerssally succeossful, from the skill with which they were laid and the seereey and rapidity with which they were exeeuted. Like Robin Hood of Ghyland, he was a kind and gentle robber, and, while he took from the riel, was liberal in relieving the poor. 'Ihis might in part be policy ; lat the minversal tradition of the comitry speaks it to have arisen from a better motive. All whom I have conversed with, and I have in my youth seen , mie who knew Rob Roy personally, gave him the character of a benevolent and hmane man 'in his way.'
His ideas of morality were those of an Arab chief, being such as naturally arose out of his wild ellucation. Supposing Rol) Roy to have argned on the tendeney of the life which he pursued, whether from choice or from necessity, he would doulhtless have assumed to himself the chanacter of a hrave man, who, deprived of his natural rights by the partiality of laws, endeavoured to assert them by the stromer hand of natural power; and he is most felicitonsly described as reasoning thus, in the high-toned poetry of my gifted friend Wordsworth :

Say, then, that he was wise as brave, As wisc in thought as bold in deed; For in the principles of things He songht his moral creed.

Said generons Rob, 'What ueed of books ? Burn all the statutes and their shelves !
They stir us up against our kind, And worse, agaiust ourselves.

- We have a passion, make a law, Too false to guide us or control ;
And for the law itself we fight In bitterness of soul.
- And puzzled, blinded thus, we lose Distinctions that are plain and few ;
These find I graven ou my heart, That, tells me whet to do.
- The ereatures see of flood and field, And those that travel on the wind;
With them no strife can last; they live In peace, and peace of mind.
- For why? Beeause the good old rule Sufficeth them : the simple plan,
That they shouhl take who have the power, And they should keep who ean.
' A lesson which is quickly learn'd, A signal this which all can see ;
Thus, nothing here provokes the strong To wanton eruelty.
- All freakishuess of mind is check'd, He taned who foolishly aspires, While to the measure of his might Each fashions hic ؛esires.
- All kinds and creatnes stand and fall By strength of prowess or of wit ;
' $T$ is Gol's approutuent who must sway, And who is to sulmit.
'Since then the rule of right is plain, And longest life is lmet a day,
To have my ends, maintain my rights, I 'll take the shortest way.'

And thus anong these rocks he lived, Throurf stummer's heat and winter's snow:
The engle, he was low atuve,
And Rub was lurd below.

We are not, however, to suppose the character of this distinguished outlaw to be that of an actual hero, aeting uniformly and eonsistently on such moral principles as the illustrious bard who, standing by his grave, has vindicated his fame. On the eontrury, as is conmon with barbarous chiefs, Rob Roy appears to have mixed lis professions of prineiple with a large alloy of eraft and dissimulation, of which his eonduct during the Civil War is suffieient proof. It is also suid, culd truly, that, although lis courtesy was one of his strongest characteristies, yet sometimes he assumed an arroganee of manner which was not easily culured by the high-spirited men to whom it was nddressed, and drew the daring outlaw into frequent disputes, from which he did not always come off with credit. From this it has been inferred that Rob Roy was more of a bully than a hero, or at least that he had, according to the common phrase, his fighting days. Some aged men who knew him well have deseribed him also as better at a taich-tulzie, or scufte within doors, than in mortal combat. The tenor of liss life may be quoted to repel this charge ; while, at the same time, it must be allowed that the situation in which he was placed rendered him prudently averse to maintaining quarrcls where nothing was to be had save blows, and where sueecss. Would have raised up against him new and powerful enemics, in a country where revenge was still considered as a duty rather than a crime. The powe. of eommanding his passions on such oceasions, far from bein ${ }_{b}$.nconsistent with the part whieh MaeGregor had to perform, was essentially neeessary, at the period when he lived, to prevent his cureer from being cut short.

I may here mention onc or two oceasions on which Rob Roy appcars to have given way in the mamer alluded to. My late vcuerable friend, Jolm Ramsay of Ochtertyrc, alike eminent as a classieal scholar and as an authentic register of the ancient history and manners of Sentland, informed me that on oeeasion of a publie meeting at a boufire in the town of Doune, Rob Roy gave some offence to James Edmondstone of Newton, the same gentleman who was unfortunately concerned in the slaughter of Lord Rollo (sec Maclaurin's ('rimina "rials, No. IX.), when Edmondstone compelled MacGregor to quit the town on pain of being thrown by him into the bonfire. 'I broke one of your ribs on a former occasion,' said he, 'and now, Rob, if you provoke me farther, I will break your neck.' But it must be remembered that Edmometstone was a man of consequence in the Jacobite party, as he carried the royal standard of James Vll.

xxvi INTRODUCTION TO ROB ROY

at the battle of Sherriffmuir, and also, that he was near the door of his own mansion-house, and probubly surromeded ly his friends and adherents. Rob Roy, however, suffered in reputation for retiring minder suei a threat.

Another well-vonched case is that of Cumingham of Boynitan.

Henry Cmminghan, Ban!, of Boyuhan, was a gentleman of Stirlingshire, who, like many expuisites of our own time, tuited a natural ligh spirit and daring character with an affectation of delieacy of address and manmers amounting to foppery. ${ }^{1}$ He ehanced to be in company with Rob Roy, sho, either in contempt of Bornlian's sinpposed effeminacy, or becanse he thought him a safe person to fix a pararel on (a point which Kub's enemies allerged he was wont to consider), insulted him so grossly that a challenge passed letween then. The groodwife of the clachan had hidden Comminghan's sword, and, while he rummaged the house in ynest of his own or some other, Rub Roy went to the Shieling Hill, the appointed place of combat, and paraded there with great majesty, waiting for his antagonist. In the meantime Cumninghan had rummarel out an old sword, and, entering the ground of contest in all haste, rushed on the outliaw with such unexpeeted fury that he fairly drove him off the field, nor did he show himself in the village again for some tinte. Mr. Mi.eGregor Stirling has a softened aecount of this aneclote in his new edition of Nimmo's Stirlingshire; still he recorls Rob Roy's discomfiture.

Occasionally Rob Roy suffered disasters and incurred great personal danger. On one remarkable occasion he was savel by the coolness of his lieutenant, Macanaleister, or Fletcher, the Little John of his band-a fine active fellow, of eourse, and celebrated as a marksman. It happene.l that MacGregor and his party had been surprised aul dispersed by a superior force of horse and foot, and the word was given to 'pplit and squmbler:' Each shifted for himself, but a bold dragoon attachet himself

[^4]to pursuit of Rol, and, overtaking him, struck at him with his broadsworl. A plate of irm in his homet saved the Mackregor from being cut duwn to the teeth; but the bow was heary enongh to bear him to the gronnd, crying as he fell, ' (), Macanaleister, is there naething in her?' (i.r. in the ginn). The trooper, at the same time exclaming, 'D--11 ye, your mother never wrought your night-cup:' had his arm raised for a second blow, when Macanaleister fired, and the ball pierved the dragoon's heart.
Sueh as he was, Rob Roy's progress in his ocenpation is thus deseribed by a genteman of sense and talent, who resided within the circle of his prelatory wars, had prubably felt their effects, and speaks wi' them, as might be expected, with little of the forbearance with which, from their ${ }^{n c c u l}$ bir and romantic eharacter, they are now renarded.
'This man (Roo Ruy Mac(iveror) who was a persom of sagatity, mad neither wanted stratagem nur address, haviug nhmodned himself to all licentionsuess, sett himself ntt the hean of all the loose, vagrant, and desperate peopte of that clan in the west cond of Perth and sirling shires, and infestell liose whole conntrys with theilis, pobberys, and deprelations. Very few who lived within his reach (that in, with:in the distance of a noeturnal expedition) conld momise to theriselves socrity, either to their persons or effects, without subgerting themselves t., ary him a heavy and shamefull tax of black-maill. He at last proweeded to such a degree of andacionsuess that he committed roblerys, raised depredations [contributions], and resented quarrels at the heand of a sery considerable hody of armed men, in open day, and in the face of the government.' 1

The extent and suceess of these depredations camot be surprising when we consider that the scene of them was haid in a comitry where the genemal law was neither enforcel nor respected.
Having recorled that the general hathit of cattle-stealing had blimed even those of the hetter elasses to the infany of the practice, and that, as men's property consisted cutirely in herds it wals rendered in the highest degree prearious, Mr. Graham adds- On these aceomits there is no culture of gromid, no improvement of pastures, and, from the same reasons, no mannfactures, no trade ; in shert, no industry. The people are extremely prolific, and therefore sin muerons that there is in t bnsiness in that commtry, aceording to its present order and economy, for the one-half of them. Every place is full of idle people, accostomed to arms, and lazy in everything bert rapines and depredations. As buddiell or aque-ithe houses 1. to be fonnd everywhere throngh the eomintry, no in these tir . saunter away their time, and frequently consmine the.; the returns of their illegal purelhases. Here the laws have never been executel, nor the authority of the magistrate ever established. Here the officer of the law neither dare nor enn execinte his duty, and several places are above thirty miles from lawfinl persons. In short, here is no order, no authority, no government.

[^5]
sxviii IN'RODUCOIJON 'IO ROB ROY

The period of the Rehellion, 1715 , approaehed som after Roh Roy had attained celebrity. His Jaconite partialities were now placed in opposition to his sense of the obligations which he owed to the indirect protection of the Dike of Argyle. But the desire of 'drowning his sommding steps anid the din of general war'' indueed lim to join the forces of the Band of Mar, although his patron, the Duke of Argyle, was at the head of the arny opposed to the Highland insurgents.

The MacGregors, a large sept of them at least, that of Ciar Mahr, on this oecasion were not eommandel by Rob Roy, lint by his nephew already mentioned, Gregor MacGregor, otherwise ealled James Grahan of Glengyle, mil still better remembered by the Gaelic epithet of Cillime Dhu, i.e. Black Kinee, from a black spot on one of his knees, which his Highland garb rendered visible. There can be no gnestion, however, that, being then very yomg, Glengyle must have aeted on most occasions by the advice and direction of so experieneed a leader as his mucle.
The MacGregors assembled in mumbers at that period, and began even to threaten the Lowlands towards the lower extremity of Loch Lonomel. They suldenly seized all the boats which were upon the lake, and, probahly with a view to some enterprise of their own, drew them overhand to Inversmaid, in orler to intercept the progress of a large borly of west-country Whigs who were in arns for the government, and moving in that direction.
The Whigs made an exenrsion for the recovery of the houts. Their forces eonsisted of volmiteers from Paisley, Kilpatrick, and elsewhere, who, with the assistance of a body of seamen, were towed up the river Leven in long-buats belonging to the ships of war then lying in the (Ilyde. At Luss they were joined by the forces of Sir Itmuphrey Colyuhom and Jannes Grant, his son-in-law, with their followers, attired in the Highland dress of the period, whinch is picturespuely deseribed.' The whole party crowsed to Craig Ruyston, bint the MadGregors did not offer combat. If we are to helieve the account of the expedition given by the historinn lane, they lenped on shore at Craig Royston with the ntmost intrepidity, no eneny appearing to oppose them, and, by the noise of their irnms, which they beat incessantly, ant the discharge of their artillery and minall-arms, terrified the MacGregors, whom they appear never to have seen, out of their fastnesses, and cansed them to tly in a punie to the general camp of the Highlambers at Strath lillam. I'le lowcountry men succeded in getting possession of the boats, at a great expenditure of noise and conrage, and little risk of danger.

After this temporary removal from his ohl hants, hob hoy was sent by the barl of Mar to Aberleen, to raise, it is believel, a part of the Clan Gregor which is settled in that conntry. 'lhese men were of his own family (the race of the Ciar Mohr). They were the descendants of abont three hmmdred Maeiregors whom the barl of Murray, abont the year $11 ; 2$, tramiported from his estates in Menteith to oppose against his enemies the NacIntoshes, a race as harly and restless as they were themselves.

But while in the city of Aberdeen Roll Roy met a relation of a very different elass ant character from those whom he was sent to summon to arms. This was Dr. James Gregory (by descent a MacGregor), the patriareh of a dynasty of professors
: At night they arrived at lass. where they were joined by sir Iumpliray Colghhonn of Lass, and James Grant oi Dinscirden, hie son-in-law, followed by 40 or 50 stately fellows in their short hose and belted pladds, armed eaeh of them with a well-ixed gin on his shoulder, a strong handsome target. Whih a sharip-pointed steel of above half an ell hength serewed into the navel of 1 t . on his left am, a sturdy elnymore by hls slde, and a pistol or two, with a dirk and knife, on his belt. "The boel damond expedition was judged worthy to form a sepmrate pamplilet, wheh domond seen. but as guoted by the historlan lap. It must be delectable. I have not seen, but, as yhtoted by the listl. they wein on ln their expedttlon, and about noon pame to lamersiant inversnaldi, the place of danger, Where the linsley men and thase of limharton, and several oi the other companles. to the number of 100 men. Whit the groatest intreplalty leapt on shore, got up to the top of the momintatis, anh stood a constimerable thme, heating thefr drims all the while: but no enemy appenring, they weat in ghest of thelr boats, which the remels had sclzed, and having casually lighted om some ropes. anchors, and onis hild among the shrmbs. at length they comal the hats drawn in a mood way on the land. whifel they harled down th the low. Shed of them ns werr not dammuged they earrled off with thell, and such as were they sunk or hewed In pleces. earried same night thes retmrned to luss, mhd thence bext day to bumThat same night whe from what first set out. brloging along whth them the whole boats they found lin thelr way on eltiep shate of the loeh, and the the creeks of the ksles. and morred them inder the cannon of the eastle. limrlag this expedition the pinnaces disharging thely pateraroes, and the men their smath-arms, made such a thundering nolse throngh the mathtplled refoundhes echoes of the vast anountains on both sides of the loeh, that the Jactiregionrs were cowed and tirighted away to the rest of the rebels who were encame ed simblaphllen Istrath Fillan I. - Rae's History of the Rebellion, 4to, 12. $\mathbf{2 8 7}$. distinguished for literary und scientific talent, and the grandfather of the late eninent physician and accomplished sehohr, Professor (iregory of Edinburgh. This gentlenan was at the time Professor of Medicine in King's College, Aberleen, and soll of Dr. James Gragory, distinguished in science as the inventor of the reflecting teleseope. With such a family it mny seem our friend Rob could have had little communion. But civil war is a species of misery which introduces men to strange bedfellows. Dr. Gregory thought it a point of prudence to elainn kindred at so critical a periox with a man so formidable nnd intluential. He invited Roh Roy to his house, and treated him with so nuch kindness that he producel in his generous bosom a degree of gratitude which seemed likely to occasion very inconvenient effects.

The Professor had in son about eight or nine years old, a lively, stout boy of his age, with whose appearance our Highland Robin Hood was much taken. (nn the day before his departure from the honse of his lemmed relative, Rob Roy, who had pondered deeply how he might requite his cousin's kinduess, took Dr. Gregory aside mud addressed him to this purport: 'My dear kinsman, I have been thinking what I could do to show my sense of your linspitality. Now, here you have a fine spirited boy of a son, whom you are ruining by cranming hin with your nseless book-learning, and I am determined, by way of manifesting my great good-will to you and yours, to take him with me and make a man of him.' 'The learned Professor was ntterly overwhelned when his warlike kinsman amouneed his kind porpose, in langoage which implied no doubt of its being a proposal whieh wonld be, and ought to be, aecepted with the atmost gratitude. 'The task of apology or explanation was of a most delicate deseription ; and there might have been considerable danger in suffering Rub Roy to pereeive that the promotion with which he threatened the son was, in the father's cyer, the realy road to the gallows. Indeed, every excuse which he could at first think of, such as regret for putting his friend to tromble with a youth who had been edncated in the Lowlands, and so on, mily strengthened the chieftan's inclination to patronise liis yonng kinsinan, as he sumposed they arose entirely from the modesty of the father. He would for a long time take no apology, and even spoke of carrying off the youth by a certain degree of kindly violenee, whether his father consented or not. At length the perplexed Professor pleaded that his son was very young, and in an infirm state of health, and not yet able tw embre the hardmhips of a mountain life: but that in mother year or two he hinpen his health would he fimuly estahlished, and he womld be in a fitting condition to attend on his brave kinsman, and follow ont the splendid lestinies to which he nquened the way. This agreement being made, the cousins parted - Rul Roy pledging his honour to carry his young relation to the hills with him on his next return to Aberleenshire, and Dr. Gregory, doubtlesw, praying in his seeret soul that he might never see Ruht's Highland face ugnin.

James Gregory, who thus eseaped lwing his kinsmmn's recruit, and in all probability lis henchuan, was afterwaris Professor of Merlicine in the College, nad, like most of his family, distinguished by his scientific aequirenents. He was rather of an irritable and pertimacions disposition ; and his friends were wont to remark, when he showed any symptom of these foibles, ' Ah : this comes of not having been edncated ly Rob Roy.'
The comexion between Rob Roy and his classical kinsman did not end with the period of Rolis transicnt power. At a period considerably subsecguent to the year 171: he was walking in the Castle Street of Aberleen arm-in-arm with his hust, Dr. James Gregory, when the drmus in the barracks suldenly beat to urms, and soldiers were seen issuing from the barracks. 'If these lads are turning out,' said Rob, taking leave of his cousin with great composure, 'it is time for me to look after my safety.' So saying, he dived down a close, and, as John Bunyan says, 'went upon his way and was seen :10 more.' ${ }^{1}$

We have already stated that Rob Roy's eonduct during the insurrection of 171 in was $^{\text {wery }}$ vequivocal. His person and followers were in the Highland amy, but his heart seems to have been with the Duke of Argyle's. Yet the insurgents were constrained to trust to him as their only guide when they marehed from Perth towards Dmmblane, with the view of erossing the Forth at what are called the Forls of Frew, and when they themselvess said he could mot be relied upun.
This movement to the westwarl on the part of the insurgents bronght on the battle of Sherriffimuir, inulecisive indeed iil its immediate results, but of which the Juke of Argyle

[^6]
xxxii INTHODUC゙IION 'IO ROB ROY

reaped the whole advantage. In this aetion it will lee reeolleeted that the right wing of the Highlanders home and ent in pieces Argyle's left wing, while the clans on the left of Mar's army, thongh comsisting of Stewarts, Mackemies, and Comerinv, were completely rontel. During this medley of flight ant pmrsuit, Rol, Roy retained his station on a hill in the centre of the Ilighland position ; and, though it is said his attack might have decided the day, he conhd not be prevailed upon to charge. 'This was the more nimfortmme for the insurgents, as the leaning of a party of the Mauphersons had beell committed to MacGregor. This, it is sail, was owing to the age and intirnity of the ehief of that name, who, mable to lead his clan in person, objected to his heir-apparent, Macpherson of Norll, liselarging his duty on that ocension; so that the tribe, or a part of them, were brigadel with their allies the MacGregors. While the faventable moment for action was gliding away memployed, Mar's positive orders reachel Rob Roy that he shonld presently attack. To which lie cerolly replied, 'No, no! if they camot do it withont me, they camot do it with me.' One of the Macphersons, mamed Alexander, one of Rub's origimal profession, videlicet a drover, but a man of great strength and spirit, was so incensel at the inactivity of his temprary leader that he threw off his plaid, drew his sword, and called ont to his elansmen, 'Let us endure this no longer: if he will not lead yon, I will.' Rob Roy replied, with great coolness, 'Were the qnestion about driving Highland stots or kyloes, Sandie, I wonld yiehl to your superior skill; hut, as it respects the leading of men, I minst be allowed to be the better julge.' 'Did the matter respeet driving Glen-Figas stots,' answered the Macphersm, 'the question with Roh would mot be, which was to be last, but which was to be foremest.' lucensed at this sarcusm, MacGregor drew his sword, and they womld have fonght mpon the spot if their friends on both sides land not interferel. But the moment of attack was completely lost. Rob ilid not, however, negleet his own private interest on the oecasion. In the confision of an mulecided field of hattle he cmriched his fillowers by plandering the hagrage and the lead on both sides.
The fine old satirical ballayl on the battle of Sherriffimini dees not forget to stignatise our hero's comluet on this memorable occasion.

INTRODUCOI'ION 'I'U HOH HOS' xxxiii

> Yor he néer alvancel
> Fromin the glace where lee stanced, Till ane mair way I do there at a', man.

Notwithstanding the sort of nentrality which Rob Roy had contrived to observe during the progress of the Rebellion, he did not eseape some of its petwalties. He was ineladel in the act of attainler, and the honse in Breablallonee, which was his place of retrent, was hurued by (ieneral Larel Cimdogan, when, after the conchusion of the insmrection, he marched through the Highlands to disarm and pmish the offending elans. But, upon going to luverary with alowt forty or fifty of his followers, Rub obtained favour, hy an nppurent surrender of their arms to Col. Patrick Campleill of Fimb, who furnished them and their leader with protections muder his hanul. Being thus in a great mensure secured from the resentment of govermment, Rolb Roy established his residence at Craig Royston, near Loch Lomonil, in the midst of his own kinsmen, and lost no time in resuming his private quarrel with the Duke of Montrose. For this purpose he som got on foot as many men, and well armed too, as he had yet commandel. He never stirred withont a loolyguard of ten or twelve picked followers, and withont much effort could increase then to fifty or sixty.
The Duke was not wanting in efforts to destroy this troublesome adversary. Hiv (irace applied to General Carpenter, commanling the forees in Scothand, and hy his orders three parties of soldiers were directed from the three different points of Glasgow, Stirling, and Finlarig, near Killin. Mr. Grahann of Killearn, the Duke of Montrose's rehation and factor, sheriffdepante also of Dumbartonshire, aceonpanied the troops, that they might act muler the eivil authority, mud have the assistance of a trusty guide well acrpmainted with the hills. It was the object of these several columins to arrive abont the same time in the neighbourhoor of Rob Roys residence and surprise him and his followers. But heavy rains, the difficulties of the commtry, and the gool intelligence which the ontlaw was always supplied with, disappointed their well-concerted combination. The troops, finding the birds were flow - ${ }^{2}$ nged themselves by destroying the nest. They hurned Rob coy's house, though not with impunity, for the Mac(iregors. uncealed among the thickets and cliffs, firen on them and $\mathfrak{i}$...it a gremadier.
Rob Roy avengeal himself for the loss which he sustained on this occasion by an act of singular andacity. About the middle of November 1716 Johm Graham of Killearn, ahrealy nentinned VOL. IV—0

xxxiv INIRODUCLION TO ROB ROY

as factor of the Montrowe family, went to a place cilled Chapel brrock, where the tenants of the Duke were simmmoned to nupear with their ternly rents. They appearel aceordingly, and the factor had received realy money to the amomit of about $\mathfrak{£ 3}(3)$ when Roh Roy enterel the room at the head of nin urmed party. The steward endenvoured to protect the Duke's property by throwing the lawhs of aceomis and money into a garret, trinsting they might escape nutice. But the experienced freebouter was mot to be baftled where suleh a prize was at atake. He reavered the books midel cash, phecel himself caloly in the reseipit of enstom, examined the aceomits, poeketed the mones, mind gave reeepipts on the lluke's purt, suying he woild hold reckning with the Duke of Montrose ont of the damages which he had sunstained hy his Girace's menns, in which he inelnided the lomses he had suffered, ws well by the burning of his hanse by (ieneral Cadogan as by the later expedition agminst Craig kuyston. He then requested Mr. Grahum to attend him; nor does it appear that he treated him with any persomal violenee, or even rudeness, although he iuformed him he regarded him as a hostage, mul menaed rongh usage in case he should be pursued, or in danger of heing overtaken. Few more andaeions feats have been performed. After some rapil changes of place (the fatigue nttending which was the mily amoyynce that Mr. (iralam seems to have complained of), he carried his prisoner to an island on Loeh Katrine, and cansed him to write to the Duke, to state that his ransom was fixed at 3400 nuerks, being the balance which MacGregor pretemled remained due to him, after deducting all that lie owed to the Duke of Montrose.

However, niter detaining Mr. Grahnun five or six days in custondy on the island, which is still callen Rob Roy's Prison, and eonla be no comfortable dwelliug for November nights, the outlaw seems to have despared of attaning further advantage from his bold attempt, and sulfered lis prisoner to depart uninjured, with the aceonut books mul bills granted by the tonauts, taking especial care to retain the cash. ${ }^{1}$
Other primks are told of Roll, which argue the sanme boldness. and sagacity as the seizure of Killearn. ${ }^{2}$ 'The Duke of Montrose, weary of his insolence, pricured a mbantity of armis and distrihnteil them among lis tenantry, in order that they might defend themselves ngainst futura violences. But they fell into different lumin from those they were intendel for. The Machrerors inade sepurnte attacks on the honses of the temanta, mil ilismrmed them all one after mother, not, as was supposed, withont the consent of many of the permons so dimarmed.

[^7]

As a great part of the Dake's rents were payable in kind, there were girmels (grmaries) eatablished forstoring np the corn at Monlin, and elsewhere on the Buchanan extate. "I'u theso sturehonses Robl Roy ased to repair with a suthicient force, mal of conrag when he was least expeeted, and insint upon the delivery of quantities of grain, sumetimes for his own use unl sometimes for the assistance of the emmetry people, always piving regnlar receipte in his own nane, and pretemling in reckon with the Duke for what smms he received.

In the mennwhile a garrimin was estublished by government, the mins of which may be still seen alont half-way betwixt lach Iomond and Loch Katrine, upon Rob Roys origimal property of laversmail. biven this militury establishsmint conld inot bridle the restlens Mactiregor. Ife contrived to surprine the little fort, disarm the woldiers, and destruy the fortifiention. It was afterwaris re-establishet, and again taken previons to the insmreetion of $1 \mathrm{i}+\mathrm{i}$ - ft . Finally, the fort of lnversmaid was $n$ third time repaired after tho :arinction of eivil discord; and when wo find the celehra* . "al Wolfe commanding in it, the imagination is stron- nes. Il lyy the variety of time and events which the cin \& ": "riugs simultaneously to recollection. It is now tota! a intled. ${ }^{1}$

It was not, strictly speaking, as a professed imi is ator that Rob Roy now comblacted his operations, bit as a sort of contractor for the police - in Suntish phrmse, a lifter of black-muil. The nature of this contract has lwen described in the Novel of Waverley, and in the notes $[13,16]$ un that work. Mr. Grahan of Gartmore's deseription of the character may bo here transcribed:-

[^8][^9]
xxxvi IN'RODOUC'IION 'TO ROH ROY

ence with the thieves was agreel with to preserve the lands contracted for from thefts, for errtain sums to be paid gearly ont of these lands. Upon this find he ennployed one halt of the thin ves to recover stolen cattle, and the other half of them to steall, in ordir to make this agreement mad blackmaill contanct necessiary. Ihe estates of $t$..ase gentlemen who refused to contract, or give commenamo to that pernicions practice, are phmered by the thioviag lart of the watheh, in order to foree then to purchas: their protestion. Itheir leader collss limself the cirperaine of the W'atch, and his banditi go by that mame. And as this eives them a kind of authority to travire the ronuty, so it makes them eappable of doing "neh misehief. These different odh kimels of coms through the Highands asiee altogether a very considerable hoty of men, inmed from their infaney to thir erat fitigues, and so are eapable to act in a militury way when areasiont olfor.
'Poople rho are ignorant and enthusiastick, who are in absolute dependan' upon iheir chief or landlord, who are directed in their conseiences by wu.a! Citholick priests or nonjuring elergymen, and who are not masters of any property, maty easily be formed into any mould. They far no dangers, as they have nothing to lose, and so "an with ease be induced to attempt anything. Nothing can make their condition worse; ennfusions and tronbles do commonly indulge them in such licentionsuess as by these they better it.' ${ }^{1}$

As the practice of contracting for black-mail was an obvions eneouragement to rapinc, and a great obstacle to the course of justiee, it was, by the Statute 1567, Chup. 21, declared a capital crime, both on the part of him who levied and him who paid this sort of tax. But the necessity of the casc prevented the execution of this severe lav, 1 believe, in any one instance; and men went on submitting to a certain mulawful imposition rather than run the risk of utter ruin, just as it is now found difficult or inpossible to prevent those who have lost a very large sum of moncy by robbery from compounding with the felons for restoration of a part of their booty.

At what rate Rob Roy levicd black-nail I never heard stated; but therc is a formal contract by which his nephew, in 1741, agreed with varions landliolders of estates in the counties of Perth, Stirling, and Dinnbarton, to recover cattle stolen from them, or to pay the value within six nomths of the loss being intimated, if such intimation were made to him with sufficiont despatch, in consideration of a payment of $\{5$ on eath $\mathfrak{E} 1(0)$ of valued rent, which was nut a very heavy insurance. Petty thefts were not included in the contraet ; but the theft of one horsc or one head of black cattle, or of shecp exceeding the number of six, fell under the agreement.

Rob Roy's ?rofits upon such contracts brought him in a considerable revenue in money or cattle, of which he made a popular use ; for he was publicly liberal as well ans privately beneficent. Thle minister of the parish of Balpuidder, whose name was Robison, was at one time threatening to pursue the parish for an angmentation of his stipenul. Rohb Roy took an oppurtmity to assure him that he would do well to abstain from this new exaction, a lint which the minister did not fail to unlerstanl. But, to make lime sime indemuification, MacGregor presented hime every year with a cow and a fat sheep: and no scrinles as to the mode in which the domor eane by them are said to have affiected the reverem gentleman's conscience.

[^10]
INTRODUC"IION TO ROB ROS xxxvii

The following account of the proceedings of Rob Roy, on an applieation to him from one of his eontractors, had in it something very interesting to me, as told by an ohl eountrynam in the Lemox who was present on the experlition. But as there is no point or marked ineident in the story, and as it must necessimily be without the half-frightened, half-bewildered look with which the "arrator aecompanied his reeollections, it may possibly lose its effect when transferred to paper.

My informant stated himself to have been a lad of fifteen, living with lis father on the extite of a gentlenam in the Lumox, whose name 1 have forgotten, in the capacity of herd. On a fine morning in the end of Oetoker, the period when surh ealamities were almost always to be appre. hemded, they fomm the Highlamd thieres hatl heen down nipon them, and swept away ten or twelve lieal of eattle. Roh Roy was sent for, and came with a party of seven or cight armed men. He heard with great gravity all that conld lee tohl him of the circmustances of the creagh, and expressed his confidenece that the heri-wildiefows could not have earried their booty firr, and that he should be able to recover them. He desired that two Lowlinders should be sent on the party, as it was not to be expected that any of his gintlemen would take the trouble of driving the cattle when he shonld recover possession of them. My informant and his father were despatched on the expedition. They had no good-will to the jonrney; nevertheless, providal with a little food and with a dog to help, them to manage the eattle, they set off with MarGregor. They travelleal a long day's journey in the direetion of the monntain Benvoirliel, and slept for the night in a ruinous lut or bothy. The next morning thes. resmmed their journey among the hills, Roh lioy directing their eourse liy signs and mark's on the heath, whieh my informant did not muderstind.
About noon Rob comminuled the armed praty to halt, and to tie, conched in the heather where it was thickest. 'Do you and your son,' he said to the oldest lowlander, 'ro boldly over the hill. You will see beneall you, in a glen on the other side, your master's cattle feeding, it hare he, with others: gather your own together, taking care to disturb ino one else, and inive them to this place. If any one speak to or threaten yon, tell them that I am here, at the head of twenty men.' 'But what if they abmse ns, or kill ns?' said the lowland peassunt, by no means delighted at finding the embassy inposed ou him and his son. 'If they do you any wrong,' said Rol, 'I will never lorgive them as long as I live.' The Lowlander was by no means content with this security, hat did not think it safe to dispute Rob's injunctions.

xxxvii IN'ROD)UC'II(ON 'TO ROB ROY

He and his son elimbed the hill, therefore, fomme a doep valley, where there grazed, as Rob load prealicted, a large horel of cattle. 'They cantionsly selected those which their master hanl lost, and tork measures to drive them over the hill. As soon as they began to remove them they were smprised by hearing eries and sereams; and, looking aromed in fear and trembling, they saw a woman, seeming to have started out of the earth, who tlyted at them, that is, scoldell them, in Garlie. When they contrived, however, in the best Gaelic they conhl muster, to deliver the message Rob Roy told them, she became silent, and disalpleared without offering them any further annoyance. The chief heard their story on their return, and spoke with great complacency of the art which he possessed of putting such things to rights without any muleasant bustle. The party were now on their roal hone, and the danger, thongh not the fatigue, of the expedition was at an end.

They drove on the eattle with little repose until it was nearly dark, when Rob proposed to halt for the night upon a wide moor, across which a cold northeast wind, with frost on its wing, was whistling to the tune of the Pipers o: Strath-Dean. ${ }^{1}$ The Highlanders, slieltered by their plaids, lay down in the heath comfortably enongh, but the lowlanders had no protection whatever. Rob Roy, observing this, directed one of his followers to afford the old man a portion of his plaid; 'for the callant (boy), he may,' said the freebooter, 'kerp himself warm by walking abont and watching the eattle.' My informant heard this sentence with no small distress ; and, as the frost wind grew more and more eutting, it seemed to freeze the very blood in his young veins. He hal been exposesl to weather all his life, he said, but never could forget the cold of that night; in so much that, in the bitterness of his heart, he cursed the bright moon for giving no heat with so much light. At length the sense of cold and weariness became so intolerable that he resolved to desert his watch to seek some repose and shelter. With that purpose he eouched himself down behind one of the most bulky of the Highlanders, whis acted as lieutenant to the party. Not satisfied with having secured the shelter of the man's large person, he coveted a share of his plaid, and by inperceptible degrees drew a corner of it round him. He was now corsparatively in paradise, and slept sound till daybreak, when he awoks and was terribly afraid on observing that his noeturnal operations had altogether uncovered the duinhe-wassel's neek and shonlders, whieh, lacking the plaid which shonld have protected them, were eovered with cranreuch (i.e. hoar frost). The lad rose in great dread of a beating at least, when it should be found how luxuriously he had been accommodatel at the expense of a prineipal person of the party. Good Mr. Lientenamt, however, got up and shook himself, rubbing of the hoar frost with his plaid, and muttering something of a 'canlil neight.' 'They then drove on the cattle, which were restored to their owner withont farther adventure. The above can hardly be termed a tale, but yet it contains materials both for the poet and artist.

It was perhaps about the same time that, by a rapid march into the Balquidder hills at the head of a body of his own [^11]tenantry, the Duke of Montrose actually surprised Rob Roy and made him prisoner. He was momted belind onc of the Duke's followers, named James Stewart, and made fast to him by a horse-girth. The person who had hime this in charge was grandfather of the intelligent man of the same name, now deeeased, who lately kept the imin the vicinity of Loch Katrine, and acted as a guide to visiturs through that beautiful seenery. From him I learned the story many years before cee was cither a publicim or a gmide, except to noorfowl shootery. It was evening (to resume the story), and the Duke was pressing on to lodge his prisoner, so long sought after in vain, in some place of seeurity, when, in crossing the 'l'eith or Forth, I forget which, MacGregor took an opportunity to conjure Stewart, by all the ties of old acplaintance and good-neighbourhood, to give him some chance $0^{t}$ an escape from an assured doom. Stewart was moved with compassion, perlapss with fear. He slipped the girth-buckle, and Rob, dropping down from behind the horse's croupe, dived, swam, and estaped, pretty minch as deseribed in the Novel. When James Stewart came on shore, the Tuke hastily demanded wherc his prisoner was; and, as no asstinet a:Lswer was returned, instantly suspected Stewart's comnivance at the eseape of the ontlaw, and, drawing a stet! pistol from his belt, struck him down with a blow on the head, from the effects of which, his descendant said, he never completely recovered.

In the success of his repeated escapas from the pursuit of his powerfinl enemy, kob hoy at length became wanton and facetious. He wrote a mock challenge to the Duke, which he eirculated among lis friculs to ammse themover a bottle. The reader will find this document in Appendix III. It is written in a good hand, and not particularly deficient in grammar or spelling. Our Southern readers must ise given to understand that it was a piece of humour - a quie, in short - on the part of the ontlaw, who was tom samacious to propose snch a rencontre in reality. This letter was written in the year 1719.
In the following year Roh Roy composed another epistlc, very little to his own reputation, as he thereiia confesses having played booty during the civil war of 1 i io. It is aldressed to General Wade, at that time cugared in disisming the Highland clans and making military roals through the comntry. The letter is a singular composition. ${ }^{1}$ It sets out the writer's real and unfeigned desire to have offered his service to King Gcorge, but for his liability to be thrown into jail for a eivil debt, at [^12]the instance of the Dnke of Moitrose. Being thms debarred from taking the right side, he acknowledged he embiteed the wrong one, npon Falstaft"s prineiple, that, since the king wanted men and the relels soldiers, it were worse shame to be idle in snch ,tirring world than to embrace the worst side, were it as buck as rebellion conld make it. The impossibility of his being neutral in such a debate Robs seems to hay down as an undeniable proposition. At the sime time, while he aeknowledges lnving been foreed into an minatural rebellion against King George, le plemds that he not only nvoided neting offensively against lis Majesty's forees on all oetasions, but, on the eontrary, sent to them what intelligente he conld colleet from time to tine ; for the truth of which he refers to his Grace the Duke of Argyle. What inthenee this plea had on General Wade we haive no means of knowing.

Rob Roy appears to have continued to live very mueli as usual. His fame, in the meanwhile, passed beyond the narrow limits of the eomery in which he resided. A pretended history of him appeared in London dhring lis lifetime, moder the title of The Ilighland Rogue. It is a catel-penny publication, bearing in front the effigy of a speeies of ogre, with a beard of a foot in length; and his aetions are as mmel exargerated as his personal appearance. Some few of the hest known adventures of the hero are told, though with little aceuracy; but the greater part of the pamphlet is entirely fictitious. It is great pity so exeellent a theme for a narrati :? of the kind had not fallen into the hands of De lue, who was engaged at the time interest.

As Rob Roy advanced in years he betame more peaceable in his habits, and his nephew Ghlnne Dhn, with most of his tribe, renouneed those peculiar quarrels with the Duke of Montrose by whieh his mele harl been distinguished. 'Ithe poliey of that great family had latterly been rather to attach this wild tribe by kindness than to follow the mole of violenee which had been hitherto ineffeetually resortel to. Leases at a low rent were granted to many of the MaeGregors, who had heretofore held possessions in the Inke's Highland property merely by ocenpaney ; and Glengyle (or Black linee), who continued to aet as eolleetor of black-mail, mamaged his polioe as a eommander of the Highland wateh arrayed at the elarge of government. He is said to have strictly ilstained from the open and lawless depredations whiel his kinsman had practised.

It was probably after this state of temporary quict had been olitained that Roh Ruy lemen to think of the eoneerns of his future state. He laul heen bred, and long professed himself, i Protestant; but in his later years he embraced the Roman Catholic faith - perhaps on Mrs. Cole's principle, that it was a comfortable religion for one of his ealling. Ife is said to have alleged as the camse of his ennversion a ilesire to gratify the noble fanily of Perth, who were then st niet Catholics. Having, as he observel, assumed the name of the Duke of Argyle, his first protector, hn eonld pay no compliment worth the Jiarl of Perth's acceptanee save complying with his mode of religion. Rob did not pretend, when pressed clusely on the subjeet, to justify all the tenets of Catholicism, and aeknowledged that extreme unction always appeared to him a great waste of ulyie, or oil. ${ }^{1}$

In the last years of Rob Roy's life his elan was involved in a dispute with one more powerfil than themselves. Stewart of Appin, a chicf of the tribe so named, was proprictor of a hillfirm in the Braes of Balquidder, called Invernenty. The Ma:Gregors of Rob Roy's tribe elaimed a right to it by aneient oceupaney, and declared they woull oppose to the uttermost the settlement of any persom mon the farm not being of their own name. 'The Stewarts came down with two humdred men, well armed, to olo themselves justice by main force. The MaeGegors took the fiell, but were mable to monster an equal strengtl. Fob Roy, finling himself the weaker party, asked a parley, in which he represented that both clans were friends to the King, and that he was muvilling they shonth be weakened by mutual eonflict, and thins manle a merit of surrendering to A•vin the disputed territory of Invernenty. Appin, aecordingly, s. ied as tenants there, at an easy quit-rent, the MaeLarens, it family dependent on the Stewirts, and from whose eharacter for strength and bravery it was expected that they would make their right good if amoyed by the MacGregors. When all this had been amicably adjusted, in presence of the two clans drawn up in arms noar the liirk of Balquiller, Rob Roy, apparently fearing his tribe might be thought to have woneded too mueh upon the occasion, steppel forward and said that, where so many gallant men were met in inms, it wonll be shamefnl to part without a trial of skill, and therefore he took the freedom to invite any gentlenan of the Stewarts present to exchange a [^13]few blows with him for the honomr of their respective elans. The brother-in-law of $A$ ppin, and second chicftain of the clan, Alaster Stewart of Invernahyle, necepted the challenge, and they eneomiterel with broadsword and target before their respective kinsmen. ${ }^{2}$ 'The combat lasted till hob reeeived a alight womd in the am, whieh was the nsinal temuination of snch a combat when fought for honour only, and not with a mortal purpose. Rob Roy dropped his point ind congratulated his alversary on having leen the first mun who ever drew hlowl from him. The vietor generously acknowledge l that, withont tine advantage of youth and the ngility aceompuying it, he probably could not have come off with advantage.

This was probably one of Rob Roy's last exploits in arms. The time of his death is not known with certanty, but he is generally said to have survived 1733, and to have died an aged man. When he fonnd limself approaehing his final clange, he expressed some eontrition for particular parts of his life. His wife laughed at these scruples of conscience, and exhorted him to die like a man, as he had lived. In reply, he rebuked her for her violent passions, and the commsels slie had given him. 'You have put strife,' he suid, 'hetwixt me and the best men of the eountry, and now you would plaee emmity between me and my God.'

There is a tradition, no way ineonsistent with the former, if the character of Rob Roy be justly considered, that, while on his death-bed, he learned that a person with whom he was at enmity proposed to visit him. 'Raise me from my hed,' said the invalid; 'throw my phaid aromnd me, and bring me ny elaymore, dirk, and pistols; it shall never le said that a fyeman saw Rob Roy MacGregor defenceless and marmed.' His foeman, conjectured to be one of the MaeLarens before and after mentioned, entered and paid his compliments, inquiring after the health of his formidable neightwour. Rob Roy maintained a cold, haughty civility during their short conference, and so soon as he had left the house, 'Now,' he said, 'all is over ; let the piper play Ha til mi tulith (We return no more)'-and he is said to have expired hefire the dirge was finished.
'This singular man died in bed in his own honse, in the parish of Bahquidler. He was hured in the churelyyard of the same

[^14]parish, where his tombstone is only distinguished by a rude attempt at the figure of a bromisword.
The character of Rob Roy is, of conrse, a mixed one. His sagacity, boldness and prudence, qualities so highly necessary to success in war, becane in some degree vices from the numer in which they were employed. 'The circmustances of his education, however, must be ndmitted us some extenuation of his habitual transgressions against the law: and for his pulitioal tergiversations he might in that distracted periond plemd the example of men far more powerful, and less excmsable in becoming the sport of circminstances, than the poor and desperate outlaw. On the other hand, he was in the constant exercise of virtues the more meritorions as they seem inconsistent with his general character. Pursuing the occupation of a predatory chieftain-in modern phrase, a captain of banditti - Rob Roy was moderate in his revenge and humane in his snccesses. No charge of cruelty or bloodshell, miless in battle, is brought ngainst his menory. In like mamer the formidable outlaw was the friend of the poor, and, to the utmost of his ability, the support of the widow and the orphm, kept his word when pledged, and died lamented in his own wild comntry, where there were hearts grateful for his beneficence, though their minds were not $s^{\text {sPficiently instructed to appreciate his errors. }}$

Abstract

The Author perhaps ought to stop here ; but the fate of a part of Rob Roy's family was so extraordinary as to call for a continmation of this somewhat prolix account, as affording an interesting chapter, not on Highland manners alone, but on every stage of society in which the people of a primitive and half-civilised tribe are brought into close contact with a nation in which civilisation and polity has attained a complete superiority. Rob had five sons - Coll, Romald, James, Dmican, and Robert. Nothing occurs worth notice concerning three of them; but James, who was a very handsome man, seems to have had a good deal of his father's spirit, and the mantle of Dugald Ciar Mohr had apparently descended on the shoulders of Robiul Oige, that is, Young Robin. Shortly after Rob Roy's death the ill-will which the MacGregors entertainel against the MacLarens again broke out, at the instigation, it was saill, of Rob's widow, who seems thus far to have deserved the character givel to her hy her husbaul, as an Ate stitring np to blood and strife. Robin Oig, under her instigation, swore that as soon as her coukl get back a certaiu gun which hal belonged to his father, aul ham been lately at Dome to her repaired, he would shoot Maelaren for having presmed to settle on his mother's land. 1 He was as good as his worl, and shot Mactatrel when between the stilts of his plough, wounting him mortally.

[^15]
xliv INTRODUCLION 'TO ROB ROY

The aid of a Highland leech was proeured, who probed the wound with a probe made out of a castock, i.c. the stalk of a colewort or cabbage. This learued gentlenan declavel he would not venture to prescrile, not knowing with what shot the futient hat berll womded. MacLaren died, and abont the same tine his cattle were huyghed mul his live stock destroyed $\ln$ a barbarous mumer.
Robln Oig, after this feat, which one of his bingraphers represents as the unhappy discharge of a gun, retirel to his mother's honse to luast that he had drawn the first bood in the uliarrel aforesnid. On the approneh of troops and a body of the Stewarts, who were bound to take up the eliuse of their tenant, Robin Oig alsconded, nud eseannel all search.

The ductor alrealy mentioned, by name Callum Maclulvister, with James and Romald, brothers to the actual perpetrator of the umider, were brought to trial. But as they contrived to ripresent the netion as a rash deet committed by the 'duft callint Rob,' to which they were not accessory, the jury fonnd their aeecssion to the crime wns 'not proven.' The alleged acts of spoil and violene on the Macharens' cattle were also found to be unsupported by avidenee. As it was proved, however, that the two brothers, lonald and James, were held and reputed thieves, they were appointed to find caution to the extent of $£ 200$ for their good behaviour for seven years. ${ }^{1}$ collection of arms belonging to the Author. It Is a Spanish-barrclled gun, marked with the letters 1 A . M. ( C ., for Rohert Maefircur ('ainpheli.

- The Author is unecrtain whether it in worth while to mention that ho had a personal opportinity of observing even in his own time that the king's wrlt did not pass guite current in the braes of Bulpuldide. There were very considerable debts dine lig Stewart of Appin dehitily to the Author's famlly). Whlell were likely to be same firm of Invernenty, the could not be made avaimble out or the murder seene of the mirder done apurail strapping deer-stalkers, stll possessed lils family, consisting of tong lense. for a trlifing rent. There was no chance of any one ly the Jaclantens, who, belite dexirous to elugrite to Amerlea, agreed to seil theither buther they repented their harat the next term of Whitsunday, or whether from a mere point of homour, gain or desired doelared they would not permlt a summons of removal to be expented against them, whleh was neersisary for the legal completion of the bargain. And sueh wan the gelurial limpresslon that they were men capathe of resisting the ictral expeution of warning liy very effectual means, no king's messenger wond execute the summons without the support of a mallitary force. An escort of $n$ sergeallt and six mell was ohbained from a llighiand reyinent lying in stiring: thid the Author, theu a wrlter's apprentlee, enilivalent to the homourable situntion of 111 attoruep elerk, was invested with the superinteulence of the expedition, wlth direetlons to see that the inessengel diseharged hif duty fully, ind that the gallant sergeant did not expedi hls part liy eominitting vlolence or plunder. And thus it happened, oddy enongh. thint the Author flest ellemed the romantie seenery of Loeli Katrine, of wilieh he may perinaps say ho has somewhat extended the reputatlon, piding in all the dlanity of dituger, witit a front and rear cuard, and loaded urms. The sprgellit was absolutely a ilghland sergeant kitc. full of storles of Itoli liuy and of himseif, and a very good eompanion. We experieneed no interruption whater.u, anit when we eame to invernenty found the house deserted. We took up on prarters for the night, and used sonie ariolested as we caule the morning we returned as unnolester thought of any serlous opposition, torich. where, having had some silght recelved their mones and from thelr paupera reyna, I sineerely hope they prospered

The rent of Inverneniy instantly rose from $£ 10$ to $£$ io or $£ 80$; and

The spirlt of chanhip was at that time so strong-to which must be added the wish to secure the allierence of stant, able-londled, mud, as the Scotch phrase then went, 'pretty men' - that the representutive of the noble c.mily of l'erth condescended to net onenly ay patron of the MacGregors, anil appenred as such upon their trala. So at lenst the Author was hisformed by the late liolert Mar-hitonh, Fisi., mlvocate. The cireumstance may, however, have oecurrel later than 1736, the year lu which this first trial took place.

Robin Oig served for a time in the 42,1 regiment, nuld was present at the battle of fontenoy, where he was made prisoner and womided. He was exchangel, returnall to Sentland, and obtained his discharge He afterwarls alpearel oprolly in the Machregors' comery; and, notwithstanding his outlawry, marriat a daughter of Gralanin of Drunkie, a gentleman of some property. His wife died a few vears afterwarls.

The insurrection of 1745 soon afterwaris called the Mactiregors to arms. Robert Mactiregor of Glencarnock, gemerally regarded as the chief of the whole mame, and grandfather of sir John, whom the clan received in that character, ruised a Maetswger reginement, with which he joined thet standard of the Chevaliers. The mare of Ciar Mohr, however, aflecting implependence, and commumbed by Glengle and his consin dames Roy Maedregor, did not join this kindred conjry, but mited themselves to the levies of thre titular Dake of Perth, until Willimm MacGregor Drmmond of Ballaidie, whom they regardet as hoad of their brameln of Clan Alpine, should come over from Frame. To cement the mion after the Highland fashion, James laid down the name of Cimminell and assmmed that of Drmmond, in compliment to Lord Peeth. Ile was also called James Roy, ufter his father, and James Mohr, or Big James, from his height. His corls, the relics of his father Robs band, behaved with great activity; with ouly twelve men he suldeedenl in surprising and burning, for the seconl time, the fort at Inversmail, constructed for the express purpose of bridling the country of the Maciregors.

What rauk or command James MacGregor lad is uncertain. He calls, himself Major, and Chevalier Johnstone ealls him Captain. He must have held rank meder Ghlune Dhu, his kinsman, hut his active and audacions claracter placed him ahove the rest of his brethren. Many of his followers were nuarmed ; he smppliel the want of guns and swords with seythe-blades set straight upon their handles.

At the battle of Prestonp:ans James Roy distinguished himself. 'His company,' says Chevalier Jolustone, 'dill great execution with their seythes.' They cut the leges of the horses in two ; the riders through the midalle of their bodies. MacGrogor was have and intrepid, but, at the sane time, somewhat whimsical anll singular. When advancing to the rharge with his company, he receivel five womnds, two of them fiom balls that pierced his boly throngh and throngh. Stretelhell on the gromed, with his lead resting on his hand, he callell out lomily to the Highlanders of his company, 'My lals, I am mot deal. Be ( - -, I slall see if any of you "lors not do his duty.' The vistory, as is well known, was instantly obtained.

In some curious letters of James Roy ${ }^{1}$ it aplyears that lis thigh-bone was hroken on this occasion, and that he, nevertheless, rejoined the army with six companies, and was present at the battle of Culloden. After that defeat the Clan MacPregor kept togeliner In a holy, and ill not dinperse till they had returned luto thelr own country. They brought Iane: Roy with thein in a litter; and, without being jurticularly inolented, he wan [erinitted to reskie In the Maclírugur's conntry along with his brotherw.

[^16]
INTHOIDUCIION TO ROB ROY

Jamen Macfiregor Inrmmmond was attalited for high trenson wilh persons of more importanir. But it appears lio lind entered into nome communication with governurent, um, In the letters quoted, he mentions having olitainml a pass frum the Lard Jnstice-Cherk in 1717, whel wan a anflicient protectlon to lim from the military. The cireunnstance in olscinrely stated in one of the lettern ulready ynoted, but may perbinjw, jolned to mbsequent luchents, anthonise the numplelon that Janes, like his futher, conhl look ut both sinhen of the carels. As the confinson of the drew back to their whl hannts and lived mumbested. But an atrocions ont rage in which the soms of Kub lioj wero concernenl brought at lougth on the family the fill vengennce of the lew.

James loy was a married nam, and had fonrteen dhhiren. Hat his brother, lkobin Uig, was now a widower: and it was resolvet, if possilile, that lie shouhl make his fortune by carrying off and marrying, ly force If upressary, some woman of fortme from the Lowlands.

The inngimation of the halfeeivilised Highlamlers was lems shocked at the idea of this particular species of violence than might le expected from their gencral kindness to the weaker sex when they muke jart of their own fanilies. But all their views were tinged with the iden that they lived in a state of war; and in such a state, from the time of the slege of Troy to 'the moment whell :"evism fell,' the female cuptiven are, to uncivilised vietors, the most valuable part of the booty.

The wealthy are slangliter'l, the lovely are spared.
We need not refer to the rape of the Sabines, or to a similar instance in the Book of Julges, for evidence that such depals of violenee have been committed 1 pon a large senle. Inlemd, this surt of cuterprise was so common along the Ilighland hine as to give rise to a variety of sougs and ballads. ${ }^{2}$ The annals of Ireland, as well as those of Scotland, prove the crime to have been common in the nome hawhes parts of hoth conntries : and any woman who happened to plense a man of spirit who had a good horse, and possessed a f.W chosen frionds and a retreat in the monntaing, was not permittel the alternative of saying himi may. What is more, it would seem that the wonen themselves. most interested in the immmities of their sex, were, among the lower ciasses, accustomed to rugarl sueh marriages as that which is presuntly to lu: detailed as "pritty Fanmy"s way, or rather, the way of Donald with pretty Fanny. It is not a great many years since a respectable woman, above the lower rank of life, expressed herself very warmly to the Author on lis taking the frcelom to censure the belaviolir of the MacGregors on the occasion in prestion. She said 'that there was no use in giving a bride too lunch choice upon such oceasions : that the marringes were the luypiest lang syne which had been doue off hand.' Finally, she averred that her 'owil mother had never seen her father till the night he brought lier up from the Lemox. with ten head of black cattle, and there had not been a happier couple in the country.'

[^17]James Drumuond and his brethren having nimilar apinlons with the Anthor'm old acyuaintunee, and dulxiting how they might mies the fallen fortunes of their chan, formed a resulution to settlo their hrother's fortnue by atriking up an alvantng"ous mariage latwixt Robin lig nul one Jenn been left about two lumiths a willow hy the feath of her linstwind. Iler of a great erime.

This poor youg victime llved with her muther in her own honse at Eallabelly, in the parish of Baifron amil shire of Stirling. At this place,
 James Mohr null hahin Oig, turherl lito the honse where the object of their attack wan rexident. presentend gims, sworls, nad pistols to the malen of the family, and tervifind tho women loy threatening to lireak open the duors if Jemin hey wins not murremblerel, un, sitil Jmmes Roy, • his brother was a young fellow determined to makg his fortune.' Having it h, geth Iragged the ohiect of their lawless purpose from hir phace of concealment, they tore her from her mother's arms, boninted her on a horse before one of the gang, and carried har ofl in spite of her nervans mud eries, which were long hearil after the terified speritators of the ontrage cond no longer see the party retreat throngh the darknesw. In her attempts to eseape the poor yonng womas threw herself from the horse on wheh they hail placed her, and in wo doing wrenched her side. They then laid her donble over the pummel of the sadille, mat transported her throngh the noosses and moons till the pain of the injury whe had suffered lin her side, augnented ly the meaximess of her posture, made her consent to sit upright. In the execuition of this crime they stoppend nt more houses than oue, but noue of the inlalitinuts dared interrupt their proceedings. Amongst others who saw them was that elassical and accomplished seholar, the late Professor Willian Richardson of Glaggow, who nsed to describe as a terrible drean their violent mul noisy cutrance into the house where he was then residing. The llighlanders filled the little kitehen, brandishing their arms, demmoling what they pleased, nud reeeiving whaterer they demandel. Jamers Mohr, he siail, was a tall, stern, nad soldier-like man. Rohin Oig looked more gente; dark, hut yet rudly in complexion - a gool-looking young savagc. Their victim was so dishevelled in her dress, and forlon in her appearance nand demeanour, that he conill harily tell whether she was alive oor deal.
The gang earried t.ee minfortnate woman to Rowerdenma, where they had a priest mascrupulons enough to read the marringe serviee, while James Moher foreilly heht the bride up lefore him ; and the priest declared the couple man anil wife, even while she protested against the infany of his eombuct. Uular the same threats of violence which hat been all aloug used to cuforce their selieme, the poor victim was compelled to reside with the pretembel husband who was thas forced mon her. They even dared to carry her to the pimbic church of Balpuidinr, where the otliciating clergymun (the same who had been Rob Roy's pensioner) only asked them if they were married persons. Robert MacGregor nuswered in the altirmative ; the territionl female was silent.

The country was bow ton eflientually subjected to the law for this vile outrage to be followed by the alvantages proposed by the actors. Military parties were sent ont in every direction to seize the MaeGregors,

xlviii INTHODECLION TO ROB ROY

who were for two or three wecks comprillet to ahift from one place to another in the mountahas, bearing the mufortunate Iomn liey along with them. In the meanwhlle the Snpreme Civil Comrt lasimel a warrant sennestrating the property of Jean liey or Wright, which rennoved out if the reach of the netors in the viohnere the priae wheth they expected. They hand, hawever, adopted a lediet of the pwor wommi's niprit being (n) far brokell that whe woulh perfer submitting to her comlition, mud nitherthg to Robln Oig as her humband, ruther than hever the diskrace expultment, lot their kinsman thengyle, chief of thir immedinte funily, wis of a temper averse on lawless proceedings ; ${ }^{1}$ and the enptive's frlead having hand reromrse: to his ndvice, they feared that he would withelraw his protertion if they whinsed to place the prisoner ut likerty.
The bethen resolvel, therefore, to litedute the mhapy woman, bint pevionsly hal reconre: to every menmire wheh should oblige her, elther from fear or otherwiw", to own her marrhas with Rolin Oig. Tho cuillhehs (ohd Highlan! hagg) alministered drugs, which were designed to have the efleet of philtres, but were probally deleterions. James Molir at one time threatened that, If whe dill not nepulence in the mutch, she wonld hind that there were enongh of men in the Highhnds to bring the hends of two of her nulless who werr pursuing the ci:il lawsuit. At ntother time he fill down oun his knees and confessen he land been arcessory to wronging her, but hogged she would not ruin his imocent wife und large fanily. She was made to owear she would not proseente the hrethren for the oflinue they hat emmitted; and shee was obliged by thrents to sulbserile: papers which were tendered to her, intimating that she was married off in consenplenee of her own previons rempest.
Junes Mohr brumuond atcontingly brought his pretended sister-inInw to Edinhmigh, where for some litile time she was lurriad nlout from one honse to another, wathleid by those with whom slue was loiged, nund aever prermittel to go but almue, or even to mpruach the window. The Court of Sessiom, conviderine the prenliarity of the case, and regarding Jenn Key as being still muler some forvible restraint, took her person under their own puecial rharew, and apminted her to ressile in the family of Mr. Wightman of Mauldjly, a genteman of respertahility, who was married to one of lare nowr relatives. Two simtinds kept ghard on the house day and night, a prewntion wot dermal superthons when the Mac. Gregors were in gnestim. She was allowed the gin whenever she chose, nuld to see whomsurver she had a mind, as whill as the men of law employed in the civil suit on either sille. When slee first came to Mr. Wightman's house she sermed broken down with ulfright and suffring, so clanged in fretures that her menther hardly knew her, mill so shakent in mind that she searce could treognise her paitent. It was long before she could be nssured that she was in perfect safety. But when she at length received contidence in her situation, sla made a judicial declaration or allidarit, telling the full history of her wrougs, imputing to fear her former silence on the sulgeet, and ixpressing her resolation not to prosecnte those who hand injured her, in respert of the wath which she had been compelled to take. From the pmasilhe breath of such min math, though a compuls oure, whe was rellawed hy the furms of Scontish jurisprudenee, in $t^{1}$, respuet more repuitable than these of Bingland, prosecutlons for erfil.... leing nlways ronlueted at the experlive mill eharge of the khgg, with $\ldots, 1$

[^18]
INTIUODUETION 'IO ROB ROY

 But the manapy sulflierer did not lise to be elther necesser or a : agalost thowe whin had wis derily hajured hure.

 her excort chaneed to say, "This. it a very will apot ; what if the If awery, 'the very slght of them would kill bine' she continued to rewate at dinngow, withont verturing to return to her own house at Eilinimelly. Ilar pretended hushand mades some nttempts to abtaln an intervlew with here, whith she stendily rejecten, Slie died on the till Ortuber 1751. The information for the crown hints that her deceuse might be tho robsennence of the nsige sho received. But there is a general report that she dieal of the small-pox.

In the meantinue James Mohr or Drumanond foll into the hauds of justiof. He was considerel as the instigntor of the whole a! hair. Nay, the elecensel had intiomed hore fribuls that, on the night of her Reing carried off, Robin Oig, moved his her esies nul teares, had partly consenteil tu let her return, when dames came ul with op pistol in hlo hand, mul, naking whether he was such a coward as to relinguish an enterprise hin whinh he luad risked evelything to procure him a fortume, In a manser "unpellwit his hrother to perseverre. James's trial twok place on 13th July 1752, und way conductel with the uthost finimess and iluparthlity. Several witnesses, all of the Mactirgor lianily, swor that the marringe was performet with "rery "llyearan of a"puissernee on the womanis part ; mind three or four witnesses, onn of then sherifl-sulastitute of the county, swote she might have made her regenpe if she wished, nom the magistrate stated that he oflered hare ussistanere if she felt desirous to dus. But when asked why he, in his witicial rapmety, thil not arrest the Marfiregors, he conld only nuswer that he had not lowee sutheient to make the attimpt.

The judicial decharations of Jean, Key or Wrinht stated the violent manner in which she had been rarrien otlf, aud they werp ronfirmed by many of her friemis, from her prisate commminations with them, which the event of her drath renderet good asidence. Indeed, the fact of har uhnhetion (to use a Scottish law (1.mu) was comphety proved by impartial witnessess. The unhaply woman almittel that she had piretendel nיymiesernes in her fite on several oceasims, beranse she dared not thust sulh as afferell to assist her to escape, mot even the sherrifrsuhstitute.

The inre browht in a special rerdict, linding that Jean Key or Wright had been foreibly earried off from her honse, as charged in the imbintmunt, sum that the acensel had failon to show that she was hersenf privy and consenting to this act of outrage. But they found the forcible marriage aud subserpurnt vintence was mot proved ; and also found, in wheriation of the pract's guilt in the premises, that Jenn Key did miterwards :rymieser in ler comdition. Eleven of the jury, using the names of other four whowere ahsent. subscribed a letter to the Court, stating it was their purpose and desire, by such specinal verdict, to take the panels case out of the class of capital crimes.
vOL. iv - 1

1 INTRODUCTION TO ROB ROY

Learned informations (written arguments) on the import of the verdict, which must be allowed a very mild one in the ciremustances, were laid before the High Court of Justiciary. This point is very learnedly debated in these plendings by Mr. Grant, Solicitor for the Crown, and the celebrated Mr. Locklart, on the part of the prisoner ; but James Mohr did not wait the event of the Court's deeision.

He had been committed to the Castle of Edinburgh on some reports that an escape would be attempted. Yct he contrived to achieve his liberty even from that fortress. His daughter had the aidress to enter the prison, disguised as a cobbler, briuging home work, as slie pretended. In this cobbler's dress her father quickly arrayed himself. The wife and daughter of the prisoner were hearl by the scutinels scolding the supposed cobbler for having done his work ill, and the man came out with lis hat slouched over his eyes, and grombling, as if at the manner in which they had treated him. In this way the prisoner passed all the guards without suspicion, and made his escape to France. He was afterwards outlawed by the Court of Justiciary, which proceedel to the trial of Dnucan MacGregor or Dramunond, his brother, 15 th Jimuary 1753. The atcused had unquestionably been with the party which carried off Jean Key; hut no evideuce being brought which applicd to him individually and directly, the jury found him not guilty, and nothing more is known of his fate.

That of James MacGregor, who, from talent and activity, if not by seniority, may be considered as head of the fanily, las been long misrepresented, as it has been gencrally averred in Law Reports, as well as elsewhere, that his outlawry was reversed, and that he returned aud died in Scotland. But the curious letters publishitd in Blachwood's Magazine for December 1817 show this to be and error. The first of these documents is a petition to Charles Edward. It is dated 20th September 1753, and pleads his service to the cause of the Stuarts, ascribing his exile to the persecution of the Hanoverian Government, withont any allusion to the alfair of Jean Key or the Conrt of Jnsticiary. It is stated to be forwarded by MacGregor Drimmond of lalhaldic, whon, as before mentioned, James Mohr acknowlelged as his chicf.

The effect which this petition produced lows not appear. Some temporary relief was prerhaps obtainell. But soon after this daring adventurer was engagel in a very dark intright against an exile of his own country, and placed pretty hearly in his own circunstances. A remarkable Highland story must be here brielly allmted to. Mr. Campbell of Glenure, who had been mamed factor for government on the forfeited estates of Stewart of Arisheil, was shot dead by ant assassin as he passed through the wood of Lettermore, after crossing the ferry of Ballachinlish. A gentlenan named James Stewart, a matural hrother of Ardsheil, the forfeited person, was tried as being aecessory to the murder, and condemned and executed upon very donbtind evidence, the heaviest part of which only amomuted to the atensed person having assistel a nequew of his own, called Allan Breek Stewart, with money to escape after the deed was done. Not satisfied with this vengeance, whirh was whtained in a manner little to the honour of the disponsation of justice at the time, the: friends of the deceased Glemure wre eagerly desirons to obtain posserssion of the person of Allan Breek Stewart, supposed to be the actual homiecide. James Molir Drummond was secretly applied to to trepan Stewart to the sea-coast, and bring lim over to Britain to almost certain death. Drummond MacGregor had kindred connexions with the slain Glenure; and, besides, the Mactiregors and Camplells had been friends of late, while the former clan and the Stewarts had, as we have seen, been recently at feud ; lastly, Robert.Oig was nuw in enstody at Edinburgh, and James was degirous to do some service by which his brother might be saved. The joint lirce of these motives may, in James's estimation of right and wrong, have beon some vindication for engaging in such an enterprise, although, as must be neeessarily supposed, it could only be executed by treachery of a gross description. MacGregor stipulated for a liecuse to return to Eng. land, pronising to bring Allan Breck thither along with him. But the intended victim was put upon his gnard by two countrymen, who sulspected James's intentions towarls lim. He escaped from his kiduapper, after, as MacGregor alleged, robbing his portmanteau of some clothes and four snuff-boxes. Such a charge, it nay be observed, could scarce have been made unless the parties had been living on a footing of intinacy, and had access to cach other's baggage.
Although Janies Drmmmonl had thus nissed his blow in the matter of Allan Breck Stewart, lie nsed his license to make a journey to London, and had an interview, ns lie avers, with Lord Holdernesse. His Lordshil and the Under-Sceretary put many puzzling questions to him; and, as he says, offered him a situation which would bring liin bread in the government's service. This oflice was advantageons as to emolument, but in the opinion of Jnmes Drummond his aceeptance of $i c$ wonld have been a disgrace to his birth, and have rendered him a scourge to his country. If such a tempting offer and sturdy rejection had any foundation in fact, it probably relates to some plan of espionage on the Jacobites, which the government might hope to carry on by means of a man who, in the matter of Allan Breck Stewart, hal shown no great nicety of feeling. Drummond MacGregor was so far aceommodatiog as to intimate his willingness to act in any station in which other gentlemen of honour servel, but not otherwise; an answer which, compared with some passages of his past life, may remind the reader of Ancient Pistol standing upon his reputation.
Having thus proved intractable, as he tells the story, to the proposals of Lord Holdernesse, James Drummond was ordered instantly to quit England.

On his return to France his condition secms to have been utterly disastrous. He was seized with fever and gravel, ill consequently in body, and weakened and dispirited in mind. Ahtan lBreck Stewart threatened to put him to death in revenge of the designs he had harboured against him. ${ }^{1}$ The Stewart elan were in the highest degree unfriendly to him;

[^19]
ii

INTRODUCTION TO ROB ROY

and his late expedition to London had been attended with many suspicions circumstances, amongst which it was not the slightest that he had kept his purpose secret from his ehief Balhaldic. His intereourse with Lord Holdernesse was suspicious. The Jacolites were prohably, like Don Bernard de Castil Blazo in Gil Blas, little disposed to like those who kept company with alguazils. DlacDonuell of Lochgarry, a man of unquestioned honour, lodged an information against James Drummond before the High Bailie of Dunkirk, accusing him of bring a spy, so that he fomm himself obliged to leave that town and come to Paris, with only the sum of thirteen livres for his inmediate subsistence, and with absolute beggary staring him in the face.
We do not offer the convieted common thief, the accomplice in MacLaren's assassiuation, or the manager of the outrage against Jean Key, as an object of sympathy; but it is melancholy to look on the dying struggles even of a wolf or tiger, ereatures of a speeies directly hostile to our own; and in like manner the uttcr distress of this man, whose faults may have sprung from a wild system of education, working on a haughty temper, will not be pernsed without some pity. In his last letter to Balhaldie, dated Paris, 25 th Scptenber 1754, he deseribes his state of destitution as absolute, and expresses himself willing to exercise his talents in breaking or brecting horses, or as a hunter or fowler, if he could only procure employment in such an inferior capacity till sonething better should occur. An Englishman may sinile, but a Scotsman will sigh at the postscript, in which the poor starving exile asks the loan of his patrou's bagpipes, that he night play over some of the melaucl y tunes of his own land. But the effect of music arises in a great degree from association, and somuds whieh might jar the nerves of a Londoner or Parisian briug back to the Highlander his lofty mountain, wild lake, and the deeds of his fathers of the glen. To prove MacGregor's claim to our reader's compassion, we here insert the last part of the letter alluded to : -

- By all appearance I ann born to suffer Crosses, and it seems they're not at an end ; for such is iny wretehed Case at present, that I do not know eartlly where to go or what to do, as I have no sulsisistence to keep soul and bouly together. All that I have carriel here is about 13 livres, and has taken a Room at my old quarters in Hotel St. Pierre, Rue de Corlier. I send you the bearer, begging of you to let ne know if you are to he in make application to may have (the) pleasure of seeing yon, for thate nome to make contrive where but you alone; and all I want is, if it was pressible yoning to entire leggary. I eould be employed so as to keep nue inless it's attendel with some ditficulty, This probably is a diffenit of it, as your long heal can loring about matters you might think unthing of it, as ,ons ince than this if yon disclose this of nuch more Difficulty and Buttler, it's lowsilhe he might have some Employ matter to your friemd Mr. Bnttler, it sutent to know as melo of Breeding auid wherein 1 conld he of nse, France, lesides that 1 amm a gonil 11 unter, either on riding of Horses as any in France, hesidnge my heduction, as I propmse the meanest things to serve a turn tim ineter con are very well assured that I am to give you so much tronhb, hant I hope yon are very well assured that 1 am was, said with a slgh, in a sbarp Illgliland aceent. "Irell ane o" them a' ls Reekle, whleh he was never to see nexain. prover that la no sulsempent perlod of lits life shown anything of the satage mood oppressor, as he supposed helleved to liare has famp and elan.

grateful for what you have done for me, and I leave yon to juige of my present wretched case, I am, and shall for ever coutinne,
- Dear Chief, your own to command,
- Jas. Maçiegor.
'P.S. - If you'd send your pipes by the IBearer, and all the other little trinklus belonging to 1 t, I wonld put them in orler, and play some Melancholy tunes, whleh I may now with safety, nul hir real truth. Forgive my not going directly to your honse, for if I conll shm seeing of yonself, I conli not choose to be seen by my friends hiny wretehelness, nor by any of my acqualntance.'

While MacGregor wrote in this diseonsolnte manner, Death, the sad but sure remedy for mortal evils, and deeider of all donbts and uncertainties, was hovering near him. A memorandmu on the back of the letter says the writer died abont a week after, in October 1754.
It now remains to mention the fate of Robin Oig, for the other sons of Rob Roy seem to have been no way distingnished. Rohin was apprehended hy a party of militury from the fort of Inversmaid, at the foot of Gartmore, and was conveyed to Edinburgh, 26 th Ma: 1753. After a delay, which may have been protracted by the negotiations of James for delivering up Allan Breck Stewart, upon pronise of his irother's life, Kobin Oig, ons the 24th December 1753, was bronght to the lair of the High Court of Justiciary, and indicted by the name of Robert MacGregor, alias Camplell, mlins Drmmond, alins Rubert Oig; and the evidence led against him resembled exaetly that which was brought by the (rown on the former trial. Robert's case was in some degree more favonrahle than his brother's ; for, thongh the principal in the forcible marriage, he had yet to plead that he had shown symptoms of relenting while they were carrying Jean Key off, which were silenced ly the remonstrances and threats of his harder-natured brother James. Four years had also elapsed since the poor woman died, which is always a stroug circumstance in favour of the accused ; for there is a sort of perspective in gnilt, and crimes of an old date seem less odions than those of recent occurrence. But, notwithstanding these considerations, the jury, in Robert's case, did not express any solicitude to save his life, as they had done that of James. They found him guilty of being art and part in the forcible alduetion of Jean Key from her own dwelling. ${ }^{1}$

Robin Oig was condemned to death, and exacnted on 6th February 1754. At the place of execution he indaved with great decency ; and, professing himself a Catholic, imputed all his misfortmes to his swerving from the true church two or three years before. He confessed the violent methods he had used to giin Mrs. Kiry or Wright, and hoped his fate wonld stop further proceedings against his brother James. ${ }^{2}$
Tho newspapers observe that his boly, after hauging the nsmal time, was delivercd to his friends to be carricil to the Highlands. To this the recollection of a venerablo friend, recently taken from us in the fulness of years, then a school-boy at Linlithgow, enalis the Anthor to add, that a much larger bolly of Niac Gregors than had eared to advance to Edinburgh received the conpse at that place with the coronach and other wild emblems

[^20]
liv

INTRODUCTION TO ROB ROY
of Highlaul mouruing, and so escorted it to lhalquidiler. Thus we may conclude this long account of Rob Roy and his family with the classic phrase -

Ite. Conclamatum eist.
I have only to ald that I have selected the above from many anecdotes of Roh lloy which were, and may still be, curreut among the mountains where he flourished; but I am far from warrauting their exact authenticity. Clamish partialities were very apt to guile the tongue and pen as well as the pistol and claymore, and the featmes of an ancedote are wouderfully softened or exaggerated as the story is told by a MacGregor or a Campbell.

ROB ROY

CHAPTER I

How have I sinn'd, that this affliction Should light so heavy on me? I have no more sons, And this no more nine own. My grand curse Hang o'er his head that thus transform'd thee! Travel? I'll send my horse to travel next.

Monsieur Thomas.

YOU have requested me, my dear friend, to bestow some of that leisure with which Providence has blessed the decline of my life in registering the hazards a:ad difficulties which attended its commencenent. The recollection of those adventures, as you are pleased to term them, has indeed left upon my mind a chequered and varied feeling of pleasure and of pain, mingled, I trust, with 10 slight gratitude and veneration to the Disposer of human events, who guided m early course through much risk and labour, that the ease with which he has blessed my prolonged life might seem softer from remembrance and contrast. Neither is it possible for me to doubt, what you have often affirmed, that the incidents which befell me among a people singularly primitive in their government and mamers have something interesting and attractive for those who love to hear an old man's stories of a past age.
Still, however, you mist remember that the tale told by one friend, and listened to by another, loses half its clarms when committed to paper; and that the narratives to which you have attended with interest, as heard from the voice of him to whom they occurred, will appear less deserving of attention when perused in the seclusion of your study. But your greener age and robust constitntion promise longer life than will, in all human probability, be the lot of your friend. 'Throw, [^21]then, these sheets into some seeret drawer of your eserituir till we are separated from ewh other's meviety by an event which may happen at any moment, and which must lappen within the eourse of a few - a very few years. When we are purted in this world - to meet, I hope, in a better - you will, I am well aware, eherish more than it deserves the memory of your departed friend, and will find in those retails which I an now to commit to puper matter for melancholy but nut muleasing reffection. Others bequenth to the confiflants of their bosonn portraits of their extermal features: I put into your hands a faithful transeript of my thoughts and feelings, of my virtues mul of my failings, with the assured hope that the follies and headstrong impetuosity of my youth will meet the sume kind eonstruetion and forgiveness which have so uften attended the finults of my matured age.

One advantage, amomg the many, of addressing my Memoirs (if I may give these sheets a nmme so imposing) to a dear und intimate friend is, that I may spure sone of the details, in this case unnceessary, with which I must needs lave detained a stranger from what I have to say of greater interest. Why should I bestow all my tedionsness upon you becunse I have you in my power, and have ink, puper, and time before me? At the same time I dare not promise that I may not abuse the opportunity so temptingly offered me to treat of myself and my own eoneerns, even though I speak of circumstances as well known to you as to myself. The seductive love of narrative, when we ourselves are the heroes of the events which we tell, often disregards the attention lue to the time and patience of the audience, and the best and wisest have yielded to its faseination. I need only remind yon of the singular instance evinced by the form of that rare and origimal elition of Sully's Memoins, which you (with the four vanity of a book-eollector) insist upon preferring to that which is redueed to the usefin and ortinary form of Memoirs, but which I think curious solely as illustrating how far so great a man as the author was accessible to the fuible of self-importance. If I reeollect rightly, that venerable peer and great statesman had appointed mo fewer than four gentlemen of his homselohd to draw np, the evente of his life, under the title of Memorichls of the Nitye amel Ramill Alficirs of Ntate, Iomestir, Politicul, and Militiri!, transurtenl byl Ifemy $I^{\prime}$., and so forth. 'These grave recorders, having made their compilation, reduced the $1 / e m$ minsemutaining all the remarkable events of their master's life into a narrative, addressed to himself in propria persomm. And thus, instead of telling his own story in the third persm, like Julins Casna, or in the first person, like most who, in the hall in the sturl;, midertake to be the hermes of their own tale, sully enjuyed the refined though whinsica! pleasire of having the events of his life tohd over to him by his seeretaries, heing himself the muditur, as he was atso the hero, and prolmbly the anthor, of the whole book. It must have been a great sight to have seen the ex-minister, as bolt upright as a starched ruff and haced cassock could make him, seated in state beneath his canropy, and listening to the recitation of his compilers, while, standing bure in his presence, they informed him gravely, "Ihns said the thike - so did the duke infer - such were your graee's sentiments mpen this important puint - such were your secret comnsels to the king on that other emergeney,' --circminstances all of which must have been much better known to their hearer than to themselves, and most of which could only be derived from his own special commmication.

My situation is not quite so hulierons as that of the greac Sully, nud yet there wonkd be something whimsieal in lrank Osbaldistone giving Will 'Treshmu a formal aeeomint of his birth, edncation, and comnexions in the world. I will, therefore, wrestle with the tempting spirit of 1'. P., clerk of our parish, as I best may, mud endearour to tell you nothing that is familiar to you alrearly. Some things, however, I must reenll to your memory, becanse, though formerly well know to you, they may have been forgotten throngh lapse of time, and they afford the groundwork of my destiny.

You must remember my father well ; for, as your own was a member of the mereantile honse, yon knew him from infancy. Yet you hardly saw him in his best days, hefore age and infirnity had qnenehed his ardent spirit of enterprise and specinlation. He would have been a poorer num indeed, but perhaps as happy, had he devoted to the extension of seienee thase netive energies and acnte powers of obscrvation for whieh eommereial pursuits found ocenpation. Yet in the fluctuations of mereantile speeulation there is something eaptivating to the adventurer, even independent of the hope of gain. He who embarks on that fiekle sen requires to possess the skill of the pilot and the fortitude of the navigator, and after all may be wreeked and lost, muless the gales of fortme breathe in his finvomr. This mixture of necessary attention and inevitable hazard - the frequent and awful uneertainty whether prublence shall overcome fortune, or fortune baffle the schemes of prudence - affords full occupation for the powers as well as for the feelinge of the mind, and trade has wll the fascination of ganbling without its moral guilt.

ROB ROY

Early in the 1sth century, when I-.. Heaven help me! - was a yonth of some twenty years old, I was sumumed suddenly from Bonrdenux to attend my futher on hasiness of iniportance. I shall never forget our first interview. You recollect the brief, abrupt, and somewhat stern mole in which he was wout to communicate his pleasure to those around him. Methinks I see him even now in my mind's eye - the firm and upright figure ; the step, quick num deternined ; the eye, which shot so keen and so penetrating a ghanee ; the features, on which care had already planted wrinkles; mul hear his language, in which he never wasted word in vain, expressel in a voice which had sometimes an occasional harshuess far from the intention of the speaker.
When I dismonuted from my post-horse I hastened to my father's apartment. He was traversing it with an air of composed and stealy deliberation which even my arrival, although an only son unseen for four years, was unable to discompose. I threw myself into his arms. He was a kind, though not a fonil, father, and the tear twinkled in his dark cye, but it was only for a moment.
'Dubourg writes to me that he is satisfied with you, Frank.'
'I am happy, sir $\qquad$ ,
'But I have less reason to be so,' he added, sitting down at his bureau.
'I am sorry, sir ——'
'Sorry and happy, Frank, are words that on most occasions signify little or nothing. Here is your last letter.'

He took it out from a number of others tied up in a parce! of red tape, and curiously labelled and filed. There lay my poor epistle, written on the subject the nearest to my heart at the time, and conched in words which I had thought would work compassion, if not conviction - there, I say, it lay, suncezell up anong the letters on miscellaneous business in which my father's daily affairs had engaged him. I cannot help smiling internally when I recollect the mixture of hurt vanity and wounded feeling with which I regarded my remonstrance, to the peuning of which there had gone, I promise you, some trouble -as I beheld it extracted from amongst letters of advice, of credit, and all the commonplace lumber, as I then thought them, of a merchant's correspondence. 'Surely,' thought I, 'a letter of suel impritance - I dared not suy, even to myself, mo woll writtell - deserved a sepurate place, ns well as more anxious consideration, than thase on the ordinary lmsiness of the counting-honse.'

But my fither did not olserve mig dissatisfaction, mad would not have minded it if he had. Ile proceeded, with the letter in his hand: "Ihis, l'rank, is yours of the 21st ultimo, int which yon advise me (realing from my letter) that in the mest important business of forming a phan and adopting a profession for lifo you trist my patermal gonalness will hold you entitleal to at lenst a negative voiee ; that you have insuperable - ay, insinperable is the worl - 1 wish, liy the way, you womlld writo a more distinet carrent hamb, draw a seore through the this of your t's anil npen the loups of your l's - insinperable oljeetions to the urrangements which I have proposed to yon. 'There is much more to the name effiest, ocenpying four goorl pages of paper, whiel, a little attention to perspienity and distinetness of expression might have comprised with as many lines. For, after all, Frank, it amounts but to this, that you will not do as I would have you.'
'That I amnot, sir, in the present instance, not that I will not.'
'Words avail very little with me, yomug man,' said my father, whose intlexibility always possessed the air of the most perfect calmness and self-possessiom. "Can not", may be a more civil phrase than "will not," lont the expressions are synonymons where there is no moral impossibility. But I an not a friend to doing business hastily; we will talk this matter over alter dimer. Owen!'
Owen appeared, not with the silver locks which yon were nsed to venerate, for he was then little more than fifty: but he had the same, or an exaetly similar, miform snit of light brown elothes; the same peari-grey silk stowkings; the sume stock, with its silver buckle: the same plaited caubric ruffles, drawn down over his kinckles in the parlonr, but in the count-ing-house carefilly folded back nuder the sleeves, that they mightremain mustained by the ink which he daily consumed - in a word, the same grave, formal, yet benevolent cast of features which contimell to his death to distimguish the head clerk of the great honse of Oshahlistone and 'I'reshmu.
'Owen,' said my father, as the kind old man shook me affectionately by the hand, 'you unst dine with ns to-liay, and hear the news Prank has brought ns from our friends in Bourdenux.'

Owen made one of his stiff bows of respectful gratitude ; fur, in those days, when the distance het ween sulperions and inferiors was enforced in a mamer to which the present times are strangers, such un invitution was a favour of some little consequence.
shall long remember that dimer-purty. Deeply affieeted hy feelinge of muxiety, mint mumingled with dixpleasure, I wus mable to take that netive share in the conversation which ming father sement to expert from me; and ! the frequently knve misntisffactory miswers to the questions with which he ussuiled me. Owen, havering hetwixt his respect for his patron and hiss love for the youth he land dandled on his knee in childhounl, like the timoross yet muxims ally of an invended mation, endenvoured at every bhuder I made to explain niy no-meaning and to cover my retrent ; manemvres whieh ndidel w, my father's pettish displensure, and brought a share of it mpon my kind advocute, instead of protecting me. I land not, while residing in the house of Duburg, ansolutely anducted myself like

> A clerk condemn'd lais father'n soul to criss,
> Who penn'd a stanza when he should engross ;
but, to say truth, I lund frequented the eonnting-honse no more than I had thonght minolntely necessury to secure the food report of the Prenchman, long : correspondent of onr firm, to whom my father had trusted for initiating me into the mysteries of commeree. In tict, my principal attention had been dedicated to literature mad manly exereives. Dy father did not altogether diseonruge such nequisments, whether mental on personal. He had too mach grool seme bent topereve that they site gracefilly $n$ pon every man, and | was sensible that they relieved and dignified the character 1 . Which bee wished me to aspire. But his rhief ambition wa- that 1 shonld succeed not merely to his fortme, lint to the bews and phans by whiel he imarined he comld extond and perpetnate the wealtly. inheritunce which he design of me.

Love of his professiom wa the motive which he chose shouhl be most ostensible when he mearl me to tread the same path; but he had others witl which I only becane aequainted at a later period. Impetmous in hiv - hemes, as well as skilfinl and daring, each new alventure, when successfin became at mue the incentive, und furnished the means, for farther speculation.

It neemed to he necessary to him, us to mumbitions conqueror, to pmal on from nehievement to nehievenent, withont stoming to secure, far less t! enjoy, the mepnisitions which hos bumle. Acenstomed to see his whole fortme trembiling in the scoles of chance, and dexterous at alopting experlients for casting the balance in his favomr, his health amil spirits and activity seemed ever to increase with the minating huzarla on which he staked his wealth; and he resembled a sitor, acenntomed to hrave the billows and the foo, whose confiteme risen on the eve of tempent ar of battle. Ho was not, however, insensible to the changes which inereasing uge or supervening nalarly might make in his own constitution; and was anxions in goon time to necure in me massistant who might take the helm when his hanl grew wenry, and ked, the vessel's way necording to his commel mul instriction. Patermal affection, an well ins the fintheramee of his own jhans, determined him to the samo conclasion. Yomr father, thomgh his fortme was vested in the honse, was only a slepping parther, as the emmercial phrase geves ; and Owell, Whose probity and akill in the detaik of arithmetic rembered his services invuluable as a head elerk, was mot possessed either of information or talents suffieient to mondnet the mysteries of the principul mamuement. If my father were suldenly simmmonerd from life, what wonld become of the world of schemes which he had finmed, unless his soll were monlded into a ownmercial Hercules, fit to sustain the weight when relinumished by the falling Athes? mal what wonld beeone of that sont himself if, a stranger to lusiness of this deveription, he fommel himself at once involved in the labyrinth of mereantile concerns, withont the clue of knowledge necessary for his extrustion? For all these reasons, avowed mul secret, my father was determined I shonhl enhate his profession ; and when he was detemined the revolntion of no man was more inmomalle. 1 , however, was also a party to be consulted ; and, with something of his own pertiancity, I had formed a determimation precisely contrary.

It may, I hane, be some palliative for the resistance which on this oeeasion I offered to bys fhether wishes, that I disl not filly mulerstand mon what the were fommlend, or how deeply his happines was involved in them. Lmarimer myself certain of a large som in finture anm ample maintentince in the mennwhi -.. that it misht be necessary, in ord on nhmit to lathour nal limit:
wer. I uily saw in my father's proposal for my engaging in bnsiness a desire that I should add to those heaps of wealth which he had himself aequired ; and, imagining myself the best judge of the path to my own happiness, I did not conceive that I should increase that happiness by angmenting a fortune whieh I believed was already sufficient, and more than suffieient, for every use, comfort, and elegant cnjoyment.

Accordingly, I am compelled to repeat that my time at Bourdeaux had not been spent as my father hal proposed to himself. What he considered as the chief end of my residence in that eity I har postponed for every other, and would (had I dared) have negleeted it altogether. Dubourg, a favoured and benefited correspondent of our mercantile house, was too much of a shrewd politician to make such reports to the head of the firm eoneerning his only child as would excite the displeasure of both; and he might also, as yon will presently hear, lave views of selfish advantage in suffering me to neglect the purposes for whiel I was placed mider his chargc. My conduct was regulated by the bounds of decency a.d good orler, and thus far he had no evil report to make, supposing him so disposed; but perhaps the erafty l'renehman wonld have becu cqually eomplaisant had I been in the habit of indulging worse feelings than those of indolence and aversion to mercantil business. As it was, while I gave a decent portion of mv ume to the commercial studies he recommended, he was hy 110 means envious of the hours which I dedicated to other and more classical attainments, nor did he ever find fanlt with me for dwelling upon Corneille and Boilean in preference to Postlethwayte (supposing his folio to have then existed, and Monsieur Duhourg able to lave promounced his name) or Savary, or any other writer on commercial eennomy. He had picked up somewhere a eonvenient expression, with which he rounded off every letter to his eorrespondent. 'I was all,' he said, 'that a father could wish.'

My father never quarrelled with a phrase, however frequently repeated, provided it seemed to him distinct and expressive; and Addison himself conld not have fonnd expressions so satisfactory to him ass, 'Yours received, and duly honoured the bills incolosed, as per margin.'

Knowing, thereforc, very well what he desired me to be, Mr. Osbaldistone nade no doubt, from the frequent repetition of Dubourg's favourite phrase, that I was the very thing he wished to see me ; when, in an evil hour, he reeeived my letter, containing my elonuent and detailed apology for declining a place in the firm and a desk and stool in the corner of the dark connting-honse in Crane Alley, surmomuting in height tuose of Owen and the other clerks, and only inferior to the tripod of my father himself. All was wrong from that moment. Dubourg's reports became as suspicions as if his bills had been noted for dishonour. I was smmmoned home in all haste, and received in the manner I have already communicated to yon.

ROB ROY

CHAP'TER II

I begin shrewdly to suspect the young man of a terrible taint - pmetry ; with which idle disease if he be infected, there's no hope of him in a state conrse. Actum est of hin for a Commonwealth's man, if he go to't in rhyme once.

Ben Jonson's Bartholomew Fair.

MY father had, generally spenking, his temper muder complete self-command, and his anger rarely indicated itself by words, except in a sort of dry testy manner, to those who had displeased him. He never used threats or expressions of loud resentment. All was arranged with him on system, and it was his practice to do 'the needfinl' on every oecasion without wasting words abont it. It was, therefore, with a bitter smile that he listened to my imperfect answers concerning the state of commeree in France, and unmereifully permitted me to involve myself deeper and deeper in the mysteries of agio, tariffs, tare and tret ; nor can I charge my menory with his having looked positively angry, mutil he found me unable to explain the exact effiect which the depreciation of the louis d'or had produced on the negrotiation of bills of exchange. 'The most remarkable national occurrence in my time,' said my father, who nevertheless had seen the Revolution, 'and he knows no more of it than a post on the quay!'
'Mr. Francis,' suggested Owen, in his timid and conciliatory manner, "camot have forgotten that by an arrét of the king of France, dated 1st May 17(x), it was provided that the porteur, within ten days after due, must make demand $\qquad$ -'
'Mr. Prancis,' said my father, interrupting him, 'will, I daresay, resollect fur the moment anything yon are so kind as hint to him: But, holy o' me: how Dubonrg comld permit him: Hark je, ()wen, what sort of a youth is Clement Dubonig, his nephew there, in the office, the black-haired lad?'
'One of the cleverest clerks, sir, in the house, a prodigious young man for his time,' answered Owen; for the gaiety and eivility of the young Frenehman had won 1is heart.
'Ay, ay, I sulpose he knows something , thic nature of cxehange. Dinbourg was determined I should have one youngster at least alout my hand who ninderstooi business; but ? see his drift, and he shall find that I do so when he looks at tos balance-sheet. Owen, let Clement's salary be puid up to nex. quarter-day, and let hima ship himself back to Bourdeaux in his father's ship, which is clearing ont yonder.'
'Dismiss Clement Dubourg, sir ${ }^{\prime}$ ' said Owen, with a faltering voicc.
'Yes, sir, dismiss him instantly ; it is enough to have a stupid Englishman in the counting-house to make blunders, wihout keeping a sharp Frenchman there to profit by them.'

I had lived long enough in the territories of the Girani Monarque to contract a hearty aversion to arbitrary exertion of authority, even if it had not b instilled inte me with my earliest breeding, and I could nut refrain from inter, prevent an innocent and meritorious young man fron paying the penalty of having aequired that proficiency whieh my father had desired for me.
'I beg pardon, sir,' when Mr. Osbaldistone had done speaking, 'but I think it but just that, if I have been negligent of my studies, I should pay the forfcit minself. I have no reason to eharge Monsieur Dubourg with having neglected to give me opportunities of improvement, however little I may have profited by them; and with respect to Monsieur Clement Dubourg-, 'With respect to liin, and to you, I shall take the measures which I see needful,' replied ny father; 'but it is fair in you, Frank, to take your own blane on your own shoulders - very fair, that cannot be denicd. I cannot acquit old Dubourg,' he said, looking to Owen, 'for having merely afforded Frank the means of useful knowledge, without eithar seing that he took advantage of them or reporting to me if te did not. You wee, Owen, he has natural notions of equity becoming a British merchant.'
'Mr. Francis,' said thic head clerk, with his usinal formal inelination of the head, and a slight elevation of his right hand, which he had aequired by a hanit of sticking his pen behind his ear before he spoke - 'Mr. Fro'cis seems to understand thic fundamental principle of ali nocral accounting, the great cthic rule of threc. Let $A$ do to $B$ as he would have $B$ do to him; the product will give the rule of conduet required.'

My father smiled at this reduction of the golden rule to arithmetical form, but instantly proceeded : 'All this signifies nothing, Frauk ; you have been throwing away your time like a boy, and in future you must learn to live like a man. I shall put yon under Owen's care for a few months, to recover the lost ground.'

I was about to reply, but 0 wen looked at me with such a supplicatory and warning gesture that I was involuntarily silent.
'We will then,' continued my father, 'resume the subject of mine of the 1st ultimo, to which you sent me an answer which was unadvised and unsatisfactory. So now fill your glass and push the bottle to Owen.'

Want of courage - of audacity, if you will - was never my failing. I answered firmly, 'I was sorry that my letter was unsatisfactory, unadvised it was not ; for I had given the proposal his goodness had made me my instant and anxious attention, and it was with no small pain that I found myself obliged to decline it.'

My father bent his keen eye for a moment on me, and instantly withdrew it. As he made no answer, I thought myself obliged to proceed, though with some hesitation, and he only interrupted me by monosyllables.
'It is impossible, sir, for me to have higher respect for any character than I have for the commercial, even were it not yours.'
'Indeed!'
'It connects nation with nation, relieves the wants and contributes to the wealth of all; and is to the general commonwealth of the civilised world what the daily intercourse of ordinary life is to private society, or rather, what air and food are to our bodies.'
'Well, sir ?'
' And yet, sir, I find myself compelled to persist in rleclining to adopt a character which I am so ill qualified to suy, rt.'
'I will take care that you acquire the qualinications necessary; You are no longer the guest and pupil of Dubourg.'
'But, my dear sir, it is no defect of teaching which I plead, but my own inability to profit by instruction.'
' Nonsense; have you kept your journal in the terms I desired ${ }^{\prime}$
'Yes, sir.
'Be pleased to bring it here.'

The volume thus required was a sort of commonplace book, kept by my father's recommendation, in which 1 had been directed to enter notes of the niscellaneons information whicl: I had acquired in the course of my studies. F'oreseeing that he would demand inspection of this record, I had been attentive to transcribe such particulars of infornation as he would most likely be pleased with, but too often the pen had disclerged the task without much correspondence with the head. And it had also happened that, the book being the receptacle nearest to my hand, I had occasionally jotted down memoranda which had little regard to traffic. I now put it into my father's hand, devoutly hoping he might light on nothing that would increase his displeasure against me. Owen's face, which had looked something blank when the question was put, cleared up at my ready answer, and wore a smile of hope when I brought from my apartment, and placed before ny father, a commercial-looking volume, rather broader than it was long, lhaving brazen clasps and a binding of rough calf. This looked business-like, and was encouraging to my benevolent wellwisher. But he actuall: smiled with pleasure as he heard my father run over some part of the contents, muttering his critical renarks as he went on.

- Brandies - barils and barricants, also tonneaux: at Nantz 29; veltes to the barrique - at Cognac and Rochelle 27; at Bourdeaux 32. Very right, Frank. Duties on tonnage and custom-house, see Sardy's Tables. That's not well; you should have transcribed the passage ; it fixes the thing in the mentory. Reports outward and inuard. Corn debentures. Ocer-sea Cockets. Linens-I Isinghrm; Gientish. Stock-fish-Titliny; Cropling; Lub-fish. You should have noted that they are all, nevertheless, to be entered as titlings. How many inches long is a titling?'

Owen, seeing me at fault, hazarded a whisper, of which I fortunately caught the import.
'Eighteen inches, sir $\qquad$ '
'And a lub-fish is twenty-four - very right. It is important to remember this, on account of the Portugnese trade. But what have we here? Bourdemur founded in the year. Custle of the Trompette. P'alace of Gallienus. Well, well, that's very right too. This is a kind of waste-book, $O$ wen, in which all the transactions of the day, emptions, orders, payments, receipts, acceptances, draughts, commissions, and advices are entered miscellaneously.'
'That they may be regularly transferred to the day-book and ledger,' answered Owen. 'I an glad Mr. Franeis is so methodical.'
I perceived myself getting so fast into favour that I began to fear the consequence womld be my father's more obstinate perseverance in his resohtion that I must become a merchant; and, as I was determined on the contrary, I began to wish I had not, to use my friend Mr. Owen's phrase, heen so methodical. But I had no reason for apprehcusion on that seore; for a blotted piece of paper dropped out of the book, and, being taken up by my father, he interrupted a hint from Owen on the propriety of securing loose memoranda with a little paste by exclaiming, "To the memory of Elward the Black Prince. What's all this? verses! By Heaven, Frank, you are a greater blockhead than I supposed you!'
My father, you must reeollect, as a man of business, looked upon the labour of poets with contempt; and as a religious man, and of the disscating persuasion, he considered all such pursuits as equally trivial and profane. Before you condenn him, you must recall to remembranee how too many of the poets in the end of the seventeenth eentury had led their lives and employed their talents. The sect also to which my father belonged felt, or perhaps affected, a puritanical aversion to the lighter exertions of literature. So that many causes contributed to augment the unpleasant surprise occasioned by the ill-timed discovery of this unfortmate copy of verses. As for poor Owen, could the bob-wig whieh he then wore have uncurled itself and stood on end with horror, I an convinced the morning's labour of the friseur would have been undone, merely by the excess of his astonishment at this enormity. An inroad on the strongbox, or an erasure in the ledger, or a missummation in a fitted aecount, eonld harilly have surprised him more disagreeably. My father read the lines sometimes with an affectation of not being able to understand the sense, sometimes in a mouthing tone of mock heroic, always with an emphasis of the most bitter irony, most irritating to the nerves of an anthor.
> - $O$ for the voice of that wild horn, On Fontarabian echoes horne,

> The dying hero's call, That told imperial Charlemagne, How payuim sons of swarthy Spain

> Hal wronght his champion's fall.

Fontarabian echoes!' continued my father, interrupting himself; 'the Fontarabian Fair wonld have been more to the purpose. Paynim! What's paynim? Could yu not say pagan as well, and write English, at least, if you must needs write nonsense ?

> Sal over earth and ocean sonnding,
> And England's distant cliffs astonding,
> Snch are the notes should any
> How Britain's hope nad France's fear,
> Victor of Cressy und loitier,
> Int Bourdenux dying lay.

Poitiers, by the way, is always spelt with an s, and I know no reason why orthography shonld give place to rhyme.

> "Raise my faint head, my supuires," he said,
> "And let the cayement be display'd,
> That I uay see once more
> The splendour of the set ting sun Gleani on thy mirror'd wave, Garonne,
> And Blaye's empurpled slore."
"Garonne" and "sun" is a bad rhyme. Why, Frank, you do not even understand the beggarly trade you liave chosen.

> "Like me, le sinks to Glory's sleep, His fall the dews of eveuing steep, So soft shall if in sorrow shecd. When England's maidrickling tear, Of their Black Ealwards hear dead.
"And though my sun of gl ry set, Nor Frauce, nor England shall forget The terror of my name; And oft slatl Britain's heroes rise, New planets in these southern skies, Through clouds of blood and flame."

A cloud of flame is something new. "Good-morrow, my masters all, and a merry Clristmas to you !" Why, the bell-man writes better lines.' He then tossed the paper from him with an sir of superlative contempt, and concluded, 'Upon my crei,it, Frank, you are a greater blocklead than I took you for.'
What could I say, my dear 'Tresham? 'There I stood, swelling with indignant mortification, while my father regarded me with a cahn but stern look of scorn and pity ; and poor Owen, with uplifted hands and eyes, looked as striking a picture of horror as if he had just read his patron's name in the Gazette. At length I took courage to speak, endeavouring that my tone of voice should betray nyy feelings as little as possible. 'I an quite aware, sir, how ill yualified I am to play the conspicuons purt in society you have destined for me ; and, luckily, I am not nmbitions of the wealth I might aepuire. Mr. ()wen would be a much more effective assistant.' I said this in some malice, for I considered Owen as having deserted my canse a little too soon.
'Owen 7' suid my father. 'The boy is nad, aetually insane. And pray, sir, if I may presmue to inguire, having coolly turnel me over to Mr. Owen - although I may expect more nttention from any one than from my son - what may your own sage projects be?'
'I sloould wish, sir,' I replied, smmmoning up my courage, 'to travel for two or three years, should that counist with your pleasure ; otherwise, although late, I would willingly spend the same time at Oxforl or Cambridge.'
'In the name of common sense! was the like ever heard? to put yourself to sehool among pedants and Jacobites, when you might be pushing your fortune in the world! Why not go to Westminster or Eton at once, man, and take to Lilly's Grammar and Aecidence, and to the birch too, if you like it ?'
'Then, sir, if you think my plan of inprovement too late, I would willingly return to the Continent.'
' You have already spent too nueh time there to little purpose, Mr. Francis.'
'Then I would choose the army, sir, in preference to any other active line of life.'
'Choose the d-l,' answered my father, hastily, and then checking himself-'I profess you make me as great a fool as: you are yourself. Is he not enough to drive one mad, Owen?' Poor Owen shook his head and looked down. 'Hark ye, Frank,' continued my father, 'I will ent all this matter very short; I was at your age when my father turned me out of doors and settled my legal inheritanee on my younger brother. I left Osbaldistone Hall on the back of a broken-down hmuter, with ten guineas in my purse. I have never erossed the threshold again, and I never will. I know not, and I care not, if my foxhunting brother is alive or has broken his neek; but he has children, Frank, and one of them shall be my son if you eross me farther in this matter.'
' You will do your pleasure,' I answered, rather, I fear, with more, sullen indifference than respect, 'with what is your own.
'Yes, Frank, what I have is my own, if labour in getting and eare in angmenting can make a right of property; and no drone shall feed on my honeyeomb. 'Think in it well; what I have said is not withont reflection, and what I resolve upon I will execute.'

- Hononred sir - dear sir,' exclained ()wen, tears rashing into his eyes, 'you are not wont to tee in such a himry in transacting business of importance. Let Mr. Francis rinn inf the Inlance before yon shint the acconnt ; he loves yon, I ams sure: and when he puts down his filial obedience to the prer comern I ann sure his objections will disuppear.'
'Do you think I will ank himin twice,' suid my father, sternly, 'to be my friend, my assistant, nud my conlidant I to be a partner of my cares and of my fortune? Owell, I thought yon had known me better.'
He looked at me as if he meant to add something more, but turned instantly away and left the room abruptly. I was, I own, affeeted by this view of the case, which hatl not occurred to me; and my father would probably have hand little reason to complain of me had he commenced the diseussion with this argument.
But it was too late. I had mueh of his own obduracy of resolution, and Heaven had decreed that my sin should be my punishnent, though not to the extent which my transgression merited. Owen, when we were left alone, contimied to look at me with eyes whieh tears from time to time moistened, as if to diseover, before attempting the task of intercessor, mon what point my obstimey was most assailable. At length he began, with broken and disconcerted accents- - $0 \mathrm{~L}-\mathrm{ll}, \mathrm{Mr}$. Francis! Good Heavens, sir! My stars, Mr. Oshaldistone! that I should ever have seen this day ; and yon so young a gentleman, sir. For the love of Heaven! look at both sides of the aceount. Think what you are foing to lose - a noble fortme, sir, one of the finest honses in the City, even umder the old firm of Tresham and 'Trent, and now O.bahlilistone and 'Treshan. You might roll in gold, Mr. Fraucis. Anul, my dear young Mr: Frank, if there was any particular thing in the business of the house whieh you disliked, I would (sinking his voice to a whisper) put it in orler for you termly or weekly or daily if yon will. Do, my dear Mr. Francis, think of the honour due to your father, that your days may be long in the land.'
vol. 17-2
'I am much obliged to yon, Mr. Owen,' said I - ' very much obliged indeel : lint my father is hest judge how to hestew his money. He talks of one of my consins: let him disypose of his wealth as he pleasmes, I will never sell my likerty for golld.'
- Gold, sir? I wish you saw the lablaue-shleet of profits at last term. It was iu five figures - five figures to carh partner's s un total, Mr. Frank. Anll all this is to go to a l'apist, and a north-country booby, and a disalfeeted persom hesides. It will break my heart, Mr. Francis, that lave been tuiling nure like a doy than a man, and all for love of the firm. Think how it will somul, Oslaldistone, 'Ireshlan, and Osmblistone; or, perhap, who kuows (agnin lowering his vaice), (Istaldistone, ()s. ballistone, and 'I'resham, for our Mr. Oslmaldistone can buy them all outt.'
'But, Mr. ()wen, my comsin's name heing also O.baldistome, the nume of the eompany will somul every hit as well in your ears.'
( ) , fie "pon yon, Mr. lirancis, when yom know how well I love yon. Your cousin, indeed : a P'apist, lu doulht, like lis father, and a disafliected jerson, to the Protestant sinceession that's another item, doubtless.'
'There are many very good men Catholics, Mr. Owen,' rejoined I.
As Owen was about to answer with musual animation my father re-entered the apartment.
'You were right,' he said, '()well, and I was wrong; we will take more time to think over this mutter. Yomg man, you will prepare to give me an answer on this inuortant subject this day month.'

I bowed in silence, sufficiently shad of in reprieve, and trusting it might indicate some relaxation in my father's determination.
The time of probation passed slowly, unmarked by any accident whatever. I went and came and disposel of my time as I pleased, without ruestion or criticism on the part of my father. Indeen, I rarely saw him save at meal-times, when lif stndionsly aroided a disenssion which yon may well suppone I was in no hurry to press onwarl. Our conversation was if the news of the day, or on such general topies as strangers discourse npon to each other ; nor could any me have gnessed from its tenor that there remained undecidel hetwixt ins: dispute of such importance. It hanuted me, however, more than once, like the nightuare. Was it possible he would keep h:s word and disinherit his only som in favour of a nephow whose very existence he was not perhaps quite certain ofl My grandfather's condnet in similar circmuntances borled me now goorl, had I considered the matter rightly. But I had formed an erroneous idea of my finther's character, from the importance which I recollected I maintained with him and his whole family before I went to l'rance. I was not aware that there are men who indulge their children at an carly age, becanse to do so interests and ammses them, and who can yet be suffieiently severe when the same children cross their expectations at a more advanced perios. On the contrary, I persuaded myself that all I had to apprehend was some temporary alienation of affection - perhapsa rinstication of a few weeks, whieh I thonght wonld rather please me than otherwise, since it would give me an opportunity of setting alwont my mutinished version of Or hrado F'uriuss, a poen which 1 longed to render into English verso. I sulfered this belief to get such absolnte possession of my mind that I had resumed my blotted papers, and was busy in meditation on the oft-reenrring rhymes of the Spenserian stanza, when I heard a low and cantions tap, at the iloor of my apartment. 'Come in,' I said, and Mr. Iwen entered. So regalar were the motions and habits of this wortly man, that in all probability this was the first time he had ever been in the second story of his patron's house, however conversant with the first; and I am still at a loss to know in what manner he discovered my apartment.
'Mr. Francis,' he said, interrupting my expressions of surprise and pleasnre at seeing him, 'I dinot know if I ann doing well in what I am about to say : it is not right to speak of what passes in the compting-honse ont of domss - one should not tell, as they say, to the post in the warehonse how many lines there are in the ledger. But yonng Twineall has been absent from the house for a fortuight and more, mutil two days since.'
'Very well, my dear sir, and how does thut concern us?'
'Stay, Mr: Praucis: your liather save him a private commission; and 1 am sure he did not wo down to Palmonth abont the pilcharil alliair ; and the Kxeter Gusiness with, Blackwell and Company has been settled; :and the mining people in Cornwall, 'Irevanion and 'Iregnillian, have paid all they are likely to pay; and any other matter of bosiness minst have heen nut throngh my books ; in short, it's my faithfin belief that '? wincall has been down in the north.'
'Do you really suppiose so?' sitid 1 , somewhat startled.
'He has spoken ahout nothing, sir, since he returned, but his new boots mul hix lijppons spurs and a cock-fight at Sork; it 's as true as the imultiplication-table. Do, Heaven bless yon, my dear child, make up your mind to please your father, and to be $n$ man and a merchant at once.'
I felt at that instant a strong inelination to submit, and to make Owen happy by requesting him to toll my father that I resigned myself to his dispossal. But pride - pride, the source of so much that is good and so much that is evil in our conrso of life, provented me. My aequiescence stuck in my throut, and while I was churhing to get it nip my father's voice sumnmoned 0 wen. He linstily left the room, and the opportunity was lost.
My father was methodical in everything. At the very same time of the day, in the sane apartment, and with the same tone and manner which he had employed an exact month before, he recapitulated the pripusal he had made for taking me into partnership, and arsigning me a department in the counting-house, and reynesterl to have my final decision. I thought at the time there was something mukind in this; and 1 still think that my father's conduet was injulieions. A more coneiliatory treatuent would in all probubility have gained his purpose. As it was I stood fast, and as respectfully as I could deelined the proposal he made to me. "erhaps - for who can juilge of their own lieart? - I felt it umaanly to yield on the first summons, and expeeted farther solicict. as at least a pretext for chnuging my mind. If so, ! wi.. appointed ; for my father turned coolly to Owen, ant ' You see it is as I told you. Well, Frank (whem, you are nearly of age, and as well qualified to jume wo will constitute your own happincss as you ever are tith th. he ; therefore, I say no more. Bit as I anl not hound sugive in to your plans, any more than you are compelled to submit to mine, may I ask to know if you have fornell any whieh depend on iny assistance?'
I answered, not a little abashed, "That being bred to no profession, and having nue fmels of my own, it was obvionsly unpossible for me to snbsist without some allowance from my father; that my wishes were very moderate; and that 1 hoped my aversion for the profession to which he had dessigned me wonld not occasion his altogether withdrawing his paternal support and protection.'

That is to say, you wish to leun on my arm and yet to walk your own way 1 That can hirrlly be, Frank; however, I nitlpuse you mean to oboy my directiman no far an they do unt cross ycurr own hmmonr?'

I was about to speak. 'Silence, if yon please,' le continued. 'Supposing this to be the case, you will instantly ret out for the North of Eighond, to pay yoar nuele a visit and see the atate of his family. I lave chosen from umong his sons - ho has six, I believe - one who, I understand, is most worthy tis fill the place I intended for yon in the comiting-hnse. Hint some farther arrang ments may lo uecessury, mol for these ycur presence may he regaisite. Yom shall have farther instructions at Oslalilist ne Hall, where yon will please to reme in until you hear from se. Everything will he ready for yur departure to-morrow morning.'

With these words my father left the apartment.
'What does all this mean, Mr. Owen?' said I to my sympathetic friend, whose countenance wore a cast of the deepest dejection.
'Yon have ruined yourself, Mr. Frank, that's all ; when your father talks in that quiet determined mamer there will be no more change in him than in a fitted accomit.'

Aud so it proved; for the next morning, at five o'clock, I found myself on the road to York, monnted on a reasomably good horse, and with fifty gnineas in my pocket; travelling, as it wonld seem, for the purpose of assisting in the adoption of a successor to myself in my father's honse and favour, and, for aught I knew, eventually in his fortune also.

CHAPTER III

The slack sail shifts from side to side, The boat, untrimm'd, admits the tide, Borne down, adrift, at random tost, The oar breaks short, the rudder's lost.

Gay's Fables.

IHAVE tagged with rhyme anci blank verse the subdivisions of this important narrative, in order to seduce your continued attention by powers of composition of stronger attraction than my own. The preceling lines refer to an unfortunate navigator who daringly unloosel from its mooriugs a boat which he was unable to manage, and thrust it off into the full tide of a navigade river. No school-boy who, betwixt frolic and defiance, has executed a similar rash attempt could feel himself, when adrift in a strong current, in $u$ situation more awkward than mine when I found myself driving, without a compass, on the ocean of human life. There had been such unexpected ease in the manner in which my father slipt a knot usually esteemed the strongest which binds society together, and suffered me to depart as a sort of outcast from his family, that it strangely lessened the confidence in my own personal accomplishments which had hitherto sustained me. Prince Prettyman, now a prince and now a fisher's son, had not a more awkward sense of his degradation. We are so apt, in our engrossing egrotism, to consider all those aceessories which are drawn aronnd us by prosperity as pertaining and belonging to our own persons, that the discovery of our mimportance, when left to our own proper cesomrees, hecomes inexpressibly mortifying. As the hum of Iondon died away on my car, the distant peal of her steeples more than once somuded to my ears the admonitory 'I'rirn again' erst leard by her finture Lord Mayor ; and when I looked lack from Highlgate on her dusky magnificence, I felt as if I were leaving helind me comfort, opmilence, the charms of society, and all the pleasinres of enltivated life.

But the die was cast. It was, indeed, by no means probable that a late and ungracious compliance with my father's wishes would have reinstated me in the situation which I had lost. On the contrary, firm and strong of purpose as he himself was, he might rather have been disgusted than conciliated by my tardy and compulsory acquiescence in his desire that I should engage in commerce. My constitutional obstinacy came also to my aid, and pride whispered how poor a figure I should make when an airing of four miles from London had blown away resolutions formed during"a month's serious deliberation. Hope, too, that never forsakes the young and hardy, lent her lustre to my future prospects. My father could not be serious in the sentence of foris-familiation which he had so unhesitatingly pronounced. It must be but a trial of my disposition, which, endured with patience and steadiness on my part, would raise me in lis estimation, and lead to an amicable accommorlation of the point in dispute between us. I even settled in my ow:1 mind how far I would concede to him, and on what aricicles of our supposed treaty I would make a tirn stand; and the result was, according to my compntation, that I was to be reinstated in my full rights of filiation, paying the easy penalty of some ostensible compliances to atone for my past rebellion.
In the neanwhile I was lord of my person, and experienced that feeling of independence which the youthful boson receives with & thrilling mixture of pleasure and apprehension. My purse, though by no means amply replenished, was in a situation to supply all the wants and wishes of a traveller. I had been accustomed, while at Bonrdeaux, to act as my own valet; my horse was fresh, young, and active, and the bnoyancy of my spirits soon surmounted the melancholy reflections with which my journey commencel.
I should have been glad to have journeyed upon a line of road better calculated to afford reasonable objects of curiosity, or a more interesting conntry to the traveller. But the north road was then, and perhaps still is, singularly deficient in these respects; nor do I believe you can travel so far through Britain in any other direction without meeting more of what is worthy to engage the attention. My mental rmminations, notwithstanding my assumel confidence, were not always of an inichequered nature. The Muse too - the very coqnette who had led me into this wilderness - like others of her sex, deserted me in my utmost need; and I should have been reduced to rather an uncomfortable state of dulness hail it not been for the occasional conversation of strangers who elhaneed to pass the same way. But the characters whom 1 met with were of a miform and uminteresting description. Country parsons, jogging homewards after a visitation ; farmers or graziers returning from a distant market ; clerks of traders, travelling to collect what was due to their masters in provincial towns ; with now and then an offieer going down into the comitry upon the recruiting service, were at this periol the persons by whon the turn-pikes and tapsters were kept in exercise. Our speech, therefore, was of tithes and creeds, of beeves and grain, of eommodities wet and dry, and the solvency of the retail dealers, nceasionally varied by the description of a siege or battle in Flanders, whicli, perhaps, the narrator only gave me at second hand. Robbers, a fertile and alarming theme, filled up every vacancy : and the names of the Golden Farner, the Flying Highwayman, Jack Needham, and other Beggar's Opera heroes, were familiar in our mouths as household words. At such tales, like children closing their circle round the fire when the ghost story draws to its climax, the riders drow near to cach other, looked before and behind them, examined the priming of their pistols, and vowed to stand by each other in case of danger ; an engagement which, like other offensive and defensive alliances, sometimes glided out of remembranee when there was an appearance of actual peril.

ROB ROY

Of all the fellows whom I ever saw haunted by terrors of this nature, one poor man with whom I travelled a day and a half afforded me most amusement. He had upon his pillion a very small, but apparently a very weighty, portmantea!, abont the safety of whieh he secmed particularly solicitous, never trusting it out of his own immediate care, and uniformly repressing the offieious zeal of the waiters and ostlers, who offered their serviees to carry it into the house. With the same precaution he laboured to coneeal, unt only the purpose of his journey and his ultimate place of destination, but even the direction of each day's route. Nothing embarrassed him more than to be asked by any one whether he was travelling upwards or downwards, or at what stage he intended to bait. His place of rest for the night he scrutinised with the most auxions care, alike avoiding solitude and what he convidered as bad neighbon 'ood: and at Grantham I believe he sate up all night to avoid sleeping in the next rom to a thick-set squinting fellow in a black wig and a tarnished gold-laced waistcoat. With all these cares on his mind, my fellow-traveller, to jnige by his thewes and sinews, was a man who might have set danger at defiance with as much impunity as most men. He was strong and well-built ; and, judging from his gold-laced hat and cockade, seemed to have scrvel in the army, or at least to belong to the military profession in me capacity or other. His conversation also, though always sulficiently vulgar, was that of a man of sense, when the terrible bughears which, haunted his imagination for a monent ceased to oecupy his attention. But every accidental assoxiation recalled them. An open heath, a closc plantation, were alike sulbjects of apprehension; and the whistle of a shepherd lad was instantly converted into the signal of a depredator. Even the sight of a gibbet, if it assuied him that one robber was safely disposed of by justice, never failed to remind him how many remained still unhanged.

I should have wearied of this fellow's company had I not been still more tired of my own thoughts. Some of the marvellous stories, however, which he related had in themselves a cast of interest, and another whimsieal point of his peenliarities afforded me the oceasional opportunity of amusing myself at his cxpense. Among his tales, several of the minfortunate travellers who fell among thieves incurred that calamity from associating themselves on the road with a well-dressed and entertaining stranger, in whose company they trusted to find protection as well as amusement ; who cheered their journey with tale and song, protected them against the evils of overcharges and false reckonings, until at length, minder pretext of showing a near path over a desolate common, he seduecd his unsuspicious victims from the public road into some dismal glen, where, suldculy blowing his whistle, he assemmed his comrades from their lurking-place, and displayed himself in his true colours, the captain, namely, of the band of robbers to whom his unwary fellow-travellers had forfcited their purses, and perhaps their lives. Towards the conelusion of such a tale, and when my companion had wronght himself into a fever of apprehension by the progress of his own narrative, I nbserved that he nisnally eyed me with a glance of doubt and suspicion, as if the possibility occurred to him that he might, at that very moment, be in company with a character as dangerous as that which his tale described. And ever and anon, when such suggestions pressed themselves on the mind of this ingenions self-tormentor, he drew off from me to the opposite side of the highroad, looked hefore, behind, and aronnd him, examined his arns, and seemed to prepare limself for Hight or defence, as circumstances might require.

The suspicion implied on such occasions seenned to me only momentary, and two hadicrous to be offensive. There was, in fact, no particular reflection on my dress or adilress, althongh I was thns mistaken for a rubber. A man in those days might have all the external appearance of a gentleman and yet tarn out to be a highwayman. For the division of labour in every departhent not having then taken phace so fully as since that period, the profession of the polite and accomplished matyenturer who nicked you out of your moncy at White's, or bowled you out of it at Marybone, was often united with that of the professed ruttian who, on Bagshot Heath or linchley Comnum, commanded his brother bean to stmed and deliver. There was also a touch of conseness and hardhess about the munners of the times, which has since in a great degree been softened and shaded away. It seems to me, on recollection, ans if ilesperate men hand less reluctance then than now to embrace the most desperate means of retrieving their fortme. The times were indeed past when Anthony a' Wood mourned over the execution of two men, goodly in person and of undiputed comage and honour, who were hanged without mercy at Oxford merely because their distress had driven them to raise contributions on the highway. We were still farther removed from the days of 'the mad Prince and Poins.' And yet, from the number of nninclosed and extensive heathe in the vieinity of the metropolis, and from the less populons state of remote districts, both were frequented by that species of momuted highwaymen that may possibly becone one day unknown, who carried on their trade with something like courtesy; and, like Gibbet in the Beaur Stratagem, piqued themselves on being the best behavel men on the road, and on conducting themselves with all appropriate civility in the exercise of their vocation. A young man, therefore, in my cireminstances was not cutitled to be highly indignant at the mistake which confomend him with this worshipfinl class of depredators.
Neither was I offendel. On the contrary, I foumd ammement in altemately exciting and halling to sleep, the suspicions of my timorons companion, and in purposely so acting as still farther to puzzle a brain which uature and apprehension had combined to rember none of the clearest. When my free conversation had lulled him into complete security, it required only a passing inguiry conrerning the direction of his jumrney, or the mature of the lonsiness which oceasioned it, to put his suspicions once more in arns. F'or example, a conversation on the eomparative strength and activity of our horses took sueh a turn as follows : -
' O sir,' said my companion, 'for the gallop, I grant you; but allow me to say, your horse, although he is a very handsome gelding, that must be owned, has tho little houc to be a good roadster. The trot, sir (striking his Bucephalus with his spurs) - the trot is the true pace for a hackney; aud, were we near a town, 1 shonld like to try that daisy-culter of yours upon a piece of level roal - barring canter - for a quart of claret at the next inn.'
'Content, sir,', replied I ; 'and here is a stretch of ground very fivvourable.'
'Hem, ahem,' answered my friend, with hesitation; 'I make it a rule of travelling never to blow my horse between stages. One never knows what oceasion he may have to put him to his mettle; and hesides, sir, when I said I would match you, I meunt with even weight, yon ride four stone lighter than l.'
'Very well; but I aun coutent to carry weight. Pray what may that portmantean of yours weigh?'
'My p-p-portmanteau?' replied he, hesitating. ' 0 very little -a feather - just a few shirts and stockings.'
'I shomld think it heavier, from its appearance. I'th hold you the quart of claret it maker the orlds betwixt our weight.'
'You 're mistaken, sir, I assinre yon - 'quite mistaken,' replied my friend, edging off to the side of the road, as was his wont on these alarming occasions.
'Well, I'm wilfing to venture the wine : or I will bet yon ten pieces to five that I carry your portumenten on my cronpe and "ut-trot you into the bargain.'
'This proposal raised my friend's alatim to the nittermost. His nose changed from the matural copper hone which it had aepmired from many a comfortable cup of charet or sack into a palish brassy timt, aud his teeth chattered with apprehension at the unveiled andaeity of my proposal, which seemed to place the bare-faced plunderer before hinn in full atrocity. As he fialtered for an :answer, I relieved him in some degree by a question concerning a steeple which now became visible, and all ohservation that we were now so near the village as to rum min risk from interruption on the road. At this his comentenance deared up; but I easily perceived that it was long ere he forsut a proposal which seemed to him so firanght with suspicion as that which I had now hazarded. I tronble yon with this detail of the man's disposition, and the manner in which I practised upon it, because, however trivial in themselves, these particulars were attended by an important influence on future incidents which will occur in this narrative. At the time this person's conduct only inspired me with contempt, and confirmed me in an opinion, which I already entertained, that, of all the propensities which teach mankind to torment themselves, that of causeless fear is the most irritating, busy, painful, and pitiable.

CHAPTER IV

> The Scote are pror, cries surly English pride. True is the charge ; nor by themselves denied. Are they not, then, in strictest reason clear, Who wisely come to mend their fortunes here?

Chunchill.

THERE was, in the days of which I write, an old-fashioned custom ou the English roal, which I suspect is now obsolete, or practised only by the vulgar. Journeys of length being made on horseback, and of course by brief stages, it was usual always to make a halt on the Sunday in some town where the traveller might attend divine service, and his horse have the benefit of the day of rest, the iustitution of which is as humane to our brite labourers ass profitable to ourselves. A counterpart to this decent practice, and a remuant of old Euglish hospitality, was, that the landlord of a principal inn laid aside his character of publicm on the seventh day, and invited the guests who chanced to be within his walls to take a part of his family beef and pulding. This invitation was nsinally complied with by all whese distingnished rank did not iuduce them to think compliance a derogation; and the proposal of a bottle of wine after dinner to driuk the landlord's health was the only recompense cver offered or accepted.
I was born a citizen of the world, and my inclination led me into all scenes where my knowletlye of mankind could he enlarged ; I had, besides, no pretensions to sequester myself on the score of superior dignity, and therefore seldom failed to accept of the Sunday's hospitality of minc host, whether of the Garter, Lion, or Bear. The honest pmblican, dilated into additional consequence by a sense of his own importance while presiding among the guests on whom it was his ordinary duty to attend, was in himself an entertaining spectacle ; and aromed his genial orbit other planets of inferior consequence performed their revolutions. The wits and humorists, the distinguished worthies of the town or village, the apothoeary, the attorney, even the eurate himself, did not dimdain to partake of this hebdomadal festivity. 'The gnests, assembled from different quarters and following different professions, formel, in language, mamers, and sentiments, a curious eontrast to each other, not indifferent to those who desired to possess a knowledge of mankind in its varieties.

It was on sueh a day and such an occusion that my timorons nequaintance and I were about to grace the boarl of the ruddyfiwed host of the Black Bear, in the town of Darlingtom anm bishopriek of Durhan, when our landlorl informed us, with a sort of apologetie tone, that there was a Seotch gentleman to dine with us.
'A gentleman! what sort of a gentleman ?' said my companion, sonewhat hastily, his mind, I suppose, running on gentlemen of the pad, an they were then termed.
'Why, a Senteh sort of a gentleman, as I said before,' returned mine host ; 'they are all gentle, ye min know, though they ha' narra slirt to back; but this is a decentioh hallion a canny North Briton as e'er cross'l Berwick bridge. I trow he 's a dealer in cattle.'
'Let us have his company by all means,' answered my companion; and then, turming to me, he gave vent to the tenor of his own reflections. 'I respeet the Seotelh, sir ; I love and honour the nation for their sense of morality. Men talk of their filth and their poverty; but commend me to sterling honesty, though elad in rugk, as the puet saith. I have been credibly assuren, sir, by men on whom I can depend, that there was never known such a thing in Seotland as a high way robbery.'
'That 's because they have nothing to lose,' said mine host, with the chuekle of a self-npplauding wit.
' No , no, landlord,' answered a stroug deep voiee behind him, 'it 's e'en because your Euglish gingers and supervisors,' that you have sent down benorth the Tweed, have taen up the trade of thievery over the heads of the mative professors.'
'Well sail, Mr. Camphell!' answered the lanillord; 'I did nat think thoud'st been sae near us, mon. But thou kens I'm an ontspoken Yorkshire tyke. And how go markets in the south ?'
'Even in the ordinar,' rplied Mr. Campbell ; 'wise folks buy and sell, and fools are bought and sold.'

[^22]'But wise men and fools both eat their dinner,' nuswered our jolly entertainer ; 'and here a comes-as prime a buttock of beef as e'er hungry mon stuck fork in.'

So saying, he eagerly whetted his kuife, assumed his sent of empire at the head of the boarl, and loaded the plates of his sundry guests with his gool cheer.
This was the first time 1 had hearl the Scottish aceent, or, indeed, that I hal faniliarly met with an individnal of the nucient nation by whom it was spoken. Yet from an early period they had ocenpied and interested my imagination. My father, as is well known to you, was of mu ancient fanily in Northumberland, from whose seat I was, while eating the aforesaid dimer, not "ery many miles distant. ITh ynarrel betwixt him and his relatives was such that he smareely ever mentioned the race from which he sprong, and held as the most comtemptiblo speeies of vanity the weakness which is commonly termed family pride. His anbition was only to be distimgnished as William Osbaldistone, the fint, at least mo of the first, merchants on 'Change; and to have proved him the lineal representative of Willian the Conqueror wonld have far less flattered his vanity than the limm and bostle which lis approach was wont to produce mang the bulls, bears, and brokers of Stock Alley. He wished, no doult, that I should remain in such ignorance of my relatives and descent as might ensure a correspondence between my feelings and his own on this subject. But his designs, as will happen occasionally to the wisest, were, in some degree at least, comnteracted by a being whom his pride would never have supposed of importance adequate to influence them in my way. His murse, an old Northumbrian woman, attached to lim from his infancy, was the only person comected with his native province for whom he retained any regard ; and when fortme dawned now him one of the first uses which he made of her lavours was to give Mabel Rickets a place of residence within his honsehold. After the death of my mother, the care of nursing me during my childish illnesses, and of rendering ail those tender attentions which infancy exacts fron female affection, devolved on old Mabel. Interdicted by her master from speaking to him on the subject of the heaths, glades, and dales of her helover Nortlimmberland, she poured herself forth to my infiant ear in descriptimus in the scenes of her youth, anil loug narratives of the events which tradition declared to have passed amongst them. I'o these I inclined my ear much mure serionsly than to graver but less unimated instructors. Even yet methinks I see old Mabel, her head slightly agitated by the palsy of age, and shaded by a close cap, as white as the driven snow ; her face wrinkled, but still retaining the healthy tinge which it had acquired in rural labour - I think I see lier look around on thu briek walls and narrow street which presented themselves froun our windows, as she concluded with a sigh the favourite old ditty, which 1 then preferred, and - why should I not tell the truth ? - which I still prefer to all the opera airs ever minted by the capricious brain of au Italian Mus. D. -

> Oh, the oak, the ash, and the bonny ivy tree,
> They flouriah best at hoine in the Nortl Country !

Now in the legends of Mabel the Scottish uation was ever freslly remembered, with all the embittered declanation of which the narrutor was capable. The inhabitants of the opposite frontier served in her narratives to fill up the parts which ogres and ginuts with seven-leagued boots oreupy in the ordinary nursery tales. Anil how could it be otherwise? Was it not the Black Douglas who slew with his own hand the heir of the Ostaldistone family the day after he took possession of his estate, surprising him and his vassals while solemnising a feast suited to the occasion? Was it not Wat the Devil who drove all the year-old hogs off the braes of Lanthorn side, in the very rezent days of my grandfather's father ? And lad we not many a trophy, but, according to old Mabel's version of history, far more honourably gained, to mark our revenge of these wrongs? Dill not Sir Heury Ossaldistone, fifth baron of the name, carry off the fair maid of Fairuingtom, as Aehilles did his Chryseis and Briseis of old, and detain her in his fortress against all the power of her friends, supported ly the most mighty Scottish chiefs of warlike fame? And had not our swords shone foremost at most of those fields in which England was vietorions over her rival? All our fanily renown was aequired, all our family misfortmes were occasioned, by the northern wars.

Warned by such tales, I looked upon the Seottish people during my ehildhood as a race hostile by uature to the more southern inhalitants of this realm; and this view of the matter was not mueh correctel hy the language which my father sometimes held with respect to them. He lat engaged in some large speeulations concerning oak-woods, the property of Highland proprietors, and alleged that he found them much more ready to make bargains, and extort carnest of the purchawemoney, than punctual in complying on their side with the ternus of the engagements. 'The Scoteli mercantile men, whom he was under the necessity of employing as a sort of middlemen on those occasions, were also suspected by my father of huving secured, by one means or other, more than their own shure of the profit whieh ought to lave necrued. In short, if Mulel complained of the Senttish arms in ancient times, Mr. Ostaldistono inveighed no less agninst the arts of theve motern, Sinons; and between them, though without any fixed purpose of doing so, they improssed my youthful mind with a sincere aversion to the northem inhabitants of Britain, as a people bloolthirsty in time of war, treacherons during truce, interested, selfisli, avaricious, and tricky in the business of peaceful life, and having few good qualities, unless there should be nccounted such a ferocity whieh resembled courage in martial affairs, and a sort of wily craft, which supplied the place of windom in the ordinary commerce of mankind. In justification or apology for those who entertained such prejudices, I must remark that the Scotch of that period were guilty of similur injustice to the English, whom they brauded univernally as a race of purseprond arrogant epicures. Such seeds of national uiislite remained between the two countries, the nutural eonsequcnees of their existence as separate mid rival states. We liave seen recently the breath of a demagogue blow these sparks into a temporary thame, whieh I sincerely hope is now extinguished in its own ashes. ${ }^{1}$
It was, then, with an impression of dislike that I contemphated the first Scotelnan I clanneel to mect in society. There was much about him that coineided with my previous conceptions. He had the hard features mud athletic form said to be peculiar to his country, together with the national intonation and slow pedantic mode of expression, arising from a desire to avoid peenliaritics of idiom or dialeet. I eonld also observe the caution and shrewduess of his eometry in many of the observations which he made and the answers whieh lie retumed. But I was not prepared for the air of easy self-possession und superiority with which he secmed to predommate over the company into which he was thrown, as it were by neeident. His dress was as eoarse as it conld be, being still decent ; and, at a time when great expense was lavished upon the wardrobe, even of the lowest who pretemerl to the character of gentlemen,

[^23]

MICROCOFY RESOLUTION TEST CHART

(ANSI and ISO TEST CHART Na. 2)

APPLIED IMAGE Inc
(716) 288 - 5989 - Fox

ROB ROY

this indicated mediocrity of circumstances, if not proverty. His conversation intimated that he was engaged in the cattle-trade, no very dignified professional pursuit. And yet, under these disadvantages, he scemed as a matter of course to treat the rest of the company with the cool aud condescending politeness which implies a real or imagined superiority over those towards whom it is usel. When he gave his opiuiou on any point, it was with that easy tone of confidence used by those superior to their society in rank or information, as if what he said could not be donbted, and was not to be questioned. Mine host and his Suuday guests, after an effort or two to support their consequence by noise and bold averncut, smink gradually under the authority of Mr. Campbell, who thus fairly posisessed himelf of the lead in the conversation. I was tempted from curiosity to dispute the ground with him myself, tontidiug in my knowledge of the world, extended as it was by my residence abroad, and in the stores with which a tolerable education had possessed my mind. In the latter respect he offered no competition, and it was easy to see that his natural powery had never been cultivated by education. But I found him much better acquainted than I was myself with the present state of France, the character of the Duke of Orleans, who had just succeeded to the regency of that kingdom, and that of the statesmen by whom he was surrounded ; and his shrewd, caustic, and somewhat satirical remarks were those of a man who had been a close observer of the affairs of that country.
On the subject of politics Caunpell observed a silence and moderation which might arise from caution. The divisions of Whig and 'Tory then shook England to her very centre, and a powerful party, engaged in the Jacobite interest, menaced the dynasty of Hanover, which had becn just established on the throne. Every ale-house resounded with the brawls of contending politicians, and as mine host's politics were of that liberal description which quarrelled with no good custoner, his hebdomadal visitants were often divided in their opinion as irreconcilably as if he had feasted the Commnon Council. 'The curate and the apothecary, with a little man who made no boast of his vocation, but who, from the flourish and snap of his fingers, I believe to have been the barber, strongly esponsed the cause of High Church and the Stuart line. The excise'nan, as in duty bound, and the attorney, who looked to some betty office nuder the crown, together with my fellow-traveller, who seemed to enter keenly into the contest, stanchly supported the cause of King George and the Protestant succession. Dire was the screaming, deep the oaths: Fach party appealed to Mr. Campbell, anxions, it seemed, to elicit his approbation.

- Yon are a Scotchnan, sir ; a gentlenan of your conntry mnst stand up fir hereditary right, cried one party.
'Yon are a Presbyterian,' assimmed the other clase of disputants: 'yon cannot be a firiend to arbitrary pmwer.'
'(rentlemen,' said our Seoteh oracle, after lowing gained, with some difficulty, a moment's panse, 'I invena much dubitation that King George weel deverves the predilection of lis friends; and if he can hand the grip he has gotten, why, donbtless, he may make the ganger here a commissioner of the reveme, and confer on our friend, Mr. Quitan, the preferment of solicitor-reneral ; and he may also grimet some good deed or reward to this lonest gentleman who is sitting upon his portmantean, which he prefers to a chair. And, questionless, ling Janes is also a grateful person, and when he gets his hamd in play le may, if he be so minded, make this reverend rentloman arch-prelate of Canterbury, and Dr. Mixit chief physician to lis: household, and commit his royal beard to the care of my friend Latherum. But as I doubt mickle whether any of the competing sovereigns wonld give Rob Campbell a tass of apnavita, if he lacked it, I give my vote and interest to. Jonathan Brown, our landlord, to be the king and prince of skinkers, conditionally that he fetches us another botile as good as the last.'

This sally was received with general applause, in which the landlord cordially joined; and when he had given orders for fulfilling the condition on which liis preferment was to depend, he failed not to acinaint them 'that, for as peaceable a sentleman as Mr. Campbell was, he was, moreover, as bohd as a lion - seven lighwaymen had he defeated with his single arm that beset him as he cane from Whitson 'Iryste.'
"Thou art deceived, friend Jonatlan,'s said Canpbell, interrupting him; 'they were but barely two, and two cowardly loons as man conld wish to meet withal.'
'And did yon, sir, really;' said my fellow-traveller, edgring his chair - I shonld have said his portmantem - nearer to Nir. Campbell - 'really and actnally beat two highwaynen yourself alone? '
'In troth did I, sir,' replied Campbell: 'and I think it nate great thing to make a sime abmo.'
'Vpon my word, sir,' replied my' :arefuaintanoe, 'I slanhle bo

ROB ROY

happy to have the pleasure of your company on my journey; I go north ward, sir.'
This piece of gratuitous information concerning the route he proposed to himself, the first I had heard my companion bestow upon any one, failed to excite the correspunding confidence of the Scotchman.
'We can scarce travel tugether,' he replied, drily. 'You, sir, doubtless, are well mounted, and I for the present travel on foot, or on a Highland shelty, that does not help me much fas 'er forward.'

So saying, he called for a reckoning for the wine, and, throwing down the price of the additional bottle which he had himself introduced, rose as if to take leave of ns. My compmion made up to him, and, taking him by the button, drew him aside into one of the windows. I eould not help overhearing him pressing something - I supposed his company upon the journey - which Mr. Campbell seened to decline.
'I will pay your charges, sir,' suid the traveller, in a tone as if he thought the argument shonld bear down all opposition.
'It is quite impossible,' stid Campleell, somewhat contemp. tuously ; 'I have business at Rothbury.'
'But 1 am in no great hurry; I can ride out of the way, and never miss a day or so for good company.'
' Epon my faith, sir,', said Campbell, 'I cannot ıder you the service you secm to desiderate. I am,' he adder drawing himself np hanghtily, 'travelling on my own private affairs, and if ye will act by ny advisement, sir, ye will neither unite yourself with an absolnte stranger on the road, nor communicate your line of journey to those who are asking ye no questions about it.' He then cxtricated his button, not very ceremoniously, from the hold which detained him, and, coming up to me as the company were dispersing, observed, 'Your friend, sir, is too communicative, considering the nature of his trust.'
' 'That gentleman,' I replied, looking towards the traveller, 'is 'oo friend of mine, but an acquaintance whom I picked up on the road. I know neither his name nor business, and you seem to be deeper in his confidence than I am.'
'I only 'neant,' he replied, hastily, 'that he seems a thought rash in conferring the honour of his company on those who desire it not.'
'Ihe gentleman,', replied I, 'knows lis own affairs best, and I should, be sorry to constitute myself a judge of them in any re.seet.'

Mr. Camphall made no farther observation, but merely wished me a good journey, and the party dispersed for the evening.

Next day I parted company with my timid companion, as I left the great northern roal to turn more westerly in the direction of Osbaldistone Manor, my mucle's seat. I canmot tell whether he felt relievel or embarrassed by my departure, comsidering the dubions light in which lie secmed to regard me. For my own part, his tremors wased to ammse me, and, to say the truth, I was heartily glad to get rid of him.

CHAPTER V

> How melts my beating heant, as I belold Each lovely mymph, our island's boast and pride, Push on the generous steed, that sweeps along O'er rough, o'er smouth, nor heeds the steepy hill, Nor falters in the extended vale below !

The Chase.

IAIPROACHED my native north, for such I esteemed it, with that enthnsiasm which romantic and wild scenery inspires in the lovers of nature. No longer interrupted by the babble of my companion, I conld now remark the diffierence which the comntry exhibited from that through which I had hitherto travelled. The streans now more properly deserved the name, for, instead of slumbering stagnant among reeds and willows, they brawled along beneath the shade of natural copsewood; were now hurried down declivities, and now purled more leisurely, but still in active motion, throngh little lonely valleys, which, opening on the road from time to time, seemed to invite the traveller to explore their recesses. I'Ine Cheviots rose before me in frowning majesty ; not, indeed, with the sublime variety of rock and cliff which characterises momitains of the primary class, lont huge, romid-headed, and clothed with a dark robe of russet, gaining, by their extent and desolate appearance, an intinence npon the imagination, as a desert district possessing a character of its own.

The abode of my fathers, which I was now approaching, was situated in a glen or narrow valley which ran up anong those hills. Extensive estates, which once belonged to the family of Osbaldistone, had been long dissipated by the misfortmes or misconduct of my ancestors; but enongh was still attached to the old mansion to give my macle the title of a man of large property. Ihis he employed (as I was given to moderstand by some inminies which I made on the road) in maintaining the prodigal hospitality of a northern squire of the period, which he deemed essential to his family dignity.

From the summit of an eminence I lad already had a distant view of Oshaldistone Hall, large ani antiquated edifice, peeping out from a Druidical grove of huge oaky: and I was directing my course tewards it, as straightly and as speedily as the windings of a very indifferent road womld pernit, when my horse, tired as he was, pricked mp his ears at the enlivening notes of a pack of hommly in fill ery, checered by the occasional bursts of a French horn, which in those days was a constant accompaniment to the chase. I made no dombt that the pack was my uncle's, and drew up . my lorse with the purpose of suffering the hmiters to pass without potice, aware that a hunt-ing-field was not the proper scene to introdnce myself to a keen sportsman, and determined, when they had passed on, to procer : to the mansion-honse at ny own pace, mind there to a wait th "3turn of the proprietor from his spert. I pansed, therefure, on a rising gromul, and, not mmoned by the sense of interest which that species of silvan sport is so much calenlated to inspire (although my mind was hot at the moment very accessible to impressions of this nature), I expected with some eagerness the appearance of the hmitsmen.
The fox, hard run and nearly spent, first made his appearance from the eopse which clothed the right-hand side of the valley. His dronping brush, his soiled appearance, and jaded trot proclaimed his fate impending: and the carrion erow, which hovered over him, already considered poor Reynard as soon to be his prey. He crossed the stream which divides the little valley, and was dragging himself up a mavine on the other side of its wild banks, when the headmost homuls, followed by the rest of the pack in full ery, hust from the conpice, followed by the huntsman and three or four riders. 'The dags, pursucd the trace of Reynard with merring instinet ; and the humters followed with reekless haste, regarilless of the hroken and diffieult nature of the fromul. They were tall, stont yonng men, well mounted, and dressed in greeln and red, the uniform of a sporting association formed moder the anspices of old Sir Hildebrand Osbaldistone. 'My consins:' thenght I, as they swept past me. The next reflection was, what is my re , tion likely to be among these worthy successors of Nimronl? .nd how inmprobable is it that $I$, knowing little or nothing of rural sports, shall find myself at case or hapy in my mucle's family. A vision that passed me interrupted these reflections.

It was a young lady, the loveline if wose very striking fentures was enhanced by the mimation of the chase and the glow of the exercise, momited on a leautifinl horse, jet black, muless where he was fleeked by spots of the suow-white foam which embossed his bridle. She wore, what was then somewhat mussual, a coat, vest, and hat resembling those of a man, which fashion has since called a riding-liabit. The mod- had been introduced while I was in Frunce, and was perfectly new to me. Her long black hair streanced on the breeze, laving in the hurry of the chase escuped from the ribbon which bonnd it. Some very broken grommd, through which she guided her horse with the most admirable aldress and presence of mind, retarded her course, and bronght her closer to me than miny of the other riders had passed. I had, therefore, a fill view of her meommonly fine fiee and person, to whieh an inexpressible cinarm was added by the wilh gaiety of the scene and the romance of her singular dress and nuexpected appearance. As she passed me, her horse made, in his impetnosity, an irregular movement, just while, coming once 1 more upon open gromid, she was again putting him to his speed. It served as all apology for me to ride close up to her, as if to her assistance. There was, however, no cause for alarm ; it was not a stimble, nor a false step; and, if it had, the fair Amazon had too mich self-possession to have been deranged by it. She thanked my good intentions, however, by a suile, and I felt encouraged to put my horse to the same pace, and to keep in her immediate neighbourhood The clamoir of ' Whoop, dead, lead!' and the eorresponding flourish of the Freneh horn, soon amounced to ns that there was no more occasion for haste, sinee the chase was at a close. One of the young men whom we had seen approaehed us, waving the brush of the fox in triumph, as if to upbraid my fair eompanion.
'I see,' she replied - 'I sec ; but make no noise about it; if Phoebe,' she said, patting the neck of the beantifinl animal on which she rode, 'har not got among the eliffs, you would have had little cause for boasting.'
They met as she spoke, and I observed them both look at me and converse a moment in an modertone, the yonng lady apparently pressing the sportsman to do something which he neclined shyly, and with io sort of sheepish sullcnness. She instantly turned her horse's head towards, me, saying, 'Well, well, 'Thornie, if you won't, I must, that's all. Sir,' she continued, addressing me, 'I have becin endeavouring to persuade this cultivated young gentlenan to make inquiry of you whether, in the course of your travels in these purt:, your have heard auything of a friend of , ,mrs, one Mr. Francis Osbaldistone, who has heen for some days expected at (Nunialdistone Hall?'

I was too lappy to aeknowlelge myself to be the party iumuired after, and to express my thanks for the obliging impuries of the yomug lady.
'In that case, sir,' she rejoined, 'as my kinsman's politeness seems to be still shmmering, yom will permit ne- though I suppose it is highly improper - to stanl mistress of ceremonies, and to present to you yomg Sinire 'Thorneliff' Osbaldistone, your cousin, and Die Vernon, who has also the honour to be your accomplished eomsin's pour kinswoman.'
There was a mixture of bolluess, satire, and simplieity in the manmer in whiel Miss Vernom prinomeed these words. My knowledge of life was sulticient the cuable me to take up a corresponding tone as I expressed my sratitule to her for her condeseension, and my extreme pleasinte at having met with them. 'To say the trath, the emmpliment was so expressed that the landy might easily appropriate the greater share of it, for 'Thorncliff seemed an arrant cmutry hmukin, awkwarl, shy, and somewhat sulky withal. He shook hands with me, however, and then intimated his intention of leaving me that he might help the huntsman and his brothers to conple np the hommes, a purpmse which he rather eommumieated by way of information to Miss Vernom than as apology to me.
'There he goes,' said the yomng laty, following him with eyes in which disdain was almirably puinted - 'the prince of grooms: - - 'figliters and blackgnarl horse-enursers. But there i- of them to mend mother. Have yon read $\leq$ Re: $_{1} \quad 1$ Miss Verimi. name.'
.n, ma'am? I do not even renember the author's
' 0 lud! on what a strand are you wreeked!' replied the young lady. 'A poor forlorn and ignorant stranger, macepmainted with the very Alouran of the savage tribe whom yon are come to reside ammer. Never to have heard of Markhim, the most celebraten anthor on farriery! 'Then I fear yon are equally a stranger to the more munlern names of (Gibson and Bartlett?'
'I am indeel, Miss Vermm.'
'And do you not blush to own it?' said Miss Vermun. 'Why, we must forswear your alliance. Then I suppose you can neither give a ball nar a mash nor a horn?'
'I confess I trust all these matters to an ostler or to my groom.'
'Incredible carelessness: Aud yon camuot she a horse, or ent his mane and tail; or worm a dog, or crop his ears, or cut his dew-chaws : or rechain a hawk, or give him his castingstones, or direet his diet when he is senled ; or
'ITo smm, up my insignificance in one worl,' replied I, 'I amt profmundly ighorant in all these rural accomplishments.'

- Then, in the nane of Heaven, Mr. Francis Osbaldistone, what can you do?'
- Very little to the purpose, Miss Vernon ; something, however, I can pretend to. When my groom has dressed my lurse I can ride him, and when my hawk is in the field I cmn tly him.'
'Can you do this?' said the yomg lady, putting her larre to a canter.
There was a sort of rude overgrown fenee erossed the path kefore us, with a gate, composed of pieees of woonl rough from the forest ; I was about to move forward to open it, when Miss Vernen cleared the obstruction at , Hying lenp. I was bound, in point of honour, to follow, and was in a moment again at her side.
'There are hopes of you yet,' she said. 'I was afraid you had leen a very degenerate Osbaldistone. But what on earth brings you to Cub Castle ? for so the neighbous have christened this lunting-lall of ours. You might have staid away, I suppose, if you would?'

I felt I was by this time on a very intimate footing with my beautiful apparition, and therefore replied in a contidential undertone - ' Indeed, my dear Miss Vernon, I might lave considered it as a saerifice to be a temporary resident in Osbaldistone Hall, the inmates being sule as you descrile them; but I am convincerl there is one exception that will make amends for all deficiencies.'
'(), you mean Rashleigh ?' suid Miss Vernom.

- Indeed I do not; I was thinking - forgive me - of some person much nearer me.'
'I suppose it would be proper not to moderstand your civility? But that is not my way; I don't make a courtesy for it, becanse I am sitting on horseback. But, seriously, I deserve your exception, for I ain the only conversible being about the Mall except the old priest and Rashleigh.'
'And who is Rashleigh, for Heaven's sake?'
'Rashleigh is one who would fain have every one like him for his own sake. He is Sir Hillehrand's youngest son, abmomt your own age, but nut so - nut well-lowking, in short. But natire has given him a monthful of emmon sense, and the priest has added a mishelfinl of learning; he is what we call a very clever man in this comintry, where clever men are scarce. Bred to the church, lint in no hurry to take orders.'
"To the Catholic Church?'
"Ihe Catholic Clureh! what ('inroh else l' said the yomme ialy. 'But I firgit, they told me yon are a herotic. Is that true, Mr. Oslmaldistune ?'
'I must not deny the charge.'
'And yet yon have lreen abroad, and in Catholic conntries?'
'For nearly finir years.'
- You lave secm convents 9 '
'Often; but I have not seen much in them which recommended the Catholic religion.'
'Are not the inhahitents happy?'
'Some are mulnestimably no, whom either a profomid sense? of devotion, or an experience of the pressecutions and misfirtunes of the world, or a natural apmethy of temper, has led intu retirement. 'I'hose who have adoptel a life of sechasion from sulden and overstrained enthusiasm, or in hasty resentment of some disapprintment or mortification, are very miserable. The quickness of sensation soon returns, and, like the wi ler animals in a menarerie, they are restless mader continement, while others muse or fattun in cells of no larger dimensimss thon theirs.'
'And what,' continued Miss Vernon, 'becomes of those victims who are condemul. to a convent by the will of others? What do they reseml expecially, what do they resemble if they are born to eujoy ute, and feel its blessings ?'
'They are like imprisoned singing-birls,' replied I, 'comdemned to wear ont their lives in continement, which they try to beguile by the exercise of accomplishments which would have adorned society had they been left at larye.',
'I shall be,' returned Miss Vernon - 'that is,' saiul she, correcting herself, 'I should be rather like the wild haw's. who, barred the free exercise of his soar through heaven, will dash himself to pieces against the bars of his. cage. But til return to Rashleigh,' said she is a more lively tone, 'yom will think him the pleasantest mam you ever saw in your life, Mr: Oshaldistone, that is, for a week et lep $t$. It he could find out a blind mistress, never man would be so secure of conquest ;
but the eye breaks the speell that cuchants the ear. But here we are in the court of the old hall, which looks as wild and old fishlioned as any of its immates. There is nu) great toiletto kept at Osmaldistone llall, you minst know ; but 1 must take oft thene thimgs, they are mo mpleaswitly warm, mid the hat lurts my farehead tro,' eontinned the lively girl, taking it off anil slukkig down a profinsion of sable 1.2 glets, which, lualf langhing, half blushing, she sepmrated with her white slender fingens, in order to elear them away from her beantiful face mul piercing hazel eyes. If there was may eopuretry in the aetion, it was well disgninivel by the carcless indifference of her manner. I embld nut help, saying, 'that, julthing of the fimmily from what 1 saw, I shomild suppose the tuilette a very mineceosary care.'
'Ihat's very politely said ; thongh, proups, I ought nut to nuderstand in what sense it was memat,' replied Miss Vernon; 'but yon will see a better apology for a little negligence when yon meet the (Irsons yon are to live amonsst, whose furms mo toilette conld improve. But, as I said before, the old dimeerbell will elang, or rather elank, in a few minntes; it cracked of its own aceord on the day of the landing of King Willie, and my unele, respeeting its prophetic talent, wonld never permit it to be mended. So do you hold my palfrey, like a dinteous knight, until I send some more hmuble suluire to relieve yon of the eharge.'
She threw me the rein as if we lud been aequainted from our ehildhood, jumped from her sudille, tripped aeross the conrtyard, and entered at a side-door, leaving me in admiration of her beanty, and astmnished with the over-frankneess of her manners, which seemel the more extraordinary at a time when the dietates of politeness, flowing from the enimt of the Gramd Momarque Lomis XIV., preseribed to the fair sex an musnul severity of decormm. I was left awkwarlly enough stationed in the centre of the court of the old hall, mounted on one horse and holding another in my hand.
'the building afforded little tw interest a strauger, had I been dixposed to consider it attentively : sle cides of the gnadrangle were of varions architecture, and w. heir stone-shafted latticed windows, projecting turrets, and massive arehitraves, resembled the inside of a comvent, or of one of the older and less splendid colleges of Oxford. I called for a domestic, but was for some time totally mattended to ; which was the more provoking as I could perceive I was the object of curiosity to several servanta, both male aud female, from different parts of the building, who popped out their heais nul withdrew them, like rabbits in a warren, before I conld make a dir ct appenl to the attention of any indivilual. The return of the huntamen and hounds relieved mo from my emburrassment, mad with some difficulty I got one clown to relieve me of the charge of the horses, and another stuppil boor to guide me to the presence of Sir Ilildebranl. 'lhis service ho pertorned with mueh such grace and gool-will as a peasant who is complled to uet as guide to a hostile patrol ; and in the same manner I was obliged to guard against his deserting me in the lalyrinth of low vanlted passages which conducted to 'Stun Hall,' us he called it, where I was to be introduced to the gracions presence of uny uncle. We dil, lowever, at length reach a bong vanled rom, floored with stone, where a range of oaken tables, of a weight and size too hassive ever to ho moved aside, were ulrealy covered for dimer. Ilhis venerable apartment, which luil witnessed the feasts of several generations of the Osbaldistone family, bore also evidenee of their success in fiehl-sports. Huge aitlers of deer, which might have been trophies of the hunting of Chevy Chace, were ranged around the walls, interspersed with the stuffed skins of budgers, otters, martins, and other mimals of the chase. Amidst some remnants of old arnour, which had, perhaps, served against the Scotch, liung the nore valued weapons of silvan war, cross-buws, ghas of vaions device and construction, nets, fishing-rods, otter-spears, himnting.poles, with many other silugular devices anci ciibilues fio taking or killing game. A few oll pictures, dimmed with smoke and stainel with March beer, hung on the walls, lepresenting knights and ludies, honoured, doubtless, and rew wned in their day; those frowning fearfully from hure bushes f: vin and of beard, and these looking delightfully w:h all their aight at the roses which they brandished in their ha:: $\alpha$.

I had just time to give a glance nt these matters when about twelve blue-coated servants burst into the hall with much tumult and talk, each rather employed in directing his comrades than in discharging his own duty. Some bronght blocks and billets to the fire, which roared, blazed, and ascended, half in smoke, half in flame, up a huge tmmel, with an opening wide enouph to nccommodate a stone-seat within its ample vault, and which was fronted, by way of chimney-piece, with a huge piece of heavy architecture, where the monsters of heraldry, embodied by the art of some Northumbrian chisel, grinned and ramped in red freestone, now japauned by the smoke of centurics. Others of these oldfashioned serving-men bore huge smoking dishes, loaded with substantial fare ; others brought in cups, fingons, bottles, yea barrels of liquor. All tramped, kicked, plunged, shouldered, and jostled, doing as little service with as mnch tunult as could well be imagined. At length, while the diiner was, after various efforts, in the act of being arranged upon the board, 'the clamour much of men and dogs,' the cracking oin whips, calculated for the intimidation of the latter, voices loud and ligh, steps which, impressed by the heavy-heeled loots of the perici, clattered like those in the statue of the Hestin de pierre, ${ }^{1}$ annomed the arrival of those for whose benefit the preparations were made. The hubbnb among the servants rather increased than diminished as this crisis approached: some called to make haste, others to take time, some exlorted to stand out of the way and make room for Sir Hildebrand and the young squires, some to close round the table and be in the way, some bawled to open, some to shut, a pair of fold-ing-doors which divided the hall from a sort of gallery, as I afterwards learned, or withdrawing-room, fitted up with black wainscot. Opened the doors were at length, and in rushed curs and men - eight dogs, the domestic chaplain, the village doctor, my six cousins, and my uncle.

[^24]
CHAPTER VI

The rude hall rocks - they come, they come;
The diu of voices shakes the dome;
In stalk the varions forms, and, lrest
In varying morion, varying vest,
All march with haughty step, all proully shake the crest.

Penrorg

IF Sir Hildebrand Osbaldistone was in no hurry to greet his nephew, of whose arrival he must have been informed for some time, he had important, avocations to allege in excuse. 'Had seen thee sooner, lad,' he exclaimed, after a rough shake of the hand and a hearty weleome to Osbaldistone Hall, 'but had to see the hounds kemelled first. 'Thou art welcone to the Hall, lad. Here is thy cousin Percie, thy cousin Thornie, and thy cousin John, your eousin lick, your cousin Wilfred, and -stay, where 's Rashleigh - ay, here's Rashleigh - take thy long body aside, Thornie, and let's see thy brother a bit your cousin Rashleigh. So thy father has thought on the old Hall and old Sir Hildebrand at last ; better late than never. Thou art weleome, lad, and there's enough. Where's my little Die? Ay, here she comes; this is my niecc Die, my wife's brother's daughter, the prettiest girl in our dales, be the other who she may ; and so now let's to the sirloin.'
To gain some idea of the person who held this language, yon must suppose, my dear Tresham, a man aged abont sixty, in a hunting suit which had once been richly laced, but whise splendour had been tarnished by many a November and December storm. Sir Hildehraul, notwithstanding the abruptness of his present mamuer, had at one period of his life known courts and eamps; had held a commission in the army which encamped on Hounslow Heath previous to the Revolntion, and, recommended perhaps by his religion, had been knighted abont the same period by the unfortunate and ill-advised James II. But the Knight's dreams of further preferment, if he ever entertained any, had died away at the erisis which drove his patron from the throne, and since that period he had spent a sequestered life upon his mative domains. Notwithstanding his rusticity, however, Sir Hildehrand retained much of the exterior of a gentleman, and appeared among his sons as the remains of a Corinthian pillar, lefaced and overgrown with moss and lichen, might have looked if eontrasted with the rongh, mhewn masses of upriglt stones in Stomhenge or any other Druidical temple. I'he sons were, indeed, heavy madorned blocks as the eye wonld desire to look npon. Tall, stont, and concly, all and each of the five eldest seemed to want alike the Promethean fire of intellect and the exterior grace and manner which, in the polished world, sometimes supply mental deficieney. I'heir most valuable moral quality seemed to be the good-humour and content which was expressed in their heavy features, anll their only pretence to accomplishment was their dexterity in field sports, for which alone they lived. The strong Gyas and the strong Cloanthus are not less distinguished by the poet than the strong Percival, the strong IThorncliff, the strong John, Riehard, and Wilfred Osbaldistones were by ontward appearanee.
But, as if to indemnify herself for a miformity so uneommon in her productions, Dame Natnre had rendered Rashleirh Osbaldistone a striking contrast in person and manner, and, as I afterwards learned, in temper and talents, not only to his brothers, but to most men whom I had hitherto net wit! 1 . When Percie, Thornie, and Co. had respectively nodded, grimned, and presented their shoulder, rather than their hand, as their father named them to their new kinsman, Rashleigh stepped forward and welcomed me to Oshaldistone Hall with the air and manner of a man of the world. His appearance was not in itself prepossessing. He was of low stature, whereas all lis brethren seemed to be descendants of Anak; and, while they were handsomely formed, Rashleigh, thongh strong in person, was bull-necked and cross-made, and, from some early injury in his youth, had an imperfection in his gait, so much resembling an absolute halt that many alleged that it formed the obstacle to his taking orders; the Chureh of Rome, as is well known, admitting none to the clerical profession who labours under any personal deformity. Others, however, ascribed this unsightly defect to a mere awkward habit, and contended that it did not amount to a personal disqualification from holy orders.
ROB ROY

The features of Rashleigh were such as, having looked upon, we in vain wish to banish from our memory, to which they recur as objects of painful curiosity, althongh we dwell umn them with a feeling of dislike, and even of dixynst. It was mot the actual plaimess of lis face, taken separately from the meaning, which mate this strong impression. His features were, indeed, irregular, but they were ly mon means vilsair: amb his keen dark eyes and shargey eychrows redeemed his tate from the charge of commonplace urliness. Bat there was in these eyes an expression of art and design, ann, on provocation, a ferocity tempered by cantion, which nature had nade obvions: to the most ordinary physiegnomist, perhaps with the same intention that she has given the rattle to the puismons snake. As if to compensate him for these disadvantages of exterior, Rashleigh ()sbaldistone was possiessel of a voice the most suft, mellow, and rich in its tones that I ever heard, and was at no loss for language of every sort suited to so tine an organ. His first sentence of welcome was hardly conded ere I internally agreed with Miss Vernon that my new kinsman would make an instant conquest of a mistress whose ears alone were to judge his cause. He was about to place himself beside me at dimer, but Miss Vernon, who, as the only fenale in the fanily, arranged all such matters according to her own pleasure, contrived that I shonld sit hetwixt Thorncliff and herself; and it can scarce be doubted that I favourcd this more advantageons arrangement.
'I want to speak with you,' she said, 'and I have p'reed honest Thornie betwixt Rashlifigh and you on jurpose. He will be like -

> Feather-bed 'twixt castle wall And heavy brunt of camnon ball; while I, your earliest acenaintance in this intellectual family, ask of you how you like us all?'
'A very comprchensive ruention, Miss Vernon, considering how short while I have been at ().baildistone Hall.'
' $O$, the philosophy of our fimily lies on the surface : there are minute shades distimgnishing the intividnals which regnire the eye of an intelligent observer: lmit the speries, as natinalists, I believe, call it, may be distinguished anl characterived at once.'
'My five elder cousins, then, are, I presmue, of pretty nearly the same character.'
'Yes, they form a happy compound of sot, gamekeeper, bully, vou, iv-4 vol. tr-4

ROB ROY

horse-jockey, and fool ; but, as they say there cannot be found two leaves on the same tree exactly alike, so these happy ingredients, being mingled in somewhat various proportions in each individual, make an agreable variety for those who like to study character.'
'Give me a sketch, if you please, Miss Vernon.'
'You shall have them all in a family-piece, at full length; the favour is too easily granted to be refused. Percie, the son and heir, has more of the sot than of the gamekeeper, bully, horse-jockey, or fool. My precious 'Ihornie is more of the bully than the sot, gamekeeper, jockey, or fool. John, who sleeps whole weeks amongst the hills, has most of the gamekeeper. The jockey is powerful with Dickon, who rides two hundred miles by day and night to be bought and sold at a horse-race. And the fool predominates so much over Wilfred's other qualities that he may be termed a fool positive.'
'A goodly collection, Miss Vernon, and the individual varieties belong to a most interesting species. But is there no room on the canvas for Sir Hildebrand?'
'I love my uncle,' was her reply ; 'I owe him some kinduess - such it was meant for at least - and I will leave you to draw his picture yourself, when you know him better.'
'Come,' thought I to myself, 'I am glad there is some forbearance. After all, who would have looked for such bitter satire from a creature so young and so exquisitely beautiful?'
'You are thiuking of me,' she said, bending her dark eyes on me, as if she meant to pierce through my very soul.
'I certainly was,' I replied, with some embarrassment at the determined suddenness of the question; and then, endeavouring to give a complimentary turn to my frank avowal: 'How is it possible I should think of anything else, seated as I have the happiness to be?'
She smiled with such an expression of concentrated haughti ness as she alone could have thrown into her countenance. 'I must inform you at once, Mr. Osbaldistone, that compliments are entirely lost upon me; do not, therefore, throw away your pretty sayings : they serve fine gentlemen who travel in the country instead of the toys, beads, and bracelets which navigators carry to propitiate the savage inhabitants of newly discovered lands. Do not exhaust your stock in trade ; you will find natives in Northumberland to whom your fine things will recommend you; on me they would be utterly thrown away, for I happen to know their real value.'

I was silenced and confomided.
'You remind me at this moment,' said the young lady, resuming her lively and indifferent manner, 'of the fairy tale, where the man finds all the money whieh he had carried to market suddenly changed into pieces of slate. I have eried down and ruiued your whole stock of complinentery diseourse by oue unlucky observation. But eome, never mind it. You are belied, Mr. Osbaldistone, muless you have much better conversation than these findenrs which every gentleman with a toupet thinks himself obliged to recite to an unfortumate girl, merely because she is dressed in silk and ganze, while he wears superfine eloth with embroidery. Your natural paces, as any of my five cousins might say, are far preferable to your complimentary amble. Endeavour to forget my milucky sex ; call ine Tom Vernon, if you have a mind, but speak to me as you would to a friend and companion; you have no idea how much I shall like you.'
'That would be a bribe indeed,' returned I.
'Again!' repiied Miss Vernon, holding up her finger ; 'I told you I would not bear the shadow of a compliment. And now, when you have pledyed my uncle, who threatens you with what he calls a brimmer, I will tell you what you think of me.'

The bumper being pledged by me as a dutiful nephew, and some other general intercourse of the table having taken place, the continued and business-like clang of knives and forks, and the devotion of cousin Thorneliff on my right hand and eonsin Diekon, who sate on Miss Veruon's left, to the luge quantities of meat with whieh they heaped their plates, made them serve as two occasional partitions, separating us from the rest of the eompany, and leaving us to our tête-ri-tête. 'And now,' said I, 'give me leave to ask you frankly, Miss Vernon, what yon suppose I am thinking of you? I could tell you what I really do think, but you have interdieted praise.'
'I do not want your assistance. I iun comjurer enough to tell your thoughts without it. You need not open the easeinent of your bosom ; I see through it. You think me a strange bold girl, half eoquette, half romp; desirous of attracting attention by the freedonu of her manuers and londuess of her conversation, becanse she is ignorant of what the syectater calls the sufter graces of the sex ; and perhaps yon think I have some particular plan of storming you into admiration. I should be sorry to shock your self-epinimu, bit you were never more mistaken. All the confidence I have reposisel in you I would have given as readily to your father, if I thought he could have understood me. I an in this happy family as much sechuded from intelligent listeners: as Sancho in the Sierra Morena, and when opportunity offers I must npeak or die. I ussure you I wonld not have told you a word of all this curious intelligence had I cared a pin who knew it or knew it not.'
'It is very cruel in yon, Miss Vernon, to take away all particular marks of tavour from your commmuications, but 1 mnst receive them on your own temis. You have not included Mr. Rashleigh Osibaldistone in your domestic sketches.'
She shrmik, I thought, at this remark, and hastily nuswered in a much lower tone, 'Not a word of Rashleigh! Ilis ears are so acute when his selfishness is interested that the somuls would reach him cven through the nass of 'Thorncliffs, person, stuffed as it is with beef, venison-pasty, and pudding.'
'Yes,' I replied: 'but, pecping past the living screen whieh divides. uss before I put the question, I pereeived that Mr. Rashleigh's chair was empty ; he has left the table.'
'I would not have you be too sure of that,' Miss Vernom replied. 'Take my ailvice, and when you speak of Rashlcigh get up, to the top of Ottervcope Hill, where you can see for twenty miles round you in every direction, stand on the very peak and speak in whispers; and, after all, don't be too sure that the bird of the air will not earry the matter. Rashleigh has been my tutur for four years; we are mutnally tired of each other, and we shall heartily rejoice at our approaching separation.'
'Mr. Rashleigh leaves Osbaldistone Hall, then ?'
: Yes, in a few days ; did you uot know that? Your father nust keep his resolutions much more secret than Sir Hildebrand. Why, when my uncle was informed that you were to be his guest for some time, and that your father desired to have one of his hopeful sons to fill up the lucrative situation in his counting-house which was vacant by your obstinacy, Mr. Francis, the good kuighi: lindd a cour plénière of all his family, including the butler. honsekecper, and yamekeeper. This revercad asscmbly of the peers and honschold officers of Oshaldistone Hall was not emonoed, as yon may suppose, to elect your sulbstitute, becanse, as Rashleiegh alone possessed more arithnetic then wals necessary to calculate the olds on a fightingcock, none but he could be supposed qualified for the situation. But some solenn sunction was yecessary for transforming Rashleigh's destiuation from starving as a Catholic priest to thriving as a wealthy banker; and it was not without some reluctance that the acquiescence of the assembly was obtained (1) such an act of degradation.'
'I can conceive the scruples ; but how were they got over ?'
'By the general wish, I believe, to get Rashleigh out of the honse,' replied Miss Vernon. 'Althongh youngest of the family, he has somehow or other got the entire management of all the others; and every one is sensible of the subjeetion, though they tamut shake it off. If any one opposes him he is sure to rue having done so befire the year gnes about; and if you do him a very important service you may rue it still more.
'At that rate,' answered 1, suiling! 'I should look alout me; for I have been the canse, however unintentionally, of his change of situation.'
'Yes! and whether he regards it as an advantage or disadvantage, he will owe you a grudge for it. But here come cheese, radishes, and a bumper to churelı and king, the hint for chaphins and ladies to disuppear; and I, the sole representative of womanhood at Osbaldistone Hall, retreat as in duty bound.'
She vanished as she spoke, leaving me in astonishment at the mingled character of slirewdness, audatity, and fraukness which her conversation displayed. I deypuir conveying to yon the least ilea of her manner, althourh I have, as nearly as I can remember, imitated her language. In fact, there was a mixture of untanglit simplicity, as well as native shrewduess and haughty bolduess, in her manner, and all were modified and retommendel by the play of the nosit beautiful features I had ever beheld. It is not to be thonght that, however strange and uncommon I might think her !iberal and unreserved communications, a young man of two-and-twenty was likely to be severely critical on a beantiful girl of eighteen for not observing a proper distince towards him. On the contrary, I was equally diverted and flateren by Miss Vernon's confidence : and that notwithstanding her deelanation of it, being comferred on me solely because I was the first auditor who ceenrred of intelligence enough to comprehend it. With the presumption of my atge, certainly not diminishod by my residence in France, I imamined that well-formed features and a hambome person, buth which I conceived myself to phisess, were not nusnitable Inalifientions for the confidmut of a yomug beauty. My vanity thus enlisted in Miss Vernon's belaif, I was far frou judging her iwith severity merely for a frumbuess which, I silposed, was in some degree justified by my own personal merit; and the feelings of partiality which her beanty and the singularity of her sitnation were of themselves calculated to excite, were enhanced by my opinion of her penetration and jnelgment in her choice of a friend.

After Miss Vernoll quitted the apartment, the bottle circulated, or rather flew, around the table in unceasing revolution. My foreign education had given ine a distaste to intempernuec, then and yet too conmon a vice among my conntrymen. The conversation which seasoned such orgies was as little to my taste, and, if anything conld reuder it more disgusting, it was the relationship of the company. I therefore seized a lucky opportunity, and made my escupe through a side-door, leading I knew not whither, rather than endure any longer the sight of father and sons practising the same degrading intemperance, and holding the same coarse and disgusting conversation. I was pursucd, of course, as I had expected, to be reclained by force as a deserter from the shrine of Bucchus. When I heard the whoop and halloo, and the tramp of the heavy boots of my pursuers on the winding stair which I was desceuding, I plainly foresaw I shonld be overtaken unless! could get into the open air. I therefore threw open a casement in thi staircase which looked into an old-fashionel garden ; and, a t t:e height did not exceed six feet, I jumped out without hesitation, and soon heard, far behind, the 'hey whoop! stole away : stole away!' of my baffled pursuers. I ran down one alley, walked fast up another; and then, conceiving myself out of all danger of pursuit, I slackened my pace into a quiet stroll, enjoying the cool air which the heat of the wine I had been obliged to swallow, as well as that of my rapid retreat, rendered doubly grateful.

As I sauntered on, I found the garlcuer hard at his evening employment, and saluted him, as I pansed to look at his work. 'Good even, my friend.'
'Gude c'en - gude e'en t'ye,' answcred the man, without looking up, and in a tone which at once indicated his northern extraction.
'Fine wenther for your work, my frienul.'
'It's no that muckle to be complecied o',' answered the man, with that limited degree of praise which gardencrs and farmers nsually bestow on the very lest weather. Then raising his head, as if to sec who spoke to him, he toucher his Scotch lomnet with an air of respect, as he observed, 'Eh, gude safe ns! it's a sight for sair cen to see a gold-laced jeistiecor in the $\mathrm{Ha}^{\prime}$ garden sae late at e'en.'
'A gold-laced what, my goorl friend?'
'Ou, a jeistiecor - that's a jacket like your ain there. 'They hae other things to do wi' them up, youder, unbuttoning them to make room for the beef and the bag-puddings and the claret-wine, nue doubt ; that 's the ordinary for evening lecture on this side the Burder.'
'IThere's no such plenty of guod cheer in your comutry, my good frienl,' I replied, 'as to tempt yon to sit so late at it.'
'Hout, sir, ye ken little about Scothand ; it 's no for want of gude vivers - the hest of fishl, Hesh, and fowl hae we, by sybues, ingans, turneeps, and other garden fruit. But we have mense and discretion, and are moderate of our months; but here, fiate the kitchen to the ha', it's fill and fetch mair, frae the tae end of the four-and-twenty till the tother. Even their fast days they ca' it fasting when they hae the best o' sea-fish frae Hartlepool and Sunderland by, land carriage, forbye trouts, grilses, salmon, and a' the lave o't, and so they make their very, fasting a kind of luxury and abomination ; and then the awfii' masses and matins of the puir deceived souls; but I shouldha speak about them, for your honour will be a Roman, I'se warrant, like the lave.'
'Not I, my friend ; I was bred an English presbyterian or dissenter.'
'The right hand of fellowship to your honour then,' quoth the gardener, with as much alacrity as his hard features were capable of expressing, and, as if to show that his good-will did not rest on words, he pluckel forth a huge horn snuff-box, or mull, as he called it, and proffered me a pinch with a morst fraterual grin.

Having accepted his courtesy, I asked him if he had been long a domestic at Osbaldistone Hall.
'I have been fighting with wild bensts at Ephesus,' said he, looking towards the building, 'for the best part of these fiur-' and-twenty years, as sure us my unme's Andrew Prirservice.'
'But, my excellent friend Audrew Faiservice, if your religion and your temperance are so much offended by Ronam ritnals and southern hospitality, it seems to me that yon must have been putting yourself to an umnecessary penance all this while, and that you might have fouml a service where they eat less and are more orthodox in their worship. I daressy it camot be want of skill, which prevented your being placed more to your satisfaction.'
'It disua become me to speak to the boint of my qualifications,' said Andrew, looking romul him with grent complacency ; 'but nae doubt I should understanil my trade of horticulture, secing I was bred in the parish of Dreeplaily, where they raise lang-knle under ghass, und force the enrly nettles for their spring kule. Aul, to speak truth, 1 hae been Hitting every term these four-nul-twenty yeurs; but when the time comes, there 's nye something to saw thit I wonld like to see suwn, or something to maw thit I would like to see mawn, or something to ripe that I would like to see ripen, and sae I e'en daiker on wi' the family frie yenr's end to year's enul. And I wad suy for certuin thit I an gann to quit at Camlemme, only I was just as positive om it twenty yenrs syne, num I find mysell still turning up the monls here, for a' that. Forbyo that, to tell your honour the even-down truth, there's me better place ever offered to Andrew. But if your honour wal wish me to ony place where I wal hear pure doctrine, mid hae a free cow's grass, and a cot, mind a yarl, and mair than ten punds of nmmal fee, and where there's nae ledily aboont the town to count the apples, I'se hold mysell muckle indebted t' ye.'
'Bravo, Andrew ; I perceive you'll lose no prefernent for want of asking patronage.'
'I canna see what for I should,' replied Andrew ; 'it's 110 a generation to wait till ane's worth's discovered, I trow.'
'But you are no friend, I observe, to the ladies.'
' Na, by my troth, I keep up the first gardener's quarrel to them. They're fasheous bargnins-aye erying for apricocks, pears, plums, and apples, smmmer mal winter, without distinction 0 ' seasons; but we hae nae slires o' the spare rib here, be praised for 't: execpt mild Martha, aud she's weel enengh pleased wi' the freedion "' the berry-bushes to her sister's weuns, when they come to drink tea in a holiday in the housekeeper's room, and wi' a wheen coollings now and then for her ain private supper.
' You forget your young inistress.'
'What mistress do I forget ? whae 's that?'
' Your young mistress, Miss Vernon.'
'What! the lassie Vernon? She's nae mistress o' mine, man. I wish she was her ain mistress; and I wish she mayna be some other body's mistress or it 's lang. She 's a wild slip that.'
'Indeed!' said I, more interested than I cared to own to myself or to show to the fellow ; 'why, Andrew, yon know all the secrets of this family.'
'If I ken them, I can keep, them,' suil Anhew, 'they winua work in my wame like harmin a harrel, I'se warrant ye. Miss Die is - bint it 's neither beef nur hrese o' mine.'
Ame he hegan to dig with a grent emblane of assiduity.
'What is Miss Vermom, Audrew? 1 ama a friend of the family, and slonild like to kunw.'
'Other than a gule ane, I 'm fearing,' said Amirew, clowing one oye hard, and slaking his head with a grave and mysterions look- 'something glee'fl: your homme mulerstands me ?'
'I camot say I do,' said I, 'Anlrew: but I shonld like to hear yon explain yourself,' and therewithal I slipped a crownpiece into Audrews horn-hard hanl. The tonch of the silver made hime grin a ghastly smile, as he modled wlowly and thrinst it into his breeches pocket ; and then, like a man who well mader. stood that there was value til be returned, stood up anil rested his amus on his spade, with his features compmened into the most important gravity, as for some serions ermmminication.
'Ye mann ken, then, young gentlenan, since it imports you to know, that Miss Vermon is -

Here breaking off, he sucked in luth !is cheeks, till his lantern jaws and long chin assmmed the apmarme of a pair of nut-crackers; winked hard once more, frownel, shook his head, and seemed to think his physiognomy had empleted the information which his tongre hand not fully tolld.
'Good Gool! ' saill I, ‘so youns, so beantiful, so early lost!'
'Troth, ye may say sae : she's in a manuer lost, borly and saul; forby being a Papist, l'se mphand her for --' und his northern cantion prevailed and he was again silent.
'For what, sir ?' said I, steruly: 'I insist on knowing the plain meaning of all this.'
'Ou, just for the hitterest Jaembite in the haill shire.'
'Pshaw ! a Jacohite ! is that all?'
Andrew horked at me with snme astomishment at hearing his information treated so lightly: and then muttering, 'Aweel, it's the warst thing I kell ahoot the lassie, howsoe'er;' he resmmed his spude, like the ling of the Vandals in Marmontel's late novel.

CHAPTER VII

Bardulph. The sheriff, with a monntrous watch, is at the door.
Henry IV., Kirst Part.

IFOUND nut with some difficulty the apartment which was destined for my accommorlution; und, huving secured myself the necessury good-will and attention from my mele's domestics, by u.ing the mems they were most capable of connprehending, I secluded myself there for the remainder of the evening, conjecturims, from the fuir way in which I had left my new relatives, as well as from the distant noise which contimen to echo from the stone-hall, as their banqueting room wns callen, that they were not likely to be fitting company for a sober man.

What conld my father mean by sending me to be an inmate in this strange fanily ? was my first and most mutural reflection. My uncle, it was plain, received me as one who was to make some stay with him, and his rude hospitality rendered him us indifferent as King Hul to the number of those who fed at his cost. But it was plain my presence or absence would be of as little importance in his eyes us that of one of his blue-coated serving-men. My consins were mere cubs, in whose company I might, if I liked it, unlearn whatever decent munners or elegant accomplishments I had acquirel, but where I could attain no information beyoul what regarded worning dogs, rowelling horses, and following foxes. I conld only inngine one reason, which was probably the truc one. My futher considered the life which wis led at ()sbaldistone Hall as the natural and inevitable pursuits of all country gentlemen, and he was desirous, by giving we an opportunity of seeing that with which he knew I should be disgusted, to reconcile me, if possible, to take an active share in his own business. In the meantin, he would take Rashleigh (Sibaldistone into the conuting-h use. But he had an humdred motes of providing for him, and that advantageonsly, whenever he chose to get rid of him. So that, althongh I did feel a certain it Im of conscience at having leen the memus of introlncing If dileigh, leing surh as he was deseribed by Mins Vemun, into my farther's lnasiness, perhaps into his coufidence, I sulmbed it by the reflection that my father was complete master of his own affiairs, a man not to be imposed upon or influenced ly muy one, anll thut all I knew to the young gentleman's projndice was throngh the medinm of a singular anel gidly girl, whose rmmmunications were made with an injudicions frmikness which might warrant me in sul). posing her conelnsions hud heen hastily or inacenmely formed. Then my mind muturully turned to. Hiss Verninn herself, her extreme beanty; her very pectiliar sitmetion, relying solely upon her reflections and her own spirit for gilidance and protection ; and her n. ole claracter offering that variety and spirit which pigues our eariosity and engages our attention in.spite of ourwelves. I had rense enongh to convider the neighlourlood of this singular yomug lady, mind the chaneen of our being thrown into very elose and fregnent interconrse, as adding to the dangers, while it relieved the dulness, of Osbaldistone Hall ; but I conild not, with the fillest exertion of my prulence, prevail npon myself to rearet excessively this new and purticular hazard to which I was to be exposell. 'This mernple I also settled an yomg men settle most ilificicilties of the kinul: I would le very cautions, ahways on my grard, consider Miss Vermon rather ax a compminion than an intimate: and all would do well enough. With theve reflections I fell asleep, Misw Vernon, of comese, furming the last sulject of my contemplation.
Whether I dreamed of her or nut I ammot sutisfy yon, for I was tired and slept somidly. But she was the first person I thonght of in the norning, when waked at dawn ly the eheerfinl notes of the limiting-lorin. 'I'r start up mul direct me horse to be sumdled was my first movement : and in a fow minutes I was in the courtyard, where men, dous, and homes were inf fill prepuration. My mele, who, !orhaps, was mot. entitled to expect in very alert sportsinam in hix nephew, brol as he had been in foreign inurts, seemed rather surprised to see me, and I thonght his moming salntation winted smmething of the hearty and hospitable tone which distinguished his first welcome. 'Art there, lanl? ay, youth's aye rathe; but look to thysell - mind the ohl song, hinl - [^25]I believe there are few young men, and those very sturdy moralists, who would not rather be tiexed with some moral peccudillo than with want of kow wedge in horsemanship. As I was by no means deficient either in skill or conrage, I resented my mele's insimation accordingly, and assured him he wonld find me up with the hounds.

'I doubtna, lad,' was his reply; 'thon 'rt a rank rider, I'se warrant thee ; but take heed. Why father sent thee here to me to be bitted, and I doubt I must ride thee on the curb, or we 'll hae some one to ride thee on the halter, if I takena the better heed.'

As this speech was totally unintelligible to me ; as, besides, it did not seem to be delivered for my use or benefit, but was spoken as it were aside, and as if expressing aloud something which was passing throngh the mind of my much-honoured mucle, I concluded it must either refer to my desertion of the bottle on the preceding evening, or that my mele's morning hours being a little diseomposed by the revels of the night before, his temper had snffered in proportion. I only made the passing reflection, that if he played the ungracious landlord I would remain the shorter while his guest, and then hastened to salute Miss Vernon, who advanced cordially to meet me. Some show of greeting also passol between my consins and me; but as I saw them malieiously bent upon critieising my dress and accoutrements, from the cap to the stirrup-irons, and snecring at whatever had a new or foreign appearanee, I exempted myself from the task of paying them much attention; and assmming, in reqnital of their grins and whispers, an air of the utmost imlifference and contenpt, I attached nuyself to Mis, Vernon as the only person in the party whom I could regard as a suitable companion. By her side, therefure, we sallied furth to the destined cover, which was a dingle or copse on the side of an extensive common. As we rode thither, 1 observed to Diana that I lid not see my consin Rashleigh in the fielld; to which she replien, '() mo, he 's a mighty humter, hut it's after the fashom of Nimrom, and his gane is man.'

The dogs unw hrushed into the cover, with the appropriate ensonragement from the hunters: all was himiness, hastle, and activity. My consil:s were som tom much interested in the business of the murning to take any firrther notice of me, unless that I overheard bickinn the horse jockey, whisper to Wilfred the fool, 'Look thou, an our French cousin be nat off a' first burst.'

To which Wilfred answered, 'Like enow, for he has a queer ontlandish binding on 's castor.'
Thorncliff, lowever, who in his rude way seened not absolutely insensible to the beauty of his kinswoman, appeared determined to keep, us eompany nore elosely than his brothers, perhapss to watch what passen betwixt Miss Vernon and me, perhaps to enjoy my expected mishaps in the chase. In the last partienlar lie was disappointed. After beating in vain for the greater part of the morning, a fox was at length fomme, who led us a clase of two hours, in the course of which, notwithstanding the ill-onened French binding npou my hat, I sustained my character as a horsenam to the alluiration of my macle and Miss Vernon, and the secret disappointnent of those who expected me to disgrate it. Reynard, however, proved to wily for his pursiners, and the hounls were at fanlt. I conld at this time chserve in Miss Vernon's mamer an impatience of the clove attendance which we received from Thorneliff ()sbaldistone ; and, as that active-spirited young lady never hesitated at takinn the readiest means to gratify any wish of the monent, she swiol to him, in a tone of reproach - 'I wonder, 'Thornie, what keeps you dangling at my horse's ernpper all this morning, when yon know che earths above Woolverton mill are not stopt.'
'I know no such an thing then, Miss Die, for the miller swore himself as black as night that he stopt them at twelve o'elock, midnight that was.'

- O fie upon you, Thornie, would you trust to a miller's word ? and these earths, too, where we lost the fox three times this season, and you on your grey mare that ean gallop there and hack in ten minutes :'
'Well, Miss Die, I'se go to Woolverton then, and if the earths are not stopt I'se radille Dick the miller's bones for him.'
'Do, my dear 'Thornie, horsewhip the raseal to purpose: via-Hy away, and alont it '- Thorneliff went off at the gallop - 'or get horsewhipt yourself, which will serve my purpose just as well. I must teacli them all discipline and oberlience to th. word of eommanl. I am raising a reximent, you must know. Thornie shall be my sergeant-miejor, Dickion nyy riding-master. aud Wilfred, with his deep dhlb-it-luht tones, that speak but three syllables at a time, my kettle-drummer.'
'And Rashleigh?'
'Rashleigh shall be my seout-master.'
'And will yon find no employment for me, most lovely colonel?'
'You shall have the choice of being paymaster or plundermaster to the corps. But see how the dogs puzzle about there. Come, Mr. Frank, the scent's cold; they won't recover it there this while ; follow me, I have a view to show you.'

And in fact she cantered up to the top of a gentle hill, commani $\quad$ an extensive prospect. Casting her eyes around, to see th... no one was near us, she drew up her horse beleath a few birch-trees, which screened us from the rest of the hunt-ing-field. 'Do you see yon peaked, brown, heathy hill, having something like a whitish speck upon the side?'
'Terminating that long ridge of broken moorish uplands? I see it distinctly.'
'That whitish speek is a rock called Hawkesmore Crag, and Hawkesmore Crag is in Scotland.'
'Indeed ? I did not think we had been so near Scotland.'
'It is so, I , assure you, and your horse will carry you there in two hours.'
'I shall hardly give him the trouble; why, the distance must be eighteen miles as the crow flies.'
' You may have my mare, if you think her less blown. I say, that in two hours you may be in Scotland.'
'And I say, that I have so little desire to be there that if my horse's head were over the Border, I would not give his tail the trouble of following. What should I do in Scotland?'
' Provide for your safety, if I must speak plainly. Do you understand me now, Mr. Frank ?'
'Not a whit ; you are more and more oracular.'
'Then, on my word, you ei her mistrust me most unjustly, and are a better dissembler than Rashleigh Osbaldistone himself, or you know nothing of what is imputed to you; and then no wonder you stare at me 'n that grave manner, which I can scarce see without laughing.'
'Upon my word of honour, Miss Vernon,' said I, with an impatient feeling of her childish disposition to mirth, 'I have not the most distant conception of what yon mean. I am happy to afford you any subject of amusement, but I ain quite ignorant in what it consists.'
'Nay, there 's no sound jest after all,' said the young lady, composing herself, 'only one looks so very ridiculous when he is farrly perplexed; hut the matter is serious enough. Do you know one Moray, or Morris, or some such name?'
'Not that I can at present recollect.'

ROB ROY

'Think a moment. Did you not lately travel with somebody of such a name?'
'The only inan with whom I travelled for any length of time was a fellow whose soul seemed to lie in his portmanteau.'
'Then it was like the soul of the licentiate Pedro Garcias, which lay among the ducats in his leathern purse. That man has beell robbed, and he has lodged an information against you, as connected with the violence done to him.'
'You jest, Miss Vernon ?'
' I do not, I assure yon; the thing is an absolute fact.'
' And do you,' said I, with strong indignation, which I did not attempt to suppress - ' do you suppose me capable of meriting such a charge?'
' You would call me out for it, I suppose, had I the acivantage of being a man. You may do so as it is if you like it ; I can shoot flying as well as leap a five-barred gate.
'And are colonel of a regiment of horse besides,' replied I, reffecting how idle it was to be angry with her. 'But do explain the present jest to me!'
'There 's no jest whatever,' said Diana; ' you are accused of robbing this man, and my uncle believes it as well as I did.'
'Upon my honour, I an greatly obliged to my friends for their good opinion!'
' Now do not, if you can help it, snort and stare and snuff the wind, and look so exceedingly like a startled horse. 'There's no such offence as you suppose; you are not charged with any petty larceny or vulgar felony, by no means. This fellow was carrying money from government, both specie and bills to pay the troops in the north; and it is said he has been also robbed of some despatches of great consequence.'
' And so it is high treason, then, and not simple robbery, of which I ain accused?'
'Certainly ; which, you know, has been in all ages accounted the crime of a gentlenan. You will find plenty in this country, and one not far from your elbow, who think it a merit to distress the Hanoverian government by every means possible.'
' Neither my politics nor my morals, Miss Vernon, are of a description so accommodating.'
'I really begin to believe that yon are a Presbyterian and Hanoverian in good earnest. But what do you propose to do?',
'Instantly to refute this atrocious calumny. Before whom,' I asked, 'was this extraordinary accusation laid?'
'Before old Squire Inglewood, who had sufficient unwilling.
ness to receive it. He sent tidings to my uncle, I suppose, that he might smaggle yon away into Seotland, out of reach of the warrant. But my unele is sensible that his religion and old predilections render him obnoxious to government, and that, were he caught playing booty, he would be disarmed, and probably dismounted - which would be the worse evil of the two as a Jacobite, Papist, and suspected person.' ${ }^{1}$
'I can eonceive that, sooner than lose his hunters, he would give up his nephew.'
'His nephew, nieees, sons, daughters if he had them, and whole generation,' said Diana; 'therefore trust not to him, even for a single moment, but make the best of your way before they can serve the warrant.'
'That I shall certainly do ; but it shall he to the house of this Squire Inglewood. Which way does it lie?'
' About five miles off, in the low ground behind yonder plantations; you may see the tower of the clock-house.'
'I will be there in a few minutes;', said I, putting my horse in motion.
'And I will go with you and show you the way,' said Diana, putting her palfrey also to the trot.
'Do not think of it, Miss Vernon,' I replied. 'It is not permit me the freedom of a friend - it is not proper, scareely even delieate, in yon to go with me on such an errand as I an now upon.'
'I understand your meaning,' said Miss Vernon, a slight blush erossing her haughty brow ; 'it is plainly spoken,' and after a moment's pause she added, 'and I believe kindly meant.'
'It is indeed, Miss Vernon ; can you think me insensible of the interest you show me, or ungrateful for it l' said I, with even more earnestness than I could have wished to express. 'Yours is meant for true kindhess, shown best at the hour of need. But I must not, for your own sake, for the chance of miseonstruetion, suffer you to pursue the chictates of your generosity ; this is so public an occasion, it is ahnost like venturing into an open court of justice.'
'And if it were not alnost, but altomether entering into an open court of justice, do yon think 1 wonld not go there if I thought it right, and wished to protect a friend! You have no one to stand by you, you are a strager ; and here, in the outskirts of the kingdon, country justices do odd things. My unele has no desire to embroil himself in your affair ; Rashleigh

[^26]is absent, and, were he here, there is no knowing which side he might take; the rest are all more stupid and hrintal one than another. I will go with yon, and I ilo not fear being able to serve yon. I am nu fine lady, to be terrified to death with law books, hard words, or bis wigs.'
'But, my dear Miss Vernon ,
'But, my dear Mr. Francis, le patient and quiet, and let me take my own way; for when I take the lit betwcen my teeth there is no briclle will stop me.'
Flattered with the interest so lovely a creature seemed to take in my fate, yet vexed at the ridiculons appearance I should make by carrying a girl of cighteen along with me as an adrocate, and seriously concerned for the misconstruction to which her motives might be exposed, I endeavoured to combat her resolution to accompany me to Squire Inglewoorl's. The selfwilled girl told me romully that my dissmations were absolutely in vain; that she was a trie Vernon, whom no eonsideration, nut even that of being able to do but little to assist him, sloould induce to abandun: a friend in distress; and that all I could sity on the subject might be very well for pretty, well-edncated, well-behaved misses from a town boarding-school, bint did mot apply to her, who was accustomed to s ind nobody's opinion but her own.

While she spoke thus, we were advancing hastily towards Huglewood Place, while, as if to divert me from the task of farther remonstrance, she drew a ludicrous picture of the magistrate and his clerk. Inglewood was, according to her description, a white-washed Jacolite, that is, one who, having been long a nonjuror, like most of the other gentlencu of the country, had lately qualified himself to act as a justice ly taking the oaths to government. 'He had done sol'. she said, 'in compliance with the urgent request of must of his brother squires, who saw with regret that the palladinm of silvan sport, the game-laws, were likely to fall into disisise for want of a magistrate who would cuffirce them: the nearest acting justice being the Mayor of Newcastle, ant hic, as heing rather inclined to the consmmption of the game when properly dressed than to its preservation when alive, was more partial, of course, to the canse of the poacher than of the sportsman. Resolving, therefore, that it was expelient some one of their number should sacrifice the seruples of Jacolitical loyalty to the good of the community, the Northamhrian emntry gentlemen imposed the duty on Luglewool, who, being very inert in most of his feelings and sentiments, might, they thought, comply with any political creed without much repugnance. Having thins procured the body of justice, they proceeded, continued Miss Vernon, 'to attach to it a clerk, ly way of soul, to direct and animate its movenuents. Accordingly, they got a sharp Newcastle attorney called Jobson, who, to vary my metaphor, finds it a good thing enough to retail justice at the sign of Squire Inglewood, and, as his own emoluments depund on the quantity of business which he transacts, he hooks in his principal for a great deal more employnent in the justice linc than the honest squire had ever bargained for; so that no apple-wife within the circuit of ten miles can settle her account with a costermonger without an audience of the reluctant Justice and his alert clerk, Mr. Joseph Jobson. But the most ridiculons scenes occur when affairs come before him, like our business of to-day, having any colouring of politics. Mr. Joseph Jobson - for which, 10 donbt, he has his own very sufficient reasons - is a prodigious zealot fur the Protestant religion, and a great friend to the present establishuent in church and state. Now his principal, retaining a sort of instinctive attachment to the opinions which he professed openly until he relaxed his political creed, with the patriotic view of enforcing the law against unauthorised destroyers of black-game, grouse, partridges, and hares, is peculiarly embarrassed when the zeal of his assistant involves hin in judicial proceedings connected with his earlier faith; and, instead of seconding his zeal, he seldom fails to oppose to it a double dose of indolence and lack of exertion. And this inactivity does not by any means arise from actual stupidity. On the contrary, for one whose principal delight is in eating and drinking, he is an alert, joyous, and lively old soul, which makes his assumed dulness the more diverting. So you may see Jobson on such occasions, like a bit of a broken-down blood-tit condemned to drag an overloaded cart, puffing, strutting, and spluttering to get the Justice put in motion, while, though the wheels groan, creak, and revolve slowly, the great and preponderating weight of the vehiclc fairly frustrates the efforts of the willing quadruped, and prevents its being brought into a state of actual progression. Nay more, the unfortunate pony, I nuderstand, has becn heard to complain that this same car of jnstice, which he finds it so hard to put in motion on some occasions, can on others run fast enourg down hill of its own accord, dragging his reluctant self backwards along with it, when anything can be done of service to Squire Inglewood's quondan friends. And then Mr. Jobson talks hig about rejorting his principal to the Secretary of State for the Home Department, if it were not for his particular regard and friendship for Mr. Inglewood and his fanily.'
vol. Ir --5

ROB ROY

As Miss Veruon concluded this whimsical description, we found ourselves in front of lnglewood Place, a handsome though old-fashioned building, which showed the consequence of the family.

CHAP'TER VIII

> -Sir,' quoth the Lawyer, ' not to flatter ye, You have na good auil fiir a battery As heart could wish, and neell not shame The promdest man alive to claim.'

Butler.

OUR horses were taken by a servant in Sir Hildebrand's livery, whom we fomm in the conrtyarl, and we entered the honse. In the entrince hall I was somewhat surprised, and my fair emmanion still more so, when we met Kashleigh Osbahlistone, who conld not help showing equal womder at our rencoutre.
'Rashleigh,' said Miss Vemon, without giving him time to ask any question, 'you have heard of Mr. Vraneis Osbaldistme's affair, and you have been talking to the Justice alumit it?'
'Certainly,' said Rashleigh, composedly, 'it has been my business here. I have been endenvouring,' he said, with a bow to me, 'to render my consin what service I can. But I am sorry to meet him here.'

- As a friend and relation, Mr. Osbaldistone, you ought to have been sorry to have met me anywhere else, at a time when the eharge of my reputation resuined me to be on this spot as soon as possible.'
'True; but, judging from what my father said, I should have supposed a short retreat into Scotland, just till matter: should be smoothed over in a quiet way

I answered with warmeth, 'Ihat I had no prudential measure: to observe, and desired to have nothing smoothed over ; on the contrary, I wats come to inguire into a rascally ealumny, which I was determined to probe to the bottom.'
'Mr. Francis Osbaldistone is an immoeent man, Rashleigh,' said Miss Vernon, 'ind he demands an investigation of the charge against him, and I intend to smpport him in it.'
'You do, my pretty cousin? I should think, now, Mr.

Francis Osbaldistone was likely to be as effectually, and rather more delicately, supported ly my presence than by yours.'
'0 certuinly' ; but two heals are letter thm one, you know.'
'Especially such a heme as yoms, my pretty bie,' ndvancing and taking her hund with a faniline fondness which mude me think him fifty times, nylier than mature lmad made him. She led him, however, in few steps aside; they conversed in an under voice, mid she appeared to insist npon some request, which he was mawilling or mable to comply with. I never saw so strong a contrust letwixt the expression of two faces. Miss Vermon's from being earnest bectune mugry. Her eyes and eheeks becane more minuted, her colour mounted, she elenched her little hand, mul, stamping on the gromud with her tiny foot, seemed to listen with a mixture of contempt mul indignation to the apologies which, fiom lis look of civil deferenee, his eomposed num respect ful smile, his hoody rather drawing back than advanced, and other signs of look anul person, I eoneluded him to be pronting out it her feet. At length she thung away from him, with 'I "rill have it so.'
'It is not in my power, there is nup possihility of it. Wonld you think it, Mr. Osbatdistone?' said he, aldressing me -
'Yon are not mad ?' said she, interrupting him.
'Would you think it?' said he, without attendiug to her hint. 'Miss Veruon insists not only that I kuow your inmocenee - of whieh, indeed, it is imponsible for any one to be more eonvinced - but that I must also be aequainted with the real perpetrators of the ontrage on this fellow; if, indeen, sueh an outrage has been committed. Is this reasonable, Mr. Osbaldistone? ${ }^{\text {' }}$
'I will not allow any appeal to Mr. Osbaldistone, Rushleigh,' said the young lady ; 'he does not know, as I do, the incredible extent and acenracy of yonr information on all juints.'
'As I am a gentlenan, you do me more hnimur than 1 deserve.'
'Justiee, Rashleigh, only justice ; and it is only justice which I expeet at your hands.'
'You are a tyrant, Diana,' he answered, with a sort of sigh - 'a capricious tyrant, and rule your friends with a rod of irom. Still, however, it shall be as yon desire. But you onght not to be here, you know you ought not; you must return with me.'
Then turning from Diana, who seemed to stand mulecilled, he came up to me in the most frieully mamer, and said, ' Do not donbt my interest in what regards you, Mr. Osbaldistone.

If I leave you just at this moment, it is only to act for your advantage. But you must use your influence with your cousin to return ; her presence cannot serve you, and must prejudice herself.'
'I assure you, sir,' I replied, 'you cannot be more convinced of this than I; I have urger Miss Vernon's return as anxiously as she would permit me to do.'
'I have thought on it,' said Miss Vernon, after a pause, 'and I will not go till I see you saie out of the hands of the Philistines. Cousin Rashleigh, I daresay, uneans well; but he and I know each other well. Rashleigh, I will not go. I know,' she added, in a more soothing tone, ' my being here will give you more motive for speed and exertion.
'Stay, then, rash, obstinate girl,' said Rashleigh ; 'you know but too well to whom you trust'; and, hastening out of the hall, we heard his horse's feet a minute afterwards in rapid motion.
'I'lhank Heaven, he is gone!' said Diana. 'And now, let us seek out the Justice.'
' Had we not better call a servant ?'
' 0 , by no means; I know the way to his den. We must burst on him suddenly ; follow me.'
I did follow her accordingly, as she tripped up a few gloomy steps, traversed a twilight passage, and entered a sort of anteroom, hung round with old maps, architectural elevations, and genealogical trees. A pair of folding-doors opened from this into Mr. Inglewood's sitting apartment, fron which was hearl the fag-end of an old ditty, chanted by a voice which had been in its day fit for a jolly bottle-song.

> O, in Skipton-in-Craven, Is never a haven, But many a day foul weather; And he that would say A pretty girl nay,
> I wish for his cravat a tether.'
'Hey day !' said Miss Vermon, 'the genial Justice must have dined already ; I did not think it had been so late.'
It was even so. Mr. Inglewood's appetite having been sharpened by his official investigations, he had ante-dated hi.meridian repast, having dined at twelve instead of one o'clock, then the general dining hour in England. The various occurrences of the morning occasioned our arriving onme time after this hour, to the Justice the most important (i) the four-andtwenty, and he had not neglected the interval.
'Stay you here,' said Diama; 'I know the house, and I will call a servant ; your sudden apparmice might ntartle the old gentleman even to choking'; and she exconped from me, leaving ne uncertuin whether $I$ onght to advince or retrent. It was impossible for me not to hear some part of what pussed within the dinner apartment, and particnlarly neveral mpelogies for declining to sing, expressed in a dejectel croaking voice, the tones of which, I conceived, were not cntirely new to me.
'Not sing, sir 1 by our Lady ! but yon must. What ! you lanve cracked ny silver-mounted coern-mut of sack, and tell me that you cannot sing! Sir, sack will make a cat sing, mud spenk too; so up with a merry stave, or trnudle yourself out of my loors. Do you think you are to take up all my valuable time with your d-d declarations and then tell me you cannot sing?
'Your worship is perfectly in rule,' said another voice, which, from its pert conceited accent, might he that of the clerk, 'mund the party misist be conformable; he hath camet written on his face in court hand.'
'Up with it, then,' said the Justice, 'or, hy St. Christopher, you shall crack the cocou-nut full of snlt-nind-water, according to the statute for such effect made and provided.'
Thus exhorted and threatened, my quonlam fellow-travellor, for I could no longer donbt that he was the recustut in question, uplifted, with a voice similar to that of a criminal singing his last psalm on the scaffold, a most doleful stave to the follow. ing effect :
> 'Good people all, I pray give ear, A woeful story you shall hear, "T is of a robber as stont ns ever Bade a true man stand and deliver. With his foolle doo fa loodle loo.
> - This knave, inost worthy of a corrl, Being arm'd with pistol and with sword, Twixt Kensington and Brentford then Did boldly stop six honest mene. With his foodle doo, ett.
> - These honest men did at Brentford dine, Having drank each man lis pint of wiue, When this lold thief, with wany eurres, Did say, You dogs, your lives or purreses. With his foodle doo, ete.

I question: if the honest men whose misfortme is commemorated in this pathetic ditty were more startled at the appearance of the bohl thief thme the somgnter was at mine ; for, tired of waiting for some one to annollice nue, mad finding my situation as a listener rather uwkward, ! presentel myself to the compmy just ns my friend, Mr. Morrix, fir sumb, it neems, was his mane, was uplifting the filth stave of his dolefiul ballad. The high tone with which the tune started died awny in a gunver of emistermation on finting hiniself so near one whove clmaracter he supposed to be little less sumpieions than that of the hero of his madrigal, mud he remained silent, with a month gaping as if I had brought the Gorgon's heul int my hand.

HOB HOM:

The Juntice, whose eyes had chosed muler the inthence of the som niferoms lullatiy of the song, started up in his chair as it smdenly censed, mid stared with womler nt the muexpected mddition which the emmpuny had received while his organs of sight were in abeynuce. The elerk, as 1 conjectured him to be from hix nppearance, was nlso eommoved ; for, sitting opposite to Mr. Morris, that honest gentlenunis terror communnicated itself to him, though he wotted not why.

I broke the silence of surprise occasinned hy my abrupt entrance. 'My nume, Mr. Inglewoul, is l'rancis Oshaldistone; I inderstand that some sermmalrel has brought a complaint before ym, charging !ue with being concerned in a loss which he says, he has sustained.'
'Sir,' said the Justice, sonewhat peevishly, 'these are matters I never enter upon after dimer ; there is a time fir everything, and a jnstice of peace must ent as well as other fulks.'
The goorlly person of Mr. Inglewionl, by the way, seemed by nue mems to have sutfiered by any finsts, whether in the service of the law on of religion.
'I hey parime for mall-timed visit, sir; but as my repmention is concerned, and as the dimer appears to he conchuled -.
'It is not eoncluded, sir,' replied the magistrate : 'man requires digestion as well as food, and I protest I cammothave benefit from my victuals muless I am allowed two hours of quiet leisure, internixed with harmless mirth and a monderate circulation of the bottle.

- If your hammer will firgive nue, said Mr. Jobsim, who hat prowheed and arrimged his writing implenents in the hrind space that our conversation alliorded, 'as this is a case of felony, mad the gentleman seems something impatient, the charge is contron mecrem domini weys:
' $\mathrm{D}-11$ dominie regis!' said the inmatient Justice : 'I hope it 's un treason to say mo ; but it 'x enomgh to make one matl to be worried in this way. Have I a moment of my life yiliet for warrunte, orders, diroctions, ates, bails, lumils, aml recognivannees? I prononice to, yon, Mr. Jobson, that I shatil semel yon mind the justiceship to the levil one of those dajw.
- Your honour will consider the dignity of the oflice me of the quormon and cuntow rofulomnu, an oflive of which Nir Filward Coke wisely suith, "Ilhe whole Christime worhl hath not the like of it, so it be dily executenl."
'Well,' said the Justice, partly reconciled by this enhasinn! on the dignity of his sitnation, mal gnlping down the rest of his diswatisfaction in a huge bmoper of claret, let us to this gear then, mad get rid of it as fiast as we can. Here yon, sin. yon, Morris - yon, knight of the surowfin (onntenance - is this Mr: Francis Osbaldistone the gentlenatn whon yon eharge with being art and purt of folony?'
'I, sir I' rephed Morris, whose scattered wits had hardly yot reassembled themselves. 'I charge nothing - I say mothing uganst the gentlenman.'
"Then we dixmiss your comphint, sir, that is all, unl a minl riddance, Pissh about the bottle. Irr. Oshuldistome, help yourself.'

Johson, however, was determined that Morris shomlil mot back out of the scrape so easily. What do yon mean, Mr. Morris? Here is your own leclaration, the ink scarce dhied, and you womld retract it in this scandalons manner:'
'How do I know,' whispered the uther, in a tremnlons tome, 'how many rognes are in the honse to back him? I have renil of snch things in Johnson's Lieves of the Ilighneroymon. I protest the door opens , kieps "! ther Mighurriymon. I
And it did open, mad Biana Vernon entered. 'Yon keep fine order here, Justice ; nut a servant to be seen or heard of.'
'Ah!' said the Jnstice, starting ul with an alacrity which showed that he was not su mgrossed by his devotions to 'lliemis or Comus as to forget what was dhe to beanty - 'ah, ha! Die Vernon, the heath-bell of Cheviut and the blossonn of the Border, come to see how the whl bachehor keepui lonse? Art welcome, girl, as Howens in May:'
'A fine, open, hospitable honse yon do keep, Jnstice, that must be allowed; not a soml to miswer a visitor.
'Ah! the knaves, they reckoned themselves secme of me for a couple of hours. But why did you not come carlicer? Your cousin Rashleigh dined here. and ran away like a poltroon after the first huttle was out. But you have not dined ; we 'll lave something nice and ladylike, sweet and pretty like yourself, tossed up in a trice.'
'I may eat a crust in the ante-room before I set out,' answered Miss Veruon - ' I have had a long ride this morning; but I can't stay long, Justice. I came with my cousin, Frank' Osbaldistone, there, and I must show him the way back again to the Hall, or he 'll lose himself in the wolds.'
'Whew! sits the wind in that quarter?' inquired the Justice.
'She show'd him the way, and she show'd him the way, She show'd him the way to woo.

What! no luck for old fellows, then, my sweet bud of the wilderness?'
' None whatever, Squire Inglewood; but if you will be a good kind Justice, and despatch young Frank's business, and let us canter home again, I'll bring my uncle to dine with yon next week, and we 'll expect merry doings.'
'Aud you shall find them, my pearl of the Tyne. Zookers, lass, I never envy these young fellows their rides and scampers unless when you come across me. But I must not keep you just now, I suppose ? I am quite satisfied with Mr. Francis Osbaldistone's expianation ; here has been some nistake which can be cleared at greater leisure.'
'Pardon me, sir,' said I, 'but I have not heard the nature of the accusation yet.'
'Yes, sir.' said the clerk, who, at the appearance of Miss Vernon, hac , 'en up the matter in despair, but who picked up) courage to press farther investigation on finding hiimself sulpported from a quarter whence assuredly he expected no backing - 'yes, sir, and Dalton saith, "That he who is apprelended as a felon shall not be discharged upon any man's discretion, but shall be held either to bail or commitment, paying to the clerk of the peace the usual fees for recognizance or conmitment."'
I'he Justice, thus goaded on, gave me at length a few words of explanation.

It seems the tricks which I had played to this man Momis, had made a strong impression on his innagination; for I fomen] they had been arrayed against me in his cvidence, with all the exaggerations which a timorous and heated imagination comild suggest. It appeared also that, on the day he parted from me, he had been stopped on a solitary spot and eased of his beloved travelling companion, the portmanteau, by two men well momnted and armed, having their faces covered with vizards.
One of them, he conceivel, had much of my shape and air, and in a whispering conversation which took place betwixt the freebooters he hearl the other or, y to hmin the mame of Osbaldistonc. 'The declaration tither see fer'i: that, upon inquiring into the principles of the finuily so ne' sed, he, the said declarant, was informed that ti ey were of ti e worst description, the family, in all its memujs, !uviag been Papists and Jacobites, as he was given to understand by the dissenting dergyman at whose house he stopped after his rencontre, since the days of William the Conqueror.
Upon all and each of these weighty reasons he charged me with being accessory to the felony committed upon his person; he, the said declarant, then travelling in the special employment of government, and having charge of certain important papers, and also a large sum in specie, to be paid over, accordmeg to his instructions, to certain persons of official trust and importance in Scotland.
Having heard this extraordinary accusation, I replied to it, that the circumstances on which it was founded were such as could warrant no justice or magistrate in any attempt on my personal liberty. I admitted that I had practised a little upon the terrors of Mr. Morris while we travelled together, but in such trifling particulars as could have excited apprehension in no one who was one whit less timorous and jealous than himself. But I added, that I had never scen him since we parted, and if that which he feared had really come upon him, I was in no ways accessory to an action so unworthy of my character and station in life. That one of the robbers was called Osbaldistone, or that such a name was mentioned in the course of the conversation betwixt them, was a trifling circumstance, to which no weight was due. And concerning the disaffection alleged against me, I was willing to prove to the satisfaction of the Justice, the clerk, and even the witness himself, that I was of the same persuasion as his friend the dissenting clergyman; lad becn educaterl as a good subject in the principles of the Revolution, and as such now demanded the personal protection of the laws which had been assured by that great event.
The Justice fidgeted, took snuff, and seemed considerably embarrassed, while Mr. Attorncy Jobson, with all the volnbility of his profession, ran over the statute of the Ilhirty -Furr

ROB ROY

Edward III., by whieh jestiees of the peace are allowed to arrest all those whom they find by indictment or snspicion, and to put them into prison. The rogue even turned my own admissions against me, alleging that, since I had confessedly, upon my own showing, assmmed the bearing or deportment of a robber or malefactor, I had volmitarily subjected myself to the suspicions of which I complained, and brought myself within the compass of the act, having wilfully, clothed my enduct with all the colour and livery of guilt.'

1 combated both l.s arguments and his jargon with much indignation and scom, and observed, 'that I should, if necessary, produce the bail of my relations, which I conceived could not be refused withont subjecting the magistrate in a misdemeanour.'
' Parlon me, my good sir - parlon me,' said the insatiable clerk, 'this is a case in which neither bail nor mainprize can be reeeived, the felon who is liable to be committed on heavy grounds of suspicion not being replevisable under the statute of the 'Third of King Edward, there being in that aet an express exception of such as be charged of commandment or force, and aid of felony done'; and he hinted that his worship would do well to renember that such were no way replevisable by common writ, nor withont writ.

At this period of the conversation a servant entered and delivered a letter to Mr. Jobson. He had no sooner run it hastily over than he exclaimed, with the air of one who wished to appear much vexed at the interruptim, and felt the eonsequence attaehed to a man of multifarious avocations - 'Gool God! why, at this rate, I shall have neither time to attend to the public concerns nor my own - no rest - no quiet. I wish to Heaven another gentleman in our line would settle here!'
'God forbid!' said the Justice, in a tone of sotto roce deprecation: 'some of us have enough of one of the tribe.'
' 'This is a matter of life and death, if your worship pleases.'
'In God's name: no more justice business, I hope, said the alarmed magistrate.
'No - no,' replied Mr. Jobson, very consequentially. 'Old Gaffer Rutledge of Grime's Hill is subpona'd for the next world ; he has sent an express for Dr. Killdown to put in bail, another for me to arrange his worldly affairs.'
'Away with you, then,' sand Mr. Inglewood, hastily; 'his may not be a replevisable case under the statute, yon know, or Mr. Justice Death may not like the doctor for a main pernor or bailsman.'

ROB ROY

'And yet,' said Jobson, lingering as he moved towards the door, 'if my presence here be necessary - I conld make ont the warrant for committal in a moment, and the constable is helaw. And yon have heard,' he said, lowering his voice, 'Mr. Rashleigh's opinion -_ the rest was lost in a whisper.

The fustice replied alond, 'I tell thee no, man, no; we 'll fla nonght till thon return, man; $t$ is but a four-mile ride. Come, push the buttle, Mr. Morris. Don't be cast down, Mr. Osbaldistone. And you, my rose of the wilderness - one cup) of claret to refresh the bloom of your cheeks.'

Diana started, as if from a reverie, in which she appeared to have been plmged while we held this discussion. 'No, Justice, I slonld be atraid of transferring the bloon to a part of my' face where it would show to little advantage. But I will pledre you in a cooler beverage'; and, filling ag glass with water, she drank it hastily, while her hurried manner belied her assmmed gaiety.

I had not mmeh leisure to make remarks upon her demeanomr, however, being fill of vexation at the interference of fresh obstacles to an instant examination of the diseraceful and impertinent chare which was Ironght against me. But there was no moving the Jnstice to take tho matter up in absence of his clerk, an incident which grave him apparently as much pleasure as a holiday to a ss tool-hoy. He persisted in his endeavours to inspire jollity into a company the individuals of which, whether considered with reference to each other or to their respective situations, $w, \quad$ means inclined to mirth. - Come, Master Morris, you 'r the first man that's been robbed, I trow; grieving ne'er ironglit hack loss, man. And you, Mr. Frank Osbaldistonc, are not the first bully-boy that has said stand to a true man. 'There was Jack Winterfich, in my young days, kept the best compmy in the land - at horseraces and cock-fights who but he- hand and glove was I with Jack. Push the loottle, Mr: Morris, it's dry talking. Many quart bumpers have I eracked, and thrown many a merry main with poor Jack - good family, reenly wit, quick eye, as honest a fellow, barring the deed hedied We ll drink to lis memory, gentlemen. Poor Jack Winterficld: And since we talk of him, and of those sort of thingrs, and ince that d-d clerk of mine has taken his gibberish elsewher, und since we re smur mong ourselves, Mr. Osbaldistone, if you will have my hest alvier, I would take up, this matter - the law's hard, very severe, hamem poor Jack Winterfieh at York, deapite family comexions and great interest - all for easing a fat west-country grazier of the price of a few beasts. Now here is honest Mr. Morris has been frightened, and so forth. D-n it, man, let the poor fellow have back lis portmanteau and end the frolic at once.'

ROB ROY

Morris's eyes brightened up at this suggestion, and he began to hesitate forth an assurance that he thirsted for no man's blood, when I cut the proposed aceommodation short by resenting the Justiee's suggestion as an insult that went direetly to suppose me guilty of the very erime which I had eome to his house with the express intention of disavowing. We were in this awkward predicament when a servant, opening the door, announcel, ' A strange gentleman to wait upon lis honour'; and the party whom he thus deseribed entered the room without farther ceremony.

CHAPTER IX

> One of the thieves come back again! I'll stand close. He dares not wrong me now, so near the hollse, And call in vain 't is, till I see him offer it.

The Widow.

ASTRANGER!' eehoed the Justice ; 'not upion business, I trust, for I 'll be $\qquad$ ,'
His protcstation was cut short by the answer of the man himself. 'My business is of a nature somewhat onerons and particular,' said my acquaintance, Mr. Campbell, - for it was he, the very Scotchman whom I had seen at Northallerton, - 'and I must solieit your hononr to give instant and heedful consideration to it. I believe, Mr. Morris,' he added, fixing his eye on that person with a look of peculiar firmmess and almost ferocity - 'I believe ye ken brawly what I am - I belicve ye cannot have forgotten what passed at our last meeting on the road?' Morris's jaw dropped, his comntenance becance the colour of tallow, his teeth ehattered, and he gave visible signs of the utmost consternation. 'T'ake heart of grace, man,' saini Campbell, 'and dima sit elattering yonr jaws there like a pair of eastanets! I think there can be nae difficnlty in your telling Mr. Justiee that ye have seen me of yore, and ken me to be a evvalier of fortune and a man of honour. Ye ken fu' weel ye will be some time resident in my vieinity, when I may have the power, as I will possess the inclination, to do yon as goml a turn.'
'Sir - sir, I believe you to be a man of honour, and, as yon say, a man of fortme. Yes, Mr. Inglewood,' he addel, clearing his voiee, 'I really believe this gentleman to be so.'
'And what are this gentlenan's commands with me?' said the Justice, somewhat peevishly. 'One man iniroduces another, like the rhymes in the "House that Jack built," and I get company without either peace or conversation!'
'Both shall be yomrs, sir,' answered C'mupbell, 'in a brief period of time. I come to release your mind from a piece of troublesome chaty, not to make increment to it.'
'Body 0 ' me: then yon are weleme as ever Scot was to Enghand, and that's mot naying much; lout get on, man, let's liear what yon have got to say at onece.'
'I presime this gentlenan'. comtinned the North Briton, 'told yon there was a person of the name of Campbell with him when he had the mischance to lose his valise?'
'He has not mentioned such a name from begiming to end of the matter,' said the Justice.
'Ah! I conceive - I conceive,' replied Mr. Campbell. 'Mr. Morris was kindly afeared of committing a stranger into collision wi' the judicial forms of the conntry; but as I maderstand my evidence is necessary to the compurgation of ane honest gentleman here, Mr. Francis Osbaldistone, wha has been most unjustly suspected, I will dispense with the precantion. Ye will, therefore,' he added, aldressing Morris with the same determined look and accent, 'please tell Mr. Justice Inglewoorl whether we did not travel several miles together on the road, in consequence of your own anxions request and suggestion, reiterated ance and again, baith on the evening that we were at Northallerton, and there declined by me, but afterwards accepted, when I overtook ye ou the road near Cloberry Allers, and was prevailed on by you to resign my ain intentions of proceeding to Rothbury ; and, for my misfortune, to accompany you on your proposed route.'
'It's a melancholy truth,' answered Morris, holding down his head as he gave this gencral assent to the long and leading question which Campbell put to him, and seeming to acquiesee in the statement it contained with rueful docility.

- And I presume yon ce: also asseverate to his worship that no man is better qualified than I am to bear testimony in this case, seeing that I was by yon, and near you, constantly during the whole oceurrence?
'No man better . qualified, certainly,' said Morris, with a deep, and embarmassed sigh.
'And why the devil did yon not assist him then,' said the Justice, 'since, by Mr. Morris's accomit, there were but two robbers; so you were two to two, and yon are both stout likely men?'
'Sir, if it please your worship,' said Camphell, 'I have been all my life a man of peace and quietness, no ways given to broils or batteries. Mr. Morris, who belongs, as I miderstand, or hath belonged, to his Majesty's urmy, might have used his pleasure in resistanee, he travelling, as I also miderstand, with a great eharge of treasure ; but for me, who had lout my own small peculiar to defend, and who ann, moreover, a man of a pacific oceupation, I was muwilling to commit myself to hazard in the matter.'
I looked at Camphell as he nittered these words, and never recollect to have seen a more singular contrast than that between the strong daring sternmess expressed in his harsh teatures, and the air of composed meeknes, and simplicity which his language assmmed. There was evell a slight ironical smile lurking abont the corners of his month, whieh seemed, involmetarily as it were, to intimate his disdain of the quiet and pearefill eharacter which he thought preper to assimue, and which led me to entertain strange snspicions that his concem in the violenee done to Morris had been something very different from that of a fellow-sufferer, or ceen of a mere spectator.
Perhaps some sueh suspieions crossed the Justice's minul at the moment, for he exelaimel, as if by way of ejaculation, 'Body o' me ! but this is a strange story.'
The North Briton seemed to gress at what was passing in his mind; for he went on, with a change of manner and tone, dismissing from his comitenance some part of the hypocritical affeetation of humility which had made him ohnoxions to snspieion, and saying, with a more frank and meonstrained air, 'To say the truth, I am just ane o' those camy folks wha care not to fight but when they hate gotten something to fight firr, which did not chance to be my predieament when I fell in wi' these loons. But, that your worship may kimw that I am a person of good fanm and eharater, please to cast yonr eye over that billet.'
Mr. Inglewood took the paper from his hauls, and real half aloud, "These are to certify that the bearer, Rubert Cauphell of - of some place which I cumbt pronwune,' interjecten the Jnstiee, "is a person of goonl lineare and peaceable demeanomr, travelling towards Bugland on his own proper affinis, etc. ete. etc. Given muler our haml, at one Cistle of huser Invera-rara- Argyie.'
'A slight testimonial, sir, which I thought fit to impetrate from that worthy nobleman (here he raised his hand to his head, as if to touch his hat) Maccallum More.'
'MacCallum who, sir?' said the Jnstice.
'Whom the Southern call the Duke of Argyle.'

ROB ROY

'I know the Duke of Arryle very well to be a nobleman of great worth and distinction, and a true lover of his conntry. was me of those that stood by him in 1714, when he unhorsed the Duke of Marlborongh ont of his command. I wish we land more noblemen like him. He was an lonest 'I'ory in those days, and hand and glove with Ormond. And he has aceeded to the present government, as I have done myself, for the peace and quiet of his connt $s$; for I camot presime that great man to have been actnated, as violent folk's pretend, with the fear of losing his places and regiment. His testimonial, as you call it, Mr. Campleell, is perfectly satisfactory; and now, what have yon got to say to this matter of the rolliery?'
'Briefly this, if it please your worship: that Mr. Morris might as weel charge it against the bale yet to be born, or against myself even, as arainst this young gentleman, Mr. Oshaldistone ; for 1 an not only free to depone that the person for whom he towk him was a shorter man, and a thicker man, but also, for I thanced to oltain a glisk of his visage, as his fanse-face slipped aside, that he was a man of other features and complexion than those of this yomg gentlenan, Mr. Osbaldistone. And I believe,' he added, thrining round with a natural yet somewhat sterner air, to Mr. Morris, 'that the gentleman will allow I had better oppritmity to take corfnizance wha were present on that occasion than he, being, I believe, much the cooler $o^{\prime}$ the twa.'
' I agree to it, sir - I agree to it perfectly,' said Morris, shrinking back, as Campbell moved his chair towards him to fortify his appeal. 'And I incline, sir,' he added, addressing Mr. Inglewood, 'to retract my information as to Mr. Osbahlistone ; and I request, sir, yon will permit him, sir, to go about his business, and me to go abont mine also : your wurship nay have business to settle with Mr. Campbell, and I am rather in haste to be gone.'
' 'Then, there go the declarations,' said the Jnstice, throwing them into the fire. 'And now yon are at perfect liberty, Mr. Osbaldistone. And you, Mr. Morris, are set quite at yomr case.'
'Ay,' saill Camphell, eyeing Morris as he assented with a rueful grin te the doatice's olservations, 'much like the ease of a toad muder a paik of harrows. But fear notl:ing, Mr. Morris; you and I mann leave the honse thegither. I will see you sate - I hope you will wot doubt my honour when I say sae - to the next highway, and then we part company; and if we do not meet as friends in Seothand, it will be your ain fault.'
With such a lingering look of terror as the comdemmed criminal throws when he is informel that the cart awaits him, Morris arnse, but when on his legs appeared to hesitate. 'I te I thee, nam, fear :notling,' reiteratel Camphell ; I will keep my word with you. Why, thon sheep's heart, how du ye ken but we may can pick up some speerings of your valise, if ye will be amenable to gule comsel? Onr horses are realy. Bial the Jnstice fireweel, man, and -how your sonthern breeding.'
Morris, thus exhorted and encomaged, towk his leave, muler the escort of Mr. Camphell, but apparently new seriples anul terrors had struck him leffire they left the homse, for I heart Camphell reiterating assurances of safety and protection ans they left the ante-room - ' By the som of my Mooly, man, thom 'rt as safe as in thy father's kail-yarl. 'Zumudy: that a chield wi' sic: a black beard shanld hae nae mair heart that a hen-partridge ! Come on wi' ye, like a frank fallow, anes and fir aye.'
The voices died away, and the subsernent tranpling of their horses anmounced to us that they had left the mansion of Jus. tice Inglewood.

The joy which that worthy magistrate received at this easy conclusion of a matter which threatened him with some tronble in his judicial capacity, was somewhat danped hy reflection on what lis elerk's views of the transaction might be at his return. ' Now I shall have Johson un my shoulders about these a - 1 papers; I doubt I shomld yot have destrused them, after all. But lang it, it is only puying his fees, aull that will make all sumoth. Aud now, Miss Die Vernom, though I have litherated all the others, I intend to sign a writ for committing yon to the custoly of Mother Blakes, my old honsekeeper, for the evening, and we will send for my neighbur, Mrs. Musprave, and the Miss Dawkins, and your consins, and have old Cubs the fiddler, and be as merry as the maids; and Frank ()sbaldistone and I will have a carouse that will make us fit company for you in half an hour.'
'Thanks, most worshipful,' returned Miss Vernon ; 'but, as matters stand, we must retum instantly to ().shaldistome Hall, where they do not know what has becone of ns, and relieve my mucle of his anxiety on my consin's account, which is just the same as if one of lis own sons were concerned.'
'I believe it truly;' said the Justice ; 'for when his eldest son, Archie, came to a band culd, in that unlucky affair of Sir

John Fenwick's, wh Hildebrand uned to halloo ont his name as readily as any of the remaining six, and then eomplain that he conld not recollect which of his sons had leen hanged. So pray hasten home and relieve his paternal solisitude, since go youn must. But, hark thee hither, heath-blossom,' he snifl. pulling her towards lim by the hand, and in a good-hmmoured tone of almonition, 'another time let the law take its comrse. without putting your pretty finger into her old nusty pie, ail full of fragnents of law giblerish- Prench and dog-Latin. Anil, Dio, my benuty, let young fellows show each other the way throngh the mowrs, in case you should lose your own road while yon are pointing out theirs, my pretty Will o' the Wisp.'

With this admonition he saluted and dismissed Miss Vernon, and took an equally kinl farewell of me.
'Thon seems to be a good tight lad, Mr. Frank, and I remember thy father too ; le was my playfellow at school. Llark thee, lad, ride early at night, and don't swagger with clance passengers on the king's lighoway. What, man! all the king's liege subjects are not bonnd to understand joking, and it's ill eracking jests on matters of felony. Aull here's poor Die Vernon too - in a manner alone and deserted on the face of this wide earth, and left to ride and rim and scamper at her own silly pleasure. Thou mus:" he careful of Die, or, egad, I will turn a young follow arrin si, purpose, and fight thee myself, althongh I must own it wonid be a great deal of tronble. And now, get ye both gone, and leave me to my pipe of tobaceo and my meditations ; for what says the song -

> The Indim leaf doth briefly hurn;
> So doth man's strength to weakness turn;
> The fire of youth extiuguish'd ${ }^{\prime}$ nuite, Comes age, like embers, dry and white.

> Think of this as you take tobacco. ${ }^{1}$

I was much pleased with the gleams of sense aud feeling which escaped from the Justice through the vapours of sloth and self-indulgence, assured him of my respect to his adnonitions, and took a friendly farewell of the honest magistrate and his hospitable mansion.
We fonnd a repast prepared for us in the aate-room, which we partook of slightly, and rejoined the same servant of Sir Hildebrand who land taken our horses at our entrance, and who had been directed, as he informed Niiss Vernon, by Mr. Rash-

[^27]leigh, to wait and attend un'in ins home. We rosle a little way in silence, for, to saly trith, my mind was tow murh bewildered with the events of the norning to permit me to le the first to lireak it. At lemgth Miss Vernom exchamed, as if giving vent to her own reflections, 'Well, Rushleinh is a man to be feared and wondered at, and all bint loved: he does whatever ho pleases, and makes all uthers his puphets: has a player reanly to perform every part whinh lee inagnes, ann an invention und realiness which snpply experlichts for eviry emergency:
'Yon think, then, salifl Inswering rathor to her menning than to the express womls ale mate nse off, 'that this Mr. Campbell, whose appearmace was su upprortmee, anl who trussed np and carried off my aconser as a falcon truses a partringe, was an agent of Mr. Rastileigh Oslalilistone?'
'I do gness as mach,' replied Dinan, 'und whew lly snspect, moreover, that he womld larrlly lave apmeared sn very mond in the nick of time if I han! not happened to meet Rashleigh iil the hall at the Justice's.'
'In that case my thanks are chiefly due tu you, my fair preserver.'
'T'o be sure they are, returned Dianit; 'and pray, suppose them paid, and aceepted with a gracions smilo, fin' l lio mot care to be troubled with hearing them in grome earnest, mul an mineh more likely to yawn than to behave hecoming. In short, Mr. Frunk, I wished to serve ymi, anl I have fintmately been able to do so, and have omly bue favome to ask in retmra, and that is, that yon will saly lun mure ahont it. But who comes liere to meet ins, "hlomly with spmring fiery-rel with haste"? It is the smbordinate man of law, I think; mo less than Mr. Jiseplh Johson.'

And Mr: Joseph Johson it proved to he, in great haste, and, as it speedily appeared, in most extreme lail lommonr. Ile wime up to ns and stopmed his horse, as we were abmit to pass with a slight salutation.
'So, sir-so, Miss Vemon - ay, I see well enomgh low it is: bail put in during my absence, I suppuse? I whonlol like to know who drew the recogrizance, that a all: If his worship uses this form of procedure often, I alvise him to set another elerk, that's all, for I whall certainly demit:'
'Or suplose lie get his present clerk stitched to his sleeve, Mr. Jobson,' said Diana, 'womld mot that do as well? And pray how does Famer Ratledre, Mr; Juhmon? I lupe you found him able to sign, seal, and deliver?'

This question seemed greatly to inerease the wrath of the man of law. He lowkerl at Miss Vernon with suth an air of spite anid resentment as laid me mider a strong temptation to knock him off his home with the butt of my whip, which I only snppressed in consideration of his insignificance.
'Parmer Rutleike, ma'mu!' widl the clerk, so som as his indignation premitted him tos articnlate, 'Farmer Rutledge is in as haudvone enjoyment of his health as you are ; it's all a bum, ma'nu- all a hamborozle and a bite that affair of his ill. ness; and if, you did not know as much before, you know it now, ma'mun.'
'La you there now:' replied Miss Vernom, with an affeeta. tion of extreme and simple wouder, 'sure you don't may so, Mr. Jobson? ${ }^{\prime}$
'But I do may so, ma'am,' rejoined the ineensed serihe ; 'and moreover I kny, that the olld miserly elonl-hreaker called me pettifogger - pettifogger, ma'am - mul suid 1 came to homt for a job, ma'am, which I lave no more right to have suid to me than any other gentleman of my profession, manan, especially as I ame elerk to the pence, having and holding said office under Trigesimn Neptimn Ileuriry Octrri, and Primn Giulielmi, the first of King Willinm, ma'am, of glorious and immortal memory - our . Immortal deliverer from Papists and pretenders, anil wooden sho,es and warnuing-puns, Miss Verumn.'
'Sad things, these woolen sloes and warming'pans,' retorted the yonug laly, who seemed to take plensure in augmenting his wrath ; 'anl it is a comfort yon don't seem to want a warming-pun at present, Mr. Jobson. I am afraid Gaffer Rutlenge has not confined his incivility to langunge. Are you suro he "lin not give you a beating?'
'Beating, ma'am:-no (very shortly); no man alive shall beat me, I promise you, ma'an.'
'That is according as you humpen to merit, sir,' said I: 'for your mole of speaking to this young laty is so mineconing that, if you do not elange your tone, I shall think it worth while to chastise you myselfi'
'Chastise, sir! and me, sir! Do you know whom you speak to, sir?'
'Yes, sir,' I replied; ' you say yourself you are eierk of peace to the connty ; and Gaffer Rutledge says yon are a pettifogger ; and in neither eapacity are you entitled to be impertinent to a young larly of fushion.

Miss Vernon lail her hand on my arm and exclained, 'Come,

Mr. Osbaldistone, I will have ne ussaults and hattery an Mr. Johson ; I ann not in sufficient charity with him to permit a simple tonch of your whip; why, he would live on it for a term at lemat. Besides, yon have alremly hurt his feelings sufficiently : you have called hime impertinent.
-I don't value his langmake, Misw,' suill the elerk, nomewhat crestfallen ; 'besides, impertinent is. not an actiomble word: lont pettifogger is shamler in the highest degree, and that 1 will make Gaffer lutledge know to his eont, mall all who malieionsly repeat the same to the breach of the public peace, and the taking away of my private gexs nane.
' Never mind that, Mr. Johmom,' suid Miss Vermen; 'yon know, where there is nothing, your own law allows that the king himelf must lose his rightes: and for the taking away of your goorl name, 1 pity the pror fellow whon gets it, and wish yon joy of losing it with all my heart.'

- Very well, ma'an, gond evening, ma'an! I have no more to say - only there are laws agrainst Papists, which it wonld be well for the land were they better execinted. There 's 'Third and Fourth Edward Vl., of antiphoners, miswals, prailes, proceessionals, manuals, legends, pies, portmasses, unit those that lave suleh trinkets in their possession, Miss Vernon ; and there 's smmmen. ing of Papists to take the onthe: and there are pemish reconant onviets mider the First of his present Majesty; ay, and there are penalties for hearing mass. Sce 'l'wenty-'Thirl of (Queen Slizabeth, and Third Janes 1., Chapter Twenty-Fifth. And there are estates to be registered, and deeds and wills to be enrolled, and double taxes to le made, according to the aets in that case made and provided $\qquad$ '
'See the new edition of the Statntes at Larre, published minder the careful revision of Juseph Jubson, Gent., Clerk of the P'eace,' said Miss Vernon.
'Also, and above all,' contimed Jobsen-- 'for I speak to your warning - you, Diana Vernon, spinstress, not leing a femme comurte, and being a convict popish reconsant, are hound to repair to your own dwelling, and that by the nearest way, moder penalty of being held felon to the king; and diligently to seek for passage at common ferries, and to tarry there but one ebb und flood; and unless yon can have it in such places, to walk every day into the water up to the kneev, assaying to pass over.'
'A sort of Protestait . penance for my Catholic errors, 1 suppose,' said Miss Vermon, langhing. 'Well, I thank you for the information, Mr. Jobson, and will hie ne home as fast as I can, and be a better honsekeeper in time coming. Good-night, my dear Mr. Jobson, thon mirror of clerical courtesy.'
'Good-night, ma'am, and remember the law is not to be trifled witl.'.

And we rode on our separate ways.
'There he goes for a troublesome mischief-making tool,' said Miss Vernon, as she. gave a glance after him ; 'it is hard that persons of birth and rank and estate should bo subjected to the offieial inıpertinence of such a paltry pickthank as that, merely for believing as the whole world believed not much above a hundred years aro ; for certainly our Catholie faith has the advantage of antiqnity at least.'
'I was much temptel to liave broken the raseal's head,' I replied.
'You would have acted very like a hasty yomng man,' said Miss Vernon; 'and yet, had my own hand been an ounce heavier than it is, I think I should have laid its weight upon him. Well, it does not signify complaining, but there are three things for which I an much to be pitied, if any one thought it worth while to waste any compassion upon me.'
'And what are these three things, Miss Vernon, may I ask ?'
'Will you promise me your deepest sympathy 'f I tell you?'
'Certainly ; can you donbt it?' I replied, elosing my horse nearer to hers as I spoke, with an expression of interest whieh I did not attempt to disgnise.
'Well, it is very seducing to be pitied, after all ; so here are my three gricvanees. In the first place, I an a girl and not a young fellow, and would be shut 11 , in a mad-honse if I did half the things that I have a mind to ; and that, if I had your happy prerogative of acting as you list, wonld make all the world mad with imitating and applanding me.'
'I can't quite afford you the synpathy yon expect inpon this score,' I replied; 'the misfortune is so general that it belongs to one half of the speeies; and the other half $\qquad$ ,'
'Are so much better cared for that they are jealons of their prerogatives,' interrupted Miss Vernon; 'I forgot you were a party interested. Nay, mid she, as I was going to speak, 'that soft smile is intended to be the prefiee of a very pretty compliment respecting the peculiar advantages which Die Vernon's friends and kinsimen enjoy by her being born one of their helots; but spare me the intterance, my good frienl, and let us try whether we shall agree better on the second count of my indictment against fortune, as that quill-driving puppy would call it. I belong to an oppressed sect and antiyuated religion, ant, instead of getting credit for my devotion, as is due to all good girls beside, my kind friend, Justice Ingle woorl, may send me to the homse of correction, merely for worshipping (forl in the way of my ancestors, and say, as old Pembroke did to the Abbess of Wilton, ${ }^{1}$ when he nsmped her convent and establishment, "(90 sipin, yoin jade - go spun.""
'IThis is not a cureless evil,' said I, gravely. 'Comsult some of our learued divines, or consult your own excellent understanding, Miss Vernou, and surely the particulars in which our religions creed differs from that in which yon have been educated $\qquad$ ,
'Hush!' said Diana, placing her forefinger on her mouth, -'hush! no more of that. Forsake the faith of my gallant fathers: I would as soon, were I a man, forsake their bamer when the tide of battle pressed harlest against $i$ t, and turn, like a hireling recreant, to join the vietorions enemy.'
'I honour your spirit, Misis Vernon; and as to the inconvenienees to which it exposes yon, I can only say that wounds sustained for the sake of conscienee carry their own balsam with the blow.'
'Ay; but they are fretful and irritating for all that. But I see, hard of heart as yon are, my chance of beating hemp, or drawing out flax into marvellonss coarse tliread, affects you as little as my eondemuation to coif and pinners instead of beaver and coekade ; so I will spare myself the fruitless pains of telling my third cause of vexation.'
' Nay, my dear Miss Vernon, do not withdraw your confidenee, and I will promise you that the threefold sympathy due to your very musual canses of distress shall be all duly and truly paid to accomat of the third, providing yon assure me that it is one which yon neither share with all womankime nor even with every Catholic in Eugland, who, God bless you, are still a sect more numerous than we Protestants, in onr zeal for church and state, would desire them to be.'
'It is, indeed,' said Diana, with a manner greatly altered, and more serions than I had yet seen her assmme, 'a misfortme that well merits compassion. I ann by nature, as yon may easily observe, of a frank and mireserved disposition - a plain true-hearted girl, who would willingly act openly and honestly by the whole world, and yet fate has involved ine in [^28]such a series of nets and toils and entanglements that I dere hardly speak a word for fear of consequenees - not to mysclf but to others.'

'I'hat is indeed a misfortume, Miss Vernon, which I do most sincerely compassionate, but which I should hardly have anticipated.'
' 0 , Mr. Osbaldistone, if you but knew - if any one knew, what difficulty I sometimes find in hiding an aching heart with a smooth brow, you would indeed pity me. I do wrong, perhaps, in speaking to you even thus far on my own situation; but you are a young man of sense and penetration, you eannot but long to ask me a hundred questions ou the events of this day, on the share which Rashleigh has in your deliverance from this petty scrape, mpon many other points which camnot but excite your attention, and 1 eannot bring myself to answer with the necessary falsehood and finesse ; 1 should do it awkwardly, and lose your good opinion, if I have any share of it, as well as my own. It is best to say at once, Ask me no questions, I have it not in my power to reply to them.'
Miss Vernon spoke these words with a tone of feeling which eould not but make a corresponding impression upon me. I assured her she had neither to fear my urging her with impertinent questions nor my misconstruing her declining to answer those whieh might in themselves be reasonable, or at least natural.
'I was too much obliged,' I said, 'by the interest she had taken in my affairs to nuisuse the opportunity her goodness had afforded me of prying into hers; I only trusted and entreated that, if my services could at any time be useful, she would eommand them without doubt or hesitation.'
'Thank you - thank you,' she replied; 'your voice does not ring the euekoo clime of compliment, but speaks like that of one who knows to what he pledges himself. If - but it is impossible - but yet, if an opportunity should occur, I will ask you if you remember this promise; and I assure you I shall not be angry if I find you have forgotten it, for it is enough that you are sincere in your intentions just now; mueh may occur to alter them ere I call upon you, should that moment ever come, to assist Die Vernon as if you were Die Vernon's brother.'
'And if I were Die Vernon's brother,' said I, 'there eould not be less ehance that I should refuse my assistrnce. And now I am afraid I must not ask whether Rashleigh was willingly accessory to my deliverance ?'
' Not of me; but you may ask it of himself, and depend upon it he will say yes; for, rather than any, good action shonld walk throngh the world like an unapropriated adjective in an illarranged sentence, he is always willing to stand num substantive to it himself.'
'And I must not ask whether this Campbell lie himself the party who easel Mr. Morris of his portmantem, or whether the letter which our friend the attorney received was not a finesse to withdraw him from the scene of action, lest he shomld have marred the happy event of my deliverance? And I must not ask
'You must ask nothing of me,' said Miss Vernon ; 'so it is quite in vain to go on putting cases. You are to think just as well of me as if I had answered all these queries, and twenty others besides, as gribly as Rashleigh could have done : and observe, whenever I touch my chin jnst so, it is a sign that I camot speak upon the topic which happens to oceupy your attention. I must settle signals of correspondence wi a you, becanse you are to be my confilant and my comsellor, only yon are to know nothing whatever of my affairs.'
'Nothing can be more reasonable,' I replied, laughing; ' and the extent of your confidence will, you may rely nion it, only be equalled by the sagacity of my comisels.
This sort of conversation brought us, in the highest goodhumour with each other, to Osbaldist mie ILall, where we found the family far advanced in the revels of the evening.
'Get some dimner for Mr. Oibaid distone anm me in the library,' said Miss Vernon to a servant. 'I must have sume compassion upon yon,' she added, turning to me, 'and provide against your starving in this mansion of brutal ahmulance; atherwise I am not sure that I should show yon my private hamits. This same library is my den, the only corner of the Hall-homse where I am safe from the ourang-ontangs, my consins. They never venture there, I suppose for fear the fillios shonld fall down and crack their skulls; for they will never atfect their heads in any other way. So follow me.'

And I followed through hall and bower, vantend passage and winding stair, until we reached the room where she had ordered our refreshments.

CHAP'IER X

> In the wide pile, by others heeded not, Hers was one sacred solitary spot, Whose gloomy aisles and lending shelves contain For moral hunger food, and cures for inoral pain.

Anonymous.

THE library at Osbaldistone Hall was a gloomy room whose antique oaken shelves bent beneath the weight of the ponderous folios so dear to the seventeenth century, from whieh, under favour be it spoken, we have distilled matter for our quartos and octavos, and which, once more subjected to the alembic, may, should our sons be yet more frivolous than ourselves, be still farther reduced into duodecimos and pamph!ets. The collection was chiefly of the classics, as well foreign as ancient history, and, above all, divinity. It was in wretched order. The priests who in snecession had acted as chaplains at the Hall were for many years the only persons who entered its preeincts, mutil Rashleigh's thirst for reading had led him to distnrb the venerable spilers who harl muffed the fronts of the presses with their tapestry. His destination for the church rendered his condnct less absurd in his father's eyes than if any of his other descendants had betrayed so strange a propensity, and Sir Hildebrand acquiesced in the library receiving sone repairs, so as to fit it for a sittiny-room. Still an air of dilapidation, as obvions as it was meomfortable, pervaded the large apartment, and amonnced the nerglect from which the knowledge which its walls contained had not been able to exempt it. The tattered tapestry, the worm-eaten shelves, the lange and clmasy, yet tottering, tables, desks, and ehairs, the rusty grate, seldom gladdened by either sea-coal or fagots, intimated the contempt of the lords of Osbaldistone Hall for learning, and for the volumes which record its treasures.
'You think this place somewhat diseonsolate, I suppose?'
said Diana, as I glansed my eye rommd the forlorn apartment; 'but to me it seems like a little paradise, for I call it my own and fear no intrusion. Rashleigh was joint proprietor with me while we were friends.'
'And are you no longer so ?' was my natural question.
Her forefinger immediately touched her dimpled chin, with an arch look of prolibition.
'We are still allies,', she continued, 'bomed, like other confederate powers, by circmustances of mutural interest ; but I am afraid, as will happen in other cases, the treaty of alliance has survived the amicable dispositions in which it had its origin. At any rate we live less. together, and when he comes through that door there I vanish through this door here; and so, having made the discovery that we two were one too many for this apartment, as large as it seems, Rashleigh, whose occasions frequently call him elsewhere, has generously male a cession of his righis in my favour : so that I now endeavour to prosecute alone the studies, in which he used formerly to be my guide.'
'And what are those studies, if I may presume to ask ?'
'Indeed you may, without the least fear of seeing my forefinger raised to my chin. Science and history are my principal favourites; but I also study poetry and the classics.'
'And the classics ? Do your rear them in the original?'
'Un" restionably ; Rashleigh, who is no contenptible scholar, taughi me Greek and Latin, as well as most of the languages of modern Europe. I assure you, there has been some pains taken in my ellucation, although I cam neither sew a tucker, nor work cross-stitch, nor make a pudding, nor, as the vicar's fat wife, with as much truth as elegance, grood-will, and politeness, was pleased to say in my behalf, do any other useful thing in the varsal world.'

And was this selection of studies Rashleigh's choice or your own, Miss Vernon ?' I asked.
'Um!' said she, as if hesitating to answer my question, 'it's not worth while lifting my finger abont, after all ; why, partly his and partly mine. As I leaned ont of doors to ride a horse, and bridle and saddle him in case of necessity, and to clear a five-barred gate, and fire a gon withont winking, and all other of those masculine accomplishuments that my brute consins run mad after, I wanted, like my rational consin, to read (ireek and Latin within doors, and make my emmplete approach to the tree of knowledge, which you men-seholars wonld engross to yourselves, in revenge, I suppose, for our common mother's share in the great original transgression.'
'And Rashleigh readily indulged your propensity to learming ?'
'Why, he wished to have me for his scholar, and he coulli but teach me that which he knew himself; he was not likely to instruct me in the mysteries of washing lace ruffes or hemming cambric handkerchiefs, I suppose.'
'I admit the temptation of getting such a scholar, and have no doubt that it made a weighty consideration on the tutor's part.'
' $\mathbf{0}$, if you begin to investigate Rashleigh's notives, my finger touches my chin once more. I can only be frank where my own are inquired into. But to resume - he has resigned the library in my favour, and never enters without leave had and obtained; and so I have taken the liberty to make it the place of deposit for some of my own goods and chattels, as you may st. by looking round you.'
'I beg pardon, Miss Vernon, but I really see nothing around these walls which I can distinguish as likely to claim you as mistress.'
'That is, I suppose, becanse you neither see a shepherd or shepherdess wrought in worsted and handsonely framed in black ebony, or a stuffed parrot, or a breeding-cage full of canary-birds, or a housewife-case, broidered with tarmished silver, or a toilette-table, with a nest of japanned boxes, with as many angles as Christnias minced pies, or a broken-backed spinet, or a lute with three strings, or rock-work, or shell-work, or needle-work, or work of any kind, or a lap-dog, with a litter of blind puppies. None of these treasures do I possess,' she continued, after a pause in order to recover the breath she had lost in enumerating them. 'But there stands the sword of my ancestor, Sir Richard Vernon, slain at Shrewsbury, and sorely slandered by a sad fellow called Will Shakspeare, whose Lancastrian partialities, and a certain knack at embodying them, has turned history upside down, or rather inside ont; and by that redoubted weapon hangs the mail of the still older Vernon, squire to the Black Prince, whose fate is the reverse of his descendant's, since he is more indelted to the bard who took the trouble to celebrate him for good-will than for talents -

[^29]Then there is a model of a new martingale whieh I invented myself-a great improvement on the Duke of Newcastle's : and there are the hood and bells of my falcon Cheviot, who spitted himself on a heron's bill at Horsely Moss - poor Cheviot, there is not a bird on the perches below but are kites and riflers compared to him! - and there is my own light fowling-piece, with an improved fire-lock; with twenty other treasures, each more valuable than another. And there, that speaks for itself:
She pointed to the earved oak frame of a full-length portrait by Vandyke, on which were inseribed in Gothic letters the words Vernon semper viret. I looked at her for explanation. 'Do you not know,' said she, with some surprise, 'our motto the Vernon motto, where

> Like the solemn vice Iniquity, We moralise two neauings in one word?

And do you not know our cognizance, the pipes?' pointing to the armorial bearings sculptured on the oaken scintcheon, aronud which the legend was displayed.
'Pipes! they look more like penmy-whistles. But, pray, du not be angry with my ignorance,' I continued, observing the colour moint to her cheeks, 'I can mean no affront to your armorial bearings, for I do not cenen know iny own.'
'You an Osbaldistone, and whfess so much!' she exclaimed. 'Why, Percie, Thornie, John, Dickon, Wilfred himself, might be your instruetor. Even ignorance itself is a plunmet over you.'
'With shame I confess it, my dear Miss Vernon, the nnysteries couched under the grim hieroglyphics of heraldry are to me ns unintelligible as those of the pyramids of Egypt.'
'What ! is it possible? Why, even my uncle reads (iwillym sometimes of a winter night. Not know the figures of heraldry ? of what could your father be thinking?'
'Of the figures of arithmetic,' I answered, 'the most insignificant unit of which he holds more highiy than all the blazonry of chivalry. But, though I an ignorant to this inexpressible degree, I have knowledge and taste enough to aduire that splentid picture, in which I think I can discover a family likeness to you. What ease and dignity in the attitude, what riehness of eolouring, what brealth and depth of shade!'
'Is it really a fine painting ?' she askel.
'I have seen many works of the renowned artist,' I replied, 'but never beheld one more to my liking.'

ROH ROY

'Well, I know as little of pictures as you do of heraldry,' replied Miss Vemon ; 'yet I have the advantage of yon, hecanse I have always admired the painting without mulerstanding its value.'
'While I have negleeted pipes and tabors, and all the whinsical eombinations of chivalry, still I an informed that they floated in the fields of ancient fame. But you will allow their exterior appearance is not so peenliarly interenting to the minformed speetator as that of a fine pminting. Who is the person here representerl?'
'My gramilfather ; he shared the misfortumes of Charles I., and, I an sorry to add, the excesses of his sini. Onr patrinomial estate was greatly impaired ly his prodigality, and was altogether lost by lis successor, my mufortunate father. But peace be with, thell who have got it; it was lost in the eause of loyalty.'
'Yonr father, I presume, suffered in the political dissensions of the period?'
'He did indeed; he lost his all. And hence is his child a dependent orphan-eating the bread of others, siligeeted to their capriees, and compelled to sturly their inelinations. Yet prouder of having had such a father than if, playing a more prudent but less upright part, lie had left me possessor of all the rieh and fair baronies which his fanmily once possessied.'
As she thas spoie, the entranee of the servants with dinner cut off all conversation but that of a general nature.

When our hasty meal was coneluded, and the wine placed on the table, the donestic informed us, 'that Mr. Rashleigh had desired to be told when our diuner was removed.'
'T'ell him,' said Miss Veruon, 'we shall be happy to see him if he will step this way; place another wine glass and chair and leave the room. You mnst retire with him when he goes away;' she continued, addressing herself to me; 'even my liberality camot spare a gentleman above eight hours out of the twenty-four; and I think we have been together for at least that length of time.'
'The old seythe-man has moved so rapidly,' I answered, 'that I conld not count lis strides.'
'Hush!' said Miss Veruon, 'here comes Rashleigh' ; and she drew off her ehair, to which I had approached mine rather elosely, so as to phace a greater distance between us.
A modest tap at the door, a gentle manuer of 0 ening when invited to enter, a studied softness and humility if step and deportment, ammonnced that the education of Rashleigh Oshaldistone at the College of St. Omer*accorded well with the ideas I entertained of the mmmers of mu aceomplished Jesnit. I need not add that, as a somind I'rotestunt, these idens were not the most fayourable. 'Why shonld you use the ceremony of knocking,' said Miss Vernon, 'when yon knew that I was not alone?'
This was spoken with a burst of inmatience, ns if she hat felt that Rashleigh's air of cantion and reserve covered some insinuation of impertinent suspicion. 'You have tanght me the form of knocking at this dow so perfectly, my fuir consin,' answered Rashleigh, without change of voice or manner, 'thit habit has become a seeond nature.'
'I prize sincerity more than courtesy, sir, und yon know I do,' was Miss Vermon's reply.
'Courtesy is a gallant gay, in courtier by name and by profession,' replied Rashleigh, 'and therefore most fit fir a lady's bower.'
' $\mathrm{B}^{12}$ Sincerity is the true knight,' retorted Miss Verum, 'anl therefore much more weleome, consin. But, to end a debate not over amusing to your strmuger kinsuma, sit duwn, Rashleigh, and give Mr. Francis Osbaldistone your comutenance to his glass of wine. I have done the honours of the diumer for the credit of Oshaldistune Hall.'
Rashleigh sate down and filled his glass, glaneing his eye from Diana to me with an eularrassument which his utmost efforts could not entirely disyrise. I thought he appeared to be uncertain concerning the extent of confidence she might have reposed in me, anil hastened to leal the conversation into a chamel which should sweep away his suspieion that Dima might have betrayed any secrets which rested between then. ' Mliss Vernon,' I said, 'Mr. Rashleigh, hus recommended me to return my thanks to you for my speedy disengragenent from the ridiculons accussitimi of Morris ; and, monstly fearing my gratitule might not be warn enough to remind me of this duty, she has put my curionity on its. side by referring me to yon for an account, or rather explanation, of the events of the day.'
'Indeed?' answered Rashleigh. 'I should have thought (looking keenly at Miss, Vernoui) that the lady herself might have stood interpreter'; and his eye, revertiug from her face, sought mine, as if to search, from the expression of hy features, whether Diana's communication had been as narrowly limited vol. IV-7 as my words had intimated. Miss Vornon retorted his inumisi torial glanee with one of decidel scom ; while I, mecertain whether to deprecate or resent his obvious snspicion, replied, 'If it is your pleasure, Mr. Rashleigh, as it has heen Miss, Vernon's, to leave me in igmoranee, I must ne cssarily snbmit ; but pray do not withhold your infomation from me on the ground of imagining that I have alrealy obtnined any on the snbject. For 1 tell you, as a man of honour, I an as ignorant as that picture of anything relating to the events I have witnessed to-day, excepting that I miderstand from Miss Vernon that you have been kindly aetive in my favour.'

ROB ROY

'Miss Vermon has overrated my humble efforts,' said Rashleigh, 'though I claim full eredit for my zeal. The truth is that, as I galloped back to get some one of our family to join me in becoming your bail, which was the most obvions, or, indeed, I may say, the only way of serving you which occurred to my stupidity, I met the man Cawnil - Colville - Canpbell, or whatsoever they call him. I had miderstood from Morris that he was present when the robbery took place, and had the goonl fortune to prevail on him - with some diffienlty, I eonfess - $t_{1}$ tender his evidenee in your exculpation, which I presmme was the means of your being released from an unpleasnut situation.'
'indeed 1 I am much your debtor for procuring sueh a seasonable evidence in my belnalf. But I cannot see why having been, as he said, a fellow-sufferer with Mortis - it shonld have required mueh trouble 'o persuade him to step forth and bear evidence, whether to conviet the aetual robber or free an imocent person.'
'Yon do not know the genius of that man's comutry, sir,' answered Rashleigh. 'Diseretion, prurlence, and foresight are their leading qualities; these are only inodified by a narrowspirited but yet ardent patriotism, which forms, as it were, the outmost of the coneentric bulwarks with which a Scotchman fortifies himself against all the attacks of a generons philanthropical principle. Surmonut this monnd, you find an imer and still dearer barrier - the love of his province, his village, or, most probahly, his clan ; storm this secourl obstacle, you have a third - his attachucut to his own fanily - his father, mother, sons, daughters, meles, annts, and consins to the nintlo generation. It is within th : 9 limits that a Scotchman's social affection expands itself, ncv. reaching those which are outermost till all means of discharging itself in the interior circens have been exhausted. It is within these circles that his heart throbs, each pulsation being fiinter and fainter, till, heyond the widest bomdary, it is ahmost mufelt. Anl what is worst of all, could you surnomit all these concentric outworks, yon have an imer citalel, leeper, higher, and nure efficient than them all a Seotchman's love for himself.'
'All this is extremely elongent and metaphorical, Rashleigh,' said Miss Vernon, who listened with murpressed impatience; 'there are ouly two objections to it : first, it is mot true ; seconlly, if true, it is nothing to the purpose.'
'It is true, my fuirest liana,' returmed Rashieigh; 'and, morenver, it is most instantly to the purpose. It is true, becanse yon camot deny that I know the conntry and people intimately, and the character is drawn from deep and acenrate consilleration ; minl it is to the purpose, becanse it answers Mr. Prancis Osbuldistone's question, and shows why this same wary Scontchman, comsidering onr kinsman to be neither his comutryman nor a Camphell, nor his cousin in any of the inextricable combinations by which they extend their pedigree; and, alove all, seeing no prospect of persomal advantage, but, on the comtrary, much hazarit of loss of time and delay of business - -
'With other inconvenienese, perlapw, of a nature yet more formidable,' interrupted Miss Vernum.
'(Of which, donltless, there might be many,' said Rashleigh, continuing in the sume tome. 'In short, my theory shows why this man, hoping for no alvantage, and afraid of some inconvenience, might require a degree of persuasion ere he could be prevailed on to give his testimony in favour of Mr. Onbahlistone.'
'It seems surprising to me,' I observel, 'that during the glance I east over the declaration, or whatever it is termed, of Mr. Morris, he should never have mentioned that Cumphell was in his company when he met the maraulers.'
'I moderstood from Campbell that he had taken his solemn promise not to mention that circumstance,' replied Rashleigh; 'his reason for exacting such an engagement yon may guess frou what I have hinted : he wished to get louck to hiw own comutry, midelayed and unembarrassed by any of the juticial inumiries which he wonld have heen muler the necessity of attending had the fact of his being present at the robbery taken air while he was on this side of the Border. But let him nuce be as distant as the Forth, Morris will, I warrant yon, come forth with all he knows about him, and, it may he, a gond deal more. Besides, Canupleli is a very extensive dealer in cattle, and has often occasion to send great droves into Northnumberlend; and, when driving such n trade, he would be a great fool to embroil himself with our Northmbrime thieves, than whom no men whe live , ne nure vindiet ive.'

ROH ROY

I dure le swirn of that, said Misw Vernom, with $n$ tome which implical something mote than a simple nequieseence in the promosition.
'Still,' waid I, remming 'Ir - Nied, 'ullowing the firce of the reasons which Camphell i, itht ave for desiring that Morris should be silent with reana 1, , promise when the robbery: was committed, I cannot a it he he could attain suleh min in that partienlar at the man mint of sabjecting his atory to diseredit.
Rashleigh agreed with it and seemed to regret that $\mathrm{l}_{11}$ 'min.".".". extraordinary, more closely on that suljeed, mich 'med the Seotelman mysterions. 'But,' lue aske ". wwed lewked extremely cence. 'are yon very examination?, Campbell is really not alluded to in his
'I read the paper over lastily,' said I, 'bat it is my stronn impression that nus such cirmmstance is mentioned; at least it must inave been tonched on very slightly, since it failed to catch my attention.'
'I'rue, true,' answered Raslleigh, forming his own inference while he adopted my words: 'I ineline to think with you that the eiremmstanee must in reality lave been mentioned, but so slightly that it failed to attraci your attention. And then is to Campleell's interest with Morris, I ineline to suppose that it must have been gained by playing upon his fears. This chieken-learted fellow, Morris, is imund, I muderstand, for Seotland, destined for some little employment muder government ; and, possessing the conrage of the wratliful dove or most magn . impons monse, he may have been afraid to enconnter the ill-will of such a kill-cow as Camphell, whose very appearance would be enongh to fright him out of his little wits. You observed that Mr. Camplell has at times a keen and animated maner - something of a martial cast in lis tone mid bearing?'
'I own,' I replief, 'that his expression struek me as being occasionally fierce and simister, and little adapted to his peaceable professiuns. Has he served in the army?'
'Yes - lin' - not, strictly speaking, served; but he has been, I believe, like most of his comitrymen, trained to amms. Indeed, among the hillim they carry them from hoyhool to the grave.
So, if you know mything of your fellow-traveller, yon will ensily juige that, going to such a comintry, he will take care to avoiid a quarrol, if he cum help it, with any of the matives. But come, I see your decline your wine, mid I ten am a degener. ate Oshandistane sul far as respeets the eirembation of the trottle. If you will go to my rom I will holl you a hand at piunet.
We rose to take leave of Miss Vernon, who had from time to time suppressed, nppurently with difticulty, in atrong temptation to break in mbou Rashleigh's details. As we were alont to leave the romin the smothered fire bruke firth.
'Mr. Osbahdistone,' she suill, 'your own oilservation will enable yon th verify the jnstice or ingustice of Rashleigh's sulggestions concerning such individuals an Mr. Cambell and Mr. Morris; but in shandering Scothund he haw horne fahse withess against a whole comntry; and I requent yon will allow now weight to his evidence.
'Perlaps,' I answered, 'I may find it somewhat difficult to ohey your injunctim, Miss Vernon ; for I muns own I was bred up, with no very favomrable idea of 'anr northern neighibmurs.'
'Distrust that part of your education, sir,' she replied, 'muld let the daughter of a Senchwoman pray yon to renpect the land which gave her parent birth mutil yomr own olservation has proved them to le mworthy of your gomel opinion. Preserve your hatred and contempt for dissimmlation, baseness, amed falsehool wheremever they are to be met with. You will fiml enomgh of all without leaving Ehghand. Adien, gentlemen; I wish yon good evening.'
And she signed to the door with the mamer of a prince-* disminssing her train.
We retired to Rashleish's apartment, where a servant hrought. uss coffer and cards. I haid formed my resolution to pre Raschleigh no farther on the events of the day. $\therefore$ mysitery: and, as I thomght, mot of a favomable compleximo, anmeared to hang over his conduct ; hat to ascertain if my silpimptore jnst it was necessary to throw him off his gationd. We cut fur the deal and were some earnestly engaged in our plas 1 thonght I perceived in this trifling for ammsenmen (fin the stake which hashleigh proposel was a mere trith, ammething of a fierce and ambitions temper. He seemed prorfer ly to understand the beantifinl fame at which he played, his pro. ferren, as it were on prineiple, the risking bold innd pen pans strokes to the ordinary rules of play ; and, neglecting the minor and better-balanced chances of the game, he hazarded everything for the chance of piqueing, repiqueing, or capoting his adversary. So soon as the intervention of a game or two at pipuet, iike the music betwecn the acts of a drama, had completely interrupted our previous course of conversation, Rashleigh appeared to tire of the gane, and the cards were superseded by discourse, in which he assmmed the lead.

ROB ROY

More learned than soundly wise, better acquainted with men's minds than with the moral principles that ought to regulate them, he had still powers of conversation which I have rarcly seen equalled, never excelled. Of this his manner implied some consciousness; at least it appeared to me that he had studied hard to improve his matural advantages of a melodious voice, tluent and happy expression, apí language, and fervid imagination. He was neve: loud, never overbearing, never so much occupied with his own thoughts as to outrun either the paticnce or the comprehension of those he conversed with. His ideas succeeded each other with the gentle but unintermitting flow of a plentiful and bountenus spring; while I have heard those of others who aimed at distinction in conversation rush along like the turbid gush from the sluice of a mill-pond, as hurried and as easily exhausted. It was late at night ere I could part from a companion so fascinating; and when I gained my own apartment it cost me no small effort to recall to my mind the character of Rashleigh, such as I had pictured him previous to this téte-ì-téte.
So effectual, my dear Tresham, does the sense of being pleased and amused blunt our farulties of perception and discrimination of character, that I can unly compare it to the taste of certain fruits, at once luscious and poignant, which renders our palate totally unfit for relishing or distinguishing the viands which are subsequently subjected to its criticism.

CHAPTER XI

> What gars ye gaunt, my merrymen a'
> What gars ye look sie dreary? What gars ye hing your head sae sair In the castle of Balwearie?

Old scotch Ballad.

THE next morning chanced to be Sunday, a day peculiarly hard to be got rid of at (Osbaldistonc Hall ; for, after the formal religious service of the morning had been performed, at which all the family regularly attended, it was hard to say upon which individual, Rashleigh and Miss Vernon exeepted, the fiend of emmi descended with the most abundant outpouring of his spirit. 'To speak of my yesterday's embarrassment amused Sir Hildebrand for several minutes, and he congratulated me on my deliverance from Morpeth or Hexham jail, as he would have done if I laad fallen in attempting to clear a five-barred gate and got up without hurting myself:
'Hast had a lucky turn, lad; but do ua be over-venturous again. What, man! the king's road is free to all neen, be they Whigs, be they Tories.'
' On my word, sir, I am imnoeent of interrupting it ; and it is the most provoking thing on earth that every person will take it for granted that I an accessory to a crime which I despise and detest, and which would, moreover, deservedly forfeit my life to the laws of my country.'
'Well, well, lail, even so be it. I ask no questions; no man bound to tell on himsell ; that's fair play, or the devil's in 't.'
Rashleigh here came to my assistance; but I could not help thinking that his arguments were calculated rather as lints to his father to pnu on a show of acquiescence in my declaration of innocence than fully to establish it.
'In your own house, my dear sir, and your own nephewyou will not surely persist in hurting his feelings hy seening to discredit what he is so strongly interested in affirming. No doubt you are fully descrving of all his confidence, and I am sure, were there anything yon could do to assist him in this strange affair, he wonld have recourse to your goodness. But my cousin Frank has been dismissed as an imocent man, and no one is entitled to suppose him otherwise. For my part, I have not the least doubt of his imocence; and onr family honour, I conceive, reqnires that we shonld maintain it with tongue and 'sword against the whole country:'

ROB HOY

'Rashleigh,' said his father, looking fixedly at him, 'thon art a sly loon: thon hast ever been too cumning for me, and too cunning for most folks. Have a care thon provena too cimming for thysell ; two faces under one hood is no true herald:y. And since we talk of heraidry, I'll go and read Gwillym.'
This resolution he intimated with a yawn, resistless as that of the Goddess in the Dunciad, which was responsively echoed by his giant sons as they dispersed in quest of the pastimes to which their minds severally inclined them - Percie to discuss a pot of March beer with the steward in the buttery; Thorncliff to cut a pair of cudgels and fix them in their wicker hilts; John to dress May-fles ; Dickon to play at pitch-and-toss by himself, his right hand against his left; and Wilfred to bite his thumbs and hum himself into a slumber which should last till dinner time, if possible. Miss Veruen suad retired to the library.
Rashleigh and I were left alone in the old hall, from which the servants, with their usual bustle and awkwardness, had at length contrived to hurry the remains of our substantial break. fast. I took the opportunity to upbraid him with the manner in which he had spoken of my affair to his father, which I frankly stated was highly offensive to mc , as it seemed rather to cxhort Sir Hildebrand to conceal his suspicions than to root them ont.
'Why, what can I do, my dear friend?' replied Rashleigh ; ' my father's disposition is so tenacious of suspicions of all kinds when once they take root, which, to do him jnstice, does not easily happen, that I have always found it the best way to silence him upon such subjects, insteal of argning with him. Thus I get the better of the weeds which I camot eradicate by cutting them over as often as they appear, mutil at length they die away of themselves. There is neither wisdom nor profit in disputing with such a mind as Sir Hildebrand's, which hardens itself against conviction, and belicves in its own inspirations as firmly as we good Catholics do in those of the Holy Father of Rome."
'It is very hard, though, that I should live in the house of a man, aud he a near relation too, who will persist in believing me guilty of a highway robbery.

ROB ROY

'My father's foolish opinion, if one may give that epithet to any opinion of a father's, does not affect your real innocence; and as to the disgrace of the faet, depend on it that, considered in all its bearings, politieal as well as moral, Sir Hildehrand regards it as a meritorious aetion - a weakening of the eneny, a spoiling of the Amalekites - and you will stand the higher in his regard for your supposed atcession to it.'
'I desire no man's regarl, Mr. Rashleigh, on such terms as must sink me in my own; and I think these injurious suspicions will afford a very good reason for quitting ()stbaldistone Hall, which I shall do whenever I can commmicate on the subject with my father.'
'Ihe dark eountenanee of Rashleigh, though little aecustomed to betray its master's feelings, exhibited a suppressed smile, which le instantly ehastened hy a sigh.
'You are a happy man, Frank; you go and come, as the wind bloweth where it listeth. With your address, taste, and talents you will soon find eircles where they will be more valued, than amid the dull inmates of this mansion: while 'G' he paused.
'And what is there in your lot that can make you or any one envy mine - an outcast, as, I may ahost term myself, from my father's house and favour?'
'Ay, but,' mwered Rashleigh, 'comsider the wratified sense of independence which you must have attaned by a very temporary saerifice, for sneh I an sure yours will prove to be consider the power of acting as a free agent, of enltivating your own talents in the way to which your taste determines you, and in which you are well qualified to distinguish yourself. Fane and freedom are cheaply purehased hy a few weeks' residence in the North, even though your place of exile be Oshaldistone Hall. A seeond Ovid in Thrace, you have not his reasons for writing Tristia.'
'I do not know,' said I, blushing as beeame a yomer scribbler, how you shonld be so well aeqnainted with my trinnt sturlics.'
'There was an emisary of your father's here some tine since, a young eoxeomb, one 'Twineall, who informed me coneerning your seeret sacrifiees to the Muses, and irdleni, that some of your verses had been greatly admired by the best julloses.
Tresham, I believe you are gniltless of laving ever essayed to build the lofty rhyme; but yon must ! ive known in your day many an apprentice and fellow-eraft, if not some of the master-masons, in the temple of Apollo. Vanity is their universal foible, from him who decoratel the shades of 'Twickenham to the veriest, scribbler whom he has lashed in his Duncind. I had my own share of this common failing, and, without considering how little likely this young fellow T'wineall was by taste and habits either to be acquainterl with one or two little pieces of poetry which I had at times insinuated into Button's coffeehonse, or to report the opinion of the critics who frequented that resort of wit and literature, I alnost instantly gorged the bait; whieh Rashleigh perceiving, improved his opportnnity by a diffident, yet apparently very anxious, request to be pernitted to see some of my manuscript produetions.
'You shall give me an evening in my own apartment,' he continued; 'for I must soon lose the charms of literary sucicty for the drudgery of eommerce and the coarse every-day avocitions of the world. I repeat it, that my compliance with my father's wishes for the advantage of my family is indeed a sacrifice, especially considering the cenlin and peaecful profession to which my edueation destined me.'
I was vain, but not a fool, and this hypocrisy was too strong for ine to swallow. 'You would not persnade me,' I replicd, 'that you really regret to exchange the situation of an obseure Catholie priest, with all its privations, for wealth and society and the pleasures of the world ?'

Rashleigh saw that he had eoloured his affeetation of moderation too highly, and after a sccond's panse, during which, I suppose, he calculated the degree of candour which it was necessary to nse with me (that being a quality of which he was never needlessly profuse), he answercd with a smile - 'At my age, to be condemned, as you say, to wealth and the world, does not, indecd, sound so alarming as perhaps it ought to do. But, with pardon be it spoken, you have mistaken my destination - a Catholic priest, if you will, but not an obscure one. No, sir, Rashleigh Osbaldistonc will be more obscure, should he rise to be the richest citizen in London, than he might have been as a nember of a church whose ministers, as some onc says, "set their sandall'd feet on princes." My fanily interest at a certain exiled court is high, and the weight which that court ought to possess, and does possess, at Rome is yet higher -my talents not altogether inferior to the education I have reeeived. In soher judgnent, I might have looked forward to ligh eminence in the church; in the dream of fancy, to the very highest. Why might not,' he added, laughing, for it was part of his manner to keep much of his discourse apparently betwixt jest and earnest - ' why might not Cardinal Osbaldistonc have swayed the fortmes of empires, well-born and wellconnected, as well ns the low-born Mazarin, or Alberoni, the son of an Italian gardener?'
' Nay, I can give yon no reason to the contrary; but in your place I should not much regret lasing the chance of such pre-carious and invidions clevation.
' Neither would I,' he replied, 'were I sure that my present establishment was morc certain ; bit that must depend upon circumstances, which I can only learn by experience - the dispusition of your father, for example.'
'Confess the truth withont finesse, Rashleigh : you wonld willingly know something of him from me?'
'Since, like Die Vernon, yon make a point of following, the banner of the good knight Sincerity, I reply - certainly.'
' Well, then, you will find in my father a man who las followed the paths of thriving more for the exercise they affiorded to his talents than for the love of the golld with which they are strewed. His active mind would have been lappy in any sitnation which gave it scope for exertion, thongh that exertion had been its sole reward. But his wealth has accumulated becunse, moderate and frugal in lis habits, no. new sources of expense have occurred to dispose of his increasing income. He is a man who lates dissimulation in others, never practises it himself, and is peculiarly alert in discovering motives though the colouring of language. Himself silent by habit, he is readily disgnsted by great talkers, the rather that the circumstances by which he is most interested afford no great scope for conversation. Hc is severely strict in the duties of religion : but you have no reason to fear his interference with yours, for he regards toleration as a sacred principle of political economy. But if yon have any Jacobitical partialities, as is naturally to be supposed, yon will do well to suppress them in his presence, as well as the least tendency to the high-flying or 'Tory principles ; for he holds both in utter detestation. For the rest, his word is his own hond, and must be the law of all who act under him. He will fail in his duty to no one, and will permit no one to fail towarls him ; to cultivate his favour, you must execute his commands, instead of echoing his sentiments. His greatest failings arise out of prejudices comected with his own profession, or rather his cxclusive devotion to it, which makes limu sec little worthy of praise or attention unless it be in some measure connected with eommerce.'

ROB ROY

'O rare-painted portrait!' exelaimed Rashleigh, when I was silent. 'Vandyke was a danher to yon, Frank. I see thy sire before me in all his strength and weakness - loving and honouring the King as a sort of lord mayor of the empire, or ehicf of the Boarl of 'Irade; venerating the Commons, for the acts regulating the export trade ; and respecting the l'eers, because the Lord Chancellor sits on a woolsaek.'
'Minc was a likeness, Rashleigh; yours is a carieature. But in return for the rarte du pays which I have unfolded to you, give me some lights on the geography of the unknown lands $\qquad$ ,'
'()n which you are wrecked,' said Rashleigh. 'It is not worth while : it is 110 Isle of Calypso, umbrageous with shade and intricate with silvan lahyrinth; but a bare ragged Northmmbrian moor, with as little to interest curiosity as to delight the eye. You may descry it in all its nakedness in half an hour's survey, as well as if I were to lay it down before you by line and compass.'
' 0 , but something there is worthy a more attentive survey. What say you to Miss Vernon? Does not sle form an interesting objeet in the landscape, were a!l ronnd as rude as Iceland's eoast?'

I eould plainly perceive that Rashleigh disliked the topic now presented to him ; but my frank communieation had given me the advantageous title to make inquiries in my turn. Rashleigh felt this, and found himself obliged to follow my lead, however difficult he might find it to play his cards suecessfully. 'I have known less of Miss Vernon,' he said, 'for some time than I was wont to do formerly. In early age I was her tutor ; but, as she advanced towards wonlaulhood, my various avocations, the gravity of the profession to which I was destined, the peculiar nature of her engagements - our mutual situation, in short, rendered a close and constant intinacy dangerous and improper. I believe Miss Veruon night consider my reserve as unkinduess, but it was my duty; I felt as much as she seemed to do when compelled to give way to prudence. But where was the safety in cultivating an intinacy with a beautiful and susecptible girl, whose heart, you are aware, must be given either to the cloister or to a betrothed husband?'
'IThe cloister or a betrothed husband!' I celioed; 'is that the alternative destinel for Miss Vernon?'
'It is indeed,' said Rashleigh, with a sigh. 'I need not, I suppose, cantion you against the danger of cultivating tom closely the friendship of Miss Vernon; you are a man of the world, and know how far you can indulge yourself in her society with safety to yomrself and justice to her. But I warn you that, considering her ardent temper, you must let your experience keep guarll over her as well as yourself, for the specimen of yesterday may serve to show her extrene thonghtlossness and neglect of decormm.'
There was something, I was sensible, of truth as well as good sense in all this; it scemed to be given as a friendly warning, and I had no right to take it amiss; yet I felt I conld with plensure have run Rashleigh Oilnaldistone through the borly all the time he was speaking.
'Ihe dence take his insolence !' was my internal meditation. - Would he wish me to iufer that Miss Verion had fallen in love with that hatehet-face of his, and beeone degraded so low as to require his slyness to cure her of an inprident passion? I will have his aeaning from him,' was my resohntion, 'if I should drag it out with cart-ropes.'

For this purpose I placel my temper muder as accurate a gnard as I conld, and observed, 'That, for a lady of her good sense and acpurired accomplislments, it was to be regretted that Miss Vernon's mamers were rather blunt and rustic.'
'Frank and mureservell, at least, to the extreme,' replied Rashleigh; 'yet, trust me, she has an excellent heart. I'o tell yon the truth, shonld she continue her extreme aversion to the cloister and to her destined husband, and slomblimy own labours in the mine of Plutus promise to secure me a decent independence, I slatl think of renewing our acpuaintanee and shariug it with Miss Vernon.'
'With all his fune voice aull well-turned perions,' thought I, 'this same Rashleigh Osbaldistone is the ugliest and most conceited coxcomb I ever met with.'
'But,' continued hashleigh, ats if thinking aloud, 'I should not like to supplant 'Thomeliff.'
'Supplant 'Thorncliff! Is your brother 'Thorucliff,' I inumired, with great surprise, 'the destined h..shand of Diana' Vernon?'
'Why, ay ; her father's conanmans, annd a certain fimily contract, destine her to marry one of Sir Hildelraul's smas. A dispensation has been oltained from Ronae to Diana Vernon to marry "Blank" Osibaldistme, Esul, son of Sir Hildebrand Oibhal distone of Oslaldistone Hall, Bart., and sin firth; and it only remains to pitch upon the happy man whose name shall fill the gap in the manuscript. Now, as Percy is seldom sober, my father pitched on Thomeliff as the second prop of the family, and therefore most proper to carry on the line of the Osbaldistones.'

ROB ROY

'The young lady,' said I, forcing myself to assume an air of pleassutry, which, I believe, becane me extremely ill, 'woull perhaps have been inclinell to look a little lower on the family tree for the branch to which sle was desirous of elinging.'
'I cannot say,' he replied. 'There is room for little. choice in our family : Dick is a gambler, John a boor, and Wilfred an ass. I believe niy father really made the best selection for poor Die after all.'
' O 'The present company,' said I, 'being always excepted.'
' 0 , my destination to the church placed me out of the question; otherwise I will not affeet to say that, qualified by my education both to instruct and guide Miss Vernon, I might not have been a more creditable choice than any of my elders.'
'And so thought the young lady, doubtless?'
'You are not to suppose so,' answered Rashleigh, with an affectation of denial which was contrived to convey the strongest affirmation the case admitted of. 'Friendship only friendship - formed the tie betwixt us, and the tender affection of an opening mind to its only instructor. Love came not near us; I told you I was wise in time.'
1 felt little inclination to pursue this conversation any farther, and, shaking myself elear of Rashleigh, withdrew to my own apartment, which, I reeollect, I traversed with much vehemence of agitation, repeating aloud the expressions which had most offended me. 'Susceptible - ardent - tender affec-tion-love! Diana Vernon, the nost beautiful creature I eve" beheld, in love with him, the bandy-legged, bull-neeked, limping sconndrel! Richard the 'Third in all but his hmup-back! And yet the opportunities he must have had during his cursel course of lectures ; and the fellow's flowing and easy strain of sentiment ; and her extreme seclusion from ever; one who spoke and acted with common sense ; ay, and her obvious pique at him, mixed with admiration of his talents, which looked as like the result of neglected attachment as anything else. Well, and what is it to me that 1 should stom and rage at it ? Is Diama Vernon the first pretty gir! that has loved or married an ugly fellow? And if she were free of every Osbaldistone of theu,

What concern is it of mine? A Catholic, a Jacobite, a termagant into the boot; for me to look that way were utter madness.
By throwing such reflections on the flame of my displeasure appeared at the dinner-table in as sulky heart-buming, and well be imagined.

CHAP'TER XII

Drunk 1-and spenk parrot 1 - and squabble ? - swagger f Swear 1 - and discourse fustian with one's own shallow?

Oringle.

IHAVE already told you, my dear 'Tresham, what probably was no news to you, that my principal fault was an minconquerable pitch of pride, which exposed me to frequent mortification. I had not even whispered to myself that I loved Diana Vernon ; yet no sooner did I hear Rashleigh talk of her as a prize which he uight stoop to carry off or neglect at his pleasure than every step which the poor girl had taken, in the innocence and opeuness of her heart, to form a sort of friendship with me seemed in my eyes the most insulting coquetry. 'Soh ! she would secure ine as a pis aller, I suppose, in case Mr. Rashleigh Osbaldistone should not take compassion upon her! but I will satisfy her that I am not a person to be trepanned in that manner; I will make her sensible that I see through her arts, and that I scorn them.'

I did not reflect for a moment that all this indignation, which I had no right whatever to entertain, proved that I was anything but indifferent to Miss Vernon's charms ; and I sate down to table in high ill-hunour with her and all the daughters of Eve.
Miss Vernon heard me, with surprise, return ungracious answers to one or two playful strokes of satire which she threw out with her usual freedom of speech; but, having no suspicion that offence was meant, she only replied to my rude repartees with jests somewhat similar, bit polished by her good temper, though pointed by her wit. At length she perceived I was really out of humour, and answered one of hy rude speeches thus: 'They say, Mr. Frank, that one may gather sense from fools: I heard consin Wilfred refinse to play any innger at cudgels the other day with cousin Thornie, because consin Thomie got angry and struck barder than the rules of auicable combat, it seems, permitted. "Were I to break your head in good earnest," quoth honest Wilfred, "I care not how angry you are, for I should do it so much the more eavily ; but it 's hard I shonld get rapme over the costard and only pmy yon inack in make believes." Do, yom muderstand the momal of this, Frank !'
'I have never felt myself moler the? neceessity, madam, of standying how to extract the sles. Ler portion of senve with whieh this family seasm their conversation.'
'Necessity: and madam! Yon smrprive me, Mr. Usbuldistone.'
'I am mufortmate in doing so.'
'AmI to suppose that this capricious tone is serions, or is it ouly assumed to make your monl-humour more valuable?'
'Yon have a right to the attention of so many pentlemen in this family, Miss Vernon, that it camot be worth your while to inguire into the cause of my stnpidity mud had spirits.'
'What!' she said, ' ami I to mederstand, then, that you have deserted my faction and gone over to the encmy ?'
Then, looking across the table and olverving that Rashleigh, who was seated opposite, was watching ns with a singular expression of interest on his harsh features, she continued,

> 'Horrible thought ! Ay, how I see 't is true, For the grim-visaged hashleigh smiles on me, And points at thee for his!

Well, thank Heaven aud the muprotecten state which has taught me endurance, I do not take offenee easily ; and that I may not be foreed to quarrel, whether I like it or !u!, I have the homour, earlier than usual, to wish you a happy digestion of your dimer and your bad humour.'
Aull she left the table accordingly.
Upon Miss Vernon's departure I found myself very little satisfied with my own conduct. I had hurled back offered kindness, of which circmmstances had but lately pointel ount the honest sineerity, nud I had but just stopped short of insulting the beantiful, and, as she had said with some emphasis, the muprotected being by whom it was proffered. My comeduet scemed brutal in my own cyes. 'l'o combat or drown these painful refleetions I applied myself more frequently than usinal to the wine which cirenlated on the table.
The agitated state of my feelings combined with my habits of temperance to give rapid effect to the beverage. Hahitual topers, I believe, wequire the power of suaking themselves with a quantity of liguor that does little more than muddy those in telleets whieh, in their sober state, are none of the clenrest : but men who are strangers to the vice of drunkennens as a hatit are more powerfilly acted upm ly intoxicating lipuors. My apirits, once aronsed, became oxtravagnt ; I talked a great deal, argued upon what I knew nothing of, told stories of which I forgot the pont, then laughed immorderately at my own forne.tfinluess: I accopted snveral bets withont having the least jurlog ment ; challenged the giant John to wrestle with me, although he had kept the ring at Hexham for a year and I never tried so mach as a singlo fall.
My micle had the gosmess to interpose and prevent this consmmmation of drminen folly, which, 1 suppose, would have otherwise ended in my neek being broken.
It has even been reported hy maligners that I sung a songe while muder this vinons influence ; but, as I remember nothing of it, and never attempted to turna tmue in all my life lefonn or since, I would willingly hope there is no actnal fommation for the calumny. 1 was absurd enough withont this exaggeration. Without positively losing my senses, I speedily lost all commanil of my temper, and my impetnons passions whirled me onward at their pleasure. I hail sate down sulky and discontented, and disposed to be silent ; the wine rendered me lopnacions, disputations, and quarrelsome. I contrulicted whatever was: asserted, and attaeked, withont any respect to my uncle's table, both his politics and his religion. The affected mond eration of Rashleigh, which he well knew how to qualify with irritating ingredients, was even more provoking to me than the noisy und bnllying language of his olstreperons brothers. My unele, to do him justice, endeavoured to hring ns to order ; but his anthority was lost amilst the tmmilt of wine and passion. At leugth, frantic at some real or supposed injurions: insinuation, I actually struck Rashleigh with my fist. Not Stoie philosopher, superior to his own passion and that of others, conld have received an insult with a higher degree of scorn. What he himself did not think it apparently worth while to resent, 'Thorncliff resented for him. Sworls werr drawn and we exchanged one or two passes, when the other brothers separated us by main foree; and I shall never forget the diabolical sneer which writhed Rashleigh's wayward features as I was forced from the apartment by the main strength of two of these youthful Clitans. They seeured me in my apartment by locking the door, and I heard them, to my inexpres:
ible rage, laugh heartily as they deseended the stairs. I es. sayed in my firy to break ont: but the window grates anid the streught of 14 doner clenched with irmon resivted my efinerts. At length I threw myself om my hed, win! fell askeep ambilat vows of dire revenge to be taken in the ensming day.
But with the morning eeril repentance caniae. I felt in tho keenest mamuer the violence and atovirlity of my emolnet, nuil Was obliged to entifess that wine and passim hand lowered my intellects even below thene of Wilfred Oslablisistome, whom I held in su much contempt. My inneminfortable retlectimis were by mo means serotheel hy meditating the neeeswity of an apeology firr my improper belaviour, and recollecting that $$$ Iiss Dermon mint he a witness of my subuissiom. The imprypriety and minkinh ness of my conduct to her persomally added nit a little to theve galling comsiderations, mind for this 1 could not even Weme the miserable exchse of intexieation.
linder all these aggravating feelings of Name and degradation I descenden to the breakfast-laill, like a criminal to re reive sentence. It chanced that a hard frow had rembered it immonsible to take out the hommer, so that $1 /$ hat Jo additimal minertification to meet the fimily, excepting wily Ranleish and Miss Vernon, in fill divan, surrembling the colle remimon-paty and chine of beef. 'They were in high glee as I entered, muil I conld easily imagine that the jests were firmished at my expense. In fact, what I was disposeal to eonsider with serions puin was regarided as an excellent grond johe hy my mucle and the greater part of my comsins. Sir Hillelimund, while he rallied me on the exploits of the preceding evening, swore he thought a young fellow had better be thrice drumk in one day than sueak sober to bed like a Preshyterian and leave a luatch of honest fellows and a domble quart of claret. And, to back this eonsolatory apeech, he poured out a large bmuper of brandy, exhorting me to swallow 'a hair of the dog that had hit me.
'Never mind these lats langhing, nevoy,' he continued; 'they would have been all as great milksinns as yourself had I not nursed them, as one may saly, in the toast and timlinnel.'
Ill-mature was not the fanlt of my consins in general: they saw I was vexed aul hirr at the recollectimis of the preceding evening, and endeavoured, with clmusy kimlness, to remove the painful impression they had male on me. Thormeliff alone looken sulten and mureconciled. 'Ihis young man had never liked me from the begimuing; and in the marks of attention recasionally shown me ly his brothers, awkward as they were, he alme had never joined. If it was true, of which, however, I begin to have my doubts, that he was eonsidered by the family, or regarded himself, as the destined hnsband of Miss Vernon, a sentiment of jealonsy might have sprung up in his mind from the marken predileetion which it was that young lady's pleasure to show for one whom 'Thorncliff might, perhaps, think likely to beeome a dangerons rival.

Rashleigh at last entered, his visage as dark as mourning weed, brooding, I could not but doult, over the minjostifiable and disgracefinl insult I had offered to hin. I had already settled in my own mind how I was to belave on the occasion, and harl sehooled n.yself to believe that true honour consisted not in defending, but in apologising for, an injury so mueh disproportioned to any provocation I might have to allege.
If therefore hastened to meet Rashleigh, and to express myself in the highest degree sorry for the violenee with which I had acted on the preceding evening.
'No circumstances,' I said, 'could have wrung from me a single word of apolory save my own conscionsuess of the impropriety of my behaviour. I hoped my consin wonld accept of my regrets so sineerely offered, and consider how much of my miseondnet was owing to the excessive hospitality of Osbaldistone Hall.'
'He shall be friends with thee, lal,' eriel the honest knight, in the full effnsion of his heart, 'or '1-11 me, if I call him som more: Why, Rashie, dost stand there like a $\log$ ? "Sorry for it" is all a gentleman can say, if he happens to do anything awry, especially nver his elaret. I served in Homsslow, and shonld know something, I think, of alfairs of honour. Let me hear no more of this, and we 'll, go in a booly and rummage ont the badger in Birkenwood Bank.'

Rashleigh's face resembled, as I have already noticed, in? other eonntenance that I ever saw. But this singularity lay not only in the features, but in the mole of changing their expression. Other comntenances, in altering from grief to joy, or from anger to satisfaction, pass through some brief intecral ere the expression of the predominant passion supersedes entirely that of its predecessor. There is a sort of twilight, like that between the elearing up of the darkness and the rising of the sum, while the swollen muscles subside, the dark eye clears, the forehead relaxes and expands itself, and the whole countenance loses its. sterner shades and becomes serene and placid. Rashleigh's face exhibited none of these gradations, but changed almost instantaneomsly from the expression of one passion to that of the contrary. I can compare it to nothing but tho sudiden shifting of a stene in the theatre, where, at the whistle of the prompter, a cavern disappears and a grove arises.
My attention was strongly arrested by this peenliarity on the present oecasion. At Rashleigh's first eltrance, 'black he stood as night!' With the same inflexible comntenance he heard my excuse and his father's exhortation ; and it was not until Sir Hildebrand had done speaking that the clond cleared away at once, and he expressed in the kindest and most civil terms his perfect satisfaction with the very handsome apology I hal offered.
'Indeenl', he said, 'I have so poor a brain myself, when I impose on it the least burden beyond my usinal three glasses, that I have only, like honest Cassio, a very vagne recolleetion of the confusion of last night - remember a mass of things, but nothing distinetly - a quarrel, but nothing wherefore. So, iny dear cousin,' he continned, shaking me :.:anlly hy the hand, 'eonceive how much I am relievel ly finding that I have to receive an apology, instead of having to make one. I will not have a worl said upon the subject more; I should be very foolish to institute any scrutiny into in accomit when the balance, which I expeeted to be against me, hat been so mexpectedly and agreably strnek in my favomr. Yom see, Mr. Osbaldistone, I an practising the language of Lombard Street, and qualifying myself for my new calling.'
As I was alhomt to answer, and raised my eyes for the purpose, they enconntered those of Miss Vernon, who, having entered the rom unobserved during the conversation, had given it her close attention. Abashed and confommed, I fixed my eyes on the ground, and made my escape to the breakfast-tahle, where I herded anong my lomsy consinis.
My mele, that the events of the preceling day might not pass oat of our menory withont a practical moral lessim, took (eceasion to give Rashleigh and me his; serions advice to correet our milksin, hahits, as he termed them, and gradnally to inure our brains to bear a gentlemanlike quantity of lipuor withont brawls or breaking of heals. Ite reconnended that we should begin pildling with a regular quart of claret per day, whieh, with the aid of March beer and brandy, made a handsome competence for a beginner in the art of toping. And, for our encouragement, he assured us that he had known many a man who had lived to our years without having drunk a pint of wine at a sitting, who yet, by falling into honest company and following hearty example, had afterwards been numbered among the best good fellows of the time, and could carry off their six bottles under their belt quietly and comfortably without brawling or babbling, and be neither sick nor sorry the next morning.
Sage as this advice was, and comfortable as was the prospect it held out to me, I profited but little by the exhortation; partly, perhaps, because, as often as I raised my eyes from the table, I observed Miss Vernon's looks fixed on me, in which I thought I could read grave compassion blended with regret and displeasure. I began to consider how I should seek a scene of explanation and apology with her also, when she gave me to understand she was determined to save me the trouble of soliciting an interview. 'Cousin Francis,' slie said, addressing me by the same title she used to give to the other Osbaldistones, although I had, properly speaking, no title to be called her kinsman, 'I have encountered this morning a difficult passage in the Divina Commedia of Dante; will you have the goodness to step to the library and give me your assistance? And whel: you have unearthed for me the meaning of the obscure Florentine, we will join the rest at Birkenwood Bank, and see their luck at unearthing the badger.'
I signified, of course, my readiness to wait upon her. Rashleigh made an offer to accompany us. 'I am something better skilled,' he said, 'at tracking the sense of Dante through the metaphors and elisions of his wild and gloomy poem than at hunting the poor inoffensive hermit yonder out of his cave.'
'Pardon me, Rashleigh,' said Miss Vernon ; 'but, as you are to occupy Mr. Francis's place in the counting-house, you mnst surrender to him the charge of your pupil's ellucation at $\mathrm{O}_{\mathrm{s}}$ baldistone Hall. We shall call you in, however, if there is any occasion ; so pray do not look so grave upon it. Besides, it is a shame to you not to understand field-sports. What will you do should our uncle in Crane Alley ask you the signs by which you track a badger? ${ }^{\text {' }}$
' Ay, true, Die - true,' said Sir Hildebrand, with a sigh. 'I nisdoubt Rashleigh will be found short at the leap when he is put to the trial. An he would ha' learned useful knowledge like his brothers, he was bred up where it grew, I wuss ; but French antics and book-learning, with the new turnips and the rats and the Hanoverians, ha changed the world that I ha' known in Old England. But come along with us, Rashie, and carry my hunting-staff, man; thy cousin lacks none of thy company as now, and I woma ha Die crossed. It's ne'er be said there was but one woman in Ostaldistone Hall, and she died for lack of her will.'
Rashleigh followed his father, as he commanded, not, however, ere he had whispered to Diana, 'I suppose I must in diseretion bring the courtier Ceremony in my company, and knock when I approach the door of the library?'
' $N o$, no, hashleigh,', said Miss Vernon ; 'dismiss from your company the false archimage Dissimulation, and it will better ensure your free access to our classical consultations.'
So saying, she led the way to the library, and I followed like a criminal, I was going to say, to execution; but, as I bethink me, I have used the simile once, if not twice, before. Without any simile at all, then, I followed, with a sense of awkward and conscious embarrassment which I would have given a great deal to shake off. I thought it a degrading and mwworthy feeling to attend one on such an occasion, having breathed the air of the Continent long enough to have imbibed the notion that lightness, gallantry, and something approaching to well-bred self-assurance should distinguisil the gentleman whom a fair lady selects for her companion in a tête-ą-téte.
My English feelings, however, were too many for my French education, and I made, I believe, a very pitiful figure when Miss Vernon, seating herself najestically in a huge elbow-chair in the library, like a judge about to liear a canse of importance, signed to me to take a chair opposite to her (which I did, much like the poor fellow who is going to be tried), and entered upon conversation in a tone of bitter irony.

CHAP'TER XIII

> Dire was his thought, who first in poison steep'd The weapon forn'il for slaughter; direr his, And worthier of damation, who instilld The nortal venom in the social cup, To fill the veins with death instead of life.

Anonymous.

UPON my word, Mr. Francis Osbaldistone,' said Miss Veruon, with the air of one who thought herself fully entitled to assume the privilege of ironical reproach which she was pleased to exert, ' your character improves upon us, sir; I could not have thought that it was in you. Yesterday might be considered as your assay-piece, to prove yourself entitled to be free of the corporation of Osbaldistone Hall; but it was a masterpiece.'
'I am quite sensible of my ill-breeding, Miss Vernon, and I can only say for myself that I had received some communications by which my spirits were mmsually agitated. I am conscious I was impertinent and absurd.'
'You do yourself great injustice,' said the merciless monitor: ' you have contrived, by what I saw and have since heard, to exhibit in the course of one evening a happy display of all the various masterly qualifications which distinguish your several cousins - the gentle and generons temper of the benevolent Rashleigh, the temperance of Percie, the cool courage of Thorncliff, John's skill in dog-breaking, Dickon's aptitude to betting -all exhibited by the single individual Mr. Francis, and that with a selection of time, place, and circmustance worthy the taste and sagacity of the sapient Wilfred.'
'Have a little mercy, Miss Vernon,' said I, for I confess I thought the schooling as severe as the case merited, especially considering from what quarter it came, 'and forgive me if I suggest, as an excuse for follies I am not nsually guilty of, the custom of this house innd comitry. I am far from approving of it; but we have Shakspeare's authority for saying that good wine is a good familiar creature, and that any man living may be overtaken at some time.'
'Ay, Mr. Francis, lout he places the panegrie and the apology in the month of the greatest villain his pencil has drawn. I will not, however, aluse the advantage your unotation has given me by overwhehning yon with the refutation with which the victim Cassio, replies to the tempter lago. I only wish yon to know that there is one person at least surry to see a youth of talents and expretations sink into the slough in which the inhabitants of this honse are nightly wallowing.
'I have but wet my shoe, I assure yon, Miss Vernon, and am too sensible of the filth of the puddle to step farther in.'
'If sueh be your resolntion,' she replied, 'it is a wise one. But I was so much vexed at what I heard that your concerns have pressed before my own. Yon lehaved to me yesterday during dimer as if something had been told yon which lessened or lowered me in your opinion; I beg leave to ask you what it was?
I was stupified; the direct blmuness of the demand was much in the style one gentleman inses to another, when requestang explanation of any part of his conduct in a suod-hmmonred yet determined manner, and was totally devoin of the circmmlocutions, shadings, softenings, and periphrasis which nsually accompuny explanations hetwixt persons of different sexes in the higher orders of society.
I remained completely embarrassed ; for it pressed on my recollection that Rashleigh's communications, supposing them to be correct, ought to have rendered Miss Vernon rather an object of my comprassion than of my pettish resentment ; and had they furnished the best apolony possible for my own conduct, still I must have had the utunest diffienlty in detailing what inferred such necessary and natural offence to Miss Vermon's feelings. She observed my he itation, and proceeded in a tone somewhat more peremptory, but still temperate and civil.
-I hope Mr. Oshaldistone does not dispute my title to request this explanation. I have no relative whocan protect me ; it is, therefore, just that I be permitted to protect myself.'
I endeavoured with hesitation to throw the blame of my rude behaviour upon indispusition - mpon disagreeable letters from Lomdon. She suffered me to exlanst my arpolacies, and fairly to rmm myelf agromd, listening all the while with a smile of absolute incredulity:
'And now, Mr. Francis, having gone through your prolngue of exeuses, with the same bad grace with which all prolognes, are delivered, please to draw the curtain and show the that which I desire to see. In a worl, let me know what Rashleigh says of me; for he is the grand engineer and first mover of all the machinery of Osbaldistone Hall.'
'But, supposing there was anything to tell, Miss Vernon, what doess he deserve that betrays the secrets of one ally to another 1 Rashleigh, you yourself told me, remained your ally thongh no longer your friend.'
'I have neither patience for evasion nor inelination for jesting on the present subjeet. Rashleigh cammot-onght nut - dare not, hold any language respecting me, Diana Vemon, but what I may demand to hear repeated. 'That there are subjects of secrecy and confidence between us is most certain; but to sueh his commmnieations to you could have no relation, and with sueh, I, as an individual, have no coneern.'

I had by this time reeovered my presence of mind, and hastily determined to avoid making any diselosure of what Rashleigh had told me in a sort of confidenee. 'There was something maworthy in retailing private eonversation; it eonld, I thought, do no good, and must necessarily give Miss Vernon great pain. I therefore replied, gravely, 'that nothing but frivolous talk had passed between Mr. Kashleigh Osbaldistone and me on the state of the family at the Hall ; and I protested that nothing laad been said whieh left a serious impression tu her disadvantage. As a gentleman, I said, I could not be more explieit in reporting private eonversation.'
She started up with the animation of a Camilla about to advanee into battle. 'This shall not serve your turn, sir ; I must have anuther answer from yom.' Her features kindlerl, her brow becane flashed, her eye glaneen will-fire as she proeeeded : 'I demand sueh an explanation as a woman hasely slandered has a right to demand from every man who eallis himself a gentleman; as a creature, mutherless, frieutles:alone in the world, left to her own gnidanee and protection, las a right to require from every being having a happier lot, in the name of that God whosent thrm into the world to enjus aud her to suffer: Yon shall not deny me, or,' she added, looking solemmly upwarls, 'yon will rue your denial, if there is jnstiee for wrong either in earth on in leaven.'

I was utterly astomished at her velienence, but felt, thus conjured, that it beane my duty to lay aside serupulons delicacy, nad gave her briefly, but distiuctly, the heads of the iuformation which Rashleigh had conveyed to me.
She sate down and resmued her compusure as som as I entered upm the subject, and when I stopped to seek for the most delicate turn of expression, she repeatedly interrunted me with 'Go on - pray, go on ; the first wurd which oecurs to yon is the plainest, and must be the lest. Do not think of my feelings, but speak as you would to an memencerned third party.'
Thins urged and encouraged, I stammered through all the account which Rashleigh had given of her early contract to marry an Osbahdistone, and of the uneertainty and difficulty: of her choice; and there I would willingly lave pansed. But lier penetration discovered that there was still something belind, and even guessed to what it related.
' Well, it was ill-matured of Rashleigh to tell this tale on me. I am like the poor girl in the fairy tale, who was hetrothed in her cradle to the Black Bear of Norway, but complained chiefly of being called Bruinis biride by her eompanions at sedoml. But besides all this, Rushleigh said something of himself with relation to me, did he not?
'He certainly hinted that, were it not for the iden of supplanting his brother, he would now, in enusequence of his chauge of profession, be desiroms that the word hashleigh should fill up the hlank in the dispensation, instead of the word 'Thorneliff.'
'Ay ? indeed ?' she replied; 'was he so very condescending? Too numeh honour for his limulle hambuid, biana Vernom. Aud she, I suppose, was to be emraptured with juy could such a sulbstitute he effected?'
"'Io confess the truth, he intimated as much, and even farther insinuated $\qquad$ ,
'What? Let me hear it all !' she exclamed, hastily.
'That he harl hroken off your muthal intimacy lest it should have given rise to an affection ly which his destination to the church woild not permit him to profit.'
'I am obliged to hinu for his comsideration,' replied Miss Vernon, every feature of her tine comntenance taxed to express the most supreme degree of seorn and contempt. She paused a moment, and then said, with her usual composure, 'There is lout little I have heard from yon which I did not expeert to hear, and which I oughit not to have expected: becanse, batiug one circumstance, it is all very true. But, as there are some poisons sa active that a few drops, it is said, will infect a whole fountain, so there is one falsehood in Rashleigh's communication powerful enough to corrupt the whole well in which Truth herself is said to have dwelt. It is the learling and foul falsehood that, knowing Rashleigh as I have renson too well to know him, any circumstance on earth could make me think of sharing my lot with him. No,' she continued, with a sort of inwaril shuddering that seemed to express involuntary horror, 'any lot rather than that - the sot, the gambler, the bully, the jockey, the insensate fool were a thonsand times preferable to haslileigh; the eonvent, the jail, the grave shall be welcome before them all.'
There was a sad and melaneholy calence in her voiee corresponding with the strange and interesting romance of her situation. So young, so beantiful, so untaught, so mnch abanidoned to herself, and deprivell of all the support which her sex derives from the conntenanee annd protection of female friends, and even of that degree of defenee which arises from the forms with which the sex are approaehed in civilised life - it is scarce metaphorical to say that my licart bled for her. Yet there was an expression of dignity in her eontenupt of ceremony, of upright feeling in her dissdain of falsehood, of firm resolution in the manner in which she eontemplated the dangers by which she was surrounded, which blendel iny pity with the warmest admiration. She seemed a prinecss deserted by her subjects and deprived of her power, yet still scorning those formal regulations of socicty which are created for persons of an inferior rank; and, amid her difficultics, relying boldly and eonfidently on the justice of Heaven and the unshaken constancy of her own mind.

I offered to express the mingled feelings of sympathy and admiration with which her unfortmate situation and her high spirit combined to impress me, but she imposed silence on me at once.
'I told you in jest,' she said, 'that I disliked compliments; I now tell yon in earnest that I do not ask sympathy, and that I despise consolation. What I have borne, I have bornc. What I am to bear, I will sustain as I may; no word of commiseration can make a hurden fecl one feather's weight lighter to the slave who must carry it. There is only onc hmman being who could have assisted me, and that is he who has rather chosen to add to my embarrassment - Rashleigh Osbaldistone. Yes: the time mee was that I might have learned to love that man. But, great Gorl ! the purpose for which lie insimmated himself into the conficlence of one already so forlorn; the undeviating and continned assidnity with which he prowned that purpose from year to year, withont one single monentary panse of remorse or compassion ; the pirpose for which lie wonld have converted into poinon the fond he administered to my mind. Gracions l'rovidence : what shonld I have heen in this world and the next, in body and sonl, liml I fallen inmer the arts of this aceomplished villain!'

I was so much struck with the seene of perfislious treachery which these words disclosed, that I rose from my chair, liardly koowing what I did, laid my land on the liilt of my sword, and was about to leave the apurtment in search of him on whom I might discharge my just indignation. Ahmost brenthless, and with eyes and looks in which seom and indignation had given way to the most lively alarm, Miss Vernon threw lierself between me and the domr of the apartment.
'Stay,' she said -- 'stay ; however jnst your resentment, yon do not know half the secrets of this faurfil prison-honse.' She then glanced her eyes anvionsly ronnd the romm and sunk her voice ahnost to a whisper - - He bears a charmed life; you cannot assail him without endangering other lives, nud wider destruetion. Had it been otherwise, in some hour of justice he had hardly been safe, even from this weak hand. I told yon,' she said, inotioning me back to luy seat, 'that I needed no comforter; I now tell yom, I need nin avenger.'

I resumed my seat meehanically, mosing on what she said, and recollecting also, what had eserped me in my first glow of resentment, that I had 10 title whatever to constitute nyself Miss Vernon's chanpion. She pumsed to let her own emotions and mine snbside, and then addressed me with more composire.
'I have already said that there is a mystery comected with Rashleigh of a dangerons and fatal mature. Villain as he is, and as he knows he stands eonvicted in my eyes, I cannot - dare not, openly break with or defy him. Yon also, Mr. ()slaldistone, must bear with him wit? patience, foil his artifices by opposing to them prudenee, not vinlence ; and, ahove all, you mast a aroid such scenes as that of last night, which canmot hint give him perilons advantages over yon. I Ihis cantion! I lesigned to give yom, and it was the object with whic:l I desired this interview; hut I have extended my confidence farther than I proposed.'

I assured her it was not misplated.
'I dio not helieve that it is,' she replied. 'Yom have that in your face and manmers which anthorises trist. Let ns inntime to be friends. You need nut fear,' she said, laughing, while she blushed a little, yet speaking with a free and unembarrassed voice, 'that friendship with us should prove ouly a spreciuns name, as the poet says, for nnother feeling. I belong, in hahits of thinking and acting, rathor to your sox, with which I have always been brought up, than to my uwn. Besides, the fatal veil was wrapt round me in my cradle; for yon may easily helieve I have never thought of the deteatable condition under which I may remove it. The time,' she added, 'for expressing my final determination is not arrived, and I would fain have the freedom of wild heath and upen air, with the othor commoners of nature, as long as I can be permitter to cujoy them. And now that the passuge in Dante is made so clear, pray go and see what is become of the badger-baiters. My head aches so much that I camot join the party.'
I left the library, but not to join the hunters. I folt that a solitary walk was necessury to comprose my spirits before I again trusted myself in Rashleigh's company, whose depth of calculating villainy had been so strikingly exposed to me. In Dubourg's family (as he was of the Refornued persuasion) I had heard many a tale of Romish prienta who gratified at the expense of friendship, hospitality, and the most sacred ties of social life, those passions the blaneless indulgence of which is denied by the rules of their order. But the deliberate system of undertaking the education of a leserted orphan of noble birth, and so intimately allied to his own family, with the perfidions purpose of ultimately seducing her, detailed as it was by the intended vietim with all the glow of virtuous resentment, seemed more atrocious to me than the worst of the tales 1 had heard at Bourdeaux, and I felt it would be extrenely difficult for me to meet Rashleigh and yet to suppress the abhorrence with which he impressed me. Yet this was absolutely necessary, not only on account of the nysterious charge which Diana had given ine, but because I had in reality no ostensible ground fur quarrelling with hin.
I therefore resolved, as far as possible, to meet Rashleigl:s dissinulation with equal cantion on my part during our residence in the same family; and when he should depart for London, I resolved to give Owen at least such a hint of his character as might keep him on his guarl over my father's intcrests. Avarice or ambition, I thougit, night have as great, or greater, charms for a mind constituted like Rashleigh's, than unlawful pleasure ; the energy of his character, and his power of assuming all seeming gond qualities, were likely to procure him a high regree of confidence, and it was not to be hoperl that either gool faith or gratitnde wonld prevent him from ahnsiug, it. The task was somewhat diffienlt, especially in my cirennstanices, since the cantion which I threw ont might be imputed to jenlonsy of my rival, or rather my successor, in my finther's favomr Yet 1 thonght it almohtely necessary to frume such a letter, leaving it to Owen, who, in his own line, was wary, priment, anl ciremmspect, to make the necessary use of his knowledge of Rnshleigh's truo character. Such a letter, therefore, I indited mul deaphitehed to the post-honse liy the first anmortnity.

At my meeting with lhashleigh he, as well an l, appeared to have taken up distunt gromid, and th le disposed to avoid all pretext for collision. He whe prolmbly comscious that Miss Vernon's commmications had leen mufivonrable to him, thongh he conld not know that thry extended to discovering lis meditated villainy towards her. Onr interomirse, therefore, was reserved on both sidles, and turned on subjects of little interext. Indeed, his stay at Oshallistone Hall did uot exceed a few days after this period, during which I mily remarked two cirommstances respecting him. The first was, the rapid and almost intnitive manner in which his powerfil and astive minul seized npon and arranged the elementury principles necessury in his now profession, whieh he now stindied haril, and occasionmy made parade of his progress, as if to show me how light it was for him to lift the burden which I had Hung down from very weariness and inability to carry it. The other remarkable circonstance was that, notwithstanding the injurics with which Miss Vernon charged Rashleigh, they had several private interviews together of considerable length, nlthongh their bearing towards each other in public chicl not neem more cordial than usual.
When the day of Rashleigh's departure arrived, his father bade him farewell with indifference; his brothers, with the illconcealed glee of school-hoys, who sec their tasknaster depart for a season, and feel a joy which they dare not cxpress: mind I myself with cold politeness. When he appronched Miss Vernon, and wonld have salnted her, we drew baek with a took of haughty disdain; but suid, us she extenled her hand to lim, 'Farewell, Rashleigh. Good reward you for the good yon have done, and forgive yon for the evil yon have meditated.'
'Amen, my fair consin,' he replied, with an air of s:mutity, which belonged, I thought, to the seminary of siant Oncr's;

MICROCOPY RESOLUTION TEST CHART

(ANSI and ISO TEST CHART No. 2)

APPLIED IMAGE lme
1653 East Main Street Rochester, New York 14609

USA
(716) 482 - 0300 - Phone
(716) 288 - 5989 - Fax

ROB ROY

'happy is he whose good intentions have borne fruit in deeds and whose evil thoughts have perished in the blossum.'
'These were his parting worls. 'Accomplished hypocrite!' said Miss Vernon to me, as the door closed behind him. 'How nearly cim what we most despise and hate approach in outward manmer to that which we most venerate!
I had written to my father by Rashleigh, and also a few lines to Owen, besides the contidential letter which I have already mentioned, and which I thought it more proper and prudent to despatel by another eonveyance. In these epistles it would have been natural for me to have pointed out to my father and my friend that I wass at present in a situation where I could iumprove myself in no respect, muless in the mysteries of hunting and hawking; and where I was not mulikely to forget, in the company of rude grooms and horse-boys, any useful knowledge or elegant accomplishments which I had hitherto aequired. It would also have been natural that I should have expressed the disgust and tadimm which I was likely to feel among beings whose whole sonls were centred in fieldsports or more degrading pastimes; that I should have complained of the habitual intemperanee of the family in which 1 was a guest, and the difficulty and almost resentment with which my unele, Sir Hildebraud, received any apology for deserting the bottle. This last, indeed, was a topic on which my father, himself a man of severe temperance, was likely to be easily alarmed, and to have tonehed upon this spring woinld to a certainty have opened the doors of my prison-honse, and would either have been the means of abridging my exile, or at least wonld have proeured me a change of residence during my rustication:
I say, my dear Treshan, that, considering how very nnpleasant a prolonged residence at Osbaldistone Hall must have been to a young man of my age, and with my habits, it might have seemed very natural that I shonld have pointed out all these disadvantages to my father, in orler to obtain his consent for leaving my mele's mansion. Nothing, however, is more certain than that I did not say a single word to this purpose in my letters to my father and Owen. If Osbaldistone Hall had been Athens in all its pristine grory of learning, and inhabited by sages, heroes, anl poets, I could not have expressed less inclination to leave it.

If thou hast any of the salt of youth left in thee, Treshan, thou wilt be at no loss to aceomnt for my silenee on a topie seemingly so obvions. Miss Vernon's extreme beanty, of which she herself seemed so little conscions, her romantic and mysterions situation, the evils to which she was expmesel, the courage with which she scemed to face them, her manners, more frask than belonged to her sex, yet, as it seemed to me, exeeeding in frankiess ouly from the damotess conscionsness of her imnocence - above all, the obvions and flattering distinction which she made in my fave, or over all other persons, were at once calculated to inter: ${ }^{\text {a }}$, my best feelings, to exeite my curiosity, awaken my imagination, and gratify my vanity. I dared not, inleed, confess to myself the depth of the interest with which Miss Veruon inspired me, or the large share which she occupied in my thoughts. We rend together, walked together, rude together, anul sate tugether. The stndies which she had broken off mpon her quarrel with Rashleigh, she now resumed under the anspices of a tutor whose views were more sincere, though lis capacity was far more limited.

In truth, I was by no means qualified to assist her in the prosecution of several profomed studies which she had commenced with Rashleigh, and which appearel to me more fitted for a churchman than for a beautifnl fenale. Neither can I conceive with what view he shonld have engaged Diana in the gloomy maze of casnistry which sehoohnen called philosophy, or in the eqnally abstruse, though more certain, sciences of mathematics and astronomy; meless it were to break down and confonnd in her mind the difference and distinction between the sexes, and to habituate her to trains of sulhtile reasoming, by which he might at his own time invest that which is wrong with the colour of that which is right. It was in the same spirit, though in the latter case the evil purpose was more obvions, that the lessons of hashleigh had encouraged Miss Vernon in setting at nought and despising the forms and ceremonial limits which are drawn round fenales in modern society. It is true, she was sequestered from all female company, and conld not learn the nsinal rules of decorm, either fron example or precept ; yet such was her imate modesty, and accurate sense of what was right and wromg, that she wonld not of herself have adopted the bohl muempromising mamer which struck we with so much surprise on our first acenaintance, had she not been led to conceive that a contempt of ceremony indicated at once superiority of understandiug and the comfilence of embscions imnocence. Her wily instructor had me, dumbt his own vol. Iv-? views in levelling those outworks which reserve and caution erect around virtue. But for these and for his other crines he has long since answered at a higher tribunal.

Besides the progress which Miss Vernon, whose powerful mind read:ly adopted every means of information offered to it, had made in more abstract science, I found her no contempible linguist, ana well acquainted both with ancient and molern literature. Were it not that strong talents will often go firthest when they seem to havo least assistance, it would be annost incredible to tell the rapidity of Miss Vernon's progress in knowledge; and it was still nore extraordinary when her stock of mental acquisitions from books was compared with her total ignorance of actual life. It seemed as if she saw and knew everything except what passed in the world aronnd her ; and I believe it was this very ignorance and simplicity of thinking upon ordinary subjects, so strikingly contrasted with her fund of general knowledge and infornation, which rendered her conversation so irresistibly fascinating, and riveted the attention to whatever she said or did; since it was absolutely inmpossible to anticipate whether her next word or action was to display the most acute perception or the most profound simplicity. The degree of danger which necessarily attended a youth of my age and keen feelings from remaining in close and constant intinacy with an object so amiable and pecnliarly interesting, ull who remember their own sentiments secinliariy may easily estimate.

CHAP'TER XIV

Yon lamp its line of quivering light
Shoots from my lady's bower ; But why should heauty's lamp be bright At midnight's lonely hour?

Old Ballad.

THE mode of life at Osbaldistone Hall was too uniform to admit of description. Diana Vernon and I enjoyed much of our time in our mutual studies; the rest of the family killed theirs in such sports and pastines as suited the seasons, in which we also took a share. My mucle was a man of habits, and by habit became so much accustomed to my presence and mode of life that, upon the whole, he was rather fond of me than otherwise. I might probably have risen yet lig'.er in his good graces had I enployed the same arts for that urpose which were nsed by Rashleigh, who, availing himself of his father's disinclination to bnsiness, had gradually insinuated himself into the management of his property. But, although I readily gave my uncle the advantage of my pen and my aritl:metic so often as he desired to correspond with a neighbour or settle with a tenant, and was, in so far, a more nsefnl inmate in his family than any of his sons, yet I was not willing to oblige Sir Hildebrand by relieving him entircly from the management of his own affairs ; so that, while the good knight admitted that 'nevoy Frank was a steady, handy lad,' he seldom failed to remark in the same breath, 'that he did not think he shonld ha' missed Rashleigh so much as he was like to do.'
As it is particularly unpleasant to reside in a family where we arr variance with any part of it, I made some efforts to overc.., the ill-will which my consins entertained against me. I exchanged my laced hat for a jockey-cap, and made some progress in their opinion ; I broke a young colt in a manner which carricd me further into their good graces. A het or two opportmely lost to Dickon, and an extra health pledsed with

Pereie, plaeed me on an ensy and familiar footing with all the young squires except 'Thornelif:

I have already noticed the dislike entertainel against me by this young fellow, who, as he hat rather more sense, haul also in mueh worse temper, than any of his lirethren. Sullen, duggel, and quarrelsome, he regarided my resilence at Osbaldistone Hall ans an intrision, mid viewed with envions and jatons eyes my intimacy with Diana Vernon, whon the effect proposed to be given to a certain fimily compaet assigned to him as an intended sponse. That he loved her could seareely be said, at least without much misapplication of the word; but he regardel her as something appropriatell to himself, and resented internally the interference which he knew not how to prevent or interript. I attempted a tone of eoneiliation towards Thorneliff on several oecusions; but he rejeeted my advances with a manner about as gracions as that of a growling mastiff when the animal shmms ani resents a stranger's attempts to caress him. I therefore abandoned him to his ill-hmmour, and gave myself no firther trouble about the matter.
Sueh was the footing upon which I stood with the family at Osbaldistone Hall; but I ought to mention another of its immates with whom I oceasionally held some diseourse. 'This was Andrew Fairserviee, the gardener, who, since he had discovered that I was a Protestant, rarely suffered me to pass him without proffering his Seotch mull for a social pinel. There were several advantages attending this courtesy. In the first place, it was made at no expense, for I never took snuff; and, secondly, it affiorded an excellent apology to Andrew, who was not partieularly fond of hard labour, for laying aside his spade for several minutes. But, above all, these brief interviews gave Andrew an opportunity of venting the news he had collecten, or the satirical remarks whieh his shrewd northern hmmour sulggested.
'I am saying, sir,' he said to me one evening, with a face obvionsly elarged with intelligence, 'I hae been doun at the 'I'rinlay Knowe.'
'Well, Andrew, and I suppose you heard some news at the ale-house ?
' Na, sir ; I never gang to the yill-honse - that is, unless ony neighbour was to gie me a pint, or the like o' that; but to gang there on ane's ain coat tail is a waste o precious time and hard-won siller. But I was dom at the 'Irmiay Kinowe, as I was saying, about a wee bit business o' my ain wi' Mattie

Simpson, that wants a forpit or twa o' peers, that will never be nissed in the $\mathrm{Hn}^{\prime}$ '-honse; and when we were at the thrangest o' our bargain, wha suld come in but Pate Maeready, the travelling merchant?'
'Pedlar, I suppose yom mem?'
'E'en as your homonr likes to ca' him; but it's a creditable calling and a gainfn', and has been lang in use wi' our folk. Pate 's a far-awa cousin o' mine, and we were blythe to meet wi' ane anither.'
'And you went and had a jug of ale together, I suppose, Andrew? For Heaven's sake, cut short your story.'
'Bide a wee - bide a wee; you southrons are aye in sie a hurry, and this is something cuncerns yoursell, an ye wad tak patience to hear 't. Yill ! deil a drap o' yill did Pate offer me ; but Mattie gae ns baith a drap skimmed milk, and ane o' her thick : it jammeks, that was as wat and raw as a divot. O, for the $\mathbf{r}$ 'nie gridle cakes o' the North:- and sae we sat doun and took out our clavers.'
'I wish you wonld take them out just now. Pray, tell me the news, if you have got any worth telling, for I can't stop here all night.'
'Than, if ye mnun hae 't, the folk in Lummon are a' elean wud about this bit job in the north here ?'
'Clean wood! what's that?'
' Ou, just real daft, neither to haud nor to bind, a' hirdygirdy, elean through ither, the deil 's over Jock Wabster.'
'But what does all this mean? or what business have I with the devil or Jack Webster ?'
'Umph!' said Andrew, looking extremely knowing, 'it 's just becunse - just that the dirdum 's a' about yon man's pokmanty.'
'Whose portmantean ? or what do yon mean?'
'Ou, jnst the man Morris's, that he suid he lost yonder; but if it's no your honour's affair, as little is it mine ; and I mamma lose this gracions evening.'

And, as if suddenly seized with a violent fit of industry, Audrew began to labour most diligently.

My attention, as the crafty knave had foreseen, was now arrested, and umwilling, at the same time, to acknowledge any particular interest in that affair by asking direct (tu, 2stions, I stood waiting till the spirit of volnutary communica in should again prompt him to resume his story. Audrew dhg on mamfully and spoke at intervals, but nothing to the purpose of Mr. Macready's news; and I stood and listened, enrsing him in my heart, and desirons, at the same timu, to see how long his humour of contradiction would prevail over his desire of speaking upon the subject which was obvionsly uppermost in his mind.
' An trenching up the sparrygrass, and min gaun to snw sum Misegun beans. They winna wut then to their swine's Hesh, I'se warrant; muekle ginde mey it do them. Anl siclike dung as the grieve has gien me! it shonld be whf. -strae, or aiten at the warst o't, mul it's peave-dirt, as fizzenless as chnckiestanes. But the hmitsman guides a' as ho likes abont the stable-yarl, and he's selled the best $n$ ' the litter, I'se wurrant. But, howsoever, we maman lose a turn o' this Saturday at e'en, for the wather's sair broken, and if there 's a fair day in seven, Sunday's sure to come and liek it up. Howsomever, I'm nu denying that it may settle, if it le lleaven's will, till Monday morning, and what's the use o' my breaking my back at this rate : I think I'll e'en awa' hume, for yon's the curfew, as they ca' their jowing-in bell.'

Aecordingly, applying both his hands to his spade, he pitched it upright in the trench whieh he hal been digging, and, looking at me with the air of sunariority of one who knows himself possessed of important infornation, which he may emmmunicate or refuse at his pleasure, pulled down the sleeves of his shirt, and walked slowly towards his eoat, which lay earefully folded up upon a neighbouring garden-seat.
'I must pay the penalty of having interrupted the tiresome rascal,' thought I to myself, 'and even gratify Mr. Fairservice by taking his communieation on his own terms.' 'Then raising my voiee, I addressed him - 'And after all, Andrew, what are these London news you hal from your kinsman, the travelling merehant?
''The pedlar, your honour means?' retorted Andrew ; 'but ea' him what ye wull, they're a great eonvenience in a comutryside that's scant on' borongh-towns, like this Northmberland. That 's no the case, now, in Seotland. There 's the kingdom o' Fife, frae Culross to the East Nuik, it's just like a great combined city. Sae mony roynl boroughs yoked on end to end, like ropes of ingans, with their hic streets, and their booths, nae donbt, and their krames, mid honses of stane and lime and forestairs; Kirkealily, the sell o't, is langer than ony town in England.'
'I daresay it is all very splendid and very fine ; but yon were talking of the London news a little while ago, Andrew.'
' Ay,' replied Andrew, 'but I dima think your honour eared to hear abont them. Huwsoever,' he continned, grimuing a ghastly smile, 'Pate Macready does say that they are sair mistrysted yonder in their Parliament Inonse alnumt this rubberjo o' Mr. Morris, or whatever they ca' the chicl.'
'In the House of Parliament, Andrew: How came they to mention it there ?'
'Ou, that 's just what I snid to l'ate ; if it like your honour, I'll tell you the very words : it's now worth making a lie for the matter - "Pate," snid I, "what ado had the lords aml hairds and gentles at Lunnon wi' the carle and his walise? When we had a Scotch Parliament, Pate," says I-and deil rax their thrapples that reft us o't 1 - " "they sate donsely down and made haws for a haill country and kiurick, and never fashed their bearls about things that were competent to the judge orlinur o' the bomuls: but I think," said I, "that if ae knil-wife pon'd affi her neighbour's nutch they wad hate the twasome o' thenu into the Parliament House o' Lummon. It's just," mill I, "imaist as silly as our auld daft laird here and his gomerils $0^{\prime}$ " soms, wi' his hmutsnen and his homds, and his hunting cattle and lorns, riding haill days after a bit heast that wimna weigh sax pmols when they hae eatched it."'
'You argned most admirably, Andrew;' said I, willing to eneonrage him to get into the marrow of his intelligence: 'and what said Pate?'
'Ou,' he said, 'what better cou'd be expeeted of a wheen pock-pudding English folk? But as to the robbery, it 's like that when they 're a' at the thrung o' their Whig and 'lory wark, and ea'ing ane anither, like mhanged blackgnards, up gets ae lang-tom .... - Id, and he ways that a' the north of Ehigland were ran.
-and $t$.
senger $l_{\text {s }}$. -s-and, unietly, he wasin far wrang mayhe 'mai levied anaist open war, mula king's mesthe best oumu ostppit aun rubbit on the highway, and that and miekle gowd ta'en aff him, and mony valmable papers; and that there was me redress to be gritten hy remeed of law, for the first justice o' the peace that the rulhit man gaed to, he had fund the twa loms that did the deed birling and drinking wi' him, wha but they? and the justice took the worl of the tane for the compearance o' the tither ; and that they een gae him leg-bail, and the honest man that had lost his siller was fain to leave the comintry for fear that waur had cone of it.'
'Can this be really true?' said I.
'Pate swears it's as true as that his ell-wand is a yard lang - and so it is, jnst hating an inch, thut it may meet the English measure. And when the chield had suid his warst, there was in terrible cry for mines, and out connes he wi' this man Morris's name, and your nuele's, and synire linglewood's, and other folks' beside (looking sly at me): Aind then nother dragon o' a chield got ap on the other side and said, wad they aecuse the best fentlemen in the land on the ont': of a broken coward! for it's like that Morris had been drummed ont o' the army for rimuing awa in Flanders; and lie said, it was like the story had been made up hetween the minister and him or ever he had left Lummon; and that, if there was to be a search-warrant granted, he thonght the siller wal be finnd some gate near to St. Jannes's Palace. Aweel, they trailed up Morris to their har, as they ca't, to see what he conld say to the jol) ; lout the folk that were ngain him gne him sic: an awfin' thronghgam abont his rimnin' awa, and about a' the ill he had ever dnne or said for a' the forepart o' his life, that Patie says he looked mair like ane dead than living ; and they con'dua get a word o' sense ont o' him, for downi, hit fright at their gowling and ronting. He mann be a saft snl', wi' a head me better than a fozy frosted turnip: : it wad hae ta'en a hantle o' them to semur Andrew Fairserviee out o' his tale.'
'And how did it all end, Andrew ? did your friend happen to learn?'
'On, ny ; for as his walk's in this comntry, Pate put uff his journey for the space of a week or thereby, becanse it wal be acceptable to his customers to bring down the news. It just $n$ ' gaed aff like monnshine in water. The fallow that beygan it drew in his homs and said that, thongh he helieved the man had been rubbit, yet he aeknowledged he might hae heen mista'en abont the particulars. And then the uther chield got up and said he cared na whether Morris was rubbit or no, proviled it wasna to beeome a stain on ony gentleman's honour and reputation, especially in the north of England; "for," said he before them, "I come frae the north mysell, and I carena a bordle wha kens it." And this is what they ea' explaining - the tame gies up a bit, and the tither gies up a hit, mul as friemls again. Aweel, after the Commons' Parliament had tusgit and rived and ruggit at Morris and his rubbery till they were tired o't, the Lorily' Parliament they behoved to hae their spell o't. In pmir anld Scotliand's Parliament they a' sate thegither, cheek by choul, and than they didna need to hae the same blethers twice ower again. But till't their lordships went wi' as muckle teeth mul gule-will as if the matter haid heen a' sperk mul spmut new. Firrhye, there whs something suil about me Cambelf, that suld hae been eonecrued in the rult. hery, mair or less, and that he suld hae had a warrant frme the Duke of Argyle, as a textimumial $0^{\prime}$ his charaster. Aurd this pmi MacCallmin More's bearll in a bleize, an ginde reason thare was; anil he gat up wi' an unto hunge, and gneril them a' lowk alont them, mul wal ran it ev alsm their thrmata there was never ane o' the Camphells but was as wight, wise, warlike, and wortly trust as muld Sir John the (iracme. Now, if your honeur's sure ye arema a drap's bluid akin to a Cample ll, us I am mane mysell, sme far as 1 com comit my kin or hat hal it comited to me, I'll gie ye mis mind on that matter.'
'Yon may be assured il have mo cominxion whatever with my gentleman of the mane.'
(On, than we may speak it quietly amaug omrells. There's mith ginde mill haul n' the Campleds, like other manes. But the grit folk at Lammen even now : for he cama prevecesely le said to belang to ony o' the twa sides o' ihem, sate deil ane ": them likes to quarrel wi' him: sate they cen vited Mortiv's tale a fanse enhnmuions libel, as they ca't, and if he halm gien them leg-buil, he was likely to line tn'en the air win the pillury for leasing-makinc.'.
So speaking, honest Andrew collected his dibhes, spades, amd hoes, and threw them inis a wheel-harrow - heisurely, lawever, and allowing me full time to pht any firther prestions which might aecour to me befiore he trmillal them off to the twolhonse, there to repuse luring the manning day. I thenght it best to speak out ree, lest this medhling fellow should suppase there were more weighty reasons for my silene than actually existed.
'I slould like to see this emmtryman of yomrs, Andrew, ambl to hear his news frum himeelf directly. Yom lave prolmhly. heard that I had some tromble from the impertinent folly if this man, Morris (Andrew grinamed a most significant grin), anl I shmold wish to see some comsin, the merchant. to ask him the particnlars of what he heard in Lamblon, if it comble lee dure without much tronble.'
'Nuething mair easy,' Ans ew ohserven : 'he had hut to hint to his consin that 1 wantel a pair or twa o' hose, and he wan the wi' me as fast as he could lay leg to lee grimal.'
' $O$ yes, assure him I shall be a customer ; and as the night in,
as you may, settled and fair, I shall walk in the garden until he comes; the mon will seon rise over the fells. Youn my hring him to the little lncek-gate; and I shall have plensure, in tho memwhile, in leoking on the bushes and evergreens hy the bright frosty movilight.'
'Vara right - vara right ; thut's what I hat aften waid - an kail-haid or a colliflour glances sute gle ${ }_{b}$ 'y by momilight, it 's like a leddy in her diamomes.'
So saying, off went Andrew Fairservice with great glee. Ho hail to walk about two miles, a labour he madertook with the greatent pleasure, in order to secure to his kinsman the sale of some articles of his trade, thongh it is probuble he would nut have given him sixpence to trent him to a yuart of ale. "Illo goord-will of an Englishman would have displayed itwelf in a mamer oxactly the reverse of Androw's' thonght I, as I piceel along the sinooth-cut velvet walks, which, embowered with high hedges of yew and of holly, intervected the ancient garden of Osbaldistone Hall.
As I turned to retrace my stops, it was natural that I should lift up my eyes to the windows of the old library, which, small in size but several in number, stretched aloug the second story of that side of the house which now faced me. Jight glanced from their casenents. I was not surprised at this, for I knew Miss Vernon often sate there of an evening, though from motives; of delicacy I put a strong restraint upon myself, and never sought to join her at a time when I knew, all the rest of the fanily being engaged for the evening, our interviews must necessarily have been strictly tête-it-tête. In the mornings we nisually read together in the same roon; but then it often happened that one or other of our consins entered to seek some parchment duodecino that cunld be converted into a fishingbook, despite its gildings and illnmination, or to tell ns of some 'sport toward,' or from mere want of knowing where else to dispose of themselves. In short, in the mornings the library was a surt of public room, where man and woman might meet as on nentral gromed. In the evening it was very different: aud, bred in a comutry where much at rention is paid, or was at least then paid, to biemserume, I w sirons to think for Miss Vernun concerning those points of propriety where her experience did not afford her the means of thinking for herself. I made her therefore comprehend, as delicately as I conld, that when we had evening lessons the presence of a third party was proper.

Miss Vernon first langhel, then blushed, and was disposed to be displeased; and then, suddenly checking herself, sumb, I believe yon are very right; and when I feel indined to be a very lonsy seholar I will brile old Martla with a cult of tea to sit by me and be my screen.'
Martha, the old honsekeeper, purtonk of the tante of the family at the Hall. A tonst and tankarl womld have pleased her better than all the tea in Chima. However, .s the use of this beverage was then eorfined to the higher maks, Martha folt some vanity in being asked to partake of it ; and by dint of a great deal of sugur, many words searce less sweet, and abmadance of toast and butter, she was sometimes prevailed numin to give as her commemance. On other occanions the servants almost unanimonsly shmmed the library atter nightfall, heconse: it was their foolish pleasure to believe that it hay on the hamuted side of the honse. The more tio. rous had seen sights mud heard somuds there when all the rest of the honse was quiet; and even the yompgenires were far from having any wish to enter theve formidable !recincts after nighltfall without necessity.
That the library had at one time been a favourite resource of Rashleigh, that a private door out of one side of it commmincated with the sepuesterel and remote apmrtment which he chose for himself, rather increased than disarmed the terrors which the honselook had for the dreaded library of Osbaldistone Hall. His extensive information as to vihat passed in the world, his profound knowledge of science of every tind, a few physical experiments which he occasic nally showed off, sere, in a ho' . of so much ignorance and bigotry, esteemed gool reasons supposing him endowed with powers over the spiritial wor He nuderstond Greek, Satin, mul Hebrew; and herefore, acecording to the apprehension, and in the plirase, of in i, irnther Wilfred, needed not to care 'for ghaist cr 'rarghaist, luvil in dobbie.' Yea, the servants persistel that 'r, harl hearl hime hold conversations in the library when every vansal sinal in the family were gone to bed; and that he spent the nixht in watching for bogles, and the morning in sleeping in his hed, when he shonld have been heading the homids like a true Osbuldistone.
All these absurd rumours I had heard in broken hints and imperfect sentences, from which I was left to draw the inference ; mul, as easily may be supposed, I langhed them to scorn. But the extreme solitude to which this chamber of evil fame was committed every night after curfew time was an additional reason why I should not intrude on Miss Vernon when she chose to sit there in the evening.

To resume what I was saying, I was not surprised to see a glimmering of light from the library windows; but I was a little struck when I distinctly pereeived the shalows of two persons pass along and intercept the light from the lirst of the winlows, throwing the casement for a mon:ent into shade. 'it must he' old Martha,' thonght I, 'whom Diam has engaged to be her companion for the evening, or I mist have heen ministaken, and taken Diana's shadow for a second persin. No, by Heaven! it appears on the second window - two fignres distinctly traced ; and now it is lost again; it is seen on the third, on the fourth, the darkened forms of two perions distinetly seen in each window, as they pass along the room betwixt the windows and the lights. Whom can Diana lave got for a companion?' The passage of the shadows between the lights and the casements was twice repeated, as if to satisfly me that my observation served me truly ; after which the lights were extinguished, and the shades, of course, were seen 10 more.
'Iritling as this circumstance was, it occupied my mind for a considerable time. I did not allow myself to suppose that my friendship for Miss Vernon had any direetly selfish view; yet it is incredible the displeasure I felt at the idea of her admitting any one to private interviews at a time and in a place where, for her own sake, I had been at some tronble to show her that it was improper for me to neet with her.
'Silly, romping, ineorrigible girl!' said I to myself, 'on whom all good advice and delicacy are thrown away! I have been eliented by the simplicity of her mamer, which I suppose she can assume just as she conld a straw bonnet, were it the fashion, for the mere sake of celebrity. I suppose, notwithstanding the excellence of her understanding, the society of half a dozen of clowis to play at whisk and swablers wonld give her more pleasure than if Ariosto limself were to awake from the dead.'
'I'lis reffection came the more powerfully across my mind becanse, having mistered up comrage to show to biania my yersion of the tirst busk of Ariosto, I haul requented her to invite Martha to a tea-party in the library that evening, to which arrangenent Miss Vornmi had refinsed her consent, alleging some apology which I thonght frivolons at the time. I had not long speculaten wn this disisgreable subject when the back garden-door opened and the fignres of Andrew and his countryman, bending moder his pack, erossed the moonlight alley, and called my attention elsewhere.

I fomid Mr. Maeready, as I expectel, a tough, sagacions, longhealed Scotchman, and a collector of news botli from choice and profession. He was able to give me a distinct aceomit of what haul passed in the ILomse of Commons and Ifonse of Lords on the affair of Morris, whieh, it appears, had been made by both parties a tonelistone to ascertain the temper of the Parliment. It appeared also that, as I had learned from Andrew by second hand, the ministry had proved too weak to support a story involving the character of men of rank and importance, and resting upen the eredit of a person of such indifferent fame as Morris, who was, moreover, confinsed and contradictory in hiss mode of telling the story. Maeready was even able to simply me with a eopy of a printed jonrnal, or news-letter, selifom extending beyond the eapital, in which the substance of the lehate was mentioned ; and with a eopy of the Duke of Arigyle's speed, printed upon a broalside, of whieh he had purchased several from the hawkers, beeanse, he said, it wonld be a saleable artiele on the north of the 'Tweed. 'Ihe first was a meagre statement, full of blanks and asterisks, and which added little or nothing to the information I had from the Scotehman; and the Duke's speeeh, thongh spirited and elopnent, eontained ehiefly a panesyrie on his comntry, his family, and his clan, with a few compliments, equally sincere, perhaps, thongh less glowing, whieh he took so favonrable an opportunity of paying to hinnself. I could not learn whether my own repntation had been direetly implicated, althongh I pereeived that the honour of ony unele's family had been impeached, and that this person Campbell, stated by Morris to have been the most active robber of the two by whom he was assailed, was said by him to have appeared in the behalf of a Mr. Osbaldistone, and by the eomivance of the Justice procnred his liberation. In this particular Morris's story jumped with my own suspicions, which hat attached to Campinell from the moment I saw hime appear at Jnstice Inglewool's. Vexed npon the whole, as well as perplexed with this extraordinary story, I dismissed the two Sentelmen, after making some purthases firm Macready, and a small eompliment to Fainservice, and retired to my own apartment to consider what I ought to do in defence of my character thus publiely attacked.

CHAPTER XV

Whence, and what art thou?
Milton.

AFTER exhausting a sleepless night in meditating on the intelligence I had received, I was at first inclined to think that $i$ ought as speedily as possible to return to London, and by my open appearance repel the calumny which had been spread against me. But I hesitated to take this course on recollection of my father's disposition, singularly absolute in his decisions as to all that concerned lis family. He was most able, certainly, from experience, to direct what I ought to do, and, from his acquaintance with the most distinguished Whigs then in power, had influence enough to obtain a hearing for my cause. So upon the whole I judged it most safe to state my whole story in the shape of a narrative addressed to my father ; and as the ordinary opportunities of intercourse between the Hall and the post-town recurred rarely, I determined to ride to the town, which was about ten miles' distance, and deposit my letter in the post-office with my own hands.

Indeed I began to think it strange that, though several weeks had elapsed since my departure from home, I had received $n o$ letter either from my father or Owen, although Rashleigh had written to Sir Hildebrand of his safe arrival in London, and of the kind reception he had met with from his uncle. Admitting that I might have been to blame, I did not deserve, in my own opinion at least, to be so totally forgotten by my father; and I thought my present excursion might have the effect of bringing a letter from him to hand more early than it would otherwise have reached me. But, before concluding my letter concerning the affair of Morris, I failed not to express my carnest hope and wish that my father would honour me with a few lines; were it but to express his advice and commands in an affair of some difficulty, and where my knowledge of life could not be supposed adequate to my own guidance. I found it impossible to prevail on myself to urge my actual return to London as a place of residence, and I disguised my unwillingness to do so under apparent snbmission to my father's will, which, as I imposed it on luyself as a sufficient reason for not urging my tinal departure from Osibaldistone Hall, would, I doubted not, be received as such by my parent. But I begged permission to come to Lumbon, for a short time at least, to meet and refute the infamous calmmies which had been circulated concerning me in so public a mamer. Having made up my packet, in which my earnest desire to vindicate my character was strangely blendel with reluctance to quit my present place of residence, I role over to the post-town and ileposited my letter in the office. By doing so, I obtained possession, sonewhat carlier than I should otherwise have done, of the following letter from my friend Mr. Owell : -

- Dear Mr. Francis,

'Yours received per favour of Mr. R. Osbaldistone, and note the contents. Stall do Mr. R. O. such civilities as are in my power, and have taken him to see the Bank and customhouse. He seems a sober, stealy yonng gentleman, and takes to business; so will be of service to the firm. Could have wished another person had turned his mind that way; but Goul's will be done. As cash may be scarce in those parts, have to trust yon will excuse my inclosing a goldsmith's bill at six days' sight, on Messrs. Hooper and Giriler of Newcastle, for finn, which I doubt not will be duly honoured. - I rem.in, as in duty bound, dear Mr. Frank, your very respectfinl and obedient servant, Josepit Owen.

Abstract

' Postscriptum. - Hope you will advise the above coming safe to hand. Am sorry we lave so few of yours. Your father nays he is as insual, but looks poorly.'

From this epistle, written in old Owen's formal style, I was rather surprised to observe that he made no acknowledgment of that private letter which I had written to him, with a view to possess him of Rashleigh's real character, although, from the conrse of post, it seened certain that he ought to have received it. Yet 1 had sent it by the usual conveyance from the Itall, and had no reason to suspect that it could misearry upon the road As it comprised matters of great importance, both to my father and to myself, I sat down in the post-office and again wrote to Owen, recapitulating the heads of my former letter, and requesting to know in conrse of post if it had reached him in safety. I also acknowledged the receipt of the bill, and promised to make nse of the contents if I shonld have any occasion for money. I thought, indeed, it was odd that my father should leave the care of supplying my necessities to his elerk; bit I concluded it was a matter arrangel between thicm. At any rate ()well was a bachelor, rich in his way, and passionately attached to me, so that I had no hesitation in being obliged to him for a suall sum, which I resolved to consider as a loan, to be returned with my earliest ability, in case it was not previously repaid by my father; and I expressed myself to this purpose to Mr. Owen. A shopkecper in a litule town, to whom the postmaster directed me, readily gave me in gold the amonnt of my bill on Messrs. Hooper and Girder, sil that I returned to Osbaldistone Hall a good deal richer than I had set fortl. This reeruit to my finances was not a matter of indifference to me, as I was necessarily involved in some expenses at Osbaldistone Hall ; and I had seen, with some uneasy impatience, that the sum which my travelling expenses had left unexhausted at my arrival there was imperceptibly diminishing. This souree of anxiety was for the present removed. On my arrival at the Hall I found that Sir Hildebrand and all his offspring had gone down to the little hamlet, ealled 'Trinlay Knowe, 'to see,' as Andrew Fairservice expressed it, 'a wheen midden-eocks pike ilk ither's harns ont.'
'It is indeed a brutal amusement, Andrew ; I suppose yon have none such in Scotland?'
' Na , na,' answered Andrew, boldly ; then shaded away his. negative with, 'unless it be on Fastern's E'en, or the like n' that. But, indeed, it's no mnckle matter what the folk do to the midden pootry, for they haud siecan a skarting and scraping in the yard that there's nae getting a bean or pea keepit for then. But I an wondering what it is that leaves that turret-door open ; now that Mr. Rashleigh's away it canna be him, I trow.'

The turret-door to whieh he alluded opened to the garden at the bottom of a winding-siair, leading down from Mr. Rashleigh's apartments. 'I'his, as I have already mentioned, wis situated in a seqnestered part of the house, communicating with the library by a private entrance, and by another intricate and dark vaulted passage with the rest of the house. A long narrow turf-walk led, between two high holly hedges, from the turret-door to a little postern in the wall of the garden. By nieans of these communications Rashleigh, whose movements were very independent of those of the rest of his family, could leave the Hall or returu to it at pleasure, without his absence or presence attracting any observation. But during his absence the stair and the turret-door were entirely disused, and this made Andrew's observation somewhat remarkable.
'Have yon often observed that door open?' was ny questi.nn.
' $N$ o just that often neither ; but I hae noticed it ance or twice. I'm thinking it mann hae been the priest, F'ather Vaughan, as they ca' him. Ye 'll no cateh ane o' the servants ganging up that stair, puir frightened heathens that they are, for fear of bogles and brownies, and lang-nebbit things frae the neist warld. But Father Vaughan thinks himsell a privileged per-son-set him up and lay him down! I'se be cantion the warst stibbler that ever stickit a sermon ont ower the 'I'weed yonder wad lay a ghaist twice as fast as him, wi' his holy water and his idolatrous trinkets. I dimua believe he speaks gude Latin neither; at least he disma take me up when I tell him the learued names o' the plants.'
Of Father Vaughan, who divided his time and his ghostly care between Osbaldistone Hall and about half a dozen mansions of Catholic gentlemen in the neighbourhood, I have as yet said nothing, for I had seen but little. He was aged about sixty, of a good fanily, as I was given to understand, in the north; of a striking and imposing presence, grave in his exterior, and much respected anong the Catholics of Northumberland as a worthy and upright nan. Yet Father Vaughan did not altogether lack those peciliarities which distinguish his order. There hung about him an air of mystery, which in Protestant eyes savoured of priestcruft. 'The natives - such they might be well termed - of Osbahdistone IFall looked njp to him with much more fear, or at least more awe, than affection. His condemnation of their revels was evilent from their being discontinued in some measure when the priest was a resident at the Hall. Even Sir Hillebrand himself put some restraint upon his conduct at such times, which perhaps rendered Father Vanghan's presence rather irksome than otherwise. Te had the well-bred, insinuating, and ahnost flattering address peculiar to the elergy of his persuasion, especially in Eugland, where the hy Catholic, hemmed in by penal laws, and by the restrictions of his sect and recommendation of his pastor, often exhibits a reserved, and almost a timid, manner in the society of Protestants ; while the priest, privileged by his order to mingle with persons of all creeds, is open, alert, and liberal in his intercourse with them, desirous of popularity, and usually skilful in the mode of obtaining it.
voL. IV- 10

146

ROB ROY

Father Vaughan was a particular acquaintance of Rashleigh's otherwise in all probability lie would searce have been able to maintain his footing at Osbaldistone Hall. 'I'his gave me no desire to cultivate his intimacy, nor did lic seem to make any advances towards mine; so our occasional intercourse was confined to the exchange of mere civility. I considered it as extremely probable that Mr. Vaughan might occupy Rashleigh's apartnient during his occasional residence at the fall ; and his profession rendered it likely that lie should occasionally be a tenant of the library. Nothing was more probable than thiat it night have been his candle which had excited my attention on a preceding evening. This led me involuntarily to recollect that the intercourse between Miss Vernon and the priest was marked with something like the same mystery which characterised her communications with Rashleigh. I had never heard her mention Vaughan's name, or even allude to him, excepting on the occasion of our first meeting, when she mentioned the old priest and Rashleigh as the only conversible beings besides herself in Osbaldistone Hall. Yet although silent with respect to Father Vaughan, lis arrival at the Hall never failed to impress Miss Vernon with an anxious and fluttering tremor, which lasted until they had exchanged one or two significant glances.

Whatever the mystery might be which overclouded the destinies of this beautiful and interesting female, it was clear that Father Vaughan was implicated in it ; unless, indeed, I could suppose that he was the agent employed to procure her settlement ir the cloister, in the event of her rejecting a union with either of my corsins - an office which would sufficiently account for her obvious cnotion at his appcarance. As to the rest, they did not seem to converse much together, or even to seek each other's socicty. Their league, if any sulbsisted between them, was of a tacit and understood nature, operating on their actions withont any necessity of specch. I recollceted, however, on reflection, that I had once or twice discoverel signs pass betwixt them, which I had at the time supposed to bear reference to some hint concerning Miss Vernon's religious observances, knowing how artfully the Catholic clergy maintain, at all times and seasons, their influence over the minds of their followers. But now I was disposed to assign to these communications a deeper and more mysterious import. Did he hold private meetings with Miss Vernon in the library ? was a question whieh occupied my thoughts; and if so, for what purpose? And why should she have admitted an intimate of the deceitful Rashleigh to suel close confidenee?
These questions and difficulties pressed on my mind with an interest which was greatly inereased by the impossibility of resolving them. I had already becin to suspect that my friendship for Diana Vernon was not altogether so disinterested ins in wisdom it ought to have been. i had already felt myself becoming jealous of the contemptible lout Thorncliff, and taking more notice than in prudence or dignity of feeling I ought to have done of his silly attempts to provoke me. And now I was serutinising the conduct of Miss. Vernon with the most close and eager observation, which I in vain endenvoured to palm on myself as the offspring of idle euriosity. All these, like Benediek's brushing his hat of a miorning, were signs that the sweet youth was in love; and while my judgment still lenied that I had been guilty of forming an attachment so imprudent, she resembled those ignorant guides who, when they have led the traveller and themselves into irretrievable error, persist in obstinately affirming it to be impossible that they can have missed the way.

CHAPTER XVI

- It happened one day about noon, going to my hont, I was exceelingly smrprised with the print of a man's naked foot on the shore, which wais very plaiu to be seen on the sand.'

Rubinson Crusoc.

WITH the blended feelings of interest and jealonsy whieh were engendered by Miss Vernon's singular sitnation, my observations of her looks and actionss became acutely sharpened, and that to a degree which, notwithstanding my efforts to conceal it, could not escape her penetration. The sense that she was observed, or, more properly speaking, that she was watchell by ny looks, seemed to give Diana a mixture of embarrassment, pain, and pettishness. At times it seenned that she sought an opportul ty of resenting a conduct which she conld not but feel as offensive, considering the frankness with which she had mentioned the difficnlties that surrounded her. At other times she seemed prepared to expostulate upon the subject. But either her conrage failed or some other sentiment impeded her seeking an erlairecissement. Her displeasure evaporated in repartee, and her expostulations died on her lips. We stood in a singular relation to ench other, spending, and by mutual choice, much of onr time in clove society with each other, yet disguising our mutual sentiments, and jealous of, or offended by, each other's actions. There was betwixt us intimacy without confidence; on one side love without hope or purpose, and curiosity withont any rational ior jastifiable motive ; and on the other embarrassment and donht. vecasionally mingled with displeasure. Yet I believe that this agitation of the passions, such is the nature of the human besmm, as it continued by a thousimul irritating and interesting, thongh petty circumstances, to render Miss Vernon and me the constant objeets of each other's thoughts, tended upon the whole to inerease the attachment with which we were naturally disposed to regard each other. But although my vanity early discovered that my presence at Osbaldistone Hall had given Diana some additional reason for disliking the cluister, I conld by no means confide in an affection which seented completely sulburlimate to the inysteries of her singular situation. Miss Vernon was of a character far too formed and determined to permit her love for me to overpower either her sense of duty or of prindence, and she gave me a proof of this in a conversation which we had together about this periool.

We were sitting together in the library. Miss Vernon, in turning over a copy of the Orlemdo f'urioses which helonged to me, shook a piece of written puper from between the leaves. I hastened to lift it, but sle prevented me.
'It is verse,' she saill, on glancing at the paper; and then mufolding it, but as it to wait my "nswer before proceeding 'May I take the liberty? nay, nay, if you blush and staminer I must do violence to your modesty and suppose that permission is granted.'
'It is not worthy your pernsal-- a scrap of a translation. My dear Miss Vernon, it would be too severe a trinl that you, who understand the original so well, shonld sit in jndgment.'
'Mine honest friend,' replied Diama, 'llo not, if yon will be guided by my advice, bait your hook with too much hmaility ; for, ten to one, it will not catch a single complinent. You know I belong to the unpopulur fanily of Tell-truths, and would not flatter Apollo for his lyre.'
She proceeded to read the first stanza, which was nearly to the following purpose:-

Ladies, and knights, and arms, and love's fair flame, Deeds of emprize and conrtesy, I sing;
What time the Moors from sultry Africk came, Led on by Agramant, theia youthfnl king-
He whom revenge and hasty ire did bring O'er the broad wave, in France to waste and war.
Such ills from old Trujano's death diul spring, Which to avcuge he crame from realins afar,
And menaced Cliristian Charles, the Roman Emperor.
Of dauntless Roland, too, my strian shall somm, In impurt never known in pruse or rhyme,
How he, the chief, of jnilgme'nt dern'd profomed, For huckless love was crazell npon a time -
'There is a great deal of it,' said she, glancing along the paper, and interrupting the sweetest sommels which mortal ears can drink in - those of a youthfinl peet's verses, namely, read by the lips which are dearest to them.
'Much more than ought to eugage your attention, Misw Vernon,' I replied, something mortified, and I took the verwes from her unreluctant hand ; 'and yet,' I coutinued, 'shut up ax I ain in this retired situntion, I have felt sometimes I could not annuse myself better than by carrying on, merely for my own amusement you will of course understand, the version if this fascinating author, which I began some monthe since when I was on the banks of the Garoune.
'The question would only be,' said Diama, gravely, 'whether you could not spend your time to better purpose?'
'You mean in original composition,', said I, greatly flattered : 'but, to say truth, my genius rather lies in finding words anil rhymes than ideas; and therefore I am happy to use those which Ariosto has prepared to my hand. However, Misw Vernon, with the encouragement you give $\qquad$ '
'Pardon me, Frank, it is encouragement not of ny giving but of your taking. I meant neither origimal composition nor translation, since I think you might employ your time to far better purpose than in either. You are mortified,' she continued, 'and I am sorry to be the cause.'
' Not mortified - certainly not mortified,' said I, with the best grace I could muster, and it was but indifferently assumed : 'I an too much obliged by the interest you take in nee.'
'Nay, but,' resumed the relentless Diana, 'there is hoth mortification and a little grain of anger in that constrained tone of voice; do not be angry if I probe your feelings to the bottom - perhaps what I am about to say will affect them still more.'
I felt the childishness of my own conduct and the superion manliness of Miss Vernon's, and assured her that she need net fear my wincing under criticism which I knew to be kiully: meant.
'That was honestly meant and sail,' she replien ; 'I knew full well that the fiend of poetical irritability flew away with the little preluding congh which ushered in the decharation. And now I must be serious. Have you heard from your father lately ?'
' Not a word,' I replied ; 'he has not honoured me with a single line during the several months of my residence here.'
'That is strange ; you are a singular race, you bold Osbaldixtones. Then you are not aware that he has gone to Holland to arrange some pressing affairs which required his own immediate presence?'
'I never heard a word of it until this moment.'
' And farther, it must be news to you, mid I prosume scarcely the most agreeable, that he has left Rashleigh in the a!most uneontrolled management of his affiuirs until his return?'

I startod, and conld not suppress my surprise mul approhension.
'Yon have reason for alurm,' suid Miss Vernom, very gravely; 'and were I yon I would endenvonr to meet mind obviate the dangers which arise from so milesirable min arrangement.'
'And how is it possible for me to do so?'
'Everything is possible for him who possesses comrage and activity, she suid, with a look resembling one of those heroines of the age of chivalry whose eneouragenent was wont to give champions double valour at the hour of need; 'and to the timid, and hesitating everything is impossible, because it vecmes so.'
'And what would you advise, Miss Vernon ?' I repliel, wishing, yet dreading, to hear her miswer.
She paused a moment, then answered firmly - 'IThat you instantly leave Osbaldistone Hall and return to Lomion. Yon have perhaps already,' she contimell, in a softer tone, 'been here too long; that fault was not yours. Every snceeding moment you waste here will be a crime. Yee, a crime; for I tell you plainly that if Rashleigh long manuges your father's affairs you may consider his ruin as consummated.'
'How is this possible ?'
'Ask no questions,' she said ; 'but, believe me, Rashleigh's views extend far beyond the possession or inerease of commercial wealth. He will only make the command of Mr. Osbaldistone's revenues and property the means of putting in motion his own ambitious and extensive schemes. While your father was in Britain this was impossible ; during his absence Rashleigh will possess many opportunities, and he will not negleet to use them.'
'But how ean I, in disgrace with my father mid divestel of 'tll coutrol', over his affairs, prevent this danger by my mere presence in London?'
'That presence alone will do much. Your elain to interfere is a part of your birtlright, nud is inalienable. You will lave the countenance, doubtless, of your father's liead elerk and confidential friends and partuers. Above nll, Rashleigh's schemes are of a nature that' - she stopped abruptly, as if fearful of saying too mueh - 'are, in shurt,' she resmmed, 'of the nature of all selfish and unconscientious plans, which are speedily abaadoned an nown as thone who frame them perceive their arts are discovered and watched. Therefure, in the language of your favourite pret -

ROB ROY

To hore ! 10 borwe ! urge doulten to thowe that frar.'
A feeling, irresistible in its impulae, inducel me to reply'Ah! Diana, can yrm give me alvice to leave ()sbaldistone Ifall? wen indeed I have already leen ar resident here too long!'

Miss Vernon colonrel, lont proceeded with great firmuess: - Indeed, I do give yon this advice - mot only to quit Osbablis. tone Hall, but never to return to it more. You have mily one friend to regret here,' she contimued, forcing in smile, 'minl she has been long accustomel to sacribiee her friendships mul her comforts to the welfare of others. In the worll! you will meet a humidred whose friemidhip, will be as disinterested, more asefin, less oncmmbered by mintowaril circmustances, less intluenced lyy evil tongues anl evil times.'
'Never!' I exclaimed - ' never! the world can afforl me nothing to repay what I must leave behinil me.' Here I tow her hand anil pressed it to my lips.
'This is folly!' she exclaimed - 'this is madness!' and she atruggled to withdraw her hand from my grasp, but not so stubbornly as actually to succeed until I haul held it for nearly a minute. 'Hear me, sir!' she sain, 'nud eurb this unmanly burst of passion. I am, by a molemin contract, the I. 'if Heaven, unless 1 conld prefer being wedderl to villainy in the person of Raslileigh Osinidistone, or brutality in that of his brother. I am, therefore, the liride of Heaven, betrothed to the convent from the eradle. 'lo me, therefore, these raptures are misapplied ; they only serve to prove a fiarther necessity for your departure, mul that withomt delay.' At these words she broke suddenly off, and said, but in a suppressed tome of voice, 'Leave me instantly; we will meet here again, but it must he for the last time.'

My eyes followed the direction of hers as she spoke, and I thought I saw the tapestry slake which covered the coor of the secret passage from lhashleigh's room to the library. I conceivel we were observed, and turned an inquiring glance in Miss Vernon.
'It is nothing,' said she, faintly, '"a ${ }^{\prime}$. ; behind the arras."'
""Dead for a ducat," " woull have been my reply had I dared to give way to the feelings which ruse indignant at the idea of being subjecterl to an er sulropper on such an ncension. Pru denee, and the necessity of suppressing my pmasion mil obeying Diam's reiteratel commanil of ' Leave mel leave me:' cmue in time to prevent any rash netion. I left the apmrtment in n will whirl and giddiness of minl, which I in vain attempted to compune when I returned to my own.
A elmon of thomghtes intrinted themselves on me at once, pmssing lastily throngh my hrain, intercepting annd overshad. owing each other, and revenbling those fogs which in mom. tainons comintries are wout to descend in obsenre volunes and distigure or obliterate the 1:sual marks by which the traveller steers his eonrse throngh the wilds. 'I'he dark and mulefined ilen of danger $a$ ising to my father from the machinations of such a man as Raxhleigh (Vshaldistone ; the limelf leclaration of love whieh I hail oflicren to Miss Vermm's neceptance ; the acknowledged difficulties of her sitmation, bomme by a previons contract to salerifice herself to a elowister or to an ill-assorted marriage-all pressel themselves at onee upon my recollection, while my julgnent was mable deliberately to consider any of them in their just light num hearinge. But elietly, anil ofuve all the rest, I was perplexed by the manner in which Miss Vernon had received my tender of affection, and by her manner, which, Huctmating betwixt smmpathy and firmuess, seemed to intimute that I possessed an interest in her bosom, but nut of force suffieient to comitermanace the obstacles to her avowing a mutuml aflection. The glanee of feur, rather than surprise, with which she had watched the motion of the tapentry over the concealed door implied an apprehension of dauger whieli I eonhl not but suppose wel: gromuled; for Diam Vermon was little sulject to the harvous emotions of her sex, and totally mapt to fear without actual and rational cause. Of what muture comlld those mysteries he with which she was surromuled as with mu enehanter's spell, and which seemed contimually to exert an active inthence over her thoughts and actions, tinngh their agents were never visible? On this sulject of dombt my mimel finally rested, as if glad to shake itself free from investigating the propriety or prudence of my own conduct, by transferring the inquiry to what concerned Miss Vernon. 'I will be resolved,' I concluded, 'ere I leave Oshaldistone Hall, concerning the light in which, I must in fiture regard this fascinating beine over whose life fromkess an! mystery seem to have divided their reign, the former inspiring her words and sentiments, the latter spreading in misty influence over all her actions.'

Joined to the obvinus interests which arose from curiosity and anxious passion, there mingled in my feelings a strong, though unavowed and undefined, infusion of jealousy. This sentiment, which springs up with love as naturally as the tare. with the wheat, was excited by the degree of intluence which Diana appeared to concede to those unseen beings by whom her actions were limited. The more I reflected upon her character, the more I was internally though unwillingly convinced that she was formed to set at defianec all control excepting that which arose from affection; and I felt a strong, bitter, and gnawing suspicion that such was the foundation of that influence by which she was overawed.
These tormenting doubts strengthened my desire to penetrate into the secret of Miss Vernon's conduct, and in the prosecution of this sage adventure 1 formed a resolution, of which, if you are not weary of these details, you will find the result in the next chapter.

CHAPTER XVII

I hear a voice you cannot hear, Which says, I must not stay ;
I see a hand you cannot see,
Which beckous me away.
Tickell

IHAVE already told yon, Tresham, if you deign to hear it in remembrance, that my evening visits to the library had seldom been made except by appointment, and mider the sanction of old Dame Martha's presenee. This, however, was entirely a tacit conventional arrangement of my own institnting. Of late, as the embarrassments of our relative situation had increased, Miss Vemon and I had never met in the evening at all. She harl therefore no reason to suppose that I was likely to seek a renewal of these interviews, and especially withont some previous notice or appointment betwixt us, that Martha might, as nsual, be placed upon duty ; but, on the other hand, this cautionary provision was a matter of understanding, not of express enactment. The library was open to me, as to the other members of the family, at all hours of the day and night, and I eould not be aceused of intrusion however sudlenly and muexpectedly I might make my appearence in it. My belief was strong that in this apartment Miss Vernon occasionally received Vaughan, or some other person, by whose opinion she was aceustomed to regulate her conduet, and that at the times when she could do so with least chance of interruption. The lights which gleamed in the library at umsual hours, the passing shadows which I had myself remarkerl, the footsteps which might be traced in the morning dew from the turret-door to the postern-gate in the garden, somms and sights whieh some of the servants, and Andrew Fairservice in particular, had observed and accomnted for in their own way. all tended to show that the place was visited by some one different from the ordinary immates of the Hall. Comected as this visitant must probably be with the fates of Diana Vernon, I did not hesitate to form a plan of discovering who or what he was, how far his influence was likely to produce good or evil consequences to her on whom he acted - above all, though I endeavoured to persuade mysclf that this was a mere subor dinate consideration, I desired to know by what means this person had acquired or maintained his influence over Diana, and whether he ruled over her by fear or by affection. 'I'le proof that this jealous curiosity was uppermost in my minul arose from my imagination always ascribing Miss Vernon's conduct to the influence of some one individnal agent, although, for aught I knew about the matter, her advisers might be as numerous as legion. I remarked this over and over to myself, but I found that my mind still settled back in my original conviction that one single individual, of the masculine sex, and in all probability young and handsome, was at the bottom of Miss Vernon's condret; and it was with a burning desire of discovering, or rather of detecting, such a rival that I stationed myself in the garden to watch the nomicnt when the lights should appear in the library windows.

ROB ROY

So eager, however, was my impatience that I commenced my watch for a phenomenon which could nut appear nutil darkness a full hour before the daylight disappeared on a Jnly evening. It was Sabbath, and all the walks were still and solitary. I walked up and down for some time, enjoying the refreshing coolness of a smmmer evening, and meditating on the probable consequences of my enterprise. The fresh and balny air of the garden, impregnated with fragrance, produced its usinal sedative effects on my over-heated and feverish blood ; as these took place, the turmoil of my mind began proportionally to abate, and I was led to question the right I had to interfere with Miss Vernon's secrets, or with those of my mucle's family. What was it to me whom my mele might choose to conceal in his honse, where I was myself a guest only by tolerance? And what title had I to pry into the affairs of Miss Veruon, fraught, as she had avowed them to be, with mystery, into which she desired no scrutiny?
Passion and self-will were ready with their answers to these questions. In detecting this secret, I was in all probability about to do service to Sir Hildebrand, who was probably ignorant of the intrigues carried on in his family ; and a still more important service to Miss Vernon, whose frank simplicity of character exposed her to so many risks in maintaining a private eorrespondenee, perhaps with a person of doubtful or dangerous character. If I seemed to intrude myself on her confidenee, it was with the generons and disinterested - yes, I even ventured to call it the disinterested - intention of guiding, defending, and protecting her against craft, against nalice, above all, against the secret comsellor whom she had ehosen for her confidant. Such were the arguments which my will boldly preferred to my conscience as coin which ought to be current; and which conscience, like a grombling shopkeeper, was contented to aceept rather than come to an open breach with a eustomer, thongh more than doubting that the tender was spurious.

ROB ROY

While I paced the green alleys debating these things pro and con, I suddenly lighted upon Andrew Fairserviee, perched up like a statue by a range of bee-hives, in an attitude of devout conte uplation ; one eye, however, watching the motions of the little irritable citizens, who were settling in their straw-thatched mansion for the evening, and the other fixed on a book of devotion, which much attrition had deprived of its comers and worn into an oval shape ; a circmmstance which, with the elose print and dingy colour of the volume in question, gave it an air of most respectable antiquity.
'I was e'en taking a spell o' worthy Mess John Quackleben's Flower of a Sureet Sacour sam on the Middenstend of this Worlh,' said Andrew, closing his book at my appearance, and putting his horn spectacles, by way of mark, at the place where he had been reading.
'And the bees, I observe, were dividing your zittention, Andrew, with the learned anthor?'
'They are a contmmacions generation,' replied the gardener; 'they hae sax days in the week to hive on, and yet it's a common observe that they will aye swarm on the Sabbathday, and keep folk at hane frae hearing the Word. But there s mae preaching at Graneagain Chapel the e'en; that's aye ae mercy.'
'Yon might have gone to the parish church as I did, Andrew, and heard an excellent discourse.'
'Clauts o' canlel parritch - clants o' canld parritch,' replied Andrew, with a most supercilious sneer ; 'gude anench for dogs, begging your honour's pardon. Ay ! I might nae doubt hae heard the curate linking awa at it in his white sark yonder, and the musicians playing on whistles, mair like a penny wedding than a sermon; and to the boot of that, I might hate gane to even-song, and heard Daddie Docharty numbling his mass; muckle the better I wad hae been o' that!'
'Docharty!' said I (this was the name of an old priest, an Irishman, I think, who sometimes officiated at ()sbaldistone Hall), 'I thought Father Vaughan had been at the Hall. He was here yesterday.'
'Ay,' replied Andrew; 'but he left it yestreen, to gang to Greystock or some o' thae west-country hanlils. 'There's an unco stir amang them a' e'enow. They are as busy as my bees are; God sain them ! that I suld even the puir things to the like o' Papists. Ye see this is the second swarm, and whiles they will swarm off in the afternoon. The first swarm set off sime in the morning. But I an thinking they are settled in their skeps for the night. Sae I wuss your honour good-night, and grace, and muckle o't.'
So saying, Andrew retreated ; but often east a parting glance upon the 'skeps,' as he called the bee-hives.
I had indirectly gained from him an important piece of information - that Father Vaughan, namely, was not suppposed to be at the Hall. If, therefore, there appeared light in the windows of the library this evening, it either could not be his, or he was observing a very secret and suspicions line of conduct. I waited with impatience the time of sunset und of twilight. It had hardly arrived ere a glean from the windows of the library was seen, dimly distingnishable amidst the still enduring light of the evening. I marked its first glimpse, however, as speedily as the benighted sailor deseries the first distant twinkle of the lighthouse which marks his course. 'The feelings of doubt and propriety which had hitherto contended with my curiosity and jealousy vanished when an opportninity of gratifying the former was presented to me. I re-entered the house, and, avoiding the more frequented apartments with the conseionsness of une who wishes to keep his purpose secret, I reached the door of the library, hesitated for a moment as my hand was upon the lateh, heard a suppressed step within, opened the door-and found Miss Vernon alone.

Diana appeared surprised, whether at my sudden entrance or from some other eause I could not guess ; but there was in her appearance a degree of flutter which I had never before remarked, and which I knew eould only he produced by unnsual emotion. Yet she was calm in a moment; and such is the foree of conscience, that I, whon studied to surprise her, seemed myself the surprised, and was certeinly the embarrassed person.

ROB ROY

 arrived at the Hall?'No one that I know of,' I answered, in some confusion; 'I only sought the Orlando.'
'It lies there,' said Miss Vernon, pointing to the table.
In removing one or two books to get at tha: which I pretended to seek, I was, in truth, meditating to make a handsome retreat from an investigation to which I felt my assurance inaderuate, when I pereeived a man's glove lying upon the table. My eyes eneountered those of Miss Vernon, who blushed deeply.
'It is one of my relies,' she said, with hesitation, replying not to nyy words, but to my looks ; "it is one of the gloves of my grandfather, the original of the superb Vandyke which you
As if she thought something more than her bare assertion was neeessary to prove her statement true, she opened a drawer of the large oaken table, and, taking out another glove, threw it towards me. When a temper naturally ingenuous stoops to equivoeate or to dissemble, the anxious pain with which the unvonted task is laboured oftel. induees the hearer to doubt the authentieity of the tale. I cast a hasty glance on both gloves, and then replied gravely - 'The gloves resemble each other, doubtless, in form and embroidery; but they cannot form a pair, sinee they both belong to the right hand.'
She bit her lip with anger, and again coloured deeply.
'Yon do right to expose me,' she replied, with bitterness ; 'some friends would have only judged from what I said that I ehose to give no particular explanation of a circumstanee which calls for none - at least to a stranger. You have judged better, and have made me feel not only the meamess of duplieity, lint my own inadequacy to sustain the task of a dissembler. I now tell you distinetly that that glove is not the fellow, as yon have acutely diseerned, to the one which I just now prom need. It belongs to a friend yet dearer to me than the original of Vandyke's pieture - a friend by whose counsels I have been, and will be, guided - whom I honour - whon I - , She pansed.
I was irritated at lier manner, and filled up the blank in my own way. 'Whom she lones, Miss Vernon wonld say?'
'And if I do say so,' she replied, haughtily, ' by whom shall my affection be ealled to aceount?'
' Not by me, Miss Vernoil, assuredly. me aequitted of sueh presumption. But entreat yon to hold But,' I continned, with some emphasis, for I was now piqued in return, 'I hope Miss Vernon will pardon a friend, from whom she seems disposed to withdraw the title, for observing $\qquad$ ,
'Observe nothing, sir,' she interrupted, with some vehemence, 'except that I will neither he doubted nor questioned. There does not exist one by whom I will be either interrogated or judged; and if you sought this musual time of presenting yourself in order to spy upon my privacy, the friendship or interest with which you pretend to regard me is a poor excuse for your uncivil curiosity.'
'I relieve you of mv presence,' said I, with pride equal to her own ; for my temper has ever been a stranger to stooping, even in cases where my feelings were most deeply interested --'I relieve you of my presence. I awake from a pleasnit but a most delusive Ireani ; and - but we understand eneh other.'

I had reached the door of the apartment when Miss Vermon, whose movements were sometimes so rapid as to seeln almost instinctive, overtook me, and, catching hold of my arm, stopped me with that air of anthority which she could so whimsically assume, and which, from the naiveté and simplicity of her manner, had an effect so peculiarly interesting.
'Stop, Mr. Frank,' she said ; ' you are not to leave me in that way neither ; I am not so amply provided with friends that I can afford to throw away even the nigrateful and the selfish. Mark what I say, Mr. Francis Osbaldistone. You shall know nothing of this mysterious glove,' and she held it up as she spoke- ' nothing; no, not a single iota more than you know already; and yet I will not permit it to be a gauntlet of strife and defiance betwixt ns. My time here,' she said, sinking into a tone somewhat softer, 'must necessarily be very short ; yours must be still shorter. We are soon to part, never to meet again; do not let us quarrel, or make any mysterions miseries the pretext for farther embittering the few hours we shall ever pass together on this side of eternity.'

I do not know, T'resham, by what witchery this fascinating creature obtained such complete mangement over a temper which I eamot at all times manage myself. I had determined, on entering the library, to seek a complete explanation with Miss Vernon. I had found that she refused it with indignant defiance, and avowed to my face the preferenee of a rival ; for what other eonstruetion could I put on her declared preference of her mysterions confidant? And yet, while I was on the point of leaving the apartment and breaking with her for ever,

"I hope miss vernon will pardon a friend."
From a painting by Herdman.
it cost her butt a change of look and tone, from that of real and haughty resentment to that of kind and playful despotism, again shaded off into melancholy and serions feeling, to lead me beck to my seat, her willing suljeet on her own haril terms.
'What does this avail?' said I, as I sate down. 'What can this avail, Miss Vernon? Why should I witness emburrassments which I camot relieve, and mysteries which I offend you even by attempting to penetrate 1 Inexperienced as you are in the world, you must still be aware that a beautiful young woman can lave but one male friend. Even in a male friend I should be jealons of a confidence shared with a third party muknown and coneealed; but with you, Miss Vernon-
'You are, of course, jealous, in all the tenses and moods of that aniable passion? But, my good friend, you have all this time spoke nothing but the paltry gossip which simpletons repeat from play-books and romanees, till they give mere cant a real and powerful influenee over their minhls. Buysand girls prate themselves into love; and when their love is like to fall asleep they prate aud teaze themselves into jealousy. But you and 1, Frank, are rational beings, and neither silly nor inlle enough to talk ourselves into any other relation than that of plain honest disinterested friendship. Any other mion is as far out of our reach as if I were man or you woman. To speak truth,' she alded, after a moment's hevitation, 'even though I am so complaisant to the decormm of my sex as to blush a little at my own plain dealing, we cannot marry if we would, and we ought not if we could.'
And certainly, Tresham, she did blush most angelically as she made this eruel deelaration. I was about to attaek both her positions, entirely forgetting those very suspieious which lad been confinned in the course of the evening, but she proceeded witha cold firmmess which approached to severity.
'What I say is sober and indisputable truth, on which I will neither hear question nor explanation. We are therefore friends, Mr. Osladilistone, are we not?' She held out her hand and, taking mine, alded - 'And nothing to each other now or heneeforward exeept as friends.'
She let go my haul. I smm it and my head at once, fairly overcroued, as Spenser would have termed it, by the iningled kinduess and firmness of her manner. She hastened to change the subjeet.
'Here is a letter,' she said, 'directed for yon, Mr. Osbaldistone, very duly and distinctly; but which. notwithstanding vul. $1 V-11$ the cantion of the person who wrote and addressed it, might perhaps never have reached your hands, hall it int fallen into the possession of a certain Pacolet or onchanted dwarf of mine, whom, like all distressed damsels of romance, I retain in my seerut serviee.'

I opened the letter and glaneed over the eontents; the minfolded sheet of paper dropired from my hands, with the involmintary exelamation of 'Gracions Heaven! my folly and disohedience have ruined my father!'
Miss Vemon rose with looks of real and affeetionate alarm 'Yon grow pale, you are ill; shall I bring you a glass of water! Be a man, Mr. Osbaldistone, and a tinn one. Is yonr father - is he no more ?'
'He lives,' said I, 'thank God! but to what distress and difficulty
'If that be all, despair not. May I read this letter I' she suid, taking it up.

I assented, hardly knowing what I said. She read it with great attention.
'Who is this Mr. 'Iresham who signs the letter !'
'My father's partuer (your own good father, Will), hut he is little in the habit of acting personally in the business of the honse.
'He writes here,' said Miss Vermon, 'of various letters sent yon previously.' to you previously.'
'I have received uone of them,' I replied.
'And it appears,' she continued, 'that Rashleigh, who has taken the full management of affairs during your father's absenee in Holland, has some time since left Inmidon for Scotlanl, with effeets and remittanees to take up large hills granted by your father to persons in that eountry, and that he has not since been heard of.'
'It is but too true.'
'And here has been,' she added, looking at the letter, ' $a$ head elerk, or some such person-Owenson - Owen-despatched to Glasgow to find out Rashleigh, if possible, and you are entreated to repair to the same place and assist him in his researehes.'
'It is even so, and I must depart instantly.
'Stay but one moment,' sail Miss Vernon. 'It seems to me that the worst which cem come of this matter will be the loss of a eertain sum of money; auld can thas 'ring tears into your eyes 1 For shame, Mr. (isbaldistone:'
'Yon do me injustiee, Miss Vemon,' I answered. 'I grieve not for the lons, lint for the effect which I know it will prodnce on the spirits mul health of my father, to whom merantile credit is us homour ; and who, if dechared insulvent, womhl sink iuto the grave, "मypressed hy a sense of grief, remomene, mal despar, like that of a soldier eonvieted of cownrdice, or a man of honour who han host his rank and charicter in society. All this I might have prevented hy a tritling sucrifice of the firdisht pride mul indolenee which recoiled from sharing the haloonse of his honomrable mal nsefill profession. Guorl Heaven! how shall 1 releem the consennenees of my error ${ }^{\prime}$ '
'By instuntly repmiring to Glasgow, as yon are conjured to do by the friend who writes this letter.'
'But if Rashlieigh,' saill I, 'has really formed this base nuld mucurcientions scheme of phundering his lenefictor, what prospect is there that I can find means of frustrating a plan so deeply laid?'
'The prospect,' she replied, 'indeet, may be uncertain; but, on the other hand, there is 110 possibility of your doing any serviee to your father by remaining liere. Remember, hal you been on the post destined for you this disaster could not have happened; laasten to that which is now pointed unt, and it may possibly be retrieved. Yet stay - du not leave this room until I return.'
She left me in confusion and amazement ; amid whieh, however, I conld find a lueid interval to admire the firmness, composure, and presence of mind which Miss Vemon seemed to possess on every erisis, however sudden.
In a few minutes she returned with a sheet of paper in her hand, folded and sealed like n letter, but without address. 'I trust yon,' she said, 'with this proof of my friendship, becanse I have the most perfeet confidence in your honour. If I muderstand the nature of your distress rightly, the funds in Rashleigh's possession minst be recovered by a certain daythe $12 t$ th of September, I think, is named - in order that they may be applied to pay the bills in question ; and, consequently, that if adequate fands be provided before that period your fither's credit is safe from the apprelended calamity.'
'Certainly; I so muderstand Mr. Tresham.' I looked at your father's letter again, and added, 'There cannot be a lo itht of it.'
: Well,' said Diana, 'in that case my littie Pacolet may he of use to you. You have heard of a spell contaned in a letter.

ROB ROY

Take this packet; do not open it until other and orlinary means have failed; if yon succeed by your own exertions, 1 trust to your honour for dentroying it withont opening or sulforing it to loo opened. But if not, yon may break the seal within ten days of the finted day, and yon will timel direetions which may powsibly bo of service to yon, Adien, Prank; we never meet more ; but sometimes think on your friend Die Vernoll.'

She extemded her hami, but I elasped her to my bosom. She sighell as she extricated herself from the embrace which she prermitted, excaped to the door which led to her own apartment, and I suw her no more.

CHAPTER XVIII

> Alad hurry, hurry, of they role, An fant an faint might lw; Hura, harra, the demp cann ride, Dont fear to ride with nur?

ilimoril

THERE is one advantage in an acemmatation of evils differing in canse anif character, that the distraction which they affiord by their contradictory operation prevents the patient from leing overwhelned muler either. I was deeply grieved at my sepmation from Miss Vernom, yet not so unnch so as I shomid have been had not my father's apprehended distresses forced themselves on my attention; and I was distressed by the news of Mr. 'l'resham, yet less so than if they had fully ocenpied my mind. I was neither a false lover nor an unfeeling son ; but man can give bint a certain portion of distressful emotions to the canses which demand them, and if two operate at once our sympathy, like the finds oi a compronding bunkrupt, can only be divided between them. Sueh were my reflections when I gained my apartment - it seems, from the illustration, they alrealy began to have a twang of commeree in them.

I set myself serionsly to consider yomr father's letter. It was not very distinet, and referred for several particulars to Owen, whon ' was entreated to meet with as som as possible at a Scotch tow: ealled Glasgow; being infomned, moreover, that my ohl friend was to be heard of at Messrs. MacVittie, Mackiin, and Company, merchants in the Gallowgate of the said town. It likewise allonled to several letters, which, as it appeared to me, must have miscarried or have been intercepted, and complained of my olnhrate silence in ternsw which would have been highly mijnst had my letters reached their purposed destination. I was muzed as I read. That the spirit of Rashleigh walked around me, and comjured mp, these doubts and diffieulties by which I was surrounden, I could not doubt for one instant; yet it was frightful to conceive the extent of eombined villainy and power which he monst lave employed in the perpetration of his designs. Let me do myself justice in one respect ; the evil of parting from Miss Vernon, however distressing it might in other respects and at another time have appeared to me, sunk into a snborinate consideration when I thonght of the dangers impending over my father: I did not myself set a high estimation on wealth, and had the affectation of most yomng men of lively imagination, who sur, pose that they can better dispense with the posisession of money than resign their time and facnlties to the labonr neeessary to aegnire it. But in my father's case I knew that bankruptcy would be eonsidered as an ntter and irretrievable disgrace, to which life wonld afford no eomfort, and death the speediest and sule relief.

My mind, therefore, was bent on averting this catastrophe, With an intensity which the interest conld not have proluced hiad it referred to my own fortunes; and the result of my deliberation was a firm resolution to depart from Osbaldistone Hall the next day, and wend my way without loss of time to meet Owen at Glasgow. I did not hold it expedient to intimate my departure to my unele otherwise than by leaving a letter of thanks for his hospitality, assuring him that sudflen and important uusiness prevented my offering them in person. I knew the blunt old knight wonld readily excise cercmony, and I had sucl a belief in the extent and decided charaeter of Rashleigh's maehinations, that I han some apprehension of his having provided means to intercept a jonmey which was mudertaken with ew to disconeert them, if my departure were publiely anmomeed at Osbaldistone Hall.

I therefore determined to set off on my jonrney with dayligint in the ensning morning, and to gain the neighbouring kingdom of Scotland before any idea of my departure was entertaned at the Hall ; but one impediment of eonseqnence was likely to prevent that speed which was the soul of my experlition. I did not know the shortest, nor indend any, road to Glasgow; and as, in the eiremnstanees in which I stoon, despatel War of the greatest consequenee, I letermined to consult Andrew Fairservice on the snbjeet, as the nearest and most anthentic authority within my reach. Late as it was, I set off with the intention of aseertaining this important point, and after a few minutes' walk reaehed the dwelling of the gardener.

Andrew's dwelling was situated at no great distance from the exterior wall of the garden, a sung comfortable Northumlrian cottage, built of stones roughly dressed with the hammer, and having the windows and doors decorated with huge heavy architraves, or lintels, as they are called, of hewn stone, and its roof covered with broad ele's flags, instead of slates, thateh, or tiles. A jargonel' pear-irce is' one end of the cottage, a rivulet, and flower lot of a mon' me extent, in front, and a kitchen-garden behinc' ;" paddesk or a cow, and a small tield, cultivated with severa' empa of :rain, rather for the benefit of the cottager thau for sale, amounced the warm and cordial couforts which Old England, even at her most northern extremity, axtends to her meanest inhabitants.
As I approached the mansion of the sapient Andrew, I heard a noise which, being of a nature peculiarly solemm, nasal, and prolonged, led me to think that Andrew, according to the decent and meritorious custom of his comutrymen, had assembled some of his neighbours to join in fanily exereise, as he called evening devotion. Andrew had indeed neither wife, child, nor fenale inmate in his family. 'The first of his trate,' he said, 'had had encugh o' thae cattle.' But, notwithstanding, he sometimes contrived to form an andience for himself out of the neighbouring Papists and Church-of-England men - brands, as he expressed it, snatched out of the burning, om whom he used to exercise his spiritual gifts, in defiance alike of Father Vaughan, Father Docharty, Kashleigh, and all the world of Catholics around him, who deemed bis interference on such occasions an act of heretical interloping. I eonceived it likely, therefore, that the well-disposed neighbours might have assenubled to hold some chapel of ease of this nature. The noise, however, when I listened to it more accurately, seemed to proceed entirely from the lungs of the said Andrew; and when I interrupted it by entering the honse I found Fairservice alone, combating as he best could with long words and hard names, and reading aloul, for the purpose of his own edification, it volume of controversial divinity. 'I was just taking a spell,' siid he, laying aside the hage folio volume as I enterel, 'of the worthy Doctor , Lightfoot.'
'Lightfoot!' I replied, looking at the ponderons volume with some surprise ; 'surely your author was mhappily named.'
'Lightfoot was his name, sir; a divime he was, and another kime of a divine than they hae nowadays. Always, I crave your pardon for keeping ye standing at the dow, hut having been mistrysted - Gude preserve us! - with ae horle the night already, I was dubions o' opening the yett till I had gaen through the e'ening worslip; and I lad just finished the fifth chapter of Nehemiah. If that wima gar them keep their distanee I wotna what will.'

ROB ROY

'Trysted with a bogle!' said I ; 'what do you mean by that, Andrew?
'I said mistrysted,' replied Andrew ; 'that is as muekle as to say, fley'd wi' a ghaist - Gule preserve us, I say again!'
'Flay'd by a ghost, Andrew : how am I to understand that ?'
'I did not say flay'd,' replied Andrew, 'but fley'd, that is, 1 got a fleg, and was ready to jump out o' my skin, though naebody offerel to whirl it aff my body as a man wad bark a tree.
'I beg a truee to your terrors in the present ease, Andrew, and I wish to know whether you can direet me the nearest way to a town in your country of Scotland ealled Glasgow?'
'A town ca'd Glasgow !' eehoed Andrew Fairserviee. 'Glasgow's a ceety, man. And is't the way to Glasgory ye were speering if I kend? What suld ail me to ken it ? it's no that dooms far frae my ain parish of Dreepulaily, that lies a bittoek farther to the west. But what may your honour be gaun to Glasgow for?'
'Partienlar business,' replied I.
'That's as muckle as to siy, " speer nae questions, and I'll tell ye nae lees." 'Io Glasgow?' He made a short panse. 'I am thinking ye wad be the better 0 ' some ane to show you the road.'
'Certainly, if I could meet with any person going that way.'
'And your honour, donbtless, wad consider the time and trouble?
'Unquestionably ; my business is pressing, and if your can find any guide to aceompany me I'll pay him handsomely.'
'This is no a day to speak o' earnal matters,' said Andrew, casting his eyes upwards ; 'but if it werew' Sabbath at e'en, I wad speer what ye wad be content to gie to ane that wad bear ye pleasant company on the road, and tell ye the names of the gentlemen's and noblemen's seats and castles, and eount their kin to ye?'
'I tell you, all I want to know is the road I mist travel : I will pay the fellow to his satisfaction : I will give him anything
'Ony thing,' replied Andrew, 'is naething; and this lad that I am speaking o' kens a' the short euts and queer bye-paths
'I have no time to talk abont it, Andrew ; do you make the bargain for me your own way.'
'Aha! that's speaking to the purpose,' answered Andrew. 'I an thinking, since sae be that sae it is, I'll be the lad that will guide you inysell.'
'You Andrew? how will you get away from your employment?'
'I tell'd your honour a while syne that it was lang that I hae been thinking o' flitting, maybe ass lang as frae the first year I came to Osbaldistone Hall ; nud now I am o' the minul to gang in gude earnest. Better soon as syne; better a finger aff ' as aye wagging.'
'You leave your service then? But will you not lose your wages?'
'Nae doubt there will be a certain loss; but then I hate siller o' the laird's in my hands that I took for the apples in the auld orchyard ; and a sair bargain the folk had that bought them - a wheen green trash. And yet Sir Hildebrand's as keen to hae the siller - that is, the steward is as pressing about it -as if they had been a', gowden pippins; and then there's the siller for the seeds - I'm thinking the wage will be in a manner decently made up. But doubtless your honour will consinder my risk of loss when we won to Glasgow ; and ye 'll be for setting out forthwith ?'
'By daybreak in the morning,' I answered.
"That's some. 'the suddenest; whare am I to find a maig? Stay-1 st the beast that will answer me.'
'At five in the 1 .urming, then, Andrew, yon will meet me at the head of the avenue.'
'Deil a fear o' me - that I suld say sae - missing my tryste,' replied Andrew, very briskly ; 'and, if I might allvise, we wad be aff twa hours earlier. I ken the way, dark or light, as weel as blind Ralph Ronaldson, that's travelled ower every nomer in the country-side, and disna ken the colour of a heather-cowe when a's dune.'
I highly approv: if Andrew's amendment on my original proposal, and we agrieed to meet at the place appointel at three in the morning. Ai mice, however, a reflection came across the mind of my intender: : avelling companion.
'The bogle! the wogle!, what if it should come ont upon us? I downa, forgather wi' thae things twice in the four-andtwenty hours.'
'Pooh ! pooh !' I exclained, breaking away from him, 'fear nothing from the next world ; the earth contains living fiends who can act for themselves without assistance, were the whole host that fell with Lucifor to return to aid and ahet them.'

ROB ROY

With these words, the import of which was suggested by my own situation, I left Andrew's habitation and returned to the Hall.
I made the few preparations whieh were necessary for my proposed journey, examined and loaded my pistols, and then threw myself on my bed, to obtain, if possible, a brief sleep, before the fatigue of a long and anxious joumey. Nature, exhausted by the tumultuous agitations of the day, was kinder to me than I expeeted, and I sunk into a deep and profound slumber, from which, however, I started as the old elock struck two from a turret adjoining to my bedchamber. I instantly arose, struek a light, wrote the letter I proposed to leave for my uncle, and, leaving behind me such artieles of dress as were cumbrous in carriage, I deposited the rest of my wardrobe in my valise, glided downstairs, and gained the stable without impediment. Withont being quite such a groom as any of my cousins, I had learned at Osbaldistone Hall to dress and saddle niy own horse, and in a few minutes I was nounted and ready for my sally.
As I paced up the old avenue, on which the waning moon threw its light with a pale and whitish tinge, I looked back with a deep and boding sigh towards the walls which contained Diana Vernon, under the despondent impression that we had probably parted to meet no more. It was impossible, among the long and irregular lines of Gothic casements, which now looked ghastly white in the moonlight, to distinguish that of the apartment which she inhabited. 'She is lost to me already,' thought I , as my eye wandered over the dim and indistingnishable intricacies of architecture offered by the moonlight view of Osbaldistone Hall - 'she is lost to me already, ere I have left the place which she inhabits! What hope is there of my maintaining any correspondenee with her when leagues shall

While I paused in a reverie of no very pleasing nature, the 'iron tongue of time told three upon the drowsy ear of night,' and reminded me of the neeessity of keeping my appointment with a person of a less interesting description and appearanee - Andrew Fairserviee.

At the gate of the avenue I found a horseman stationed in the shadow of the wall, but it was not until I had coughed twiee, and then called 'Andrew,' that the horticulturist replied, 'I'se warrant it's Andrew.'
'Lead the way, then,' sain. I, 'and be silent if yon can till we are past the hamlet in the valley.'
Andrew led the way accordingly, and at a mueh brisker pace than I would have recommended ; nud so well did he obey my injunctions of keeping silenee, that he wonld reinrn nu answer to my repeated inquiries into the canse of such minecessary haste. Extricating ourselves by short cuts knuwn to Andrew from the mumerons stony lanes and bye-paths which intersected eaeh other in the vicinity of the Hall, we reached the open heath; and riding swiftly across it, took our course amonig the barren hills which divide England from, Scorland on what are called the Mildle Marches. I'lie way, or rather the broken track which we occupied, was a happy interchange of bog and shingles ; nevertheless, Andrew relented nothing; of his speed, but trotted manfully forward at the rate of eight or ten miles an hour. I was surprised and provoked at the feilow's obstinate persistence, for we made abrupt ascents and descents over ground of a very break-neek charaeter, and traversed the edge of precipices where a slip of the horse's feet would have consigned the rider to certain death The moon, at best, afforded a dubious and imperfect light ; but in some places we were so much under the sharle of the mountain as to be in total darkness and then I could only trace Andrew by the clatter of his horse's feet and the fire which they struck from the flints. At first this rapid motion, and the attention which, for the sake of personal safety, I was compelled to give to the conduet of my horse, was of service hy forcibly diverting my thoughts from the varions painful reflections whieh must otherwise have pressed on my mincl. But at length, after hallooing repeatedly to Andrew to ride slower, I became serionsly ineensed ut his impulent perseverance in refusing either to obey or to reply to me. My fanger was, however, quite impotent. I attempted once or twice to get up alongside of my self-willed gnide, with the purpose of knocking him off his horse with the butt-end of my whip; but Andrew was better mounted than I, and either the spirit of the animal which he bestrode, or more probably some presentiment of iny kind intentions towards him, induced himi to quicken his pace whenever I attempted to make up to him. ()n the other hand, I was compelled to exert iny spurs to keep him in sight, for without his gridance I was too well aware that I should never find my way through the howling wilderness which we now traversed at such an unwonted pacc. I was so angry at length that I threatened to lave recourse to my pistols, and send a bullet after the Hotspur Andrew which should stop his fiery-footed carcer, if he did not abate it of his own accord. Apparently this threat made smue impression on the tympanum of his ear, however deaf to all my milder entreaties ; for he relaxed his pace upon hearing it, and, sufferiug me to close up to him, observed, 'Ihere wasna muckle sense iu riding at sic a daft-like gate.

ROB ROY

'And what did you mean by doing, so at all, you selfwilled scoundrel?' replied I; for I was in a towering passion, to which, by the way, nothing contributes nuore than the having recently undergone a spice of personal fear, which, like a few drops of water tlung on a glowing fire, is sure to intlame the ardour which it is insulficient to quench.
'What's your inonour's wull?' replied Audrew, with intpenetrable gravity.
'My will, you rascal? I have been roaring to you this honr to ride slower, and you have never so much as answered me. Are you drunk or mad to belave so?'
'An it like your honour, I ann something dull o' hearing; and I'll no deny but I might have maybe taen a stirrup-cup at parting frae the auld biggiug whare I hae dwalt sae lang ; and having naebody to pledye, uae doubt I was obliged to do mysell reason, or else leave the end ${ }^{\prime}$ ' the braudy stoup to thae Papists; and that wad be a waste, as your honour kens.'
This might be all very true, and nuy circumstances required that I should be on goed terms with my gnide; I therefore satisfied myself with requiring of him to take his directions from me in finture concerning the rate of travelling.
Audrew, emboldened by the milduess of my tone, elevated his own into the pedantic, conceited octave which was familiar to him on host occasions.
' Your honour winna persnade me, and naebody shall persuade me, that it's either halesome or prudent to tak the night air on thae moors withont a cordial $\mathrm{o}^{\prime}$. clow-gillifower water, or a tass of brandy or aqnavite, or sie-like creature comfort. I hate taen the bent ower the Otterscape Rigg a hundred times, day and night, and never could fund the way unless I had taen my morning ; mair by token that I had whiles twa bits o' ankers o' brandy on ilk sile o' ne.'
'In other words, Andrew,' said I, 'you wer: a smuggler;
how does a man of your strict principles reconcile yourself to cheat the revenne ?'
'It's a mere spoiling o' the Egyptians,' replied Andrew; 'Puir auld Scotland suffers eneugh by thae blackguard loons o' excisemen and gangers, that hae cone down on her like lecinsts since the sad and sorruwfu' Union; it 's the part of a kind son to bring her a soup o' something that will keep, up her anld heart, and that will they nill they, the ill-fa'ard thieves.'

Upon more partianlar inquiry, I fonnd Andrew had frequently travelled these momitain-paths as a smmgrgler, both before and after his establishment at ()sbaldistone Hall ; a circumstance which was so far of inportance to me, as it prowed his capacity as a guide, notwithstanding the escupale of which he hat heren gnilty at his outset. Even now, thongh travelling at a more moderate pace, the stirrup-cup, or whatever else hat such an effect in stimulating Andrew's motions, seemed not totally to lave lost its intluence. He often cast a nervons and startled look behind him; and whenever the road seemed at all practicable, showed symptoms of a desire to accelerate his pace, as if he feared some pursinit from the rear. These appearances of alarm gradually diminished as we reached the top of a high bleak ridge, which ran nearly east an! west for about a mile, with a very steep descent on either side. The pale beams of the morning were now enlightening the horizon when Andrew cast a look behind him, and not secing the appearance of a living being on the noors whieh he had travelled, his hard features gradually unbent, as he first whistled, then sming, with much glee and little melody, the end of one of his native songs:
> 'Jenny, lass ! I think I hae her Ower the moor amang the heather ; All their clan shall never get her.'

He patted at the same time the neck of the horse which had carried him so gallantly; and my attention being directed by that action to the animal, I instantly recognised a favomrite mare of 'Thomeliff (Ssbaldistone. 'How is this, sir ?' said I, steruly; 'that is Mr. 'Thorneliff's uare!'
'I 'll no say bnt she may aiblins hae been his honour's Squire 'Thorneliff's in her day ; but she's mine now:'
'Yon have stolen her, yon rascal.'
' Na, na, sir, nae man can wyte me wi' theft. The thing stands this gate, ye see: Squire Thorncliff imorowed ten pumds o' me to gang to York races; deil a boddle wad he pay me back again, and spake o' raddling my banes, as he ca'd it, when I nsked him font for my ain buck again. Now I think it will riddle lim or he gets his horse ower the Borler again; unless he pays me plack and bewbee, he sall never see a hair o' her tail. I ken a camy chield at Loughmaben, a bit writer lad, that will put ne in the way to sort him. Steal the mear: na, na, far be the sill 0 ' theft frae Andrew Fairwervice; I have just arre-tell her jurisdictiones jumdumly cirusey., 'Thae are bonny writer words - amaist like the language o' huz gardeners and uther learned men. It's a pity they re sue dear : thae three words were a' that Andrew got for a lang law-plea, and four ankers $o^{\prime}$ as gude brandy as was e'er coupit ower craig. Hech, sirs: but law's a dear thing.'

HOB ROY

' Yon are likely to find it much dearer than you suppose, Andrew, if yon proceed in this mode of paying yourself withont legal authority.'
'Hout tont, we 're in Scotland now - be praised for't : - and I can find baith friends and lawyers, and juilges too, as weel as ony Osbaldistone o' them a'. My mither's mither's third consin was cousin to the provost o' Dumfries, and he wimna see a drap o' her blude wranged. Hout awa, the laws are indifferently administered here to a' men ulike; it's no like on yon side, when a chield may be whuppit awa' wi' ane o' Clerk Johmon's warrants afore he kens where he is. But they will hae little enengh law annung them by and by and that is ae grand reason that I hae gien them gude day.'

I was lishly provoked at the achicvement of Andrew, and considered it as a hard fate which a second time threw me into collision with a person of such irregnlar practices. I determined, however, to bny the mare of him when we should reach the end of our journey, and send her back to my cousin at Oslahllistone Hall; and with this purpose of repuration I resolved to make my uncle acquainted from the next post-town. It was needless, I thonght, to quarrel with Anirew in the meantime, who had, after all, acted not very umatnrally for a person in his circumstances. I therefore smothered my resentment, and asked him wha ine meant by his last expressions, that there wonld be littic law in Northumberland by and by.
'Law : said Audrew, 'hout, ay; there will be club-law enengh. The priests and the Irish officers, and thae Papist cattle that hae been sodgering abroal becanse they durstna bide at hame, are a' Heeing thick in Northmberland e'enow, and thae corbies dinfe gather without they smell carrion. As sure as ye live, his honour Sir Hildebrand is gann to stick his horn in the bog; there's naething but gun and pistol, sword and dagger amang them, and they 'll be laying on, l'se warrant : for they're fenrless fules the young Osbaldistone squires, nye uraving your honour's murdon.'

This speech recallerd to my memory some smspicions that I myself had entertuined that the Jacohites were on the eve of some desperate enterprise. But, conscions it did not become me to be a spy on my uncle's words and netions, I had rather avolled than availed myself of any opprortmity which ocenrred of remarking upon the signs of the times. Andrew Fairservice felt no such restraint, and donbtless spoke very truly in stating his conviction that some desperate plots were in agitation as a reason which determined his resolution to leave the Hall.
'IThe servants,' he stated, 'with the tenantry and others, hat been all regularly enrolled and mustered, and they wanted me to take arms also. But I'll ride in nae siccan troon; they little kend Andrew that asked him. I'll fight when I like mysell, but it sall neither be for the hure o' Bubylon nor ony hure in England.'

CHAPTER XIX

> Where longs to fall yon rifted pire, As weary of the inynlting air, The wert's thoughts, the warior's fire, The lover's sighs, are sleeping there. Langhones.

A$T$ the first Scotch town which we reacherl my guide sought out his friend and counsellor, to consult upon the proper and legal means of converting into his own lawful property the 'bonny creature ' which was at present his own only by one of those slight-of-hand arrangements whieh still sometimes took place in that once lawless district. I was somewhat diverted with tice dejection of his looks on his return. He had, it seems, been wither too commnnicative to his contidential friend, the attorney ; and learned with great dismay, in return for his unsuspeeting frankness, that Mr. 'I'outhope had during his absence been appointed elerk to the peace of the cominty, and was bound to commmicate to justice all such achievenments as that of his friend, Mr. Andrew Fairservice. There was a necessity, this alert member of the police stated, for arresting the horse and placing him in Bailie 'Trumbull's stable, therein to remain at livery, at the rate of twelve shillings (Scotch) per diem, mutil the question of property was duly tried and debated. He even talked as if, in strict and rigorons exeeution of his duty, he onght to detain honest Andrew himself; but on my guide's most piteonsly entreating his forbearance, he not only desisted from this proposal, but mande a present to Andrew of a broken-winded and spavined pony, in order to enable him to pursue his jonrney. It is true, he gnalified this act of generosity by exacting from poor Audrew an absolute cession of his right and interest in the gallant palfrey of 'Thorncliff Osbaldistone; a transference which Mr. 'Tonthope represented as of very little consequence, since his unfortunate friend, as ho facetionsly observed, was likely to get nothing of the mare excepting the halter.

Andrew seemed woeful and disconcerted, as I serewed out of him these purtienlars ; for his morthern pride was crinelly pinched by being (ommpelled to admit that attomeys were attomers on both sides of the 'Tweed, mad that Mr. Clerk Thouthone was not a farthing more sterline coin than Mr. ('lerk Jobson, i,

- It wadma hae vexed him half sue muckle ta hae been cheated ont $o$ ' what might amaist be suid to be won with the peril o' his eraig had it happened manag the Suglishers; but it was an meo thing to see hawks pike ont hawks' cen, or ae kimdly Seot cheat anither. But mat donbt things were strangely changed in his conntry sin' the sad ant sorrowfn' Luinn'; min event to which Andrew referred every symptom of depravity or degeneracy which he remarked among his comntrymen, more especially the inflammation of reekonings, the diminished size of pintstomps, and other grievancen, which he pointed ont to me during our journey.
For my own purt, I held myself, as things han! turned out, ar:puitted of all elarge of the mare, and wrote to my unele the cireunstances muler which she was carried into Scotland, coneluding with informing lim that she was in the hunds of justice and her worthy representatives, Bailie 'I'rmmbull and Mr. Clerk 'Touthope, to whon I referved hinn for farther partieulars. Whether the property returned to the Northmubrian fox-hunter, or comtinued to bear the persom of the Seottish attomey, it is mineeessary for me at present to saly.
We now pursined our journey to the north-westwarl, at a rate mueh slower than that at which we had achieved our noeturmal retreat from Eugland. (1ue elain of burreu and muinteresting hills succeeded muother, mutil the more fertile vale of Clyde opened upon us; and with such lespatch as we might we gained the town, or, as my guide pertimacionsly terneed it, the eity, of Glasgow. Of late years, 1 unierstanil, it has fully deserven the name which, ly a sort of political secomidsight, my guide assigned to it. An extensive and increasius trade with the West hulies and American colomines hase, if 1 am rightly informed, haid the fimmlation of wealth anil prosperity, which, if carefully strengthened and built umen, may one day support an immense fabric of commercial prosperity; but in the earlier time of which I speak the dawn of this splendour harl not arisen. The Cuion hat, indeed, opened to Scotland the trate of the Linglish colonies; but, betwixt want of capital and the mational jeulonsy of the Euglish, the merchants of Scotland were as yet exeluded in a grent measnr: from the exercise of the privileges which that menumable trenty conferred on them. Glangow lay on the wrong side of thin island for participating in the enst comutry or continental trade, by which the trifling cemmerce as yet possessed by Scotlmud chiefly wipportel itself. Yet, thongh she then, gave sumall promise of the commercial eminente to. which, 1 min informed, she seems now likely one day to attain, Glasguw, inthe prineipal central town of the wentern distriet of Scotland. was a place of considerable rank muld importmice. The broant and brimming Clyde, which Hows so near its walls, gave the means of min inland navigntion of some importance. Sot only the fertile plains in its inmediate neighbourhoon, but the dis tricts of Ayr and Dumfries, regarded Glasgow as their cupital, to which they transmitted their prodnce, and reeeived in return sueh necessnries mud lnxuries as their eonsmmption requiren.

ROH ROY

The dusky monntains of the Western Highlands often sent forth wilder tribes to frepuent the murts of St. Mungo's fivourite city. Hordes of wild, shaggy, dwarfish cattle and ponies, condueted by Highlanders as wild, as shaghy, and sometimes an dwarfish us the animals they had in elmirge, often traversed the streets of Glasgow. Strangers gazed with surprise on the: antique and fantastic dress, and listened to the unknown and dissonant sounds of their lminguge, while the monntaineers, armed even while engaged in this peaceful oceupation with musket and pistol, sword, dagger, mad target, stared with astonishment on the artieles of luxury of which they knew nut the use, and with an avidity which seemed somewhat alarming on the articles which they knew and vuluch. It is always with unwillinguess that the Highlnuder quits his deserts, and at thi early period it was like tearing a pine from its rock to plant him elsewhere. Yet even then the momutain glens were over peopled, althongh thimed oceasionally by funine or by this sword, and many of their inlabitants strayed down to Glasson. there formed settlements, there sought and fomed employ ment, although different, indeed, from that of their mative hill.. This supply of a hardy and useful popnlation was of consequen.e. to the prosperity of the place, furnished the means of carrying on the few manufactures which the town alrealy boasted, and laid the foundation of its future prosperity.

The exterior of the city corresponded with these promising cireumstances. The principal street was broul and important, decorated with publie buildings of murchitecture rather striking than correct in point of taste, mid rnminim hetween rows of tall hronses built of stome, the fronts of wheh were ceceasimmally richly ormmented with mamm-work; a cirenmathnce which gave the street mimposing nir of dignity mul grandenr, of which mont binglish towns are in some measure deprived by the slight, musubstantial, nuid perishable ynality and nypearance of the bricks with which they are comstrieted.
In the western metropelis of Scothand my guide and I arrived oin a Suturiay evenings, too late the entertain thonghes of husinesss of miy kind. We alighted at the door of 1 jolly hostler-wife, as Audrew called her, the 'Ostelere' of old father Chancer, by whon we were eivilly received.

On the following morning the bells pealel from every steeple, annomeing the sanetity of the rhy. Notwithstanding, however, what I hard hearl of the severity with which the Sabbath is ohserved in Seotland, miy first impulse, not mumturally, was to seek out Owen; but on monniry I finnd that my attempt wonld the in vain 'until kirk-time was ower.' Not ouly did my landlayly and guide jointly assure me that 'there wahna be a living sonl either in the comintig homse or dwelling homse of Messrs. MacVittie, MacFin, and Cimipnny,' to which (Owen's letter referred me, but, morenver, "fir less would I find any of the partners there. They were serious men, nud wan be where il minle Christians onght to be at sie a time, mid that was in the Burony Latigh Kirk.' ${ }^{\prime}$
Andrew Fairserviee, whose disgust at the law of his comntry haul fortmately not extembed iteself to the other learned professioms of his native land, how stmes forth the praises of the prearher who was to perform the dinty, to which my hostess replied with many loud amens. The result was, that I determimel to go to this popular place of worship, as much with the purpose of learning, if possible, whether Owen had arrived in Cllaggow, as with uny great expectation of edification. My hoper were exalted by the assuranee that, if Mr. Ephraim MacVittie - worthy man! - were in the land of life he wonld surrely houour the Barony Kirk that dhy with his presence ; and if he chanced to have a strauger within his gates, doubtless he wout! bring him to the duty along with him. This probability determinell my motions, mul, muler the escort of my faithful Anlrew, I set forth for the Barony Kirk.
On this oceasion, however, I had little need of his guidance ; for the erowd which foreed its way up a steep and rough paved street to hear the most popular preacher in the west of Scotland would of itself have swept me along with it. On attaining the summit of the hill we turned to the left, and a large pair of folding cloors admitted us, muongst others, into the open and extensive burying-place which surrounds the minster or cathedral church of Glasgow. The pile is of a gloomy and massive, rather than of an elegant, style of Gothic architeeture; but its peculiar character is so strongly preserved, and so well suited with the accompaniments that surround it, that the impression of the first view was awful mnd solemn in the extreme. I was indeed so much struck that I resisted for a few minutes all Andrew's efforts to drag me into the interior of the building, so deeply was I engaged in surveying its outward eharacter.

[^30]
ROB ROY

Situated in a populous and considerable town, this ancient and massive pile has the appearance of the most sequestered solitude. High walls divide it from the buildings of the eity on one side; on the other it is bounded by a ravine, at the bottom of whieh, and invisible to the eye, murmurs a wandering rivulet, adding by its gentle noise to the imposing solemnity of the scene. On the opposite sil? of the ravine rises a steep bank, covered with fir-trees closely planted, whose dusky shade extends itself over the cemetery with an appropriate and gloomy effeet. The churchyard itself had a peenliar character ; for thongh in reality extensive, it is small in proportion to the nmmber of respectable inhabitants who are interred within it, and whose graves are almost all covered with tombstones. There is therefore no room for the long rank grass which in most cases partially clothes the surface of those retreats where the wicked cease from tronbling and the weary are at rest. The broad flat monumental stones are placed so close to each other that the preeincts appear to be flagged with them, and, though roofed only by the heavens, resenble the floor of one of our old Euglish churches, where the pavement is covered with sepulchral inscriptions. The contents of these sad records of mortality, the vain sorrows which they preserve, the stern lesson which they teach of the nothingness of humanity, the extent of gromin which they so closely eover, and their uniform and melancholy tenor, reminded me of the roll of the prophet, which was 'written within and withont, and there was written therein lamentations and mourning and woe.'

ROB ROY

The cathedral itself corresponds in impressive majesty with these acrompaniments. We feel that its appearance is heavy, yet that the effeet produced would be destroyed were it lighter or more ornamental. It is the only metropolitan chureh in Scotland, exeepting, as I am informed, the cathedral of Kirkwall, in the Orkneys, whieh remained minjured at the Reformation; and Andrew Fairservice, who saw with great pride the effeet whiel it produeed upon my mind, thas accomited for its preservation : 'Ah!'it's a brave kirk - nane o' yere whigmaleeries and curliewurlics and open-steek hems about it a' solid, weel-jointed mason-wark, that will stand as lang as the warld, keep hands and gunpowther aff it. It had amaist a donneome lang syne at the Refornation, when they pu'd doun the kirks of St. Andrews and P'erth and thereawa', to cleanse them oo papery, and idolatry, and image worship, and smrplices, and sie like rags o' the muckle hure that sitteth on seven hills, as if ane wasna braid eneugh for her auld hinder end. Sae the commons o' Renfrew, and o' the Barony, and the Gorbals, and a' about, they beloved to come into Glasgow ae fair morning to try their hand on purging, the High Kirk o' Popish nicknaekets. But the townsmen o' Glasgow, they were feared their auld edifiee miglit slip the girths in gaun through siccan rough physie, sae they rang the conmon bell and assembled the train-bands wi' took o'drum - by good lnck, the worthy James Rabat was dean o' gnild that year; and a gule nason he was himsell, made him the keener to keep up the auld bigging and the trades assembled, and offered downright battle to the commons, rather than their kirk should coup the crans, as others had done elsewhere. It wasna for luve o' paperie; na, na! nane could ever say that o' the trades o' Glasgow. Sae they sune came to an agreement to take a' the iclolatrons statues of sants - sorrow be on them ! - out o' their neuks. And sae the bits o' stane idols were broken in pieces by Seripture warrant, and flung into the Molendinar burn, and the auld kirk stood as crouse as a cat when the flaes are kaimed aff her, and a'body was alike pleased. And I hae heard wise folk say that if the same had been done in ilka kirk in Scotland the Reform wad just lae been as pure as it is e'en now, and we wal hae mair Christian-like kirks; for I hae been sate lang in England that naething will drive't out o' my head that the dog-kennel at Osbaldistone Hall is better than mony a honse o' God in Scotland.'
Thus saying, Andrew led the way into the place of worship.

CHAPTER XX

It strikes an awe And terror on my aching sight ; the tombs And monumental caves of death look cold, And shoot a chillness to the trembling heart.  Mourning Bride.

NOTWITHSTANDING the impatience of my condnctor, I could not forbear to pause and gaze for some minutes on the extcrior of the building, rendered nore impressively dignified by the solitnde which ensued when its hitherto open gates were closed, after having, as it were, devoured the multitudes which had lately crowded the churchyard, but now, inclosed within the building, were engaged, as the shoral swell of voices from within announced to us, in the solemn exercises of devotion. The sound of so many voices, united by the distance into one harmony, and freed from those harsh discordances which jar the ear when heard more near, combining with the murmuring brook and the wind which sung among the old firs, affected me with a sense of sublimity. All nature, as invoked by the Psalmist whose verses they chanted, seemed united in offering that solemn praise in which trembling is mixed with joy as she addresses her Maker. I had heard the service of high mass in France, celebrated with all the échat which the choicest music, the richest dresses, the most imposing cercmonies could confer on it ; yet it fell short in effect of the simplicity of the Presbyterian worship. The devotion, in which every one took a share, seemed so superior to that which was recited by nusicians as a lesson which they had learned by rote, that it gave the Scottish worship all the advantage of reality over acting.
As I lingered to catch more of the solemn sound, Andrew, whose impatience became ungovernable, pulled me by the sleeve - 'Come awa', sir-come awa', we mamna be late o' gaun in to disturb the worship; if we bide here the searchers will be on us, and carry us to the guard-house for being idlers in kirk-time.
Thus admonished, I followed my guide, but not, as I had supposed, into the body of the cathedral. 'This gate - this gate, sir !' he exclaimed, dragging me off as I made towards the main entrance of the buiiding. 'There's but cauldrife lawwark gaun on yonder - carnal morality, as dow'd and as fusionless, as rue leaves at Yule. Here's the real savour of doctrine.'
So saying, we entered a small low-arched door, secured by a wicket, which a grave-looking person seemed on the point of closing, and descended several steps as if into the funeral vaults beneath the church. It was even so ; for in these subterranean precincts, why chosen for such a purpose I knew not, was established a very singular place of worship.
Conceive, Treshan, an extensive range of low-browed, dark, and twilight vaults, such as are used for sepulchres in other countries, and had long been dedicated to the same purpose in this, a portion of which was seated with pews and used as a church. . The part of the vaults thus occupied, though capable of containing a congregation of many hundreds, bore a small proportion to the darker and more extensive caverns which yawned around what may be termed the inhabited spacs. In those waste regions of oblivion dusky banners and tattered escutcheons indicated the graves of those who were once, doubtless, 'princes in Israel.' Inscriptions, which could only be read by the painful antiquary, in language as obsolete as the act of devotional charity which they inplored, insited the passengers to pray for the souls of those whose bodies rested beneath. Surrounded by these receptacles of the last remains of mortality, I found a numerous congregation engaged in the act of prayer. The Scotch perform this duty in a standing instead of a kneeling posture, more, perhaps, to take as broad a distinction as possible from the ritual of Rome than for any better reason, since I have observed that in their family worship, as doubtless in their private devotions, they adopt, in their immediate address to the Deity, that posture which other Christians use as the humblest and most reverential. Standing, therefore, the men being uncovered, a crowd of several hundreds of both sexes and all ages listencd with great reverence and attention to the extempore, at least the inwritten, prayer of ill aged clergyman, ${ }^{1}$ who was very popular in the city.

[^31]
ROB ROY

Educated in the same religious persuasion, I seriously bent my mind to join in the devotion of the day, and it was not till the eongregation resmued their sents that my attention was: diverted to the consideration of the appearance of all aronnd me.

At the conelusion of the prayer most of the men put om their hats or bonnets, and all who had the happiness to have seats sate down. Andrew and I were not of this number, having been too late of entering the ehurch to secure such accommodation. We stood among a number of other persons in the same situation, forming a sort of ring around the seated part of the congregation. Behind and around us were the vaults I have already described; before us the devont andience. dimly shown by the light which streamed on their faces thronghi one or two low Gothic windows, such as give air and light to charnel-houses. By this were seen the usual variety of countenances which are generally turned towards a Scotel pastor ou such occasions, almost all composed to attention, unless where a father or mother here and there recalls the wandering eyes of a lively child, or disturbs the slumbers of a dull one. The high-boned and harsh countenance of the nation, with thir expression of intelligence and shrewdness which it frequently exhibits, is seen to more advantage in the act of devotion or in the ranks of war than on lighter and more eheerful occasions of assemblage. The discourse of the preacher was well qualified to call forth the various feelings and faculties, of his audience.
Age and infirmities had impaired the powers of a voice originally strong and sonorons. He read his text with a pronunciation somewhat inarticulate ; but when he closed the Bible and commenced his sermon his tones gradually strengthened: $:$ s he entered with vehemence into the arguments which he maintained. They related chiefly to the abstract points of the Christian faith, subjects grave, deep, and fathomless by mere human reason, but for which, with equal ingenuity and propriety, he sought a key in liberal quotations from the inspirel writings. My mind was mprepared to coincile in all his reasoning, nor was I sure that in some instances I rightly comeprehended his positions. But nothing conld be more impressive than the eager enthusiastic manner of the good old man, annl nothing more ingenions than his mode of reasoning. The Scotch, it is well known, are more remarkable for the exercise of their intellectual powers than for the keemness of their feelings; they are, therefore, more moved by logic than by rhetoric, and more attracted by acute and argumentative reasoning on doctrinal points than influenced by the enthusiastic appeals to the heart and to the passions, by which popular preachers in other comutries win the favour of their hearers.
Among the attentive groun) which I now saw might be distinguished various expressions similar to, those of the andience in the famons cartoon of Paul preaching at Athens. Here sat a zealous and intelligent Calvinist, with brows bent just as much as to indicate profound attention; lips slightly compressed; : yes fixed on the minister, with an expression of decent pride, as if sharing the triumph of his argunent ; the forefinger of the right hand touching successively those of the left, as the preacher, from argument to argument, ascended towards his conclusion. Another, with fiercer and sterner look, intinated at once his contempt of all who doubted the creed of his pastor, and his joy at the appropriate pmishment denounced against thell. A third, perhaps belonging to a different congregation, and present only by accident or curiosity, had the appearance of internally impeaching some link of the reasonng; and you might plainly read, in the slight motion of his head, his doubts as to the soundress of the preacher's argment. The greater part listened with a caln satisfied countenance, expressive of a conscious merit in being present, and in listening to such an ingenious discourse, although, perhaps, unable entirely to comprehend it. The women in general belonged to this last division of the andience ; the old, however, seeming more grimly intent upon the abstract doctrines laid before them; while the younger females pernitted their eyes occasionally to make a modest circuit around the congregation, and some of them, Tresham (if my vanity did not greatly deceive me), contrived to distinguish your friend and servant as a handsome young stranger and an Englishman. As to the rest of the congregation, the stupid gaped, yawned, or slept, till a wakened by the application of their more zealous ueighbours' heels to their shins; and the idle indicated their inattention by the wandering of their eyes, but dared give no more decided token of weariness. Amid the Lowland costmme of coat and cloak, I could here and there discern a Highland plaid, the wearer of which, resting on his basket-hilt, sent his eyes among the audience. with the murestrained curiosity of savage wonder; and who in all probability was imattentive to the sermon for a very pardonable reason - becanse he did not understand the language in which it was delivered. The martial and wild look, however, of these stragglers addel a kind of character which the congregation could not have exhibited without them. They were more numerous, Andrew afterwards observel, owing to some cattle-fair in the neighbourhood.
Such was the group of countenances, rising tier on tier, discovered to my critical inspection by such suubeanns as forced their way through the narrow (Gothic lattices of the Laigh Kirk of Glasgow, and, having illuminated the attentive congregation, lost themselves in the vacuity of the vaults behind, giving to the nearer part of their labyrinth a sort of imperfect twilight, and leaving their recesses in an utter darkuess, which gave them the appearance of being interminable.
I have already said that I stood with others in the exterior circle, with my face to the preacher and my back to those vaults which I have so often mentioned. My position rendereal me particularly obnoxions to any interruption which arose from any slight noise occurring annongst thesc retiring arches, where the least sound was multiplied by a thousand echoes. The occasional sound of raindrops, which, admitted through some cranny in the ruined roof, fell successively and plashed upon the pavement beneath, caused me to turn my head more than once to the place from whence it seemed to proceed; and when my eyes took that direction I found it difficult to withdraw them - such is the pleasure our imagination receives from the attempt to penetrate as far as possible into an intricate labyrinth imperfectly lighted, and exhibitiug objects which irritate our curiosity only because they acquire a mysterious interest from being undefined and dubious. My eyes became habituated to the gloomy atmosphere to which I directed them, and insensibly my mind became more interested in their discoveries than in the metaphysical subtleties which the preacher was euforcing.
My father had often checked me for this wandering mood of mind, arising perhaps from an excitability of imagination to which he was a stranger; and the finding myself at present solicited by these temptations to inattention recalled the time when I used to walk, led by his hand, to Mr. Shower's chapel. and the earncst injunctions which he then laid on we to redeem the time, because the days were evil. At present the picture which my thoughts suggested, far from fixing my attention, destroyed the portion I had yet left, by conjuring up tu my recollection the peril in which his affairs now stood. I endeavoured, in the lowest whisper I could frame, to request

Andrew to obtain information whether any of the gentlemen of the firm of MacVittie and Co. were at present in the congregation. But Andrew, wrapped in profound attention to the sermon, only replied to my suggestion by hard punches with his ellow, as signals to me to remain silent. I next.strained my eyes, with equally bad success, to see if, anoug the sea of up-turned faces which bent their eyes on the pulpit as a common centre, I could discover the sober and busmess-like physiognomy of Owen. But not anong the broad beavers of the Glasgow citizens, or the yet broader-brimmed Lowland bonnets of the pensants of Lanarkshire, could I see anything resembling the decent periwig, starched rufles, or the uniform suit of light brown garments, appertaining to the heal clerk of the establishment of Osbaldistone and 'I'resham. My anxiety now returned on me with such violence as to overnower not only the novelty of the scene around me, by which it had hitherto been diverted, but moreover my sense of decorum. I pulled Aulrew hard by the sleeve, and intimated iny wish to leave the church and pursue my investigation as I could. Audrew, obdurate in the Laigh Kirk of Glasgow as on the mountains of Cheviot, for some time deigned me no answer ; and it was only when le found I conld not otherwise be kept ;uiet that he condescended to inform me that, being once in th: church, we could not leave it till service was over, because the doors were locked so soon as the prayers legan. Having thns spoken in a brief and peevish whisper, Andrew again assumed the air of intelligent and critical importance and attention to the preacher's discourse.

While I endeavoured to make a virtue of necessity, and recall my attention to the sermon, I was again disturbed by a singular interruption. A voice from behind whispered distinctly in my ear, 'You are in danger in this city.' I turned round as if mechanically.
One or two starched and ordinary-looking mechanics stood hesile and behind me, stragglers who, like ourselves, had been too late in obtaining entrance. But a glance at their faces satisfied ime, thongh I could hardly say why, that nouc of these was the person who had spoken to me. 'Their conntenances seemed all composed to attention to the sermon, and not one of them returned any glance of intelligence to the inquisitive and startled look with which I surveyed them. A massive round pillar, which was close behind us, might have concealed the speaker the instant he uttered his mysterious caution ; but wherefore it was given in such a place, or to what species of danger it directed my attention, or by whom the warning wats uttered, were points on which my imagination lost itself in com jecture. It would, however, I conchuded, he repeated, and I resolved to keep, my countennuce turned towards the clergyman, that the whisperer might be tempted to renew his commmication muder the idea that the first haul passed unohserven.

ROB ROY

My plan succeeded. I had not resmmed the appearance of attention to the preacher for five minutes, when the same voice whispered, 'Listen; but do not look buck.' I kept my face in the same direetion. 'Yon are in danger in this phace,' the voice proceeded; 'so am I. Meet me to-night on the Brigg, at twelve preceesely; keep at home till the gloaming, and avoid observation.'

Here the voice ceased, and I instantly turned my head. But the speaker had, with still greater promptitule, glided behind the pillar and escaped my observation. I was determined to catch a sight of liim, if possible, and, extricating myself from the outer cirele of licarers, I also stepped behinid the column. All there was empty; and I could only sec a figure wrapped in a mantle, whether a Lowland cloak or Highland plaid I could not distinguish, which traversed like a phantom the dreary vacuity of vaults which I have deseribed.
I made a mechanical attempt to pursue the mysterious form, which glided away and vanished in the vaulted cemetery like the spectre of one of the numerous dead who rested within its precincts. I had little chance of arresting the coursic of one obviously deternined not to be spoken with ; but that little chance was lost by my stumbling and falling before I had made three steps from the column. The obscurity which occasioned my misfortune covered my disgrace, which I aceounted rather lucky, for the preacher, with that stern authority whick the Scottish ministers assume for the purpose of keeping order in their congregations, interrupted his discourse to desire the 'proper officer' to take into constolly the causer of this disturbanec in the place of worship. As the noise, however, was not repeated, thic beadle, or whatever else he was called, did not think it necesssiry to be rigorons in searching out the offculer; so that I was cnabled, without attracting farther observation, to place myself by Andrew's side in iny original position. The service proceeded, and closed without the occurrence of mything else worthy of notice.

As the congregation departed and dispersed my friend

Andrew exclaimed, 'See, yonder is worthy Mr. MacVittie and Mrs. MacVittie, and Miss Alison MueVittie, and Mr. Thomas Mact'in, that they say is to marry Miss Alison, if a' bowls row right ; she 'll hae a hantle siller, if sle 's no that bonny.'
My eyes took the direetion he pointed ont. Mr. MaeVittie was a tall, thin, elderly man, with hard features, thiek grey eyebrows, light eyes, and, as I imagined, a sinister expression of conntenance, from which my heart recoiled. I remembered the warning I had received ill the ehurch, and hesitated to aldress this person, though I could not allege to myself any rational gronnd of dislike or suspicion.

I was yet in suspense when Andrew, who mistook my hesitation for hashfulness, proceedel to exhort me to lay it aside. 'Speak till him - speak till him, Mr. Franeis; he's no provost yet, though they say he'll be my lord neist year. Speak till him, hen ; he'll gie ye a deeent answer for as rich, as he is, muless ye were, wanting siller frae him : they say he's dour to draw his purse.'

It immediately oceurred to me that, if this merchant were ren" $y$ of the ehurlish and avaricious disposition whieh Andrew intimated, there might be some cantion neeessary in making myself known, as I conld not tell how aecounts might stand hetween my father and him. 'Ilhis consideration canle in aid of the mysterious hint which I had received, and the dislike which I had eonceived at the man's comintenance. Instead of addressing myself directly to him, as I had designed to have done, I contented myself with desiring Andrew to inquire at Mr. MacVittie's honse the address of Mr. Owen, an English gentleman ; and I charged him not to mention the person from whom he received the commission, but to bring me the result to the small inn where we lodged. This Andrew promised to do. He said something of the duty of my attending the evening service ; but added, with a cansticity natural to him, that 'in troth, if folk couldna kcep their legs still, but wal needs be couping the creels ower throughstanes, as if they wad raise the very dead folk wi' the clatter, a kirk wi' a ehimley in 't was fittest for them.'

CHAPTER XXI

On the Rialto, every night at twelve, I take my evening's walk of meditution : There we two will meet.

Venice Preserved.

FULL of sinister augury, for which, however, I could assign no satisfactory cause, I shut myself up in my apartment at the inn, and having dismissed Andrew, after resisting his importunity to accompany him to St. Enoch's Kirk, ${ }^{1}$ where, he said, 'a soul-searching divine was to haud forth,' I set nyyself' seriously to consider what were best to be done. I never was what is properly called superstitious ; but I suppose all men, in situations of peculiar doubt and difficulty, when they have exercised their reason to little purpose, are apt, in a sort of despair, to abandon the reins to their imagination, and be guided cither altogether by chance or by those whimsical impressions which take possession of the wind, and to which we give way as if to involuntary inpuisss. There was something so singularly repulsive in the hard features of the Scotch trader, that $I$ conlil not resolve to put myself into his hands without trangressi• : every caution which could be derived from the rules of ph ognomy; while at the same time the warning voice, the $i \cdot \ldots$ which flitted away like a vanishing shadow through those $v_{1}$, its. which might bo terned 'the valley of the shadow of death,' hail something captivating for the imagination of a young man who, you will farther please to remicmber, was also a young poet.

If danger was around me, as the mysterions communication intimated, how could I learn its mature, or the mems of avert ing it, but by meeting my minkown counsellor, to whom I conld see no reason for imputing any other than kind intentions. Rashleigh and his mac ,inations occurred more than once to my remembrance; but so "yid had my journey been, that I coulid

[^32]not suppose him apprised of my arrival in Glasgow, murh lesw prepared to play of any stratageem againat my person. In my temper alan I was bold and contident, strong aul active in person, and in some measure aceustomed to the nee of arme, in which the French youth of all kinds were then initinted. I dind not fear any single opponent; assassination was neither the vice of the age nor of the comntry ; the place selected firs our meeting was too public to armit any suspicion of meditatel violence. In a word, I resolved to meet my mysterions comnsellor on the bridge, as he hail requested, and to be afterwarls gniden by circunstances. Let me not conceal from you, 'Tresham, what at the time I endeavoured to conceal from my-self-the subdued, yet secretly-cherished hope thut Dianu Vernon might, by what chanee I knew not, through what means I could not guess, have some eomexion with this strumpe and dubious intimation, conveyed at a time and place, and in a manner, so surprising. She alone, whispered this insidions thought - she alone knew of my journey, from her own accomnt she possessed friends and influence in Scotlani, she hal furnished me with a talisman, whose power I was to invoke when all other aid failed me; who then, but Diana Vernon, possessed cither means, knowledge, or inclination for averting the dangers by which, as it seemed, my steps were surroundell This flattering view of my very doubtful case pressed itself upon me again and agaiu. It insinuatel itself into my thoughts, though very bashfully, before the hour of dimer; it displayed its attractions more boldly during the course of my frugal meal, and becane so eourageously intrusive during the snceceding half hour (ailed perhaps by the flavour of a few glasses of most excellent claret) that, with a sort of desperate attempt to escape from a delusive sednction, to which I felt the danger of yielding, I pusherd my glass from me, threw aside my dimner, seized my hat, and rushed into the open air with the fecling of onc who would fly from his own thouglts. Yet perlaps I yichled to the very feelings from which I scemed to fly, siner my steps insensibly led me to the bridge over the Clyde, the place assigned for the rendezvous by my mysterious monitor.

Although I had not partaken of my repast until the hours of evening church-service were over - in which, by the way, I complied with the religions scruples of my landlaty, who hesitated to dress a hot dimer between sermons, and also with the admonition of my nnknown fricur, to keep my apartment till twilight - several hours had still to pass away betwixt the time of my appointment anill that at which I reamed the assigned phace of meeting. The interval, an yon will realily crentit, was wearisome emagh; and I cant hardly explain to yon how it prased away. Vidins gronps of persons, all of whime, yomig and old, neemed impressed with a reverential feeling of the sunctity of the flay, pasone! along the large open mealow which lies on the northern tank of the Clyde, and serves at once an a bleaching-fieht nu"l |hanire-walk for the inhalitants, or pared with slow steps he th hridge which commminates with the sonthern distrin if "e connty. All that I remember of them was the gene :., :- 1 t mpleasing, intimation of a devotional character ins,imene in ench little party, formally assmmed perhaps hy some, $1,+$ sincercly claracterising the greater mumber, which lum nern ant miety of the yonng into a tome of more gnici $L$ :... int - ing, interelange of sentiments, and suppre al the 1 ent argment and protractel disputes of thow of , ". aivancel age. Notwith standing the numbers whe pesse.t.1. no general somend of the human voice was heard ; fris turncil chin to take some minutes' voluntary excrcise, to whith the leisint: of the evening, and the beanty of the surrounding scenery, semed to invite them : all lumried to their homes and resting-places. To one acconstomed to the mode of spending Smalay evenings abroad, even among the French Calvmists, there seemed something Julaical, yet at the same time striking and affecting, in this mode of keeping the Sabbath holy. Insensibly, I felt my monte of sauntering by the side of the river, and crossing successively the varions persons who were passing homeward, and withont tarrying os delay, mist expose me to observation at least, if not to censure, and I slonk ont of the frequented path, and found a trivial orecupation for my mind in marshalling my revolving walk in such a manner as should least reuler me obnoxious to observation. The different alleys lined out through this extensive mealow, and which are plantel with trees, like the Park of St. Jia , w's in London, gave me facilities for carrying into effect these childish maneurres.

ROB HOY

As I walked down one of these avenues, I heard, to my surprise, the sharp and comeeitel voice of Andrew Fairservice, raised by a sense of self-consernence to a pitch somewhat higher than others seemed to think consistent with the solemmity of the day. To slip, behind the row of trees under which I walked was perhays no very dignified proceeding; but it was the easiest mole of escaping his observation, and perhaps his impertinent awniduity and still more intrusive curiowity. An lee passed, I heard him commmicate to a grave-lnoking mani in a black cemt, a slonehed hat, and (ieneva denik tho following. sketch of a churacter which my self-love, while revolting against it an a caricature, could nut, nevertheless, refine to reagnise as a likeness:-

- Ay, ay, Mr. Hammorgaw, it's oeen as I tell ye. He 's ma n'thergether sue void 0 ' sense neither: he has a ghmming sight o' what's reasonable - that is anes and awa', 1 ghlisk and na mair; but he's crack-brained mud coekle-hemled almout his mipperty-tipperty peetry monsense. He 'll glowr at an anldwarld barkit nik-smat as if it were a queez-madinm in full hearing ; and a maked erain, wi' a burn jawing ower 't, is mutu himin as a garden garniinht with flowering knots mil choiee potherls; then he wad mather claver wi' a laft guen they ca' Dinan Vernon - weel I wot they might ca' her Diama of the Ephesinus, for she 's little better tham a leathen ; better 1 she's wame - a Roman, a nere Romm - he 'll claver wi' her, or ony other idle slat, rather than hear whit mi hit do him gimle a' the days of his life frae yom or me, Mr. Wammorgnw, or ony ither soler mad spensible promom. Reason, sir, is what he caman endure ; he'sa' for your vanities and volubilities; and he ance tellid me, pair blinded ereature! that the Psalms of David were exenlent pretry! as if the holy Palmint thought o' rattling rhymes in a blether, like his ain silly clinkum-clankuma thinge that he ca's verse. Gude help, him: 'twa lines o' Davie Lindsay wad diug a' le ever elerkit.
While listming to this perverted acemut of my temper mad stulies, you will not be surprised if 1 meditatelf fin Mr. Fuirservice the ampleasant surprise of a hroken pate on the first decent opportmuity. Mis friend only intimated his attention by 'Ay, ay!' and 'Is 't e'en sat?' and such like expressims of interest, at the proper breaks in Mr. Fairservice's harmgnountil at length, in answer to some olservation of greater lencth, the import of which I mily collected from my trmsty gnile is reply, honest Andrew answered, "I'ell him a hit 0 ' mes mind, quoth ye? Wha wad he fule then bat Andrew? He - a redwurd leevil, man! He s like (iiles Heathertan's a d 1 ar : ve need but shake a clont at him to make hinn til 1 and pore. Bide wi' hima, say ye ? 'I'roth, I kemat what fir I I ith wi' him mysell. But the lad's mo a had lat after a': "the needs anae carefu' body to look after him. He hasia the right arip "' his haud : the gowl slips through the water, man ; and it 's no that ill a thing to be near him when his purse is in his hand and it's seldom out o't. And then he's come o' guid kith anil kin. My heart warme to the puir thoughtless cullant, Mr. Hammorgaw ; and then the penny fee $\qquad$

ROB ROY

In the latter part of this instructive communication Mr. Fairservice lowered his voice to a tone better besceming the conversation in a place of publie resort on a Sabbath cevenin, and his companion and he were soon beyond my hearing. My feelings of hasty resentment soon subsided under the conviction that, as Andrew himself might have said, 'A hearkener alway; hears a bad tale of himself,' and that whoever should happen to overhear their character discussed in their own servants'-hall must prepare to undergo the scalpel of some such allatomist as Mr. Fairservice. The incident was so far useful as, includiu! the feelings to which it gave rise, it sped away a part of the time which hung so heavily on my hand.

Evening had now closed, and the growing darkness gave to the booad, still, and deep expanse of the brimful river first a hue sombre and uniform, then a dismal and turbid appearance, partially lighted by a waning and pallid moon. The massive and ancient hridge which stretches across the Clyde was now but dimly visiblu, and resembled that which Mirza, in his unequalled vision, has described as traversing the valley of Bagdad. The low-browed arches, seen as imperfectly as the dusky current which they bestrode, seemed rather caverus which swallowed up the gloomy waters of the river than apertures contrived for their passage. With the advancing night the stillness of the seene increased. There was yet a twinkling light occasionally seen to glide along by the stream, whieh conducted home one or $t=0$ of the small parties who, after the abstinence and religious auties of the day, had partaken of a social supper, the only meal at which the rigid Presbyterians made some advance to sociality on the Sabbath. Occasionally, also, the hoofs of a horse were heard, whose rider, after spending the Sunday in Glasgow, was directing his steps. towards his residence in the country. 'Ihese somds and sights became gradually of more rare occurrenec. At leugth they altogether ceased, and I was left to enjoy my solitary wall on the shores of the Clyde in solemn silence, broken only by the tolling of the successive hours from the stecples of the churehes.

But as the night advaneed my impatience at the uncertainty of the situation in which I was placed increased cvery moment, and became nearly ungovernable. I began to question whether I had been imposed upon by the triek of a fool, the raving of a madman, or the stndied machination of a villain, and paced the little quay or pier aljoining the entrance to the bridge in a state of ineredible anxiety and vexation. At length the hour of twelve o'clock swing its smumons over the city from the belfry of the metropolitan charch of St. Mungo, and was answerel and vouehed by all the others like dutiful dincesans. 'The celones had scarcely ceased to repeat the last sound when a human form - the first I had seen for two homrs -appeared passing along the bridye from the southern shore of the river. I advaneed to meet hime with a feeling as if my fate depended on the resslt of the interview, so mueh liad my anxiety been wound up by protracted expectation. All that I could remark of the passenger as we advanced towards each other was that his frame was rather beneath than above the middle size, but apparently strong, thick-set, and inuseular; his dress a horseman's wrapping enat. I slackened my pace, and almost paused as I advanced, in expeetation that hic would address me. But, to my inexpressible disappointment, he passed without speaking, and I had no pretence for being the first to address one who, notwithstanding his appearance at the very hour of appointiment, might nevertheless be an absolute stranger. I stopped when he had passed me and looked after him, uncertain whether I ought not to follow him. The stranger walked on till near the northern end of the bridge, then paused, lonked back, and, turning round, again advanced towards me. I resolved that this time he should not lave the apolngy for silence proper to apparitions, who, it is vulgarly supposed, camot speak mitil they are spoken to. 'You walk late, sir,' said $I$, as we met a seeond time.
'I bide tryste,' was the reply, 'and so I think do you, Mr. Osbaldistone.'
'You are then the person who requested to meet me here at this unnsual hour?'
'I am,' he replied. 'Follow me, and you shall know my reasons.'
' Before following you, I must know your name and purpose,' I answered.
'I ann a man,' was the reply ; 'and my purpose is friendly to you.'
'A mar :' I repeater. 'IThat is a very brief deseription.'
'It will serve for one who las no other to give,' said the stranger. 'He that is without name, without friends, without coin, without country, is still at least a man; and he that has all these is no more.

ROB ROY

'Yet this is still too general an account of yourself, to say the least of it, to establish your credit with a strunger.'
'It is all I mean to give, howsoe'er; you may choose to follow me, or to remain without the information I desire to afford you.'
'Can you not give me that information here?' I demanded.
'You must receive it from your eyes, not from my tongue ; you must follow me, or remain in ignorance of the information; which I have to give you.'
There was something short, determined, and even stern in the man's mamer, not certainly well calculated to conciliate undoubting confidence.
'What is it you fear?' he said, impatiently. 'To whom, think ye, your life is of such consequence that they should seek to bereave ye of it?'
'I fear nothing', I replied firmly, though somewhat hastily. 'Walk on ; I attend you.'
We proceeded, contrary to my expectation, to re-enter the town, and glided like mute spectres, side by side, up its empty and siient streets. The high and gloomy stone fronts, with the variegated ornainents and pediments of the windows, looked yet taller and more sable by the imperfect moonshine. Onr walk was for some minutes in perfect silence. At length my conductor spoke.
'Are you afraid?'
'I retort your own words,' I replied ; 'wherefore should I fear?'
'Because you'are with a stranger, perhaps an enemy, in a place where you have $n 0$ friends and many cnemies.'
'I neither fear yon nor them; I am yonng, active, and armed.'
'I am not armed,' replied my conductor; 'but 110 matter, a willing hand never lacked weapon. You say you fear nothing : but if yon knew who was by your side perhaps you might underlie a tremor.'
'And why should I?', replied I. 'I ayain repeat, I fear nought that you can do.'
'Nought that I can do? Be it so. But do yon not fear the consequences of being found with one whose very name whispered in this lonely strect would make the stones thenselves rise up to apprehend him, on whose head half the meen in Glasgow would build their fortune as on a found treasure, had they the luck to grip him by the collar, the sound of whose apprehension were as welcome at the Cross of Edinburgh as ever the news of a field strieken and won in Flanlers?'

'And who then are yon, whose name shonld create so deep a feeling of terror ?' I replied.
' No enemy of yours, since I ann conveying you to a place where, were I myself reeognised and identified, irm to the heels and hemp to the eraig would be my brief dooming.'

I paused and stood still on the patement, drawing back so as to have the most perfect view of my companion which the light afforded, and which was sutticient to guard me against any sudden motion of assault.
'You have said,' I answered, ' either too much or too little too mueh to induee me to confide in yon as a mere stranger, since you avow yourself a person amenable to the laws of the country in which we are ; and too little, unless, yon could show that you are unjustly subjected to their rigonr.'
As I eeased to speak, lie made a step towards me. I drew back instinetively and laid my hand on the hilt of my sword.
'What,' said he, 'on an unarmed man, and your friend?'
'I am yet ignorant if you are either the one or the other,' I replied; 'and, to say the truth, your language and manner might well entitle me to doubt both.'
'It is manfully spoken,' replied my conductor ; 'and I respect him whose hand can keep his head. I will be frank and free with you: I am conveying you to prison.'
'To prison!' I exclaimed ; 'by what warrant, or for what offenee? You shall have my life sooner than my liberty; I defy you, and I will not follow you a step farther.'
'I do not,' he said, 'earry you there as a prisoner. I am,' he added, drawing himself haughtily up, 'neither a messenger nor sherift's officer ; I carry you to see a prisoner from whose lips you will learn the risk in which you presently stand. Vimer liberty is little risked by the visit; mine is in some peril; but that I readily encounter on your account, for I care not for risk, and I love a free young blood, that keas no protector bit the cross o' the sword.'

While he spoke thus, we had reached the principal street, and were pausing before a large building of hewn stone, garnished, as I thought I could perceive, with gratings of iron before the windows.
'Muekle,' said the stranger, whose language became more broadly national as he assumed a tone of colloquial freedom ' muckle wad the provost and bailies o' Glasgow gie to han him sitting with iron garters to his hose within their tolbooth that now stands wi' his legs as free as the red-fleer's on the outside on, 't. And little wad it avail them; for an if they had me there wi' a stane's weight o' iron at every ancle, I would show them a toom roun and a lost lodger before to-morrow. But come on, what stint ye for?'

As lie spoke thus, he tapped at a low wicket, and was answered by a sharp voice, as of one awakened from a dream or reverie 'Fa's tat? Wha's that, I wad say? and fat a deil want ye at this hour at e'en? Clean again rules - clean again rules, as they ca' them.'

The protracted tone in which the last words were uttered betokened that the speaker was again conposing himself to slumber. But my guide spoke in a loud whisper, 'Dougal, man : lae ye forgotten $\mathrm{Ha}_{\mathrm{a}}$ nun Gregarach?'
'Deil a bit, deil a bit,' was the ready and lively response, and I heard the internal guardian of the prison-gate bustle up with great alacrity. A few words were exchanged between my conductor and the turnkey in a language to which I was an absolute stranger. The bolts revolved, but with a caution which marked the apprehension that the noise might be overheard, and we stood within the vestibule of the prison of Glasgow, a sinall but strong guard-room, from which a narrow staircase led upwards, and one or two low entrances conducted to apartments on the same level with the outward gate, all secured with the jealous strength of wickets, bolts, and bars. The walls, otherwise naked, were not unsnitably garnished with iron fetters and other uncouth implements, which might be designed for purposes still more inhuman, interspersed with partizans, guns, pistols of antique manufacture, and other weapons of defence and offence.

At finding myself so unexpectedly, fortuitously, and, as it were, by stealth, introduced within one of the legal fortresses of Scotland, I could not help recollecting my adventure in Northumberland, and fretting at the strange incidents which again, without any demerits of my own, threatened to place me in a dangerous and disagreeable collision with the laws of a country which I visited only in the capacity of a stranger.

CHAPTER XXII

> Look round thee, young Astolpho. Here's the place
> Which men (for being poor) are seat to starve in ; Rude remedy, I trow, for sore disease. Within these walls, stifled by damp and stench, Doth Hope's fair torch expire ; and at the snuff, Ere yet 't is quite extinct, rude, wild, and wayward, The desperate revelries of wild despair, Kindling their hell-horn cressets, light to deeds That the poor captive would have died ere practised, Till bondage sunk his soul to his condition.'

The Prison, Act i. Scene 3.

AT my first entrance I turned an eager glance towards my conductor; but the lamp in the vestihnle was too low in flame to give iny curiosity any satisfaction by affording a distinct perusal of his feutures. As the turnkey held the light in his hand, the beams fell more full on his own scarce less interesting figure. He was a wild shock-headedlooking animal, whose profusion of red hair covered and obscenred his features, which were otherwise only characterised by the extravagant joy that affected him at the sight of my guide. In my experience I have met nothing so absolutely resembling my idea of a very uncouth, wild, and ugly savage adoring the idol of his tribe. He grinned, he shivered, he laughed, he was near crying, if he did not actually cry. He had a 'Where shall I go? What can I do for you?' expression of face, the complete, surrendered, and anxious subservience and devotion of which it is difficult to describe otherwise than by the awkward combination which I have attempted. 'I'he fellow's voice seemed choking in his eestasy, and only could express itself in such interjections as 'Oigh, oigh - ay, ay ; it's lang since she's seen ye!' and other exclanations equally brief, expressed in the same unknown tongue in which he had communicated with my condluctor while we wene on the ontside of the jail door. My guide received all this excess of joyful gratulation mueh like a prinee too carly acenstomed to the honage of those aromid hin to be mueh moved by it, yet willing to requite it by the nsual forms of royal courtesy. He extended his hand graciously towards the turnkey, with a civil inqniry of 'How's a' w' yon, Dougal?'

ROB ROY

'Oigh, oigh!' exelaimed Dougal, softening the sharp exclamations of his surprise as he looked around with an eye of watchful alarin-'oigh, to see you here - to see yon here. Oigh, what will eome o' ye gin the bailies suld come to get witting - ta filthy, gutty hallions, tat they are?'
My guide placed his finger on his lip and said, 'Fear nothing, Dougal ; your hands, shall never draw a bolt on me.'
'Tat sall they no,' said Dougal ; 'she suld - she wad - that is, she wishes them hacked aff by the elbows first. But when are ye gaun youder again? and ye 'll no forget to let her ken? She's your puir cousiin, God kens, only seven times removed.'
'I will let you ken, Dougal, as soon as my plans are settled.'
' And, by her sooth, when you do, an it were twal $o$ ' the Sunday at e'en, she 'll fling her keys at the provost's head or she gie them anither turn, and that or ever Monday morning begins; see if she winna.'
My inysterious stranger eut his aequaintanee's eestasies short by again addressing him, in what I afterwards understood to be the Irish, Earse, or Gaelic, explaining, probably, the services whieh he required at his hand. 'The answer, ' Wi' a' her heart - wi' a' her sonl,', with a good deal of indistinct munttering in a similar tone, intimated the turnkey's aequieseence in what he proposed. The fellow trimmed his dying lamp and made a sign to me to follow him.
'Do yon not go with us?' said I, looking to my eonduetor.
'It is mulecessary,' he replied; 'my company may be inconvenient for you, and I had better remain to secinre our retreat.'
'I do not suppose you mean to betray me to danger ?' said I.
'To none but what I partake in donbly,' answered the stranger, with a voiee of assuranee which it was impossible to mistrust.

I followed the turnkey, who, leaving the imner wicket unloeked behind him, led me up a 'turnpike' (so the Scotch call a winding stair), then along a narrow gallery, then, opening one of several doors which led into the passuge, he ushered me into a small apartment, and, casting his eye on the pallet bed which occupied one corner, said with an under voice, as he placed the lamp on a little deal table, 'She's sleeping.'
'She! whol can it be Diana Vernon in this abode of misery?'

I turned my eye to the bed, and it was with a mixture of disappointment oddly mingled with pleasure that I saw my first suspieion had deceived me. I saw a head neither young nor beautiful, garnished with a grey beard of two days' growth, and accommodated with a red nighteap. The first glance put me at ease on the score of Diana Vernon; the second, as the slumberer awoke from a heavy sleep, yawned, and rubbed his eyes, presented me with features very different indeed-even those of my poor friend Owen. I drew baek out of view an instant, that he might have time to recover himself; fortumately reeollecting that I was but an intruder on these cells of sorrow, and that any alarm might be attended with unhappy consequences.
Meantime the unfortunate formalist, raising hinself from the pallet bed with the assistanee of one hand, and scratching his eap with the other, exelaimed, in a voice in which as much peevishness as he was capable of feeling contended with drowsiness, 'I'll tell you what, Mr. Dugwell, or whatever your name may be, the sum total of the matter is, that if my natural rest is to he broken in this manner, I must complain to the lord mayor.'
'Shentlemans to speak wi' her,' replied Dougal, resuming the true dogred sullen tome of a turnkey in exchange for the shrill clang of Highland congratulation with whieh he had welcomed my mysterions gnide; and, turning on his heel, he left the apartment.

It was some time before I conld prevail npon the unfortunate slecper awakening to recognise me ; and when he did so the distress of the worthy creature was extreme at supposing, whieh he naturally did, that I had been sent thither as a partner of his captivity.
' 0, Mr. Frank, what have you brought yourself and the honse to? I think nothing of myself, that am a mere eipher, so) to speak; lont you, that was your father's sum total - his omnium - yon that might have been the first man in the first house in the first city, to be shut up in a nasty. Scotch jail, where one cammot even get the dirt brushed off their clothes!'

He rubbed, with an air of peevish irritation, the once stainless brown coat, which had now shared some of the impuritics of the floor of his prison-house, his habits of extreme punctilions neatness acting mechanically to increase his distress.
' 0 Heaven be gracious to us!' he continued. 'What news this will be on 'Change! There has not the like come there since the battle of Almanza, where the total of the British loss was summed up to five thousand men killed and wounded, besides a floating balance of missing; but what will that he to the news that $\mathrm{O}_{\mathrm{s} b a l d i s t o n e ~ a n d ~ ' T r e s h a m ~ h a v e ~ s t o p p e d!' ~}^{\text {I }}$

I broke in on his lamentations to acquaint him that I was no prisoner, though scarce able to account for iny being in that place at such an hour. I conld only silence his inguirics by persisting in those which his own situation suggesterl; mul at length obtained from him such information as le was able to give me. It was none of the most distinct; for, however clear-headed in his own routine of commercial business, 0 wen, you are well aware, was not very acute in comprehending what lay beyond that sphere.
The sum of his information was, that of two correspondents of my father's firm at Glasgow, where, owing to engagenents in Scotland formerly alluded to, he transacted a great deal of business, hoth my father and Owen had found the house of MacVittie, MacFin, and Company the most obliging and accommodating. They had deferred to the great Eughish honsc on every possible occasion; and in their bargains and transactions acted, without repining, the part of the jackall, who only claims what the lion is pleased to leave him. However small the share of profic allotted to them, it was always, as they expressed it, 'enough for the like of them'; however large the portion of trouble, 'they were sensible they could not do too much to deserve the continued patronage and good opinion of their honoured friends in Crane Allcy.'
The dictates of my father were to MacVittie and MacFin the laws of the Medes and Persians, not to be alterel, innovated, or even discussed; and the punctilios cxacted by Owen in their business transactions - for he was a great lover of form, more especially when he conld lictate it ex cathedri - seemed scarce less sanctinoonions in their cyes. This tome of deep and respectful observince went all currently down with Owen ; but my father looked a little closer into men's bosoms, and whether suspicious of this excess of defercuce, or, as a lover of brevity and simplicity in business, tired with, these gentlemen's long-winded professions of regard, he liad miformly resisted their desire to ecome his sole agents in Scotland. On the contrary, he transacted many affairs through a correspondent of a character perfectly different -- a man whose goorl opinion of himself amonnted to self-conceit, and who, disliking the Figlish in general as much as my father did the Scotech, would hold no communication but on a footing of absolnte equality ; jealons, morcover, captions occasionally, as temacions of his own opinions in point of furm as ()wen conld be of his, and totally indifferent thongh the anthority of all Lombaril Street had stood against his nwn private opinion.

ROB ROY

As these peculiarities of temper rendered it diffienle to transact business with Mr. Nieol Jarvie ; as they occasioned at times disputes and coldness between the English housc and their eorrespondent, which were only, got over by a sense of mutual interest ; as, moreover, Owen's personal vanity sometimes suffered a little in the discussions to which they gave rise, you cannot be surprised, Tresham, that our old frienid threw at all times the weight of his influence in favour of the civil, discreet, accommodating concern of MacVittie and MacFin, and spoks, of Jarvie as a petulant, eoneeited Scotch pedlar, with whom there was no dealing.

It was also not surprising that in these circumstances, which 1 only learned in detail some time afterwards, 0 wen, in the difficulties to which the house was reduced by the absence of my father and the disappearance of Rashleigh, should, on his arrival in Scotland, which took place two days before mine, have recourse to the friendship of those correspondents who had always professed themselves obliged, gratified, and devoted to the service of his principal. He was received at Messrs. MacVittie and MacFin's connting-house in the Gallowgate with something like the devotion a Catholic would pay to lisis tutelar saint. But, alas ! this sunshine was soon overclouded, when, enconraged by the fair hopes which it inspired, he opened the difficulties of the house to his friendly correspondents, and requested their comsel and assistance. MacVittie was almost stmmed by the conmunication; and MacFin, ere it was compheted, was already at the ledger of their firm, and deeply cngaged in the very bowels of the multitudinous accounts between their house and that of Oshaldistone and Tresham, for the purpose of discovering on which side the balance lay. Alas! the scale depressed considerably against the Faglish firm : and the faces of MacVittie and MacFin, hitherto only blank and donbtful, became now ominous, grim, and lowering. They met Mr. Owen's request of countenance and assistance with a connter-demand of instant recurity against imminent hazard of eventual loss ; and at length, speaking more plainly, required that a deposit of assets, destined for other pirposes, should he placed in their hamds for that purpose. Owen repelled this demand with great indignation as dishonourulle to his constituents, minust to the other ereditors of Owhaldistome and 'Tresham, and very ungrateful on the part of thowe by whon it was made.

The Scotch partners gained in the course of this controversy; what is very eonvenient to persons who are in the wrong, min opportmity and pretext for putting themselves in a violent passion, and for taking, muler the pretext of the provocation they had reeeived, measures to whieh some sense of decency, if not of conseience, might otherwise have deterred them from resorting.

Owen had a small share, as I believe is usual, in the house to which he acted as head elerk, and was therefore perwonally liable for all its obligations. This was known to Messrs. MarVittie and MaeFin; and, with a view of making him feel their power, or rather in order to force him at this emergeney intu those measures in their favour to whieh he had expressed himself so repugnant, they had recourse to a summary process of arrest and imprisonment, which it seems the law of Seotland (therein surely liable to much abnse) allows to a creditor who finds his conseience at liberty to make oath that the debtor meditates departing from the realm. Under such a warrant had poor Owen been confined to duranee on the day preceding that when I was so strangely guided to his prison-house.
Thus possessed of the alaming outline of faets, the cuestion remained, what was to be done? and it was not of easy deter mination. I plainly perceived the perils with which we were surromeded, but it was more diffieult to sulggest any remedy: The warning which I had already received seened to intimate that my own personal liberty might be endangered by an opeen appearance in Owen's behalf. Owen entertained the samuapprehension, and, in the exaggeration of his terror, assured me that a Seotelman, rather than rmi the risk of losing : farthing by an Eughishman, would find law for arresting his wife, children, man-servant, maid-servant, and stranger within his honsehold. The laws eoncerning debt in most eommes are so ummercifully severe that I eouiin not altogether dishelieve his statement; and my arrest, in the present circminstances, would have been a coup de graice to my father's affiairs. In this dilemma I asked ()wen if he had not thought of having recourse to iny father's other correspondent in Glasgow, Mr. Nicol Jarvie.
'He had sent him a letter,' le replied, 'that morning; but if the smooth-tongned and civil honso in the Gallowgate had used him thas, what was to be exprected from the cross-grine erab-stuck in the Salt Market? Yon might us well ask a broker to give up, his perce tage nes expect a favour from him withont the per comtra. He hal not even,' ( wen suid, 'maswered his letter, though it was put into his hand that morning ns: he went to clurch.? And here the denpairing nan of figures threw himself down on his pallet, exclaiming - 'My por fenr master ! My poor dear master! O, Mr. Frank, Mr. Frank, this is all your obstimacy! But God furgive me for saying so to you in your distrens! It's Gool's disposing, and man must salbmit.'
My philosophy, 'I'resham, conld not prevent my sharing in the honest creature's distress, and we mingled our tears, the more bitter on my part as the perverse opposition to my father's will, with which the kind-heartell (1wen forbore to mpbraid me, rose up to my conscience as the cause of all this aftliction.
In the midst of our mingled sorrow we were disturbed and surprised by a lond knocking at the outward door of the prison. I ran to the top of the staircase to listen, but could ouly hear the voice of the turnkey, alternately in a high tone, answering to some person without, and in at wisper, addressed to the person who had guided me hither: 'She's coming -she's ecoming,' alond ; then in a low key, '0 hon-a-ri! () hon-a-ri : what 'Il she do now? Gang up ta stair and hide yoursell ahint ta Sassenach shentleman's perl. She's coming as fast as she can. Ahellanay! it's my lord provosts, and ta pailies, and ta guard, and ta captain's coming toonstairs too. Giot pless her: gang, up or he meets her. She's coming - she's coming; ta lock 's sair roostel.'
While Dongal unwillingly, and with as much delay as possible, undid the varions fastenings to give adhnittance to those without, whose innatience became chanorous, my gnide ascended the winding stair and sprang into Owen's apartment, into which I followed him. He cast his eyes hastily romme as if looking for a place of eoncealnent, then swid to me, 'Lend me your pistols; yet it's no matter, I can do withont them. Whatever yon see, take no heed, and do not mix your hand in another man's fend. 'Ihis gear's mine, and 1 mist manage it as I dow ; but I have been as hard bester, and worse, than I and even now.'

As the stranger spoke these words he atripped from his person the cumbrous upper eunt in which he was wrapt, com. fronted the door of the "partment, on which he fixed a keen and determined glanco, drawing his person a little back t." concentrate his force, like a fine horse lirought mis to the leaping-bur. I had not a monent's doubt that he meant t.. extricate himself from his embarrassment, whatever nimight ine: the canse of it, by springing full upon those who should appear when the doors opened, and forcing his way through all oppusition into the street ; and such was the appearance of strength and agility displayed in his frume, and of determination in lis look anll mamer, that I did not doubt a moment but that he might get clear through his opponeuts, unless they employed fatal means to stop his purpose.

It was a period of awful suspense betwixt the opening of the outward gate and that of the door of the apartment, when there appeared - no gnard with bayonets fixed, or watch with clubs, bills, or partizans, but a good-looking young woman, with grogram petticoats, tucked up for trudging through the streets, and holding a lantern in her hand. This female ushered in a more important personage, in form stout, short, and somewhat corpulent ; and by dignity, as it soon appeared, a magistrute, bob-wigged, bustling, and breathless with peevish impatience. My conductor, at his apprearance, drew back as if to escalpe observation; but he could not elude the penetrating twinkle with which this dignitary reconnoitered the whole apartment.
'A bouny thing it is, and a beseeming, that I should the kept at the door half an hour, Captain Stanchells,' said lie, adldressing the principal jailor, who now showed himself at the door as if in attendance on the great man, 'knocking as hard to get into the tollooth as ony body else wad to get out of it, could that avail them, poor fallen creatures! Aud how's this? how's this? strangers in the jail after lock-up hours, and in the Sabbath evening! I shall look after this, Stanchells, you may depend on't. Keep the door locked, and I'll speak tu these gentlemen in a gliffug. But first I maun hae a crack wi' an auld acquaintance here. Mr. Owen, Mr. Owen, how 's a' wi' ye, man ?'
'Pretty well in body, I thank you, Mr. Jarvie,' drawled out poor (Owell, ' but sore afflicted in spirit.'
'Nae doubt, nae doubt. Ay, ay, it's an awfu' whumme; and for ane that held his heal wa high too - human nature, human uature! Ay, ay, we 're $a$ ' subject to a downeome. Mr. Osbaldistone is a gule honest gentleman; but I aye said he was ane o' them wad make a spume or spoil a horn, as my father the worthy deacon insen to say. The deacenn nsed to say tolme, "Niek - yomug Niek" his mame was Nicol as wed nas mine, mae folks ca'd us in their dathin' yonng Nick and anld Nick - "Nick," saill la," "never put ont your arm firther than ye can draw it easily back ugann." I lane suill sue to Mr. Osbaldistone, and he didum reem to take it athegether sar kind as I wished; but it was weel meant - weel meant.'
This diseourse, delivered with prohligions volubility anol a great appearance of self-emplateney, as he recollected lis uwn advice und predictions, gave little promise of assistance at the hamls of Mr. Jarvie. Fet it somon appeared rather to proceed from a total want of delicacy than mily deficiency of real kindness ; for when Owen expressed himedf somewhat hart that these things shonld be recalled to memary in his present situation, the Glaswegian tork him by the hand and mate hiin 'Cheer up a gliff! D' ye think I wal hare conded out ar twal o'clock at night, and amaist broken the lard'is day, just to tell a fa'en man o' lis backslidings? Na, ma, that s ine Bailie. Jarvie's gate, nor was't his worthy father's the deacon afore liim. Why, man! it's my rule never to think on warldly business on the Sabbath, and though I did a' I could to keep, your note that I gat this morning out of my head, yet I thonght mair on it a' day than on the preneling. And it 's my rule to gang to my bed wi' the yellow curtains preceesely at ten o'clock, miless I were enting a ludduck wi' a neighbour, or a neighbour wi' me -ask the lass-quem there if it isma a findanental rule in my honselohd - and here hae I sitten mp realing gude hooks, and gaping as if I wail swallow St. Enox Kirk, till it chappit twal, whilk was a lawfin hour to gie a look at my ledger jnst to see how thinge stood between us; and then, as time mind tide wait for moman, 1 made the lass get the: lantern, and cane slipping my ways here to see what can be: dme anent your affairs. Bailie Jarvie can command entrance into the tolbooth at ony hour, day or night ; sate conld my father the dencon in his time, honest man, praise to his memory!'
Althongh Owen groaned at the mention of the ledger, leading me grievously to fear that here also the balance stood in the wrong columin; and althongh the worthy magistrate's, speech expressed much self-eomplacency and some ominuus triumph in his own superior judgment, yet it was blended with a sort of frank and blunt good-nature, from which I could not help deriving some hopes. He requested to see some papers he menticnord, snatched them hastily from Owen's hand, and, sitting on the bed, to 'rost his shanks,' as he was pleased to express the acconmodation which that posture afforled him, his servantgirl held up the lantern to him, while, pshawing, nuttering, and sputtering, now at the imperfect light, now at the contents of the packet, he ran over the writings it contained.

Seeing him fairly engaged in this course of study, the guide who had brought me hither seemed disposed to take an unceremonious leave. He made a sign to me to say nothing, and intimated by his change of posture an intention to glide towarls the door in such a manuer as to attract the least possible observation. But the alert magistrate (very different from my old acquaintance, Mr. Justice Inglewood) instantly deteeted and interrupted his purposes. 'I say, look to the door, Stanchells; shut and lock it, and keep watch on the outside.'

The stranger's brow darkened, and he seened for ar instani again to meditate the effecting his retreat by violence ; but ere he had determined the door elosed and the ponderous bolt revolved. He muttered an exclamation in Gaelie, strode across the floor, and then, with an air of dogged resolution, as if fixed and prepared to see the scene to an end, sate himself down on the oak table and whistled a strathspey.
Mr. Jarvie, who seemed very alert and expeditious in going through business, soon showed himself master of that which he had been considering, and addressed himself to Mr. Owen in the following strain : 'Weel, Mr. ()wen, weel, your house are awin eertain sums to Messrs. MacVittie and MacFin - shame fa' their souple snouts! they made that and mair out $n$ ' a bargain about the aik-wood, at Glen Cailziechat, that they took ont atween my teeth, wi' help o' your gude word, I maun needs say, Mr. Owen ; but that makes nae odds now. Weel, sir, your honsie awes them this siller; and for this, and relief of other engage ments they stand in for yon, they line putten a double turn i" Stanchells's nuckle key on ye. Weel, sir, ye awe this siller: and maybe ye awe some nuir to some other body too, mayln. ye awe some to mysell, Bailie Nicol Jarvie.'
'I cannot deny, sir, but the balance may of this date ln' brought out against us, Mr. Jarvie,' sail (Owen ; 'but yon 'Il please to consider
'I hae nae time to consider e'enow, Mr. Owen ; sae near

Sabbath at e'en, and out o' ane's warm bed at this time o' night, and a sort o' drow in the air besides, there 's nae time for considering. But, sir, as I was saying, ye awe me noney - it winna deny - ye ave me money, less or mair, I'll stand by it. But then, Mr. Wven, I camm see how yon, an active man that momerstamls misiness, can reld out the binsiness ye're come down ahout, and elcar us a' aff - as I have gritt hope ye will if ye're keepit lying here in the talbooth of Glasgow. Now, sir, if you ean time cantion judicio sisti, that is, that ye winna flee the country, but appear and relieve your cantion when ca'd for int our legal courts, ye may be set at liberty this very moming.'
'Mr. Jarvie,' said ()wen, 'if any friend wonld beeome surety for me to that effeet, my liberty might be usefully employed, donbtless, both for the house and all convected with it.'
'Aweel, sir,' continued Jarvie, 'and doubtless such a friend wad expect ye to appear when ca'd on, and relieve him o' his engagement.'
'And I should do so as eertainly, bating sickness or death, as that two and two make four.'
'Aweel, Mr. ()wen,' resumed the citizen of Glasgow, 'I dinna misdoubt ye, and I 'll prove it, sir - I'll prove it. I am a carefu' man, as is weel kend, and industrious, as the hale town can testify; and I can win my crowns, and keep my erowns, and count my erowns wi' ony borly in the Sant Market, or it may be in the Gallowgate; and I'm a prident man, as my father the deacon was before me; but rather than an honest eivil gentleman, that understands business, and is willing to do justice to all men, should lie by the heels this gate, anable to help himsell or ony boily else - why, conscience, man! I'll be your hail nuysell. But ye 'll mind it's a buil judicio sisti, as our town-clerk says, not judicatum whlci; ye 'll mind that, for there's murckle difference.'
Mr. Owen assured him that, as matters then stoon, he could unt expect any one to become secirity for the actual payment of the deht, hint that there was not the most distant cause for alprehending losis from his failing to present himself when liwfilly called npon.
'I believe ye - I believe ye. Eneugh said - enengh said. We 'se hate your legs loose by brtakfast-time. And now let's hear what thir chamber chiels o' yours hae to say for themselves, or how, in the name of murnle, they got here at this time o' night.'

CHAPTER XXIII

Hame came our gudeman at e'en, And hame came he, And there he saw a man Where a man suldna be.
'How's this now, kimmer ? How 's this ? quo' he, - How came this carle here Without the leave o' me ?'

Old Song.
THE magistrate took the light out of the servant-maid's hand, and advanced to his scrutiny, like Diogenes, in the street of Athens, lantern-in-hand, and probably with as little expectation as that of the cynic that he wils likely to encounter any especial treasure in the course of lis researches. The first whom he approached was my mysturions guide, who, seated on a table as I have already described him, with his eyes firmly fixed on the wall, his features arrangel into the utmost inflexibility of expression, his hands folded 111 his breast with an air betwixt carelessness and defiance, his heel patting against the foot of the table, to keep time with the tmue which he continued to whistle, submitted to Mr. Jarvie's in vestigation with an air of absolute coufidence and assurance, which for a moment placerl at fault the memory and sagacity of the acute and anxious investigator.
'Ah! Eh! Oh!' exclaimed the Bailie. 'My conscienw': it's impossible; and yet-no! Corscience, it canna be! annt yet again - deil hae me! that I suld say sae! Ye robber-- ye cateran - ye born deevil that ye are, to a' bad ends and nite gude "ane - can this be you?'
' E'en as ye see, Bailie,' was the laconic answer.
'Conscience! if I am na clean bumbaized! you, ye cheat-the-wnddy rogue, you here on your venture in the tolbootho Glasgow? What d' ye think's the valne o' your head?'
'Umph! why, fairly weighed, and Dutch weight, it might weigh down one provost's, four bailies', a town-clerk's, six deacons', besides stentmasters $\qquad$ '
'Ah, ye reiving villain!' interrupted Mr. Jarvie. 'But tell ower your sins and prepare ye, for if I say the word $\qquad$ ,
'True, Bailie,' said he who was thus addressed, folding his hands behind him with the ntmost nonchalence, 'but ye will never say that word.'
'And why suld I not, sir?' exclaimed the magistrate - 'why suld 1 not? Answer me that; why suld I not?'
'For three suffieient reasons, Bailie Jarvie. First, for auld langsyne ; seeond, for the sake of the anld wife ayont the fire at Stuckavrallachan, that made some mixture of our bhids, to my own proper shame be it spoken! that has a cousin wi' aecounts, and yarn winnles, and looms, and shinttles, like a mere mechanical person ; and lastly, Bailie, because, if I saw a sign o' your betraying me, I wonld plaster that wa' with your harns ere the hand of man conld reseue you!'
'Ye're a bauld desperate villain, sir,' retorted the madannted Bailie; 'and ye ken that l ken ye to be sae, and that I wadna stand a moment for my ain risk.'
'I ken weel,' said the other, 'ye hae gentle hhid in your veins, and I wad be laith to hurt my ain kinsman. But I'll gang ont here as free as 1 came in, or the very wa's o' Glasgow tolbooth shall tell $0^{\prime}$ 't these ten years to eome.'
'Weel, weel,' said Mr. Jarvie, 'bluid's thicker than water ; and it liesun in kith, kin, and ally to see motes in ilk other's een if other een see them no. It wad be sair news to the anld wife below the Ben of Stnekavrallachan, that yon, ye Hieland limmer, had knoekit out my harns, or that 1 had kilted yon up in a tow. But ye'll own, ye dour deevil, that were it no your very sell I wad hae grippit the best man in the Hielands.'
'Ye wad hae tried, cousin,' answered my guide, 'that I wot weel ; but I doubt ye wad hae come aff wi' the short measure ; for we gangthereout Hieland bodies are an unehaney generation when you speak to us o' bondage. We downa bide the coercion of gude braid-claitl about our hinderlins, let abee lireeks o' freestone and garters o' iron.'
'Ye 'll find the stane breeks and the aim garters, ay, and the hemp eravat, for a' that, neighlomr,' replied the Bailie. 'Nae man in a eivilised comntry ever played the pliskies ye hae done ; but e'en pickle in your ain pock-neai, I hat gien ye warning.'
'Well, eousin,' said the other, 'ye 'll wear blaek at wy burial ?'

ROB ROY

'Deil a black cloak will be there, Robin, hit the corbies and the hoodie-craws, I'se gie ye my hand on that. But whar's the gude thonsund pmid Scots that I lent ye, man, and when an I to see it again?'
' Where it is,' replied my guide, after the affectation of emin. sidering for a moment, 'I camot justly tell; probably where last year's suaw is.'
'And that's on the tap of Sehehallion, ye Hieland dog,' smil Mr. Jarvie ; 'and I look for payment frae you where ye stanl.
'Ay,' replied the Highlander, 'but I keep neither snaw nur' dollars in my sporran. And as to when you'll see it - why, just "when the king enjoys his ain again," as the auld sang says."
' Warst of $a^{\text {', }}$, Rohin,' retorted the Glaswegian - ' I mean, ye disloyal traitor - warst of $a^{\prime}$ ! Wad ye bring popery in on us, and arbitrary power, and a foist and a warming-pan, and the set forms, and the enrates, and the auld enormities $0^{\prime}$ surplice.: and cearments? Ye had better stick to your auld trade is theft-boot, black-mail, spreaghs, and gill ravaging - better steal ing nowt than ruining nations.'
'Hont, man, whisht wi' your Whiggery,' answered the Celt, 'we hae kend ane anither mony a long day. I'se take care your counting-room is no eleaned out when the gillon-a-naillic come to redd up the Glusgow buiths, and elear them o' their anld shop-wares. And, unless it just $f_{a}$ ' in the preceese way ${ }^{\prime}$; your duty, ye inauma see me oftener, Nicol, than I am disposen to be seen.
'Ye are a dauring villain, Roh,' answered the Bailie ; 'and ye will be hanged, that will be seen and heard tell o' ; but I'se ne'er be the ill hird aud foul my nest, set apart strong necessity and the skreigh of duty, whieh no man should hear and the inoberient. And wha the deevil's this ?' lee continued, turning to me - 'some gillravager that ye hae listed, I daur say: He looks as if he had a bauld heart to the highway and at lang eraig for the gibbet.'
'This, good Mr. Jarvie,' said Owen, who, like myseif, hand been struck dumb during this strange recognition and molew strange dialogue which took place betwixt these extraorlinary kinsmen - 'this, good Mr. Jarvie, is young Mr. Frank Osballi, tone, only child of the head of our house, who should have been taken into our firm at the time Mr. Rashleighn Osbaldistone, his consin, had the luck to be taken into it (here Owen eonld not suppress a groan). But, howsoever -',
' $O$, I have heard of that smaik,' said the Seotch merchant, interrupting him ; 'it is he whom yonr prineipal, like an obstinate auld fule, ward make a merchant 0 , wad he or wad he no, and the lad turned a strolling stage-player in pure dislike to the labour an honest man should live by. Weel, sir, what say yon to your handiwark? Will Hanlet the Dane or Hanlet's ghost be good security for Mr. Owen, sir ?'
'I don't deserve your taunt,' I replied, 'though I respeet your motive, and an too grateful for the assistance you have afforled Mr. Owent to resent it. My only business here was to do what I could - it is perhaps very little - to aid Mr. Owen in the management of my father's affairs. My dislike of the commereial profession is a feeling of whieh I am the best and sole judge.'
'I protest,' said the Highlander, 'I had some respect for this callant even before I kend what was in him; but now I honour him for his contenpt of weavers and spinners, and sie-like mechanical persons and their pursuits.'
'Ye're mad, Rob,' said the Bailie - 'mad as a March hare, though wherefore a hare suld be mad at Mareh mair than at Martinmas is mair than I can weel say. Weavers : deil shake ye out o' the web the weaver eraft made. Spimers! ye'll spin anl wind yoursell a bomny pirn. Anl this young birkie here, that ye 're hoying and hompling on the shortest road to the gallows and the deevil, will his stage-plays and his poetries help, him here, d' ye think, ony mair than your deep oaths and ilrawn dirks, ye reprobate that ye are? Will Tityre tu patule, is they ca' it, tell him where Rashleigh Osbalidistone is? or Macbeth, and all his kernes and galloglasses, and your awn to lnout, Rob, procure him five thonsand pommls to answer the hills which fall due ten days hence, were they a' rouped at the ('russ - basket-hilts, Andrea-Ferraras, leather targets, brogues, brechan, and sporrans?'
'T'en, days ?' I answered, and instinctively drew out Diana Vernon's packet ; and, the time being elapsed during whieh I was to keep the seal sacred, I hastily broke it open. A sealed letter fell from a blank inclosure, owing to the trepilation with which I opened the pareel. A slight eurrent of wind, which found its way throligh a broken pane of the window, wafted the letter to Mr. Jarvie's feet, who lifted it, examined the aldress with uneeremonious euriosity, and, to iny astonishment, handed it to his Highland kinsman, saying, 'Here's a wind has blown a letter to its right owner, thongh there were ten thousand chanees against its coming to hamd.'

The Highlander, having exanined the address, broke the letter open withont the least eeremony. I endeavoured to interrupt his proceeding.
' Yon must satisfy me, sir,' said I, 'that the letter is intenfer for you before I can permit yon to peruse it.'
'Make yourself yuite easy, Mr. Oshaldistone,' replied the momitaineer, with great composure; 'remember Justice hugle wood, Clerk Jobson, Mr. Morris -- above all, remember your vera humble servant, Robert Cawnil, and the beantifil Diania Veruon. Remember all this, and doubt no longer that the letter is for me.'

I remained astonished at my own stupidity. Through the whole night the voice, and even the features, of this man, though imperfectly seen, hamnted me with recollections th which I conld assign no exact local or persome associations. But now the light dawned on me at onee: this mmin was Camphell himself. His whole peculiarities flushed on me at once - the deep strong voice; the inflexible, stern, yet considerate cast of features; the Scottish brogue, with its corresponding dialect and imagery, which, althongh he possesseml the power at times of laying them aside, reeurred at every moment of emotion, and gave pith to his sarcasm or velicmence to his expostulation. Rather beneath the middle size than above it, his limbs were formed upon the very strongent model that is consistent with agility, while, from the remarkalle ease and freedom of his movements, yon eonld not doubt lis possessing the hitter quality in a high degrec of perfection. Two points in his person interfered with the rules of symmetry: his shonlders were so broad in proportion to his height as, notwithstanding the lean and lathy appearance of his frame, gave him something the air of being too square in respect to his stature; anul his arms, though romed, sinewy, and strons. were so very long as to be rather a deformity. I afterwario heard that this length of arm was a circumstance on which he prided himself; that when he wore his native Highland gart he could tie the garters of his hose withont stopping: and flat it gave him great advantage in the use of the broalsworl, at which he was very dexterons. But certainly this want of symmetry destroyed the claim he might otherwise have set ni, th be acconnted a very handsome man; it gave something will. irrogular, and, us it were, mearthly to his appearance, and reminded me involmonturily of the tales which Malel nsed tw tell of the old Picts who ravaged Northmberland in ancient times, who, according to her tradition, were a sort of half-goblin, half-hmman beings, distinguished, like this man, for courage, cumming, ferocity, the length of their arms, and the squareness of their shoulders.
When, however, I reeollected the eireumstances in which we formerly met, I conld not doubt that the billet was most probably designed for him. He had made a marked fignre annug those inysterions personnges over whom Diana seemed to exereise an influence, and from whom she experieneed an influcnce in her turn. It was painful to think that the fate of a being so amiable was involved in that of desperadoes of this man's dewcription; yet it seemed impossible to donbt it. Of what use, however, coulld this person be to my father's affairs? I conld think only of one. Rashleigh Oslahlistone hanl, at the instigation of Miss Vernon, certainly fomid means to prodnce Mr. Campbell when his presenee was necessary to exculpate me from Morris's acensation. Wan it not possible that her inflnence, in like manner, might prevail on Campbell to produce Rashleigh? Speaking on this snppowition, I regnested to know where my dangerons kinsman was, and when Mr. Campbell had seen him. The answer was indirect.

- It's a kittle cast she has gien me to play; but yet it's fair play, and I wima baulk her. Mr. Osbaldistone, I dwell not very far from henee; my kinsman can show yon the way. Leave Mr. Owen to do the best he call in Glasgow; do you come and see me in the glens, and it's like I may pleasure yon and stead your fither in his extremity. I am but a poor man, but wit's better than wealth; mul, cousin (turning from me to address Mr. Jarvie), if ye daur venture sae muckle as to eat a dish of Scoteh collops and a leg o' red-deer venison wi' me, come ye wi' this Sassemeh gentleman as far as Drymen or Bueklivie, or the Clachan of Aherfoil will be hetter than my o' them, and I 'll hae someborly waiting to weise ye the gate to the plave where I may be for the time. What say ye, man? 'There's my thmmb, I 'll ne'er heguile thee.'
' Ni , nat, Rolin,' saill the amtions hurgher, 'I seldom like to leave the Gurbals; I have nae freedom to gang anang your wild hills, Robin, and your kilted red-shanks, it disma become my place, man.'
'The devil damm your place and yon baith:' reiterated Campbell. 'The only drap, o' wentle hinid that's in your booly was our great gramd-mele's that was justified at Inmburton, and you set yomself up to saly ye wal derngate fire your place to visit me: Hark thee, man, I owe thee a day in harst; I'll pay up your thousan pund Scota, plack and bawbee, gin ye 'll be an honest fallow for anes, and just daiker up the gate wi this Sassenach.'
'Hout awa' wi' your gentility,' replied the Bailie ; 'carry your gentle bluid to the Cross, and see what ye 'll buy wit. But if I were to come, wad ye really and soothfastly pay me the siller !'
'I swear to ye,' said the Highlander, ' upon the halidome of him that sleeps beneath the grey stane at Ineh Cailleach.' ${ }^{1}$
'Sae nae mair, Robin - sue nae mair. We'll see what niay be dune. But ye mauma expect me to gang ower the Highlland line. I 'll gae beyond the line at no rate. Ye maun meet me about Bueklivie or the Clachan of Aberfuil, ant dimna forget the needful.'
' Nae fear - nae fiear,' said Camphell, 'I 'll be as true as the steel blate that never failed its master. But I must he budging, eousin, for the air o' Glasgow tolbouth is no that ower salutary to a Highlander's eonstitution.'
'Iroth,' replied the merchant, 'and if my duty were to be dune ye couldna change your atmosphere, as the minister ca's it, this ae wee while. Ochon, that I suld ever be concerned in aiding and abetting an escape frae justice ! it will be a shame and disgrace to me and mine, and my very father's memory, for ever.'
'Hout tout, man, let that flee stiek in the wa',' answered his. kinsman ; ' when the "dirt's dry it will rub out. Your father, honest man, could look ower a friend's fanlt as weel as anither:
'Ye may be right, Robin,' renlied the Bailie, after a moment': reflection ; 'he was a considerate man the deacon; he kent w. had a' our frailties, and he lo'ed lis friends. Ye 'll no hae furgotten him, Robin?' 'This question he put in a softened tone, conveying as much at least of the ludicrons as the pathetic.
'Forgotten him!' replied his kinsman, 'what suld ail ne t." forget him ? a wapping weaver he was, and wrought my fir: pair o' hose. But cone ana', kinsinan,

> Come fill up my cap, come fill ul my cann, Come saddle niy horses and call up uy man; Come open your gates and let me gae free, I daurna stay langer in bonny Dundee.'
'Whisht, sir !' said the magistrate, in an authoritative tone,

[^33]- lilting and singing sae near the latter end o' the Sablath! 'Ilis house may hear ye sing anither tune yet. Aweel, we hae $a^{\prime}$ backslidings to answer for. Stanehells, open the door.'
'I'he jailor obeyed, anil wo all wallied forth. Stanchells looked with some surprise at the two strungers, wonlering, lonbtless, how they canne into these prenises withont his kinowledge; but Mr. Jarvie's 'Priends o' mine, Stanchells - friends o ${ }^{\prime}$ mine,' silencel all disposition to ingniries. We now descended into the lower vestibule, and hallowed more than once for Dougal, to whieh summons no answer was returned; when Campbell observed, with a sarlonic smile, "That if Dougal was the lad he kent him, he would scarce wait to get thanks for his nin share of the night's wark, but was in all probability on the full trot to the pass of Ballamaha -
'And left us, and abune a' me mysell, locked up in the tolbooth a' niylt! !' exelained the Builie, in ire and perturbation. 'Ca' for fore-hammers, sledge-hamuers, pinehes, and coulters; send for Deacon Yettlin, the smith, and let him ken that Bailie Jarvie's shut up in the tollooth by a Hieland blackguard, whom he 'll hang up as high as Haman
' When ye catch him,' said Campbell, gravely ; 'but stay, the door is surely not lockel.'
Indeed, on examination, we found that the door was not only left open, but that Dongal in his retreat had, by carrying off the keys aloug with hinn, taken care that no one should exercise his office of porter int a hurry.
'He has thlimmerings o' common sense now, that creature Dougal,' saiil Campbell ; 'he kend an open door might hae served me at a pinch.'
We were by this time in the street.
'I tell you, Rolin,', said the magistrate, 'in my puir mind, if ye live the life ye do, ye shuld lae ane o' your gillies domkeeper in every jail in Scotland, in ease o' the warst.'
'Ane o' my kinsmen a bailic in ilka burgh will just do as weel, cousin Nicol ; so gude-night, or gude-morning, to ye ; and forget not the Clachan of Aberfoil.'
Anll without waiting for an answer, he sprung to the other side of the street and was lost in darkness. Inmediately on his disappearance we heard him give a low whistle of peeuliar modulation, which was instantly replied to.
'Hear to the Hieland deevils,' sain Mr. Jarvie ; 'they think thenselves on the skirts of Ben Lommol alremly, where they may gang whewing and whistling alont withont minding Sunday or Saturday.' Here he was interrupted by something which fell with a heavy clash on the street before us. '(iude guide us: what 's this mair o't I Mattie, haud up the lantern. Conscience ! if it isna the keys. Weel, that's jlist as weel; they cost the burgh siller, and there might hae been nome clavers nhout the loss o' them. (), an Builie Grahame were to get word o' this night's job it would be a sair hair in my neek :
As we were still but a few steps from the tolbooth door, we carried back these implements of office, and consigneal them to the head jailor, who, in lieu of the usmal mode of making goml his post by turning the keys, was keeping sentry in the vestibule till the arrival of some assistant, whom he had summoned in order to replace the Celtic fugitive Dougal.

Having discharged this piece of duty to the burgh, and my road lying the same way with the honest magistrate's, I profiteil by the light of his lantern, and he by my arm, to find our way through the streets, which, whatever they may now be, were then dark, uneven, and ill-puverl. Age is casily propitiaterl by attentions from the young. The Builie expressed himself interested in me, and addel, 'That, since I was nane o' that play-acting and play-ganging geueration, whom his saul hatell, he wad be glad if I wad eat a reisted haddock or a fresh herring, at breakfast wi' him the morn, and meet my friend, Mr. Owen, whom by that time he would place at liberty.'
'My dear sir,' said I, when I had accepted of the invitation with thanks, 'how could you possibly comiect me with the stage I'
'I watna,' replied Mr. Jarvie ; 'it was a bletherin' phrasiu' ehield they ca' Fairservice, that cam at e'en to get an order to send the erier through the tom for ye at skreigh o' day the morn. He tell't me whae ye were, and how ye were sent frae your father's house because ye wadna lo a dealer, and that ye uightnn disgrace your family wi' ganging on the stage. Aue Hammorgaw, our preeentor, bronght him herr. and said he was an anld acquaintance; but I sent them baith awa' wi' a thae in their lug for bringing me sic an erran.' on sia night. But I see he's a fule-creature a'thegither, and clean mista'en about ye. I like ye, man,' he continuel; ' 1 like a lad that will stand by his friends in trouble: I aye did it mysell, and sae did the deaeon my father, rest and bless him: But ye sulha keep ower nuckle company wi' Hielandmen and thae wild cattle. Can a man touel pitch and no be defiled? aye mind that. Nae doubt the best and wisest may err.

Once, twice, and thrice have I hackslidden, man, and dune three things this night my father wadna hae believed his een if he conld hae lonked up and seen me do them.'
He was by this time arrivell at the door of his own dwelling. He paused, however, on the threshold, and went on in a solemn tone of deep contrition: 'Firstly, I hae thought my ain thoughts on the Sabbath; secondly, I lime gien security for mill Eugfishman; and, in the third ame last pheee, well-i-day! I lue let nu ill-doer escape from the phace of imprisomment. But there's buln in Gilead, Mr. Oshmilistone. Mattic, I can let ntysell in; see Mr. Osbaldistone to Lanckie Flyter's, at the corner o' the wynd. Mr. Oshaldistone (in a whinper) ye 'll offer nue incivility to Matte; she's an lonent man's daughter, and a near cousin $o^{\prime}$ ' the Laird o' Limmerfield's.'

MICROCOPY RESOLUTION TEST CHART

(ANSI and ISO TEST CHART No. 2)

APFLIED MMALGE Inc
1653 Ecst Main Street
Rochester. New York 14609 USA
(716) $482-0300-$ Phone
(716) $288-5989-$ Fox

CHAPTER XXIV

Will it please your worship to accept of my poor service? I beseech that I may feed upon your bread, though it he the brownest, and drink of your drink, though it be of the smallest ; for 1 will do your worship as much service for forty shillings as another man shall for three pounds.

Greene's T'u Quqque.

IREMEMBERED the honest Bailie's parting charge, but did not conceive there was any incivility in adding a kiss to the half-cromn with which I remunerated Mattie's attendance; nor did her 'Fie for shame, sir,' express any very deadly resentment of the affront. Repeated knocking at Mrs. Flyter's gate awakened in due order, first, one or two stray dogs, who began to bark with all their might; next, two or three night-capped heads, which were thrust out of the neighbouring windows to reprehend me for disturbing the solemnity of the Sunday night by that untimely noise. While I trembled lest the thunders of their wrath might dissolve in showers like that of Xantippe, Mrs. Flyter herself awoke, and began, in a tone of objurgation not unbecoming the philosophical spouse of Socrates, to scold one or two loiterers in her kitchen for not hastening to the door to prevent a repetition of my noisy summons.
These worthies were, indeed, nearly concerned in the fracas which their laziness occasioned, being no other than the faithful Mr. Fairservice, with his friend Mr. Hammorgaw, and another person, whom I afterwards found to be the town-crier, who were sitting over a cog of ale, as they called it (at my expense, as my bill afterwarls informed me), in orler to devise the terms and style of a proclanation to be made through the streets the next day, in order that 'the unfortunate young gentleman,' as they had the impudence to qualify me, might be restored to his friends without farther delay. It may be supposed that I did not suppress my displcasure at this impertincut interference with my affairs ; but Andrew set ip such cjaculations of transport at my arrival as fairly drowned my expressions of resentment. His raptures, perchance, were partly political; and the tears of joy which he shed had eertanly their sonnce in that nuble fountain of emotion, the tankard. However, the tumultnons glee which he felt, or pretended to feel, at my return saved Andrew the broken head which I had twice destined him ; first, ull aceount of the collonuy he had held with the precentor on my affairs; and seeondly, for the impertinent history he had thonght proper to give of me to Mr. Jarvie. I, however, contented myself with slapping the door of my bedroom in his face ans he followed me, praising Heaven for my safe return, and mixing his joy with admonitions to me to take care how I walked my own ways in future. I then went to bed, resolving my first business in the morning should be to diseharge this troublesome, pedantic, self-conceited coxcomb, who seemerl so much disposed to constitute himself rather a preeeptor than a domestic.

Accordingly in the morning I resumed my purpose, and, calling Andrew into my apartment, requested to know his charge for guiding and attending me as far as Glasgow. Mr. fairservice looked very blank at this demand, justly considering it as a presage to approaching dismission.
'Your honour,' he said, after some hesitation, 'wunna think - wunna think $\qquad$ '
'Speak out, you rascal, or I 'll break your head,' said I, as Andiew, between the donble risk of losing all by asking too much, or a part by stating his demand lower than what I might be willing to pay, stood gasping in the agony of doubt and calculation.
Ont it came with a bolt, however, at my threat, as the kind violence of a blow on the back sometimes delivers the windpipe from an intrusive morsel. 'Aughteen pennies sterling mer diem - that is, by the day - your honour wadna think miconscionable ?'
'It is double what is usual, and treble what you merit, Andrew; but there's a guinea for you, and get about your insiness.'
'Tlie Lord forgie us! Is your honour mad?' exelaimed Audrew.
'No; but I think you mean to make me so. I giv: you a third above your demand, and you stand staring and expostulating there as if I were cheating you. Take your money and go about your business.'
'Gude safe us!' continued Andrew, 'in what can I hae offended your honour? Certainly $a^{\prime}$ flesh is but as flowers of the field; but if a bed of camomile hath value in medicine, of a surety the nse of Andrew Fairservice to your homonr is, nothing less evident; it's as muekle as your life's worth to part wi' me.'

ROB ROY

' Upon my honour,' replied I, 'it is diffieult to say whether yon are more knave or fool. So you intend then to rennin with me whether I like it or no?'
'Iroth, I was e'en thinking sae,' replied Andrew, dognantically; 'for, if your honomr disna ken when ye hae a gnde servant, I ken when I lae a gnde master, and the deil the in my feet gin I leave ye ; and there's the brief and the lang rit. Besides, I hae reeeived nae regnlar warning to 'puit my place.'
'Your plaee, sir :' said I; 'why, you are no hired servant of mine; you are merely a gnide, whose knowledge of the country I a vailed myself of on my road.'
'I am no just a common servant, I admit, sir,' remonstrated Mr. Fairservice ; 'but your honour kens I quitted a gude place at an hour's notice to comply wi' your hononr's solicitations. A man might make honestly and wi' a clear eonseienee twenty sterling pounds per ammm, weel eounted siller, o' the garden at Osbaldistone Hall, and I wasma likely to gie up a' that fir a guinea, I trow. I reekoned on staying wi' yonr honour to the + in's end at the least o't ; and I account npon miy wage, boarlwire, fee and bountith - ay, to that length c't at the least.'

- Come, eome, sir,' replied I, 'these impudent pretensions. won't serve your turn ; and if I hear any nore of them I shall eonvinee you that S(fuire Thorncliff is not the only one of my name that can use his fingers.'

While I spoke thus, the whole matter struek me as so ridieulons that, though really angry, I had struek me as so sfieulty to forbear laughing at the gravity with which Andrew supported a plea so utterly extravigant. The rascal, aware of the impression he had made on my muscles, was eneonraged to perseverance. Te judged it safer, however, to take his pretensions a peg lower in case of overstraining at the same time both his plea and my patience.
'Adnitting that my honomr con jart with a faithfinl servant that had serverl me and mune by day and night for twenty years, in a strange place, and at a moment's warning, he was weel assmred,' he silid, 'it wasna in my heart nor in 110 true gentleman's, to pit a puir larl like himsell, that had eome forty or fifty, or say a hudred, miles ont o' his road purely to hear my honour company, and that had mae han it hout his penny-fee. to sic a hardship as this comes to.'
'I think it was you, Will, whon once tolit me that, to be an obstinate man, I am in certain things the most grallible and malleable of mortals. The fact is that it is only contradiction which makes me peremptory, and when I do not feel myself called on to give battle to any proposition, I imn always willing to. grant it, rather than give myself mud tronble. I knew this fellow to be a greely, tiresome, medrling eoxcomb; still, however, I must have some one abont me in the quality of guile and domestic, and I was so murh used to Andrew's hamour that on some occasions it was rather amusing. In the state of indeeision to which these refleetions led me, I asked Fairserviee if he knew the roads, towns, etc., in the north of Scotland, to whieh my father's eoncerns with the proprietors of Highland forests were likely to lead me. I believe if I had asked him the road to the terrestrial paradise he would lave at that moment modertaken to guide me to it ; so that I ham reason afterwards to think myself fortmate in finding that his actual knowledge did not fall very much short of that which he asserted himself to possess. I fixed the amomit of his wages, and reserved to myself the privilege of dismissing him when I chose, on paying him a week in arvanee. I gave him finally a severe leeture on his conduet of the preceding day, and then dismissed him, rejoicing at heart, though somewhat erestfallen in countenanee, to rehearse to his friend, the precentor, who was taking his morning draught in the kitehen, the mode in which he had 'cuitler up the daft yomg English siquire.'

Agreeable to appointment, I went next to Bailie Nicol Jarvie's, where a comfortable morning's repast was arranged in the parlour, which served as an nuartment of all homrs, and almost all work, to that honest gentleman. The hustling and benevolent magistrate had been as grood as his word. I fonmd my friend Uwen at liberty, and, conscious of the refieshments and purifieation of brush and basin, was of comrse a very different person from Owen a prisoner, squalid, heart-hroken, and hopeless. Yct the sense of peemiary diffienties arising hehind, before, and around him had depressed his spirit, and the almost paternal embrace whiel the good man gave ue was embittered by a sigh of the deepest anxiety. And when he sate down, the heaviness in his eye and mamer, so different from the quiet eomposed satisfaction whieh they minally exhibited, indicated that he was employing his aritlmetic in mentally numbering up the days, the honrs, the minutes which yet remained as an interval letween the dishonour of bills and the downfall of the great conmereial establishment of Osbaldistone and Treshan. It was left to me, therefore, to do honour to our landlordis hospitable eheer - to his tea, richt from China, which he gc. in a present from some eminent ship's hustand at Wapping; to his eoffee, from a snuy plantation of his own, as he inforned u.; with a wink, called Salt Market Grove, in the island of Jamaica: to his English toast and ale, his Scotch dried salmon, his Juch Fyne herrings, and even to the donble damask tableeloth, 'wrought by no hand, as you may guess,' save that of his, deeeased father the worthy Deacon Jarvie.

Having eonciliated our good-humoured host by those little attentions whieh are great to most men, I endeavoured in my turn to gain from him some information whieh might be nseful for my guidance, as well as for the satisfaetion of my euriosity. We had not hitherto made the least. 'lusion to the transactions: of the preeeding night, a eircumstar., which made my question somd somewhat abrupt when, witnout any previons introduction of the subject, I took advantage of a pause when the history of the tableeloth ended, and that of the napkins was abont to eommenee, to inquire, 'Pray, by the by, Mr. Jarvie, who may this Mr. Robert Campbell be whom we met with last night?
The interrogatory seemed to strike the honest magistrate, to use the vulgar phrase, 'all of a heap,' and, instead of answering, he returned the question - 'Whae's Mr. Robert Campbell? ahem - ahay! Whae's Mr. Robert Campbell, quo' he ?'
'Yes,' said I, 'I mean who and what is he ?'
'Why, he's - ahay ! - he 's-ahem! Where did ye meet with Mr. Robert Campbell, as ye ca' him?'
'I met him hy ehance,' I replied, 'some months ago, in the north of England.'
'(Ou then, Mr. Osbaldistone,' said the Bailie, doggedly, 'ye 'll ken as muckle about him as I do.'
'I should suppose not, Mr. Jarvie,' I replied ; 'you are his relation, it seems, and his friend.'
' 'There is some consin-red between us, doubtless,' said the Bailie, relnetantly ; 'but we hae seen little o' ilk other sinee Rob gae up the eattle line o' dealing. Poor fillow : he was hardly guided by them might hae used him hetter; and they haena made their plaek a bawbee o't neither. There's mony ane this day wad rather they had never chased puir Rolin frae the Cross o' Glasgow; there 's mony ane wad ruther see him again at the tail o' three hundred kyloes than at the head o' thirty waur cattle.'
'All this explains nothing to me, Mr. Jarvie, of Mr. Campbell's rank, habits of life, and means of subsistence,' I replied.
'Kank!' said Mr. Jarvie. 'He's a Hieland gentlpman, me doubt; better rank need nane to be ; and for hatit, I jndye he wears the Hieland habit anuang the hills, though he has breeks on when he comes to Glasgow ; and as for lis subsistence, what needs we care about his subsistence, sae lang as he asks naething frae us, ye ken. But I hae nae time for clavering ahout him e'en now, because we maun look into your father's concerns wi' a' speed.'
So saying, he put on his spectaeles and sate down to examine Mr. Owen's states, which the other thought it most prudent to communieate to him without reserve. I knew enough of business to be aware that nothing could be more atute and sagaeious than the views which Mr. Jarvie entertained of the matters submitted to his examination ; and, to do him justice, it was marked by much fairness and even liberality. He scratched his ear indeed repeaterlly on ohserving the balanee which stood at the debit of Osbaldistone and Tresham in aceount with himself personally.
'It may be a dead lor 'he observed; 'and, conscience! whate'er ane o' your Lomk il Street goldsmiths may say to it, it's a snell ane in the S Market $\mathrm{o}^{\prime}$ Glasgow. It will be a heavy deficit-a staff ( ${ }^{\prime}$ o' my bicker, I trow. But what then? I trust the honse wuma coup the crans for a' that's come and gane yet; and if it does, I'll never bear sae base a mind as thae corbies in the Gallowgate; an I am to lose by ye, I'se ne'er deny I hae won by ye mony a fair pund sterling. Sae, an it come to the warst, I'se e'en lay the head o' the sow to the tail o' the grice.'
I did not altogether muderstand the proverbial arrangement with which Mr. Jarvie consoled himself, but I could easily see that he took a kind and friendly interest in the arrangement of my father's affairs, suggested several expedients, approved sever : plans proposed by Owen, and, by his comintenance and coun- , greatly abated the gloom upon the brow of that afflici d delegate of my father's extablishment.

As I was an idle spectator on this occasion, and perhaps as I showed some inclination more than once to return to the vol. $15-15$ prohibited, and apparently the puzaling, subject of Mr. Camp bell, Mr. Jarvie dismissed nie with little formality, with in advice to 'gang up the gate to the college, where I wad find some chields could speak Greek and Latin weel - at least they got plenty $o^{\prime}$ siller for doing deil haet else, if they didnat dis that; and where I might read a spell o' the worthy Mr Zachary Boyd's translation o' the Scriptures; better poetry need rane to be, as he had been tell'd by them that kend, or sullit hae kend, about sic things.' But he seasoned this dismission with a kind and hospitable invitation 'to come back and take part o' his family-chack, at ane preceesely; there wad be a leg o' mutton, and, it might be, a tup's head, for they were in season.' But, above all, I was to return at 'ane o'clock preceesely: it was the hour he and the deacon his father aye dined at ; they pat it aff for naething nor for naebody.'

CHAPTER XXV

> So stands the Thracian herisman with his spear Full in the gal', and hopes the hantel hear; : And hears him in the rustling woul, and sees His conrse at distance by the bending trees, And thinks - Here comes my mortal enei ly, And cither he must fall in light, or 1.

Pulamon and Arcite.

ITOOK the route towards the college, as recommended by Mr. Jarvie, less with the intention of seeking for any object of interest or amusement, than to arrange my own ideas and meditate on my future conduct. I wandered from one quadrangle of old-fashioned buildings to another, and from thence to the college yards, or walking-ground, where, pleased with the solitude of the place, most of the stulents iveing engaged in their classes, I took several turns, pondering on the waywardness of nyy own destiny.
I could not doubt, from the circumstances attending my first meeting with this person Canpbell, that he was engaged in some strangely desperate courses ; and the reluctance with which Mr. Jarvie alluded to lis person or pursuits, as well as all the scene of the preceding might, tended to confirm these suspicions. Yet to this man Diana Vernon had not, it would seem, hesitated to address herself in my behalf; and the conduct of the magistrate himself towards him showed an odd mixture of kindness, and even respect, with pity and censure. Something there must be uncomanon in Canpbell's situation and character; and what was still more extraordinary, it seemed that his fate was doomed to have influence over, and connexion with, my own. I resolved to bring Mr. Jarvie to close quarters on the first proper opportunity, and learn as much as was possible on the subject of this mysterious person, in order that I might judge whether it was possible for me, without prejudice to my reputation, to hoh that decree of farther correspondence with him to which he secmed to invite.

While I was musing on these subjects, my attention wil. attracted by three pers mes who appeared at the upper enl if the walk through which I was sanntering, seemingly engn-mal in very earnest eonversation. 'Ihat intuitive inpression whin amomes to ns the approach of whomsover we love or hate with intense vehemence, long lefore a nore inliflerent eve rin recognise their penons, flashed umon my minl the sure ronviction tha: the midnowt of thene three men was kashleish Osbaldistone. I', adilress hime was my first innjulsa: wi! second was to watch hinn until he was alone, or at leas $1 .$, reeomoitre his eompanions hefore confronting him. 'l'he part! was still at such distanee, and engaged in such deep discomrer, that I hud time to step mobserved to the other sile of a small hedpe whieh imperfectly sereened the alley in whieh I win walking.

It was nt this period the fashion of the young and gay tu wear, in their moming walks, a scurlet cloak, often laced inn! embroidered, alove their other dress, and it was the trick in the time for gallants oceasionally to dinpose it no as to muffio a part of the face. I'he initating this fashion, with the degree of shelter which I received from the hedge, enabled lin to meet my cousin unobserved by him or the others, excen perhapes a passing stranger. I was not a little startled it recognising in his companions that very Morris on whene accomnt I had been summoned before Justice Inglewoorl, and Mr. MacVittie the merchant, from whose starched and severe aspect İ had recoiled on the preceding day.

A more ominous eonjmition to my own affairs and thone of my father could scarce have been formed. I remembered Morris's false aceuration against me, which he ight be aeasily induced to ru. W as he had heen intini" I to with draw; I reeolleeted the inauspicions influenee of MacVittis: over my father's affinirs, testified by the imprisomaent of Owen; mud I now saw both these men eomblned with rom whose talents for mischief I deemed little inferior to those if the great author oin all ill, and my abhorrence of whom ahmo: amomited to dread.

When they had passed me for some paces I turned ant followed then unobserved. At the end of the walk they separated, Morris and MaeVittie leaving the gardens, anil Rashleigh returning alone throngh the walks. I wa now determined to confront him, and demand reparation for the injuries he had done my father, though in what form redress was likely to be rendered remmined to be known. This, however, I trusted to chance; and, Hinging buck the cloak in which I was mufled, I massel throngh ngup of the low lienge num pre. sented myself betore Rashteigh, as, in a deep reverie, he paced down the avenue.
Rasllefigh was no man to be surprisell or thrown off his gnaril by sulden occurrennes. Yet he din not find me thins close to him, wearing mombubtedly in my fine the marks of that indigmetion which was glowing in my lusson, without visibly starting at an mppurition so sulden mud so memaring.
'You are well met, sir,' was my commencenent ; 'I was alowt to take a long aud doult finl jomrney in quest of yon.'
'You know little of hime yon songht then,' replied Rash. leigh, with his nsmal undanted sompnomere. 'I am ensily fiomal ly my friends, still more easily by my foes; your maner compels me to ask in which class I must rank Mr. F'rancis Ostmaldistone ?'
'In that of your fies, sir,' I nuswered - 'in that of yomr mortal foes, muless you instantly do justice to your lenefiuctur, my father, by accounting for his property.'
'And to whom, Mr. Oslahldistone,' answered Rashleigin, 'ann I, a member of your father's commercial extablishment, to be compelled to give miny acconnt of luy proceetings in those concerns which are in every respect iflentifien with my own ? Surely not to a young gentlenan whose expuisite taste for literature would render such discussicus disgusting and mintelligible.'

- Your sneer, sir, is no answer ; I will not part with yom mutil I have full satisfaction concerning the fraud you mellitate; you shall go with me before 11 magistrate.'
'Be it so,' said Rashleigh, and mule a step' or two as if to. accompany me; then pausing, proceeded: " 11 ere 1 inctinef to do as you would have me, yon should suon fed which of is has most reason to Iread the prosence of a magistrate. But I hai no wish to accelerate your tate. Go, young man! ammse! , mer self in your world of poetical imaginations, and leave the buness of life to tiose who muderstand and can condut it.'
His intention, I believe, was to provoke me, annl he st ceeded. 'Mr. Osbaldistone,' I said, 'this tone of caln insoles. shall not avail you. You onght to be aware that the name we both bear never submitted to insult, and shall not in my perswn be exposed to it.'
'You remind me,' said Rashleigh, with one of his blackent looks, 'that it was dishenoured in ny person ! anl yous remind me nlvo by whom! Do you think I lave forgoten the evening nt Osimildistome Hall when you cheaply mull with impmity played the bully at my expense? for that insult, never to fe washed out but by henal! for the varimes times you have crossed my puth, mill always to my prejintice ; for the persevering filly with which yon seek to truverse sehemes tho inuprtance of which you neither know nor are capable of estimating - for all these, sir, yon owe me a long acemont, for which there shall emme an early day of reckoning.'
'Let it come when it will,' I rephien, 'I slall be willing and really to meet it. Yet yon seem to have forgoten the heavios article - that I had the pleasire to aid Misw Vemom's gonnl sense and virtnomx feeling in extricating her from your in fanions hiver.'

I think his dark eyes flashed actual fire at this home-tamnt, mul yet his poice retainel the sume calm expressive tone with which he had hitherto comdncted the conversation.
'I had other views with respect to yon, yomig man,' was his: answer ; 'less hazarions for yon, and nure snitable to my pres. ent character nall former edheation. But I see yon will draw on yourself the persmal clastisement your lnyish insolence su well merits. Follow me to a more remote spot, where we are less likely to be interrupted.'

I fillowed him accorilingly, keeping a striet eye on his nim. tions, for I believed him capable of the very worst actions. We renched an open spot in a sort of wilderness, laid ont in the Duteh taste, with clipped hedges and one or two statues. I was oll my garrd, and it was well with me that I was so ; firs Rashleighes sword was ont anid at my breast ere I conld throw down my cloak or get my wenpon misheathed, so that I only saved my life by springing a pace or two mekwards. He haid some andvantage in the difference of onr weapmen ; for inis sword, as I recollect, was longer than mine, and hat me of thone bayonet or three-corneren blades which are now generally worn: whereas mine was what we then callell a Saxom blate - marmo, Hat, and two-edgen, and scarcely so manageable as that of my enemy. In other respects we were pretty equally matched: for what advantage I might possess in superior andress and agility was fully comiterbalianeed by Rashleigh's great strength and coohess. He fimght, indeed, more like a fiend than a mann - with concentrated spite and desire of borol, only allayed hy that conl consideration which male his worst actions appear gat worve from the air of deliberate premerditation which swemal to acompuny them. His ohvions matignity of pirimse neser for at moment threw him off his ghard, and he exhansted e ery wint and stratagent proper to the seiene? of defenec ; white at the same time he meditated the most denperate e eaxtrophe to our rencounter.
On my part the ecrmbat was at lirst sinstaineel wi ' anure murleration. My passions, thongh hasty, were bit malevolent: anil the walk of two or tirree minntes' phae gave me time to reflect that Rashleigh was my father's nephew, the som of ath mincle whe, after his fashion, hand heen kime to mer, ame that his
 My first resolution, therefire, : to attempt tu disarme my antagenist - -1 mannenvre in " $\therefore$ an continling in my superiority of skill mard practice, I mutici; ...l little difliculty. If fomil. however, I had met my mutch : and mene or two finils which I received, and from the comsequenees of which I marrowly esmpent, illiged me to observe more cantion in my munle of fightimg. By degrees I hecane exaspemted at the ransomr with which Rashloigh scught my life, and returnel his pusses with an inveteracy resembling in some degree his own : sin that the cennluat lam ail the appearance of being destine to lave a trugin issine. "'lant issue had nearly taken place at my expense. .II finot slipped in a full lounge which I made at my mbersary, anill I conlif not so far recover myself as completely to purry the thrust with which my pass was repaicl. Yet it towik lout purtial effeet, rmming threngh my waisteont, prazing my rils, "mil passing through moj - wat behinit. 'Ihe hilt of Rashleig' . sworl, sil great was t . vigour of his thrinst, struck against my breast with such fuce as to give me great pain, and contirn me in the momentary belief that I was murtally womidel. Bager for reve, e, I srappled with my enemy, seizing with my left hand the hit of his sworl, num shortening luy own with the purpusis of rumiug hime tirrongh the looly. Our cleath-grapple was interripted hy a man who forcilily threw himself hetween us, and, pushing us separate from each other, exclainmon, in a lomid and conmanding voice, 'What! the sime of these fitherss who sucked the stme hreast shofding earh nother's hinid as it were straugers': sy the hand of my father, I will eleave to the brisket the first man that mints another stroke:'

I looked up in astmishment. The sueaker was uo other than Campbell. He had a basket hilted limadswod irawn in his hand, which he made to whistle aromul his hee las he spoke, as if for the purpose of euforcing his mediation. Rashleigh and I stared in silence at this unexpectel intruder, who proceeded to exhort us alternately: 'Do you, Maister Francis, opine that ye will re-establish your father's credit by cutting your kinsman's thrapple, or getting your ain sucekit instead thereof in the college yards of Glasgow? Or do yon, Mr. Rashleigh, think men will trust their lives and fortunes wi' ane that, when in point of trust and in point of confidence wi' a grat political interest, gangs about brawling like a drunken gillic! Nay, never look gash or grim at me, man; if ye're angry, ye ken how to turn the buckle o' your belt behind you.'
'You presume on my present situation,', replied Rashleigh, 'or you would have hardly dared to interfere where my honour
'Hout, tout, tout! Presume! And what for should it be presuming? Ye may be the richer man, Mr. Osbaldistone, as is maist likely; and ye may be the mair learned man, whilk I dispute not; but I reckon ye are neither a prettier man nor a better gentlenan than mysell, and it will be news to me whin I hear ye are as gude. And dare too! Muckle daring there 's about it; I trow here I stand, that hae slashed as het a haggis as ony o' the twa o' ye, and thought nae meckle o' my morning's wark when it was dune. If my foot were on the heather as it's on the canseway, or this pickle gravel, that's little better, I hae been waur mistrystel than if I were set to gie ye baith your ser'ing o't.'

Rashleigh had by this time recovered his temper completely. 'My kinsman,' he suid, 'will acknowledge he forced this quarrel on me. It was none of my seeking. I an glad we are interrupted before I chastised his forwarduess more severely.'
'Are ye hurt, lad?' inquired Campbell of me, with sonc appearance of interest.
'A very slight scratch,' I answered, 'which my kind consin, would not long have boasted of had not ycu come between us.'
'In troth, and that's true, Maister Rashleigh,' said Camp. bell; 'for the cauld iron and your best bluid were like to hae become acquaint when I mastered Mr. Frank's right hand. But never look like a sow playing upon a trump for the luve o' that, man; come and walk wi' me. I hae news to tell ye, and ye'll cool and come to yoursell like MacGibbon's crowdy, when he set it out at the window-bole.'
'Pardon me, sir,' said I. 'Your intentions have secmed friendly to me on more occasions than one; but I must not, and will not, quit sight of this person until he yields up to me those means of doing justice to my father's engagements of which he has treacherously possessed himself.'
'Ye 're daft, manl,' replied Campbell ; 'it will serve ye naething to follow us e'enow. Ye hae just cnow o' ae nan, wad ye bring twa on your head, and might linde q!uiet?'
'I'wenty,' I replied, 'if it be necessary.'
I laid my hand on Rashleigh's collar, who made no resistance, but said, with a sort of scornful smile, 'You hear him, MacGregor: he rushes on his fate; will it be iny fault if he falls into it? The warrants are by this time realy, and all is prepared.'

T'le Scotchman was obvionsly embarrassed. He looked around, aull before, and behind him, and then suid: "The ne'er a hit will I yield my consent to his being ill-gnided for standiug up for the father that got him; and I gie Gol's malison and mine to a' sort o' magistrates, justices, bailies, sherifis, sheriff-officers, constables, and sic-like black cattle, that hae heen the plagues o' puir anld Scotland this hunder year. It was a merry warld when every man held his ain gear wi' his ain grip, and when the country-side wasna fasherl wi' warrants and poindings and apprizings, and a' that cleatry craft. And ance mair I say it, my conscience winua see this puir thoughtless lad ill-guided, and especially wi' that sort o' trade. I wad rather ye fell till 't again, and fonght it out like donce honest men.'
'Your conscience, Mac(fregor!' said Rashleigh ; 'you forget how long yon and I have known each other.'
'Yes, my conscience,' reiterated Campbell, or MacGregor, or whatever was his name; 'I hae such a thing about me, Maister O.shaldistone ; and therein it may weel chance that I hae the hetter o' you. As to our knowledge of each other, if ye ken what I am, ye ken what usage it was made me what I am; and, whatever you may think, I wonld not change states with the prondest of the oppressors that hae driven ine to tak the leather-bush for a beild. What you are, Maister Rashleigh, and what excuse ye hae for being what yon are, is between your ain heart and the lang day. And now, Maister Francis, let go his collar ; for he says truly, that ye are in mair danger from a magistrate than he is, and were your canse as straight as an arrow he wad find a way to put you wrang. So let go his craig, as I was saying.'

He seconded his word, with an effort so sudden and mex.

ROB ROY

pected that he freed Rashleigh from my hold, and securing me, notwithstanding my struggles, in his own Herculean gripe, he called out, 'Take the bent, Mr. Rashleigh. Make ae pair o' legs worth twa pair o' hands; ye hae dune that before now.'
' You may thank this gentleman, kinsman,', said Rashleigh, 'if I leave any part of my debt to you unpaid ; and if I quit you now, it is only in the hope we shall soon meet again, without the possibility of interruption.'

He took up his sword, wiped it, sheathed it, and was lost among the bushes.
The Scotchman, partly by force, partly by remonstrance, prevented my following him; indeed, 1 began to be of opinion my doing so would be to little purpose.
'As I live by bread,' said Campbell, when, after one or two struggles, in which he used much forbearance towards me, he perceived me inclined to stand quiet, 'I never saw sae daft it callant! I wad hae gien the best man in the country the breadth o' his back gin he had gien me sic a kemping as ye hae dune. What wad ye do? Wad ye follow the wolf to his den? I tell ye, man, he has the auld trap set for ye. He has got the collector-creature Morris to bring up a' the auld story again, and ye maun look for nae help frae me here, as ye got at Justice Inglewood's. It isna good for my health to come in the gate $o^{\text {, }}$ the Whigamore bailie bodies. Now gang your ways hame, like a gude bairn ; jouk and let the jaw gae bye. Kcep, ont $0^{\prime}$ sight $0^{3}$ Rashleigh and Morris and that MacVittie animal. Mind the Clachan of Aberfoil, as I said before, and, by the word of a gentleman, I wunna see ye wranged. But keep a calm sough till we meet again; I maun gae and get Rashleigh out $0^{\prime}$ ' the town afore waur comes o't, for the neb o' him 's never out o' mischief. Mind the Clachan of Aberfoil.'

He turned upon his heel and left me to meditate on the singular events which had befallen me. My first care was to adjust my dress and reassume my cloak, disposing, it so as to conceal the blond which flowed down my right side. I harl scarcely acconplished this when, the classes of the college being dismissed, the gardens began to be filled with parties of the students. I therefore left them as soon as possible ; and in my way towards Mr. Jarvie's, whose dinuer hour was now approaching, I stopped at a small unpretending shop, the sign of which intimated the indweller to be Christopher Nielson, surgeon and apothecary. I requested of a little boy who was pominding some stuff in a mortar that he would procure me an audience of this; learned pharmacopolist. He opened the door of the back-shop, where I found a lively elderly man, who slook his head incrednlously at some idle account I gave him of having been wounded accidentally by the button breaking off my antagonist's fuil while I was engaged in a fencing match. When he had applied some lint and somewhat elsc he thought proper to the tritling wound I had received, he ohscrved, 'There never was button on the foil that made this hurt. Ah! young blool! young blood! But we surgeons are a secret generation. If it werenat for hot blood and ill blood, what would become of the twa learned faculties ?'
With which moral reflection le dismissed me; and I experienced very little pain or inconvenience afterwards from the scratch I had received.

CHAPTER XXVI

An iron race the mountain-clifls maintain, Foes to the gentler genius of the plain.

Who, while their rocky raniparts round they see, The rough abode of want aud liberty, As lawless force from eontidence will grow, Insult the plenty of the vales below.

Gray.

WHAT made ye sae late ?' said Mr. Jarvie, as I enterel the dining-parlour of that honest gentleman ; 'it is chappit anc the best feck o' five minutes bye-ganc. Mattie has been twice at the door wi' the dimer, and weel fir you it was a tup's head, for that cama suffer by delay. A sheep's head ower muckle boiled is rank poison, as my worthy father used to say; he likit the lug $o^{\prime}$ anc weel, honest man.
I made a suitable apology for my breach of punctuality; anl was soon seated at table, where Mr. Jarvie presided with great glee and hospitality, compelling, however, Owen and myself to do rather more justice to the Scottish dainties with which his board was charged than was quite agreeable to our southerin palates. I escaped pretty well, from having those habits of society which enable one to elude this species of well-meint persecution. But it was ridiculous enough to sec Owen, whose ideas of politeness were more rigorons and formal, and who was willing, in all acts of lawful compliance, to evince his respect for the fricud of the firm, eating with rueful connplaisance mouthful after mouthful of singed wool, and pronouncing it exeellent, in a tonc in which disghst ahmost overpowered civility.

When the cloth was removed Mr. Jarvic compounded with his own hands a very small bowl of brandy-punel, the first which I had ever the fortunc to sec.
'The limes,' he assured us, 'were from nis own little farm yonder-awa,' indicating the West Indies witl a knowing shrug of his shoulders, 'and he had learned the art of composing the liquor from auld Cuptain Coffinkey, who acquired it, he added in a whisper, 'as maist folk thought, anang the buccuneers. But it's exeellent lighor,' said he, helping as ronnd ; 'and good ware has aften come frae a wicked market. And as for Captain Coffinkey, le was a decent hian when I kent him, only he used to swear awfilly. But he's dead, and gaen to hin account, and I trust he's accepted - I trust he 's accepted.'
We found the liquor exceedingly palatahle, and it led to a long conversation between Owen and onr host on the opening which the Union had afforden to trade between Glasgow and the British colonies in America annl the West Indies, and on the facilities which Glasgow possessed of making up sintalle cargoess for that market. Mr. Jarvie answered some objection which Owell made on the difficulty of sorting a cargo for America without buying from England with vehenence and volubility.
' Na, na, sir, we stand on our ain botton ; 'ie pickle in our ain pock-neuk. We hae our Stirling serges, Musselliurgh stuffs, Aberden hose, Edinburgh shalloons, and the like, for our woollen or worsted goods; and we has linens of a' kinds better and cheaper than you hae in Lumucu itsell ; and we can buy your north $o^{\prime}$ England wares, as Manchester wares, Sheffield wares, and Newcastle earthenware, as cheap as you can at Liverpool ; and we are making a fair spell at cottons and mnslins. Na, na! let every herring ling by its ain head, and every sheep by its ain shank, and ye 'Il find, sir, us Glasgow fulk no sae far ahint but what we may follow. This is but poor entertainment for you, Mr. Osbaldistone (observing that I had been for some time silent), but ye kelı cadgers mauı aye be speaking about cart-saddles.'
I apologised, alleging the painful circumstances of my own sitnation, and the singular adventures of the morning, as the cullses of my abstraction and absence of mind. In this mamer: I gained what I songht - - an opportunity of telling my story distinctly and without interruption. I only omitted mentioning the :ssund I had received, which I did not think worthy of notice. Mr. Jarvie listened with great attention and apparent interest, twinkling his little grey er taking smiff, and only interrupting me by brief interjecti, When I came to the accomet of the rencomnter, at which Owen folded his hand and cast up his eyes to Heaven, the very image of woefui surprise, Mr. Iarvie broke in upon the narration with 'Wrang now dean wrang: to draw a sword on your kinsman is iuhibited by the laws o' God and man; and to draw a sword on the streets of a royal burgh is punishable by fine and imprisenment; and the college yards are me better privilegell: they should be a place of peace and quietuess, I trow. The collowe didna get gnde f(60) a-year ont o' bishops' rents - sorrow fia' the broorl $0^{\prime}$, bishops and their rents too:- nor yet a lense $o^{\prime}$ the archbishopri$\cdot k$ o' Glasgow the sell o't, that they sulif let folk tuilzie in their yarils, or tire wild tallants bicker there wi' suaw-ba's as they whiles do, that when Mattie mul I gae through we are fuin to make a thaik and a bow, or rin the risk o' our harns, being knocked out - it suld be looked to. ${ }^{1}$ But come awn' wi' your tale; what fell neist ?'
On my mentioning the ppparance of Mr. Canmpell, Jarvie arose in grant surprise and pacel the room, exclaiming, ' hu hin again! Robert's mad - clean wud, and waur! Rob will he hanged and disgrace a' his kindred, and that will be seen and heard tell o'. My father the deacon wrought him his first husit; odd, I am thinking Deacon I'Threeplie, the rape-spinner, will be twisting his last cravat. Ay, ny, puir Robin is in a fiir way o' being hanged. But come nwa' - cone awa', let's hear the lave o't.'

I told the whole story as pointedly as I could ; but Mr. Jarvie still found something lacking to make it clear, until I went back, though with considerable reluctance, on the whole story of Morris, and of my meeting with Campbell at the honve of Justice Inglewood. Mr. Jarvie inclined a serious ear to all this, and remained silent for some time after I had finished my narrative.
'Upon all these matters I am now to ask your advice, Mr. Jarvie, which, I have no doubt, will point out the, best way to act for my father's advantage and my own honour.'
'Ye 're right, young man - ye're right,' said the Bailie. 'Aye take the counsel of those who are anlder and wiser than yoursell, and bima like the godless. Rehoboam, who took the advice in is wheen beardless callants, neglecting the auld comsellors whin had sate at the feet $o^{\prime}$ his father Solomon, and, as it was weel put by Mr. Meiklejohn in lis. lecture on the chapter, were doubtless partakers of his sapience. But I maun hear naething about honour ; we ken naething here but about credit. Honour is a homicide and a bloodspiller, that gangs about making frays in the streat ; but Credit is a decent honest man, that sits at hame and makes the pat play.'

[^34]'Assuredly, Mr. Jarvie,' said our friend Owen, 'credit is the sum total; and if we can but save that, nt whatever disconnt
'Ye are right, Mr. Owen - ye are right ; ye speak weel and wisely; and I trust bowls will row right thongh they are a wee ajee cenow. But tonching Robin, I am of opinion le will hefriend this yommg man if it is in his prower. The has a gnile heart, puir Robin ; and thongh I lost a matter o' twa hmuler punds wi' his former engagenents, und hacma muckle expectation ever to see back my thonsand pmul seots that he promises me cenow, yet I will never say but what Robin means fair by a' men.'
'I am then to consider him,' I replied, 'as an honest man?'
'Unph!' replied Jarvie, with a precantionary sort of courg. ' Ay, he has a kind o' Hielaud honesty ; he's honest after a sort, as they say. My father the deacon insed aye to laugh when he tauld me how that bye-word came np. Ane Captain Costlett was cracking crouse about his loyalty to King Charles, atul Clerk Pettigrew - ye'll hae heard mony a tale abont him? asked him after what mamer he served the king, whell he was fiylhting again him at Wor'ster in Cromwell's army ; anel Captain Costlett was a ready body, and said that he served hime "fiter" sint. My honest father nsed to laugh weel at that sport ; and sae the bye-word came up.'
'But do you think,' I said, 'that this man will be able to serve me after a sort, or should I trust myself to this place of rendezvous which he has given me?'
'Frankly and fairly, it 's worth trying. Ye see yonrsell there's some risk in your staying here. This lit body Morris has gotten a custom-house place doun at Greencek - that's a port on the Firth doun by 're; and tho' a' the warld kens him to be but a twa-leggit creature, wi' a goose's heal and a hen's heart, that goes about on the quay plagning folk about pernits, and cockits, and lockits, and a' that vexations trale, yet if he lodge an information - on, nae donbt a man in magisterial duty mann attend to it, and ye might come to be clapped up, between four wa's, whilk wad be ill-convenient to your father's affairs.'
'I'rue,' I observed ; 'yet what service am I likely to render him by leaving Glasgow, which, it is probable, will be the principal scene of Rashleigh's machinations, an! committing myself to the donbtful faith of a man of whom I know little but that he fears justice, and has doubtless gool reasons for doing so; and that for some secret, and probably dangerous, purpose he is in close league and alliance with the very persom who is like to be the author of our ruin?'
'Ah! but yo julge Rob larilly,' suid the Bailie - 'yo julge him hardly, puir chield; mul the truth is, that yo ken macthin," about our hill country, or Hielanls, as we ca' then. 'They are clem mither set frae the like o' huz ; there's nae inilie eourt.s. amang them; mae magistrates that dima bear the sword in vain, like the worthy deneon that's awa', mul, I may say 't, like mysell and other present magistrates in this eity. But it 's just the laird's command and the loon maun loup; mad the never another law hae they but the length o' their dirks: the brould sword's pursuer, or phantiff, as you Eaghishers ca' it, and tha target is defender ; the stoutest head bears langest out - anid there's a Hieland plea for ye.'

Owen gromed deeply ; and I allow that the deseription dial not greatly inerease my desire to trist myself in a eountry so lawless as he deseribed these Scottish mountains.
'Now, sir,' said Jarvie, 'we speak little o' thae things, because they are familiar to oursells; and where's the use "i vilifying ane's country, and bringing a diseredit on aue's kin, before Southrons and strangers? It's an ill bird that files it.: air. nest.'
'Well, sir, but as it is no impertinent curiosity of mine, but real neeessity, that obliges me to make these inquiries, I hope you will not be offended at my pressing for a little farther information. I have to deal, on my father's aeeomit, with several gentlemeu of these wild countries, and I must trust your good sense and experience for the requisite lights upon the subject.'

This little morsel of flattery was unt thrown out in vain.
'Experienee!' said the Builie, 'I hae had experience, n:u' doubt, and I hae made some calculations. Ay, and to speat: quietly amang oursells, I hae made some perynisitious through Andrew Wylie, my auld elerk; he's wi' MacVittio aud Co. mow. but he whiles drinks a gill on the Saturday afternoons wi' his auld master. And since ye say ye are willing to be guided hig the Glasgow weaver-borly's advice, I am no the man that will refise it to the son of an anld corresponlent, and my father the deacon was nane sie afore me. I have whiles thonght o' letting my lights burn before the Duke of Argyle or his brother Lord Ilay - for wherefore should they be hiididen under a bushel ? - but the like o' thae grit men wadna minel the like of me, a puir wabster-body; they think mair o' wha says a thing than $o$ ' what the thing is that 's said. The mair's the pity mair's the pity. Not that I wad speak ony ili of this MacGallum More. "Curse not the rieh in your ledehamber," saith the son of Sirmch, for a bird of the uir shall curry the clatter, and pint-stoups hae lang hige.'

ROB ROY

I interrupted these prolegomena, in which Mr. Jurvie was apt to be somewhat diffinse, ly praying him to rely upon Mr. Owen and myself as perfectly secret and safe eonfidants.
'It's no for that,' he replied, 'for I fear nae man; whet for suld I I I speak nae treason. Only thae Hiehndmen hae lang grips, and I whiles gung a wee hit up the glens to see some auld kinsfolks, and I wadna willingly be in band blude wi' ony $n$ ' their clans. Howsumever, to proceed - Ye mann understand I found my remarks on fignres, whilk, ne Mr. Uwen here weel kens, is the only true demonstrable root of human knowledge.'
Owen readily assented to a proposition so muelt in his own way, and our orator proceeded.
'I'hese Hielands of ours, as we ca' then, gentlemen, are but a wild kind of warld by themsells, full of heights mul howes, woords, caverns, lochs, rivers, and mountains that it wall tire the very deevil's wings to flee to the tap o' them. And in this eountry, and in the Isles, whilk are little better, or, to speak the truth, rather waur than the mainland, there are about twa humder and thirty parochimes, ineluting the Orkneys, where, whether they speak Gaelie or no, I wotna, but they are min uncivilised people. Now, sirs, I sall haud ilk parochine at the moderate estimate of eight humder examinable persons, dedncting ehildren mader nine years of age, and then adding one-fifth to stand for bairns of nine years auld and moler, the whole population will reaeh to the sum of - let us and one-fifth to $8(0)$ to be the multiplier, and 230 being the multiplieand $\qquad$ ,
'The produet,' said Mr. Owen, who entered delightedly into these statisties of Mr. Jarvie, 'will be $230,(1) 0$.'
'Right, sir - perfectly right ; and the military array of this Hieland comntry, were a' the men-folk between aughteen and fifty-six bronght out that eonld bear arms, couldna eome weel short of fifty-seven thonsand five hmulred men. Now, sir, it's $a$ sad and awfu' truth that there is neither wark, nor the very fashion nor appearanee of wark, for the tae half of thate phir ereatures; that is to say, that the arricultme, the pasturage, the fisheries, and every species of honest industry about the country, eannot employ the one moiety of the pupulation, let them work ns lazily as they like; and they do work as if a plough or a sparde burnt their fingers. Aweel, sil, this moiety of nnemployed borlies, monomting to $\qquad$
'To one hmudred and fifteen thonsmal sonls,' said ()wen, 'heing the half of the above product.'
'Yo hae 't, Maister ()well - yo lue 't ; whereof there may lwe twenty-eight thousand seven hmulred able-bodied gillies fit to bear arms, and that do bear amse, and will touch or look at mae honest means of livelihoorl even if they could get it - which, lack-a-day, they cannot.'
'But is it possible,' sail! I, 'Mr. Jarvie, that this can be a just picture of so large a portion of the island of Britain?'
'Sir, I'll muke it as plain as Peter Pasley's pike-stalf; I will allow that ilk parochine, on an average, employs fifty plenghs, whilk is a great proportion in sic miserable soil as thae creatures hae to labour, and that there may be pasture enengh fir pleugh-horses, and owsen, and forty or fifty cows; now, to take care $o^{\prime}$ the pleughs and cattlo, we'se allow seventy-five families of six lives in ilk family, and wo'se add fifty mair to make ever numbers, and ye hae five hundred sonls, the tae half o' the population, employed and maintained in a sort $o^{\prime}$ fashion, wi' sotue chance of sour-milk and crowdie; but I wad be glad to ken what the other five hunder are to do?'
'In the name of God!' said I, 'what do they do, Mr. Jarvie? It makes me shudder to think of their situation.'
'Sir,' replied the Bailie, 'ye wad maybe shudder mair if ye were living near-hand them. For, admittiug that the tae half of them may make some little thing for thensells honestly in the Lowlands by shearing in harst, Iroving, hay-making, aml the like; ye hae still mony hundreds and thousands o' lang. legged Hieland grillies that will neither work nor want, anil maun gang thigging and sorning abont on their acquaintance, or live by doing the laird's bidding, be't right or be't wrang.' And mair especially mony humdreds o' them cone down I" the borders of the low conutry, where there's gear to grip, and live by stealing, reiving, lifting cows, and the like depredations; a thing deplorable in ony Christinn conntry. the mair especially that they take pride in it, and reckint driving a spreagh - whilk is, in plain Scotch, stealing a herd of nowt - a gallant, manly action, and mair befitting of pretty men, as sic reivers will ca' themsells, than to win a day's wage by ony honest thrift. And the lairds are as bal as the loons; for if they dima hid them gae reive and harry, the deil a hit they forhid them, and they shelter them, or let them shelter theinsells, in their woots, and momitains, and stromgholis. whenever the thing 's dune. And every ane $u$ ' thenn will miintain as mony' o' his nin nume, or his clan, as we way, has he can rap anl rend menns for, or - whilk is the sume thingas mony as can in ony fishion, fair or foul, mainteen themsells : and there they are wi' gun, and pistol, dirk und domrlach, rendy to disturb the peate o' the comutry whenever the laird likes; and that's the grievance of the Ilielanls, whilk are, and hae heen for this thonsand years hye past, a ioike o' the maist lawless unehristian limmers that ever disturled a donce, iniet, Gond-fearing neighlonrhood like this 0 ' ours in the west here.'
'And this kinsman of yours, and friend of mine, is he one of those graat proprietors who maintain the household trongs you speak of ?' Iinquired.
' Na , na,' said Bailie Jarvie; 'he's nane o' your $\mathrm{mreat}^{2}$ grandees $0^{\prime}$ ehiefs, ass they ua' them, neither; thongh he is weel born, and lineally descended frue auld Glenstrue. I ken his linenge : indeed he is a near kinsman, and, as I smid, of gnde tentle Ilieland hlude, though ye may think weel that I care little about that nonsense ; it 's a' moonshine in water - waste threals and thrums, as we say; but I conld show ye letters free his father. that was the third aff Glenstrae, to me father Deacon Jarvie - peaee be wi' his memory: - begiming, " Dear Deaeon," and ending, "Your loving kinsman to commaml." 'They are amaist $a$ ' about borrowed siller, sue the gule deacon, that's dead and gane, keepit them as doenments and evidents. He was a carefu' man.'
'But if he is not,' I resumed, 'one of their ehiefs or patriarehal leaders, whom I have heard my father talk of, this kinsman of yours has, at least, mneh to say in the Highlands, I presume ?'
' Ye may say that; nae name better kend between the Lennox and Breadalbanc. Robin was anes a weel-doing, painstaking drover, as ye warl see amang ten thousand. It was a pleasure to see him in his belted plaid and brognes, wi' his target at his baek, and claymore ant dirk at his belt, following a humdred Highland stots, and a dozen o' the gillies, as rongh and ragged as the beasts they drave. And he was baith civil and just in his dealings, and if he thonght his chapman had made a hard bargain he wad gie him a luck-penmy to the mends. I hae kend him gie back five shillings out of the pund sterling.;
'Twenty-five per cent,' saill (Wwen, 'a heavy discomat.'
'He wad gie it though, sir, as I' tell ye, mair espeeially if he thought the buyer was a puir man, and couldina at ad by a loss. Bitt the timem enin hurd, mill Rol was ventire ome. It wanna my fiut - it wasun my fint ; he cminn wyte me. I u!." tanld hime ot. Aud the creditors, mair expecinlly sone grit neighbours o' his, grippit tu, his living and land; mull they sing his wife was turned out o' the honse to the hillside, and wiir misguided to the benot. Shmuefi'! shamefin'! I min a pemeefin' man and a magistrate, but if ony mie hul guided sae munckl. ns my mervant (flueni, Mattie, ne it 's like they gnidel Kuli; wife, I think it suld hae set the slnable that my father the dencon had at Bothwell Brig n-walking again. Weel, Rol) (sinn hune, and fand desolation, Gorl pity ns! where he leff jlent!: he looked enst, west, sonth, north, mud saw neither hanhin nin hope - neither heild nor shelter; sne he e'en mid the bomet ower his brow, belted the hrondsword to his side, twok to the brae-side, nud loccame a lroken mun.'
The vaice of the good citizen was broken by his contending feelings. He obviously, while he professel to contenum the perligree of his Highland kinsman, inttached a secret feeling of consequence to the comnexion, and he sprike of his friend in lis. prosperity with an overtlow of affection which deepened his sym. pathy for his misfortnnes mud his regrot for their consequences.
'Thus tenpiterl, and mith hi by despnir,' said I, secung Mr. Jarvie did not proced in his nurrative, 'I suppose your kinsman became one of those depredators you lave described to ns!'
'No s-- bad as that,' said the Ginswegian - 'no n'thegither and ontanatat sae bad as that ; but he becane a levier of blackmail, wider and farther than ever it was mised in our day; a' throngh the Lemox mad Menteith, and up to the gates is; Stirling Castle.'
'Black-mail? I do not muderstmud the plirase,' I renarked.
'On, yo see, Rob soon gathered mu unto hand o' hanebonmets int his back, for le comes o' a rough name when le :kent by his ain, and a name that's lell! itss ain for mony a lang year, baith again king and parliament, and kirk too fir aught I ken - an auld nud homourable name, for as satir as it has been worried and hadden down and oppressed. My mother was a MaeGregor, I caren: wha kens it. And sae Rhil hat "soon a gallant band ; und as it grieved him, he said, to see sid"hership," and waste, and deprediation to the somitho" the Ifieland line, why, if ony heritor or farmer wal pay him four punls Scots ont of ench hundred punds of valued rent, whilk was: doubtless a moderate consideration, Rob engaged to keep theu menithlens ; let them send to, him if they lost ane minckle as a single cloot by thieving, and hob emgared to get them again, or may the valne; aul he aye keopit his worl- 1 cama deny lont he keepit his word - a' men allow Rob keejw his, worll.'
'This is a very singnlar comtract of assurunce,' said Mr. Owell.
'It's clean again our statute law, that must le owneel,' mid darvie - 'clean ngain law, the levging and the prying back. mail are baith pmishable; but if the law canma protect my ham and byre, what for suld I ine engige wi' allichand gentleman that can? answer me that.'
'But,' nnill I, 'Mr. Jarvie, is this contmet of Dack-mail, as yom call it, completely volnutary on the part of the landlori or firmer who pays the insurmee? or what nsually happens in chese any one rofnses mynent of this tribute?
'Aha, hal!' said the Builie, longhing mad putting his finger to his nowe, 'yo think ye hae me there. 'Iroth, I wal advise ony frienls o' mine to gree wi' Rob; for, watch as they lihe, and do what they like, they are sair apt to be harried when the lang nights come om. Some or the (irahame mind Cohemm gentry stood ont ; but what then? they lowe their haill ston:k the f. rst winter ; sae maist folks now think it hest to emne into Rob's terms. He 's casy wi' a' body that will he ensy wi' him ; but if ye thraw him ye lam hetter thraw the deevil.
'And by his exphnits in these vocations,' I emontined, 'I suppowe he has renferel himself minemable to the laws of the conilitry?
'Amenable? ye may say that; his araig wad ken the weight o' li: hurlies if they could get haud o' Rol. But he hats finde ficends anang the grit folks; and 1 conld tell ye o' ate prit fannily that keeps him up as far as they decently can, tu be a thom in the side of another. And then he's sic an :ulli-fiarran lang-headed chield as never tonk up the trade o' caterin in our time : mony a daft reik he las phayed, mair thum wad fill a book, and a queer :une it wad he, as gude as Rohin Hool or Willian Wallace - a' fn' $n^{\prime}$ ventmresmene deeds and eseapes, sie as fiolk tell ower at a winter-ingle in the daft diys:. It's a "pueer thing o' me, gentlemen, that mu a man on patare mysell, and a peacefir man's sim, firr the leacon my fither quarrellenl wi' nane out o' the town-emancil-..- it 's a y yueer thing, I say, but I think the Hicland bude o' me warns at thate daft tales, and whiles I like better to hear them than a worl o' profit, Gude forgie me! But they are vanities - sinfu' vanities; and, moreover, again the statute law - again the statute and gospel law.'
I now followed up my investigation by inguiring what means of inthuence this Mr. Robert Canpbell conld possibly possess over my affairs or those of my father.
'Why, ye are to molerstanl,' said Mr. Jarvie, in a very subb. dued tone - 'I speak anang friends, mol moder the rose - ye are to understand that the Hielands hae been keepit quiet sinue? the year anghty-nine, that was Killieerankie year. But how hae they been keepit quiet, think ye? By siller, Mr. Owen: by siller, Mr. Osbaldistone. King William cansed Breadallame distribute twenty thonsand gucle fmols sterling anang them, and it's said the auld Hieland Farl keepit a lang lng o't in his ain sporran. And then (Qneen Ame, that's dean, gae the chiefs hits o' pensions, sae they had wherewith to sulport their gillies and caterans that work nae wark, as I said afure; anil they lay by quiet enengh, saving some spreagherie on the Lowlands, whilk is their use and wont, and some entting o' thrapples amang thensells, that nae civilised borly kens or eares ony thing anent. Weel, but there's a new warlil come up wi' this King George - I say, Gud bless him, for me ! - there's neither like th be siller nor pensions gaun ammg then; they haena the means $n$ ' mainteening the clans that eat them un, as ye may gness frae what I said before ; their credit's gane in the Lowhands; and : man that ean whistle ye up a thousand or feifteen humdred linking lads to do his will wad hardly get fifty pmonds on his band at the Cross o' Glasgow. 'This canma stand lang ; there will be an ontbreak for the Stuarts - there will le an outhreak; they will come down on the Low Comitry like a flowd, as they did in the waefu' wars o' Montrose, and that will be seen anil heard tell n' ere a twalmonth gangs round.'
'Yet still,' I saill, 'I do not see how this concerns Mr. Camphell, minch less my father's affairs.'
' Kob can levy five handred men, sir, and therefore war suld concern him as muckle as maist folk,' replied the Bailie; 'fur it is a faenlty that is far less profitable in time o' peace. 'Then, to tell ye the truth, I dombt he has been the prine arront hetween smene $n$ 'our Hieland chiefs and the gentlemen in the north of Bughand. We a' heard ot the pullic money that wats tacn frae the elield Morris somewhere abont the fit $0^{\prime}$ ' Chevint ly Rob and ane o' the Oibaldistone lads; and, to tell ye the truth, word gaed that it was yoursell, Mr. Prameis, anil somry was I that your father's son suld hae taen to sie practices. Na, ye needna say a word about it, I see weel I was mistaen ; but I wad believe ony thing o' a stage-player, whilk 1 eoneluded ye to be. But now I donbtna it Las been Rashleigh himsell, or some other o' your consins; they are a' tarr'd wi' the same stick -rank Jacobites and Papists- anl wal think the government viller and government papers lawfin' prize. And the ereatnre Morris is sic a cowardly enitiff that to this home he daurraa say that it was Rob took the portmantean aff him ; and throth he 's right, for your chstom-honse and exeise cattle are ill liket on a' sides, and Kol might get a back-handed lick at him before the Board, as they can't, could help him.'
'I have long sinspected this, Mr. Jarvie,' vaill I, 'and perfectly agree with yon; but as to my fathere's affairs $\qquad$ ''
'Suspected it? it's certain - it's certain; I ken them that staw some of the papers that were taen aff Monris, it's needless to say where. But to your father's alfiairs. Ye mam think that in thae twenty years bye-gane some o' the lieland hairls and chiefs hae come to some sma' sense o' their ain interest. Your father and others hae bought the wools of Glen Disseries, Glen Kissoch, 'Tober-na-Kippoch, and mony mair hesides, and your father's honse has granted lagge bills in payment; a and as the credit o' Osbaldistone and 'Treshiam wais grule - for I 'Il siny before Mr. Owen's face, as I wad behime his back, that, bating misfortunes. ${ }^{\prime}$ ' the Lord's sending, nae men conld be mair honourable in minsiness - the Ifielaml gentlenen, holderso' thae bills, hae fomed eredit in Glasgow and Dinhurgh - I mirht ammist say in Clasgow wholly, for it 's little the pridefu' Eilinburgh folk do in real business - for all, on the graater part of, the contentso' thate hills. So that Ahat ! d' ye see me now?'

I confessed I conld not cuite follow his drift.
'Why,' said he, 'if these bills are mot paid, the Cilasgow merehant comes on the Hieland lairds, what hate deil a hooldte " siller, and will like ill to spew mp what is item a spent. They will turn desperate, five lommed will pise that might Bate sitten at hame, the deil will gace ower Jow Wabster, and the stomping of your father's homse will hasten the onthreak that's been sae lant biding uns:'
'Yon think, then,' said I, surprised at this simgnlar view of the case, 'that Rashleigh Oshaldistome hats dome this injury to my father merely to accelerate a rising in the Highlaunds, hy "listressing the gentlemen to whan these liills were arigrinally grauted?'
'Dombtless - donbtless; it has heen one main reasm, Mr.

ROB ROY

Osbaldistone. I doubtna but what the ready money he earried off wi' him might be another. But that makes eomparatively but a sma' part o' your father's loss, though it might unake thi maist part o' Rashleigh's direct gain. 'The assets he carried off are of nae mair use to him than if he were to light his pije wi' them. He tried if MacVittie and Co. wad gie lim siller "m them, that I ken liy Audro Wylie; lnit they were ower anlid cats to draw that strae afore them: they keepit aff and gae fair words. Rashleigh Osbaldistone is better kend than trustell in Glasgow, for he was here ahout some Jacobitical papistieal trok ing in seventeen hundred and seven, and left debt alint him. Na , na, he canua pit aff the paper here ; folk will misdoubt him how he came by it. Na, na, he 'll hae the stuff safe at some ". their haulds in the Hielands, and I daur say my cousin li,k could get at it gin he liked.'
'But wonld he be disposed to serve us in this pinch, Mr. Jarvie?' said I. 'You have deseribe! him as an agent of the Jacobite party, and deeply eonneeted a their intrigues; will he be disposed for my sake, or, if you please, for the sake of justire, to make an act of restitution which, supposing it in his power; would, aecording to your view of the ease, materially interfere with their plans?'
'I camia preceesely speak to that: the grandees anoms them are doubtfu' o' Rob, and he 's doubtfin' o' them ; and he' 's been weel friended wi' the Argyle family, wha stand for the present model of goverument. If he was freed o' his hornings and captions, he warl rather be on Argyle's side than he wial be on Breadalbane's, for there 's auld ill-will between the Brealalbune family and his kin and name. The truth is, that liut, is for his ain hand, as Henry Wyud fenght : ${ }^{1}$ he 'll take the side that suits him best; if the deil was laird, Rob wall be fir being tenant, and ye cana blame him, puir fallow, considerinf his eireumstances. But there's as thing sair again ye $:$ hin has a grey mear in lis stable at liane.'
'A grey mare!' said I. 'What is that to the purpose?'
'The wife, man-the wife, an awfu' wife she is. Shlu' downa bide the sight $o^{\prime}$ a kindly Scot, if he come frae the La, wlands, far less of an Inglisher, and she'll le keen for a' that ean set up King James, and ding down King George.'
'It is very siugular,' I replied, 'that the mercantile transactions of London citizens shonld beeome involved with revolntions and rebellions.'

[^35]'Not at a', man - not at a',' returned Mr. Jarvie, 'that's a' your silly prejudications. I read whiles in the lang dark nights, and 1 hae read in Baker's Chimicle that the merchants (") London conld gar the Bank of Genoa break their promise to alvance a mighty sum to the King of Spain, wherehy the sailing of the Grand Spanish Armada was put aff for a haill year. What think yon of that, sir?'
'Tlant the merelants did their comitry golden service, which ought to be honourably remenbered in our histories.'
II think sae too; and they wad de weel, and deserve weel haith $o^{\prime}$ the state and $u^{\prime}$ humanity, that wad save three or four honest Hicland gentlenen frae lonping heads ower heecls into destruction, wi' a' their puir siackless followers, just becanse they cama pay back the siller they lad reason to comut upon as their ain, and save your father's credit, and my ain gude siller that Oibaldistone and I'resham awes ne into the bargain. I say, if ane could manare a' this, I think it suld be done and said unto him, even if lie were a puir ca'-the-shuttle body, as unto one whom the king delighteth to honour.'
'I camnot pretend to estimate the extent of public gratitude,' I replied; 'but our own thankfulness, Mr. Jarvie, would be commensurate with the extent of the obligation.'
'Which,' added Mr. Owen, 'we wonld endeavour to balance with a per contra the instant our Mr. Osbaldistone returns from Holland.'
'I doubtua-I doultna; he is a very worthy gentleman, and a sponsible, and wi' some o' my lights ninght do muckle business in Scotland. Weel, sir, if these assets could be redeemed out o' the hands o' the Plilistines, they are ginde paper: they are the right stuff when they are in the right hands, and that's yours, Mr. Owen. And I'se find yc three men in Glasgow, for as little as ye may think o' us, Mr. Owen - that's Sanlie Steenson in the 'Irade's Land, and Joln Pirie in Candlr Riggs, and another, that sall be nameless at this present, sa! ${ }^{1 \prime}$.ulvance what somms are sufficient to sceure the credit of your honse, and seek nac better sceurity.'
Owen's eyes sparkled at this prospect of extrication: hat his conntenance instantly fell on recollecting low inmprobable it was that the recovery of the assets, as he techinically called then, shonld be successfully achicved.
'Dimia despair, sir - dima desparir,'sail Mr. Jarvie ; 'I hae taen sae muckle concurn wi' yonr affairs alreally that it maun e'en be ower shoon ower boots wi', me now. I am just like !uy father the deacon - praise be wi' him ! - I canna meddle wi' a friend's business but I aye end wi' making it luy ain. Sac I'll e'en pit, on my boots the morn and be jogging ower Drymen Muir wi' Mr. Fronk here ; and if I canna nak Rob hear renson, and his wife too, I dinna ken wha can. I hae becn a kind freend to thenn afore now, to say nacthing o' ower-looking him last night, when nanning his name wad hae cost him his life. I 'll be hearing o' this in the comeil naybe frae Bailie Grahane and MacVittie and some o' them. 'They hae coost up my kindred to Rob to me already, set up their nashgabs: : tauld them I wad vindicate nae man's faults; hont sct apart what he had done again the law o' the conntry, and the hership; $o^{\prime}$ the Lennox, and the misfortune o' some folk losing life by him, he was an honester man than stude on ony o' their shanks. And what for suld I mind their clavers? If Rob is an outlaw, to himsell be it said, there is nae laws now about reset of intercommuned persons, as there was in the ill times o' the last Stuarts., I trow I hae a Scotch tongue in my head; if they speak, l'se answer.'
It was with great pleasure that I saw the Bailie gradnally surmount the barriers of cantion, under the united influence of public spirit and good-natured interest in our affairs, together with his natural wish to avoid loss and acquire gain, and not a little harmless vanity. Through the combined operation of these motives he at length arrived at the doughty resolution of taking the field in person, to aid in the recovery of my father's property. His whole information led ne to believe that, if the papers were in possession of this Highland adventurer, it might be possible to induce him to surrender what he could not keep, with any prospect of personal advantage ; and I was conscions that the presence of his kinsman was likely to have cinsiderable weight with him. I therefore cheerfinlly acquiesred in Mr. Jarvie's proposal that we should set out early next morning.
That honest gentleman was indeed as vivacious and alert in preparing to carry his purpose into execution as he had been slow and cautious in forming it. He roared to Mattie to 'air his trot-cosey, to have his jack-boots greasel and set before the kitchen fire all night, and to see that lis beast be corned, and a', his riding gear in order.' Having agreed to meet him at five o'clock next morning, and having settled that Owen, whowe presence conld be of no use to us upon this expedition, should await our return at Glasyow, we took a kind farewell of this mexpectedly zealous friend. I installed Owen in an apartment in my lodgings contignons to my own, and, giving orders to Andrew Fairservice to attend me next morning at the hour appointed, I retired to rest with better hopes than it had lately been my fortune to entertain.

CHAPTER XXVII

Far as the eye could reach no tree was seen, Earth, clad in russert, seorn'! the' ly green ; No birds, exerpt as birds of passage, flew; No bee was heard to hum, no love to eno; No streanis, as amber smooth, as amber elear, Were seen to glide, or heard to warhle here.

Prophecy of Famine.

IT was in the braeing atmosphere of a harvest morning that I met by appointment Fairservice, with the horses, at the door of Mr. Jarvie's house, whieh was but little space distant from Mrs. Flyter's hotel. The first matter which cuught my attention was that, whatever were the deficieneies of the pony which Mr. Fairserviee's legal adviser, Clerk 'Touthope. generously bestowed upon him in exehange for Thorncliff: mare, he had eontrived to part with it and proenre in its stend an animal with so eur:ous and complete a lameness that it seened only to make use of three logs for the purpose of progression, while the fourtli appeared as if meant to be flourisleon in the air by way of neeompaniment. 'What do yon mean ly bringing such a creature as that here, sir ? and where is the pony you rode to Glasgow upon ?' were my very natural and impatient inquiries.
'I sell't it, sir. It was a slink beast, and wad hae eaten its head aff, standing at Luckie Flyter's at livery. And I lane bought this on your honour's aeconnt. It's a grand harguin, cost but a pund sterling the foot; that's fout a thegither. The stringhalt will gate aff when it's gaen a mile ; it's a weel-keml ganger ; they ea' it Souple 'Tam.'
'On my soul, sir:' said I, 'you will never rest till wy supple-jack and your shonlders beeome aequainted. If you dis not go instar:tly and procure the other brute you shall pay the penalty of your ingenuity.'

Andrew, notwithstanding my threats, eontinued to battle the point, as he said it would cos im a guinea of rue-bargain to the man who had oought his. ny before he could get it back again. Like a true Euo shunn, though sensible I was duped by the rasenl, I was about to pay his exaction rather than lose time, when forth sallied Mr. Jarvie, cloaked, mantled, hoorled, and booted as if for a siberim winter, while two apprentices, under the immediate direction of Mattie, led forth the deeent ambling steed which had the honour on such mecasions to support the person of the Glangow mugistrate. tire he 'elombe to the saddle,' an expression more deseriptive of the Bailie's morle of momining than that of the knightserrant to whom Spenser applies it, he inguired the tanse of the dixpute betwixt my servant and me. Having learned the nature of honest Andrew's manoulure, he instantly eut short all dehate by pronouncing that, if Fairservice did not forthwith return the three-legged palfrey and produce the more nseful quadruped which he had disearded, he would send him ta prison and ameree him in lmaf his wages. 'Mr. Osbaldistome,' said he, 'contraeted for the service of both your horse and yon, twa brutes at mice, ye uneonseionable raseal! But I'se look weel after you during this joumey.'
'It will be nonsense fining me,' said Andrew, doughtily, 'that hasua a grey groat to pay a fine wi'; it 's ill taking the breeks aff a Hielandman.'
'If ye hae mae purse to fine, ye hae flesh to pine,' replied the Bailie, 'and I will look weel to ye getting your deserts the tae way or the tither.'

To the commands of Mr. Jarvic, therefore, Andrew was compelled to submit, only muttering between his teeth, 'Ower mony maisters-ower mony maisters, as the paddock said to the harrow, when every tooth gae her a tig.'

Apparently he found no diffienlty in getting rid of Supple Than, and reeovering possession of his former Bucephalns, for he accomplished the exelange without heing many minutes absent; nor did I hear further of his having paid any smart-money for hreach of bargain.
We now set forward, but had not reached the top of the street in which Mr. Jarvie dwelt when a loud hallooing and breathless call of 'Stop, stop!' was heard belind ns. We stopped aceordingly, and were overtaken by Mr. Jarvie's two lads, who bore two parting tokens of Mattie's care for her master. The first was conveyed in the form of a volminoms silk handkerchief, like the mainsail of one of his: own West-

ROB ROY

Indiamen, which Mrs. Mattie particularly desired he womld put about his neek, and which, thins entrented, he alded to his other integuments. The second youngster brought only it verhal charge (I thought I saw the rogue disposed to laugh ais he delivered it) on the part of the lionsekeeper, that her master wonld take care of the waters. 'P'ooln! pooh! silly linssy; answered Mr. Jarvie; bitt added, turning to me, 'it shows a kind heart though - it shows a kind licart in sae young a quem. Mattie 's a carefu' lass.' So speaking, le pricked the sides of his; palfrey, and we left the town without farther interription.

While we paced easily forward, by a road which conducted us nortl-eastward from the town, I liad an opportunity t1" estimate and admire the good qualities of my new frienl. Although, like my father, he considered commercial transuction.; the most important objeets of human life, he was not wedled to them so as to mudervalue more general knowlenge. On the contrary, with much oddity and vulgarity of manner, with it vanity which he made much more ridiculous by disgnising it now and then under a thin veil of hmmility, and devoid as he was of all the advantages of a learnced edication, Mr. Jarvic's conversation showed tokens of a slirewl, observing, liberal, anul, to the extent of its opportmmities, a well-improved mind. He was a good local antiquary, and entertained me, as we passind along, with an account of remarkable events which had formerly taken place in the scenes through which we passed. And as he was well aequainted with the ancient history of his district, he saw with the prospective eye of an enlightenced patriot the buds of many of those future advantages which have only blossomed and ripencd within thesc few ycars. I remarkel alsit.; and with great pleasure, that, althongh a keen Scotchman, ani abundantly zealous for the honour of his country, he was dixposed to think liberally of the sister kingdom. When Andtrw Fairservice (whon, by the way, the Bailic conld not abile) chose to impute the accident of one of the horses casting his shoe to the deteriorating influence of the Union, he incurred : severe rebuke from Mr. Jarvic.
'Whisht, sir! whisht ! it's ill-seraped tongues like yours that make misclief atween neightourhoorls and nations. 'There 's naething saie gule on this side o' time but it might hae been better, and that may he salid o' the Union. Nane were keener against it than the Glasgow folk, wi' their rablling: and their risings, and their mols, as they ca' them nowadays. But it's an ill wind blaws nacborly gude. Let ilka anc roose
the ford as they find it. I may, "Iet Clamgow flourish!" whilk in judicionsly and elegantly putten romid the town's arms by way of bye-word. Now, sinte St. Mmgo eatehed herrings in the Clyile, what was ever like to gar uss 4 ourish like the sugar and tolneeo trade 1 Will ony looly tell me that, and grimble at the treaty that opened nis a road west-awa' yomber?

Andrew Fairservice was far from acquiescing in these argnments of experience, and even ventured to enter a grumbling protest, "That it was an meleo change to hat Scothand's laws made in England; and that, for liss share, he wadna for a' the herring-burrels in Glasgow, and a' the tolhacen-casks to boot, hae gien up the riding o the Seots Parlinment, or sent awn' onl crown, and our sword, and our seeptre, and Mons Meg, ${ }^{1}$ to be keepit by thae English pock-puldings in the 'Tower o' Lunnon. What wad Sir Willian Wallace, or anld Davie Lindsay, hae said to the '"nion, or them that made it ?'

The road which we travelled, while diverting the way with these disenssions, had beeome wild and (open as som as we had left Glasgow a mile or two behind ns, and was growing more dreary as we advanced. Huge continuons heaths spread before, behind, and around ns in hopeless laurenness, now level and interspersed with swamps, green with trencherons verdure, or sable with turf, or, as they eall them in Scotland, peat-bugs, and now swelling into huge heavy aseents, which wanted the dignity and form of hills, while they were still more toilsome to the passenger. There were neither trees nor bushes to relieve the eye from the russet livery of absolute sterility. The very heath was of that stinted imperfeet kind which has little or no flower, and affords the coarsest and memest covering which, as far as my experienee enables me to julge, mother larth is ever arrayed in. Living thing we saw none, except occasionally a few straggling sheep of a strange diversity of enlours, as black, bluish, and orange. The sable hue predominated, lowever, in their faees and legs. The very hiris seemed to shom these wastes, and no wonder, since they had an casy method of escaping from them; at least I only heard the monotonoms and plaintive cries of the lapwing and enrlew, which my companions: denominated the peaswecp and whanp.

At dimer, however, which we took about noon, at a most miserable ale-house, we had the good fortme to find that these tiresome screamers of the morass were mot the only inlahitants: of the moors. 'Ihe goodwife told us that 'the gudeman had [^36]been at the hill' ; and well for us that he bad heen so, for wo enjoyed the prodnce of his chasse in the shape of soase broiled moor-game, a dish which gallantly eked ont the ewe-milk cheess, dried salmon, and oaten bread, heing all heesides that the homas afforled. Some very indifferent two-penay ale and ag ghess of oxcollent braudy crowned our repmet; and as our horses had in the meantime disenssed their corn, we remmed our journey with renovated vigour.

I had need of all the spirits " goorl dimer comld give th resist the dejection which crept insensilhy on my mined whea I combined the strange uncertainty of my ermal with the dis consohte aspect of the country through which it was lealin. me. Our road coutinaed to bo, if possible, more waste anil wild than that we hal travelled in the forenom. The fins miserable hovels that showed some morks of hamme habituti,n were now of still rarer occurrence ; mal at length, as we begrin to ascend an minterruptel. swell of moorhand, they totally disappeared. The only exercise which my imagiantion received was when some purticular turn of the coal gave nis a partial view to the left of a large assemblage of dark-blue mountuins stretching to the north and north-west, which promisell to inclade within their recesses a country as wild perhaps, limt certainly differing greatly in point of interest from thit which we now travelled. The peaks of this screen of momutains were as wildly varied and distingnished as the hills whield we land seen on the right were tame nud lampish; and while I guzel on this Alpine region I folt a longing to explore its recesses, though accomranied with toil and danger similur to that whid a sailor feels when he wishes for the risks and animation of a battle or a gale, in exchange for the insupportable monotony of a protmected calin. I made various ingurics of iny friend, Mr. Jarvie, respecting the names and positions of these remarkahle: monntains; but it was a subject on which he had no informa tion, or did not choose to be communicative. 'They're the Hieland hills-the Hieland hills. Ye'll see and hear eneash ubout them hefore ye see Glasgow Cross again. I downa hrok at them ; I never sce them lat they gar me srew. It's no fin fear-no for fear, but just for grief for the puir blinded half. starved ereatures that inhabit them. Bat say nae mair nhmu it; it's ill speaking o' Hielaullncus sae near the liae. I han' kend mony an honest man waini lae ventured this leagth without he had made lis last will and testament. Mattie lain ili-will to see me set awa on this ride, and grat a wec, the sil!
tawpie ; but it's nae mair ferlie to see a woman greet than to see a goose gnag burefit.'
I next attempterl to lead the discourse on the charncter nuil history of the person whm we were going to visit ; but on this topie Mr. Jarvie was totally inacesssible, owing perhaps in purt to the attendance of Mr. Anlrew Fairservice, who chnse to keep so close in our rear that his ears conld but fail to cutch every word which was spoken, while his tomge assimned the freatom of mingling in cour conversation as often as ho watw an opportunity. For this ho oeceasionally ineurred Mr. Jarvie's reproof.
'Keep back, sir, as best sets ye,' suid the Builie, as Aulrew pressed forward to cateh the miswer to some question I had asked about Cumpbell. 'Ye wall finin rile the fore-horse, ant re wist how. 'That chiell's aye fir heing out o' the cheese fat he was monlded in. Now, as fir your puentions, Mr. Ospmeldistone, now that chichl's out of ear-shot, I'll just tell ye it's free to you to speer, and it's free to me to answer or no. Cinde, I canna say muekle o' Roh, puir chield; ill I winum suy o' hime, fir, forby that he's my comsin, we 're coming near his ain amutry, and there may be ane of his gillies ahint every whinbush for what I ken. And if ye 'll be guinled hy my antvire, the less ye speak ahout him, or where we are gann, or what we are gamin to do, we 'll be the mair likely to speed nis in mur erraml. For it 's like we muy fa' in wi' some a' his mufremis, there are e'en ower mony o' them alwint; and his hwonet sits even m his brow yet for a that ; hut I doubt they 'll he unsiles wi' Roh at the hast : air day or late day, the fox's hide findwaye the llaying knife.'
'I will certainty,' I replied, 'he entirely guide $i$ hy your experience.'
'Right, Mr. Osbaldistone - right ; hut I mann speak to this gahhting skyte tom, for buirus and fules speak at the Cross what they hear at the ingle sille. D' ye hear, yon, Amlrew what's your mane - Fairsurvice?

Antrew, who at the hast rebuff had fallen a good way behiul, did not chonse to ackinwledge the summons.
'Andrew, ye sconudrel!' repeated Mr. Jarvie ; 'here, sir: here!'
'Here is for the dog,' sail Audrew, coming up, sulkily.
'I'll gie you dog's wages, ye raseal, if ye dima attend to what Isay t'ye. We are ganlu intu the liclands a bit -
'I judged as muckle,' saiil Amirew.

- Hand your peace, yo kinve, minl hear what I have to say till ye. We are gam a bit into the Hielands $\qquad$ ,
'Ye tanll me ne already,' replied the ins:orrigible Andrew.
'I 'll break your heall,' saill the Builie, rising in wrath, 'if ye dimia hand your tongue.'
'A hadden tongue,' replied Androw, 'mukes a slabbered month.'
It wan now necessary I shonld interfere, which I did hy eommanding Andrew with an authoritative tone to be silent nt his peril.
'I am silent,' said Andrew. 'I'se do a' your hawfin' bidding' without a nay-say. My puir mither used aye to tell me,

Be it better, bo it worse,
Be ruled by him that has the purse.
Sae ye may e'en quenk as lang as yo like, haith the tane and the tither o' yon, for Aninlrew.'

Mr. Jarvie took the advantage of his stopping after quoting the nbove proverb to give lim the reyuisite nustructions.
'Now, str, it's as muckle as your life's worth - that wall he dear o' little siller, to be sure - but it is an muckle as a' our lives are worth, if yo dima mind what I say to ye. In this public, whar we are gaun to, and whar it is like we may lue to stay a' night, ment o, a' clans and kindred, Hieland and Iawland, tak up their quarters. And whiles there are mair drawn dirks thun open Bibles amang them, when the usinuehnugh gets nppermost. See ye mither meddle nor mak, nor gie mae offenre wi' thai cla ' ring tengue n' yours, but keep a malm sough, aud let ilka cock figlit his ain battle.'
'Muckle needs to tell me that,', said Anlrew, contemptnonsly, 'as if I hal never seen a Hielanduan before, null kend niae how to manage them. Nae man alive can cuitle up. Donath better than mysell ; I hae hought wi' them, sayll wi' them, - eaten wi' them, drucken wi' them _-'
'Did ye ever fight wi' them?' said Mr. Jarvie.
' Na, na,' answered Andrew, 'I took care o' that ; it wad ill hae set me, that am an artist and half a scholar to my trale, to be fighting amang a wheen kilted loons that dimm ken the nane o a single herb or flower in braid Scots, let abee in the Latin tongue.'
'Then,' said Mr. Jarvie, 'as ye wad keep either your tongue? in your month, or your lugs in your head -and ye might niin.: them, for as saucy members as they are - I charge ye to say nae wori, gude or had, thut ge can weel get bye, to ony Inaly that may he in the elachan. Anil ye 11 suevially mulerstanil that ye re no to be hlevaing and blastimg ahont your master's nume nud mine, or suyiug that this is Mr. Builie Sisal darvie of the Saut Market, mon o" the worthy Deacon Niend Jarvie, that son of the manuging partner of the great honse of Osmelistone and 'lreshlum, in the Clity.'
'Enengh said,' meswered Andrew - 'eneugh mid! What hat mony things o' nuir imprirtance to speak :ilmot, I trow.'
'It's thae very things of inuprtanee that 1 anf feared for, yo Wethering gense ; ye nummunspenk ony thing, gule or banl, that ye can by ony puswibility help.'
'If ye dinma think ne tit,' replied Amirew, in a humf, 'to spenk like ither folk, gie me my wages ant luy bourd-wages and I'se gae back to (ilaseow. There 's num' surrow at our part ing, as the anld mear suil to the broken cart.'
Finding Amdrew's perverseness agnin rising to op pint which threntened to ocension me inconvenience, I was maler the neepessity of explaining to hime that he might return if he thought proper, bint that in that case I would not pay him a simgle farthing for his past services. The argmuent wid crmmemem, as it has been called hy jocular loricians, lass weight with the greater part of mankiml, and Aulrew was in that particular far fronn affecting any trick of singularity. He 'drew in his hurns,' to use the Bailie's phrase, on the instant, professen no intention whatever to disoblige, and a resolntion to be ginided by my commands, whatever they might be.
Coneord being thus luppily restored to our small party, we contimed to pursue our journey. The romb, which haul ascented for six or seven Fuglish miles, hegan now to descend for about the same space, through a conntry which, neither in fertility or interest, conld boast any malatage weer that which we had mased alrealy, and which afforded in! variety; muless when some tremendons peak of a Highland mometain inpeared at a distance. We continued, however, to ride on withomt panse ; and even when night fell and wershatowed the desolate wilds which we traversel, we were, as I mulerstond frum Mr. Jarvie, still three miles imul a littock distant from the phate where we were to spend the night.

CHAI'IER XXVIII

> Baron of Bucklivie, May the fonl tiend Urive ye, Anil a' to prieces rive ye, For building sic a town, Where there's neither horse meat, nor man's meat, nor a chair to sit down.

Scoltish Iopular Rhymes on ": Bual Inu.

THE night was pleasant, and the moon afforded ns soul light for onr jonrney. Under her rays the ground ower which we passed assmued a more interesting appear ance than during the broad daylight, which discoveren the extent of its wasteness. The mingled light and shadows gave it an interest which naturally did not belong to it a and, like the effect of a veil flung over a plain woman, irritated our curiosity on a subject whieh had in itself nothing gratifying.
The descent, however, still continued, turned, winded, left the nore open heaths, and got into stecper ravines, which promised soon to lead us to the banks of some brook or river, and ultimately made good their presage. We found onrselies at length on the bank of a stream which rather resembled one of my native Enolish rivers than those I harl hitherto seen in Scotland. It was narrow, deep, still, and silent ; althongh the imperfect light, as it gleamed on its, placid waters, showed alow that we were now anong the lofty mometains which formed its eraulle. 'That's the Forth,' said the Bailie, with an air of reverence which I have observed the Seotch nsually pay tw their distingmished rivers. The Clyde, the 'Tweed, the Forth, the Spey are nsinally mamed by those who dwell on thin if banks with a sort of respect and pride, and I have known dumes oecasioned ly any word of disparasement. I camot say I lave the least pluarrel with this. sort of harnless enthnsiavin. I received my friend's. commmication with the inportanm which he seemed to think appertained to it. In fact, I was not a little pleased, not a little pleased, after so long and dull a journey, to approach a region which promised to engage the imagination. My faithful squire, Andrew, did not seem to be quite of the sume opinion, for he received the solemm information, "That is the Furth,' with a 'Umpli! an he had said that 's the publichonse it wal hae been mair to the purpose.'
'The Forth, however, as fir as the imperfect light permitted me to julge, seemed to merit the almiration of those who claimed an interest in its strean. A beantiful eninence of the most regnlar romid shape, and clothed with copsisewood of hazels, mountain-ash, and dwarf-oak, intermined with a few magnifieent old trees, which, rising above the muderwood, exposed their forked and bared brancles to the silver monshine, seemed to protect the sources from which the river sprung. If I could trust the tale of my companion, whiel, while professing to disbelieve every word of it, he told nuder his lireath, and with an air of something like intimidation, this hill, so rerularly formed, so richly verdant, and garlanded with such a heantifill variety of ancient trecs and thriving eopsewonl, was held by the neighbourhoon to contain within its museen caverns the palaces of the fairies; a rate of airy leings who formen an intermediate class between men and demons, and who, if not positively malignant to hmmanity, were yet to he avoided and feared on account of their capricions, vindictive, and irritable disposition. ${ }^{1}$
'They ca' them,' said Mr. Jarvie, in a whisper, 'Daoine Schie, whilk signifies, as I muderstand, men of peace; meaning thereby to make their gude-will. And we may e'en as weel ea' thems that too, Mr. Osbaldistone, for there's nae gule in speaking ill o' the laird within his ain bomms.' But he added pres. ently after, on seeing one or two lights, which twinkled before ns, 'It's deceity o' Satan after a', aml I feam to say it ; for we are near the manse now, and yonder are the lights in the Clachan of Aberfoil.'

I own I was well pleased at the circmustance to which Mr. Jarvie alluded; not so much that it set his tongue at liberty, in lis opinion, with all safety to dealare his real sentiments with respect to the Damine schie or fairies, as that it promised some hours' repose to ourselves and our horses, of which, ifter a ride of fifty miles and upwards, looth stood in sume need.

We crossed the infant Forth by an old-fishiomed stome brilge, very ligh aul very nalrow. My combuctor, liwwever, informed me that to get through this deep ami impurtant

[^37]stream, and to clear all its tributary dependencies, the general pass from the Highlands to the southward lay by what wis called the Fords of Frew, at all times deep and difficult of passage, and often altogether inforlable. Beneath these fords there was no phss of general resort matil so far east as the bridge of Stirling ; so that the river of Porth forms a defensible line betwixt the Highlands and Lowlands of Scothand, firom it. souree nearly to the Firth or inlet of the ocem, in which it terminates. 'The subsequent events which we witnessed led num" to reeall with attention what the shrewdness of Bailie Jarvie suggested, in his proverlial expression, that 'Forth bridles the wild Highlandman.'

About half a mile's riding after we erossed the bridge placen! us at the door of the public-house where we were to pass the: evening. It was a hovel rather worse than better than that in whieh we had dined ; but its little windows were lighted 씨, voices were heard from within, and all intinated a prospect of food and shelter, to whieh we were by no means indifferent. Andrew was the first to observe that there was a peeled willowwand placed aeross the half-open door of the little imm. He hung baek, and advised us not to enter. 'For,' said Andrew, 'some of their chiefs and grit men are birling at the usquebangh in bye there, and dima want to be disturbed ; and the leist we 'll get if we gang ram-stan in on them will be a broken head, to learn us better havings, if we dima eome by tiee length of a eauld dirk in our wane, whilk is just as likely.'

I looked at the Bailie, who acknowledgel, in - inisper, 'that the gowk had some reason for singing a' . the year.'
Meantime a staring half-clad wench or two eame out of the inn and the neiglibouring cottages on hearing the somul of our horses' feet. No one bidle us welcome, nor did any one officr to take our horses, from which we had alighted ; and to our various inguiries the hopeless response of 'Ha niel Sassenarlh' was the only answer we could extract. 'Ithe Bailie, however. fonnd (in his experience) a way to make them speak English. 'If I gie ye a bawbee,' said he to an urchin of about ton yeurs: old, with a fragment of a tattered phaid about him, ail you? understand Sassentaeh?'
'Ay, ay, that will I,' replied the brat, in very derent English.
'Then gang and tell your mammy, my man, there's twa Sassenach gentlemen come to speak wi' her.'

The landlady presently appearel with a lighted pieee of split fir blazing in her hand. The turpentine in this species of torch (which is generally dug from out the turf-loggs) nakes it blaze and sparkle readily, so that it is often used in the Highlands in lien of candles. On this occasion such a torch illuminated the wild and anxious features of a female, pale, thin, and rather above the usual size, whose soiled and raghed dress, thomegh aided by a plaid or tartan sereen, barely served the purpmes of decency, and eertainly not those of comfort. Her black hair, which escaped in uncombed elf-locks from moder her eoif, as well as the strange and embarrassed lowk with which she regirded us, gave me the idea of a witch distmbed in the midst of her imlawful rites. She plainly refused to almit us into the honse. We remonstrated anxionsly, and pleaded the length of our journey, the state of our horses, and the certainty that there was not another plate where we could be received nearer than Callander, which the Bailie stated to be seven Seots miles distant. How many these may exactly amomet to in Binglish measurement I have never been able to aseertain, but I think the donble ratio may be pretty safely taken as a medin.... computation. The obdurate hostess treated our expostulation with contempt. 'Better gang farther than fire waur,' she said, speaking the Scottish Loowland dialeet, and being indeed a mative of the Lemox distriet. 'Her homse was tach mp wi' then wadna like to be intronded on wi' stringers. She didna ken wha mair might be there - redenats, it might he, frae the grarrison.' 'These last words she spoke under her breath, and with very strong emphasis. 'The night,' she said, 'was fair abune head; a night amang the heather wad caller mir hoods. We might sleep in our elaes as mony a gude blade does in the scabbard ; there wasma muekle flow-moss in the shans, if we twok up our quarters right ; and we might pit up our horses to the hill, naebody wad say naething against it.'
'But, my good woman,' said I, while the Bailie groamed and remained umbecided, 'it is six hours since we dined, and we have not taken a morsel since. I am positively dying with hunger, and I have no taste fior taking up my alnule supperless among these mometains of yours. I positively must enter : and make the best apology yom ean to your ginests for alding a stranger or two to their number. Amlrew, you will see the horses put up.'
The Hecate looked at me with surprise, and then ejacenlated, 'A wifu' man will hae his way: "Them that will to C'upar maun to Cupar!" To see thae English helly-gods! He has hat ate fin meal the day alrendy, and he 'll venture life und liberty rather than he 'll wint a het supper: Set roasted beef and puidin. on the opposite side o' the pit o' 'Iophet, and an Englishmu will mak a spung at it. But I wash my hands o't. Follow me, sir (to Andrew), and I'se show ye where to pit the beasts.'
I own I was somewhat dismayed at my landlarly's exprensinns, which seented to be ominons of some approaching danger. I did not, however, choose to shrink back after having declaremd my resolution, and aecordingly I boldly entered the hanse; and, after narrowly escaping breaking my shins over a turf hatek and a salting-tub, which stood on either side of the narrow exterior passage, I opened a crazy half-decayed door, constructel not of plank but of wieker, and, followed by the Bailie, entered into the principal apartment of this Seottish caravansary.

The interior presented a view which seemed singuhr cumph to southern eyes. The fire, fed with blazing turf and brauches of dried wool, blazed merrily in the centre; but the stmike, having no means to escape but through a hole in the runf, eddied round the rafters of the cottage, and hung in sable fillds at the height of about five feet from the floor. The space lie neath was kept pretty clear by innumerable currents of air which rushed towards the fire from the broken panel of basket-wirk which served as a door; from two square holes, designell is ostensible windows, through one of which was thrust a phiiid and through the other a tattered greatcoat ; and, moreover, through various less distingnishable apertures in the wails , if the tenement, which, being built of romid stones and thrif, cemented by mud, let in the atmosphere at immmerable crevires.

At an old oaken table adjoining to the fire sat three mell, guests apparently, whom it was impossible to regard with indifference. 'Two were in the Highland dress ; the one, a little dark-complexioned man, with a lively, quick, and irritable expression of features, wore the trews, or close pantaloons, wwe out of a sort of chequered stocking stuff. The Bailie whisperml me that 'he behoved to be a man of some consequence, fir that naebody but their duinhe-wassels wore the trews; they. were ill to weave exactly to their Highland pleasure.'

The other monntaineer was a very tall, strong man, with a quantity of reddish hair, freckled face, high cheek-bones, and long chin-a sort of caricature of the national features, of Scocland. The tartan which he wore differed from that of his companion, as it had much more scarlet in it, whereas the shades of black and dark green predominated in the ehequers of the other. The third, who sate at the same table, was in the Lowland dress - a bold, stont-looking man, with a cast of military daring in his eye and namer, lisis riding-dress showily and profisely laced, and his cocked hat of formindahle dimensions. His hanger and a pair of pistols lay on the table hefore him. Fach of the Highlanders ind their maked dirks stuck upright in the hoard beside him - an emblem, I was afterwards inforneed, but surely a strange one, that their compotation was not to le interrupted by any brawl. A mighty pewter measure, containing about an English quart of nsquetangh, a liquor nearly as stroug as brandy, which the Highlanders distil from mult and drink nndiluted in excessive ! nantities, was pheed before these worthies. A hroken glass with a wooden front servel as a driaking cut, to the whole party, innd circulated with a rapidity which, considering the poteney of the lipuor, seemed absolutely marvellons. These men spoke lond and cagerly together, sometimes in Gaelic, at other times in Englisi. Another Highlander, wrapt in his plaid, reclined on the floor, his head resting on a stone, from which it was only separated by a wisp of straw, and slept or seemed to sleep, without attendiur to what was going on around him. He also was probably a stranger, for he lay in full dress, and accoutred with the sword and target, the usial arms of his comntrymen when on a journey. Crihs there wel of different dimensions beside the walls, formed some of fracturel boards, sone of shattered wicker-work or plaited boughs, in which slumbered the fannily of the homse -men, women, and children-their places of repose only concealed by the dusky wreaths of vapour which arose above, br . low, and around them.
Our entrince was made so quietly, and the caronsers I have described were so eagerly engaged in their discinssions, that we escaped their notice for a minute or two: But I inserved the Highlander who lay beside the fire raise h:- elf on his ellow as we entered, and, drawing his plaid over the nower part of his fiee, fix his look on us for a few seconds, after which lie resmued his reeumbent posture, and seemed again to betake liinself to the repose which our entrance had interrupted.
We advanced to the fire, which was an agreeable spectacle after our late ride during the coulluess of an intmme evening among the mountains, and first attacted the attention of the gruests who had preceded us by calling for the laudlady. She approaehed, looking donbtfully and timidly, now at us, now at the other party, and returned a hesitating and doubtfin answer to our request to have aomething to eat.
'She didna ken,', she suid ; 'she wasma sure there was my thing in the honse,' and then modifiel her refusal with the qualification - 'that is, ony thing fit for the like of us.'.

I assured her we were indifferent to the quality of mur supper; and looking round for the means of aceommodation, which were not easily to be found, I arranged an old hen-eoop as a seat fir Mr. Jarvie, and turned dowin a broken tub to serve for my nin. Andrew Fairservice entered presentiy afterwards, and torik a phace in silence behind our bueks. The natives, as I may call them, eontinued staring at us with an air as if confomuled ly our assuranee, and we, at least I myself, disguised as well as we eould, under an appearunee of indifferenee, any secret anxiety we might feel eoneerning the mode in which we were to le received by those whose privaey we had disturbed.
At length the lesser Highlander, addressing hinself to me, said in very good English, and in a tone of great haughtiness, ' Ye make yourself at home, sir, I see.'
'I usually do so,' I replied, 'when I come into a honse of publie entertainment.'
'And did she na see,' said the taller man, 'by the white wand at the door, that gentlemans had taken up the publichonse on their ain business?'
'I do not pretend to understand the eustoms of this comutry; but I an yet to learn,' I replied, 'how three persons should ine entitled to exelnde all other travellers from the only place of shelter and refreshment for miles round.'
'There 's nae reason for't, gentlemen,' said the Bailie: 'we mean nae offence - but there's neither law nor reason fir 't. But as far as a stoup o' gude bramly wad make up the 'qnarrel, we, being peaceable folk, wal be willing $\qquad$ '
'Damn your brandy, sir!' said the Lowlander, aljuitin! his coeked hat fiereely upon his hearl; 'we desire neither ynur brandy nor your company,' and up he rose from his seat. 'His eompanions also arose, muttering to each other, drawing up their plaids, and snorting and snuffing the air after the manner of their eountrymen when working themselves intn a passion.
'I tauld ye what wad come, gentlemen,' said the landlady, 'an ye wad hae been tauld. Get awa' wi', ye out 0 ' my house, and make nae disturbance here; there's nae sentleman be disturbed at Jeanie MaeAlpine's an she can hinder. A wheen idle English loons, gam about the conntry muder clond o' night, and disturbing honest peaceable, gentlemen that are drinking their drap drink at the fireside!'
At another time I shonld have thonght of the ohl Latin all:ge,

Dat vouiam corviv, vexat censura columbas.
But I had not any time for classical quotation, for there was ,hvionsly a fray about to ensue, at which, feelinif myself inlignant at the inhospite '.e insolence with which I was treated, I was totally indifferent, unless on the Bailie's acceoment, whose person and ynalities were ill qualified for such an adventure. I started mp, however, on seeing the others rise, anm dropped my cloak from my shonlders, that I might be ready to stand on the defensive.
'We are three to three,' said the lesser Highlander, glancing his eyes at our party ; 'if ye be pretty men, draw!' and, mishenthing his broadsword lie advanced on me. I put myself in a posture of defence, and, aware of the superiority of my weapon, a rapier or small-sworl, was little afraid of the issue of the contest. The Bailie lehaved with unexpected mettle. As he saw the gigantic Highlander confront lime with his weapon drawn, he tugged for a seemed or two at the hilt of his 'shabble,' as he ealled it ; bnt finding it loth to 'ruit the sheath, to which it hard long been seenred by rust and disuse, he seized, as a substitute, on the red-hot coulter of a plongh which had been employed in arranging the fire by way of a poker, and brandished it with sueh effect that at the first pass he set the Highlamler's plaid on fire, and compelled him to keep a respeetfinl distance till he conld get it extinguished. Andrew, on the contrary, who ought to have faced the Lowland champion, had, I grieve to say it, vanished at the very commeneement of the fray. But his antagonist, erying, 'P'iir play! fair play!' seemed courteonsly disposed to take 110 share in the seuffle. 'Ihns we commeneed our renremtir on fair terms as to numbers. My own aim was to possess myself, if possible, of my autagonist's weapon; but I was deterren from closing for fear of the dirk which he held in his left hand, anul used in parrying the thrusts of my rapier. Meantine the Bailie, notwithstanding the success of his first muset, was sorely besterl. The weight of his weapon, the compulenoe of his person, the very effervescence of his own passions, were rapidly exhansting both his strength aud his breath, and he was almost at the mercy of his antagonist, when 川1 started the sleeping Highlander from the floor on which he reclined, with his naked sword and target in his hand, innil threw himself hetween the discomfited magistrate and lis assailant, exehiming, 'Her mainsell has eaten the town prad at the Cross o' (ilasgow, and jy her troth she 'll tight for kiilie' Sharvie at the Clachan of Aherfoil, tat will she e'en!' LInd seeonding his words with deeds, this mexpeeted anxiliary made his sword whistle about the ears of his tall eomitrymini, who, nothing abashed, returned his blows with interest. But being both aceoutred with round taryets made of wood, stimhtul with brass and eoverel with leather, with whieh they reanlily parried each other's strokes, their combat was atendel with much more noise and clatter than serious risk of damage. It appeared, indeed, that there was more of bravalo thiall if serious attempt to do us any injury ; for the Lowland fenth. man, who, as I mentioned, had stood aside for want of : ill antagonist when the brawl commenced, was now pleased to aet the part of moderator and peacemaker.
'Haud your hands - haud your hands; enengh doueeneugh done! the quarrel's 10 mortal. The strange gentle men have shown themselves men of hononr, and gien reasmilible satisfaction. I'll stand on mine honour as kittle as ony mann, but I hate unnecessary bloodshed.'

It was not, of course, my wish to protract the fray: my adversary seemed equally disposed to sheath his sword : the Bailie, gasping for breath, might be considered as hovs de comblut, and our two sword-and-buckler men gave np their contest with as much indifference as they had entered into it.
'And now,' said the worthy gentleman who acted as mmire, 'let ns drink and gree like lonest fellows. The homsic will haud ns. $a^{\prime}$. I propose that this good little gentlemam that seems sair forfonghen, as I may say, in this tuilzie, slall spuld for a tass o' brandy, and I 'll pay for another, by way of archilwe, and then we 'll birl our bawbees a' ronnd about, like brethrea.'
'And fa's to pay my new ponnie plaid,' said the larer Highlander, 'wi' a hole burnt in't ane might put a kail pat through ? Saw ever ony boily a decent gentleman fight wi' it firebrand hefore?'
'Let that be nae hindrance,' said the Baili, who had muw reeovered his breath, and was at once disposed to enjey the triumph of having belaved with spirit and avoid the necessity of again resorting to such hard and doubtful arbitrement.
'Giin I hae broken the head,' he said, 'I sall find the plaister. I new plaid sall ye hae, and o' the hest - your ain chan-colours, man-an ye will tell me where it can be sent t' ye frae Glameo.'
'I ncedna name my clan: I am of a king's elan, as is weel keml,' suid the Highlander ; 'lont ye may tak a lit o' the phaid - figh, she smells like a singit sheep's head! - and that 'll learn ye the sett; and a gentloman, that 's a consin o' my ain, that rarries egrss dom frae Glencroe, will ea' for 't ulont Martimas, an ye will tell her where ye bide. But, honest gentlenam, neist time ye fight, an ye line ony renpect for your athversury, let it be wi' your sword, man, sinee ye wear me, and no wi' thae het culters and fireprands, like a will Ludian.'
'Conscience !' replied the Bailie, 'every man mann do as he dow. My sword hasua seen the light sinee Buthwell Brig, when my father, that's dead and game, ware it ; and I kenna weel if it waw fortheoming than either, for the battle was o' the briefest. At ony rate, it's rlewed to the scahburd now beyoud my power to prort them ; and, finding that, I e'en grippit at the first thing 1 conld make a fend wi'. I trow my fighting days is done, though I like ill to take the scorn, for a' that. But where's the honest lad that tuik my inarrel on himsell sae frankly $?$ l'se bestow a gill o' uquavitie on him, an I suld never ea' for anither.'
The champion for whom he looked around was, however, no longer to be seen. He had escaped, unobserved by the bailie, immediately when the brawl was ended, yet not before I had recognised, in his wild features and shagey red hair, our arpmaintance Dougal, the fugitive turnkey of the (ilasfow jail. $I$ communicated this observation in a whisper to the Bailie, who answered in the same tone, 'Weel, weel, I see that him that ye kell o' said very right. 'There is some grlimmering o' common sense about that creature Dougal ; I mam see and think o' something will do him some gade.'
'Thus saying, he sat down, and, fetching one or two deep, aspirations by way of recovering his breath, called to the landlady: 'I think, Luekie, now that I find that there's nate lule in my wame, whilk I hal muekle reason to donht fine the dhings o' your house, I wall he the hetter o' something to pit iutill 't.'
The dame, who was all offieiousness so soon as the stom hail blown over, immediately mulertook to hroil something confortable for our supper. Indeed, unthing sinrprised me more. in the eourse of the whole matter, than the extreme ealmness with which she and her honselold seemed to regard the martial tumult that harl taken phace. I'he goorl wiman was minls heard to call to mome of her nssistants, "Steek the door - steck the door ! Kill or le killed, let maelmoty pase out till thry lane paid the lawin.' And ns for the slmmberers in those liuiss his the wall which servel the fannily fur bels, they only raiswil their sliirtless loslies to look at the fray, ejacolated, " High: wigh !' in the tone suitahle to their respective sex amb agees, minl were, I helieve, fast asleep again ere our sworts were well returned to their seablarils.

Onr landlialy, however, now made a great bustle to get sine victuals reanly, and, to my surqiise, very som began to prepare for us, in the frying-pan, a savonry mess of venison collops, which she dressed in a manner that might well sutisfy humury men, if not epienres. In the meantime the branly was phareml (in the table, to whiel the Highlanders, however partial to their nutive strong waters, showed no ohjection, but muelh the rimtrary ; and the Lowland gentleman, after the first cul, had passed round, became desirous to know our profession and the object of our journey.
' We are bits o' Clasgow bodies, if it please your honumr,' siil the Bailie, with an affeetation of great humility, 'travelliug tu Stirling to get in some siller that is awing us.'
I was so silly as to feel a little disconcerted at the massum. ing aecomnt which he chose to give of us; but I recollentend my promise to be silent and allow the Bailie to manare the matter his own way. And really, when 1 recolleeted, Will. that I had not only brought the honest man a long jourruey from home, which even in itself hal been some ineonvenience (if I were to judge from the obvions pain and reluctance with whirch he took his seat or arose from it), but had also put him within a hair's-breadth of the loss of his life, I conld hardly refuse him such a compliment. The spokesman of the other party, sumtinus up his breath through his nose, repeatel the words with :i sunt of sneer. 'You Glasgow tradesfolks hae naething to do but tigang frae the tae end $u$ ' the west $o$ ' Seotland to the ither tu plague honest folks that may ehanee to be a wee ahint the haml. like me.'
'If our lebtors were a' sie honest gentlemen as I believe you to be, Garsehattaehin,' replied the Bailie, 'conseienee ! we might saves ourselves a labour, for they wad come to seek us.'
'Eh! what! how!' exclained the person whom he had addressed, 'as I shall live by bread - not forgetting beef auld brandy - it's my anld frieul Nieul Jnrvie, the best man that ever counted donn merks om a hond till a distressed pentleman. Were ye ma coming up my way 1 were ye ma coming up the Earrick to Garselattachin?'

- 'Iroth no, Maister (ialloraith,', repliel the Bailie, 'I hat other egiges on the spit; and I thonght ye wad le saying I can to look about the annual rent that's due on the lit heritable land that 's between ns.'
'Danu the anmal rent!' saill the lairl, with an appearance of great heartiness. 'Deil a worl o' haniness will you or 1 spuak. now that ye 're sae near my comutry. 'lu see how a trut cosery and a joseph can disgnise a man-that I suld ha ken my amlid feal friend the deacon!'
-The bailie, if yeplease,' resmuel my compmion. 'But I ken what gars ye mistak: the band was granted to my father that 's happy, and he was deacon; but his name was Nionlas weel ass mine. I dima mind that there's been a payment of prinuipal simin or anmal rent on it in my day, mul donbtless that has made the mistake.'
'Weel, the devil take the mistake and all that mecasioned it:' replied Mr. Galbraith. 'But I am ghal ye are a loilie. (ientlemen, fill a brimmer; this is my excellent friend, Builie Nieol Jarvie's health; I kemd him and his father these twenty vears. Are ye a' cleared kelty aff? Fill anither. Here's to his being sune provost; I say provost-Lurrl Provost Nieol Jarvie! And them that affirms there's a man walks the Hie Street o' Glasgow that's fitter for the office, they will do weel nut to let me, Duncon (Galbmith of Garvehattachin, hear them sity sae, that 's all.' Ame therewith Dmem Galloraith uartially eroked his hat and phaced it on one side of lis hem with an air of defiance.
'Ihe brandy was probably the best recommendation of these complimentary toasts to the two llighlanders, who drank them without appearing maxious to comprehend their purport. 'lhers connenced a conversation with Mr. Galbraith in (iaetir, whirh he talked with perfect Hueney, being, as I afterwards learnel, a near neighbour to the Highlands.
'I kend that Scant-ci-grace weel enengh frac the very outset,' said the Bailie, in at whisper to me ; 'but when blude was warm, and swords were ont at ony rate, wha kens what way he might hae thought o' paying his debts? it will be lang or lie does it in conmon form. But he's an honest lan, and hats a warm heart too ; he disma come often to the Cross $\sigma^{\prime}$ (ihasenw, but meny a buck and blackeock he sends us doun frae the hills. And I cath want my siller weel enengh. My father the dencon had a great regard for the family of Garwehattachin.'

Supper being now nearly realy, I looked romud for Amdrew Fairservice; lont that tristy follower had not heen seen by miy one since the hegimuing of the rencrumter. The hostess, however, snid that she levieved our servant han! gone into the stable, mind offerel to light me to the place, maying that 'ra entreaties if the hairns or hers could make him give any answer; and that truly she caredua to gang into the stable hersell at this lumr. She was a lone woman, and it was weel kead how the brownin of Ben-ye-gask guided the gudewife of Arhagowan; mal it was aye judged there was a brownie in our stable, which was just what garr'd me gie ower keeping an hostler.'

As, however, she lighted we towaris the miserable hovel into which they had crammed oar malneky steeds, to resale themselves on hay, every filre of which was as thick as :in ordinary goose quill, she plainly showed me that she had another reason for drawnig me aside from the compmy than that whicls her words implied. 'Kead that,' she said, slipping a piere if paper into my hand as we arrived at the door of the shed: 'l bless God I am rid o't. Between sorgers and Saxons, and caterans and cattle-lifters, and hurship and hinimhen, an honest woman wad live quieter in hel! than on the Highland line.'

So saying, she put the pine-torch into my hand, and returned into the house.

CHAP'IER XXIX

> Bagpipen, not lyres, the Ifighlaml hills alorn, Macleaa's loud bollo, amis Mardregor's horti. Juhu Cinguris Roply tis Alliei Romsty.

ISTOPPED in the entrance of the stable, if indeed a place be entitled to that name where horses were stowed away along with gonts, pmiltry, pigs, and cows, muler the same reof with the mansion-homse: althomgh, by a legree of refinement miknown to the rest of the hamete, min which I afterwaris heard was imputed to an overprite on the pirt of Jemie MaeApine, our landlaty, the apretment was arommulated with an entrance different from that nsed by her hiped customers. By the light of my toreh I deciphered the following liillet, written oni a wet, crmupled, and dirty piece of puper, anl addressed, 'Fior the honoured hands of Mr. F'. O., a Saxom yonng gentleman - 'Ihese.' 'I'he contents were as follows:-
'Sik,
'There are night-hawks abroud, so that I eamot give you and my respected kinsman, B. N. J., the meeting at the Clachan of Aberfoil whilk was my purpose. I pray yon to avoid mulecessary commminution with those yon may find there, as it may give future tromble. 'I'he person who gives yon this is faithful, and may be tristed, and will gmide yon to a place where, God willing, I may safely give yon the meeting, when I trust my kinsman and yon will visit my poor honse, where, in despite of my enemies, I can still promise sic cheer as ane Hielandman may gie his friends, and where we will drink a solemin health to a certain 1). V., and lonk to certan allairs whilk I hope to be your aidance in; mul I rest, as is wout among gendemen, your servant to command, 'R. M. C.'

I was a good deal mortified at the purport of this letter, which seemed to aljourn to a more distant place and date the VOINT18 service which I had hoped to reeeive from this man Camplell. Still, however, it was some comfort to know that he continned to be in my interest, since without him I eould have no lurpe of recovering my father's papers. I res- ived, therefore, 11 obey his instruetions; and, observing ali caution before the guests, to take the first gool opportninity I could find to $\mathrm{pm}^{\mathrm{m}}$ cure from the landlady directions how I was to obtain it meeting with this mysterious person.

My next business was to seek out Andrew Fairservice, whom I called several times by name without receiving iny answer, surveying the stable all round, at the same time, mit without risk of setting the premises on fire, had not the quantity of wet litter and mud so greatly counterbalanced two or three bunches of straw and hay. At length my repeatend eries of 'Andrew Fairservice - Andrew! Fool! Ass, where ane you ?' proluced a doleful 'Here,' in a groaning tone, which might have been that of the lrownie itself. Guided by this sound, I advanced to the eorner of a shel, where, ensconced in the angle of the wall, behind a barrel full of the feathers of :lll the fowls whieh had died in the eause of the publie for a munth past, I found the manful Andrew ; and partly by force, partly by command and exhortation, compelled him forth into the open air. The first words he spoke were, 'I am an honest liul, sir.'
'Who the devil questions your honesty?' said I; 'or what have we to do with it at present ? I desire you to come amd attend us at smper.'
'Yes,' reiterated Andrew, withont apparently understandine what I said to him, 'I am an honest lad, whatever the Bailie may say to the contrary. I grant the warld and the warll's gear sits ower near my heart whiles, as it does to mony a ane. But I am an honest lad; and, though I spak o' leaving ye in the muir, yet God knows it was far frae nyy purpose, but jult like idle things folk says when they're driving a bargain, to set it as far to their aim side as they can. And I like your lonnur weel for sae young a lad, and I wadna part wi' ye lightly.'
'What the deuce are you driving at now?' I replied. 'Itas not everything been settled again and again to your satisfirction? And are you to talk of leaving me every hour, withont either rhyme or reason ?'
' Ay, but I was only making fashion before,' replied Andrew; 'but it's come on me in sair earnest now. Lose or will, I daur gae nae farther wi' your honour; and if ye'll tak my foulish advice, ye 'll bide by a broken tryste rather than gang forward yoursell ; I hae a sincere regard for ye, and I 'in sure ye 'll be a credit to your friends if ye live to saw ont your wild aits and get some mair sense and steadiness. But I can follow ye nae farther, even if ye suld foumder and perish from the way for lack of gnidance and counsel ; to gang into Rob Roy's comintry is a mere tempting o' Providence.'
'Kob Roy?' said I, in some surprise; 'I know no such persion. What new trick is this, Andrew?'
'It's hard,' said Andrew - 'very hard, that a man cama be helieved when he speaks Heaven's truth, jnst because he 's whiles owercome, and tells lees a little when there is necessary occasion. Ye needua ask whae Rob Roy is, the reiving lifter that he is - God forgie ine! I hope naeborly hears us - when ye hae a letter frae him in your pouch. I heard ane o' his gillies bid that auld rudas jaud of a guldewife gie ye that. They thought I didna understand their gibberish; but, though I camma speak it muekle, I can gie a ginde guess at what I hear them say. I never thonght to hae tauld ye that, but in a fright a' things come ont that suld be keepit in. O, Maister Frank, a' your unele's follies and a' your cousins' pliskies were naething to this! Drink clean cap out, like Sir Hildehrand; begin the blessed morning with brandy sops, like Squire Percy; swagger, like Squire Thomeliff; rin wud amang the lasses, like Silnire John ; gamble, like Richard; win sonls to the prepe and the deevil, like Rashleigh ; rive, rant, break the Sabbath, and do the pope's bidding, like then $n^{\prime}$; int thegither-hut, mercifil Providenee! take care o' your young bluid, and gang nae near Rob Roy!'

Andrew's alarm was too sincere to permit me to suppose he comiterfeited. I eontented myself, however, witl telling him that I meant to remain in the ale-house that night, and desired to have the horses well looked after. As to the rest, I charged him to ohserve the strictest silence npon the subject of his alarn, and he might rely upon it I wonld not inenr any serious dauger withont due precantion. He followed me with a dejected air into the honse, ohserving leetween his teeth, 'Man suld he served afore beast: I haena had a morsel in my month, but the rongh legs $o^{\prime}$ that anld minircock, this haili blessed dily.'
The harmony of the company seemed to lave suffered some interruption since my departure, for I found Mr. Galbraith and my friend the Bailie high in dispute.
'I Il hear nae sic langnage,' said Mr. Jarvie, as I entered, 'respecting the Dinke o' Argyle and the name o' Camphell.' He 's a worthy public-spirited nobleman, and a credit to the country, and a friend and benefactor to the trade o' Glasgow.'
'I'll sae naething against MacCallum More and the Slioch-nan-Diarmid,' said the lesser Highlander, laughing., 'I live ois the wrang side of Glencroe to quarrel with Inverara.'
'Our loch ne'er saw the Cawnil lymphads,' said the bigser Highlander. 'She 'll speak her mind and fear naebody. She doesina value a Cawmil mair as a Cowan, and ye may tell MacCallum More that Allan Inverach said sae. "It's a far cry to Lochow." ${ }^{1}$
Mr. Galbraith, on whom the repeated pledges which he had quaffed had produced some influence, slapped lis hand on the table with great force, and said in a stern voice, 'therc's a bloody debt due by that family, and they will pay it one day. The banes of a loyal and a syallant Grahame hae lang rattled in their coffin for vengeance on thae Dukes of Guile and Lords for Lorn. There ne'er was treason in Scotland but a Cawnil was at the bottom o't ; and now that the wrang side's uppernost, wha but the Cawmils for keeping down the right ? But this warld winna last lang, and it will be time to sharp the mailen for shearing o' craigs and thrapples. I hope to see the auld rusty less linkiug at a bluidy harst again.'
'For shame, Garschattachin!' exclaimed the Bailie - 'fie for shame, sir ; wad ye say sic things before a magistrate, and bring yoursell into trouble? How d' ye think to mainteen your family and satisfy your creditors - mysell and others - if ye gang on in that wild way, which cannot but bring you under the law, to the prejudice of a' that's comnecter wi' ye?'
' $\mathrm{D}-\mathrm{n}$ my creditors,' retorted the gallant Galbraith, 'aurl you, if ye be ane o' them. I say there will be a new warlid sune. And we shall hae nae Cawmils cocking their bonnet sale hie, and hounding their dogs where they daurna come themsells, nor protecting thieves, nor murdcrers and oppressors, to harry and spoil better men and mair loyal clans than thensells.'

The Bailie hal a great mind to lave continued the dispute, when the savoury vapour of the broilal venison, which our landlady now placed before us, proved so powerful a mediator that he betook himself to his trencher with great cagerness, leaving the strangers to carry on the dispute anong thenselves.

[^38]'And tat's true,' said the taller Highlander, whose name I found was Stuart, 'for we suldna be plagued and worried here wi' meetings to pit down Rob Roy if the Cawmils didna gie him refutch. I was ane o' thirty o' my ain name - part Glenfinlas, and part men that came down frae Appine - we shased the MacGregors as ye wal shase rae-deer, till we cane into Glenfalloch's country, and the Cawmils raise and wadna let us pursue uae farder, and sae we lost our labour ; but her wad gie twa and a plack to be as near liob as she was tat day.'
It seemed to happen very unfortunately that in every topie of diseourse which these warlike gentlemen introduced my friend the Bailie found some matter of offence. 'Ye'll forgie me speaking my mind, sir; but ye wad m? ybe hae gien the best bowl in your bonnet to hae been as far awa frae Rob as ye are e'en now. Odd, my het pleugh-culter wad hae been naething to his claymore.'
'She had better speak nae mair about her culter, or, by G-, her will gar her eat her words, and twa handfuls o' cauld steel to drive them ower wi'!' And with a most inauspicious and menaeing look the mountaineer laid his hand on his dagger.
' We 'll hae nae quarrelling, Allan,', said his shorter companion ; 'and if the Glasgow gentleman has ony regard for Rob Roy, he 'll maybe see him in cauld irons the night, and playing tricks ou a tow the morn ; for this country has been ower lang playued wi' hin, and his race is near-hand run. And it's tim, Allan, we were ganging to our lads.'
'Hont awa, Inverashalloeh,' said Galbraith. 'Mind the auld saw, man : "It's a bauld meon," quoth Bennygask; "another pint," quoth Lesley. We 'll no start for another chappin.'
'I hae had chappins eneugh,' said Inverashalloch ; 'I'll drink my quart of usquebaugh or brandy wi' ony honest fellow. but the deil a drap mair, when I hae wark to do in the morning. And, in my puir thinking, Garschattachin, ye had better be thinking to bring up your horsemen to the clachan before day, that we may a' start fair.'
'What the deevil are ye in sic a hurry for ?' said Garschattachin; 'meat and nass never hindered wark. An it had been iny directing, deil a bit o' me wad hae fashed ye to come down the glens to help us. 'The garrison and our ain horse could hae taen Rob Roy easily eneugh. 'There's the hand,' he said, holding up his own, 'should lay him on the green, and never ask a Hielandman o' ye a' for his help.'
'Ye might hae loot us bide still where we were, then,' srid

ROB ROY

Inverashalloch. 'I didna come sixty miles without being sent for. But an ye 'll hae my opinion, I redd ye keep yonr mouth better steekit, if ye hope to speed. Shored folk live lang, and sae may him ye ken o'. 'The way to catch a birll is no to fling your bannet at her. And also thae gentlemen hae heard some things they suldna hae heard an the brandy hadna been ower bauld for your brain, Major Galbraith. Ye needna cock your hat and bully wi' me, man, for I will not bear it.'
'I hae said it,' said Galbraith, with a solemn air of drunken gravity, 'that I will quarrel no more this night either with broadcloth or tartan. When I am off duty I'll quarrel with you or ony man in the Hielands, or Lowlands, but not on duty - no - no. I wish we heard o' these redcoats. If it had heen to do ony thing against King James we wad hae seen them lang syne; but when it's to keep the peace o' the country they cill lie as lound as their neighbours.'
As he spoke we heard the measured faotsteps of a borly of infantry on the march; and an officer, followed by two or three files of soldiers, entered the apartment. He spoke in an Eurlish accent, which was very pleasant to my ears, now so hmig accustomed to the varying brogue of the Highland and Lowlant Scotch.
'You are, I suppose, Major Galbraith, of the squadron of Lennox militia, and these are the two Highland gentlemen with whom I was appointed to meet in this place?'
They assented, and invited the officer to take some refreshments, which he declined.
'I have been too late, gentlemen, and am desirous to make up time. I have orders to search for and arrest two persons guilty of treasonable practices.'
'We 'll wash our hands o' that,' said Inverashalloch. 'I came here wi' my men to fight against the red MacGregor that killed my cousin seven times removed, Duncan MacLaren in Invernenty ; ${ }^{1}$ bnt I will hae nothing to do tonching honest gentlemen that may be gann throngh the country on their ain business.'
'Nor I neither,' said Inverach.
Major Galbraith took ul the matter more solemmly, anul, premising his oration with a hiccup, spoke to the following purpose : 'I shall say nothing against King George, Captain, becanse, as it happens, my commission may rin in his name; hut one commission being good, sir, does not make another bad, and [^39]some think that James may be just as good a name as George. 'I'here's the king that is and there's the king that suld of right be; I say, an honest man may and suld be loyal to them both, Captain. But I an of the Lord-Lieutenant's opinion for the time, as it becomes a militia offieer and a depute-lieutenant; and about treason and all that, it's lost time to speak of it, least said is sunest mended.'

'I am sorry to see how you have been employing your time, sir,' replied the English officer, as indeed the honest gentleman's reasoning had a strong relish of the liquor he had been driuking ; 'and I could wish, sir, it had been otherwise on an occasion of this consequence. I would recommend to you to try to sleep for an hour. Do these gentlemen belong to your party?' looking at the Bailie and me, who, engaged in eating our supper, had paid little attention to the officer on his entrance.
'Iravellers, sir,' said Galbraith - 'lawful travellers by sea and lind, as the prayer book hath it.'
'My instructions,' stid the Captain, taking a light to survey us closer, 'are to place under arrest an elderly and a young person, and I think these gentlemen answer nearly the description.'
'Take care what yon say, sir,' said Mr. Jarvie ; 'it shall not be your red coat nor your laced hat shall protect yon if you put any affront on me. I'se convene ye baith in an action of scaudal and false imprisonment. I an a free burgess and a magistrate o' Glasgow ; Nicol Jarvie is my name, sae was my father's afore me; I am a bailie, be praised for the honour, and my father was a deacon.'
'He was a prick-eared cur,' said Major Galbraith, 'and fought agane the King at Bothwell Brig.'
'He paid what he ought and what he bought, Mr. Galbraith,' said the Bailie, 'and was an honester man than ever stude on your shanks.'
'I have no time to attend to all this,' said the officer; 'I must positively detain yon, gentlemen, miless you can produce some respectable security that yon are loyal subjects.'
'I desire to be carried before some civil magistrate,' said the Bailie, 'the sherra or the jurdge of the bounds ; I am not obliged to answer every redcoat that speers questions at me.'
' Well, sir, I shall know how to manage you if yon are silent. And you, sir (to me), what may your name be?'
'Francis Usbaldistone, sir.'
'What, a son of Sir Hildebrand Osbaldistone of Northumberland ?'
' No, sir,' interrupted the Bailie ; 'a son of the great William Osbaldistone, of the house of Osbaldistone and Tresham, Craue Alley, London.'
'I am afraid, sir,' said the offieer, 'your name only inereases the suspicions against yon, and lays me under the necessity of requesting that you will give up what papers you have in charge.

I observed the Highlanders look anxiously at each other when this, proposal was made. 'I had none,' I replied, 'to surrender.'
The officer commanded me to be disarmed and searehed. 'Tw have resisted wonld have been maducss. I aceordingly gave up my arms, and submitted to a search, which was conducted as civilly as an operation of the kind well could. They fouml nothing except the note which I had reeeived that nighlit through the hand of the landlady.
'This is different from what I expected,' said the officer : 'but it affords us good grounds for detaining you. Here I find you in written communication with the outlawed robber, Robert MacGregor Campbell, who has been so long the plagne of this distriet. How do you aeeount for that?'
'Spies of Rob!' said Inverashalloch; 'we wad ser re. them right to strap them up till the neist tree.'
' We are gaun to see after some gear o' our ain, gentlemen,' said the Bailie, 'that's fa'cu into his hands by accident ; there's nae law agane a man looking after his ain, I hope?'
'How did you come by this letter?' said the offieer, addressing himself to me.
I could not think of betraying the poor woman who had given it to me, and remained silent.
' Do you know anything of it, fellow ?' said the officer, looking at Andrew, whose jaws were clattering like a pair of castanets at the threats thrown out by the Highlander.
' $O$ ay, I ken a' about it. It was a Hieland loon gied the letter to that lang-tongued jand the gulewife therc. I'll he sworn my maister kend naething, abont it. But he's wilfn' to gang up the hills and speak wi' Rob; and 0, sir, it wad be a charity just to send a wheen o' your redcoats to see him sife back to Glasgow again whether he will or no. And ye can keep Mr. Jarvie as lang as ye like. He's responsible eneugh for muy fine ye may lay on him ; and so's my master for that matter:
for me, I'm just a puir gardener lad, and no worth your steering.'
'I believe,' said the offieer, 'the best thing I can do is to send these persons to the garrison mider an escort. They seem to be in inmediate correspondence with the enemy, and I slall be in no respeet answerable for suffiering them to be at liberty. Gentlemen, you will eonsider yourselves as my prisoners. So soon as dawn approaehes I will send you to a plate of security. If you be the persons yon describe yourselves, it will soon appear, and you will sustain no great ineonvenience from being detained a day or two. I can liear no remonstrunces,' he contimued, tuming away from the Bailie, whose mouth was open to address him; ' the serviee I an on gives me no time fur idle discussions.'
'Aweel-aweel, sir,' said the Bailie, 'you're welcome to a tune on your ain fiddle; but see if I dimm gar ye dance till 't afore a's dune.'
An anxious consultation. now took plaee between the officer and the Highlanders, but earried on in so low a tone that it was impossible to catch the sense. So soon as it was coneluded they all left the house. At their departure, the Bailie thus expressed himself : 'Thae Hielandmen are o' the westland elans, and just as light-handed as their neighbours, an a' tales be true, and yet ye see they hae brought them frae the head o' Ar:yleslire to make war wi' puir Rob for some auld ill-will that they hae at him and his sirname. And there's the Grahames and the Buehanans and the Lemmox gentry a' mounted and in order. It's weel kend their quarrel, and I dimm blame them : meebody likes to lose his kye. And then there's solgers, puir things, hoyed out frae the garrison at a'body's bidding. Puir Roh will hae his hands fu' by the time the sum eomes ower the hill. Weel, it's wrang for a nugistrate to be wishing ony thing agane the course o' jnstice, but deil o' ne an I wad break my heart to hear that Rob had gien them a' their paiks!'

CHAPTER XXX

Abstract

Gencral, Hear me, and mark me well, and look upon me Directly in my face - my woman's face ; See if one fear, one shadow of a terror, One paleness dare appear, but from my anger, To lay hold on your mercies.

Bonduca.

WE were permitted to slumber out the remainder of the night in the best manner that the miserable acconinoodations of the ale-house permitted. I'he Bailic, fatigued with his journey ar ! the subsequent scenes, less intir. ested also in the event of our arrest, whiel to him eonld only be a matter of temporary ineonvenience, perhups less nice thini habit had rendered me about the eleanliness or deeency of hiscouch, tumbled himself into one of the eribs whieh I have alrealy described, and soon was heard to snore soundly. A brokicil sleep, snatched by intervals, while I rested my head upon the table, was mv only refreshment. In the course of the night I had occasion to observe that there seemed to be some donlit and hesitation in the motions of the soldiery. Men were sent out as if to obtain intelligence, and returned apparently without bringing any satisfactory information to their commandings officer. He was obviously enger and anxions, and again despatched small parties of two or three men, some of whom, ass I could understand from what the others whispered to eath other, did not returu again to the clachan.
The morning had broken when a corporal and two men rushed into the hut, dragging after them, in a sort of trimmp, a Highlander, whom I immediately recognised as my acquaintance the ex-turnkey. The Bailie, who started up at the noise with which they entered, immediately made the sane discovery, and exclaimed, 'Mercy on us! they hae grippit the pmir creature Dougal. Captain, I will put in bail -suffieient bail, for that Dougal creature.'

To this offer, dietated undoubtedly by a grateful recollection of the late interference of the Highlander in his behalf, the Captain only answered by requesting Mr. Jarvie to ' mind his own affairs, and remember that he was himself for the present a prisoner.'
'I take you to witness, Mr. Osbuldistone,' snid the Bailie, who was probably better accuainted with the process in eivil than in inilitary cases, 'that he has refused sufficient bail. It's my opinion that the creature Dougal will have a good action of wrongous imprisonment and danages agane him, under the Act Seventeen Hundred and One, and I'll see the creature righted.'
The officer, whose name I understood was Thornton, paying III) attention to the Bailie's threats or expostulatious, instituted a very close inquiry iuto Dougal's life and conversation, and compelled hin to admit, though with apparent relnctance, the snceessive facts, that he knew Rob Roy MacGregor ; that he lad seen him within these twelve months - within these six months - within this month - within this week; in fine, that he had parted from him ouly an hour ago. All this detail came like drops of blood from the prisoner, and was, to all appearance, only extorted by the threat of an lulter and the next tree, which Captain Thoruton assured him should be his doom if he did not give direct and special information.
'And now, my friend,' said the officer, 'you will please inform me how many mell your master has with him at present.'
Dougal looked in every direction except at the querist, and hegan to answer, 'She canna just be sure ahout that.'
'Look at me, you Highland doy,' said the ofticer, 'and remember your life depends on your answer. How many rogues hal that outlawed scoundrel with hin when you left him?'
'Ou, no aboon sax rognes when I was gane.'
'And where are the rest of his banditti?'
'Gane wi' the lieutenant agane ta westland carles.'
'Against the westland clans ?' said the Captain. 'Umph! that is likely enough; and what rogue's errand were you 'lespatched upon?'
'Just to see what your honour and ta gentlemen redeoats were doing doun here at ta clachan.'
'The creature will prove fanse-hearted after a',' said the Bailie, who by this time larl planted himself close behind me; 'it's lucky I didna pit mysell to expenses anent him.'

ROB ROY

'And now, my friend,' said the Captain, 'let us understand each other. You have confossed yourself a spy, and shomild string up to the next tree; but come, if you will to me me good turn I will do you another. You, Donall - yon shall just in the way of kindness carry me and a small jpurty to the phace where you left your master, as I wish to npeak a few worls with him on serious affairs; and I'll let you go about your business and give you five gnineas to bont.'
'(Oigh ! oigh!' exelaimed Dougal, in the extremity of distress and perplexity, 'she cunna do tat - she cama do tat: she 'Il rather be hanged.'
'Hanged, then, you shall be, my friend,' saill the ofticer; 'and your blood be upon your own heal. 'Corporal Crann!, lis you play provost-marshal; away with him:'

The corporal had eonfronted poor Dougal for mome time, ostentatiously twisting a piece of eord which he had fommd in the house into the forn of a halter. He now threw it about the eulprit's neek, and, with the assistanee of two soldiers, had dragged Dougal as far as the door, when, overcome with the terror of immediate death, he exclained, 'Shentlemans, stops - stops! She 'll do his honour's bilding; stops!'
'Awa wi' the creature!' said the Bailie, 'he deserves humging mair now than ever - awa wi' him, corporal; why dima ye tak him awa?
'It's my helief and opinion, honest gentleman,' said the eorporal, 'that if you were going, to be hanged yourself you would be in no such d-l hurry.'

This `"e-dialogue prevented my hearing what passed betweeu the pr mer and Captuin Thornton, but I heard the former snivel at, in a very subdued tone, 'And ye'll ask her to grang nae rther than just to show ye where the MacGregor is? Ohon! ohon!'
'Silence your howling, you rascal. No; I give you my word I will ask you to go no farther. Corporal, make the men fall in in front of the houses. Get out these gentlemen:horses; we must carry them with ns. I camot spare, any men to guard them here. Come, my lads, get under arms.'
The soldiers bustled about, and were ready to move. We were led ont, along with Dougal, in the capaeity of prisoners: As we left the hut I heard our companion in captivity remini the Captain of 'ta fuive knineas.'
'Here they are for you,' said the officer, putting gold into his hand; 'but observe, that if you attempt to mislend me, I will hlow your brains out with my own hand.
'The creature,' said the Builie, 'is waur than I julged him: it is a warldly and a pertidions ereature. () the filthy luere of gain that men gies themsells up to! My fither the deacon ased to say the penny siller slew mair souls than the maked sword slew borlies.'
The landlady now appromehed and demanded payment of her reekoning, ineluding all that had bech quaffed by Major Gallbraith and his Highland friends. The lmglish oftiver remonstrated, but Mrs. Mae Alpine deelared, if she "hadna trusted to his hononr's name being used in their company, she wad never hae drawn them a stomy o' lighor; for Mr. Ginbraith, she might see him again or she might no, but weel lid she wot she had sma' ehance of seeing her siller ; and she was a puir widow, had mething but her custom to rely on.'

Captain Thomton put a stop, to her remonstranees by payiur the eharge, whieh was only a few English shillings, though the amount sounded very formidable in Scottish denominations. 'The generons officer wonld have inchaded Mr. Jarvie and me in this general acpuittance ; but the Builie, disregarding an intimation from the landlanly to 'make ns muckle of the Inglishers as we could, for they were sure to gie us plagne eneugh,' went into a formal accomiting respecting our share of the reckoning, and paid it necordingly. The Captain took the opportunity to make us some shight apology for detaining ns. 'If we were loyal and peaceable subjects,' he said, 'we would not regret being stopped for a day, when it was essential to the king's service ; if otherwise, he was acting aecording to his duty.'

We were eompelled to accept an apology which it would have served no purpose to refise, and we sallied out to attend him on his march.
I shall never forget the delightful sensation with which I exchanged the dark, smoky, smothering atmosphere of the Highland hut, in which we had passed the night so uncomfortably, for the refreshing fragramee of the morning air, and the ghorious beams of the rising smo, which, from a tabernacle of purple and golden elouds, were darted full on such a scene of natural romance and beauty as had never before greeted my eyes. To the left lay the valley, lown which the Forth wandered on its easterly comrse, surromuling the heautiful detached hill, with all its garland of woorls. Gn the right, amid a prohasion of thicketa, knolls, and crugs, iay the hed of a hrmat mountain lake, lightly curled into tiny waves by the hrenth if the morning breeze, ench glittering in its conrse muler the influence of the sumbemus. High liils, rocks, aurl bemis, wats. ing with natural furests of birch null uak, furmell the borders if this enchanting sheet of water ; mul, as their lenves rustlenl t" the wind and twinkled in the sinn, gnve to the depth of solitimle a sort of life and vivacity. Man alone seemed to he placell in a state of inferiority, in a weene where nll the ordinary fentures of nature were raised and exalted. 'Ihe miserable little "Imur. ocks,' as the Bailie temned them, of whieh abont a dozen fomend the village called the Clachan of Aherfoil, were composel if loose stones, cemented by olay instead of mortar, mul thatednol by turfs, laid rudely unnin rafters firmed of intive nud milewn birches and ouks from the woods aromid. The roofs appromelinel the gromend so nearly that Andrew Finisservice observed we mizht have ridden over the village the night before, and never finnill out we were nenr it, muless our horses' feet had 'gane thrmint the riggin'.'
From all we could see, Mrs. MncAlpine's house, miserable as were the quarters it afforded, was still be far the best in the hamlet; mid I daresay (if my description gives yon iny euriosity to see it) yon will hardly find it mum inmpoved it tho present day, for the Scotch are not a people whon specelily admit imnovation, even when it comes in the shape of imprusement. ${ }^{1}$

The i :habitants of these miserable dwellings were disturhed by the noise of our departure; mul as our purty of alnont twenty soldiers drew $u$ in rank before marching off, we were reconnoitered by many a heldam from the half-opened dhor of her eottage. As these sibyls thrist forth their grey heals, innperfeetly eovered with close caps of flamel, and showed their shrivelled brows, and long skimy arms, with varions gestures, shrugs, and muttered expressions in Gaelic aldressed to vanh other, iny imagination recurred to the witches of Mach with, and ${ }^{f}$ imagined I rean in the fentures of these crones the malevolence of the weird sisters. The little chilidren also, wha began to crawl furth, some quite naked, and whers very in. perfectly coverell with tatters of tartan stuff, clanped their tius: hands and grimned at the English solliers, with in expressin if national hate and malignity which seemed heyond their yans, I remarked partienlarly that there were no men, nor so much as [^40]a boy of ten or twelve years old, to le seen nmong the inhahit. nuts of a village which seemed proulons in propurtion to itw extent; mad the ilea certainly eseenred to me that we wers likely to receive from them, in the ecourse of our junruey, mure effectual tokens of ill-will than those which lowered int the visuges and dictated the murmurs of the women mid ehildren.

It was not until we commencel our murch that the malignity of the eliler persons of the comminity broke forth inta expres. sims. The lant file of men han left the village, to pursine it suall hroken truck, formed hy the sledres in which the natives transported their peats and turfos, mif which led through the whols that fringed the lower end af the lake, when a slarilly sonnd of female exclanntion lorike forth, mixed with the meremms of children, the whouping of hoys, and the clapping of hands with which the Highland dames enforce their notes, whether of rige or lamentation. I asked Andrew, who lowked as pale ns deatl, what all this meant.
'I doubt we 'll ken that ower sune,' saillhe. 'Means: It means that the Highland wives are enming and haming the redeonts, and wishing ill-huck to them, mind ilkn ane that ever spmes the Stax tongue. I have heard wivi-: flyte in Fagland anil Scotlend; it's nae marvel to hear thom tlyte my fate, but sic ill-scrapit tongnes as thae Micland canlines', mul sie grewsume wishes, that men slanld be slanghtered like sheep, and that they may lapper their hands to the elbows in ther heart's hhme, and that they suld dee the death of Walter Cumines of Gniyoek, ${ }^{1}$ wha hadna as muchle o' him left thegither as wonld supper a messnu-dog - sic awsome language as that I ne or hearl out o' a human thrapple; aml, muless the cleil wal rise aman: then to gie them a lesson, I thinkna that their talent at cursing conld he amendel. The warst oit is, they binl us, aye gang ap th lueh and see what we 'll land in.'

Alding Andrew - information to what I had myself ohserver, I could scare dombt that some attack was meditated mpon omr party. The romd, as we mlvancel, seemed to afforl every farility for such an anpleasant intorruption. At first it winded ap rt from the lake thromgh marshy meadow gromml, "vergrown w'th copsewool, now traversing dark and close thickets which Hombl have udmitted an ambuscule to la? sheltered within a f'w yards of our line of march, and frequ+ntly crossing romerh inomitain torrents, some of which towk the soldiers up! knees, and ran with such violence that their furce con be stenmed by the strength of two or three men holding fast by each othcr's arns. It certainly appeared to me, though altogether unacquainted with military affains, that a sort of half-savage warriors, as I had heard the Highlanders asserted to be, might, in such passes as these, attack a party of regular forces with great advantage. The Bailie's good sense and shrewd observation had led him to the same conclusion, an I understood from his rcunesting to speak with the Captain, whom he aldressed nearly in the following terms: 'Captain, it's no to fleceh ony favour out $o$ ' ye, for 1 stom it ; and it 's under protest that I reserve my action and pleas of oppression and wrongous imprisonment ; but, being a friend to ling George and his army, I take the liberty to specr - Dimar ye think ye might tak a better time to gang up this glen? If ye are seeking Rob Roy, he's kend to be better than half a hunder men strong when he's at the fewcst; and it he brings in the Glengyle folk and the Glenfinlas and Balquidder lads, he nay come to gie you your kail through the reek; and it's my sincere adviee, us a king's friend, ye had better take back again to the clachan, for thae women at Aberfoil are like the scarts and seamaws at the Cumries : there's aye foul weather follows their skirling.'

[^41]
ROB ROY

' Make yourself easy, sir,' replied Captain 'Thornton, 'I am in the execution of my orders. And as you say you are to friend to King George, you will be glad to lcarn that it is impossible that this gang of ruffians, whose license has disturbed the eountry so long, can escape the measures now taken to suppress thein. The horse squadron of inilitia, commanded by Major Galbraith, is already joinced by two or more troops, of cavalry, which will occupy all the lower passes of this wild comntry ; threc hundred Highlanders, under the two gentlemen yon saw at the imu, are in possession of the upper part ; and various strong partie; from the garrison are securing the hills and glens in different direetions. Our last aceounts of Rob Roy eorrespond with what this fellow has confessed, that, finding himself surrounded on all sides, he had dismissed the greater part of his followers, with the purpose either of lying eacealed or of making his escape throngh his superiur knowledge of the passe:.'
'I dima ken,' said the Bailie ; 'therc's mair brandy than brains in Garschattachin's heal this morning. And I wadna, an I were you, Captain, rest my main dependence on the Hielandmen : hawks wimar pike out hawks' een. 'They may quarrel annang themsells, and gie ilk ither ill names, and mayle a slash wi' a claynure; but they are sure to join in the lang run against $a^{\prime}$ civilised folk that wear breeks on their hinder ends and hat purses in their ponches.'
Apparently these admonitions were not altogether thrown away on Captain 'Thornton. He reformed his line of marel, commanded his soldiers to musling the.: fireloeks and fix their bayonets, and formed an advanced and rear guard, each connsisting of a nou-commissioned offien and two soldiers, who received strict orders to keep an alert lyok-out. Dongral muderwent another and very close examination, in which he steanfisstly asserted the truth of what he had before affirmed; and being rebuked on account of the suspicious and dangerous appearance of the route by which he was gniding them, he answered with a sort of testiness that seemed very natinral, 'Her nainsell didna mak ta road; an shentlemans likit grand roads, she suld hae pided at Glaseu.'
All this passed off well enough, and we resumed our prugress.
Our ronte, though leading towards the lake, had hitherto been so much sladed by wood that we only from time to time oltained a glimpse of that beautiful sheet of water. But the road now suldenly emerged from th forest ground, ind, winding close by the margin of the lorlh, afforled ns a full view of its spacions mirror, which now, the breeze having totally subsided, retlested in still magnificence the high dark heathy momutains, huge gray rocks, and shaggy banks, by which it is encircled. The hills now smink on its margin so closely, and were so broken and precipitons, as to afford no passage exeept just mpon the narrow line of the track which we ocenpica, and which was overhung with rocks, from which we might have been destroyed merely liy rolling down stones, without much possilihity of offering resistance. Add to this, that, as the road winded round every promontory and hay which indented the lake, there was rarely a possilility of seeing at humlred yards lefore us. Our commander appeared to take some alarm at the nature of the pass in which he wass engaged, which displayed itself in repeated orders to his soldiers to be on the alert, annd in many threats of instant death to Dongal if he should be found to have led them into danger. Dongal received these threats with an air of stnpil impenetrability, which might arise cither from conscions innecenoe or from donged resulation.
'If shentlemans were seeking ta lied Gregarach,' he sail, 'to he sure they couldna expect to find her without some wee danger.'
Just as the Highlander uttered these words, a halt was made by the corporal commanding the advance, who sent hark one of the file who formed it to tell the Captain that the prith in front was occupied by Highlanders, stationed on a ciml. manding point of particular difficulty. Almost at the sithe instant a soldier from the rear came to say that they leseme the sound of a bagpipe in the woods through which we hand just passed. Captain Thornton, a man of conduct as well is courage, instantly resolved to force the pass in front, with int waiting till he was assailed from the rear; and, assuring liis soldiers that the bagpipes which they heard wcre those of the friendly Highlanders who were advancing to their assistanure, he stated to them the importance of advancing and seemrin, Rob Roy, if possible, before these auxiliaries should come if to divide with them the honour, as well as the reward which was placed on the head of this celcbrated frecbooter. He therefore ordered the rear-guard to join the centre, and buth to close up to the advance, doubling his files so as to occury with his column the whole practicable part of the road, ithil to present such a front as its breadth admitted. Dougal, t11 whom he said in a whisper, 'You dog, if you have deceived me you shall die for it!' was placed in the centre, between two grenadiers, with positive orders to shoot him if he attemptel an escape. The same situation wos assigned to us as heing the safest, and Captain Thornton, taking his half-pike from the soldier who carried it, placed himself at the hoad of his little detachment and gave the word to march forward.
The party advanced with the firmness of English solliers. Not so Andrew Fairservice, who was frightened out of his wit:: and not so, if truth must be told, either the Bailic or I mreilf, who, without feeling the same degree of trepidation, could nuit with stoical indifference see our lives exposed to hazard in a quarrel with which we had no concern. But there was neithir tinne for remonstrance nor remedy.

We approached within about twenty yards of the spot where the advanced guard had seen some appearance of an cueny: It was one of those promontorics which run into the lalis, and round the base of which the road had hitherto winlow in the manner I have described. In the present case, however, the path, instead of keeping the water's ellge, scaled the: promontory by one or two rapid zigzags, carricd in a brokelu track along the preeipitous face of a staty grey rosk, whicin would otherwise have been absolutely inaecessible. On the top of this rock, only to be approached by a road so broken, so narrow, and so precarions, the corporal dechured he had seen the bomets and loug-barrelled guns of several monntaincers, apparently eouehed among the long leath and brushwood which crested the eminence. Captain Thornton ordercd him to move forward with three files to dislodge the supposed ambuscade, while at a more slow but steady paee he advanced to his support with the rest of his party.
Thi attaek whieh he meditated was prevented by the mexpecterl apparition of a female upon the summit of the rock. 'Stand!' she said, with a eommanding tone, 'and tell me what ye scek in MacGregor's eountry?'
I have seldom seen a finer or mote commanding form than this woman. She might be between the term of forty and fifty years, and had a countenance which must once have becn of a mearsenline cast of beauty; though now, imprinted with deep lincs by exposure to rough weather, and perhaps by the wasting influence of grief and passion, its features were only strong, harsh, and expressive. She wore her plaid, not drawn around her head and shoulders, as is the fashion of the women in Scotland, but disposed around her body as the Highland soldiers wear theirs. She had a man's bomet, with a feather in it, an unsheathed sword in her hand, and a pair of pistols at her girille.
'It's Helen Campbell, Rob's wife,' said the Bailie, in a whisper of eonsidcrable, alarm ; 'and there will be broken heads amang us or it 's lang.'
'What seek ye here?' she asked again of Captain Thornton, who had himself alvanced to reconnoitre.
'We seek the outlaw, Rob Roy MacGrcgor Camplell,' answered the officer, 'and make no war on women ; therefore offer 110. rain opposition to the king's troops, and assure yourself of civil treatment.'
'Ay,' retorted the amazon, 'I an no stranger to your tender mereies. Ye have left me neither name nor fame ; my mother's bones will shrink aside in their grave when mine are laid beside them. Ye have left me and mine ncither house nor hold, blanket nor bedding, cattle to feed us, or flocks to clothe us. Ye have taken from us all - all! 'I'he very name of our ancestors have ye taken away, and now ye conc for our lives.'
'I seek no man's life,' replied the Captain; 'I only execute my orders. If you are alone, good woman, you have nought to fear; if there are any with yon so rash as to offer useless resistance, their own blood be on their own heads. Move firward, sergeant.'
'Forward, march,' said the non-commissioned oflicer. 'Huzzil, my boys, for Rob Roy's head and a purse of gold!'
He quickened his pace into a rmm, followed by the six soldiers; but as they attained the first traverse of the ascent the flasli of a dozen of firelocks from various parts of the pass partel in quick suceession and deliberate aim. The sergeant, shot thromsh the body, still struggled to gain the ascent, raised himself ly his hands to clamber up the face of the rock, but relaxed his grasp after a desperate effort, and falling, rolled from the filce of the cliff into the deep lake, where he perished. Of the soldiers three fell, slain or disabled ; the others retreated un their main body, all more or less wounded.
'Grenadiers, to the front!' said Captain 'Thornton. Youn are to recollect that in those days this description of soldiers actually carried that destructive species of firework from which they derive their name. The four grenadters moved to the front accordingly. The officer commanded the rest of the party to be ready to support them, and only saying to us, 'Look to your safety, gentlemen,' gave, in rapid succession, the word to the grenadiers; 'Open your pouches, handle your greuades, blow your matches, fall on.'

The whole advanced with a shout, headed by Captain Thomton, the grenadiers preparing to throw their grenades amons the bnshes where the imbuscule lay, and the musketeers to support them by an instant and close assault. Dougal, firgotten in the scunfle, wisely crept into the thicket which overlimng that part of the roul where we had inrst halted, which he ascended with the activity of a wild cat. I followed his example, instinctively recollecting that the fire of the Hightlanders would sweep the open track. I clambered until ont of breath; for a continued spattering fire, in which every slot was mnltiplied by a thousand echoes, the hissing of the kindled fusees of the grenades, and the successive explosion of those missiles, mingled with the huzzas of the soldiers and the yells and cries of their Highland antagonists, formed a contrast which added - I do not shame to own it - wings to my desire to reach a place of safety. The difliculties of the ascent soom increased so much that 1 despaired of reaching Dongal, who seemed to swing himself from rock to rock, and stump to stump, with the facility of a squirrel, and I turned down my eyes to see what had become of ony other companions. Both were brought to a very awkward standstill.
The Bailie, to whom I suppose fear had given a temporary share of agility, had ascended abont twenty feet from the path, when his foot slipping, as he straddlenl from one luge fragment of rock to another, he would have slombered with his father the dencon, whose acts and words he was so foul of quoting, but for a projecting branch of a ragged thom, which, catcling hold of the skirts of his riding coat, supported him in mid-air, where he dangled not mulike to the sign of the Golden Flecee over the door of a mereer in the 'Irongate of his native city.

As for Andrew Fairserviee, he haul alvanced with better suecess until he had attained the top of a bare eliff, which, rising above the wood, exposed him, at least in his own opinion, to all the dangers of the neighbouring skirnish, while at the sime time it was of such a precipitons and impracticable nature that he dared neither to advance nor retreat. Fouting it up and down upon the narrow space which the top of the cliff afforded (very like a fellow at a country fair dancing upou a trencher), he roared for mercy in Gaelic and Buglish alternately, aceording to the side on which the scale of victory secmed to predominate, while his exclamations were only answered by the groans of the Bailie, who suffered much, not only from apprehension, but from the pendulous posture in which he hung suspended by the loins.
(Hn perceiving the Bailie's precarions situation, iny first idea was to attempt to render him assistance; but this was impossible withont the concurrence of Andrew, whom ncither sign, nor entreaty, nor command, nor expostulation conld inspire with courage to adventure thic descent from his painful elevation, where, like an muskilfin and obmoxions minister of state, muable to escape from the, cminence to which he had presumptuously ascenderl, he ce tinued to pour fourth piteons prayers for mercy, which no one neard, and to skip to and fro, writhing his body into all possible antick slapes to avoid the balls which he conceived to be whistling aromd him.
In a few minntes this canse of terror ceased, for the fire, at first so well sustained, now sunk at once, a sure sign that the contlict was conclnded. 'To grain some spot from which I conld see how the day hal gone was now my object, in order to appeal to the mercy of the victors, who, I tristell (whichever side might be gainers); would not suffer the honest Bailie to remain suspended, like the coffin of Mahomet, between heaven and earth without lending a hand to disengage him. At length, by dint of scrambling, I found a spot whieh commanded a vieli of the field of battle. It was indeed ended ; and, as my ninind already augured, from the place and eircumstances attending the contest, it had terminated in the defeat of Captain Thomton. I saw a party of Highlanders in the act of disarning that offieer and the scanty remainder of his party. They consistend of about twelve men, most of whom were wounded, who, surrounded by treble their number, and without the power either to advanee or retreat, exposed to a murderous and well-aimed fire, which they had no means of returning with effect, had at length laid down their arus by the order of their offieer, when he saw that the road in his rear was occupied, and that protracted resistance would be only wasting the lives of his brave followers. By the Highlanders, who fought under eover, the vietory was eheaply bought, at the expense of one man slain and two wounded by the grenades. All this I learned afterwards. At present 1 only comprehended the general result if the day from seeing the English offieer, whose face was covered with blood, stripped of his hat and arms, and his men, with sullen and dejected countenanees, which marked their deep regret, enduring, from the wild and martial figures who surrounded them, the severe measures to which the laws of war subject the vanquished for security of the victors.

CHAPTER XXXI

'Woe to the vanguish'd!' was stern Brenno's word, When sunk proud Rome beneath the Gallic sword 'Woe to the vanguish'd!' when his massive blade Bore down the scale against her ransom weigh'd; And on the field of foughten battle still Woe knows uo limit save the victor's will.

The Gaulliad.

IANXIOUSLY endeavoured to distinguish Dougal among the victors. I had little doubt that the part he had played was assumed on purpose to lead the English officer into the defile, and I could not help admiring the address with which the ignorant and apparently half-brutal savage had veiled his purpose, and the affected reluctance with which he had suffered to be extracted from him the false information which it must have been his purpose from the begiming to communicate. I foresaw we should incur some danger on approaching the victors in the first flush of their success, which was not unstained with eruelty, for one or two of the soldiers, whone wounds prevented then from rising, were poniarded by the vietors, or rather by some ragged Highland boys who had mingled with them. I concluded, therefore, it would be misafe to present ourselves without some mediator; and as Camplell, whom I now could not but identify with the celebrated freebooter Rob Roy, was nowhere to be seen, I resolved to claim the protection of his emissary, Dougal.

After gazing everywhere in vain, I at length istraved my steps to see what assistanee I sould indiviluall, render to my unlueky friend, when to my great joy I saw Mr. Jarvie delivered from his state of suspense; and, though very black in the face, and much deranged in the garments, safely scated beneath the rock in front of which he had been so lately suspended. I hastened to join him and offer my congratulations, which he was at first far from receiving in the spirit of cordiality with which they were offered. A henvy fit of coughing scarce permitted him breath enough to express the broken hiuts which he threw out ayuinst my sineerity.

ROB ROY

'Uh! wh! uh! uh! 'They say a friend - wh! mh! - a friend sticketh closer than a brither - uh! uh! uh! When I cane up here, Maister Osbaldistone, to this country, cursed of fionl and man - uh! uh! - Heaven forgie me for swearing - on nate man's errand but yours, d' ye think it was fair - uh! uh! to leave me, first, to be shot or drowned atween red-wud High. landers and redeonts; and next, to be hung up between henten and earth, like an auld potato-bogle, without sae muckle as trying - uh! uh! - sae muckle as trying to relieve me?

I made a thousand apologies, and laboured so hard to represent the impossibility of my affording him relief by my own unassisted exertions that at length I succeeded, and the Bailie, who was as placable as hasty in his temper, extended his favour to me onee more. I next took the liberty of asking hinn how he had contrived to extricate himself.
'Me extricate: I might hae hung there till the day of judgment, or I could hae helped mysell, wi' my heard hinging down on the tae side and my heels on the tother, like the yarn scales in the weigh-house. It was the creature Dougal that extricated me, as he did yestreen; he euttit aff the tails o' my coat wi' his durk, and another gillie and him set me on my legs as eleverly as if I had never been aff them. But to see what a thing gude braid-elaith is: had I been in ony o' your rotten French camlets now, or your drap de Berries, it wonlid hae sereeded like an auld rag wi' sie a weight as mine. But fair fa' the weaver that wrought the weft o't. I swuug and modlitit youder as safe as a gabbart that's moored by a three-ply cable
I now inquired, what had becone of his presecver.
'The ereature,' so he eontinued to call the Highlandman, 'eontrived to let me ken there wad be danger in gann near the leddy till he cane back, and bade me stay here. I anno the mind,' he contimed, 'that he's seekiig after yon, it 's a censiderate creature ; and troth, I wai swar he was right alnont the leddy, as he ca's her, too. Helen Camplell was nane o' the maist douce n?:idens, nor meekest wives neither, and folk say that Rob him: " stands in awe o' her. I doubt she wima ken me, for it's men? years since we met; I am elear for waiting for the Dougal ereature or we gane near her.'
I signified my acquieseence in this reasoming; but it was not the will of fate that day that the Builie's prudence should profit himself or nuy one else.

Anlrew Fairservice, though he had eeased to capor on the pimacle upon the cessation of the firing which han given occasion for his whimsical exercise, continned, as perehed on the top of an exposed eliff, too conspicuons an object to excape the shary eyes of the Highlanders when they had time to look a little around them. We were apprised he was discovered by a wild and loud halloo set up, aunong the assembled victors, three or four of whom instantly plunged into the copsewood and ascended the rocky side of the hill in different direetions towards the place where they had discovered this whimsical apparition.

Those who arrived first within gunshot of poor Andrew did not trouble themselves to offer him any assistance in the ticklish posture of his affairs, but, levelling their long Spunish-barrelled gnus, gave him to understand by signs which admitted of no misconstruction that he must contrive to come down and submit himself to their mercy, or be marked at from beneath, like a regimental target set up for ball-practice. With such a formidable hint for venturous exertion, Andrew Frairgervice conld no longer hositate; the more iimminent peril overcame his sense of that which seemed less inevitable, and he began to deseend the cliff at all risks, clutching to the ivy and ouk stumps and projecting framnents of rock with an alnust feverish anxiety, and never failing, as circumstances left him a hand at liberty, to extend it to the plaided gentry below in an attitule of supplication, as if to deprecate the discharge of their levelled firearms. In a worl, the fellow, under the influence of a connterueting motive for terror, achievel a safe descent fron his perilous eminence, which, I verily believe, nothing but fear of instant death could have moved him to attempt. The awkward mode of Andrew's descent greatly anused the Highlanders below, who fired a shot or two while he was engaged in it, without the purpose of injuring him, as I believe, but merely to enhance the anusement they derived firm lis extrene terror, and the superlative exertions of agility to which it excited him.

At length he attained fim and comparatively level gromud, or rather, to speak more correctly, his foot slipping at the last puint of descent, he fell on the earth at his full length, and was raised by the assistince of the Highlanders, who stood to receive him, and who, ere he gained his legs, stripped him not only of the whole contents of his porkets, but of periwig, hat, eat, doublet, stockings, and shoes, performing the feat with surh admirable celerity that, although he fell on his lnack a will. elothed and decent burgher-seening serving-man, he nrwe a forked, uncased, bald-pated, beggarly-looking searecrow. With. out respect to the pain which his undefended twes expericurel from the sharp encounter of the rocks over which they lurried him, those who had detected Andrew proceede' to drain him downward towards the road through all the intervening obstacles.

In the course of their descent Mr. Jarvie and I hecame expusel to their lynx-eyed observation, and instantly half a dozen armell Highlanders thronged around us, with drawn dirks and sworls pointed at our faces and throats, and cockel pistols presentell against our bodies. To have offered resistance wonld have In-un madness, especinlly as we had no weapons capable of supprorting such a denionstration. We therefore subnitted to our finte; and, with great roughness on the part of those who assisten! it our toilette, were in the act of being rednced to as unsophin.ti. cated a state (to use King Lear's phrase) as the plumelesss hipeed Andrev Fairserviee, who stood slivering hetween fear and rolld at a few yards' distance. Good chance, however, saved us frim this extremity of wretcheduess; for, just as I had yieldel III my cravat (a smart Steinkirk, by the way, and richly laceml, and the Bailie had been disrobed of the fragments of lis riding-coat, enter Dougal, and the scene was changed. By a high tone of expostnlation, mixed with oathe and threats, as far as I could conjecture the tenor of his language from the violenee of his gestures, he compelled the plnmerers, however reluetant, not only to give up their further depremiations on our property, but to restore the spoil they hand already appropriated. He suatched my cravat from the fellow who had seized it, and twisted it (in the zeal of his restitutimin) around my neek with such suffocating energy as male me think that he had not only been, during liis residence at Glasgow, a substitute of the jailor, but minst moreuver have taken lessons as an apprentice of the hangman. IIe thmes the tattered remmants of Mr. Jarvie's eonat aromm his shomillers, and, as more Highlanders began to flock towards ns from the highroad, he led the way downwards, directing null commanimbing the others to afforl nis, but particularly the Bailie, the assistance necessary to our descending with comparative case and safety. It was, however, in vain that Andrew Fairservice employed his lungs in obsecrating a share of Douga!' yrotection, or at least his interference, to procure restoration of his shues.
'Na, na,' suid Dungal in reply, 'she 's nae gentle borly, I trow; her petters hae ganged parefoot, or she 's muckle mis. ta'en.' And, leaving Andrew to follow at his leisure, or rather at such leisure as the surromiling crowd were pleased to indulge him with, he hurried us down to the pathway in which the skirmish had been fought, and hastenel to present ns as alditional captives to the female leader of his band.

We were dragged before her accordingly, Dougal fighting, struggling, screaming, as if he were the party most mprehenssive of hurt, and repulsing, by threats and efforts, all those who attempted to take a nearer interest in our capture than he secmed to do himself. At length we were pheed lefore the heroine of the clay, whose appearance, as well as those of the sawage, meouth, yet martial figures who surrommded us, struck me, to own the truth, with considerable apprehension. I do not know if Helen MacGregor had persomily mingled in the frisy, unil indeed I was afterwards given to understand the contrary; but the specks of blool on her brow, her humels, and naked arms, as well as on the blade of the sword which she eontinued to hold in her hame, her floshed comitenance, and the disorlered state of the raven locks which escaped from muder the red bonnet and plume that formed her head-lress, seemed all to intimate that she had taken mimmeriate share in the conflict. Her keen black eyes and features expressed an imagination inflamed by the pride of gratified revenge and the triumph of victory. Yet there was nothing positively sumgninary or cruel in her deportment; and she reminded me, when the inmediate alarm of the interview was over, of some of the paintings I had seen of the inspired heroines in the Catholic churches of France. She was not, indeed, sufficiently beantiful for a Judith, nor had she the inspired expressim in features which painters have given to Deborah, or to the wife of Heber the Kenite, at whosc fect the strong oppressor of Israel, who dwelled in Harosheth of the Gentiles, bowed down, fell, and lay a dead man. Nevertheless, the cuthmsiasm by which she was agitated gave her eomitenance and deportment, wildly dignified in themselves, an air which made her approweh nearly to the ideas of those womlerful artists who gave to the eye the heroines of Scripture history.

I was uncertain in what terms to accost a personage so uncummon, when Mr. Jarvie, breaking the iee with a preparatory cough (for the spreed with which lie had been lirought intu her presence had agnin impeded his respiration), addressed her infollows: 'Uh! nh! ete. ete. I am very happy to have thijoyful opportunity (a quaver in his voice strongly helied ilue emphasis which he studionsly laid on the word joyful) - Hhis joyjul oceasion,' he resmued, trying to give the adjective a more snitable aceentuation, 'to wisla my kinsman Robin's wife: very grod morning. Wh! bli! How 's a' wi' ye' - hy this timer he lad talked himself into his nswal jogrotrot manuer, which, exhilited a mixture of familiarity and self-inportance - "lom": $\mathrm{a}^{\prime}$ wi' ye this lang time? Ye 'll hae fingoten ine, Mrs. Mare: Gregor Campleell, as your consin- nh! ill!- hit ye 'll mininl my father, Deacon Nienl Jarvie, in the Saut Market o' (Glavivin min honest nam he was, nud a spmaible, and respectit yom ann! yours. Sac, as I mide before, ! am right glad to see yom, . 11 . Maefiregor Camplell, as my kinsmm's wife. I wad crave dnliberty of a kinsman to salute you, lout that your gillies hep such a dolefu' fust hand o' my nrme; ; and, to speak Hearem: truth and a magistrate's, ye wadua he the wair of a cogtia' " water before ye welcomed your friends.'
There was something in the familiarity of this introduction which ill snited the exalted state of temper of the persinill $t$ whon it was addressel, then busied with distrihuting demme of death, and warn from conquest in a perilons eneonnter.
'What fellow are you,' slie said, 'that dare to claim kimulion with the Mac(iregor, and neither wear his dress nor speak his langunge? What are yon, that have the tongue and the ladit of the homind, and yet seek to lie down with the deer?'
'I dimua ken,' said the mulamed Builie, 'if the kintlient has ever been weel reld out to yon yet, consin; luit it 's helnel and ean he proved. My mother, Elspeth Macharlane, wat the wife of my father, Dencon Nicol Jarvie - peace be wi' them laith-and Elspeth was the daughter of Pathane Machiolline. at the Sheeling o' Jach Sloy. Now this Parhane Mactialime. as his surviving daughter, Maggy Mach'arlane, ulines Mar. Xial, wha married Duncan MacNabor Stuckavrallachan, ean tretifi: stood as near to your guldenan, Rubin MaeGregor, as in the fourth degree of kinulrel, for $\qquad$ ,
The virago lopped the genealogical tree by denaming hanglitily, 'If a strean of minhing water acknowledged anis relation with the portime withdrawn fiom it for the mean dis mestic uses of those who dwelt on its banks?'
'Vem true, kinswoman,' nain the Bailie ; 'but for n' that the lurn wad be ghal to hae the mill- lam lnek again in simumer, when the chuckie stanes are white in the sinn. I kenl weel enemgh your Hieland folk lmand ns diavane penple light mind chaplif for our haginge aud mur claes: but every hurly weaks their native tengue that they learmen in infiniey ; mul it womld be a daft-like thing to see me wi' my fat wane in in short llinhand cout, num my puir short houghis gartered below the kneer, like nue 口' yomr hug-legred gillies. Mair by token, kiuswoman,' he continned, in lefiance of varions intimatioms liy which Dompal seemed to reemmemil silence, us well ass of the marks of inipatience which the amazan evineel at his lonparity, 'I wal hase ye to mind that the kinges errand whiles comes in the raulger's gate, and that, for as ligh as ye may think of the gumlethrere 's Seripture warrant for that - yet as high ns ye hami him, as I was suying, I lime leen serviceable to lali, ere mow ; fintyre an at of pearlins I sent yoursell when ye was gum to le mairriend, amil when Rob was an honest weel-shing drover, and mane "' 'lis minaw'in' wark, wi' fighting, and Hasles, and thaf-gihs, disurthing the king's peace and disarming his soldiers.'

Ha: hail apparently toneleel ona a key whieh hiss kinswoman will not brook. She drew herself ip to her fill height, mind betrayed the aconteness of her feeling by a langhof mingled stom and bitterness.
'Yes,' she said, 'yon, and such as vom, might chaim a relation to Ins when wo stopped to be th, mathy wretches fit to exist muler your dominion, as wo: in .if wool and drawers of water - to find cattle for laws to oppress and tremne.......... we are free - free by the very act which left ins 1., in: h.mse inur hearth, fiowl nor avering, which hereavel ine :...in of all, anll makes me troan when I think I minst still cumber the earth fir other pmipuses than those of vengeance. Anil I will carry on the work this day has so well commenced by a deed that shall hreak all bands between Maedregor and the Lawhunt chmels. Here, Allan, Dongal, bind these Sassenachs neck mul heel together and throw them into the Highlimid loch to seek for their lighlamil kilısfolk.'
The Bailie, alarmed at this manlate, was commencius at expostulation, which probably womld have only intlanmei the: violent passions of the person whom he allitesseil, whon bhusal threw himself between then, and in his own lingigage, which he spoke with a fluency and rapidity strongly contrasted by the slow, inplerfeet, and idiot-like mamer in which he expressed hinself in English, ponred forth what I doubt not was a very aninated pleading in our behalf.

His mist-ass rephied to him, or rather eut short his harangne, by exelainang in English (as if det rmined to make us taste inf anticipation the full bitterness of death), 'Base dog, and son of a dog, do yon dispute my commands? Shonld I tell ye to cint out their tonguess and put them into each other's throats, to try whieh would there best knap Southron, or to tear out their heart: and put them into each other's breasts, to see which wimhl there best plot treason against the MacGregor - and such thin!.s. have been done of old in the day of revenge, when our fathern had wrongs to redress - should I eommand you to do this, would it be your part to dispute my orders ?'
' To be sure, to be sure,' Dougal replied, with aecents of profound submission; 'her pleasure suld be done, tat's lint reason ; but an it were - tat is, an it could be thought the same to her to eoup the ill-fuured loon of ta redeoat Captiain, and hims corporal Cramp, and twa three o' the relcoats jintu the loeh, hersell wad do't wi' muckle mair great satisfiatim than to hurt ta honest eivil shentlemans as were friends to the Gregarach, and came up on the Chief's assuranee, and not to do no treason, as hersell could testify.'

The lady was about to reply, when a few wild strains if a pibroel were heard advancing up the road from Aberffil, the same probubly which had reaelied the ears of Captain 'Thernton's rear-guard, and determined lim to force his way mwirll rather than return to the village, on finding the pass ocempient. The skirmish being of very sloort duration, the armed mell who followed this martial melody had not, although quickening their murch when they heard the firing, been able to arrive in time sufficient to take any share in the rencontre. The vietny, therefore, was eomplete withont them, and they now arrived nily to slare in the triumph of their eountrymen.

There was a marked differenee letwixt the appearance of these new comers and that of the party by whieh our escont had been defeated, and it was greatly in favour of the furmer: Among the Highlanders who surrommled the Chieftainess, if i may presmme to call her so withont offenee to grammar, were men in the extremity of age, boys scaree able to bear a sworl, and eveu women - all, in short, whom the last neeessity uryes, to take up arns; and it added a shade of bitter slame to the dejection which clouded 'Ihornton's manly countenance, when lie found that the numbers and position of a foe, otherwise so despicable, had enabled them to conuner his brave veterans. But the thirt.v or forty Highlanders who now joined the others were all men ot the prime of yonth or manlunel, active cleanmade fellows, whose sloort huse and belted plaids set out their sinewy limbs to the best alvantage. 'Iheir arms were as superior to those of the first party as their dress and appearance. The followers of the female chief had axes, seythes, and other antigne weapons, in aind of their gnus, and some had ouly clubs, daggers, and long knives. But of the seeond party must had pistuls at the belt, and almost all had dirk hanging at the poneles which they wore in front. Eatch haul a good grom in his hand and a broadsword by his side, lesesides a stont romid target, made of light woul, sovered with leather and curiunsly stulded with brass, and haviug a steel pike serewed into the centre. These linug on their left shoulder during a march, or while they were engaged in exchanging fire with the enemy, and were wora: on the left arm when they charged with sword in hand.

But it was easy to see that this chosen band had not arrived from a victory such as they fomm their ill-appointed companions possessed of. The pilmoch sent forth oectasionally a few wailing notes, expressive of a very different sentiment from trimuph, and when they appared loffore the wife of their Chieftain it was in silence, and with downeast and melancholy looks. They paused when they approached her, and the pipes again sent forth the same wild and melancholy strailu.

Helen rushed towards them with a conntenance in which anger was mingled with apprehension. 'What means this, Altaster?' she said to the ministrel. 'Why a lanent in the moment of vietory? Robert - Hamish - where's the Mac(iregor? where's your father?'

Her sons, who led the hamd, advanced with slow mad irresolnte steps towards her, and murbured a few words in Gaelic, at hearing which she set up a shriek that mate the rocks ring again, in which all the women and hoys joined, clapping their hands and yelling, as if their lives han heen expiring in the somud. The momitain echues, silent simee the military somuls of hattle had ceased, had now to answer these framtic and diseorlant shrieks of sorrow, whieh drove the very night-birds from their haunts in the rocks, as if they were startled to hear orgies more hideous and ill-omened than their own, performed in the face of open day.
'Taken!' repeated Helen, when the clanour hal subsided -'taken! captive! and you live to say so I Coward duse: did I nurse you for this, that you should spare your blowl in your father's enemies? or see hin prisoner, and come back to tell it?'
'The sons of MacGregor, to whom this expostnlation was addressed, were youths, of whom the eldest had hardly attainem his twentieth year. Hamish, or James, the elder of these youths, was the tallest by a head, and much handsomer than his brother ; his light blue eyes, with a profusion of fair hair, which streamed from under his smart blue bonnet, made his whoie appearance a most favourable specimen of the Highlinil youth. The younger was called Robert; but, to distimgnislı him from his father, the Highlanders added the epithet "()iy,' ", ". the young. Dark hair, and dark features, with a ruddy whuw of health and animation, and a form strong and well-set beymul his years, completed the sketch of the young mountaineer.
Both now stood before their mother with conntenances clouded with grief and shame, and listened with the mont respectful submission to the reproaches with which she loadell them. At length, when her resentment appeared in sume degree so subside, the eldest, speaking in English, prohahly: that he might not be understood by their followers, endeavoureid respectfully to vindicate himself and his brother from his mother's reproaches. I was so near him as to comprehend much of what he said ; and, as it was of great consequence t" me to be possessed of information in this strange crisis, I failecl not to listen as attentively as I could.
'The MacGregor,' his son stated, 'had been called out upon a trysting, with a Lowland hallion, who came with a token from $\qquad$ , he muttered the name very low, but I thonght it sounded like nyy own. 'The MacGregor,' he said, 'accepted of the invitation, but commanded the Suxon who brought the nessage to be detainel, as a hostage that good faith should be wserved to him. Accordingly he went to the place of appointment (which had some wild Highland name that I cannot remembert), attended only by Angus Breck and little Rory, commanding no one to follow him. Within half an hour Angus Breck car back with the doleful tidings that the MacGregor had lne+il surprised and made prisoner by a party of Lemox militia, under Galbraith of Garschattachin.' He added, 'that Gallmaitl, on being threatened by MacGregor, who, upon his capture, menaced him with retaliation on the person of the hostage, had treated the threat with great contempt, replying, "Let each side hang his man; we'll hang the thief, and your catherans may hang the ganger, Rob, and the comintry will be rid of two damned things at once, a wild Highlander and a revenue oftiecr." Angus Breck, less carefully lookel to than his master, contrived to escape from the hands of the captors, atter having been in their eustody long enough to hear this discussion and to bring ofi the news.'
'And did you learn this, you false-hearted traitor,' said the wife of MacGregor, 'and not instantly rush to your father's rescue to bring him off, or leave your body on the place?'

The young MacGregor modestly replied, by representing the very superior force of the en:my, and stated that, as they made no preparation for leaving the eountry, he had fallen ibuck up the glen with the purpose of eolleeting a band sufficient to attenpt a rescue with some tolerable chance of snecess. At length he said, 'The militiamen would quarter, he understood, in the neighbouring house of Gartartan, or the old castle in the Port of Menteith, or some other stronghold, which, although strong and defensible, was nevertheless capable of being surprised, conld they but get enough of inen assembled for the purpose.'

I miderstood afterwards that the rest of the frecbooter's followers were divided into two strong bands, one destined to watch the remaining garrison of Inversmaid, a party of which, under Captain Thornton, hand been defeated; and another to show front to the Highland clans who had mited with the regular troops and Lowlanders in this hostile and combined invasion of that mountainous and desolate territory, which, lying between the lakes of Loch Lomond, Loch Katrine, and Loch Ard, was at this time currently called Rob Roy's or the MacGregor country. Messengers were despatched in great haste, to concentrate, as I supposed, their forces, with a view to the purposed attack on the Lowlanders; and the dejection and despair at first visible on each countenancc gave place to the hope of rescning their leader, and to the thirst of vengeance. It was under the burning inflnence of the latter passion that the wife of MacGregor commanded that the hostage exchanged for his safety should be brought into her presence. I betieve her sons had kept this unfortminte wretch out of her sight for fear of the consequences; but if it was so, their humame precaution only postponed his fate. They dragged forward at her summons a wretch already half dead with terror, in whose agonised features I reeognised, to my horror and astonishment. my old acquaintance Morris.

[^42]
ROB ROY

He fell prostrate before the female Chief with an effort t. clasp her knees, from which she drew back, as if his touch hail been pollution, so that all he could do in token of the extremity of his humiliation was to kiss the hem of her plaid. I nevir heard entreaties for life poured forth with sueh agony of spirit. The ecstasy of fear was such that, instead of paralysing his tongue, as on ordinary occasions, it even rendered him elonuent : and, with cheeks pale as ashes, hands compressed in agony, "yethat seemed to be taking their last look of all mortal oljects, he protested, with the deepest oaths, his total ignorance of any design on the person of Rob Roy, whom he swore he lovel inil honoured as his own sonl. In the ineonsistency of his termir he said he was but the agent of others, and he muttered the name of Rashleigh. He prayed but for life, for life he winlt give all he had in the world ; it was bit life he asked - life, if it were to be prolonged under tortures and privations; he asked only breath, though it should be drawn in the damps of the lowest caverns of their hills.
It is impossible to describe the seorn, the loathing, and contempt with which the wife of MacGregor regarded this wretched petitioner for the poor boon of existence.
'I could have bid you live,' she said, 'had life been to youl the same weary and wasting burden that it is to me-that it is to every noble and generous mind. But you - wretch ! yin could creep through the world maffected by its varions ilisgraces, its meffable miseries, its constantly accumulating maswes. of crime and sorrow ; you conld live and enjoy yourself white the noble-minded are betrayed, while nameless and bintheses villains tread on the neck of the brave and the long-descenled: you could enjoy yourself, like a butcher's dog in the shambles, battening on garhage, while the slaughter of the oldest aiml best went on around you! This enjoyment you shall mot liw: to partake of; you shall die, base dog, and that befire ymu cloud hass passed over the sum.'

She gave a brief command in Gaelic to her attendants, twin of whom seized upon the prostrate suppliant and hurried him to the brink of a cliff which overhung the flood. He set up the: most piereing and dreadful cries that fear ever uttered : I may well term them dreadfin, for they hamted my sleep for years, afterwards. As the murderers, or executioners, call thein as you will, dragged him along, he recognised me even in that inoment of horror, and exelaimed, in the last artienlate words I ever heard hin utter, ' 0 , Mr. Osbaldistone, save me! save me!'
I was so much moved by this horrid spectacle that, although in momentary expectation of sharing his fate, I did attempt to speak in his behalf, but, as might have been expected, my interferenee was sternly disregarded. The victim was held fast by some, while others, binding a large heavy stone in a plaid, tied it round his neek, and others again eagerly stripped him of some part of his dress. Half-naked, and thus manacled, they hurled him into the lake, there about twelve feet deep, with a loud halloo of vindictive triumph, above which, however, his last death-shriek, the yell of mortal agony, was distinctly leard. The heavy burden splashed in the dark blue waters, and the Highlanders, with their pole-axes and swords, watched an instant, to guard lest, extricating limself from the load to which he was attached, the victim might have struggled to regain the shore. But the knot had been securely bound; the wretched man sunk without effort ; the waters, which his fall had disturbed, settled cahnly over him, and the unit of that life for which he had plealed so strongly was for ever withdrawn from the sum of human existence.

CHAPTER XXXII

Abstract

And be he safe restored ere evening set, Or, if there 's vengeance in an injured heart, And power to wreak it in an armed hand, Your land shall ache for't.

Old Play.

IKNOW not why it is that a single deed of violence and cruelty affects our nerves more than when these are exercised on a more extended scale. I had seen that day several of my brave countrymen fall in battle; it seemed to ne that they met a lot apuropriate to humanity, and my businn, though thrilling with interest, was affected with nothing of that sickening horror with which I beheld the unfortunate Morris pint to death without resistance and in cold blood. I looked at my companion, Mr. Jarvie, whose face reflected the feelings which were painted in mine. Indeed, he could not so suppress his horror but that the words escaped hin in a low and broken whisper -
'I take up my protest against this deed, as a bloorly and cruel murder : it is a cursed deed, and God will avenge it in His due way and time.'
'Then you do not fear to follow?' said the virago, hending on him a look of death such as that with which a hawk looks at his prey ere he pounces.
'Kinswoman,' said the Bailie, 'nae man willingly wad (rut short his thread of life before the end $o^{\prime}$ his pirn was fiirly measured off ou the yarn-wimules. And I hae muckle to din, an I be spared, in this warld - public and private business, als weel that belanging to the magistracy as to my ain particular: and nae doubt I hae some to depend on me, as puir Mattie, wha is an orphan. She 's a far-awa' cousin o' the Laird o' Limmerfield. Sae that, laying a' this thegitler-"skin for skin, yea all that a man hath will he give for his life."'
'And were I to set you at liberty;' said the imperions dame, 'what name would you give to the drowning of that Saxon $\log$ ?'
'Uh! uh!-hem ! hem!' said the Bailie, clearing his throat as well as he could, 'I suld study to say as little on that score as might be ; least said is smuest mended.'
'But if you were called on by the courts, as you termi them, of justice,' she again demanded, 'what then would be your answer?'
The Bailie looked this way and that way, like a person who meditates an escape, and then answerel in the tone of one who, seciug no means of accomplishing a retrent, deternines to stand the brunt of battle - 'I see what you are driving me to the wa' about. But I'll tell you 't plain, kinswoman, I behoved just to speak according to my ain conscience; and though your ain gudeman, that I wish had been here for his ain sake and mine, as weel as the puir Hieland creature Dougal, canı tell ye that Nicol Jarvie can wink as hard at a friend's failings as ony borly, yet l'se tell ye, kinswoman, mine's ne'er be the tongue to belie my thought; and sooner than say that yonder puir wretch was lawfully slaughtered, I wad consent to be laid beside him, though I think ye are the first Hieland woman wad mint sic a doom to her husband's kinsman but four times removed.'

It is probable that the tone of firmuess assmmed by the Bailie in lis last speech was better suitel to make an impression on the hard heart of his kinswoman than the tone of supplication he had hitherto assumed, as gems can be cut with steel, though they resist softer metals. She commanded us both to be placed hefore her. 'Your name,' she said to me, 'is Oshaldistone? 'The dead dog, whose death you have witnessed, called you so.'
' My name is Osbaldistone,' was my answer.
'Rashleigh, then, I suppose, is your Christian name ?' she pursued.
'No; my name is Fraucis.'
' But you know Rashleigh Osbaldistone ?' sle continued. 'He is your brother, if I mistake not, at least your kinsman and near friend.'
'He is my kinsman,' I replied, 'but not my friend. We were lately engaged together in a rencontre, when we were separated by a person whom I understand to be your husband. My blood is hardly yet dried on lis sword, and the wound on my side is yet green. I have little reason to acknowledge him as a friend.
' 'Then,' she replied, 'if a stranger to his intrignes, you can go in safety to Garschattachin and his party, without fear of being detained, and carry them a message from the wife of the Mac(Iregor 1'

I answered, "That I know no reasonable cause why the militia gentlemen should detnin me; that I had no reason, on my own account, to fear being in their hands; and that if uy going on her embassy would act as a protection to my friend and servant, who were her prisoners, $I$ was ready to set out directly.' I took the opprortnnity to say, "That I had come into this country on her husbund's invitation, and his assurance that he would aid me in some inportant natters in which 1 was interested; that my companion, Mr. Jarvie, had aceom. panied me on the same errand.
'And I wish Mr. Jarvie's boots had been fu' o' boiling water when he drew them on for sic a purpose,' interrupted the Bailie.
'You may read your father,' said Helen MacGregor, turning to her sons, 'in what this young Suxon tells us. Wise only when the bonmet is on his head and the sword is in his hanif, he never exchanges the tartan for the broadeloth but he runss himself into the miserable intrignes of the Lowlanders, aml becomes again, after all he has suffered, their agent - their towl - their slave.'
'Add, madam,' said I, 'and their benefactor.'
' Be it so,' she said; 'for it is the most empty title of them all, since he has uniformly sown benefits to reap a harvest of the most foul ingratitude. But enough of this. I shall canse you to be guided to the enemy's outposts; ask for their cumbmander, and deliver him this message from me, Helen MacGregor: 'That if they injure a hair of MacGregor's head, anil if they do not set him at liberty within the space of twelve homrs, there is not a lady in the Lennox but shall before Christmas cry the coromach for them she will be loth to lose; there is not a farmer but shall sing wellawa over a burnt barnyard and an enpty byre; there is not a laird nor heritor shall lay his head on the pillow at night with the assurance of beins a live man in the moming; and, to begin as we are to eutil, :il soon as the tern is expired I will send them this Glaspows Bailie and this Saxon Captain, and all the rest of my prisoners, each bundled in a plaid, and chopped into as many pieces as there are checks in the tartan.'

As she paused in her denuuciation, Captain Thornton, who was within heurimg, addenl with, great coolness, 'Present my compliments - Captain Thornton's, of the Royals, compliment:
-to the commanding officer, and tell him to do his duty and secure his prisoner, and not waste a thonght nyou me. If I have been fool enough to have been led into an ambuscade by these artful savages, I am wise enou;h to know how to die for it withont disgracing the service. I amm moly sorry for my poor fellows,' he suid, 'that have fallen into sueh butcherly hands.'
'Whisht! whisht!' exelaimed the Bailie; 'are ye weary o' your life 1 Yo'll gie my service to the commanding oftieer, Mr. Osbaldistone - Builie Nicol Jurvie's service, a magistrate o' (ilasgow, as his father the deacon was before him - and tell him, here are a wheen honest men in great trouble, and like to come to mair ; and the best thing he can do for the eommon good will be just to ler Rob eome his wa's up the glen, and nae mair about it. 'There's been some ill dmue here alrealy, but as it has lighted chiefly on the ganger, it wimm be muckle worth making a stir abont.'

With these very opposite injunctions from the parties ehiefly interested in the suceess of my embassy, and with the reiterated charge of the wife of Maciregor to remember mud detail every word of her injunetions, I was at length suffered to depart; and Andrew Fairserviee, chiefly, I believe, to get rid of his elamorous supplications, was permitted to attend me. Doubtful, however, that I might use my horse as a means of escape from my guides, or desirous to retain a prize of some value, I was given to understand that I was to perform my journey on foot, escorted by Hamish MacGregor, the elder brother, who, with two followers, attendel, as well to show me the way as to reconnoitre the strength and position of the enemy. Dougal had been at first ordered on this party, but he contrived to elude the serviee, with the purpose, as we afterwards understood, of watching over Mr. Jarvie, whom, according to his wild principles of fidelity, he eonsidered as entitled to his good offices, from having onee acted in some measure as his patron or master.

After walking with great rapidity abont an hour, we arrived at an eminenee covered with brushwoud, which gave us a commanding prospeet down the valley, and a full view of the post which the militia ocenpied. Being ehiefly cavalry, they had judiciously avoided any attempt to penetrate the prise which had been so minsuecessfully assayed by Captain Thornton. 'They had taken up their sitmation wilh smme military skill sit a rising ground in the centre of the little valley of Abermil, through which the river Forth winds its earliest course, und which is formed by two ridges of hills, faced with harricades of limestone rock, intemnixed with huge masses of brecein, of pelbles imbedided in some softer subutance which has harilened around them like mortar, mid surromided by the more lafty mountains in the distance. These ridges, however, left the valley of breadth enough to secure the eavality from any sulden surprise by the monntaineers, and they hul statimed sentincls and outposts at proper distances from this main body in every direction, so that they might secure full time to monit mull git under arms upon the least alarin. It was not indeen expertoll at that time that Highlanders would attack cavalry in :m open plain, though late events have shown that they may flo:n with success. ${ }^{1}$ When I first knew the Highlanders they hal almost a superstitious dread of a momuted tronper, the lursw being so much more fierce and imposing in his appearance than the little shelties of their own hills, and moreover leing trinind as the more ignormit mountaineers believed, to fight with his feet and lis teeth.

ROH ROY

The appeurance of the piequeted horses feeding in this little vale ; thie forms of the soldiers, as they sate, stoond, or walkind in various groups in the vicinity of the beautiful river ; and of the bare yet romantic ranges of rock which helge in the lanulscape on either side, formed a noble foreground, while far to the eastward the eye canght a glance of the lake of Menteith; and Stirling Castle, dimly seen along with the blue and distant line of the Ochil Mountains, closed the scene.

After gazing on this lanlscape with great earnestness, young, MacGregor intimated to me that I was to lescend to the station of the militia and execute my errand to their commander, enjoining me at the same time, with a menacing gesture, neither to inform them who had guidel me to that place nur where I had parted from my escort. Thus tutored, I descended towards the military post, followed by Andrew, who, wily retaining his breeches and stockings of the Enylish costume, without a hat, bare-legged, with brognes on his feet, whim Dougal had given him out of compassion, and having a tattered plaid to supply the want of all upper garments, looked as if he had been playing the part of a Highland Toun-of-Bedlam. We had not proceeded far before we becane visible to one of the videttes, who, riling towards us, presentel lis carabine :inid commanded me to stand. I obeyed, and when the soldier canme [^43]up, desired to be conduetel to his commanding officer. I was immediately bronght where a eircle of offieers, sitting upon the gross, seemed in attendance mpon one of superior rank. He wore a cuirass of polishad steel, over whieh were drawn the insignian of the ancient Order of the Ihistle. My friend Ginrwhattachin and many other gentlemen, some in miform, others in their ordinary dress, hat all armed and well attenderl, seemed to) receive their orders from this person of distinetion. Many servants in rieh liveries, apparently a purt of his honsehold, were also in waiting.

Having paid to this noldemm the respect which his rank appeared to demmend, I ateqminted him that I had been an involmutary witness to the king's soldiers having suffiered a defeat from the Highlamders at the pmess of Loch Arrl (smeli I had learned was the nane of the place where Mr. 'Ihoritem was made prisuner), and that the victors threntened every species of extremity to those who lad fallen into their power, as well as ti) the Low Country in general, muless their Cliief, who hal that morning been made prismer, were retnrned to them muinjured. The Dinke, for he whom I addreswed was of no lower rank, listened to me witl: great complosure, and then replied, that he shonld be extrenely sorry to expose the infortinate gentimen who had been made prisomers to the cruelty of the Parlurimis into whose hands they had fallen, but that it was fully to suppose that he would deliver up the very anthor of all these disorders and offences, and so encourage his followers in their license. 'You may return to those who sent yon,' he proceeded, 'and inform them that I shall certainly cause Rob Koy Campbell, whom they call Macfiregor, to be executed by break of day as an outlaw taken in arms, and deserving death by a thonsund acts of violence ; that I should be most justly held moworthy of my sitmation mid commission did I act otherwise ; that I shall know how to protect the comitry against their insolent threats of violence; mid that, if they injure a hair of the heal of any of the minfortmate gentlemen whom an milucky necident has thrown into their power, I will take such :umple vengeanee that the very stones of their glens shall sing woe for it this hmmired years to come:'

I hmubly begged leave to remmistrate respecting the honourable inission imposed on me, and touched upon the obvious danger attending it, when the nohle eommander replied, 'that, such heing the case, I might send my servant.'
' 'The deil be in my feet,' said Audrew, withont either having

MICROCOPY RESOLUTION TEST CHART

(ANSI and ISO TEST CHART No. 2)

ROB ROY

respect to the presence in which he stood or waiting till I replied - 'the deil be in my feet if I gang my tue's lenyth. Do the fork think I hae another thrupple in my ponch after John Highlandman's sueckit this ane wi' his joctaleg? or that I can dive domn at the tae side of a Highland loch and rise at the tother, like a shelldrake? Na , na; ; ilk ane for himsell, and God for us a'. F'olk may just mak a juge o' their ain ade, and serve themsells till their baims grow np, and gang their ain errands for Andrew. Rob Roy never cane near the parish of Dreepdaily to steal either pippin or pear frae me or mine.'

Silencing my follower with some difficulty, I represented to the Duke the great danger Captain Thorinton and Mr. Jarvie would certainly be exposed to, and entreated he would make me the bearer of such modified terms as might be the meinns of saving their lives. I assured him I shonld decline no danger if I could be of service ; but, from what I had heard and seen, I had little doubt they would be instantly murdered should the chief of the outlaws suffer death.
'I'he Duke was obviously much affected. 'It was a hard cave,' he said, 'and he felt it as such ; but he had a paramount duty' to perform to the country: Rob Roy must die!'
I own it was not without emotion that I heard this threat of instant death to my acquaintance Campbell, who had so often testified his good-will towards me. Nor was I singular in the feeling, for many of those around the Duke ventured to expresw themselves in his favour. 'It would be more advisable,' they said, 'to send him to Stirling Castle, and there detain him a close prisoner, as a pledge for the submission and dispersion of his gang. It were a great pity to expose the country to be plundered, which, now that the long nights approached, it wonld be found very difficult to prevent, since it was impossible to guard every point, and the Highlanders were sure to select those that were left exposed.' 'They added, that there was great hardship in leaving the unfortunate prisoners to the ahmost certain doom of massacre denounced against them, which 110 one doubted would be executed in the first burst of revenge.
Garschattachin ventured yet farther, confiding in tl honour of the nobleman whon he addressed, althou in he kiew he had particular reasons for disliking their prisoner. 'Rul) Roy,' he sail, 'though a kittle neighbour to the Low Comntry, and particularly obnoxious to his Grace, and though he mayhe carried the catheran trale farther than ony man o' his day, was an auld-firrand carle, and there might be some neanis found of making him hear reason ; whereas his wife and sons were reckless fiends, without either fear or mercy about them, and, at the head of $a^{\prime}$ his limmer loons, wonld be a worse plagne to the comntry than ever he had been.'
'Pooh! yooh!' replied his Grace, 'it is the very sense and cumung of this fellow which has su long maintained his reign ; a mere Highland robber w ald have been put down in as many weeks as he has flomrished years. His gang, withont him, is no more to be dreaded as a permanent anmoyance - it will no longer exist -- than a wasp withont its head, which may sting unce perhaps, but is instantly crushed into amihilation.'

Garschattachin was not so easily silenced. 'I am snre, my Iord Duke,' le replied, 'I have no favour for Roh, and he as little for me, seeing he has twice cleaned ont my ain byres, heside skaith amang my tenants; but, however $\qquad$ '
'But, however, Garschattachin,' said the Duke, with a smile of peculiar expression, 'I fancy you think such a freedom may be pardoned in a friend's friend, end Rob's supposed to be no enemy to Major Galbraith's friends over the water.'
'If it be so, my lord,' said Garschattachin, in the same tone of jocularity, 'it's no the warst thing I have heard of him. But I wish we heard some news from the clans that we have wiited for sae lang. I vow to God they 'll keep a Hielandman's word wi' ns ; I never kend them better, it's ill drawing boots upon trews.'
'I cannot believe it,' said the Duke ; 'these gentlemen are known to be men of honour, and I must necessarily suppose they are to keep their appointment. Send out two more horsemen to look for our friends. We cumot, till their arrival, pretend to attack the pass where Captain 'Thornton has suffered himself to be surprised, and which, to my knowledge, teu men on foot might make good agrainst a regiment of the hest horse in Europe. Meanwhile let refreshments be given to the men.'

I had the benefit of this last order, the more necessary and acceptable as I had tasted nothing since our hasty meal at Aherfoil the evening before. The videttes who had heen despatched returued withont tidings of the expected auxiliaries, and sumset was approaching when a Highlander belonging to the clans whose co-operation was expected appeared as the thearer of a letter, which he delivered $t$, the Duke with a most profound conge.
'Now will I wad a hogshead of claret,' said Garschattachin,
'that this is a message to tell us that these cursed Highlandmen, whom we have fetched here at the expense of so muth plague and vexation, are going to draw off and leave us to lu our own business if we call.'
'It is even so, gentlemen,' said the Duke, reddening with indignation, after haviug perised the letter, which was written upon. a very dirty scrap of paper, but most panctilionsly addressed, 'For the much-honoured hands of Ane High :nil Mighty Prince, the Duke,' etc. etc. etc. 'Our allies,' continted the Duke, 'lave deserted us, gentlemen, and have made a separate peace with the enemy.'
'It's just the fate of all alliances,' said Garschattachin ; 'the Dutch were gaun to serve us the same gate, if we had not gryt the start of them at Utrecht.'
'You are facetious, sir,' said the Duke, with a frown which showed how little he liked the pleasantry, 'but our business is rather of a grave cast just now. I suppose no gentlenan would advise our attempting to penetrate farther into the country, unsupported either by friendly Highlanders or by infantry from liversnaid?'

A general answer announced that the attempt would he perfect madness.
' Nor would there be great wisdom,' the Duke added, 'in remaining exposed to a night attack in this place. I thercfure propose that we should retreat to the house of Duchray anl that of Gartaiwn. and keep safe and sure watch and warrl until morning. Eat defore we separate I will examine Rob Roy before you all, and make you sensible, by your own eyes anil ears, of the extreme unfitness of leaving him space for farther outrage.' He gave orders accordingly, and the prisoner was brought before him, his arms belted down above the elbow, and secured to his body by a horse-girth buckled tight behind him. Two non-commissioned officers had hold of him, one on cach side, and two filc of men with carabines and fixed bayonets: attended for additional sccurity.
I had never scen this man in the dress of his comntry, which set in a striking point of view the peculiaritics of his form. A shock-head of red hair, which the lat and periwig of the Lowland costume liad in a great measure concealcd, was seen beneath the $\mathrm{H}^{\prime} \quad$ ad bonmet, and verified the epithet of ' Roy,' or Red, by wincu he was much better known in the Law Country than by any other, and is still, I suppose, best remembered. The justice of the appellation was also vindieated hy the appearance of tha: of his kilt to the top of his country dress left bare 'iort hose, whieh the fashion of of thiek, short, red La!r, and which was eovered with a fell resemb, short, red air, especially aromd his knees, which anee of extrenis respect, as well as from their sinewy appearbull. Upon the strength, the limbs of a red-coloured Highland change of dress and by my having become acpuainted witt, he real and formidable character, his appearance had acyuin... to my eyes something so much wilder and more striking than it hefore presented, that I could scarce recognise him to be the same person.
His mamer was bold, uneonstrained, unless by the actual honds, haughty, and even dignified. He bowed to the Duke, nolded to Garsehattaehin and others, and showed some surprise at seeing me anong the party.
'It is long sinee we have met, Mr. Campbell,' snid the Duke.
' It is so, my Lord Duke ; I could have wished it had been (looking at the fastening on his arms) when I could have better paid the compliments I owe to your Grace; but there's a gude time coming.'
'No time like the time present, Mr. Campbell,' answered the Duke, 'for the hours are fast Hying that must settle your last account with all inortal affairs. I do not say this to insult your distress; but you must be aware yourself that you draw hear the end of your career. I do not deny that you may sometimes have done less harm than others of your unhappy trade, and that you may oceasionally have exhibited marks of talent, and even of a disposition which promised better things. But you are aware how long you have been the terror and the oppressor of a peaeeful neighbourhood, and by what acts of violenee you have maintained and extended your usurped authority. You know, in short, that you have deserved death, and that you mnst prepare for it.'
' My lord,' said Rob Roy, 'althongh I may wel, lay my misfortunes at your Grace's door, yet I will never say that you yourself have been the wilful and wicting author of them. My lowl, if I had thought sae, your Grace would not this day have heen sitting in judgment on me ; for yon have been three times within good rifle distance of me when you were thinking but on the red deer, and few people have kend me miss my aim. But as for them that have abused your Grace's ear, and set you up against a man that was ance as peaeefu' a man as ony in the land, and made your name the warrant fur driving me to utter extremity - I have had some amends of them, amd, for a' that your Grace now says, I expeet to live to hae mair.'

ROB Ruy

'I know,' said the Duke, in rising anger, 'that yon are a determined and impudent villain, who will keep his oath if he swears to misehief: but it shall be my eare to prevent you. You have no enemies buit your own wicked netions.'
'Had I called myself Grahame instead of Campbell, I might have heard less about them,' answered Rob Roy, with doggell
'You will do well, sir,' said the Duke, 'to warn your wiie and family and followers to beware how they nise the gentlemen now in their hands, as I will repuite tenfold on them anil their kin and allies the slightest minury done to any of his Majesty's liege subjeets.'
'My lord,' said Roy in answer, 'none of my enemies will allege that I have been a bloodthirsty man, and were I now wi' my folk I could rule four or five humdred wild Hielanders as easy as youn Graee those eight or ter lackeys and foot-hins. But if your inace is bent to take the head away from a homse, ye may lay your aecount there will be misrule amang the nembers. However, eome o't what like, there's an honest man, is kinsman o' my ain, maun come by nae skaith. Is there ony body here wad do a gnde deed fur MacGregor? he may repay it, though his hands be now tied.'

The Highlander who had delivered the letter to the Duke replied, 'I'll do your will for you, MaeGregor ; and I'll gang back up the glen on purpose.'
He advaneed, and received from the prisoner a message to his wife, whieh, being in Gaelie, I did not understand, but I had little doubt it related to some measnres to be taken for the safety of Mr. Jarvie.
'Do you hear the fellow's impudenee?' said the Duke; 'he eonfides in his character of a messeuger. His eondnct is of a pieee with his masters', who invited us to make commen canse against these freebooters, and have deserted ins so soon as the MaeGregors have agreed to surrender the Balquidder lands they were squabbling about.

> No truth in plaids, no faith in tartan trews !, Cameleon-like, they change a thousand hues.,

[^44]Grace have occasion to say $i t$, wad ye bit be for hegiming justice at the well-head. Sie the honest man his mear ugain. let every heal wear its ain bamet, and the distractions 0 ' the Lemmox wad be mended wi' them o' the land.'
'Hush! hush! Garsehattuelin,' said the Duke; 'this is langnage dangerous for you to talk to miny one, annl espeeially to me; but I presume yon reckon yourself a privileged person. Please to draw off your party towards Gartartan; I shall myself see the prisoner eseorted to Duchray, and seml you urilers to-morrow. Yuu will please grant no leave of absence to any of your troopers.'
'Here's auld ordering and counter-ordering,' muttered Garschattachin between his teeth. 'But patienee! patienee! wo may ae day play at "Change seats, the king's coming." '

The two troops of eavalry now formed, aml prepared to marel off the ground, that they might avail themselves of the remainder of daylight to get to their evening quarters. I receivel an intination, rather than an invitation, to attend the party; and I perceived that, though no longer considered as a prismer, I was yet under some sort of suspicion. The times were indeed so dangerous, the great party questions of Jacohite and Hanoverian dividel the eomntry so effectmally, anm the constant disputes and jealousies between the Highlamlers and Lowlanders, besides n nmmber of inexplicable canses of fend which separated the great leading families in Seotland from each other, occasioned sueh general suspieion, that a solitary and mproteeted stranger was almost smre to meet with something disagreeable in the eourse of his travels.

I acquieseed, however, in my destination with the best graee I conld, consoling onyself with the hope that I might obtain from the captive freebonter some information concerning lasilleigh and his machinations. I shonld do myself injustice did I not add that my views were not merely selfish. I was ton much interested in my singular acqnaintance nut to be desirons of rendering lim such services as his unfortunate situation might demand, or admit of his receiving.

CHAPTER XXXIII

And when he rame to hroken brigg,  He bent his low and swant ; And when he came to grass growing, Set down his leet and ran.

THE eelnes of the rocks and minines on either side niw rang to the trumpets of the cavalry, which, formine themselves into two distinet bodies, began to nume down the valley at a slow trot. That commanded hy Majur Galbrnith soon took to the right hand and crossed the Firth, for the purpose of taking up the quarters assigned them for the night, when they were to ocenpy, as I understood, an old mistle in the vicinity. They formed a lively objeet while crossing the stream, but were soon lost in winding np the bank on the omissite side, whieh was clothed with wood.

We continued our march with eonsiderable good order. Tn ensure the safe enstody of the prisoner, the Duke had cansed him to be placed on horseback behind one of his retainers, called, as I was informed, Ewan of Brigglands, one of the largest and strongest men who were present. A horse-belt, passed round the bodies of both and buckled hefore the yeoman's breast, rendered . . "Je for Rob Roy to free himself from his keeper. I v. ued to keep close beside them, and accommodated $\dagger$ as closely surron. would permit, and had $y$ the soldiers as the width of the wend side with pistol in hand ays at lenst mene, if not two, oll cand a Highland pmoy of which they Fairservice, firmished with other, was pernitted to ride han made prey somewhere in whom a ureat number attedel amors the other domesties, of without falling into the ranks of the line of march, thums troopers.

In this manner we travelled for a certain distance, mutil we arrived at a place where we also were to cross the river. The Forth, as being the outlet of a lake, is of eonsiderable depth, even where less important in point of width, and the descent to the ford was by a broken precipitons ravine, which only permitted one horseman to descend at once. The rear and ceutre of our small boily halting on the bank, while the front files passed down in suecession, prodneed a considerable delay, as is usual on such occasions, and even some confmsion; for a number of those riders who made no proper part of the sipuadron crowded to the ford withont regnlarity, and made the militia cavalry, although tolerably well drilled, partake in some degree of their own disorder.

It was while we were thus huddled together on the bank that I heard Rob Roy whisuer to the man behind whom he was placel on horseback, 'Yusr father, Ewan, wadna hae carried an nuld friend to the shambles, like a calf, for a' the dukes in Clristendom.'
Ewan returned no answer, but shrugged, as one who would express by that sign that what he was doing was none of his own choice.
'And when the MacGregors come down the glen, and ye see toom faulds, a bluidy hearthstanc, and the fire flashing out hetween the rafters o' your house, ye may be thinking then, Ewan, that were your fri al Roh to the forc, you would ha: e had that safe whieh it will make your heart sair to lose.'
Ewan of Brigglands again shrugged and troaned, but remained silent.
'It's a sair thing,' eontimued Rob, sliding his insinuations so gently into Ewan's ear that they reached no other but mine, who certainly saw myself in no slupic called upon to destroy his prospeets of escape - 'it's a sair thing that Ewan of Brigglands, whon Roy MacGregor has helped with hand, sword, and purse, suld mind a glom from a great man mai' than a friend's life.'
Ewan seemed sorely agitated, but was silent. We heard the Duke's voice from the opposite bank call, 'Bring over the prisoncr.'
Ewan put his horse in motion, and just as I heard Roy say, 'Never weigh a MacGregor's bluid against a broken whang , ' leather, for there will be mother accoming to gic for it baith here and hereafter,' they passcil me hastily, and, dashing forward rather precipitately, entered the water.
' Not yct, sir - not yet,' said some of the troopers to me, as rol. $\mathbf{1 v}-21$

I was about to fullow, while others pressed forward into the stream.
I saw the Duke on the other side, by the waniug liwht, engaged in commanding lis people tin get into orler, as they landed dispersedly, some higher, some lower. Many hard crossed, some were in the water, and the rest were prepsuming to follow, when a sudden splash warned me that Maedirwain's eloqnence had prevailed on Ewan to give him freedon anil n chance for life. The Duke also hened the somad, and instantly guessed its meaning. 'Dog!' he es hiimed to Ewan as he landed, 'where is your prisoner?' mad, without waiting to hear the apology which the terrified vassal began to falter forth, he fired a pistol at his head, whether fatally I know not, innl exelaimed, 'Gentlemen, disperse and pursue the villain. lia hundred guineas for him that secures Rob Roy!'
All became an instant scene of the most lively confinsinn. Rob Roy, disengaged from his bonls, doubtless; by Ewan's slipping the buckle of his lelt, had dropiped off at the hores's tail, and iustantly lived, passing under the belly of the trump. horse which was on his left hand. But as he was obliged to eone to the surface an instant for air, the glimpse of his tartan plaid drew the attention of the troopers, some of whom phungel mato the river with a total disregard to their own safety, rind. ing, reeording to the expression of their country, through proil and stream, sometimes swimming their horses, somstimes lusing them and struggling for their own lives. Others less zenlons, or more prudent, broke off in different direetions, and galline id up and down the banks, to watcin the places at which the fursitive might possibly land. The hallooing, the whooping, the calls for aid at different points, where they saw, or conceived they saw, some vestige of hi:: 'rey wore seeking; the frepnent - port of pistols and cara! , firel at every object which exeited the least suspieion; the sight of so many honsenen riding about, in and out of the river, mul striking with their long broalswords at whatever excited their attention, joined th the vain exertions nsed by their officers to restore order mul regularity; and all this in so wild a scene, and visible only hy the imperfeet twilight of an autmmn evening, made the must extraordinary hubbub I had hitherto wituessed. I was intleed left alone to observe it, for our whole eavalcade had disperseld ini pursuit, or at least to see the event of the search. Inllemel, as I partly suspeeted at the time, ar a afterwards learued with certainty, many of those who secmed most aetive in their attempts to waylay and recover the fugitive, were, in actual truth, least desirons that he shomild be taken, and ouly joined in the ery to increase the general confusion, mul to give Ruh Roy a better opportunity of esemping.

Fswape, indeed, was not difficult for at swimmer so expert as the freelnoter, as soon as he hul ehaded the first lourst of pirrsuit. At one time he was closely prisespl, unil several blows were made which flashed in the water uromul him: the scene much resembling one of the otter-hmits which I hat seen at Osladilistone Ilall, where the anmal is detected by the homods from his being necessitatel to put his nose above the stremm to vent or breathe, while he is emabled to elule then by getting muder water again so soon as he has retieshen himself loy respiration. MaeGregor, however, had a trick 1 onill the utter; for he contrived, when very closely pursuen, to disengrge himself unobserved from his plaid, and sutfier it to flomt down the stream, where in its progress it cuitenly attrueted general attention ; many of the horsemen were thas put unon a false scent, and several shots or stabs were averted from the purty for whom they were designed.
Onee fiurly out of view, the reeovery of the prisoner became almost impossible, since in so many places the river was rmilered inaecessible by the steepuess of its banks, or tho thickets of alders, poplars, and bireh, whieh, overhanging its lauks, prevented the approach of horsemen. Errors and aecidents had also happened amoug the pursiners, whose task the approwehing night ret Sered every moneut more hopeless. Sonne got themselves involved in the eddies of the strean, and repuired the assistance of their companions to save then from drowning. Others, hurt by slants or blows in the confused mictée, implored help, or threatened vengeance, and in one or two instances such aceidents led thetual erife. 'The trmmpets, therefore, sommed the eetreat, minmuei that the commanding oftieer, with whatsoever nuwillinghe had for the present relinumished hopes of the important ${ }^{\text {s mize }}$ which had thus mexpectedly eseaped his grasp. and ihe twopers hegar slowly, reluctantly, and brawling with eneh. $\quad$ they returned, agsin to assume their ranks. I conld darkening as they formed on the sonthern bank of ser, whose murmiurs, long drowned by the londer eries of seful pursuit, were now hearl hoarsely mingling with the detp, disenintented, and "epruechfill vgiees of the disappointed hors - It.
Hitherto I had been as it were a mere of atow, thongh far from an uninterested one, of the singular scene which haul passed. But now I hearl a voice snidilenly exclaim, 'Where is the English stranger I It was he gave Rob Roy the knife ti) cut the belt.'

ROB RCY

'Clanve the jook-pudding to the chafts! ' cried one vire.
'Weize a brace of balls throngh his hmrn-pun!: sail a ssoond.
'Drive three inehes of canld airn into his breaskit!' shounten a third.
And I heard several horses galloping to and fro, with the kind purpose, donbtless, of executing these demmatiations. I was immediately mwakened to the sense of my situation, innl to the certainty that armeel men, having no restraint whatover on their irritated and iullamed passions, would proluably herein by shooting or eutting be down, and afterwarils investigate the justice of the netion. Impressed by this belief, I leapuyl from my horse, and, turuing him loose, plunged into a bushi it alder-trees, where, considering the adnaucing olscurity of the night, I thought there was little chance of my heing discoverend. Had I been near enongh to the Duke to have invoked his personal protection, I wonld have done so; but he laad alrealy commenced his retreat, and I saw no officer on the left bank in the river of authority sufficient to have affiorded protectiom, in case of my surrendering myself. I thought there was no puint of honour which could require, in such circumstanees, an minnecessary exposure of my life. My first idea, when the tumult began to be appeased, and the clatter of the horses' feet was heard less frequently in the immediate vicinty of my hirling. place, was to seek out the Duke's quarters, when ull should lie quiet, and give myself up to him, as a liege subject, who inal nothing to fear from his justice, and a stranger, who had ever: right to expec: protection and hospitality. With this purpu-e I crept ont of my hiding-place and looked around me.
The twilight had now meltei nearly into dark: ass ; fev. none of the troopers were left on my side of the for h, anmi it those who were already across it, I only heard the distall, trample of the horses' feet, and the wailing and prolonsed somid of their trumpets, which rung throngh the woods tu recall stragglers. Here, therefore, I was left in a situation if considerable difficulty. I had no horse, and the deep aul whirling stream of the river, rendered turbid by the late tummitt of which its channel had been the scene, and seening yet more so under the doubtful influenice of an inmperiect moonlight, had no invitugs influence for a pelestrian by no means accustomed to wade rivers, and who had lately seen hursemen weltering in this dangerrus pmasage up to the very
 the side of the rivar on whiel: I theastiont, contld lie nue other than of conchoding the varions fintignes of this day and the preceding night by passing, im: ". "h was now closing in al fresen on the side of a Highlmur '..iil.

After a moment's retlertion I begas to comsider that Pairservice, who had donbtless crosself the river with the other domenties, according to his forwarl anll impertinent chaston of putting himself always mong the foremost, combl not fail to satisfy the Duke, or the competent anthorities, resprecting my rank and : ation ; and that, therefore, my chanater hill not require $:$ : 1, nediate appearance, at the risk of being drowned in the r . , of being mable to trace the march of the suluadron, in case of my renching the other side in safety: on, finally, of being ent down, right or wrong, ly stine straginler, who might think such a piete of gond service a convenient exclise for not sooner rejoining his ranks. I therefore ressolved to mensure my steps buck to the little im where I limi pussed the preceding night. I had nothing to apprelened from Rob Roy. He was now at liberty, and I was certain, in case of my falling in with any of his people, the news of his excape would ensure me protection. I might thus also show that I had no intention to desert Mr. Jarvic in the delicate situation in which he had engagen himself, chietly on my accomut. And lastly, it was only in this quarter thent 1 conld hope to learn tidiugs concerning Rashleigh and m' father's papers, whieh had lieen the original cause of an experlition so franght with perilons aulventure. I therefore abmuloned all thonghts of crossing the Firth that evening ; and, turning my back on the Fords of Frew, began to retrace my steps towaris the little villagre of Alverfioil.
A sharp frost-wind, which make itself heard and felt from tine to time, removed the elomls of mist which might otherwise have slunbered till morning on the valley; "nl, though it conld not totally disperse the elouds of vapom; I threw them in couffased and changefin! nusses, now hovering mond the heals of the montans, now filling, as with a dense annl volnumbons streas: of smoke, the varims deep, gillies where masses of the composite rock or breceia, tumbling in fragments from the cliffs, have rushed to the valles; leaving each behinh its course a rent and torn ravine resembling a deserted watercourse. 'The moon, which was now high, and twinkled wi.h all the vivacity of a frosty atmosphere, silvered the windings of the river and the peaks and precipices which the mist left visible; while her beans scemed, as it were, absorbed by the fleecy whiteness of the mist where it lay thick and condensed, and gave to the more light and vapoury specks which were elsewhere visithe a sort of filniy transparency resembling the lightest veil of silver gauze. Despite the meertainty of my situation, a view su romantic, joined to the active and inspiring influence of the frosty atmosphere, elevated my spirits while it braced my nerves. I felt an inelination to cast care away and bid detiance to danger, and involnintarily whistled, by way of carlence to my steps, which my feeling of the cold led me to aecelerate, and I felt the pulse of existence beat prouder and higher in proportion as I felt confidence in my own strength, courage, and resonrces. I was so much lost in these thonghts, and in the feelings which they excited, that two horsemen came 口р behind me without my hearing their approach, until one was on each side of me, when the left-hand rider, pulling up lis horse, addressed me in the English tongue. 'So ho, friend, whither so late?'
' 'To my supper and bed at Aberfoil,' I replied.
'Are the passes open ?' he inquired, with the same commanding tone of voice.
'I do not know,' I replied, 'I shall learn when I get there; but,' I addel, the fate of Morris recurring to my recollection, 'if yon are an English stranger I advise yon to turn back till daylight; there has been sone disturbance in this neighbonrhood, and I should hesitate to say it is perfectly safe for strangers.'
'The soldiers had the worst, had they not?' was the reply.
'They had indeed; and an officer's party were destroyed or made prisoners.'
'Are you sure of that?' replied the horseman.
'As sure as that I hear yon speak,' I replied. 'I was ath mwilling spectator of the skirmish.'
'Unwilling?' contimed the interrogator. 'Were yon nut engaged in it then?'
'Certainly no,' I replied ; 'I was detained by the king's officer.'
'On what suspicion? and who are you? or what is your name ?' he continued.
'I really do not know, sir,' said I, 'why I should answer so many questions to an unknown strauger. I have told you enough to convince yon that you are going into a dangerous and distracted country. If yon choose to proceed, it is your own affair; but, as I ask you no questions respecting your name and business, you will oblige me by making no inguirics after mine.'
'Mr. Francis Osbaldistone,' said the other rider, in a voice the tones of which thrilled through every nerve of my borly, 'should not whistle his favourite airs when lic wishes to remain mudiscovered.'
And Diana Vernon - for she, wrapped in a horseman's cloak, was the last speaker - whistled in playful mimiery the sceond part of the tune which was on my lips when they came nip.
'Good God!' I exclaimed, like one thunderstruck, 'can it be yon, Miss Vernon, on such a spot, at snch an hour, in such a lawless country, in such
'In such a masculine dress, yon would say. But what wonld you have? The plinosophy of the excellent Corporal Nym is the best after all : things minst be as they may - pauca certa.'
While she was thus speaking I eagerly took advautage of an musually bright glean of moonsline to stndy the appearance of her companion; for it may be easily supposed that, finding Miss Verıon in a place so solitary, engaged in a journcy so dangerous, and under the protection of onc gentleman only, werc circumstances to excite every feeling of jcalonsy as well as surprise. The rider did not speak with the deep inclody of Rashleigh's voice ; his tones were more high and comm anding; lic was taller, moreover, as he sate on liorseback, than that first-rate object of my hate and suspicion. Neither did the stranger's address resemble that of any of my other cousins : it had that indescribable tone and manner by whicl we recognise a man of sense and breeding, even in the first few sentences he ${ }^{5}$ peaks.
'The object of my anxiety seemed desirons to get rid of ny investigation.
'Diana,' he said, in a tone of mingled kindness and anthority, 'give yonr consin his property, and let us not spend time herc.'
Miss Verion had in the neantime takcu out a small case, and, leaning down from her horse towards me, she said, in a tone in which an effort at her usnal guaint lightuess of expression contended with a deeper and more grave tone of sentiment,

ROB ROY

'You see, my dear coz, I was born to be your better angel. Rashleigh has been compelled to yield up his spoil, and hal we reached this same village of Aberfoil last night, as we purpused, I should have fonnd some Highland sylph to lave wafted th you all these representatives of commercial wealth. But there were giants and dragons in the way; and errant-knights and damsels of modern times, bold though they be, must not, its of yore, run into useless danger. Do not you do so either, my dear coz.
'Diana,' said her companion, 'let me once more warn you that the evening waxes late, and we are still distant from unr home.'
'I am coming, sir, I am coming; consider,' she added with a sigh, 'how lately I have been subjected to control ; besides, I have not yet given my cousin the packet, and bid him farevell - for ever. Yes, Frank,' she said, 'for ever I There is a gulf between us - a gulf of absolute perdition; where we go, you must not follow; what we do, you must not share in. Farewell; be happy!'

In the attitude in which she bent from her horse, which was a Highland pony, her face, not perhaps altogether unwillingly, touched mine. She pressed my hand, while the tear that trembled in her eye found its way to my cheek instead of her own. It was a moment never to be forgotten - inexpressibly bitter, yet mixed with a sensation of pleasure so deeply soothing and affecting as at once to unlock all the floorgates of the heart. It was but a moment, however; for, instantly recoveriug from the feeling to which she had involuntarily given way, she intimated to her companion she was ready to attend him, and, putting their horses to a brisk pace, they were soon far distil. from the place where I stood.

Heaven knows, it was not apathy which loaded my frame and my tongue so much that I conld neither return Miss Vernon's half-embrace nor even answer her farcwell. The word, thongh it rose to my tongne, seemed to choke in my throat like the fatal guilty which the delinquent who makes it his plea knows must be followed by the doom of deatlo. 'lhe surprise, the sorrow almost stipificd me. I remained motinnless with the packet in my hand, gazing after them as if endeavouring to count the sparkles which flew from the horses' hoofs. I continued to look after even these had ceased to he visible, and to listen for their footsteps long after the last distant trampling had died in my ears. At length tears rushed to my eyes, glazed as they were by the exertion of straining after what was no longer to be seen. I wiped them mechanically, and almost without being aware that they were flowing, but they came thicker and thicker. I felt the tightening of the throat and breast, the hysterica passio of poor Lear ; and, sittiug down by the wayside, I shed a flood of the first and most bitter tears which had flowed from my eyes since childhood.

CHAPTER XXXIV

Dangle. Egad, I think the interpreter is the harder to bo understond of the two.

IHAD scarce given vent to my feelings in this paroxy:im ere I was ashaned of my weakness. I remembered that I hand been for some time endeavouring to regard Diana Vennun, when her idea intruded itsclf on my remembrance, as a friend, for whose welfare I shculd indeed always be anxious, but with whom I could have little further communication. But the alnost mirepressed tenderness of her namer, joined to the rommee of our sudden meeting where it was so little to have been cxpected, were circumstances which threw me entirely off my guari. I recovered, however, sooner than might have been expected, innl, without giving myself time accurately to examine my motives, I resumed the path on which I had been travelling when overtaken by this strange and unexpected apparition.
'I am not,' was my reflection, 'transgressing her injunctionso pathetically given, since I an but pursuing my own journey hy the only open route. If I have succeeded in recovering my father's property, it still remains incumbent on me to see my Glasgow friend delivered from the situation in which he has involved himself on my account ; besides, what other place of rest can I obtain for the night excepting at the little inm of Aberfoil? They also must stop there, since it is impossible for travcllers on horseback to go farther. Well, then, we shall meet again - meet for the last time perhaps; but I shall see amd hear her; I shall learn who this happy man is who exercises over her the authority of a husband; I shall learn if there remain, in the difficult course in which she seems engaged, any difhculty which my efforts may remove, or aught that I can do to express my gratitude for her generosity - for her disinterested friendship.'

As I reasoned thus with myself, colouring with every plansible pretext whicis occurred to my ingenuity my passionate desire once more to see and converse with my cousin, I was sumbenly hailed by a touch on the slooulder; and the deep voice of a Highlander, who, walking still fasti $r$ than I, though i was proceeding at a smart pace, accosted me with, 'A braw night, Maister Osbaldistone; we have met at the mirk hour beforc now.'

There was no mistaking the tone of MacGregor; he had escaped the pursuit of his cnemies, and was in full retreat to his nwn wilds and to his adlierents. He had also contrived to arim himself, probably at the house of some scerct adlierent, for he had a musket on his slonder and the usual Highland weapons by lis side. 'Io have fomd myself alone with such a character in sueh a sitnation, and at this late hour in the evening, might not have been pleasant to me in any ordinary mool of mind ; for, though habituated to think of Kob Roy in rather a friendly point of view, I will confess frankly that I never heard him speak but that it seemed to thrill my blood. The intonation of the mountaineers gives a habitual deptli and hollowness to the sound of their words, owing to the guttural expression so common in their native language, and they usually spea'k with a good deal of emphasis. 'I'o these national peculiarities Rob Roy added a sort of hard indifforenee of aceent and manver, expressive of a mind neither to be launted nor smrprised nor affected by what passed before him, however dreadful, however sudden, however afflieting. Habitual danger, with unbounded confidence in his own strength and sagacity, had rendered him indifferent to fear; and the lawless and precarious life he led had blunted, though its dangers and errors liad not destroyed, his feelings for others. And it was to be remembered that I had very lately seen the followers of this minn commit a cruel slaughtor on an unarned and suppliant individual.

Yet such was the state of my mind that I welcomed the company of the outlaw leader as a relief to my own overstrained and painful thoughts; and was not without hopes that through his means I might obtain some che of gnidance through the maze in which my fate had involved me. I therefore answered his greeting cordially, and eongratulated him on : late escape in circumstances when escape seemed impossib
'Ay,' he replied, 'there is as much between the craig and the woodie as there is between the eup and the lip. But my peril was less than you may think, being a stranger to this cometry.

Of those that were summoned to take me and to keep me and to retake me again, there was a moiety, as cousin Nicol Jarvie calls it, that hal nae will that I suld be either taen or keepit fast or retaen ; and of t'other moiety there was ae half wils fcared to stir me ; and so I had only like the fourth part of fifty or sixty men to deal withal.'
'And enough too, I shonld think,' replied I.
'I dinna ken that,' said he ; 'but I ken that, turn every illwiller that I had amang them out upon the green before the Clachan of Aberfoil, I wad find them play with broadsword and target, one down and another come on.'
He now inquired into my adventures since we entered his country, and laughed heartily at my account of the battle we hra' in the inn, and at the exploits of the Bailie with the reml. hot poker.
""Let Glasgow flourish!"' he exclaimel. 'Ithe curse of Cromwell on me if I wal hae wished better sport than to sre cousin Nicol Jarvie singe Inverach's plaid like a sheep's heal between a pair of tongs. But my cousin Jarvie,' he alded, nurre gravely, 'has some gentleman's bluid in his veins, although he has be in unhappily bred up to a peaceful and mechanical cratt, which could not but blunt any pretty man's spirit. Yc may estimate the reason why I could not receive you at the Clachan of Aberfoil, as I purposed. They had made a finc hose-nct for me when I was absent twa or three days at Glasgow upon the king's business ; but I think I broke up the league about their lugs : they 'll no be able to hound one clan against another as they hae dune. I hope soon to see the day when a' Hielanduen will stand shouther to shouther. But what chanced next?

I gave him an account of the arrival of Captain Thornton and his party, and the arrest of the Bailie and myself, muler pretext of our being suspicious persons; and upon his nure special inquiry I recollected the officer had mentioned that, besides my name sounding suspicious in his ears, he had orders to secure an old and young person resembling our description. 'Ihis again muverl the outlaw's risibility.
'As man lives by bread,' he said, 'the buzzards have mistaen my friend the Bailie for his Excellcncy, and yon for Diana Vernon. O, the most cgregious night-liowlets!'
'Miss Vernon?' said I, with hesitation, and trembling for the answer, 'dues she still bear that name? She passed lut now, along with a gentleman who seemed to use a style of authority.'

'Ay, ay!' answered Rob, 'she's under lawfu' anthority now ; and fill time, for she was a daft hempic. But she's a mettle quean. It's a pity his Exceelloncy is a thought eldern. Ihe like $a^{\prime}$ yoursell or my son Hamish wad ho mair sortable in pint of years.'
liere, then, was a complete downfill of those castles of cards which my fancy had, in denpite of my reason, so often amused herself with building. Although in truth I lum scarcely any: thing else to expect, since I conld not suppose that Diam conld be travelling in such a comntry, at such an loour, with any hint one who had a legal title to protect her, I lid not feel the blow less severely when it came, and MacGregor's voiee, urging :ne to pursue my story, sounded in my ears witlont conveying biny exact import to my mind.
'You are ill,' he said, at length, after he had spoken twice without receiving an answer ; 'this day's wark has been ower muckle for ane doubtless unused to sic things.'
Thic tone of kindness in which this was spoken recalling we to mysclf, and to the necessities of my sitnation, I contimued my narrative as well as I could. Rob Roy expressed great exultation at the snecessful skimnish in the pass.
'Ilhey ray,' he observed, 'that king's chaff' is better than other folks' coms ; but I think that canna be said o' king's soldiers, if they let themselves be beaten wi' a wheen auld carles that are past fighting, and bairms that are no come till 't, and wives wi' their rocks and distaffs, the very wally-draigles o' the country-side ; and Dougal Gregor, too, wha wad hae thonght there hat been as muckle sense in his tatty pow, that ne'er lad a hetter covering than his ain shaggy hassock of lair ! But say away, though I dread what's to come neist, for my Helen's an incarnate devil when her bluid's up; puir thing, slie has ower minckle reason.'

I observed as much delicacy as I could in commnnicating to him the usage we liad received, but I obviously aw the detail gave him great pain.
'I wad rather than a thonsand merks,' he said, 'that I had been at hane! 'lo misguide strangers, and forbye a' my ain natural consin, that had showed me sic kindness; I wad rather they hal burned half the Lemmox in their folly! But this comes o' trusting women and their bains, that have neither measure nor reason in their lcalings. However, it's a' owing tu that dog of a gauger, wha betrayed me by pretembing a message from your consin Rashleigh, to meet him on the king's atlairs, whitk I thought was very like to be anent Garmehattachin amm a purty of the lennox derhring themselves for King dane Faith, but I kemi I wis ilean leg口iled y aen I hearil the I luke was there; and when they strupped the horse girth ower my arms I might lue jumged what wis liding me; for I kond your kinsman, being, wí parden, it slipgery loen himsell, is probie fin employ those of his nin kilnoy. wish he maym hae herol at the bottom o' the ploy himsell; I thonght the chichl Morris looked devilish gneer when I deternined he should remain: wad or hostage for my safe back-coming. But I ame come lairk, mae thanks to him or them that employed him, and the gumenn is, how the collector lonn is to win, buek himsell. I jumise him it will not he without musom.'
'Morris,' saill I, 'has alrendy puid the last ransom which mortal man cin owe.'
'Ell! What $?$ ' oxclaimed my companion, hastily; ' "hat d'ye say 1 I trust it was in the skimish he was killeal!'
'He was slain in cold blool after the fight was over, Mr. Canpbell.'
'Cold blood ? Danmation!' he said, muttering betwix! his teeth. 'How fell that, sir? Speak out, sir, and do not Mainter or Camplell me; my foot is on my native heath, and my name is Mae Mregor!'

His passions were obvionsly irritated ; but, withont notiong the rudeness of his tone, I gave him a short and distinct acomit of the denth of Morris. He struck the butt of his fill with great vehemence against the gromm, and broke ont, 'l vow to Gool, such a deed might minke one forswear kin, chn, comitry, wife, and bairns! And yet the villain wrought long for it. . Iind what is the difference between wursling below the water wi' it stane abont your neck and wavering in the wind wi' a tether romid it? it 'sibut choking after a', and he drees the down he etthen for me. I conld have wished, thongh, they had rather pinttin a hall throngh him, or a dirk: for the fashon of removins lime will give rise to mony idle clavers. But every wight lias lis weind, and we mann a dee when omr day comes. And narthuly will deny that Helen Maciregor has deep wrongs to avenge',

So saying, he reemed to dismiss the theme altogether firm his minl, and proceeded to impure how I got free from the: party in whose hands he hat seen me.

My story was soon told; annl I added the episode of my having recovered the papers of my father, thongh I dared mot trust my voice to name the name of Diana.
'I was sure ye wad get them,' mail Mne(iregor; 'the letter ye bromght me contaninel his Exeelleney's plensure th that effeet : and me dombt it was my will to have nided in it. Aml Insked ye up into this glen on the very errmal. But it's like his Bixcellency hus forgathered wi' Javhleigh swner thun I expecterl.'
The first purt of this miswer waw whut must firmilly struck me.
'Whas the letter I bromght yom, then, firm thiw persm yous call his lixcellency? Who is he? mul whit is his rank und proper mune?
'I min thinking,' mail Mac(iregon, 'that, since ye dinna ken them already, they camm he o'mokle ronse pinence to yon, mul sae I whall say naething on that noore. Bat weel I wot the letter was froe his nin hmol, or, laving a surt of bosiness of my ain on my hands, being, us ye weel may vere, just as fun. (an fairly mange, I emma suy I wonld he fashed mi! muskle abont the mintter.'
I now recollected the lights seen in tho library, tho cinmmstances which had excited my jealomsy - the for Rashleigh's nurtment; and, almoe all, I recollected that a a retired in orler to write, as I then thomght, the hillet th: ind I whs to have reconrse in ense of the last necessity. Her homs, then, were not spent in solitmle, hat in listening the the mblresses of some ilespente agent of Jucobitienl trashm, who was a secret revident within the mmsion of her mele": Other yomg women have sold themselves for groll, or sulfereal them selves to he selncel from their first love from vanity : $b$, i! Dian hat sacrificed my affections mul her own to purtake the for tumes of some desperate alventurer, to seek the hamso of free hooters throngh midnight leserts, with no better has of is ar fortme than thint mimiory of both which the me a comi. the Stnarts at St. Germuins hal in their power to hestow.
'I will see her,' I suin, internally, 'if it be prsille, more. I will argue with her as a friemb, as a kimsman, an $^{\text {and }}$ the risk she is incarring, and I will facilitate her retren! 1 o France, where she may, with more comfort and propriety, ${ }^{*}$ well is safety, abide the issue of the turmoils which the politis trep:umer to whom she has mited her fite is dunitless busien in putting into motion.
'I conclade, then,' I said to Macdresor, after abont five minutes' silence on both sides, 'that his Eixcellency, since you give me no other name for him, wan residing in Osbaldiatne Gall at the same tilne with mywelf $?^{\prime}$

ROB ROY

'To be sure - to bo surv; ul in the young laly's apmertment, an best reason wns.' 'Illis ratnitous information wiss aldiling gall to bitteruess. 'But fer.;' indled Mnefiregor, 'kenil he was derned there, save Rashleigh mul Sir Hillelimun! ; for you were on.; $G^{\prime}$ the guestion, mill the yomug lads hemen wit enengh to en' the cat froe the cream. But it 's al bra' anld-finshiomed house ; anll what I specially admire is the abmindance o' hole and bores and concenlments: ye conld put twenty or thirty men in ae corner, nurl "family might live a week withnint finding them ont, whilk, me doult, mey on recasion lu' a grecial convenionce. I wish we lud the like o' Owhalilitome Hall on the braen o' Craig lieyston. But we mann gur whils and caves serve the like a us pimir Hiehnid brdies.'
'I suppose his E" ellency, suid I, 'was privy to the first accident which befell

I eould not heln hesitating a moment.
'Ye were going to say Morris,' said Rob Roy, coolly, fin lie was too much accnstomed to deeds of violenee for the mitatim he had at first exprensed to be of long contimance. 'I nsial th laugh heartily at that reik, bitt I 'll hardly hae the heart to du' 't again, sinee the ill-fnur'd aecident at the Laeh. Na, un, his Excellency kend nought o' that ploy; it was a' managed atwren I. Ahleigh and mysell. But the sport that came after, anll Rashleigh's shift o' turning the suspucion aff himsell mpon yin, that he had nae grit favour to frae the beginning ; and then Miss Die, she mann hae us sweep upi n' onr spiders' welwsissilin, and set you out o' the Justice's claws; and then the frightmen! eraven, Morris, that was scared ont o' his seven senses hy srimig the real man when he was charging the imocent stranser: :min the gowk of a clerk, and the drunken carle of a justice - , dun!: ohon! mony a langh that job's gien ane; nud now a hat I can do for the puir devil is to get some messes said fin his soul.'
'May I ask,' said I, 'how Miss Vernon came to have som mich influence over Rushlicigh and his accomplices as to levinuse your projectell plan?'
'Mine? it wass nome of mine. No mint can say I ever laid my burden on other filks' shoulders; it was a Rashinishis doings. But malunbtelly she hanl grent influence wi' us heitith on account of his Excellency's affection, as weel as that she kend far ower mony secrets to be lightlied in a matter o' that kimd. Deil tak him,' he ejaculated, ly way of numming up, 'that gies women either mecret to L cen or power to abonse; fules shonldua lue chupping sticks.
We were now within a guarter of a mile from the village. when three Jlighlanlers, springing unnon us with presented arms, commanded ns t", stand and tell our business. "I'he single worl ' 'iregarach,' in the heep annl commanimes voice of' my compunion, waw answered hy a shout, or rather yell, of juyfinl ruegnition. One, throwing down his fireloek, clayped his lemer so fast round the knees that he was mable to extricate himself, muttering at the same time a torrent of Ciaclic gratulation, which every mow and then rose into a sort of seream of glannesss. 'The two others, after the first howling wis over, set off literally with the speed of deers, contending which should lirst carry to the village, which a strong party of the Madiregors nuw necupied, the joyful news of Rabliny's escape and return. The intelligence exciten such shomits of jubilation that the very hills romg again, and yomng anl ohl, men, women, and ehildren, nithout distinction of sex or age, ceme rumning down the vale to meet us, with all the timultums speed anil chmour of a numutain torrent. When I hearil the rusling noise and yells of this joyful multitule upproneh us, I thought it a fittiug preamtion to remind Machregor that I was a stranger, and nuder his protection. He acourdingly held me fast by the haul while the assemblage erowde! aromand him with such shouts of devoted attachment anl joy at his return as were really affecting; nor did he extend to hiis followers what all filserly sought, the grasp, namely, of his hame, matil he hail made them understand that I was to be ki:aily anil carefinly useel.
'The mandate of the Sultan of Delli eould not have been mure promptly obeyed. luleen, 1 muw sitstained nearly :as much ineonvenience from their well-meat attentions as firmerly from their rudeness. They would harilly allow the friend of their lender to walk mpm his own legs, som earmst were they in afforting ne suppert and inssistance mon the waly : anil ut length, taking alvautage of a slight stmmble which 1 male over a stine, which the press dinl nut permit me: to avoin, they fairly seized npon me and lwie me in their anms iin triumph townards Mr.s. Mac.Alpine's.
On arrival before her lowpitahle wigwan I fomen power and popularity had its inconvenences in the Ifighlands, as every where else ; fur, before MacGregor could be permitted to enter the house where he was to obtain rest and refreshment, he was obliged to relate the story of his eseape at least a dozen times over, as I was told by an offieious old man, who ehose to trims. late it at least as often for my edification, and to whom I wis in policy obliged to seem to pay a decent degree of attention. 'The andience being at length satisfied, gromp after gromp leparted to take their bed upon the heath, or in the neighinmering huts, some eursing the Duke and (Garschattachin, whe lamenting the probable danger of Ewan of Brigglands, incurred by his friendship to MaeGregor, but all agreeng that the escape of Rob Roy himself lost mothing in comparison with the exploit of any mene of their chiefs sinee the days of Dougal Ciar, the founder of his line.
vol. $\mathbf{1 v}-22$

ROR ROY

The friendly ontlaw, now taking me by the arm, condurted me into the interior of the hut. My eyes roved romul its smoky reeesses in quest of Diana and her companion ; lat they were nowhere to be seen, and I felt as if to make inminies might betray some secret motives which were best combeiolol. The only known conntenance upon which my eyes rexten wis that of the Bailie, who, seated on a stool by the fireside, reeeived, with a sort of reserved dignity, the welemnes of liul Roy, the apologies which he made for his indifferent aternmmodation, and his inquiries after his health.
'I am pretty weel, kinsman,' sairl the Bailie, 'indifferemt weel, I thank ye; and for aceommolations, ane camma expert to carry about the Saut Market at his tail, as a snail does his (allu; and I an blythe that ye hae gotten out $o^{\prime}$ the hands $o$ ' your unfreends.'
' Weel, weel, then,' answered Roy, 'what is't ails ye, mim: A's weel that ends weel : the warld will last our day. Cime, take a eup o, bramly; your father the deacon conhl tak anm at an orra time.'
'It might he he might do sae, Rolbin, after fatigne, whillk has been my lot mair ways than ane this day. But,' lor constimed, slowly filling up a little woulen stomp which migh lowl ahout three glasses, 'he was a momerate man of his himicirp, as 1 am mysell. Here's wussing health to ye, Ruhin (a sin : mid your weelfare here and herealter (another taste), and alow to my consin Helen, and to your twa hopefi' lads, of whom mair anom.'
So saying, he drank up the rontents of the cup, with sreat gravity and deliberation, while Mac(iresm winked aside to me, as if in ridicnle of the air of wishom and superior antlonity which the Bailie assmmed towards him in their intereourse, and which he exereised when Roh was at the head of his armed clan in full as great, or a greater, degree than when he was at the Bailie's merey in the tollowth of diasigow. It seemed to me that MacGregor wished me, as a stramger, to melerstand that, if he submitted to the tone which his kinsman assmmed, it was partly ont of deference to the rights of hospitality, but still mure for the jest's sake.

As the Bailie set down his enp he reconnised me, and, giving me a cordial welcome on my retmon, le waived farther commmination with me for the present.
'I will speak to your matters anon; I mann begin, as in reason, wi' those of my kinsman. I presmme, Robin, there's nachonly here will carry anght o' what 1 am gimm to say to the town-conncil or elsewhere to my prejudice or to yours?
'Make yourself easy on that head, consin Nicol,' answered Macdergor ; 'the tae half o' the gillies wima ken what ye say, and the tother winna care; hesides, that I wad stow the thigne ont o' the head o' moy o' them that suld presime to say ower again ony speech held wi' me in their presence.'
'Aweel, consin, sie being the case, amil Mr. ()shaldistone here heing a prondent yonth, and a safe friend, I'se plainly tell ye, ye are breeding up your fanily to gang an ill gate.' 'Then clearing his voice with a preliminary hem, he addressed his kinsman, clecking, as Malvolio propused to do when seated in his state, his faniliar smile with an anstere regard of control.

- Ye ken yoursell ye hand light by the law; and for my ransin Helen, forbye that her reception o' me this blessed day, whilk I exense on aceome of perturbition of mind, was muckle on the north side o' friemdly, I sity - ont-pintting this personal reason of tomplaint - I hate that to say o' your wife -
'Say nothing of her, kinsman,' said Rob, in a errive and stem tone, 'but what is befitting a friend to say and her husband to hear. Of me you are welcome to say your full pleasire.'
'Aweel, aweel,' said the Bailie, somewhat disconcerted, 'wese let that be a pass-over; I lima approve of making mischief in fanilies. But here are your twa soms, Hamish and Robin, whilk signifies, as I im gien to molerstand, James and Robert. I trust ye will eall them sate in fintme; there eomes mae gnde o' Hannishes and Eachines and Domsses, except that they re the names ane aye chanes to see in the indiotments at the westem circuits for cow-lifting, at the instance of Lis Majesty's advocate for his Majesty's interest. Aweel, hut the twa lads, as I was saying, they haena sae muckle is the ordinar gronds, man, of liberal edncation : they dimna ken the very multiplication table itself, whilk is the root of a' nsetfin' knowledge, and they did naething bit langh and fleer at me when I tauld them my mind on their ignorance. It 's my hulief they can neither read, write, nur cipher, if sic a thing conld le believed o' ane's ain connexions in a Clristian land.'

ROB ROY

'If they conld, kinsman,' said MacGreger, with great indifference, 'their learning must have come o' free will, hir whar the deil was I to get them a teacher? Wad ye hate haid "me put on the gate o' your Divinity Hall at Glasgow Collese, "Wanted, a tutur for Rob Roy's bairns"?'
'Na, kinsman,' replied Mr. Jarvie, 'but ye might hae sent the lads whar they could hae learned the fear o' Good and the usages of civilised creatures. They are as igmorant as the kyloes ye used to drive to market, or the very Eisglish churis that ye sauld them to, and can do naething whatever to purpose.'
'Uunph!'answered Rob; 'Hamish can bring domn a blackcock when he's on the wing wi' a single bullet, and Roh can drive a dirk through a twa-inch board.'
'Sae muekle the waur for them, cousin - sae muckle the waur for them baith:' answered the Glasgow merehant in a tone of great decision ; 'an they ken naething hetter than that they had better no ken that neither. T'ell me yoursell, Ruh, what has a' this cutting, and stabling, and slowting, and driving of dirks, whether throngh limanan Hesh or fir deals, dume for yoursell? and werena ye a happier man at the tail i, your nowt-bestial, when ye were in m honest calling, than ever ye hae heen sinee, at the head o' your Hicland kernes an!! gallyglasses?'

I observed that MacGregor, while his well-meaning kinsman spoke to him in this mamer, turned and writhed his bonly like a man who indeed suffers pain, hat is determined no grown haill eseape his lips; and I longed for an opportunity to intervipt the well-menut, hut, as it was obvious to me, quite mistaken strain in which Jarvie addressed this extraordinary person. 'The dialogne, however, came to an end withont my interference.
'And sae,' said the Bailie, 'I hae been thinking, Rol, that, as it may he ye are ower deep in the black book to win a pardon, and ower anld to mend yoursell, that it wad he a pity to bring up twa hopefu' lads to sie a godless trade as your ain, and I wad blythely tak them for prentices at the loom, as I began mysell and nyy father the deacon afore me, though, praise to the Giver: I only trade now as wholesale dealer. And and '
He saw a storm gathering on Rob's brow, which probably incluced him to throw in, as a sweetener of an obnoxions proposition, what he had reserved to crown his own gencrosity, lad it been embraced as an acceptable onc. 'And, Robin, land, ye needua look sae glim, for I'll pay the prentice-fee, and never plague ye for the thousand morks neither.'
'Ceade millia diamel - hmodred thonsmind devils:' exclaimed Rob, rising and striding through the hut. 'My sons weavers: Willia molligheart! but I wad see every loom in Glasgow, haun, traddles, and shuttles, burnt in hell fire sooner:'

With some difficulty I made the Bailie, who was preparing a reply, comprehend the risk and impropriety of pressing our lowst on this topic, and in a minute he recovered, or reassumed, his serenity of temper.
'But ye mean weel - ye mean weel,' said he: 'so gie me your land, Nicol, and if ever I put my sons apprentice I will gie you the refusal o' them. And, as you say, there's the thonsand inerks to be settled between us. Here, Fachin Mac.Inalcister, bring me my sporran.'
The person he addressed, a tall, strong momintaineer, who seenel to act as MacGregor's lieutenant, hronght from some place of sifety a large leathern pouch, such as Highlanders of rank wear before them when in full dress, made of the skin of the sea otter, richly garnished with silver nrnaments and stinds.
'I advise no man to attempt opening this sporran till he has my scerct,' said Rob Roy ; and then twisting one button in one direction, and another in another, pulling one stud upward, and presing another downward, the month of the purse, which was Inmul with massive silver-plate, opened and gave admittance to his hand. He made me remark, as if to break short the sulhiject on which Bailie Jarvic had spoken, that a suall steel pistol was concealed within the ursse, the trigger of which was comected with the moming, and made part of the machinery, si) that the wcapon would certainly be dischargel, and in all probalility its combents lodged in the person of any one who, being maequainted with the secret, should tamper with the lock which secured his treasurc. 'This,' said he, touching the pistol - 'this is the keeper of my privy purse.'

The simplicity of the contrivance to secure a furred pouch, whieh could have been ripped open without any attempi is the spring, reminded ne of the verses in the Ollyssery, where Ulysses, in a yet ruder are, is content to secure his pmpretiy by casting a curious and involved complication of curdare around the sea-chest in which it was deposited.

The Bailie put on his spectacles to examine the mechanisin, and when he had done, returned it with a smile antl a ioish, observing, 'Ah! Rob, had ither folks' purses been ats weel gnarded, I doubt if your sporran wad hae heen as weel fillen aw it kythes to be by the weight.'
'Never mind, kinsman,' said Rob, laughing, 'it will aye open for a frienl's necessity or to pay a just due; and here, he added, pulling out a roulean of gold - 'here is your ten humitrend merks; count them and see that yon are full and justly pain!.
Mr. Jarvie took the money in silence, and, weighing it in his hand for an instant, laid it on the table, and replied, 'Rols, I canna tak it, I downa intromit with it; there can nate gule come $o$ 't. I hae seen ower weel the day what sort of a site your gowd is made in : ill-wot gear ne'er prospered; and, twlo plain wi', you, I winna meldclle wi't ; it looks as there might be bluid on't.'
'Troutsho!' said the outlaw, affecting an indifference which, perhaps, he did not altogether feel, 'it's gude French ginwl, and ne'er was in Scotchman's pouch befree mine ; look at them, man, they are a' louis d'ors, bright and bonnie as the day they were coinel.'
'The waur, the waur-just sae muckle the waur, Ruhin,' replied the Bailie, averting lis eyes from the money, themerh, like Cosar on the Lupercal, his fingers seemed to itch for it. 'Rebellion is waur than witehcraft or robbery either ; there's gospel warrant for 't.'
'Never mind the warrant, kinsman,' said the freebonter; 'you come ly the gowd honestly, and in paynent of a just; debt. It came from the one king, you may gie it to the outhr, if ye like; and it will just serve for a weakening of the enemu, and in the point where puir King James is weakest too: fir, God knows, he has hands and hearts eneugh, but I doubt lie wants the siller.'
'He 'll no get mony Hielanders then, Robin,' said Mr. Jarvie. as, again replacing his spectacles on his nose, he mudid the ronleau and legan to connt its, contents.
'Nor Lowlanders neither,' said Mac(Aregor, arehing his eve brow, and, as he louked at me, directing a glance tuwards. Mr Jarvie, who, all unconseions of the ridiente, weighed each piece with habitual sernpulosity; mud luving toll twice over the snm, which anomuted to the diseharge of his debt, principal and interest, he returned three pieces to buy his kinswommin a nown, as he expressed himself, and a brace more for the twa hairns, as he called them, requesting they might buy anything they liked with them except gunpowider. The Ihighlander stared at his kinsman's unexpected generosity, luit courteonsly aceepted his gift, which he deposited for the time in his wellserirred poncl.

The Bailie next prodnced the original limul for the deht, on the back of which he had written a formal discharge, which, inaving subscribed himself, he requested me to sign as a witness. I hid so, and Bailie Jarvie was looking anxionsly aromed fir another, the Scottish law requiring the subseriptim of two wituesses to validate either a bond or acequittance. 'You will hardly find a man that ean write save onselves: within these three miles,' said Rob, 'but I'll set the the matter as easily'; anl, taking the paper from before his kinsman, he threw it in the fire. Bailie Jarvie stared in his turn, but his kinsman continued, 'I'hat's a Hieland settlement of aceomits; the time might come, consin, were I to keep a' these charges and discharges, that friends might be bronght into trouble for having dealt with me.'

The Bailie attempted no eeply to this argment, and our supper now appeared in a style of abundance, and even delicacy, which, for the phace, might he comsidered as extraordinary. The greater part of the provicons were coll, intimating they had been prepared at some distance; and there were some bottles of good French wine to relish pasties of various sorts of game, as well as other dishes. I remarked that MacGregor, while doing the homoms of the table with great and anxions hospitality, prayed ns to excuse the circonnstance that some particuliar dish or pasty had been infriuged on before it was presented to nis. 'You must knw,' sail he to Mr. Jiarvie, but withont looking towards me, 'you are met the ouly guests this night in the MacGregor's country, whilk, doubtless, ye will believe, since my wife and the twa lads would otherwise have been maist ready to attend you, as weel beseems them.'

Bailie Jarvie looked as if he felt glal at any cireminstance which oceasioned their absence : and I shonld hatre been entirely of his opinion had it not been that the mitlaw's apmongy seemed to imply they were in attendane on Diana and her companim, whom even in my thoughts I could not bear to designate as her husband.

While the unpleasant ideas arising from this suggention counteracted the goord effects of appetite, welcome, and winal cheer, I remarked that Rob Roy's attention had extended itrelf to providing us better bedding than we had enjoyed the night before. 'Two of the least fragile of the bedstemans which stinenl by the wall of the luit had been stuffed with heath, then in full flower, so artifieially arranged that the Howers, heing uppermost, afforded a inattress at once elastie and fragrant. Cloaks, and sueh hedding as conld be collected, stretcleml over this vegetable eouch, made it both soft and warm. 'The Bailie seemed exhausted by fatigue. I resolved to ndjum my communicatio:. him until next morning; and therefire suffered him to betake himself to bed so soon as he hail finished a plentiful supper. Though tired and harassed, I did luit myself feel the same disposition to sleep, but rather a restens and feverish anxiety, which led to some farther discuurse betwixt me and MacGregor.

CHAP'TER XXXV

Abstract

A hopeless darkness settles o'er my fate; I've suen the last look of her heavenly eyes, I 've heard the last sount of her blessed voice, I've seen her fair form from my sight depart: My doom is closed.

Count Basit.

IKEN not what to make of you, Mr. Osbaldistone,' said MacGregor, as he pmshed the flask towards me. 'Yon eat not, you show no wish for rest; and yet you drink not, though that flusk of Bourdeanx might have come out of Sir Hildebrand's ain cellar. Had yon been always as abstinent, yon would have eseaped the deadly hatred of your cousin Rashleigh.'
'IIad I been always prurlent,' said I, hhshing at the scene he recalled to my recollection, 'I shonld have escaped a worse evil - the reproach of my own conscience.'

MacGregor cast a keen and somewhat fierce glanee on me, as if to read whether the reproof, which he evidently felt, had been intentionally conveyed. He saw that I was thinking of myself, not of him, and tumed his face towards the fire with a deep sigh. I followed his example, and each remained for a few minutes wrapt in his own painful reverie. All in the hut were now asleep, or at least silent, excepting ourselves.

MacGregor first broke silence, in the tone of one who takes up his determination to enter on a painful snbject. 'My consin Nicol Jarvie means well,' he said, 'but he presses wwer hard on the temper and situation of a man like me, consillering what I have been - what I have been forced to become - and, above all, that which has forced me to beeome what I am.'

He paused ; and, thongh feeling the delicate nature of the discussion in which the conversation was likely to engage me, I conld not help replying, that I did not doubt his present sitmation had much which must be most mpleasant to his feelings. 'I should be happy to learn,' I added, 'that there is an honourable chance of your escaping from it.'

ROB ROY

'You speak like n boy,' returned MacGregor, in an low twie that growled like distant thmeder - 'like a lay, who thinks the auld gnarled oak can be twisted ns easily as the joung sap ling. Can I forget that I have been branded as an ontlaw, stignaltised as a traitor, n price set on my head as if I han leen a wolf; my family treated as the dam and culs of the hill finx, whom all may toment, vilify, degrade, and insilt ; the very name whieh came to me from a long and noble line of martial ancestors denounced, as if it were a spell to combure me the devil with?'

As he went on in this mamer, I conld phanly see that, ly the enumeration of his wrongs, he was lashnig himself up intin a rage, in order to justify in his own eyes the errors they hand led himin into. In this he perfectly succeeded ; his light wrey: eyes contracting alternately and dilating their pmpils, mutil they seemed actually to Hash with Hame, while he thru-t furward and drew hack his foot, grasped the hilt of his tlirk, extended his arm, clencled his fist, and finally rove from liss seat.
'And they shall find,' le saild, in the same muttered but dery' tone of stifled passion, 'that the name they have dared to pro. scribe - that the mme of Mac(Gregor -- is a spell to raise the wild devil withal. They shall hear of my vengeance that wiml ${ }^{1}$ scom to listen to the story of my wrongs. 'The miserable Hish land drover, bankript, barefooted, stripped of all, dishomumrol and hunted down, hecanse the avarice of others grasied at more than that poor all conld pay, shall burst on them in in awful change. They that scoffed at the grovelling worm ant trode upon him may cry and howl when they see the stoup of the flying and fiery-mouthed drugon. But why do 1 speak of all this ?' he snid, sitting down again, and in a calner tmee. 'Only ye may opine it frets my patience, Mr. Oshaldistonte. th be hunted like an otter, or a sealgh, or a salmon minn the shallows, and that by my very friends and neighbours ; annl th have as many sword-cuts made, and pistols flashed at me, al 1 had this day in the ford of Avondow wonld try a saint's temper, much more a Highlander's, who are not fanmons for that sule gift, as ye may late learl, Mr. Osbaldistone. But ae thin! bides wi' me o' what Nicol siid. I'm vexed for the hairns: I in vexed when I think o' Hanish and Robert living their fither's life.' And, yielding to despondence on accomit of his sums which he felt not upm his own, the father rested his hearl upon his hand.
I was much affectel, Will. All my' life hong I have heen more melted by the listress muler which a strong, prome, and powerful mind is "munelled to give way than by the more easily exnited sorrows of softer lispusitions. I'he desire of ailing him rished strongly on my minl, mot withstanling the appurent diftieulty, and even inumsiihility, of the task.
'We lave extensive commexims ahroml,' said I ; 'might not your sous, with sume assistance - mind they are well entitled to what my father's house can give - find an homourable resomre in forci;n service ?'

I believe ny conntennme showed signs of sincere emotion; hut my companion, taking we ly the hann, as I was going to speak farther, said, 'I thank - I thank ye; hut let ns say me nair o' this. I linl not think the eye of man womlal arain lave ween a tear on Mac(iveror's eychash.' He dashed the moisture from his long grey eyelash nom shaggy red eyehrow with the hack of his hatid. 'To-morrow mominge', he said, 'we 'll talk of this, and we will talk, too, of your aftairs ; for we are early starters in the dawn, even when we have the luck to have good bels to sleep in. Will ye mot pledge me in a grace cup?' I deelined the invitation.
"Ihen, by the soul of St. Maronoch ! I must pledge myself,' and he poured ont and swallowed at least half a part of wine.

I laid myself down to repuse, revolving to delay my own inquiries mutil his mind shonll he in a mure emmposed state. Indeed, so much had this singular man pussessed himself of my imagination, that I felt it impossible to avoid watching him for some minutes after I had thung myself om my heath mattress to seeming rest. He walked np and down the hut, crossed himself from time to time, muttering wer some Iatin prayer of the Catholic Church; then wrupped himself in his plaid, with his naked sword on one side and his pistol on the other, su disposing the fohls of his mantle that he couhd start up at a moment's warning, with a weapon in either hand rearly fin instant eombat. In a few minutes his heavy breathing anomued that he was fast aslecp. Overpowered by fatione, and stmmed by the varions unexpected and extraordinary scenes of the day, I, in my turn, was som overpowered by a slmmber deep and overwhelning, from which, notwithstanling every canse for watchfulness, I did not awake until the next morning.

When I opened my eyes nuld recollected my sitmation, I fonnd that Maciregor had alremly left the hint. I awakinowd the Bailic, who, wfer many a mort and grom, mid some hrasy complaints of the soreness of his bones, in consequence of the unwonted exertions of the precerting day, wan at length able the comprehend the joyful intelligence that the assets carried , if by Rashleigh Osbonldistone had leen wafely recoverel. 'The insstant he moderstnod my meaning he furgot all his grievanres, and, bustling np in a great himry, proeceded to compare the rintents of the preket, which I purt into his hamds, with Mr. Ownis memoranchmes, mintering as he went onn, 'Right, right, the real thing. Buillie and Whittington - where's Buillie mend Whittington 1- seven hmodred, six, and eight - exaet to a fraction. Pollock and Peelman - twenty-eight, seven - exact. I rainel le blest I (irub and Grinder-letter men camut he-three humired and seventy. Gliblad-twenty; I donht (ililhanl's ganging. Slipprytongue - Slipprytongue's gaen; but they are silua smins - $\mathrm{s}: 2 \mathrm{ar}$ sums. 'The rest's a' right. Praise be hlent : we have got the stuff, and may leave this dolefnl conntry. I haill never think on Loch Ard, but the thought will gar me grew again.'
'I anm surry, cousin,' snid Mac(iregor, who entered the hut during the last observation, 'I have not been altogether in the circmmstances to make your reception sic as I conld have desired; natheless, if you would condescend to visit my $l^{\prime \prime \prime}$ ir dwelling $\qquad$ ,
'Muckle obliged, muekle obligen,', answered Mr. Jarvie, very hastily. 'But we mann he ganging - we mam be jogging, Nr. Osballistone and me; business camaa wait.'
'Aweel, kinsman,' replied the Highlamer, 'ye ken umr fashion : foster the guest that comes, further him that mam gang. But ye camnot return ly Drymen; I must set ye on Loch Lomond, and boat ye down to the Ferry o' Balloch, inn! send your nags romid to meet ye there. It's a maxim of a wise man never to return by the same road he came, proviting another 's free to him.'
'Ay, ay, Rob,' sail the Bailie, 'that's ane $n$ ' the maximis se learned when ye were a drover ; ye carelna to face the temant. where your heasts had been taking a rug of their mumblam! grass in the bye-ganging ; and I dombt your roald's wanr markel now than it was then.'
'The mair need not to travel it ower often, kinsman,' replima Rob; 'hut I'se senul romid your nags to the ferry wi' lhensal Gregor, wha is converted for that purpose into the Bailie's mim.
coming - not, as ye may believe, from Aherfoil or Rob Roy's comntry, but on a yuiet jnunt from Stirling. See, here he is.'
'I wadua line kend the erenture,' maid Mr. Jarvie; nor indeed was it cany to recognise the wild Highhander when ho appenred before the dour of the cottuge, attired in a hat, periwis, and ridiug cont which had once called Anilrew Fairservies minster, ant monuted on the Bailie's horse, and leating mine. He receival his hast oriders from his manter to avoid certain places where he might be exposed to suspieion, to collect what intelligenee he conld in the comrse of his journey, and (1) awnit our coming at an appointed phace near the Ferry of Ballucel.
It the same time MacGregor invited ns to aceompany him "pmon own roud, assuring ins that we must needessurily march a few miles before breakfast, and revommending a irmin of hranuly as a proper introdnetion to the jonrney, in which he waspletged by the Bailie, who promonneed it 'an minwful anil perilons habit to begin the chay wi' spiritnons liquors, except to defend the stomach, whilk was a temder part, ngainst tho morning mist ; in whilk ense his father the deacon had recommemled a dram by preeept anil example.'
'Very true, kinsman,' replied luhl ; for which reason we, who are Children of the Mist, have a right to drink brandy from muming till night.'
The Bailie, thus refresherd, was momuted on a small Highland pmy; mother was offered for my use, which, however, I declined, and we resumed, muder very different guidmice and anspices, our journey of the preceding dhy.
Our escort eonsisted of MacGregor and five or six of the handsonest, best armed, and nost athletic momitaincers of his lanul, and whom he had ginerally in immedinte attendance "!win his own persoln.
When we approached the pass, the seene of the skirmish of the preceding day, and of the still more direful deed whieh followed it, NueGregor hastened to spenk, as if it were rather to what he knew must be neeessarily passing in my mind than ti) anything I had said; he spoke, in short, to my thoughts, and not to my words.
'You must think harilly of ns, Mr. Osbaldistone, and it is not matural that it should be otherwise. But remember, at least, we have not been mprovoked: we are a rude and an isnorant, and it may be a vident and passionate, but we are not a cruel, people ; the land might be at peace and in law for nis, did they allow un to enjoy the blessings of peacefal law. But wo have heell a pervecuted generation.
'And perseention,' suid the Bailie, 'maketh wise men man!.

- What must it do then to men like nes, living nes our finthers dida a thounand yenrs sinco, and jusseswing senree mure light, than thoy diel? Can wo view their bluidy edicten ngain-t no, their hanging, hemding, houndling, mud hunting down nun murient and honourable nume, ns deserving better trentment thun that which enemies give to enemies? Here I stand, lave hern in twenty frays, and never hurt mann but when I was in het hhin!: and yet they wad betruy me and hang me like a masterlew dong. at the gate of ouy grent man that has mu ill will at me.'
I replied, 'that the proseription of his mme mul finmily sounded in Euglish ears nes a very ernel mul urbitrury law': and having thus far soothed him, I resmend my propowitions of obtaining military employment for himself, if he chose it, annl his sons in foreign purts. MacGregor show me very corvlially by the hand, and detaining me, so as to permit Mr. Jarvie th precerle ns, a manenvere for which the marrowness of the mand served as an excuse, he said to me, 'Yon ure a kind-heartend innl an honourable youth, and understand, donbtless, that whilh is due to the feelings of a minn of honomr. But the henther that I have trod upon when living mast bloom ower me when ! am dead; my heart would sink, anil my nrm would shrink atml wither like fern in the frost, were I to lose sight of my native hills ; nor lins the world a scene that would console me fir the loss of the rocks mid cains, wild ns they are, that yon see around us. And Helen - what wonld leecome of her were 1 1" leave her the subject of new insult nul at:ocity ? or how muld she bear to be removed from these seenes where the remem. brance of her wrongs is aye sweetened by the reeollectinn if her revenge? I was mice so lard put at by my great cuenus, as I may well ca' him, that I was forced e'en to gie way tor the tide, and removed myself :und my people anm fimily from :"mr dwellings in our mative land, and to with haw for a time into MacCallum More's country: and Helen made a lament on mir departure as weel as Mackimmon ${ }^{1}$ himsell comlid hae fiamed it, and so piteonsly sull and watesime that omr hearts annaind broke ns we sate and listened to her: it was like the wailings of one that monrus for the mither that hore him, the thims came down the rongh fites of our gillies as they hearkenel; and I wad not have the same touch of heartbreak again -- In',

[^45]not to have all the lands that ever were owned by Mac(ireror.'
'But your mons,' I suid, 'they are at the age when your comintrymen have usimally no ahjeetion to see the worh?'
'And I whould lee centent,' he replies, 'that thery pimshend their fortune in the lirench or spminh serviee, as is the wint of Senttish cavaliers of hommer, anil hast nighot your phan seemend fensible enongh. But I hae seen his lixrellengy this morning hefire ye were up.'
 with auxiety.
' Nearer than ye thought,' was Mac(iregur's reply: 'Imt he seemed rather in some shape to jalonse your speaking to the yomug leddy, and su you see -

- There was no crecasion for jealonsy,' I amswered, with some hanghtiness ; 'I shmuld not have intrided on his privary.'
- But ye must nut he offended, in hok out from anumig yomr curls, then, like a wild-eat out of an ivy-ton, fir ge are to mulerstanil that he wishes nust sincere weel tol youl, anil has provel it. And it's partly that whilk has set the heather on fire ecen now.'
'Henther on fire ?' said I. 'I do not mulerstand you.'
- Why,' resmued Mac(iregor, 'ye ken weel enengh that women and gear are at the hotton of a' the miselief in this warld. I hae been misolonbting yomr emsin Rashleigh since ever he saw that he wasma to get Die Vermon fir his marrow, anid I think he took gruige at his Excelleney mainly on that acemut. But then came the splore abomt the survendering your papers; and we hae now grode evilence that, sate sum as he was compelled to yieh them up, he vale pmast to Stirling and tanld the government all, and mair than all, that wan gimm donsely on mange us hill-filk: mul, dombitless, that was the way that the conntry was laid to take his lixcellenry and the ledity, and to make sis an mexpected maid on me. And I hate as little dombe that the perer heevil Morris, whom he romla gar believe ony thing, was egred on hy him and sme of the hawlaml gentry to trepan me in the sate he tried to ins. But if hashleigh Oshaldistone were haith the lat : and hest of his name. annl grauting that he and I ever furgsather assain, the fiem, wn down my weasand with a bare hande at his loclt if we part heture my dirk and his hest bluid are weel armpainted theogither:'
He promomed the hast threat with an minnus from, and the appropriate gesture of his hamd unom his dagser.

KOB ROY

'I should ahnost rejoice at what has happened, said I, 'eonld I hope that Rashleigh's treachery might prove the mems of preventing the explosion of the rash and desperate intrignes in which I have long suspected him to be n prime agent.'
'Trow ye na that,' suid] Rob Roy; 'traitor's word never yet hurt honest canse. He was ower deep in our secrets, that is trie ; and harl it not heen so, Stirling and Edlinhorgh Castles wonld have been baith in our hander by this time, or brietly hereafter, whilk is now scarce to bemed fior. But there are ower mony engaged, and far owe sinle a ransi, o be gien 川, for the breath of in traitor's talf. "ulal that, wili be seen annd heard of ere it be lang. And so, a : I wime atont to say, the best of my thmaks to yon for your offe, aneni siv sons, whilk last night I hard some thoughts to have embraced in their behalf. But I see that this villain's treason will convince onr great folks that they must instantly draw to a heal, aud make a blow for it, or be taen in their houses, coupled up like homms, and driven up to London like the honest noblemen and gentlemen in the year seventeen hmedred and seven. Civil war is like a cockatrice; we have sitten loatching the egg that held it for ten years, and might hae sitten on for ten years mair, when in comes Rashleigh and chips the shell, and out hangs the wonder amang ns, and cries to fire and sword. Now in sic a matter I 'll hae need o' a' the hands I can mak; and, nae disparagement to the Kings of France and Spain, whom I wish very weel to, King Jancs is as gude a man as ony o' them, and has the best right to Hamish and Rob, being his natural. born subjeets.'

I easily comprehended that these words boded a general national convulsion ; and, as it wonld have been alike nseless and dangerous to have combated the political opinions of my gnide at such a place and moment, I contented myself with regretting the promiseuons scene of eonfusion and distress likely to arise from any general exertion in favour of the exiled royal family.
'Let it come, man - let it come,' answered Maefregor ; 'yo never saw dull weather clear without a shower; and if the world is turned mpside down, why, honest men have the better ehance to cut bread out of it.'

I again attempted to hring him back to the subjeet of Diana; but, although on most oceasions and subjects he nsed a freerlom of speech which I hal no great delight in listening to, yet upon that alone, which was most interesting to me, he kept a degree of scrupulons reserve, and contented himself with intimating 'that he hoped the leddy would be soom in a quieter comitry than this was like to lee for one while.' I was ahliged to be content with this answer, and to proceed in the hope that aceident might, as on a former occusiom, stannd my friend, and allow me at least the sand gratification of bidding farewell to the object who had oeenpied such a share of my affections, so much beyond even what I had surposed till I was athunt to be separated from her for ever.
We pursued the margin of the lake for ahout six Euglish miles, through a devions and beautifully variegated path, until we attained a sort of Highland farm or assembly of hamlets, near the head of that fine sheet of water called, if 1 mistakie mot, Leeliart, or some such name. Here a momerons party of Matcliregor's men were stationed in order to receive ns. The taste as well as the elonnence of tribes in a savage, or, to speak more properly, in a rude state, is nisually just becense it is mufettered by system and affectation ; and of this I hand an example in the choice these mountaineers hand made of a place to receive their guests. It has been said that a British monareh would judge well to receive the embassy of a rival power in the caltin of a man-of-war ; and a Iighland leader acted with some propriety in choosing a sitnation where the natural objects of graulenr proper to his comintry wight have the full effeet on the mind of his guests.
We ascendel abont two lumidred yards from the shores of the lake, guided by a brawling bronk, and left on the right hand four or five Highlaud huts, with patehes of arable land around them, so small as to show that they must have been worked with the spade rather than the plough, cut as it were ont of the surrounding copsewond, and waving with erops of barley and oats. Above this limited space the hill becane more steep; and on its edge we descried the glittering arms and waving drapery of ahout fifty of MacGregor's followers. They were stationed on a spot the recollection of which yet strikes me with admination. 'The brook, hurling its waters duwnwards from the monntain, hand in this spot encountered a harrier rock, over which it had made its way hy two distinet leals. The first fall, across which a magnificent old oak, slanting out from the farther hank, partly extended itself as if to shroud the dusky strean of the cascade, might be ahout twelve feet high ; the broken waters were received in a beantiful stone hatin, almost as regular as if hewn by a senlptor ; and after vir. 1 r-23 wheeling around its flinty margin, they made a secould pre. cipitous dash through a dark and narrow chasim, at least lifty feet in depth, and from thenee in a hurried, but comparatively a more gentle course, escaped to join the lake.

ROB ROY

With the natural taste which belongs to mountanneers, ilnd especially to the Seottiol Highlanders, whove feelings. I lave observed are often allied with the ronamitic and puetical, liot, Roy's wife and followers had prepared our morning repast in a stene well caleulated to impress strangers with some feelings of awe. They are also naturally a grave and proud people, ant, however rude in our estimation, carry their ideas of form :mil politeness to an exeess that would inpear overstrained, exrept from the demonstration of superior foree whiel accompanies the display of it ; for it must be granted that the air of punctilinus deference and rigid etiquette which would seem ridiculnus in an ordinary peasant, has, like the salute of a corris de yurile, it propriety when tendered by a Highlander completely anneel. There was, aceordingly, a good deal of formality in our approach and reeeption.
The Highlanders, who had been dispersed on the side of the hill, drew themselves together when we came in view, illul, standing firm and motionless, appeared in close column helinid three figures, whom I soon recognised to be Helen Mactirestror and her two sons. MaeGregor himself arranged his attendiuts in the rear, and, requesting Mr. Jarvie to dismount where the ascent became steep, advanced slowly, marshalling uss forwainl at the head of the troop. As we advanced we heard the wild notes of the bagpipes, whieh lost their matural discord firmm being mingled with the da? we came close the wife of N Her dress was studiously ar ound of the cascade. When or came forward to meet ns. than it had been on the of in a more feminine tiate the same lofty, foldad loy fonbending, and resolute character ; and as she foned nyy friend the Bailie in an mexpected and apparently unwelcome embrace, I could perceive, by the agitation of his wig, his back, and the calves of his legs, that he felt much like to one who feels himself suddenly in the gripe of a she-hear, without being able to distinguish whether the animal is in kindness or in wrath.
'Kinsman,' she said, 'you are weleome; and yom tme, stranger,' she added, releasim? my alarmed compuim, who instinetively drew back and : thed his wig, and addrewing herself to me - 'you also are w deome. You came,' she addeni,
'to our unhappy eomutry when our bloods were chafed and our hands were red. Lisuse the rudeness that gave yon a rough welcome, and lay it upon the evil times, and not upon ns.' All this was said with the mamers of a princess, and in the tone and style of a court. Nor wass there the least tincture of that vulgarity which we naturally attach to the Lowland Senttish. There was a strong provinial accentuation, but otherwise the langnage rendered by Helen MasGremor ont of the native and poetieal Gaelic into English, which she had aequired as we do learned tongnes, but had probably never heard applicd to the mean purposes of ordinary life, was graceful, flowing, and deelamatory. Her husband, who had in his time played many parts, nsed a mueh less elevated and emphatie dialeet ; but even his language rose in purity of expression, as yon may have remarked, if I have been accurate in recording it, when the affairs which he disenssed were of an as tating and important nature ; and it appears to me in lis ease, and in that of some other Hightanders whom I inave known, that when familiar and facetions they nsed the Lowland Scottish dialeet, when serious and impassioned their thoughts arranged themselves in the idiom of their native langnage ; and in the latter case, as they uttered the correspondung ideas in English, the expressions sommed wild, elevated, and poctieal. In fact the lauruage of passion is almost always pure as well as vehement, and it is no uncommon thing to hear a Scotehman, when overwhelmed by a comentryman with a tone of bitter and fluent nphmaiding, reply by way, of taunt to his adversary, 'You have groten to your English.'
Be this as it may, the wife of MacGregor invited us to a refreshment spread out on the gratss, which abounded with all the good things their mountans conld offer, bint was clonded by the dark and undisturbed gravity which sat on the brow of our hostess, as well as by our deep and anxious recoltection of ${ }^{\prime}$ what had taken place on the preceding day. It was in vain that the leader exerted himself to excite mirth. A chill homg over our minuls as if the feast had been funcreal ; and every bosom felt light when it was ended.
'Adien, eonsin,' she said to Mr. Jarvie, as we rose from the entertainmeut ; 'the best wish Helen MacGregor can give to a friend is, that he may see her no more.'
The Bailie struggled to answer, probably with some commonluce maxim of morality ; lont the calni and melancholy stermess of her countenance bore down and disenncerted the mechanical and formal importance of the magistrate. coughed, hemmed, bowed, and was silent. ' H agistrate. He she said, 'I have a token from one whom you can you, stranmer,'
'Helen,' interrupted MacGregor, in a loud and stern wince, 'what means this? have yon forgotten the charge?'
'MacGregor,' she replied, 'I have forgotten nonght that is fitting for me to remember. It is $t$ such hands as there,' and she stretched forth her long, sinewy, and bare arm, 'that are fitting to convey love-tokens, were the gift comnected with aught but misery. Young man,' she said, presenting me with a ring, which I well remenbered as one of the few ornaments that Miss Vernon sometimes wore, 'this comes from one winm yon will never see more. If it is a joyless token, it is well fitted to pass through the hands of one to whom joy can never be known. Her last words were - "Let him forget me fur 'And can she,' I said, almost without being conscious that I spoke, 'suppose that is possible ?'
'All may be forgotten,' said the extraordinary female who addressed me - 'all, but the sense of dishonour and the devire of vengeance.'
'Seid suas !' cried the MacGregor, stamping with impatiente. The bagpipes sounded, and with their thrilling and jarring tones cut short our conference. Our leave of our hostess wits taken by silent gestures; and we resumed our journey, with :in additional proof on my part that I was beloved by Lianie :und was separated from her for ever.

$\square$  6\% - - -

CHAPTER XXXVI

Farewell to the land where the clonds love to rest, Like the shrond of the dead, on the momitain's cold breast; T's the cataract's roar where the eagles reply; And the lake her lone bosom expands to the sky.

OUR route lay through a dreary yet romantic country, which the distress of my own mind prevented me from remarking particularly, anl which, therefore, I will not attempt to describe. The lofty peak of Ben Lomond, here the predominant monarch of the mountains, lay on our right hand and served as a striking landmark. I was not awakened from my apathy until, after a long and toilsome walk, we emergel through a pass in the hills and Loch Lomond opened before us. I will spare you the attempt to describe what you would harilly comprehend withont going to see it. But certainly this noble lake, boasting innumerable beantiful islands, of every varying form and outline which fancy can frame, its northern extremity narrowing until it is lost among dusky and retreating momitains, while, gradually widening as it extends to the southward, it spreads its base around the indentures and promontories of a fair and fertile land, affords one of the most surprising, beautiful, and sublime spectacles in nature. The eastern side, peculiarly rongh and rugged, was at this time the chief seat of MacGregor and his clan, to curb whom a small garrison had been stationed in a central position hetwixt Loch Lomond and another lake. The extreme strength of the country, however, with the mumerous passes, marshes, caverns, and other places of concealment or defence, made the establishment of this little fort seem rather an acknowledgnent of the danger than an effectual means of securing against it.
On more than one occasion, as well as on that which I witnessed, the garrison suffered from the adventurons spirit of the outlaw and his followers. These advantages were never sullied by ferocity when he himself was in command; fir, equally good-tempered and sagacions, he mulerstood well the danger of incurring mmeceswary orlinm. I learnt with pleanne that le had emsed the captives of the precerling day to be litnoated in safety; mind many trats of mercy, and even genemsit!, are recorded of this remarkable muni un similan occusions.

A boat waited for us in a ereek beneath a hure rook, mammal by four histy Highland rowers ; and our host took leave of ns with great cordiality, and even affection. Betwist him innd Mr. Jarvie, indeed, there seemed to exist a derree of mutnal regand which formed a strong contrast to their difierent acernp: tions and habits. After kissing each other very lovingly; and when they were just in the act of parting, the Bitilie, in the fuhness of his heart, and with a faltering voice, asimed lis kinsman, 'that af ever an hmmedred pund, or even twa hmadrad, wonld put him or lis family $\mathbf{i}$. a settled way, he need but just send a line to the Sant Market'; and Rob, urasjing his bathet. hilt with one hand and slaking Mr. Jarvie's heartily with the other, protested, 'that if ever any borly shonld affront his kinsman, min le wonld but let him ken, he wonkl stow his his; ont of his heme, were he the hest man in Glaspow.'

With these assmrances of mutnal aid and contimed gimilwill, we bore away from the shore, and took our course fin the south-western angle of the lake, where it gives birth to the river Leven. Rob Roy remained for some time standing wim the rock from leneath whieh we had departed, conspicnons hy: his long gim, waving tartans, and the simple phne in his cap which in those days denoted the Highland gentleman anil soldier; althomph I olserve the present military taste has decorated the Highland bomet with a quantity of black phnmage, resembling that which is borne before fimerals. At leusth, as the distance increased between ns, we saw him turn :llld so slowly up the side of the lill, followed by lis immediate attendants or body-gnard.

We performed our voyage fir a long time in silmue, interrupted only by the Gaelie chant which one of the rowns smig in low irregnlar measure, rising oceasionally into a wiht chorns, in which the others joined.

My own thonghts were sad enongh; yet I felt somethin!s soothing in the mannificent secnery with which I was surrounded ; and thonght, in the enthnsiasm of the moment, thist, had my faitl been that of Rome, I conld have consented to live and die a lonely hermit in one of the romantic and beantifin islands amongst which our boat glided.

The Railie had also his speculations, but they were of somewhat a different complexion, as I fimend when, after ahout an hour's silence, during which he had been mentally enguget in the calculations necessary, he undertook to prove the prosilility of draining the lake, anf 'giving to plough and hartow many hmulred, ay, many a thonswil oures, from whilk no mam eonld get earthly gude e'enow, unless it were a ged ${ }^{1}$ or $n$ dish of perch now and then.'
Amilst a long disenssim, which he " cranmed into mine car against the stomach of my sense,' I only rememiner that it was part of his project to preserve a partion of the lake just deep enough and brwad enongh for the pimpmes of water-earriage, so that cond-targes and pabbarls should pass as easily between Dumbarton aud Glenfalloeh as between Cilasgow and Greenock.
At length we neared our distant phace of handing, aljoining to the ruins of an ancient cantle, and just where the lake diechurges its sulperthous waters into the Leven. There we formel Dongul with the horsess; 'The Bailie had formel a plan with respect to 'the creature' as well as upun the hraming of the lake, and, perhaps, in both cases with mure regard to the utility than to the practical possibility of his sehene. 'Dongal,' he weid, 'ye are a kindly creature, anil hat the sense anol feeling if what is due to your betters; and I'me'en wae for youn, Dumgal, for it cama be but that in the life ye lead yom suld get in Jeddart cast ${ }^{2}$ ae day, smer or hater: I trust, comsidering my services as a magistrate and my father the deacon's afore me, I hae interest eneugh in the comncil to gar then wi:ak a wee at a wan fant than yours. Sae I hat heen thinking that, if ye will gang back to Glasgow wi' us, being a strong-vickit creature, ye might be employed in the warehonse till something letter suld cast up.'
'Her nainsell mekeke obliged till the Bailie's homomr,' replied Dougal ; 'but teil be in her shanks fans she samgs on a canseway'd street, muless she be drawn up the Gallowgate wi' tows, as she was before.'

In fact, I afterwards learned that Dougal hat miginally come to Glasgow as a prisoner, from being ememed in some depredation, but had somehow found such favour in the cyes of the jailor that, with rather overweening contidence, he haid retained him in his service as one of the turnkeys, it task whieh Dougal hand discharged with sufficient fidelity, so far as was known, mutil overeome by his clannish prejurices on the innexpected appearence of his ohl lender.

[^46]
ROB ROY

Astonished at receiving sol rommd a refinsal to so favomrable an offor, the Bailie, turning to me, ohserved that the 'crenture was a natural-horn idist.' I testified my own gratitude in: way which Dougal much better relished, by slipping a comple of guineas into his hand. He no sooner felt the tonch of the gold than he sprumg twice or thrice firm the earth with the agility of a wild buck, flinging out first one heel and than another, in a mamer which womld have astonished a Fromph daneing-naster. He ran to the boatmen to show them the prize, and a stuall gratuity made theur take part in his ruptures. He then, to nse a favourite expression of the dramatie dohn Bumyn, 'went on his way, andl saw him no more.'

The Bailie and I momited our horses and proeceded on the roml to Glangow. When we hand lont the view of the lake mal its superb anmphitheatre of momitains, I could not help express. ing with enthnsiasm my sense of its matural beanties, althomgh I was conscions that Mr. Jarvie was a very uncongenial spirit to commminate with on such a subjeet.
'Ye are a yomng gentleman,' he replied, 'and an Englishmm, and a' this may be very fine to yon; but for me, whan anm a phain man mul ken something o' the different valnes of land. I wadna gie the finest sight we hae seen in the llielands fine the first keek o' the Gurbats, o' (ilaspow; and if I were ance thre it suldna be every fule's erranl-begging your pardon, hir. Francis - that suld take me out o' sight o' Saint Manmes. steeple again!'
The honest man had his wish; for, by diut of travelling very late, we arrived at his own homee that night, or rather on the succeeding morning. Having seen my worthy fellow-travellar safely consigned to the charge of the comsiderate and oflimims Mattie, I proceeded to Mro. Flyter's, in whose honse. aven at this murouted hour, light was still burning. The dowr wis opened by no less a person thmi Andrew Faisservice himalff' who, upon the first somul of my vinice, set mi a loul shme if joyful recognition, aur, withont nttering a syllable, ran mpstais: towards a parlour on the secomel flonr, fiom the windows if which the light pruceeled. Jnstly comiceivinig that he went to amounce my return to the anxions: ()wen, I followed him upon the foot. Owen was not alone: there was another in the apartment, it was my father.
The first impulse was to preserve the dignity of his usial equanimity -- 'Prancis, I munglad to see yon.', The next was to mimine me tenderly - 'My dear, dear san:' Owen seenred me of my hands and wetted it with his tears, while he joineed in grutulating my return. 'Ihese aro seenes which aldress themselves to the eye and to the heart rather than to the car. My old eyelids still moisten at the reenlle:tim of our meeting: hint your kind and affectionate feeling can well imagine what I Nomild find it in nossible to deserite.
When the tuanlt of our joy wis aver I learnt that my father had arrived from Inolland shortly atter ()wen hand set off fir Scotland. Determined and rapiel in inll his muvements, he minly stopmed to provide the means of diselurging the obligatimns incmubent on his homse. By his extensive resomrees, with fimeds enlarged and credit fortified hy eminent sumeess in his anntinental specilation, he ensily mecomphished what perhaps his ahsence alone rembered diffientr, and set ont for Senthand to exart justice from Rashleigh Oshallistome, as well as to put arder to his affiairs in that comutry. My father's arrival in finll credit, and with the muple mems of supporting his emgagements. lwnminaly, as well as benefiting lis correspmondents in finture, wis a stimning hlow to MacVittie and Company, who hand eme ceived his star set for ever. Highly incensed at the nasge his confidential clerk and agent had received at their hands, Mr. Whaldixtone refinsed every tenler of apology and accommolatime : and, having settled the balanee of their accomit, amomeed th then that, with all its mmerons contingent advantages, that leaf of their ledger was closed for ever.

While he enjoyed this trimmple wer false friemls, he was not a little alnmed on my aceomit. Wwen, groml man, had not supposel it possible thint a journey of fifty or sixty miles, which may he made with so much ease and saffety in any direction from Lomidon, could be attended with any particular danger. But he eanght alarm, by sympathy, from my father, to whom the comutry and the lawless charaeter of its inhahitants were hetter known.
'These apprehensions were raised to agony when, a few hours lefine I arrived, Andrew Pairservice made his apparance, with a dismal and exaggerated acomit of the mucertain state in which he lum left me. 'The moblenaln with whe tromps he lad been a sort of prisoner had, after examination, imet mily dismissed him: but furnished him with the means of returning rapidly to Glasgow, in order to amounce to my friends my precarious and unpleasant situation.

ROB ROY

Andrew was one of thone persons who have in ahjectinn til the surt of temporary attention and woefnl inmortance whin attaches itself to the learer of bat tidings, anif haml therefine by no memis smoothed down his tale in the telling, enpirially as the rich Inmion merchant himself proved mexpecterlly whe of the anditors. Ho went at great length into nit arminit in the dangers I had eseaperl, chiefly, as he insimated, by momas of his rwn experience, exertion, and sameity.

- What was to come of me now, when my lietter ampa, in his (. Indrew's) person, whs removed from my sile, it was, he suid, 'sad and mair to conjecture; that the Bailie was nue hether than just imeborly at a pinch, or somethine wime, for lee win a conceited borly, mind Andrew linted conceit; bint cortainly atween the pistols and the carabines of the tronpers, that rannit aff the tume after the tother as fins as hail, mul the dirks innd claymores o' the Hiehmers, mul tho deepr waters an! weil-a; the Avondow, it was to lee thought there wal be a phir neemme of the young gentleman.'
This statement would have driven Owen to despair land he been alone and unsmpported; but my father's perfect kinwlinden of mankind enabled him casily to alprecinte the clmaractor ai Andrew, ind the real amount of his intelligence. Stripmed if all exaggeration, however, it was nhmming enongh to a parent. He determined to set ont in person to olitain my liherty, ly runsom or negotiation, and wis busied with Owen till a late lamr, in order to get throngh some nevensary correspmonlemer. and devolve on the hatter some hinsiness which should be trans. uctel during his absence ; and thas it chanced that I fomm dhen watchers.

It was late ere we separnted to rest, nud, too impatient ling to endure repose, I Whs stirring early the next morning. Andrew gave his attendance nt my levee, as in duty bimm, and, instead of the scareerow figure to whieh he hand hem res dinced at Aberfoil, now appeared in the attire of an mondertaker a goodly suit, namely, of the deepest monruing. It was mot till after one or two queries, which the rascal alfected as hing is lie conlel to mismoderstand, that I fomme ont he 'han thomelit it bit decent to put on mourning on acconnt of my inexpreve. ible loss; and, as the broker at whose shop he had eqnipmen himself deelined to receive the gools again, and as liis wn garment: had heen destroyed or carried off in my homours eerviee, donhiless I and my honourahle father, whon Provideme had blessed wi' the means, wadna snffer a puir lad to sit hown wi' the loss: a stand $0^{\prime}$ ches was nae great matter to an ()shal. distone, he praised for 't : expecially to an anlil and attacherl servint "' the house.'

Is there was sumething of justice in Indrew's plea of loss anit of mumbing, with a leaver and all things comforming, as the exterior signe of woe for a master who was ative mal mary.

My fither's first care, when! he arose, was the visit Mr. Jarvin, fir whose kindness he entertaned the most gratefinl sentiments, which he expressed in very few, lomt manly and nervons terms. He explaned the altereal state of his athaiss, and offered the Bailie, on such terms as conlal not hat be both alvantageons and neceptable, that part in his concerns which had heron hitherto manared by MacVittic and Compmay: The Bailie luartily congratnlated my father and (1wen on the chmusiol posture of their affairs, and, withont afferting to diselaim that fue hat dome his best to serve them, when matters looked other wise, he said, 'He had only just aeted as he wad be dome hy: that, as to the extension of their correspondenes, lue framkly ascepted it with thanks. Harl MaeVittie's folk hehaved like homest men,' he said, 'he wad hae liked ill to late come in ahint them ann ont afore them, this gate. But it 's otherwise, and they mam! e'en stmad the loss.'
'Tlic Bailie then folled me by the sleeve into a corner, and, after again corlially wishing me joy, proceded in rather an (mbarrassed tone: 'I wad heartily wish, Maister Prancis, there suld le as little said as possible about the gueer things we san uy yomder awa. 'I'here's nue gute, muless ane were julicially examinate, to suy ony thing alont that awfin' job "Morris; anil the members o' the conncil walna think it creditable in ane if their body to be fighting wi' " whecn Hichurlmen, anul singeing their plaidens. And almue a', thongh I ann a deecnt sponsible man when I am on my right eme, I canma lant think I mann hae made a gneer fignre withont my hat innl my periwig, himging hy the middle like hawdrons, or a chati llung ower a cloak-pin. Bailie (irahame wad hate an meo hair in my neek an he got that tule by the end.'

I conld not suppress a smile when I recollected the Bailie's situation, althomgh I certainly thonght it no langhing mattor at the time. The good-natured merchant was a little confinsind, but smiled abso when he shook his heal. 'I see how it is I see how it is. But say nacthing abont it, there's is sumb. callant ; and charge that lang-tongmen, conceited, npertinis serving-man $o^{\prime}$ yours to say naething neither. I wadna for ever sae muekle that even the lassock, Mattie kend ony thing about it. I wad never hear an end o't.'

ROS ROY

He was obviously relieved from his impending fears if ridieule when I told him it was my father's intention to leave Glasgow almost immediately. Indeed, he had now no mutive for remaining, sime the most valuable part of the papers carried off by Rashleigh had been reeovered. For that purtinn which he had eonverted into cash and expended in his own or on political intrignes, there was no mode of recovering it lut by a suit at law, whieh was forthwith eommeneed, and priveeeded, as our law agents assured us, with all deliberate spleed.

We spent, accordingly, one hospitable day with the Bailie, and took leave of him, as this narrative now does. He continned to grow in wealth, honour, and eredit, and aetually ruse to the highest eivie honours in his native eity. About two years after the period I have mentioned, he tired of his bachelor life, and promoted Mattie from her wheel by the kitchen fire to the upper end of his table, in the eharaeter of Mrs. Jarvie. Bailie Grahame, the MacVitties, and others (for all men have their enemies, espeeially in the eouneil of a royal bursh) ridieuled this transformation. 'But,' said Mr. Jarvie, 'let them say their say. I'll ne'er fash mysell, nor lose ny liking for sae feckless a matter as a nine days' clash. My hunest father the deacon had a byeword, > Brent brow and lily skin, A loving heart and a leal within, Is better than gowd or gentle kin.

Besides,' as he always eoneluded, 'Mattie was nae ordinary lassock quean ; she was akin to the Laird o' Limmerfield.'

Whether it was owing to her descent or her good gift: I do not presinme to deeile ; but Mattie behaved exeetlently in her exaltation, and relieved the apprehensions of some of the Bailie's friends, who had deemed his experiment somewhit hazardous. I do not know that there was any other incilent of his quiet and useful life worthy of being particulaty recorded.

CHAP'TER XXXVII

'Come ye hither, my " six " good sons, Gallant men I trow ye be,
How many of yon, my children dear, Will stand by that good Earl and me?'
'Five' of them did answer make 'Five' of thenı sproke hastily, - $O$ father, till the day we die, We 'll stand by that good Earl and thee.'

The Rising in the North.

0N the morning when we were to depart from Glasgow, Andrew Fairservice bouncel into my apartment like a madman, jumping up and down, and siiging, with more vehemence than tune,

> 'The kiln's on fire - the kiln 's on fire -
> The kiln 's on fire, she's $a^{\prime}$ in a lowe.'

With some difficulty I prevailed on him to cease his confounded clamour and explain to me what the matter was. He was pleased to inform me, as if he had been bringing the finest news inaginable, 'that the Hielands were clean broken out every man $o^{\prime}$ them, and that Rob hoy and a' his breekless bands wad be down npon Glasgow or twenty-four hours $0^{\prime}$ the clock gaed round.'
'Hold your tongue,' said I, 'you rascal! You must be drunk or mad ; and if there is any truth in your news, is it a siuging matter, you scommdrel?'
'Drmik or mad! nae donbt,' replied Andrew, dauntlessly; 'ane's aye drunk or mad if he tells what grit folks dima like to hear. Sing! odd, the clans will make us sing on the wrang side $0^{\prime}$ our mouth, if we are sae drunk or mad as to bide their coming.'
I rose in great haste, and found my father and Owen also on foot, and in considerable alarm.

ROB ROY

Andrew's news proved but too true in the main. The great rebellion which agitated Britain in the year 1715 had already broken out, by the unfortunat? Earl of Mar's setting mp the standard of the Stuart family in an ill-omened hour, to the ruin of many homonrable fimilies, both in England and Nentland. The treachery of some of the Jacobite agents (Rawhleigh among the rest), and the arrest of others, had nade George the First's government acquainted with the extensive ramifications; of a conspiraey long prepared, and which at last exploded prematurely, and in a part of the kingdom too distant to have any vital effect upon the country, whieh, however, was plungel into mueh confusion.
'This great public event served to eonfirm and elneidate the obseure explanations I had reeeived from MacGregor ; and I eould easily see why the westland elans who were brouglit against him should have waived their private quarrel in cumsideration that they were all shortly to be engaged in the sime public eanse. It was a more melaneholy reflection to my mind that Diana Vernon was the wife of one of those who were nust active in turning the world upside down, and that she was herself exposed to all the privations and perils of her husband's hazardous trade.

We held an immediate consultation on the measures we were to adopt in this crisis, and acquieseed in my father's plan that we should instantly get the neeessary passports and make the best of our way to London. I aequainted my father with my wish to offer my personal service to the government in iny volunteer corps, several being already spoken of. He readily aequieseed in my propowal; for, though he disliked war as a profession, yet npon principle no man wonld have exposed his life more willingly in defenee of civil and religious liberty.
We travelled in haste and in peril through Dumfries-shire and the neighbouring : eounties of Eugland: In this quarter gentlemen of the Tory interest were already in motion, mustermig men and horses, while the Whigs assembled thenselves in the prineipal towns, armed the inhabitants, and prepared fir eivil war. We narrowly eseaped being stopped on more w":alsions than one, and were often compelled to take circuiturs routes to avoid the points where forces were assembling.
When we reached Lomdon we immediately assoeiated with those bankers and eminent merchants who agreed to suppurt the eredit of government, and to meet that rum upom the finms on which the eonspirators had greatly fonnded their lopes of furthering their undertaking, by rendering the gover it, as it were, bankrupt. My father was chosen one of the .ubers of this formidable body of the monied interest, as all had the greatest confidence in his zeal, skill, and activity. He was also the organ by which they commmuicated with govermnent, and contrived, from funds belonging to his own house, or over which he had command, to find purchasers for a quantity of the national stock, which was suddenly flung into the market at a depreciated price when the rebellion broke ont. I was. 1 not ille myself, but obtained a commission, and levied at my father's expense about two hundred men, with whom I joineel General Carpenter's army.

ROB ROY

The rebellion in the meantime had extended itself to England. The unfortunate Earl of Derwentwater had taken arms in the canse along with General Forster. My poor nucle, Sir Hillebrand, whose estate was reducel to almost nothing by his own carelessness and the expense and dehanchery of his sons and household, was easily persualed to join that mufortumate standard. Before doing so, however, he exlibited a degree of precaution of which no one could have suspected him : he made his will!
By this document he devised lis estates at Osbaldistone IIall, and so forth, to his sons successively, and their male heirs, mutil he came to Rashleigh, whom, on acconnt of the tum he hall lately taken in politics, he detested with all his might; he cut him off with a slilling, and settled the estate on me, as his next heir. I had always been ruther a favourite of the old gentleman; but it is probable that, confillent in the number of gigimutic youths who now armed aromed him, he considered the destination as likely to remain a lead letter, which he inserted chiefly to show his displeasure at Rashleigh's treachery, both public and domestic. 'There was an article by which he bequeathed to the niece of his late wife, Diama Vernon, now Lady Diana Vernon Beanchamp, some diamonds belouging to her late aunt, and a great silver ewer, having the arms of Vernon and ()sbaldistone quarterly engraven upon it.

But Heaven had decreed a more speedy extinction of his mumerous and healthy lineage than, most probably, he himself hanl reckoned on. In the very first muster of the conspirators at a place called Green Rigg, 'Thorncliff Osbaldistone quarrelled alwnt precedence with a gentleman of the Northumbrian border, tw the fill as fierce and intractable as himself. In spite of all remonstrances, they gave their commander a specimen of how far their discipline might be relied upon, by fighting it nut with their rapiers, and my kinsman was killed on the spot His death was a great loss to Sir Hildebrand, for, notwithrtand. ing his infernal temper, he lad a grain or two of more sense than belonged to the rest of the brotherhood, Rashleigh always xcepted.

ROB ROY

Percival, the sot, died also in his calling. He had a wager with another gentlenaun, who, from his exploits in that line, lad acquired the formidable epithet of Brandy Swalewell, which should drink the largest cup of strong liquor when King Janes was proclaimed by the insurgents at Morpcth. The cxploit was something enormous. I forget the exact quantity of lrainly which Percie swallowed, but it occasioned a fever, of which he expired at the end of three days, with the word, 'Water, water,' perpetually on his tongue.
Dickon broke his neck near Warrington Bridge, in an attempt to show off a fonndered blood-mare, which he wished to palm upon a Manchester merchant who had joined the insurgents. He pushed the animal at a five-barrell gate; she fell in the leap, and the unfortunate jockey lost his life.

Wilfred, the wol, as sometimes befalls, had the best fortume of the family. He was slain at Proud Preston, in Lancasiire, on the day that General Carpenter attacked the barricades, fighting with great bravery, though I have heard he was never able exactly to comprehend the cause of quarrel, and did nut uniformly remember on which king's side he was engaged. John also behaved very boldly in the same engagement, and received several wounds, of which he was not happy enongh to die on the spot.

Old Sir Hildebrand, entirely broken-hearted by these sliccessive losses, became, by the next day's surrender, onc of the unhappy prisoners, and was lodged in Newgate with his wonnded son John.
I was now released from my military duty, and lost no time, therefore, in endeavouring to relieve the distresses of these near relations. My father's intercst with govermment, and the general compassion excited by a parent who had sustained the successive loss of so many sons within so short a time, would have prevented my uncle and consin from being bronght to trial for ligh treason; but their doom was given forth from a greater tribunal. John died of his wounds in Newgate, reem. mending to me, with his last breath, a cast of hawks which he had at the Hall, and a black spaniel bitch, called Lucy.

My poor uncle seemed beaten down to the very earth by his family calamities, and the circminstances in which he unexpectedly fomud himself. He said little, but seemed grateful for such attentions as circmustances permitted me to show him. I did not witness his meeting with my fither for the first time for so many years, and moder ciremmstances so melancholy; but, joldging from my father's extreme depression of spirits, it must have been melancholy in the last degree. Sir Hildebrand spoke with great bitternesis against Rashleigh, now his only surviving child; laid upon him the ruin of his honse and the deaths of all his brethren, and decharel that neither he nor they would have phunged into political intrigue but for that very member of his family who had been the first to desert them. He once or twiee mentioned Diana, always with great affeetion; and onee he said, while I sate by his bedside - ' Nevoy, since Thorncliff and all of them are dead, I am sorry you cannot have her.'

The expression affeeted me much at the time; for it was a usial custom of the poor old Baronet's, when joyously setting forth upon the morning's chase, to distingnish 'I'horneliff, who was a favourite, while he snmmoned the rest more generally; and the loud jolly toue in which he used to halloo, 'Call 'Thornie, eall all of them,' contrasted sadly with the woebegone and selfabandoning note in whieh he nttered the disconsolate words which I have above quoted. He mentioned the contents of his will, and supplied me with an authentieated copy; the original he had deposited with my old acquaintanee, Mii. Justice Lnglewood, who, dreaded by no one and confided in by all as a kind of nentral person, had become, for anght I know, the depositary of half the wills of the fighting men of both factions in the comnty of Northumberland.
'The greater part of my melle's last hours were spent in the discharge of the religious duties of his chureh, in which he was directed by the chaplain of the Sarlinian amlassador, for whom, with some difficulty, we obtained permission to visit him. I rould not ascertain by my own observation, or through the medical attendants, that Sir Ilidebrand Osbaldistone thed of any formed complaint bearing a name in the science of medicine. He seemed to me completely worn out and broken down by fatigue of body and distress of mind, and rather ceased to exist than died of any positive stringgle ; jnst ats a vessel, buffeted and tossed by a suecession of tempestuons gales, her timbers overstrained and her joints loosened, will sometimes spring a vol. IV - 24 leak and founder when there are no apparent causes for her destruetion.

It was a remarkable eireumstanee that my father, after the last duties were performed to his brother, appeared suddenly to imbibe a strong anxiety that I should act nipon the will annd represent his father's honse, which had hitherto seemed to he the thing in the world whieh had least charms for him. But formerly he had been only like the fox in the fable, contemning what was beyond his reach ; and, moreover, I doubt not thi:t the excessive dislike which he entertained against Rashleigh (nuw Sir Rashleigh) Oslmhldistone, who londly threatenel to attack his father Sir Hildebrand's will and settlement, corroln). rated my father's desire to maintain it.
'Ite had been most ,unjustly disinherited,' he said, 'hy his own father; his brother's will had repaired the disgrace, if nut the injury, by leaving the wreck of the property to Frink, the natural heir, and he was determined the bequest shonld, take effect.'

In the meantime Rashleigh was not altogether a contemptille personage as an opponent. Ithe information he had given to govermnent was critically well-timed, and his extreme phansibility, with the extent of his intelligence, and the artful mimmer in which he eontrived to assnme both merit and inthence, hand to a certain extent proeured him patrons among ministers. We were already in the full tide of litigation with him cun the subjeet of his pillaging the firm ci Osbaldistone and I'reshainn, and, judging from the progress we made in that comparatively, simple lawsuit, there was a chance that this second course if litigation might be drawn out beyond the period of all wur natural lives.
I'lo avert these delays as much as possible, my father, hy the advice of his counsel learned in the law, paid off and rested in iny person the rights to certain large mortgages afferting Osbaldistone Hall. Perhaps, however, the opportinity to wil vert a great share of the large profits which accrued from the rapid rise of the funds mpon the suppression of the relnullinn, and the experience he had so lately had of the perils of comemerce, enconraged him to realise in this manner a considematle part of his property. At any rate it so chanced that, instcall of commanding me to the desk, as I fully expected, having intimated my willingness to comply with his wishes, howerer they might destine me, I reeeived his directions to go down to Osbaldistone Hall and take possession of it as the heir :unl representative of the family. I was directed to apply to Squire luglewood for the copy of my mele's will deposited with him, and take all necessary measures to secure that possession which suges say makes nine points of the law.
At another time I should lave been delighted with this clauge of destination. But now Oshaldistone Ifall was accompanied with many painful recollections. Still, however, I thought that in that neighbonrhood only I was likely to acquire some information respecting the fate of Diuma Vermon. I had every reason to fear it must be fir different from what I conld have wished it. But I could obtain no precise information on the sulbject.
It was in vain that I endeavoured, by such acts of kindness as their situation admitted, to conciliate the confidence of some distant relations who were among the prisoners in Newgate. A pride which I could not condemm, and a natural sispicion of the Whig, Frank Osbaldistone, cousin to the double-distilled traitor Rashleigh, closed every leart and tongne, and I only receirnd thanks, cold and extorted, in exchange for such benefits as ! nad power to offer. The arm of the law was also gradnally abridging the numbers of those whom I endeavoured to serve, and the liearts of the survivors became gradually more contracted towards all whom they conceived to be concerned with the existing government. As they were led gradually, and by detachments, to execution, those who survived lost interest in mankind, and the desire of commineating with them. I shall loug remember what one of them, Ned Shafton by name, replied to my auxious inquiry whether there was any indulgence I could procure him. 'Mr. Frank Osbaldistone, I must suppose you mean me kindly, and therefore I thank yon. But, by G-d, men cannot be fattened like ponltry when they see their neighhours carried off day by day to the phee of execution, and know that their own necks are to be twisted romud in their turn.'

Upon the whole, therefore, I was glad to escape from London, from Newgate, and from the scenes which both exhibited, to lreathe the free air of Northumberland. Andrew Fairservice had continued in my service more from my fither's pleasnre than my own. At present there seemed a prospect that his local acquaintance with Osibaldistone Hall and its vicinity minght be nseful; and, of course, he accompanied me on my journey, and I enjoyed the prownect of getting rid of him hy establishing him in his old ifuarters. I camot conceive how he conld prevail upon my father to interest himself in him, unless it were by the art, whit: ha hossessed in no inconsider able degree, of aflectiug an extreme attachment to his master, which theoretical attachment he made computible in pramtice with phaying all manmer of tricks without seruple, providing only against his master leing eheated by any one but himself.

ROB ROY

We performed our journey to the North without any remark. able adventure, and we finnil the comitry, so lately aritatend by rebellion, now peaceftel and in sood order: The nearer we appronched to Ostaldistone Hall, the more did my heart sink at the thonght of entering that deserted mansion; so that, int order to pmstpoue the evil day, I resolved first to make my visit at Mr. Justice higlewood's.
That venerable person had been much disturbed with thoughts: of what he had been mud what he now was; and natural recollections of the past land interfered considerably with the active duty which, in his present situation, might have lween expected from him. He was fortmate, however, in one restert : he had git rid of his clerk, Johsom, who had finally left him in durlgeon at his inactivity, mul becone legal assistant tu a certain Squire Standish, who had hately commenced pherations in those parts as a justice, with a zenl for King Geome and th Protestant succession which, very different from the feelings of his old patron, Mr. Johson had more occasion to restrain within the bounds of the law than to stimulate to exertion.
Old Justice Inglewood receivel me with grent courtesy, alld readily exhihited ny mucle's will, which seemed to be withme a flaw. He was for some time in olvions distress how he should speak and act in my presence ; but when he fomud that, though a supporter of the prescut government upon priuciple, I was disposed to think with pity on those who had oppowed it on a mistaken feeling of loyalty and duty, his discourse becane a very diverting medley of what he had done and what he hand left undone - the pains he had taken to prevent some sumires from joining, and to wink at the escape of others, who had lwent so milucky as to engage in the affair.

We were tefte-r-tete, aum several bumpers had heen qualfed by the Justice's special desire, when on a sulden he requested me to fill a lmme fide lerimmer to the health of poor dear bie Vernon, the rowe of the wilderness, the heath-bell of chevint, and the blossom that's transplanted to an inferial convent.
'Is not Miss Vernon married, then?' I exclaimed, in great astonishment. 'I thought his Excellency --'
'Pooh ! pooh! his Excellency mud his Lardship's all a humlog now, you know - mere St. (iernumins titles; Furl of Beanchamp and ambassador plenipotentinry from Frnice, when the Duke Regent of Orleans scaree knew that he lived, I duresay ! But you must have seen old Sir Prederick Vernon at the Hall, when lie phayed the part of Futher Vimghan?'
'Good Heavens! then Vaughan wis Miss Vernon's father:'
'I'o be sure he was,' said the Jnstice, conilly. 'There's no use in keeping the secret now, for he must be oit of the commtry by this time; otherwise, no doult, it would he my duty to apprehend him. Come, off with your bumper to my dear lost Die!

> Aud let her health go round, around, around, And let her heath guround;
> For though your stock hing be of silk, Your knees near kiss the ground, aground, uground.'

I was mable, as the reader may easily conceive, to join in the Instice's jollity. My head swm with the slonek I had received. 'I never hearl,' I said, ' that Miss Vernon's fither was living.'
'It was not our govermuent's fanlt thut he is,' replied luglewood, 'for the devil n man there is whose head wonld have hrought more money. He wis comdenned to death for Fenwick's plot, and was thought to have had some hand in the Knightshridge affair, in King Willimn's time; mul, as he had married in Scotlanel a relation of the honse of Breadalbane, he misessed great intluenee with all their chiefs. There was a talk of his being demanded to he given up at the leace of Rysswick, but he shammed ill, and his death was given publiely nit in the French papers. But when he eame back here ont the old seore, we old Cavaliers knew him well - that is to say, $I$ knew him, not as being a Cavalier myself - but no information being lodged against the poor gentlenan, and my memory being slortened by frequent attacks of the gout, I could not have sworn to him, yon know.'
'Was he, then, not known at Oshaldistone Hall?' I inquired.
'Tho none but to his danghter, the old knight, and Rashileigh, who had got at that secret as he did at every one else, and held it like a twisted cord abont pur Die's neck. I have seen her one hundrel times she would have spit at him, if it had not been fear for her father, whose life would not have been worth five minutes' purchase if he lad heen diseovered to the govem. ment. But don't mistake me, Mr. Osluhldistone ; I saly the govermment is a goonl, a gracious, and a just govermment : and If it has hangel one-humf of the rebels, poor thingo, :all will acknowlodge they would nut have been touched hal they stait peaceably at houme.'

[^47]
ROB ROY

Wniving the disenssion of these politienl questions, I hrmurdt back Mr. Inglewood to his subjeet, and I found that Miatia, having positively refinsed to marry any of the Osimuldintmene family, and expressed her purticular detestation of Rushleigh, he had from that time begm to eool in zeal for the emmen if the Pretender; to which, as the youngest of six brethren, mul bold, artful, and able, he had hitherto looked forward as the means of making his fortune. Probably the eompulsion with which he had been forced to render up the spoils which he had abstraeted from my father's comting-honse, by the muiten anthority of Sir Frederick Vernon and the Scottish Chiefs, lani determined lis resolution to mivance his progress by changing his opinions and betraying his trust. Perlaps also, for fiw men were better judges where his interest was concerned, he considered their means and talents to be, as they afterwarls proved, greatly inaderpuate to the important task of overthriw. ing an established govermment. Sir Frederick Veruon, or, is he was called among the Jacobites, his Excelleney Visconnt Beanehamp, had, with his daughter, some diffienlty in excaning the eonsequences of Rashleigh's information. Here Mr. liyle. wood's information wis at fanlt ; but he did not donbt, since we had not heard of Sir Frederick being in the lmuds of the government, he must be by this time abroad, where, agreeahle to the eruel bond he hal enterel into with his brother-in-lial, Diana, since she had deelined to select 14 husband ont of the Osbaldistone family, must he confined to a convent. The original cause of this singular agreement Mr. Inglewood combld not perfeetly explain ; but he understood it was a family culle. paet, entered into for the purpose of securing to Sir lirederick the rents of the remmant of his large estates, which had her'm vested in the ()wbaldistome fanily by some legal mancente. in short, a fanily compact, in which, like many of those mulertaken at that time of day, the feelings of the principal partiod interested were no more regarded than if they had been a part of the live stoek upon the lands.
I cannot tell, such is the waywardness of the human heart, whether this intelligence gave ne juy or sorrow. It seemed tu me that, in the knowledge :hat Miss Vernon was eternally divided from me, not by mar. we with nuother, but by sechusimu in a convent, in order to, fillfil an absurd barguin of this kiml, my regret for her lows was aggravated rather than diminisheel. I became dull, low-spirited, absent, and mable to suppritt the task of conversing with Justice lugleword, who in his turl yawned, and propmed to retire carly. I tonk leave of him over night, determining the next lay, hefore breakfast, to ride over to ()shaldistone Ifall.
Mr. Ingleword acquiesced in my proposal. 'It would be well,' he said, 'that I made my appearmice there before I was kin"win to be in the comery, the more especially an Sir Rashleigh Wiballistone was now, he midersteonl, at Mr. Jobson's honse, hateling some minechief domittess. 'They were fit company;' he aldell, 'for each other, Sir Rashleigh having host all right to mingle in the society of men of honour ; but it was hardly possiblde two such d-d rascals should coillogne together withont minichief to honest propple.'
He conchind by earnestly recommenting a toast and tankarid, and an attack upon his venison pasty, before I set out in the morning, just to break the cold air on the wolds.

CHAPTER XXXVIII

His master 'x gome, and no one now Dwells in the halls of Ivor; Men, loge, and liorses, all are dead, He is the sole survivor.

Wordnworth.

THERE are few more melancholy sensations than thone with which we regard scemes of pust pleasure when altered and deserter. In my ride to Osbuldistone Mall I passed the same olljects which I had seem in compray wilh Miss Vernon on the day of our menorable ride from lurflewnon Place. Her spirit seemed to keep me compmy on the way; nund, when I approached the spot where I hand first seen her, I nhmost listened for the cry of the homads and the notes of the horn, and strained my eve on vacent spate, as if to desery the fair huntress again deoeml like an apparition from the hill. But all was silent and all was solitary. When I reached the Hall, the closed doors and windows, the grass-grown pavement, the conrts, which were now so silent, presented a strong cont rast to the gay and histling seene I had so often seen them exhinit, when the merry humters were going forth to their morning .lnut, or returning to the daily festival. The joyons barh of tha fixs. homuds as they were mecompled, the cries of the huntsman, the clang of the inorses' hoofs, the lond langh of the ohl kuight at the head of his strong and mmerons descembants, were .ll silenced now and for ever.
While I gazed romul the seene of solitude and emptines., I was inexpressibly affected, even by recollecting thrae whom, when alive, I hard no reason to regard with affection. But thes thought that so many youthe of goorly presence, wam" "I life, health, mul conficlence, were within so short a time whl in the grave. by varions, yet all violent and mexpected, in ato if death, affiorded a pieture of mortality at which thr. mul trembled. It was hittle consolation to me that I eturn if a propriator to the halls whiel I harl left almost like a fugitive. Ily mind was not linbithated to regarel the wenes aroninl as my property, mul I felt myself an manper, at least an intronling stranger, and eomh harilly slivest myself of the iden that nome of the bulky forms of my decensed kinsmen were, like the pignitic spectres of a romanee, to "ypenr in the gateway and dispute my entrance.

While I was engaged in there sinl thomghts, my fillower, Andrew, whone feelings were of a very different mation, exertal himself in thandering alternately one every deor in the binid. ing, enling at the same time fir mhintance, in a tome so lome ns to intimate that ha', at least, whe filly semsible of his newlyaspuired importance, as sunire of the lanly to the new lome of the manor. At length, timilly aml relnctantly, Anthony Syddall, my mole's aged hotlor and major-domu, presentenl himself at a lower window, well fenced with iron lams, mal inumired our minsiness.

- We are come to tak yon: chame nff your hamb, my anhl friemb,' and Ambew lianservice : 'ye may wie mp yomr keys as sme as ye like: ilka dor has lis day. I 'll tath the phate and mupery utf your hame. Se hae han yomr ain time oft, Mr. Syddall; hut ilka bem ham its hark, mall ilka path has its pridlle; mad it will jus- set yon hemeeforth to sit at the bardemi an weel as it did do dew hang syne.'

Checking with some difficolty the formardness of my follower, I explained to sydhall the nature of my right, and the title I had to demand mhittare into the Mall, as into my (ww property. The old man sermed much agitated ant distresseal, and teatifice manifent rehostane to give me entrance, althongh it was comched in at lmmhl anm subnissive tone. I allowed for the aritation af natmad feelinge, which really did the oll man homom ; lont contimed perampory in my demand of admittanere. explaninine th him that his refinal womld oblice me fo aphly lior Mr. Lhglewonds warrant and a constable.
'We are come firmu Mr. Instiee Jughoworl's this moming,' said Andrew, to enforce the menace, 'and I saw Archie Rothedre, the constable, as I amm mo by the comitry is mo be lawless as it has heen, Mr. Syildall, letting rebels and Papists githy on as they liest listed.'

The threat of the law sommed drealful in the old man's ars, conscions as he was of the suspiciom mater whint he himself lay, from bis religion and $\left.\right|^{\prime \prime}$, mion to sio Hilde brand and his sons. He mudil, with fear and trembing, one of the postern entranees, which was seenred with many a molt and bar, and hmmbly hopel that I wonld excuse him fir fidelity in the discharge of his duty. I reassured him, and tohd him I had the better opinion of him for his cantion.

ROB ROY

'Sae have not I,' said Andrew. 'Sydlall is an. anld sneckdrawer ; he wadna be looking as white as a sheet, and his knees knocking thegither, umless it were for something mair than he's like to tell us.'
'Lord forgive yon, Mr. Fairservice,' replied the butler, 'to say such things of an old friend and fellow-servant: Whire,' following me hmubly along the passage - ' 'where would it lin' your honour's pleasire to have a fire lighted? I fear me yum will find the honse very dull and dreary. But perhaps youn mean to ride back to Inglewood Place to dimner?
'Light a fire in the library,' I replied.
'In the libury!' answered the old man; 'nohody has sat there this many a day, pad the room smokes, for the daws have built in the chimney this spring, and there were no young men about the Hall to pull then down.'
'Our ain reek 's better than other folks' fire,' said Aullrew; 'his honour likes the library. He 's nane o' your Papishers, that delight in blinded ignoranee, Mr. Syldall.'

Very reluetantly, as it appeared to me, the butler led the way to the library, and, contrary to what he had given mee to expeet, the interior of the apartment lowked as if it had heren lately arranged, and made more comfortable than usinal. There was a fire in the grate, which Imrnel clearly, notwithst:muling what Syldall had reported of the vent. 'Taking up the tomus, as if to arrange the wool, bitt rather perhaps to eonceal his own confusion, the butler observed, 'it was birning clear nuw, but had smoked womedily in the morning.'
Wishing to be alone till I recovered myself from the first painful sensations which everything aronnd me recalled, I lesired old Syddall to call the lamb-steward, who lived at ahnont a quarter of a mile from the Hall. He departed with ohvions: rehnctance. I next ordered Andrew to procire the attembince of a comple of stont fellows upon whom he could rely, the popnlation around heing l'apists, and Sir Rashleigh, who was capable of any dexprerate enterprise, being in the neighbourlounl. Andrew lairservire mudertom this task with great cheerfnhluess, and promised to briug me np from 'I'rinlay Khowe 'twal true' blue Preshyterians like himsell, that wonld face and ont-face maith the Pope, the devil, and the Pretender ; and blythe will I be o' their company mysell, for the very last night that I was at Osbaldistone Hall, the blight be on ilka blossom in my bit yard, if I didna see that very pieture (pointing to the fulllength portrait of Miss Vernon's grandfather) walking by moonlight in the garden! I tauld your honour I was Heyed wi' a loggle that night, but ye wadna listen to me ; I aye thought there was witcher ft and deevilry annug the P'apishers, but I ne'er saw 't wi' bodily een till that awfu' night.' ' (Get along, sir,' said I, 'and briug the fellows you talk of; and see they have more sense than yourself, and are not frightened at their own sharlow.'
'I hae been counted as gude a man as my neighbours ere muw,' said Andrew, petulantly ; 'but I dima pretend to deal wi' evil spirits.' And so he made his exit, as Wardlaw, the laul-steward, made his appearanee.
He was a man of sense and honesty, without whose careful management my mele would have found it diffienlt to have maintained hininself a housekeeper so loug as he did. He examined the nature of my right of possession carefully, and almitted it candidly. 'To any one else the succession wonld have been a poor one, so mueh was the land encumbered with delit and mortgage. Most of these, however, were already vested in my father's person, and he was in a train of aequiriug . .e rest ; his large gains, by the reeent rise of the funds, lowiting made it a matter of ease and convenience for him to pay off the debt whieh affected his patrimony.
1 transacted mueh neeessary husiness with Mr. Wirellaw, and detained him to dine with me. We preferrel taking our repast in the library, although Syddall strongly recommenderi our removing to the stone-hall, which he had put in order for the oecasion. Meantime Andrew made his appearance with his true-blue recruits, whom he recommended in the highest terms as 'sober decent men, weel founded in doctrinal points, and, above all, as bold as lions.' I ordered them something to drink, and they left the room. I observed old Syddall slake his head as they went out, and insisted upon knowing the reason.
'I maybe eamot expeet,' he said, ' that your honour should put confidence in what I say, but it is Heaven's truth for all that. Ambrose Wingfield is as honest a man as lives, but if there is a false kuave in the eomitry it is his hrother Lancie; the whole country knows him to be a siy fur Clerk Jobsou on the poor gentlemen that have been in tronble. But he's a Dissenter, and I suppose that's enough nowadays.'

ROB ROY

Having thus far given vent to his feelings, to which, however, I was little disposed to pay attention, and having placerd the wine on the table, the old butler left the apartment.
Mr. Wardlaw, having remained with me until the evening was somewhat alvanced, at length bmulled up his papers ind removed himself to his own habitation, learing nee in that confused state of mind in which we can hardly say whether we desire company or solitude. I hat not, however, the churire betwixt them ; for I was left alone in the room of all others most caleulated to inspire me with melaneholy reflections.
As twilight was darkening the apartment, Andrew had the sagacity to advance his head at the door, not to ask if I wishel for lights, but to recommend them as a measure of precaution against the bogles, whieh still haunted his imarination. I rejected his proffer somewhat peevishly, trimned the wool-fire, and, placing myself in one of the large leathern chairs which flanked the old Gothie ehimuney, I watched unconseiously the bickering of the blaze which I had fostered. 'And this,' saill 1 alone, 'is the progress and the issue of human wishes! Nursed by the merest trifles, they are first kindled by faney, nay, ire fed upon the vapour of hope till they eonsume the sulnstanne whieh they inflame ; and man, and his hopes, passions, and desires, sink into a worthless heap of embers and ashes!'
There was a deep sigh from the opposite side of the rom, which seemed to reply to my reflections. I started milin amazement. Diana Vernon stood before me, resting on the arm of a figure so strongly resembling that of the portrait so often mentioned, that I looked hastily at the frame, expecting to see it empty. My first idea sas, either that I had gome suddenly distracted, or that the spirits of the dead had arisen and been placed before me. A seeond glanee convinced me of my being in my senses, and that the forms whieh stood heffre me were real and substan:tial. It was Diana herself, thomsth paler and thinner than her former self; and it was no tenint of the grave who stood besile her, hut Vancham, or rather Sir Frederick Vernon, in a dress made to imitate that of his ancestor, to whose picture his comntenance possessed a family resemblance. He was the first that spoke, for Diana kept her eyes fast fixed on the ground, and astonishment actually riveted my tongue to the roof of my mouth.
' We are your suppliants, Mr. Osbaldistone,' Lo said, 'and we claim the refuge and protection of your roof till we can pursue a journey where dungeons and death gape for me at every step.'
'Surely,' I articulated with great difficulty, 'Miss Vernon cannot suppose - you, sir, camot believe, that I have forgot your interference in my difficulties, or that I am capable of betraying any one, much less you?'
'I know it,' said Sir Frederick ; 'yet it is with the most inexpressible reluctance that I impose on you in confidence, disarreeable perhaps, certainly dangerons, and which I would lave specially wished to have conferred on sume one else. But my fate, which has chased me through a life of perils and escapes, is now pressing inc hard and I have no alternative.'
At this monent the door opened, and the voice of the officions Aulrew was heard. 'A 'm bringin' in the camules. Yo can light then gin ye like. Can do is easy carried about wi' ane.'
I ran to the door, which, as I hoped, I reached in time to prevent his observing who were in the apartment. I turned him out with hasty violence, shut the door after him, and locked it; then, instantly remembering his two compranions below, knowing his talkative humour, and recollecting Syddal ${ }^{\text {P }}$ remark that one of them was supposed to be a spy, I follow: lim as fast as I could to the servants' hall, in which they were assembled. Andrew's tongue was loud as I opened the door, but my unexpected appearance silenced him.
'What is the matter with you, you fool?' said I ; ' you stare and look wild, as if you had seen a ghost.'
' $\mathrm{N}-\mathrm{n}-\mathrm{no}-\mathrm{ncthing}$,' said Andrew ; 'but your worship was pleased to be hasty.'
'Because yeu disturbed me out of a somd sleep, you fool. Syddall tells me he camnot find beds for these good fellows tonight, and Mr. Wardlaw thinks there will be no occasion to detain them. Here is a crown-piece for them to drink my health, and thanks for their grod-will. You will leave the Hall immediately, my good lads.'
The men thanked me for my bounty, took the silver, and withdrew, apparcntly unsuspicious and contented. I wat hiod their departure until I was sure they could have no furthe. intercourse that night with honest Andrew. And so instantly had I followed on his hecls, that I thought he could not have time to speak two words with illem before I interrupted him. But it is wonderful what mischief may be donc by only two words. On this occasion they cost two lives.

ROB ROY

Having made these arrangenrents, the best which occurred to me upon the pressure of the moment, to secure privacy for my guests, I returned to report my proceedings, and added, that I had desired Syldall to answer cvery summons, conchurl. ing that it was by his comnivance they had been scercted in the Hall. Diana raised her eyes to thank me for the cantion.
'You now understand my mystery,' she said; ' you kouw, doubtless, how near and dear that relative is who has so often found shelter here, and will be no longer snrprised that hashleigh, having such a secret at his command, should rule me with a rod of iron.'
Her father added, 'that it was their intention to trouble me with their presence as short a time as was possible.'
I entreated the fugitives to waive every considcration lint what affected their safety, and to rely on my utmost exertinns to promote it. 'This led to an explanation of the circmmstinnes under which they stood.
'I always suspected Rashlcigh Osballistonc,' sail Sir Frederick ; 'but his condnct towards my muprotected 'dild, which with difficulty I wrung from her, and his treachery in your father's affairs, made me hate and despise him. Ii mir last interview I concealed not my sentinients, as I shonlld in prudence have attemptel to do; and in resentment of the scorn with which I treated him, he added treachery antl apostasy to his catalogue of crimes. I at that time fondly hoped that his defection would be of little consequence. The Earl of Mar had a gallant army in Scotland, and Loord lerwentwater, with Forster, Kenmure, Winterton, and others, were assembling forces on the Border. As my connexions with these English nobility and gentry were cxtensive, it was jumpel proper that I should accompany a detachment of Highlanders, who, under Brigadier MacIntosh of Borlmm, crossed the Firth if Forth, traversed the low co, mintry of Scothand, and united themselves on the Borders with the English insurgents. My daughter accompanied me through the perils and fatigues of a march sin long and difficult.'
'And she will never leave her dear father!' exclaimed Miss Vernon, clinging fondly to his arm.
'I had hardly joined our English friends when I hecime sensible that our canse was lost. Our numbers diminished instead of increasing, nor were we joinced by any except of nur own persuasion. The 'Tories of the High Church remained in general undecided, and at length we were cooped up by a mperior force in the little town of Preston. We defented oursclves resolntely one day. On the next the hearts of our leaders failed, and they resolved to surrender at discretion. 'I's yich myself up on such terms were to have hid my head on the bluck. About twenty or thirty gentlenen were of my mind. We mounted our horses, and placed my danghter, who insisted on sharing my fate, in the centre of our little party. My companions, struck with her conrage and filial piety, declared that they would die rather than leave her behind. We rode in a body down a street called Fishergate, which leads to a marshy ground or meadow, extending to the river Ribble, through which one of our par'y promised to show us a good ford. This marsh hat not been strongly invested by the encmy, so that we had only an affair with a patrol of Honeywood's dragoons, whom we dispersed and cut to pieces. We erossed the river, gained the highroad to Liverpool, and then dispersed to seck several plaees of concealment and safety. My fortme led me to Wales, where there are many gentlenen of my religions and political opinions. I could not, however, find a safe "phortmity of escaping by sea, and fomind myself obliged again to draw towards the North. A well-tried fricmel has appointed to meet me in this neighbourhood and guide me to a seaport on the Solway, where a sloop is prepared to carry me from my native country for ever. As Osbaldistome Hall was for the present uninhabited, and muder the charge of old Syddall, who had been our confidant on former occasions, we drew to it as to a place of known and secure refugc. I resimed a dress whiel hand been used with good effect to scare tine superstitions ristics or domesties who elaneed at any time to see me; and wo expected from time to time to hear by Syddall of the arrival of our friendly guide, when your sudden coming hither and occupying this apartment laid us under the necessity of submitting to your mercy.'
'Thus ended Sir Frederiek's story, whose tale sounded to me like ne told in a vision ; and I conld harilly bring myself to helie that I saw his daughter's furn once more before me in Hesh and blood, though with diminished beauty and smok spirits. 'The buoyant vivacity with which she had resisted every tonch of adversity had now assumed the air of eomposed and submissive but danntless resolntion and constancy. Her father, though aware and jealons of the effect of her praises on my mind, conld not fortheir expatiathing upon them.
'She has endured triaks,' he sail, 'which might have dignified the history of a martyr ; she has faced danger and death in various shapes; she has undergone toil and privation from which men of the strongest frame would have shrunk ; she has spent the day in darkness and the night in vigil, and has never breathed a nurmur of weakness or complaint. In a worl, Mr. Osbaldistone,' he coneluded, 'she is a wortly offering to, that God to whom' erossing himself, 'I shall dedicate her, as all that is left dear or preeious to Frederiek Vemon.'
There was a silenee after these words, of which I well understood the mournful import. The father of Diana was still ass anxious to destroy my hopes of being mited to her now, as he had shown himself during our brief meeting in Scotland.
'We will now,' said he to his daughter, 'intrule no farther on Mr. Osbaldistone's time, since we have acquainted him with the cireumstanees of the miserable guests who claim his proteetion.'
I requested them to stay, and offered myself to leave the apartment. Sir Frederiek observed, that my doing so conld nut but exeite my attendant's suspieion ; and that the place of their retreat was in every respeet commodious, and furnished hy Syddall with all they could possibly want. 'We might perlaps have even contrived to remain there, concealed from your ob. servation; but it wonld have been unjust to decline the most absolute relianee on your honour.'
'You have done me but justice,' I replied. 'To you, Sir Frederick, I am but little known; but Miss Vernon, I am sure, will bear me witness that $\qquad$ ,'
'I do not want my daughter's evidence,' he said, politely, but yet with an air caleulated to prevent my addressing myself to Diana, 'sinee I am prepared to believe all that is worthy of Mr. Franeis Osbaldistone. Permit ns now to retire ; we must take repose when we can, since we are absolutely uncertain when we may be called upon to renew our perilous journey.'
He drew his daughter's arm within his, and, with a profomed reverenee, disappeared with her behind the tapestry.

CHAPTER XXXIX

But now the haud of fate is on the curtain, And gives the scene to light.

Don Sebastian.

IFEL'T stimmed and chilled as they retired. Inagination, dwelling on an absent object of affection, paints her not only in the fairest light, hit in that in which we most desire to helold her. I had thought of Diaun as she was when her parting tear dropped on my cheek, when her parting token, received from the wife of MacGregor, augured her wish to convey into exile and conventual sechision the remembrance of my affection. I saw her ; and her cold passive mamner, expressive of little except composed melaucholy, disappointed, and in some degree almost offendel, me. In the egotism of my feelings, I accused her of indifference, of insensibility. I upbraided her father with pride, with cruelty, with fanaticism ; forgetting that both were sacrificing their interest, and Diana her inclination, to the discharge of what they regarded as their duty.
Sir Frederick Vernon was a rigid Catholic, who thought the path of salvation too narrow to be trodilen by an heretic : and Diana, to whom her father's safety had been for many years the principal and moving spring of thonghts, hopes, and actions, felt that she liad disclarged her duty in resigning to his will not alone her property in the world, but the clearest affections of her heart. But it was not surprising that I could not at such a moncut fully appreciate these honourable motives; yct my spleen songht no ignoble mean: of discharging itself.
'I am contemned, then,' I sain, when left to run over the tenor of Sir Frederick's communications - 'I am contemmed, and thought unworthy even to exchange words with her. Be it so ; they shall not at least preveut me from watching over her safety. Here will I remain as an outpost, and, while under my voL. IV - 25 roof at least, no dauger shall threaten her if it be such als the arni of one determined man can avert.'

HOB ROY

I smmmoned Syidall to the library. He came, but sallue attended by the etermal Amdrew, who, dreaming of great thiniss in conserfuenee of my taking possession of the Hall anil the amexed estates, was resolved to lose nothing for want if keeping himself in view ; and, as often happens to men who entertan selfish objects, overshot lis mark and rendered lis attentions terlious and ineonvenient.
His unrepurired presence prevented me from speaking freely to Syddall, and I dared not send him away for fear of incren-ing suleh suspieions as he might entertain from his former alloupt disinissal from the library. 'I shall sleep here, sir,' I simit, giving them direetions to wheel nearer to the fire an whid fashionel day-bed, or settee. 'I have mueh to do, and shiall go late to bed.'
Syiddall, who seemed to understand my look, offeren to procure me the accommodation of a mattress and some bedlin!. I aceepted his offer, dismissed my attendant, lighted a pair of candles, and desired that I might not be disturbed till seven in the ensuing morning.
The domesties retired, leaving me to my painful and ill. arranged refleetions, until nature, worn out, should reluire some repose.

I endeavoured forcibly to abstract my mind from the sillgular eireumstances in whieh I found myself placed. Feelinime whiels I had gallantly combated while the exciting object was remote were now exasperated by my immediate neighbominnell to her whom I was so soon to part with for ever. Her nanne was: written in every book whieh I attempted to pernse ; anil her innage foreed itself on me in whatever train of thonght I struve to engage myself. It was like the offieious slave of Prior's Solomon, -

> Abra was ready ere I named her name, And when I cail'd another, Abra came.

I alternately gave way to these thoughts and strugulnel against them, sometimes yielding to a moorl of melting tenderness of surrow, which was scaree natural to me, sometimus arming myself with the hurt pride of one who had experiewed what he esteemed mmerited rejection. I paced the lihary until I had chafed myself into a temporary fever. I thin threw myself on the eouch and endeavoured to dispose my:ulf to sleep; but it was in vain that I nsed every effort to compose myself; that I hy without movenent of finger or of nusele, as still us if I had been alrealy a corpee ; that I endeavoured to divert or lanish dispuieting thonglats, by fixing my mind on some net of repetition or arithmetical process. My blood throbbed, to my feverish mprehension, in pulsations which resembled the deep and regnlar strokes of a distant fullingmill, and tingled in my veins like streams of liquid fire.
At length I arose, opened the winlow, and stonel by it for some time in the elear momilight, receiving, in purt at least, that refreshment and dissipation of idens from the clear and celln seene, without which they had beeome beyond the command of my own volition. I resmued my place on the cunch with a heart, Heaven knows, not lighter, but firmer, mul minere resolvel for enduranee. In $n$ short time a slmuber crept "wer my senses; still, however, thongh my senses slombered, my soml was awake to the painful feelings of my situation, anil my dreams were of mental angnish and external objects of terror.
I remember a strange agony, minder which I eoneeived myself and Dinna in the power of Maefregor's wife, and about to he precipitated from a rock into the lake; the signal was to the the discharge of a camon, fired by Sir Frederiek Vernon, whi, in the dress of a cardinal, officiated at the ceremony. Nothing eonld be more lively than the impression whieh I receivel of this imaginary seene. I conld paint, even at this moment, the mute and courageous submission expressed in Diann's features, the wild and distorted faees of the executioners, who erowled around us with 'mopping and nowing,' grimates ever changing, and each more hideous than that which preceded. I saw the rigid and inflexible fanatieism painted in the free of the father, I saw him lift the fatal mateh, the deanly sigmal exploded, it was repeated again and again annd agsain, in rival thumders, by the echoes of the sumponding clifis, and I awoke from faneied horror to real apprehension.
'The sonnds in my drean were not ideal. 'They reverberated min my waking ears, hut it waw two or three minimes ere I could collect myself so as distinetly to minderstand that they proreeded from a violent knocking at the gate. I leaped from my conch in great apprehension, took my sword under my arm, and hastened to forlide the admission of any one. But my route was necessarily cirenitons, beeanse the hibrary looked nut upon the quadraingle, but into the gardens. When I had reaehed a staircase the windows of which opened npon the entrance court, 1 hearl the feeble and intimidated tones of Syddall expostulating with rongh voices which demmanled admittance, by the warrant of Justice Standisll, and in the king's name, nud threatened the old domestic with the heaviest penal eonsernences if he refusenl instant obedience. Bre they had ceased I heard, to my unspeakable provocution, the vise of Andrew bidding 'Syldall stand aside and let him open the door.

ROB ROY

'If they come in King George's name we have naethiny to fear; we hae spent baith bluid a ul yowd for him. We dimai need to darn ourselves like some folks, Mr. Syidall. We are neither l'upists nor Jacobites, I trow.'
It was in vain I aceelerated my puee downstairs; I heard bolt after bolt withitrawn by the oftheions scomindrel, while all the time be was boasting his own and his master's loynty to King George ; and I could easily calenlate that the pmrty minst enter before 1 conld arrive int the door to replace the lars, Devoting the back of Andrew Pairservice to the eurlgel so sumi as I should lave time to pay him his deserts, I ran back to the library, barricaded the door as I best could, and hastened to that by which Diana and her father entered, and beggel for instant admittunce. Diana herself undid the door. She was ready dressed, mull betrayed neither perturbation nor fear.
'Danger is so faumiliar to us,', she said, 'that we are always prepared to meet it. My fither is already up; he is in Rasl. leigh's apartment. We will escape into the garden, and thence by the postern-gate - I huve the key from Syddhll in catse of need - into the wood. I know its dingles better than miy me now alive. Keep them a few minutes in play. And, dear, dear Frank, once more fare thee well!'
She vanished like a meteor to join her father, and the intruders were rapping violently, and attempting to force the library door, by the time I had returned into it.
'You robber dogs!' I exclaimed, wilfully mistaking the purpose of their disturbance, 'if yon do not instantly ynit the" honse I will fire my blmolerbuss throngh the door.'
'Fire a fule's buble!' said Andrew, Fairservice ; 'it's Mr. Clerk Jobsom with a legal warrant $\qquad$ ,
'To search for, take, and npprehenl,' said the voice of that execrable pettifogger, 'the boodies of certain persons in my warrant maned, charged of high treason under the Thirteenth of King Willians, Chapter 'Ilird.'

And the violence on the door was renewed. 'I am rising, gentlemen,' said I, desirons to gnin as nusch time as possible; 'commit no violence ; give me lenve to look nt your warrant, and, if it is formal nand legal, I shall not opmose it.
'Gorl save great George our liing! ejamulated Andrew. 'I tanld ye that ye womld find mee ducolites here.'
Spinning out the time as much ats pmasible, I was at length compelled to open the dowr, which they wonth utherwise have fureed.
Mr. Jobson enterel, with several assistants, anong whom I diseovered the yonnger Wingfieh, to whom, ilombtless, he was obligel for his informatiom, and exhibited his warraut, directed nut only against lirelerick Vermin, an attainted traitor, but alwo against Diam Vernon, spinister, and Francis (Slmablistone, gentheman, acensed of mixprisim of treasin. It was a case in which resistance would have been madness: I therefore, after capitnlatimg for a few mimutes' lelay, surremlered myself a prisomer.
I hall next the mortification to see Johwon go straight to the chamber of Miss Vernon, and I learned that from thence, without hesitation or difficulty; he went to the room where Sin Frederick had slept. 'The hare has stolen away;', said the brute, 'but her form is warm; the greyhounls will have her by the haunches yet.'
A screan from the garilen amonncel that he prophesied too truly. In the conrse of five minutes Rashleigh entered the library with Sir Frederick Vernom and his daughter as prisoners. 'The fox,' he sail, 'knew his whl earth, but he forgot it could be stopped by a carefint huntsman. I had not firgot the garlen gate, Sir l'rederick, or, if that title suits yon better, most noble Lord Beanchan!p.'
'Rashleigh,' said Sir Frederick, 'thom art a detestable villain!’
'I better deserved the mame, Sir Kuight, or my lord, when, muler the direction of an able tutor, 1 somght to intronluee civil war into the bosom of a peacefint comery. But 1 have done my best,' said he, looking npwarls, 'to, atome for my errors.'
I conld hold no longer. I had designed to watel their proceerlings in silence, but I felt that I must speak on die. 'If hell,' I said, 'has one complexim more hideous than another, it is where villainy is masked by lyymerisy.'.
'Ah! my gentle comsin,' said Rashleigh, hobling a caudle towards me, and surveying ne from heal to font, 'right weleome to Usbaldistone Hall! I can forgive your spleen. It is hard to lose an estate and a mistress in one night ; for we shall takie possession of this phor manor-honse in the name of the lanful heir. Sir Rashleigh (Oskaldistome.'

White Rashleigh braved it ont in this manner I conla see that he put a strong force nywn his feelings, looth of anger mat slame. But his state of mind was nure olvious when biana Vernon mallrensed him. 'Rashleigh,' she anil, 'I pity youl: for, tleep an the evil is which yom lave labsomed to do me: and the evil you lave actually done, I cannot hate you so murla an 1 seorn aml pity yon. What yon have now done may lae the work of an hour, but will furnish yoll with reflection for your life - of what mature I leave to your own eonscienee, which will not slumber for ever.'

Rashleigh stronde onre or twice thromph the room, (anne in to the side-table, on which wine was still standing, and pmened out a large glass with a trembling lunal: but when he saw that we observed his tremor he suppressed it by a strong effint. amb, looking at us with fixed and daring composure, carriond the bumper to his head withont spilling a drup.
'It is my father's old burgundy,' he sail, lionhing to Jhiome: 'I ame glad there is sume of it left. Yous will net punpmer pit: sons to take care of the house and property in my manee anil turn out the doating old butler and that foolish Scotel mavel Meanwhite, we will convey these persons to a more prines place of custorly., I have provided the whe family courh fint your eonvenience,' he said, 'thongh I ann not ignorant that even the lady conld brave the night air on foot or on homebaek were the errand more to her naind.'
Andrew wrung his hands. 'I only said that my master was surely spenking to a ghaist in the library; and the villain Lancie to betray an mald friend, that sumg aff the same P'sithe book wi' bim every Sabbath fir twenty years !'
He was turned out of the honse, together with Svaliall, without being allowed to conchnde his lamentation. Ilis ix. pulsion, however, led to some simgular conseqnences. Resolvine. according to his own story, to go down for the night where Mother Simpson womld give him a longing for ohl aceqnaintanme: sake, he had just got cleur of the avenne, and into the wh woon, as it was ealled, though it was now used as pasture-gromil! rather than woodland, when he smdenly lighted on a drowe of Scotch cattle, which were lying there to repose themselvo after the day's jomrney. At this .lulrew was in num wiy surprised, it leeng the well-known enstom of his comutrymen, who take care of those droves, "1 inarter themselven atter night minen the lisat minelosed grase gromil they can "fins, nuil depurt lefore daybreak to esenpe paying for their nizht: linkigigs. But he was both surprised anil startled when as Highhumer, suriuging up, aceused him of disturhing the catte, and refused him to pans forward till he hal. Inwen tu his master. The momutaneer conducted Andrew into in thicket, where he fomme three ur four mure of him somutrymen. '. And,' suid Aulrew, 'I suw sume they were ower meny men for the Anve: and, from the questions they put to me, I julged they hail other tuw on their rock.'
They questioned hime elosely ahmot all that hat passel at Osimidistome Hall, and seemed surpmed and concerned at the repurt he made to them.
'And troth,' snill Anirew, 'i tanlal then a' I kemel; fir dirks and pistols were what I conld never refinse infur ation to in a' my life.'
'They talked in whispers among themselves, and at length collected their cattle together and drove them chase an to the cuntrance of the avenne, which might le half a mile distant firm the honse. They proceeded to drag together some felled trees which lay in the vicinity, so as to make a temporary harricade across the road, almont fiftecn yards beyond the avenne.
It was now near daybreak, and there was a pale castern sleam mingled with the farling mowalight, so that whieets comld be discovered with some distinctness. The lumbering somid of a conch, drawn by fomr horses, and escorted by six men or: horsebork, was heard coming np the avenne. The Highlander. :'forpei attontively. The carriage contained Mr. Johsim: :1, fiffortunte prisoners. The escort emsisten of $\operatorname{Bn}$ : assint., :-..... as we hand paswel the gate at the heal of the avel at or wan shehind the cavaleade by a IIighlamhan, stationed in re fir the t purpuse. It the same time the carriage Wils impetent in its farther progress hy the cattle, ammomst which we were involved, and hy the larrisale int firmot. Twn of the esenrt ilismminted tor remuse the felled trees, which thry might think were left there liy arcident or carelessiness. 'Ilio uthers bergim with thei ships to drive the cattle from the waml.
'Who dare abose our cattle?' sailla rough voire. 'Shont lim, Augns.'
Rashleigh instantly called out, 'A resene - a rescue:' aurl, firing a pistol, wounded the man who sume.

ROB ROY

'Chymmere !' cried the leader of the Highlanders, and a s affle instuntly commencel. The officers of the law, surprised at so sudden an attack, and not usnally possessing the me.st lesperate bravery, made bnt an imperfect defenee, considering the superiority of their numbers. Some attempted to ride hatek to the Hall, but on a pistol being fired from behind the sate, they conceived themselves surrounded, and at length gallinmel off in different directions. Rashleigh, metunwhile, had dis.mounted, and on foot haul maintained in desperate and single. handed conflict with the leader of the band. The window of the carriage, on my side, permitted me to witness it. It leugth Rashleigh dropped.
'Will you ask forgiveness for the sake of God, King James, and anld friendship ?' said a voice which I knew right well.
' No, never,' said Rashleigh, firmly.
'I'lhen, traitor, die in your treason!' retorted MacGregor, and phanged his sword in his prostrate antagonist.

In the next moment he was at the carriage door, handed out Miss Vernon, assisted her father and me to alight, anl, dragging out the attorney head foremost, threw him muler the wheel.
'Mr. Osbaldistone,' he said, in a whisper, 'you have nothine to fear; I must look after those who have. Your friends will soon be in safety. Fiarewell, and forget not tho MacGregor.'
He whistled ; his band gathered romm him, and, hurrying Diana and her father aloug with him, they were almost instan!ly lost in the glades of the furest. The conchman and postilion had abandoned their horses and Hed at the first discharge of firearms; bat the animals, stoppel by the barricude, remained perfectly still; and well for dobsom that they did so, for the slightest motion would have drassel the wheel over his body. My first object was to relieve him, for such was the rascal's terror that he never conld have risen by his own exertions. I next commanded him to observe that I had neither taken part in the rescue nor availed myself of it to make my escalpe, and enjoined him to go down to the Hall and call some of his party who had been left there to assist the womuded. But Jobson's fears had so mastered and controlled every facmilty of his mind that he was totally incapable of moving. I now resolved to go myself, but in my way I stmmbled over the lenly of a man, as I thonght dead or dying. It was, however. Andrew Fairservice, as well and whole as ever he was in his life, who had mily taken this recumbent posture to avoid the slashes, stabs, and pistol-balls which, for a moment or two, were flying in varions directions. I was so glad to find him that I dil not inquire how he came thither, but instantly eommanded his assistance.
Rashleigh was our first object. He gromed when I approached him, as much through spite as throngh pain, and shot his eyes, as if detemnined, like lago, to speak no word more. We lifted lim into the earriage, and performed the same good office to another wounded man of his party, who hand been left on the field. I then with difficulty made Jobson moderstand that he must enter the coach also, and support Sir Rashleigh npon the seat. He obeyed, but with an air as if he but half comprehended my meaning. Andrew and I turned the horses' heads rouml, and, opening the gate of the aveme, led them slowly back to Osbaldistone Hall.
Some fugitives had already reached the I Iall by circonitons routes, and alarmed its garrison by the news that Sir Rashleigh, Clerk Jobson, and all their eseort, save they who escaped to tell the tale, had been ent to pieces at the head of the avenne hy a whole regiment of widd Highlimulers. When we reached the mansion, therefore, we heard siteh a buga as arises when hees are alarmed and mustering in their hives. Mr. Johson, however, who had now in some neasure come to his senses, fomme voice enongh to make himself known. He was the more anxions to be released from the carriage as one of his compmions (the peace-officer) had, to his inexpressible terror, expred hy his side with a hideous groan.

Sir Rashleigh Osbaldistone was still alive, but so drearlfully wommed that the bottom of the coach was filled with his blood, and long traees of it left from the entrance-door into the stonehall, where he was placed in a ehair, some attempting to stop the bleeding with eloths, while others called for a singeon, and no one seemed willing to go to feteh one.
'T'orment me not,' said the wounded man. 'I know no assistance can avail me. I am a dying man.' Ite raised himself in his chair, thongh the damps and chill of death were already on his brow, and spoke with a firmmess which seemed heyond his strength. 'Consin Francis,' he said, 'Iraw near to me.' I approached him as he repuested. 'I wish you mily to know that the pangs of death do not alter one iota of my feelings towards yon. I hate you!' he said, the expression of rase throwing a hideons glare into the eyes which were som to be closed for ever - 'I hate you with a hatred as intense now', while

I lie bleeding and dying before you, as if my foot trode on your neek.'
'I have given you no cause, sir,' I repliend, 'and for your uwn sake I conld wish your mind in a better temper.'
'You have given me cause,' he rejoined : 'inlove, in aunlitim, in the paths of interest, you have erossed and blighted nue it every turn. I was born to be the honour of my father's hume; ; I have been its disgrace, and all owing to you. My very patrimony has beome yours. 'Take it,' he said, 'and uny the curre of a dying man cleave to it!'

In a moment after he had uttered this frightful wish the fell back in the chair; his eyes became glazed, his limhs stiffened, but the grin and glare of mortal hatred survivel even the last gasp of life. I will dwell no longer ons so painful a pieture, nor say any more of the reath of Rashleigh thinn that it gave me access to my rights of inheritance withunt farther challenge, and that Jobson found hinself compelled to allow that the ridiculous charge of misprision of high tretwill was got up on an affidavit which he made with the sole pmrpose of favouring Rashleigh's views, and removing me inimi Osbaldistone Hall. 'The rascal's name was struck off the list of attorneys, and he was reducel to poverty and coutempt.
I retumed to Lomlon when I had put my affairs in order at Osbaldistone Hall, and felt happy to escape from a place which suggested so many painful recollections. My anxiety wan mur acute to learn the fate of Diana and her father. A Frembly gentleman who came to London on conmercial busiuess, win entrusted with a letter to me from Miss Vernon, which put ney milili at rest respectiug their safety.

It gave ue to understand that the opportune appearame of Macefregor and his party was not fortuitous. The Sconti-h nobles and geutry curgaged in the insurrection, as well its those of Eunflanl, were particularly anxious to further the escape of Sir Prederick Yernon, who, as an old and trintel agent of the lonse of Stewart, was possessed of matter emmols eonrage they had known so many prowts, was the persin ilhm they pitched upon to assist his seseape, aud the phace of nomeing was fixed at Osbaldistome Hall. You have alremply hemid how nearly the plan hand been diseoncerted by the nimbinny Rashleigh. It sulccecden, however, perfectly; for, when inte Sir 1 -rederick aud his daughter were again at large, they fommd horses prepared for them, and, by MacGregor's knowlenge if the country - for every part of Scotland and of the north of Fingland was faniliar to him - were comdncted to the wester:1 sea-coast, and safely embarked for France. The same gentleman told me that Sir Frederick was not expected to surwive for many months a lingering disease, the consequence of late hardships and privations. His daughter was placed in a convent, and, although it was her father's wish she shonld take the veil, he was understood to refer the matter entirely to her own inclinations.
When these news reacherl me I frankly told the state of my affections to my father, who was not a little startled at the inlea of my marrying a Roman, Catholic. But he was very desirons to see me 'settled in life,' as he called it ; and he was sensible that, in joining him with heart and hand in his commercial latours, I had sacrificed my own inclinations. After a lorief hesitation, and several questions asked and answered to his satisfiaction, he broke out with - 'I little thought a son of mine should have been lord of Osbaldistome Manor, and far less that he shomid go to a French convent for a sponse. But so dutifinl a danghter cannot but prove a goorl wife. Yon have worked at the desk to please me, Frank; it is but fair yon should wive to please yourself.'

Itow I sped in my wooing, Will Tresham, I need not tell you. Yin know, too, how long and happily I lived with Diana. You know how I lamented her. But you do not - cannot know, lrwe much she deserved her husband's sorrow.
1 have no more of romantic adventure to tell, nor, indeed, anything to communicate farther, since the latter incidents of my life are so well known to one who has shared, with the most friendly sympathy, the joys as well as the sorrows by which its scenes have been chequered. I wiften visited Scotland, but never again saw the bold Highlander who had such an inthence on the early events of my life. I learned, however, from time to time that he contimed to maintain his srommd anning the mountains of Loch Lomond, in despite of his powerfinl enemies, and that he even obtained, to a certain derree, the comivivance of government to his self-elected offiee of Protector of the Lemox, in virtue of which he levied black-mail with as much regularity as the proprietors did their ordinary rents. It seemed impossible that his life should have conchuled withont a violent end. Nevertheless, he died in old! ase and by a peaceful death, some time abont the year 173:3, and is still remembered in his comtry as the hohin Howd of

HOB ROY

Scotland, the dread of the wealthy, but the friend of the poor, and possessed of many qualities, both of head and heart, which would have graced a less equivocal profession than that to which his fate coudemned him.
Old Andrew Fairservice used to say that 'There were many things ower bad for blessing, and ower gude for banning, like Rob Roy.'
[Here the original manuscript ends somewhat abruptly. I have reason to think that what followed related to private affairs.]

APPENDICES TO INTRODUCTION

No. I

ADVERTISEMENT FOR APPREHENSION OF ROB ROY

(From the Edinburgh Frening Courant, June 18 to June 20, A.D. 1712. No. 1058.)

- Tuat Robert Camplell, commonly known ly the name of Rob Roy MacGragor, being lately intrusted by several noblemen and gentiemen with cunslderable sums for buying cows for them In the lilghlands, has treacherously gone off with the money, to the value of &i(oou sterling, which he carrlos along with hlm. All Magistrates and (Officers of hls Majesty's forces are Intrented to selze upon the sald lob lioy, and the money whlch he carrles with hlm, untii the persons concerned in the money be heard agalust him; and that notlce be siven. When he is apprehended, to the keeper of the Exchange Coffec-honse at Edinburgh, and the keeper of the Coffee-house at cilassow, where the partles concerned will be advertised, and the seizers shall be very reasonably rewarded for their pains.'

It is unfortunate that this hue and cry, which is afterwards repeated In the same paper, contains no descrlption of Roh loy's person, whlch, of course, we must smpose to have been pretty generally known. As it is directed agalnst llob Roy personally, It would seem to exclude the idea of the cash being carrled off by his partner, MacDonald, who would certainly have been mentioned in the advertisement if the creditors concerned had supposed him to be in possession of the money.

No. IILETTERS FROM AND TO THE DUKE OF MONTROSE RESPECTING ROB ROY'S ARHEST OF MR. GRAHAM OF KILLEARNTHE DUKE OF MONTROSE TO$\qquad$ 1'Glasgow, the 21at Norember 1716.

- My Lord- 1 was surprised last night with thenccount of a very remarkable instance of the Insolence of that very motorlous rosue liol Roy, whom your Lordshlp has often henrd named. Tlie honour of his Majesty's gor-

[^48]
AP1PENDICES 'TO INTROIUUCTION

ernment being eoneerned In It, I thought It my dily to nequalni your lordshlp of the partlenlars by an express

- Mr. Arabame of Klllearn (whom I have had occaslon to mention frequently to you, for ihe good servlce he did last winter during the rebelline. having the charge of my Ilghtand estate, went to Monteath, whleh le 11 bari of It, on Monday last, to bring in my rents, it belng usual for him tor iwe house, for the convee ulfhts together at thls tlme of the year, in a countrle same night, about 1 of whom he has stlll keep't about him loge, with a party of those ruflinis house where Mr. Girnhame was with sinee the late rebellion, surroundid the ordered his men to present thelr cunne in of my tenants dolag ble busfursw, he wins sltilig, while he lingelf at in att the window of the room whire the door, with coeked plstols, and at the same tlme with others enterid att away to the hills whth the money made Mr. Grahame prisuner, carrehig hins tenants fronds for thelr Hnes, amountig got, hls books and papers, mulluy ling, whereof the one-haif had amounting to above a thonsand poindes sire. been palll now ; and att the mame time last year, and the other was to have a lettir to me the eopy of which is enclosed) offorine me to canse hhu writu
- That your Iordshim may have the bosed orrering me terms of a trialy. necessary that I shonid Inform son the better veew of this matter, It will in put hlinself at the head of the Cian w'Cremellow has now, of a long lime. ages, have disthgnlshed themselves beyond a raee of people who, in all thons, and murders, and have heen the eunstant haring roblerles, depridiaof vagabonds and loose people. From the time of the Revolution hin bis taken every opportunity to appeur against the goverament, aeting rather as a robler than dolng any renil serviee to those whom he pretended to apmar for, and has realle done mole mischlef to the countrle than all the oflor IIghlanders have done.
- Some three or four years before the last rebellion broke out, kelng over. burdened with delits, he quitted hls ordinary resldence and removed sum. twelve or sixteen miles farther into the Ilighlands, puting himself uniner the proteetlon of the Earl of Broadalling. When my Lord Cadogan was in the Illphiands he ordered his honse att thls place to be burnt, which your Lordshlp sees he now [laces to my nceonnt.
-Thls obliges hin to retnrn to the suine conntrle he went from, heine a most rugged inaecessible phee, where he took up his regldence anew anongst surpon frleuds and relations: but. well judging that it was possible to surprise hla, he. whth alont forty-flve of his followers, went to Inver:iry. and made a sham sumpender of their arma to Coll. Camplell of Flantr, Cinimunder of one of the Independint Companles, nad returned home whithiw men, eneh of them having the Coll.'s proteetlou. This happened in the lumin arms of summire last : yet not long after lie appeared with hls men twiw them, rescued a pilsoner freming's troups: and one of those thmes atarkt through the conntry, plunderine the and ailt this whlle gent aliroad his party sume of iny temants. phatering the countrle people, and amongst the rest
- Uelng iaformed of these disorders after I eame to Scotland. I applient to Lhent. Genll. Carpenter, who ordered three partys from Glasgow, Sillin: and Finlarig, to march in the night by different rontes, In order to surimis. If the ereat ralne that houses, which would have had its effect ecriainly the march of the tront happened to fill that verle night had not refarded tlons that they wre ordered fors if the partles eame too late to the staslon was to huru a coumthe for. All that rould be done upon this areaof hls elan had, from the rocks. fired npon the King's resided, ofter sume grenadler wis klliod.

Mr. (irahame of Kheara. belng my depity-sheriff in that nonnty. wont along with the barty that marched from stlring ; and, doubtless, will unt meet with the worse treatment from that barbaroun people on that account. Besiden, that he in my relntlon, and that they know how active he has been In the se:rice of the Government - all which, your Lordshlp may believe, puts mu under very great concern for the gentleman, wille, at the same time, I caa forsee no manner of way how to relieve hlm other than to leave him to chance and hls own management.

APPENDICES TO INTRODUCTION

I had my thoughts befure of proposing to tiovernment the bullding of some barracks, as the only expedient for suppressing these rebels, and securIng the peace of the countrle: nind in that vlew spoak to Genll. Carpenter, who has now a scheme of it lin his linnds: und $i$ nu persuaded that will he the true method for restrulnlug them effectually: lut, in the meantime. It alll be necessary to lodge some of the troops in those places, upon which 1 latend to write to the Generall.

- 1 am sensllile I have troubled your Lordsilp with it verle long letter. Which I should he nshamed of, were I nyself slagly concerned: but where the hoaour of the Fing's Goveinmient is tonclied, I need make no apoiogie, and i shall only beg leave to add. that I am, with great respect and truth,
- My Lord.
'yr. Lordss. most humble and ' obedlent servant,
' Montrose.'
COPY OF GRAHAM OF KILLEARN'S LETTER INCLOSED IN THE pheceiding
${ }^{6}$ Chappllarmoch, Not. 19th, 1716.
- May it pipasp yofr Grace- - 1 an obllged to glve your Grace the trouble of this, ly IRobert Roy. ${ }^{\circ}$ commands. leing so unfortunate at present as to lw hls prisoner. I refere the way and nmmer 1 was apprebended to the learer, and shall only. In shori, acpuilut your Girnce with the demands. which are. that yonr Grace sliall discliniche him of all sonmes he owes your (irice, and glve itm lite somme of :;416 merks for his loss and damages sustalued by hlm, both at Cralgrostowu and at his honse, Auchinchisallen : and that your Girace shall glve your word not to tronble or prosecute him atterwarda; till wheh tlme he carryes me, all the woney 1 recelved this day. my books and bonde for entress, not yet pald. along with him, with assirances of hard usage if any bartys are sent after him. The sum I recrivel thls day. conform to the neirest computation I can make before 1 whall walt your Grace's retirn, and ever am,
- Your Grace's most obedleut, falthfui.
- humbie servant.

Stc sub.
Johs Grahame.

THE DUKF OF MONTROSE TO 2Stl Nov. 1710. - Killearn's Release
-Glabgow, 28h Sot. 1716.

- Sir - Haring qequainted you ly my last. of the g1st lustant, of what hathapponed to my frlend. Mr', draliame of Klleari. 1 'm very glad to have It uow to tell you. that list night I was very agreably surprised with Mr.
 of him from the thme of hls beluer carthed awit. It seems fobl Roy, when stil the more to the justlee of the Government : and therefore thought lit

APPENDICES 'TO INTRODUCTION

to diamias him on Sundny evening lant, liaving keft him from the Inonday night hefore, under a viry uneany kind of reatralit, leelie ohilged tochans contlbually froll place to blare. Ile gave lilm back the bookn, pmpiris, atid bonds, but kept the money.

-I am, with great truth, Nir.- your most bumhie servant.\section*{No. III}CHALLENGF: BY ROB ROY(Bee Introluctlon, p. :xil)

' Muntmose.'

RGE ROY TO AIN JHE AND MIGHTY IMINCF, JAMFS DI'KF, of MONTRONF.

- Is charity to your Grace's couralke and conduct, plense know, tho onis way to retreve both in to trent Itoblloy llka hlinself, In apmohnthes bum hifs hands. That Impertlient rerlileks or thiterera may not brand mi fir challenging a man that 's repulte of n poor dastavily sual. hot and haw of hls hands to Joyue with hitu In the combente. Then sure your diram want your Grace and the troops any further tromble of menrching: that ls. If your ambition of ghory prews youl to embrace thls metutald vellture offri of Rob's head. But If gour cirnce's plets, prudence, und cownrilne forlhis otherwhe your overthrowe or ruln is determhed : mid advertise your indods never more to look for the frerinent clvility piged them, of semine lhim that favour: so your firnce by thls has peace In your offer, If tho sumbl of

 Roy, probably a retalner of the linke of Argyle in Isla, whleli ls ho these words: -
 WIII divert yourself and comrndes. I wot no hews sllece I salw von, unly acconnt about them 1 'la le sure to let voin hore of $1 t$, and tlll then 1 wit not write any more thll I have more heromits. I am, Sir, somr after (a [consla| and most limmble servant.
lis: lins.

Addressed, To Mr. Patriek Auderson, At llay These.  The seal, a stag - no toml emblem

of at wild catherm.
It nppeare fomm the chvelope that lioh lioy stlll montmum to act as in-

APPENDICES TO INTRODUC＇IION

No．IV

FROM ROBF，RT CAMPBHLLL，alias M＇GRFGOR， COMMONI．Y（AI．LIES ROH R（OY＇，＇TO FIFI．D－M．ARSHAK．WADE，  Then recelving the mubminaion of ilmaffected Cbleftalue anil Clans． 1

－Hin－The grent humanty whll whill yibl linve comstamty acted in the belos nil in arms，it was nelther safe nor Inderi posslble for me to siand

＇I nim，whth ull iluty nitil respect．
－Your lixecelleneres most．de． －Huneht Campelafo．＇

No．V

thomy Baty Livingatane

A whlu：has mot with dienlyon， Who has ntolell her away．

Ho bonk frae low loer mattin coat， But ans tur sllkengown，
Sylue rowil leer lio hls turtan plail， Allil hitlum leer romblanl romb＇．

 E．Anharel，心is．

いい。ハージに

APPENDICES TO INIRODUCIION

In another lallad we are told how-

Four-anl-t wenty Hinland mun Cmane dumn by Yhdioch olde, And they have inworu a deadly oath, Jonn Cu ulp auld be a bride:

And they have aworn a deally oatl, Ilk sman apon hla durk.
That she mbuld weel wifh Dunum Ger, Or they'd make bloody worke.

This Inat we have from tradition, Imit there are many others la his cols. lectlons of seattish inallatis to the same furpose.

 and varlona editlona. 'The tuse is llvels ntul willd, and we welect the foiluw.
lum Ink worda from memory: -

Rob Roy Is frae the Hielande coure,
Down to the Lawland border:
And he has atolen that lady a way, To haud ble house in order.
He set hef on a millk-white ateenl, Of none lie veomil th awe;
Untlli they remehed the Hlelond lillin, Alrow the Balanha'! !

Baylup, ‘Be conteut, le ronte mi, lise content with mu, Lauly ; Where will ye flul hil Lempix lami, gee braw a man mulme, Luly:

- Rob Roy, he was buy futher callevl, MacGregor was his name, Lanly: A' the comitry, far and near, Have heard hargregor's fanm, lasly.
- He wasa heelge abont hila friemin, A liectie to hiln fier, Laily: If any man did limm galuany, He pelt hila dendly blown, Laly
-I am an lold, I am an bold, I am an bolil nud more, Laily
Ory man that doubte thy word, May try my gude clayuore, laaly.
- Then la cont onit, be content, lie content with bue, lavly;
For now yom nre my wedded wife,
Uutll tlu day ye ile, Lody.'

No. VI

GHLUNE DHU

The following noticem concerning thle ('hlef fell under the Autlurs aye

 Inclatents of 1745.

This Chlef liad the Important task entrusted to llim of defombius tho t'natle of bomme, In whleh the thevaller plated a satrison to promery his goonl condict in thise chnrge.

 gentlomen are possosserl of. Ifr is honest and distiterested for a powert.
 In Europe. In short, the whole people of thit country derela wowl that bain did monl live under so milli n goverum tht as diongyle's, not a man havin: so murfla as lost a chleken whlle lie combland thore:

It would appear from thas coulons passuge that dilengyle-mot strwan sltation.

[^49]
l.SCAPE OF ROB ROY FROM THE DUKE OF ATHOLE:

Tir: fullowigg cops of a letter which pasmed from oue clergyman of the 'hurch of Nertland to another wim eobumualeated to me hy John Gregorurnt lwown the Inken of Athole and Argyte napina to have anlmated the formic ugatust liob lloy, as one of Arkyle's partizane.

- hisv. and hash Hmithen.
- Yre of the g8th Jun I had by the liparer. Im pleased so you from l'ulurt, tho' I 've well all the last wereken prlate, only 1 find in them mudtal are to le preferred to dilleers of the C'oart of engulys. The 1 Bllt in lome of commons nad Come liepure the larile, wileli is thought to le eonfavime. I heartly whel the presplit hanaiars ut Coart may bot prove un encouragar to whtehfill and restlos rimembes.

 twen his dirnee (whal heur did correxpond wisme ut court nlont (t) garty from (ien curblater to rocelve and bring lalin to Fil', whieli party came the length uf Kenrose in Fife: le was to le dellvered to thela liy a pirty his diruce liad demanaled from the diovernour at I'erth, who when thrued lig his dirace, linving resolved to delluer hitu hy a party of hls own

 In remly to recelve him. Thls mbier of than lloh hal Imployed in taklue the other dram heartty wt the Gunrd, \& $\eta^{*}$ all were pretiy hearty lioh is
 s. une irlvate lastructlous ut the lime fore his wife) where loe es attended we ${ }^{\text {wit }}$ the Gund. When aprlous In this privat conversatone he is making sime few stepsearelessly from the four alout the housi till he emmen eloss llina to the guard. hernase of the delng it give to there hopies of $n$ Conshorabla addltomull flarge not Jolin lloy.' Ny wifo was upon Thursilay last dellvered of in son after more travell, of what, she stlli montinues bry weak. I give $y^{\text {e }}$ lady liearty thanks fur the llinilinnd platd. It 'a sumb eloath, bit it lowe not naswer the sett I sent sollie thas ague w'

[^50]

MICROCOPY RESOLUTION TEST CHART

(ANSI and ISO TEST CHART No. 2)

APPLIED IMAIEE Inc
1653 Eost Main Street
Rochester, New York 14609
(716) 482 - 0300 - Phone
(716) 288-5989 - Fax
 herself to thisish her bed before she was ligited, but 1 kuow yt hels cathon timety to $y^{r}$ hand. . 1 'm sory 1 hat mot moty to somd by the la alter, having no thought of it d being exposed to some Hitile expenses lant werk.
 Lixe olse this treeriom fom de.

- manse or Combie, July : ${ }^{2}(1,1717$.
- I salute $y^{r}$ lady. I wish my . . . her I Hangitter much Joy.'
[Thls note was printed for the first the in the Abbitsford Edition, 18f: 40.]

POSTSCRIPT

The second of the Appendices to the Introduction to Rob Roy a see pr:3:1/by that daring freebooter. While lowing the lanke of Montrose 's fent. These wre taken from seroll roples in the possesston ot bis firace the pres ent Inke, Who kindly promitled the nse of them in the present publicatim. The Nowel hal but just passed throush the press when the Ithgit Homber able Mr. Perl-Whase important state arocathons do not avert hts atton thon from the interests of hiterature - transmitted to the Anthor onpita of the orighal lettris and inelosure, of which he pessessed onty the thath draught. The orfinials were discosored th the state laper Offer by the Indefatigable rescarches of Mr. Lamen, who is dably throwing mon livit on that vainable coliectonn of reourds. on that vabable collecthon of records. From the doraments with whin the Allthor inas been thas khally favomed, io is mabined to till up How int ls addressed to Lord Viscomut lownshome, and is accompaniod by ont in the same date to Robert Irinfle, lisquire, the Euder-sucretary of siate. wheh is here inserted, as relative to so eurlous an incident.

Letter from the Duke of Montrose to Robert Pringle. Fisy. Under-Secretary to Lord Viscount Townshend

- $S^{2}$.

'Glasoow, 21 Nor' 1:14,

- Ilaveing had so many dispatehes to make this night. I iope ye I fxיmse me that I make use of another hand to sive fow a short aceoment of the we caslon of this express, hy with I have written to my Lat. Ihak if lies. burgis and my Lord lownsiment, which I hope se't gett carefitiy dehiwom
- Mr. Graham. somuger of killearn. behar on Mmatay last in Momtenla at a country honse, coliecting my rents, was about nibe öriock that same nizhs surprlsed by fob loy whth a party of his men in arms. Who, haveines surronnded the house and serimed the arenues. presemt ed their guns in at the windows, whilo he himsif windows, Whife he himself rintered the room with some others with rakt and carrsed all a way whth him to the hllis. it the same thme wrterins: poselng a very homomrahn traty to me. 1 mast say this story was in and mp. that thls gentleman, my noar reiatloll, whonld be heobsht th suffor all the assuramers of my beftg. with great sincerity.

- Er, yr must hamathe servant.
(signedi)
- NoNTunsf:

 mown and Iblitiver.

 luth with letters.'

Examined,
Liont. BFMON.
Deputy Kepper of State l'upers.

Statr I'appr Office,

Sior. $t, 1 \times 0$.

R. 1..

 inf: I holl laphatel and Ambrose de Lamela with the church-treasure.

[^51]

NOTES TO ROB ROY

Note 1. - IIORses of the Catmolics, p. 64

w occastons of pubile alarm. In the begiuning of the plghteenth century, the hurses of the catholles were oftell seized upon, as they were always supposed to be on the ere of rising in rebellion.

Note 2. - Tobicco. p. 84

The fines here quoted belong to. or were altered from. a set of ferses at ane the very popular in England. berinning. " Tobaceo that is withered guita. In Nootland the celebrated Balph Erskhe. autior of the Guspel somucts, publlshed what he called smokill! Npirilumlizal, lu two purts. "The lirst part belng au Old Meditation upon smoking Tobacco.' It beglas -

> This Indian weed now withered quite, Tho' green at noon, cut down at night,

> Shows thy deeay;
> All flesh is hay.
> Thus think, and smoke tobacco. (Laing)

Note 3. - NuNsfir of Wihtos. p. 89

The munnery of Wllton was granted to the Farl of Pembroke upon its dissolution by the magisterial authorlty of IIenry Vill. or his son Edward Vi. On the acpession of Quep Mary, of Catholle memory, the Earl found it necessary to relnstal the Abbess and her fair recluses, whleh he did with many expresslons of his remurse, kneeling humbly to the vestals, and indurting them Into the convent and posisesslons from whleh he had expelled them. With the aceesslon of Elizabeth the aceommodating Eari again re. sumed hls Irotestant falth, and a secoud time drove the nuns from thelr samethary. The remonstrances of the Ahiess. who reminded him of his penitent espressions on the former opeaslon, eould wring from him no cother answer than that in the text - 'Go spin, you jude - go spla.'

Note 4. - Babony Laigh Kirk, p. 170

'i, waigh Kirk or Crept of the Catheriral of Glasgow served for more that 1 wo centuries as the church of the Learony Parish. and for a time wad cunverted into a binlal-plaec. In the restorations of this grand buldin:the crypt was cleared out. and is now admired ar one of the richest speci mens of Early Eaghsh architecture exlsting in Seotland (Laing).

 and clrommstancos commocted whth my uarratives of whleh I myself nevm so murh as flramed.

 seen. It formurly contahed a illunery; hence the name Inch calloweh, or the Islama of ©!d Winmen.

 tesy from a fanalu of alow from in man. It was only the refrictory whe underwent the storm.

 whleh slde lie fohght on: su. tw fisht for yomr own hand. like llaby

Mons Meg was a large ald-tashloned jhwo of ordnance. a grat farombita

 Meg's month whthl ith infrease, as mery sohoulhoy khows, the lohithose any distant expeditlon. Aftor the Valon there was moris popmiar alpore

Nute 10. - Finily sipp:istition. p. 2f:1

 af fillotwo.

 limul 1:adithon.

 pased to bu drad. Thls. lewwere, was met has real fate.

 fam not dead. I fell down la a swomi und was tarrled Into fialryand, ha rown, nad that. If he theows the kinlfe whith la lowds in his hand were my

1 [For a correction of this note, sure nute to lutronlurtion to A Legend of aymerase.]

Nute 12. - At Foll. p. 286

1 do not know how thls mphit al.,... in Mr. Onbaldiatone'R day. Mat I can assure the reader whome miloshix miny lend him to flalt the sorums of these romantle advellures. that the cimchinn of Abrefoll now afforde a wers an additlonal recommundatlont th him thint he wlli thal himself lin the vilin. Ity of the Rev. Ir. lintrifk firuliam. minlater of the gospel at Alwrinil. whose urbanity In communtouthig Information on the subject of nathonal antiquitles is senrere exceoded peon ly the stores of Iogendary forn whinh he bas accumulated. - Ori!!. Nofc: itio resprectuble "rgyman alludnd to has been dead for some years. - [.tided in 1sey.]

Note 13. - Walter Ceming of Guiyock, p. 287

A great feudal oppreasor, who. rlaligg on some cruel purpose through the forest of Gulyock, was throwu from his horse, and, hls foot beling caught In the stlrup, was alragged alung by the frlght aned aulunal tll he wins lurn to pleces. The expression, 'Walter of (inlyock's curse.' is proverblat.

Nute 14. - Tife Micilimshoss, p. 3.50

The MacRImmons or Maccirlmonds were liercilingy plpers to the rilefs of NacLeod, and celebrated for thelr tulonts. The plloroch sald to have been composed by Helen Maciringor is stlii In existence. See the Intrutuetion to thls Novel (p. xxi).

Nte 16. - Tfeddirt Cast. p. 3.5n

"The memory of Dunlonr's legal (? proceedlags at Jedburgh is preserver In the proverblal phrase "Jediait Justice." which slgnifies trial after vecutlon.' - 1 Instrelay of the Boriler; I'reface, R. Ivl. (Luing).

Note 16. - MacGregor Papern, p. 405

Some papers connected with Rob Roy Mactiregor, slgned ' Ro. Camplull,' In 1711. Were Iately presented to the Soclety of Antigitarlea. One of thise is a kind of contract between the linke of Montrose and liob Roy, by which the latter undertakes to dellver within a glven time ' Nixtie good nill suff. cient Klntallf hlghland Cowes, betrixt tise nge of five and alne yeara, at funtene pounds Scotis per peice, with ane bulf to the bargane, and that at the head dyker of Buchanan upon the twenty-elpht day of Xay next.' Dated December 1711. - See Ploceedings, vol. vil. p. 2.53 (Laing).

GLOSSARY

18

WORDS, PHIRASLK, AND ALII'SIONS

AD chimpinam, to the purse
Atal.1v. Iwrlap.
AIK. Uik; AIK-HEAO, BII Oik -ll!k
Alik, irirly

AIT, odts; AIT, AITEN, oaten Al. 'ulis, the Koran, the swrel thook of the MohaniIthenlans
Al.ertzil a merjeant or ofll. ror of joline limanza, battle of, fonght ill Spain on :5.' April 1:15, during the war of the Apanisli Succesmion, the Fronch defeatiug the aliied Fungivh and Spaninlı forces
A Mil.t, almost
An'r, ings, once; asce and tw.s. how and again, or ciasumally
Anhrei Pehralga, a broulज्ञाताi Anker, a cast if wine or *pirits, , 1.0 .

- Lillut

Anchlow'
the rett.
118:
$\because \quad$ O1te
tavern
 III the Fiprir Qupene to the prorsonitication of Hypocrixt : a wiantl, maxician higyie's Levee, wits more prob bly writtenly Josph II t. l ell, 'Sir Robert Walmilus poet'
Irk, all antient Greek godthios who begniled ment t., rash and inconsiderate 4.9+1;

Iflofarkan, aulibearfinn, sagacious, old-fashimel

A rontrow, the River Forth Aront, bushle, heyonl

Baik, courtiay
Han, cirris
Banit, lqumi
If inerit, lairefinted
BaBGINT, BAROHRNT, a polblin that :1predred in the firin of $n$ horrible dug, proterbling misfortune or death. Nie a mote to The Befrohed
Laril, a small brinuly cask nsed in the Freneh (Gass cony) retail trulo
Barkit, stripluel of bark Barmicint, or baricint. INentical with Haril (q. I.) bahrique, ot bariute, a hogelead, the brandy cask used at buitr deallx. Cuguta, Rocheile, and towns adjacent BahtLeit, i,, antlion of The firnllemnn's Firriory (17int)
Hatiphoss. a pet word for the crat
Hacled, leflel
Bawber, a half prnuy
Beatx Strataora, by George Farqulas
Benoan's Opera, Gay's play
BEiLD, shelter. protectiont
Benebirt, i.e. Benenlick.
Spe Vurlh At/o nbent Nothing, Act ii, Sc. 3
Bent, the niont: take the BENT, sep List of Sruteh Proverl心, $\mathbf{i}$. 117
Besten, besct, haril progsel? Bicker, a wordell bowl or vessel , to throw stonem, to quarrel; (of a thame) to flicker, 'quiver

Bematance, propriety, deceriny
Bimaina, lmilhing
Hike, nent, swarin
Isinkie, lively filiow, yontil of incttie, 'kpark'
Hinl., toss, drink copionnly
Hhbrtid, or Birrel., konent, author of a liorrey-

Bittock, inore than a lit; A MILE AND A BITTOK K , a proverbial expresalion for a considerable distance longer
Black Dotolas, Good Sir James Douglan, the valiant supporter of Robert Bruce BiayE, a port on the Giromie, France
Bi, evzimg and blasting, apeaking in a luud, ontelltatlous manner
Blether, ille talk, hombense
Boble, modole, a cople'r coin, jol Englishl hale-penny Buole, glont; swarecrow
Bule, an ajertire
Hone, a erevice
Luc moxk, a shall hut, a heap of stones
Bhald, bruad
Brechas, tartan plaid
Brig, brilge
Broote, Highland shoe Broken maN, an outlaw broomielaw, a part of Glasgow harbour
Brose, pottage made by pouring boiling water over oatimeal
BUDDiEL.l, or butdeal, a small keg or cask in which spirits were conveyed on pack-saddles from place to place

412

Hiririt，Imotly，sing

fir，Inemition．fire forploge
C＇A＇，to drive，wark：＂A＇

CA＇b ror，vallegl fur
Cabmer，an ithermit henifr， hawker
（＇ABiANT，a lint
（：ALLEK，tis＇（Inl，fromen
CAmilita，the Narlike dingintor if ant anciollt Volucian king，a chardetor in the situoi，
Canet，he hlogen
Canny，cantionm，yuirt，moll－ nilhs．
Car，chy；boink chean iati out，irnill to the land｜run
Capticin，arrant liy jullieqii procens，a mot．s inw term
Cable，a fellow
Cabline，ling
Cakte in paym，may of tho conint ry
Cateran，catherin，a rab－ h．r，thilef
Callomirfy，ablim，iohl
Calenee，chalio
Cater，a shell
Chack，shark
Chirta，choip： 1
CHALHERA，a mevaliry of eapaelty vorrampondinis ta chalilrons，mill llwal to meanite caril，Hime，coal， ete．
Chap，strike（r．！，wi a clock）； CHAPIIT，Bt rick Cilapis，chorden，a fuart menshire Chapping－nticks，for intrik－ ling with Cheathy，fradfal．Imeqitful
Cheat．The－w＇onf mate，a gallows－biry
Chiel，chirlid，a fellow
CHUCKIE－stanes，small pelibles
Chacilan，liamber Clash，Be＇audal，goanip，talk acriapinge uf end porritge

Cıвикıt，writeø
Clointills，in fullower of Alleas，who took fart ill the boat－race of ．Filleins $s$ ．
Clorst，hoof，single beast
Ciow，chove
Cor＇ket，cuatonim neal or war． rallt
Cockle－hes iden，$_{\text {，}}$ whinsia：al， cock－lirained
Con，whiden vessel
College of St．Over＇s，a college at st．Omer iu

Nommanily，for mlisatiug Fineliali moll lriml lforomit （：allorilen
Coblisury，to mehedice to． दrither，lutriдин Cinont，riant
liditak，rill．ll，frow
CHllnach，the llighant lament for the alo int formm in ovilac，a mliy fur min tral

 thluloles firy lotenver．ho：al
Coll Misithe，a fill，tuls flete gatherlug of rammal． deprowlants （＇unsis－lisf，kjuhtip．
（＇HCK，to gosajp
C＇Jisatu，thes meck，throat －rag，prectpley

Cubabit，a rula

Cburton C＇mokels，T．Thir lanik rofiricil to is lir－ Nem＂hes in ther vionth on 7rehemi，la：－t
Cbuthow，a larioty of ptork． timlo or combellali，fromitis to 2t linlu．fin lougth
CR＂are，brisik，＂herery
C＇lt，iliv，rionwire，a thilh buttage maity of ontmoal
Cirtik：Ur，tiokle ug，to do fior
Ctmairs，the imanda Great anil Littlo C＇minbrat in the Firth of Clyte
C＇RLAF－WUKLE，ornasucut OH 1：（1）｜c linrfis＇，rhaflug，frulicking
Harr，（ral：：HIFT HAYs． （＇hristlointile． latiki，jug slowly，hang on itrcanhately
DILTos．Mullabi．，author of The rometo，Imesliere（1F：

Dat vkiam cionvis，vexat CREStit rolembis，tho arows ex：aple，the doves are（x）l｜sharit
Divie lingsiv，the jopmar hable for the＂l＂tular litit rathery Soollish pret，Sif． l：avil Lyulday of tho Monnt，amther of sulare of the Thies livthles
HF：GN ot gitim，n magistrate in wertin sintry burgios whor exproives atpervimion over atil bniltilus．s

14nti＇s．all indo．diathernatice frwar，a thrf，foat
Dobber，forite，apparition

Bon Rambifl inn outt． IW InMkla．Nef fofl fi．．． lik．v．
Ihmore extouedingiy
Ihis＇li，aromela

Hul Hi，ACH，inumllo，klapo mon＇k

How．In Ine ahle；Iminis．

｜how＇b，H｜florad
 IN．Hpishi，a thirek liz：
 0．f Ih．rri in C＇entral l＇i．n．．．
Hhest，to nulliver －lower lhkre，THE，the Duk．If Mont rown

Hrke，dirk
Irs．eyor
F：I．I．wail，a yard medxura
FNE：CH，ENOW，ANEI！ Alloligh
Firti．k，hitenil
Eisen，collyare，pitt all the millue footing with Hivineste，proxifs

Fibkith，ats loniphit athathe H1くい？
FAsil，to tromsile，ratiorm

FASTKRN＇s F＇EN，Sh
Tllevilay
Fistid．fill
FAIGE－Fick，mask
Fick．pirt
Feckikna，trliling，lloplous rites
 Worliall whome right－bul．I in leer hishatud，atow tivin Vik：ns．shift FENWICK＇\＆PLot，a llis to aspassinate Willian III． the prime asent int whin roterl in J．llitiory la！

FBIt．1世，womler，M．nnlertul
Filer，llotile，aril

Conill．Finslunters
Fi．AF，Hed
Fit：ziell，whredte
Flefil，jurer
Fiten，fright
Fley，frighten
Ficuw－mons，llmorass
Fitif－gib，explosion of gun． powder

Firte，at nill
Finct and a wanminhran． II nism a juplular rejuirt that the t＇retelliler wan a －Injumititiont vhild，anil nats intrindicen！litu the rogal luvi whlifin mirtil． luge will．An oll pronertic rallm the mertidet mald the fingllamas fall，llturatly a loorrhace markut，lwelat it Finltarahio，at ilne wenterit runbve．Inviling

 H．H．W．，evlausterl

 foull parentul abslourity

Ful＇sirket（blanl－nabre）， lame fiuzr，wift，spungy
ficis，towit
 ＂！heril．Culnf．Fiazu＂： 1 －n kinll if lighter or birge． Hand uth the Clyale folldokinas．gatiyctans，all arimeli retainer
GingIIEREOET，wnodering， bagroult
（1） $1 \mathrm{~s}, \mathrm{~m} 11: \mathrm{ke}$ ，olsige （iiall，sour－Jooking finte，way，blimbur
fixar，affalr，hinaliums grofl－ arty，pugsexhlons

Geron，a pike

（ientioll，a kinul of Flominals linell，preshatily thante at firitt or Churut
Gunow，Wish，ulthor uf The furrier＇s lierr finile． 16： 11
（：H．ars－A－NALLLIE，the I： with the kilt，Ifighlanile． filmiliavaging，cembittiag dipremation cimmectakeg，thin rakes ＂luked on a girills．or gribille，that is，a that irun p川 （G）．E．ET，twinted
fincerc，slluooth and bright lilify，oliffina，a jifly，ill－ stillt，momelt finsts，g＇ance，ylimpse dil．mo．．a frow：！ litıин，gaze，ntare
liomelit．，forl，lont
finkBALx．suhbrles on the ＇（milh sile of Glaggow Gown，gold
fown，rillkon，full ligg anll brinthedting It， Innl tollea of whoor lareck tontainamy the anti－ tintr，weft ；anker，to Mowl tikEh，or GROtE，mhUMIIT， ＊lus． 8

dillly，alik
（filtr，kroial
t！blitolish，a conarne fatric ，it ．．th ：llll norl．H：alally

 the biliser
 ploy
finli，ivm，or filiti，dons， the jeen lialue of the anther of I Dixpliay ar lleralilry． vaijums mithotim．The reini writer In malill follabre beril 1）r．Julin（barklumin，lean of Borking
Gras，a followar of Alow，os， a lin towik piart int the lanat．

Ilsumen．lidh
IIVr，amallent thlug rou－

 Ulי。
IIabil．，nater，whol．

\｜A narba，liavi neblera
\｜A siri，Kisurenilit，I eillt mpesk Kinglinlı Ilastie，Kiom lioll，many II stix（ismonslen，it in a Alwfirugor
\｜Ahs－Pas，nkull
Hincsa，braiua llakmr，harvest
harding，herina atcid．hahitatlon avisos，behaviour －fe．ITuFs－COWE，a fwlg of he：ather
Ilraki．e．a sharp．tonthed in－ $\therefore$ trumelut used for chioling H：1x

Heshe，the Hath whio how －harge of the rattle on at Scotch farm

 one wlan desario．s to till 11 sildio or hatter Hemitor，il landowiwr in E．r onl llerar．i．jlandeling
Hez，hot

Hiv．lixh fil liks it uns written by 11．fine
Ilinientians，lent tox－kn
\｜inग川日at $k$ ！w，lumaleal arow llinsinu，hettor rimulring a delator til pray ar perforim， Imil．r jalı of lvelug pro． chalinseni is rolmel
Ib．．．．．NET，hathall mit naed lor rivalot Hablige：all مn－

How ofll，thiml．h．int いいい！ hour．，hollow
Huws．k．t．tu I
Ilir，lucitu，urge mil
HrBiosm，hittorkn
 ज्ञात muther
I м titictll
IVfas，chlon
I Nisik，titu，Hreplare
Intanmit，hiterfern with． tolloh，the efferm if another，a Scota law term inverlocily，where Argyleis forrons were defeatiml ly Montrose lin the whiter of ｜iil｜ $1 \mathrm{i} i$
 Hibull，jruliahly so catlent
 Weot r＇labliors
Itr．C＇いN\＆imatimeat．tlo． ＇The＇thing in uicue proo －l．aimerl，i，e．puhblienl
Ivy－Tul，isy－lmist．
Jalorse，be minplejous of， olgjent t 1 dллیiкk，a lianiock or cake， s．librally of nat－flour
JA＇V，jallo
IAw，li，lamh；a wave
IEintiki，oh，perliapm from the Freu＇l just＂urorps，a tishl－tittins jarket
Jит tal．\＆a，リlasp－knifa
In ols xils＇sl．ile＇s af the llighura！uren．by Captain at lifusinghan in lit？
Jollsistos the historian， Robert Jonstun，allt me of two Latill Works 012＂ha Ilixtory of İrituin，［PIn． lished at Ansterclan in 141：ant lans
Joniau，a rillins－r－loak
Jい＇k（husk）alll li．t the JAT （ warri）En ly
Jowivi，tollinig of a ！all，the thngue being inoved by hablut

Gl．OsSARY

Jemeatem moln，mequital Jubicio minti．＇delay of Judmenent
Jeationthowar panoantr catioky，Iut Jumabitionm pundamose ciend，to have law declarnd
Jutipied，executed for treason

Kallorard，rabhuge gatileti katl－maib，a cabimere luaf： All－wirs，vesetable meller Kalm，comit
K：kk，glimpme
Kkif a ral．m arom，kryl silfure ：kakpit，kept KıLTr art，wlum quili rumpty
KEmp，mition mill nght： sempine，a atrugghe
Kmink，a retalner or servant
Killecom，a terrllin fellow， deaperalo
Kiltap，elevatell，turked 川j， lifted
Kinuly temanym，tenaita whoen anerestorn have re． aided for generations on the name laurlin
Kimarex，kingdons
Kintaili，．a parish in the county of lioms and Cro－ limarty
Kittle，vexatious，mensitive ： ertcle cast，dificult part Krap Bouthans，speak like the Eugllioh
Kniohtakilinoz apfaim，A Jacobite plot of liaing to manaslnate Willian！ 111 ． at Knighenbridge，when re－ turning from huntiug．The priuclpal agelita wern 8 ir
Wm．Barclay and sir Wm．
Perkins
Knames，merchanta＇stalln or bootlis
Krz，cows
Krloses，Hidehland enttle Кутнц，вееи

Laioh Kirk，or crypt of the cathedral of Glangow， cerved for more than two centuries as the clurrch of the Barony jarinh
Laith，Joth
Lano i．co．a great deal
Lano vebbit，long－honefl． uned often of preternatural brings l．apper，bemmear
Lassock，girl
Lave，the remainder，reat
LAWin，reckonilig
Leasing－makino，I reason
LEDiARt，Lfideart，of Ledard，a waterfill near the north side of Lurch

Amf．See IImerler，Note 25，p． 178
Lhorsim，clifoulcles of the lives of the salists
Lakana，liem not，Im iut，br． Ats mot
Lightriot，Ion，Jepas，Vice
Clanewlur of Cambilidge Undvernity in the 1；th cell． tirs！
L．Auntume，wlighten！
l．atr，to ming＂bererful theren
Iansman，jaile，seot Ir．l｜
Livinar，Davilo．A Dinla
Linulmay
Lamaling，ralllinu，dulug nay－ thlug ，fuickly or glibly： artive
Lawhew，l．e．Lamel）Awn LanN，fullow，comilume man
lanet，let
Laing，picmienaisg of，by a bendy of Irimh commanimiten hy Alexander M•Ihimucil， the Colkitto of I．rymin of Montrose，In Hiti

Lin＇No，quilet

Later，leap
Lown，blaze
Lie rian，a variety of sturk． finh，more than 24 luclows in longth
Lickie，whow：a title np－ plivid to ndanty in hounewife or landlady in genoral

Li＇g，thie ear ：portion

Lrmphaids，the galley，which The family of Argyin and others of the Clan Camp－ lull carry he thelr armus
Maiben，a mule kind of guil－ lotine formerly inedi in Sentlaud
Main，throw a，in throw a cant nt dice
Mantal．s，the mervice－booka of the prleatn，containiug the macramental services Marxian，Gervasm，author pe．．．．＂＂ntmining＂ll Anumilerlge birlenginin to Nmilh，firrier，ar llurse－ lech（1tint：－） marmontel＇s late novel，
i．．Mélisnire（1Fía）
Markow，a partuer lil mar－ rlise

MEswan，rur
Mırkier，Inli：ل1
Miniben，du．． steat，thim ：Mhation－ dubshill stands
Misten，Mide，fabricated， attimpted
Mirk，llifk；mirk hotr，juid－ uight

Mikza，Viatuy or by $1: 11$ novil ln Tha＊ywrintur
Mingurs bana，whiplin al Mazagan，＂port inl Him Atlantié cerame of Mire．．．．＂
Moncorimes，milt reat
Minfeyme，ti，alistu
Monemea，an varly coran
 Imoulde
Mickle，minch
MITI．，a mantionox
Minn，rap，
Nainwei，owimelf
Nayi baz，limoleut taik
Nкп，поме
Nиıт，hexe
Nras，nowk，comer
Nivur，upphew
NEWTuENipa，eare．．te Swerlinh turnlpm，wha agicenture alount ith wr twelve yeara before the．，int of the ixth centing．liow brown rat，whloli hite urarly exterminately ur Iristll ont the blach r．t．
 Fingland about the mishlo of the Isth century Nippentr－tifpentr，afl．．． mily neat or exact oxell

OpResteex，grnamuntil ntitch
OMra，orcasional，mlil
Owe A bay is Hanvf．©
List of Seotel I＇rivenli．

Ow wne oxell
P＇acolet，a Imarf，numar if a ningeel horme，ilt the lequend of liulrufin＇thal （ 1 wornc
Paikw，a drubblag
Pallabien，something thet nffords protection，s．at．Is palochine，parlah
P＇st，pot；pilt
Patrrakoks，or plaempha， minal piecres of orda．．．． Hased for diachinrblit stones，rte．，and for $111 \omega_{2}$ sith＇res
Paica terba，few．worda
Paterba regai，f＂いoty． ntrickell domain，
Pearliss，a klind of lar．
Pedro Garciab．St， 11 preface to fiil Blas：
Pensy－weddino，a wid川． at which the guest． f．an． tributed towards the a．${ }^{\text {．}}$ pellses

Port．amall quantity， htll．firco
I＇tallisis，ath neflefote fel． lous whersirtion favolir by pretherong him maritiong，in 1 ．．．15
lolit．tisu，fis finck at t．hblo， lalink fast hounmly ur in at initliog way
l＇o＊．a direntiory of clourelis dhrutughat flaw jowr
I＇ine．for atike ulit with tho l．．ik
 1．．．．r
lims，rucl
 リ11ん $\quad$ ！ 1 of a latily：
 $\mathrm{l}^{1+11} y$
 ［r．a．｜n．ruinaly

ri．．．Mr．onk．Irulte

 lecili tldaral by the Keotelt thse Fingliahumes we k－ lio s lior gend living limtiv．pertery

lin－steinwaytr．Malacily． aththor of The l＇ni＂eswl Imitematy of Truilo mul l．s． 1 Prom the Fivinls． a．．sivary below
1 Antif meice，siarmerow
I In＇H，P10＇H，pulle． 1
linw，lue．11｜
I＇кerty（MEs），Hsed in Sonted jumhti！e a k．thant，alort fill w．jirolupt and realy

f＇shene I＇bertymas，a oliof－ athe，in linekjaghorn＇s life flowisnl liblise，trest．•host＂• fiat ND KENB，ruh witil 1はり！11世4

liblift，romly，gritok
lisk etratelis
Hifing，whar M1，disentangle ： $1 \cdot 1$ ises
Rir＇wit．townaglit mat lir．5it．－Honkro lizyr，rohhad

Revitch，ruflico
ISris，prasik，trick

Evint．，（1）pillacer，hroak

 In－fing elviti

 inal
 ment，frmelafloing tho

 holly
 matar ruwela mande at lijpuns ware cerleter：ifen？

Kow $\mathrm{K}_{1}$ aldollo．
18／minE，jurain．
 （athetis＂！
IS11w，8．11

Aut kl．Ras．illinkilit
A．AV，lilent
Hat．A siuphl，heary－lacialmal 1．H10w
Nathk，it mhirt
NuT，mill
 dwytex．wrhor ifflir work （liab ：ant tranalatirn，ur

M－ABT．A curnmurant
 weiarl！：1 furlougea
K．Mr：vikis，lebt，tom biblyjax
SELL．if r，irnall
Ablidap．ant Kitre，a ilharacter in！$\quad$ ！！$/ \mathrm{m}$
Arisívio，morvilss
Si．Ta，h． strr，patterat

fllltambs．． ficht vinllon atatf．firut amble at C＇hathas

 Ilresume
Silaw，a llat at thr louttuan of ：hill
Sura．ry，wery hatill lioner．： Nlouldon jubly
Silutil：A．Nheritl
Shif ${ }^{\circ}$ Hembisil，the otherer chargend sor abtermil to the prontmintiticg，repalrligy，mu． fithy insil thearlowa of पrisan！ Mitinex，MifeneA

mivieir fuxual
wivis ofwe cratty Groek who Hiluceml thic Trujalla tu ahlop their wiblts
sth Jobls 1 HE CBE．We．the lacr，whel full at riolhirk

 （kinementioll of blor Dilko？if Multruxa

Khill．m．r．itcll
finlanth，whe w ho merven out小い木k
Mhlll．，M＇rvillil

 ＂f dawll
Shy re，it wretileed flllow
StaAllikll，motioner it luot or daligurabim hisai HI＇s． stinn，a greenly matroding su utk，il lul．milly fellow sivisk，turut witis andilent atroche

TVEI I．，Aharfi，nevere．Ierrihle pira．a dewlals writer 16 l＇rovorbm．The ililer ferms Hillineatemel the wurian to ／i，le vinstions．

 thriatorna．n insht：siot Thiscugx misl Norm

Hम：L a k．Hup wry：supph hor．19y lust

Araires，stattompita
Sг：FK，slut
sithr．k，aris，metent，medhle いいい
StI：INKIBK（chavat），a riolily laced cravat，lemix．ly kuettol．that rany intil fashion after the battle of StENTVOTTEL，ashessor of a thwou or farinlı

416

GLOSSARY

Stiablef, elergyman who lias no settled charge
Stice his horn in the boo, like a wild bull, get himmelf stuck fant
Sticeit a serman, broke dawn in the pulpit
Stint, stop, hais back
Stock-mish, cod, ling, ete., eplit and dried without malt ; usually cod fish Guly is meant

Stat, a bullock

StuUf, a liquid measure
STow, cut
Strae, straw
Suley, Maximilien the Bethune, Duke of, minister to Heury IV. of France
SUPrLe-jack, a strong pliant cane
Syba, young onion
Syse, billee, ago

Taf, tane, the one
TAss, a glass, goblet
Tatry-pow, jotate-head
Tawfie, awkward girl
 recelving of stolen goods from a thef against peet. niary consideration Thiaging ant morning, a kind of pentecl legring, or rather something between begging and robbing, as extorting cattle or the means of subsistence thrang, thronged, busy ; bustle
Thrairle, thruat, windpipe
Thraw, thwart, twist
Thrgughoaun, a searching cross-examination
Throlighstane, flat gravestone
Thrum, a story
Thrums, the loose ends of a piece of woven stuff

Tis, tonch

Titilar, other
Titlino, a variety of atockfisli or cod-figh, is inches in length
Tityre, tu patulat (recubans bub tegmine fagl),

Oh, Tityrua, reelining under the shade of the wide spreading beech; lience, playlig the pastoral poet
Tol, fox ; bushi
Тоцвоотн, јаil Tonneav, a hoghhemi, the brandy cusk used at Nantes Took, tuck, beat of drum

Towm, elujty

Toleret, or Touper, the topkunt or enrl of a periwig
Tow, a rope, hempl
Town, it Seotland a house and its dependent cottagen
Thioreimo hrptimil Hesmei Octavi, Act 37 Henty Vill.
Thoke, traffle, transact, dabble with
Trot-cosey, tiding-hood
Trik, took TIILzie, southe
Turf-back, turf bucket
Twai., twelve
Twangme, two
UncAsefi, undresmed
Uninancy, dangeroing, not safe to medhe with Usco, mucommon, considermble; unco thing, a sabl thing
Usquebacgh, whisky
Veltes, a liquid meamure eqital to 6 pinte, hised in France ; so and so many, varying according to the prort of shipuent, made a hogsheal
Vernon aemprer viret, i.p. Vernon tonrishes ever, read as, ler nom semper viret, i. e. Spring does not last for pver
Vivers, victuals
WA', wall : way
Wab, wonld; a bet ; a hostage
Wadset, inurtgage, a Scots law terin WaE, horty; wazsghr, houriful
Wally-draigle, a freble fermal, drone, slovenly female Wame, belly; hollow

Wappinc, stont, strapping
Warstie, wreatle
Watna, don't know
Wean, child
Wedoes, a wether, miale whcep
Weil, eldy
Wearn, lestiny
Weane, weize, guife, dirort
Well-a-wa : or walla-way an exclanation of sorrow
Whano, thong
Wheren, a few, some
Whigmaleerie, gimicrach, fanta' 'ieal ornament
While byne, some time since
Whist and swabreis. in old form of wh. st, the card-game
White's, a London ciln Where about a century ikis high play went on Whitsge Thyste, a fair helid at Wooler, 20 iniles sontl of Berwlck, at Whitnumtide ; a similar mertiug was held at Whitsunbank Hill, :3 miles from Wooler
Whumade, turn aver, ljmet
WHUPPIT A WA, whiphed away, carried off
Wight, valiant, coniragemis
Will to Cupar maj's th Cupar, a wilful man umat have his way
Winna, will not
Winnle, a frame for wimbing yarn
Winteatos, the Earl of Wiutonn is meant Witting, knowledge
WGN To, reach, arrive at Womden shoeb and whik 1NG-PANB, the Freuch inm the Pretenler. Sife Foi-t Woone, a withy. Twigs of willow, such as bind figet.
often used for halters in Scotland and Irelaud, heing a sage economy of heun, Woundly, very much, dreau fully Wud, mad
WUSH, recammend
WCBs, wish
Wyte, blaue
Yett, gate, doar
Yill, ale

sCOTCH PROVERBS AND FAMILIAR EAYINGS OCCLRRING IN ROB ROY'

Never put ort your arm farther than you can draw it easily hack. An Instane of scotel canthon.
 Jrem and fools prochatm in problie wiat they orerhear at the fireside.
 a full mon, so that one plat more or bess won't matter.
filat fut (his) hourd la a baze. Stired up his wrath.

tiall the bent. Taken to ilfot.
bielter atinger ate as aye wagring. lietter cut a tinger of than let it annoy lig hanging.
bittir sugh farther than fare watr. lietter goon than stay here and suffer worse.
Rofter sune as syine. The somer the better.
Blaid's thleker than wator. An intimatlon of the strength of kinsilip.
if a blowls row (roli) rifht.
$11^{\circ}$ sill taking the breeks aff a Illequmban. You can't dowhat's Impossible.
li yereanery ye kellow to tirn the buckle a your belt behind you. Yon can prepare to tight it out.
Cadgers mann aye be speaking about cart-siaddes. Fiverybody loves to talk abint his own tride.
kiep a eatm solugh. Kiep silent. 'He low:

- Gan do' Ls easy carrled about wione. Volmatary advele is cheap.

They wro ower atid eate to draw that strac atore them. Phey vere too ald 10 be played with in that way.
That chele 's aye for heing ont o the cheese-fat he was monlded in. We Is always forgetting has plate.
Thae corbles dima wather whthout they smell carron. Those harples don't cond together whthent some gowd reason.
llis ralk wad ken the welpht $0^{\prime}$ hls hurdies. Ile would he hanged.
As eromse as a cat when the flac's are katmed aff her. I'erfectly contented and hapro.
Weil rax thelr thrappies that reft us o't. The devil wring the neeks of those that deprived us of it.
The doll's ower Jock Wiatster. All mone wrong lsef Ramsay's Gentle: shepherd.
I had wher begs on the splt. I lad wher fish to fry. sometheng else to do.

If theres a fatr day in sewen. Numblay sure to come and liok it up. The one falr day In the werk is sure to le lost by falluge on "smoday.
Its: a fir ery to dombow Ser 1 . 274 .
Sent thom as a wid a hat in their las. Gave them a sharp reprimand, smothine to think over.
fort that flee stirk in the was. Let hygones be bygones.
Forth bridles the wifd Ilighiandman. The Forth ls the boundary of the llyblands.
Air day or inte das, the fox's hide finds aye the flaying knife, Everything finds its uatural fate at last.
As fustonless as rife leares at lule. Aitogether feebie and destitute of strength.
The tane fles up a bit and the tither gies up a bit. They make mutual concesslons.
VOL. $1 \mathrm{~V}-27$

The gowk had some reason for singing ance in the sear. The fool (euckoo) has a good reason for singing onee a par.
He has a grey mear In hls stable at hame. Ife has a wife at home.
A hadden tongue makes a siabbered mouth. It's ineonvenlent to hold one's Swallow a hair of the dog that had bit me. After belng lntoxleated nowrnight, take a dram In the morning.
It wad be a salr hair in my neck. A constant eause of annoyanee, and wonid give a hoid or purchase over me.
I owe thee a day in harst. A good deed ln tlme of need.
Is for his ain hand, as IIenry Wynd feught. Sce Note 8, p. 408.
Neither to haud nor to bind. Absolutely uneontroliahle.
Hawks pike out hawks' cen. One thlef Infures another.
l'he stoutest head bears langest out.
1 'il e'en lay the head o' the sow to with the bad, whatever comes.
Set the heather on tire. Sitir up rebeliion or Insurrection.
Let every herring hing by Its aln head. Let eaeh be Independent.
Slashed as het a haggis. Been In as difficuit or hot a business.
Stiek his horn in the bog. Get hlmseif into a fix.
Iika bean has lts black and llka path has its puddle. Every good thing has some drawback.
Let lika cock fight his aln battie.
It's an lii bird that files its ain nest. He's a eontemptible wreteh who dis. credits his own klndred.
With iron garters to his hose. With his legs in shaekies.
Jouk and let the jaw gae hy. Submit temporarlly to what is too strong to he opposed.
Gie you your kali through the reek. Give you severe punishment.
Kilted up in a tow. Strung up. hanged.
The klngis errand whiles come sometlmes serve the king.
There's nae gude in speakligg iif o' the laird within his ain bounds. speak lif of a man in his own house.
Cool and come to yourseli like MacGibbon's crowdy when he set it ont at the window-hoie. See Giossary for 'crowdy' and 'bole.'
It just a' gaed aff like moonshine in water. It was entlreis on the surface.
Onything is naething. 'Anything' means ' nothlng.'
It maun e'en he ower shoon ower hoots wl' me. I must take up the matter beartily and thoroughis. I inust go the whole hog.
Ower many malsters, as the paddock sald to the harrow when every tooth gae her a tlg. An explanation of the adage, Like a toad under a harrow.
Plekie in yer aln pock-neuk. Depend on your own exertions.
Plnt-stoups hae lang lius. Littie pitchers have blg ears.
Wind yourseli a bonny pirn. Prepare trouhle for jourseif.
rlack and bawbee. The last penny.
As piain as Peter Pasiey's pike-staff. Perfectiy plain, seif-evident.
As he can rap and rend means for. Scrape together maintenanee for. Our ain reak's (smoke) better than other foiks' fire.
Let lika (each) ane roose (praise) the ford as they find it.
Siored (threatened) foik live lang.
A sight for sair cen. A most welcome sight
There 's sma' sorrow at our parting, as the auld mear sald to the broken cart. I'm glad to get rid of you.
He's honest after a sort. Sef p. 239.
Never look like a sow playing upon a trump for the luve o' that, man
Don't look so dissatisfied and angry.
Speer (ask) nae questions and lil tell ye nae lees (lies).
Make a spune or spoll a horn. Either do great things or make a miserable

A staft out $0^{\prime} \mathrm{my}$ blcker. A serlous loss.
las an unco swas and sily. I'ussesses great Influence, power.
Clean through lther. In utter confuslon, perplexity.
There's my thumb, I'll neiar begulle thee. A form of oath.
They had other tow on thelr rock. Other business on hand.
livery whight has his welrd. liverybody has his own individual desting.
Them that will to Cupar man to Cupar. A wllful man must have his way.
It's nae malr ferlle to see a woman grept than to see a goose gang baretit.
It's not more strange to see women weep than it ls to see a goose with bare feet.

I N D EX

Abbess of Writon, 89, 407
Aberfoll, village. 286,410 ; bridge at, vi, 261 ; lun at, 242
Advertisement, Author's, $v$
Ard, Loch. See Loch Ard
Argyle, Earl of, relations with Rob Roy, xiil, 8
Argyle's Leree, quoted, xxyl
Ariosto's Orlando Furiosu, transtation of, 149
Athole, Earl of, relations with the MacGregors, xilli, xv1; Rob Roy's escaje from, xxxix, 403
Anthor's Advertispment, $v:$ his expedition against the MacLarens, xliv Avondhu, or Hiver Forth, $\because 00(1,286,311$
Barony Laigh Kire, Glasgow, 183, $40 \%$; scene in, 183
Beanchamp, Earl of. See Vernon, Sir
Frederick rederick
Black Bear ium at Darlington, 30
Black-1nail, levied by Rob Roy, xxvii, xxxv, 244, $3 \mathscr{1}$
Black Prince, Frauk's verses on, $1+$
'Bonny Baby Livingstone,' 401
Brownies, superstitions fears of, $2 \pi$
Buchanan, Laird of, and the MacGregors, xiii, xvi

Camprell, cattle dealer. Spe Rob Roy Campbells of Argyle, Fairservice's opinion of, 137
Catholics, seizure of their horses, thit
Cattle, recovery of, by Rol Roy: xxxvi
Charlioch, murderer of the stuidents, xii
Ciar Mohr. Ape Dugald Ciar Mohir
Clachana of Alberfoil. Sipe Aberfoil
College of Glasgow,
Colyuhouns' feud with the MacGregors, $x$, xx
Craig Royston, Rob Roy's property, xix, xxlx, xxxiii
Cramp, Corpral, 284
Cumingham of Borfuhan, his challenge to Rob Roy, xxyi Rob Roy, xxvi
Datone Scuie, or fairies, 20.1, 409
Darlington, Black Bear inn at, 30
Dougal, Hub Ruy's follower, turukey at Glasgow ganl, 198; makes off with the prisumer lefore Thonitom, exs: leals the. woldiers into the ambush, enco ; potect, the Bailie and Frank, exis, init: as the Bailie's mau-servant, 3 :5

Irmking habits, time of tale, if. 11:3, 11i Jummonl, James Mohr. sife ManG remur, Janes Mohr Iruminond, Jolm, muriler of, ix
Drum ii
Pulknirg, the Bonrdeanx merchant, f
Dubourg, Clument, 10
Duel In.tween Frank and Rambleigh, :3u
Dugad Ciar Mohr, murderer of the sthlents, xi; tombstone of, xii; lis descendauts, xiii, xix Duncan with the Cowl,

Edmondstose of Newton, challeuges $\begin{aligned} & \text { Roy } \\ & \text { Ruv }\end{aligned}$
Eugisimne
Euglishmen and meat, 264
Erskine, Ralph, oll rmoking, $41 /$ Ewan of Brigglands, :320; aids Rob IVoy to escape, $3: 2.2$

Fairservice, Amirew, iot : reports Morric's robbery to Frank. 13:'; his opinimu of the the lhall with Frank. lio: carriow, ,n Thoraclitt's mar", inti: deserihnes his mastar to 1 mummeraw, 193 ; threat chend with dismissmh, ergl: inings a sparinnol 257 ; hhes in Aberfoil ime, it.t: belan iont during the skirmish at Louth Aru, :!6. 297 ; stripped hy the Hichlanders, refnews to "arry the lnike's messas. in Heden MacGregir, :313; at Gl, spow as:ili, :ail : buys monruiak, ste; ; returns t. up the keys, $37 \%$ interruption in the library. Sisl; almits Johson anil the ntlicers, 3sx: thrned nut by Rashluigh, :3:H) ; meets the Highlaml drowers, $3: 11$

Finry sulerstition, ©i1, $2: 2,419$
Flytir, Mrs, lolging-house keeper in Glasgun,

Forth, River, its source, 260; valley of, 86, 311
Four-and-twenty Hieland men,' tor?
Foos-lunting, 39 , (ti)
F'rew, Fords of, 96
(ianlic language, 350
(ialbraltl, Major, at Alwerfull inn, $\because(6), 26$ intercedes for Kol Roy, 314
Gurschattachin. Spe Galbraith
Ghane Dliu, or Mactiregor of Girugyle, sxviil, xl, xlviii, fre fhangow, at time of novel, 17 ; eathedral of. lint, tinf ; college of, inf (il.oufruin, conflict in, xi (ilonkgle. Nee Ghlume Dhu Glussiry, 411
'(Gund jrople all,' 71
Grahian of Gatimore, on Rob Ror, xxvii, xxsy; ou the state of the Hishlands, xxvii Gralain of Killearn, seized by lkol, lay, wxiii ; letters on lisarrent, if\% (iregory, Dr. Janes, relations nith liub lBoy, xxix (irembliers, in action, 292
(iley Stunc of MacGregor, xii (iniyuck's curse, 2ot, 110
Himmorgat, Audrew's conflilant, 193 Heraldry, 05
Highlanters, thei: ileota on marvinge by aliture, xlvi; in Glasgow, 175 ; teste, isit
Highlamls, the Bailie's account of, 241 ; approaeh to, 25
Higliwaytuen, at time of novel, :5
 Inglewood, Justice, lī, 70 ; burns the deciaratious, $8!$; visited by Frasik, $30:$
lun cuntoms, at time of novel, $: 9$ hiverach, at Aberfuil, $6 \mathbf{6} 64,276$ luseraslallorll, at Aberfoil, $2 t \rightarrow 0,276$ luvernenty, farm of, xli, xliv liversnaid, fort at, $\times x \times 4$
'It's a far cry to Loclı Awe,' 276
Jacobite Rising of 1715 , the Mactregors' share in, xxviii, xxxi ; premunitiuns on, in Northmuserlant, 36ï
Janues Mohr. See MacGregor, Janies Dolir darvie, Bailie Nieol, Owen's account of, $\because n \%$ : visits Owell in quol, 306 ; interview with lkoh Koy iu gaol, 910 ; eutertains. Frank and Owen at breakfast, ex3; ax-his dinner, zist ; his areonnt of Rob Roy, displays his interest in Ondablistome and Treshan, 249 ; sets out for the Highlinis, with the Highland chiefs, 217,274 : fights the: Highlander, ${ }^{26}$; ; arrested at Alnerfinl, :-7! ; gets suspertuled in milair, $24 \%, 244$; jutests agrinst Morris's derath, Buw : his message to Rol Roy's captors, 311 ; nolvioe atmut Kuti Roy'м mona, $3: 3$; ; eluloraceal by Helen Macdiregor, 3ith; lis departuru lionte, $3 \% \%$; thankenl by Usbaldistunu selliur, 3ini ; marries Mattie, Stit
Jedhart Cast, 359,410
Jobson, Junepli, Juatirec'a elerk, fti; called to lintholge, if; slown his miger to Mise Vermon, $x$; ; entorm the Hall to arrest the Vernous, isw; him behatviuur inthe remine, 3:1:

Key, dean. arried off by Rohin Oik, xlaia; in Filinturgh, xlviii ; luer de:ath, xlix
Klypen, lurship of, xiii
Kiak, Rev. Rotert, carried off $b_{j}$ fairies, (10)

- Lathes aml knishts,' $14!$

Laigh Kirk of (tl:agow, 1N\}, 406
Le:an, Uonalel, or Dunean, xii
l.uliart naterfill, 3.0 . $\}$
 H1:S
Laclı Aril, amlush beside, : : 1
Lovill Lomount, 3 in

- Lachow, It 'a a far cry to,' $2 \mathrm{O}^{\circ} \mathrm{l}$

Litse Latird uf, $x$
 t.lles of the siots, $3:$

Ma'Auzleister, lkob I y's lieutroant, xxui
#1.F:いlate Clan, aii
Ah-Grogor. Vite lab Roy ManGront ('lat, lescent of, viii ; Jespoiled of their phrmesthons, viii; virthally outlawell, ix : find with the Colgulavints, $x$, xrviii; bittlo of Glenfruin, xi ; share in massarre of the stulents, xi; rlan hame prollbited, xlii; relations with Argyle, xiii; mhare in the Civil W:ur, xv; Rub Roy, xviii-xliii ; hership of Kipurn, xviii ; fend with Duke ol Montrone, xil ; "onntry invaled hy Whize volmoters, xxaii : :t Shervilfunir, xxxii : felul with Stew'ort, xli: Roh, lRoy's mons, aliii-lis, paper's relating to, $11{ }^{\prime}$ e'apture, : ins ; escort, Frank, : 111 : lis
 J.hues Muhr

 seromel reception of the lisilite anal Frank. 2. H

Mactiregor, James Moltr, xliv-liis: takes ther sly: ablucts Jean Key, xlvii ; lis tri.el, slix; eseaper from ladinhurgh Castle. l: plote to hetray Allan Sreck Stewart, 1 ; interview with Lortl Holdernossee. li : lis's sadriregor ot liheneyle. S.e (thlume Dhat Alachregr of Gleastiae, x , xis

MarGregor, Robert, 3i3. See alsn Rohin Oig
Mardaren Clan, thelr fornd with the MarGregore, xil, 'ris, 409 ; Anthor's expeditlon againat, xliv
Macpherson, Alexunder, at Hherrifimuir, xxxll
Macrealy, Pate, the peilir, liii:, $1+1$
MacRiminon's Lauent, tio
MaeVittie, the Ghasgew werehant, $18: 0$; in-Rashilelgh, :2y
Mar, Fari of, hu 17IE rising. :hit;
Martha, ionmekecemer it thi II.II, I39
Mattle, the Bailie's maid, :yi:; her care for her mister, 153 ; minle Mis. Jarvie, 3it
Mons Meg, canuoh, fix
Montrose, Duke of, ynarrel with, Rob Roy, view with Frunk, 313 ; intercogatey Roh Roy, 316 ; letters from, respuretug firiham of Kiliearı, 397, H43; Rob Roy's chailouge to, 400
Morrls, his terror of highwaymen, :l: travels with Frank, :4; trios tu forme himmelf on Campibell, $3 ; ;$ rohlwry of, lis; at Jistlce Inglewoud's, -1 ; ilm charge igatinst Frank dismissed, s: ; the rohhery he fore Parianment, lis: with Rawhucigh in Ghasgow, "2s; Jarvie's nceromit of the roblnry, 247 ; thrown into Locin Ard, ưti; Rob Kuy's atory of the robbery, 334 ;
Mottoes at head of chapters, :-2
, My foot is on my native heath,' 334
My sons weavers !' 341
Newoate, prisoners in, 3ix, 3i!
North road, at time of novel, 24,20
'O for the voice of thit wilo hors,' if Orlando Furiose, tramshtion of, $14: 1$
Osbablistone, Diekon, Ew; death of, 318
Osbaldistune, Francis, his memoirx, 1 : firmt interview with his father, $\pm$; refisess t" take to commerce, 5 , I: ; his versus dixcovered, 14 ; leaves his father's housc, $: 1$; falls fin with Morris, it ; plays upon his fears, 2i; meets Cunpbe ll, 30: meet. Ibis and his consins, fin; reated next hor at dinmer, $4!!$; interview with Andrew Falirservice, 54 : tho l.ant, (in); chargenl with robbing Morris, lisk; arrives with Diana at the Jnstice's, fis; the charge dismissent, 82: taken by Wio into the library, ?'?: inquiries of Rashleigh respurting his releas.": 98; conversation with Rashleich, 11.5: learns of Die's onditimal cursurement, 109; ill-temper at dimmer, $112:$ strikes Rashlelgh, IIt; admonishel! y Dir, I:0; warus Gwen against Rashleigh, I2, risus warus (owen against Rashleigh, IL, : rises In estimation at the Hall, 131 ; epes. shamows in Die's room, 138: urged hy Die to return to London, 10.2 ; last sconf with her return to Lond on, 150 ; hast scme with her in the library, 15 ; ; hiter from 'rewham. in the liorary, 15s ; lutter from 'Trewham, 162,16 ; leaves for Cilaseow, 170 ; wirued in the eathedrai, Is-, meets the stranger on the bridge. 19.7: Ied by Rob Roy to the gaol, 197: recognises Campbell in the gaol. 214; euraged with Fairservice,

220 ; breakfasta with Nicol Jar in. :mini enfounter with Rashleagh in thi. © litic cronverantion respecting hing proploit-..... :口1; nets out for the lifghlands, from lab Roy, 27is; arrested by :if tom Thornton, sasi; the mareh lnto thene lie:

 trussos party, ist ; luets with the Vivil.
 lattır alsmi Diana, jui ; returus t. $11 .{ }^{\circ}$ foli, $3 i i^{-}$: reeovery of the Assets. $31=\ldots$ pitrture Irom the IIghinnde, 3Fiti; 1...... Hin's lowe-token fromi Helen Man fo: .....
 helr tu Osbaldistone Hail, ses!: tah ! 11 .

Onhnhtistome, Sir Hihlehrand, and him sed 47: Dle's dreseription of them, in: l.: susplichous, Iob; joins the lusurrevilinh,

Onbinhintole, Johm, E0; fate uf, 3fis
O, inalilistone, I'ercie, © ; denth of, sitis Osballivtone, Kashleigh, deweribed ha Ji, alad Dite at tha' Jurtia'e'r. Is: joins 1.
 with Frank, Ith; lis statemplitm al ut Mins Vernon, IOs; strmek by Frank. Ilt infanomes rondnet tewarils Mina Vinul. tirm's extate. Hi: : veominter with fin $h$ in Ghagow colluge gurds, gat1; fonlif Robl loy's interference, got lif. int. exphamed, $\because+\mathrm{A}_{\text {: }}$ lectrayn\} of [koh, K histreachery, inils alisrarded by him hith:

0.

Frable, th: Thos Velirf, introdnction: th Framh, tli: Mi-s Vermon's leseripti, 1 , 1

 Fuirmovire, 1::3: his death, 36
Oshaldistule, Wiffred, deterribed hy Mat Framn, in: colge-lling match with 'illuti eliff, 11:-: de:th of, 3tis
O. Hablitomr, Wilhiam, Frank's fatheo. :31, I117: his climuer ntter Frank' roin

O.bablintome kill at (iliogou, 3it1

Onbalilistone Hall, $8!$. 4 ; dininer it.
 abolt, 13 ; revisitom, Лif;
Owron, greets Frank, $\overline{5}:$ remonstrates io Frank, 1T, 19; his lutter tor Fralik. 1 in Clasgow grol, 201 : his misfortum 202 ; at the Balie's, -2.3 , 3*
Prelz, Sir Robert, kindnese to the Anther, 4113
Pierth, combat at the North Iuch, 408
Piqnet, game of, 101
Purse of Rol Roy, 341

Rur's Ilixfory of the febellinn, quoted, xxlx liwery, Neoteli reverellew for, atil

Li,hinOin, mlonta MarLaren, xllii : lifa ginl sliii ; him eareer, xlv; carriewoll Jwank.y, Wvii; his expertlou, lili; lablliul 111, tu:
lath liny, the historle peranon, hintury uf, vii, wiii-xliil; is irover, xix; Hecelotox of.

 Girmory, xxix; at Sherriltumle, xui:
 trator's eatlo, xxxil; takell prisan"ry
 (1, Dake of Mont rose, xisix: collilhit witla livtier to Marmbal W:alte, xxxic, ful: fowilue from the Duke of Atlule, xxxiv, $11 ;$

 it Jistice lugkeworl'm, is; villterthont with Murris's robikery, wo, !!): warua Fromk in the Lalgh Clinred, lis: inect.

 (?) or.ten Rashlmigh anI Frank, ㄹ:31 ; Jar-regreta lios wife's untrages ont Mortis, ä: ! :

 :3.1-: lime daym, $: 15$
 linthedge, Farmer, and his will, ,ti

Sibbath, Scotch, IN: I:I?
sontrole, bople, Frank's mirly antiputhies to :1; rimanter, Rashleighos rearliogs of. :In; forms of wotalip, 1aj; woring, wivii, i!1

Sherrihlunir Battle, Kuh Roy'.s I'rt in, ixxi
Smuguting, Aulraw's jlleas of, 17:
Suns h.1lling, Jus

Chustlell of (ihomire, l, li
'ry.ut, datlf' , ixsix
-acart of Apmen, vii, alix
 Now, viii

sinlont: ollatance of, ai sully's Mrmuic. $: ~=$ land, IN: 3

8ydilall, the hutler at tho H. HIl, 3.7
Tante of Highlandorm, ant
The Imlian leatt: E. 1
Thornton, Cigptain arrisי"4 at Aberfoll, wis;

 Titlu, wigiul , vii

 Pronhalu, Will, mhluessed hy Oshaldintome, 1, if possim: litter frimi hin fathor ris-
 Twineall, the elirak, 1:t

Vabonas, Father, 14\%. Nie Vermon, Sir l'rollerick

 1:3): inlmoninlu:i him fur his miseomluct, 1:0): Nomamls a recital of Rashlobighin woml, di:-: "aters the library with her

 $\therefore$

Villull , th:c, ! II, !ni
Winm, Maribial, litter from Rohl lioy, x xxix, H
Warthim, the lamb-steward. 30s
Whig colmotors, invade M.uGregerss rombtry, aviii
Wightman, Mr., of Manlilly, xlviii
Wiitom, Ahluess off, $: 5: 1$, 111
Whaing, furcible, in thre llighlamds, Nliit, 411

Wurship inSonllull. 1:6
Wrizht, Joat, rarriad oll ly Ik,hin Oig, vhii. Sit Key, Jo:all Wind, Il-Iny, oi l'urth, 2ls, fus
$x+2$

THE
WAVERIEY NOVELS
OF
SIR WALTER SCOTT
volume XIII
$\qquad$
THE PIRATK

INTRODUCIION TO THE PIRATE

Quoth he, there was a ship.

THIS brief preface may begin like the tale of the Ancient Mariner, since it was on shipboard that the Author acquired the very moderate degree of local knowledge and information, both of people and scenery, which he has elldeavoured to embody in the romance of the Pirute.
In the summer and autumn of 1814, the Author was invited to join a party of Commissioners for the Northerı Lighthonse Service, who proposed making a voyage round the coast of Scotland, and throngh its various groups of islands, chiefly for the purpose of seeing the condition of the many lighthouses under their direction - edifices so inportant whether regarding them as benevolent or political institutions. Among the coum missioners who manage this important public concern, the sheriff of each county of Scotland which borders on the sea liolds ex ufficio a place at the Board. These gentlemen act in every respect gratuitonsly, but have the nse of an arned yacht, well found and fitted up, when they choose to visit the lighthouses. An excellent engineer, Mr. Robert Stevenson, is attached to the Board, to afford the benefit of his professional advice. The Author accompanied this experlition as a guest ; for Selkirkslire, though it calls lime sheriff, has not, like the kinglom of Boltemia in Corporal 'Irin's story, a seaport in its circuit, nor its magistrate, of course, any place at the Board of Cummissioners - a circumstance of little consequence where all were old and intimate friends, bred to the same profession, and disposed to acconmodate each other in every possible manner.
I'he nature of the important business which was the principal prrpose of the voyage was connected with the amusement of visiting the leading objects of a traveller's curiosity ; for the wild cape or formidable shelve which requires to be marked

viii INTRODLCOION TO THE: PIRATE:

ont by a lighthonse is generally at no great distance from Hoe most lumgnificent scemery of rocks, caves, and billows. Jur time, too, was at our own dispomal, mal, as mont of as were fron-h water mailors, we conld at any time make a finir wiml ont of a fonl one, and run before the pule in quest of sonne objeren if curinsity which lay muler onr hors:

With these? purpones of phlilie utility, mal sonne per-mal anusenent, in view, we left the port of Jeith on the shith July 1814, min along the enst coist of Seothand, viewing it. different curiosities, stomel over to bethanl and Orkney, whin vo were some time detained by the womlers of a eonntry which displayel mo much that was new to no: and having sorn what was corinns in the I'Itima I'men of the ancionts, where the sum harilly thonght it worth while to go to bed, sinne his rising was at this serason so early, we donbled the extreme northern termination of Sicotland, and tonk a rapid survery of the Hebriden, where we finmi many kind frimils. 'Thern, that our little experlition might not want the dignity of dankern, we wre favourm with a distant glimpse of what was seinl "11 be an American cruiser, anil had opportmoity to consider what a pretty figure we whomlal have male lad the vogage emind in our being carried captive to the l'nited States. After vi-ll ing the romantic shores of Morven and the vieinity of (Hsin, we made a rinn to the const of Ireland and visited the (iiant: Causeway, that we might compare it with Statha, which wo had surveyed in our eonrse. At length, nbont the midille if September, we ended our voyage in the Clyde, at the j"t il Greencek.'

And thins terminated our pleasant tour, to which our equip ment gave unnsmal facilities, an the ship's company could fin'm a good bont's crew, independent of those who might be left on board the vessel, which permitted ins the freedom to land wherr. ever our curiosity carried ns. I Let ne adil, while reviewing fin a monent a smmy portion of my life, that among the six in seven triends who performed this voynge together; some of them doubtless of different tastes and pursuits, and remaining fing several weeks on board a small vessel, there never occurred $1 /$. slightest dispute or disagreement, each seening anxions to suh mit his own particular wishes to those of his friends. By thi: mutual aceommolation all the purposes of one little experition were obtained, while for a time we might have arlopted the lines of Allan Cuminghan's fine seab-song,

[^52]
Thre world of waters waw our holle, Alid merr" intil were we !

But sorrow mixes he memorials with the purest remem. brances of pleasure. (In returning from the vignge which had proved mo satisfactory, I fombl that fate hand deprived her mmintry most mexpectedly of a laily qualified to morn the hing rank which she heli, and who had long adnitted bete a a share of her friendship.' 'I'he subsequent losen of me af those comirailes , Who mate up the party, and he the most intimate friend I had in the world, ${ }^{2}$ casts also its shate on recollectionis which, but for these imbitterments, wonld le othorwise so satisfactory.

I may here briefly ohserve, that my bininess in this voyige, su firr as I conlt lie said to: lave may, was to cmleavomr to dis. ruver some lowalities whicin might be usefinl in the Lamd of the Isfor, a poem wi i which I was then th:reatening the public, and Which was afterwarls printed withont attaining remarkahle sincess. But ns at the same time the ammymons novel of Il'reroley was making its way top pophlarity, I alrendy nupured the possibility of a second effort in this department of literature, and I saw numeli in the wild islanls of the Orkneys and Geetand which I julged might be made in the highest degree interasting, shoulid these isles ever beanne the secne of a marrative of fictitions events. I learned the history of Gow the pirate from an old sibyl (nee Note $14, p, 4 \overline{-1}$ ), whase principal subsistence was by a trade in favourable winds, which she sold to mariners at Strommess. Nothing could be mure interesting than the kindness and hospitality of the gentlenen of Zethunl, Which was to me the more affecting as severul of them hal been friends and correspondents of my fither.

I was induced to go a generation or two firther back to finil materials from which I might trace the features $0^{\text {a }}$ : he old Norwegian udaller, the Seottish gentry having in general oceupied the place of that primitive race, anl their languace and peenliarities of manner having entirely disappeared. The oniy differenee now to be observed betwixt the gentry of these islands and those of Scotland in general is, that the wealth and property is more equally divided among our more northern eountrymen, and that there exists among the resident pro. prietors no men of very great wealth, whose display of its luxuries might render the others discontented with their cwn lot. From the same canse of general equality of fortunes, and the eheapness of living which is its natural consequenee, I fomil the officers of a veteran regiment who had maintained the garrison at Fort Charlotte, in Lerwick, diseomposed at the ideat of being recalled from a country where their pay, however inadequate to the expenses of a capital, was fully adequate to their wants, and it was singular to hear natives of merry Busland herself regretting their approaching departure from the melancholy isles of the Ultima 'Ihule.

[^53]
$x$ INTRODUCTION TO THE PIRATE

Such are the trivial particulars attending the origin of that publication, which took place several years later than the agreeable journey in which it took its rise.

The state of mamers which I have introduced in the romanee was neeessarily in a great degree imaginary, though foumded in some measure ou slight hints, which, showing what was, seeneed to give reasonable indication of what must once have been, the tone of the society in these sequestered but interesting islands.

In one respect I was jullgel somewhat hastily, perliaps, when the character of Norna was pronouncel by the eritics a mere eopy of Mey Merrilies. That I had fallen short of what I wished and desired to express is unquestionable, otherwise m! objeet could not have been so widely mistaken; nor can I yet think that any person who will take the trouble of reading the Pirate with some attention can fail to trace in Norna-the victim of remorse and insanity, and the dupe of her own imposture, her mind, too, flooded with all the wild literature and extravagant superstitions of the North - something distimet from the Dumfriesshire gipsy, whose pretensions to super natural powers are not beyond those of a Norwood prophetess. The foundations of such a character may be perhaps tracel. though it he too true that the necessary superstructure cammot have been raised upon them, otherwise these remarks wonld have been mmecessary. 'There is also grat improbability in the statement of Norna's possessing power and "pportmity ts impress on others that belief in her supernatural powers which distracted her own mind. Yet, amid a very credulous and ignorant population, it is astonishing what success may be attained by an impostor who is, at the same time, an enthusiast. It is such as to remind us of the couplet which assures us that

The pleasure is as great  Of being cheated as to cheat.

Indeed, as I have observed elsewhere, the professed explanation of a tale, where appearances or incidents of a superuatural clamacter are explained on natural causes, has often, in the wiuding up of the story, a degree of improbability almost eynal to itl absolute goblin tale. Even the genius of Mrs. Radeliffe could not always surmount this difficulty.

Albotsford, 1st May 1831.

ADVERTISEMENT TO THE FIRST EDI'TION

THE purpose of the following narrative is to give a detailed and accurate account of certain remarkable incidents which took place in the Orkney Islands, concerning which the more imperfect traditions and mutilated records of the country only tell us the following erroneous particulars:-
In the month of Jannary 1724-25, a vessel, called the 'Revenge,' bearing twenty large guns and six smaller, commanded by John Gow, or Goffe, or Smith, came to the Orkney Lslauls, and was discovered to be a pirate by various acts of insolence and villany committed by the crew. These were for some time submitted to, the inhabitants of the remote islands not 1"ssessing arms nor means of resistance; and sn bold was the captain of these banditti, that he not only came ashore and grave dancing-parties in the village of Stromness, but, before bis real character was discovered, engaged the affections, and received the troth-plight, of a young lady possessed of some property. A patriotic individual, James Fea, younger of Clestron, formed the pian of securing the buccanier, which he effiected by a mixture of courage and address, in consequence chietly of Gow's vessel having gone on shore near the barbour

xii INTRODUCTION TO THE PIRATE

of Calfsound, on the Island of Eda, not far distant from a honsee then inhabited by Mr. Fea. In the various stratagelns by which Mr. Fea contrived finally, at the peril of his life (they being well armed and desperate), to make the whole pirates his prisoners, he was much aided by Mr. James Laing, the grunulfather of the late Malcolm Laing, Ess., ${ }^{1}$ the acute and ingeniuus $!\cdot$ orian of Scotland during the $1 \overline{7}$ th century.
low and others of his crew suffered, by sentence of the High Court of Admiralty, the punishment their crimes had long deserved. He conducted himself with great audacity when before the court; and, from an account of the matter by an eye-witness, seems to have been subjected to some unusinal severities in order to compel him to plead. The words are these : 'John Gow would not plead, for which he was brought to the bar, and the Judge ordered that his thumbs shoulil he squeezed by two men, with a whip-cord, till it did break; and then it should be doubled, till it did again break, and then laid threefold, and that the executioners should pull with their whole strength ; which sentence Gow endured with a great deal of boldness.' 'The next morning (27th May 1725), when he had seen the terrible preparations for pressing him to death, his courage gave way, and he told the marshal of court that he would not have given so much trouble had he been assured of not being hanged in chains. He was then tried, condeumed, and executed, with others of his crew.

It is said that the lady whose affections Gow had engagel went up to London to see him before his death, and that, arriving too late, she had the courage to request a sight of his dead body ; and then, touching the hand of the corpse, she formally resumed the trotin-plight which she had bestower. Without going through this ceremony, she could not, accurding to the superstition of the country, have escaped a visit frimin the ghost of her departed lover, in the event of her bestowing upon any living suitor thee faith which she had plighted to the dead. This part of the legend may serve as a curious columentary on the fine Scottish ballad ${ }^{2}$ which begins,

> There came a ghost to Margaret's door, etc.

[^54]The common accomnt of this incident farther bears, that Mr. Fea, the spirited individual by whose exertions Gow's career of ininuity was cut short, was so far from receiving any reward from Government, that he could not obtain even comntenance enough to protect him against a variety of sham suits, raised against him by Newgate volicitors, who acted in the name of Gow and others of the pirate crew; and the various expenses, vexatious prosecntions, and other legal consequences, in which his gallant exploit involved him, utterly ruined his fortme and his family; making his memory a notable example to all who shall in future take pirates on their own anthority.

It is to be supposed, for the honour of George the First's Govermment, that the last circmustance, as well as the dates, and wther particulars of the commonly received story, are inaccurate, since they will be found totally irreconcilable with the following veracions narrative, compiled from materials to which he himself alone has had access, by

The Author of I'aterley
December, 1821.

THE PIRATE

CHAPTER I

The storm had ceased its wintry roar, Hoarse dash the billows of the sea; But who on Thule's desert shore Cries, Have I burnt my harp for thee?

Macniel.

THAT long, narrow, and irregular island, usually called the mainland of Zetland, because it is by far the iargest of that archipelago, terminates, as is well known to the mariners who navigate the stormy seas which surround the Thule of the ancients, in a cliff of immense height, entitled Sumburgh Head, which presents its bare scalp and naked sides ti) the weight of a tremendous surge, forming the extreme point of the isle to the south-east. This lofty promontory is constantly exposed to the current of a strong and furious tide, whicl, setting in betwixt the Orkney and Zetland Islands, and running with force only inferior to that of the Pentland Firth, takes its name from the headland we have mentioned, and is called the Roost of Sumburgh - 'roost' being the phrase assigned in these isles to currents of this description.
On the land side, the promontory is covered with short grass, and slopes steeply down to a little isthmus, upon which the sea has encroached in creeks, whish, advancing from either side of the island, gradually work their way forward, and seem as if in a slort time they would form a junction and altogether insulate Sumburgh Head, when what is now a cape will become a lonely mountain islet, severed from the Mainland, of which it is at present the terminating extremity.

Man, however, had in former days considered this as a remote or unlikely event; for a Norwegian chief of other times, or, vol. xiri-1 as other accounts said, and as the name of Jarlshof seemed to imply, an ancient Earl of the Orkneys, had selected this neck of land as the place for establishing a mansion-honse. It has been long entirely deserted, and the vestigeis only can he discerned with difficulty; for the loose sand, borne on the tempestuous gaies of those stormy regions, has overblowin inn almost buried the ruins of the buildings; but in the ennl if the 17 th century a part of the carl's mansion was still entire and habitable. It was a rude building of rough stone, with nothing about it to gratify the eye or to exeite the imaginition; a large old-fashioned narrow house, with a very steep roof, eovered with flags composed of grey sandstone, woull perhaps convey the best idea of the plaee to a modern reader. The windows were tew, very small in size, and distributed up and down the building with uiter eontempt of regnlarity. Against the main strueture had rested, in former times, certain smaller compartments of the mausion-house, containing offires, or subordinate apartments, neeessary for the earl's retainer: and menials. But these had beeome ruinous; and the rafters had been taken down for firewood or for other purposes; the walls had given way in many places; and, to complete the devastation, the sand had already drifted amongst the ruins, and filled up what had been once the chambers they contained, to the depth of two or three feet.

THE PIRATE

Amid this desolation, the inhabitants of Jarlshof had comtrived, by constant labour and attention, to keep in order a few roods of land, which had been inclosed as a grarden, anil] whieh, sheltered by the walls of the honse itself from the relent. less sea-blast, produeed sueh vegetables as the elimate conll bring forth, or rather as the sea-gale would permit to grow ; for these islands experienee even less of the rigour of cold thim is encountered on the mainland of Seotland; but, unsheltered by a wall of some sort or other, it is searee possible to ratise even the most ordinary culinary vegetables; and as for shrults or trees, they are entirely out of the question, such is the forre of the sweeping sea-blast.

At a short distance from the mansion, and near to the weabeach, just where the creek forms a sort of imperfect harlumi, in which lay three or four fishims boats, there were a few mond wretched cottages for the inlmbitants and tenants of the township of Jarlshof, who held the whole district of the landlord upon sueh terms as were in those days usually granted to persons of this description, and whieh, of course, were hard enough.

The landlord hinsself resided npon an estate which he possessed in a more eligible situation in a different part of the island, and seldom visited his possessions at Sumburgh Head. He was an honest, plain Zetlani gentleman, somewhint passionate, t!e necessary result of being surrounded by dependants; and somewhat over-convivial in his labits, the conseqnence, perhaps, of having too much time at his disposal ; but frank-tempered and wenerons to his people, and kind and hoypitable to strungers. He was descended also of an old and noble Norwegian family -a eircumstance which rendered him dearer to the lower urders, most of whem are of the same race; while the lairds, or proprietors. - ag generally of Scottish extraction, who, at that early period, were still considered us strangers and intruders. Magnus 'I'roil, who deduced his descent from the very earl who was supposed to have founded Jarlshof, was peculiarly of this "pinion.
The present inhabitants of Jarlsliof had experienced, on several occasions, the kindness and good-will of the proprietor of the territory. When Mr. Mertoun - such was the name of the present inhabitant of the old mansion-first urrived in Zetland, some years before the story commences, he had been received at the house of Mr. 'Iroil with that wam and cordial lospitality for which the islands are distimguished. No one aked him whence he came, where he was going, what was his purpose in visiting so remote a corner of the empire, or what was likely to be the term of his stay. He arrived a perfect stranger, yet was instantly overpowered by a succession of invitations; and in each house which he visited he found a home as long as he chose to accept it, and lived as one of the family, unnoticed and unnoticing, mimil he thonght proper to remove to some other dwelling. This apparent indifference to the rank, character, and qualities of their gnest did not arise from apathy on the part of his kind hosts, for the islanders had their full share of natural curiosity: hut their delicacy deemed it would be an infringement nion the laws of hospitality to ask questions whic! their gnest might have fomme it diffienlt or mupleasing to answer ; and insteal of endeavouring, an is ustal in other commeries, to wring out of Mr. Mertom such commmicati,ns as he might find it agreeable to withhold, the comsiderate Ketlanders contented themselves with eagerly gathering ur sueh scraps of information as could be collected in the conrse of conversation.

But the rock in an Arabian desert is not more reluctant to afford water than Mr. Basil Mertoun was niggard in imparting his confidence, even incidentally; and certainly the politeness of the gentry of Thule was never put to a more severe test than when they felt that good-breeding enjoined them 11 abstain from inquiring into the situation of so mysterions a personage.

THE PIRATE

All that was actually known of him was easily summed up. Mr. Mertoun had come to Lerwick, then rising into some inportance, but not yet acknowledged as the principm town if the island, in a Dutch vessel, accompanied only by his sim, a handsome boy of about fourteen years old. His own age minglit exceed forty. The Dutch skipper introduced him to some of the very good friends with whom he used to barter gin and gingerbread for little Zetland bullocks, smoked geese, annl stockings of lambs' wool ; and although Meiuherr could omly say that, 'Meinherr Mertoun hab bay his bassage like mie gentlemans, and hab given a kreitz-dollar beside to the crew,' this introduction served to establish the Dutchman's passenser in a respectable circle of acquaintances, which grailually enlarged, as it appeared that the stranger was a man of considerable acquirements.
This discovery was made alnost per force; for Mertoun was as unwilling to speak upon general subjects as upon his own affairs. But he was sometimes led into discussions, which showed, as it were in spite of himself, the scholar and the mian of the world ; and at other times, as if in requital of the hospitality which he experienced, he seemed to compel himself, against his fixed mature, to enter into the society of thme around him, especially when it assumed the grave, melancholy, or satirical cast which best snited the temper of his own minil. Upon such occasions, the Zetlanders were miversally of opinim that he must have had an excellent education, neglected ouly in one striking particnlar, namely, that Mr. Mertoun sarce knew the stem of a ship from the stern; and in the management of a boat a cow conld not be more ignorant. It seemed astonishing, such gross ignorance of the most necessary art of life, in the Zetlam Isles at least, should subsist along with his accomplishments in other respects ; bnt so it whs.

Unless called forth in the mamer we have mentioned, the habits of Basil Mertomn were retired and gloomy. From lound mirth he instantly fled; and even the moderated cheerfulness of a friendly party had the invariable effect of throwiug lime into deeper dejection than even his usual demeanour indicitenl.

Women are always particularly desirous of investigating mystery and of alleviating melancholy, especially when thess circunstances are united in a handsome man about the prime of life. It is possible, therefore, that amongst the fair-haired and blue-eyed danghters of 'Ihnle this mysterious and pensive strauger might have fomnd some one to take upon herself the task of consolation, had he shown miny willingness to accept snch kindly offices; but, far from doing so, he seemed even to shum the presence of the sex to which in our distresses, whether of minil or body, we generally apply for pity and comfort.
'Io these peculiarities Mr. Mertoun added another, which was particularly disagreeable to his host and principal patron, Magnus 'Iroil. This magnate of Zethand, descended by the father's side, as we have already said, from an ancient Norwegian family, by the marriage of its representative with a lanish lady, held the devont opinion that a cup of (ieneva ir Nantz was specific against all cares and aftlictions whatever. These were rentedies to which Mr. Mertoun never applied : his drink was water, and water alone, and no persuasion or entreaties could induce him to taste any stronger beverage than was afforded by the pure stream. Now this Magnus 'lroil conld mit tolerate ; it was a defiance to the ancient Northern laws of "nnviviality, which, for his own part, he had so rigidly observed thit, although he was wont to assert that he hail never in his life gone to bed drunk (that is, in his own sense of the word), it would have been impossible to prove that he had ever resigneel himself to slumber in a state of actnal and absolute solbriety. It may be therefore asked, What did this stranger bring into society to compensate the displeasure given by his anstere and abstenious habits? He had, in the first place, that manner and self-importance which mark a person of some cunsequence ; and although it was conjectured that he could nut be rich, yet it was certainly known by his expenditure that neither was he absolutely poor. He had, besiles, some powers of conversation, when, as we have alrealy hinted, he chose to exert them, and his misanthropy or aversion to the business :und intercourse of ordinary life was often expressed in an antithetical manner, which often passed for wit, when better was lu,t to be had. Above all, Mr. Mertoun's secret seemed impenetrable, and his presence had all the interest of a riddle, which men love to read over and over, becanse they camint fiml out the meaning of it.

Notwithstanding these recommendations, Mertoun differed in so many material points from his host, that, after he had been for some time a guest at his prineipal residenee, Magnus Iroil was agreeably surprised when, one evening, after they hal sat two hours in absolnte silence; drinking brandy and water-. that is, Magnus drinking the alcolol and Mertonn the element -the guest asked his hont's sermission to ocenpy, as his teman, this deserted mansion of Jarlsloff, at the extrenity of the territory called Dunrossnces, and situated just beneath Sumburgh Head. 'I shall be handsonely rid of him,' quoth Magnus tw himself, 'and his kill-joy' visuge will never again stop the laitle in its romnd. His depurture will ruin me in lemons, however, for his mere look was quite sufficient to sour a whole ucemen of punch.'

THE PIRATE

Yet the kind-henrted Zetlander generonsly and disinter. estedly remonstrated with Mr. Mertomn on the solitule anid ineonveniences to which he was about to sulbject himeself. 'There were searcely,' he said, 'even the most necessary artiche: of furniture in the old honse; there was 10 suceicty within many uiles; for provisioms, the principal article of foorl womlid be sour sillocks, and his only compmiy gills and gannets.'
'My good friend,' replied Mertomn, 'if you could have named a cirenmstance which would render the revidence more eligille to me than any other, it is that there would be neither human luxiry nor human society near the place of my retreat : a shelter from the wenther for my own head and for the hey's is all I seek for. So nume your rent, Mr. Troil, and let me the your tenaut at Jarlshof.'
'Rent!' answered the Zetliander; ' why, no great rent fir an old? louse which no one has lived in since my mother's time God rest her ! - and as for shelter, the old walls are thick ehumsh, and will bear many a bang yet. But, Heaven love yon, Mr: Mertom, think what yon are purposing. For one of nis tio live at Jarlshof were a wild scheme enongh ; but yon, whin are from another country, whether English, Scotch, or Irisl, nu one cant tell $\qquad$ '
'Nor does it greatly matter,' said Mertoun, womewhat abruptly.
'Not a herring's scale,' answered the lairl; 'only, that I like you the better for being no Scot, as I trust you are mut one. Hither they have come like the clack-geese: urery chamberlain has brought over a flock of his own name, and his own hatching, for what I know, and here they roost for ever. catch them returuing to their own barren Highlands or Low.
lands, when once they have tastell our Zetland beef and seen our bonny voess and lochs. No, sir' - here Magnus proceedel with great anmation, sipping from time to time the lmiff-dilnted -pirit, which at the same time mimated his reventment against the intrulers and enabled him to endure the mortifying reflection which it suggesten - ' 110 , sir, the ancient days and the gemine munners of these islands are no more; for our ancient pussessors - our P'atersons, our Fens, our Schlugbrenners, our Thorbiorns - have given place to Giffords, Seotts, Momats, men whose names bexpeak thein or their ancestors strungers to the soil which we the Troils have inhubited long lefore the days of 'lurf-Binur, who first tanght these isles the mystery of burning peat for fiel, and who has been handed down to a gratefinl posterity by a name whieh records the diseovery.'
This was a subject upon which the potentate of Jarkhof win unnully very liffinse, and Mertom saw him enter unu it with plasure, becunse he knew his should not be called npon to contribute nuy aill to the conversation, and might therefore indulge his own saturnine humour while the Norwegian Zethander dechime! on the change of times and inhahitants. But just as Magnus had arrived at the melancholy conchusion, "Ihow, probable it was that, in another century, searee a " merk," vearce even an "ure," of land would be in the possession of the Norve inlabitants, the true ulallers ${ }^{1}$ of Zetland,' he recollected the circumstances of his gnest, and stopped suldenly short. 'I do mut say all this,' he added, interrinting himself, 'as if I were muwilling that yon should settle on my estate, Mr. Mertom. But for Jurlshof - the plaee is a wild one. Come from where you will, I warmut you will say, like other travellers, you came from a better climate than onrs, for so say you all. And yet you think of a retreat which the very natives rim away from. Will yon not take your glass ?-- (This was to be considered as interjectional) - 'Then here 's to you.'
'My good sir,' answered Mertom, 'I am indifferent to elimate : if there is but nir enongh to fill my lungs, I eare not if it be the breath of Ambia or of Laplanl.'
'Air enongh you may have,' 'msswere! Magnus, 'nu lack of that; ; somewhat damp, strangers nllege it to he, but we know a corrective for that. Here's to yon, Mr. Mertoun. You mist leam to do so, anul to smoke a pipe ; and then, as you say, you will find the air of Zetland equal to that of Arabia. But have you seen Jarlshof?'

[^55]
THE PIRATE

The stranger intimaterl that he had not.
'Then,', replied Magnons, 'you have no idea of your under taking. If yon think it a comfortable roadstead like this, will the house situated on the side of an inland voe,' that bringn thu herrings up to your door, you are mistaken, my heart. II Jarlshof yon will see nought but the wild waves tumbling 'ill the bare rocks, and the Roost of Sumburgh runuing at the ralle of fifteen knots an hour.'
'I shall see nothing at least of the current of human passions, replied Mertoun.
' Yon wili hear nothing but the clanging and screaming if scarts, sheerwaters, and sea-gulls from daybreak till sunset.'
'I will compound, my friend,' replied the strumger, 'so that I 's not hear the chattering of women's tongues.

- Ah,' said the Norman, 'that is becuuse you hear just muw my little Minna and Brenda singing in the garden with your Morlaunt. Now, I would rather listen to their little woinc: than the skylark which I once hearl in Caithness, or the night ingale that I have read of. What will the girls do for want if their playmate Mordaunt?
'They will shift for thenselves,' answered Mertoun : 'yomunir or elder, they will find playmates or dupes. But the question is, Mr. Troil, will you let to me, as your tenant, this old mansion of Jarishof?'
'Gladly, since you make it your option to live in a spot so desolate.'
'And as for the rent ?' continued Mertoun.
'The rent!'replied Magnns; 'hum - why, you must haw the bit of "plantie cruive," " which they once called a gariul. and a right in the "scathold," and a sixpenny merk of lanl. that the tenants may fish for you ; eight "lispunds" " of butter and eight shillings sterling yearly is not too much?'
Mr. Mertoun agreed to terms so moderate, and from thence forward resided chiefly at the solitary mansion which we hasc described in the beginning of this chapter, conforming not only: without complaint, but, as it seemed, with a sullen pleasnre, to all the privations which so wild and desolate a situation necessurily imposed on its inhabitant.

[^56]

MAGNUS TROIL AND HIS DAUGHTERS.
From at painting by Robert IIerdman, IR.S.A.

CH APTER :

> 'T is not alone th . A.nns ; the mes., Anselmo, The man finds sympathes in the se wild wastes And roughly tumbling seas, which fairer views And smoother waves deuy him.

THE few inhabitants of the township of Jarlshof had at first heard with alarm that a person of rank superior to their own was come to reside in the ruinous tenement which they still called the castle. In those days (for the present times are greatly altered for the better) the presenee of a superior, in sueh a situation, was almost certain to be attended with additional burdens and exaetions, for whieh, under one pretext or another, feudal customs furnished a thousand apologies. By each of these, a part of the tenants' hard-won and precarious profits was diverted for the use of their powerful neighbour and superior, the taeksman, as he was called. But the sub-tenants speedily found that no oppression of this kind wis to be apprehended at the hands of Basil Mertoun. His uwi means, whether large or small, were at least fully adequate to his expenses, whieh, so far as regarded his habits of life, were of the most frugal deseription. 'The luxuries of a few hooks, and some philosophical instruments, with whieh he was supplied from London as oecasion offered, seemed to indieate a deyree of wealth unusual in these islands; but, on the other hand, the table and the aeeommodations at Jarlshof did not exceed what was maintained by a Zetland proprietor of the most inferior deseription.
The tenauts of the hamlet troubled themselves very little about the quality of their superior, as soon as they found that their situation was rather to be mended than rendered worse by his presenee; and, onee relieved from the apprehension of his tyrannising over them, they laid their heads together to make the most of him by various petty tricks of overeharge and extortion, which for a while the stranger submitted to with the most philosophic indifference. An incident, lowever, occurred which put his character in a new light, ande effertnally checked all future efforts at extravagant imposition.

A dispute arose in the kitchen of the castle betwixt an oll governante, who acted as housekeeper to Mr. Mertoun, anid Sweyn Erickson, as good a Zetlander as ever rowed a brat th the 'haaf fishing '; ${ }^{1}$ which dispute, as is usual in such cases, was maintained with such increasing heat and vociferation as to reach the ears of the master (as he was caller), who, secludeni in a solitary furret, was deeply employed in examining the contents of a new package of books from London, which, after long expectation, had found its way to Hull, from thence by a whaling vessel to Lerwick, and so to Jarlshof. With more than the usual thrill of indignation which indolent people always feel when roused into action on some unpleasant occasion, Mertoun descended to the scene of content, and so suddenly, peremptorily, and strictly inquired the canse of disputc, that the parties, notwithstanding every evasion which they attempted, became mable to disguise from limi that their difference respected the several interests to which the honest governante and no less honest fisherman were respectively entitled in an overcharge of about oue hundrel per cent on a bargain of rock-cod, purchased by the former from the latter, for the use of the family at Jarlshof.

When this was fairly ascertained and confessed, Mr. Mertnun stood looking upon the culprits with eyes in which the uthont scorn seemed to contend with awakening passion. 'Hark you, ye old hay,' said he at length to the housekeeper, 'avoil my house this instant! and know that I dismiss you, not for hein! a liar, a thicf, and an ungrateful quean - for these are yualities as proper to you as your name of woman - but for daring, in my house, to scold above your breath. And for you, yom rascal, who suppose you may cheat a stranecr as you woull flinch ${ }^{2}$ a whale, know that I am well acqlauinted with the rights which, by delegation from your master, Magnus Truil, I can exercise over yon, if I will. Provoke me to a certinin pitch, and you shall learrn, to your cost, I can break your rest as easily as you "cin interrupt my leisure. I know the meanin! of "scat," and "wattle," and "hawkhen," and "hagalef," nut

[^57]every other exaction by which your lords, in ancient and moderit days, have wrung your withers; nor is there one of yon that shall not rue the day that you could not be content with robbing me of my money, bit must also break in on my leisure with your atrocions Northern clamour, that rivals in discord the sereaming of a Hight of Arctic gulls.'
Nothing better occurred to Sweyn, in answer to this objurgation, than the preferring a humble request that his honour would be pleased to keep the cod-fish without paynent, and say no more about the matter ; but by this time Mr. Mertoum had worked up his passions into an ungovernable rage, and with one hand he threw the money at the fisherman's head, while with the other he pelted him out of the apartment with his own fish, which he finally Hung ont of doors after him.
There was so much of appalling and tyramic fury in the stranger's mamer on this occasion, that Sweyn neither stopped to collect the money nor take back his commodity, but fed at a precipitate rate to the small hamlet, to tell his comrades that, if they provaked Master Mertomin any farther, he would turn an absolute Pate Stewart ${ }^{1}$ on their hand, and head and hang without either judgment or mercy.
Hither also came the discarded honsekeeper, to consult with her neighbours and kindred (for she too was a native of the village) what she should do to regain the desirable situation from which she hard been so suddenly expelled. The old Rauzelliar of the village, who had the voice most potential in the deliberations of the township, after hearing what had happened, pronomince

Sweyn Ericksou had gone too far in raising the marke Ir. Mertom ; and that, whatever pretext the tacksiman ont assume for thus giving way to his anger, the real grievance must have been the charging the rock coll-fish at a penny instead of a half-pemyy a pound; he therefore exhorted all the community never to raise their exactions in future beyond the proporion of three pence upon the shilling, at which rate their master at the castle could not reasonahly be expected to grumble, since, as he was disposed to do them nio harm, it was reasonahle to think that, in a moderate way; he hat no objection ' do them good. 'And three upon twelve, said the experiencen Ranzellaar, 'is a decent and moulerate profit, and will brin? with it God's blessing and St. Ronald's.'

[^58]
THE PIRATE

Proceeding upon the tariff thus judiciously recommented to them, the inhabitants of Jarlshof cheated Mertoun in future only to the moderate extent of twenty-five per cent - a rate til which all nabobs, army-contractors, speculators in the funds, and others, whom recent and rapid success has enabled to settle in the country upon a great scale, ought to submit as very reasim. able treatment at the hand of their rustic neighbours. Mertumin at least seemed of that opinion, for he gave hinself no farther trouble upon the subject of his household expenses.

The conscript fathers of Jarishof, having settled their own matters, took next under their consideration the case of Swertha, the banished matron who had been expelled from the castle, whom, as an experienced and useful ally, they were highly: desirous to restore to her office of honsekeeper, should that lie found possible. But as their wisdom here failed them, Swertha, in despair, had recourse to the good offices of Mordaunt Mertoun, with whom she had acquired some favour by her knowledge in old Norwegian ballads, and dismal tales concerning the 'I'rows, or Drows (the dwarfs of the Scalds), with whom superstitions eld had peopled many a lonely cavern and brown dale in Dumrnsis. ness, as in every other district of Zetland. 'Swertha,' sail the youth, 'I can do but little for you, but you may do something, for yourself. My father's passion resembles the fury of throse ancient champions - those Berserkars, you sing songs about.
'Ay-ay, fish of iny heart,' replied the old woman, with : pathetic whine; 'the Berserkars were champions who lived before the blessed days of St. Olave, and who used to run like madmen on swords, and spears, and harpoons, and muskets, and snap them all into pieces, as a finner ${ }^{1}$ would go through a herring-net, and then, when the fury went off, they were as weak and unstable as water.' ${ }^{2}$
'That's the very thing, Swertha,' said Mordaunt. 'Now, my father never likes to think of his passion after it is over, and is so much of a Berserkar that, let him be desperate as l:e will to-day, he will not care about it to-norrow. Therefore, he has not filled up your place in the household at the castle, and not a mouthful of warm food has been dressed there since youl went away, and not a morsel of bread baked, but we have lived just upon whatever cold thing came to hand. Now, Swertha, I will be your warrant that, if yon go boldly up to the castle, and enter upon the discharge of your duties as usual, you will never hear a single word from him.'

[^59][^60]Swertha hesitated at first to obey this bold counsel. She said, 'To her thinking, Mr. Mertoun, when he was angry, lookel more like a fiend than any Berserkar of then all: that the fire thashed from his eyes, and the foam Hew from his lips; anl that it would be a plain tempting Providence to put herself again in sueh a venture.'

But, on the ensouragement whieh she received from the som, she determined at length onee more to face the parent; and, dressing herself in her ordinary household attire, for so Mordaunt partieularly recommended, she slipped into the 'ast'c, and presently resuming the various and numerons occupations which devolved on her, seemed as deeply engaged in household cares as if she had never been out of office.

I'he first day of her return to her duty, Swertha made no appearance in presence of her master, but trusted that after his three days' diet on cold meat, a hot dish, dressed with the best of her simple skill, might introduce her favourably to his recollection. When Mordaunt had reported that his father han taken no notice of this change of diet, and when she herself observed that, in passing and repassing him occasionally, her inppearance produced no effect upon her singular master, she began to imagine that the whole affair had escaped Mr. Mertoun's memory, and was aetive in her duty as usual. Neither was she convinced of the contrary until one day when, hapmening somewhat to elevate her tone in a dispute with the other maid-servant, her master, who at that time passed the place of contest, eyed her with a strong glance, and pronouneed the single word, 'Remember!' in a tone which tanght Swertlia the govermment of her tongue for many weeks after.

If Mertoun was whinsical in his mode of governing his honsehold, he seemed no less so in his plan of educating his son. He showed the youth but few symptoms of parental iffection ; yet, in his ordinary state of nimd, the improvement of Mordannt's elucation seened to be the utmost object of his life. He hind hoth books and information sufficient to discharge the task of tutor in the ordinary branches of knowledge; and in this ciapacity was regnlar, calm, and strict, not to say severe, in exacting from his papil the attention necessary for his protitins. But in the perusal of history, to whith their attention was frequently turned, as well as in the study of classic anthors, there uften occurred facts or sentiments which prolnced an instant effect umon Mertoun's mind, and brought on him suddenly what Siwertha, Sweyn, and even Morkannt, cane to distinguish by the name of his durk hour. He was aware, in the nsmal cave, of its appronch, and retreated to nu inner apartment, into which he never permitted even Mordant to enter. Here he wimll nhide in seclusion for clays, mend even weeks, only eoming nint nt imeertain times, to take such food as they had taken eare to lenve within his reach, which he used in wonderfully surall maintities. At other times, and especially during the winter solvitice, when almost every person spends the gloomy time within durses in feasting and merriment, this unhappy man would wrap himself in a dark-coloured sea-cloak, and wander ont ahnig the stomy beach, or npou the desolate heath, indulging his own glonmy inid wayward reveries under the inclement sky, the rather that he was then most sure to wander menconntered and nombservel.
As Mordaunt grew older, he learned to note the particilar signs which preceled these fits of gloomy despondeney, and th direct such precautions as might ensure his unfortmate prenent from ill-timed interruption (which had always the effect of driving him to fury), while, as the same time, full provision was made for his subsistence. Mordanut pereeived that at such periouls the melancholy fit of his father was greatly prolonged if he clanced to present himself to his eyes while the dark hour was upou him. Ont of respect, therefore, to his parent, as well iss to indulge the love of active exercise and of amusement natural to his period of life, Mordaunt used often to absent himself altu. gether from the mansion of Jarlshof, and even from the district, secure that his father, if the dark hour passed awny in his absence, would be little inclined to inquire how his son ham disposed of his leisure, so that he was sure he had not watched his own weak moments, that being the subjeet on which he entertained the utmost jealousy.
At such times, therefore, all the sourees of annusenent w!ich the comintry afforded were open to the yomiger Mertom, who, in these intervals of his education, had an opportunity to give full seope to the energies of a bold, active, and daring elaracter. He was often ergaged with the youth of the hamlet in thine desperate sports to which the 'Irealffil trade of the samphiregatherer' is like a waik nown level gromil - often joinel thue midnight excursions upon the face of the gidly cliffs, to seenre the eggs or the young of the sea-fowl ; and in these during mil. ventures displayed an address, presence of mind, and activity which, in one so young and not a native of the country, aston: ished the oldest fowlers. ${ }^{1}$ [^61]At other times, Mordannt aceompanied Sweyn and other fishermen in their long and perilous expeditions to the distant and deeps sea, learning mider their direction the managenent of the boat, in which they equal, or excel, perhaps, any natives of the British empire. This exereise had charms for Mordaunt independently of the fishing alone.

At this time, the old Norwegian sagas were much remembered, and often rehearsel, by the fishermen, who still preserved anoug thenselves the ancient Norse tongue, which was the speech of their forefathers. In the dark romnuce of those Scandinavian tales lay much that was captivating to a yonthfnl ear; and the classie fables of autiguity were rivalled at least, if not excelled, in Mordanint's opinion by the strange legends of Berserkars, of sea-kings, of dwarfs, giants, and sorcerers, which lue heard from the native Zethanders. Often the seenes aromid him were assigned as the loealities of wild poems, which, halfrecited, half-chanted by voices as hoarse, if not so loud, as the waves over which they floated, pointed out the very bay on which they sailed as the seene of a bloody sca-fight ; the starceseen heap: of stones that bristled over the projecting cape as the dhu, or castle, of some potent enrl or noted pirate ; the distant and solitary grey stone on the lonely moor as marking the grave of a hero; the wild cavern, up which the sea rolled in leavy, broad, and unbroken billows, as the dwelling of some noted sorceress. ${ }^{1}$
The ocean also had its mysteries, the effect of which was aided by the dim twilight, through which it was imperfectly seen for more than half the year. Its buitumless depths and secret caves contained, aecording to the account of Sweyn and others skilled in legendary lore, snch wouders as modern navigators reject with disdain. In the quiet moonlight hay, where the waves came rippling to the shore, upou a bed of sumoth sand intermingled with shells, the mernaid was still seen to glide along the waters by moonlight, and mingling her voice with the sighing breeze, wais often hearl to sing of subterrailean wonders, or to chant prophecies of future events. The Kraken, the hngest of living things, was still smposed to c:mmher the recesses of the Northern Ocean; and often, when some fog-bank covered the sea at a distance, the eye of the expericnced matman saw the horns of the monstrons leviathan welking and waving amidst the wreaths of mist, and bore away with all press of oar and sail, lest the sudden sinction, oceasioned by the sink-

[^62]ing of the monstrous mass to the botton, should drag within the grayp of its multifarious feelers his own frail skiff. The seat snake was also known, which, arising out of the depths of "нe:u, strotchos to the skies his enormous neck, covered with a minne like that of a war-horse, and with his broad, glittering cyes raised mast-head high, looks out, as it seems, for plunder or for victims.

Many prodigious stories of these marine monsters, aul if many others less known, were then universally received aunning the Zetlanders, whose descendants have not as yet by any means abandoued faith in them. ${ }^{1}$
Such legends are, indeed, everywhere current amongst the vulgar; but the imagination is far more powerfully affecter! hy them on the deep and dangerous seas of the North, anililst precipices and headlands, many hundred feet in height ; annid perilous straits, and currents, and eddies; long sunkent reef. of rock, over which the yivid ocean foans and boils; dark carerus, to whose extremities neither man nor skiff has ever vell. tured; lonely, and often uninhabited, isles; and occasionally the ruins of ancient Northern fastuesses, dinnly seen by the feetble light of the Arctic winter. To Mordaunt, who had much if ronance in his disposition, these superstitions formed a pleating and interesting exercise of the imagination, while, half-loublitis, half-inclined to believe, he listened to the tales chanted sumcerning these wonders of nature and creatures of credulnms belief, told in the rude but energetic language of the ancient Scalds.
But there wanted not softer and lighter amusement, thiat might seem better suited to Mordaunt's age than the wild tait: and rude exercises which we have already mentionel. The season of winter, when, from the shortness of the daylight. labour becomes impossible, is in Zetland the time of revel, feasting, and merriment. Whatever the fisherman has beell able to acquire during summer was expended, and often wastel, in maintaining the mirth and hospitality of his hearth during this period; while the landholders and gentlemen of the island gave double loose to their convivial and hospitable dispritions, thronged their hous. with guests, and drove away the rigour of the season with just, glee, and song, the dance, and the wine-cup.
Anid the revely of this merry, though rigorous, season II" youth added more spirit to the dance or glee to the revel than [^63]the young stranger, Mordaunt Mertoun. When his father's state of mind permitted, or indeed required, his absence, he wanlered from house to house, a welcome gucst wherever he came, and lent his willing voice to the song and his foot to the revel. A boat, or, if the weather, as was often the case, pernitted not that convenience, one of the munerons ponies, which, straying in hordes about the extensive moors, may be said to le at any man's sommand who can catch them, conreyed him from the mansion of one hospitable Zetlander to that of another. None excelled him in performing the warlike sword-dance, a species of amusenent whieh had been derivel from the habits of the ancient Norsemen. He could play upon the 'gne,' and upon the common viotin, the melaneholy and pathetic tunes peenliar to the country; and with great spirit :unl execution could relieve their monotony with the livelier airs of the North of Scotland. When a party set forth as misiskers, or, as they are called in Scotland, 'guizards,' to visit sume neighbouring laird or rieh udaller, it augured well of the expedition if Mordaunt Mertoun eould be prevailed upon to mudertake the office of ' skudler ,' or leader of the band. ' 'pom these occasions, full of fun and frolie, he led his retinue from lonse to house, bringing mirth where he went, and leaving rearret when he departed. Mordaunt becume thus generally known, and beloved as generally, through most of the loonses composing the patriarchal commluity of the Main Isle; but liis visits were most frequently and most willingly paid at the mansion of his father's landlord and protector, Magnus 'I'roil.

It was not entirely the hearty and sineere welcome of the worthy old magnate, nor the sense that he was in effect his fither's patron, whieh occasioned these frequent visits. 'The hand of weleome was indeed reeeived as eagerly as it was siluerely given, while the ancient Udaller, raising limself in his huge chair, whereof the inside was lined with well-dressed sealskins, and the outside composed of massive oak, carved by the rude graving-tool of some Hamburgh carpenter, shouted firth his welcome in a tone which might, in ancient times, have hailed the return of Ioul, the highest festival of the Goths. 'lhere was metal yet more attractive, and younger hearts, whose welcome, if less loud, was as sincere as that of the jolly Udaller. But it is natter which ought not to be discussed at the conclusion of a chapter.

CHAP'TER III

Oh, Bessy Bell and Mary Gray, Thry were twa bonnie lasses; They bigged a house on yon burn-brae, And theekit it ower wi' rashes.
Fair Bessy lkell I looed yestreen, And thought I ne'er could alter; But Mary Cray's twa pawky een Have garr'd my fancy fulter.

Scuts Song.

WE have already mentioned Minma and Brenda, the dhughters of Magnus Troil. 'Their mother hall been dead for many years, and they were now two beantiful girls, the eldest only eighteen, which might be a year or two yomuger than Mordaunt Mertoun, the second about seventen. They were the joy of their father's heart and the light of his old eyes ; and although indulged to a degree which night have endangered his con frt and their own, they repaid his affection witl a love into vihieh even blind indulgenee had not introduced slight regard or feminine eaprice. The difference of their tempers and of their complexions was singularly striking, although combined, as is usual, with a certain degree of family resemblance.

The mother of these maidens had been a Seottish laty from the Highlands of Sutherland, the orphan of a noble chicel, who, driven from his own country during the feuds of the 1ith eentury, had found shelter in those peaceful islands, which, amidst poverty and seelusion, were thus far happy, that they: remained unvexed by discord and mustained ly civil broil. The father (his name was St. Clair) pined for his native glen, his feudal tower, his elansmen, and his fallen authority, innd died not lour after his arrival in Zetland. The beauty of his wrphan daughter, despite her Scottish lineage, melted the stont heart of Magnus 'Troil. He sued and was listened to, and she became his bride; but dying in the fifth year of their mion, left him to mourn his brief period of domestie happiness.

From her mother, Minua inherited the stately form and dark eyes, the raven loeks and finely-pencilled brows, whieh showed she was, on one side at least, a stranger to the bluod of thule. Her chee': - was so slightly and delieately tingel with the rose that many thought the lily had an undue propertion in her complexion. But in that predoninance of the puler flower there was nuthing sickly or languid : it was the true, naturnl colonr of health, mund corresponded in a peenliar degree with fentures which seeneed calconlated to express a contemplative and high-mimed character. When Minua Troil heard a tale of woe or of injnstiee, it was then her blood rushed to her cheeks, ame showed plainly how warm it beat, notwithstanding the generally serions, composed, and retiring disposition which her comenance and demenomr seemed to exhibit. If strangors sometimes conceivel that these fine features were clouded by melancholy, for which her uge and situation conld scaree have given occasion, they were som satisfied, upon further acpuaintance, that the phacid, mild quietule of her disposition, and the mentul energy of a character which was but little interested in ordinary and trivial oederrences, were the real cause of her gravity ; and most men, when they knew that her melaneloly had no ground in real sorrow, anil was only the aspiration of a sonl bent on more important oljects than those by whieh she was surromuled, might have wished her whatever could whl to her happiness, but conld searce have desired that, graceful as she was in her natural anl maffected serionsiless, she should change that deportment for one more gay. In short, motwithstanding our wish to have avoided that hackneyel simile of an angel, we camot avoid saying there was something in the serious beanty of her aspect, in the measured yet gracefill ease of her motions, in the minsic of her voice, and the serene purity of her eye, that seemed as if Minna T'ruil belonged natirally to some higher and better sphere, and was only the ehance visitant of a world that was nut worthy of her.
O call it fair, not pale!
The scareely less beautiful, equally lovely, and equally innocent Brenda was of a complexion as differing from her sister as they differed in character, taste, and expression. Her profise lueks were of that paly brown which reeeives from the passing sunbeann a tinge of gold, but darkens again when the ray has passed from it. Her eye, her mouth, the beantifill ruw of teeth, which in her innocent vivacity were frequently dis. closell ; the fresh, yet not too bright, glow of a healthy cim. plexion, tinging a skin like the drifted anow, spoke her gemane Scamlinavian descent. A fiuiry form, less tall than that of Minma, but still more finely monlded into symuetry ; a vare. less, und ulmost childish, lightness of step; an eye that seemed to look on every object with pleasure, from a natiral and serme cheerfulnesss of disposition, attracted even more genema admiratimn than the charms of her sister, though perhaps that whirl Miman didexcite might be of a more intense as well as a mure reverential clmracter.

THE PIRATE

'The dispmsitions of these lovely sisters were not less differrut than their complexions. In the kindly affections, neither comld be said to excel the other, so mueh were they attached to thit ir father and to each other. But the cheerfulness of Bronda mixed itself with the every-day business of life, and seemed inexhanstible in its profusion. The less bnoyant spirit of hir sister appeared to bring to society a contented wish tu lam interested anil pleased with what was going forwari, but mas rather placilly curried along with the stream of mirth annl pleasure than disposed to aid its progress by any effirts of hur own. She enchred mirth rather than enjoyed it; mul the pleasures in which she most delighted were those of a grater and inure solitary cast. The knowledge which is derived finn bonks was beyoud hel reach. Zetland afforded few opport unitiey in those days of studying the lessons bequeathed

By dead men to their kind;
and Magniss Troil, such as we have deseribed him, was mit a person within whose mansion the means of sueh knowlenge wirp to be acquired. But the book of nature was before Minulu, that noblest of volumes, where we are ever called to womler :an! to admire, even when we camnot mulerstand. 'The plants if those wild regions, the shells on the shores, and the long lia if featherel elans which hannt their cliffs and eyries, were as will known to Minna 'Troil as to the most experieneed fiwlers. Her powers of observation were wonderful, and little interrupted h, nther tones of feeling. The information which she acpuired hi: habits of patient attention was indelibly riveted in a naturally: powerfil menory. She had also a high feeling for the solitary and melancholy grandeur of the seenes in which she was phateil. 'The ocean, in all its varied forms of sublimity and terrer' ; the tremendous eliffs, that resound to the eeaseless roar of the billuws and the clang of the nea-fowl, hail for Minun a charm in nhmont every state in which the ehanging neasons exhibited thell. With the enthusiastic feelinge proper to the romantie race from which her mother desconded, the live of maturni ohjects was to her a passion capable not only of occupying, but at times of agiating, her mind. Scenes upon which her sister looked with a sense of transient awe or emotion, which vanished un her return from witnessing them, contimued long to fill Minna's immpination, not only in solitnde and in the silence of the night, lut in the hours of society. Su that sometimes when she sat like a heantiful statue, a present memler of the dhmestic circle, her thoughts were far absent, wandering on the wild sea-shore, anul among the yet wilder mountains of her native isles. And yet, when rocalled to conversation, and mingling in it with interest, there were fow to whom her friemle were more indelited for enlancing its enjoyments; and althourh something in her manuers chamed deference (notwithstanding her early youth) as well as affection, even her gay, luvely, and amiable sister was nut more generally beloved than the more retired and pensive Minma.

THE PIRATE.

Indeed, the two lovely sisters were not only the delight of their friends, but the pride of those islands, where the inhahit. ants of a certain rank were blemded, by the remuteness of their situation and the general hospitality of their halits, iuto one friendly community. A wandering poet and parcel-musicim, who, after going through various fortunes, had returned to emid lis days as he eonhl in his mative islands, had celebrated the daughters of Magnus in a poen, which he entitled 'Night anel Day' ; and in his deseription of Mimua might ahmost he thought tu have anticipated, thongh only in a rude ontline, the exquisite lines of Lord Byron, -

She walks in beauty, like the night Of clondless clinues and stary skies;
And all that's best of dark and hright Meet in her aspect and her eres:
This mellow'd to that teuder light Which heaven to gandy day dmines.
Their father loved the maidens both so well that it might ie difficult to say which lie loved best ; sivilig that, perchance, lie liked his graver damsel better in the walk withont doors, aul inis merry maiden better by the fireside; that he more desired the society of Mima when he was sul, and that of Bremba when he was mirthful; and, what was nearly the same thing.
preferred Minma before noon, and Brenda after the glass had eirculated in the evening.

But it was still more extraordinary that the affeetions of Mordaunt Mertoun seemed to hover with the same impartiality as those of their father betwixt the two lovely sisters. lirun his boyhood, as we have noticed, he hal been a frequent inmate of the residence of Magnus at Burgh-Westra, althongh it lay nearly twenty miles distant from Jarlshof. The imprassable eharacter of the country betwixt these plaees, extending oser hills covered with loose and quaking bog, and frequently intersected by the creeks or arms of the sea, whieh indent the island on cither side, as well as by fresh-water streams and lakes, rendered the journey diffieult, and even dangerous, in the dirk season; yet, as soon as the state of his father's mind warned him to absent himself, Mordaunt, at every risk and under every difficulty, was pretty sure to be found the next day at BurghWestra, having achieved his jonrney in less time than would have been employed perhaps by the most aetive native.
He was, of course, set down as a wooer of one of the daughters of Magnus by the public of Zctland; and when the old Udaller's great partiality to the youth was considered, nobody doubted that he might aspire to the hand of either of those distingnished beanties, with as large a share of islets, rocky moorland, and shore fishings as nught be the fitting portion of a favoured ehild, and with the presumptive prospeet of possessing half the domains of the ancient honse of 'lrwil, when their present owner shonld be no more. This secmed all a reasonable speeulation, and, in theory at least, better construeted than many that are eurrent throngh the world as miquestionable faets. But, alas! all that sharpuess of ohservation which conld be applied to the conduct of the parties failed to determine the main point, to which of the yumb persons, namely, the attentions of Mordamit were peculiarly devoted. He seemed, in general, to treat them as an affectionate and attaehei brother might have treated two sisters, sis equally dear to him that a breath would have turned the seale of affection. Or if at any time, which often happened, the one maiden appeared the more especial object of his attention, it seemed only to be because ciremistances called her pecmiar talents and disposition into more particular and immediate exercise.
Both the sisters were aceomplished in the simple music of the North, and Mordaunt, who was their assistant, and sometimes their preceptor, when they were practising this delightfnl art, might be now seen assisting Minna in the acquisition of those wild, solemn, and simple airs to which Scalds and harpers sung of old the deeds of heroes, and presently fonnd equally active in teauning Brenda the more lively and complicated music which their fathers affection cansed to be bronght from the English or Scottish capital for the use of his danghters. And while conversing with them, Mordaunt, who mingled a strain of deep and ardent enthusiasm with the gay and mengovernable spirits of youth, was equally ready to enter into the wild and poetical visions of Minna or into the lively and often humorous chat of her gayer sister. In short, so little did he seem to attach himself to either damsel exelusively, that he was sometimes heard to say that Minna never looked so lovely as when her light-hearted sister had induced lier, for the time, to forget her labitual gravity ; or Brenda so interesting as when she sat listening, a subdued and affected partaker of the deep pathos of her sister Minna.
The public of the Mainland were, therefore, to nise the lunter's phrase, at fault in their farther conclusions, and conld but deternine, after long vacillating betwixt the maidens, that the young man was positively to marry one of them, but which of the two could only be determined when his approaching manhoord, or the interference of stont old Magnes, the father, should teach Master Mordaunt Mertomn to know his own mind. 'It was a pretty thing indeed,' they nsually coneluded, 'that lie, no native born, and possessed of no visible means of sulsistence that is known to any one, should presume to hesitate, or alfect to have the power of selection and choice, hetwixt the two most distingushed beautics of Zetland. If they were, Magnus 'Troil, they would soon be at the buttom of the matter,' and so forth; all which remarks were only whispered, for the hasty disposition of the Udaller had too much of the old Norse fire about it to render it safe for any one to become an manthorised intermeddler with his family affairs. And thus stool the relation of Mordannt Mertom to the fanily of Mr. 'Troil of Burgh-Westra when the following incidents took place.

CHAPTER IV

Abstract

This is no pilgrim's morning: yon grey mist Lies upon hill, and dale, and field, and forest, Like the dun wimple of a new-made widow; And, by my faith, although my heart be soft, I'd rather hear that widow weep and sigh, And tell the virtues of the dear departed, Than, when the tempest sends his voice abroad, Be subject to its fury.

The Double Nuptials.

THE spring was far advanced when, after a week spent in sport and festivity at Burgh-Westra, Mordaunt Mertoun bade adieu to the family, pleading the necessity of his return to Jarlshof. The proposal was combated by the maidens, and more deeidedly by Magnus himself: he saw no occasion whatever for Mordaunt returning to Jarlshof. If lisis father desired to see him, whieh, by the way, Magnus did not believe, Mr. Mertoun had only to throw himself into the stern of Sweyn's boat, or betake himself tr a pony, if he liked a laul journey better, and he would see not only his son, but twenty folk besides, who would be most happy to find that he had unt lost the use of his tongue entirely during his long solitule, 'Although I must own,' added the worthy Udaller, 'that, when he lived among us, nobody ever made less use of it.'
Mordaunt aequieseed both in what respeeted his father's taciturnity and his dislike to general society; but sugge.ted, at the same time, that the first eircumstance rendered his uwn immediate return more necessary, as he was the usual chamel of communication betwixt his father and others ; and that the seeond corruborated the same necessity, since Mr. Mirtomi: having no other society whatever seemed a weighty reamm why his soin's should be restored to him without loss of time. As to his father's coming to Burgh-Westra, 'They might as well,' he said, 'expeet to see Sumburgh Cape eome thither.'
'And that would be a cumbrous guest,' said Magnus. 'But you will stop for our dinner to-day? There are the families of Muness, Quendale, Thorslivoe, and I know not who else, are expeeted; and, besides the thirty that were in house this blessed night, we shall have as many more as chaniber and bower, and barn and boat-house, can furnish with beds or with barley-straw ; and you will leave all this behind you!
'And the blithe dance at night,' added Brenda, in a tone betwixt reproach and vexation; 'and the young men from the Isle of Paba that are to dance the sword-dance, whom shall we find to match them, for the honour of the Main?
'There is many a merry dancer on the Mainland, Brenda,' replied Mordaunt, ' even if I should never rise on tiptoe again. And where good dancers are found, Brenda 'Troil will always find the best partner. I must trip it to-night through the wastes of Dunrossness.'
'Do not say so, Mordaunt,' said Minna, who, during this conversation, had been looking from the window something anxiously ; 'go not, to-day at least, through the wastes of Duirrossness.'
'And why not to-day, Minna,' said Mordaunt, laughing, 'any more than to-morrow?
' 0 h , the morning mist lies heavy upon yonder chain of isles, nor has it permitted us since daybreak even a single glimpse of Fitful Head, the lofty cape that concludes yon splendid range of mountains. The fowl are winging their way to the shore, and the sheldrake seems; through the mist, as large a? the scart. ${ }^{1}$ See, the very sheerwaters and bonxies are making to the cliffs for shelter.
'And they will ride out a gale against a king's frigate,' said her father : 'there is foul weather when they cut and run.'
'Stay, then, with us.' said Minna to her friend ; 'the storm will be dreadful, yet it will be grand to see it from BurghWestra, if we have no friend exposed to its fury. See, the air is close and sultry, though the season is yet so early, and the day so calm that not a windlestraw moves on the heath. Stay with us, Mordaunt ; the storm which these signs announce will be a dreadful one.'
'I must be gone the sooner,' was the conclusion of Mordaunt, who could not deny the signs, which had not escaped his own quick observation. 'If the storm be too fierce, I will abide for the night at Stourburgh.'
'What!' said Magnus; 'will you leave us for the new

[^64]chamberlain's new Scotch tack:man, who is to teach all us Zetland savages new ways? 'lake your own gate, my lal, if that is the song you sing.'
'Nay,' said Mordaunt; 'I had only some curiosity to see the new implements he has brought.'
'Ay - ay, ferlies make fools fain. I would like to kuow if his new plough will bear against a Zetland rock?' answered Magnus.
' 1 must not pass Stourburgh on the journey,' sail the youth, deferring to his patron's prejudice against innovation, 'if this boding weather bring on tempest; but if it only break in rain, as is most probable, I am not likely to be melted in the wetting.'
'It will not soften into rain aione,' said Minna; 'see how much heavier the clonds fall every moment, and see these weather-gaws that streak the lead-coloured mass with partial gleams of faded red and purple.'
'I see them all,' said Mordaunt ; 'but they only tell me I have no time to tarry here. Adieu, Minna; I will send you the eagle's feathers, if an eagle can be found on Fair Isle or Foulah. And fare thee well, my pretty Brenda, and keep a thought for me, should the Paba men dance ever so well.'
'Take care of yourself, since go you will,' said both sisters toget.t.ier.

Old Magnus scolded them formally for supposing there was any danger to an active young fellow from a spring gale, whether by sea or land; yet ended by giving his own caution also to Mordaunt, advising him seriously to delay his journer, or at least to stop at Stourburgh. 'For,' said he, 'seconid thoughts are best; and as this Scottishnan's howf lies right under your lee, why, take any port in a storn. But do not be assured to find the door on latch, let the storm blow ever io hard; there are such matters as bolts and bars in Scotland, though, thanks to St. Roland, they are unknown here, save the great lock on the old Castle of Scalloway, that all men run to see ; maybe they make part of this man's improvements. But go, Mordaunt, since go you will. You should driuk a stirrup-cup now, were you three years older; but boys shonld never drink, excepting after dimer. I will drink it for yon, that gool customs may not be broken, or bad luck come of it. Here is your bonally, my lad.' And so saying, he quaffer a rummer glass of brandy with as much impunity as if it had beell spring-water.

Thus regretted and cautioned on all hands, Mordaunt took leave of the hospitable household, and looking back at the comforts with which it was surrounded, and the dense smoke that rolled upwards from its chimmeys, he first recollected the guestless and solitary desolation of Jarlshof, then compared with the sullen and moody melancholy of his father's temper the warn kindness of those whom he was leaving, and conld not refrain from a sigh at the thoughts which forced themselves on his imagination.
'The signs of the tempest did not dishonour the predictions of Mimna. Mordaunt had not advaneed three honrs on his journey before the wind, which had been so deadly still in the morning, began at first to wail and sigh, as if bemoaning beforehaml the evils which it might perpetrate in its fury, like a madman in the gloomy state of dejection which precedes his fit of violence; then gradirally inereasing, the gale howled, ragel, and roared with the full fury of a northern storm. It was accompanied by showers of rain mixed with hail, that dashed with the most unrelenting rage against the hills and rocks with whieh the traveller was surrounded, distracting lis. attention, ia spite of his utmost exertions, and renlering it very difficult for him to keep the direetion of his journey in a comitry where there is neither road nor even the slightest track to direet the steps of the wanderer, and where he is often interrupted by brooks as well as large pools of water, lakes, and lagoons. All these inland waters were now lashed into sheets of tumbling foam, much of which, carried off by the fury of the whiriwind, was mingled with the gale, and transported far from the waves of which it had lately made a part; while the salt relish of the drift which was pelted against his face showed Mordaunt that the spray of the more distant ocean, disturbed to frenzy by the storm, was mingled with that of the inland lakes and streams.
Amidst this hideous combnstion of the elements, Mordaunt Mertoun struggled forward as one to whom such elemental war was familiar, and who regarded the exertions which it reunired to withstand its fury but as a mark of resolution and manhwod. He felt even, as happens usially to those who endure great lardships, that the exertion necessary to subdue them is in itself a kind of elevating trimmph. To see and distingnish his path when the cattle were driven from the hill, and the very fowls from the firmament, was but the stronger proof of his own superiority. 'They shall not hear of me at Burgh-Westra,' sail he to himself, 'as they heard of old doited Ringan Ewenson's boat, that foundered betwixt roadstead and key. I am more of a cragsmann than to mind fire or water, wave by sea, or qnag. mire by land.' 'I'hus he struggled on, buffeting with the storn, supplying the want of the ussual sigus by which travellers directenl their progress (for rock, mountain, and headland were shromled in mist and darkness) by the instinctive sagacity with which long acquaintance with these wilds had taught him to mirrk every mmute object which could scrve in such circumstances, to regulate his course. Thus, we repeat, he struggled onwaril, occasionally standing still, or even lying down, when the gnst was most impetuous ; making way against it when it was sumewhat lulled, by a rapid and bold advance even in its very current ; or, when this was impossible, by a movenent resembling that of a vessel working to windward by short tacks, but never yielling one inch of the way which he had fought so hard to gain.

THE PIRATE

Yet, notwithstanding Mordaunt's experience and resolntion, his situation was sufficiently uncomfortable, and even precariuns; not because his sailor's jacket and trowsers, the common dress of young men through these isles when on a journey, were thoroughly wet, for that might have taken place within the sume brief time in any ordinary day in this watery climate; but the real danger was that, notwithstanding his utmost exertions, he made very slow way through brooks that were sending their waters all abroad, through morasses drowned in double deluges of moisture, which rendered all the ordinary passes more than usually dangerous, and repeatedly obliged the traveller to perform a considerable circuit, which in the usual case was unnecessary. Thus repeatedly baffled, notwithstanding his youth antil strength, Mordaunt, after maintaining a dogged conflict with wind, rain, and the fatigue of a prolonged journey, was truly happy when, not without having been more than once mistaken in his road, he at length found hinself within sight of the hune of Stourburgh, or Harfra; for the names were indifferently given to the residence of Mr. Triptolemus Yellowley, who wits the chosen missionary of the chamberlain of Orkney and Zetlaul, a speculative person, who designed, through the medium of 'T'iptolemhs, to introduce into the Ultina I'hule of the Romans :c spirit of improvement which at that early period was scarce known to exist in Scotland itself.
At length, and with much difficulty, Mordaunt reached the house of this worthy agriculturist, the only refuge from the relentless storn which he could hope to meet with for several miles; and going straight to the door, with the most undoult ing confidence of instant admission, he was not a little surpmsed to find it not merely latched, which the weather might excuse, but even bolted, a thing which, as Magnus I'roil has already intimated, was almost unknown in the archipelago. To knock, to call, and finally to batter the door with staff and stones, were the natural resources of the yonth, who was rendered alike inputient by the pelting of the storm and by encountering such most unexpected and unusual obstacles to instant admission. As he was suffered, however, for many minutes to exhaust his impatience in noise and clanour, without receiving any reply, we will euploy them in informing the reader who Triptolemms Yellowley was, and how he came by a nane so singular.
Old Jasper Yellowley, the father of 'I'riptolemis, though born at the foot of Roseberry 'Topping, had been 'come over' by a certain noble Scottish earl, who, proving too far north for camy Yurkslire, had persuaded him to aceept of a farm in the Mearns, where, it is unnecessary to add, he fumed inatters very different from what he had expected. It was in vain that the stout firmer set manfully to work to counterbalance, by superior skill, the inconveniences arising from a cold soil and a weeping climate. These might have been probably overcome; but his neishbourhood to the Granpians exposed him eternally to that species of visitation from the plaided gentry who dwelt within their skirts whieh made yomg Norval a warrior and a hero, but only converted Jasper Yellowley into a poor man. This was, indeed, balanced in sca.e sort by the inpression which his ruldy cheek and robust form had the fortune to make upon Miss Barbara Clinkscale, daughter to the umquhile, and sister to the then existing, Clinkscale of that ilk.
'This was thought a horrid and unnatural mion in the neighbonrhood, considering that the house of Clinkscale had at least as great a share of Scottish pride as of Scottish parsimeny, and was amply endowed with both. But Miss Baby lial her handsome fortune of two thousand marks at her own li.posal, was a woman of spirit, who had been major and sui juris (as the writer who drew the contract assured her) for full twenty years; so she set consequences and commentaries alike at defiance, and wedded the hearty Yorkshire yeoman. Her brother and her more wealthy kinsmen drew off in disgnst, and alumst disowned their degraded relative. But the louse of Clinkscale was allied, like every other family in Scotland at the time, to a set of relations who were not so nice - tenth and sisteenth cousins, who not only acknowledged their kinswoman

THE PIRATE

Baby after her marriage with Yellowley, bint even condescentel to eat beans and bacon ${ }^{1}$ - though the latter was then the ahmunination of the Scotch as much as of the Jews - with her hunstamul, and would willingly have cemented the friendslip, by hurrowing a little cash from him, had not his good lady, who under:thnil trap as well as any womm in the Mearns, put a negative on this advance to intimacy. Incleed, she knew how to make yonng Deilbelicket, old Dougalld Baresword, the Lairl of Bauly. lorawl, and others pay for the hospitality which she did not think proper to den." them, by rendering them useful in her nemotiations with the light-landed lads beyond the Cairn, who, finding their late object of plunder was now allied to 'kend folks, and owned by them at kirk and market,' became satisfied, on a ment. erate yearly composition, to desist from their depredations.

This eminent success reconciled Jasper to the duminion which his wife began to assume over him; and which was much confirmed by her proving to be - let me see, what i, the prettiest mode of expressing it ? - in the family way. (H) this occasion, Mrs. Yellowley had a remarkable dreani, as is the usual practice of teeming mothers previous to the birth of ant illustrious offspring. She 'was a-dreamed,' as her hustmuld expressed it, that she was safely delivered of a plough, drawn by three yoke of Angus-shire oxen; and being a mighty investigator into such portents, she sat herself down with her gossips to consider what the thing might mean. Honest Jisper ventured, with much hesitation, to intimate his own opiumm that the vision had reference rather to things past than things future, and might have been occasioned by his wife's nerves having been a little startled by meeting in the loan abuve tl. house his own great plough with the six oxen, which were the pride of his heart. But the good cummers ${ }^{2}$ raised such a hue and cry against this exposition, that Jasper was fain to put his fingers in his ears and to run out of the apartment.
'Hear to him,', said an old Whigamore carline - 'liear to him, wi' his owsen, that are as an idol to him, even as the call of Bethel! Na - na, it's nae plengh of the flesh that the homy lad-bairn - for a lad it sall be - sall e'er striddle between the stilts o'; it's the pleugh of the Spirit; and I trust mysell to see him wag the head o' him in a pu'pit ; or, what 's better, on a hillside.'
'Now, the deil's in your Whiggery,' said the old Laily Gilenprosing; 'wad ye liac our cmmmer's bommy lad-bairn wag the [^65]head aff his shouthers like your godly Mess James Guthrie, ${ }^{1}$ that ye hald such a clavering about? $\mathrm{Na}-\mathrm{ma}$, he sall walk a mair siccar path, and be a dainty curate ; and say he should live to be a bishop, what the waur wad he be?'

The gamutet thus fairly thung down by one sibyl was caught up by another, and the controversy between Preshytery and Episeopacy raged, rearel, or rather screamed, a round of cimamon-water serving only like oil to the Hame, till dasper entered with the plough-stalif ; and by the awe of his presenue, anl the shame of misbehaving 'before the stranger man,' innposed some comlitions of silence upon the disputants.
I do not know whether it was impatience to give to the liyht a being destined to such high and doubtful fates, or whether poor Dame Yellowley was rather frightened at the hurly-hurly which had taken place in her presence, but she was taken suldenly ill; and, contrary to the formula in such cuses nsed :an! provided, was soon reported to be 'a gool deal worse tham was to be expected.' She took the opportunity, laving still all her wits about her, to extract from her sympathetic husband two promises - first, that he would christen the child, whose 1.irth was like to cost her so dear, by a name indicative of the vision with which she had been favoured; and next, that he would educate him for the ministry. The canny Yorkshiremm, thinking she had a good title at present to dictate in such matters, subscribed to all she required. A man-child was accordingly born under these conditions, but the state of the mother did not permit her for many days to inguire how far they had been complied with. When she was in some degree convalescent, she was inforned that, as it was thought fit the child should be immediately clristened, it had received the name of Triptolemus; the curate, who was a man of some classical skill, conceiving that this epithet contained a hanilsone and classical allusion to the visionary plough, with its triple yoke of oxen. Mrs. Yellowley was not much delighted with the manner in which her request had been complied with: but grumbling being to as little purpose as in the celchnated alase of 'I'ristram Shandy, she e'en sat down contented with the heathenish name, and endeavoured to curuteract the effects it might produce upon the taste and feelings of the nominee by such an education as might put him above the slightest thmelit of socks, eoulters, stilts, monldi-bourds, or anything connected with the servile drudgery of the plough.

[^66]
THE PIRATE

Jasper, sage Yorkshireman, smiled slyly in his mleeve, rm. ceiving that young Trippie was likely to prove a chij) of the old block, and would rather take after the jolly York.hire yeoman than the gentle but somewhat airre blool of the lumse of Clinkscalo. He remarked, with supp,ressed glee, that tho tune whieh best answered the purpose of a lullahy was tho 'Ploughman's Whistle,' and the first words the infint learnull to stammer were the names of the oxen; mureover, that the 'bern' preferred home-brewed ale to Scotch twopeminy. anml never quitted hold of the tankard with so mueh reluctanne us when there had been, by some inancuvre of Jasperis "wn deviee, a double 'straik' of malt allowed to the brewing, aluye that which was sanetioned by the most liberal reeipe of whirl his dame's household thrift admitted. Besides this, when Im other means eould be fallen upon to divert an oceasional fit of scqualling, his father observed that Trip eould be always sileneed by jingling a bridle at his ear. From all which symptoms he used to swear in private that the boy wimill prove true Yorkshire, and mother and mother's kin would have small share of him.
Meanwhile, and within a year after the birth of 'Triptonemins, Mrs. Yellowley bore a daughter, named after herself, Bartwil:, who, even in earliest infaney, exhibited the pinehed nose innl thin lips by whieh the Clinkscale family were distinguishel amongst the inhabitants of the Mearns ; and as her childhumul advaneed, the readineis with whieh she seized, and the tensecity wherewith she decaincd, the playthings of 'rriptolemus, besilis a desire to bite, pineh, and seratch, on slight or no provocati"? were all eonsidered by attentive observers as proofs that .' Baly would prove 'her mother over again.' Malieions did not stiek to say, that the aerimony of the Clinkseale • nnl had not on this occasion been cooled and sweetened by that if Old England; that young Deilbelieket was mueh aboun the house, and they eould not but think it odd that Mrs. Yellowlyy: who, as the whole world knew, gave nothing for nothing, whimin be so uneommonly attentive to heap the treneher and to fill the caup of an idle blaekguard ne'er-do-weel. But when folk hat onee looked npon the anstere and awfully virtuons conntenanre of Mrs. Yellowley, they did full justice to her propriety of ennduet and Deilbelieket delicaey of taste.

Meantime, young 'Inptolemus, having received sueh instructimis as the curate could give him (for, thongh Dame Yellowley athered to the perwecuted remmant, her jolly hushman, editied by the black giwis and prayer-book, still conformed (1) the church as by hw established), was, in due process of time, rent to Sit. Audrews to proseeute his studies. He went, it is trie, but with an eye curned back with sad remembrnaces on his father's plongh, his father's pancakes, mod his father's ale, for which the small-beer of the college, commonly there termed 'throughth-go-nimble,' furnished a pour substitnte. Yet he matveneel in his learning, being fomad, however, to show a purticular favour to such anthors of antiguity as had made the improvement of the soil the objeet of their researehes. He endured the Bucolics of Virgil ; the Cieorgics he had by leart ; hint the Emeid he eonld not away with; and he was partieularly arvere upon the celebrated line expressing a ehargo of cavalry, Incause, as he understood the word putrem, ${ }^{1}$ he opined that the combatants, in their ineonsiderate ardur, gnlloped over a new-manured plongherl field. Cato, the Roman Censor, was his favourite among elassieal heroes and philosophers, not on acenult of the strietness of his morals, but because of his treatise, De Re Rusticr. He havl ever in! his month the phrase if Cicero, Jam neminem autepmess Cutuni. He thonght well if l'alladius and of T'erentins Varro; but Cohmella was hiss puchet-companion. To these uncient worthies ho alded the mure modern 'lusser, Hartlib, and other writers on rural eemesminco, not forgetting the lacubrations of the Nhe pherd of siselislimi,y Ilain, and such of the better-informed philonathe who, instad of loading their almanaes with vain predictions of pulitical events, pretemided to see whit seeds would grow and what wonld not, and lireet the attention of their readers to that course of cultivation from which the prodnction of goorl crops may be safely predicted; modest sages, in fine, who, careless of the rise mind downfall of empires, content themselves. with pointing out the fit seasuls to reap and suw, with a fair gness at the weather which each month will be likely to pregent : as, for example, that, if Heaven pleases, we hall have show in Jannary, and the anthor will stake his reputatime that July proves, on the whole, a month of smishine. Now, athongh the rector of St. Leonard's was greatly pleased in gencral with the quiet, laberious and studions bent of Iriptolennss Yellowley, and deemed him, in so fiat, worthy of a name of four syllables having a Latin tcrmination, yet he relished not, by [^67]any means, his exflusive attention to his favourite anthers. It mavoured of the earth, 1; said, if not of something worse, to have a man's mind alway's grovelling in monhe, stercoratel in mustercornted ; and he printed ont, but in vain, history, ant pootry, and divinity ase nore elevating subjects of ocecuputions. Triptolemus Yellowley was nhstinate in his own conrse. If the battle of Pharsalin, he thonglit not as it affected the freedmen of the world, but dwelt on loe rich erop which the Fimathian fields were likely to phituce he next season. In vernarular poetry, 'I'riptulemins i.. il , wee be prevailed npon tor reand a single conplet, es an"; Thsser, as aforesaid, what Iundied I'oints of $G_{i}$, Imsk. mdry he had got by heurt : excepting also Diers lime now lixim, which, charmed with the title, he bought wi l isility from on mekman, but, alfier reading the first two jater. Al... . in in fire as an inmplant and mismamed politic:! htel. .. divinity, he smmeel that matter up by remindia as is in that to linbour the parth and win his bread with the th:t if his body and sweat of his brow was the lot imposed upons thin man; and, for his part, he was resolved to disclarse, to the best of his abilities, a tank so obviously necessary to existeice, leaving others to speculate as much as they would upon the more reeondite mysteries of theology.

With a spirit so much narrowed and limited to the emmerns of rural life, it may be doubted whether the proficieney of Triptolemus in learning, or the use he was like to make of his acquisitions, would have mueh gratified the ambitions hune if his affectionate mother. It is true, he expressed no rellutanre to embraee the profession of a clergyman, which suited well enough with the labitual personal indolence whiel sometimes attaches to speculative dispositions. He had views, to speak plainly (I wish they were peciliar to himself), of cultivatin! the glebe six days in the weck, preathing on the seventh with due regularity, and dining with some fat franklin or comery :rd, with whom he could sumbe a pipe and drink a tankarid atter thimer, and mix in secret conferenee on the exhansitless subject,

> Qnid faciat laxtas segetes.

Now this plam, besides that it indicated nothing of what was then called the root of the matter, implied neeessarily the pus. session of a manse; and the possession of a manse inferred compliance with the doetrines of prelacy and other enormities of the time. There was some question how far manse and plehe, stipend, buth victual and meney, might have ontfralancel the good lady's predispowition towards Prestytery ; but her zeal was not put tu so severe a trial. She rlied before her son had completed his stullies, lenving her attlieted spouse just as disconsolate as was to be expected. The first net of old Jaqper's undivided ndwinistration was to recall his som from St. An irews, in order to obtain his assistance in his domestic labuors. And here it might have been sumpnesel that our Iriptolemus, summoned to carry into practice what he had so fonilly studied in theory, must have been, to use a simile which he would thave thought lively, like a cow entering umote a clover park. Ahas, mistaken thonghts nul deceitful hoper of mankime !
A laughing philosopher, the Demoeritus of omr day, once, in a mural lecture, compared human life to a table pierced with n number of holes, each of which has a pin made exactly to fit it, hut which pins being stuck in linstily, and without selection, chance leals inevitably to the most ank ward mistakes. 'For how often do we see,' the orator pathetically coneluded - 'how often, I say, du we see the ronnd man al ack into the threecornered hole :' This new illustration of the vagnried of fortune set every one present into comvinsions of hanghter, exceptimg me fat alderman, who seemed to make the case his own, mid insisted that it was in. jesting matter. 'Io take me the simile, havever, which is an excellent one, it is phain that 'lriptolemins Yellowley had heen shaken out of the bage at least a humdred years tois som. If he had cone on the stage in our own time, that is, if he had thomrished at any time within these thirty or firty years, he conld not have missed to have held the office of rice-president of some eminent ngrionltural socia $y$, bul to have transacted all the business thereof muler the anspiese of sume noble duke or lord, who, as the matter mighit happen, cither knew, or did not know, the differenee hetwixt a horses aul a cart mult a cart-horse. He eomild mot have misised such preferment, for he was exceedingly leamed in all those partienlars which, being of mo comsennence in actnal practice, En, of course, a great way to constitute the dhampor of a "omaisent in any art, and enpecially in artiontur. But, alas: 'Triptolemus Yellowley hanl, as we alreanly ave hinted, come into the world at lenst a century tho sisell fin, instead of sitting in an arm-chair, with a hanmer in his hatal anil a humper of port before him, givily forth the tha-t - "I', hreeding, in all its branches,' his father phated him letwiat the stilts of a plough, and invited him to guide the oxen, on whue beauties he would, in our day, have descanted, and whise rumps he would not have goaded, but have carvel. IIld Jasper complained that although no one talked so well if common and several, wheat and rape, fallow and lea, as his, ! ${ }^{\text {ararned son (whom he always called 'Tolemus), yet, 'dans it,' }}$ added the Seneca, 'nought thrives wi' un - nought thrive, wi un!' It was still worse when Jasper, becoming frail anl ancient, was obliged, as happened in the course of a few years, gradually to yield up the reins of government to the academical neophyte. neophyte.
As if nature had meant him a spite, he had got one of the dourest and most intractable farns in the Mearns to try conclusions withal, a place which seemed to yield everything but what the agriculturist wanted ; for there were plenty of thistles, which indicates dry land; and store of ferm, which is saill to intimate deep land ; and nettles, which show where lime hath been applied; and deep furrows in the most mulikely sputs, which intimated that it had been cultivated in former day: by the Peghts, as popular tradition bore. There was also eneugh of stones to keep the ground warm, according to the creel of some farmers, and great abundance of springs to render it cowl and sappy, according to the theory of others. It was in vain that, acting alternately on these opinions, poor 'l'riptolenus endeavoured to avail hinself of the supposed capabilities of the soil. No kind of butter that might be churned could be mate to stick upon his own bread, any more than on that of prow Tusser, whose Hundred Points of Giood Husbandry, so usefill to others of his day, were never to himself worth as many pennies. ${ }^{1}$

In fact, excepting an humci. 3 d acres of infield, to which ,hd Jasper had early seen the necessity of limiting his labours, there was not a corner of the farm fit for anything but to break plough-graith and kill cattle. Aud then, as for the part which was really tilled with some profit, the expense of the farming establishment of "I'riptolenms, and his disposition to experiment, soon got rid of any good arising from the cultivation of it. 'The carles and the cart-avers,' he confesseel, with a sigh, speaking of his farm-servants and horses, 'make it all, and the carles and cart-avers eat it all' - a conclusion which might sum up the year-book of many a gentleman farmer.
Matters would have soon becn brought to a close with [^68]Triptolemus in the present day. He would have got a bankcredit, manoeuvred with wind-bills, dashed out upon a large scale, and soon have seen his crop and stock sefuestered by the sheriff; but in those days a man could not ruin himself so easily. The whole Scottish tenantry stood upon the same level flat of poverty, so that it was cxtremely difficult to find any vantage ground by climbing up to which a man might have an opportmity of actually brcaking his neck with some erche. They were pretty much in the situation of people who, meing totally without credit, may indeed suffer from indigence, but caunot possibly become, bankrupt. Besides, notwithstanding the failure of 'Iriptolemus's projcets, there was to be halanced against the expenditure which they occasioned all the savings which the extreme economy of his sister Barbara could effiect; anul in truth her exertions were wonderful. She night have realised, if any one could, the idea of the learncd philosopher, who pronounced that sleeping was a fancy, and cating but a habit, and who appeared to the world to have renounced both, nutil it was unhappily discovered that he had an intrigue with the cook-maid of the family, who indemnified him for liis privations by giving him private entrée to the pantry and to a slare of her own couch. But no such deceptions were practised by Barbara Yellowley. She was up early and down late, and seemel, to her over-watched and over-tasked maidens, to be as 'wakerife' as the cat herself. 'Then, for eating, it appeared that the air was a banquet to her, and she would have made it so to her retinue. Her brother, who, hesides being lazy in lis person, was somewhat luxurious in his appetite, would willingly now and then have tasted a monthful of animal food, were it but to know how his sheep werc fed off. But a proposal to eat a child could not have startled Mistress Barbara more ; and, bcing of a compliant and easy disposition, Triptolemus retonciled himself to the necessity of a perpetual lent, too happy whon he conld get a serap of hutter to his oaken cake, ur (as they lived on the banks of the Esk) escape the daily nereessity of eating salmon, whether in or out of scason, six dass ont of the seven.

But althongh Mrs. Barbara brought faithfully to the joint stuek all savings which her awful powers of economy accomWished to scrape together, and although the dower of their mother was by degrees expended, or nearly so, in aiding them mun extreme occasions, the term at length approached when it seemed impossible that they combld sinstain the conflict any longer against the evil star of Triptolemus, as he called it himself, or the natural result of his absurd speculations, as it was termed by others. Luckily, at this sad crisis, a god jumped down to their relief out of a machine. In plain English, the noble lord who owned their farm arrived at his mansion-honse in their neighbourhool, with his coach and six and his ruming footmen, ${ }^{\text {i }}$ in the full splendour of the 17 th century.

THE PIRATE

This person of quality was the son of the nobleman who had brought the ancient Jasper into the country from Yorkshire, and he was, like his father, a fanciful and scheming man. ${ }^{2}$ He had schemed well for himself, however, amid the mutations of the time, having obtained, for a certain period of years, the administration of the remote islands of Orkney and Zetlind, for payment of a certain rent, with the right of making the most of whatever was the property or revenue of the crown in these districts, under the title of Lord Chamberlain. Nuw, his lordship had becone possessed with a notion, in itself' a very true one, that much might be done to render this grant available, by inproving the culture of the crown lands, buth in Orkney and Zetland; and then having some acquaintance with our friend Triptolemus, he thought (rather less happily) that he might prove a person capable of furthering his sclenenes. He sent for him to the great hall-house, and was so mucli edifiei by the way in which our friend laid down the law npon every given subject relating to rural economy that he lost no time in securing the co-operation of so valuable an assistant, the first step being to release him from his present unprutitalle farm.
The terms were arranged much to the mind of Triptoleuns, who had already been taught, by many years' experience, a dark sort of notion that, without undervaluing or doubting for a moment his own skill, it would be quite as well that almost all the trouble and risk shonld be at the expense of his employer. Indeed, the hopes of advantage which he held out to his patroul were so considerable, that the Lord Chamberlain dropped every idea of admitting his dependant into any share of the expected profits; for, rude as the arts of agriculture were in Scutlanl, they were far superior to those known and practised in the regions of 'Thule, and Triptolemus Yellowley conceived limself to be possessed of a degree of insight into these mysteries far superior to what was possessed or practised even in the Mearns.

[^69]The improvement, therefore, which was to be expeeted would bear a double proportion, and the Lord Chamberlain was to reap all the profit, dedueting a handsome salary for his steward Yellowley, together with the aceommolation of a house and domestic farn, for the support of his family. Joy seized the hart of Mistress Barbara at hearing this hapy termimation of what threatened to be so very baid an affair as the lease of C'auldacres.
'If we cannot,' she said 'provide for our own house when all is coming in and nothing going out, surely we must be worse than infidels!'
I'riptolemus was a busy man for some time, huffing and puffing, and eating and drinking in every ehange-louse, while he ordered and eolleeted together proper implements of agriculture, to be used by the natives of these devoted islands whose destinies were menaced with this formidable change. Singular tools these would seem if presented befure a modern agricultural society ; but everything is relative, nor could the heavy cart-load of timber, called the old Scots plough, seem less strange to a Scottish farmer of this present day than the corslets and casques of the soldiers of Cortes might seem to a regiment of our own army. Yet the latter eunguered Mexico, and undoubtedly the former would have been a splendid improvement on the state of agrieulture in 'Thule.
We have never been able to learn why 'Triptulemns preferred fixing his residence in Zetland to beeoming an inlabitant of the Orkneys. Perhaps he thought the inhabitants of the latter arelipelago the more simple and docile of the two kindred tribes; or perlaps he preferred the situation of the house and farm he himself was to oeenpy (which was indeen a tolerable one) as preferable to that which he had it in his power to have obtained upon Pomona (so the main island of the Orkneys is entitled). At Harfra, or, as it was sometimes called, Stourburgh, from the remains of a lictish fort which was almost close to the mansion-honse, the factor settled himself in the plenitude of his anthority, determined to lunour the name he bore by his exertions, in precept and example, to civilise the Zetlianders, and improve their very confined howlelge in the primary arts of human life.

CHAPTER V

The wind blew keen frae north and east ;
It blew npon the flomer
Quo. our goximan to cur goolwife,
'Get np and bar the door.'

- My hand is in my housewifeskep, Goodman, as ye may see;
If it shouldna be barr'd this hundred years, It's no be barr'd for me!'

Old Song.

WE can only hope that the gentie reader has not found the latter part of the last chapter extremely tedimis; but, at any rate, his impatience will scarce equal that of young Mordannt Mertoun, who, while the lightning canue tlath after flash, while the wind, veering and shifting from poiut to point, blew with all the fury of a hurricane, and while the rain was dashed against him in deluges, stood hammering, calling. and roaring at the door of the old Place of Harfra, impatient for admittance, and at a loss to conceive any position of ex. isting circumstances which could occasion the exclusion of a stranger, especially during such horrible weather. At leusth, finding his noise and vociferation were equally in vain, he liell back so far from the front of the honse as was necessary to enable him to reconnoitre the chimneys; and, amidst "st nim and shade,' could discover, to the increase of his dismay, that though noon, then the dinner-hour of these islands, wisk nuw nearly arrived, there was no smoke proceeding frou the tumids; of the vents to give any note of preparation within.
Mordannt's wrathfil innpatience was now changed intu sympathy and alarm ; for, so long accustomed to the exnle:innt hospitality of the Zetland Islands, he was immediately indheed to suppose some strange and maccountable disaster had befillum the family; and forthwith set himself to discover some plate at which he conld make forcible entry, in order to ascertain the situation of the inmates, as much ans to ohtain shelter from the still increasing stonu. His present anxiety was, however, as much thrown away as his late clamorons importmities for ahmittance had been. I'riptolemns and his sister hand heard the whole alarm without, and had already had a slarp dispute in the propriety of opening the door.
Mrs. Baby, as we have described her, was no willing renderer of the rites of hospitality. In their farm of Cauldacres, in the Mearns, she had been the dread and abhorrence of all satherlmzie men, and travelling packmen, gipsies, long remembered heggars, aun so forth; nor was there one of them so wily, as she used to hanast, as could ever saty they had heard the elink of her sneck. In Zetland, where the new settlers were yet strangers to the extreme honesty and simplicity of all classes, suspiciom and fear joined with frugality in her ilesire to exclude all wandering gnests of uneertain charaeter; and the seeond of these motives had its effect on 'Triptolemus himself, who, thongh neither suspicious nor penurious, knew good people were scarce, good firmers scareer, and had a reasonable share of that wisdom which looks towards self-preservation as the first law of nature. These hints may serve as a commentary on the following dialuge whieh took place betwixt the brother and sister.
' Yow, good be gracions to us,' said Triptolemus, as he sat thmmbing hisis old sehool-eopy of Virgil, 'here is a pure day for the bear seel! Well spoke the wise Mantuan - ventis sur-yrutihns-and then the groans, of the mountains, and the longresmmuling shores ; but where's the woods, Biby? - tell me, I say, where we shall find the nemorum murmur; sister Baby, in these new seats of ours ?'
'What's your foolish will?' said Bahy, popping her head from out of a dark reeess in the kitchen, where she was busy aluwit some nametess deed of housewifery.
Her brother, who had addressed himself to her more from habit than intention, no sooner saw her heak red nuse, keen arey eyes, with the sharp features thereunt, conforming, shaded hy the flaps of the loose 'toy' which depended on each side of her eitser fiace, than he bethought himself that his query was likely (1) find little aeceptation from her, and therefore stoul another willey hefore he would resume the topie.
'I suy, Mr. Yellowley,' said sister Baby, coming into the middle of the roon, 'what for are ye erying on me, and me in the midst of my honsewifeskep?'
' Nay, for nothing at all, Baby,' answered 'I'riptolemus,

THE PIRATE

'saving that I was saying to myself, that here we had the sea, and the wind, and the rain, sufficient enongh, but where's the wood 1-where's the wood, Baby, answer me that?'
'The wood!' replied Buby. 'Were I no to take better care of the wood than you, brother, there would soon be nu! more wood about the town than the barber's bluck that's on your own shoulders, Triptolemus. If ye be thinking of the wrech. wood that the callants brought in yesterday, there was six sunces of it gaed to boil your parritch this morning ; thonyh, I trow, a carefin' man wad have ta'en drammock, if breakfiast he behooved to have, rather than waste baith meltith and fiuel in the same morning.'
'I'hat is to say, Baby,' replied Triptolemus, who was somewhat of a dry joker in his way, 'that when we have firc we are not to have food, and when we have food we are not to have fire, these being too great blessings to enjoy both on the same day! Good luck, yon do not propose we shonld starve with cold and starve with hunger unico contextu? But, to tell yon the truth, I could never away with ruw oatmeal, sloekened with water, in all my life. Call it drammock, or crowdie, or ju:t what ye list, my vivers must thole fire and water.'
'The mair gowk you,' said Baby ; 'can ye not make your brose on the Sunday, and sup them canld on the Monday, sinre ye're sae dainty? Mony is the fairer face than yours that has licked the lip after such a cogifu'.
'Mercy on us, sister !' said Triptolemus ; 'at this rate, it's a finished field with me: I must unyoke the plengh ann lie down to wait for the dead-thraw. Here is that in this lomee wad hold all Zetland in meal for a twelvemonth, and ye gruldye a cogfin' of warm parritch to me, that has sic a charge!'
'Whisht! haud your silly, clavering tonguc! 's said Baly, looking round with apprehension ; 'ye are a wise man to speak' of what is in the house, and a fitting man to have the clarise of it ! Hark, as I live by bread, I hear a tapping at the outer
'Go and open it then, Baby,' said her brother, glad at anything that promised to interrupt the dispute.
'Go and open it, said he!' echoed Baby, half-angry, half. frightenen, and half-trimmphant at the supcriority of her understanding over that of her brother. 'Go and open it, said he, indeed! is it to lend robbers a chance to take all that, is in the honse?'
'Robbers:' cehoed I'riptolemus, in his turn; 'there are no more robbers in this country than there are lambs at Yule. I tell yon, as I have told you an hundred times, there are no Highlanduen to harry us here. This is a land of quiet and honesty. Ofortunati nimium!'
'And what good is St. Ninian to do ye, 'Tulemus?' said his sister, mistaking the yuotation for a Catholic invoeation. 'Besides, if there be no Highlandmen, there may be as bad. I saw sax or seven as ill-looking chields gang past the Place yesterday as ever came frae beyont Clochna-ben; ill-faur'd tools they had in their hands, whaling-knives they ca'ed them, but they looked as like dirks and whingers as ae bit airn can lowk like anither. There is mae honest men carry siccan touls.'
Here the inocking and shouts of Morlame were very andible betwixt every swell of the horrible blast which was careering without. 'The brother and sister looked at each other in real perplexity and fear. 'If they have heard of the siller,' said Bahy, her very nose changing with terror from red to bline, 'we are hut gane folk!'
'Why speaks now, when they should hold their tongne?' said 'Triptolemus. 'Go to the shot-window instantly, and see how many there are of them, while I luad the old Spanish. barrelled duck-gun; go as if you were stepping on new-laid egrs.
Baby crept to the window, and reported that she saw only 'me young ehiehd, clattering and roaring as gin he were daft. How many there might be out of sight, she could not say.'
'Out of sight! nonsense,' said 'Triptolenns, laying aside the ramrol with which he was loading the piece with a trembling hand. 'I will warrant then out of sisht and hearing both; this is some poor fellow catched in the tempest, wants the shelter of our roof, and a little refreshment. Open the door, Bahy, it's a Christian deen.'

- But is it a Christian deed of hin to come in at the window, then ?' said Baby, setting up a most doleful shriek, as Mordamit Mertoun, who had forced open one of the windows, leaped down into the apartment, dripping with water like a river gonl. Iriptolemus, in great tribulation, presented the gmu which he had not yet loaded, white the intruler exchaimed, 'Hold-- holld ; what the devil mean yo: by keeping your doors bolted in weather like this, and levelling your gon at fulks' heads as yon would at a sealgh's?'
'And who are you, friend, and what want you?' said

THE PIRATE

Triptolemus, lowering the butt of his gun to the floor as he spoke, and so recovering his arms.
'What do I want?' said Mordaunt ; 'I want everythine. I want meat, drink, and fire, a bed for the night, and $n$ shieltie for to-morrow norming to carry me to Jarlshof.'
'And ye said there were nae caterans or somers here?' said Baby to the agricultnrist, reproachfully. 'Heard ye ever a breekless loon frae Lochaber tell his mind and his errand mair deftly ? Come - come, friend,' she added, addressing her. self to Mordaunt, 'put up your pipes and gang your gate. hier. is the house of his lordship's factor, and no place of reset fior thiggers or sorners.'
Mordaunt laughed in her face at the simplicity of the request. 'Leave built walls,' he said, 'and in such a tempest think I am What take you me for 1' - a gannet or a scart du you like a madwoman should drive me from the shirling at me storm ?'
'And so you propose, young man,' said Triptolemus, gravely, 'to stay in my house, volens nolens - that is, whether we will
'Will !' said Mordaunt ; 'what right have you to will anything about it? Do you not hear the thunder? Do yon nut hear the rain? Do you not see the lightning? And do yon mit know this is the only house within I wot not how many miles? Come, my good master and dame, this may be Scottish jestins, but it sounds strange in Zetland ears. You have let out the, fire, too, and my teeth are dancing a jig in my head with colld: but I 'll soon put that to rights.'
He seized the fire-tongs, raked together the embers upon the hearth, broke up into life the gathering-peat, which the lootess; had calculated should have preserved the seeds of fire, withont giving them forth, for many hours ; then casting his eye romul, saw in a corner the stock of drift-wood, which Mistress Bahy had served forth by ounces, and transferred two or three lugs of it at once to the hearth, which, conscious of such muwenteil supply, began to transmit to the chimney such a smoke as hat not issued from the Place of Harfra for many a day.

While their uninvitel gnest was thas making himself at home, Baby kept edging and jogging the factor to turn out the intruder. But for this madertaking 'Triptolemus Yellowley felt neither courage nor zeal, nor dill circumstances seem at all to warrant the favourable conclusion of any fray inte which he might enter with the young stranger. The sinewy limbs and graceful form of Mordaunt Mertoun were seen to great arlvantage in his simple sea-dress ; and with his dark sparkling eye, finely formed head, animated features, elose eurled dark hair, and bold, free looks, the stranger formed a very strong contrast with the host on whom he had intruded himself. I'riptolcmus was a short, elumsy, duck-legged disciple of Ceres, whose buttlenose, turned up and handsomely coppered at the extremity, seemed to imitate something of an occasional treaty with Bacchus. It was like to be no equal mellay betwixt persons of such unequal form and strength; and the differcnce betwixt twenty and fifty years was nothing in favour of the weaker purty. Besides, the factor was an honest, good-natured fellow at bottom, and being soon satistied that his guest had no other views than those of obtaining refuge from the stom, it would, despite his sister's instigations, have been his last aet to deny a boon so reasonable and neeessary to a youth whose exterior was so prepossessing. He stood, therefore, considering how hic could most gracefully glide into the eharacter of the liospitable landlord out of that of the churlish defender of his domestic castle against an unanthorised intrusion, when Baby, who had stood appalled at the extreme familiarity of the stranger's aulliress and demeanour, now spoke up for herself.
' My troth, lad,' said she to Mordanut, 'ye are no blate, to light on at that rate, and the best of wood, too : nane of your sharney peats, but good aik timber, nae less mann serve ye!'
'You come lightly by it, dame,' said Mordanit, carclessly; 'and you should not grudge the fire what the sea gives yon for nothing. These good ribs of oak did their last duty npon earth and ocean when they could hold no longer together under the brave hearts that manned the bark.'
'And that's true, too,' said the old woman, softening ; 'this mam be awsome weather by sea. Sit down and warm yc, since the sticks are alow.'
'Ay - ay,' : aid Triptolemus, 'it is a pleasure to see siccan a lrony, bleeze. I havena seen the like o't sinee I left Cauldacres.,
'And shallna see the like o't again in a hurry,' said Bayy, 'muless the house take fire, or there suld be a eoal-heugh foun! out.'
'And wherefore shonld not there he a coal-hengh fonnd "unt?' said the faetor, trimmphantly - 'I say, wherefore shonld not a coal-heugh be found ont in Zotland as well as in Fife, now that the chamberlain has a far-sighted and discreet man upm the spot to make the necessary peryuisitions? 'They are laith fishing-stations, I trow!'

THE PIRATE

'I tell you what it is, 'Tolemus Yellowley,' answerel his sister, who had practical reasons to fear her brother's opuning upon any false scent, 'if you promise my lord sae mony of these bomie-wallies, we 'll no be weel hafted here lefure we are found out and set a-trotting again. If ane was to speak th you about a gold mine, I ken weel wha wad promise he sulld have Portugal pieces clinking in his pouch before the year gaed by.'
'And why suld I not ?' said I'riptolemus. 'Maybe ywir head does not know there is a land in Orkney callen Ophir, or something very like it; and wherefore might not Solonnun, the wise king of the Jews, have sent thither his ships anil his' servants for four hundred and fifty talents? I trow he kinew best where to go or send, and I hope you believe in your Bille, Baby 1'
Baby was silenced by ant appeal to. Scripture, however mal a propos, and ouly answered by an inarticulate 'humph' if incredulity or scorn, while her brother went on addrewing Morlannt. 'Yes, you shall all of you see what a change slaill eoin introduce even into such an unpropitious country as yinrs. Ye have not heard of eopper, I warrant, or of ironstone, in these islands, neither?' Mordannt said he had heard there was copper near the Cliffs of Konigsburgh. 'Ay, and a copper scum is found on the Loch of Swana, too, young man. But the youngest of you, doubtless, thinks hinself a match for such as I am!

Baby, who, during all this while had been closely and acenrately reeonnoitring the youth's person, now interposed in a manner by her brother totally mexpeeted. 'Ye had mair need, Mr. Yellowley, to give the yomug man some Iry cluthes, and to see about getting something for him to eat, than to sit there bleezing away with your lang tales, as if the weather were not windy enench without your help; and maybe the lad would drink some "bland," or sic-like, if ye had the grace to ask him.'

While 'Iriptolemns looked astonished at such a propesial, considering the quarter it came from, Mordaunt answerel, he 'should be very ghal to have dry clothes, but begged to he excused from drinking matil he lad anten somewhat.'

Triptolemus accordingly conducted him into another apartment, and accommodating him with a chauge of dress, left him to his arrangementes, while he himself returned to the kitchen, much purzled to account for his sister's mumsmal fit of hospitality. 'She must be fey,' ${ }^{1}$ he suil, 'and in that case has not long to live, and though I fall heir to her tocher-gusel, I all surry for it; for she has hell the house-gar well together: drawn the girth over tight it may be now and then, hut the saldle sits the better.
When I'riptulemus returned to the kitchen, he fommd his suspicions confirmed; for his ister was in the ilespernte act of consigning to the pot a smoked goove, which, with others of the same tribe, land long hung in the large chimney, muttering to herself at the same time, 'It munn be eaten sune or syne, and what for no by the puir callant ?'
'What is this of it, sister?' said 'Triptolemus. 'You have on the girdle and the pot at nace. What day is this wi' yon!'
'l'en such a day as the Israelites had bevile the Hesli-puts of byypt, billie 'Triptolemus; but ye little ken wha ye have in your house this blessed day.'
'I'roth and little do I ken,' said I'riptolemus, 'ns little as 1 would ken the naig I never saw before. I wonld take the land for a jaggor," but he has rather ower good havings, and has no pack.'
'Ye ken as little as ane of your ain bits o' nowt, man,' retorted sister Baby ; 'if ye ken ma him, do ye ken 'Irronda Dronsilaughter?'
'Tronda Dronsdaughter !' echned Triptolemus ; 'how should 1 but ken her, when I pay her twal penuies Scots by the day for working in the house here 11 trow she works as if the things burned her fingers. I had better give a Scots lass a groat of Euglish siller.'
'And that's the maist sensible word ye have said this blessed morning. Weel, but 'Tronda kens this larl weel, and she has often spoke to ne about him. 'They call his father the Silent Man of Sumburgh, and they say he's nucamy.'
'Hout, hout - nonsense, nomsense ; they are aye at sic trash as that,' said the brother, 'when yon want a day's wark out of them: they have stepped ower the tangs, or they have met an uncumy body, or they lave turned alout the boat against the sum, and then there 's mought to be done that day.'
'Weel - weel, brother, ye are so wise,' suid Baby, 'becanse ye knapped Latin at St. Andrews; and can your lair tell me, then, what the laid has romud his halse?'

[^70]
THE PIRATE

- A Barcelona napkin, as wet as a dishelont, and I have jurt lent him one of my own overlays,' snid 'Triptulemus.
'A Barcelona napkin!' maid Baby, elevating her vaire, itull then suddenly lowering $i t$, as from apprehension of being "we:heard. 'I say a gold chain!'
'A gold chain! said 'I'riptolemus.
'In troth is it, himer ; and how like you that ? The filk say here, as 'Ironda tells me, that the king of the Drows githe it to his father, the Silent Man of Sumburgh.'
'I wish you would speak sense, or be the silent woman,' sail I'riptolemus. "I'he upshot of it all is, then, that this lat i , the rich stranger's son, and that you are giving him the goose yene were to koep till Michuelmas!'
'I'roth, brother, we maim do something for Goil's sake, anil to make friends; and the lad,' added Baby, for even she was not altogether above the prejudices of her sex in favour of (nint. ward form - 'the lad has a fair face of his nin.'
' $Y_{\theta}$ would have lot mony a fair face,' said 'I'riptolemm. 'pas. the door pining, if it had not been for the gold chain.'
'Nae doubt-nae doubt,' replied Barbara; 'ye wadna have me waste our substance on every thigger or sorner that hin- the luck to come by the door in a wet day? But this lail hus a fiuir and a wide name in the country, and Tronda says lee is tu he marriod to a daughter of the rich Udaller, Magnus 'I'ruil, and the marriage-day is to be fixed whenever he makes chuice, set him up ! between the twa lasses; and so it wad be as mullit as our good name is worth, and our quiet forbye, to let him sit unserved, although he does comie unsent for.'
'The best reason in life,' said I'riptolemus, 'for letting a math into a house is, that you dare not bid him go by. However, since there is a man of quality amongst them, I will let him know whom he has to do with, in my person.', 'Then advaucin' to the door, he exclaimed, 'Heus tili, /have !'
' Adsum,' answered the youth, entering the apartment.
'Hem !' said the erudite Triptolemus, 'not altagether deficient in his limmanities, I see. I will try him further. ('im-t thou aught of husbandry, yomg gentleman?'
'Troth, sir, not I,' answered Mordannt ; 'I have been trained to plough upon the sea and to reap upon the crag.'
'Plough the sea!' said Triptolemus; 'that's a firrow requires small harrowing; and for your harvest on the crag, I sulp"we yon mean these "scowries," or whatever yon call them. It in a sort of ingathering which the Ramzelman should stop, by the law; nothing more likely to brook an honest man's hones. I profess I cannot see the pleasure men propmes hy ilangling in a rulne's-end betwixt earth and heaven. In my case, I hul nus lief the other end of the rope were, fistened to the githet; I should the vire of not filling, at least.'
' Now, I womld mily ulvise you to try it,' replien Mordannt. 'IIrnst me, the world Ims few grander sensutioms than when one is perched in mid-uir het ween a high-lorowed cliff mind a romring neven, the rope hy which yon ure sustained seeming surne - rrmger than is silken thread, und the atone ont which you have one fiot steadied affording such "t bremeth ws the kittiwake might rent npon - to feel and know all thix, with the finll mantidence that your own agility of limb mid streupth of head can tring you ns safe off as if you lame the wing in the gonsthw wh this is indeed being almont independent of the carth you than on!'
'Iriptolemns atared at this enthusinstie: deseription of an annsement which had so fow chums fior him: and his sister, louking at the glancing eye and elevated haming of the yommg alventurer, minwered by ejacnlating, 'My certie, lul, lint jo are a brave chield!'
- A brave chield!' returned Yellowley: ' 1 say a lirave gим to be tliehtering and Heeing in the winl whon he might athide apon terve firmn! But come, here 's a goome that is mone to the pmrpose, when once it is well boiled. Get ns trenchers anin salt, Bally; lint in truth it will prove salt enongh - a tasty nomsel it is. But I think the Zethanders be the only folk in the worht tinat think of runuing sueh risks to eatch geese, und then boiling thrin when they have done.'
- 'I's he sure,' replied his sister (it was the ouly worl they haul agreed in that day), "it wonld be menneo thing to hid ony smlewife in Angus or a' the Mearns beil a gense, while there wis sie things as spits in the warh. But wha's this neist?' -ha: adled, looking towaris the entrance with great indignation. 'My certie, open doors mad dogs come in ; and wha opened the durir to him? ${ }^{3}$
' 1 did, to be sure,' replied Mordanut : ' you would not have a pror devil stand beating your deaf door-cheeks in weather like this? Here goes something, though, to help, the fire,' he alliled, drawing ont the sliding bar of oak with which the dow had heren secontred, amithrowing it on the hearth, whence it was suateched li. Dime Baby in great wrath, she exclaimining at the satme time -

[^71]
THE PIRATE

'It 's sea-borne timber, as there's little else here, and he rlings it about as if it were a fir-clog! And who be you, an it plecise you 3 ' she added, turning to the strunger - ' $a$ very hallanshiakicr loon, as ever crossed my twa cen!'
'I am a jagger, if it like your ladyship,' replied the minvited guest, a stout, vilgar, little man, who had indeed the hmmide appearance of a peetlar, called 'jagger' in these islands; 'never travelled in a wair day, or was more willing to, get to harbonnage. Heaven be praised for fire and house-room!'
So saying, he drew a stool to the fire, and sat down withomt further ceremony. Dame Baby stared 'wild as grey gosshawh,' and was meditating how to express her indignation in something warmer than words, for which the boiling pot seemed to officr it convenient hint, when an old half-starved serving-woman the 'Tronda already mentioned - the sharer of Barbara's dmes. tic cares, who had been as yet in some remote corner of the mansion, now hobbled into the room, and broke out into ex clamations which indicated some new cause of alarm.
' 0 ) master!' and ' 0 mistress !' were the only sommels i!: conld for some time articulate, and then followed them up with, 'The best in the honse - the best in the honse ; set a' on the board, and a' will be little eneugh. 'There is auld Nornat of Fitful Head, the most fearful woman in all the isles!'
'Where can she have been wandering?' said Mordaunt, not withont some apparent sympathy with the surprise, if not with the alarm, of the old domestie; ' but it is needless to ask - the worse the weather, the more likely is she to be a traveller.'
'What new tramper is this?' eehoed the distracted Baly, whom the quick succession of guests had driven wellnigh crays with vexation, 'I'll soon settle her wandering, I sall warrant, if my brother has bnt the saul of a man in him, or if there lne a pair of jougs at Scalloway!'
'Ihe irom was never forged on stithy that wonld hanld her, said the ohd maid-servant. 'She comes - she comes. (linl': sake, speak her fair and camy, or we will have a ravelled ha-p on the yarn-windles.'

As she spoke, a woman, tall enough almost to tonch the tw of the door with her cap, stepped into the room, signings he' cross as she entered, and pronomeing, with a solemn vice. "The blessing of God and St. Ronatd on the open docr, and their broad malison and mine npon close-handed churls
'And wha are ye, that are sae hanld wi' your blessing and banning in other folks' houses? What kind of country is this, that folk cannot sit quiet for an hour, and serve Heaven, and keep their bit gear thegither, without gangrel men and women coming thigging and sorning ane after another, lile a string of wild geese?
'Ihis speeeh the muderstanding reader will easily saddle on Mistress Baby' ; and what effects it might have prohlueed on the last stranger can only be matter of conjecture, for the old servant and Mordaunt applied themselves, at once to the party addressed, in order to deprecate her resentment; the former speaking to her some words of Norse, in a tone of intereession, and Mordaunt saying in Euglish, "They are straugers, Norna, and know not your name or qualities; they are maepmainted, tom, with the ways of this conntry, and therefore we must lood them excused for their lack of hompitality.'
'I lack no hospitality, young num,' said 'Triptolemus, ' miseris succurvere diseo: the goose that was destined to roost in the clinuney till Michaelmas is boiling in the pot for you ; but if we had twenty geese, 1 see we are like to find mouths to eat them every feather. 'This nust be muended.'
'What must be amended, sordid slive ?' said the stranger Norna, turning at once upon him with an emphasis that made hiin start - ' what mist be amended? Bring hither, if thou wilt, thy newfangled coulters, spailes, and harrows, alter the implements of our fathers from the plosinshare to the monsetrap; but know thon art in the land that was won of old by the flaxen-haired "kempions" of the North, and leave us their huspitality at least, to show we eome of what was once noble and generous. I say to you, beware; while Norna looks forth at the measureless waters from the crest of Fitful Head, some thing is yet left that resembles power of defence. If the men if 'Thule have ceased to be champions, and to spread the banguet fir the raven, the women have not forgotten the arts that lifted them of yore into queens and prophetessees.'
'Ihe woman who pronomiced this singular tirade was as striking in appearanee as extravagantly lofty in her pretensions :und in her langnage. She night well have represented on the stape, so far an features, voice, and stature were comeerned, the Bimuluca or Boadicea of the Britons, or the sage Velleda, Aurinia, or : my other fated pythoness who ever led to battle a tribe of the ancient Guths. Her features were high and well fommed, anl would have been handsone bint for the ravages of time and the effects of exposure to the severe weather of her comitry. Age, and perhaps sorrow, hal quenelhed, in some degree, the fire of a dark blue eye, whose hue almost approached to blarl: and had sprinkled snow on such parts of her tresses as hath escaped from under her cap, and were dishevelled by the rimur of the storm. Her upper garment, which dropped with water, was of a coarse, dark-coloured stuff, called wadnaal, then much used in the Zetland Islands, as also in Iceland and Norway. But as she tlirew this cloak back from lee shoulders, a shurt jacket, of dark-blue velvet, stamped with figures, became visible, and the vest, which correxponded to it, was of a crimson colurr and embroidered with tarnished silver. Her girdle was phated with silver ornaments, cut into the shape of planctary sisms; her blue apron was enbroidered with similar devices, and coverel a petticoat of crinson cloth. Strong, thick, enduring shoe?, if the half-dressed leather of the country, were tied with stralw, like those of the Roman buskins, over her scarlet stornius. She wore in her belt an ambiguous-looking weapon, which mightht pass for a sacrificing knife or dagger, as the imagination of the spectator chose to assign to the wearer the character if a priestess or of a sorceress. In her hand she held a staff, symared on all sides, and engraved with Runic characters and tisures, forming one of those portable and perpetual calendars which were used among the ancient natives of Scandinavia, and whirh, to a superstitions eye, might have passed for a divining-rul.

THE PIRATE

Such were the appearance, features, and attire of Nurni if the Fitful Head, upon whom many of the inhabitants of the island looked with observance, many with fear, and ahmost all with a sort of veneration. Less pregnant circumstances of silspicion would, in any other part of Scotland, have expuneel her to the investigation of those criel inguisitors who were then often invested with the delegated authority of the privy comencil, for the purpose of persecuting, torturing, and finally consigning, to the flames, those who were accused of witcheraft or sumery. But superstitions of this nature pass through two stage are they become entirely obsolete. 'Ihose supposed to be prisisiseed of supernatural powers are venerated in the carlier states if society. As religion and knowledge increase, they are first hell in hatred and horror, and are finally regarded as impusins. Scotland was in the second state : the fear of witcheralt mils great, and the hatred against those sulspected of it intence. Zetland was as yet a little world by itself, where, ammes the lower and ruder classes, so much of the ancient Northern superstition remained as cherished the original veneration fin the affecting supernatural knowledge and power over the elenums, which made a constituent part of the ancient Scandinarian crecd. . At least, if the natives of Thule admitted that one class of nagicians performed their feats by their alliance with Satan, they devoutly believed that others dealt with spirits of a different and less odious class - the ancient dwarfs, called in Zetland Trows, or Drows, the modern fairies, and so forth.
Among those who were supposed to be in league with discmbodied spirits, this Norna, descended frum, and representative of, a family which had long pretended to such gifts, was so cminent, that the name assigned to her, which signifies one of those fatal sisters who weave the web of human fate, had been conferred in honour of her superinatural powers. The name by which she had been actually christened was carefully concealed by herself and her parents; for to its discovery they superstitionsly amnexed some fatal consequences. In those times, the doubt only occurred, whether her supposed powers were acyuired by lawful means. In our days, it would have been questioned whether she was an impostor, or whether her imagination was so deeply impressel with the mysteries of her supposed art that she might be in some degree a believer in her own pretensions to supernatural knowlelgc. Certain it is, that she performed her part with such undonbting confivience, and such striking dignity of look and action, and evinced, at the sane time, such strength of langnage and energy of purpose, that it wonid have been difficult for the greatest secptic to have doubted the reality of her enthusiasin, though he might smile at the pretensions to which it gave rise.

CHAPTER VI

If, by your art, you have Put the wild waters in this roar, allay them.
Tempest.

THE storm had somewhat relaxed its rigour just befire the entrance of Norna, otherwise she must have finlul But she had hardly adc travel during the extremity of it, fury: whom chance had assembled helf so unexpectedly to the party Yellowley, when the tempest at the dwelling of Triptulemus mence, and raged around the buddenly resumed its former veliethe inmates insensible to building with a fury which made mansion was about to fall aboving except the risk that the wl

Mistress Baby a above their heads.
'The Lord guide us - this to her fears in loud exclamations of a country of guizards and is surely the last day ; what kinu if fool carle,' she added turve-carlines is this? And you, yin passions had a touch of acidity on her brother, for all her Mearns land to come here waidy in them, 'to quit the homms beggars and gaberlunzies, where there is naething but stirily: anger on the outside on 't!', within ane's house, and Heavens
'I tell you, sister Baby,'
'that all shall be reform, answered the insulted agriculturist, betwixt his teeth 'thed and amemded - excepting,' he added, jaud, that can ald bitter scaukfing humours of an ill-natured The old domesiturness to the very storm!' selves in entreaties and the pellar meanwhile exhansted themin the Norse langnase, the of which, as they were emene uothing.
She listened to them with a haughty and ummovel air, and replied at length aloud, and in Enghish - 'I will not. What if this house be strewed in ruins before moming - where would be the world's want in the crazed projector and the niggardly pinch-commons by which it is inhabited? They will needs come to reform Zetland custons, let them try how they like a 'Zetland storm. Yon that would not perish, quit this house !'
The perllar seized on his little knapsack, and began hastily to brace it on his back, the old maid-servant cast her eloak ahout her shoulders, and both seemed to be in the act of leaving the house as fast as they could.
Triptolenus Yellowley, somewhat commoved by these appearances, asked Mordaunt, with a voice which faltered with apprehension, whether he thought there was any, that is, so very much danger.
'I eannot tell,', answered the youth, 'I have scarce ever seen such a storm. Norna can tell us better than any one when it will abate ; for no one in these islands can julge of the weather like her.'
'And is that all thou thinkest Norma can do ?' said the sibyl; 'thou shalt know her powers are not bounded within sueli a narrow space. Hear me, Mordaunt, youth of a foreign land, but of a friendly heart. Dost thou quit this doomed mansion with those who now prepare to leave it ?'
'I do not - I will not, Norna,' replied Mordaunt: 'I kuow mot your motive for desiring me to remove, and I will not leave, upon these dark threats, the honse in which I have been kinully received in such a tempest as this. If the owners are miaccustoned to our practice of unlimited hospitality, I ann the more obliged to them that they have relaxed their usages and opened their duors in my behalf.'
'He is a brave lad,' said Mrs. Baby, whose superstitious feelings had been daunted by the threats of the smpposed surceress, and who, amidst her eager, narrow, and repining disposition, had, like all who possess marked eharacter, some sparks of higher feeling, which made her sympathise with generous sentiments, though she thought it too expensive to entertain them at her own cost - 'lhe is a brave lad,' she again repeated, 'and worthy of ten geese, if I had them to boil for him, or roast either. I'll warrant him a gentleman's son and no clurl's blood.'
'Hear me, young Mordaunt,' said Norna, 'and depart from this house. Fate las high views on you : you shall not remain in this hovel to be crushed amind its worthless ruins, with the relics of its more worthless inlabitants, whose life is as little to the world as the vegetation of the house-leek which now grows on their thatch, and which shall soon be crushed amongst their mangled limbs.'

THE PIRATE

' I - I - I will go forth,'said Yellowley, who, despite of his bearing himself seholarly and wisely, was beginning to lie terrified for the issne of the adventure; for the house was , m, and tie walls rocked formidably to the blast.
' 'I'o what purpose ?' said his sister. 'I trust the Priure if the power of the air has not yet sueh-like power over thinse that are made in God's image that a gool house shomld fill about our heads because a randy quean (here she darted : fierce glance at the pythoness) should boast us with her glamour, as if we were sae mony dogs to erouch at her biddin::"
'I was only wanting,' said 'Triptolemus, ashamed of 'lis motion, 'to look at the bear-braird, which must be sair lain ni' this tempest; but if this honest woman like to bide wi' $1 \mathrm{i}, \mathrm{I}$ think it were best to let us a' sit doun canny thegither, till it's working weather again.'
'Honest woman!' eehoed Baby. 'Foul warlock thief!' Aroint ye, ye limmer!'s she added, addressing Norna direttly: 'out of an honest house, or, shame fa' ne, but I'll take the bittle ' to you!'
Norna cast on her a look of supreme contempt ; then, step. ping to the window, seemed engaged in deep contenplation of the heavens, while the old maid-servant, Tronda, drawing mive to her nistress, implored, for the sake of all that was dear to man or woman, 'Do not provoke Norna of Fitful Heal! Yime have no sie woman on the mainland of Seotland : she cam ride on one of these elouds as easily as man ever rode on a sheltie.'
'I shall live to see her ride on the reek of a fat tar-barrel,' siid Mistress Baby ; 'and that will be a fit paeing palfrey firr lier.

Again Norna regarded the enraged Mrs. Baby Yellowley with a look of that unutterable seorn whieh her hannsht features could so well express, and moving to the window which looked to the north-west, from whiel quarter the sale seemed at present to blow, she stood for some time with her arms erossed, looking out upon the leaden-coloured sky, obscured is it was by the thiek drift, which, eoming on in successive gnis of tempest, left ever and anon sad and dreary intervals of expectation letwixt the lying and the reviving blast.
Norna regarded this war of the elements as one to whom their strife was familiar ; yet the stern ser - ilty of her features had in it a cast of awe, and at the same time of autherity, as the cabalist may be supposed to look upon the spirit he hit: evoked, and whieh, though he knows how to subject liiln to [^72]his spell, bears still an aspect appalling to flesh and bloor. The attendants stood by in different attitudes, expressive of their varions feelings. Mordannt, though not indifferent to the risk in which they stood, was more curions than alarmed. Ile had heard of Norna's alleged power over the elements, and now expected an opportunity of judging for limself of its reality. Triptolemus Yellowley was confonnded at what seemed t" he far beyond the bonds of his philosophy; and, if the truth must be spoken, the worthy agriculturist was grently mure frightened than inquisitive. His sister was not in the least curions on the subjeet; but it was difficult to say whether amger or fear predominated in her sharp eyes and thin, eompressed lips. The pedlar and old T'ronda, confident that the lunse would never fall while the redoubted Noma was beneath its roof, held themselves ready for a start the instant she shonld take her departure.

Having looked on the sky for some time in a fixed attitule, and with the most profound silence, Norna at once, yet with a slow and elevated gesture, extended her staff of black oak towards that part of the heavens from which the blast came lardest, and in the midst of its fury chanted a Norwegian invocation, still preserved in the Island of Vist, under the name of the 'Song of the Reim-kennar,' though some call it the 'Song of the 'Tempest.' The following is a free translation, it luing impossible to render literally many of the elliptical and metaphorical terms of expression, peeuliar to the ancient Northem poetry : -

Stern eagle of the far north-west,
Thon that bearest in thy grasp the thunderbolt,
Thon whose rushing pinious stir ocean to maduess,
Thon the ilestroyer of herds, thon the scatterer of navies,
Thon the breaker down of towers,
Amidst the scream of thy rage,
Amilst the rushing of thy onward wings,
Though thy scream be loud as the cry of a perishing uation,
Tlongh the rushing of thy wings be like the roaring of ten thousand waves, bict hear, in thine ire antl thy haste,
Ifear thou the voice of the Reim-kennar.
II
Thou hast met the pine-trecs of Drontheim,
Their dark-green heads lie prostrate beside their uprooted stems;
Thou hast met the rider of the ocean,
The tall, the strong bark of the fearless rover,
Aul she has struck to thee the topsail
"'hat she had not veiled to a royal armada;

Thou hast met the tower that bears its crest among the clouds, The battled massive tower of the jarl of former dayy, And the copertone of the turret Is lying upou its hospitable hearth; But thou too shalt stoop, proud compeller of clouds, When thou hearust tho voice of the Reim-kennar.

111
There are verses that cau stop the stag in the forest, Ay, and when the dark-coloured dog is opening on his track; There are vernes can make the wild hawk panse on his wing, Like the fulcon that wears the hool anel the jesses, Anel who knows the shrill whistle of the fowler. Thou who canst meck at the sereani of the drowning mariner, And the crash of the ravnged forest, Aud the groan of the overwhelmed crowds, When the church hath fallen in the monent of prayer, There are sounds which thou also must list, When they are chantel by the voice
iv
Enough of woe hast thou wronglit on the ocean :
The widows wring their hands on the beaeh.
Enough of woe hast thou wrought on the land:
The huskandinan folds his arnis in despair.
Cease thou the waving of thy pinions,
Let the oceun repose in lier dark streugth;
Cease thou the flashing of thine eye:
Let the thunderholt sleep in the armonry of Odin.
Be thou still at my bidding, viewless rucer of the north-western lieaven,
Sleep thou at the voice of Norna the Reim-kenuar !
We have said that Mordaunt was naturally fond of romantic poetry and romantic situation ; it is not therefore surprising that he listened with interest to the wild address thus uttered to the wildest wind of the compass, in a tone of such damuthess enthusiasm. But though he had heard so mueh of the Rumic rhyme and of the Northern spell, in the country where he had so long dwelt, he was not on this occasion so ereilulous as fo believe that the tempest, whieh had raged so lately, and which was now beginning to decline, was subilued before the charmend verse of Norna. Certain it was, that the blast seemed passiung away, and the apprehended danger was already over ; but it was not improbable that this issue had been for some time foreseen by the pythoness, throngh signs of the weather inn. pereeptible to those who had not dwelt long in the comitry, or had not bestowed on the meteorological phenomena the attention of a striet and close observer. Of Norna's experience he had no doubt, and that went a far way to explain what seemed supernatural in her demeanour. Yet still the noblp countenance, half-shaded by dishevelled tresses, the air of majesty with which, in a tone of menace as well as of command, she addressed the viewless spirit of the tempest, gave him a strong inclination to believe in the ascendency of the ceenlt arts over the powers of nature ; for, if a woman ever moved on earth to whom such anthority over the laws of the miverse could belong, Norna of Fitful Head, jndging from bearing, figure, and face, was born to that high destiny.
The rest of the company were less slow in receiving conviction. 'I' I'ronda and the jagger noue was necessary : they had long believed in the full extent of Norna's authority over the elements. But Triptolemus and his sister gazed at emoh other with wondering and alarmed looks, especially when the wind began perceptibly to decline, as was remarkably visible during the puuses which Norma made betwixt the strophes of her incuitation. A long silence followed the last verse, until Norna resumed her chant, but with a changed and more southing modulation of voice and tune :
> ' Fagle of the far north-western waters,
> Thou hast heard the voice of the Heim-kennar,
> Thou hast closed thy wide sails at her bidding,
> And folded them in peace by thy sille.
> My bessing be on thy retiring path!
> When thou stoopest from thy place on high,
> Suft be thy slumbers in the caverus of the unknown ocean,
> Kest till destiny shall again awaken thee;
> Eagle of the north-west, thou hast herrd the voice of the Reim-kennar!'

' A pretty sang that would be to keep the corn from slaking in har'st,' whispered the agriculturist to his sister ; ' we must neak her fair, Baby : she will maybe part with the secret for : hundred punds Scots.'
'An hundred fules' heads!' replied Baby; 'bid her five marks of ready siller. I never knew a witch in my life but she was as poor as Job.'
Norna turned towards thent as if she had guessed their thoughts; it may be that she did so. She passed them with a look of the most sovereign contempt, mid walking to the table on which the preparations for Mrs. Barkana's frugal meal were alrealy disposed, she filled a small wooden "unaing from tun earthen pitcher which contained hland, a subacid liguor made out of the serous part of the milk; she broke a single musis! from a barley-cake, and having eaten and drma, retumol towards the churlish hosts. 'I give you no thanks,' she sain, 'for my refreshment, for yon bill me not welcomre to it ; anil thanks bestowed on a churl are like the dew of heaven) in the eliffs of Foulah, where it finds nought that can be refreshed ly its intluences. I give you no thanks,' she said again, but Irawing from her pocket a leathern purse that seemed largu illid heavy, she added, 'I puy you with what yon will value lumre than the gratitude of the whole inhubitants of Hialthand. Siay not that Norna of Fitful Head hath eaten of your breal anid Irunk of your cup, and left yous sorrowing for the charge tu which she hath put your hnuse.' So snying, she lail ini the table a small piece of antique gold coin, hearing the rute and half-defacel effigies of some ancient Northern King.
Irriptolemus and his sister exclaimed against this liberality with veliemence; the first protesting that he kept no pillilit, and the other exclaiming, 'Is the carline haad? Hearl sin ever of ony of the gentle house of Clinkscale that gave meat for siller ${ }^{7}$
'Or for love either 1' muttered her brother; 'haud to that, tittie.'
'What are ye whittie-whattieing about, ye gowk ?' sail lii. gentle sister, who suspected the tenor of his, murmurs. 'Vii, the lady back her bonnie die there, and be blithe to be san ril on' $t$ : it will be a sclate-stane the morn, if not something wispe:
The honest factor lifted the money to return it, yet ""nl'. not help being struck when he saw the inpression, and hn hand trembled as he handed it to his sister.
'Yes,' said the pythoness again, as if she read the thonght: of the astonished pair, 'you have seen that coin before; heware low you use it! It thrives not with the sordid or the meansouled; it was won with hononrable danger, and nunct he expended with honourable liberality. 'Ihe treasure which lii"muler a cold hearth will one day, like the hidden talent, lear witness against its avaricions possessors.'

This last obscure intimation seened to raise the alarm atml the wonder of Mrs. Baby and her brother to the nttermin. The latter tried to stanmer out something like an invitation to Norna to tarry with them all night, or at least to take share of the 'dimer,' so he at first called it ; but looking at the company, and remembering the limited contents of the put, he corrected the plirase, and hoped she would take some part of the 'suack, which would be on the table ere a man could liwee a pleugh.'

- I eat not here - I sleep not here,' replied Norna; 'nay, I relieve yon not only of my own presence, but 1 will dismiss your unwelcome guests. Mordaunt,' she adden, addressing young Mertoun, 'the dark fit is past, and your father looks for youl this evening.'
'Do you return in that direction ?' said Mordannt. 'I will hut eat a morsel, and give you my aid, good mother, on the ruil. 'The brooks musi be out, mul the joumey perilous.'
'(Our ways lie different,' answered the sibyl, 'und Norna needs not mortal arm to aid her on the way. I nim smmmoned far to the east, by those who know well how to smooth my pussage. For thee, Bryce Smuisfeot,' she continued, speaking (1) the pediar, 'speed thee on to Sumburgh: the Roost will afliorl thee a gaflant harvest, and worthy the gathering in. Muel goolly ware will ere now be seeking a new owner, and the careful skipper will sleep still enough in the deep hand; and "arre not that bale and kist are dashing agninst the shores.'
- Na - na, good mother,' answered Sunilsfoot, 'I desire no min's life for my private advantage, and mu just grateful for the hlessing of Providence on my sma' trade. But, donbtless, mue man's loss is another's gain; and ns these storms destroy i' thing on land, it is but fair they suld send us something hy vea. Sae, takiug the freedom, like yoursell, mother, to borrow a lunp of barley-hread nud a dranght of bland, I will bid goodday and thank you to this good gentlenan and lady, and e'en ho oll my way to Jarlshof, as you advise.'
'Ay,' replied the pythoness, 'winere the slaughter is, the eagles will be gathered; and where the wreek is on the shore, the jugger is as busy to purehase spoil as the slark to gorge "qum the dead.'
'This rebuke, if it was intended for suel, seemed above the compreliension of the travelling-merchant, who, bent upon gain, assumed the knapsuek and ell-wmend, and askel Mordanut, with the familiarity pernitted in a wild country, whether he womld not take company along with him?
'I wait to eat some dimer with Mr. Yellowley and Mrs. Bahy,' answered the youth, 'and will set forward in half an lumir.'
'I'hen I ll just take my piece in my hund,' said the pedlur. Accordingly, he mintered a benerietion, and, withont more ceremony, hedped himself to what, in Mrs. Bahy's covetons eyes, alpearel to be two-thirds of the bread, took a long pull at the jus of bland, seized on a handful of the small fish called silluchs,

MICROCOPY RESOLUTION TEST CHART

(ANSI and ISO TEST CHART Na. 2)

APPLLIEQ IMAGE
1653 East Moin Street
Rochester, New York 14609 USA
(716) $482-0300-$ Phone
(716) $288-5989-$ Fax
which the domestic was just placing on the board, and left the room without farther ceremony.
' My certie,'s said the despoiled Mrs. Baby, 'there is the chaipman's dronth ${ }^{1}$ and his hunger baith, as folk say! If the laws against vagrants be executed this grate - It's no that I wad shut the door against decent folk,' she said, lowking to Mordannt, 'more especially in such julgment-weather. But I see the goose is dished, poor thing.'
This she spoke in a tone of affection for the smoked ginse. which, though it had long been an inanimate inhabitant of lieer chimney, was far more interesting to Mrs. Baby in that state than when it screamed amongst the clouds. Mordamt laughed and took his seat, then turned to look for Norna : but she haut glided from the apartment during the discussion with the pedlar.
'I am glad she is gane, the dour carline,' said Mrs. Bialy, 'though she has left that piece of gowd to be an everlasting' shame to us.'
'Whisht, mistress, for the love of Heaven !' said 'Tromla Dronsdaughter ; 'wha kens where she may be this monent? We are no sure but she may hear ns, though we canmot sec lier.'

Mistress Baby cast a startled eyc around, and instantly recovering herself, for she was naturally couragcous as well is violent, said, 'I bade her aroint before, and I lid her arrint again, whether she sees me or hears me, or whether she's ower the cairn and awa'. And yon, ye silly sumph,' she said to pron' Yellowley, 'what do ye stand glowering there for ? You a Sannt Andrew's student! - you studied lair and Latin humanities, as ye ca' them, and daunted wi' the clavers of an auld randie wife: Say your best college grace, man, and witch or nae witch, we ll eat our dinner, and defy her. And for the value of the sowilen piece, it shall never la said I ponched her siller. I will gio it to some poor body - that is, I will test ${ }^{2}$ upon it at my leath, and keep it for a purse-penny till that day comes, and that 's min using it in the way of spending siller. Say your best collese grace, man, and let us eat and drink in the ineantime.'
'Ye had muckle beiter say an maamus to St. Ronatil, ${ }^{3}$ and fling a saxpence 6 wer your left shouther, master,' natil Tronda.
'That ye may pick it np, ye jaud,' said the implacalle

[^73]Mistress Baby ; 'it will be lang or ye win the worth of it ony other gate. Sit down, Triptolemus, and mindua the words of a daft wife.'
'Daft or wise,' replied Yellowley, very much diseoncerted, 'she kens more than I would wish she kend. It was awfu' to see sie a wind fa' at the voice of Hesh and blood like oursells;
'If ye cannot but think,' sainl Mrs. Baby, very sharply, 'at least ye can hand your tongine.'

The agriculturist man'? no reply, but sate down to their seanty meal, and did the inomours of it with unnsual heartiness to his new guest, the first of the intraders who had armived, and the last who left them. The sillocks speedily disappeared, and the smoked goose, with its appendares, took wing so effectmally that I'ronda, to whom the polishing of the bones had been destined, found the task aceomplished, or nearly so, to lier hand. After dimer, the host produced his bottle of brandy; but Mordaunt, whose general habits were as sober almost as those of his father, laid in very light tax upon this unusual exertion of hospitality.
During the meal, they learned so much of young Mordannt and of his father that even Baby resisted his wish to reassume his wet garments, and pressed him (at the risk of an expensive supper being added to the charges of the day) to tarry with them till the next morning. But what Norna had said excited the youth's wish to reach hone, nor, however far the hospitality of Stourburgh was extended in his behalf, did the house present any particular temptations to induce hin to remain there longer. He therefore accepted the loan of the factor's cluthes, promising to return them and send for his own; and took a civil leave of his host and Mistress Bahy, the latter of whom, however affected by the loss of her goose, could not but think the cost well bestowed (since it was to be expended at all) upon so handsome and cheerfin a youth.

CHAPTER VII

> She does no work by halves, yon raving ocean ; Engulfing those she strangles, her wild womb Afforls the mariners whon she hath dealt on, Their death at once, and sepulchre.

THERE were ten 'lang Scots miles' hetwixt Stourburgh and Jarlshof; and though the pedestrian did not number all the impediments whicl. crossed 'lamo' Shamter's path - for in a comitry where there are neither hedge: nur stone inclosures, there can be neither 'slaps nor stiles' yet the number and nature of the 'mosses and waters' which her hand to eross in his peregrination was fully sufficient to balance the account, and to render his journey as toilsome and danmernis as 'Tam o' Shanter's celebrated retreat from Ayr. Neither witeh nor warlock er sed Morlamints path, however. '?!? length of the day was a a nady consillerable, and he arrived alle at Jarlshof by eleven o'cloek at night. All was still and liark ronnd the mansion, and it was not tili he had whistled twice or thrice beneath Swertha's window that she replied to the signill

At the first sonnd, Swertha fell into an acrecable dreain of a young , whale-fisher who some forty years since used to make such a signal beneath the window of her hut; at the semmil, she waked to rennember that Johmie Fea had slept sumnd among the frozen waves of Greenland for this many a sean, and that she was Mr. Mertomn's governante at Jarlshof ; it the third, she arose and opened the window.
'Whae is that,' she demanded, 'at sic an hour of the ni,ght ?'
'It is I,' said the youth.
'And what for comena ye in? The door's on the latelh, there is a gathering-peat on the kitchen fire, and at munk beside it ; ye can light your ain candle.'
'All well,' replied Mordaunt; 'but I want to know how my father is.'
'Just in his orlinary, gude gentleman; nsking for yon, Maister Mordannt; ye are ower far and ower late in your walks, youns sentlenan.'
'Inen the dlark hour has passed, Swerthn ?'
'In troth has it, Maister Mordamt,' answered the governante ; 'and your fat'her is very reasonably good-matured for him, pror gentleman. I spake to him twice yesterday withont his speaking first; and the first time he answared me as eivil as yon conld do, and the neist time he bade me no plague him; and then, thought I, three times were aye canny; so I spake to him again for luck's sake, and lie called me a chattering old devil ; but it was quite and clean in a civil sort of way.'
'Bnough - enough, Swertha,' answered Mordaunt ; 'and now get up and find me something to eat, for I have dined but pourly.'
'Then you have been at the new folks' at Stourburgh; for there is no another house in a' the isles but they wad hae gi'en ye the best share of the best they had. Saw ye aught of Narna of the Fitful Head 1 She went tu Stourburgh this morniug, and returned to the town at night.'
'Returned! then she is here? How conld she travei three leagues and better in so short a time?'
'Wha kens how she travels?' replied Swertha; ' but I heard her tell the Ranzelnan wi' my ain lugs that she intended that diay to have gone on to Burgh-Westra, to speak with Minma 'Iroil, but she had seen that at Stourburgh - indeed, she said at Harfra, for she never calls it by the other name of Stourburgh that sent her back to our town. But gang your ways round, and ye shall have plenty of supper: ours is nate toom pantry, and still less a locked ane, though my master be a stranger, and 110 jnst that tight in the npper rigging, as the Ranzelman says.'
Mordannt walked round to the kitchen accordingly, where Swertha's care speedily accommodated him with a plentiful though coarse meal, which indemnified him for the scanty hospitality he had experiented at Stourburgh.
In the morning, some feelings of fatigne made yomug Mertom later than usimal in leavig his beel ; so that, contrary to what was the ordinary case, he fi, mid his father in the apartment where they ate, and which served them indeed for every emmon purpose, save that of a bedehamber or of a kitchen. The son greeted the father in mute reverence, and waited unti! de should address him.
'Yon were absent yesterday, Mordaunt?' said his father. rol. xilit-Mordannt's absence had lasted in week and more ; hut he hat often observed that his father neever seenned to notice how time passed during the perionl when he was affeetel with his sullem vapours. He assented to what the elder Mr. Mertom hand said.

'And yon were at Burgh-Westra, as I think $?$ ' contimell liis father.
'Yes, sir,' replied Mordamnt.
The elder Mertome was then silent for some time, and prand the floor in deep silence, with an air of sombre reflection, whinit seemed as if he were about to relapse into his moody fit. Sial denly turning to his son, however, he observed, in the tone off it query, 'Magnus 'Iroil has two daughters - they must be nuw young women ; they are thought handsome, of course?'
'Very generally, sir,' answered Mordaunt, rather sinp risel to hear his father making any inquiries about the indiviluals of a sex which he usually thought so light of - a surpri : which was much increased by the next question, put as abr cly as the former.
'Which think you the handsomest ?'
'I, sir ?' replied his son with some wonder, but withont embarrassnent, 'I really am no judge. I never considerent which was absolutely the handsomest. 'They are both very pretty young women.'
' You evade my question, Mordaunt ; perhaps I have smue very particular reason for my wish to be acquainted with your taste in this matter. I am not used to waste words for nio purpose. I ask you again, whieh of Magnus Troil's daughters you think most handsome ?'
'Really, sir,' replied Mordaunt - 'but you ouly jest in asking me such a question.'
'Young man,' replied Mertoun, with eyes which liegan to roll and sparkle with impatienee, 'I never jest. I desire an answer to my question.'
'Then, upon my word, sir,' said Mordannt, 'it is not in my power to fonm a jullment betwist the young ladies; they are both wery pretty, but by no means like each other. Minna is dark-hairel, and mure grave than her sister - more serions, hut by no me:us either dull or sullen.'
'Uim,' replied his father; 'you have been gravely bronglit up, and this Minna, I suppose, pleases yon most?'
${ }^{\prime}$ No, sir, really I can give her no preference over her siste: Brenda, who is as gay as a lamb in a spring morning; lessi tall than her sister, but so well formed and so excellent a daucer
'That she is best qualified to amuse the young man who has a dull home and a moody father ?' said Mr. Merwom.
"othing in his father's conduct had ever surprised Mordamet so much as the obstinacy with which he seemed to pursne a theme so foreign to his general train of thourht and hahits of conversation ; but he contented himself with minswering once more, "That both the young ladies were lighly admirable, but lie had never thonght of them with the wish to do either injustice by ranking her lower than her sister ; that others would probably decide between them, as they happened to be partial to a grave or a gay disposition, or to a dark or fair complesion ; but that he could see no excellent quality in the one that was not lalanced by something equally captivating in the other.'
It is possible that even the coolness with which Mordaunt made this explanation might not have satisfied his father concerning the subject of investigation; but Swertha at this moment entered with breakfast, and the youth, notwithstandin! his late supper, engaged in that meal with an air which satisfied Mertoun that he held it matter of more grave inmportance than the conversation which they had just had, and that lie had nothing more to say npon the subject explamatory of the answers he had already given. He sladed his brow with his hand, and looked long fixedly upon the young man as he was husicd with his morning meal. There was neither abstraction nor a sense of being observed in any of his motions: all was frank, natural, and open.
'He is fancy free,' muttered Mertoun to himself, 'so young, so lively, and so inaginative, so handsome and so attractive in face and person, strange that at his age, and in his circumstances, he should have avoided the meshes which catch all the world beside !'
When the breakfast was over, the cllder Mertoun, instead of proposing, as usmal, that his son, who awaited his commands, should betake limself to one branch or other of his studies, assumed his hat and staff, and decired that Mordant should accompany him to the top of the eliff, called Sumburgh Heal, and from thence look $c$ " 4 pon the state of the ncean, ayitated as it must still be by t . tempest of the preceding diay. Mordaunt was at the age wi m young men willingly exchange sedentary pursuits for active exercise, and surted i! with alacrity to comply with his father's request; and in the course of a few minutes $t: v$ were mominting together the hill, whish, ascemiling from the Lumb side in a long, steep, and grassy slope, sinks it once from the smmmit to the sea in an abrupt and tremenduns

THE PIRATE

The day was delightfinl ; there was just so mueh motion in the air as to disturb the little fleecy clouds whieh were seattered on the horizon, and by floating them occasionally over the : inn, to ehequer the landsca;' with that variety of light and shinde which often gives to a bare and nuinclosed scene, for the time at least, a species of charm approuehing to the varieties of a eultivated and planted country. A thousand fitting hues if light and shade played over the expanse of wild moor, rechs, and inlets, whieh, ns they climbed higher and higher, spreal in wide and wider circuit aromen them.

The elder Mertoun often pansed and looked around npon the seene, and for some time his soll supposed that he halted to enjoy its beauties; but as they aseended still higher up the hill, he remarked his shortened breath and his uneertain and toilsome step, and becanne assured, with some feelings of alarm, that his father's strength was, for the moment, exhausted, innd that he found the ascent more toilsome and fatiguing than usual. To draw elose to his side, and offer him in silence the assistance of his arm, was all act of youthful deference to advanced age, as well as of filial reverenee; and Mertom seemed at first so to receive it, for he took in silence the advantage of the aid thus afforded him.

It was but for two or three minutes, however, that the father availed himself of his son's support. They had mut ascended fifty yards farther ere he pushed Mordannt suddenly if not rudely, from him ; and, as if stmeg into exertion by somin sudden recolleetion, began to monnt the acclivity with such lin and quiek steps that Mordanut, in his turn, was obliged t exert himself to keep pace with him. He knew his father's peculiarity of disposition ; he was aware, from many slight cir cumstances, that he loved him not even while he took murd pains with his edncation, and while he seened to be the sole object of his care upon eartl. But the conviction had never been more strongly or more powerfully forced upon him than ay the hasty churlishness with which Mertom rejeeted from a son that assistance which most elder!y men are willing to receive from youths with whon they are but slightly comeeted, as a tribute which it is alike graceful to yield and pleasing to receive. Mertoun, however, cuil not seem to perceive the effert which his unkindness had produced upon his son's feelings. He pansed upon a sort of level terrace, whieh they had now attuned, and addressed his son with mindifferent tone, which seemed in some regree affected.
'Since yon have son few inducements, Mordannt, to remain in these wild islands, 1 suppose you sometimes wish to look a little more abroud into the world?'
'By my word, sir,' replie! Mordamt, 'I eannot say I ever lave thought ous such a subject.'
'And why not, young main ?' demanded his father; 'it were hut natural, I think, at your age. At your uge, the fair and varied breadth of Britain could not gratify me, much less the compass of a sea-girdled peat-moss.'
'I have never thought of leaving Zetland, sir,' replied the son. 'I an happy here, and have friends. You yourself; sir, would miss me, unless indeed $\qquad$
'Why, thou wonldst not persmade me,' said his father, somewhat hastily, 'that you stay here, or desire to stay here, for the love of me ?'
'Why should I not, sir ?' answered Morlaunt, mildly ; 'it is my duty, and I hope I have hitherto performed it.'
'Oh ay,' repeated Mertom, in the sume tone, 'your duty your duty. So it is the duty of the dog to follow the groom that feeds him.'
'And does he not do so, sir?' said Mordaunt.
' Ay,' said his father, turning his liead aside ; 'but he fawns only on those who earess him.'
'I hope, sir,' replied Mordaunt, 'I have not been found deficient?'
'Say no more on't - say no more on't,' said Merto'm, abruptly; 'we have both done enougin by each other ; we must soon part. Let that be our counfort, if our separation slould require comfort.'
'I shall be ready to obey your wishes,' said Mordaunt, not altogether displeased at what promised him an upportmity of looking farther abroad into the world. 'I presume it will be your pleasure that I commence my travels with a season at the whale-fishing.'
'Whale-fishing!' replied Mertoun : 'that were a mode indeed of seeing the world! hut thou speakest but as thon hast learned. Enongh of this for the present. 'Tell me where you had shelter from the storm yesterday ?'
' At Stourburgh, the honse of the new factor from Scotlani.'
'A pedantic, fantastic, visionary schemer,' sai ! Mertomn: 'and wion saw you there?'
'His sister, sir,' replied Morlannt, 'and old Norma of the Fitful Head.'
'What ! the mistress of the potent spell,' answered Mertomin, with a sueer - 'she who can change the wind by pulling hur curch on one side, as King Erick nse' to do by turming his cap 1 'the dame journeys far from home; how fares shre! Does she get rich by selling favourable winds ' to those "whe are port-bonnd?'
'I really do not know, sir,' said Mordaunt, whom certain recollections prevented from freely entering into his father's humbour.
'Yon think the matter ton serions to bo jested with, ir perhaps esteenn her merchandise two light to bo cared afin?"' continied Mertonn in the same narcastic tone, which was the nearest approach he ever made to cheerfunhess ; 'but comsider it more deeply. Everything in the miverse is bonght :unll sold: mid why not wind, if the merchant can find purchasers? The earth is rented, from its surface down to its most central mines; the fire, and the means of feeding it, are currently bought and sold; the wretches that sweep the beisterums ocean with their nets pay ransolu for the privilege of luing drowned in it. What title has the air to be exempted firmin the miversal course of traflic ? .111 above the earth, mader the carth, and around the earth has its price, its sellers, and its purchasers. In many conntrics the priests will sell you a portion of Heaven; in all comntries men are wiling to biny, in exchange for health, wealth, and peace of $c$ nscience, a till allowance of Hell. Why shonld not Norma pus. ee her tralfir?
'Nay, I know no reason against it,' replied Mordamet ; 'minly I wish she would part with the commodity in smaller qumatitie. Yesterday sie was a wholesale dealer; whoever treated with her had too good a pennyworth.'
'It is even so,' said the father, pansing on the verge of the wild promontory which they had attained, where the huse precipice sinks abruptly down on the wide and tempestnn!: ocean, 'and the effects are still visible.'
The face of that lofty cape is composed of the suft ainl crumbling stone called sand-flag, which gradually heromins decomposed, and yields to the action of the atmosphere, annl is [^74]Aplit into large masses, that humg lunse upon the verge of the precipice, and, detached from it hy the firy of the tempusts, aften descend with great firry into the vexed ahyss which lashes the finot of the rock. Numbers of these hage frognents lies strewed beneath the rocks from which they have fallen, and annongst these the tide fomus and rages with a firy peenliar to these latitudes.

It the period when Mertom and his som lowked som the verge of ${ }^{1} 1$ p precipice, the wide sea still henved and swelled with the upgitution of yesterday's sturn, which had heen far $t \cdot x$, violent in its effects on the ceem to subside sppedily. The tide therefore ponred on the headland with a fury deafening to the ear and dizaying to the eye, threntened instant destruction to whatever might be at the time involvel in its current. The sight of nature, in her magniticence, or in her beanty, or in her terrors, has at all times an overpowering interest, which even habit camot greatly weaken; and hnith father and son sat themselves down on the clift to look cont upwn that minmomed war of waters which rolled in their wrath to the foot of the рrecipice.
At once Mordaunt, whose eyes were sharper, and probably his attention more alert, than that of his father, sturted nif and exclained, 'Goal in Henven! there is a vessel in the Roost!'
Mertom looked to the north-westward, and an object was visible amid the rolling tide. 'She shows no snil,' he obsiervel; and inmediately added, after loohing at the object throngh his ay-glass, 'She $i^{\prime}$ dismasted, and lies a sheer hulk upon the witter.'
'And is drifting on the Sumburgh Head,' exclaimed Mordamut, strnck with horror, 'without the slightest means of eathering the cape!'
'She makes no effiort,' answered his father ; 'she is probably deserted by her crew.'
'Anl in such a day as yesterday,' replied Mordamnt, 'when no open haat conld live were she manned with th: best men ever handled an oar: all minst have prerished.'
'It is most probable,' said his father, with stern composure ; 'anl one day, sooner or later, all must have perished. What signifies whether the fowler, whom nothing escapes, canght them np at one swoop from youler shattered deck, or whether he latched them individnally, as chance gave them to his grisin? What signifies it? The deek, the battlefiehlare sca:ce mere fital 'o us Ghan our table annl our hed; ;anl we are saved from the one, merely to drag ont a heartleas and wearisome existence till wo perisll at the other. Wonll the honr were come - that homr which reason womh teach ns to wish for, were it not that natire has implanted tha fene of it son strongly wilhin us! You womlernt such in retlection, lreanse cife is yet new to yon. Ere yon lave attamed my age, it will io the fmailiar compranion of your thonghts.'
'Surely, sua' replied Morlannt, 'much distante to life is not the neceswary consequence of alvanced nge ${ }^{\prime}$ '
"lo all who have sense to estimate that which it is really so munch of the nuimal impulse abont them ns to derive phan ure from vensmal gratification may, perlmps, like the anmash, feel pleasure in mere existence.'

Mordanit linal neither the doetrine nor the example. Ine thought it man who diselarged his duties towneds othere as well as the goori old Vilaller hal a better right to haw ble sun shine thir on his setting than that which he might memin from mere insensibility. But he let the subjeet drup, lin ${ }^{\prime \prime}$ dispute with his fither had alwiys the effect of irritating hinn. and agnin he adverted to the condition of the wreck.

I'lie hilk, for it was little better, was now in the very milat of the cinrrent, and drifting at a great rate towards the finin the precipice, upon whose verge they were placel. L'et it wis a long while ere they had a distinct view of the object whilh they had at first seen as a black speck amongst the waters, :mil then, at a nearer distance, like a whale, which now scarce shme its back-fin above the maves, now throws to view its lame hink side. Now, however, they conld more distinctly observe the appearance of the ship, for the huge swelling waves which hare her forwarl to the shore heaved her altemately high num dhe surface, and then planged her into the trongh or finmow of the sea. She seemed a vessel of two or three limmired tons, fillad up for defence, for they conld see her port-holes. She hail henn dismasted probably in the gale of the preceding day, and lity water-logged on the waves, a prey to their violence. It ap peared certain that the crew, finding themselves mahle cither to dire't t'r, vessel's conrse or to relieve her by ?mmping, hind taken is ..cir bouts and left her to her fate. All applehe. sions were therefore monecessary, so far as the inmendiato lows of hmman lives was emmernodl: and yet it was not withme a feeling of breathless awe that Morlimet and his fanher heheld the vessel - that rume masterniece by which lomman gronins aspires to surmonnt the waves mul contend with the winds uphon the print of falling a prey to them.
Onward she cune, the large black hitk seeming larger at cevery fithom's length. She came nearer, until she heatrockle the smmuit of one tremendons billow, which rolled on with her imbroken, till the wave and its hurden were precipitated arainst the rock, and then the trinamph of the elements over the work of human hands was at onve completed. Sne wave, we have said, mate the wrecken vessel completely munifest in her whole buitk, as it raised her and bore her onward mgainst the face of the precipice. But when that wave receled from the fingt of the rock, the ship had ceased to, exist; nuid the rutiring billow. only bore lack a rmmetity of heans, n! :ha, alaks, and similar oljects, which swept ont to the offin :, - he brought in amain by the next wave, and again precipita . .! ' aon the lace of the rowk.
It we. at this moment that Murdanni conceived he saw a man tho.ting on in plank or water-cnsk, which, drilting nway from the main earrent, seened about to go ashore num a small spot of saml, where the water was slallow and the waves hruke more smoothly. 'To see the danger an! to exclain, 'He lives, and nuy yet be suvel!' was the first impulse of the fearless Murlamt. The next was, after me rupiil glance at the front of the cliff, to preeipitate himself - such seemed the rapility of his movement - from the ve:ge, and to commence, by means of slight fissures, projection., and erevice in the roxk, a descent which, to a spectator, appeared little else than all at of alsonlute insarity.
'Stop, I emmunull your, rash !, maill his father; 'the attempt is icath. Stop, and take salier path to the left.' But Mordanut was already complately engaged in his perilons enterprise.

- Why should ${ }^{\top}$ arevent ': 'm ?' saill his father, checking his auxiety with the e arr, and mateling phitosorhy whose principles he had adopted. 'should be die now, full of generoms and hight feeling, eager in the canse of hmmaity, happy in the exertion of his own conseions activity and youtliful strength shunld he die now, will he nut esenpe misanthropy, and remorse, aun age, mad the conscionsness of decaying powers, hoth of honly and mind? I will not look upon it, however. I will not -I cumot hehold this young light sin sumblenly yuencheel.'
He turned from the precipice accordingly, and hastening to the left for more than a yuarter of a mile, he proceedel towarils a 'riva,' or cleft in the rock, containing a path, called Erick's Steps, neither safe, indeed, nor easy, but the only one by which the inhabitants of Jarlshof were wont, for any purpose, to seek access to the foot of the precipice.

THE PIRATE

But, long ern Mertoun had reached even the upper cull of the pass, his adventurous and active son had accomplished his more desperate enterprise. He had been in vain turned aside from the direct linc of descent by the intervention of difficulties which he had not seen fron above: his route becance mily more circuitous, but could not be interrupted. More thatin once, large fraginents to which he was about to entrnst his weight gave way before hiin, and thundered down into the tormented ocean; and in one or two instances such detached pieces of rock rushed after him, as if to bear him hearllong in their course. A courageous heart, a steady eye, a tenacions hand, and a firm foot carried him through his desperate attempt; and in the space of seven minutes he stood at the bottom of the cliff from the verge of which he had achieved his perilous descent.

The place which he now occupied was the small projecting spot of stones, sand, and gravel that extended a little way into the sea, which on the right hand lashed the very bottom of the precipicc, and on the left was scarce divided from it by a sinall wave-worn portion of beach that extended as far as the foot of the rent in the rocks called Erick's Steps, by which Mordaunt's father proposed to descend.
When the vessel split and went to pieces, all was swallowal up in the ocean which had, after the first shock, been seen to flowit upon the waves, excepting only a few pieces of wreck, cask:, chests, and the like, which a strong eddy, formed by the reflux of the waves, had landed, or at least grounded, upon the shallow where Mordannt now stood. Amongst these, his eager cye dis.covered the object that had at first engaged his attention, an! which now, scen at nigher distance, proved to be in truth : man, and in a most precarious statc. His arms werc still wrap, with a close and convulsive grasp round the plank to which le had chngg in the moment of the shock, but scense and the power of motion were fled; and, from the situation in which the plank lay, partly grounded npou the beach, partly floating in the sea, there was every chance that it inight be again washed off shore, in which case denth was inevitable. Jinst as he hard made himself aware of these circumstances, Mordaunt beheld a huge wave advancing, and hastened to interpose his aid eri it burst, aware that the reflux might probably sweep away the sulferer.

He rushed iuto the surf, and fastened on the body with the same tenacity, though under a different impulse, with that wherewith the loound seizes his prey. The strength of the retiring wave provel even stronger than he had expected, and it was not without a struggle for his own life, as well as for that of the stranger, that Mordamit resisted being swept off with the receding billow, when, though an adroit swinmer, the strength of the tide must either lave dashed him against the rocks or hurried him out to sea. He stood his ground, however, and ere another such billow had returned, he drew up, upon the small slip of dry sand, both the body of the stranger and the plank to which he continued firmly attached. But how to save and to recall the means of ebbing life and strength, and low to remove into a place of greater safety the sufferer, who was incapable of giving any assistance towards his own preservation, were questions which Mordaunt asked himself eagerly, but in vain.

He looked to the summit of the cliff on which he had left his father, and shouted to him for his assistance ; but his eye could not distinguish his form, and his voice was only answered by the scream of the sea-birds. He gazed again on the sufferer. A dress richly laced, according to the fashion of the times, fine linen, and rings upon his fingers, evinced he was a man of superior rank; and his fcatures showed youth and comeliness, notwithstanding they were pallid and disfigured. He still breathed, but so feebly that his respiration was almost imperceptible, and life seemed to keep such slight hold of his frame that there was avery reason to fear it would become altogether extinguished, unless it were speedily reinforced. To loosen the handkerchief from his neck, to raise him with his face towards the brecze, to support him with his arms, was all that Mordaunt could do for his assistance, whilst he anxiously looked for some one who might lend his aid in dragging the unfortunate to a more safe situation.
At this moment he beheld a man advancing slowly and cautiously along the beach. He was in lopes, at first, it was liis father, but instantly recollected that he lad not had time to come round by the circuitous descent to which he must necessarily have recourse, and besides, he saw that the man who approached him was shorter in stature.

As he came nearer, Mordaunt was at no loss to recognise - c pedlar whom the day before he had met with at ILarfra, anlid who was known to hin before upon many occasions. He shouted as loud as he could, 'Bryce, hollo :-Bryce, conne hither!' But the merchant, intent upon picking up some of the spoils of the wreck, and upon dragging them out of reach of the tide, paid for some time little attention to his shouts.

THE PIRATE

When he did at length approach Mordannt, it was not th lend him his aid, but to remonstrate with him on his rashuess in undertaking the charitable office. 'Are you mad?' said he: 'you that have lived sae lang in Zetland, to risk the saving of' a drowning man? Wot ye not, if you bring him to life again, he will be sure to do you some capital injury ? ${ }^{1}$ Come, Mister Mordaunt, bear a hand to what's mair to the purpose. Help ne to get ane or twa of these kists ashore before anybody elve comes, and we shall share, like good Christians, what God sents us, and be thankful.'

Mordaunt was indeed no stranger to this inhuman superstition, current at a former period among the lower orders of the Zetlanders, and the more generally adopted, perhaps, that it served as an apology for refusing assistance to the unfortunate victims of shipwreck, while they made plunder of their goots. At any rate, the opinion, that to save a drowning man was to run the risk of future injury from him, formed a strange contradiction in the character of these islanders, who, hospitahle, generous, and disinterested on all other occasions, were sometimes, nevertheless, induced by this superstition to refure their aid in those mortal emergencies which were so comm!n upon their rocky and stormy coasts. We are happy to ahl, that the exhortation and example of the proprietors have eradicated even the traces of this inhuman belief, of whict: there might be some observed within the memory of those nuw alive. It is strange that the minds of men should have ever been hardened towards those involved in a distress to which they themselves were so constantly exposed; but perhaps the frequent sight and conscionsness of such danger tends to blunt the feelings to its consequences, whether affecting ourselves in others.
Bryce was remarkably tenacious of this ancient belief ; the more so, perhaps, that the mounting of his paek depended less upon the warelouses of Lerwick or Kirkwall than on the consequences of such a north-western gale as that of the day preceding; for which (being a man who, in his own way, pro-[^75]fessed great devotion) he sellom failed to express his grateful thanks to Heaven. It was indeed said of him, that, if he had spent the same time in assisting the wrecked eamen which he had employed in ritting their bales and boxes, he would have saved many lives, and lost much linen. He paid no sort of attention to the repeated entreaties of Morlaunt, althongh he was now upon the same slip of sand with him. It was well known to Bryce as a place on which the eldy was likely to land snch spoils as the ovean risgorged ; and, to improve the favourable moment, he oceupied hiniself exclusively in securing and appropriating whatever seemed most prortable and of greatest value. At length, Morlament saw the lionest peedlar fix his views upon a strong sea-chest, framed of some lndian woold, well seeured by brass plates, and seeming to be of a foreigit construction. The stout loek resisted all Bryce's efforts to open it, until, with great composure, he pluched from his preket a very neat hammer and chisel, and began furcing the hinges.

lneensed beyoud patienee at his assurance, Mordannt canglit up a wooden streteher which lay near hin, and laying his charge softly on the sand, approached Bryce with a meatacing gesture and exelaimed, 'You cold-bloorded, inhmanan rascal! either get up instantly and lend me your assistance to recover this man, and bear him out of danger from the surf, or I will int only beat you to a mummy on the spot, bet inform Magnus Troil of your thievery, that he may have yon flogged till yon bones are bare, and then banish you from the Mainland!'
The lid of the ehest had just sprung open as this rongh. address salnted Bryee's ears, and the inside presented a tempting view of wearing-apparel for sea and land, shirts, plain and with lace ruftles, a silver compass, a silver-hilted sworl, and other valuable articles, which the perlar well knew to be such as stir in the traule. He was half-lisposed to start up, diaw the sword, which was a eut-and-thrust, and 'darraign battaile,' as Spenser says, rather than quit his prize or brook interruption. Being, though short, a stont, square-male personage, and not much past the prime of life, having besides the better weapon, he might have given Mordaunt nore trouble than his b crolent kinght-errantry deserved.
Already, as with vehemenee he repeated his injunctions that Bryce should forbear his plunder and come to the assistance of the dying man, the pedlar retorted with a voice of defianse, - Dinni swear, sir - dima swear, wir : I will endure no swearint in my presence; and if you lay a finger on me, that am taking the lawfin spoil of the Egyptians, I will, give ye a leswon ye shall remember from this day to Yule!'

'THE PIRATE

Mordaunt would speedily have put the pellar's comrane til the test, but a voiee belind him suddenly said, 'lorbear?' It was the voice of Norna of the litful Iead, who, during the heat of their altercation, had approached them 'mobserved. 'four bear!' she repeated; 'and, Bryee, do thon render Mordamut the assistance he requires. It shall avail thee more, and it i, I who say the word, than all that you eonld earn to day beside.
'It is se'enteen hundred linen,' said the pedlar, giving: a tweak to one of the shirts, in that knowing manner with whin matrons and judges ascertain the texture of the 1 ln mI - "it: se'enteen hundred linen, and as strong as an it were dowlas. Nevertheless, mother, your bidding is to be done ; and 1 womld have done Mr. Mordaunt's bidding too,' he adden, relaxing from his note of defiance into the deferential whining tome with which he cajoled his customers, 'if he hadna made nee if profane oaths, whieh made my very flesh grew, and caused me, in some sort, to forget myself.' He then took a flask from lisi pocket, and approached the shipwrecked man. 'It's the inest of brandy,' he said; 'and if that doesna eure hin, I ken unomglt that will.' So saying, he took a preliminary gulp, hinuself, as if to show the quality of the liquor, and was abuut to put it to the man's mouth, when, suddenly withholding his haund, he looked at Norna - 'You ensure me against all risk of evil firmin him, if I am to render him my help? Ye ken yoursell whit folk say, mother.'

For all other answer, Norna took the hottle from the perllar:, hand, and began to ehafe the temples and throat of the ship. wrecked man ; directing Mordaunt how to hold his heaul, sin is to afford him the means of disgorging the sea-water which he had swallowed during his immersion.
The pedlar looked on inactive for a moment, and then stitl, 'To be sure, there is not the same risk in helping him, now he is out of the water, and lying high and dry on the beach: :anl to be sure, the principal danger is to those who first toncin him: and, to be sure, it is a world's pity to see how these rinks an : pinching the puir creature's swalled fingers' : they make his hand as blue as a partan's back hefore boiling.' So saying, he seizal! one of the man's cold hands, which hatd just, by a tremultur: motion, indicated the return of life, and began his chamitatle work of removing the rings, whieh seemed to be of sume valuc.
'As you love your life, forbear,' said Norua, sternly, 1 will lay that on you which shall spoil your travels through the isles.'
'Now, for mercy's sake, mother, say nae mair about it,' said the pedlar, 'and I'll e'en do your pleasure in your ain way: I did feel a rheumatise in my back-spmuld yestreen; mull it wal be a sair thing for the like of me to be debarred my quiet walk round the country, in the way of trade - making the honest penny, and helping myself with what Providence sends ou our coasts.'
' Peace, then,' said the woman - ' peace, us thou wouldst nut rue it; and take this man on thy broad shoulders. His life is of value, and you will be rewarded.'
'I had muekle need,' said the pedlar, pensively looking at the lidless chest and the other matters whieh st ewel the sand; 'for he has comed between me and as muckle spreicherie as wad hae made a man of me for the rest of my life; and now it maun lie here till the next tide sweep it $a^{\prime}$ doun the Roost, after them that aught it yesterday morniug.'
'Fear not,' said Norna, 'it will come to man's usc. See, there come carrion-crows of seent as keen as thine own.'
She spoke truly; for several of the people from the hamlet of Jarlshof were now hastening along the beach, to have their share in the spoil. The pedlar beheld them approaeh with a deep groan. 'Ay - ay,' he sail, 'the folk of Jarlshof, they will make elean wark ; they are kend for that far and wide ; they wima leave the value of a rotten ratlin; and what's wamr, there isma ane o' them has mense or sense ensugh to give thanks for the mercies when they have gotten them. There is the auld Ranzelman, Neil Ronaldson, that eama walk a mile to hear the minister, but he will hirple ten if he he ${ }^{-r}$ of a ship ellbayed.'
Norna, however, seemed to possess over him so complete an ascendency, that he no longer lesitated to take the man, who now gave strong symptoms of reviving existenee, upon his shoulders; and, assisted by Mordamet, trulged along the seaheach with his burlen, without farther remonstrance. Ere he wis borne off, the stranger pointed to the chest, and attempted tu mutter something, to which Norna replied, 'Enough. It shall be secured.'
Alvancing towards the passage ealled Erick's Steps, by which they were to ascend the cliffs. they met the prenpie from Jarlshof hastening in the opposite direction. Man and woman,

THE PIRATE

as they lassed, reverently made room for Noma, and suluted her, not without an expression of fear upon some of their fites, She passed them a few paces, and then turning back, called alond to the Ranzelman, who (though the practice was mure eommon than logal) was attending the rest of the hanlet "pnin this plundering expedition. 'Neil Ronalison,' she suicl, 'mark has been just there stands yonder a chest, from whieh the hil house at Jarlshof juif. Look it be brought down to yonr own touching the slightest as it now is. Beware of moving in that so mueh as looks at the coutents were better in his grave. nor in aught will I be disobeyed.'
'Your pleasnre shall be done, mother,' said Ronaldson warrant we will not break bulk, since sic is your biddling.'

Far behind the rest of the villagers followed an old woman, talking to herself, and eursing her own deerepitude, which kept her the last of the party, yet pressing forward with all her might to get her share of the spoil.

When they met her, Mordaunt was astonished to reeognive his father's old housekeeper. 'How now,' he said, 'Swertha, what make ;ou so far from home?'
'Just e'elı daikering out to look after my auld master anl your honour,' replies : Swertha, who felt like a eriminal caught in the manner; for, on more occasions than one, Mr. Mertomin had intimated his high disapprobation of sueh excursions as she was at present engaged in.

But Mordaunt was too mueh engaged with his own thoughts to take mueh notice of her delinqueney. 'Have you seen my father ?' he said.
'And that I have,' replied Swertha. "The gude gentleman was ganging to hirsel himsell doun Eriek's Steps, whilk wimhl have been the ending of him, that is in no way a cragsman. Sae I e'en gat him wiled away hame ; and I was just seeking. you that yon may gang after him to the hall-house, for to my thought he is far frae weel.'
'My father unwell ?' said Mordannt, remembering the faintwess he had exhibited at the commenement of that morimy's walk.
'Far frae weel - far frae weel,'. groaned out Swertha, with a piteous shake of the head; 'white o' the wills - white $\sigma$ ' the' gills; and him to think of eoming down the riva!'
'Retnrn home, Mordaunt,' said Norna, who was listenines 1 . what had passed. 'I will see all that is necessary done for this man's relief, and you will find him at the Ranzelman's when yon list to ingnire. You cannot hely, him more than you alrealy have done.'

Morlannt felt this was true, and, emmmunding Swertlan to follow him instantly, hetook himself" to the paih lomewarl.
Swertlia hobbled relactantly after lier yomug master in the same direction, mitil she lost sight of lime on his entering the cleft of the rock; then instantly turned about, mattering to herself, 'Haste home, ing good sooth: - haste home, and lose the lest chanee of getting a new rokelay and owerlay that I have haul these ten years! By my certie, na. It's seldom sie rich guluends some on onr shore ; no sinee the "Jemy and James" came awhore in King Charlie's time.'
So saying, she mender her paee as well as she could, and, a willing minid making amends for frail limbs, posted oul with woulerfinl despateh to put in for her share of the spoil. She sonin reached the beach, where the Ranzelman, statting his own pouches all the while, was exhorting the rest 'to part things fiair and he neighbonrly, and to give to the auld and helpless a slare of what was going, which,' he charitably remarked, 'would bring a blessing on the shore, and send them "mair wrecks ere winter."' ${ }^{1}$

[^76]
CHAPTER VIII

He was a lovely yonth, I gness ;
The panther in the wilderness
Was hot no fair as lie;
And when he chose to sprort and play, No dolphill ever was so gay Upoil the tropic sea.

Wordmwortit.

THE light foot of Mordannt Mertoun was not long of bearing him to Jarlshof. He entered the honse hastily: for what he himself had olserved that morning contrisponded in some degree with the ideas which Swertha's tale was calenlated to excite. He fominl his father, however, in the inner apartment, reposing himself after his fatigue ; and his first ylus. tiom satisfied him that the good dame had practised a little imposition to get rid of them both.
'Where is this dying man, whom you have so wisely wemtured your own neck to relieve?' said the elder Mertomu t. the yomiger.
' Norna, sir,' replied Mordaunt, 'has taken him under her charge; she muderstands such nuntters.'
'And is quack as well as witch?'s said the elder Mertum. 'With all my heart ; it is a trouble saved. But I hasted lume', on Swertha's lint, to look ont for lint and bandages; fur hire speech was of broken bones.'
Mordannt kept silence, well knowing his father wonld int persevere in his inquiries mpon such a matter, and not willinus either to prejudice the old governante or to excite his firthir to one of those excesses of passion into which he was anh th burst when, contrary to his wont, he thought proper to correct the comluct of his domestic.
It was aite in the day ere old Swerthn returned from her expedition, heartily fatigned, and bearing with her a bunilla if some bulk, containing, it wonld scem, her share of the spuil.

Mordaunt instantly sought her ont, to charge her with the deceits she had ractised on buth his fither and hiunself; lint the accused matron hacked not her reply.
'By her troth,' she said, "whe thonght it was time to hid Mr. Mertominging hame anil get lanilages, when she hail seen, with her ain twa cen, Morlannt ganging down the clifl like a wilh-cat; it was to le thonght broken trones womld he the emb, she might weel tell Mordamit his finther was puirly, mul him looking sae white in the gills, whilk, she wal die џinn it, was the very word she nsed, and it was a thin: that cumbluab le denied by man at this very moment.
'But, Swertha,' suid Moridanit, as some as her chamormes defence gave him time to spak in reply, 'how came yon, that domhld lave been honsy with your honsewifery and your spinning, to leo ont this moming at brick's Steps, in orler to take all this muecessary care of my lither and me? And what is in that bmade, Swertha f for I fear, Swertha, you have been transogressing the law, and have been ont unon the wrecking sy:tem.'
''rair fa' your sonsy face, and the blessing of St. Ronalid upon yon,' said Swertha, in a tone hetwixt cmaxims and jestius: 'would you keep' a puir honly frae menting hersell, and sue minekle gear lying on the lowse sand for the lifting? Iont, Maister Mordamt, a ship ashore is a sight to wile the minister out of his very pun'pit in the middle of his preaching, muckle muir a puir auld ignorant wife frae her rock and her tow. Anid little did I get for my day's wark : just some rags ", ambinie thims.s, and a bit or twa of coorse claith, and sic-like; the strung and the hearty get a' thing in this warll.'
'Yes, Swertha,' replied Mertom, 'and that is rather hard, as yom minst have yomr share of pumshment in this world and the next for robling the poor mariners.'
'Itout, callant, wha wad punish an anld wife like me for a wheen dhods? Folk speak muckle black ill of Farl Patrius: but he was a freeme to the shore, and munde wise laws namint nuy boly helping vessels that were like to samg on the breakers: ${ }^{1}$ Ahed the mariners, I have heard Bryce Jagger say, lose their right frae the time keel tonches sand; and, moreover, they are dead and gane, poor sonls - dead and grate, and care little about warlds wealth now. Nay, mae mair than the great jarls ami sea-kings, in the Norse days, did almut the treawres that they buried in the tomber num sepmlehres anld langssyie. Did I ever tell yom the mang, Mister Morinumt, how ilaf Trygnarmin garr'l hide five golle armons in the sume grate with him 1'
'Nu, Swertlm,', wiid Mordmint, who tonk glew"re in lin menting the cmming ohl phonlerer, 'ymu never fohd me than: bint I tell yom, thint the atrunger whoni Norum Ims taken dimi to the town will be well ennugh to-morrow to nak where sum have hidhlen the poonls that you lave stolen from the wrow.!'
'But wha will tell him a word about it, limnie?' simb Swertha, lonking slyly up, in her yonng muster's fince. "Ihn numir ly token, since I mumn tell ye, that I lave a lnmuy min. mant of silk numug the line, that will manke a dainty wiistenat to Jomrvell, the first merry-making ye gnuge to.'
Mordmint conld no longer forbear linghing at the riminimg with which the old dame proposed to bribe of his evilenne ly imparting a portion of her plander; mud, desiring her tw wet ready what provision she had made for dimuer, he Ietinnoll to his father, whom he fomd stil! sitting in the snme placer, :n.! "early in the sanue posture, in whieh he had left him.

When their lasty nud frugal meal was finisheel, Morilannt ammonced to his father his purpose of gink down tw: 'In town, or hamlet, in look after the shipwrecked su:l, r.
'The elder Mertonn assented with a norl.
'He must be ill accommodated there, sir,' maded his som-a hint which only produced mother nod of nasent. 'He seememel. from his muearance, pursnedy '-lamut, 'to be of very wnul rank; nind admitting these poor people do their best to rereive him, in lis present weak state, yet
'I know what you would say,' said his father, interru!tine him; ' we, yon think, onght to do something towaris assi-time' him. Gu to him, then; if he lacks money, let him nane the smin, mind he shall have it ; but, for loglging the stranger leve. innl holding intercourse with him, I neither can nur will du w. I have retired to this farthest extremity of the British Who..." avoid new friends and new faces, and none such shall intrumb mine either their happiness or their misery. When you ha:" kuwn the word half a score of years longer, your ently frimul? will have given yon reason to remember them, and to als,ind new ones for the rest of your life. Go, then - why do yom swi! Tind the comintry of the man: let me see no one alonat mic lout those colgar omitenances, the extent and charautor": whise pretty knavery I know, and can sulmit th, as to :"ll cil too ifling to canse irritation.' He then throw his pmase to his som and signed th him to depmert with all speen.
shorlanint was not homg befire he reached the village. In the dark abode of Neil Romalison, the Rnizelman, he finmil the stranger sentel by the peat-fire, npon the very chest which haul excited the eupidity of the devont Bryee Similationt, He prillar. The Ranzelman himself was absent, dividing, with nll dow importiality, the spoils of the wrecken vessel amonget the matives of the commmity; listening to and redressing their complaints of inspuality, and (if the matter in hand hall not lwen, from begiming to eni, utterly minat and indefensible) discharging the part of a wise anil prudent mugistrate in all the letails. For at tinis time, and prohably mutil a much later priosl, the lower oriders of the ishanders entertanined an opinion, common to harbarians nlso in the same sitmation, that whatever was cust on their shores became their indinpmable property.
Margery Bimbister, the worthy sponse of the Ranzelman, was in the charge of the house, and intronheel Morlanit to her guest, saying, with un great ceremuny, "Ihis is the yomnt tacksman. You will maybe tell him your mune, thongh yom will not tell it to us. If it hemb not heen fin his fime quarters, it's bint little you would have siill to onyborly, sue lang as life lastel.'
'The stranger arose anill showk Mordannt by the hanl; ohserving, he miderstood that he had been the memas of savin! his life amp his chest. "The rest of the property,' he sail, "is, I see, walking the plank; for they are as bnsy as the devil in a gale of wind.'
'And what was the use of your semmanship, then,' said Margery, 'that you conldna keen off hie Smmburh Ileand? It would have been lang ere sumburgh Heal haul come to yon.'
'Leave us for a moment, goad Margery Bimbister,' sainl Mordame ; 'I wish to have some private emiversation with this sentleman.'
'Gentleman!' .and Margery, with an emphasis: 'mut but tine man is well bongh to look at,' she ahdrod, absin sinvering him, 'hut I dmont if there is minckle of the sentleman alomit him.'
Mordamit looked at the stranger, and was of a different "pinion. He was rather above the midlle size, and formed handsomely as well as strongly. Morlamit's interemrse witi suciety was not extensive; but he thumght his new aumaintance, to a bold, sunburnt, handsome countenance, which seemed to have faced varions clinates, added the frank and open manners of a sailor. He answered cheerfully the inquiries which Mordannt male after his health ; and maintained that one ninght's rest wonld relieve him from all the effects of the disaster he had sustained. But he spoke with bitterness of the avarice innd curiosity of the Ranzelnan and his spouse.

THE PIRATE

'That chattering old woman,' said the stranger, 'has persecuted me the whole day for the name of the ship. I think she might be contented with the share she has had of it. I was the principal owner of the vessel that was lost yomler, and they have left me nothing but my wearing apparel. Is there no magistrate, or justice of the pcace, in this wild comintry, that would lend a hand to help one when he is annumg the breakers?'
Mordaunt mentioned Magnus Troil, the principal proprietor, as well as the 'fowd,' or provincial judge, of the district, as the person from whom he was most likely to obtain redress ; ;anl regretted that his own youth, and his father's situation in a retired stranger, should put it out of their power to afford him the protection he required.
'Nay, for your part, you have done enongh,' said the sailn, ; 'but if I had fivc out of the forty brave fellows that arc finlese' food by this time, the devil a man would I ask to do me the right that I could do for myself!'
'Forty hands!' said Mordaunt; ' yon were well mamed for the size of the ship.'
'Not so well as we needed to bc. Wc mounted ten gmes besides chasers ; but our cruise on the main hat thinned ns if men, and lumbered us up with goods. Six of our guns were in ballast. Hands! if I had had enough of hands, we wonld never have miscarried so infernally. The people were knoeked up with working the pumps, and so took to their boats, and left me with the vessel, to sink or swim. But the dogs hat their pay. and I can afford to pardon them. The boat, swamped in the enrrent -- all were lost - and here a:n I.'
'Youn had come north abont then, from the West Indies?' said Mordamut.
'Ay - ay, the vessel was the "Guol Hope" of Bristul, a letter of marque. She had finc hek down on the Spanish Main, Indh with commerce and privateering; but the luck is enderl with her now. My name s Clcment Cleveland, captain, anil purt owner, as I said before. I am a Bristol man born ; my father was well known on the tollsell - old Clem Cleveland of the College tireen.'

Mordannt had no right to inquire farther, and yet it seemed to him as if his own mind was but half satisfied. There was an affectation of bluntness, a sort of defiance, in the manner of the strunger, for whiel cireumstances afforded no oceasion. Captain Cleveland had suffered injustice from the islanders, hit from Mordaunt he had only received kindness and protection; yet he seemed as if he involved all the neighburhood in the wrongs he eomplained of. Mordaunt looked down and was silent, doubting whether it would be better to take his leave or to proceed farther in his offers of assistance. Cleveland seemed to guess at his thoughts, for he inmediately added, in a conciliating manner - 'I am a plain man, Master Mertoun, for that I understand is your nane; and I am a ruined man to boot, and that does not mend one's good manners. But yon have done a kind and friendly part by me, and it may be I thirk as mueh of it as if I thanked you more. And so before I leave this place I'll give you my fowling-piece; she will put a hundred swan-shot through a Dutehman's cap at eighty paces; she will carry ball too: I have hit a wild bull within a homdred and fifty yards; but I have two pieces that are as good or better, so you may keep this for my siake,' 'Illat would be to take my share of the wreek,' answeied Mordannt, laughing.
'No such matter,' said Cleveland, undoing a ease which contained several gins and pistols; 'you see I lave saved my private arm-chest as well as my elothes - that the tall old woman in the dark rigging managed for me. Anul, between ourselves, it is worth all I have lost; for,' he added, lowering his voice and looking round, 'when I speak of being rnined in the hearing of these land-sharks, I do not mean ruined stock and block. No, here is something will do more than shoot sea-fowl.' So saying, he pulled out a great ammmition-ponch marked swanshot, and showed Mordauist, hastily, that it was full of Spanish pistules and Portagnes, as the broad Portngal pieces were then called. 'No-no,' he inded, with a smile, 'I lave ballast enongh to trim the vessel again; and now, will yon take the piece?'
'Since you are willing to nive it me,' said Mordannt, langh ing, 'with all my heart. I was just groing to ask yon, in my father's name,' he added, slowing his purse, 'whether yon wanted any of that same ballast.'

- Thanks, but yon see I am provided. Take my old arynaintance, and may she serve yon as well as she has served me; lut yon will never make so good a voyage with her. Yon ain shoot, I suppose?'
'I'olerably well,' said Mordaunt, admiring tine piece, which was a beautiful Spanish-barrelled gun, inlaid with goll, surill in the bore, and of unusual length, sueh as is chiefly useif fin shooting sea-fowl and for ball-practice.
'With slugs,' continued the donor, 'never gun shot chieer; and with single ball you may kill a seal two hundred yards at sea from the top of the highest peak of this iron-bound cmat of yours. But I tell you again, that the old rattler will never do you the service she has done me.'
'I shall not use her so dexterously, perhaps ?' said Morlanint.
'Umph ! perhaps not,' replied Cleveland; 'but that is mit the question. What say you to shooting the man at the wheel, just as we run aboard of a Spaniard? So the Don was taken aback, and we laid him athwart the hawse, and carried her cutlass in hand; and worth the while she was - stout brigantine - "El Santo Francisco" - bound for Porto Bello, with cull and negroes. That little bit of lead was worth twenty thousimid pistoles.'
'I have shot at no such game as yet,' said Mordaunt.
' Well, all in good time; we cannot weigh till the tide makes. But you are a tight, handsome, aetive young man. What is to ail you to take a trip after some of this stuff?' laying his hanel on the bag of gold.
'My father talks of my travelling soon,' replied Mordiunt, who, born to hold men-of-war's-men in great respect, filt flattered by this invitation from one who appeared a thoroughbred seaman.
'I respect him for the thought,' said the captain, 'anl I will visit him before I weigh anchor. I have a consort off these islands, and be eursed to lier. She'll find me ont shmewhere, thongh she parted company in the bit of a squall, unlens she is gone to Davy. Jones too. Well, she was better fimmil than we, and not so deep loarled : she must have weathere! it. We'll have a hamnock shmg for you aboard, and make an sailon and a man of yon in the same trip,'
'I shonkl like it well enough,' said Mordannt, who eigerly longed to see more of the world than his lonely situation hail hitherto permitted; 'hut then my father minst decide.'
'Your father! pooh!' said Captain Cleveland; 'but you are very right,' he added, checking himself. 'Garl, I have lived so long at sea that I cumot imagine anybody has a right to think except the captain and the master. But you are very right. 1 will go up to the old gentleman this instant and speak to him myself.' He lives in that handsome, modern-looking buildiug, I suppose, that I see a quarter of a mile off?'
'In that old half-ruinel house,' said Mordaunt, 'he docs inuleed live ; but he will see no visitors.'
'Ihen you must drive the point yourself, for I can't stay in this latitude. Since your father is no magistrate, I must go to see this same Magnus - how call you him? - who is not justice of peace, but something elsc that will do the turn as well. 'Hese fellows have got two or three things that I must and will have back; let them keep the rest, and be $d-d$ to them. Will you give me a letter to him, just by way of colnmisision?
'It is scarce needful,' said Mordaunt. 'It is enough that yon are shipwrecked and need his help; but yet I may as well furnish you with a letter of introduction.'
'There,' said the $s$ ilor, producing a writing-case from lis chest, 'are your writing-tools. Meantime, since bulk has leecn bruken, I will nail down the hatches and make sure of the carto.'
While Mordaunt, accordingly, was engagel in writing to Magnus Troil a letter, setting forth the circumstances in which Ciptain Cleveland had been thrown upon their coast, the cilptain, having first selected and laid aside some wearing alparel and necessaries enough to fill a knapsack, took in hand hammer and nails, employed himself in sceuring the lid of his sea-chest by fastening it down in a workman-like mamer, and then added the corroborating seririty of a cord, twisted and knotted with nautical dexterity. 'I leave this in your charge,' he said, 'all except this,' showing the bag of gold, 'and these,' puinting to a cutlass and pistols, 'which nay prevent all further risk of my parting company with my Portarues.'
'You will find no occasiom for weapons in this comitry, Captain Cleveland,' repliel Mordaunt: 'a child might travel with a purse of gold from Sumburgh Head to the Scaw of Unst, and no soul would injure him.'
'And that's pretty boldly said, young gentlcman, considering what is going on without doors at this moment.'
'Oh,', replied Morlaunt, a little confused, 'what comes on land with the tide they reckon thcir lawful property. One would think they had studied under Sir Arthegal, who pro. nounces -

For equal right in equal things doth stand, And what the mighty sea hath once possens'd, And plucked quite from all prossessors' hands, Or else by wrecks that wretches have distress'd, He may dispose, by his resistless might, As things at random left, to whom he list.'
'I shall think the better of plays and ballads as long as 1 live for these very words,' said Captain Cleveland; 'and yint I have loved them well enough in my day. But this is grunl doctrine, and more men than one may trim their sails to surli a breeze. What the sea sends is ours, that's sure enurugl. However, in case that your good folks should think the laul as well as the sea may present them with waifs and strays, I will make bold to take my cutlass and pistols. Will you cause my chest to be secured in your own house till you hear from ine, and use your influence to procure me a guide to show me the way, and to carry my kit?'
'Will you go by sea or land?' said Mordauiit, in reply.
'By sea!' exclaimed Cleveland. 'What, in one of these cockle-shells, and a cracked corkle-shell to boot 1 No - no : latel - land, unless I knew my crew, my vessel, and my voyage.'

They parted accordingly, Captain Cleveland being surplied with a guide to conduct him to Burgh-Westra, and his cheest being carefully removed to the mansion-house at Jarlshuf.

CHAPTER IX

This is a gentle trader, and n prudent. He's no Autolycus, to blear your eye With quips of worldly gatuls and gramesomeness ; But seasons all his oflittering merchanuise With wholesume doctrines, suitell to the nse, As men sauce goose with sage and rosemary.

Old Play.

ON the subsequent morning, Mordaunt, in answer to his father's inquiries, began to give him some account of the shipwrecked mariner whom he had rescued from the waves. But he had not proceeded far in recapitulating the particulars which Cleveland had communicated, when Mr. Mertoun's looks became disturbed; he arose hastily, and, ufter pacing twice or thrice across the roon, he retired into the inner clamber, to which he usually contined himself while under the intluence of his mental malady. In the evening he reappeared, without any traces of his disorder ; but it may he easily supposel that his son avoided recurring to the subject which had affected him.
Mordaunt Mertoun was thus left without assistance to form at his leisure his own opinion respecting the new acquaintance which the sea had sent him ; and, upon the whole, he was himself surprised to find the result less. favourable to the stranger than he could well account for. 'Ihere seemed to Mordaunt to be a sort of repelling intluence about the man. I'rue, he was a handsome man, of a frunk and prepossessing mamer, lint there was an assumption of superiority about him which Mrrdaunt did not quite so much like. Although he was so keen a sportsman as to be delighted with his acquisition of the Spanish-barrelled gum, and accordingly mounted and dislummited it with great interest, paying the utmost attention to the most nimute parts about the lock and oruaments, yet he wis, upon the whole, inclined to have some scruples about the mode in which he had acguired it.
'I should not have accepted it,' he thought ; 'perhaps Captain Cleveland might give it to me as a sort of payment for the tritling service I did him; and yet it would have lretn churlish to refuse it in the way it was offered. I wish he hall lorked more like a man whom one would have chosen to lee obligel to.'

But a successful day's shooting reconciled him to his ginl, and he becane assured, like most young sportsmen in siniliar cireumstances, that all other pieces were but pop-guns in comparison. But then, to be doomed to shoot gulls and seels, when there were Frenchmen and Spaniards to be come at, when there were ships to be boarded, and steersmen to lee marked off, seemed but a dull and contemptible destiny. His father had mentioned his leaving these islands, and no other morle of ocunpation occurrell to his inexperience save that of the sea, with which he had been conversant from his infancy. His ambition had formerly aimed no higher than at sharing the fatignes and dangers of a Greenland fishing expelition; for it was in that scene that the Zetlanders laid most of their perilous adventures. But war was again raging, the history of Sir Francis Drake, Captain Morgan, and other bohl allventurers, an account of whose exploits he had purchased frum Byrce Snailsfoot, had made much impression on his miml, ant d the offer of Captain Cleveland to take him to sea freprently: recurred to him, although the pleasure of such a project wis somewhat damped by a doubt whether, in the long rim, he should not find many objections to his proposed commander. Thus much he already saw, that he was opinionative, and might probably prove arbitrary; and that, since even kindness wils mingled with an assumption of superiority, his occasimal displeasure might contain a preat deal more of that disisgree. able ingredient than could be palatable to those who siiled under him. And yet, after counting all risks, conld his father: consent but be obtained, with what pleasure, he thought, wimli he embark in quest of new scenes and strange adventures, ill which he proposed to himself to achieve such deeds as shumbld be the theme of many a tale to the lovely sisters of Bums. Westra - tales at which Minma should weep and Brenda shonlid smile, aral both should marvel! And this was to be the rewand of his labours: aul his dangers; for the hearth of Magnus 'Tr,il had a magnetic influence over his thoughts, and however they might traverse amid his day-dreams, it was the point where they finaily settled

There were times when Mordaunt thought of mentioning to his father the conversation he had held with Cuptnin Clevelane? and the seamun's proposal to him; hit the $1 \%$; short ats general accomit wheh he had given oi that person's inic. 5 , $y$, upen the moming after his departure from the hamlet, had promlucel a sinister effeet on Mr. Mertomis mind, and discouraged him from spenking firther on any subject connected with it. It wonld be time enough, he thought, to mention Captain Cleveland's proposil when his consort should arrive, and when he should repeat his offer in a more formal mamer ; and these he supposed events likely very swon to happen.
But days grew to weeks, and weeks were numbered into months, and he heard nothing from Cleveland ; and only learned ly m occasional visit from Bryce Sinailsfoot that the captain was residing at Burgh-Westra as one of the family. Morlaunt was somewhat surprised at this, althongh the mulimited hospitality of the islands, which Magnus Troil, both from fortume anl disposition, carried to the utmost extent, made it almost a matter of course that he should remain in the family mitil he disposed of himself otherwise. Still it seemed strange he had not gone to some of the northern isles to impuire after his consort ; or that he did not rather choose to make Lerwick his residence, where fishing-vessels often brought news from the coasts and ports of Scotland and Holland. Again, why did he not send for the chest he had deposited at Jarlshof ? and still farther, Mordaunt thought it would have been but polite if the stranger had sent him some sort of message in twken of remembrance.
These subjects of reflection were comnected with another still mure umpleasant, and more difficult to accomnt for. Until the arrival of this person, searce a week had passed without bringing hiim some kind greeting or token of recollection from BurghWestra ; and pretences were scarce ever wanting for maintaining a constant intercourse. Minna wanted the words of a Norse maillad ; or desired to have, for her various collections, feathers, or egys, or shells, or specimens of the rarer sea-weets ; or Bremla sent a riddle to be resolved, or a song to he learned: ir the honest old Udaller - in a rude manuscript, which might have passed for an ancient Runic inscription - sent his hearty greetinge to his grood young friend with a present of something to make good cheer, and an earnest reguest he would come to Burgh-Westra as soon, and stay there as long, as possible. These kindly tokens of remembrance were often sent hy special message; besides which, there was never a passenger or a traveller who crossed from the one mansion to the other who did not bring to Mordaunt some friendly greeting from the Udaller and his family. Of late, this intercourse had theculne more and more infrequent ; and no messenger from Buryh. Westra had visited Jarishof for several weeks. Mordannt lwoth observed and felt this alteration, and it dwelt on his mind, while he questioned Bryce as closely as pride and prudence wonld permit, to ascertain, if possible, the cause of the change. Yet he endeavoured to assume an indifferent air while he asked the jagger whether there were no news in the country.

THE PIRA'TE

'Great news,' the jagger replied; ' and a gay mony of them. That crack-brained carle, the new factor, is for making a change in the "bismars" and the "lispunds"; and our worthy fiwil, Magnus Troil, has sworn that, sooner than change them fir the still-yard, or aught else, he 'll fling Factor Yellowley from Brassa Craig.'
' Is that all 3 ' said Mordaunt, very little interested.
'All ! and eneugh, I think,' replied the pedlar. 'How are folks to buy and sell, if the weights are changed on them?'
'Very true,' replied Mordaunt; 'but have you heard of no strange vessels on the coast?'
'Six Dutch doggers off Brassa; and, as I hear, a highquartered galliot thing, with a gaff mainsail, lying in Scalloway Bay. She will be from Norway;'
'No ships of war, or sloops?
'None,' replied the pedlar, 'since the "Kite" tender sailen with the impress nen. If it was His will, and our men were out of her, I wish the deep sea had her!'
'Were there no news at Burgh-Westra 1 Were the family all well?
' $A$ ' weel, and weel to do, out-taken, it may be, something ower muckle daffing and laughing : dancing ilk night, they say, wi' the stranger captain that's living there - him that was ashore "n Sumburgh Head the tother day ; less daffing served him then.'
'Daffing ! dancing every night!' said Mordaunt, not particularly well satisfied. 'Whoun does Captain Cleveland dance with!'
'Ony body he likes, I fancy,' said the jagger; 'at ony rate, lie gars a' body yonder dance after his fiddle. But I keu littlo about it, for I am no free in conscience to look upon that flinging fancies. Folk should mind that life is made but of rotten yarn.'

[^77]' I fancy that it is to keep them in mind of that wholesome truth that you deal in such tender wares, Bryce,' replied Mordaunt, dissatisfied as well with the tenor of the reply as with the affected scruples of the respondent.
"That's as muckle as to say, that I suld hae minded you was a flinger and a fidlller yoursell, Maister Mordannt ; but I am an auld man, and maun muburlen my conscience. But ye will be for the dance, I sall warrant, that 's to be at Burgh- Westra on John's Even - Naunt John's, as the blinded creatures ca' him and nae doubt ye will be for some warldly braws - hose, waistcoats, or sic-like ? I hae pieces frue Flanders.' With that he placed his movable warehouse on the table, and began to mulock it.
'Dance!' repeated Mordaunt - 'dance on St. Joln's Even? Were you desired to bid me to it, Bryce?'
' Na; but ye ken weel eneugh ye wad be welcome, bidden or no bidden. This captain-how ca' ye him?-is to bo skudler, as they ca't - the first of the gang, like.'
' 'The devil take him!' said Mordaunt, in impatient surprise.
'A'in gude time,' replied the jagger ; 'liurry no man's cattle; the devil will hae his due, I warrant ye, or it wima be for lack of seeking. But it's true I'm telling you, for a' ye stare like a wild cat; and this same captain - I watua his uamelought ane of the very waistcoats that I am ganging to show ye-purple, wi' a gowd binding, and bonnily broidered; and I have a piece for you, the neighbour of it, wi' a green grind; and if ye mean to streek yonrsell up beside him, ye maun e'en bny it, for it's gowd that glances in the lasses' een nowadays. See - look till 't,' he added, displaying the pattern in various points of view - 'look till it through the light and till the light throngh it, $u i$ ' the grain and against the grain : it shows ony gate ; cum frae Autwerp a' the gate. Four dollars is the price ; anl yon captain was sae weel pleased that he flang down a twenty shilling Jacobis, and lade me keep the change and be d-l! Poor silly profane creature, I pity lim.'

Without inquiring whether the perllar bestowed his compasion on the worldly impradence or the religions deficiencies of C'aptain Cleveland, Mordannt turned from him, folded his arms, and paced the apartment, muttering to himself, 'Not asked. A stranger to be king of the feast!' Wonis which lie repeated so earnestly that Bryce caught a part of their import.
'As for asking, I am almaist bauld to say that ye will be asked, Maister Mordaunt.'
'Did they mention my name, then!' said Morlannt.
'I canna precoesely say that,' maid Bryce Suailsfoot: 'Int ye needna turn away your head sue sourly, like a sealgh when he leaves the shore ; for, do you see, I heard distinetly that in the revellers about are to be there ; and is't to be thenght they would leave out yon, an auld kend freend, and the lighte:t foot at sie frolies - Heaven send you a better praise in lliw ain gude time ! - that ever tlang at a fildle splleak, between this mid Unst I Sue I consider ye altogether the same as invited : and ye had best provide yourself wi' a waistemat, fir brave and lrisk will every man lo that 's there - the Lord pity them:'
He thus continued to follow with his green glazen eyes the motions of young Mordanit Mertomn, who was paeing the menn in a very pensive manner, which the jagger probably miniuter. preted, as he thonght, like Clandio, that, if a man is sad, it mut needs be becanse he lacks money. Bryee, therefore, after annther pause, thns accosted him - 'Ye needna be sad about the mather, Maister Mordaunt; for although I got the jnst price of the article from the captain-man, yet I mamn deal freendly wi' ysin, as a kend freend and customer, and bring the price, as they say, within your purse-month ; or it 's the same to me to let it lie ower till Martinnas, or e'en to Candlemas. I am decent in the warld, Maister Mordaunt ; forbid that I should hurry miy huelly, far mair a freend that has paid me siller afore now. (n. 1 wiil be content to swap the garment for the value in feathers in sealotters'skins, or ony kind of peltrie; nane kens better than !umrsell how to come by sic ware, and I am sure I hae fiminimel you wi' the primest $o^{\prime}$ powder. I diana ken if I tell'd ye it was out o' the kist of Captain Plunket, that perished on the N'aw of Unst, wi' the armed brig "Mary," sax years syne. He wasa prime fowler himself, and luck it was that the kint came inhore dry. I sell that to nane but gude marksmen. And sul, I was saying, if ye had ony wares, ye liked to coup, ${ }^{1}$ for the waistent, I wad be ready to troek wi' you, for assureally ye will lip wated at Burgh-Westra on St. Jolm's Even; and ye wadma like tol lum wanr than the captain - that wadna be setting.'
'I will be there at least, whether wanted or not,' sain Mur. daunt, stopping short in his walk, and taking the waistonatpiece hastily out of the pedlar's hand; 'and, as yon say, will not dis.grate them.'
'Haud a care - haud a care, Maister Mordaunt,' exceiaimed the pedlar; ' ye handle it as it were a bale of coarse wainu al :

[^78]ye 'll fray 't to bits; yo might weel say my ware in temer ; and ye 'll mine the price is four dollars. Sall I put ye in my laok for it?'
' No,'sail Morihunt, hastily ; and, taking out his purse, he Hang down the money.
'Grace to ye to wear the garment,' said the joyous pellinr, 'anl to me to guide the siller ; and protect ns from earthly vanities and earthly covetonsmess; mui send yon the white linen rament, whilk is mair to be desired than the mustins, and cambries, and hwws, and silks of this world; annd send we the talents which avail more than much fine Spanish gold, or Dutch dullirs either; and - but Gion gnide the callant, what for is he wrapping the silk up that gate, like a wisp of hay 1
It this moment, wh Swertha, the honsekeeper, entered, to whom, as if eager to get rid of the sulboet, Mordanit threw; his firchase, with somethimg like careless disslain; and, telling her III Pint it aside, suatchel his ginl, which stomel in the eorner, threw his shooting acemitrenents, abont him, and, withont minticing Bryces attempt to enter into conversintion unan the - braw seal-skin, as saft as doe-leather,' which made the sling and cover of his fowling-piece, he left the apartment abruptly.
The jagger, with those green, suggling, aml gain-lencrying kind of optics which we have already desseribel, eontimed fiazing for an instant after the enstoner who treated his wures with such irreverenee.
Swertha also looked after him with some surprise. 'The callint's in a ereel,' In moth she.
'In a creel!' echued the peellar; 'he will he as wowf ns ever his father was. To guide in that gnte a bargain that cost him finm , lollars:- very, very fifish, as the east-country fisher-folk say.'
'Four dollars for that green rag!' said Swertha, catching at the words which the jagger had mwarily suffered to eseane: - that was a bargain indeed! I wonder whether he is the greater fule or yon the mair rogue, Bryce Suailsfoot.'
'I didna say it eost him preceesely four dollars,' said Sunilsfoot: 'but if it hat, the lat's siller's his ain, I hope ; and he is amhl enengh to make his ain bargains: Mair by token, the gndes are weel worth the momey and mair.'
'Mair by token,' saill Swerthia, coolly, 'I will see what his father thinks about it.'
' Ye 'll no be sae ill-matured, Mistress Swertha,' suid the jagger : 'that will be but cauld thanks for the bomy owerlay that I hae brought you a' the way frate Lerwiek.'
'And a bonny price yo 'Il be nettin, on 'th' said Swertha ; 'for that 's the gate your goorl ileeds onul.'
'Yo mall hue the fixing of the prive yoursell ; or it may lie ower till yo're buying something for the house or for your master, and it can make a' ae count.'
'Iroth, and that 's true, Bryce Sunilsfoot; 1 am thinking we 'll want some napery sume ; for it's no to be thought we cansimin, and the like, as if there was a mistress in the house ; and sie we make nane at hame.'
'And that 's what I ca' walking by the W orl,' said the jagger. " Go unto those that buy and sell"; there 's muckle pirntit in that text.'
'There's a pleasure in dealing with a discreet man, that ean make profit of ony thing,' said Swertha ; 'and now that I tuke another look at that daft callant's waistcoat-piece, I think it is honestly worth four dollars.'

CHAP'RER X

I bave possossed the regulation of the weather and the dixtribution of the sensons. The sun has listened to my dictates, nid jasmal from tropic to tropic by my direction ; the cloudn, at my command, liave prourel forth their waters.

Riaselas.

A
NY sulden cause for anxious and mortifying reflection, which, in advanced age, nccasions sullen and pensive inactivity, stimulates youth to eager and active exertion; as if, like the hurt deer, they enleavoured to drown the pain of the shaft by the rapidity of motion. When Mordamit caught up his gun and rushed ont of the honse of Jarlshof, he walked on with great activity over waste and wild, without any determined purpose, except that of excaping, if pussible, from the smart of his own irritation. His pride was effeetually mortified by the report of the jagger, which coincided exactly with some dombts he had been led to entertain, hy the long and unkind silence of his friends at Burgh-Westra.
If the fortmes of Cessar had doomed him, as the poet suggests, to have been

But the best wrestier on the green, it is, nevertheless, to be presumed that a foil from a rival in that rustic exercise would have mortified him as mueh as a defeat from a competitor when he was struggling for the empery of the world. And even so Mordannt Mertomi, legraded in his own eyes from the height which he had ocempied as the clief amongst the youth of the island, folt vexed and irritated, as well as humbled. The two beantiful sisters, also, whose smiles all were so desirons of tequiring, with whom he hat lived on terns of such familiar affection that, with the sane ease and imnocence, there was uneonscionsly mixed a shade of deeper though undefined tenderness than characterises fratermal love - they also seemed to have forgotten him. He could not be ignorant that, in the universal opinion of all Dunrossness, nay, of the whole Mainland, he might have had every chance of being the favoured lover of either; and now at onve, annl without any failure on his part, he was become so little to them that he had lost even the consequence of an ordinary aen miintance. The old Udaller, too, whose hearty and sincerc elantweter should have made him more constant in his frieulships, scemed to have been as fickle as his daughters, and poor Mordanut hall at once lost the smiles of the fair and the favour of the powerful. These were uncomfortable refleetions, and he doubled his pace, that he might outstrip then if possible.
Without exactly reffecting upon the ronte which he pursined, Mordaunt walked briskly on through a country wherc neither hedge, wall, nor inclosure of any kind interrupts the steps of the wanderer, until he reaehed a very solitary spot, where, ellubosomed among steep heathy hills, which sunk suddenly down on the verge of the water, lay one of those small fresil-witer lakes whieh are common in the Zetland Isles, whose outlets form the sources of the small brooks and rivulets by which the country is watered, and serve to drive the little mills which manufacture their grain.

It was a mild summer day; the beams of the sun, as is nut uncommon in Zetland, were moderated and shaded by a silvery haze, which filled the atmosphere, and, destroying the stromg contrast of light and shade, gave even to noon the sober livery of the evening twilight. 'I'lic little lake, not three-1tuarters if a mile in circuit, lay in profound quiet; its surface undinpled. save when one of the nunerous water-fowl which glided on its surface dived for an instant muder it. The depth of the water gave the whole that cerulean tint of bluish green which oneasioned its being ealled the Green Loch; and at present it formed so perfect a mirror to the bleak hills by which it was sulrrounded, and which lay reflected in its bosom, that it was difticult to distinguish the water from the land; may, in the shad,wy uncertainty occasioned by the thin hazc, a stranger could scarre have been sensible that a sheet of water lay before him. . 1 scene of morc complete solitude, having all its peenliarities heightened by the extreme serenity of the weather, the !umet, grey, coniposed twic of the atmospliere, and the perfect silene of the clcucnts, conld hardly be inuagincd. The very aquatic birds, who frequented the spot in great numbers, forbore their usual flight and sereums, and floated in profound tranguillity upon the silent water.

Without taking any determincd aim, without having any determined purpose, almost without thinking vit he was abont, Mordaunt presented his fowling-piec a and fired across the lake. The large swan-shot dimpled its surface like a partinl shower of hail ; the hills took np the noise of the report, and repented it ugnin, mul ugain, and again, to all their echoes; the water-fowl took to wing in edlying and confused wheel, answer 'i. $^{\circ}$, the echoes with a thonsand varying screams, fron th reep note of the swabie, or swartback, to the querulous a : of the tirrasle and kittiwake.
ifordant luohed for a moment on the clamorons crowd with a $\because$ lin' of rese atment, which he felt disposed at the moment to apply to a! nature, and all her objects, mimate or inanimate, however little coneerned with the cause of his internal mortification.
'Ay - ay,' he said, 'wheel, dive, seream, and clamonr as you will, and all becanse you have seen a strange sight and heard an unusual sound. 'I'here is many a one like you in this round word. But you, at least, shall learn,' he added, as he relvaded liis gun, 'that strange sights and strange sounds, ay, and strange acquaintances to boot, have sometimes a little shade of danger eonnected with them. But why should I wreak my uwn vexation on these harmless sca-gnlls?' he subjoined, after a moment's pause; 'they have nuthing to do with the friends that have forgotten me. I loved them all so well, - and to be so soon given up for the first stranger whom chanee threw on the coast!'

As he stood resting upon his grun, and abandoning his mind to the course of thrse unpleasant reflections, his meditations were mexpectedly interrupted by some one tonching his shoulder. He looked around, and saw Norna of the Fitfin Head, wrapped in her dark and ample mantle. She had seen him from the brow of the hill, and had descended to the lake throngh a small ravine whieh concealed her, mutil she came with noiscless step so close to him that he turned round at her tonch.

Mordaunt Mertoun was by nature neither timorons nor credulons, and a conrse of reading more cxtensive than nsual hand, in some degree, fortified his mind against the attacks of superstition; but he would have been non actual prodigy if, living in Zetland in the end of the 17 th century, he had possessed the philosophy which did not exist in Scotland generally until at least two generations later. He doubted in his own mind the extent, nay, the very existeme, of Noma's sumernatural attributes, which was a high flight of incredulity in the country where they were universally received; but still his incredulity went no farther than donbts. She was unquestionably an extraordinary woman, gifted with an energy above others, acting upon motives peculiar to herself, and apparently independent of mere earthly considerations. Impressed with these ideas, which he had inbibed from his youth, it was not without something like alarm that he beheld this mysterious fenale standing on a sudden so close beside him, and looking upon him with such sad and severe eyes, as thase with which the liatal Virgins, who, according to Northern mythology, were called the Valkyriur, or 'Choosers of the Slain,' were supposed to ressime the young champions whom they selecter to share the banmurt of Odin.

THE PIRATE

It was, indeed, reckoned unlucky, to say the least, to meet with Norna suddenly alone, and in a place remote from wit nesses; and she was supposed, on such occasions, to have lieen usually a prophetess of evil, as well as an omen of misfortme, to those who had such a rencontre. There were few or none uf the islanders, however familiarised with her occasional appearance in society, that would not have trembled to meet her un the solitary banks of the Green Loch.
' I bring you no evil, Mordaunt Mertoun,' she said, reading perhaps something of this superstitious feeling in the looks of the young man. 'Evil from me you never felt, and never will.'
' Nor do I fear any,' said Mordaunt, exerting himself to throw aside an apprehension which he felt to be ummanly. 'Why should I, mother? You have been ever my friend.'
' Yet, Mordaunt, thou art not of our region; but to nenme of Zetland blood, no, not even to those who sit around the hearthstone of Magnus Troil, the noble descendants of the ancient jarls of Orkney, am I more a well-wisher than I am to thee. thou kind and brave-hearted boy. When I hung aroumd thy neck that gifted chain, which all in our isles know was wrunght by no earthly artist, Lai by the Drows, ${ }^{1}$ in the secret recenses. of their cavcrns, thou wert then lut fifteen years old ; yet thy foot had been on the Maiden Skerrie of Northmaven, known before but to the webbed sole of the swartback, and thy will had been in the deepest cavern of Brimnastir, where the "hait tish ${ }^{2}$ had before slumbered in dark obscurity. Therefore I

[^79]wave thee that noble gift; and well thou knowest that, since that day, every eye in these isles las looked on thee as a son ur as a brother, endowed beyoud other youthis, and the favoured of those whose hour of power is when the night nucets with the day.'
'Alas! mother,' said Mordaunt, 'your kind gift may have given me favour, but it has not been able to keep it for me, or I have not been able to keep it for myself. What natters it ? I shall learn to set as little by others as they do by me. My father says that I shall soon leave these islands, and therefore, Mother Norna, I will return to you your fairy gift, that it may bring more lastiug luck to some other than it has done to me.'
'Despise not the gift of the nameless race,' said Norna, frowning; then suddenly ehanging her tone of displeasure to that of monruful solemnity, she added, 'Despise them not; but, o Mordaunt, eourt then not! Sit down on that grey stone; thou art the son of my adoption, and I will doff, as far as 1 may, those attributes that sever me from the common mass :c humanity, and speak with you as a parent with a child.'
There was a tremulous tone of grief which mingled with the loftiness of her language and carriage, and was calculated to excite sympathy, as well as to attract attention. Mordamint sat down on the roek which she pointed out -- a fragment which, with many others that lay scattered around, had been torn by some winter storm from the preeipice at the foot of which it lay, upon the very verge of the water. Norna took her own
' $t$ on a stone at about three feet distanee, adjusted her

- tle so that little more than her foreheal, her eyes, and a te lock of her grey hair were seen from beneath the shade of her dark wadmaal cloak, and then proceeded in a tone in whieh the imaginary consequence and importance so often assumed by lunacy seemed to contend against the deep workings of some extraordinary and deeply-ronted mental aftliction.
'I was not always,' she said, 'that whieh I now am. I was not always the wise, the powerful, the eommanding, before whou the young stand abashed and the old nueover their grey heads. There was a time when my appearance did not silence mirth, when I sympathised with human passion, and had my own share in human joy or sorrow. It was a time of helplessess - it was a time of folly - it was a time of idle and unfruitful aughter - it was a time of causeless and senseless tears ; and yet, with its follies, and its sorrows, and its weaknesses, what would Norna of Fitful Head give to be again the mmmarked and happy maiden that she was in her carly days! Hear m; Mordannt, mid lear with me ; for you hear me ntter romplaints which have never sommled in mortal ears, and which in mortal ears shall never somend ngain. I will he what I ought,' she continued, starting ul and extemting her lean :und withered arm, 'the queen and protectress of these wild and neglecten isles; I will be her whose fowt the wave wets mot, save by her permission, ny, even thongh its rave be at its willest madness: whose robe the whirlwind respects, when it rends the honserigging from the roof-tree. Bear me witness, Mordaunt Mertom: yon heard my words at Harfra - yon saw the tempest sink before them! Speak, bear me witness !'

THE PIRATE

'To have eontradicted her in this strain of high-tonel enthusiasm would have been cruel and unavailing, even had Mordaunt been more decidedly convineed than he was that int insane woman, not one of supernatural power, stood before lim.
'I heard you sing,' he replied, 'and I' saw the tempe-t abate.'
'Abate!' exelained Norna, striking the ground impatiently with her staff of black oak; 'thon speakest it but half: it sunk at onee - sunk in shorter space than the elild that ihushet to silence by the nurse. Enough, you know my pmew: but you know not - mortal man knows not, and never shall know - the priee whieh I paid to attain it. No, Morlanm, never for the wilest sway that the aneient Norsmen buasten, when their banners wavell victorions from Bergen to Palestine - never, for all that the romid world contains, do thon baiter thy peace of mind for suel greatiess as Norna's.' She resmmed her seat upon the rock, drew the mantle over her face, rested her head uron her hands, and, by the convulsive motion which agitated her bosom, appeared to be weepuing bitterly.
'Good Norna,' said Mordamen, and paused, scaree knowing what to say that might console the milappy woman- 'smul Norna,' he again resumed, 'if there be aught in your minul that tronbies it, were you not best to go to the worthy minister at Durossness? Mensay yon have not for many years lepell in a Cliristian eongregation : that camot be well, or right. You are yourself well kinown as a healer of bodily disease ; hut whent the mind is sick, we shonld draw to the Physician of onr sonls:

Norna hat raised her person slowly from the stoupins posture in wiich she sut : hut at length she started inp on het feet, threw back her mantle, extemdel her arm, amd white hue lip fromed and her eye sparkled, exclaimed in a tomer resemblin:
a scream - ' Me did yon speak - me did you bid seek ont a priest! Would you kill the goorl man with horror? Me in aChristian congregation! Wonld you have the roof to fall on the sar ${ }^{[-1}$ 2sss assembly, and mingle their blood with their worship? - I seek to the grood Physician: Wonld you have the fiend elam his prey openly before God and man?'

The extreme agitation of the muhappy spaker maturally led Mordannt to the conclnsion which was gencrally aloped and accredited in that superstitions country and period. 'Wretched woman,' he said, ' if indeed thon 'ast leagued thyself with the Powers of Evil, why should yon not seek even yet for repentance? But do as thon wilt. I cannot, dare not, as a '"hristian, abide longer with you; and take again your gift,' he raill, offering back the chain. 'Good can never come of it, if indeed evil hath not come already.'
'Be still and hear me, thon foulish boy,' said Norna, calmly, as if she had been restored to zeason by the alarm and horro. which she perceived in Mordaunt's countenance -- 'hear me, I ay. I an not of those who have leagned themselves with the Fhemy of Mankind, or derive skill or power from his ministry. Aul although the unearthly powers were propitiated hy a sucrifice which human tongne can never utter, yet, God knows, my guilt in that offering was no more than that of the blind man who falls from the precipice which he conld neither see nur shim. ()h, leave me not - shm me ne ${ }^{+}$- in this hour of Weakness! Remain with me till the tempter. ion be passed, or I will plunge myself into that lake, and rid myself at once of my power and my wretehedness!'
Mordannt, who had always looked up to this singular woman with a sort of affection, occasioned no doubt by the carly kindness and distinction which she had shown to him, was readily induced to resmme his seat and listen to what she had firther to say, in hopes that she would gradnally overcome the violence of her aritation. It was not long ere she seemed to have gained the victury her companion expected, for she addressel him in her usinal steady and anthoritative namer.
'lt was not of myself, Mordannt, that I purposed to speak, when I beheld yon from the smmmit of youder rrey rock, and cume down the path to meet with yon. My fortmes are fixed beyoul change, be it for weal or for woe. For my: If I have ceased to feel much; but for those whom she loves Aorna of the Fitfin Heal has still those feelings which link her to her kind. Mark me. There is un eagle, the noblest that builds in these airy precipices, and into that eagle's nest there lancrept an adder; wilt thou lend thy aid to crnsh the reptile, and to save the noble brood of the lord of the north sky?'
'You must speak more plainly, Norna,' said Mordannt, 'if you would have me understand or answer you. I ani in' guesser of riddles.'
'In plain language, then, you know well the family of Buryll. Westra - the lovely daughters of the generons old C'daller, Magnus 'Troil - Minna and Brenda, I mean? You know then, and you love them?'
'I have known them, mother,' replied Mordaunt, 'and I have loved them - none knows it better than yourself.'
'To know them once,' said Norna, emphatically, 'is to kiow them always. To love them once is to love them for ever.'
'I'o have loved them once is to wish them well for ever,' replied the youth; 'but it is nothing more. T'o be plain with you, Norna, the fumily at Burgh-Westra have of late totilly neglected me. But slow me the means of serving them, I will convinee you how much I have remembered old kindness, how little I resent late coldness.'
'It is well spoken, and I will put your purpose to the prowf.' replied Norna. 'Magnus T'roil has taken a serpent into lins bosom : his lovely daughters are delivered up to the machiniations of a villain.'
'You mean the stranger, Cleveland ${ }^{\prime}$ ' said Mordaunt.
''The stranger who so calls himself,' replied Norna - 'the same whom we found flung ashore, like a waste herp of sea-weel, at the foot of the Sumburgh Cape. I felt that within me that would have prompted ine to let him lie till the tide floated liin off, as it had floated him on shore. I repent me I gave not way to it.'
'But,' said Mordaunt, ' I cannot repent that I did my duty as a Christian man. And what right have I to wish otherwise? If Minna, Brenda, Magnus, and the rest like that stranger better than me, I have no title to be offended; nay; I michit well be laughed at for bringing myself into comparisom.'
'It is well, and I trust they merit thy unselfish firiemshin.'
'But I cammot perceive,' said Mordaunt, 'in what yon cial propose that I shonld serve them. I have but just learned by Bryee, the jagger, that this Captain Clevelan! is all in all with the ladies at Burgh-Westra and with the Vilitler himself. I would like ill to intrude myself where I inn mit welcome, or to place my home-bred merit in comparisun with Captain Cleveland's. He can tell them of battles, when I can only speak of birds' nests; can speak of shooting Frenchmen, when I can only tell of shooting seals; he wears gay clothes and bears a brave countenance, I am plainly dressed and plainly nurtured. Such gay gallants as he can noose the hearts of those he lives with, is the fowler nooses the guillemot with his rod and line.'

- You do wrong to yourself,' replied Norna - 'wrong to yourself, and greater wrong to Minna and Brenda. And trust not the reports of Bryce: he is like the greedy chaffer-whale. that will clange his course and dive for the most petty co: . which a fisher can cast at him. Certain it is that, if you have been lessened in the opinion of Magnus Troil, that sordid fellow hath laul some share in it. But let him count his vantage, for my eye is upon him.'
'And why, mother,' said Mordaunt, 'do you not tell to Magnus what you have told to me?'
'Because,' replied Norna, 'they who wax wise in their own conceit must be taught a bitter lesson by experiene?. It was hit ycsterday that I spoke with Magnus, and what was his reply? - "Good Norna, you grow old." And this was spoken by one bounden to me by so nany and such close ties - by the descendant of the ancient Norse earls - this was from Magnus Troil to me; and it was said in behalf of one whom the sea flong forth as wreck-weed: Since he despises the counsel of the aged, he shall be taught by that of the young; and well that he is not left to his own folly. Go, therefore, to BurghWestra, as usual, upon the Baptist's festival.'
'I have had no invitation,' said Mordaunt: 'I am not wanted, not wished for, not thought of - perhaps I shall not be acknowledfed if I go thither ; and yet, mother, to confess the truth, thither I had thought to go.'
'It was a good thought, and to be cherished,' replied Norna; 'we seek our friends when they are sick in lealth, why not when they are sick in mind and surfeited with prosperity? Do not fail to go ; it may be, we shall meet there. Meanwhile our riads lie different. Farewell, and speak not of this meeting.'
'They parted, and Mordannt remained standing by the lake, with his eyes fixed on Norna, until her tall dark form became invisible among the windings of the valley down which she wandered, and Mordaunt returned to his father's mansion, determined to follow counsel which coincided so well with his own wishes.

CHAP'TER XI

> All your ancient customs And long-lescended usages I 'll change. Yo shall not eat, nor drink, nor speak, nor move, Think, louk, or walk, as ye were wont to dlo. Even your narriage-beds shall know mutation : The bride shall have the stock, the groom the wall; For all old practice will I turn and change, And call it reformation - marry will I!

'T is E'ven that we're at Odds.

THE festal day approached, and still no invitation arrived for that gnest without whom, but a little space since, no feast conld lave been held in the island ; while, ,n the other hand, such reports as reached them on every side sume highly of the favour which Captain Cleveland enjoyed in the family of the old Udaller of Burgh-Westra. Swertha and the old Ranzehnan shook their heads at these mutations, anil reminded Mordaunt, by many a half-hint and innuendo, that he had incurred this eclipse by being so imprudently active to secure the safety of the stranger, when he lay at the mercy of the next wave beneath the cliffs of Sumburgh Head. 'It is best to let saut water take its gate,' said Swertha: 'luck never came of crossing it.'
'In troth,' said the Ranzelman, 'they are wise folks that let wave and withy haud their ain: luck never came of a halfdrowned man, or a half-hanged ane either. Who was't shit Will Paterson off the Noss? ${ }^{1}$ The Dutehman that he saved from sinking, I trow. T'o fling a drowning man a plank or a tow may be the part of a Cliristian ; but I say, keep hands aff him, if ye wad live and thrive free frae lis danger.'
'Ye are a wise man, Ranzehnan, and a worthy,' echoed & , ibla, with a groan, 'and ken how and whan to help a neighbour as weel as ony man that ever drew a net.'
'In troth, I have seen lengtl of days,' answered the Ranzelman, 'and I have heard what the nuld folk said to each other

[^80]unent sic matters ; and nae man in Zethnd shall go farther than I will in any Christian service to a man on firm land; bat if he cry " Help!" ont of the sant waves, that's another story.'
'And yet, to think of this lad Cleveland standing in our Maister Mordaunt's light,' said Swertha, 'and with Marnus 'Iroil, that thought him the flower of the ishand but on Whitsunday last; and Magims, too, that's both held - when he's fresh, honest man! - the wisest and wealthiest of Zethand!'
'He cmma win by it,' said the Ramzelman, with a look of the deepest sugacity. "There 's whiles, Swertho, that the wisest of us, as I an sure I humbly eonfess mysell not to be, may be litite better than gills, and can no more win by doing deeds of blly than I can step over Sumburgh Head. It has been my own case once or twice in my life. But we shall see soon what ill is to come of all this, for good there camnot come.

And Swertha answered, with the same tone of prophetic wisdom,' Na - ma, gude can never come on it, mul that is ower truly said.'
IThese doleful predictions, repented from time to time, hat some effect upon Mordaunt. He did not indeed suppose that, the charitable action of relieving a drowning man had subjected him, as a necessary and fatal consequence, to the unpleasint circumstances in which he was placed ; yet he felt as if a sort of spell were drawn around him, of which he neither understood the nature nor the extent ; that some power, in shont, beyond his own control was aeting upon his destiny, and, as it seemed, with no friendly influence. His curiosity, us well as his anxiety, was highly excited, and he continued determined, at all events, to make his appearance at the approaching festival, when he was impressed with the belief that something meommon was necessarily to take place, which should determine his future views and prospects in life.

As the elder Mertoun was at this time in his ordinary state of health, it became necessary that his son should intimate to him his intended visit to Burgh-Westra. He did so ; and his father desired to know the especial reason of his groing thither at this particular time.
'It is a time of merry-making,' replied the youth, 'and all the country are assembled.'.
'And you are doubtless impatient to add another fool to the number. Go; but beware how you walk in the path which you are about to tread : a fall from the cliffs of Fonlah were not more fatal.'
'May I nask the reason of your cantion, sir I' replieel Mhir damt, breaking throngh the reserve which ordinarily smhinisted betwixt him and his singulur parent.
'Magnus 'I'roil,' said the elder Mertoun, 'has two daurhtherm: you are of the age when men look npon such gands nith eyes of affertion, that they umy nifterwards learn to enrse the lay that first opened their eyes upon heaven! I bid lon hervare of them; for, as sure as that death and sin came int. the world by woman, so sure are their soft words mull mifter. looks the ntter destruction and ruin of all who pint faith in them.'
Mordaunt had sometimes observed his father's marked dis. like to the female sex, but had never before heard himp pive vent to it in terins so determined and preeise. He rephien, that the danghters of Magnus 'lroil were no more to him than miny other females in the islands. 'They were even of iow, importance,' he said, 'for they had broken off their friendllif' with him, without nssigning any canse.'
'And you go to seek the renewal of it?' answered his fith er. 'Silly motl, that has once escaper the taper without singeing thy wings, are you not contented with the safe obscurity of these wilds, but must hasten baek to the Hame, whieh in mure at length to consume thee ? But why should I waste arym. ments in deterring thee from thy inevitable fate? Go where H1;' destiny calls thee.'
On the sneceeding day, which was the eve of the great festival, Mordamit set forth on his road to Burgh-Wentria, nondering alteruately on the injunetions of Norna, on the ominons words of his father, on the inauspicions angnries of Swertha mid the Ranzehnan of Jarlshof; and nut withont experieneing that gloom with which so many eoneurring circumstances of ill omen combinel to oppress his imind.
'It hodes me but a cold reception at Burgh-Westra,' saill he; 'bnt my stay shall be the shorter. I will but find nut whether they have been deceived by this scafaring stranger, or whether they have acted out of pare eaprice of temper :unl love of change of emminy. If the first be the case, I will vimdisate my charaeter, mil let Captain Cleveland look to him self; if the latter, why, then, goot-night to Burgh-Westrat and all its inmates.'
As he mentally meditated this last alteruative, lurt prile, and a return of fondness for those to whom he supposed lie was bidding farewell for ever, brought a tear into his eye, which he dashed off hastily and indignantly, as, mending his pare, he eontinued on his journey.
The weather being now serene and nudisturbed, Mordmunt made his way with an ease that formed in atriking contrast to the diflieulties which he had entomitered when he last travelled the same ronte; yet there was a less pleasing sulbject for compurison within his own mind.
'Sly breast,' he said to himself, 'was then agninst the wind, hut my heart within was serene and happy. I wonld I hurd now the same carcless feelings, were they to be bought by battling with the severest stom that ever blew across thewe lonely hills!'
With sueh thoughts, he arrivel about now at Harira, the latitation, as the reader may remember, of the ingenions Mr. Yellowley. Our traveller had, unon the present uectasion, taken care to be quite independent of the niggardly hospitality of this mansion, whieh was now beeome infamons on that account throngh the whole island, by briuging with him, in his small kmapsack, sueh provisions as might have suffieed for a longer jurruey. In courtesy, however, or rather, perhaps, to get till of his own disquieting thonghts, Murdant did not fail to mall at the mansion, whieh ho fonme in singular conmution. 'Iriptolemus himself, invested with a pair of large jack-hoots, went clatering up and down stairs, screaning ont gnestions in his sister and his serving-woman 'Ironda, who replied with shriller and more complicated sereeehes. At length, Mrs. Buly hervelf made her appearance, her venerable person endued with what was then called a joseph - an ample garment, whieh hand once heen green, but now, hetwixt stains and patches, had become, like the vesture of the partriarch whose name it bore, a garment of divers eolours. A steeple-crownel hat, the purchase of some long-past moment, in which vanity had got the better of avarice, with a feather which hand stood as much wind and rain as if it had been part of a seamew's wing, made up her equipment, save that in her hand she held a silver-monited whip of antique fashion. 'This attire, as well as an air of determined bustle in the gait and apparance of Mre. Barbara Yollowley, seemed to hespeak that she was prepared to take a journey, and cared not, as the saying goes, who knew that such was her determination.
She was the first that observed Mordmut on his arrival, and she greeted him with a degree of minglend rimutim. 'Be gool to us!' she exelaimed, 'if there is not the canty callant that wears yom thing ahont his nock, and that smaped min mir L'mee as light as if it had beell a nanalie-lavrock!' The anlmin:. tion of the gold chain, which had formerly made so deep min in pression on her mind, was marked in the first purt of her : ynewh. the recollection of the mutimely fate of the smokerl pinne was commenorated in the second clanse. 'I will lay the lmadent of my life,' she instantly added, 'that he is panging our taile. dount.

THE PIRATF:

'And blithe will we be of your compme,' she midel. 'It : early day to eat, but if you liked a lmarley scome amb a irminkif hland-matheless, it is ill travelling on a fill stomach, becile quelling your appetite for the feast that is biding yon thic day; for all sort of prodigality there will doubtless he:"
Mordaunt prodnced his own stores, and, explaining the:t he did not love to be burdensone to thenn on this second meanim, invited them to partake of the provisions he had to offer. Inarr I'riptolemus, who seldon saw half so good a dimer an his gnest's lunclioon, threw himself upon the fookl cheer, like Sancho on the selum of Cunacho's kettle, and even the lialy herself conld not resist the temptation, thongh she gave wiat to it with more moderation, and with something like a senw if shame. 'She had let the fire out,' she said, 'for it was :" pity wastimg finel in so cold a comitry, and so she hari not thomghin of getting anything realy, as they were to set out su sinn: "and so she could not but say that the youns sentlemini: "maeket" looked very good; and, besides, she had smine carminty to see whether the folks in that comery cured their herf iif the same way they did in the north of Scotland'; muder whind combined eomsiderations, Dame Baby made a hearty expuriment on the refreshments which thas unexpectelly presented hemselves.
When their extemporary repast was finished, the fiactur became solicitons to take the road; num now Mordame dicovered that the alacrity with whieh he had heen receciven ly Mistress Baly was not altogether disinterestel. Neither , hie nor the learned 'lriptolemms felt much disposed to commit themselves to the wilds of Zethum withont the assistann.. .ff a guide : and althomgh they rould have commanded the ail if one of their own labomring folks, yet the cantions agrimultur: observed, that it wonld be losing at least one day's work : and his sister multiplied his apprehensinns by echoing lack, "Wher day's work: ye inay weel say twenty ; for, set mue of this anses within the amell of a knil-pot, anil their hags within the sumul of a fiddele, mul whistle them truck if ye an:
Now the firthnate urrival of Mondannt, in the very nick of time, but tor mention the gonk (hacer which, he hrought with threshold which, on all ordimury weasions, ahdintred the passage of a gnest; mor was. Mr. Yelluwley athere her insmsilhe of the fleantre he promised himself in detailing his phans of inuprovement to his yong empunion, and cujuying what his fate yildom assigned him - the emmpuy of a patient and admiring listener.
As the factor and his sister were to prosecute their jommey in horselack, it only remained to momit their gnide and com-pamim-a thing easily acemplished where there we sueh mumbers of slagigy, long- hacken, shurt louged punies ruming wilh umon the extensive mours, which are the common pasturage fin the cattle of every township, where shelties, ; ;ese, swine, gonts, sheep, and little Zethand cows are turned ont promiseninsly, and often in numbers whieh can obtain hat precarimes sulssistence from the niggard vegotation. 'There is, indeed, a right of individual property in all these minuls, which we lranded or tattooed by each owner with his own peculiar mark; hat when any passenger has oceasimal ave for a pony, he never secruples to lay huld of the first which he can catch, puts on a halter, and, having rode hinu as far as he finds convenient, turns the animal loose to find his way hack again as he hest cant - a matter in which the ponies are sulficiently sagaeims.
Hthough this general exercise of property was one of the enmmitie; which in due time the factor intended to abolish, set, like a wise man, he sernpled not, in the meantime, to avail himself of so general a practice, which, he combescended to allow, was particularly convenient for those whin, as chnnced to he his own present case, had mo ponies of their own on which their neighbours eonld retaliate. Three shelties, therefire, wre prucured from the hill - little shagged mimals, mure resembling wild bears than anything of the horse tribe, yet prisesesed of no sumall degree of strensth and wirit, and able to conlure as much fatigue and indifferent nsage as my creatures in the world.
I'wo of these horses were already provided and fully arrenitred for the journey. One of then, destined to bear the fair persom of Misutress Baly, was decrrated with a huge silmsadlle of venerable antiquity - a mass, as it were, of rimshium vor. siti-s and padding, from which depended, on all sides, a housing of ancient tapestry, which, having been originally intended fir a horse of ordinary size, covered up the diminutive palfrey "ver which it was spread, from the ears to the tail, and from the shoulder to the fetlock, leaving nothing visible but its lead, which looked fiercely out from these enfoldments, like the heraldic representation of a lion looking out of a bush. Mordaunt gallantly lifted up the fair Mistress Yellowley, and at the expense of very slight exertion placed her upon the summit of her mountainous saddle. It is probable that, on feeling herself thus squired and attended npon, and experiencing the long unwonted consciousness that she was attired in her best array, some thoughts dawned upon Mistress Baby's mind which checkered for an instant those habitual ideas alnout thrift that formed the daily and all-engrossing occupation of her soul. She glaneed her eye upon her faded joseph, and on the long housings of her saddle, as she observed, with a sumile, to Mordaunt, that 'Iravelling was a pleasant thing in fine weather and agreeable company, if,' she added, glancing a look at a place where the embroidery was somewhat frayeli aud tattered, 'it was not sae wasteful to ane's horse-furniture.'

THE PIRATE

Meanwhile, her brother stepped stoutly to his steed; and as he chose, notwithstanding the serenity of the weather, to throw a long red cloak over his other garments, his pony was even more completely enveloped in drapery than that of his sister. It happened, moreover, to be an animal of a high and comtunacious spirit, bouncing and curvetting occasionally under the weight of Triptolemus, with a vivacity which, notwithstanding his Yorkshire deseent, rather deranged him in the saldle; gambols which, as the palfrey itself was not visible, except upon the strictest inspection, had, at a little distance, an effect as if they were the voluntary movements of the cloaked cavalier, without the assistance of any other legs than those with which nature had provided him ; and, to any who had viewed Triptolemus under such a persuasion, the griavit!, and even distress, announced in his countenance must have made a ridiculous contrast to the vivacious caprioles with which he piaffed along the moor.
Mordaunt kept up with this worthy couple, momnted, arcording to the simplicity of the time and country, on the first and readiest pony which they had been able to press into the service, with no other aceoutrement of any kind than the halter which served to guide him; while Mr. Yellowley, seening with pleasure his guide thus readily provided with a steed, privately resolved that this rude custom of helping travellers to horses, without leave of the proprictor, shonld not be abated in Zetland until he cane to possess a heril of ponies belouging in property to himself, and exposed to sutfer in the way of retaliation.
But to other uses or abuses of the country 'Triptolemus Yellowley showed himiself less tolerant. Long and wearisome were the discourses he held with Mordaunt, or (to speak much more correctly') the harangues which he inflicted upon him, concerning the changes which his own advent in these isles was about to occasion. Unskilled as he was in the modern arts by which an cstate may be improved to such a high degree that it shall altogether slip through the proprictor's fingers, I'riptolemus had at least the zeal, if not the knowlenge, of a whole agricultural society in his own person ; nor was he surpassed by any onc who has followed him in that noble spirit which scorns to balance profit against outlay, hut holds the glory of effecting a great change on the face of the land to be, like virtue, in a great degrec its own reward.
No part of the wild and mountainous region over which Mordaunt guided him but what suggested to his active imagination some scheme of improvement and alteration. He would make a road throngh yon scarce passable glen, where at present nothing but the sure-footed creatures on which they were mounted could tread with any safcty. He would substitnte better houses for the skeos, or sheds built of dry stoncs, in which the inhabitants cured or manufactured their fish ; they should brew good ale instead of bland; they should plant furests where tree never grew; and find mines of treasure where a Danish skilling was accounted a coin of a most respectable denomination. All these mutations, with many others, liil the worthy factor resolve upon, speaking at the same time with the utmost confidence of the comitenance and assistance which he was to receive from the higher classes, and especially from Magnus 'Troil.
'I will impart some of my ideas to the poor man,' he saici, 'before we are both many hours older ; and you will mark how grateful he will be to the instructor who brings him knowledge, which is better than wealth.'
'I would not have you build too strongly on that,' said Mordaunt, by way of caution. 'Magmus 'I'roil's boat is kittle to trim; he likes his own ways, and his comutry ways, anm you will as soon teach your sheltie to dive like a sealgh as bring Magnus to take a Scottish fashion in the place of a Norse une; and yet, if he is stealy to his old cnstoms, he may perhaps be as changeable as another in his old fricondships.'
'Hesus, tu iuppte!' said the scholar of St. Andrews, 'steady or unsteady, what can it matter? An not I here in point of trust and in point of power? and shall a fowd, by which barbarous appellative this Nagnus 'rroil still calls himself, presume to measure judgment and weigh reasons with me, who represent the full dignity of the chamberlain of the islands of Orkney and Zetland ${ }^{\prime}$ '
'Still,' said Mordannt, 'I would advise you not to advance too rashly upon his prejudices. Magnus Troil, from the huur of his birth to this day, never saw a greater man than himself, and it is difficult to bridle an old horse for the first time. Besides, he has at no time in his life been a patient listener to long explanations, so it is possible that he may quarrel with your proposed reformation before you can convince him of its advantages.'
'How mean you, young man?' said the factor. 'Is there one who dwells in these islands who is so wretchedly blinul as not to be sensible of their deplorable defects? Can a man,' he added, rising into enthusiasm as he spoke, 'or even a beast, look at that thing there, which they have the impudence to call a corn-mill, ${ }^{1}$ without trembling to think that corn should be entrusted to such a miserable molendinary? The wretches are obliged io have at least fifty in each parish, each trundling a way upon its paltry millstone, under the thatch of a roof no bigger than a bee-skep, instead of a noble and seemly barmis mill, of which you would hear the clack through the haill country, and that casts the meal through the mill-eye by forpits at a tine!'
'Ay-ay, brother,' said his sister, 'that's spoken like your wise sell. The mair cost the mair honour - that's your word ever mair. Can it no crecp into your wise head, man, that ilka body grinds their ain nievefu' of meal in this comntry, without plagning themsells about barons' mills, and thirls, und sucken, and the like trade? How mony a time have I heard you bell-the-cat with auld Edie Netherstane, the miller at Grindleburn, and wi' his very knave too, about in-town and out-town multures, lock, gowpen, and knaveship, ${ }^{2}$ and a' the lave o't ; and now naething less will serve you than to hring

[^81][^82]in the very same fashery on a wheen puir bories, that big ilk ane a mill for themselves, sie as it is ?'
'Dinna tell me of gowpen and kuaveship!' exelaimed the indignant agriculturist; 'better pay the half of the grist to the miller, to have the rest grund in a Christian mamer, than put good grain into a bairn's whirligig., Look at it for a moment, Baby. Bide still, ye eursed imp!' 'Ihis interjection was applied to his pony, which began to be extrenely impatient, while its rider interrupted his jouruey to point out all the weak points of the Zetland mill. 'Look at it, I say - it's just one degree better than a hand-quern : it has neither wheel nor trindle, neither cog nor happer. Bide still, there 's a canny beast. It canna grind a biekerfu' of meal in a quarter of an hour, and that will be mair like a mash for horse than a meltith for man's use. Wherefore - Bide still, I say : - wherefore wherefore - The deil's in the beast, and nae good, I think!'

As he uttered the last words, the shelty, which had pranced and curvetted for some time with much impatience, at length got its head betwixt its legs, and at once canted its rider into the little rivulet which served to drive the depreciated engine he was surveying; then emarsipating itself from the folds of the cloak, fled back towards its own wilderness, neighing in scorn, and flinging out its heels at every five vards.
Laughing heartily at his disaster, Mordaunt helped the old nuan to arise ; while his sister sarcastically congratulated him on having fallen rather into the shall sws of a Zetland rivulet than the depths of a Seottish mill-pond. Disdaining to reply to this sarcasm, Triptolemus, so soon as he had recovered his legs, shaken his ears, and found that the folds of his cloak had saved him from being much wet in the scanty streamlet, exclaimed aloud, 'I will have eussers from Lanarkshire, brood mares from Ayrshire : I will not have one of these cursed abortions left on the islands, to break honest folks' necks. I say, Baby, I will rid the land of them.'
'Ye had better wring your ain cloak, 'Iriptolemus,' answered Baby.
Mordaunt meanwhile was employed in catching another pony from a herd which strayed at some distance : and, having made a halter out of twisted rushes, he seated the dismayed agriculturist in safcty upon a more quiet, though less active, steed than that which he had at first bestrole.
But Mr. Ycllowley's fall had operated as a comsiderable white uron !is spirits, and, for the full space of five miles' travel, he said scarce a word, leaving full course to the melan choly uspirations and lamentations which his sister Bahy bestowed on the old bridle, which the pony had carried off in its flight, and which, she observed, after having lasted for eighteen years come Martinunas, might now be considered as a castaway thing. Finding she had thus the field to herself, the old lady launched forth into a lecture mpn economy, according to her own idea of that virtue, which seemed to include a sys. tein of privations which, though observed with the sole purphese of saving money, might, if undertaken upon other principles, have ranked high in the history of a religious ascetic.
She was but little interrupted by Mordaunt, who, conscious, he was now on the eve of approaching Burgh-Westra, employed himself rather in the task of anticipating the nature of the reception he was about to meet with there from two beautiful young women than with the prosing of an old one, however wisely she might prove that sinall-beer was more wholeswine than strong ale, and that, if her brother had bruised his ankle. bone in his tumble, cumfrey and butter was better to bring liim round again than all the doctors' drugs in the world.
But now the dreary moorlands, over which their path had hitherto lain, were exchanged for a more pleasant prospect, "pelling on a salt-water lake, or arm of the sea, which ran up far inland, and was surrounded by flat and fertile gromm, prodincing crops better than the experienced eye of I'riptolemins: Yellowley had as yet witnessed in Zetland. In the midst of this Goshen stood the mansion of Burgh-Westra, screenel from the north and east by a ridge of heathy hills which lay behinul it, and commanding an interesting prospect of the lake and its parent ocean, as well as the islands and more distant monntuins. From the mansion itself, as well as from almost every cuttarye in the adjacent hamlet, arose such a rich cloud of vaponry smoke as showed that the preparations for the festival were not confined to the principal residence of Magnns himself, hut extended through the whole vicinage.
'My certie,' said Mrs. Bahy Yellowley, 'ane wad think the haill town was on fire! The very hillside smells of the ir wastefulness, and a liumgry heart warl scarce seek better kitchen ${ }^{1}$ to a barley scone tham just to waft it in the reek that's rising out of yon lums.'

[^83]
CHAPTER XII

Abstract

Thou hast described A hot friend cooling. Ever note, Lucilius, When love begins to sicken and decay, It useth an enforced cercmony. There are no tricks in plain and simple faith.

Julius Casar.

IF the smoll which was wafted from the chimneys of BurghWestra up to the barren hills by whieh the mansion wats surrounded could, as Mistress Barbara opined, have refreshed the hungry, the noise which proceeded from thence might have given hearing to the deaf. It was a medley of all somind:, and all connected with jollity and kind weleome. Nor werc the sights associated with them less animating.
Troops of friends were seen in the act of arriving - their dispersed ponies flying to the moors in every direetion, to recover their own pastures in the best way they could; such, as we have already said, being the usual mode of diseharging the cavalry which had been levied for a day's service. At a small hut commodious harbour, connected with the house and hamlet, those visitors were landing from their boats who, living in distant islands and along the eoast, had preferred making their journey by sea. Mordaunt and his companions might see eaeh party pausing frequently to greet eaeh other, and strolling on successively to the house, whose ever open gate received them alternately in sueh numbers that it seemed the extent of the mansion, though suited to the opulenee and hospitality of the owner, was searee, on this occasion, sufficient for the guests.
Anong the eonfinsed sommls of mirth and welcome which arose at the entrance of each new company, Mordannt thonght, he could distinguish the lond langh and hearty salntation of the sire of the mansion, and begran to feel more deeply than before the anxious doubt whether that cordial reception, whic! was distributed so freely to all others, would be on this occasion extended to him. As they came on, they heard the voluntary scrapings and bravura effusions of the gallant fiddlers, who impatiently flung already from their bows those sounds with which they were to animate the evening. The clamour of the eook's assistants, and the loud seolding tones of the cook him. self, were also to be heard - sounds of dissonance at any other time, but which, subdued with others, and by certain happy associations, form no disagreeable part of the full chorus which always precedes a rural feast.

THE PIRATE

Meanwhile, the guests advanced, eaeh full of their own thoughts. Mordaunt's we have already notieed. Baby was wrapt up in the melancholy grief and surprise exeited by the positive conviction that so mueh vietuals had been eooked at onee as were neeessary to feed all the mouths which were clamouring around her - an enormity of expense which, though she was no way eoneerned in bearing it, affeeted her nerves, as the beholding a massaere would touch those of the most indifferent spectator, however well assured of his own personal safety. She siekened, in short, at the sight of so mueh extravagance, like Abyssinian Bruee, when he saw the luckless minstrels of Gomilar haeked to pieees by the order of Ras Miehael. As for her brother, they being now arrived where the rude and antipue instruments of Zetland agrieulture lay seattered in the nsinal confusion of a Seottish barn-yard, his thoughts were at once engrossed in the defieiencies of the one-stilted plough; of the 'twisear,' with which they dig peats; of the sledges, on whirh they transport commodities; of all and everything, in shint, in which the usages of the islands differed from those of the mainland of Scotland. The sight of these imperfect instruments stirred the blood of Triptolenus Yellowley, as that if the bold warrior rises at seeing the arms and insignia of the enemy he is about to eombat ; and, faithfui to his high emprive, he thought less of the hunger whieh his journey had occasioned, although about to be satisfied by such a dinner as rarely fell to his lot, than upon the task which he had undertaken of civilising the manners, and improving the cultivation, of Zetland.
'Jacta est alea,' he muttered to himself; 'this very day shall prove whether the Zetlanders are worthy of our lithurs, or whether their minds are as incapable of cultivation as their peat-mosses. Yet, let us be cantious, and watch the soft time of spceeh. I fecl, by my own experience, that it were bent to let the body, in its present state, take the place of the mind.
. mouthful of that same roast-beef, which smells so delicately, will form an apt introduction to my grand plan for improving the breed of stock.'
By this time the visitors had reached the low but ample front of Magnins 'Iruil's residence, which seemed of varions lates, with large and ill-imagined additions, hastily adapted to the original building, as the increasing estate, or enlarged family, of successive proprietors appeared to each to demand. Bencath a low, broad, and large porch, supported by two huge carvel posts, once the heal-ornaments of vessels which had finmul shipwreek upon the coast, stood Magnus himself, intent on the hospitable toil of receiving and welcoming the mumerons guests who successively approached. His strong, purtly fignre was well adapted to the dress which he wore - a blue coat of an antique cut, lined with scarlet, and laced and looped with gold dowi the seams and button-holes, and along the ample culffs. Strong and masculine features, rendered ruddy and brown by frequent exposure to severe weather ; a quantity of most venerable silver hair, which fell in unshorn profusion from wader his gold-laced hat, and was carelessly tied with a ribbon behind, expressed at once his advanced age, his hasty, yet well-comditioned temper, and his robust constitution. As our travellers approached hin, a shade of displeasure seemed to cross his brow : nd to interrupt for an instant the honest and hearty burst of hilarity with which he had been in the act of greeting all prior arrivals. When he approached Triptolemus Yellowley, he irew himself up, so as to mix, as it were, some share of the stately importance of the opulent Udaller with the welcome afforled by the frank and hospitable landlord.
'You are welcome, Mr. Yellowley,' was his address to the factur --' you are welcome to Westra; the wind has blown yon on a rough coast, and we that are the natives must be kind to you as we can. This, I believe, is your sister. Mrs. Barbara Ycllowley, pernit me the honour of a neighbourly salute.' And so saying, with a daring and self-devoted conrtesy which would find no equai in our degenerate days, he actually ventured to salute the withered cheek of the spinstress, who relaxed so much of her usual peevishness of expression as to reccive the courtesy with sumething which approached to a smile. He then looked full at Mordaunt Mertoun, and, without offering his hand, said, in a tone somewhat broken by suppressed agitation, 'Yon, too, are welcome, Master. Mordaunt.'
'Did I not think' so,' said Mordannt, naturaliy uffendel by the coldness of his host's manner, 'I had not been here ; and it is not yet too late to turn back.'
'Young man,' replied Magnus, 'you know better than must that from these doors no man can turn withont an offence to their owner. I pray you, disturb not my guests by your ill. timed scruples. When Magnus I'roil says welcome, all are welcome who are within hearing of his voice, and it is an indifferent loud one. Walk on, my worthy guests, and lot us see what checr my lasses can make yon within doors.'
So saying, and taking care to make his manner so general to the whole party that Mordauit should not be able to apprispriate any particular portion of the welcome to hinself, nor yet to complain of being excluded from all share in it, the Vilailler ushered the guests into his honsa, where two large outer roonss, which, on the present occasion, served the purpose of a molem saloon, were already crowded with guests of every descriptic 1.

The furniture was sufficiently simple, and had a characcer peculiar to the situation of these stormy islands. Maynus Troil was, indeed, like most of the higher class of Zetland proprietors, a friend to the distressed traveller, whether by "ia or land, and had repeatedly exerted his whole authority in protecting the property and persons of shipwrecked mariners; yet so frequent were wrecks upon that tremendous coast, anl so many unappropriated articles were constantly flung ashore, that the interior of the house bore sufficient witness to the ravages of the ocean, and to the exercise of those rights which the lawyers terin 'flotsome and jetsome.' 'The chairs, which were arranged around the walls, were such as are used ir cabins, and many of them were of foreign construction; the mirrors and cabinets, which were placed against the walls for ornament or converience, had, it was plain from their form, been constructed fir ship-bourd, and one or two of the latter were of strange and unknown wood. Even the partition which separated the twin apartments scemed constructed out of the bulk-head of some large vessel, clnmsily adapted to the service which it at present perforined by the labour of some native joiner. 'To a stranger thesc evident marks and tokens of human misery might, at the first glance, form a contrast with the scene of mirth with which they werc how associated ; but the association was so familiar to the natives that it did not for a moment interrupt the course of their glee.

To the younger part of these revellers the presence of Mardaunt was like a fresh char.u of enjoyment. All came around him to marvel at his absence, and all, by their repeated inquiries, phainly showed that they conceived it had been entirely voluntary on his side. The youth felt that this general acceptation relieved his anxiety on onn painful point. Whatever prejudice the fanily of Burgh-W estra might have adopted respecting him, it must be of a private nature; and at least he had not the additional pain of finding that he was depreciated in the eyes of society at large ; and his vindication, when he fommd opportunity to make one, would not require to be extended beyond the circle of a single family. This was consoling; though his heart still throbbed with anxiety at the thouglit of meeting with his estranged but still beloved friends. Laying the excuse of his absence on his father's state of health, he nade his way throngh the various groups of friends and guests, each of whom seemed willing to detain him as loug as possible, and laving, by presenting them to one or two fanilies of consequence, got rid of lis travelling-companions, who at first stuck fast as burs, lee reached at length the door of a small apartment, which, opening from one of the large exterior rooms we have mentioned, Mima and Brenda had been permitted to fit up after their own taste, and to call their peculiar property.
Mordaunt had contributed no small share of the invention and mechanical execution employed in fitting up this favourite apartment, and in disposing its ornaments. It was, indeed, during his last residence at Burgh-Westra, as free to lis entrance and occupation as to its proper mistresses. But now, so much were times altered that he remained with lis finger on the latch, uncertain whether he should take the freedon to draw it, until Brenda's voice pronounced the words, 'Conc in, then,' in the tone of one who is interrupted by an unwelcome disturber, who is to be heard and despatched with all the speed possible.

At this signal, Mertoun entered the fanciful cabinet of the sisters, which, by the addition of many omaments, including some articles of considerable value, had been fittel up for the approaching festival. The laughters of Magurs, at the moment of Mordaunt's entrance, werc seated in deep consultation with the stranger Cleveland and with a little, slight-made old man, whose eye retained all the vivacity of spirit which had supported him under the thousand vicissitudes of a changeful and precarious life, and which, accompanying him in his old age, rendered his grey hairs less awfully rever $\cdot \mathrm{d}$ perhaps, bit not less beloved, than would a nore grave a d less imaginative expression of countenance and character. There was even a penetrating shrewduess mingled in the look of curiosity with which, as he stepped for an instant aside, he seened to watch the meeting of Morlamit with the two lovely sisters.
The reception the youth met with resembled, in general char. acter, thut which he hal experienced from Magnus himuself; but the maidens conn not so well cover their sense of the change of circumstances under which they met. Both blushed, as, risint: and without extending the hand, far less offering the cheek, as the fashion of the times pernitted, and almost exactel, chey paid to Mordaunt the selutation due to all ordimary acquaintance. But the blush of the older was one of those trunsient evidences of flitting emotion that vanish as fast as the passing thought which excites them. In an instant she stood before the youth calm and cold, returning, with guarded and cantions eourtesy, the usinal civilities, which, with a faltering voice, Mordannt endeavoured to present to her. The emution if Brenda bore, externally at least, a deeper and more agitatime character. Her blush extended over every part of her bemutiful skin which her dress pernitted to be visible, including her slender neck and the upper region of a finely-formed bosim. Neither did she eveu attempt to reply to what share of his confused compliment Mordaunt addressed to her in partieular, int regarded him with eyes in which displeasure was evidently mingled with feelings of regret and reeolleetions of former times. Mordaunt felt, as it were, assured upon the instant that the regard of Minna was extinguished, but that it might be yet possible to reeover that of the milder Brenda; and such is the waywarduess of human fancy, that, though he haul never hitherto made any distinct differenee betwixt these two beantifill and interesting girls, the favour of ' er whieh seemed most ahbsolutely withdrawn became at the in his eyes.

He was disturbed in these hasty reflections by Clevelaml, who advanced, with military fraukness, to pay his complinents: to his preserver, having only delayed long enongh to permit the exchange of the ordinary salutation betwixt the visitor and the ladies of the family. He made his approach with so good a grace, that it was impossible for Mordamit, although he dated his luss of favour at Burgh-Westra fiom the straugers appearance on the coast and domestication in the family, to do less than return his advances as courtesy demandel, accept his thanks with an appearance of satisfaction, and hope that his time had patsed pleasantly since their last meeting.

Cleveland was about to answer, but he was anticipated by the little old man, formerly noticed, who, now thrusting himself forward and seizing Mordaunt's hand, kissell him on the forehearl; and then at the same time cehoel and answered his question. 'How panses time at Burgh-Westra? Was it yon that asked it, iny prince of the cliff aml of the scaur? How should it pass, but with all the wings that beanty and joy cnn add to help its flight!'
'And wit and song, too, my good olld friend,' said Mordaunt, half-serious, half-jesting, as he slook the old man cordially by the hand. 'These cannot bo wanting where Cland Halcro cones!'
'Jeer me not, Mordaunt, my good lad,' replied the old man. 'When your foot is as slow as mine, your wit frozell, and your wong out of tune $\qquad$ '
'How can you belie yourself, my good master ?' answered Mordaunt, who was not unwilling to avail himself of his old frienl's peculiarities to introduce something like conversation, break the awkwardness of this singular meeting, and gain time for observation, ere requiring an explanation of the change of cunduct which the family seemed to have adopted towards him. 'Say not so,' he continued. 'Time, my old friend, lays his hand lightly on the bard. Have I not heard yous say, the poet partakes the immortality of his song? mud surely the great English peet you used to tell us of was elder than yourself when he pulled the bow-oar annong all the wits of London.'
'This alluded to a story which was, as the French term it, Halcro's cheval de lataille, and any allusion to which was certain at once to place him in the saddle and to push his hobby-horse into full career.
His laughing eye kindled with a sort of enthusiasm, which the ordinary folk of this world night have called crazed, while he dashed into the subject which he best loved to talk upon. 'Alas, alas, my dear Mordaunt Mertoun, silver is silver, and waxes not dim by use; and pewter is pewter, and grows the longer the duller. It is not for poor Cland Halcro to name himself in the same twelvemonth with the immortal John Dryden. I'rne it is, as I may have told yon before, that I have seen that great man, nay, I have been in the Wits' Coffee-house, as it was then called, and had once a pinch ont of his own very snuff-box. I must have told you all how it happened, but here is Captain Cleveland who never heard it. I lodged, you must know, in Russel Street - I question not but you know Russel Street, Covent Garden, Captain Cleveland?

THE PIMATE

'I should know its latitude pretty well, Mr. Halero,' suid time captain, smiling: 'but I believe yon mentioned the circumstance yesterday, and, benides, we have the duy's duty in luand: you must play us this song which we are to study.'
'It, will not serve the turn tuw,' snid Halero: 'we must think of nomnthing that will take in our dear Mordanint, the first vivice in the istand, whether for a part or solo. I will never be he will tom i string to you unless Mordaunt Mertoun is to heli, ns II t. II hat say you, mily fairest Night I What think yon, my - ari Dawn of Day ?' he added, adiressing the young women, $\therefore \cdot{ }^{\prime}$ whom, as we have said elsewhere, he had long befine Sust,we: thess allegorical names.
$\because \ddots^{\prime}$ hordaunt Mertomn,' said Mima, 'has eone teo late t" (1... .n wir band on this occasion: it is our misfortme, bit it frow ' 1 ' said Halcro, hastily - 'too late - and you In ef and together all your lives? 'lake my worl, my bunny has that old tunes are sweetest, and old freuds surent. M1. Cleveland has a fine bass, that must be allowed; bunt 1 would have you trust for the first effect to one of the twenty fine airs you cansing where Morlaunt's tenor joins so well with your own witchery. Here is my lovely Day approves the change in her heart.'

' You were never in your life more mistaken, father Halcro, said Brenda, her cheeks again reddening, more with displeasure, it seemed, than with shame.
'Nay, but how is this?' said the old man, pausing and looking at them alternately. 'What have we got here? A cloudy night and a red morning? That betokens rough weather. What means all this, young women ? - where lies the offence! In me, I fear; for the blame is always laid upon the whent when young folks like you go by the ears.'
'The blame is not with you, father Halcro,' said Mimma, rising and taking her sister by the arm, 'if indeed there be blame anywhere.?
'I should fear then, Mima,' said Mordaunt, endeavourime to soften his tone into one of incifferent pleasantry, 'that the new-coner has brought the offence along with him.'
'When no offence is taken,' replied Mimna, with her ustual gravity, 'it matters not by whom such may have been offered.'
'Is it possible, Minna!' exclaimed Mordaunt, 'and is it wn who speak thus to me! And you too, Brenda, can you too juige wo harshly of me, yet without permitting we one momenr of honest and frank explanation?'
'"Those who should knuw best,' answered Brenda, in a low int decisive tone of voice, 'have told ns their plemmere, mal it minus he dane. Sister, I think we have staid toil long here, and shall be winted elsewhere. Mr. Mertom will excuse ns on so busy a day.'
The sisters linked their arms together. Halero in vain endeavoured to stop them, making, at the same time, a theatrical geture, and exclaiming -
'Now, bay nal Night, but this is wondrous strange !'
Then turned to Mordaunt Mertomit, and adden, ' 'The girls are possessed with the spirit of mutahility, showing, as our muster Spenser well saith, that Among all liviug creatures, more or lesse, Change still doth reign, and keep the greater sway.

Captain Cleveland,' he continued, 'know you anything that lay happened to put these twe jnvenile Graces ont of tume?'
' He will lose his reckoming,' answered Clevehnid, 'that spends time in inguiring why the wind shifts a point or why a woman changes her mind. Were I Mr. Morlamit, I would not ask the proud wenches another question on such a suljeet.'
'It is a friendly advice, Captain Cleveland,' replied Mordanut, 'and I will not hold it the less so that it has been givell unasked. Allow me to iulluire if you are yourself as indifferent to the opinion of yonr fenale frients ns it seems yon would have me to be?
'Who, I ?' said the captain, with an air of frank indifference, II never thought twice nipon such a subject. I never saw a wiman worth thinking twice about after the at wor was n-peak ons shore it is another thing, and I will hugl n!, dance. and make love, if they like it. with twenty girl, were they hut half so pretty as those who have left $n$ and make them heartily welcome to change their conrse in the somud of a Inatswain's whistle. It will be oulds but I wes" as fast as they can.'
A patient is seldom phea ed with that sort of consolation which is founded on hotlint licht the malady of which lin complains; and Morda ant felt divinsed to be offembed with Captain Cleveland both for taking nutice of his cmbarmas. ment and intruding upon him his own opinion; and he replied, therefore, somewhat sharply, 'That Captain Cleveland's sentiments were only suited to such as had the art to. become universal favourites wherever chance happened to throw thenl, and who conld not lose in one place more than their merit was sure to gain for them in another.'

This was spoken ironically; but there was, to coufes, the truth, a superior knowledge of the world, and a eonscim-niness of external merit at least, about the man which rendered his interferenee doubly disagreeable. As Sir Lucins ()'Irisser says, there was an air of suceess about Captain Cleveland whieh was mighty provoking. Young, handsome, and well assured, his air of nautical bluntness sat naturally and casily upon him, and was perhaps particularly well fitted to the simple manners of the remote country in whieh he fonnd himself; and where, even in the best families, a greater denree of refinement might have rendered his conversation rather less acceptable. He was contented, in the present instante, to smile good-humouredly at the obvious discontent of Morlamit Mertoun, and replied, 'You are angry with me, my gooll frient, but you eannot make me angry with you. The fair hanls of all the pretty women 1 ever saw in my life would never lave fished me up out of the Roost of Sumburgh. So, pray, tlo nut quarrel with me ; for here is Mr. Halero witness that I have struck both jack and topsail, and should you fire a broadside into me, cannot return a single shot.'
'Ay-ay,' said Halcro, 'you must be friends with Captain Cleveland, Mordaunt. Never quarrel with your friend becanse a woman is whimsical. Why, man, if they kept one humour, how the devil eould we make so many songs on them as we dc. Even old Dryden himself, glorions old John, conld have said little about a girl that was always of one mind : as well write verses upon a mill-pond. It is your tides and your runts, and your eurrents and eddies, that come and go, and ehl and flow - by Heaven! I run into rhyme when I so much as think upon them-that smile one day, rage the next, flatter :und devour, delight and ruin us, and so forth - it is these that dive the real soul of poetry. Did you never hear my "Adien th the Lass of Northmaven" ? That weo poor Bet Stimbister, whuli I call Mary for the sound's sake, as I call myself IIecon, after my great ancestor Haeon Goldemund, or Haco with the (iollen Mouth, who cane to the island with Harold Harfager, and was his ehief Scald? Well, but where was I? Oh ay ; pин But Stimbister, she - and partly some debt - was the canse of my leaving the isles of Hialtland - hetter so ealled than Shetland, or Zetland even - and taking to the broad world. I have had a tramp of it since that time. I have battled my way through the world, captain, as a man of mold may, that has a light heal, a light purse, and a heart as light as them both; fought my way, and paid my way, that is, either with money or wit ; have seen kings ehanged and deposed as you would turn it tenant out of a seat-hold; knew all the wits of the age, and especially the glorious Jolm Dryden; what man in the islands ciun say as mueh, barring lying? I had a pinch out of his own suntf-box ; I will tell you how I eame by sueh promotion.'
'But the song, Mr. Halero,' said Captain Cleveland.
'The song!' answered Halcro, seizing the captain by the button - for he was too mueh accustoned to have his audience escape from hin during recitation, not to put in practice all the nsiual means of prevention, - 'the song! Why, I gave a cupy of it, with fifteen others, to the immortal Jolin. You hhall hear it - you shall hear them all, if you will but stand still a moment ; and you too, my dear boy, Mordaunt Mertonn, 1 have searce heard a word from your mo,th these six months, and now you are ruming away from me.' So saying, he seeured him with his other hand.
'Nay, now he has got us both in tow,' said the seaman, 'there is inthing for it but hearing him out, though he spins as tough a yarn as ever an old man-of-war's-man $t$ asted on the watch at midnight.'
' Nay, now, be silent - be silent, and let one of us speak at muce,' said the poet, imperatively ; while Cleveland and Mordaunt, lnoking at eaeh other with a ludierous expression of resignation to their fate, waited in submission for the wellkuown and inevitable tale. 'I will tell you all about ii,' continned Halcro. 'I was knoeked abont the world like other young fellows, doing this, that, and t' other for a livelihood: for, thank God, I could turn my hand to anything; but loving still the Muses as much as if the ungrateful jades had found me, like so many blochheads, in my own enaeh and six. However, I held out till my eonsin, old Lawrence Linkletter, died, and left me the bit of an island yonder; although, by the way, Cultnalindie was as near to him as I was ; but lawrence loved wit, though he had little of his own. Well, he left me the wee hit island - it is as barren as Paruassuss itself. What then? I have a penny to spend, a penny to keep, my purse, a pemy to give to the poor --ay, and a bed and a bottle for a friend, as you shall know, boys, if you will go back with me when this merriment is over. But where was I in my story?'
' Near port, I hope,' answered Cleveland; but Haler: was too determined a narrator to be interrupted by the broadest hint.
'Oh ay,' he resumed, with the self-satisfied air of one who has recovered the thread of a story, 'I was in my old lodgings in Russel Street, with old 'limothy Thimblethwaite, the master Fashioner, then the best-known inall abrut town. He male for all the wits, and for the dull boobies of fortune besides, anm made the one pay for the other. He never denied a wit crenlit save in jest, or for the sake of getting a repartee; and he was in correspondence with all that was worth knowing abont town. He had letters from Crowne, and 'late, and Prior, and 'loum Brown, and all the famous fellows of the tine, with such pellets of wit, that there was no reading them without laughing realy to die, and all ending with craving a further term for payment.'
'I should have thought the tailor would have found that jest rather serious,' said Mordaunt.
'Not a bit - not a bit,' replied his eulogist, 'Tim Thimblethwaite - he was a Cumberland man by birth - had the soul of a prince - ay, and died with the fortune of one; for woe betide the custard-gorged alderman that came under 'Tim's goose, after he had got one of those letters - egad, he was sire to pay the kain! Why, Thimblethwaite was thought to be the original of little 'Tom Bibber, in glorious John's comedy of the Wild Gallant; and I know that he has trusted, ay, and leut John money to boot out his own pocket, at a time when all his fine court friends blew cold enough. He trusted me too, and I have been two months on the score at a time for my upper room. To be sure, I was obliging in his way - not that I exactly could shape or sew, nor would that have been decorons for a gentlennan of good descent; but I - eh, el -I drew bills - summed up the books -
'Carried home the clothes of the wits and aldermen, and sot lodging for your labour?' interrupted Clevelaud.
' No , no- damn it, no,' replied Halcro: ' 'uo such thing : you put me out in my story - where was I?'
'Nay, the devil help you to the latitude,' said the captain, extricating lis button from the gripe of the numerciful barls's finger and thumb, 'for I have no time to take an observation.' So saying, he bolted from the room.
'A silly, ill-bred, conceited fool,' said Halcro, looking after him ; ' with as little manners as wit in his empty coxenmb. I wonder what Magnus and these silly wretches can see in him. He tells such damuable long-winded stories, too, abont his adventures and sea-fights - every seeond word a lie, I doubt not. Mordaunt, my dear boy, take example by that manthat is, take warning by him - never tell long stories about yourself. You are sometimes given to talk too much ahont your own exploits on erags and skerries, nud the like, which only breaks conversation, and prevents other folk from being heard. Now, I see you are impatient to hear ont what I was saying. Stop, whereabonts was I?'
'l fear we must put it off, Mr. Halero, until after dinner,' said Mordaunt, who also meditated his eseape, though desirous of effeeting it with more delieacy towards his old acquaintance than Captain Cleveland had thought it neeessary to use.
'Nay, my dear boy,' said Halcro, seeing himself about to be utterly deserted, 'do not you leave me too : never take so bad an example as to set light by old acquaintanee, Mordaunt. I have wandered many a weary step in my day; but they were always lightened when I could get hold of the arm of an old friend like yourself.'
So saying, he quitted the youth's eoat, and sliding his hand gently under his arm, grappled him more effectually; to which Mordannt submitted, a little moved by the poet's observation upon the unkinduess of old aecuniutances, under which he lumself was an immediate snfferei. But when Halero renewed lis formidable question, ' Whereabouts, was I ?' Mordannt, preferring his poetry to lis prose, remindied him of the song whieh he said he had written upon his first leaving Zetlanda song to which, indeed, the inquirer was no stranger, but which, as it mist be new to the realer, we shall here insert as a firourable specimen of the poetieal powers of this tuneful descendant of Haco the Golden--monthed: for, in the opinion of many tolerable judges, he held a respectable rank among the inditers of madrigals of the period, aud was as well qualified to give immortality to his Nancies of the hills or dades at many a gentle sonnetteer of wit and pleasure abont town. He was something of a musician also, and on the present ocecasion seized upen is sort of linte, and, ynitting his victim, prepared the instrument for an aceompaniment, speaking all the while, that he might lose no time.
'I learued the 'יnte,' he said, 'from the same man who taught honest Shadwell - plump ''on, as they used to call him
-somewhat roughly treated by the glorious John, yon re-
Methinks I see the new Arion sail,
The lute still trembling underneath thy nail ;
At thy well-sharpen'd thuinb, from shore to shore,
The trebles squeak for fear, the basses roar.
Come, I am indifferently in tune now. What was it the he? Ay I remember-nay, "The Lass of Northmaven" is the ditty funir Bet Stimbister! I have called her Mary in the verses. Bet.y. does well for an English song; but Mary is more natural liere. So saying, after a short prelude, he sung, with a tolerable voice and some taste, the following verses : -

$$
\begin{aligned} & \text { MARY } \\
& \text { Farewell to Northmaven, } \\
& \text { Grey Hillswicke, farewell ! } \\
& \text { To the calms of thy haven, } \\
& \text { The storms on thy fell, } \\
& \text { To each breeze that can vary } \\ & \text { The mood of thy main, } \\ & \text { And to thee, bouny Mary } \\ & \text { We meet not again. } \\
& \text { Farewell the wild ferry } \\
& \text { Which Hacon could brave, } \\
& \text { When the peaks of the skerry } \\
& \text { Were white in the wave. } \\
& \text { There 's a maid may look over } \\ & \text { These wild waves in vain } \\
& \text { For the skiff of her lover : } \\
& \text { He comes not again. } \\
& \text { The vows thou hast broke, } \\
& \text { On the wild currents fling them; } \\
& \text { On the quicksand and rock } \\
& \text { Let the mermaidens sing them. } \\
& \text { New sweetuess they 'll give her } \\ & \text { Bewildering strain ; } \\ & \text { But there's one who will never } \\ & \text { Believe them agrain. } \\
& \text { Oh were there an island, } \\
& \text { Though ever so wild, } \\ & \text { Where woman conld smile, and } \\ & \text { No man be beguiled; } \\
& \text { Too tempting a snare } \\
& \text { To poor mortals were given, } \\ & \text { And the hope would fix there, } \\ & \text { That should anchor on heaven ! } \end{aligned}
$$

' I see you are softened, my young friend,' said Halcro, whell lie had finished his song ; 'so are most who hear that same ditty. Words and music both mine own ; and, without saying much of the wit of it, there is a sort of eh - eh - simplicity and truth almut it which gets its way to most folks' heart. Even your father cannot resist it ; and he has a heart as impenetrable to poetry and song as Apollo himself could draw an arrow against. Bitt then he has had some ill luck in his time with the womenfirlk, as is plain from his owing them such a grudge. Ay - ay, there the charm lies; none of us but has felt the same sore in nur day. But come, my dear boy, they are mustering in the hall, men and women both - plagues as they are, we should set on ill without them ; but before we go, only mark the last turil

And the hope would fix there, - that is, in the supposed island - a place which neither was nor will be, -

That should anchor on heaven.

Now you see, my good young man, there are here none of your heathenish rants, which Rochester, Etherege, and these wild fellows used to string together. A parson might sing the song, and his clerk bear the burden ; but there is the confounded bell - we must go now ; but never mind, we 'll get into a quiet corner at night, and I 'll tell you all about it.'

CHAPTER XIII

Full in the midst the polish'd table shines, And the bright gollet.s, rich with generous wines ; Now each partak's the fenst, the wine prepares, Portions the food, and each the portion shares; Nor till the rage of thirst and hanger ceased, To the high host approach'd the sagacious guest.

Odyssey.

THE hospitable profusion of Magnus 'Iroil's board, the number of guests who feasted in the hall, the much greater number of retainers, attendauts, humble friends, and domestics of every possible deseription, who revelled without, with the multitude of the still poorer and less hommend assistants, who came from every hamlet or township, within twenty miles round, to share the bounty of the munificent Udaller, were such as altogether astonished Triptolemus Yel lowley, and made him internally doubt whether it wonlo he prudent in him at this time, and amid the frll glow of his luse. pitality, to propuse to the lyost who presided over sueh a splumbid banquet a radical change in the whole eustoms and usages of his country.

True, the sagacious Triptolemus felt conseions that he pussessed in his own person wisdom far superion to that of all the assembled feasters, to say nothing of the landlord, against whine prudence the very extent of his hospitality formed, in Yellow. ley's opinion, sufficient evidence. But yet the Amphitry"n with whom one dines hoids, for the time at least, an influence wer the minds of his most distingoished guests ; and if the dimmer be in good style and the wines of the right ynality, it is humbling to see that neither art nor wisdom, scarce extronial rank itself, can assume their natural and wonted snperionity over the distributor of these good things, until coffec has berin brought in. Triptolemus felt the fill weight of this temm, iary superiority, yet he was desirons to do something that mishit vindicate the vaunts he hadmade to his sister and his fellow-traveller, and he stole a look at them from time to time, to mark whether he was nut sinking in their esteen from postponing his promised lecture on the enomuities of Zethand.
But Mrs. Barhara was busily engageel in notiug and registering the waste inconrrel in such an entertaimment as she had probably never before looked upon, and in admiring the host's indifference to, and the guests" absolute negligence of, those rules of civility in which her yonth had been brought up. 'The feasters desired to be helped from a dish which was mihroken, and might have figured at supper, with as much freedom as if it had undergone the ravages of half a dowen guests; and no one seemed to care - the landlord himelf least of all - whether those dishes only were consumed which, from their nature, were incapable of reappearance, or whether the assault was extendel to the substantial rounds of beef, pastics, and so forth, which, by the rules of good housewifery, were destined to stand two attacks, and which, theretore, according to Mrs. Barbara's inleas of politeness, ought nut to have been ammihilatel by the guests npon the first onset, but spared, like Ontis in the cave of Polyphemms, to be devoured the last. Lost in the meditations to which there lireaches of convivial discipline gave rise, and in the contenjlation of an ideal larder of cold meat which she could have sived ont of the wreck of roast, boiled, and baked, sufficient to have supplied her culplroard for at least a twelvemonth, Mrs. Barlara cared very little whether or not her brother supported in it e extent the character which he bad calculated upon assuming.
Mordaunt Mertoun also was conversatat with far other thoughts tham those which regarded the proposed reformer of Zetland enornitics. His seat was betwixt two blithe maidens of Thule, who, not taking scorn that he had upon other occasions given preference to the daughters of the Vialler, were glad of the chance which assigned to them the attentions of so distinguished a gallant, who, as being their sumire at the teast, might in all probability beconc their partuce in the subscquent dance. But, whilst rendering to his fair neighbours all the usnal attentions which socicty required, Mordaunt kept up a covert, but accurate and close, observation upon his estranged friend", Minna and Brenda. The U'daller himself had a share of his attention ; but in him he could remark nothing, except the usual tone of hearty and somewhat boisteronsi hospitality with which he was acconstomed to minmate the banguet upon all such occasions of general festivity. But in the differiug mien of the two maidens there was much more room for puinful remark.
Captain Cleveland sat betwixt the sisters, was sedulons in his attentions to both, and Mordamet was so placed that he could observe all, and hear a great deal, of what passed let ween them. But Cleveland's peculiar regard seemed ilevoted to the elder sister. Of this the younger was perhaps eonseious, for more than once her eye glancel towards Mordaunt, ame, as he thought, with something in it whieh resembled regret for the interruption of their intercourse, and a sad renembrance of former and more friendly times; while Minua was exclusively engrossed by the attentions of her neighbour ; and that it should be so, filled Mordaunt with surprise and resentment.
Minma, the serious, the prudent, the reserved, whose countenanee and manners indicated so much elevation of eharacter Minna, the lover of solitude, and of those paths of knowlen ene in which men walk best without company - the enemy of light mirth, the friend of musing melancholy, and the frequenter of fountain-heads and pathless glens - she whose eharacter seeuleel, in short, the very reverse of that which might be captivate. In the bold, eoarse, and daring gallantry of sueh a man as this Captain Cleveland, gave, nevertheless, her ear and eye to hiin, as he sat beside her at table, with an interest and a gracionsinn's of attention which, to Mordaunt, who well knew how to julle of her feelings by her mamer, intimated a degree of the hiyghest favour. He observed this, and his heart rose against the favourite by whom he had been thus superseded, as well is 'What is there about the man,' he said within himsellf, against Minna's indiscreet departure from her own character: 'more than the bold and daring assumption of importance which is derived from success in petty enterprises, and the exercise of petty despotism over a ship's erew? His very lime guage is more professional than is used by the superior officers of the British navy; and the wit which has excited so matuy smiles seems to me such as Minna would not formerly have endured for an instant. Even Brenda seems less taken with his gallantry than Minna, whom it should have suited so little:
Mordaunt was doubly mistaken in these his angry speenli tions. In the first place, with an eye which was, in smue respects, that of a rival, he eriticised fo: too severely the manners and behaviour of Captain Cleva i, wh. They were unpolished, certainly; which was of the less consequence in it cuntry inhabited by so plain and simple a race as the ancient Letlanders. On the other hand, there was an open, naval fraukness in Cleveland's bearing, much nutural shrewduess, sunc appropriate humour, and undonbting coufidence in himself, and that enterprising hardihousl of disposition which, without nuy other recommendable qumlity, very often leads to success with the fair sex. But Mordaunt was farther mistaken ill supposing that Cleveland was likely to be disagrecable to Minua 'I'roil, on aceount of the opposition of their charneters in so many material particulars. Had his kuowledge of the world been a little nure extensive, he might have observed that, as unions are often formed hetwixt couples differing in complexion and stature, they take phace more frequently betwist persons totally diffiering in feelings, in taste, in puronits, and in understanding; and it wonld not he saying, perhaps, too mueh, to aver that two-thirds of the marriages arrulud us have been contracted betwist persons who, judging it priori, we should have thought had scarce any charms for eatch other.

A moral and primary cause might be easily assigned for these anomalies, in the wise dispensations of Provilenee, that the seneral balance of wit, wisdom, and amiuble qualities of all kinds should be kept up, through society at large. For, what a world were it if the wise were to internarry only with the wise, the learned with the learned, the amiable with the inmiable, nay, even the handsome with the handsome? and, is it not evident, that the degraded eastes of the foolish, the ismont, the brutal, and the defirmed (comprehending, by the way, far the greater portion of mankind), must, when eondemmed to exelusive intereourse with each other, become eralually as much brutalised in person ant disposition as so many ourang-ontangs? When, therefire, we see the 'gentle jnined to the rude,' we may lanent the fate of the suffering individual, but we must not the less aluire the mysterions dismwition of that wise Providence which thu: balances the noral goul and evil of life; which secures for a family, unhappy in the dinpositions of one parent, a share of better and sweeter hown, transmitted from the other, and preserves to the offipring the affectionate care and proteetion of at least one of those from whim it is naturally due. Without the frequent occurrence of nnth alliances and minions, mis-sorted as they seem at first -ight, the world could not he that for which Eternal Wisdoun has dasigued it - a place of nixed good and evil, a place of trial at once and of suffering, where even the worst ills are eheckered with something that renders them tolerable to hum. ble and patient minds, and where the best blessings carry with them a necessary alloy of imbittering depreciation.

THE PIMATE:

When, indeed, we look a little closer on the causes of those unexpected and ill-suited attachments, we have occasion to acknowledge that the means by whieh they are prodnced do not infer that complete ileparture from, or ineonsisteney with, the character of the parties which we might expect when the result alone is contemplated. The wise purposes which I Provideuce appears to have had in view, by permitting such intermixture of dispositions, tempers, and understandings, in the married state, are not accomplished by any mysterious inpulse by which, in contradiction to the ordinary laws of nature. men or women are urged to an union with those whon the world see to be unsuitable to them. The freedom of will is permittell to us in the occurrences of ordinary life, as in our mornl conduct; and in the forner as well as the latter case is often the means of misguiding those who possess it. Thns it nsinally happens, more especially to the enthusiastic and imaginative, that, having formed a pieture of admiration in their own minul, they too often deceive themselves by some faint resemblance in some existing being, whom their fancy, as speedily as gratuitously, invests with all the at tributes necessary to complete the benu idéal of mental perfection. No one, perhaps, even in the happiest marriage, with an object really beloved, ever distorered by experience all the qualities he expected to poses.s: but in far too many cases he finds he has practisel a murli higher degree of mental deception, and has erected his niry castle of felicity upon some rainbow, which owed its very existenee only to the peculiar state of the atmosphere.

Thus Mordaunt, if better acquainted with life and with the course of human things, would have been little surprised that such a man as Cleveland, handsome, bold, and animatel a man who had obviously lived in danger, and who spoke of it as sport, should have been invested, by a girl of Minna:s fanteiful disposition, with an extensive share of those qualitios which, in her active imagination, were held to till up the atecomplishments, of a heroic eharacter. 'Ihe plain bhimeness of his mamer, if remote from conrtesy, appeared at least as widely differe, it from deceit ; and, unfashioned as he seemed hy forms, he had enough both of natural sense and natmral genilbreeding to support the delusion lie had ereated, at leavt as far as externals were concerned. It is scaree necessary to add, that these ubservations apply exclusively to what are called love-matchos; for when either party fix their attachment upon the substantial comforts of a rental or a jointure, they cannot be disappointed in the acquisition, although they may he cruelly so in their over-estimation of the happiness it was to afforl, or in. having too slightly anticipated the disalvantages with which it was to be attenled.
Hasing a certain partiality for the dark beanty whom we have described, we have willingly dedicated this digression, in order to accomit for a line of conduct which we allow to neem absolutely umatural in such a marrative as the present, though the most common event in ordinary life; namely, in Minua's appearing to have over-estimated the taste, talent, and ability of a hamlsome young man, who was dedieating to her his whole time and attention, and whose homage remdered her the envy of almost all the other yonng women of that numerons party. Perhaps, if our fair readers will take the trouble to consmlt their own bosoms, they will be dismosed to allow that the dis.tinguished good taste exhibited by any individual who, when his attentions would be agreeable to a whule cireie of rivals, selects one as their individual olject, entitles him, on the footing of reciprocity, if on no other, to a large share of that individual's favourable, and even partial, esteem. At any rate, if the eharacter shall, after all, be deemed inconsistent and munatural, it coneerns not us, who reeord the facts as we find them, and pretend no privilege for bringing eloser to nature those incilents which may seen to diverge from it, or for reducing to consistence that most ineonsistent of all created things - the heart of a heautiful and admirel female.

Neeessity, which teaches all the liberal arts, can render us also adepts in dissimulation ; and Mordaunt, though a novice, failed not to profit in her school. It was manifest that, in order to observe the demeanour of thuse on whom his attention was fixed, he must needs put constraint on his own, and appear, at least, so much engaged with the damsels betwixt whom he sat that Mima and Brenula shomlid suppose limin indifferent to what was passing around him. The ready cheerfuhess of Maddie and Clara Groatsettars, who were enteemed comsiderable fortunes in the island, and were at this moment too happy inf feeling themselves seated somewhat beyond the sphere of vigilance influeneed by their aunt, the good old Lady Glowrowrum, met and requited the attempts which Mordainat male to be lively and entertaining; and they were soon engaged in n gay conversation, to which, as usual on such occasions, the gentloman contributed wit, or what pasmes for such, anll the ladies their prompt laughter and liberal applause. But, nmint 1 this seeming mirth, Mordaunt failed not, from time to timee, as covertly as he might, to observe the conduct of the two dunghiter: of Magnus ; and still it appeared as if the elder, wrapt 1 p in the conversation of Cleveland, did not cast away a thrught on the rest of the company ; and as if Brenda, more openly as she conceived his attention withdrawn from her, lookerl with an expression both anxious and melancholy towards the arnul: of which he himself formed a part. He was much movel lly the diffidence, as well as the trouble, which her looks seemed to convey, and tacitly formed the resolution of seeking a murre full explanation with her in the course of the evening. Nurnu, he rememberen, had stated that these two amiable youlny women were in danger, the nature of which sle left unexplaineif, hut which he suspected to arise out of their mistakng the character of this daring and all-engrossing stranger ; minl he secretly resolved that, if possible, lie would be the neanis of detecting Cleveland and of saving his early friends.

THE PIRATE

As he revolved these thoughts, his attention to the Mins Groatsettars gradually diminished, and perhaps he might altugether have forgotten the necessity of his appearing an minterested spectator of what was passing, had not the signal heen given for the ladies retiring from table. Minna, with a native grace, and somewhat of stateliness in her manner, bent her head to the company in general, with a kinder and more par. ticular expression as her eye reached Cleveland. Bremda, with the blush which attended her slightest personal exertion when exposed to the eyes of others, hurried through the same departing salutation with an embarrassment which almost amonnted to awkwardness, but which her youth and timidity rendered at once natural and interesting. Again Mordaunt thought that her eye distinguished him amongst the numerous company. For the first time he veutured to encounter and to return the glance ; and the conscionsuess that he had done so doubleit the glow of Brenda's countenance, while something resembling displeasnre was blended with her ennotion.
When the ladies land retired, the men betook theinselves to the deep and serious drinking which, according to the fashion of the times, preceded the evening exercise of the dance. ()ld Magnus himself, by precept and example, exhorted them 'to make the best use of their time, since the ladies would soon summon them to shake their feet.' At the same time giviug the signal to a grey-headed domestic, who stood behinil hime in the dress of a Dantzic skipper, and who added to many other cecupations that of butler, "Eric S'eambenter,' he sail, 'has the good ship the "Solly Mariner of Canton" got her cargo (ill board?'
'Chokeful loaded,' answered the Ganymede of Burgh-Westra, - with good Nantz, Jamaica sngar, P'ortugal lemons, not to mention nutmeg and wosst, and water taken in from the Shellienat spring.'
Loud and long laughed the guests at this stated and regular jest betwixt the Cidaller and his butler, which nlways served as: apreface to the introdurtion of a punel-howl of enormons size, the gift of the captain of one of the Honourahle East ludin Comepany's vessels, whieh, bomnd from China homeward, had becti Iriven north about by stress of weather into Lerwick Bay, an! had there contrived to get rid of part of the eargo, withom very serupulously reckuning for the king's duties.
Magnus Troil, having been a large eustomer, besides otherwise obliging Captain coolic, had heen remmerated, on the departure of the ship, with this splendid velicle of conviviality, it the very sight of which, as ohd liric S'caubester hent minder its weight, a murmur of applanse rall through the compming. The good old toasts dedicated to the proyperity of Letland were then honoured with flowing bunpers. 'Death to the head hat never wears hair!' was a sentiment quaffed to the sinceess of thi" fishing, as proposed ly the sonoroms voice of the lidaller. Cland Halero proposed, with general applanse, "The health of ti.' ', worthy landmaster, the sweet sister meat-mistresses; he.. man, death to fish, and growth to the prodnce of thin
'I'he same recurring sentiment was propusel urwre eow a white-headed eompeer of Magnus Troil, in the wora dind open the month of the grey fish, and keep, his hand alnutine: corn! ' ${ }^{1}$
Full opportmity was affiorded to all to homomr these inter esting toasts. Ihose nearent the capaccins Mediterranemn of punch were accommodated by the Didaller with their purtions. dispensed in huge rummer glasses by his own hospitable haml, whilst they who sat at a greater distance replenished their cups hy means of a rieh silver flagon, faeetionsly called the pimace ; which, filled oecasionally at the how, servel to dispense its liquid treasures to the more remote part: of the talile, and occa-

[^84]sioned many right merry jests on its frequent voyages. 'The cummerce of the Zetlanders with foreign vessels and homewardbound West Indiamen had early served to introdnce ammeng them the general use of the generous beverage with which the 'Jolly Mariner of Canton' was loaded; r.,r was there a man in the archipelago of Thule more skilled in combining its rich ingredients than old Eric Scambester, who, indeed, was knww far and wide through the isles by the name of the Pumeh-naker, after the fashion of the ancient Norwegians, who conferreal on Rollo the Walker, and other heroes of their strain, cpithets expressive of the feats of strength or dexterity in which they excelled all other men.
The good liquor was not slow in performing its oftice of exhilaration, and, as the revel advanced, some ancient Norse drinking-songs were sung with great effect by the guests, tending to show that if, from want of exercise, the martial virtues of their ancestors had decayed among the Zetlanders, they comld still actively and intensely enjoy so much of the pleasures. of Valhalla as consisted in quaffing the oceans of mead and brown ale which were promised by Odin to those who should share his Scandinavian paradise. At length, excited by the cup and song, the diffident grew bold and the modest loqnacions; all became desirous of talking, and none were willing to listen; each man mounted his own special hobby-horse, and began eagerly to call on his neighbours to witness his agility. Amminst others, the little bard, who had now got next to our friend Mordaunt Mertoun, evinced a positive determination to combmence and conclude, in all its longitude and latitude, the story of his introduction to glorious John Dryden ; and I'riptolemus Yellowley, as his spirits arose, shaking off a feeling of involuntary awe with which he was impressed by the opulence indicated in all he saw around him, as well as by the respect paid to Magnus 'Troil by the assembled gnests, began to broarh to the astonished and sumewhat offended Udaller some of thise projects for anneliorating the islands which he had boasted of to his fellow-travellers npon their journcy of the morning.

But the innovations which he suggested, and the receptiom which they met with at the hand of Magnus 'I'roil, must be told in the next chapter.

CHAP'TER XIV

Abstract

We 'll keep our customs ; what is law itself, But old establish'd custom! What religion (I mean, with one-half of the men that use it), Save the good use and wont that carries them To worship how and where their fathers worshipp'd? All things resolve in custom; we 'll keep ours.

Old Play.

WE left the company of Magrus 'Iroil engaged in high wassail and revelry. Mordaunt, who, like his father, shunned the festive cup, did not partake in the cheerfulness which the ship diffuscd among the guests as they moloaded it, and the pinnace, as it circmmavigated the table. But, in low spirits as he seemed, he was the more meet prey for the story-tellin. Halcro, who had fixed upon him as in a favourable state to play the part of listener, with something of the same instinct that directs the hooded crow to the sick sheep among the flock, which will most patiently suffer itself to be made a prey of. Joyfully did the poet avail himself of the advantages afforded by Mordannt's ahsence of mind and unwillingness to exert himself in measures of active defcuce. With the unfailing dexterity peculiar to prosers, he contrived to dribble out his tale to donble its usual length, by the excrcise of the privilege of unlimited digressions; so that the story, like a horse on the grand pas:, semed to be advancing with rapidity, while, in reality, it scarce was progressive at the rate of a yard in the quarter of an homr. At lensth, however, he had discnssed, in all its varions bearings and relations, the history of his friendly landord, the master fashomer in Kussel Street, including a short sketch of tive of his relations, and anecrotes of three of his primipal rivals, tugether with some gencral (oh)servations upon the dress and tishion of the period; and having marched thus far through the environs and ontworks of his story, he arrived at the body of the place, fur so the Wits' Coffechouse might be termed. He paused on the threshold, however, to explain the nature of his landlord's right occasionally to intrude himself into this well-known temple of the Muses.

THE PIRATE

'It consisted,' said Halero, 'in the two principal point. if bearing and forbearing; for my friend 'Thimblethwaite win it person of wit himself, and never quarrelled with any jest which the wags who frequented that house were flinging abom, like squibs and crackers on a rejoieing-night; and then, thung some of the wits - ay, and J daresay the greater number, minght have had some dealings with him in the way of trade, he never was the person to put any man of genius in unpleasant remenbranee of such trifles. And though, my dear young Master Mordaunt, you may think this is but ordinary civility, berallise in this country it happens seldora that there is either much borrowing or lending, and because, praised be Heaven, there are neither bailiffs nor sheriff-officers to take a poor fellow ly the neck, and because there are 110 prisons to put himintin when they have done so, yet, let me tell you, that such a lamb. like forbearance as that of my poor, dear, deceased landlurl. I'himblethwaite, is truly unconnmon withiu the London bills if mortality. I could tell you of such things that have happereel even to myself, as well as others, with these cursed Lominn tradesmen, as would make your hair stand on end. But what the devil has put old Magnus into sueh note? He shonts as if he were trying his voice against a north-west gale of wind.'
Loud indeed was the roar of the old Udaller, as, worn cilt if patience by the sehemes of improvement which the factor winnow undauntedly pressing upon his consideration, lic answered him (to use an Ossianic phrase) like a wave upon a rock.
'Trees, sir factor-talk not to me of trees! I care unt though there never be one on the island tall enough to lather a coxcomb upon. We will have no trees but those that rive in our havens - the good trees that have yards for boughs ant standing rigging for leaves.'
'But tonching the draining of the lake of Braebaster, wherenf I spoke to you, Master Magnus 'Troil,' answered the perseverim; agriculturist, 'whilk 1 opinc would be of so nuth consepneme, there are two ways - down the Linklater glen, or by the sial. mester burn. Now, having taken the level of both_-,
'There is a third way, Master Yellowley,' 'answerel the laml lord.
'I profess I can see none,' replied Iriptolemns, with as murls goorl fiith as a joker could desire in the subject of his wit, 'in respect that the hill called Braebaster on the south, and ithe high bauk on the north, of whilk I cannot carry the name rightly in my head -
'Do not tell us of hills and banks, Master Yellowley ; there is a third way of draining the loch, and it is the only way that slail be tried in my day. You say my Jord Chamberlain and I are the joint proprietors; so be it. Let each of us start an equal proportion of brandy, lime-juice, and sugar into the loch - a ship's cargo or two will do the job - let us assemble all the jolly udallers of the country, and in twenty-four hours you shall see dry ground where the loch of Braebaster now is.'
A loud laugh of applanse, which for a time actually silenced I'riptolemus, attended a jest so very well suited to tinue and place - a jolly toast was given - a merry soug was sung - the ship uuloaded her sweets - the pinnace made its genial rounds - the duet betwixt Magnus and Triptolemus, which had attracted the attention of the whole company from its siperior vehemence, now once more sunk, and werged into the general hum of the convivial table, and the poet Halcro again resumed his usurped possession of the ear of Mordaunt Mertoun.
'Whereabouts was I !' he said, with a tone which expressed to his weary listener more plainly than words conld how much of his desultory tale yet remained to be told. ' 0 h , I renember - we were just at the door of the Wits' Coffee-house; it was set up by one $\qquad$ '
' Nay, but, my dear Master Halcro,' said his hearer, somewhat impatiently, 'I am desirous to hear of your meeting with Dryden.'
'What, with glorious John? - true - ay - where was I? At the Wits' Coffee-house. Well, in at the door we got - the waiters, and so forth, staring at me ; for as to Thimblethwaite, honest fellow, his was a well-known face. I can tell you a story about that ——'
'Nay, but John Dryden?' said Mordaunt, in a tone which deprecated further digression.
'Ay - ay, glorious John - where was I? Well, as we stood close by the bar, where one fellow sat griuding of coffee, and another putting up tobacco into penny parcels - a pipe and a dish cost just a penny - then and there it was that f had the first peep of him. One Dennis sat near him, who ' Nay, but John Dryden - what like was he?' demandell Mordaunt.
'Like a little fat old man, with his now grey hair, and iis a full-trimmed black suit, that sat close as a glove. Honest

[^85]I'himblethwaite let no one but himself shape for glorious Jolun, and he had a slashing hand at a sleeve, I pronise you. But there is no getting a inouthful of common sense spoken here: d-11 that Scotelniman, he and old Magnus are at it again!'
It was very trine ; and although the interruption did unt resemble a thunder-clap, to which the former stentorian exclanation of the Udaller might have been likened, it was a close and clamorons dispute, maintained by question, answer, retort, and repartee, as closely huddlen upon each other as; the somnds which announce from a distance a close and sustained fire of musketry.
'Hear reason, sir ?' said the Udaller ; 'we will hear reatuln, and speak reason too : and if reason fall short, yon shall have, rhyme to boot. Ha, iny little friend Halcro!'
Though cut off' in the middle of his best story, if that could to said to have a middle which had neither begiminis nor enul, the bard bristled up at the summons, like a corps of light infantry when ordered up to the support of the grenadiers, lowked smart, slapped the table with his hand, and denoted his heconing readiness to back his hospitable landlord, as becomes a well. entertained guest. Triptolemus was a little daunted at this reinforcement of his adversary: he paused, like a cilutions general, in the sweeping attack which he had commenced on the peculiar nsages of Zetland, and spoke not again until the Udaller poked him with the insulting query, 'Where is your reasou now, Master Yellowley, that you were deafening me with a moment since?'
'Be but patient, worthy sir,' replied the agriculturist. 'What on earth can you or any other man say in defence of that thing yon call a plough, in this blinded country? Why; even the savage Highlandmen, in Caithness and Sutherland, can make more work, and better, with their gascroml, or what ever they call it.'
'But what ails you at it, sir?' said the Udaller: 'lot me hear your, objections to it. It tills our land, a!d what would ye more?'
'It hath but one handle or stilt,' replied Triptolemus.
'And who the devil,' said the poet, aiming at something smart, 'would wish to need a pair of stilts if he can manage to walk with a siugle one ?'
'Or tell' me,' sairl Magnus Truil. 'how it were possible for Neil of Lapmess, that lest one arm by his fall from the cray of Nekbreckan to manage a plough with two handles?'
'The harness is of raw seal-skin,' said Triptolemus.
'It will save dressed leather,' answered Magnms 'Iroil.
'It is drawn by four wretched bullocks,' said the agriculturist, 'that are yoked breast-fashion; mud two women must follow this unhappy instrmment, and complete the firrows with a couple of shovels.
'Drink about, Master Yellowley,' said the Vidaller ; 'and, as you say in Scotland, "never fash your thmmb." Our cattle are too high-spirited to let one go before the other; onr men are too gentle and well-murtured to take the working-field withont the women's company; our ploughs till our land, our land bears us barley; we brew our ale, eat our bread, and make strancers, welcome to their share of it. Here's to yon, Master Yellowley.'

This was said in a tone meant to be decisive of the question ; and, accordingly, Halcro whispered to Mordaunt, "Ihat has settled the matter, and now we will get on with glorious Jolin. 'Iliere he sat in his suit of full-trimmed black - two years due was the bill, as mine honest landlord afterwards told me - and such an eye in his head! None of your burning, blighting, falcom eyes, which we poets are apt to make a ront about, but a soft, fill, thoughtful, yet penetrating glance - never saw the like of it in my life, unless it were little Stephen Kileancogg's, the tiddler, at Papastow, who -_'
'Nay, but Johm Dryden?' said Mordannt, who, for want of better amusement, had begun to take a sort of pleasure in keeping the old gentleman to his narrative, as men herd in a restive sheep, when they wish to catch him. He returned to his theme, with his usual phrase of 'Ay, true - glorious John. Well, sir; he cast his eye, such as I have described it, on my landlord, and "Honest Tim," said he, "what hast thou got here?" and all the wits, and lords, and gentlemen that used to crowd rommd him, like the wenches ronnd a pedlar at a fair, they made way for us, and up we cane to the fireside, where he had his own established chair - I have heard it was carried to the balcony in summer, but it was by the fireside when I saw it - so up came 'Tim 'I'himblethwaite, through the midst of them, as bold as a lion, and I followed with a small parcel under my arm, which! had taken np partly to oblige my landlord, as the shop porter was mot in the way, and partly that I might be thought to lave something to do there, for you are to think there was no almittance at the Wits' for strangers who had no business there. I have hearil that Sir Charles Selley said a good thines abont that
' Nay, but yon forget glorions Jolm,' said Mordannt.
'Ay, glorious you may well call him. They talk of their Blackmore, and Shadwell, and such-like - not fit to tie the latchets of John's shoes. "Well," he said to my limillonil, "what have you got there?" and he, bowing, I warrant, lower than he wonld to a duke, said he had made bold to come and show him the stuff which Lady Elizabeth had chose for her nightgown. "Aurl which of your geese is that, 'Tim, who has got it tucked under lis wing?" "He is an Orkney goose, if it please you, Mr. Dryden," said 'Tim, who had wit at will, "and he hath brought you a copy of verses for your honour to lowk at." "Is he ampliibious ?" said glorious John, taking the paime; and methonght I could rather have faced a battery of canmu than the crackle it gave as it opened, though he did not rpeak in a way to dash one neither; and then he looked at the verses, and he was pleased to say, in a very encouraging way inleed, with a sort of good-humoured smile on his face, and certainly for a fat elderly gentleman - for I would not compare it to Minna's smile or Brenda's - he had the pleasantest smile I ever saw - "Why, 'lim," he said, "this goose of yours will prove a swan on your hands." With that he smiled a little, min they all laughed, and none louder than those who stood too fir uif to hear the jest; for every one knew when he smiled there wiss something worth laughing at, and so took it upon trust : inlil the word passed through anong the young 'Templars, anil the wits, and the smarts, and there was nothing but question wi question who we were ; and one French fellow was trying tu tell them it was only Monsieur Tim Thimblethwaite ; but le made such work with his Dumbletate and Timbletate that I thought his explanation wonld have lasted $\qquad$ ',
'As long as your own story,' thought Mordaunt ; Hit the narrative was at length finally cut short by the strony and decided voice of the Udaller.
'I will hear no more on it, Mr. Factor!' he exclaimed.
'At least let nie say something about the breed of honses,' said Yellowley, in rather a cry-mercy tone of voice. 'Your' horses, my dear sir, resemble cats in size and tigers in leviliy:"
'For their size,' said Magms, ' they are the easier for 11. to. get off and on them ('As Triptolemus experienced this morning,' thought Mordaunt to himself), and as for their devilry, let in one mount then that cannot manage them.'

A twinge of self-conviction on the part of the agriculturit prevented him from reply. He darted a deprecatory glamw: 1 Mordaunt, as if for the purpose of imploring secrecy respereting his tumble ; and the Udaller, who saw his advantage, although he wis not aware of the cause, purnied it with the high and stern tone proper to one who had all his life leen maceustomed to meet with, and unapt to indure, opposition.
'By the blood of St. Magnus the Martyr,' he said, 'but you are a fine fellow, Master Factor Yellowley: You come to us from a strange land, understanding neither our laws, nor our manners, nor our language, and you propose to become governor of the country, and that we shonld all be your slaves!'
'My pupils, worthy sir - my pupils!' said Yellowley, 'and that only for your own proper advantage.'
'We are too old to go to school,' said the Zetlander. 'I tell you once more, we will sow and reap our grain as our fathers did; we will eat what God sends us, with our doors open to the stranger, even as theirs were open. If there is aught imperfect in our practice, we will anend it in time and season ; but the blessed Baptist's holiday was made for light learts and quick heels. He that speak; a word more of reason, as you call it, or anything that looks like it, shall swallow a pint of sea-water-lie shall, by this hand!, And so fill up the good ship, the "Jolly Mariner of Canton," once more, for the benefit of those that will stick by her ; and let the rest have a fling with the fiddlers, who have been summoning us this hour. I will warrant every wench is on tiptoe by this time. Come, Mr. Yellowley, no unkindness, man; why, man, thou feelest the rolling of the "Jolly Mariner" still (for, in truth, honest I'riptolemus showed a little unsteadiness of motion as he rose to attend his host); but never mind, we shall have thee fiud thy land-legs to reel it with yonder bonny belles. Come along, Triptolemus; let me grapple thee fast, lest thou trip, old 'Iriptolemus - ha, ha, ha !'
So saying, the portly though weather-beaten lumk of the Pidaller sailed off like a man-of-war that had lraved a humdred gales, having his gnest in tow like a recent prize. . 'l'he greater part of the revellers followed their leader with lourd jubilee, although there were several stanch topers who, taking the uption left them by the Vidaller, remaned behind to relieve the "Jolly Mariner" of a fresh cargo, amidst many a piledse to the health of their absent landlord, and to the provierity of his roof-tree, with whatsoever other wishes of kinduess could be devised as an apology for another pint-bumper of noble punch.

The rest soon thronged the dancing-room, an apartment which partook of the simplicity of the time and of the conntry. Drawing-rooms and saloons were then minnown in Sentland, save in the housen of the nobility, and of course absolutely so in Zetland; but a long, low, anomalous store-room, sometimes used for the depositation of merchandise, sometimes for pimtting aside lumber, and a thousand other purposes, was well knuwn to all the youth of Dunrussness, and of many a district hesides, as the scene of the merry dance, which was sustained with so much glee when Magnus Troil gave his frequent feasts.
The first appearance of this ball room might have slrockeld a fashionable party assembled for the quadrille or the waltz. Low as we have stated the apartment to be, it was but inperfectly illuminated by lamps, candles, ship-lanterns, and a variety of other candelabra, which served to throw a dusky light upon the floor, and upon the heups of merchandise and miscellaneous articles which were piled around; some of them stores for the winter ; some, goods destined for exportation; some, the tribute of Neptune, paid at the expense of shipwrecked vessels, whose owners were unknown; some, artilles of barter received by the proprictor, who, like most others at the period, was somewhat of a merchant as well as a landholder, in exchange for the fish and other articles, the produce of his estate. All these, with the chests, boxes, casks, cte., which contained them, had been drawn aside, and piled onc above the other, in order to give room for the dancers, who, light aml lively as if they had occupied the most splendid saloon in the parish of St. James's, executed their national dances with equal grace and activity.

The group of old men who looked on bore no inconsiderable resemblance to a party of aged tritons, engaged in behorling the sports of the sea-mymphs; so hard a look lad most of them acquired by contending with the clements, and so much did the shaggy hair and beards, which nuny of then cultivated after the ancicnt Norwegian fashion, give their heads the character of these supposed natives of the decp. 'Ille yomus people, on the other hand, were mummmonly hambsme, tall, well-made, and shapely : the men with long fair hair, anl, mutil broken by the weather, a fresh, ruldy complexim, whirh, in the fenales, was softened into a bloom of intinite relicacy. Their natural good ear for music qualified them to second to the utmost the exertions of a band whose strains were hy no means contemptible; while the elders, who stood aromill or sat quiet upon the old sea-chests which served for chairs, critieised the dancers, as they compared their oxecntion with their own exertions in former days; or, warmed ly the enlp and flagon, which continued to circulate anomy them, snapped their fingers and beat time with their feet to the music.
Mordanut looked upon this scene of muiversal mirth with the paiuful recollection that he, thrust aside from his proeminenee, no longer exereised the impurtant duties of chiof of the dancers, or office of leader of the revels, which had been assigned to the stranger. Cleveland. Auxions, however, to suppress the feelings of his own disappointinent, whieh ho felt it was neither wiso to entertain nor manly to display, he approached his fair neighbours to whom he hal been so acceptable at table, with the purpose of inviting one of them to become his partner in the ilance. But the awfully aneient old lady, even the Lady Glowrowrum, who had only tolerated the exuberance of her nieces' mirth during the time of dinner hecause her situation rendered it then impossible for her to iuterfere, was not disposed to permit the apprehcinded renewal of the intimacy implied in Mertom's invitation. She therefore took upon herself, in the name of her two nieces, who sat pouting beside her in displeased silence, to inforn Mordaunt, after thanking him for his civility, that the hands of her nieces were engaged for that evening; and, as he continued to watch the party at a little distance, he had mopportunity of being convineed that the alleged engagement was a mere apology to get rid of him, when he saw the two good-hmnoured sisters join the dance under the auspices of the next young men who asked their hands. Ineensed at so marked a slight, and unwilling to expose hinself to another, Mordaunt Mertoun drew back from the cirele of daneers, shronded himself amongst the mass of inferior persons who erowded into the bottom of the room as speetators, and there, eoncealed from the observation of others, digested his own mortifieation as well as he could - that is to say, very ill - and with all the philosophy of his age - that is to say, with none at all.

CHAPTER XV

> A torch for mo ; lot wantons, light of heurt, Ticklo the uneloses rushes with their heels; For I am proverb'd with a grandsire phrase I Il be a candle-holder, and look no.

Romeo and Juliar.

THE youth, says the moralist Jobnson, cares mut fir the boy's hobby-horse, nor the man for the yonth' mis. tress; and therefore the distress of Mordament. $1 /$ crimu, when exoluded from the merry dance, may seem tritlin: tin many of my readers, who would, nevertheless, think they linl well to be angry if deposed from their usual place in an iswentbly of a different kind. There lacked not amusement, hewever, for those whom the dance did not suit, or who were not hapy onough to find partners to their liking. Halcro, now completely in his element, had assembled round him an anlience, to whom he was declaiming his poetry with all the enthusiasm of glorious John himself, and receiving in return the usinal degree of applause allowed to minstrels who recite their nwin rhyines - so long at least as the author is within hearing of the critieism. Halcro's poetry might indeed have interested the antiquary as well as the admirer of the Muses, for several of his pieces were translations or imitations from the Sallicic sagas, which continued to be smug by the fishermen of these islands even until a very late periorl; insomnch that, when Gray's poems first fonnd their way to Orkney, the ohl pende recognised at once, in the ode of the Fatal sisters, the Runic rhymes which had anused or terrified their infancy muler the title of the Mrayiciums, and which the fishers of Nurth Ronalls. sha and other remote isles used still to sing when asked fir a Norse ditty. ${ }^{1}$

Half-listening, half-lost in his own reflertions, Murlannt Mertoun stood near the door of the apartment, and in the outer ring of the little eircle formed aromed old Inahro, while the bard chanted to a low, wild, monotonous air, varied unly

[^86]liy the efforts of the singor to give interest and emplasis to particular passages, the following imitation of a Northern war-song -

THE: SONG OF HAROLD HARFAGER

The nun in rising dlaly red, The wind is wailing low and dread; From his ellff the ceagle sallies, Lenves the wolf his darkmone valleyn ; In the midnt the ravens hover, Peep the wild-dogs from the cover. Screaming, croaking, buylng, yelling, Fach la hils wild necents telling, - Soon wer fenst on dead unil dying, Fair-halr'd Harold's flag is flying.'

Many a crest in air is streaming, Many a helmet darkly gleaming, Many an arm the axe uprears, Doom'd to hew the wood of spears. All along the crowded ranks, Horses neigh and armour clanks ; Chiefs are shouting, clarions ringing, Louder utill the bard is singiug, -Gather, footmen - gather, horsemen, To the field, ye valiant Norsemen !

- Halt ye not for food or slumber, View not vantage, count not number; Jolly renpery, forward still : Grow the crop ou vale or hill, Thick or scatter'd, stiff or lithe, It shall down before the scythe. Forwarl with your sickles hright, Reap the harvest of the fight. Onward, footmen - onward, horsemen, To the charge, ye gallant Norsemea !
- Fatal Choosers of the Slaughter, O'er you hovers Olin's daughter; Hear the choice she spreads before ye, Victory, and wealth, and glory ; Or old Valhalla's roaring hail, Her ever-circling mead and ale, Where for eternity unite
The joys of wassail and of fight. Headlong forward, foot nud horsemen, Charge aud fight, and die like Norsemen !'
'The poor, unhappy, blinled heathens!' said Triptolemus, with a sigh deep enough fir a groan; 'they speak of their eternal cups of ale, and I question if they kend how to manage a croft land of grain !'

MICROCOPY RESOLUTION TEST CHART

(ANSI and ISO TEST CHART No. 2)

'The cleverer fellows they, neighbour Yellowley,' answerel the poet, 'if they made ale withont barley.'
'Barley ! alack-a-day!' replied the more accurate aldri culturist, ' who ever heard of barley in these parts ? Bear, my dearest friend - bear is all they have, and wonderment it is th me that they ever see an awn of it. Ye scart the land with a bit thing ye ca' a pleugh; ye might as weel give it a ritt with the teeth of a redlling-kame. Oh, to see the sock, and the heel. anld the sole-clout of a real steady Scottish pleugh, with a chiehi like a Samson between the stilts, laying a weight on then would keep down a mountain ; twa stately owsen, and as many broad-breasted horse in the traces, going throngh soil and tili, and leaving a fur in the ground would carry off water like a causeyed syver! They that have seen a sight like that have seen something to crack about in another sort than thuse unhappy auld-warld stories of war and slaughter, of which the land has seen, even but too mickle, for a' your singing and soughing awa', in praise of such bloodthirsty doings, Master Claud Hatcro.'
'It is a heresy,' said the animated little poet, bridfing and drawing himself up, as if the whole defence of the Orcadian Archipelago rested on his single arm - 'it is a heresy so muct, as to name one's native country if a man is not prepared when and how to defend hinself - ay, and to annoy another. The time has been that, if we made not good ale and aquavite, we knew well enough where to find that which was ready made to our hand; but now the descendants of sea-kings, and chanpions, and Berserkars are become as incapable of using their swords as if they were so many women. Ye may praise them for a strong pull on an oar or a sure foot on a skerry ; but what else could glorions John himself say of ye, my good Hialtlanders, that any man would listen to?'
'Spoken like an angel, nost noble poet,' said Cleveland, who. during an interval of the dance, stood near the party in which this conversation was held. 'The old champions you talked to us about yesternight were the men to make a harp ring gallant fellows, that were friends to the sea and enemies to all that sailed on it. Their ships, I suppose, were clumsy enough ; but if it is true that they went upon the account as far as the Levant, I scarce believe that ever better fellows unloosed a topsail.'
'Ay,' replied Halero, 'there you spoke them right. In those days none eould call their life and means of living their own, unless they dwelt twenty miles ont of sight of the bhe sea. Why, they had public prayers put up in every ehurchin Europe for deliveranee from the ire of the Northmen. In lrance and England, ay, and in Seotland too, for as high as they hold their head nowadays, there was not a bay or a haven but it was freer to our forefathers than to the poor devils of natives; and now we cannot, forsooth, so mueh as grow our own barley without Seottish help (here his darted a sarcastie glance at the finetor). I would I saw the time we were to measure arms with them again!'
'Spuken like a hero onee more,' said Cleveland.
'Ah!' continued the little bard, 'I would it were possible to see our barks, once the water-dragons of the world, swimming with the blaek raven standard waving at the topmast, and their decks glimmering with arms, instead of being heaped up with steck-fish; wimning with our fearless hamls what the nitysard soil denies; paying back all old scorn and modern injury; reaping where we never sowed, and felling what we never planted; living and laughing through the world, and smiling when we were smmmoned to unit it!'
So spoke Claud Halcro, in no serions, or at least most certainly in no sober mood, his brain (never the most stable) whizing under the influence of fifty well-remembered sagas, besides five bumpers of nsquebaugh and brandy; and Cleveland, between jest and earnest, clapped him on the shoulder and again repeated, 'Spoken like a hero!'
'Spoken like a fool, I think,' said Magnus Troil, whose attention had been also attracted by the velhemenee of the little bard. 'Where would you eruise upon, or against whom? We are all subjects of one realm, I trow, and I would have you to remember that your voyage may bring up at execution duck. I like not the Sents - no offence, Mr. Yellowley - that is, I would like them well enough if they would stay quiet in their own land, and leave us at peace with our own people, and mamers, and fashions ; and if thoy would but abide there till I went to harry them like a mad old Berserkar, I would leave them in peace till the day of judgment. With what the sea sends ns, and the land leunls us, as the proverb say;, and a set of honest neighbourly folks to help us to consume it, so help me, St. Magnus, as I think we are even but too happy!'
'I know what war is,' said ant old man, 'and I would as soon sail through Sumburgh Roost in a eoekle-shell, or in : worse loon, as I would venture there again.'

'IIIE PIRATE

'And, pray, what wars knew your valour ?' said Halcro, whe. though forbearing to contradiet his landloril from a sellic if respect, was not a whit inclined to abandon his argunent tu any meaner authority.
'I was pressell,' answered the old triton, 'to serve mulder Montrose, when lie came here about the sixteen hundred anll fifty-one, and carried a sort of us off, will ye nill ye, to get mur throats cut in the wilds of Strathnavern. ${ }^{1} 1$ slaill never firyet it. We had been hard put to it for victuals : what would I have given for a luncheon of Burgh-Westra beef-ay, or a mess of sour sillocks? When our Highlandmen brought in a dainty drove of kyloes, much ceremony there was not, for we shot aul felled, and flayed, and roasted, aud broiled, as it. came to every man's hand ; till, just as our beards were at the greasient, we heard - God preserve us - a tramp of horse, then twa or three drapping shots - then came a full salvo - and then, whel the officers were crying on us to stand, and maist of us looking which way we might run away, down they broke, horse auld foot, with old John Urry, or Hurry, ${ }^{2}$ or whatever they called him - he hurried us that day, and worried us to boot - and we began to fall as thick as the stots that we were felling five minutes before.'
'And Montrose,' said tl soft voice of the graceful Mima 'what became of Montrose, 'how looked he ?'
'Like a lion with the hunters before him,' answered the oll gentleman; 'but I looked not twiee his way, for iny own lay right over the hill.'
'And so you left him?' said Minna, in a tone of the deepest contempt.
' It was no fault of mine, Mistress Minna,' answererl the olld man, somewhat out of countenance ; 'but I was there with u19 choice of my own ; and, besides, what good could I have dune? all the rest were running like sheep, and why shoulla I have staid ?'
'You might have died with him,' said Minna.
'And lived with him to all eternity, in immortal verse:' added Claud Halcro.
'I thank you, Mistress Minna,' replied the plain-dealing Zetlander, 'and' I thank you, my old friend Clauil ; but I would rather drink both your healths in this good bicker of ale, [^87]like a living man as I am, than that yon should te making sungs in my honour, for having died forty or fifty years agoue. But what signified it? Run or fight, 't was all nene: they took Montrose, poor fellow, for all his doughty deeds, and they tork me that did no doughty deeds at all ; and they hatiged him, poor man, and as for me --

' 1 trust in Heaven they fiogyed and pickled you,' said Cleveland, worn out of patience with the dhll narrative of the peaceful Zetlander's poltroonery, of which he seemed so wondrous little ashamed.
'Flog horses and pickle beef,' said Magnus. 'Why, you have not the vanity to think that, with all your quarter-deck airs, you will make poor old neighbour Haagen ashamed that he was not killed some scores of years since? You have looked on death yourself, my doughty young friend, but it was with the eyes of a young man who wishes to be thought of ; but we are a peaceful people - peaceful, that is, as long as any one should be peaceful, and that is till some one has the impurence to wrong us or our neighbours; and then, perlapus, they may not find our Northern blood much cooler in onr veins than was that of the old Scandinavians that gave us our uames and lineage. Get ye along - get ye along to the sword-dance, ${ }^{1}$ that the strangers that are amongst nis may see that our hands and our weapons are not altogether unacquainted even yet.'
A dozen cutlasses, selected hastily from an old arm-chest, and whose rusted hue bespoke how seldom they left the sheath, arned the same number of young Zetlanders, with whom mingled six maidens, led by Minna 'Iroil ; and the minstrelsy instantly commenced a tune appropriate to the ancient Norwegian wardance, the evolutions of which are perhaps still practised in those remote islands.

- The first movement was gracefinl and majestic, the youths holling their swords erect, and without much gesture; but the tune, and the corresponding motions of the dancers, becane gradually more and more rapid; they clashed their swords together, in measured time, with a spirit which gave the exercise a dangerous appearance in the eye of the spectator, thongl the firmness, justice, and accuracy with whi h the dancers kept time with the stroke of their weapons did, in truth, ensure its siffety. The most singular part of the exhibition was the (nurage exhibited by the fenale performers, who now, surrumiled by the swordsmen, seemed like the Sabine maidens in [^88]the hands of their Roman lovers; now, moving under the arch of steel which the young men had formed ly croswing their weapons over the heads of their fair partners, resembled the band of Anazons when they first joined in the Pyrrhic dinme with the followers of 'Theseus. But ly far the most strikilit and appropriate figure was that of Minna 'Iroil, whom Halern had long since entitled the Queen of Swords, and who, indeed, moved anidst ihe swordsmen with an air which seemed to hold all the drawn blades as the proper accompaniments of her person and the implements of her pleasure. And when the mazes of the dance became more intricate, when the close and continuous clash of the weapons made some of her companiuns shrink and show signs of fear, her cheek, her lip, and her eye seemed rather to announce that, at the moment when the weapons flashed fastest and rung sharpest around her, she was most completely self-possessed and in her nwn element. Lant of all, when the music had ceased, and she remained for a instant upon the floor by herself, as the rule of the dan required, the swordsmen and maidens who departel fr at around her seemed the guards and the train of some princess, who, dismissed by her signal, were leaving her for a time to solitude. Her own look and attitude, wrappel, as she protably was, in some vision of the imagination, corresponded admirably with the ideal dignity which the spectators ascribed to her: but, almost immediately recollecting herself, she blushed, as if conscious she had been, though but for an instant, the whject of undivided attention, and gave her hand gracefully to Cleveland, who, though he had not joined in the dance, assumed the duty of conducting her to her seat.

As they passed, Mordaunt Mertoun might observe that Cleveland whispered into Minna's ear, and that her brief reply was accompanied with even more discomposure of conitenance than she had manifested when encountering the gaze of the whole assembly. Mordaunt's suspicions were strondy awakened by what he observed, for he knew Minna's charauter well, and with what equanimity and indifference she was in the custom of receiving the usual compliments and gallantries with which her beauty and her situation renderel her sulficiently familiar.
'Can it be possible she really loves this stranger?' was the unpleasant thought that instantly shot across Mordaunt: mind. 'And if she does, what is my interest in the matter?' was the second ; and which was quickly followed by the retlection that, though he claimed no interest at any time but an a friend, and though that interest was now withirawn, he was still, in consideration of their former intimacy, entitled both to he sorry and mugry at her for throwing away her affections on one he judged nuweithy of her. In this process of reasoning, it is prob..ble that a little inortified vanity, or some indescribable shade of selfish regret, might be endeavonring to assume the disguise of disinterested generosity ; lant there is so much if base alloy in our very best (munssisted) thoughts, that it is melancholy work to criticise too clesely the motives of our most wirthy accions; at least we would recommend to every one to let those of his neighbours, pass current, however narrowly he may examine the purity of his own.
The sword-dance was suleceeded by varions other specimens of the same exercise, and by songs, to which the singers lent their whole soul, while the audience were sure, as uccasion uffered, to unite in some favourite chorus. It is upon such occasions that music, though of a simple and even rude character, finds its natural empire over the generous bosons, and produces that strong excitement which cannot be attained by the most learned compositions of the first masters, which are caviare to the common ear, althongh, doubtless, they afford a delight, exquisite in its kind, to those whose natural capacity and education have enabled them to comprehend and relish those difficult and complicated combinations of harmony.
It was about midnight when a knocking at the door of the mansion, with the sonnd of the 'gue' and the 'langspiel,' announced, by their tinkling chime, the arrival of fresh revellers, to whon, according to the hospitable custom of the cumutry, the apartments were instantly thrown open.

CHAP'TER XVI

My mund misgives, Some conseguence, yet hanging in the stars, Shall bitterly hegin his feartul date. With this night's revels.

Romeo and Juliet.

THE new-comers were, according to the frequent enstom of suel frolickers all over the world, disgnised in a sirt of masquing habits, and designed to represent the tritons and mermaids with whom aneient tradition and popmlat belief have peopled the northern seas. The former, called by Zetlanders 'f that time 'sloupeltins,' were represented by yomis men grotesquely habited, with false hair, and bcards mate if flax, and ehaplets eomposed of sea-warc interwoven with shells and other marine productions, with which also were deconated their light-blue or greenish mantles of wadmaal, repeatedly: before-mentioned. 'They had fish-spears and other emblems if their assumed quality, amongst which the classical taste if Cland Halero, by whom the masque was arranged, had not firgotten the concli-shells, which were stoutly and hoarsely winded from time to time by one or two of the anpuatic deities, to the great amnoyance of all who stood near them.
The nereids and water-nymphs who attended on this ocatsion displayed, as usual, a little more taste and ornament than was to be seen amongst their male attendants. Fantastic garments of green silk, and other matcrials of superior cont and fashion, had been contrived so as to imitate their ideat if the inhabitants of the waters, and, at the same time, to show the shape and features of the fair wearers to the best advantisur The bracelcts and shells whieh adorncd the neek, arms, tinl ankles of the pretty mermaidens werc, in some cases, intermixed with real pearls; and the appearance, upon the whole. was such as might have done no diseredit to the eonrt of Amphitrite, especially when the long bright locks, blue eyes, fair complexions, and pleasing features of the naidens of 'Thinle wre taken inta consideration. We do mont indeed pretend to aser that my of these seeming mermaids had sa acenrately imitated the real siren ancommentators have supposed those attendrant on Cleopatra did, who, adopting the fistis train, of their original, were ahle, nevertheless, to make their 'bends,' or 'ends. (said commentators eamot tell which), 'mornings.' ${ }^{\text {ch}}$ Inleed, had they not left their extremities in their matnral state, it wonld have been impossible for the Zethund sirens to have exeented the very pretty dance with which they rewarded the company for the realy admission which had been granted to them.

It was soon discovered that these masquers were no strangers, hit a part of the guests, who, stealing out a little time before, hard thas disgnised themselves, in order to give variety to the mirth of the evening. The minse of Cland Halcro, always active on such ocensions, liad supplied then with an appropriate song, uf which we may give the following speeimen. The somp was alternate hetwixt a nereid or mermaid and a merman or triton the males and females on either part forming a semi chorns, which aecompanied and bore burden to the prineipal singer.

1

Merimaid

Fathoms deep heneatle the wave, Stringring heals of glistering pearl, Singing the achievements brave Of many un old Norwegian earl; Dwelling where the tempest's raving Falls as light upon our ear As the sigh of lover craving Pity from his lady dear, Children of widd Thule, we, From the deep caves of the sea, As the lark springs from the lea, Hither come, to share your glee.

See some admirable diseussion on this passage in the variornm Nhaksperatro. $\because$ OL. N111-11

Children of wihl Thult, we Have ploughill much furrown on the sea
As the steer draws on the lea,
Aud hither we come to share your glee.

111

Meimaides and Mehmen
We lomal you in our twilight enver. A h::udred fithom derplolow, For notes of joy can piorece the waves, That drown each sonnd of war and woe. Those who dwell beneath the sea Love the sons of Thule well; Thus, to aid your mirth, bring we Dance, and moug, and woululing shell. Children of dark Thule, know, Those who dwell by haaf and voe, Where your daring shallops row, Come to slare the festal show.
The final ehorus was borne by the whole voices, excepting those carrying the conch-shells, who had been trained to hoin them in a sort of zude accompaniment, which had a good effect. The poeti, as well as the performance, of the masquers received great applause from all who pretended to be judges of such matters; but above all from I'riptolemus Yellowley, who, hin ear having caught the agricultural soun's of plough and furrow, and his brain being so well drenched that it could only construe the words in their most literal aceeptation, declared romilly; und called Mordaunt to bear witness, that, though it was: it shame to waste so much good lint as went to form the tritom. beards and periwigs, the song contained the only words if common sense which he had heard all that long day.

But Mordaunt had no time to answer the appea. 'eing emgaged in attending with the utmost vigilance to the motions of one of the female masquers, who had given him a private signal as they entered, whieh induced him, though mecertain who she might prove to be, to expect some commmication from lier if importanee. The siren who had so bolilly tunched his arm, innl had accompanied the gesture with an expression of eve which bespoke his attention, was disgnised with a good deal more catrthan her sister-masquers, her mantle being loose, and wihe enough to conceal her shape convletely, and her face hidden the neath a silk masque. He observed that she gradually detached herself from the rest of the masquers, and at length placed herself, as if for the advantage of the air, near the door of a chamber which remained open, looked carnestly at him again, and then taking an opportmity, when the attention of the company was fixed upon the rest of her purty, whe left the nuartment.

Morlaunt did not hesitate instantly to follow his mysterious guide, for such we may term the masquer, as she pansed to let fiim see the direction she was about to take, and then walked swiftly towards the shore of the voe, or salt-water lake, now hying full before them, its small smmmer waves oflistening ould rippling mader the inthucuce of a hruad menalight, which, z Mhend to the strong 'wilight of thoser regiens during the summer solstice, left no sen on to regret the absense of the sinn, the path of whose setting was still visible om the waves of the west, while the horizon on the east side was alrearly beginning to glimmer with the lights of dawn.
Morlaunt had therefore no difficulty in keeping sight of his disunised guide, as she tripped it over height and hollow to the senside, and, winding among the rocks, led the way to the spot where his own labours, ciuring the time of his furmer intinacy at Burgh-Westra, hail constricted a sheltered aud solitary seat, where the daughters of Magnis were acenstomen to spend, when the weather was suitable, a good deal of their time. Here, then, was to be the place of explamation; for the maspuer stopped, and, after a moment's hesitation, sat down wi the rustic settle. But from the lips of whom was he to receive it? Norma haul first occurred to him; b but her tall tigure an! slow, majestic :tep were entirely different from the size and gait of the more fiiry-formed siren, who had preceded inim with as light a trip as if he had been a real nereid, who, haviug remained too late "и, in the shore, was, under the dread of Amphitrite's displeasure, hastening to regain her native elenent. Since it was not X...na, it could be only, he thought, Brenth who thus singled i. in ; and when she had seated herself nim the bench, and tianen the mask from her face, Brenda it accordingly proved to be. Mordant had certainly done nothing to make him dread her presence ; and yet, such is the inthence of bashfuhuess over the ingenuous youth of both sexes, that he experiencel all the rubarrassment of oue who finds himself mexpectedly placed lnfure a person who is justly offended witl: hin. Brenda felt In ! !ess embarrassment; but as she had comrted this interview, :und was sensible it must be a brief one, she was compelled, in quite of herself, to begin the conversation.
' Mor' 'unt,' she said, with a hesitating voice ; then correcting herself, sue proceeded - 'You minst be surprisel, Mr. Mertoun, that I should hi ve tahen this meommon freedon.'
'It was not till this morning, Bronda,' replied Mordamm, 'that any anark of friendsliip or intimacy from yon or from your sister conld have surprised me. 1 am fiar more astomished thut you should shun me withont reason for so many honres than that you should now allow me ni interview. In the mame of Heaven, Brenda, in what have 1 offenderl you 1 or why are we on these unnsual terms?'
'May it not ! enough to say,' replied Brenda, looking 'luwn. ward, 'that it is my father's pleasure?'
' No, it is not ellough,' returned Mertoun. 'Yomr father cannot have so suddenly altered his whole thonghts of me, annl his whole actions towards, me, without actiug muler the iuth ence of some strong dehusion. I ask yon but to exphain of what nature it is ; for I will be eontented to be lower in your emtern than the meanest hind in theve islands, if 1 cammot shew that his change of npinion is only gromended upon some infanmens deception or some gxtraordinary mistake.'
'It may he so,' said Brenda - 'I hope it is so ; that I in hope it is so, iny desire to see you thins in private nuty well prove to you. But it is difficult - in short, it is imponswible -.. for me to explain to yon the cause of ny father's reventment. Norna has sp,ken with him concerning it boldly, and 1 fear they parted in displeasure ; and you well know no light matter could cause that.
'I have observed,', said Mordaunt, 'that your fither is munt attentive to Norna's counsel, and more eomplaisunt to her peenliarities 'han to those of others; this I have ohserved, though he is no willing believer in the supernatural yualities' to which she lavs clain.'
'They are related distantly,' answered Brenda, 'anul were friends in youth; nay, as I linve hearl, it was once sulpuseed they nonld have been married ; but Norna's peculiarities sluwel themselves immediately on her father's leath, and there was itl end of that matter, if ever there was anything in it. But it is certain nuy father regards her with much interest ; and it is, 1 fear, a sign how deeply his prejndices reapectivg yon must ho rooted, since they have in sone degree 'quarrelled in your accomint.'
'Now, bi, 'is mpon yom, Brenda, that yon have called deven prejudices,' said Mertom, warmly and hastily - ' $n$ thon innid hlessings on you! Yon were ever gentle-hearted: you conld mot have maintained even the show of menkiness ' long.'
'It was indeed but a show,' said Brenda, softening gradually into the fami'iar tone in which they had conversed from infancy 'I conld never think, Mordanit - never, that is, serimsly leelieve, that yout eonld may anght makind of Minma ur if me.
'And who dares to say I have!' snidl Mordannt, giving way to the matnmel impetnosity of his misposition - 'who dares to suy that I linve, mind ventures at the sume time to hope that I will suffer his tongne to remain in safety betwixt his juws: By St. Magnis the Martyr, I will feed the hawk with it !'
' Nay, now,' sail Brenda, 'yomr nuger mily territies me. and will force me to lenve yon.'
'loave me,' naid lie, 'withomt telling either the calnmmy or the nume of the villanoms calmminator:
'()h, there are more than ome,' answered Brenda, 'that lmse possessed my father with an opinion - which I cannot 1 , if tell yon - but there are more than one who say - - -
'Were they hundreds, Brendh, I will do no less to '. In than I hove said. Sacred Martyr: to accuse me uf speaking minkindly of those whom I most respected and vinhed muder Heaven. is will back to the npartment this instant, and yomr father shall do me right before all the worlh.'
'Do not go, for the love of Henven!' maid Bremla --. ' In mot go, as yon would not render me the most mulnpyy wretch in existence!'
' 'l'ell me then, at least, if I guess aright,' maid Morilami, ' when I mmo this Cleveland for one of those who have slandered me?'
' No - no,' said Brenda, vehempntly, 'you rin from one errur into another more dangerons. Yon say you are my friend I an villing to be yous-be still in ofoment and henr what I have to say; our interview ...i lasted bi:t too long already, and every additional woment ..ngs additional dnnger with it.'
'Tell me, then,' said Mertrin. much softened by the $\mathbf{i}^{\text {mor }}$ girl's extreme appr 'monsion an $\therefore$ distress, 'what it is that yon require of me ; and ase me ine, is impossible for yon to ank anght that I will not do my very nttermost to 'omply with.'
'Well, then, this captain,', mid Brema - 'this Clevelanil-'
'I knew it, by Henven!' said Mordant: 'my minol assmed me that that fellow was, in one way or other, at the bottom of all this mischief and mismderstanding
' If yon camot be silont and patient for an instant,' replied Brenda, 'I must instantly puit youl. What I mount to say harl III relation to yon, but to annther - in ome worl, to ny sister

Minna. I have nothing to say concerning her dislike to you, but an anxious talc to tell concerning his attention to her.'
'It is obvious, striking, and marked,' said Mordaunt ; 'anl, unless my eyes deccive nuc, it is received as welcome, if, indeel, it is not returned.'
'That is the very cause of my fear,' said Brcuda. 'I, tow, was struck with the external appearance, frank manners, and romantic conversation of this man.'
'His appearance!' said Mordannt; 'he is stout and wellfeatured enough, to he sure; hut, as c!d Sinclair of Quendale said to the Spanish admiral, "Farcie on his face! I have seen many a fairer hang on the Borough Moor." Fron his manners, he might be captain of a privatcer; and, by his conversation, the trumpeter to his own puppet-show : for he speaks of little else than his own exploits.'
'You are mistaken,' answered Brenda: 'he speaks but till' well on all that he has seen and learned; besides, he has really: been in many distant countries and in many gallant actions. and he can tell them with as much spirit as modesty. Y,.il would think you saw the flash and heard the report of thr guns. And he has other tones of talking too - about the de lightful trees and fruits of distant climates; and how the people wear no dress, through the whole year, half so warm as our summer, gowns, and, indeed, put on little except cambric and muslin.'
'Upon my word, Brenda, he does seem to understand the business of amusing, young ladics,' replied Mordaunt.
'He does, indeed,' said Brcuda, with great simplicity. 'I assure you that, at first, I liked him better than Minna did: and yet, though she is so much cleverer than I am, I know more of the world than sle does; for I have seen more of cities, having been ouce at Kirkwall; besides that I was thrice at Lerwick, when the Dutch ships were there, and so 1 shoull| not be very easily deceived in people.'
'And pray, Brenda,' said Mertoun, 'what was it that made you think less favourably of the young fellow, who seenis to be so captivating?'
'Why,' said Brenda, after a moment's reflection, 'at first he' was inuch livelier ; and the stories he told were not quite sin melancholy or so tcrrible ; and he langhed and danced more.'
'And, perhaps, at that time, danced oftener with Brenda than with her sister?' added Mordaunt.
' No - I am not sure of that,' said Brenda ; 'and yet, to speak plain, I eould have no suspieion of him at all while he was altending quite equally to us hoth; for you know thu then he eomld have been no more to us than yournelf, Mordanut Mertom, or young Swaraster, or muy "ther youm man in the islands.'
'But, why then,' said Mordanit, 'should yon nut see hime, with patienee, heeome acquanted with yomr sister? lle is wealthy, or seems to be so at least. Yom say he is accomplished and pleasant. What else would you desire ina lover for Minna?
'Morlaunt, yon forget who we are,' suid the maiden, assmuing an air of consequenee, which sat as gracefully upon her simplicity as did the different tone in which she hail spoker hitherto. 'This is a little world of ours, this Zetland, inferior, perhaps, in soil and clinate to other parts of the earth, at least so strangers say ; but it is our own little world, and we, the danghters of Magnus 'Iroil, hold a first rank in it. It would, I think, little beoome us, who are descended from sea-kings and jarls, to throw ourselves a way upon a stranger, who eomes to our cuast, like the eider-duek in spring, from we know not whene, and nay leave it in autum, to go we know not where.
'And who may, ne'ertheless entiee a Zetland golden-eye to aeeompany his migration,' said Mertoun.
'I will hear nothing light on sueh a subjeet,' replied Brenda, indignantly. 'Minna, like myself, is the danghter of Magmus 'Troil, the friend of strangers, but the father of Hialthand. He gives them the hospitality they need; but let not the proudest of them think that they ean, at their pleasure, ally with his house.'
She said this in a tone of eonsiderable warmth, which she instantly softened, as she added, ' No, Mordaunt, do not suppose that Minna Troil is eapable of so far forgetting what she owes to her father and her father's blood as to think of marrying this Cleveland ; but she may lend an car to him so long as to destroy her future happiness. She has that sort of mind into which some feelings sink deeply. You remember how Cllia Storlson used to go, day by day, to the top of Vossdale Hearl, to look for her lover's ship that was never to return? When I think of her slow step, her pale cheek, her eye, that grew dimuner and dimmer, like the lamp that is half extinguished for lack of oil ; when I remember the fluttered look of somethinit like hope with which she ascended the elifl at morning, and the deep, dead despair which sat on her forehead when she returned-when I think on all this, can you wonder that I fear for Mima, whose heart is formed to entertain, with such deep-rooted fidelity, any affection that may be implantel in it ?'

THE PIRATE

'I do not wonder,' said Mordannt, eagerly sympathising with the poor girl; for, hesides the tremulous expression of her voice, the light could almost show him the tear which trembled in her eye, as she drew the picture to which her fancy had assimilated her sister - 'I do not wonder that you shoull feel and fear whatever the purest affection can dictate ; and if yon can but point out to me in what I can serve your sisterly leve, yon shall find me as ready to venture my life, if necessary, its I have been to go out on the crag to get yon the exgs of the guillemot; and, believe me, that whatever has been toll to your father or yourself of my entertaining the slighitest thoughts of disrespect or unkindness is as false as a fien!l could devise.'
'I believe it,' said Brenda, giving him her hand - 'I believe it, and my bosom is lighter, now I have renewed my confidence in so old a friend. How you can aid us, I know not ; but it was by the advice, I may say by the commands, of Norna thitt I have ventured to make this communication; and I ahnewt wonder,' she added, as she looked around her, 'that I have lail courage to carry me through it. At present you know all that I can tell you of the risk in which my sister stands. Loork after this Cleveland; beware how yon 'puarrel with him, since you must so surely come by the worst with an experienced soldier.'
'I do not exactly understand,' said the youth, 'how that should so surely be. This I know, that, with the goorl limhlis and good heart that God hath given me, ay, and with a shum cause to boot, I am little afraid of any quarrel which Cleveland can fix upon me.'
'Then, if not for your own sake, for Minna's sake,' saill Brenda - 'for my father's - for mine - for all our sakes, awoil any strife with hin; but be contenterl to watch him, and, if possible, to discover who he is, and what are his intentions towards us. He has talked of going to Orkney to inquire after the consort with whom he sailed; but day after day and week after week passes, and he goes not ; and while he keeps my father company over the bottle, and tells Minna romantic stories of foreign people, and distant wars, in wild and unknown regions, the time glides on, and the stranger, of whom we know nothing except that he is one, becones gradually clower and more inseparably intimate in our society. And now fare well. Norna hopes to make your peace with my father, and entreats you not to leave Burgh-Westra to-morrow, huwever cold he and my sister may appear towards you. I too,' she said, stretching her hand towards him, 'mnst wear a face of cold friendship as towards an unwelcomed visitor, but at heart we are still Brenda and Morlaunt. And now separate quickly, for we must not be seein together.'
She stretched her hand to him, but witlddrew it in some slight eonfusion, laughing and blushing, when, by a nittural impulse, he was about to press it to his lips. He endeavoured for a moment to detain her, for the interview had for him a degree of fascination which, as often as he had hefore been alone with Brenda, he had never experienced. But she extricated herself from him, and again signing an adien, and pointing ont to him a path different from that which she was lierself athout to take, tripped towards the house, and was soon hidden firm his view by the acelivity.
Mordaunt stood gazing after her in a state of mind to which, as yet, he had been a stranger. The dubions nentral sround between love and friendship nay be long and safely trodden, until he who stands upon it is suddenly called upon to recognise the authority of the one or the other power ; and then it most frequently happens that the party who for years supposed himself only to be a friend finds himself at once transformed into a lover. 'That sueh a change in Mordaunt's feelings should take plaee from this date, although he himself was unable exactly to distinguish its nature, was to be expected. He found himself at once received, with the most misuspieions framkness, into the eonfidence of a beautiful and fascinating young woman, by whom he had, so short a time before, imagined hinself despised and disliked; ;und, if anythin! could make a change, in itself so surprising anul :o pleasmg. yet more intoxicating, it was the guileless and open-licartel simplicity of Brenda, that cast an enchantment over everything which she did or said. The scene, too, might have hat its elfect, though there was little occasion for its aill. But a fair face looks yet fairer under the light of the moon, and a sweet voice sounds yet sweeter among the whispering somuls iff a summer night. Mordaunt, therefore, who had by this time returned to the honse, was disposed to listen with unusual patience and complacency to the enthusiastic declamation pronounced upon moonlight by Claud Halcro, whose eestasies land been awakened on the subject by a short turn in the open a undertaken to yunlify the vapours of the good liqour, which he had not spared during the fostival.

THE PIRATE

'The sun, my boy,' he said, 'is every wretched labourer's day-lantern : it comes glaring yonder, out of the east, $t$ innnmon up a whole world to labour and to misery; whicreas the merry moon lights all of us to mirth and to love.
'And to madness, or she is much belied,' said Mordaunt, ly way of saying something.
'Let it be so,' answered Halcro, 'su she does not turin us melaneholy mad. My dear young friend, the follss of this painstaking world are far too anxious about possessing all their wits, or having them, as they say, about them. At leint I know I have been often called half-witted, and I anm sure I have gone through the world as well as if I had double the quantity. But stop - where was I! Oh, touehing and concerning the moon; why, man, she is the very soul of luve null poetry. I question if there was ever a true lover in existence who had not got at least as far as " 0 thou," in a, somuet in her praise.'
'The moon,' said the factor, who was now begimiur t. speak very thick, 'ripens corn, at least the old folk said sin: and she fills nuts also, whilk is of less matter - sparge mers, pupri.'
' A fine - a fine,' said the Udaller, who was now in his altitudes; 'the faetor speaks Greek. By the bones of my hily: namesake, St. Magnus, he shall drink off the yawl fill if punel, unless he gives us a song on the spot!'
'Too mueh water drowned the miller,' answered Triptolenu:. ' My brain has more need of draining than of being drenclecl with more liquor.'
'Sing, then,' said the despotic landlord, 'for no one shall speak any other language here save honest Norse, jolly lutcli, or Danske, or broad Scots, at the least of it. So, Eric Scannbester, produce the yawl, and fill it to the brim, as a chare for demurrage.'
Ere the vessel could reach the agriculturist, he, sceing it under way and stecring towards him by short tacks (for Seambester himself was by this time not over stealy in his course), made a desperatc effort, and began to chant or rather to croak forth, a Yorkshire harvest-home ballad, which his father used to sing when he was a little mellow, and whieh went to the tune of 'Hey, Dobbin, away with the wagron.' The rueful aspect of the singer, and the desperately discordant tones of his voice, formed so delightful a contrast with ine jollity of the words and tune, that honest Triptolemus affirled the same sort of annusement which a reveller might give by appearing on a festival-day in the holyday cuat of his grandfather. The jest concluded the evening, for even the mighty and strong-headed Magnus himself had confessed the intluence of the sleepy gorl. The guests went off as they best might, each to his separaie crib and resting-place, and in a short time the mansion, which was of late so noisy, was hushed into perfect silence.

THE PIRA'TE

CHAPTER XVII

They man their hoats, and all the young men arm With whatsoever might the monsters harm ; Pikes, halberds, spits, and darts, that wound afar, The tools of prace and inplements of war. Now was the time for vigoruls lads to show What love or honour could incite then to ; A goodly theatre, where rocks are round With reverend age and lovely lasses crown'd.

Battle of the Summer Islands.

THE morning which suceeeds such a feast as that of Magnus 'Troil usually laeks a little of the zest which seasoned the revels of the preeeding day, as the fashim. able reader may have observed at a public breakfast during the race-week in a country town; for, in what is called the hest society, these lingering moments are usually spent by the company each apart in their own dressing-rooms. At BurghWestra, it will readily be believed, no such space for retirement was afforded; and the lasses, with their paler cheeks, the elder dames, with many a wink and yawn, were compelled to meet with their male companions, headaches and all, just three hours: after they had parted from each other.

Eric Scambester had done all that man eould do to suplly the full means of diverting the ennui of the morning meal. 'The board groaned with romins of hing beef, made after the fashion of Zetland - with pasties - with baked meats - with fish, dressed and cured in every possible manner ; nay, with the: foreign delicacies of tea, coffee, and chocolate; for, as we have alrealy had oceasion to remark, the situation of these islames made them early acquainted with varions artieles of foreigi luxury, which were, as yet, hut little known in Seotland, where. at a mueh later period than that we write of, one poumd if green tea mas dressed like eabbage, and another converted intn a vegetable sance for salt beef, by the ignorance of the gowe housewives to whom they had been sent as rare presents.

Besides these preparations, the table exhibited whateve. mighty potions were resorted to by bons cioums, under the facetions name of a 'hair of the dog tlat bit yon.' 'Ihere was the potent Irish usquebaugh - right Nantz - gemine Schiedam aquavita from Caithess - and Goklen Wasser from Hamburgh ; there was rum of formidable antignity, and cordials, firom the Leeward Islands. After these details, it were needless to mention the stout home-brewed ale, the (ierman mon! and sclowartz heer; and still more wonld it be beneath our dignity to dwell upon the inmmerable sorts of pottage and flummery, together with the bland and varions preparations of milk, for those who preferred thinner potations.

No wonder that the sight of so much good cheer awakened the appetite and raised the spirits of the fatigued revellers. I'he young men began immediately to seek out the'r partnens of the preceding evening, and to renew the suall calk which had driven the night so merrily away ; while Magnus, with his: stont old Norse kindred, encouraged, by precept and example, those of elder days and graver mood to a substantial flirtation with the good things before thell. Still, however, there was it long period to be filled up before dimer; for the most protracted breakfast cannot well last above an hour ; and it was to he feared that Cland Halcro merlitated the oceupation of this vacant morning with a formidable recitation of his own verses, besides telling, at its full length, the whole history of his introduetion to glorious Johu Dryden. But fortune relieved the gnests of Burgh-Westra from this threatened infliction, by sending then means of amusement peculiarly suited to their taste and habits.

Most of the guests were using their toothpicks, some were heginning to luik of what was to be done next, when with haste in his step, fire in his eye, and a harpoon in his ...mm, Frice Scambester eame to announce to the company that there was a whale on shore, or nearly so, at the throat of the voe! Then you might have seen such a joyous, boisterons, and universal bustle as only the love of sport, so deeply implanted in our nature, ean possibly inspire. A set of comitry squires, about to beat for the first woodeocks of the season, were a comparison as petty in respect to the glee as in regard to the importance of the object. The battue upon a strong cover in Ettrick Forest, for the destruction of the foxes : the insurrection of the sportsmen of the Lennox, when one of the duke's deer gets out from Inch-Mirran ; nay, the joyous rally of the fox-chase itself, with all its blithe accompaniments of hound and lurn, fall infinitely short of the animation with which the grallant mins of Thmle set off to encounter the monster whom the sea hat sent for their amusement at so opportme a conjuncture.

The multifarious stores of Burgh-Westra were rummagel hastily for all sorts of arms which could be nsed ous surth nu occasion. Harpoons, swords, pikes, and halberils fell til the lot of some ; others contented thenselves wilh hay forks, yirs, and whatever olse could be found, that was at once hom anil sharp. Thus hastily equipped, one division, muler the cmin mand of Captain Cleveland, hastened to man the honts which lay in the little haven, while the rest of the party hurviel hy land to the seene of action.

Poor T'riptolemus was interrupted in a plan which lie, ton, haul forned against the patience of the Zetlanders, antl whinll was to have consisted in a lecture upon the agriculture anil the cippabilities of the country, by this sudden lubbub, which put an end at once to Halcro's poetry and to his no less formidahle prose. It may be easily imagined that he too's very little interest in the sport which was so suddenly substituted fir liilucubrations, and he would not even have deignerl to lave looked upon the active scene which was about to take place, had he not been stimulited thereunto by the exhortations of Mistress Baby. 'Pit yoursell forward, man,' said that prowidout person - 'pit yoursell forward; wha kens whare a blewsing may light? They say that $a^{\prime}$ men share and share equils: aquals in the creature's ulzie, and a pint o't wad be worth siller, to light the cruise in the lang dark nights that they speak of. Pit yoursell forward, man - there's a graip to ye faint heart never wan fair lady; wha kens but what, when it : fresh, it may eat weel eneugh, and spare butter?'

What zeal was added to 'I'riptolemus's motions by the prospect of eating fresh train-oil instead of butter, we know not: but, as better might not be, he brandished the rural implement (a stable-fork) with whieh he was armed, and went down to wage battle with the whale.
The situation in which the enemy's ill fate had placed him Was partieularly favourable to the enterprise of the islanders. A tide of unusual height had carried the mimal over a larye bar of sand, into the voe or creek in which he wats now lyins. So soon as he found the water ebthing, he became sunsilile if his danger, and had made desperate efforts to get over the shallow water, where the waves liroke on the bar ; but hitherto he had rather injured than inended his condition, laving got himself partly agromid, and lying therefore particulurly exposed to the meditated attack. At this moment the enemy came down npon him. I'he front ranks consisted of the yonng und lmurly, arned in the miscellanoons mumer we have described; while, to witness and aminate their effortw, the young women, and the elderly persous of both sexes, took their phace amonr, the rocks which overhung the scene of aetion.
As the boats had to double a little healland ere they opened the inouth of the voe, those who came by land to the shores of the inlet had tine to make the necessary recomoissances upon the force and situation of the enemy, on whon they were abont to commence a simultaneous attack by land and sea.
This duty the stout-hearted and experiencel general, for so the Udaller might be terned, would entrnst to no eyes but his own; and, indeed, his extermal appearance and his sage condnet rendered him alike qualified for the command whieh he enjoyed. His gold-laced hat was exehanged for a bearskin cap, his suit of hiue broadcloth, with its scarlet liming, and loops, and frogs of bullion, had given place to a rel flamel jacket, with buttons of black horn, over whieh he wore a seal-skin shirt curiously seamed and plaited on the bosom, suel as are used by the Esquimaux, and sometimes by the Greentand whale fisthers. Sea-boots of a formidable size completed his dress, and in his land he held a large whaling-kuife, whieh he brandishel, as if inpationt to employ it in the opreration of ' tlinehing' the huge :ummal whieh lay before them - that is, the aut of separating its flesh from its bones. Upon eloser examination, however, he was obliged to eonfess that the sport to which he had condneted his friends, however much it eorresponded with the nagnificent scale of his hospitality, was likely to be attended with its own reeuliar dangers and difficulties.
The animal, upwards of sixty feet in length, was lying perfeetly still, in a deep part of the voe into which it hat weltered, and where it scemed to await the return of tide, of which it was probably assured by instinct. A comeil of ex $x$ pericnced harpooncrs was instantly called, and it was agreend that an effort should be made to nowsise the tail of this tompind leviathan, by easting a cablo aromil it, to be made fast by anchors to the shore, and thms to secure against his escape, in ease the tide should make before they were able to despatch lim. 'Threc boats were destined to this delicate pieee of service, me of which the Udaller hinuself proposed to command, while Cleveland mud Mertomn were to direct the two others. This Ining decided, they sat down on the strand, waiting with impuntienee until the naval part of the foree should arrive in the vee. It was during this interval that 'I'riptolemms Yellowley, atter mensuring with his eyes the extruordinary size of the whale, observed that, in his poor mint, 'A wain with six owrin, in with sixty owsen either, if they were the owsen of the comintry, conld not drag siecun a huge ereature from the water, where it wass now lying, to the sea-beach.'
I'rithing as this remark may seem to the reader, it was comneeted with a subject which mlways fired the blond of the old Vidaller, who, glaneing upon 'l'riptulemus a yuick anil tarn lowk, asked him what the devil it signified, supprosing a hmmbral oxen eould not drag the whale upon the beach? Mr. Yellnwley, though not umelt liking the tone with which the rnestim was put, felt that his dignity and his profit eomprelled himin t" minswer as follows: ' Nay, sir, you know yoursell, Master MaymuI'roil, and every one knows that knows anything, that whalesof siecan size as may not be masterfinly dragged on share hy the instrumentality of one wain with six owsen are the right anil property of the admiral, who is at this time the same mindle lord who is, moreover, chamberlain of these isles.'
'And I tell you, Mr. Triptolemns Yellowley,' sail the Udaller, 'as I would tell your master if he were here, that every man who risks his life to bring that fish ashure shall liave an equal share and partition, aceording to our ancient anll lovenble Norse eustom and wont; nay, if there is so mumithis: woman looking on, that will but toueh the cable, she will he purtuer with us; ay, and more than all that, if she will hun say there is a reason for it, we will assign a portion to the halne that is unborn.'
'The strict principle of equity whieh dietated this last arrangenent oecasioned langliter among the men, anil mine slight coufusion among the women. The faetor, hwwever, thought, it slame to be so easily daunted. 'Suum ruinur,' tribuito,' said he : 'I will stand for my lord's right anel ney "wnu.'
'Will you ?' replied Magms; 'then, by the Martyr's bones, you shall have no law of partition but that of Goul amil st. Olave, which we had before cither factor, or treasurer, or chamberlain was heard of! All shall share that lend a haun, ant never a one else. So you, Master Factor, shall be bnsy as well as other folk, and think yourself lucky to share like other folk. Jump into that boat (for the boats had by this time pulletl round the hradhurd), and yom, my lads, make way for the fhetor in the sem-sheets: he shall be the first man this blessed day that shall strike the fish.'

The lomil, muthoritative voice, muld the lahhit of absolnte command inferred in the Cilaller's while mumer, together with the conseions want of finvoirer:s mid backers mulogat the rest ,f the eompany, rendered it dithicult for 'l'riptolemis to evale smuliance, although he was thins nhont to he phaced in u ituition equilly novel and perilons. He was still, however, hesitating, and attempting an explanation, with $n$ voice in which anger was qualified by fear, and both thinly disguised muler an ittempt to be jocular, and to represent the while as a jest, when he heard the voice of Bahy mmmering in his car, - Wail he lose his share of the ukie, nurd the lank Zetlaul winter coming on, when the lightest day in December is not so elear as a moonless night in the Mearns !'
'I'lis domestic instigation, in aldition to those of fenr of the Cilaller and shame to seem less eonrageons than others, so intlamed the agrieulturist's spirits that he shook his 'graip' aloft, and entered the boat with the air of Neptime himself, carrying on high his trident.
The three Loats destined for this perilous serviee now upproacherl the dark mass, which lay like an islet in the deepent part of the voe, and suffered them to approaeh withont showing any sign of animation. Silently, and with such preeuntion as the extreme delieacy of the operation required, the intrepid :alventurers, after the failure of their first attempt, mid the expenditure of considerable time, succeeded in custing a eable around the borly of the torpid monster, und in carrying the ends of it ashore, when an hundred hands were instantly elnHoved in seeuring them. But, ere this was acemplished, the tide began to make fast, and the Uidaller informed his assistant.s that either the fish nast be killed, or at least greatly wommend, ere the depth of water on the bar was sufficient to float him, or that he was not unlikely to eseape from their joint prowess.
'Wherefore,' saill he, 'we must set to work, and the factor slall have the honour to make the first throw.'
The valiant Triptolemus caught the worl ; and it is necessary to say that the patienee of the whale, in suffering himself to be noosed without resistance, had abated his terrors, and very minch lowered the ereature in his opinion. He protested the fislo had no more wit, and scareely more activity, thin a harck suait; and, inflnenced by this undue contempt of the alversary, he v"I. xill- 12

'IHE PIRATE

waited weither for a furthor sigmul, nor a better weapon, mir a more suitable pwsition, but, rising in his energy, hurled hix gruip with all hix force mganst the mifortumate monster. 'lhe frats hand not yet retrated from him to the diskace nevessary to ensure mafely when this injudieionss conmencenent of "t war twok place.
Magnus Troil, who hal ouly jesten with the fucior, and hal reserved the lannching the first spear against the whale tos some much more skilful hame, lud just time to exchim, 'slinel ywner. selves, hady, or we are all swamped!' when the numster, mumel at once from inaetivity by the blow of the fuetor's missile, hew, with a noise revembling the explosion of a stenu-engine, a hume shower of water into the air, and at the same time began tu lind the waves with his tail in every direction. The boat in which Magnus presidel received the showor of brine which the mimal sponted aloft : mid the ailventurons Triptolouns, who hand a full share of the immersion, was no much astonished mult trreifiel by the conseruences of his own valurons deed that he thabled backwards annongat the feet of the people, who, ton busy to attend to him, were actively engaged in getting the lanat into shomal water, out of the whale's reach. Here he lay for some minutes, tramplet on by the feet of the boatmenn, until they lay on their oars to bale, when the U'daller orderod them t", "lll io shore and land this spare hand, who had commenced the fisthing so imaspiciously.

While thix was doing, the other boats had also pulled wit to safer distance, mull now, from these vell as from the shure, the unfortunate mative of the deep wus overwhelued by all himls of missiles: harpoons mid speurs flew agninst lum on all sides guns were fired, m:d each varions means of annoyanre plied which could excite him to exhanst his strength in aseless raye. When the animal found that he was locked in by shalluws oin all sides, and beenme sensible, at the sume time, of the strain of the cable on his borly, the convulsive efiorts which he made tu escape, accompanied with sommds resembling deep anul hind groans, would have moved the compassion of all but a practiend whale-fisher. The repeated showers which he spouted int., the' air began now to be mingled with blood, and the waves whirl surrounded him assumed the same erimson appearance. Meantime, the attempts of the assailants were redonbled; but Murdunt Mertoman and ('selund, in particular, exerted themedins to the uttermon, c en inding who should display mote sumate iu approaching the monster, so tremendous i: its asonies, and shomid :- fict the most deep and dendly wommls upon its huge lonlk.
The contest neemed it last pretty well over ; for, althongh the animal contimed from time to time to make frantic exertions fir liberty, yet its strengit "ppeared summin exhmsted, that, even with the assistance of the tide, which hand mow riven consilerably, it was thonght it emolla sarcely extricate itself.
Magnins gave the signal to venture nearer tio the whale, calling out at the same time, 'Close in, hads, he is not loulf so mad nuw. The factor miny look for " winter's oil for the two lamps at Harfra. Pull clove in, hads.
lire his orders conld he , ibeyed, the other two thats had antiniputel his purpone ; and Mordanut Mortomin, cager to distiuguish himualf above Clevelami, had, with the whole strength he possessed, planged a lanti-pike into the body of the animal. Buit the leviathan, like a mition whowe resonrces appear tutally exhansted by previons losses nud ealanities, collected his whole remaining foree for an effirt whieh proved at once desperate and successful. The womad last received han probnbly reached throngh his extermal defences of blubber, und attamed some very sensitive part of the system ; for he roared aloml, as he sent to the sky a mingled sheet of brine and blond, and smapying the strong cable like a twig, overset hertoun's boat with a blow of his tail, shot himself, by a mighty effort, over the bar, upon which the tide had now risen considerably, and made ont to sea, carrying with him a whole grove of the muplements which had been planted in his body, and leaving behind him, on the waters, a dark red trace of his course.
'There goes to sea your cruise of oil, Master Yellowley,' naid Magnus, 'and yon mist consume minton : net or go to bed in the dark.
'Operam et oleum perdidi,' muttered Tripto!emus: 'but if they cutch one whale fishing again, I will consent that the fish *hall swallow me as ho did Jonah.'
'But where is Mordant Mertom all this while?' exclaimed Chaud Halcro; and it was instantly perceiven that the youth, who had been stumed when his hoat was stove, was mable to swim to shore as the other sailors did, and now flosten senseless upon the waves.

We have noticed the strange mud inhuman prejnaliere which reusered the Zetlanders of that periond muwilling th: a- int those whom they saw in the act of drowning, thought that is the c.ann ity to which the islanders are most frequently expmend. Three men, however, soared above this superstition. The first was Claud Halcro, who threw himself from a small rock headlong into the waves, forgetting, as he himself afterwards statel, that he could not swim, and, if possessed of the harp of Arion, had no dolphins in atteulance. The first plunge which the pet made in deep water reminding him of these deficiencies, he was fain to cling to the rock from which he had dived, and was at length glad to regain the shore, at the expense of a ducking.

Magmus 'I'roil, whose honest heart furgot his late condiess towards Mordaunt, when! he saw the youth's danger, wonll instantly have brought him more effectual assistance, but Fric Scambester held him fast.
'Hout, sir - hout,' exclained that faithful attendant, 'cap. tain Cleveland has a grip of Mr. Mordaunt ; just let the twa strangers help ilk other, and stand by the upshot. The light of the country is not to be quenched for the like of them. Bide still, sir, I say. Bredness Voe is not a bowl of punch, that a man can be fished out of like a toast with a long spoon.'

This sage remonstrance would have been altogetleer lust upon Magnus had he not observed that Cleveland had, in fact. jumped out of the boat and swam to Mertoun's assistance, ithil was keeping him afloat till the boat came to the aid of b,ith. As soon as the immediate danger which called so londly fir assistance was thus ended, the honest Udaller's desire to render aid terminated also ; and recollecting the cause of offence which he had, or thought he had, against Mordaunt Mertumi, he shook off his butler's hold, and, turning round scornfully frim the beach, called Eric an old fool for sinpposing that he curel whether the young fellow sank or swam.
Still, however, amid his assuned indifference, Magnus coulld not help peeping over the heads of the circle which, snmmumbing Mordaunt as soon as he was brought on shore, were charitably employed in endeavouring to recall him to life; and he was not able to attain the appearance of absolnte muconern mutil the young man sat np on the beach and showed phainy: that the accident had been attended with no material "wnse yuences. It was then first that, cursing the assistants: fir wint fiviur the lad a glass of brandy, he walked sullenly away, wio if tutally unconcerned in his fate.
The women, always accurate in observing the tell-tale em.. tions of each other, failed not to remark that, when the sisters of Burgh-Wentra saw Murdant immersed in the waves, Minme grew its pale ats death, while Brenda nttered suceresive shichs of terror. But, though there were sone nods, winks, and hints: that auld acquaintance were not easily forgot, it was, on the whole, candidly admitted that less than such marks of interest could scarce have been expeeted when they saw the companion of their early youth in the act of perishing before their cyes.
Whatever interest Murdaunt's condition excited while it seemed perilous, bergan to abate as he recovered himself; and when his senses were fully restored, only Claud Hakero, with two or three others, were standing by lim. About ten paces off stood Cleveland - his hair and clothes dropping water, and his features wearing so peculiar an expression ats inmediately to arrest the attention of Mordaunt. There was a suppressed smile on his cheek, and a look of pride in his eye, that inmplied liberation from a painful restraint, and something resembling gratified seorn. Claud Halcro hastened to intimate to Mordannt that he owed his life to Clevelind : and the youth, rising from the ground, and losing ail other feelings in those of gratitude, stepped forward with his hand stretched out, to offer his warmest thanks to his preserver. But he stopped short in surprise, as Cleveland, retreating a pace or two, folded his arms on his breast and declined to accept his proffered hand. He drew back in turn, and gazed with astomishment at the ungracious mamer, and ahmost insulting look, with which Cleveland, who had formerly rather expressed a frank cordiality, or at least opemess of bearing, now, after having this rendered him a most important serviee, chose to receive his thanks.
'It is enough,' said Cleveland, observing his surprise, 'and it is unnecessary to say more abont it. I have paid back my debt, and we are now equal.'
'You are more than equal with me, Captain Cleveland,' answered Mertom, ' because you endangered your life to do for me what I did for you without the slightest risk; hesides,' he added, trying to give the diseourse a more pleawant turn, 'I have your rifte-gun to boot.'
'Cowards only conut danger for any point of the game,' said Cleveland. 'banger has been my consort for life, and saited with me on a thonsand worse voyages; and fir filles, I have enongh of my own, and you may see, when yon will, which can use them best.'
There was something in the tone with which this wals saill that struck Mordannt strongly : it was 'miching malicho,' as Hamlet says, 'and meant miselief:' (leveland sitw his sumprive, came close up to him, and spoke in a low tone of wice : 'Hark ye, my young brother. There is a custom anongst us gentle. men of fortune, that, when we follow the same chase, anl take the wind out of each other's sails, we think sixty yarls if the sea-beach and a brace of rifles are no bad way of making our odds even.'
'I do not understand you, Captain Cleveland,' said Mordaunt.
'I do not suppose you do - I did not suppose you would,' said the captain ; and, turning on his heel, with a smile that resembled a sneer, Mordaunt saw him mingle with the guents, and very soon beheld him at the side of Minna, who was talking to him with animated features, that seemed to thank him for his gallant and generous conduct.
'If it were not for Brenda,' thought Mordaunt, 'I almust wish he had left me in the voe, for no one seems to care whether I am alive or dead. Two rifles and sixty yards of sea-beathis that what he points at? It may come; but not on the lay he has saved wy life with risk of his own.'
While he was thus musing, Eric Scambester was whispering to Halcro, 'If these two lads do not do each other a miscliuef, there is no faith in freits. Master Mordaunt saves Clevelan! well. Cleveland, in requital, has turned all the sunshine of Burgh-Westra to his own side of the house ; and think what it is to lose favour in such a house as this, where the pmonch. kettle is never allowell to cool! Well, now that Cleveland in his turn has been such a fool as to fish Mordaunt out of the voe, see if he does not give him sour sillocks for stock-fish.
'Pshaw - pshaw !' replied the poet, 'that is all old womenis fancies, my friend Eric ; for what says glorious Dryden - sainted John - -

> The yellow gall that in your bosom floats Engenders all these melancholy thoughts.'

[^89]a father ; now Captain Cleveland, d' ye see, takes his glass, like au honest fellow and a gentleman.'
'Rightly reasoned, and in thine own division,' said Halcro ; and, breaking off their conversation, took his way back to BurghWestra, to which the guests of Magnus were now returning, discussing as they went, with much enimation, the various incidents of their attack upon the whale, and not a little scandalised that it should have baffled all their exertions.
'I hope Captain Donderdrecht of the "Eiintracht" of Rotterdam will never hear of it,' said Magnus; 'he would swear, donner and blitzen, we were only fit to fish flominders.' ${ }^{1}$

[^90]
CHAPTER XVIII

> And helter-skelter have I rode to thee, And tidings do I bring, and lucky joys, And golden times, and happy news of price.
> Ancient Ristol.

FORTUNE, who seems at times to bear a conscience, whel the hospitable Udaller some amends, and accorlindy repaid to Burgh-Westra the disappointment weavineal by the unsuccessful whale-fishing by sending thither, on the evening of the day in which that incident happened, nol less a person than the jagger, or travelling merchant, a- he stylel himself, Bryce Snailsfoot, who arrived in great poup, himself on one pony, and his pack of goods, swelled to nearly donble its usual size, forming the burden of another, which was lell by a bare-headed, bare-legged boy.
As Bryce announced himself the bearer of important news, he was introduced to the dining-apartment, where (firr that primitive age was no respecter of persons) he was permitted to sit down at a side-table, and amply supplied with $p^{m}$, visions and good liquor; while the attentive hospitality of Magnus permitted no questions to be put to him, until, hisi hunger and thirst appeased, he announced, with the sense of importance attached to distant travels, that lie harl just resterday arrived at Lerwick from Kirkwall, the capital of (irkney; and wonld have been here yesterday, but it blew hard off the Fitful Heal.'
'We had no wind here,' said Magnus.
'There is somebody has not been sleeping, then,' said the pedlar, 'and her name begins witl $N$; but Heaven is alu, ive all.
'But the news from Orkney, Bryce, instead of croakinss alhnit a capful of wind?'
'Such news,' replied Bryee, 'as has not been hearl this tlinty years - not since Cromwell's time.'
'There is not another Revolution, is there ?' said Halcro:

- King Janes has not come back, as blithe as King Charlie din, has lic ?'
'It's news,' replied the pedlar, 'that are worth tweuty kings, and kingdoms to boot of them; for what grood did the revoln. tions ever do us? and I daresay we itave seen a doacn, great and sma'.'
'Are any Indiamen come north about ?' said Magnus 'Iroil.
'Ye are nearcr the mark, fowd,' said the jagger ; 'but it is mae Indiaman, bnt a gallant armed veescl, clokefu' of merchandise, that they part with so easy that a decent man like mysell cam afforl to give the country the best penny worths yon ever saw ; and that you will say when I open that pack, for I comm to carry it back another sort lighter than when I bronght it here.'
'Ay - ay, Bryce,' said the U'daller, ' you must have had good bargains if you sell cheap; but what ship was it?'
'Cannot justly say. I spoke to nobody but the captain, who was a disercct man; but she had been down on the Spanish Main, for she has silks and satins, and tobacco, I warrant yon, and wine, and no lack of sugar, and bounie-wallies baith of silver and gowd, and a bonny dredging of gold dust into the bargain.'
'What like was she?' said Clcveland, who seemed to give murch attention.
'A stout ship,' said the itincrant merchant, 'schooner-rigged, suils like a dolphin, they say, carries twelve guns, and is pierced for twenty:'
'Did you hear the captain's name ?' said Clcveland, speaking rather lower than his usual tone.
' 1 just ca'd him the captain,' replied Bryce Snailsfoot ; 'for 1 nuake it a rule never to ask questions of them I deal with in the way of trade; for there is nany an honest captain, begging your pardon, Captain Cleveland, that does not care to have his name tacked to his title ; and as lang as we ken whint bargains: we are making, what signifies it wha we are makint them wi, ye ken ?'
'Bryce Snailsfoot is a cautious man,' said the Udaller, laush ing: 'he knows a fool may ask more questions than a wise man catres to answer.'
'I have dealt with the fair tradcrs in my day,' replied Snailsfoot, 'and I ken nae use in blurting braid mit with a man's name at every moment ; but I will nhind this gentle? man to be a gallant commander - ay, and a kind one ton; fir

THE PIRATE

every one of his crew is as brave in apparel as himself nearly: the very foremast-men have their silken scarfs - I have seen many a lady wear a warse, and think hersell nae sma' drink and for siller bittons, and buckles, and the lave of sic vanities, there is nae end of then.'
'Idiots!' mutterel Cleveland between his teeth; and then added, 'I suppose they are often ashore, to show all their bravery to the lasses of Kirkwall?'
' Ne'er a bit of that are they. The captain will scarce let then stir ashore without the boatswain go in the lowat as rongh a tarpaulin as ever swabb'd a deck, and yon may as weel catch a cat without her claws as him withont his ruitlass and his donble brace of pistols about him ; every man stanls as such in awe of him as of the commander himsell.'
' 'That must be Hawkins, or the devil,' said Cleveland.
'Aweel, captain,' 'replied the jagger, 'be he the tane or the tither, or a wee bit o' baith, mind it is you that gave him these names, and not me.'
'Why, Captain Cleveland,' said the Udaller, 'this may prove the very consort you spoke of.'
'They must have had some good luck, then,' said Clevelaurl, 'to put them in better plight than when I left them. Dil they speak of having lost their consort, pedlar ?'
'In troth did they,' said Bryce ; 'that is, they said sume. thing about a partner that had gone duwn to Davie Jones in these seas.'
'And did you tell them what you knew of her?' saill the Udaller.
'And wha the deevil wad hae been the fule, then,' suil the pedlar, 'that I suld say sue? When they kend what cimme of the ship, the next question wad have been about the carto: and ye wad not have had me bring down an arned vessel on the coast to harrie the poor folk about a wheen rags of duls that the sea flung npon their shores?'
'Besides what might have been found in your own pack, yon scoundrel!'s said Magnus Troil - an observation which pro. duced a loud langh. The Udaller conld not help joining in the hilarity which applauded his jest; but, instantly compusius his countenance, he said, in an umsually grave tome, 'Yom may langh, my fricuds; but this is a matter which lminge both a curse and a shame on the country ; and till we leatin to regard the rights of them that suffer by the winds and waves, we shall deserve to be oppressed and hay-ridden, as we inave been and are, by the superior strength of the strangers who rule us.'
The company hung their heads at the rebuke c: Jagmus Irviil. Perhaps some, even of the better ciciss, mighi be cull science-struck on their own accomit; and nll of them were sensible that the appetite for plunder, on the part of the temants and inferiors, was not at all times, restrained with sufficient strictucss. But Clevelund made answer gaily, 'If these honest fellows be my conrades, I will answer for them that they will never trouble the country about a parcel of clests, hammoeks, and such trumpery that the Roost may have washed ashore jut of my poor sloop. What significs to them whether the trash went to Bryce Sinailstioot, or to the bottom, or to the devil? So unbuckle thy pack, Bryce, and show the ladies thy cargo, and perhaps we may sec something that will please them.'
'It cannot be his consort,' said Brenda, in a whisper to her sister ; 'he would have shown more joy nt her appearance.'
'It must be the vessel,' answered Minna; 'I saw his eye plisten at the thought of being again united to the partner of his dangers.'
'Perhaps it glistened,' said his sister, still apart, 'at the thought of leaving Zetland; it is difficult to guess the thought of the heart from the glance of the eye.'
'Judge not, at least, unkinlly of a friend's thought,' said Minna; 'and then, Brenda, if you are mistaken, the fault rests not with you.'
During this dialogue, Bryce Smailsfoot was busied in uncoiling the carefully-arranged cordage of his pack, which anwunted to six good yards of dressed seal-skin, curiously couplicated and secured by all manner of knots and buckles. He was eonsiderably interrupted in the task by the Vdaller and others, who pressed him with questiuns respecting the stranger vessel.
'Were the officers often ashore? and how were they received by the people of Kirkwall?' said Magnus 'Troil.
'Excellently well,' answered Bryce Snailsfoot; 'and the captain and one or two of his men had becn at some of the vanities and dances which went forward in the town; hut there had been some word about customs, or king's duties, or the like, and some of the higher folk, that took upon them ats magistrates, or the like, had had words with the ceiptain, mul he refused to satisfy them; and then it is like he wats mome coldly looked on, and he spoke of carrying the ship romed to Strommess, or the Ianghope, for she lay under the guns of the battery at Kirkwall. But he (Bryee) thonght she wand hide at Kirkwall till the summer fair was over, for all that.

'I'he Orkuey gentry,' said Magnus 'I'roil, 'are alway: in :t harry to Iriw the Seotch eollar tighter romml their uwn nechs, Is it not cnongh that we mist pay "seat", and "wattle," which were all the pinblic dues under yur old Norse govemument : Imit must they come over us with king's dnes anl customs besilen: It is the part of an honest man to resist these things. I lave dune so all my life, and will do so to the end of it.

There was a loud jubilee and shont of applause among the guests, who were (some of them at least) better pleasel with Magnus 'I'roil's latitndinarian principles with resprect to the pnblic revenne (which were extremely natural to those living in so seechaled a situation, and subjected to many additional exactions) than they had been with the rigonr of his julyment on the snbject of wrecked goods. Bnt Minma's inexperienerel feelings carried her farther than her father, while she whispereen to Brenda, not unheard by Cleveland, that the tame spirit of the Oreadians had missed every chance which late incildents had given them to emancipate these islands from the scontish yoke.
'Why,' she said, 'should we not, muder so many changes as late times have introduced, have seized the opportmity th shake off an allegiance which is not justly due from ns, anil to retnrn to the protection of Demmark, our parent comitry? Why should we yet hesitate to do this, but that the gentry of Orkney have mixed families and friendship so much with our invaders that they have become dead to the throb of the heroic Norse blood which they derived from their ancestom:?
The latter part of this patriotic speech happened to reach the astonished ears of our friend Triptolemus, who, having a sincere devotion for the Protestant succession, and the Revolntion as established, was surprised into the ejaculation, 'As the old cock crowis the young cock learns - hen, I shombly sat, mistress, and I crave your pardon if I say anything amis: in either gender. But it is a happy country where the father declares against the king's customs, and the danghter against the king's erown! and, in my judgnent, it can end in naething but trees and tows.'
'Trees are scarce among us,' said Magnus ; 'and for rupes, we need them for our rigging, and camot spare them to le shirt-collars.
'And whoever,' said the captain, 'takes umbrage at what this young lady says had better keep his ears and tongue for a safer enployment than such an adventure.
'Ay - ay,' said 'I'riptolemus, 'it helps thi matter much to speak tritlis whilk are as moelcone to a prond stomaeh as wet clover to a cow's, in a land where lads are realy to draw the whittle if a lassie but looks awry. But what manners are to be expected in a country where folk call a plengh-sock a markal?
'Hark ye, Master Yellowley,' said the captain, suiling, 'I hope my mamers are not among those abnses which yon come hither to reform ; any experiment on them may be dangerons.'
'As well as difficult,' said 'I'riptolemus, drily ; 'but fear nothing, Captain Cleveland, from my remonstranees. My labours' regard the men and things of the earth, and, not the wen and things of the sea : you are not of my element.'
'Let us be friends, theu, ofd clod-compeller,' said the captain.
'Clod-compeller!' said the agrientturist, bethinking himself of the lore of his carlier days. 'Clod-compeller ipw cloudcompeller, veфeג $\eta \gamma$ eféta Zei's - Cirucum est ; in which voyage came you by that phrase?'
'I have travelled books as well as seas in my day,' said the captain ; 'but iny last voyages have been of a sort to make me forget my early cruises through elassic knowledge. But come here, Bryee; hast cast off the lashing? Come all hands, and let us see if he has auglit in lis cargo that is worth looking пюи.'
With a proud, and at the same time a wily, smile did the crafty pellar display a collection of wares far superior to those which usually filled his packages, and, in partienlar, some stuffs and embroideries of sneh beanty and curiosity, fringel, flowered, and workel, with such art and magnificenee, upon foreign and arabesque patterns, that the sight might have ilazaled a far more brilliant eompany than the simple race of 'Thule. . 111 beheld and admired, while Mistress. Baby Yellowley; holliny up her hands, protested it was a sin even to louk nuen such extravagance, and worse than murler so mueh as to ask the price of them.
Others, however, were more courageons; and the prices demanded by the merchant, if they were rot, as he himself declared, something just more than nothing, slort only of an absolute free gift of his wares, were nevertheless so moderate as to show that he himself must have made an easy acymisition of the goods, judging by the rate at which he offered to part with them. Accordingly, the cheapness of the articles ereated a rapid sale ; for in \%ethuml, as well as elsewhere, wise fiolk buy more from the pridential clesire to secure a gencl hargain than from any real occasion for the purchase. The Lady Glowrowrum bought seven petticouts and twelvo stonnehers on this sole principle, and other matrons present rivalled her in this saga. cious species of economy. The Udaller was also a consider. able purchaser ; but the priucipal constomer for whatever conll please the eye of beanty was the gallant Captain Clevelaml, who rumnaged the jugger's stores in selecting presents fin the ladies of the party, in which Minna and Brenda I'roil were especially remembered.
'I fear,' kaid Magnus 'Iroil, 'that the young women are tu consider these pretty presents as keepsakes, and that all this liberality is only a sure sign we are soon to lose you?
This question seemed to embarrass him to whom it wan put.
'I scarce know,' he said with some hesitation, 'whether this vessel is my consort or no; I must take a trip to Kirkwall to make sure of that matter, and then I hope to returu to Dumus. ness to bid you all farewell.'
'In that case,' said the Udaller, after a moment's panee, 'I think I may carry you thither. I should be at the Kirkwall fair, to settle with the merchants I have consigned my lish tu, and I have often promised Minna and Brenda that they shoulid see the fair. Perhaps also your consort, or these struupers, whoever they be, may have some merchandise that will suit me. I love to see my rigging-loft well stocked with gouls, alunent is much as to see it full of dancers. We will go to Orkuey in my own brig, and I can offer you a hammock, if you will.'

The offer seemed so acceptable to Cleveland that, aiter pouring himself forth in thanks, he seemed determined to nuark his joy by exhausting Bryce Snailsfoot's treasures in liberality to the company. The contents of a purse of gold were trans ferred to the jagger, with a facility and indifference on the part of its former owner which argued either the greatest profu in or consciousness of superior and inexhaustible wealth : so that Baby whispered to her brother that, 'If he could afford to thing away money at this rate, the lad had made a better voyare in a broken slrip than all the skippers of Dundee had made in their haill anes for a twelvemonth past.'
But the angry feeling in which slie made this remarh mat mnch mollified when '? ?eveland, whose object it seemed thia ounl.]
onll atul,
the
evening to be to buy golden opinions of all sorts of men, uprruached her with a garment somewhit resembling in shnue the seouttish phaid, but woven of a sort of wool so soft that it Hit to the toneh as if it were compesed of eider-dowi. 'I'his,' lie said, 'wis a part of a Spanishl haly'n dreses, cenlled a momitlin; at it would exactly fit the size of Mrs. Bahy Yellowley, and wis sery well suited for the fogs of the climate of hethand, he entreated her to wear it for his sake.' 'The lady, with as much comleseending sweetness as her comitenane wis able tu express, mot ouly consented to receive this mark of gallantry, but permitted the donor to arrange the mantilla nimu her projecting anul bony shoulder-blades, where, said Chand Halero, 'It hamg, fir all the world, as if it had been stretched betwixt a comple of cloak-pins.'
While the captain was performing this pieee of courtess, much to the entertainment of the compnny, which, it may tw presumed, was his prineipal object from the beginuing, Mordmut Mertoun made purchase of a sumall golden chaplet, with the private intention of presenting it to Brenda, when he slowld find an opportunity. 'The priee was fixed, and the article laid asille. Claud Halero also showed some desire of possessing a silver box of antique shape, for depositing tolaceo, which he was in the habit of using in eonsiderable quantity. But the lard seldom had current coin in promptitnde, mid. indeed, in his wandering way of life, had little occosion for miy; and Bryce, on the other hand, his laving been hitherto a remly-money trale, protested that lis very moderate profits upon such nure and choiee artieles would not allow of his uffording credit to the purchaser. Mordaunt gathered the import of this conversation from the mode in which they whispered together, while the bard seemed to advance a wislifnl finger towards the box in question, and the cautious pedlar detained it with the weight of lis whole hand, as if he hail been afraid it wonld literally make itself wings und fly into Claud Halero's pocket. Mordannt Mertom at this moment, desirons to gratify an old aegmintance, laid the price of the box on the table, and said he would mit permit Master Halero to purelase that box, as he lad settled in his own mind to make him a present of it.
'I camot think of rubhing yon, my dear yonug friend,' saild the poet ; 'but the truth is, that that same box dues remind me strangely of glorious John's, ont of which I had the homomr to take a pinch at the Wits' Coffee honse, fur which I think more highly of my right-hand finger and thmub than any other part of my berly; only yon must allow me to pay you treck the price when my Urkaster stock-fish come to murket.'
'Settle that as you like betwixt yon,', maid the jagger, tiking up, Murlaunt's money ; 'the lxox is bought annl soll.?
'Anel how dare yon sell over ngain,' Naill Captain (levellanl, suddenly interfering, 'what yon alrealy lanve sold to me!'
All were surprised at this interjection, which was lasetily made, us Cleveland, havinus turined fromin Mistress Bahy, hail become sulddenly, amb, as it seemed, not without emotion, anari what articles Bryce Smilsfiot was now disposing of. Plin this short nuld fierce question the jagger, afraid to contradict : eustoner of his description, answered only by stamuering, that the 'Lorl knew he meant nae oflence.'
'How, sir! no oflenee!' said the seaman, 'and dispose of myy property ?' extending his hand at the same time to the bux mil chaplet; 'restore the young gentleman's money, and learn to keep your course on the meridian of honesty.'

The jagger, confinsed and reluetant, pulled out his leathern poueh to repay to Mordanit the money he had just deprevitul in it, but the youth was not to be so satisfied.
'IThe articles,' he sail, 'were bought and sold - thesir were your own woris, Bryee Suailsfoot, in Master Halero's hearime: and I wilh sulfer neither you nor my other to deprive me if my property.'
'Four property, young man 1' said Cleveland. 'It is mine: I spoke to Bryce respecting them an instant before I turned from the table.'
'I - I - I had not just heard dis'tinei' . ' said Biyce, evidently unwilling to oflend either party.
'Come - eome,' suid the Uilaller, 'we will have no quarrelling about baubles; we shall be summoned presently to the rigerimis loft' - so he used to call the apmetment insed as a ball-rom 'and we must all go in good-humonr. 'The things shall remain with Bryce for to-night, and to-norrow I will myself settle whom they shall belong to.'

The laws of the Udaller in his own house were absolute as thuse of the Medes. 'Ihe two yonng men, regarding each onther with looks of sullen displeasure, drew off in diffierent directims.

It is seldom that the second day of a prolonged festival equals the first. The spirits, as well as the limbs, are jaleld. and unequal to the renewed expenditure of unimation inn i exertion; and the dance at Burgh-Westra was sustained with much less mirth than on the preceding evening. It wit yit nin hour from midhight, when even the reluetant Magnun. 'Troil, after regretting the degeneracy of the times, and wishing he conld transfise into the moslern Hialthaders some of the vigonr which still mimated his own frame, funnd himself compelled to give the sigual for general retreat.
Snst as this took place, Hatero, leading Mordanit Mertoun a little aside, said he had a message to him from Captain Clevelaud.
'A messago:' said Morilamit, his heart heating somewhat thick as he spoke. 'A challenge, I suppose?'
'A challenge:' repeatel Ihalero; 'who ever heard of a challenge in our quiet islands? Do you think that I look like a carrier of challenges, mad to yon of all men living? am mine of those fighting feols, ns glorionss John calls them; and it was not quite a messame I had to deliver - only thins far, this Chptain Cleveland, I limd, hath set his heart npon having these articles you looked at.'
'He shall not have them, I swear to yon,' replied Mordaunt Mertomil.
' Nay, but hear me,' said Halcro; 'it seems thant, by the marks or arms that are mpon them, he knows that they were firmerly his property. Now, were yon to give me the hox, as you promised, I fairly tell yom I shonld give the man back liis uwII.
'And Breuda might do the like,' thought Mordannt to him. self, and instantly replied alond, 'I have thought hetter of it, my friend. Captain Cleveland slall have the toys he sets such store by, but it is on one sole condition.'

Nay, yon will guil all with your conditions,' said Halern; 'fir, as glorions Jolin says, conditions are but -_'
'Hear me, I say, with patience. My comdition is, that he keeps the toys in exchange for the rille gin I accepted from him, which will leave no olligation between us on either side.
'I see where youn wonld tee: this is Sebastian and Dorax all aver: Well, you may let the jagger know he is to deliver the things to (leveland I think he is mad to have them-and I will let Cleveland know the conditions amexed, otherwise honest Bryce miaght cone by twin piyments instead if one : and I believe his conscience womld not choke men it.

With these words Ilalero went tu seek out Cleveland; while Mordannt, olserving Sinailsfort, who, is: a sort of privileged person, han thrnst himself intw the crowd at the hittom of the dan:ing-rom, went ne to hin, and gave him direetions to [^91]deliver the disputed articles to Cleveland as soon as he had an opportunity.

'Ye are in the right, Maister Mordannt,' said the jawser; 'ye are a prudent and a sensible lad - a calin answer turneth' away wrath; and mysell, I sall be willing to please you in my trifling matters in my sma' way; for, between the Udaller if Burgh-Westra and Captain Cleveland, a man is, as it wree, atween the deil and the deep sea; and it was like that the Udaller, in the end, would have taken your part in the dispute, for he is a man that loves justice.'
' Which apparcutly you care very little about, Master Suail. foot,' said Mordaunt, 'otherwise there could have been III) dispute whatever, the right being so clearly on my side, if youl had pleased to bear witness according to the dictates of truth:
'Maister Mordaunt,' said the jagger, 'I must own there was,' as it were, a colouring or shadow of justice on your side ; mint then the justice that I meddle with is only justice in the way of trade - to have an ell-wand of due length, if it be not stmething worn out with leaning on it in my lang and painful journeys, and to bny and sell by just weight and incasure, twenty-four merks to the lispund; but I have nothing tw, dn, to do justice betwixt man and man, like a fowd or a lawright.' man at a law-ting lang syne.'
'No one asked you to do so, but only to give crilence according to your conscience,' replied Mordamit, not greatly pleased either with the part the jagger had acted during the dispute or the constrnction which he seened to put on hix win motives for yichling up the point.

But Bryce Suailsfoot wanted not his answer. 'My conscience,' he said, 'Maister. Mordaunt, is as tender as ony man's in my' degree; but she is something of a timorsome nature, callun abide angry folk, and can never speak above her breath when there is anght of a fray going forward. Indeed, she hath at all times a suall and low voice.'
'Which yon are not much in the habit of histening to,' sill Mordaunt.
'There is that on your ain breast that proves the contrary,' said Bryce, resthutely.
'In my lrcast!' 'said Mordamt, somewhat angrily ; 'what know I of yon?'
'I said om your breast, Maister Mordamin, and not in it. I am sure nae eye that looks on that waisteoat npon ywur gallant brisket but will say that the merchant who sold such a piece for four dollars had justice and enonsience, an ، a kind heart to a costomer to the boot of a that ; site j ; shonldia be sie thrawart wi' me for having spared the breath of my month in a fool's quarrel.'
'I thrawart!' said Mordannt ; 'pooh, yon silly man! I have no 'quarrel with you.'
'[ am sut of it,' said the travelling-merchant. 'I will quarre' with ins mat!. with my will, least of all with an ohd chston er ; and if you will walk by my advice, you will quarrel nane , ith Captain (leveland. He is like one of yon cutters and slaze: thot have come into lirkwall, that think as little of slicing a man as we do of flinching a whale: it's their trade to fight, and they live by it; and they have the advantage of the like of you, that only take it up at your own hand, and in the way of pastime, when you lae nothing hetter to do.'
'The company had now almost all dispersed; and Mordaunt, laughiug at the jagger's caution, bade him good-night, and went to his own place of repose, which had been assigned to him by Eric Scambester (who acted the part of chamberlain as well as butler) in a sinall room, or rather closet, in one of the outhomses, furnished for the occasion with the ham mock of a sailor.

CHAP'TER XIX

I pass like night from land to land, I have strange power of speech; So soon as e'er his face I see, I know the man that must hear me, To him my tale I teach.

Colemides's Rime of the Ancient Mariner.

THE daughters of Magnus Troil shared the same hed, in a chamber which had been that of their parents hefore the death of their mother. Magnus, who sulfieren grievously under that dispensation of Providence, had beenne disgusted with the apartment. The nuptial chamber was abandoned to the pledges of his bereaved affection, of whmm the eldest was at that period only four years old, or thereabouts; and, having been their nursery in infancy, continned, though now tricked and adorned according to the best fishinn of the islands and the taste of the lovely sisters themselves, to be their sleeping-room, or, in the old Norse dialect, their buwer.

It had been for many years the scene of the most intimate confidence, if that could be called contidence where, in truth, there was nothing to be confided; where neither sister haul it secret ; and where every thonght that had birth in the busimn of the one was, without either hesitation or doubt, contided to the other as spontancously as it had arisen. But, since (leve land abode in the mansion of Burgh-Westra, each of the lovely sisters had entertained tho, ghts which are not lightly or earily: communicated, unless she who listens to them has previnusly assured herself that the contidence will be kintly reveivel. Minna had noticed what other and less interested observers had been mable to perceive, that Cleveland, namely, helld : lower rank in Brenda's opinion than in her own : and Bremba. on her side, thought that. Minma had hastily and mujnaty joined in the prejndices which hat been excited against Murdannt Mertom in the mind of their father. Lath was serville that she was no longer the same to her sister ; and this cunvic-tion was a painful addition to other painful apprehensions which they supposed they had to struggle with. Their manner towards each other was, in outward appearances, and in all the little cares by which affection can he expressed, even more assiduously kind than before, as if both, conscions, that their internal reserve was a breach of their sisterly imion, strove to atone for it by double assidnity in those external marks of affection which, at other times, when there was nothing to hirle, might be omitted withont inferring any conseqnenees.

On the night referred to, in partienlar, the sisters felt more especially the decay of the contidence which used to exist betwixt them. The proposed voyage to Kirkwall, and that at the time of the fair, when persons of every legree in these islands repair thither, either for business or amnsement, was likely to be an important incident in lives usually so simple and miform as theirs; and, a few months ago, Mima and Brenda would have been awake half the night, anticipating, in their talk with each other, all that was likely to happen on so momentous an occasion. But now the subject was just mentioned and suffered to drop, as if the topic was likely to prodnce a difference betwixt them, or to call forth a more open display of their several opinions than either was willing to make to the other.

Yet such was their natural openness and gentleness of disposition, that each sister imputed to herself the fault that there was aught like estrangement existing between them; and when, hir. - finished their devotions and betaken themselves to their ci: souch, they folded each other in their arms, and excth. . i sisterly kiss and a sisterly good-night, they seemed mutually to ask pardon and to exchange forgiveness, althongh neither said a word of offence, either offered or received; and both were soon plunged in that light and yet profonnd repose which is only enjoyed when sleep sinks down on the eyes of youth and innocence.

On the night to which the story relates, both sisters were visited by dreams, which, thongh varied by the moods and habit: of the sleepers, bore yet a strange general resemblance to il other.

Minna dreamed that she was in one of the most lonely reces is of the beach, called Swartaster, where the incessant opere 'on of the waves, indenting a calcareous rock, has formed a deep 'halier,' which, in the langnage of the island, means : subterranean cavern, into which the tille ebhs and Hows. Many of these rnn to an extrnordinary and unascertained depth under ground, and are the secure retreat of cormorants and seals, which it is neither easy mor safe to pursue to their extreme re cesses. Amongst these, this hatier of Swartaster was accomited peculiarly inaecessible, and slumed both by fowlers and by seamen, on aceount of sharp angles and turnings in the cave iteelf, as well as the sunken rocks which renderel it very dangeruns for skiffs or boats to alvance far into it, especially if there was the usual swell of an island tide. From the dark-browed nouth of this cavern, it seemed to Mima, in her drean, that she helutd a mermaid issne, not in the classical dress of a nereid, as in Claud Halcro's mask of the preeeling evening, but with min! and glass in hand, according to popular belief, and lashing ther waves with that long scaly train which, in the traditions of the country, forms so frightful a eontrast with the fair falw, luny tresses, and displayed bosom of a human and carthly fomale of surpassing beauty. She seemed to beekon to Minna, while her wild notes rang sadly in her ear, and denouncel, in pro. phetic sounds, calamity and woe.

The vision of Brenda was of a different deseriptim, yet equally melancholy. She sat, as she thought, in her favimite bower, surrounded by her father and a party of his, unust beloved friends, amongst whom Mordaunt Mertoun was mut forgotten. She was required to sing ; and she strove tw enter tain them with a lively ditty, in which she was acemmed eminently successful, and which she sung with such simple yet natural humonr as seldom failed to produce shouts of lauchiter and applause, while all who conld, or who eould not, silus were irresistibly compelled to lend their voices to the chorns. Bint on this oecasion it seemed as if her own voice refinsel ill its usual duty, and as if, while she felt herself mable to expres the words of the well-known air, it assumed, in her own le-pite, the deep tones and wild and melaneholy notes of Xinna if Fitful Head, for the pnrpose of ehanting some wild Rmis: rhyme, resembling those simg by the heathen priests of ind. when the victim, too often human, was bound to the fatal altar of Odin or of Thor.

At length the two sisters at once started from sleep, anml. uttering a low seream of fear, elaspell themselves in each other:arms. For their fancy had not altogether played them false: the somends whic'. hail suggested their dreans were real, anil sung within their apartment. They knew the voiee well, indeed, and yet, knowing to whom it belonged, their surprise anll fear were scarce the less when they saw the well-known Norna of liitful Head seated by the chimney of the apartment, which, during the summer season, costaneel an irm lamp well trimmed, and in winter a ${ }^{\text {see }}$ of wood or of turl.
She was wra, of in her long and muple garment of wadmaal, and moved her body slowly to and fro over the pale flame of the lamp, as she sung lines to the following purport, i: a slow, sad, and almost an mearthly accent :
> - For leagues along the watery war, Through gulf imd stream my course has been ; The billows know my hunie lay, And smooth their crests to silent green.

> The billows know my Rumic lay, The gulf grows smooth, the strean is still; But human hearts, more wihd than they, Know but the rule of wayward sill.
> One hour is mine, in all the year, To tell my woes, and nite alone : When gleams this magic lamp, 't is liere; When dies the mystic light, 't is gone.
> Daughters of northern Magnus, hail! The lamp is lit, the flane is clear, To yon I come to tell my tale, Awake, atise, my tale to hear !'

Norna was well known to the daughters of "'roil, but it was not without emotion, although varied loy the:r respective dispositions, that they beheld her so unexpectedly, and at such an hour. Their upinions with respect to the supernatural attributes to which she pretended were extrenely different.
Minua, with an unusual intensity of imagination, although superior in talent to her sister, was more apt to listen to, anul delight in, every tale of wonder, and was at all times more willing to admit impressions which gave her fancy scope and exercise, without minutely examining their reality. Brenda, on the other hand, had, in her gaiety, a slight propensity to satire, and was often tempted to laugh at the very circmustances upon which Minna founded her imaginative dreams; aurd, like all who love the ludicrons, she did not readily suffer herself to be imposed upon, or overawell, by pompons pre sions of any kind whatcver. But, as her nerves were weaker and more irritable than those of lier sister, slic often pand involuntary homage, by her fears, to ideas which her reason disowned ; and hence Cland Halero used to say, in reference to many of the traditionary superstitions aromel Burgh-Westra, that Minna helievel then withont trembling, and that Brenlis trembled withont helieving them. In our own more enlight med days there are iew whose mudubting mind and native courage have not felt Mima's high-wrought tone of enthnsiasm ; anil perlaps still fewer who have not, at one time or other, felt, like Brenda, their nerves confess the influence of terrors which their reason disowned and despised.

Under the power of such different feclings, Minna, when the first moment of surprise was over, prepared to spring from leer bell and go to greet Norna, who, she donbted not, had cune on some errand franght with fate; while Brenda, who minly beheld in her a woman partially deranged in her understandin!.! and who yct, from the extravagance of her claims, regarded her as an undefined object of awe, or rather terror, detained her sister by an eager anal terrified grasp, while shic whisperel in her car an anxions entreaty that she would call for assisituluce. But the soul of Minna was too highly wrought up by the crivi at which her fate seemed to have arrived to permit her :i. follow the dictates of her sister's fears; and, extricating herself from Brenda's hold, she hastily threw on a loose nights, wni, and, stepping boldly across the apartuent, while her heart throbbed rather with high excitement than with fear, she thus addressed her singular visitor :
' Norna, if your mission regards us, as your words seell tu express, there is one of us, at least, who will receive its impurt with reverence, but without fear.'
' Nerna - dear Norna,' said the tremulous voice of Brentla. who, fecling no safety in the bed after Minua quitten it, laid followed her, as fugitives crowd into the rear of an advanciut armp, because they dare not remain behind, and who now stumil hal: concealed by her sister, and holding fast by the skirt- of her gown - ' Norna - dear Norna,' saidi she, 'whatever you are to say, let it be to-morrow. I will call Euphane Fea, the housekeeper, and she will find you a bed for the night.'
'No bed for me!' said their nocturnal visitor ; 'no mosing of the eyes for me! They have watched as shelf anm stark appeared and disappeared betwixt Burgh-Westra and Urkney; they have seen the Man of Hoy sink into the sea, and the Peak of Hengeliff arise from it, and yet they have not tasten of slumber; nor must they slumber now till my task is endel. Sit down, then, Mima, and thou, silly trembler, sit down, while

I trin my lamp. Don your elothes, for the tale is long, and ere 't is done ye will shiver with worse than eold.
'Fur Heaven's sake, then, put it off till daylight, dear Norna!' said Brenda; 'the dawn cannot lie far distant, and if you are to tell us of anything frightful, let it be by daylight, and not by the dim glimmer of tinat blne lamp:
'Patience, fool!' said their uninvited gnest. 'Not by daylight should Norna tell a tale that might blot the sun ont of heaven, and blight the hopes of the handred boets that will leave this shore ere noon to emmence their deep-sen fishing ay, and of the hundred families that will await their recurn. The demon, whom the somuls will not fail to awaken, must whike his dark wings over a slipless and a boatless sea, as tre rushes from his momutain to drink the aceents of horror he loves so well to listen to.'
'Have pity on Brenda's fears, good Norma,' said the ehler sister, 'and at least postpone this frightful commmication to another place and honr.'
'Maiden, no!' replied Norna, sternly ; 'it must !e told while that lamp yet burns. Mine is no daylight tale : by that lamp it must be told, which is framed out of the gibbet-irons of the crnel Lord of Wodensvae, who murlered lis brother; aul has for its nourishuent - but be that nameless - enough that its food never came either from the fish or from the fruit ! See, it waxes dim and dimmer, nor minst my tale last longer than its flame endureth. Sit ye down there, while I sit here opposite to yon, and place the lamp betwixt us; for within the sphere of its light the demon dares not venture.
'The sisters obeyed, Mima casting a slow, awe-struck, jet determined look all around, as if to see the leing who, according to the donbtful words of Norna, hovered in their neighbourhood; while Brenda's fears were mingled with some share both of anger and of impatience. Norna pail no attention to either, but began her story in the following words:-
'Ye know, my daughters, that your blood is allied to mine, hut in what degree ye know not; for there was carly hostility betwixt your grandsire and him who had the misfortme to mall me danghter. Let me term him hy his Christian nume of lirland, for that which marks our relation I dare nit bestow. Your grandsire Olave was the brother of Brland. But when the wide udal possessions of their father Rolfe Troil, the most rich and well-estated of any who desicended from the old Norse stock, were divided betwixt the brothers, the fowd gave to Frland his father's lands in Orkney, and reserved for Mave those of Hialtland. Discord arose between the brethren: firs Erland held that he was wronged; and when the law tines,' with the radduen and lawright-men, confirmed the divisin, he went in wrath to Orkney, cursing Hialtland and its inhalhit. ants - cursiug his brother annd his blood.

'But the love of the rock and of the mountain still " mygh on Erland's mind, and he fixed his dwelling not on the soft hills of Ophir or the green plains of Graemsay, but in the will and mountainous Isle of Hoy, ${ }^{2}$ whose summit rises to the .k: like the cliffs of Foulah and of Feroe. He knew - that min. happy Erland - whatever of legendary lore Scald and bard haid left belind thenn ; and to teach me that knowledge, which wis to cost us both so dear, was the elief oecupation of his whine. I learned to visit each lonely barrow, each lofty cairn: to tell its appropriate tale, and to soothe with rhymes in his paise the spirit of the stern warrior who dwelt within. I knew where the sacrifiees were made of yore to Thor and to ()lin! ; wh what stones the blood of the vietins flowed; where stood the diarkbrowed priest; where the crested chiefs, who consulted the will of the idol; where the more distant crowd of inferi, worshippers, who looked on in awe or in terror. The phates most shumed by the timid peasants had no terrors fir me: I dared walk in the fairy circle, and sleep by the magic syrins.
'But, for my misfortunc, I was chiefly fond to linger ilhunt the Dwarfie Stone, ${ }^{8}$ as it is called, a relic of antiquity, whies strangers look on with curiosity and the natives with awe. It is a huge fragment of rock, which lies in a broken and rule valley, full of stones and precipiees, in the recesses of the Waril Hill of Hoy. The inside of the roek has two conehes, hewn ly "110 earthly hand, and havin" a small passage between thenn. The doorway is now open to the weather ; but hevide it lies a large stone, which, adapted to grooves still visible in the entrance, once lad served to open and to elose this extrandinury dwelling, which 'Trolld, a dwarf famous in the Northerus susay. is said to have framed for his own favourite residence. The lonely shopherd avails the place ; for at smurise, high munt, or smimset omisslapen form of the necromantic owner may smmetimes stall be seen sitting by the 1)warfie Stone. I feared mit the apparition, for, Mima, my heart was as bodd and my haml fas as immoent as yonrs. lu my childish conrage, I wisis enn but too presmmptuons, and the thirst after things mattanable [^92]led me, like our primitive mother, to desire increase of knowledge even by prohibited means. 1 longel to possess the power of the voluspue and divining-women of our ancient rave; to wield, like them, command over the elements; and to smmon the ghosts of deceased heroes from their caverns, that they might recite their daring deeds and impart to me their hidden treasures. Olfen, when watching by the Dwartie Stone, with mine eyes fixed on the Ward Hill, which rises above that gloomy valley, I have distinguished, anong the dark rucks, that wonderful earImele, ${ }^{1}$ which gleans ruddy as a furnace to then who view it from beneath, but has ever trecome invisible to him whose darigy foot has sealed the precipices from which it darts its splendour. My vain and youthfinl bresom burned to investigate these and an humdred other mysteries, which the sagas that 1 perused, or learned from Erland, rather indiented than explained; and in my daring mood I called on the lord of the Dwarlie Stome to aid me in attaining knowledge inaccessible to mere mortals.'

'Anl the evil spirit heard your summons?' said Minna, her blood curdling as she listened:
'Hush,', said Norna, lowering her voice, 'vex him not with reproach; he is with us - he hears us even now.'
Brenda started from her seat. II will to Emphane Fea's chamber,' she said, 'and leave you, Minna and Noma, to thinish your stories of hobgoblins and of dwarls at your own leisure. I care not for them at any time, hut 1 wilh not endure them at midnight, and by this pale lamplight.'
She was accordingly in the act of leaving the rom, when her sister detained lier.
'Is this the courage,' she said, ' of her that dishelieves whataver the history of our fathers tells us of supernatmal pronliey? What Norna has to tell concerns the fate, perhaps, of our father and his house ; if I can listen to it, trusting that Gool and my imnocence will protect me from all that is malignant, yon, Bremda, who believe not in such influenee, have surely no. cause to tremble. Credit me, that for the guiltess there is no fear.'
'There may be no danger,' said Brenda, umable to suppres: her matural turn for humour, 'but, as the old jest-bouk says, there is mueh fear. However, Minna, 1 will stay with yon; the rather,' she alded in a whisper, 'that I ann loth to leave you alone with this frightful woman, and that I have a dark staircase and long passage betwixt [us] and Buphanc Fea, else I would have her here ere I were five minutes older.'

[^93]
THE IRATE

'Call no one hither, maiden, upon peril of thy life,' witl Norna, 'and interrupt not my tale aguin; for it camot mul must not be told after that charmed light has ecased to burn.:
'And I thank Heaven,' nail Brenda to herself, 'that the wil burns low in the crinse! 1 am sorely tenipted to lenel it a puff, but then Norna would be alone with nss in the dark, mul that would le worse.'
So saying, she submitted to her fate, nad sat down, determined to listen with all the equanimity which she conld command to the remmining part of Norna's tale, which went on as follows : -
'It happened on a hot snmmer day, and jnst nbout the homr of noon,' continued Noma, 'as 1 sat by the I)warfie Stone, with my eyes fixed on the Ward Hill, whenee the mysterions nuld ever-buruing carbmucle shed its rays more brightly than insual, and repined in my heart at the restricted bounds of human knowledge, that at length I could not help exclaiming, in the words of an aneient saga,
" Dwellers of the monutain, rise,
Trolld the powerfill, Haims the wise !
Ye who taught weak woman's tongue
Words that sway the wise and strong, -
Ye who taught weak woman's haul
How to wield the ungic wand,
And wake the gates on Foulah's steep,
Or lull wild Sumburgh's waves to sleep !
Still are ye yet ? Not yours the power
Ye kuew in Odin's minghtier hour.
What are ye now but emply yames,
Powerful Trolhu, sagucimus Haims,
That, lightly spoken, lightly heard,
Float on the air like thistle's beard?'
'I had scaree uttered these words,' proceeded Noma, 'ere the sky, whieh had been till then umsually elear, grew so suddenly dark around me that it seemed more like midnight than noon. A single flash of lightning showed me at once the desolate landsape of heath, nurass, manntain, and precipine which lay aronnd; a single elap of thmuder wakened all the echoes of the Ward Hill, which continued so long to repeat the sound, that it seemed some rock, rent by the thmuderbolt from the sumnit, was rolling over eliff and preeipice into the valler: Immediately after fell a burst of rain so violent that $I$ wa:
fain to shmu its pelting by ereeping into the interiur of the mysterions stone.
I seated myself on the larger stone conch, which is ent at the farther culd of the cavity, mul, with my eyes fixell on the smaller bed, wearied myself with conjectures respacting the origin and purpene of my simgular place of reftige. Had it hedn really the work of that pewerfil 'Trollid to whin the peetry of the Sealds referreel it? Or was it the temb of some Scanmanam chief, interred with his arms and his wealth, perhaps alse, with his immolated wife, that what he loved beert in life might not in denth be divided from him? Or was it the aborle of pemanese, chosen by some devoted anchorite of later days? Wr the idle work of some wandering mechanic, whom chanee, and whim, and leisure, had throst nipon such an mulertaking? I tell yon the thonghts that then fleated through my brain, that yon may know that whit ensued was not the vision of a prejniticed or prepossessed imagimation, but an apparition, as certain as it was awful.
'Sleep hail gradually crept on me, amidst my luculmations, when I was startled from my slumbers ly a secome clap of thunder; and, when I awoke, I saw, through the dimu light which the upper aperture ahmitted, the minshapely and indistinct lirm of 'Irolld the dwart, seated opposite to me on the lesser ronch, which his spuare and misshapen bulk seemeel absolutely tu fill up. I was startled, but not affrighted ; for the blood of the ancient race of Lachlin was warm in my veins. He spoke ; and his words were of Norse, so old that few, save my father or I myself, could have comprehenden their inpurt - such language as was spoken in theye islands ere Olave phanted the cross on the ruins of heathenism. His meming was dark alsin and obseure, like that which the pagan priests were wont th deliver, in the name of their idols, to the tribes that assembled at the Helgafels.' 'I'his was the import -

> " A thousam wintres lark have flown, Since biet the threshohl of my stone A votaress passil, byy power to own. Visitor hold
> Of the matision of Trollt,
> Maiken hannhty of heart, Who last hither presumed Ungifted, unloonis.
> Thon shalt not lepart :

[^94]
THE PIRATE

The power thou dinst covot O'er termprat and wave,
Shall he thiter, thon promil manden, By hearh antil hy vave,

Ambl hy every whil shore wheh the morthem whot kuow:
Amil the berthern then lave.
Bint thengh this shall te given there, thon deoperitely have.
I doom thee that never the gift then shint have,
Till thon reave thy life'n giver of the gift which he gave."
'I answered him in nearly the same struin; fur the apirit if the muient scalds of uur race was mon me, and, far from frar bing the phantom, with whom I sat conged withins sin hiatron aspace, I felt the impulse of that high courage which thmen the ancient champions and Druidesses upom emintents with the invisilile world, when they thought that the earth In! lomper cuntained onemies wortlyy to be subduod by them. Therefire did I answer him thus - > "Dark are thy worids, and sotere, Thon Iweller in the stone :
> Bitt tretubling amif frar
> To her are miknown,
> Who hath songht thee liere
> In thy Iwelling lone.
> Conue what comes soever, Tho worst I can emblure ;
> Life is but a shout fever, And denth is the cure."

'The demmon scowled at me, as if at once incensed aurl wer. awed; and then coiling himself np, in a thick and anphurwne vapour, he disappeared from his place. I did not, till that moment, feel the intluence of fright, hit then it seized me. I rushel into the open air, where the tempest had passen insay, and all was pure and serenc. After $n$ mument's breathli*: panse, I hasted home, musing hy the way on the words of the [^95]phantom, which I eould not, as often happerne, revall so distincells tin menory at the time as I have lreen winee able to do.

- It may seem strunge that such min aplaritime shoull, in time, have glided from my mind like a vision of the night : lint no it was. I brought myself to letieve it the work of fancy; I thought I hand lived tom mueh in sulitnde, and had given way too much to the feelings inspired by my favomrite stulies. I abandoned thom for a time and 1 mixed with the youth of my age. I was mpon a visit at Kirkwall when I learnel to know your father, whom linsiness haul hrought thither. He ensily fonme access to the relation with whom I livel, who was anxions to compuse, if pussible, the fend which divided our families. Your father, muidens, has been rather lardened than elanged by years: Lie had the name manly form, the same old Norse frankneens of manner and of henrt, the same "pright conrage and hunesty of diepnisition, with mure of the gentle ingenuousness of youth, an enger ievire to plense, a willingness to be pleased, and a vivacity of spirits, which survives not our early years. But thomgh he was thus worthy of lave, and though Erhanl wrate to me nuthorising liis attarch. ment, there was another - a stranger, Mimun, a fital strames rer - fill of arts minkown to ns, and graces which to the plain manners of your father were miknown. Yee, he walkel, indeed, among us like a being of another amal of a sumerion rave. Ye look on me as if it were strange that I should lave had attractions for such a lover: lont I present mothing that con remind yous that Norma of the Fitfinl Heal was onee almined and loved as Ulla 'Troil: the clange hetwixt the animated holly and the eorpse after lecease is scarce more awfinl ambahsolute than I lave sustained while I yet linger on carth. lank on me, mailens - look on me hy this glimmering light. Can ye helieve that these hagrard and weather-wastel fentures; these ryes, which have heen almost emberted to stome hy lowking "pou sishts of terror : these lineks, that, mingled with grey, How strean out, the shattered pemumis of a simking vessel that these, and she to whon they helong, comble onee be the "theets of fond affection? But the wning lamp sinks finst, and let it sink while I tell my infamy. We lived in secret, we met in secret, till I gave the hat pronf of hatal amo of grilty passion! And now hean mut, thon magie glimmer: shime mit " little spaee, thon flame so puwerfin even in thy feebleness; hid him who hovers near ns keep his dark pinime aloof from the cirele thou slost illuminate; live but a little till the worst be told, and then sink when thou wilt into darkness as Hack as my guilt and sorrow!'

THE PIRATE

While she spoke thus, she drew together the reminiming nutriment of the lamp, "and trimmed its decuying flame: then again, with a hollow voice and in broken sentences, pirsinel her narrative.
'I must waste little time in words. My love was discuvered, but not my guilt. Erland came to Pomona in anger, anil transported me to our solitary dwelling in Hoy. Hc commanded me to see niy lover no more, and to receive Magnus, in whom he was willing to forgive the offences of his father, ats my future husband. Alas! I no longer deserved his attachurent ; my only wish was to escape from my father's dwelling, to conceal my shame in my lover's arms. Let me do him justice: he was faithful - too, too faithful; his perfidy would have bereft me of my senses, but the fatal consequences of his fidelity have done me a tenfold injury.'
She paused, and then resumed, with the wild tone of insanity, 'It has made me the powerful and the deypairing sovercign of the seas and winds!'
She paused a second time after this wild cxclamation, and resumed her narrative in a more composed manner.
' My lover came in secret to Hoy, to concert measures. for my flight, and I agret' to meet him, that we might fix the time when his vessel should come into the sound. I left the house at midnight.'

Here she appeared to gasp with agony, and went on with her tale by broken and interrupted scutences. 'I left the house at midnight. I had to pass my father's door, turd I perceived it was open. I thonght he watched us; and, that the sound of my steps might not break his slumbers, I closed the fatal door-a light and trivial action, but, God in Heaven: what were the consequences! At morn the room was fill if suffocating vapour - iny father was dead - deal throngh nimy :cct -dead through my disobedicuce - dead through my infinm: All that follows is mist and darkness - a choking, suffocatinis, stifling mist cuvelopes all that I said and did, all that wats, said and donc, mutil I became assinred that my down was accomplished, and walked forth the calm and terrible heing yon now behold me - the qucen of the elcments- the sharer in the power of those beings to whom man and his passions give sum sport as the tortures of the dog-fish afford the fisherman, when he pierecs his eyes with thorns, and turns him once more into lis native element, to traverse the waves in blindness and arony. ${ }^{1}$ No, maidens, she whom you see before you is impassive to the follies of which your minds are the sport. I an she that lave made the offering - I inn she that bereaved the giver of the gift of life which he gave me: the dark saying lass been interpreted liy my deed, and I an taken from humanity, to be something pre-eminently powerful, preeminently wretched!'

As she spoke thus, the light, whieh had been long quivering, leaped high for an instant, and seemed about to expire, when Noma, interrupting herself, said hastily, 'No more now - he comes - he eomes. Fnough that ye know ne, and the right I have to advise and command you. Approael now, proud spirit! if thou wilt.'
So saying, she extinenished the lamp, and passed out of the apartment with her usual loftiness of step, as Minua could observe from its measured cadence.

[^96]
CHAPTER XX

> Is all the counsel that we two have shared The sisters' vows, the hours that we have spent, When we bave chid the hasty-footed time For parting us - Oh, aud is all forgot?

> Midsummer Fiyht's Dream.

THE attention of Minna was powerfully arrested by thitale of terror, which aecorded with and explained mintuy broken hints respeeting Norna which she had heard from her father and other near relations, and she was for a time so lost in surprise, not unmingled with horror, that she did nut even attempt to speak to her sister Brenda. When, at lensth, she called her by her name, she received no answer, and, on touching her hand, she found it cold as ice. Alarmed to the uttermost, she threw open the lattice and the window-shutters, and admitted at onee the free air and the pale glimmer of the hyperborean smmmer night. She then became sensible that her sister was in a swoon. All thoughts concerning Nurlin, her frightful taln, and her mysterious connexion with tha invisible world, at once vanished from Mima's thoughts, atid she hastily ran to the apartment of the old housekeeper, t11 summon lier aid, without reflecting for a moment what sirflis she might encounter in the long dark passages which sle hat to traverse.
'The old woman hastened to Brenda's assistance, and instantly applied such remedies as her experience suggested; but the punir grr's nervous system had been so much agitated by the horribln, tale she had just heard that, when recovered from her swom, her utmost endeavours to compose her mind could not prevent her falling into a hysterical fit of some duration. This also w:subdued by the experience of old Euphane Fea, who was well versed in all the simple pharinacy used by the natives of Zethum, and who, after administering a composing-draught, distilled frim simples and wild flowers, at length saw her patient resigned tio sleep. Minua stretchell herself beside her sister, kissed bur cheek, and sourted slumber in her turn ; but the more she invoked it, the farther it seemed to fly from her eyelids; and if at times she was disposed to sink into repose, the voice of the involuntary parricide seemed again to somid in her ears, and startled her into conscionsuess.
The early moming hour at which they were accustomed to rise found the state of the sisters different from what might have been expected. A sound sleep had restored the spirit of Brenda's lightsome eye, and the rose on her laughing cheek ; the transient indisposition of the preceding night laving left as little trouble on her look as the fantastic terrors of Nornais tale had been able to impress on her imagination. The looks of Minna, on the contrary, were melancholy, downcast, and apparently exhausted by watching and anxiety. They said at first little to each other, as if afraid of tonching a subject so fraught with emotion as the scene of the preceding night. It was not until they had performed together their devotions, as usual, that Brenda, while lacing Minua's boddice (for they rendered the services of the toilet to each other reciprocally), became aware of the paleness of her sister's looks ; and having ascertained, by a glance at the mirror, that her own did not wear the same dejection, she kissed Minna's cheek, ancu said affectionately, 'Claud Halcro was right, my dearest sister, when his poetical folly gave us these names of Night and Day.'
'And wherefore sbould you say so now ?' said Minna.
' Because we each are bravest in the season that we take our name from: I was frightened welluigh to death by hearing those things last night which you endured with courageons firnuess ; and now, when it is broad light, I can think of them with composure, while you look as pale as a spirit who is surprised by sunrise.'
'You are lucky, Brenda,' said her sister, gravely, 'who can so soon forget such a tale of wouder and horror.'
'The horror,' said Brenda, 'is never to be forgotten, unless one could hope that the unfortunate wonan's excited imagination, which shows itself so active in conjuring up apparitions may have fixed on her an imaginary crime.'
'You believe nothing, then,' said Minna, 'of her interview at the Dwarfie Stone, that wondrous place, of which so numy tales are told, and which, for so many centuries, has been reverenced as the work of a demon, and as his abode?'
'I believe,' said Brenda, 'that our unhappy relative is no impostor ; and therefore I believe that she was at the Dwartie

Stone during a thunderstorm, that shc sought shelter in it, and that, during a swoon, or during sleep perlaps, some dream visited her, c.ncerned with the popmlar traditions with, which she was so conversant ; but I cannot casily believe mure.'
'And yet the event,' said Minna, 'eorresponded to the dark intimations of the vision.'
'Pardon me,' said Brenda, 'I rather think the dream would never have been put into shape, or perhaps remembered at all, but for the event. She told us herself she had nearly forsont the vision, till after her father's dreadful death ; and who shatl warrant how much of what she then supposed herself to remember was not the ereation of her own fancy, disordered as it naturally was by the horrid aecident? Harl she really secu anul conversed with a necromantic dwarf, she was likely to remember the eonversation long enough - at least I an sure I shoull.'.
'Brenda,' replied Minna,' 'you lave heard the good minisister of the Cross kirk say, that human wisdom was worse than filly, when it was applied to mysteries beyond its comprehension ; and that, if we believed no more than we could understand, we should resist the evidence of our senses, which presented us, at every turn, eircumstances as certain as they were unintelligible.'
' You are too learned yourself, sister,' answered Brendi, 'to need the assistanee of the good minister of Cross kirk; but I think his doetrine only related to the mysteries of our religion, which it is our duty to reccive withont investigation or donbt: but in things occurring in common life, as God has bestuwed reason upon us, we cannot aet wrong in employing it. But yon, my dear Minna, have a warmer fancy than mine, and are willing to receive all those wonderful stories for truth, becanse youn love to think of sorcerers, and dwars, and water-spirits, and would like much to have a little trow, or fairy, as the Scot h call them, with a green coat, and a pair of wings as brilliant as the hues of the starling's neek, specially to attend on you.'
'It would spare you at least the trouble of lacing my bouldice.' said Minna, 'and of lacing it wrong, too; for in the heat if your argument you have missed two eyelet-holes.'
'That error shall be presently mended,' said Breulia ; 'iund then, as one of our friends might say, I will haul tight and hulay: - but you draw your breath so deeply, that it will be a difficult matter.'
'I only sighed,' said Minna, in some confusion, 'to think huw soon you can trifle with and ridicule the misfortunes of this: extraordinary woman.'
'I do not ridicule them, Gorl knows!' replied Brenda, sunewhat angrily ; 'it is you, Minna, who turn all I say in truth and kindness to something harsh or wicked. I look on Norna as a woman of very extraordinary abilities, which are very often reconeiled with a strong cast of insanity; and I consider her as better skilled in the signs of the weather than any woman in Zetland. But that she has any power over the elements I no more believe than I do in the nursery stories of King lirick, who could make the wind blow from the point he set his cap to.'
Minna, somewhat nettled with the obstinate incrednlity of her sister, replied sharply, 'And yet, Brenda, this wonnan -half-mad woman, and the veriest impostor - is the persion by whom you choose to be advised in the matter next your own heart at this moment!'
'I do not know what you mean,' said Brenda, colouring deeply, and shifting to get away from her sister. But as she was now undergoing the eeremony of being laced in her turn, her sister had the means of holding her fast by the silken string with which she was fastening the boddice, and, tapping her on the neck, whieh expressed, by its sudden writhe and sudden change to a scarlet hue, as much pettish confusion as she had desired to provoke, she added, more mildly, 'Is it not strange, Brenda, that, used as we have been by the stranger Mordaunt Mertoun, whose assuranee has brought him uninvited to a house where his presence is so unacceptable, you should still look on or think of hin with favour? Surely, that you do so should be a proof to you that there are such things as spells in the country, and that you yourself labour muder thein. It is not for nought that Mordannt wears, a chain of elfin gold; look to it, Brenda, and be wise in time.'
'I have nothing to do with Mordamin Mertomn,' answered Brenda, hastily, 'nor do I know or care what he or any other young mann wears about his neck. I conld see all the gold chains of all the bailies of Elinburgh, that Lady (Glowrowrum speaks so mech of, without falling in fimey with one of the wearers.' And, having thus complied with the female rule of pleading not gnilty in general to such in indietment, she immediately resumed, in a different tone, 'But, to say the truth, Minna, I thiuk you, and all of yon, have judged far too hastily about this young friend of ours, who has been so long our most intimate companion. Mind, Morlamit Mertoun is no more to me than he is to you, who best know how little difference he made betwixt us; and that, chain or no chain, he lived with us like a brother with two sisters; and yet you can turn him off at onee, because a wandering seaman, of whom we know nothing, and a peddling jagger, whon we well know to he a thief, a cheat, and a liar, speak words and carry tales in lis disfavour! I do not believe he ever said he could have his choice of either of us, and only waited to see which was to have Burgh-Westra and Bredness Voc. I do not believe lee ever spoke such a word, or harboured such a thought, as that of making a choice between us.'
'Perhaps,' said Minna, coldly, 'you inay have had reasinil to know that his choice was already detcrmined.'
'I will not endure this!' said Brenda, giving way to her natural vivacity, and springing from between her sister's hands; then turning round and facing her, while her glowimg cheek was rivalled in the deepncss of its crimson by as much of her neck and bosom as the upper part of the half-laced hoddice permitted to be visible. 'Even from you, Minna,' whe said, 'I will not endure this! You know that all my life I have spoken the truth, and that I love the truth; and I tell you that Mordaunt Mertoun never in his life made distinction betwixt you and me, until $\qquad$ , Here some feeling of consciousness stopped her short, and her sister replied, with a smile, 'Until when, Brenda? Mcthinks your love of truth seems choked with the sentence you were bringing out.'
'Until you ceased to do him the justice he deserves,' said Brenda, firmly, 'sinee I must speak out. I have little doult that he will not long throw away his friendship on yon, who hold it so lightly.'
'Be it so,' said Minna; 'you are secure from ny rivalry, either in his love or friendship. But bethink you better, Brenda; this is no scandal of Cleveland's - Cleveland is ineapable of slander - no falseliood of Bryee Snailsfoot; not one of our friends or acquaintanee but says it has been the commen talk of the island, that the daughters of Magnus Troil were patiently awaiting the chuice of the nameless mul hirthlews stranger, Mordannt Mertom. Is it fitting that this should be said of us, the descendants of a Norwegian jarl, and the danghters of the first udaller in Zetland? or wonld it lee modest or maidenly to subnit to it unrescited, were we the meanest lasses that ever lifted a milk-pail ?'
'The tongues of fools are no reproach,' replied Brenda, marmly ; 'I will never quit my own thoughts of an imucent friend for the gossip of the island, whieh can put the worst meaning on the most innocent actions.'
'Hear but what our friends say,' repented Minna ' 'hear hut the Lady Glowrowrum ; hear but Maddie and Clara Groatsettar.'
'If I were to hear Lady Glowrowrmm,' said Brenda, steadily, 'I should listen to the worst tongue in Zetland; and as for Maldie and Clara Groatsettar, they were both hlithe enough to get Mordaunt to sit betwixt them at dinner the day before yesterday, as you might have observed yourself, but that your ear was better engaged.'
' Your eyes, at least, have been but indifferently engaged, Brenda,' retorted the elder sister, 'since they were fixed on a young man whom all the world but yourself believes to have talked of us with the most insolent presumption; and even if he be innocently charged, Lady Glowrowrime says it is unmaidenly and bold of you even to look in the direetion "There he sits, knowing it must confirm such reports.'
'I will look which way I please,' said Brenda, growing still warmer. 'Lady Glowrowrimn shall ueither rule my thonghts, nor my words, nor my eyes. I bold Mordanit Mertoun to be imnocent - I will look at him as streh - I will speak of him as such; ar.i if I did not speak to him also, and behave to him as nsua, it is in obedience to my father, and not for what lady Glowrowrum and all her nieces, had she twenty instead of two, could think, wink, nod, or tattle about the matter that concerns them not.'
'Alas! Brenda,' answered Minna, with calmness, 'this vivacity is more than is required for the defenee of the character of a mere friend! Beware! He who ruined Norna's peace for ever was a stranger, admitted to her affeetions against the will of her family.'
'He was a stranger,' replied Brenda, with emphasis, 'not only in birth but in manners. She had not been bred up with him from her youth; she had not known the gentleness, the frankness of his disposition by an intinacy of many years. He was indeed a stranger, in elaracter, temper, hirth, mameris, and morals; some wandering adventurer, berhaps, whom chance or tempest had thrown num the islands, and who knew how to mask a false heart with a frank brow. My grow sister, take home your own warning. 'There are other strangers at Burgh-Westra besides this poor Mordaunt Mertoun.'

Minna seemed for a moment overwhelued with the rapidity with which her sister retorted her suspicion and her cautinn. But her natural loftiness of disposition enabled her to relly: with assumed composure.
'Were I to treat you, Brenda, with the want of confidence you show towards me, I might reply that Cleveland is min more to me than Mordaunt was; or than young Swaraster, or Lawrence Ericson, or any other favourite guest of ny father's, now is. But I scorn to deceive you, or to disguise my thoughts. I love Clement Cleveland.'
'Do not say so, my dearest sister,' said Brenda, abandminu' at once the air of acrimony with which the conversatim laid been latterly conducted, and throwing her arms rumil lier sister's neck, with looks, and with a tone, of the most carnest affection - 'do not say so, I implore you! I will retumure Mordaunt Mertoun, I will swear never to speak to him agai ।; but do not repeat that you love this Cleveland!'
'And why should I not repeat,' said Minna, disengacing herself gently from her sister's grasp, 'a sentiment in which I glory 1 The boldness, the strength and energy, of his : Miracter, to which command is natural and fear unknown - Hiese very properties, which alarm you for my happiness, are the qualities which ensure it. Remenber, Brenda, that when your foot loved the calm, smooth sea-beach of the summer sea, inine ever delighted in the summit of the precipice when the wavewere in fury.'
'And it is even that which I dread,' said Brenda : 'it is even that adventurous disposition which : i w is urging youl to the brink of a precipice more dangerous than ever was wallod by a spring-tide. This man - do not frown, I will say in! slander of him - but is he not, even in your own partial jullis. ment, stern and overbearing 3 accustomed, as you say, to $\cdot \ldots$, mand; but, for that very reason, commanding where he lats nu" right to do so, and leading whon it would most becone limin tu follow? rushing on danger, rather for its own sake than fin any other object? And can yon think of being yolked with: spirit so unsettled and stormy, whose life has hiflierto been lon! in scenes of death and peril, and who, even while sitting ly your side, cannot disguise his impatience again to engrige in them? A lover, methinks, shonld love his mistress better than his own life ; but yours, my dear Minna, loves her less than the pleasure of inflicting death on others.'
'And it is even for that : love him,' said Minna. 'I an a daughter of the old dames of Norway, who could send their lovers to battle with a smile, and slay them with their own hamls if they returned with dishonour. My hover must seurn the moekeries by which our degraded race strive for distinctim, or must practise them only in sport, anil in earnent of nobler dangers. No whale-striking, hird-nesting favourite for me: my lover must be a sea-king, or what else modern times may give that draws near to that lofty character.'
'Alas, my sister!' said Brenda, 'it is now that I must in carnest begin to believe the furce of spells and of charms. Yon remember the Spanish story which you took fron me long since, hecause I said, in your admiration of the chivalry of the olden times of Scandinavia, you rivalled the extravagance of the hero, ilh, Minua, your colour shows that your conscience checks you, and reminds ycu of the book I mean; is it uore wise, think you, to mistake a windmill for a giant, or the commander of : paltry corsair for a kiempe or a viking?'
Minna did indeed colour with anger at this insinuation, of which, perhaps, she felt in some degree the truth.
'You have a right,' she said, 'to insult ne, because you are possessed of my secret.'
Brenda's soft heart could not resist this charge of unkinduess; she adjured her sister to pardon her, and the natural gentleness of Minna's feelings conld not resist her entreaties.
'We are unhappy, she said, as she dried her sister's tears, 'that we cannot see with the sane eyes; let us not make each other more so by mutual insult and unkindness. You have my secret; it will not, perhaps, long be one, for my father shall have the confidence to which he is entitled, so soon an certain circumstances will permit me to offer it. Meantime, I repeat, you have my secret, and I more than suspect that I have yours in exchange, though you refuse to own it.'
'How, Minna!' said Brenda ; 'would yon have me acknowledge for any one such feelings as you allude to, ere he has said the least word that could justify such a confession?'
'Surely not; but a lidden fire may be distinguishell by heat as well as flame.'
'You understand these signs, Minna,' said Brenda, hangiug down her head, and in vain endeavouring to suppress the temptation to repartee which her sister's remark offered ; 'lnut I cun only say that, if ever I love at all, it shall not be min' il I lave been asked to do so once or twice at least, whieh has nut yet chanced to me. But do not let us renew our yuarrol, and rather let us think why Norna should have told us that horrible tale, and to what she expects it should lead.'

THE PIRATE

'It must have been as a caution,' replied Minua - 'a caution whieh our situation, and, I will not deny it, which nine in particular, might seem to her to call for ; but I am alike strung in iny own innocence c...d in the honour of Clevcland.'

Rrenda wonld fain have replied that sloe did not cmififide so absolutely in the latter security as in the first; lint she was prudent, and, forbearing to awake the former painfil dis. cussion, only rephied, 'It is strange that Noma shoulh have said nothing more of her lover. Surely he could ..ot desert her in the extremity of misery to which he had reducell her ?
'IThere may be agonies of distress,' said Minna, after a punse, 'in which the mind is so much jarred that it ceases to le responsive even to the feelings which have most engrossed it: her sorrow for her lover may have been swallowed up in hurror and despair.'
'Or he may have fled from the islands in fear of our father's vengeance,' replied Brenda.
'If for fear or faintness of heart,' said Minua, lowkiug upwards, 'he was capable of flying from the ruin which lie haid occasioned, I trust he has long ere this sustained the pumish. ment which Heaven reserves for the most base and dustarilly of traitors and of cowards. Come, sister, we are ere this ex pecterl at the breakfast board.'

And they went thither, arm in arm, with much more of confidence than had lately subsisted between them; the little quarrel which had taken place having served the purpose of a bourasque, or sudden squall, which dispels mists anll vitpunts, and leaves fair weather behind it.
On their way to the breakfast apar. ont, they agreed that it was unnecessary, and might be in odent, to communioste to their father the circumstance of tha nocturnal visit, ir tu let him observe that they now knew more than formerly of the melancholy history of Norna.

CHAPTER XXI

But lost to me, for ever lonst those juys, Which reasoll seatters, anul which time destroys. No more the midnight fairy-truin I view, All in the merry memolight tipliug dew. Even the last lingering firtion of the brain, The churchyntd ghost, is now at rest again.

The Library,

THE moral bard, ${ }^{3}$ from whom we borrow the motto of this chapter, has touched a theme with which most readers have some feelings that vibrate meonscionsly. Superstition, when not arrayed in her full horrors, but laying a gentle hand only on her suppliant's head, had charms which we fail nut to regret, even in those stages of society from which her intluence is wellnigh banished by the light of reason and general eilucation. At least, in more ignorant periods, her system of ileal terrors had something in them interesting to ninids which had few means of excitement. This is more especially trie of those lighter modifications of superstitions feelings and practices which mingle in the amusements of the ruder ages, and are, like the auguries of Hallow-e'en in Scotland, considerell partly as matter of merrinent, partly as sad and prophetic earuest. And, with similar feelings, people even of tolerable education have, in our times, sought the cell of a fortune-teller, nun a frolic, as it is terned, and yet not always in a disposition absolutely sceptical towards the responses they receive.

When the sisters of Burgh-Westra arrived in the apartment destined for a breakfast as ample as that which we have described on the preceding morning, and had mulergone a jucular rebnke from the Udaller fir their late attendance, they found the coupany, most of whom haul already breakfasted, elagaged in an ancient Norwegian custom of the cluracter which we have just described.

It seems to have been borrowed from those poems of the

[^97]Sculds in which champions und heroines are so often repre． sentel as seeking to know their destiny from some sorcereex on propinetess，who，as in the legen！called by（iray the Insmint aj＂Olin，awakens by the forre of Runie rhyme the manilling revealer of the dowin of fite，and compels from her minmes often al dubions import，but which were then belienill in express ane rhadow of the events of finturity．
An｜＇ibyl，Buphane l＇en，the honsekeeper we have alrealy menimien，was installen in the recess of a large window，stanti o？sci，then sened by bearskins and other miscellaneous drapery， s．＂：＇sil．it something the appearmee of a laplanter－hint， ma．inmurnduted，like a confessional chair，with ath merture． Wh h，＂．nitted the person within to hear with ense whatever que：：1．．．Wmill 1 ia ！nit，thongh not to see the querist．Here seat ：．＂．．n I．：＂．．．．＂sibyl，was to listen to the rhythmieal iny wimis．$\quad . \quad$ suld be made to her，and return an extem－ pura dense．．．ir．＇The drapery was supposed to prevent har from sceins in what individuals she was consulted，and the inte led or as ulental reference which the answer given muler such circumstances bore to the sitnation of the person by whin the question was asked often furnished foud for hughter，innl sometimes，as it happened，for more serious reflection．The sibyl was usually chosen from her possessing the talent if improvisation in the Norse poetry； 110 musual accomplish． ment，where the minds of many were stored with ohd verse． and where the rules of metrical composition are uncommuly simple．The questions were also put in verse ；but as this power of extenporaneons composition，thongh common，embld not be supposed nuiversal，the methinn of an interpreter minght be used by any querist，which interpreter，holding the comsulter of tine oracle by the hand，and standing by the place from which the oraetes were issued，had the task of rendering intu verse the sulbject of iuquiry．${ }^{1}$
On the present occasion，Cland Halcro was summoned，hy the universal voice，to perform the part of interpreter：annt． after shaking his head and muttering some mpolugy for demy of memory and poetical powers，conti．dicted at mee hy hi wiwn conseious sumite of confidence and by the general shont of the company，the light－hearted old man cane forward to phay his part in the proposed entertainment．

But，just as it was about to commence，the arrangement of parts was singularly altered．Norna of the Fitful Head，whon

[^98]every one excepting the two sisters believed to be at the dis. tance of many miles, suddenly, and withont greeting, entered the apurtment, walked majestically up to the brurskin tabernaile, and signed to the fenmale who wns there seatel to alsicate her sunctuary. 'The old wommu cane firth, shaking her heand null looking like one overwhelmed with fear ; mor, infleed, were there many in the company who saw with absolute compesure the sulden appearance of a jerson so well knowil and so generally dreaded us Norna.
She pansed a moment at the entrance of the tent ; ancl, as she raised the skin which formed the entrance, she lorked il to the north, as if imploring from that quarter a train of inspiration ; then signing to the surprised guests that they might :ipproach in succession the shrine in which she was about to install herself, she entered the tent, and was slirouded from their sight.
But this was a different sport from what the company had meditated, and to most of them seemed to present so much more of earnest than of game that there was no alacrity slown to consult the oracle. The chameter and pretensions of Nurua semed, to almost all present, tho serions for the part which sle had assumed ; the inen whispered to each other, aurl the women, according to Claud Halero, realised the description of ghlerious John Dryden -

With horror shuddering, on a heap they ran.
The pause was interrupted by the loud, manly voice of the I'daller. 'Why does the game stand still, iny masters? Are you afraid because my kinswoman is to play our voluspa? It is hindly done in her, to do for ns what nene in the isles can du ww well; and we will not baulk our spurt for it, hut rather go on the inemier.
There was still a panse in the company, and "I amme 'I'ruil mulded, 'It shall never be said that my kin wonan sat in leer bower unhalsed, as if she were some of the whe momt:inn giantesses, and all from faint heart. I will speak first myself: But the rhyme comes worse frim my tonghe than when was a score of years younger. 'lan! Halero, you must stand by me.'

Hand in hand they approach the shrine of the supposel silyl, and after a moinent'- "onsultation together, Hatero thus expressed the query of his friend and yntron. Now, the C Claller, like nuany persons of consequence in Zetland, who, as Sir Robert

THE PIRATE

Sibbald has testified ${ }^{1}$ for them, had begun thus early to apply both to commerce and navigation, was concerned to some extent in the whale-fishery of the season, and the bard had been directed to put into his halting verse an inguiry concerning its success.

Claud Halcro

> Mother darksome. mother dread, Dweller on the Fitful Head, Thou canst see what deeds are done Under the never-setting sun. Look through sleet, and look through frost, Look to Greenland's caves and coast, -
> By the iceberg in a a ail
> Chasing of the swarthy whale;
> Mother doubtful, mother dread,
> Tell us, has the good ship sped!

The jest seemed to turn to earnest, as all, bending their heads around., listened to the voice of Norna, who, withuit a moment's hesitation, answered from the recesses of the tent in which she was inclosed:

Norna

The thought of the aged is ever on gear, On his fishing, his furrow, his flock, and his steer ; But thrive may his fishing, flock, furrow, and herd, While ihe aged for anguish shall tear his grey beard.
There was a momentary pause, during which Triptolemus had time to whisper, 'If tell witches and as many warlocks were to swear it, I will never believe that a decent man will either fash his beard or himself about anything so long as stock and crop goes as it should do.'

But $t$ : - voice from within the tent resumed its low, monotonous tone of recitation, and, int 3 rrupting farther commentary, proceeded as follows :

> Norna

The ship, well-laden as bark need be, Lies deep in the furrow of the Iceland sea; The breeze from Zetland blows fair und soft, And gaily the garland is fluttering aloft ; Seven good fishes have spouted their last, And their jaw-bones are hanging io yard and mast; Two are for Lerwick, amil two for Kirkwall, And three for Burgh-Westra, the choicest of all. ${ }^{2}$

[^99]' Now the powers above look down and protect us!' said Bryce Snailsfoot ; 'for it is mair than woman's wit that has spaed out that ferly. I saw them at North Ronaldsha that had seen the good bark, the "()have" of Lerwick, that our worthy patron has such a great share in that she may be called his own in a manner, and they had bromed ${ }^{1}$ the ship, and, as sure as there are stars in heaven, she answered then for seven fish, exact as Norna has telled us in her rhyme !'
'Unph - seven fish exactly! and yon heard it at North Ronakdsha?' said Captain Cleveland, 'and I suppose told it as a grood piece of news when you came hither?'
'It never crossed my tongue, Captain,' answered the yedlar. 'I have kend mony chapmen, travelling-merchants, and such like, neglect their goods to carry clashes and clavers npinh down from one countryside to another ; but that is no traffic of mine. I dinna believe I have mentioned the "()lave's" having maile up her cargo to three folks since I crossed to Dinnrossness.'
'But if one of those three had spoken the news over again, and it is two to one that such a thing happened, the old larly prophesies upon velvet.'

Such was the speech of Cleveland, addressed to Magnus Troil, and heard without any applause. The Vialler's respect for bis country extended to its superstitions, and so did the interest which he took in his unfortunate kinswoman. If ${ }^{1,} \mathrm{O}$ never rendered a precise assent to her high supernatural pretensions, he was not at least desirous of hearing them disputed by others.
'Noma,' he said, 'his cousin (an emphasis on the word), held no communication with Bryce Snailsfoot or his acpuintances. He did not pretend to explain low she came by lier information; but he had always remarked that Scotsmen, and indeed strangers in general, when they came to Zetland, were ready to find reasons for things which remained sufficiently obscure to those whose ancestors hall dwelt there for ages.'

Captain Cleveland took the hint, and bowed, withont attempting to defend his own scepticism.
'And now forward, my brave hearts,' said the lidaller; 'anll may all have as good tidings as I have! 'Three whales camm,t but yield - let me think how many logshearls -_'

There was an obvious reluctance on the part of the gnests to be the next in consulting the oracle of the tent.

[^100]'Gude news are welcome to some folks, if they came frue the deil himsell,' said Mistress Buby Yellowley, addressing the Lady Glowrowrum - for a similarity of disposition in solne respects had made a sort of intimacy betwist them - ' but I think, my leddy, that this has ower mickle of rank witcheraft in it to have the countenance of douce Christian folks lile you and me, my leddy.'
'There may be something in what you say, my dame,' replied the good Lady Glowrowrum ; 'but we Hialtlanders are no just like other folks; and this woman, if she be a witch, being the Fowd's friend and near kinswoman, it will be ill ta'en if we haena our fortunes spaed like a' the rest of thenn ; and sae my nieces nay e'en step forward in their turn, and nae harm dune. They will hae time to repent, ye ken, in the course of nature, if there be ony thing wrang in it, Mistress Yellowley.'

While others remained under similar uncertainty and apprehension, Halcro, who saw by the knitting of the old Udaller's brows, and by a certain impatient shuffle of his right foot, like the motion of a man who with difficulty refrains from stanying, that his patience began to wax rather thin, gallantly declared that he himself would, in his own person, and not as a procurator for others, put the next query to the pythoness. He paused a minute, collected his rhymes, and thus addressell her :

Olaud Halcro
Mother doubtful, mother dread, Dweller of the Fitful Head, Thon hast conn'd full many a rhyme, That lives upon the surge of tinue: Tell me, shall my lays be sung, Like Hacon's of the Golden Tongue, Long after Halcro's dead and gone? Or shall Hialtland's minstrel own One note to rival glorious John?
The voice of the sibyl immediately replied from her sanctuary -

Norna

The infant loves the rattle's noise ; Age, double childhood, hath its toys; But different far the descant rings, As strikes a dilferent hand the strings. The eagle mounts the polar sky ; The imber-goose, unskill'd to fly, Must be content to glide along, Where seal and sea-dog list his song.

Halcro bit his lip, shrugged his shoulders, and then, instantly recovering his good-humour and the ready, though slovenly, power of extemporaneous composition, with which long habit had invested him, he gallantly rejoined -

> Claud Halcro
> Be mine the imber-goose to play, And haunt lone cave and silent bay ; The archer's aim so shall I shun, So shall I 'scape the levell'd gun, Content my verse's tuneless jingle, With Thule's sounding tides to mingle, While, to the ear of wondering wight, Upon the distant headland's height, Soften'd by murmur of the sea, The rude sounds srem like harmony!

As the little bard stepped back, with an alert gait and satisfied air, general applause followed the spirited manner in which he had acquiesced in the doom which levelled him with an imber-goose. But his resigned and courageous submission did not even yet encourage any other person to consult the redoubted Norna.
'The coward fools!' said the Udaller. 'Are you, too, afraid, Captain Cleveland, to speak to an old woman 1 Ask her anything - ask her whether the twelve-gun sloop at Kirkwall be your consort or no.'
Cleveland looked at Minna, and probably conceiving that she watched with anxiety his answer to her father's question, he collected himself, after a moment's hesitation.
'I never was afraid of man or woman. Master Halcro, you have heard the question which our host desires ne to ask; put it in my name, and in your own way. I pretend to as little skill in poetry as I do in witchcraft.'
Halcro did not wait to be invited twice, but, grasping Captain Cleveland's hand in his, according to the form which the game prescribed, he put the query which the Udaller had dictated to the stranger, in the following words :-

Claud Halcro
Mother doubtful, mother dread, Dweller of the Fitful Head. A gallant bark from far abroad, St. Magn:co hath her in his road, With guns and firelocks not a few, A silken and a scarlet crew, Deep stored with precious merchandise, Of gold and goods of rare device What interest hath our comrade bold In bark and crew, in goorls and gold?

There was a pause of unusual duration ere the oracle would return any answer ; and when she replied, it was in a hower though an equally decided, tone with that which she had hitherto employed :

Norna

Gold is ruddy, fair, and free, Blood is crimson and dark to see ; I look'd out on St. Magnus Bay, And I saw a falcon that struck her prey: A gobbet of flesh in her beak she bore, And talons and singles are dripping with gore ; Let hin that asks after them look on his hand, And if there is blood on't, he's one of their band.
Cleveland smiled scornfully, and held out his hand. 'Few men have been on the Spanish Main as often as I have withowt having had to do vith the guarda-costas once and again ; but there never was aught like, a stain on my hand that a wet towel would not wipe away.'
The Udaller added his voice potential - 'There is never peace with Spaniards beyond the line : I have heard Captain Tragendeck and honest old Commodore Rummelaer say sis a hundred times, and they have both been down in the Bay of Honduras, and all thereabouts. I hate all Spaniards, since they came here and reft the Fair Isle men of their vivers in 1588. ${ }^{1}$ I have heard my grandfather speak of it; and there is an old Dutch history somewhere about the house, that shows what work they made in the Low Countries long since. Ihere is neither mercy nor faith in them.'
'True - true, my old friend,' said Cleveland : 'they are ats jealous of their Indian possessions as an old man of his yomus bride ; and if they can catch you at disadvantage, the mines fir your life is the word ; and so we fight them with our colours nailed to the nast.'
'That is the way,' shouted the Udaller : 'the old British jack should never down! When I think of the wooden walls, I almost think myself an Englishnan, only it would be becouning too like my Scottish neighbours; but cone, no offence to any here, gentlemen - all are friends, and all are welcome. Conne, Brenda, go on with the play: do you speak next, you have Norse rhymes enough, we all know.'

[^101]'But none that suit the game we play at, father,' said Brenda, drawing back.
'Nonsense!' said her father, pushing her onward, while Halcro seized on her reluctant hand; ' never let mistimed nodesty mar honest mirth. Speak for Brenda, Halcro ; it is your trade to interpret maidens' thoughts.'
The poet bowed to the beautiful young woman, with the devotion of a poet and the gallantry of a traveller, and having, in a whisper, reminded her that she was in no way responsible for the nonsense he was about to speak, he paused, looked upward, simpered as if he had caught a sudden idea, and at length set off in the following verses : -

Clayd Halcho

Mother doubtful, mother dread, Dweller of the Fitful Head, Well thou know'st it is thy task To tell what beauty will not ask. Then steep thy words in wine and milk, and weave a doom of gold and silk ; For we would know, shall Brenda prove In love, and happy in her love?
The prophetess replied almost immediately from behind her curtain :

Norna

Untouch'd by love, the maiden's breast Is like the snow on Rona's crest, High seated in the middle sky In bright and barren purity But by the sunbean gently kiss'd, Scarce by the gazing eye 't is miss'd, Ere down the lonely valley stealing, Fresh grass and growth its course revealing, It cheers the flock, revives the flower, And decks some happy shepherd's bower.
' A comfortable doctrine, and most justly spoken, aid the Udaller, seizing the blushing Brenda, as she was endei vouring to escape. 'Never think shame for the matter, my girl. T'o be the mistress of some honest man's house, and the means of maintaining some old Norse name, making neighbours happy, the poor easy, and relieving strangers, is the most creditable lot a young woman can look to, and I heartily wish it to all here. Come, who speaks next ? Good husbands are going - Maddie Groatsettar - my pretty Clara, come and have your share.'

The Lady Glowrowrum shook her head, and 'could not,' she said, ' altogether approve $\qquad$ , 'Enough said - enough said,' replied Magnus; 'no compulsion ; but the play shall go on till we are tired of it. Here, Minna, I have got you at command. Stand forth, my girl): there are plenty of things to be ashamed of besides old-fashionel and innocent pleasantry. Come, I will spcak for you myself, though I am not sure I can remember rhyme enough for it.'
There was a slight colour which passed rapidly over Mima's face, but she instantly regained her composure, and stood erect by her father, as one superior to any little jest to which her situation might give rise.

Her father, after some rubbing of his brow and other mechanical efforts to assist his memory, at length recovered verse sufficient to put the following query, though in less gallant strains than those of Halcro :-

Magnes Troil

Mother, speak, and do not tarry, Here'sa maiden fain would marry. Shall she marry, ay or not ! If she marry, what's her lot?

A deep sigh was uttered within the tabernacle of the sonthsayer, as if she compassionated the subject of the doom which she was obliged to pronounce. She then, as usual, returnerl her response :

Norna

Untouch'd by love, the maiden's breast Is like the snow on Rona's crest ; So pure, so free from earthly dye, It seems, whilst leaning on the sky, Part of the hearen to which 't is nigh; But passion, like the wild March rain, May soil the wreath with many a stain. We gaze - the lovely vision's gone$\Delta$ torrent fills the bed of stone, That, hurrying to destruction's shock, Leaps headlong from the lofty rock.
The Udaller heard this reply with high resentment. 'By the bones of the Martyr,' he said, his brave visage becoming suddenly ruddy, 'this is an abuse of courtesy! and, were it any but yourself that had classed my daughter's name and the word "destruction" together, they had better have left the word unspoken. But come forth of the tent, thou old galdragon,' ${ }^{1}$ lie added, with a smile, 'I should have known that thou canst not long joy in anything that smacks of mirth, God help thee!' His summons received no answer ; and, after waiting a moment, he again addressed her - 'Nay, never he sullen with me, kinswoman, though I did speak a hasty word : thon knowest I bear malice to no onc, least of all to thee; so come forth, and let us shake hanls. Thou inightst have foretold the wreck of my ship and boats, or a bad herring-fishery, and I should have said never a word ; but Minua or Brenda, you know, are things which touch me nearer. But come out, shake hands, and there let there be an end on 't.'
Norna returned no answer whatever to his repcated invocations, and the company began to look upon cach other with some surprise, when the Udaller, raising the skin which covcred the entrance of the tent, discovered that the interior was empty. The wonder was now general, and not unnnixed with fcar ; for it seenned impossible that Norna could have, in any manner, escaped from the tabernacle in which she was inclosed, without having been discovered by the company. Gone, however, she was, and the Udaller, after a moment's consideration, dropt the skin-curtain again over the entrance of the tent.
' My friends,' he said, with a cheerful countenance, 'we lave long known my kinswoman, and that her ways are not like those of the ordinary folks of this world. But she means well by Hialtland, and hath the love of a sister for me and for my house; and no guest of mine needs either to fear evil or to take offence at her hand. I have little doubt she will be with us at dimner-time.'
'Now, Heaven forbid!' said Mrs. Baby Yellowley ; 'for, my gude Leddy Glowrowrum, ti; tell your leddyship the truth, I likena cummers that can come and gae like a glance of the sun or the whisk of a whirlwind.'
'Speak lower -- speak lower,' said the Lady Glowrowrum, 'and be thankful that yon carlin hasna ta'en the house-side away wi' her. The like of her have played warse pranks, and so has she hersell, unless she is the sairer lied on.'
Similar murmurs ran through the rest of the company, until the Udal'er uplifted his stentorian and imperative voice to put thein to silence, and invited, or rather commanded, the attendance of his guests to behold the boats set off for the haaf or leep-sea fishing.

[^102]'The wind has been high since sunrise,' he said, 'and had kept the boats in the bay ; but now it was favourable, and they would sail immediately.

This sudden alteration of the weather occasioned sumdry nods and wink amongst the guests, who were not indisposed to conneet it with Ncrua's sudden disappearance ; but without giving vent to observations which could not hut be disagreeable to their host, they followed his stately step to the shore, as the 'herd of deer follows the leading stag, with all manner of respectful observance.

CHAP'IER XXII

There was a laughing devil in his sneer, That raised emotions luith of rage and fear ; And where his frown of hatred darkly fell, Hope withering lled, and Mercy sigh'd farewell.

The Corsair, C'unto I.

TWHE ling or white fishery is the principal employment of the natives of Zetland, and was formerly that upw which the gentry chiefly depended for their income, uni the poor for their subsistence. 'The fishing-season is therefore, like the harvest of an agricultural country, the busiest and mosit iniportant, as well as the most animating, period of the year.
The fishermen of each district assemble at particular stations, with their boats and crews, and erect upon the shore small huts, composed of shingle and covered with turf, for their temporary lodging, and skeos, or drying-houses, for the fish; so that the lonely beach at once assumes the appearance of an Indian town. 'The banks to which they repair for the haaf fishing are often many miles distant from the station where the fish is dried ; so that they are always twenty or thirty hours absent, frequently longer ; and under unfavourable circumstances of wind and tide, they remain at sea, with a very small stock of provisions, and in a boat of a construction which seems extremely slender, for two or three days, and are sometimes heard of no more. The departure of the fishers, therefore, on this occupation has in it a character of danger and of suffering which renders it dignified, and the anxiety of the females who remain on the beach, watching the departure of the lessening boat, or anxiously looking out for its return, gives pathos to the sccue. ${ }^{1}$
The scene, therefore, was in busy and anxions animation when the Udaller and his friends appcared on the beach. The various crews of about thirty buats, amounting each to from threa to five or six men, were taking leave of their wives and [^103]female relatives, and jumping on board their long Norway akiffs, where their lines and tackle lay ready stowerl. Magnus was not an idle splectatur of the scene : he went from one plate to another, inquiring into the state of their provisions for tho voyage, and their preparations for the fishhing; now and then, with a rough Dutch or Norse oath, abusing them lor bluck'. hoads for going to sea with their boats indifferently fommen, but always ending by ordering from his own stores a pallon of jin, a lispund of meal, or some similar essential addition to their sea-stores. The harily sailors, on receiving such, favours, expressed their thanks in the brief, gruff manner which their landlord best approver ; but the women were nore clamuruns in their gratitude, which Magnus was often obliged to silence by cursing all female tongues from Eve's downwards.

At length all were on board and ready, the sails were hoistel, the signal for departure given, the rowers began to pull, anil all started from the shore, in strong emulation to get first to the fishing-ground, and to have their lines set before the rest -an exploit to which no little consequence was attached by the bratt's: crew who should be happy enough to perform it.

While they were yet within hearing of the shore, they chanted an ancient Norse ditty appropriate to the occasim, of which Claud Halcro had executed the following literal translation : -
' Farewell, merry maidens, to song and to laugh, For the brave lads of Westra are hound to the haaf; And we must have labour, and hunger, and pain. Ere we dance with the maids of Dunrossness again.
For now, in our trim boats of Norroway deal, We must dance on the waves, with the porpoise and seal I The breeze it shall pipe, so it pipe uot too ligh, And the gull be our songstress when e'er she fits by.
Sing on, my brave bird, while we follow, like thee, By bank, shoal, and quicksand, the swarins of the sea ; And when twenty score tishes are stinining our line, Sing louder, brave bird, for their spoils shall be thine.
We 'll sing while we bait, and we 'll sing when we haul, For the deeps of the haf have enongh for as all: There is torsk for the gentle, and skate for the carle, And there 's wealth for bold Magnus, the son of the earl.
Huzza ! my biave comrales, give way for the liaaf,
We shall soonur come lenck to the dance and the laugh ;
For life without mirth is a lamp withont oil ;
Then, mirth and loug life to the bold Magnus Troil!'

The rude words of the song were soon drowned in the ripple of the waves, but the tune continued long to mingle with the sound of wind and sea, and the boats were like so many black specks on the surface of the ocean, diminishing by degrees as they bore far and farther seawarl; while the ear could distinguish touches of the human voice, alnost drowned amid that of the eloinents.
The fishermen's wives looked their last ufter the parting suils, and were now departing slowly, with downcast and anxious looks, towards the huts in which they were to nuke nrrangenentes for preparing and drying the fish, with which they hoped to see their husbands and frienis returu deeply laden. Here and there an old sibyl disphayed the superior inpurtance of her experience hy predicting, from the appenrance of the atmosphere, that the wind would be fair or foul, while others recommended a vow to the kirk of St. Ninian's for the sufety of their men and lomis (mu anciont Catholic superstition not yet wholly abolished). and others, but in a low and timorous tone, regretted to their connpanions that Norua of Fitful Head had been suffered to depart in discontent that morning from Burgh-Westra, 'and, of all days in the year, that they suld have contrived to give her displeasure on the first day of the white fishing!'
The gentry, guests of Magnus I'roil, having whiled away as much time as could be so disposed of in viewing the little urmament set sail, and in conversing with the poor wonen who had seen their friends cmbark in it, began now to separate into various gromps and parties, which strolled in different directions, as fancy led them, to enjoy what muy be called the clair-obscure of a Zetland summer day, which, though withent the brilliant smashine that cheers other emmeries during the fine season, has a mild and pleasing charncter of its own, that softens while it saddens landscapes which, in their own lonely, bare, and monotonous tone, have something in them stern as well as barren.
In one of the loneliest recesses of the coast, where a deep indenture of the rocks gave the tide access to the cavern, or, as it is called, the helyer, of Swartaster, Minm 'I'roil was walking with Captain Cleveland. They had probably chosen that walk as being little liable to interruption from others ; for, as the furce of the tide rendered the place untit either for fishling or sailing, so it was not the ordinary resort of walkers, om aceomit of its being the supposed habitation of a mernail, a race which Norwegian superstition invests with magical as well as mis.

THE PIMATE

chievous qualities. Hero, therefore, Miuna wandered with her lover.

A small npot of milk-white sand, that stretcherl benenth, mee of the precipices which wniled in the creek on cither side, at forded them space for a dry, firm, and pleasant walk of almont a hundred yards, terminated at one extremity by a dark stretel, of the bay, which, searce touched by the winl, seemed almust as smooth as glass, and which was seen from between two infy rocks, the jaws of the ereek, or indenture, that nyproached cach other above, as if they wished to meet over the clark tide that separated them. The other end of their promenade was rhamil by a lofty and almost unscalable precipiee, the ahorle of handreds of sea-fowl of different kinds, in the bottom of which the hugo helyer, or sea-cave, itself yawnel, as if for the purpmer if swallowing up the advancing tide, whieh it seemed to receiv: into an abyss of imineasurable depth and extent. The entrance to this dismal cavern consisted not in a single arch, as ninnal, but was divided into two, by a huge pillar of natural romek, whim, rising out of the sea, and extending to the top of the caven, seemed to lend its support to the roof, and thus formed a dunhle portal to the helyer, on which the fishermen annl peasants hal bestowed the rude name of the Devil's Nostrils. In this will scene, lonely and undisturbed but by the elang of the sea finl, Cleveland had already met with Minna Troil more than ence:; for with her it was a favourite walk, as the objeets which it presented agreed peeuliarly with the love of the wihl, the melancholy, and the wonderful. But now the conversation in whin she was earnestly engaged was such as entirely to with haw her attention, as well as that of her companion, from the seenery around them.
'You cannot deny it,' she said, 'you have given way to feelings respecting this young man whieh indicate prejulice and violence - the prejudice ummerited, as far as you are concernecl at least, and the violence equally imprudent and unjustifiable:
'I should have thought,' replied Cleveland, 'that the servire I rendered him yesterday might have freed me from surd it charge. I do not talk of my own risk, for I have lived in danser, and love it ; it is not every one, however, wonh have ventmeril so near the furious animal to save one with whom they hat min connexion.'
'It is not every one, indeed, who could have saved him.' answered Minna, gravely ; 'but every one who has courage ann] generosity would have attempted it. The giddy-brained Clami Hatero would have done as much as yon had his streugth heen egnal to his courage: iny father would have done as much, thuugh having such just canse of recentuent ugainst the youns man, for his vain and braggart abuse of our hospitality. Di, not, therefore, bonst of your exploit too muely, my good friend, lest you should make me think that it repuired too greit sum effiort. I know you love nut Murdanit Mertom, though yon exposed your uwn life to save hix.,

'Will you allow nothing, then,' said Cleveluad, 'for the long misery I was made to endure from the commen mul prevailing report that this beardless bird-hunter stood betwixt me and what I on earth coveted mont - the affections of Miman 'Troil?'
He spoke in a tone at once impassioned and insinuating, and liis whole language and mumer seemed to express a grace and elegance which formed the most striking contrast with the speech and gesture of the mapolisheel seamam! which he nsmally affected or exhitited. But his nuolugy was musitisfuctory to Міипа.
'You have known,' she said, 'perhaps too som and too well, how little you hail to fenr -- if yon indeed farred - that Merthon ur any other had interest with Minui I'roil. Nay, truce to thanks and protestations ; I womld areept it an the best prowf of gratitude that you would be reconciled with this youth, or at least avoid every quarrel with him.'
' 'That we should be friends, Minmu, is impossible,' replied Cleveland; 'even the love I bear you, the most powerf:! emotion that my heart ceer knew, cannot work that miracle.
'And why, I pray you?' said Minna; 'there have keena mi evil offices between you, but rather an exchange of $15: \ldots+\ldots$ ? services ; why can you not be friends? I have many remate... to wish it.'

And can you, then, forget the slights which he lat: upon Brenda, and on yourself, and on your father's ho:se?
'I can forgive them all,' said Minna; 'can you not $\varepsilon$ ?', so much, who have in truth receivel no offence?
Cleveland looked down and paused for an instant; then raised his head and replied, 'I might easily deceive yon, Minna, and promise you what my sonl tells me is an impossibility ; but 1 am forced to use too much deceit with others, and with you I will use none. I cannot be friend to this young man: there is a natural dislike -an instinctive aversion --sinuething like a principle of repulsion, in car m.tual uature, which makes ns edious to each other. Ask himself - he will tell you he has the same antipathy against me. The obligation he comferrel on me was a bridle to my resentment; but I was so galled hy the restraint that I could have gnawed the curb till my lif were bloody.'

THE PIRATE

'You have worn what you are wont to call your iron luask so long that your features,' replied Minna, 'iciain the impres. sions of its rigidity even when it is removed.'
'You do nee injustice, Minna,' replied her lover, 'and ywn are angry with me because I deal with you plainly and honestly: Plainly and honestly, however, will I say, that I cannut lie Mertoun's friend, but it shall be his own fault, not mine, if i am ever his enemy. I seek not to injure him ; but do nut $\mathrm{a}: \mathrm{k}$ me to love him. And of this remain satisfied, that it wonld twe vain even if I could do so ; for as sure as I attempted any. advances towards his confidence, so sure would I be to awalien his disgust and suspicion. Leave us to the exercise of "mr natural feelings, which, as they will unguestionably keep nis ins far separate as possible, are most likely to prevent any possible interference with each other. Does ihis satisfy you ?'
'It must,' said Minna, 'since you tell me there is no remed!: And now tell me why you looked so grave when you heard if your consort's arrival - for that it is she I have no doubt -- in the port of Kirkwall ?
'I fear,' replied Cleveland, 'the consequences of that vessel's arrival with her crew, as comprehending the ruin of my fonlest hopes. I had made some progress in your father's favour, anl, with tine, might have made more, when hither come Hawkins and the rest to blight rey prospects for ever. I told you om what terms we parted. I then commanded a vessel braver innd better found than their own, with a crew who, at my slightent nod, would have faced fiends armed with their own fiery element : but I now stand alone, a single man, destitute of all means tw overawe or to restrain them; and they will soon show so plainly the ungovernable license of their habits and dispositions, that ruin to themselves and to me will in all probability be the consequence.'
'Do not fear it,' said Minna; 'my father can never be so unjust as to hold you liable for the offences of others.'
${ }^{\text {'But what will Magnus Troil say to my own demerits, fair }}$ Minna?' said Cleveland, suniling.
'My father is a Zetlander, or rather a Norwegian,' sail Minua, 'one of an oppressed race, who will not care whether you fought against the Spaniards, who are the tyrants of the New World, or against the Dutch and English, who have succeeded to their usurped dominions. His own ancestors sinpported and exercised the freedom of the seas in those gallant barks whose pennons were the dread of all Europe.'

'I fear, nevertheless,' said Cleveland, 'tha' 'he descendant of an ancient sea-king will scarce acknowledge a fitting aequaintance in a modern rover. I have not disguised from yon that I have reason to dread the English laws; and Magnus, though a great enemy to taxes, imposts, scat, wattle, and so forth, has no idea of latitude upon points of a more general character: he would willingly reeve a rope to the yard-arm for the benefit of an unfortunate buceanier.'
'Do not suppose so,' said Minna; 'he himself suffers too much oppression from the tyrannical laws of our proud neighhours of Scotland. I irust he will soon be able to rise in resistance against them. The enemy - such I will call them are now divided amongst themselves, and every vessel from their coast brings intelligence of fresh commotions - the Highlands against the Lowlands, the Willianites against the Jaeobites, the Whigs against the Tories, and, to sum the whole, the kingdom of England against that of Seotland. What is there, as Claud Halero well linted, to prevent onr availing ourselves of the quarrels of these robbers to assert the independence of which we are deprived?'
"'Io hoist the raven standard on the Castle of Scalloway,' seid Cleveland, in imitation of her tone and manner, 'and proelaim your father Earl Magnus the First!'
'Earl Magnus the Seventh, if it please you:' answered Minna; 'for six of his ancestors have worn, or were entitled to wear, the coronet before him. You laugh at my urdour, but what is there to prevent all this ?'
'Nothing will prevent it,' replied Cleveland, 'becanse it will never be attempted. Anything mighi prevent it that is equal in strength to the long-boat of a British man-of-war.'
'Yon treat us with scorn, sir,' said Minna ; 'yet yourseli should know what a few resolved men may perforn.'
' But they mnst be armed, Minna,' replied Cleveland, 'and willing to place their lives upon each desperate alventure. Think not of sueh visions. Demmark has been cut down into a second-rate kingdom, incapable of exclianging a single broadside with England; Norway is a starving wilderness; and, in these islands, the love of independence has been suppressed by a long term of subjection, or shows itself but in a few muttered growls over the bowl and bottle. And, were your melı as will ing warriors as their ancestors, what could the unarmed crews of a few fishing-boats do against the British navy? T'hink no more of it, sweet Minna; it is a dream, and I must term it so, though it makes your eye so bright and your step so noble.'

THE PIRATE

'It is indeed a dream!' said Minna, looking down, 'and it ill becomes a daughter of Hialtland to look or to move like a freewoman. Our eye should be on the ground, and our step slow and reluctant, as that of one who obeys a taskinaster.'
'There are lands,' said Cleveland, 'in which the eye may look bright upon groves of the palm and the cocoa, and where the foot may move light as a galley under sail, over fielis carpeted with flowers, and savannahs, surrounded by armenatio thickets, and where subjection is urknown, except that of the brave to the bravest, and of all to the most leautiful.'

Minna paused a moment ere she spoke, aull then an-werel, ' No, Cleveland. My own rude conntry has churms fir me, even desolate as you think it, and depressed as it surdy is, which no other land on earth can offer to me. I enteatwir in vain to represent to myself those visions of trees and of :ruves which my eye never saw ; but my imagination can conceive ..." sight in nature more sublime than these waves when awitatell by a storm, or more beautiful than when they come, as they now do, rolling in calm tranquillity to the shore. Not the fairest scene in a foreign land, not the brightest sumberm that ever shone upon the richest landscape, would win my thumhts for a moment from that lofty rock, misty hill, and wide-rilling ocean. Hialtland is the land of my deceased ancestors ant of my living father ; and in Hialtland will I live and dic.'
'Then in Hialtland,' answered Cleveland, 'will I tom live and die. I will not go to Kirkwall : I will not make my exist. ence known to my comrades, from whom it were else hard for me to escape. Your father loves ne, Minua : who knws whether long attention, anxious care, might not bring him to receive me into his family? Who would regard the length of a voyage that was certain to terminate in happiness?'
'Drean not of such an issue,' said Mimat ; 'it is imposible. While you live in my father's homse, while you receive his assistance annd share his table, yon wili find him the renerons friend and the hearty host ; but tunch him on what concerns his name and fanily, and the frank-hearted Cidaller will :tart up before yon the haughty and prond descendant of a Murwegian jarl. See yon-a moment's suspicion has fallen "n

Mordaunt Mertoun, and he has banished from his favour the youth whom he so lately loved as a son. No one must ally with his house that is not of untainted Northern deseent.'
'And mine nay be so for aught that is known to me npon the subject,' said Cleveland.
'How !' said Minna; ' have you any rcason to believe yourself of Norse descent?'
'I have told you before,' replied Cleveland, 'that my family is totally monkown to mie. I spent my earlicst days upon a solitary plantation in the little island of Tortuga, under the charge of my father, then a different person from what he afterwards hecame. We were plundered by the Spaniards, and reduced to such extremity of poverty that my father, in desperation and in thirst of revenge, took $u p$ arms, and having become a chicf of a little band who were in the same circumstances, beeanc a huccanier, as it is called, and ernised against Spain, with vario.s vicissitudes of good and bad fortume, until, while he interferel to check some violenee of his eompanions, he fell by their hanls - no micommon fate among the captains of these rovers. But whence my father eame, or what was the place of his birth, I know not, fair Minna, nor have I ever had a curions thought on the subject.'
'He was a Briton, at least, your unfortunate father?' said Minna.
'I have no doubt of it,' said Cleveland; ' his name, which I have rendered too formidable to be openly spoken, is an English one; and his acquaintance with the English language, and even with Euglish literature, together with the pains which he tork, in better days, to teach me both, plainly spoke him to be as Eaglishman. If the rude bearing which I display towards others is not the gemine claracter of my mind and manners, it is to ny father, Minua, that I owe any share of better thoughts and principles, which may render me worthy, in some small degree, of your notice and approbation. And yet it sometimes. scems to me that I have two different characters; for I cammot bring myself to belicve that I , who now walk this lone beach with the lovely Minna I'roil, and an permitted to speak to her of the passion which I have cherished, have cver leen the daring leader of the bold band whose name wes as terrible as a tornado.'
'You had not been permitted,' said Minua, 'to use that bohl language towards the daughter of Magmis 'Troil had you nut been the brave and undanntel leader who, with so small means, has made his name so formidable. My heart is like that if a maiden of the ancient days, and is to be woll not by fair words but by gallant deeds.'
'Alas ! that heart,' said Cleveland ; 'and what is it that I may do - what is it that man can do, to win in it the interent which I desire ?'
'Rejoin your friends - pursue your fortuncs - leave the rent to destiny,' said Minna. 'Should you return the learler of a gallant fleet, who can tell what may befall?'
'And what shall assure me that, when I return - if return I cever shall - I may not find Minna Troil a bride or a sponse? No, Minna, I will not trust to destiny the only object worth attaining which my stormy voyage in life has yet offerel me.'
'Hear me,' said Minna. 'I will bind myself to you, if ymu dare accept such an engagement, by the promise of (Odin,' the most sacred of our Northern rites which are yet practised allumir us, that I will never favour another until you resign the pres. tensions which I have given to you. Will that satisfy yon? for more I cannot, more I will not give.'
' 'Then with that,' said Cleveland, after a moment's panse, 'I must perforce be satisfied ; but remember, it is yourself that throw me back upon a mode of life which the laws of Britain denounce as criminal, and which the violent passions of the daring men by whom it is pursued have rendered infamons.'
'But I,' said Minna, 'am superior to such prejndices. In warring with England, I see their laws in no nther light than as if you were engaged with an enemy who, in fulness of pride and power, has declared he will give lis antagonist no quarter. A brave man will not fight the worse for this ; and, for the mamers of your comrades, so that they do not infect your own, why should their evil report attach to you?'

Cleveland gazed on her as she spoke with a degree of womdering admiration, in which, at the same time, there lurked it smile at her simplicity.
'I could not,' he said, 'have believed that such hagh couruve could have been found united with such ignorance of the world, as the world is now wielded. For my manners, they who heet know me will readily allow that I have done my best, at the risk of my popularity and of my life itself, to mitigate the ferocity of my mates; but how can you teach hmanity to men buming with vengeance against the world by whom they ame proscribed, or teach them temperance and moderation in enjus

[^104]iug the pleasures which chance throws in their way, to vary a life which would be otherwise one constant scene of peril and hardship? But this promise, Minua - this promise, which is all I aun to reccive in gnerlon for my faith finl attachuent - let me at least lose un time in claiming that.'
'It must nut be rendered here, but in Kirkwall. We minst invoke, to witness the engagement, the spirit which presides over the aucicut Circle of Stennis. But perhaps you fear to name the aucient Father of the Slain too, the Severe, the the 'Terrible?'
Cleveland smiled.
'Do me the justice to think, lovely Minna, that I am little subject to fear real canses of terror; and for those which are visiunary I have no sympathy whatever.'
'You believe nut in them, then?' said Minna, 'and are so far hetter suited to be Brenda's lover than mine.'
'I will believe,' replied Cleveland, 'in whatever you believe. The whole inhabitants of that Valhalla about whicl your converse so much with that fiddling, rhyming fool, Claud Halcroall these shall become living and existing things, to my credulity. But, Minna, do not ask me to fear any of them.'
'Fear! no-not to fear them, surely,' replied the maiden; 'for, not before 'Thor or Odin, when they approached in the fulness of their terrors, did the heroes of ny dauntless race yield one foot in retreat. Nor do I own them as deities; a better faith prevents so fonl. an error. But, in our own conception, they are powerful spirits for good or evil. And when you boast not to fear thein, bethink you that you defy an ellemy of a kind you have never yet encountered.'
' Not in these northern latitudes,' said the lover, with a smile, ' where hitherto I have seen but angels; but I have faced, in my time, the demons of the equinoctial line, which we rovers suppose to be as powerful and as malignant as those of the North.
'Have you, then, witnessed those wonders that are beyond the visible world ?' said Minna, with some degree of awe.
Cleveland composed his countenance, and replied - 'A short while before my father's death, I came, though then very young, into the command of a sloop, manned with thirty as desperate fellows as ever handled a musket. We cruised for a long while with bad success, taking nothing but wretched small cruft, which were destined to catch turtle, or otherwise loaled with coarse and worthless trumpery. I hand much allo to prevent my comrades from avenging upon the crews of those banbling shallops the disappointment which they had occasioned to us. At length we grew desperate, and made a descent on a villige where we were told we should intercept the mules of a certhin Spunish governor, laden with treasnre. We succeeded in airrying the place ; but while I endeavoured to save the inlabitiont. from the fury of iny followers, the muleteers, with their precinns cargo, escaped into the neighbouring woods. This filled up, the measure of my unpopularity. My people, who had been long discontented, became openly mutinous. I was deposed from my command in solemn council, and condenned, as having tou little luck and too much humanity for the profession $I$ lad undertaken, to be marooned, ${ }^{1}$ as the phrase goes, on mee of those little sandy, bushy isslets whieh are called, in the Went Indies, keys, and which are frequented only by turtle anll liy sea-fowl. Many of them are supposed to be haunted -..nnie by the demons worshipped by the old inliabitants ; some hy caciques and others, whom the Spaniards had put to death by torture, to compel them to diseover their hidden treasilles; and others by the various spectres in which sailors of all nations have implicit faith. My place of banishment, calleil Cuffin Key, ${ }^{2}$ about two leagues and a half to the south-cast of Bermudas, was so infamous as the resort of these supernathral inhabitants that I believe the wealth of Mexico would nut have persuaded the bravest of the seoundrels who put me ashore there to have spent an hour on the islet alone, even in broad daylight; and when they rowed off, they pulled for the sloop like men that dared not cast their eyes behind them. And there they left me, to subsist as I might on a spect of unproductive sand, surrounded by the boundless Atlantic, and haunted, as they supposed, by malignant demons.'
'And what was the consequence?' said Minna, eagerly.
'I supported life,' said the adventurer, 'at the expenve of such sea-fowl, aptly called boobies, as were silly enought ti" let me approach so near as to knock them down with a stick : and by means of turtle-eggs, when these complaisant birls becanm better acquainted with the mischievous disposition of the human species, and more shy of course of iny advances.'
'And the demons of whom you spoke?' continued Minni:.
'I had my secret apprehensions upon their aecount,' sitid Cleveland. 'In open daylight, or in absolute darkness, I did not greatly apprehend their approach; but in the misty dawn

[^105]of the morning, or when evening was about to fall, I saw, for the first week of my abode on the key, many a dim and undefined spectre, now resembling a Spaniari, with his capa wrapped around him, aul his huge sumbirco, sis large as an umbrella, upon his head; now a Dutel sititur, with his rough cap and trunk-hose; and now mn Indian cacique, with his feathery crown and long lance of eane.'
'Did you not approach and address then ?' sail Minna.
'I always approached them,' replied the seaman; 'but-I grieve to disappoint your expeetations, my fair frient - whenever I drew near them, tho phantom changed into a busl, or a piece of driftwood, or a wreath of mist, or some sueh cause of deception, until at last I was tanght by experience to cheat uyself no longer with such visions, and continued a solitary inhabitant of Coffin Key, as little alarmed by visionary terrors as I ever was in the great cabin of a stout vessel, with a score of companions around me.'
' Y ou have eheated me into listening to a tale of nothing,' said Minna; 'but how long did you continue on the island?'
'Four weeks of wretched existenee,' said Cleveland, 'when I was relieved by the erew of a vessel whieh came thither a-turtling. Yet my miserable seclusion was not entirely useless to me; for on that spot of barren sand I found, or rather forged, the iron mask which has since been my chief seeurity against treason or mutiny of my followers. It was there I formed the resolution to seem no softer-hearted nor better-instrueted, no more humane and no more scrupulous, than those with whom fortune had leagued me. I thought over my former story, and saw that seeming more brave, skilful, and enterprising than others had gained me command and respect, and that seaming nore gently nurtured and more civilised than they had made them envy and hate ine as a being of another species. I bargained with myself then, that, sinee I could not lay aside my snperiority of iutelleet and education, I would do my best to disguise, and to sink in the rude seaman, all appearance of better feeling and letter aceomplishments. I foresaw then what has siuce happoned, that, under the appearance of daring obduracy, I shonhl acquire such a habitual command over iny followers that 1 might use it for the insurance of discipline, and for relieving the distresses of the wretches who fell under our power. I saw, in short, that to attain authority I must assume the external semblance, at least, of those over whom it was to be exercisel. 'The tillings of iny father's fate, while it excited me to wrath and to revenge, confirmed the resolution I had adopted. He also had fallen a victim to his superiority of mind, morals, and manners above those whom he commanded. They were wont to call lim the Gentleman ; and, unquestionably, they thought he waited some favourable opportunity to reconcile himself, perhaps at their expense, to those existing forms of society his habits seemed hest to suit with, and, even therefore, they murdered him. Nature and justice alike called on me for revenge. I was soon at the head of a new body of adventurers who are so numerous in those islands. I smight not after those by whom I had been myself marooned, hut after the wretches who had betrayed my father; and on them I took a revenge so severe that it was of itself sufficient to stamp me with the charater of that inexorable ferocity which I was desirous to be thought to possess, and which, perhaps, was gradually creeping on my natural disposition in actual earnest. My manner, speech, anil conduct seemed so totally clianged that those who formerly knew me were disposed to ascribe the alteration to my intercemric with the demons who haunted the sands of Coffin Key : lay; there were some superstitious enongh to believe that I hail actually formed a league with them.'
' I tremble to hear the rest!' said Minna; 'did you unt become the monster of courage and cruelty whose character you assumed?'
'If I have escaped being so, it is to you, Minna,' replied Cleveland, 'that the wonder must be ascribed. It is true, I have always endeavoured to distinguish inyself rather ly acts of adventurous valour than by schemes of revenge or of plunder, and that at length I could save lives by a rude jest, and sometimes, by the excess of the measures which I myself propused, could induce those under me to intercede in favour of prisiniers; so that the seeming severity of my character has better servel the cause of humanity than had I appeared directly devoted to it.'

He ceased, and, as Minna replied not a word, both renainet silent for a little space, when Cleveland again resumed the discourse.
'Yon are silent,' he said, 'Miss 'Troil, and I have injureyl myself in your opinion by the frankness with which I have laid my character before you. I may truly say that my natural disposition has been controlled, but not altered, by the intoward circumstances in which I an placed.'
'I am mucertain,' said Minna, after a monent's considerathes. 'whether you had been thus candid had yon nut known I slumind moon see your comrades, and discover, from their conversution and their manners, what you would otherwise gladly have concealed.'
' You do me injustice, Minna - eruel injustice. From the instant that you knew me to be a sailor of fortune, an alventurer, a buccanier, or, if you will have the broad word, a pirate, what had you to expect less than what I have toll yon?
'You speak too truly,' sail Minia: 'all this I might have auticipated, and I know not how I should have expeeted it otherwise. But it seemed to me that a war on the eruel and superstitious Spaniards had in it something emolling - something that refined the fierce employment to which you have just now given its true and dreaded name. I thought that the independent warriors of the Western Ocean, raised up, as it were, to punish the wrongs of so many nurdered and plundered tribes, must have had something of gallant elevation, like that of the Sons of the North, whose long galleys avenged on so many const: the oppressions of degenerate Rome. This I thought and this I dreamed; I grieve that I an awakened and undeceived. Yct I blame you not for the erring of my own fancy. Farewell; we must now part.'
'Say at least,' said Cleveland, 'that you do not hold me in horror for having told you the triuth.'
'I must have time for reflection,' said Mima - ' time to weigh what you have said, ere I can fully understand ny own feelings. Thus much, however, I can say even now, that he who pursues the wicked purpose of plunder by means of blool aul cruelty, and who must veil his remains of natural remorse under an affectation of superior profligacy, is not, and cannot be, the lover whom Minna Troil expected to find in Cleveland; and if she still love him, it must be as a penitent and not as a hero.'
So saying, she extricated herself from his grasp (for he still cudeavoured to detain her), making an ingerative sign to him to forbear from following her. 'She is grone,' saill Cleveland, looking after her ; 'wild and fanciful as slic is, I expected not this. She startled not at the name of my perilous course of life, yet seems totally unprepared for the evil which must necessarily attend it; and so all the merit I have gained by wy resemblanee to a Norse champion, or kiur of the sea, is to be lost at once, because a grang of pirates dunot prove to be a choir of saints. I would that. Rackam. Hawkins, and the rest had been at the bottom of the Race of Porthand - I wound the Pentland Firth had swept them to hell rather than to Orkney I I will not, however, quit the chase of this angel fir all that those fiends can do. I will - I must to Orkuey hefore the Udaller makes his voyage thither; our nueeting minght alarm even his biunt understanding, although, thank lieaven, in this wild country, men know the nature of our trade oniy by hearsay, through our honest friends the Dutch, who take care never to speak very ill of thowe they make money hy. Well, if fortune would but stand my friend with this beantiful enthusiast, I would pursuo her wheel no farther at sen, but set myself down amongst these rocks, as happy as if they were so many groves of bunanas and palmettioes.'

With these and such thoughts half rolling in his hrom, half expressed in indistinct hints and murmurs, the pirate Cleveland returned to the mansion of Burgh.Westra.

CHAPTER XXIII

There was shaking of hands and sorrow of leart,

 For the hour was approaching when merry folke must purt ; So we call'd for our hurses, and ank id for our way, While the jolly old laulloril snid, 'Nothing 's to pay.'WE do not dwell nuon the festivities of the day, which had nothing in them to interest the reader particnlarly. The table groaned under the usual plenty, which was disposed of by the guests with the usual appetite; the bowl of puneh was filled and emptied with the same celerity as nsual; the men quafferl, and the women laughed; Clanid Halcro rhymed, punned, and praised John Dryden; the lidaller bumpered and sang chornses; and the evening conchaled, as usual, in the rigging-loft, as it was Magnus I'roil's pleasure to term the daneing-apartment.
It was then and there that Cleveland, appromehing Magnus, where he sat betwixt his two daughters, intimated his intention of going to Kirkwall in a small brig which Bryce Snailsfoot, who had disposed of his goods with unprecedented celerity, had freighted thither to procure a supply.

Magnus heard the sudden proposal of his guest with surprise, not unningled with displeasure, and demanded sharply of Cleveland how long it was sinee he had learned to prefer Bryee Snailsfoot's eompany to his own? Cleveland answered, with his usual bluntness of mamer, that time and tide tarried for no one, and that he had his own partienlar reasons for makinf: his trip to Kirkwall sooner than the Lidaller propnsed to set sail ; that he hoped to meet with him and his danghters at the great fair which was now closely approaching, amb might perhaps find it possible to retmrn to /etland aloner with then.

While he spoke this, Bremla kept her eye as mach upon her sister as it was possible to do without exciting general observation. She remarkel, that Mima's pale ehcek heenme yet paler while Cleveland spoke, an! that she secmed, by compressing her lips and slightly knitting her brows, to be in the act of repressing the effects of strong interior emotion. But whe spoke not; and when Cleveland, having bidden adieu to the Udaller, approached to salute her, as was then the custom, he received his farewell without trusting herself to attempt a reply:

MICROCOPY RESOUUTION TEST CHART

(ANSI and ISO TEST CHART No. 2)

THE PIRATE

Brenda had her own trial approaching; for Mordaunt llertcun, once so much loved by her father, was now in the act if making his cold parting from him, without reveiving a sinylo look of friendly regard. There was, indeed, sarcasm in the tone with which Magnus wishec the youth a good journey, and recommended to him, if he met a bonny lass by the way, nut to dream that she was in love because she chanced to jest with him. Mertoun coloured at what he felt as an insult, thourh it was but half intelligible to him ; but he remembered Brenfla, and suppressed every feeling of resentment. He proceedel to take his leave of the sisters. Minua, whose heart was consilerably softened towards him, received his farewell with sonne degree of interest; but Brenda's grief was so visible in the kinduess of her manner and the moisture which gathered in her eye, that it was noticed even by the Udaller, who exclaimed, half-angrily, ' Why, ay, lass, that may be right enough, for he was an old acquaintance ; but mind! I have no will that he remain one.'
Mertoun, who was slowly leaving the apartment, half overheard this disparaging observation, and half turned round to resent it. But his purpose failed him when he saw that Bremla had been obliged to have recourse to her handkerchief to hite her emotion, and the sense that it was excited by his departure oblitcrated every thought of her father's unkindness. He retired ; the other guests followed his example ; and many of them, like Cleveland and himself, took their leave over-nisht, with the intention of commencing their homeward journey on the succeeding morning.
That night, the mutual sorrow of Minna and Brenda, if it could not wholly remove the reserve which had estrangel the sisters from each other, at least melted all its frozen and unkindly symptoms. They wept in each other's arms ; anlid though neither spoke, yet each be ame dearcr to the other: because they felt that the grief which called forth these drops had a source common to them both.

It is probable that, though Brenda's teass were most ahumdant, the grief of Minna was most deeply seated; for, leng after the younger had sobbed hersclf asleep, like a chilh, u!"n her sister's bosom, Minna lay awake, watehing the dulionis twilight, while tear after tea. slowly gathered in her eye, ant found a current down her cheek, as soon as it became too heavy to be supported by her long black silken eyelashes. As she lay, bewildered among the sorrowful thoughts which suppliel these tears, she was surprised to distinguish, beneath the window, the sounds of music. At first she supposed it was some freak of Claud Halcro, whose fantastic humour sometines indulged itself in such serenades. But it was not the gue of the old minstrel, but the guitar, that she heard - an instrument which none in the island knew how to touch except Cleveland, who had learned, in his intercourse with the South-American spaniards, to play on it with superiur execution. Perhaps it was in these climates also that he had learned the song, which, though he now sung it under the window of a maiden or "hale, hal certainly never been con:posed for the native of a clinaie so northerly and so severe, since it spoke of productions of the earth and skies which are there unknown.

\author{
I  - Love wakes and weeps While beauty sleeps: O for music's softest numbers, To prompt a theme, For beauty's dream, Soft as thie pillow of her slumbers :  \section*{II}  Through groves of palm Sigh gales of balm, Fire-flies on the air are wheeling; While through the gloom Comes soft perfume, The distant beds of flowers revealing.  ```
III  O wake and live, No dream can give A shadow'd bliss, the real excelling; No longer sleep, From lattice peep, And list the tale that Love is telling!'

```
}

The voice of Cleveland was deep, rich, and manly, and accorded well with the Spanish air, to which the words, probably a translation from the same language, had been adapted. His invocation would not probably have been fruitless, could Minna have arisen without awaking her sister. But that was inpus. sible ; for Brenda, who, as we have already mentioned, had wept bitterly before she had sunk into repose, now lay with her fauc on her sister's neck, and one arm stretched around her, in the auiitude of a child which has cried itself asleep in the arms of its narse. It was impossible for Minna to extricate herself from her grasp without awakening her; and she conld not, therefire, execute her hasty purpose of donning her gown and approaching the window to speak with Clevel and, who, she had no rloubt, had resorted to this contrivance to procure an intervie y. 'lhe restraint was sufficiently provoking, for it was more than prob. able that her love: came to take his last farewell; but that Brenda, inimical as she seemed to be of late towards Cleveland, should awake and witness it was a thought not to be endured.
'There was a short pause, in which Minna endeavoured more than once, with as much gentleness as possible, to muclayp Brenda's arm from her neck; but whenever she attempted it, the slumberer muttered some little pettish sound, like a cliihl disturbed in its sleep, which sufficiently showed that perseverance in the attempt would awaken her fully.

To her great vexation, therefore, Minna was cumpelled to remain still and silent ; when her lover, as if determined ulnul gaining her ear by music of another strain, sung the following fragment of a sea-ditty : -
> 'Farewell ! farewell ! the voice you hear Has left its last soft tone with ycu;
> Its next must join the seaward cheer, And shout among the shouting crew.

> The accents which I scarce could form, Beneath your frown's controlling check,
> Must give the word, above the storm, To cut the mast and clear the wreck.

> The timid cye I dared not raise,
> The hand that shooi when pressid to thine,
> Must point the guns upou the chase, Must bid the deadly cutlass shine.
> To all I love, or hope, or fear,
> Honour, or own, a 1, ng adieu !
> To all that life has soft and dear, Farewell! save mennory of you!'1

He was again silent; and again she to whom the serenado was addressed strove in vain to arise without rousing her sister. It was impossible ; and she had nothing before her but the unhappy thought that Cleveland was taking leave in his desola-

\footnotetext{
\({ }^{1}\) I cannot suppress the prife of saying. that these lines have been beautifuily set to originai music by Mrs. Arkwright of Derbyshire.
}
tion wi: \(\therefore\) a a single glance or a single word. He, too, whose temper wa, so tiery, jet who subjected his violent mood with such sedulous attention to her will - conld she but have stolen a moment to say adien, to caution him agrainst new quarrels with Mertoun, to implore him to detach himself from such comrades as he had described - could she bit have done this, who could say what effect such parting alur \({ }^{\prime \prime}\) tions might have had upon his character - nay, upon the futiow events of his life?
'Tantalised by such thoughts, Minna was about to make another and decisive effort, when she heard voices beneath the window, and thonght she could distinguish that they were those of Cleveland and Mertoun, speaking in a sharp tone, which, at the same time, seemed cautiously suppressed, as if the speakers feared being overheard. Alarm now mingled with her former desire to rise from bed, and she accomplished at once the purpose which she had so often attempted in vain. Brenda's arm was unloosed from her sister's neck without the sleeper receiving more alarm than provoked two or three mintelligible murmurs; while, with equal speed and silence, Minna put on some part of her dress, with the intention to steal to the window. But, ere she could accomplish this, the sonnd of the voices without was exchanged for that of blows and struggling, which terminated suddenly by a deep groan.
'lerrified at this last signal of mischief, Minna sprung to the window and endeavoured to open it, for the persons were so close under the walls of the house that she could not see them save by putting her head out of the casement. The iron hasp was stiff and rusted, and, as generally happens, the haste with which she laboured to undo it only rendered the task more difticult. When it was accomplished, and Minna had cagerly tirrust her bolly half out at the casement, those who had created the sounds which alarmed her were become invisible, excepting that she saw a shadow cross the moonlight, the substance of which must have been in the act of turning a corner, which concealed it from her sight. The shadow noved slowly, and seemed that of a man who suppurted another upon his shoulders -an indication which put the climax to Mima's agony of mind. The window was not above eight feet from the gound, and she hesitated not to throw herself from it hastily, and to pursue the object which had excited her terror.
But when she came to the corner of the bnildings from which the shadow seemed to have been projected, she discovered nothing which could point out the way that the figure hal gone ; and, after a moment's consideration, became sensible that all attempts at pursuit would be alike wild and fruitless. Besides all the projections and recesses of the many-angled mansion and its numerous offices - besides the various cellars, store-houses, stables, and sc iorth, which diefied her solitary search, there was a range of low rocks, stretching down to the haven, ant which were, in fact, a continuation of the ridge which formed its pier. These rocks had many indentures, hollows, and caverus, into any one of which the figure to which the shadow belonged might have retired with his fatal burden ; for fatal, she fearell, it was most likely to prove.

A moment's reflection, as we have said, convinced Minma of the folly of further pursuit. Her next thought was to alarm the family ; but what talg had she to tell, and of whoul was that tale to be told 1 On the other hand, the wounded nuan-if indeed he were wounded - alas, if indeed he were not mortally wounded ! - might not be past the reach of assistance ; anil, with this idea, she was about to raise her voice, when she was interrupted by that of Claud Halcro, who was returniug apparently from the haven, and singing, in his manner, a scrap of an old Norse ditty, which might run thus in English :

> 'And you shall deal the funeral dole; Ay, deali it, mother mine, To weary body, and to heavy soul, The white bread and the wine.
> And you shall deal my horses of pride; Ay, deal them, mother mine;
> And you shall deal my lands so wide, And deal my castles nine.
> But deal not vengeance for the deed, And deal not or tlee crime;
> The body to its place, and the soul to Heaven's grace, And the rest in God's own time.'

The singular adaptation of these rhymes to the situation in which she found herself seemed to Minna like a warning from Heaven. We are speaking of a land of omens and sujerstitions, and perhaps will scarce be understood by those whose limited inagination cannot conceive how strongly these operate upon the himan mind during a certain pr ress of society. A line of Virgil, turned up casually, was re - red in the 17 th century, and in the court of England, \({ }^{1}\) as an intimation of future

\footnotetext{
\({ }^{1}\) The celebrated sortes Virgiliana were resorted to by Charles 1. and uls courtlers as a mode of prying into futurlty.
}
events ; and no wonder that a maiden of the distant and wild isles of Zetland should have considered as an injunction from Heaven verses which happened to convey a sense amalogous to her present situation.
'I will be silent,' she muttered - 'I will seal my lips -
The body to its place, anll the soul to Heaven's grace, and the rest in God's own time.'
'Who speaks there I' said Cland Halcro, in some alarm, for he had not, in his travels in foreign parts, been able by any means to rid himself of his native superstitions. In the condition to which fear and horror had rednced her, Minma was at first unable to reply; and Halcro, fixing his eyes upon the fenale white figure, which he saw indistinctly for she stood in the shadow of the house, and the morning was thick and misty), began to conjure her in an ancient rhyme which occurred to him as suited for the occasion, and which had in its gibberish a wild and unearthly sound, which may be lost in the ensuing translation :
```

'St. Magnus control thee, that martyr of treason ;
St. Ronan rebuke thee, with rlyine and with reason ;
By the mass of St. Martin, the might of St. Mary,
Be thou gone, or thy weird shall be worse if thon tarry !
If of good, go lience and hallow thee;
If of ill, let the earth swallow thee ;
If thou'rt of air, let the grey mist fold thee;
If of earth, let the swart mine hold thee;
If a pixie, seek thy ring;
If a nixie, seek thy spring;
If on middle earth thou'st been
Slave of sorrow, shaine, and sin,
Hast eat the bread of toil and strife,
And dree'd the lot which men call life,
Begone to thy stoue ! for thy coftin is scant of thee,
The worm, thy playfellow, wails for the want of thee;
Hence, houseless ghost ! let the earth hide thee,
Till Michael shall blow the blast, see that there thou bile thee !
Phantom, fly hence! take the Cross for a token,
Hence pass till Hallowmass ! - iny spell is spoken.'

```
' It is I, Halcro,' muttered Minna, in a tone so thin and low that it might have passed for the faint reply of the conjured phantom.
'You ! - you !' said Halcro, his tone of alurm changing to one of extreme surprise ; 'by this moonlight, which is waning, and so it is! Who conld have thought to find yon, my most lovely Night, wandering abroad in your own element! Bint you saw them, I reckon, as well as 11 bold enough in yin th fullow them, though.'
'Saw whom? - follow whom \({ }^{\prime}\) ' said Minna, hoping 't" siut some information on the subject of her fears and her annsinc!.
'The corpse-lights which danced at the haven,' ruplied Halcro ; 'they bode no good, I promise you: you wot well what the old rhyme says -

> Where corpse-light
> Dances right,
> Be it day or night,
> Be it by light or dark,
> There shall corpse lie stiff aad stark.

I went half as far as the haven to look after them, but they had vanished. I think I saw a boat put off, however : sinue one bound for the haaf, I suppose. I would we hail sunil news of this fishing. There was Norna left us in anger, and then these corpse-lights! Well, God help the while! 1 nun an old man, and can but wish that all were well over. But how now, my pretty Mima, tears in your eyes! And now that I see you in the fair moonlight, barefooted, too, by St. Maynulu: Were there no stockings of Zetland wool soft enough fur these pretty feet and ankles, that glance so white in the moonluan? What, silent ! - angry, perhaps,' he added, in a more serin, tone, 'at my nonsense ? For shame, silly maiden! Remember I am old enough to be your father, and have always lovel yon as my child.'
'I am not angry,' said Minna, constraining herself to speak. 'but heard you nothing? - saw you nothing? They must hive ;' ssed you.'
'They !' said Claud Halcro ; 'what mean you by they? Is the corpse-lights? No, they did not pass by me, but I thiak they have passed by you, and blighted you with their influence, for you are as pale as a spectre. Come -- vene, Minna,' he added, opening a side-door of the dwelling, 'theere moonlight walks are fitter for old poets than for young mailens. And so lightly clad as you are! Maiden, you should take care how yon give yourself to the breezes of a Zetland night, for they bring more sleet tian odours upon their wings. But, maiden, go in ; for, as glorious John says - or, as he does not say, for I cannot remember how his verse chimes - but, as I say myself, in a pretty poem, written when my muse was in her teens -

Menweful maiden néer should rise, Till the first beann tinge the skies: Silk-fringed eyelids ntill shonlil clone, Till the shan has kiss'l the rose: : Maiden's foot we nhould not view, Mark'd with tiny print on dew, Till the opening flowerotes spresul Carpet meet for beanty's treul -
Stay, what comes next ? - let me see.'
When the spirit of recitation seized on Chad Ialcro, he forgot time and place, and might have kept his cumpanion in the colld air for half an hour, giving peetical reasons why she o"ght to have been in bell. But she interrupted him by the yuestion, earnestly pronounced, yet in a vice which was scarcely artieulate, holding Hulero, it the same time, with is trembling and convulsive grasp, as if to support herself from falling, 'Saw you no one in the boat which put to sea but now ?
' Nonsense,' replied Halcro; 'how could I see any one, when light and distance only enabled ne to know that it was a hout, and not a grampus?
'But there must have been some one in the boat,' repeatel Minua, scare. conseious of what she said.
'Certainly,' miswered the poet, 'boats sellom work to windward of their own aecord. But come, this is all folly; and so, as the queen says in an old phay, which was reviven for the stage by rare Will D'Avenant, "To bed - to bed - to bed!"'
They separated, and Minna's limbs conveyed her with difficulty, through several devions passages, to her own chamber, where she stretched herself cautionsly beside her still sleeping sister, with a mind harassed with the most agonising apprehensions. That she had heard Cleveland, she was positive ; the tenor of the songs left her no donbt on that subject. If not equally certain that she had heard young Mertoun's voice in hot quarrel with her lover, the impression to that effeet was strong on her mind. The groan with which the struggle seemed to terminate, the fearful indication from which it seemed that the congneror had borue off the lifeless bully of his victin-all tended to prove that some fatal cvent hami concluded the contest. And w! ?:h of the unhupy men had fallen? - which had met a b.jooly death ? - which haul achieved a fatal and a bloody victory? These were quextions to which the still small voice of interior conviction answered, that her lover Cleveland, from character, temper, and habits, was most likely to have been the survivor of the fray. inc received from the reflection an involuntary comsomation whish she almost detested herself for admitting, when she revenllw. 1 , 1 that it was at once darkened with her liver's guilt an! inn bittered with the destmetion of Brenda's happiness for eser:
'Innocent, anhappy sister!' sinch were leer reflectinns: 'flant that art ten tin ss hetter than I, beeanso so mpretembing so unassmming in thine exeellence! How is it poswible that ! shonld cease to feel a pang whieh is only transferred from nis bosom to thine ?'

As these eruel thoughts crossed her mind, she emold inut refrain from straining her sister so elose to her busom that, after a heavy sigh, Breuda awoke.
'Sister,' she said, 'is it you? I dreaned I hay on onte of those monuments whieh Cland Halero described to ns, where the effigy of the inhabitant benentlo liess carved in stome upno the sepulehre. I dreamed sueh a marble form lay by my wite, and that it suddenly aequired enough of life and animation t" fold me to its cold, moist bosom ; and it is yonrs, Minma, that is indeed so chilly. You are ill, my dearest Mima! fiy (i.nl' sake, let me rise and call Euphane fea. What ails yon? lins Norna been here again ?'
'Call 10 one hither,' said Minna, de' uining her; 'mothing ails ne for which any one has a remedy - nothing but appre hersions of evil worse than even Noma conld prophesy. But God is above all, my dear Brenda; and let us pray to Him t. turn, as He only can, our evil into good.'

The. dil jointly repeat their nsual prayer for strength anil prot- 1 from on high, and again composed themselves ... sleep, nuffering no word save 'Goul bless you!' to pass hetwin' them when their devotions were fimished; thas serupulumisy dedicating to Heaven their last waking words, if human fraily prevented them from comnanding their last waking thumstis, Brenda slept first, and Minna, strongly resistin.y the dark and evil presentiments which again began to crowd tuemselves um" her imagination, was at last so fortumate as to slmuler alse.

The storm which Halcro hat expected hegran abmet d:y break - a squall, heavy with wind and rain, such as is with felt, even dr: ing the finest part of the season, in these latitule At the whistle of the wind and the clatter of the bain. on tho shingle-roofing of \(\mathrm{t}^{\mathrm{e}} \mathrm{e}\) fishers' huts, many a poor wiman wis awakened, and call:ad on her children to hold m, their little hands and join in prayer for the safety of the dear hasband anil father who was even then at the merey of the disturbend elements. Around the honse of Burgh. Westra, chimmeys howled end wimlows chased. Ihe props and rafters of the ligher gatt: of che lonilding, most of them formed ont of wreek-wnel, gromed and puivered, as fearing to le again dispersed by the tempest. But the daughters of Dhagnis 'lroil eontimed to sleep as roplly und as sweetly as if the hand of Shantrey had formed them out of statnin's marble. 'Ilee symall luml passed away, und the ambeams, dispersing the chomes which drifted to leownd, shone fill through the lattice, when Minm first started from the profomel sleep into which fatigne and mental exlanstion had lulled her, and, raising herself of ler arm, began to recall events, which, after this interval of provonnd repose, nevmed hinost to resemble the baseless visions of the night. She ahoost doabted if what she recalled of horr", previoas to her starting from her herl, was not indeed the fietion of a drean, suggested, perhaps, by some exterial somuls.
- I will nee Cland Halero instantly,' she 'aid: 'he may know sumething of these strange noisen, us lu was stirring at the tilue.

With that sle sprung from bed, but hrardly stood upright on the floor ere her sister exclamed,' 'Gracious Heaven! Mima, what ails your foot - your ankle?'
She looked down, and saw with surprise, which amomited \(t\). uony, that both her feet, bit particularly one of them, was stained with dark crimson, resembling the colour of dried blowd.

Without attemptine to answer Bremla, she rushed to the winluw and east a desperate look on thes grasis beneath, fior If re she korw she mint have contracted the fitad stain. But ae rain, "hich ! fallen there in treble quantity, un well from the hatrens from the eaves of the honse, had washed away that guile wand if indeed such had ever existed. All Was freshame bas and the blates of grass, overelarged and bent with raind fithen if like diamonds in the bright morning sun.

While Mimar jun the -pamgled verdme, with her fill dark eyes fixe whlarged to vireles loy the intensity of her terror, Brendat \(x\) - hangilig abmat her, and winlo many an eager inguiry presen to know whether or how she had hurt herself?
'A piece of glan- thongh wher, said Minna, bevol. N111-- 17 thinking herself that some excuse was necessary to her sinter : 'I scarce felt it at the time.'
'And yet see how it lins bled,' said her sister. 'Sweet Mimaa, nhe added, approaehing her with a wetted towel, 'Int me wipe the blood off - the hurt may be worse than yon think if.

But as she approached, Minan, wha saw no other way if preventing discovery that thes blowl with which she was stiminel had never flowed in her own veins, harshly and hastily rem.illowl the proffierel kinduess. Poor Brenda, meconscims of any ollimese whieh she had given to her sister, drew back two or three parmo on finding her serviee thus unkindly refused, and stonl parine at Mimas with looks in whieh there was more of surnrine innd mortified affection than of resentment, but which haid yet annething also of natural displeasure.
'Sister,' said she, 'I thought we had agreed but last night that, happen to us what might, we would at least love catlo other.'
'Mueh may happen betwixt night and moming !' muswered Minna, in words rather wrenehed from her by her sitnatinn than flowing forth the voluntary interpreters of her thought.
- Much may indeed have happened in a night so sturny; answered Brenda; 'for see where the very wall arounll tin phane's plant-a-eruive has been blown down; but neither wini nor rain, nor aught else, can cool our affeetion, Minna.'
'But that may elanace,' replied Minna, 'which may convert it into

The rest of the sentence she muttered in a tone so inlistinut that it eould not be apprehendel, wilile, at th.. an.ee time, she washed the blood-stains from her feet aud lefi:- kle. Breusi, who still remained looking on at some ciistance, cullearoured in vain to assume some tone which right iu-establish kiuhuc.. and confidence betwixt then.
'You were right,' she sait:. Minma, t. s.affer no one to hely) yon to dress so simple a sc h; standing where I du, it i. scarce visible.'
'The most ernel wounds,' replied Mima, 'are those which make no outward show. Are you sure yon see it at all!'
'Oh yes!' replied Brenta, froming her :aswer as she thomedt would best please her sister, 'I see a very sligho seratch; maty, now you draw on the stocking, I can see nothing.'
'You do indeed see nothing,' answered Minna, somewhat wildly ; 'but the time will soon come that all-ay, all - will be seen and known.'

Si, saying, she hastily completed her dress, and leat the way ti) lreakfart, where she assumed her place ammingt the guests:
 speech so altered and so bewildered, that it excited the attentum of in whole compmy, and the ntmost anxiety on he part of her sther: i.'? gnu' 'I'roil. Many nul varions were we comjectures of \(\mathrm{t}^{\prime}\), дuests coneerning a distemperatuso which seemed rathe: mental then corprirenl. Some linted that the maiden had been struck with an evil eye, and something they muttered atout Norna of the Fitful Ilend: some talkel of the depurture of Captain Clevelane, :bud marmured, 'It was a shane for a yonng lady to take nin so after a landlluper of whom no one knew anything'; and this contemptnoms epithet was in partienlar bestuwed on the captain liy Mistress Bahy Yelluwley, while she was in the act of wrapping romid i.s old skinuy neek the very handsome 'owerlay,' as slie called it, wherewith the siid cuptain had presented her. The whd hady ":hwrowrmu had a system of her own, which she hinted to Nist.es.: Yellowley, after thanking God that her own eomexinn with the Burgh-Westra frunily was by the lass's muther, who was a emmy Scotswoman, like herself.
'For, as to these Truils, yom see, Dame Yelluwley, for as high ins ther hold their heads, they say that ken (winking sagaciously) that there is a bee in their iomuet. That Norma, as they call her, for it's not her right mame neither, is at whiles far beside her right mind ; and they that ken the canse say the Finwd we a some gate or other linked in with it, for he will ue: ar hear at .ll word of her. Bat I was in scotland then, or I might have keul the real canse as weel as other filk. At ony rate, there is a kind of wilhuess in the blond. Ye ken very weed daft fiolk dimun bide to be contradicted; and I'll saty that for the Fi,wow, he likes to be contradieted as ill as ony man in Zetland. lint it shall uever be said that I suid ony ill of the hanse that lan sue nearly connected wi'. Only ye will minh, dime, it is through the Sinclairs that we are akin, mot throuft the 'Troils; and the Sinclairs are ken ' fir and wide for a wise generation, dime. But I see there is , ne stirrup enp emmin. rimul.'
'I Wromber,' said Mistrens Baby to her hrotl, ats stmatas the laty (ilowrowrmon turned from her, "what gats that mumble wife "dane, dame, dame" that gate at me? She might ken the Wule of the Clinkscales is as gade as ony Cilowrowrmis anamin them.'
'Th guests, meanwhile, were fast taking their departure, scarcely noticed by Magnus, who was so much engrossed with Miuna's indisposition that, contrary to his hospitable wont, he suffered them to go away unsaluted. And thus conclivided, amidst anxiety and illness, the festival of St. John, as celebrated on that season at the house of Burgh-Westra, adding another caution to that of the Emperor of Ethiopia - with how little security man can reckon upon the days which he destines to happiness.

\section*{CHAPTER XXIV}

> But this sad evil which doth her infest, Doth course of natural cause far exceed, And housed is within her hollow breast, That either seenis sonte cursed witch's deed, Or evill spright that in her doth such torment breed.

Faëry Queene, Book III. Canto III.

THE term had now elapsed, by several days, when Mordaunt Mertoun, as he had promised at his departure, should have returned to his father's abode at Jarlshof; but there were no tidings of his arrival. Such delay might, at another time, have excited little curiosity, and no anxiety ; for old Swertha, who took upon her the office of thinking and conjecturing for the little household, would have concluded that he had remained behind the other guests upon some party of sport or pleasure. But she knew that Mordaunt had not been lately in favour with Magnus Troil ; she knew that he proposed his stay at Burgh-Westra should be a short one, upon account of his father's health, to whom, 1 n iwithstanding the little encourugement which his filial piety received, he paid uniform attention. Swertha knew all this, and she became anxious. She watchel the looks of her master, the elder Mertoun ; but, wrapt in dark and stern uniformity of composure, his countenance, like the surface of a midnight lake, enabled no one to penetrate into what was beneath. His studies, his solitary meals, his lonely walks, succeeded each other in unvaried rotation, and seemed undisturbed by the least thought about Mordaunt's alsence.
At length such reports reached Swertha's ear, from various quarters, that she became totally unable to conceal her anxiety, and resolved, at the risk of provokiug her master into fury, or perhaps that of losing her place in his household, to force upon his notice the doubts which afflicted her own mind. Mordaunt's good-humour and goodly person must indeed have made wi small impression on the withered and selfish licart of the poor old woman, to induce her to take a course so desperate, mind from which her friend the Ranzelnan endeavoured in saill t. deter her. Still, however, conseious that a miscarriage in the matter would, like the loss of 'Trineulo's bottle in the hirse I"ul, be attended not only with dishonour but with infinite lows, he determined to proceed on her high emprise with as much cintinn as was consistent with the attempt.

We have already mentioned, that it seemed a part if the very nature of this reserved and unsocial being, at least since his retreat into the utter solitnde of Jarlshof, to endure liu (lla. to start a subject of conversation, or to put any finestinn tu him, that did not arise out of urgent and pressing enmerymy. Swertha was scnsible, therefore, that, in order to one"n thi discourse favourably which she proposed to hold with her muiskur, she must contrive that it should originate with himself.

I'o accomplish this purpose, while busied in preparing the table for Mr. Mertoun's simple and solitary disiser-meil, she formally adorned the board with two covers instead of one, and made all her other preparations as if he was to have a gresest in companion at dinner.
The arifice succeeded ; for Mertoun, on coming from liss study, no sooner saw the table thus arranged than he arked Swertha, who, waiting the effect of the stratagen as a tisher watches his ground-baits, was fiddling up and down the rumu, 'Whether Mordaunt was not returned from Burgh-Westri!
This question was the eue for Swertha, and sle answerel in a voice of sorrowfin anxiety, half-real, half-affected, ' Na - nia: nae sie divot had duntel at their door. It wad be bithe news indeed to ken that yomg Maister i.oodamit, puir dear bairn, were safe at hame.'
'And if he be not at home, why shonld you lay a cover fir him, you doting fool ?' replied Mertouis, in a tone well calcullated to stop the old woman's proceedings. But she replied holdly, 'That, indeed, somebody should take thought about Maister Mordauni : a' that she could do was to have seat ant plate ready for him when he came. But she thought the dear bairn had been ower lang awa'; and, if she mam speak unt. she had her ain fears when and whether he might ever come hame.'
'Your fears!' replied Mertoun, his eyes flashing as they usually did when lis hour of ungovernable passion approached: 'do you speak of your idle fears to me, who know that all of your sex, that is not fickleness, and folly, and self-conceit, and self-will, is a bundle of idiotical fears, vapours, and tremors? What are your fears to me, you foolish old har?

It is an arlmirable \(q^{n}\) ality in womankind that, when a breach of the laws of natmal nffection comes nuder their observation, the whole sex is in arms. Let a rmmonr arise in the street of a parent that has misused a child, or a child that has insulted a parent - I say nothing of the case of husband and wife, where the interest maty be acconnted for in sympathy - annl all the women within hearing will take animated and decided part with the sufferer. Swertha, notwithstanding her gread and avarice, ham her share of the generons: feeling whieh does so muel hononn to her sex, and was, on this occasion, so much carried on by its impulse that she eonfronted her master, and upbraided him with his hard-hearted indifference, with a bohlness at which she herself was astonished.
'I'o be sure, it wasia her that suld be fearing for her young maister, Maister Mordaunt, even althongh he was, as she might weel say, the very sea-ealf of her heart; but ony other father but his honour himseli wad have had speerines made after the puor lad, and him gane this eight days from Burgh. Westra, and nacbody kend when or where he han gane. There wasiaa a bairn in the howfi but was naming for him; for he made all their lits of boats with his knife ; there wadna be a dry eye in the parish if aught worse than weal should befall him-na, no ane, unless it might be his honour's ain.'

Mertuun had been mueh struck, and even silenced, by the insolent volubility of his insurgent housekeeper; but, at the last sarcasm, he imposed on lier silence in her turn with an audible voiee, accompanied with one of the most territic glanees whieh his dark eye and stern features could express. But Swertha, who, as she afterwards acquainted the Ranzelnan, was wonderfully supported during the whole seene, wonld not be eontrolled by the loud voice and ferocious look of her master, but proeeedod in the same tone as before.
'His honour,' she said, 'had made an mneo wark beeanse a wheen bits of kists and duds, that naebody had nse for, had been sathered on the beaeh by the poor bodies of the township: and here was the bravest lad in the country lost, and cast away, as, it were, before his cen, and nae ane asking what was cone 0 ' him.'
'What should come of him but good, you old fool,' answered Mr. Mertom, 'as far, at least. as there can be good in any of the follies he spends his time in ?'
'lhis was spoken rather in a scornful than an angry tone, and Swertha, who had got into the spirit of the dialogne, was resolved not to let it dron, now that the fire of her opmonent seeniael to slacken.

' 0 ay, to be sure I am an auld fille : but if Mainter Mordimut should lave settled down in the Romst, as mai; than at luat has been lost in that wearifn' squall the other mominis. by good luck it was short as it was sharp, or naething comili have lived in it; or if he were drowned in : loeh coming lature wa foot; or if he were killed by miss of footing ona a crais the haill istand kend how venturesone he was - who,' said Swertha, 'will be the auld fiule then ?' Aud she added a pathetie ejacenlation, that 'Gorl would protect the poor notherless hairn! fir if he had had a mother, there would have been search mate after him before now.'
This last sareasin affected Mertoun powerfully : his jaw yuivered, his face grew pale, and he muttered to Swertha to st into his study (where she was scarcely ever permitted to enter) and fetch hinu a bottle which stood therc.
'O ho!' quoth Swertha to herself, as she hastened on the commission, 'my master knows where to find a cup of comfint to qualify his water with upon fitting ocecasions.'
Ithere was indeed a case of such bottles as were nimally employed to hold strong waters, but the dust and cobwehs in which they were envcloped showed that they had not icell touched for many years. With some difficulty Swerthia extracted the cork of one of them by the help of a fork - fir corkscrew was there nonc at Jarlshof - and having ascertained by smell, and, in case of any mistakc, by a moderate monthfint. that it contained wholesome Barbadoes waters, she carried it into the roon, where her master still continued to struggle with his faintness. She then began to pour a sunall 'quantity intu the nearest cup that she could find, wisely julging that, m":" a person so much unaccustomed to the nse of spirituous liy!urs, a little might produce a strong effect. But the patient signed to her impatiently to fill the cup, which might hold mere than the third of an Faglish pint measure, up to tie very brim, and swallowed it down withont hesitation.
'Now the samts above have a tare on us!' said Swertha; 'he will be drunk as weel as mad, and wha is to guide himi then, I woulder?'

But Mertomn's breath and colour returned, withont the slightest symptom of iatoxication; on the contrary, swerthis afterwards reported that, 'Although she had always had a firm opinion in favour of a dram, yet she never saw one work sueh miracles: he spoke mair like a maia of the middle world tham she had ever heard him do since she had entered his serviee.'
'siwertha,' he said, ' \(y\) :a are right in this matter, mad I was wrong. Go down tu the Ranzehnan direetly, tell him to cone and speak with the withont an instant's delay, and bring me special word what boats and peeple he can command; I will employ them all in the searel, and they shall be plentifully rewardenl.'
stimulated by the spur which maketh the old woman proverbially to trot, Swertha prosted down to the hamlet with all the ipeed of threeseore, rejoicing that her sympathetic feelings were likely to achieve their own reward, having given rise to a quest which promised to be so luerative, and in the profits whereof she was determined to have her share, shonting cut ass the went, and long before she got withim hearing, the nanes of Neil Ronaldson, Sweyn Brickson, and the other friends anil comfederates who were interested in her mission. 'Th say the truth, notwithstanding that the rood dame really felt a deep, interest in Mordamit Mertom, and was mentally troubled on weoment of his absence, perhaps few things would have disapminted her more than if he had at this moment started up in her path safe and somm, and rendered umecessary, by his appearance, the expense and the bustle of searehing atter him.
Som did Swertha aceomplish her business in the village, and alljust with the senators of the township her owi little share of percentage upon the profits likely to accrue on lier mission ; and speedily did she retnrn to Jarlshof, with Neil Fomaldson by her sile, schooling him to the best of her skill in all the reculiarities of her mister:
'Aboon a' things,' she said, 'never make him wait for an answer ; and speak loud and distinct, as if yon we.e hailing a boat, for he downa bide to say the same thing twiee uver; and if he asks about distance, ye may make leagnes for miles. for he kens naething about the face of the earth that he lives upon ; and if he speak of siller, ye may ask dollars fir shillings, for he minds them nae mair than sclate-stanes.'
Thus tutored, Neil Ronaldson was introduced into the presence of Merton, but was utterly confounded to find that he conld not act upen the system of deception which had been projected. When he attempted, by some exaggeration of iistance and peril, to enhance the live of the boats and of the men (for the search was to be by see sini land), he found himself at once cut short by Mertoun, who showed not only the most perfect knowledge of the country, but of distances, tides, currents, and all belonging to the navigation of those seas, although these were topies with which he had hitherto appeared to be totally unacquainted. The Ramzelman, therefore, trembled when they came to speak of the recompense to be afforded fir their exertions in the search ; for it was not more unlikely that Mertoun should be as well informed of what was just anil proper upon this head as upon others; and Neil rememberel the storin of his fury when, at an early period after he had settled at Jarlshof, he drove Swertha and Sweyn Erickson from hin presence. As, however, he stood hesitating betwixt the oppenite fears of asking too much or too little, Mertoun stoppeel his mouth and ended his uncertainty by promising him a re rim. pense beyond what he dared to have ventured to ask, with an additional gratuity in case they returned with the pleasing intelligence that his son was safe.

When this great point was settled, Neil Ronaldson, like a mian of conscience, began to consider earnestly the various places where search should be made after the young man; mul having undertaken faitlifully that the inquiry should be prosecuted at all the houses of the gentry, both in this anm the neighbouring islands, he added that, 'After all, if his iommr would not be angry, there was ane not far off that, if anylundy dared speer her a question, and if she liked to answer it, comlid tell more about Maister Mordaunt than anybody else toull. Ye will ken wha I mean, Swertha? Her that was down at the haven this morning.' 'Thus he concluded, addressing himself with a mysterious look to the housekeeper, which she answered with a nod and a wirk.
'How mean you?' said Mertoun ; 'speak out, short and open - whon do you speak of?'
'It is Norna of the Fitful Head,' said Swertha, 'that the Ranzelman is thinking about; for she has gone up to it. Ringan's kirk this morning on business of her own.'
'And what can this person know of my son ?' said Mertom: 'she is, I believe, a waudering madwoman or impostor:'
'If she wanders,' said Swertha, 'it is for mae lack of means at hame, and that is weel known : plenty of a' thing hats sha of her ain, furbye that the Fowd himsell would let her want naething.'
'But what is that to my son?' said Mertoun, impatientls:
'I dinna ken ; she took unco pleasure in Maister Mordannt from the time she first saw him, and mony in braw thing she gave him at ae time or auother, furbye the gowd chain that hangs about his bonny craig. Folk say it is of fairy pold. I kenua what gold it is ; but Bryee Snuilsfoot says that the value will mount to an hundred pounds English, and that is nae dea.f uuts.'
'Go, Ronaldson,' said Mertoun, 'or else send some one, to seek this woman out - if you think there be a chance of her knowing anything of my sun.
'She kens a'thing that happens in thae islands,' said Neil himaldson, 'muckle sooner than other folk, and that is Heaven's truth. But as to going to the kirk, or the kirk-yard, to speer after her, there is not a man in Zetland will do it, for meed or for money, and that's Heaven's truth as weel as the other.'
'Cowardly, superstitious fools !' said Mertoun. 'But give me my eloak, Swertha. .This woman has been at Burgh-We entra -she is related to 'Troil's fanily - she may know something of Mordaunt's absenee and its canse. 1 will seek her myself. She is at the Cross kirk, youl say?
' No, not at the Cruss kirk, but at the auld kirk of St. Ringan's. It's a dowie bit, and far frae being camny; and if your honour,'" added Swertha, 'wad walk by my rule, I wad wait until she came back, and no tronble her when she may be mair busied wi' the dead, for ony thing that we ken, than she is wi' the living. The like of her carena to have other folks' een on then when they are, gude sain us : doing their ain partieular turns.'
Mertoun made no answer, but throwing lis cluak lowsely around him (for the day was misty, with passing showers), and leaving the deeayed mansion of Jarlshot, he walked at a pace mueh faster than was usual with him, taking the direction of the ruinous ehureh, which stood, as he well knew, within three or four miles of his dwelling.
The Ranzelinan and Swertha stood gazing after him in silenee, until he was fairly out of car-shot, when, lookin! seriously on each other, and shaking their sagacions heads in the same borling degree of vibration, they uttered their remarks iil the same breath.
'Fools are aye fleet and fain,' sail Swertha.
'Fey folk run fast,' added the Ranzelwan: 'ime the thing that we are born to, we cannot win by. I have known them that tried to stop folk that were fey. You have heard ,f Hulen

Einherson of Camsey, how she stopped all the boles and windows about the house, that her gudeman might not see daylight, and rise to the haaf-fishing, because she feared foul weather; and how the boat he should have sailed in was lost in the Roost; and how she came back, rejoicing in her gudeman's sufety; but ne'er may care ! for there she found him drowned in his own masking-fat, within the wa's of his ain bigging; and moreover

But here Swertha reminded the Ranzelinan that he must \(\mathrm{g}_{\mathrm{n}}\) down to the haven to get off the fishing-boats; 'For both that iny heart is sair for the bonny lad, and that I am fear'l he cast up of his ain accord before you are at sea ; and, as I have often told ye, my master may lead but he wima drive ; and if ye do not his bidding and get out to sea, the never a bodle of boat-hire will ye see.'
'Weel - Weel, good dame,' said the Ranzelman, 'we will launch as fast as we can; and, by good luck, neither Clawson's boat nor Peter Grot's is out to the haaf this morming, for a rabbit ran across the path as they were going on board, and they came back like wise men, kenning they wad be called to other wark this day. And a marvel it is to think, Swertlia, how few real judicious men are left in this land. There is our great Udaller is weel eneugh when he is fresh, but he makes ower mony voyages in his ship and his yawl to be lang sae; and now they say his daughter, Mistress Minna, is sair out of sorts. Then there is Noma kens muckle mair than other folk, but wise woman ye cannot call her. Our tacksman here, Maister Mertoun, his wit is sprung in the bowsprit, I doubt; lis son is a daft gowk; and I ken few of consequence hereabouts - excepting always myself, and maybe you, Swertha - but what may, in some sense or other, be called fules.'
'That may be, Neil Ronaldson,' said the dame ; 'but if ywn do not hasten the faster to the shore, you wall lose tide ; and, as I said to my master some short time syne, wha will be the fule then \({ }^{\prime}\) '

\section*{CHAP'TER XXV}

I do love these ancien, mins. We rever tread upon thein but we get Our foot uponsume ruvereml listory ; And, questionles.s, lere, in thin open court (Which now lies nated to the injuries Of atormy weather), some mey lie interril, Loved the church so well, and gave so largely to it, They thought it should have canopied their hones Till doomsday ; but all things have their end : Churches and cities, which have diseases like tos:ien, Must have like death which we have.

THE ruinous church of St. Ninian had, in its time, enjoyed great celebrity ; for that mighty system of Roman superstition which spread its roots over all Europe, had not failed to extend them even to this remote archipelago, and Zetland had, in the Catholie times, her saints, her shrines, and her relics, whieh, though little known elsowhere, attracted the homage, and commanded the observanee, of the simple inhabitants of 'Thule. Their devotion to this church of St. Ninian, or, as he was provineially termed, St. Ringan, situated, as the edifice was, el se to the sea-beaeh, and serving, in many points, as a land-mark to their boats, was particularly obstinaie, and was eonnected with so much superstitions cercmonial and eredulity that the Reformed clergy thonght it best, by an order of the chureh courts, to prohibit all spiritual service within its walls, as tending to foster the rooted faith of the simple and rude people around in saint-worship and other erroneous doctrines of the Romish Church.
After the church of St. Ninian had been thus denonuced as a seat of idolatry, and deseerated of course, the public worehip was transferred to another ehurch; and the roof, with its lead and its rafters, having been stripped from the little ruide old Gothic building, it was left in the willeneness to the mercy of the elements. The fin \(y\) of the uneontrolled wimpls, whinh Lowled along an exposed npace resembling that which ne have described at Jarlshof, very soon choked up nave and aisle, mul on the morth-west side, which was eliefly exposell to the winl, hid the outside walls more than half-way up with the mumnl. of irifted samel, over which the gable-ends of the hrildinge, with the little belfry, which was built above its castern aughi, armen in ragged and shattered nakedness of ruin.

Yet, deserted as it was, the kirk of St. Ringan still retainoll some semblance of the ancient homage formerly renderen fhetie: The rude and ignorant fishernen of Dunrossucess whentwel ; practice, of which they themselves had wellnigh forgotten the wrigin, and from which the Protestant clergy in vain endeatinnell to deter them. When their boats were in extreme preril, it was commen annongst them to propose to vow an 'awnoms,' \(n\) o they termed it, that is, an ahms, to St. Ringan; and when the dhuger was over, they never failed to nbsolve themselves of their vow by coming singly and seeretly to the old ehurch, and putting off their shoes and stockings at the entrunce of the churchyari, walked thriee around the ruins, observing that they lid in in the course of the sun. When the circuit was accomplishell fir the third time, the votary droppel his offering, usually a suall silver coin, through the mullions of a lanceolated win. liw, which opened into a side aisle, and then retired, avoiding carroflly to look behind him till he was beyond the precincts which haul once been hallowed ground; for it was believed that the skillo ton of the saint received the offcring in his bony hand, and showed his ghastly death's-head at the window in which it wals thrown.

Indeed, the scene was rendered more appalling to weak anul ignorant minds because the same stormy and ellyying wiuls which, on the one side of the clurch, threatencd to bury the ruins with sand, and had, in fact, heapel it up in huge qnantitites, so as almost to hide the side wall with its buttresses, seemed in other places bent on uncovering the graves of those who haid been laid to their long rest on the sonth-eastern 'punter ; null, after an musnally hard gale, the eoffins, and sometimes the very corpses of those who lail been interred without the usinal ccrements, were discovered, in a ghastly mamer, to the egoe of the living.

It was to this desolated place of worship that the orler Mertoun now proeceded, though withont any of those religinnor superstitions purposes with which the church of St. Ringian was usually approached. He was totally wi-hout the superstitious fears of the country - may, from the equestered nuil sullon manner in which he lived, withotrawi : himself from human suciety even when assembled for wow it was tho general opinion that he erred on the nore fital a le, mind helieven rather tow little than too much of that whiel the chureh receives and enjoins to Christians.

Is he entered the little bay, on the shore, and almost on the beach, of which the ruins aro situated, he conld mut help pansing for an instant, mal becoming sensible that: the scene, ax calculated to operate on hunan feelings, had bee selected with much jonlgment as the site of a religions linnse. In from lay the sea, into which two headlands, which firmo.il the extrensities of the bny, projected their gigantic canse thrk anal able rocks, in the ledger of which the gulls, uypeared like thakes of snow; whil the eliff, stood whole lines of corn of each other, like soldiers in their thing was there none to see. The peesthons state, was disturbed enougs At the hillums. Which rine of colouring equally striking and awful.

Betwixt the extremities, or caphes, of the areting hasdlands, there rolled, on the day when Mertum visited the scene, a deep and dense aggregation of clouls, tarruagh which nin human eye could penetrate, and which, Lumaling the vivion, and excluding all view of the distant mupt representation of the :- in the! Miran, whose extent was concealed by vapu, mul ' \(n\) and st rms. The ground rising steeply from the sen-theach permithing ne view into the interior of the comutry, appenre if irretrievable harremess, where sernbby and stmites utermixed with the long bent, or coarse grass, whielt tir. ars sumly suik, elevation, which rose above the beach the very hostimin if the bay, and receled a little from the seas so as th, he withunt reach of the waves, arnse the hatf-buried ruin whit we have: atready deseribed, surromided by a wastel, half-: iumnis, and monddering wall, which, breached in several plates, served still to divide the precincts of the cenetery. 'I'he mariners who were driven by aecident into this solitary bay pretemed that the church was oceasionally observed to be full of lights, and, from that ci umstance, were usod to prophosy shipwrech ianl deaths ly me.

As Mertoun approached near to the chapel, he mopped, in sensibly, and perlinps without much premeditation, meamenes to avoid being himself seen until he came close muler the walls of the brrial-ground, which he approached, as it chancel, on that side where the mand was blowing from the graves in the manner we have describel.

Here, louking throught one of the gaps in the wall which time had made, he beheld the person whom he sought, nevupied in a manner which assorted we! with the ideas popularly enter. tained of her character, but which was otherwise sutfiniently exirairdisary.

Shu was employed besicie a rude monument, on one sile of which was represented the rough outline of a cavalier, ir knipht, on horseback, while on the other appeared \(n\) shiell, with the amorial bearings no defaced as not to be intelligille: which esentcheon was suspended by one angle, contrary tu the modern custom, which usually places them straight mul np. right. At the foot of this pillar was believed to repure, 位 Mertom had formerly hearil, the bones of Ribolt 'Iruil, whe of the remote ancestors of Magnus, and a ma: renowned for deed. of valorons emprise in the listh century. Froun the grave if this warrior Norna of the Fitful Hea 1 seemed busied in shovelling the sand, an easy task where it was so light and loose : su that it seemerl phain that she would shortly complete what th. rude winds had begun, and make bare the bones which liy there interred. As she laboured, she muttered her magic sums: for without the Rumic rlyyme no form of North :-1 superstiti", was ever performed. We have perhaps bresc: ved ton many examples of these incantations; but we cannot help attempting to translate that which follows : -
> - Champion, famell for warlike toil, Art thon silent, Ribolt Troil? Sand, and lust, :nd prebbly stones Are leaving bare thy giant bones. Who larell touch the will hear's skin Ye slumber'l o:l while life was in ? A woman now, or balie, may come, And cast the covering from thy tomb.
> Yet he not wrathfnl, chief, nor blight Mine eyes or wars with cound or sight ! \(I\) come not, with unhailowill tread, To wake the slumbers of the dead,

Or lay thy ginnt rellea luran
Bint whin I seak thou well canst ajmere. If it to iny hand allow'd 'Tu sherar a merk'w weight from thy ahromd; Yet leave there wheetad lead momagh Tou alitid thy lonien from wather rongh.

Ser, I lraw me magie knife:
Never while thour wert in lifu.
Laid'int thous ntill for sluth or fisar,
Wheu puint wind alge were glitterlug near :
See, the cerements mow I mevep.
Waken now, or nlerpi for ever !
Thou wilt not wake / the deed In done: -
The prize I sought Is fairly won.
Thankn, Ritholt, thankn; for this the sen Shall smouth its ruttled erest for thre, Al: I while afar itm billows fomm, Sulwide tu prace near Ribol t's tomb. Thanks, Rikult, thauks: for this the might Of wild winds mging at their heigh1, When to thy place of slumber nigh, Shall mofteu to a lullaby.
She, the dame of doult and dread,
Norna of the Fitfinl Ilemi, Mighty in her own despite, Miseralle in lier might, In despuir and fremzy great, In hor greatiness ilesulate, Wisent, wickedest who lives, Well can kern the word she gives.'

While Normu chunted the first part of this rhyme, she completed the lask of laying have a part of the lemben coffin of the ancient warrior, and severed from it, with mach cantion and apparent awe, a portion of the metal. She then reverentially threw back the sind upon the eoffin: and by the time she hail finished her song no trace remained that the secrets of the sepulchre had been violatel.

Mertoun remuined gazing on her from behind the churellyard wall during the whole ceremony, not from any impression of veneration for her or her employmeni, but because he connceived that to interrnpt a madwoman in her ate of madness was not the best way to obtain from her such intelligence as she might have to impart. Meanwhile, he had full time to comsider her figure, althounh her face was whenred by her dishevelled hair and by the home of her haik mantle, which permitted no more to be visible dhan a Druides wombld pobably

\footnotetext{
rul. siti- 18
}
have exhibited at the celebration of her mystical rites. Merinn had often heard of Norna before; may, it is most proballe thiit he might have seen her repentedly, for she had been in th: vicinity of Jarlshof more than once sinee his residence there. But the absurd stories which were in circulation revpecting her prevented his paying any attention to a person whon he regarded as either an impostor or a mudwoman, or a compunnd of both. Yet, now that his attention was by circmustancec: involuntarily fixed upon her person and deportment, he conllid not help acknowledging to himself that she was either a cinnplete enthusiast or rehearsed her part so admirably thin in. pythoness of ancient times eould have exeelled her. 'The dignity and solemnity of her gesture, the sonorous, yet impressive, tunie of voiee with which she addressed the departed spinit whee mortal relies she ventured to disturb, were such as fitiled tint to make an impression upon him, careless and indifferent in lis: generally appeared to all that went on around him. But no sooner was he: singular oeeupation terminated than, enterims the churchyard with some difficulty by elambering over the disjointed ruins of the wall, he made Norna aware of his presence. Far from starting or expressing the least surprise at his appearance in a place so solitary, she said, in a tone that seemed to intimate that he had been expected, 'So - you have sought me at last?'
'And found you,' replied Mertoun, judging he woull lest introduce the inquirics he had to make by assuming a thne which corresponded to her own.
'Yes!' she replied, 'found me you have, and in the platro' where all men must meet-anid the tabernacles of the dead.'
'Here we must, indeed, meet at last,' replied Mertom, glaneing his eyes on the desolate seene around, where healstones, half-eovered in sand, and others, from which the sinne wind had stripped the soil on which they rested, coveren with inseriptions, and seulptured with emblems of mortality, weri" the most conspienous objeets - 'here, as in the house of death, all men must meet at length; and happy those that come soonest to the quiet haven.'
'He that dares desire this haven,' said Norna, 'must have steered a steady course in the voyage of life. I dare not hope for such quiet harbour. Darest thou expeet it? or has the course thou hast kept deserved it?'
'It matters not to my present purpose,' replied Mertom,
'I have to ask you what tidings you know of my son, Mordaunt Mertoun ?'
'A father,' replied the sibyl, 'asks of a strauger what tidiags she has of his son I How should I know aught of him? 'I'lie cormorant says not to the mallard, "Where is my brood ?",
'Lay aside this useless affectation of mystery,' said Mertom : ' with the vulgar and ignorant it has its effect, but upon me it is thrown away. 'I'he people of Jarlshof have told me that yon do know, or may know, something of Mordaunt Mertom, who has not returned home from the festival of St. Jolu's, held in the honse of your relative, Magnus 'Iroil. Give me such information, if indeed ye have it to give ; and it whall be recompensed, if the means of recmupense are in my power.'
' 'l'he wide round of earth,' replied Norna, 'holds nothing that I would call a recompense for the slightest worl that I throw away upon a living ear. But for thy son, if thou wouldst see him in life, repair to the approaching fair of Kirkwall, in Orkney.'
'And wherefore thither 1' said Mertoun; 'I know he hat 110 purpose in that direction.'
'We drive on the strean of fate,' answered Norna, ' without nar or rudder. You had no purpose this morning of visiting the kirk of St. Ringan, yet you are here; you had no purpuse but a minute hence of being at Kirkwall, and yet you will to thither.'
' Not muless the cause is more distinctly explained to me. I am no believer, dame, in those who assert your smpernatural powers.'
'Yon shall believe in them ere we part,' sail Norna. 'As yet yon know but little of me, nor suall yon know more. But 1 know enough of yon, and conld convince you with one word that I do so.'
'Convince me, then,' said Mertoun: ' for, unless I am so convincel, there is little chance of my following your counsel.'
'Mark, then,' said Norna, 'what I have to say on your son's score, else what I shall say to you on your own will banish every other thonght from your memory. You shall go to the approaching fair at Kirkwall ; and on the fifth day of the fair you shall walk, at the hour of noon, in the outer aisle of the cathedral of St. Magnus, and there you shall meet a person who will give yon tidings of your son.'
'You must speak more distinctly, dame,' retnrued Mertoun, scornfully, 'if you hope that I sliall follow your connsel. I have been fooled in my time by women, but never so grossly as you seem willing to gull me.'
'Hearken, then!' said the old woman. 'The word which I speak shall touch the nearest secret of thy life, aud thrill thee through nerve and bone.'
So saying, she whispered a word into Mertoun's ear, the effect of which seemed almost magical. He remained fixed and motionless with surprise, as, waving her armu slowly aloft, with an air of superiority and triumph, Norna glided from linn, turned round a corner of the ruins, and was soon out of sight.

Mertoun offered not to follow or to trace her. 'We fly from our fate in vain!' he said, as he began to recover linnself; and turning, he left behind him the desolate ruins with their cemetery. As he looked back from the very last point at which the church was visible, be saw the figure of Nurna, muffled in her mantle, standiug on the very summit of the ruined tower, and stretching out to the sea-breeze something which resembled a whitc pennon, or flag. A feeling of hurrer, similar to that excited by her last words, again thrilled through his bosom, and he hastened c.iwards with unwonted speed, until he had left the church of St. Ninian, with its bay of sand, far behind him.

Upon his arrival at Jarlshof, the alteration in his comtenance was so great that Swertha conjectured he was about to fall into one of those fits of deep melancholy which she termed his dark hour.
'And what better could be expected,' thought Swertha, ' when he must needs go visit Norna of the Fitful Head when she was in the haunted kirk of St. Ringan's?'

But, without testifying any other symptous of an alienated mind than that of deep and sullen dejistion, her master acquainted her with his intention to go to the fair of Kirkwall - a thing so contrary to his usual habits that the honsekeeper wellnigh refused to credit her ears. Shortly after he: hearl, with apparent indifference, the accounts returned by the different persons who had been sent out in quest of Morlamit. by sea and land, who all of them returned without any tidings. 'The equanimity with which Mertoun heard the report of thrir bad success convinced Swertha still more firmly that, in his interview with Norna, that issue had been predicted to him ly the sibyl whom he had consulted.

The township were yet more surprised when their tacksm:11. Mr . Mertom, as if on some sudden resolution, made prepanelion:
to visit Kirkwall during the fair, although he had hitherto avoided sedulously all such places of public resort. Swertha puzzled herself a good deal, withont being able to penetrate this mystery ; and vexed herself still more concerning the fate of her young master. But her concern was much softened by the deposit of a sum of money, seeming, however moderate in itself, a treasure in her eyes, which her master put into her lands, acquainting her at the same time that he had taken hiv passage for Kirkwali in a small bark belonging to the proprieton of the island of Mousa.

\section*{CHAP'TER XXVI}

Nae langer she wept, her tears were \(a^{\circ}\) spent ;
Despair it was come, and she thought it content ; She thought it coutent, hut lier cheek it grew pale, And she droop'd, like a lily broke down by the hail. 1

Continuation of Aull Robin Eray.

THE eondition of Minua much resenbled that of the village heroine in Lady Ann Lindsay's beantiful bullad. Her natural firmness of mind prevented her from sink. ing under the pressure of the horrible secret, which haunted her while awake, and was yet more tormenting during her hroken and hurried slumbers. There is no grief so dreadful as that which we dare not commuricate, and in which we can neither ask nor desire sympathy ; and when to this is added the burden of a guilty mystery to an innoeent bosom, there is little wonder that Minna's health should have snuk under the burden.

To the friends around, her babits and maniers, nay, her temper, seemed altered to such an extraordinary degree that it is no wonder that some should have ascribed the change to witchcraft, and some to incipient madness. She became unable to bear the solitude in which slee formerly delishted to spend her time ; yet, when she hurried into society, it was without either joining in, or attending to, what passed. Gienerally: she appeared wrapped in sad, and even sullen, abstraction. mutil her attention was suddenly roused by some casual mention of the narne of Cleveland or of Mordaunt Mertoun, at which she started, with the horror of one who sees the lighted match applied to a charged minc, and expects to be instantly involved in the effects of the explosion. And when she observed that the discovery was nut yct made, it was so far from being a comsolation, that slie ahost wished the worst were knowa, rather than endure the continued agonies of suspense.

Her conduct towards lier sister was so variable, yet uniformly so painful to the kind-hearted Brenda, that it sremed to

\footnotetext{
\({ }^{1}\) See Motto to Chap. \(x \times r i\). Note 32.
}
all around one of the strongest features of her malady. Sometimes Minna was impelled to seek her sister's company, as if by the consciousness that they were common sufferers by a misfortume of which she herself alone could grasp the extent ; and then surddenly the feeling of the injury which Brenda had received through the supposed agency of Cleveland made her unable to bear her presence, and still less to endure the convolation which her sister, mistaking the nature of her malady, vainly endeavoured to administer. Frequently, also, did it happen that, while Brenda was imploring her sister to take confort, she incautiously toucherl ipon some sulbject which thrilled to the very centre of her soul; so that, mable to couceal her agony, Mimna would rush hastily from the apartment. III these different moorls, thonth they too much resembleil, to one who knew not their real wurce, the eaprices of ankind estrangement, Brenda endured with such prevailing and 1 unrufled gentleness of disposition that Miuna was frequently meved to shed floods of tears upon her neck; and, perhaps, the moments in which she did so, though imbittered by the rece ollection that her fatal seeret concerned the destruction if Brenda's happiness as well as her own, were still, softened is they were by sisterly affection, the most endurable moments of this most miserable period of her life.

The effects of the alternations of moping melancholy, fearful agitation, and bursts of nervons feeling were suon visible on the poor young woman's face and person. She became pale and emaciated; her eye lost the steady, quiet look of happiness and innocence, and was alternately dim and wild, as she was acted upon by a general feeling of her own distressful condition, or by some quicker and more poignant sense of agony. Her very features seemed to change, and become sharp and eager, and her voice, which, in its ordinary tones, was low and placid, now sometimes smo in indistinct mutterings, and sometimes was raised beyond the natnral key, in hasty amb abrupt eaclamations. When in company with others, she was sullenly silent, and, when she ventured into solitude, was observed (for it was now thought very proper to watch her on such oucasions) to speak much to herself.

The , pharnacy of the islands was in vain resorted to by Minna's anxions father. Sages of hoth sexes, who knew the virtues of every herb which driuks the dew, and angnented these virtues by words of might, insed while they prepared aul applied the medieines, were attended with no benefit; and Magnus, in the utmost auxiety, was at last induced to have recourse to the adviee of his kinswoman, Norna of the ":ful Head, although, owing to circminstanees notice?' in the conree if the story, there was at this time some estrangement betwren them. His first applieation was in vain. Norna was then at her usnal plaee of residence unn the sea-eoast, near the hamp land from which she usually took her designation ; but, althn, whol bric Scambester himself brought the messurge, she refusell 1 w N tively to see him or return any answer.

Magnus was angry at the slight put upon his messenger and message ; but his anxiety on Minna's aceount, as well as the respect which he had for Norua's real misfortunes and imputend wisdom and power, prevented him from indulging, wi the present occasion, his usual irritability of disposition. "u the contrary, he determined to make an application to his kinswoman in his own person. He kept his purpose, however, t" himself, and only desired his daughters to be in readiness tu attend him upon a visit to a relation whom he had nut seen for some time, and directed them, at the same time, to carry some provisions aloug with then, as the journey was distant, and they might perhapss find their friend unprovided.

Unaceustomed to ask explanations of his pleasure, and hoping that exercise and the amusement of such an excursion might the of service to her sister, Brenda, upon whom all household and family charges now devolved, caused the necessary preparations to be made for the expedition; and, on the next morning, they were engaged in traeing the long and tedious eourse of heach and of moorland whieh, only varied by occasional patches of oats and barley, where a little ground had been selected for sultivation, divided Burgh-Westra from the north-western extremity of the Mainland (as the prineipal island is calleel), which terminates in the eape called Fitful Head, as the sontliwestern point ends in the cape of Sumburgh.

On they went, through wild and over wold, the Citaller bestriding a strong, square-made, well-barrelled palfrey: if Norwugian breed, somewhat taller, and yet as stout, as the ordinary ponies of the eountry ; while Minua and Bremla, fanmed, amon \({ }^{\text {sit }}\) other accomplishwents, for their horsemanship, rule two of those hardy animals, which, bred and reared with nure pains than is usually bestowed, showed, both by the neatuess of their form and their aetivity, that the raee, so much and sis carelessly neglected, is capable of being inproved into beanty without losing anything of its spirit or vigour. I'hey were attended by two servants on horseback and two on foot, seenre that the last eircumstanee would be no delay to their jonrney, becanse a great part of the way was so ruggeed, or so marshy, that the horses could only move at a foot-puce ; nul that, whenever they met with any eonsiderable tract of hard and even cround, they had only to borrow from the nearest herd of ponies the use of a couple for the accommodation of these pedestrians.
The journey was a melaneholy one, and little conversation massed, except when the Udaller, pressed hy impatienee and vexation, urged his pony to a quiek pace, and aginin, recollecting Mima's weak state of health, slackened to a walk, and reiterated inguiries how she felt herself, and whether the fatigne was not two much for her. At noon the party halted and partook of some refreshment, for which they had made ample provision, beside a pleasant spring, the pureness of whose waters, however, did not snit the Udaller's palate, until qualified by a liberal addition of riglit Nantz. After he had a sceond, yea, and a third, time filled a large silver travelling-up, embosied with a German Cupid smoking a pipe and a Gernan Bacchus emptying his flask down the throat of a bear, he began to become more talkative than vexation had permitted him to be during the early part of their journey, and thus addressed his daughters:
' Well, ehildren, we are within a leagne or two of Norna's dwelling, and we shall soon see how the old spell-mutterer will reeeive us.'
Mimua interrupted her father with a faint exelamation, while Brenda, surprised to a great degree, exclaimed, 'Is it then to Nurua that we are to make this visit? Heaven forbid!’
'And wherefore should Heaven forbid?' said the Udaller, knitting his brows; 'wherefore, I would gladly know, shoulhi Heaven forbid me to visit my kinswoman, whose skill may be of use to your sister, if any woman in Zetland, or man either, can be of service to her? You are a fool, Brenda; your sister has more sense. Cheer up, Mima: thou wert ever wont to like her songs and stories, and used to lang about her neek, when little Brenda eried and ran from her like a Spanish mer chantman fron a Duteh caper. \({ }^{11}\)
'I wish she may not frighten me as much to-day, father,' replied Brenda, desirous of indulging Mimai in her tare iturnity, and at the same time to amuse her father by sustaining the

\footnotetext{
I Hight-armed pessel of the seventeenth century, adapted for privateering, and much used by the Dutch.
}
conversation: 'I have heard so mueh of hor dwellin', that I am rather alarmed at the thought of going there uninvitel.
'I'loou art a fool,' said Magnus, 'to think that a visit frum lier kinsfolks can ever come amiss to a kind, heurty, Hialtiant heart like my eousin Norna's. And, now I think on 't, I will be sworn that is the reason why she would nut receive liric Scambester! It is many a long day since I have seen her elimney smoke, and I have never carried you thither. She hath indeed some right to call me unkind. But I will tell her the truth; and that is, that, though such be the fashiom, I lin not think it is fair or honest to eat up the substance of lone women-folks, as we do that of our brother udallers, when we roll about from house to house in the winter season, until we gather like a suowball, and eat up all wherever we come.
'There is no fear of our putting Norna to any distres, jun-1 now,' replied Brenda, 'for I have ample provision of every thing that we can possibly need - fish, and bacon, and salted nuuttinn, and dried geese - more than we could eat in a week, herille, enough of liquor for you, father.'
'Right - right, my girl!' said the Udaller: 'a well-fouml Ahif' makes a merry voyage; so we shall only want the kinduess of Norna's roof and a little bedding for you; for, as to myself, my sea-eloak and honest dry boards of Norway deal suit me hetter than your eider-down eushions and mattresses. So that Nornai will have the pleasure of seeing us without having a stiver's worth of trouble.'
' ' I wish she may think it a pleasure, sir,' replied Brenda.
' Why, what does the girl mean, in the name of the Martyr ? replied Magnus Troil ; 'dost thou think my kinsman is a heathen, who will not rejoice to see her own flesh and blunil? I would I were as sure of a good year's fishing! No - Im: ! only fear we may find her from home at present, forshe is often a wanderer, and all with thinking over much on what can never be helped.'

Minna sighed deeply as her father spoke, and the Challer went on :
'Dost thon sigh at that, my girl? Why, 't is the fault of half the world ; let it never be thine own, Minna.'

Another suppressed sigh intimated that the cantion came too late.
'I believe you are afraid of my cousin as well as Brenlia is,' said the Udaller, gazing on her pale countenance: 'if so, speak the word, and we will return back again as if we had the wind on our quarter, mud were rumning fifteen knots ly the line.'
'Do, for Heaven's sake, sister, let us return !' suid Brenda, imploringly; 'you know - you remember - you must be well aware that Norin enn do nonght to help yon.
'It is but too true,' said Minina, in in smblued voice; 'but I know not - she may answer a yuestion ... a question that only the miserable dnre ask of the miserable.'
' Nay, my kinswoman is no miser,' answered the Vidaller, who only heard the begiming of the worl. 'A gool ineome she las, buth in Orkney and liere, mud many a fair lispmind of butter is paid to her. But the poor have the best share of it, and shame fiall the Zetlander who begrudges them; the rest she spends, I wot not how, in her journeys through the islands. But yon will laugh to see her house, and Nick Strumpfer, whom she calls liacolet. Many folks think Niek is the devil ; bit he is flesh and blood, like any of ns - his father lived in Graemsay. I shall be glad to see Nick again.'

While the Udaller thus ran on, Brenda, who, in recompense for a less portion of inagination than her sister, was gifted with sumd eommon sense, was debating with herself the probable effect of this visit on her sister's licalth. She came finally to the resolution of speaking with lier father aside, upon the first necasion which their journey shonh afford. To him she determined to communicate the whole particulars of their nocturnal interview with Norna, to which, among other agitating canses, she attributed the depression of Minna's spirits, and then make himself the judge whether he ought to persist in his visit to a person so singular, and expose his daughter to all the shock which her nerves might possibly receive from the interview.
Just as she had arrived at this conclnsion, her father, clashing the crumbs from his laced waisteoat with one hand and receiving with the other a fourth cup of brandy and water, drank devontly to the success of their voyare, and ordered all to be in readiness; to set forward. Whilst they were suddling their ponies, Bremla, with some diffienlty, eontrived to make her father understand she wished to speak with him in private - no small surprise to the honest Udaller, who, though secret as the grave in the very few things where he considered secrecy as of inportance, was so far from practising mystery in general, that his most important affairs were often discusser by him openly in presence of his whole family, servants inc... id.

But far greater was his astonishment when, remaining purposely with his dangliter, Brenda, a little in the wake, as he terned it , of the other riders, lie heard the whole acconnt of Noma's vivit to Burgh-Westra, and of the communication with which she had then astounded his daughters. For a longr, timu he conld ntter nothing but interjections, and ended with : thonsand curses on his kinswoman's folly in telling his danghter, such a histury of horror.
'I have often heard,' said the Udaller, 'that she was quite mad, with all her wisdom and all her knowledge of the sensums: and, by the bones of my namesake the Martyr, I begin now ti. believe it most assuredly! I know no more how to steer than if I had lost my compass. Had I known this before we set out, I think I had remained at home; but now that we have colne so far, and that Norna expects us -'
'Expects us, father!' said Brenda; 'how can that be pris. sible?
'Why, that I know not; but she that can tell how the winl is to blow can tell which way we are designing to ride. she must not be provoked; perhaps she has done my family this ill for the words I had with her about that lad Mordamet Mertum, and if so, she can mudo it ayain; and so she shall, or I will know the cause wherefore. But I will try fair worls firt.'

Finding it thus settled that they were to go forward, Brenda endeavoured next to learn from her fatlier whether Norma's tale was founded in reality. He shook his head, groaned bitterly, and, in a few words, acknowledged that the whole, so far as concerned her intrigue with a stranger and her father's death, of which she becanie the accidental and most innocent cause, was a matter of sad and indisputable truth. 'For her infints,' he said, 'he could never, by any means, learn what became of it.'
'Her infant!' exclaimed Brenda; 'she spoke not a word of her infant!'
'Then I wish my tongue had been blistered,' said the U'taller, 'when I told you of it! I see that, young and old, a man hats no better chance of keeping a secret from you women than an eel to keep himself in his hold when he is sniggled with a luy' of horse-hair : sooner or later the fisher teases him out of his hole, when he has once the noose round his neck.'
'But the infant, my father,' said Breuda, still insistiug on the particulars of this extroordinary story, 'what becaue of it ?'
'Carried off, I fancy, by the blackguard Vaughan,' "uswered the Udaller, with a gruff accent, which plainly betokened how weary he was of the subject.
'By Vaughan I' said Brenda, 'the lover of poor Norma doubtless ! What sort of man was he, father !'
' Why, much like other men, I faney,' answered the U'daller. I never saw him in my life. He kept eompany with the Scottish familios at Kirkwall, and I with the gool oll Norse foll. Ah! if Norna had dwelt always amongst her own kin, and not kept eompany with her Seottish nequaintance, she wonld have known nothing of Vaughan, and things might have been otherwise. But then I should have known nothing of your blessed mother, Brenda; and that,' he mail, his large blue eyes shining with a tear, 'would have saved me a slort joy and a lung sorrow.'
- Norna could but ill have supplied my mother's phace to you, father, as a companion and a friend - that is, julging from all I have heard,' said Brenda, with some hesitation.
But Magnus, softened by recolleetions of his belovel wife, answered her with more indulgenee than she expected. if would have been content,' he said, 'to have wedded Norme at that time. It would have been the sollering of ant ohl quarrel - the healing of an old sore. All onr blood relations wished it, and, situated as I was, espeeially not having seen your bessed mother, I had little will to oppose their comnsels. Yon must not judge of Norna or of me hy sueh an appearanee as we now present to you. She was young and beautiful, and I gamesome as a Highland buek, and little earing what haven I made for, having, as I thought, more than one under my lee. But Nurna preferred this man Vaughan, and, as I told you before, it was, perhaps, the best kinchess she conld have done to me.'
'Ah, poor kinswonan!' said Brendla. 'But believe yon, father, in "he high powers which she claims - in the mysterious vision of the dwarf - in the

She was interrupted in these questions by Magnus, to whom they were obvionsly displeasing.
'I believe, Brenda,' he said, 'aeeording to the belief of my forefathers. I pretend not to be a wiser man than they were in their time; and they all believed that, in cases of grent worldy distress, Providence upened the eyes of the mind afforded the sufferers a vision of futurity. It was but a trimming of the boat, with reverence'-here he touched his "t reverentially ; 'and, after all the shifting of ballast, poor A.o. at is as heavily loaded in the bows as ever was an (Irkneyman's yawl at the dog-fishing : she has more than afticiction enongh ow hrard to balanee whatever gifts she may have had in the millst

\section*{THE PIRATE}
of her calamity. They are as painful to her, poor noml, as a crown of thorns, would be to her brows, though it were the badge of the empire of Denmark. And do not yon, Brenila, werk to be wiser than your fathers. Your sister Nimua, lefine thr was no ill, had us much reverence for whatever was prewhucent in Nome as if it had been in the Pope's bull, which is all written in pure Iatin.'
'Poor Normn!' repeated Brenda; 'mad her child - was it never recovered \({ }^{\prime}\) '
'What do I know of her child,' said the Udaller, more gruitly than before, 'except that she was very ill, both before mul after the birth, though we kept her as merry as we could with pipe and harp, and so forth. The child had come before its time into this bustling world, so it is likely it has leen long dend. But you know nothing of all these matters, Brenda; so get along for a foolish girl, and ask no more questions about what it dues not become you to inquire into.'

So saying, the Udaller gave his sturdy little palfrey the spmr, and cantering forward over rough and smooth, while the phny's accuracy and firmness of step pint all difficulties of the pith at secure defiance, he placed himself soon by the side of the melancholy Minna, and permitted her sister to have no farther share in his conversation than as it was addressed to them juinitly. She could but comfort herself with the hope that, as Mimans. disease appeared to have its sent in the imagination, the remedies recommended by Norna might have some chance of heing effectual, since, in all probability, they would be addressel to the same faculty.
Their way had hitherto lic!d chiefly over moss and moor, varied occasionally by the necessity of making a circuit aromid the heads of those long lagoons, called voes, which rmu up intu and indent the country in such a manner that, though the Mainland of Zetland may be thirty miles or more in length, there is, perhaps, no part of it which is more than three miles distant fronis the salt water. But they had now approached the nurthwestern extrenity of the isle, and travelled along the top of an immense ridge of rocks, which had for ages withstood the laye of the Northern (cean, and of all the winds by which it is buffeted.

At length exclaimed Magnus to his daughters, 'There is Norna's dwelling! Look up, Minna, my love; for if this dues not make you laugh, nothing will. Saw you ever anything but an osprey that would have made such a nest for hervelf as that in? By my namesake's bones, there is not the like of it that living thing ever dwelt in, having no wings and the ure of reason, nuless it chanced to be the Prnwa Stack ' off Payn, where the king's daughter of Norway was shut up to keep her from lier lovers; and all to little purguse, if the tale be true : fur, maidens, I would have you to wot that it is hard to keep llax from the lowe.

Nee Note 33.

\section*{CHAPTER XXVII}
> "hrice from l'ie cavern's darksome womb !ar er manng voice arose ;
> Aud come, my daughter, fearless come, And fearless tell thy woes!

ABEIKLE.

THE dwelling of Norna, though none but a native of /etland, familiar, during his whole life, with every variety of rock-scenery, could have seen anything ludicrous in this situation, was not unaptly compared by Magnus 'Truil tu the eyrie of the osprey, or sea-eagle. It was very small, annl had been fabricated out of one of those dens which are callenl burghs \({ }^{1}\) and Pictshouses in Zetland, and duns on the mainlaml of Scotland and the Hebrides, and which seem to be the first effort at architecture - the connecting-link betwixt a fox: lude in a cairn of loose stones and an attempt to construct a hmman habitation out of the same materials, without the use of lime or cement of any kind ; without any timber, so far as can be seell from their remains ; without any knowledge of the arch or of the stair. Such as they are, however, the numerous remains of these dwellings - for there is one found on every headland, islet, or point of vantage which could afford the inhabitants adllitional means of defence - tend to prove that the remote perple by whom these burghs were cunstructed were a numerous race, and that the islands had then a much greater popmlatimin than, from other circumstances, we might have been led to anticipate.
The burgh of which we at present speak had been alterent and repaired at a later period, probably by some petty derput, or sea-rover, who, tempted by the security of the sitnatim, which occupied the whole of a projecting point of rock, and was divided from the mainland by a rent or chasm of some deptll, had built some additions to it in the rudest style of Gothic

\footnotetext{
\({ }^{2}\) See Note 34.
}
delensive architeeture; had plastered the inside with lime and clay, and broken ont windows for the admission of light and air ; and, finally, by roofing it over, and dividing it into stories, ly means of beams of wreck-wood, had converted the whole into a tower, resembling a pyramidical dovecot, formed by a double wall, still eontaining within its thickness that set of circular galleries, or concentric rings, which is proper to all the forts of this primitive eonstruetion, and which seem to have constituted the only slielter which they were originally qualified to afford to their shivering inhabitants.
'Ihis singular habitation, built out of the loose stones which lay scattered around, and exposed for ages to the vicissitudes of the elements, was as grey, weather-beaten, and wasted as the rock on which it was founded, and from which it conld not easily be distinguished, so completely did it resemble in colour, and so little did it differ in regularity of slape, from a pimacle or frayment of the cliff.

Minna's habitual indifference to all that of late had passed aromid her was for a moment suspended by the sight of an aboule whieh, at another and happier period of her life, wonld have attracted at once her curiosity and her wonder. Even now she seemed to feel interest as she gazed mon this simgular retreat, and recollected it was that of certain misery and probable insanity, connected, as its inhabitant asserted, and Dimas's faith admitted, with power over the elements and the capacity of intercourse with the invisible world.
'Our kinswoman,' she muttered, 'has chosen her dwelling well, with no more of earth than a sea-fowl might rest upon, and all around sightless tempests and raging waves. Despair and magical power could not have a fitter residence.'

Brenda, on the other hand, shuddered when she looked on the dwelling to which they were advancing, ly a difficult, dangerous, and precarious path, which sometimes, to her great terror, approached to the verge of the precipice; so that, Zetlander as she was, and confident as she had reason to be, in the stearliness and sagacity of the sure-fonted pony, she conld scarce suppress an inclination to giddiness, especially at one point, when, heing foremost of the party, and turning a sharp, augle of the rock, her feet, as they progected from the side of the pony, hung for an instant sheer over the ledge of the precipice, so that there was nothing save empty space betwixt the sole of her shoe and the white foam of the vexed ncean, which dashed, howled, and foamed five hundred feet below. What would have driven a maiden of another country into, delirimm gave her but a momentary uneasiness, wlich was instintly luist in the hope that the impression which the scene appeared to make on her sister's imagination might be favourable to her cure.

She could not help looking back to see how Mimma Anild pass the point of peril which she herself had just rumuled: and could hear the strong voice of the Udaller, thongh to himi such rough paths were familiar as the smooth sea-beach, call, in a tone of some anxiety, 'I'ake heed, jarto,' \({ }^{\prime}\) as Minna, with' an eager look, dropped her bridle, and stretched forwarl her arms, and even her body, over the preeipice, in the attitule of the wild swan, when, balancing itself and spreading its broal pinions, it prepares to launch from the cliff on the bosom of the winds. Brenda felt at that instant a pang of munterable terror, which left a strong impression on her nerves, even when relieved, as it instantly was, by her sister reeovering herself and sitting upright on her saddle, the opportunity and teuptation (if she felt it) passing away, as the quiet, steady animal whieh supported her rounded the projecting angle, and turned its patient and firm step from the verge of the precipice.
They now attained a more level and open space of gromid, being the flat top of an isthmus of projecting rock, narrowing again towards a point where it was terminated by the chasm which seperated the small peak, or 'stack,' occupied by Jornn's habitation, from the main ridge of cliff' and precipice. This natural focoo. which seemed to have been the work of some convulsi. sature, was deep, dark, and irregular, narrower towards - tom, which could not be distinctly seen, and widest at , \(\mu\), having the appearance as if that part of the cliff occupied by the building had been half rent away frou the isthmus which it terminated - an idea favoured by the angle at which it seemed to recede from the land and lean towards the sea, with the building which erowned it.

This angle of projection was so considerable, that it required recollection to dispel the idea that the rock, so much rennowed from the pervendicular, was about to precipitate it self sea ward, with its \(G^{\prime}\) 'awer : and a timorous person wonld have lieen afraid to pait foot upon it, lest an addition of weight so intomsilerable as that of the human brdy should hasten a catastrophe which seeme at every instant impending.

Without wroubling limself about such fantasies, the C'diller rode towards the tower, and there dismounting, along with his

\footnotetext{
\({ }^{1}\) Jur'tu - my dear.
}
daughters, gave the ponies in charge to one of their domestics, with directions to disencumber them of their burdens and turn them out for rest and refreshment upon the nearest heath. This done, they approached the gate, which scemed formerly to have been connected with the land by a rude drawbridge, some of the apparatus of which was still visiblc. But the rest hal been long demolished, and was replaced by a stationary fuotbridge, formed of barrel-strves covered with timf, very narrow and ledgeless, and supported by a sort of areh, eonstructed out of the jaw-bones of the whale. Aloug this 'brigg of dread ' the U'daller stepped with his usual portly majesty of stride, which threatened its demolition and his own at the same tine ; his daughters trode mor lightly and more safely after him, and the whole party stood before the low and rugged portal of Norna's habitation.
' If she should be abroad after all,' said Magnus, as he plicd the black oaken door with repeated blows; 'but if so, we will at least lie by a day for her return, and make Nick Strumpfer pay the demurrage in bland and brandy.'
As he spoke, the door opened and di.pplayed, to the alarm of Brenda, and the surprise of Minna herself, a square-made dwarf, about four feet five incles ligh, with a head of most portentous size, and features correspondent - namely, a huge mouth, a tremendous nose, with large black nostrils, which seemed to have been slit upwards, blubber lips of an unconscionable sizc, and huge wall-eyes, with which he leered, snecred, grimed, and goggled on the Udaller as an old acmpaintance, without uttering a single word. The young women could hardly persuade themselves that they did not sea before their eyes the very demon 'Irolld who made such a disting:aished figure in Norna's legend. 'Their father went on addressing this uncouth apprition in terms of such condescending friendship as the better sort apply to their inferiors when they wish, for any immediate purpose, to conciliate or coax them-a tone, by the by, which generally contains, in its very familiarity, as much offence as the more direct assumption of distance and superiority.
'Ha, Nick!-honest Nick!’ said the Vdaller, ‘liere you are, lively and lovely as St. Nicholas, your namesake, when he is carved with an axe for the head-piece of a Ditch dogger. How dost thou do, Nick, or Pacolet, if yon like that better? Nieholas, here are my two daughters, nearly as handsome as thyself, thou seest.'
Nick grinned, and did a clumsy obeisance by way of courtesy, but kept his broad, misshapen person firmly placel in the doorway.
'Daughters,' con \({ }^{*}\) :nued the Udaller, who seened to have his reasons for speaki. this Cerberus fair, at least according in his own notions of propıciation - ' this is Nick Strumpfer, miaillens, whom his mistress calls Pacolet, being a light-limbed dwart, as; you see, like him that wont to fly about, like a scourie, on his wooden hobby-horse, in the old story-book of Valentine und Orson, that you, Minna, used to read whast you were a child. I assure you he can keep his mistress's counsel, and never tuld one of her secrets in his life - ha, ha, la! !'

The ugly dwarf grinned ten times wider than before, and showed the meaning of the Udaller's jest by opening his inmense jaws and throwing back his bead, so os to discover that, in the immense cavity of his mouth, there only remained the small shrivelled remnant of a tongue, capable, perlapis, of assisting him in swallowing his food, but unequal to the fornation of articulate sounds. Whether this organ had been curtailed by cruelty or injured by disease it was impossible to guess; but that the unfortunate being had not been originally dumb was evident from his retaining the sensc of hearing. Having made this horrible exhibition, he repaid the Cldaller's mirth with a loud, horrid, and discordant laugh, which had something in it the more bideous that his mirth seen. \(\cdot \boldsymbol{d}\) to be excited by his own misery. The sisters looked on each other in silence and fear, and even the Udaller appeared disconcerted.
'And how now?' he proceeded, after a minute's panse. 'When didst thou wash that throat of thine, that is abont the width of the Pentland Firth, with a cup of brandy? Ha, Nick! I have that with me which is sound stuff, boy - ha!'
The dwarf bent his bectle brows, shook his missliapen head, and made a quick, sharp indication, throwing his right hand up to his shoulder with the thumb pointed backwards.
'What! my kinswoman,' said the Udaller, comprehendiug the signal, 'will be angry?' Well, shalt lave a flask to caronse when she is from home, old acquaintance : lips and throats may swallow though they cannot speak.'
Pacolet grimed a grim assent.
'And now,' said the Udaller, 'stand out of the way, Paculet, and let me carry my daughters to see their kinswoman. By the bones of St. Magnus, it shall be a good turn in thy way : Nay, never shake thy head, man; for if thy mistress be at home, see her we will.'

The dwarf again intimated the impossibility of their being admitted, partly by signs, partly by mumbling some uncouth and most disagreeable sounds, and the Udaller's mood began to arisc.
'Iittle dattle, man!' said he; 'trouble not me with thy gibberish, but stand out of the way, and the blame, if there bo any, shall rest with me.'

Su saying, Magnus Troil laid his sturdy hand upon the collar of the recusant dwarf"s jackut of blue wadmaal, and with a strong, but not a violent, grasp removed him from the doorway, pushed him gently aside, and entered, followed by his two dhughters, whom a sense of apprehensim, arising out of all which they saw and heard, kept very close to him. A crooked and dusty passage through which Magnus led the way was dimly enlightened by a shot-hole communicating with the interior of the building, and originally intended, doubtless, to command the entrance by a hagbut or culverin. As they approached nearer, for they walked slowly and with hesitation, the light, imperfect as it was, was suddenly obscured; and, on looking upward to discern the cause, Brenda was startled to observe the pale and obscurely-seen countenance of Norna gazing downward upon them, without speaking a worl. There was nothing extraordinary in this, as the mistress of the mansion might be naturally enough looking out to see what guests were thus suddenly and un remoniously intruding themselves on her presence. Still, however, the natural palcness of her features, exaggerated by the light in which they were at present exlibited; the immovable sternness of her look, which showed neither kindness 'or courtesy of civil reception; her deal silence ; and the ,ingular appearance of everything about her dwelling, auginented the dismay which Brenda had already conceived. Magnus Troil and Minna had walked slowly forward, without observing the apparition of their singular hostess.

\section*{CHAPTER XXVIII}

> The witch then raised her wither'd arm, And waved her wand on high, And, while she spoke the mutter'd charm, Dark lightning fill'd her eye.

Meikle.

THIS should be the stair,' said the Udaller, blundering in the dark against some steps of irregular ascent -.. 'this should be the stair, unloss my memory greatly fail me ; ay, and there she sits,' he added, pausing at a half. open donr, 'with all her tackle about her as usual, and as busy, doubtless, as the devil in a gale of wind.'

As he made this irreverent comparison, he entered, followel by his daughters, the darkened apartment in which Norna was seated, amidst a confused collection of books of various languages, parchment scrolls, tablets and stones inscribed with the straight and angular characters of the Runic alphabet, and similar articles, which the vulgar might have comected with the exercise of the forbidden arts. There were also lying in the chamber, or hung over the rude and ill-contrived chimney, an old shirt of mail, with the head-piece, battle-axe, and lance which had once belonged to it; and on a shclf were disposed, in great order, several of those curious stone axes, formed of green granite, which are often found in those islands, where they are called thunderbolts by the common peoplc, who usually preserve them as a charm of security against the effects of lightning. Therc was, moreover, to be scen amid the strange collection a stone sacrificial knife, used perhaps for immolating human victims, and onc or two of the brazen implements called celts, the purpose of which has troubled the repose of so many antiquaries. A variety of other articles, some of which had neither name nor were capable of description, lay in confusion about the apartment; and in one corner, on a quantity of withered sea-weed, reposed what seemed, at first view, to be a large, unshapely dog, but, when seen more closely, proved to be a tame seal, which it had been Norna's ammsement to domesticate.
This unconth favourite bristled up in its emer, upon the arrival of so many strangers, with an alertness similar to that which a terrestrial dog wou'd have displayed on a similar eceasion ; but Norna renained motionless, seated behind a table of rough granite, propped up by misshapen feet of the same material, which, besides the old book with which she seemed to be busied, sustained a cake of the coarse unleavened bread, three parts oatmeal and one the sawdust of fir, which is used by the poor peasants of Norway, beside which stood a jar of water.

Magnus 'Iroil remained a minute in silence gazing upon his kinswoman, while the singularity of her mansion inspired Brenda with much fear, and changed, though but for a moment, the melancholy and abstracted mood of Minma into a feeling of interest not unmixed with awe. The silence was interrupted by the Udaller, who, unwilling on the one hand to give his kinswoman offence, and desirous on the other to show that he was not daunted by a reception so singular, opened the conversation thus:
'I give you good e'en, cousin Norna; my daughters and I have come far to see you.'
Norua raised her eyes from her volume, looked full at her visitors, then let them quietly sink down on the leaf with which she seemed to be engaged.
' Nay, cousin,' said Magnus, 'take your own time : our business with you can wait your leisure. See here, Minna, what a fair prospect here is of the cape, scarce a quarter of a mile off; you may see the billows breaking on it topmast high. Our kinswoman has got a pretty seal, too. Here, sealchie, my man, whew, whew!'

The seal took no further notice of the Udaller's advances to acquaintance than by uttering a low growl.
'He is not so well trained,' continued the Udaller, affecting an air of ease and unconcern, 'as Peter MacRaw's,' \({ }^{1}\) the old piper of Stornoway, who had a seal that flapped its tail to the tune of "Caberfae," and acknowledged no other whatever. Well, cousin,' he concluded, observing that Norua closed her book, 'are you going to give us a welcome at last, or must we Ho farther than our blood relation's house to seck one, and that when the cvening is wearing late apace?'

\footnotetext{
\({ }^{1}\) See Nute 35.
}
' Ye dull and hard-heartel generation, as deaf as the adder to the voice of the charmer,' answerel Norna, adllessing them, 'why come ye to me? Yon have slighted every warning I combld give of the coming harm, and now that it hath come uron you, ye reek my counsel when it can avail yon nothing.'
'Look you, kinswoman,' said the lidaller, with his ustual frankness and bollness of mamer and accent, 'I must needs tell you that your courtesy is something of the coarsest and the coldest. I cannot say that I ever saw an adder, in regiaril there are none in these parts; but touching my own thowhhts. of what such a thing may be, it camnot be termed a smitalde comparison to me or to my daughters, and that 1 would have yon to know. For old acquaintance, and certain other rensins, I do not leave your house upon the instant; but as I calme hither in all kinduess and civility, so I pray you to receive me with the like, otherwise we will depart, and leave shame in your inhospitable threshold.'
'How,' said Norna, 'dare you use such boll language in the house of one from whom all men, from whom you yoursetfi, come to solicit counsel and aid? They who speak to the Reinkennar must lower their voice to her before whom winds and waves hush both blast and billow.'
'Blast and billow may hush themselves if they will,' replien the pe"emptory Udaller, 'but that will not I. I speak in the house of my friend as in my own, and strike sail to none.'
'And hope ye,' said Norna, 'by this rudeness to compel me to answer to your interrogatories?'
'Kinswoman,' replied Magnus Troil, 'I know not so much as you of the old Norse sagas; but this I know, that when kempies were wont, long since, to seek the habitations of the galdragons anl spae-women, they came with their axes int their shoulders and their good swords drawn in their hands, and compelled the power whom they invoked to listen to and to answer them - ay, were it Odin himself.'
'Kinsman,' said Norna, arising from her seat and coming forward, 'thou hast spoken well, and in good time for thyself and thy daughters; for hadst thou turned from my threshold without extorting an answer, morning's sun had never agailu shone ..pon you. The spirits who serve me are jealous, and will not be employed in aught that may benefit hummity, unless their service is commanded by the undaunted impon tunity of the brave and the free. And now speak, what would it thou have of me?'
'My daughter's health,' replied Magnus, 'which no remedies have been able to restore.'
'IThy daughter's health?' answered Noma; 'and what is the maiden's ailment ?'
'I'lie physieian,' said 'Troil, 'must name the disease. All that I can tell thee of it is
'Be silent,' said Norma, interrupting him, ' ! know all that thon canst tell me, and more than thon thyself knowest. Sit down, all of you; and thon, maiden,' she said, adllressing Minna, 'sit thou in that elair,' pointing to the place she had jnst left, 'onee the scat of Giervada, at whose voice the stars hid their beams and the noon herself grew pale.'
Minna moved with slow and tremulous step towards the rule seat thus indicated to her. It was composed of stone, formed into some semblance of a ehair by the rough and unskilful hand of some ancient Gothic artist.
Brenda, ereeping as close as possible to her father, sentell herself along with him upon a bench at sone distanee from Minna, and kept her eyes, with a mixture of fear, pity, and anxiety, closely fixed upon her. It would be difficult altogether to decipher the emotions by which this amiable and affectionate girl was agitated at that moment. Deficient in her sister's predominating quality of high imagination, and little eredulous, of course, to the marvellous, she could not but entertain some vague and indefinite fears on her own aceount, coneerning the nature of the seene which was soon to take place. But these were in a manner swallowed up in her apprehensions on the seore of her sister, who, with a frame so much weakened, spirits so mueh exhausted, and a mind so susceptible of the impressions which all around her was caleulatel to excite, now sat pensively resigned to the ageney of one whose treatment might produce the most baneful effects upon such a subject.
Brenda gazed at Minua, who sat in that rude chair of dark stone, her finely-formed shape and limbs making the strongest contrast with its ponderous and irregular angles, her cheek and lips as pale as elay, and her eyes turned upward, and lighted with the mixture of resignation and excited enthusiasm which belonged to her disease and her charaeter. The younger sister then looked on Norna, who muttered to herself in a low, monotonous manner, as, gliding from one place to another, she collected different articles, which she placed one by one on the table. And, lastly, Brenda looked anxiously to her father, to gather, if possible, from his countenance, whether he entertained any part of her own fears for the consequences of the sionie which was to ensue, considering the state of Minna's health and spirits. But Magnirs 'Troil seemed to have no such apprehensions : he viewed with stern composure Norna's preparatiens, and appeared to wait the event with the eomprosure of one whin, confiding in the skill of a medical artist, sees him preparing to enter upon sonie important and painful operation, in the issue of which he is interested by friendship or by affection:

Norna, meanwhile, went onward with her preparctions, until she had placed on the stone table a variety of miscellineons artieles, and among the rest a small chafing-dish full of charcoal, a crucible, and a piece of thin sheet-lead. She then spuke aloud - 'It is well that I was aware of your coming hither -ay, long before you yourself had resolved it - how should 1 elve have been prepared for that which is now to be done? Maiden, she continued, addressing Minna, 'where lies thy pain ?'

The patient answered by pressing her hand to the left side of her bosom.
'Even so,' replied Norna - 'even so, 't is the site of weal or woe. And you, her father and her sister, think not this the idle speech of one who talks by guess : if i can tell thee ill. it may be that I shall be able to render that less severe which may not, by any aid, be wholly ameuded. The heart - ay, the heart ! touch that, and the eye grows dim, the pulse fails, the wholesome stream of our blood is choked and troublell, our limbs decay like sapless sea-weed in a summer's sun, our better views of existence are past and gone; what remains is the dream of lost happiness or the fear of inevitable evil. But the Reim-kennar must to her work; well is it that I have prepared the means.'
She threw off her long dark-eoloured mantle, and stowd before them in her short jaeket of light blue wadmaal, with its skirt of the same stuff, faneifully embroidered with black velvet, and bound at the waist with a elain or girdle of silver, formed into singular devices. Norna next undid the fillet whieh bound her grizzled hair, and shaking her head willly; caused it to fall in dishevelled abnudance over her face antid around her shoulders, so as alnost entirely to hide her features. She then plaeed a small crucible on the chafing dish alreally mentioned, dropped a few drops from a vial on the charenal below, pointed towards it her wrinkled forefinger, which she had previously moistened with lignid from another sinall bottle, and said with : deep voice, 'Fire, do thy duty'; atill ealli, !re

MINNA LOOKED EAGERLY ON NORNA.
From a painting by John A. Houston, R.S.A.

the words were no nooner spoken than, probably by nome chemical combination of which the spectutors were not aware, the charcoal which was muler the crucible becume slowly ignited; while Norma, as if impatient of the delay, threw hastily back her disordered tresses, and, while her fentures reflected the sparkles and red light of the fire, and her eyes flashed from anidst her hair like those of a wilh animal from its cover, blew fiercely till the whole was in an intense glow. She paused a moment from her toil, and muttering that the elemental spirit must be thanked, recited, in her ismal monutonons, yet wild, note of chanting, the following verses : \({ }^{1}\) -
- Thou an needtiul, yet so ilread,
With clonly crest and wink of red -
Thou, without whose geninl breath
The North wemld alerp the sleep of death,
Who deligast to warn the cottage hearth,
Yet hurl'st promal pulaces so carth, -
Brightest, keconest of the powers,
Which form and rule this worhl of ours,
With my rhyme of Rumic, I
Thank thee for thy ageucy.

She then severed a portion from the small mass of sheetlead which lay upon the table, mul, placing it in the crucihle, subjected it to the action of the lighted charsoal, and, as it melted, she sung -
- Old Reim-kenmar, to thy art
Mother Ilertha sents her part ;
She, whose gracions bointy gives
Nepelful food for all that lives.
From the deep mine of the North
Came the mystic netal forth,
Doom'd, amilat disjointed stones,
Long to cere a champion's bones,
Disinhumed my charms to aid -
Mother Earth, my thanks are paid.'

She then poured out some water from the jar into a large cup, or goblet, and sung once more, as she slowly stirred it round with the end of her staff:-
- Girdle of our islands dear, Element of water, hear, Thou whose power caun overwhelm Broken mounds aud ruin'd realm On the lowly Belgiam strand,

\footnotetext{
\({ }^{1}\) Nee Norna's Spells. Note 36.
}

She then, with a pair of pincers, removed the crucible from the chafing-dish, and poured the lead, now entirely melted, into the bowl of water, repeating at the same time -

> ' Elements, eaeh other greeting, Gifts and powers attend your meeting !'

The melted lead, spattering as it fell into the water, formed, of course, the usual combination of irregular forms which is, familiar to all who in childhood have made the experiment. and from which, according to our childish fancy, we may have selected portions bearing some resemblance to domestic articles, the tools of mechanics, or the like. Norna seemed to husy herself in some such researches, for she examined the mass of lead with scrupulous attention, and detached it into different portions, without apparently being able to find a fragment in the form which she desired.

At length she again muttered, rather as speaking to hersielf than to her guests, 'He, the Viewless, will not be omitted : he will have his tribute even in the work to which he gives nothing. Stern compeller of the clouds, thou shalt also lear the voice of the Reim-kennar.'

Thus speaking, Norna once more threw the lead into the crucible, where, hissing and spattering as the wet metal touched the sides of the red-hot vessel, it was soon again reduced intn a state of fusion. The sibyl meantime turned to a corner of the apartment, and opening suddenly a window which lowked to the north-west, let in the fitful radiance of the sum, now lying almost level upon a great mass of red clouds, which, boring future tempest, occupied the edge of the horizon, and seemed to brood over the billows of the boundless sea. 'Turniug to this quarter, from which a low hollow moaning breeze then blew, Norna addressed the Spirit of the Winds, in tones which seemed to resemble his own :

> 'Thou, that over billows dark Safely send'st the fisher's bark, Giving him a path and motion Through the wilderness of ocean Thou, that when the billows brave \(y\) y, O'er the shelves canst drive the uavy, > Did'st thou claafe as one neglected, While thy brethren were respected To appease thee, see, I tear This full grasp of grizzed hair. Oft thy breath hath through it sung, Softening to my magic tongue; Now, 't is thine to bid it fy Throuht the wide expanse of sky, 'Mid the countless swarus to sail Of wild fowl wheeling on thy gale.

> Take thy portion and rejoice ; Spirit, thou hast heard my voice !'

Norna accompanied these words with the action which they described, tearing a handful of hair with vehemence from her head, and strewing it upon the wind as she continued her recitation. She then shut the casenent, and again involved the chamber in the dubious twilight which best suited her character and occupation. The melted lead was once more emptied iuto the water, and the various whimsical couformations which. it received from the operation were cxamined with great care by the sibyl, who at length seemed to intimate by voice and gesture that her spell had been successful. She selected from the fused metal a piece about the size of a small nut, bearing in shape a close resemblance to that of the human heart, and approaching Minna, again spoke in song:
> 'She who sits by haunted well Is subject to the nixie's spell ; She who walks on lonely beach To the mermaid's charmed speech ; She who walks round ring of green, Offends the peevish fairy queen; And she who takes rest in the dwarfie's cave, \(\Delta\) weary weird of woe shall have.
> By ring, by spring, by cave, by shore, Minna Troil has braved all this aul more: And yet hath the root of her sorrow and ill A source that 's more deep and more mystical still.'

Minna, whose attention had been latterly something dis. turbed by reflections on her own secret sorrow, now suddenly recalled it, and looked eagerly on Norna, as if she expected to learn from her rhymes something of deep interest. The Northern sibyl meanwhile proceeded to pierce the piece of lead, which bore the form of a heart, and to fix in it a piece of gold wire, by which it might be attached to a chain or necklace. She then proceeded in her rhyme :
- Thou art within a demon's hold, More wise than Heims, more strong than Tiolld; No siren sings so sweet as he, No fay springs lighter on the lea ; No eltin power hath half the art To soothe, to move, to wring the heart, Life-hlood from the cheek to drain, Drench the eye, and dry the vein. Maiden, ere we farther go, Dost thou note me, ay or no ?'
Minna replied in the same rhythmical manner, which, in jest and earnest, was frequently used by the ancient Scandjnavians -

> 'I mark thee, my mother, hoth worl, look, aull sign ; Speak on with the riddle - to read it be mine.'
'Now, Heaven and every saint be praised!' said Magmus; 'they are the first words to the purpose which she hath spoken these many days.'
'And they are the last which she shall speak for many a month,' said Norna, incensed at the interruption, 'if you again break the progress of my spell. Turn yo... faces to the wall, and look not hitherward again, under penalty of my severe displeasure. You, Magnus Troil, from hard-hearted audacity of spirit, and you, Brenda, from wanton and idle disbelief in that which is beyond your bounden comprehension, are untworthy to look on this mystic work; and the glance of your eyes mingles with and weakens the spell; for the powers callnot brook distrust.'

Unaccustomed to be addressed in a tone so peremptory, Magnus would have made some angry reply; but reflecting that the health of Minua was at stake, and considering that she who spoke was a woman of many sorrows, he suppressed lis anger, bowed his head, shrugged his shoulders, assumer the prescribed posture, averting his head from the table and turning towards the wall. Brenda did the same, on receiving a sign from her father, and both remained profoundly silent.

Norna then addressed Minua once more :

\footnotetext{
Mark me ! for the word I speak Shall bring the colour to thy check. This leaden heart, so light of cost, The symbol of a treasure lost, Thou shalt wear in hope and in peace, That the cause of your sickness aml sorrow may cease, When crimson foot ineets crimson hand In the Martyrs' aisle, and in Orkney-laud.'
}

Minna coloured deeply at the last complet, intimating, as she sailed not to interpret it, that Norna was completely aciuainted with the secret cause of her sorrow. The same conviction led the maiden to hope in the favourable issue which the sibyl seemed to prophesy ; and not venturing to express her feelings in any manner mure intelligible, she pres ed Norna's withered hand with all the warmith of affection, first to her breast and then to her boson, bedewing it at the same time with her tears.
With more of human feeling than she usually exhibited, Norna extricated her hand from the grasp of the poor girl, whose tears now flowed freely, and then, with more tenderness of manner than she had yet shown, slie knottell the leaden heart to a chain of gold, and hung, it around Mima's neck, singing, as she performed that last branch of the spell -
> - Be patient, be patient, for patience hath power To ward us in danger, like mantle in shower. A fairy gift you best may hold In a chain of fairy gold; The chain and the gift are each a true token, That not without warrant old Noma hath spoken ; But thy nearest and dearest must never behold them, Till time shall aecomplish the truths I have told them.'

The verses heing concluded, Norna carefully arranged the chain around her patient's neck so as to hide it in her bosom, and thus ended the spell - a spell which, at the moment I record these incidents, it is known has been lately practised in Zetland, where any decline of health, without apparent cause, is imputed by the lower orders to a demon laving stolen the heart from the body of the patient, and where the experiment of supplying the deprivation by a leaden one, prepared in the manner described, has been resorted to within these few years. In a metaphorical sense, the divease may be considered as a general one in all prarts of the world; but, as this simple and original remedy is peculiar to the isles of 'Thme, it were monpardonable not to preserve it at lensth, in a narative comected with Seottish antignities.

A second time Noma remimed lier patient that, if sloe showed, or spoke of, the fairy gifts, their virtue wonld be lost - a belief so common as to be received into the superstitions of all nations. Lastly, mbuttoning the collar which she had just fastened, she showed her a link of the rold chain, which Minna instantly recognised as that formerly given by Nurnat to

\section*{THE PIRATE}

Mordaunt Mertour. This seemed to intimate he was yet alive, and under Norna's protection; and she gazed on her with the most eager curiosity. But the sibyl imposed her finger inf her lips in token of silence, and a second time involvel the chain in those folds which modestly and closely veilen une of the most beautiful, as well as one of the kindest, bosoms in the world.

Norna then extinguished the lighted charcoal, and, as the water hissed upon the glowing embers, commanded Magnus and Brenda to look around and behold her task accomplished.

\section*{CHAPTER XXIX}

See yonder woman, whom our swains revere, And dread in secret, while they take her counsel When sweetheart shall be kind, or when cross dame shall die; Where lurks the thief who stole the silver tankurd, And how the pestilent murrain may be cured. This sage adviser 's mad, stark mad, my friend; Yet, in her mailness hath the art and cunning To wring fools' secrets from their inmost bosoms, and pay inquirers with the coin they gave her.

Old Play.

1T seemed as if Norma had indeed full right to claim the gratitude of the Udaller for the improved condition of his daughter's health. She once nore threw open the window, and Minna, drying her eyes and advancing with affectionate confidence, threw herself on her father's neck, and asked lis forgiveness for the trouble she had of late occasioned to him. It is unnecessary to add that this was at once granted, with a full, though rough, burst of paternal tenderness, and as many close embraces as if his child had been just rescued from the jaws of death. When Magnus had dismissed Minna from his arms, to throw herself into those of her sister, and express to her, rather by kisses and tears than in words, the regret she entertained for her late wayward conduct, the Udaller thought proper, in the meantime, to pay his thanks to their hostess, whose skill had proved so efficacious. But scarce had he cone ont with, 'Much respected kinswoman, I am but a plain old Norseman _- ' when she interrupted him by pressing her finger on her lips.
' There are those around us,' she said, 'who must hear no mortal voice, witness no sacrifice to mortal feelings : there are times when they even mutiny against me, their sovereign mistress, because 1 am still shrouded in the flesh of humanity. Fear, therefore, and be silent. I, whose deeds have raised me from the low-sheltered valley of life, where dwell its social wants and common charities - I, who have bereft the giver of

\footnotetext{
.vol. xir:-20
}

\section*{THE PIRATE}
the gift which he gave, and stand alone on a cliff of immeasinrable height, detached from earth, save from the small lurti,n that supports my miserable tread - I alone am fit to cure with these sullen mates. Fear not, therefore, but yet be nut tow, brill, and let this night to you he one of fasting and of prayer.'
If the Udaller had not, before the commencenent of the operation, been disposed to dispute the commands of the sibyl, it may be well believed he was less so now that it had terminated to all appearance so fortmately. So he sat down in silenee, and seized npon a volume which lay near him as a surt of desperate effiort to divert ennui, for on no other oceasion had Magnus been known to have recourse to a book for that pirrpose. It chaneed to be a book mueh to his mind, being the wellknown work of Olaus Magnus, upon the manners of the aucient Northern nations. The book is unluekily in the Latin langnase, and the Danske or Dutch were, either of them, much mure familiar to the Udaller. But then it was the fine edition pulb. lished in 1555, which contains representations of the war-chariots, fishing exploits, warlike exercises, and domestic employments's of the Scandinavians, exeeuted in copper-plates; and thus the information which the work refused to the understanding was addressed to the eye, whieh, as is well known both to oll annl young, answers the purpose of amusement as well, if nut better.

Meanwhile rue two sisters, pressed as elose to each other as two flowers on the same stalk, sat with their arms reeiprucally passed over cach other's shoulder, as if they feared some new and unforeseen cause of coldness was about to separate them, and interrupt the sister-like harmony whieh had been but just restored. Norma sat opposite to them, sometimes revolving the large parehment volume with which they had found her employed at their entrance, and sometimes gazing on the sisters with a fixed look, in whieh an interest of a kind umsually tender seemed occasionally to disturb the stern and rigorms: solemnity of her countenance. All was still and silent as death, and the subsiding emotions of Brenda hal nut yet perinitted her to wonder whether the remaining hours of the evening were to be passed in the same manner, when the scene of tranquillity was sudderly interrupted by the entrance of the dwarf Paeolet, or, as the Udaller called him, Nicholas: Strumpfer:

Norna darted an angry glanee on the intruder, who seemed to deprecate her resentment by holding up his hiands and uttering a babbling sound; then, instantly resorting to his usual mode of conversation, he expressed limself by a variety of signs made rapidly upon his fingers, and as rapidly answered by his mistress, so that the young women, who had never heard of such an art, and now saw it practised by two heings so singular, almost conceived their muttual intelligence the work of enchantment. When they had ceased their intercourse, Norna turned to Magmes Troil with much haughtiness and said, 'How, my kinsman, have you so far forgot yourself as to bring earthly food into the loouse of the Reim-kennar, and make preparations in the dwelling of power and of despair for refection, and wassail, and revelry? Speak not - answer not,' she said ; 'the duration of the cure which was wronyht even now depends on your silence and obedience: bandy but a single look or word with me, and the latter condition of that maiden shall be worse than the first!'
This threat was an effectual charm upon the tongue of the Udaller, though he longed to indulge it in vindication of his conduct.
'Follow me, all of you,' said Norna, striding to the door of the apartment, 'and sec that no one looks backwards: we leave not this apartusent empty, though we, the clildren of mortality, be removed from it.'

She went gint, ami the Udaller signed to his danghters to follow and to obey her injunctions. 'The sibyl moved swifter than her guests down the rude descent (such it might rather be termed than a proper stairense) which led to the lower apartment. Magnus and his daughters, when they entered the chamber, found their own attendmits aghast at the presence and proceedings of Norna of the Fitful Head.
They had been previously employed in arranging the provisions which they had brouglt along with them, so as to present a comfortable cold meal as soon as the appetite of the ldaller, which was as rerular as the return of tide, should induce him to desire some refreslment ; and now they stood staring in fear and surprise, while Norna, seizing upon one article after another; and well supported by the zealons activity of Paenlet, flumg their whole preparations out of the rude aperture which served fur a window, and over the cliff, from which the ancient bursh, arose, into the ocean, which raged and foamed bencath. 'Vifili' (dried beef), hams, and pickled pork flew after each other intu empty space, smoked geese were restored to the air, and cured fish to the sea, their native elements indeed, but which they were no longer capable of traversing ; and the devastation proceeded so rapidly that the Udaller could scarce secure from the wreck his silver Irinkiug cup; while the large leatheru thask of brandy which was destined to supply his favourite heverage was sent to follow the rest of the supper by the hauds of Pacolet, who regarderl, at the same time, the disapprinted Udaller with a malicious grin, as if, notwithstanding his own natural taste for the liguor, he enjoyed the disappointment and surprise of Magnus 'I'roil still more than he would have relisheil sharing his enjoyment.

The destruction of the brandy flask exhausted the patiente of Magnus, who roared out, in a tone of no small displeasire, ' Why, kinswoman, this is wasteful madness : where, and un what, would you have us sup?'
' Where you will,' answered Norna, 'and on what you will: but not in my dwelling, and not on the food with which you have profaned it. Vex my spirit no more, but begone every one of you! You have been here too long for my good, perhaps for your own.'
' How, kinswoman,' said Magnus, 'would you make oultcasts. of us at this time of night, when even a Scotchman would init turn a stranger from the door? Bethink you, dame, it is shame on our lineage for ever if this squall of yours should force us to slip cables and go to sea so scantily provided.'
'Be silent, and depart,' said Noma ; 'let it suffice you have got that for which you came. I have no harbourage for murtai guests, no provision to relieve human wants. There is beneath the eliff a beach of the finest sand, a stream of water as phre as the well of Kildinguie, and the rocks bear dulse as wholesinne as that of Guiodin; and well you wot that the well of Kildinunie and the dulse of Guiodin will cure all maladies save Black Death. \({ }^{1}\)
' And well I wot,' said the Udaller, 'that I would eat corruptel sea-weed like a starling, or salted seal's flesh like the men of Burraforth, or wilks, buckies, and lampits, like the poor sule:liof Strona, rather than break wheat bread and drink red wine in a house where it is begrudged me. And yet,' he said, clect ing liimself, 'I am wrong - very wrong, my cousin, to speak thins to you, and I should rather thank you for what you hatre done than upbraid you for following your own ways. But I see you are impatient - we will be all under way presently: And you, ye knaves,' addressing his servants, 'that were in

\footnotetext{
1 no at least says an Orkney proverb.
}
such hurry with your serviee before it was lacked, get out of doors with you presently, and manage to eatch the ponies ; for I see we inust make for another harbour to-night, if we would nut sleep with an empty stomach anil un a hard bed.
The domesties of Magnus, already sufficiently nlarmed at the violenee of Noma's eonduet, scarce waited the imperions command of their master to evacuate her dwelling with all despatch; and the Udaller, with a danghter on each arm, was in the act of following them, when Norna said emphntically, 'Stop!' 'They obeyed, and again turned towards her. She held out her hand to Magnus, whieh the placable l'daller instantly folded in his own ample paln.
'Magnus,' she said, 'we part by neeessity, but, I trust, not in anger ?'
'Surely not, cousin,' said the warm-hearted C'daller, wellnigh stammering in his hasty disclamation of all makinduess 'most assuredly not. I never bear ill-will to any one, murch less to one of my own bloorl, and who has piloted me with her adviee through many a rough tide, as I would pilot a boat betwixt Swona and Stroma, through all the waws, wells, and swelchies of the Pentland Firth.'
'Enough,' said Norna, 'and now farewell, with such a hlessing as I dare bestow - not a word more! Maidens,' she added, 'draw near and let me kiss your brows.'
The sibyl was obeyed by Minna with awe, and by Brenda with fear; the one overnastered by the warmith of her immgination, the other by the natural timidity of her constitution. Norna then dismissed them, and in two minutes afterwards they found themselves beyond the bridge, and standing nion the rucky platform in front of the ancient Pictish burgh which it was the pleasure of this sequestered female to inlabit. The night, for it was now fallen, was umsually serene. A bright twilight, which glimmered far over the surface of the sea, supplied the brief absence of the summer's sun ; and die waves seemed to sleep, muder its inflnence, so taint and slmuberons was the somad with which one atter another rolled on and burst against the fint of the cliff om which they stond. In front of them stood the rugged furtress, seeming, in the mifirm greyness of the atmosphere, as aged, as shapeless, and as massive as the rock on which it was founded. There was neither sight nor sound that indieated human habitation, save that from one rude shot-hole glimmered the flame of the feeble lamp by which the sibyl was probably pursuing her mystical and noeturnal studies, shooting "pon the twilight, in which it was som lost and confonnded, a single line of tiny light; bearing the sane proportion to that of the atmosphere as the agel womann mind her serf, the sole inhabitants of that desert, did to the solitule with which they were surromnded.
For several minutes the party, thas suchlenly and nuexpectedly expelled from the shelter where they hal reckineld upon spending the night, stooll in silence, each wrapt in their own separate reflections. Minma, her thoughts fixed wh the mystical consolation which she had received, in vain endenwoured to extract from the words of Norma a more distinct mul intel. ligible meaning ; and the Uilatler had not yet recovered his surprise at the extrusion to which he had been thus whimsienlly subjected, under circumstances that prohibited him frum re. senting as an insult treatment whieh, in all other respect,s, was so shocking to the genial hospitality of his nature that he still felt like one disposed to be angry, if he but knew how to set about it. Brenda was the first who brought matters to a puint by asking whither they were to go, and how they were to pilend the night. The question, which was asked in a tome that, auidst its simplicity, had something dolorons in it, entirely changed the train of her father's ideas; and the unexpecten perplexity of their situation now striking him in a comie phint of view, he laughed till his very eyes ran over, while every ruck around him rung, and the sleeping sea-fowl were startled from their repose by the loud, hearty explosions of his obstreperonss hilarity.

The Udallor's daughters, eagerly representing to their father the risk of displeasing Norna by this mulimited indulyente of his mirth, united their efforts to drag him to a farther distamre from her dwelling. Magnus, yielding to their strength, which, feeble as it was, his own fit of laughter rendered him incapable of resisting, sulfered himself to be pulled to a considerable dis:tance from the burgh, and then escaping form their hands, and sitting down, or rather sufferiug himself to drop, upnia larye stone which lay conveniently by the wayside, he again lanshed so long and histily that his vexed and anxions danghters linecame afraid that there was something more than natmal in these repeated convilxions.
At length his mirth exhanstel both itself aml the Ulaller's strength. He groaned heavily, wiped his eyes, and said, nut withont feeling some desire to renew his obstreperons cachinnation, 'Now, by the boness of St. Magnus, my ancestor and namesake, one would imagine that being turned ont of dewors at this time of night was nothing short of inn nhsolntely ex. quisite jest; for lhave shaken my sides ut it till they whel. Where we sat, made nnug for the night, und I male as sure of a good supper and a can us ever I had been of either; and here we ure all taken aback: mud then pur Bremada's dolefnl voice, and melancholy question of, "Whast is to be done, nud where are we to sloep ?" In gool faith, miloss one of those knaves, who umst needs torment the peor woman liy their trencherwork before it was wanted, can muke monends by telling ns of some sung port muder our lec, we have in ohler course for it but to steer through the twilight on the bearing of BurghWestra, and rough it out ns well hes we can by the way. I mon surry but for you, girls; for many it cruise have I been upon when we were on shorter allowance than we me like to have now: I would I had but secired a morsel for yon mid a drop for myself, and then there had been but little to comphin of.

Both sistery hastenel to ussure the Vidaller that they felt not the least occasion for fool.
'Why, that is well,' said Mugns, 'mud so being the casc', I will not comphin of my own appetite, though it is sharper thun convenient. And the rascal, Nicholas Strumpfer - what a leer the villningave me as he started the good Liantz into the salt-water: He grimed, the kuave, like a seal on a skerry. Had it not been for vexing my poor kinswoman, Norna, I womld have sent his misbegotten holy and misshapen jolterhead after my bomy thask, ns sure as St. Magmes lies at Kirkwall!’
By this time the servants returned with the ponies, which they had very soon canght ; these sensible animala finding nothing so enptivatiog in the pastures where they had heen sulfered to stray as inelined them to resist, the invitation again to subjeet themselves to saddle and bridle. The proppects of the party were also considerably improved by learning that the contents of their sumpter pony's burden had mut been entirely exhansted - small basket having fortmutely escaped the rage of Sorma amd Paculet by the rapidity with which one of the servants had canght up and removen it. The same domestic, an alert and ready-witted fellow, had observed mion the beach, mut above three miles distant from the burgh, and about a quarter of a mile off their straight path, a deserted 'skeo,' or fisherman's hut, and suggested that they should weenpy it for the rest of the night, in order that the ponies might be refreshed, and the yonng ladies spend the might mider cover from the raw evening air.

\section*{THE PIRATE}

When wo are delivered from great and sorious dangers, our mood is, or ought to be, grave in proportion to the peril we have oscaped and the gratitude dua to protecting Providence. But fuw things ruise the spirits more naturally or more harmlessly than when means of extrication from any of the lesser embarrassments of life are suddenly presented to ns; anil such was the case in the present instance. 'I'he Udaller, relieved from the approhensions for his daughters suffering tronn fiatigue, and himself from too much appetite and too little food, carolled Nurse ditties, as he spurred Bergen through the twilight, with as much glee and gallantry as if the night-ride had been entirely a matter of his own free choice. Brenta lent her voice to some of his choruses, which were celluet in ruder notes by the servants, who, in that simple state of :mi. ety, were not considered am guilty of any breach of respect hy mingling their voices with the song. Minna, indeed, wa- is yet unequal to such an effort; but she compelled herself t11 ussmue some share in the general hilarity of the meeting : mil, contrary to her conduct since the fatal morning which concluded the festival of St. John, she seemed to take her unval interest in what was going on around her, and answered with kindness and readiness the repeated inquiries concerning her health with which the Udaller every now and then interrupted his carol. And thus they proceeded by night, a happier part! by far than they had been when they traced the same runte on the preceding [that same] morning, making light of the difficulties of the way, and promising themselves shelter and a comfortable night's rest in the deserted hut which they were now about to approach, and which they expected to find in a state of darkness and solitude.

But it was the lot of the Udaller that day to be divel more than once in his calculations.
'And which way lies this cabin of yours, Laurie?' sand thr Udaller, addressing the intelligent domestic of whon. we \(j\). spoke.
'Yonder it should he,' said Laurence Scholey, 'at ther hir is of the voe; but, by my faith, if it be the llace, there atre twh there before ns. God and St. Ronans ind that they lne amm. company!

In truth there was a light in the leserted hut, strons emon to glimmer through every chink of the shingles and wrow wood of which it was constructerl, aud to give the whole callin the appearance of a smithy seen by ight. The miveral superstition of the Zetlanders soized upon Magnus and his escort.
'They are trows,' said one voice.
'They are witches,' murnured another.
' They are mermaids,' muttered a third: 'only hear their wild singing !'
All stopped; and, in effect, sone notes of uusic were nudible, which Brenda, with a voice that quivered a little, but yet hal a turn of arch ridicule in its tone, pronouncel to be the somid of a fiddle.
'Fiddle or fiend,' said the Udaller, who, if he believel in wuch nightly apparitions as had struck terror into his retinne, rertainly feared them not - 'fiddle or fiend, may the devil fetel' me if a witch cheats me out of supper to-night for the secomil thel!

So saying, he dismounted, clenched his trusty truncheom in his hand, and advanced towards the hut, followed by Lanrence alone; the rest of his retinue continuing stationary on the beach beside his daughters and his ponies.

\section*{CHAP'TER XXX}

> What ho, my jovial mates ! come on ! we 'll frolic it Like fairies frisking in the merry moonshine, Seen by the curtal friar, who, from some christening Or some blithe bridal, hies helatel cell-ward; He starts, and changes his bold bottle swagger To churchuma's puce professional, and, ransacking His treacherous memory for some holy hymu, Finls but the roundel of the midnight eateh.

Old Play.

THE stride of the Udaller relaxed nothing of its leugth or of its firmness as he approached the gimmering cabin, from which he now heard distinctly the sommi of the fiddle. But, if still long and firn, his steps succeedel each other rather more slowly than usual; for, like a cautions, though a brave, general. Magnus was willing to reconnoitre liis eremy before assailing him.
The trusty Laurence Scholey, who kept close behind his master, now whispered into his ear, 'So help me, sir, as I believe that the ghaist, if ghaist it be, that plays so bravely on the fiddle must be the ghaist of Maister Claud Halcro, or lis wruith at least; for never was bow drawn across thairm which brouglt out the gude auld spring of "Fair and Lucky " so like his ain.'

Magnus was himself much of the same opinion ; for lie knew the blithe minstrelsy of the spirited little old man, and hailed the hut with a hearty hilloah, which was immediately replied to by the cheery note of his ancient messmate, and Halcro limiself presently made his appearance on the beach.

The Udaller now signed to his retinue to come np, while he asked his friend, after a kind greeting and much slaking of lands, 'How the devil he came to sit there, playing old tunes in so desolate a place, like an owl whooping to the moon?'
'And tell me rather, Fowd,' said Cland Halero, 'how you come to be within hearing of me? ay, by my word, and with your bonny daughters, too? Jarto Minna and Jarto Brenda, I bid you welcome to these yellow sands; and there, shake hauds, as glorious John, or some other body, says upon the same occasinn. And how came you here like two fair swans, making day ont of twilight, and turning all you step, upon to silver?'
'Yon shall know all about them presently,' answered Magnus; 'but what messmates have yon got in the hint with you? I think I hear some one speaking.'
'None,' replied Cland Halero, 'but that poor ereature, the factor, and my imp of a boy, Giles. I - but come in --come in ; here yon will find us starving in eonfort - not so mueh as a mouthful of sour sillocks to be had for love or money.'
'IThat may be in a small part helped,'s said the Udaller ; 'for, though the best of our supper is gone over the Fitful Crags to the sealehies and the dog-fish, yet we have got something in the kit still. Here, Laurie, bring up the "vifla.",
'Jokul - Jokul !' ' was Lanrenee's joyful an …r; and he hastened for the basket.
'By the bieker of St. Magnus,' \({ }^{2}\) said Halero, 'and the burliest bishop, that ever quaffed it for luek's sake, there is no finding your loeker empty, Magnus! I believe siucerely that, ere a friend wanted, yon eould, like old Luggie, \({ }^{3}\) the warloek, fish up boiled and roasted out of the pool of Kibster.'
'You are wrong there, Jarto Claud,' said Magmins Troil, 'for, far from helping me to a supper, the foul fiend, I believe, has carried off great part of mine this blessed evening; but you are weleome to share and share of what is left.' This was said while the party entered the hut.
Here, in a cabin whieh smelled strongly of dried fish, and whose sides and roof were jet-blaek with swoke, they fomid the muhappy Triptolemus Yellowley seated beside a fire made of dried sea-weed, mingled with some peats and wreek-wood ; his sole eompanion a bare-fuoted, yellow-haired Zetland boy, who acted occasionally as a kind of page to Claud ILalero, bearing his fiddle on his shoulder, saddling his pony, and rendering him similar duties of kindly observanee. The disconsolate agriculturist, for sueh his visage betokened him, displayed little surprise, and less animation, at the arrival of the Udaller and his companions, until, after the party had drawn elose to the fire (a neighbourhood which the danpmess of the night air renderen far from disagreeable), the puninier was opened, and a tolerable supply of barley-bread and hung beef, besides a flask of brandy (no doubt smaller than that which the relentless hand of Pacolet

\footnotetext{
Jokul - yes, sir ; a Norse exprossion, atili in common use.
Sote Note 37 .
}
had emptied into the ocean), gave assurances of a tulerable supper. Then, indeed, the worthy factor grimed, chucklel, rubbed his hands, and inquired after all friends at BurghWestra.

When they had all partaken of this needful refreslument, the Udaller repeated his inquiries of Halcro, and more particularly of the factor, how they came to be nestled in such a remote corner at such an hour of night.
'Maister Magnus 'Troil,' said Triptolemus, when a second cup had given him spirits to tell his tale of woe, 'I would not have you think that it is a little thing that disturbs me. I come of that grain that takes a sair wind to shake it. I lave seen many a Martinmas and many a Whitsunday in my day, whilk are the times peculiarly grievous to those of my craif, and I could aye bide the bang; but I think I am like to be dung ower a'thegither in this damned country of yours. Giude forgie me for swearing; but evil communication corrupteth good manners.'
'Now, Heaven guide us,' said the Udaller, 'what is the matter with the man? Why, man, if you will put your plough into new land, you must look to have it hank on a stone now and then. You must set us an example of patience, seeing yul came here for our improvement.'
'And the deil was in my feet when I did so,' said the factor : 'l had better have set myself to improve the cairn on Clochnaben.'
'But what is it, after all,' said the Udaller, 'that has befallen you ? what is it that you complain of?'
'Of everything that has chanced to me since I landel out this island, which I believe was accursed at the very creation,' said the agriculturist, 'and assigned as a filting station for sorners, thieves, whores - I beg the ladies' pardon - witches, bitches, and all evil spirits!'
'By my faith, a goodly catalogue!' said Magnus; 'and there has been the day that, if I had heard you give out the half of it, I should have turned improver myself, and have tried to amend your manners with a cudgel.'
'Bear with me,' said the factor, 'Maister Fowd, or Maister Udaller, or whatever else they may call you, and as you are strong be pitiful, and consider the luckless lot of auy inexperienced person whc lights upon this earthly paradise "if ynurs. He asks for drink, t'ey bring him sour whey - III disparagement to your brandy, Fowd, which is excellent. Yon ask for meat, and they bring you sour sillocks that Satill might choke upon. You call your labourers together, and bid them work ; it proves St. Magnus's day, or St. Ronau's day, or some infernal saint or other's ; or else, perhaps, they hav : chule out of bed with the wrong foot foremost, or they have ser al owl, or a rabbit has crossed their path, or they have dremints of a roasted horse - in short. nothing is to be dune. Give them a spade, and they work as if it burned their fingers; hut set them to dancing, and see when they will tire of funking and flinging!'
'And why should they, poor bodies,' said Cland Halcro, 'as long as there are good fiddlers to play to them ?'
'Ay - ay,' said Triptolemus, shaking his head, 'you are a proper person to uphold them in such a humour. Well, to proceed. I till a piece of my best ground ; down comes a sturdy beggar that wants a kail-yard, or a plant-a-cruive, as you call it, and he claps down an inclosure in the middle of my bit shot of corn, as lightly as if he was baith laird and tenant; and gainsay him wha likes, there he dibble. in his kail-plants: I sit down to my sorrowful dinner, thinkin to have peace and quietness there at least, when in comes ole, two, three, four, or half a dozen of skelping long lads, from some foolery or anither, misca' me for barring my ain door against them, and eat up the best half of what my sister's providence - and she is not over bountiful - has allotted for my dinner: Then enters a witel, with an ell-wand in her hand, and she raises the wind or lays it, whichever she likes, majors up and down my house as if she was nistress of it, and I an bounden to thank Heaver if she carries not the broadside of it away with her!'
'Still,' said the Fowd, 'this is no answer to my question how the foul fiend I come to find you at moorings here?'
'Have patience, worthy sir,' replied the afflicted factor, 'and listen to what I have to say, for I fancy it will be as well to tell you the whole matter. You must know, I once thought that I had gotten a small godsend, that niglt have made all these matters easier.'
'How ! a godsend : Do you mean a wreck, Miaster Factor ?' exelaimed Magnus; 'shane upon you, that should have set example to others!'
' It was no wreck,' said the factor; 'bat, if you must needs know, it chanced that, as I raised an hearthstane in one of the old ehambers at Stourburgh - for my sister is, minded that there is little use in mair fireplaces about a house than one, and I wanted the stane to knock bear upon - when what should

I light on but a horn full of old coins, silver the maist feek of them, but wi' a bit sprinkling of gold among them too. \({ }^{1}\) Weel, I thought this was a dainty windfa', and so thought Bathy, annl we were the mair willing to put up with a place where there were siccan braw nest-eggs; and wo slade down the stane cannily over the horn, which seemed to me to be the very cornucopia, or horn of abmindance; and for further security Baby wad visit the room maybe twenty times in the day, and mysell at an orra time, to the boot of a' that.'
'On my word, and a very pretty amnsement,' said Cland Halern, 'to look over a horn of one's own siller. I question if glorious John Dryden ever enjoyed such a pastime in lis life : I am very sure I never did.'
'Yes, but you forget, Jarto Claud,' said the Udaller, 'that the factor was only counting over the money for my lord the chamberlain. As he is so keen for his lordslip's rights in whales and wrecks, surely he would not forget him in treasuretrove.'
'A-hem!a-hem!a-he-he-hem!' ejaculated 'Triptolemus, seized at the moment with an awkward fit of coughing ; 'no doubt, my lord's right in the matter would have been considered, being in the hand of one, though I say it, as just as can be found in Angusshire, let alone the Mearns. But mark what happened of late! One day, as I weut up to see that all was safe and snug, and just to connt out the share that should have been his lordship's - for surely the labourer, as one may call the finder, is worthy of his hire - nay, some learned men say that, when the finder, in point of trust and in point of power, representeth the dominus, or lord superior, he taketh the whole; but let that pass, as a kittle question in mpicilius juris, as we wout to say at St. Andrews - well, sir anul ladies, when I went to the upper chamber, what should I see but an ugsome, ill-shaped, and nost uncouth dwarf, that wanted but hoofs and horns to have made an utter devil of him, connt ing over the very hornfin of siller! I am no timorous man, Master Fowd, bint, judging that I should proceed with caution in such a matter - for I had reason to believe that there wats devilry in it - I accosted him in Latin - whilk it is maist becoming to speak to aught whilk taketh upon it as a goblin and conjured him in nomine, and so forth, with such words as my poor learning could furnish of a suddenty, whilk, to way truth, were not so many, nor altogether so purely latineezei us

\footnotetext{
\({ }^{1}\) See Antlifue Colns found In Zetland. Note 39.
}
might have been had I not been few years at college and many at the pleugh. Well, sirs, he started at first, as one that heareth that which he expects not; bint presently reeovering himself, he wawls on me with his grey een, like a wild cat, and opens his mouth, whilk resembled the month of an oven, for the deil a tongne he had in it, that 1 comld spy, and took upon his ugly self altogether the air and bearing of a bull-dog, whilk I have seen loosed at a fair upon a mand staig; \({ }^{1}\) whereupon I was something damited, and withdrew myself to call upon sister Baby, who fears neither dog nor devil when there is in question the little pemy siller. And truly slie raise to the fray as 1 hate seen the Limbsays aml Ogilvies bristle un, when Donah MacDomoch, on the like, made a start down frae the Highlands on the braes of listiay. But an auld useless carline, called 'Irouda Dronstanghter they might call her Drone the sell of her, without tarther al-dition-flmug herself right in my sister's gate, and yelloched anl skirled, that you would have thought her a whole generation of hounds; whereupon I judged it best to make ae yoking of it, and stop the pleugh until I got my sister's assistance; whilk when I had done, and we mounted the stair to the apartment in whieh the said dwarf, devil, or other apparition was to be seen, dwarf, horn, and siller were as elean gane as if the cat had liekit the place where I saw them.'
Here I'riptolemus pausel in his extraorlinary narration, while the rest of the party looked upon each other in surprise, and the Udaller muttered to Claud Halero - 'By all tokens, this must have been either the devil or Nicholas Strmupfer; and, if it were him, he is more of a goblin than e'er ! gave him! eredit for, and shall be apt to rate hiin as sueh in finture. 'Then addressing the faetor, he inquired - 'Saw ye nought how this dwarf of yours parted company?'
'As I shall answer it, no,' replied Triptolemus, with a eantions look around him, as if dauntell by the reeollection; 'neither I nor Baby, who had her wits more about her, not having seen this unseemly vision, could perceive any way hy whilk he made evasion. Only Trouda said she saw him tlee forth of the wind, w of the west roundel of the anld honse npon a dragon, ats she averred. But, as the dragon is held a fabmlous mimal, I suld pronounce her averment to rest upon deceptio risus.'.
'But, may we not ask farther,' said Brenda, stimulated by curiosity to know as mueh of her cousin Norna's family as was

\footnotetext{
\({ }^{1}\) Young unbroken horse.
}
possible, 'how all this operated upon Master Yellowley so as to occasion his being in this place at so unseasonable an hour ?'
'Seasonable it must be, Mistress Brenda, since it brought us into your sweet company,' answered Cland Halcro, whose mercurial brain far outstripped the slow conceptions of the agriculturist, and who became impatient of being so long silent. 'To say the truth, it was I, Mistress Brenda, who recommenden to our friend the factor, whose house I chanced to call at just after this mischance - and where, by the way, owing doult tes, to the hurry of their spirits, I was but poorly receivel - to make a visit to our other friend at Fitful Head, well jullging from certain points of the story, at which my other anil nuse particnlar friend than either (looking at Magnus) may channe to form a guess, that they who break a head are the best to find a plaster. And as our friend the factor scrupled travelling on horseback, in respect of some tumbles from our ponies: \(\qquad\)
'Which are incarnate devils,' said 'Triptolemus, aloud, muttering under his breath, 'like every live thing that I have fumil in Zetland.'
'Well, Fowd,' continued Halcro, 'I undertook to carry hinu to Fitful Head in my little boat, which Giles and I can manave as if it were an admiral's barge full manned; and Master Triptolemus Yellowley will tell you how seaman-like I pilatell him to the little haven, within a quarter of a mile of Nurnis's dwelling.'
'I wish to Heaven you had brought me as safe back agriilu,' said the factor.
'Why, to be sure,' replied the minstrel, 'I am, as glorivns Johu says -

> A daring pilot in extremity, Pleased with the danger when the waves go high. I seek the storm, but, for a caln mntit, Will steer too near the sands, to show my wit.'
'I showed little wit in entrusting myself to your charre, said Triptolemus; 'and you still less when you upset the lunit at the throat of the voe, as you call it, when even the pin bairn, that was mair than half drowned, told you that you were carrying too much sail; and then ye wad fasten the raje to the bit stick on the boat-side, that ye might have time to play "In the fiddle.'
'What!' said the Udaller, 'make fast the slects to the thwart 1 a most unseasonable practice, Claud Halcro.'
'And sae came of it,' replied the agriculturist; ' for the neist blast - and we are never lang without ane in these parts... whomled us as a gudewife would whomle a bowic, and ne'er a thing wad Maister Halcro save but his fiddle. The puir baim swam out like a water-spaniel, and I swattered hard for my life, wi' the help of ane of the oars; and here we are, comfortless creatures, that, till a good wind blew you here, had naething to eat but a mouthful of Norway rusk, that has mair sawdust than rye-meal in it, and tastes liker turpentine than onything else.'
'I thought we heard you very merry,' said Brenda, 'as we cane along the beach.'
'Ye heard a fiddle, Mistress Brenda,' said the factor; 'and maybe ye may think there can be nae dearth, miss, where that is skirling. But then it was Maister Claud Halcro's fiddle, whilk, I am apt to think, wad skirl at lis father's death-bed, or at his ain, sae lang as his fingers could pinch the thairm. And it was nae sma' aggravation to my misfortune to have him humming a' sorts of springs - Norse and Scots, Highland and Lawland, English and Italian, in my lug, as if nothing had happened that was amiss, and we all in such stress and perplexity.'
'Why, I told you sorrow would never right the boat, factor,' ssid the thoughtless minstrel, 'and I did my best to make you merry ; if I failed, it was neither my fault nor my fiddle's. I have drawn the bow across it before glorious John Dryden hinself.'
'I will hear no stories about glorious John Dryden,' answered the I'daller, who dreaded Halcro's narratives as much as Triptolemus did his music - 'I will hear nought of him, but one story to every three bowls of punch - it is our old paction, you know. But tell me, instead, what said Norna to you about your errand ?'
'Ay, there was anither fine upshot,' said Master Yellowley. 'She wadna look at us or listen to us; only she bothered our acquaintance, Master Halcro here, who thought he could have sae much to s.y wi' her, with about a score of questions about your family and household estate, Master Magnus Troil; and when she had gotten a' she wanted out of him, I thought she wad liae dung him ower the craig, like an empty peacod.'
'And for yourself?' said the Udaller.
'She wadna listen to my story, nor hear sac much as a word that I had to say,' answered 'Triptolemus: 'and sae much for them that scek to witches and familiar spirits!'
'You needed not to have had recourse to Norma's wishm, Master Factor,' said Minna, not unwilling, perhaps, to stin his' railing aguinst the friend who had so lately rendered her sorvice : 'the youngest child in Orkney conld have tohl yinn that fairy treasures, if they are not wisely employed fil the good of others, as well as of those to whom they are innpurten, do not dwell long with their possessors.'
'Your humble servant to command, Mistress Minuie,' sulil Triptolemus; 'I thank ye for the hint, and I am blithe that you have gotten your wits - I beg pardon, I meant your hea'th into the barn-yard again. For the treasure, I neither nsed nur abused it - they that live in the house with my sister Baby wal find it hard to do either! - and as for speaking of it, whilk they say muckle offends them whom we in Scotland call Good Neighbours, and you call Drows, the face of the auld Norse kiugs in the coins themselves might have spoken as much about it as ever I did.'
'The factor,' said Claud Halcro, not unwilling to seize the opportunity of revenging himself on Triptolemus for disgracing his seamanship and disparaging his music - 'the factor was so scrupulous as to keep the thing quiet even from his master, the Lord Chamberlain; but, now that the matter has ta'ell wind, he is likely to have to account to his master for that which is no longer in his possession ; for the Lord Chamberlain will be in no hurry, I think, to believe the story of the dwarf. Neither do I think (winking to the Udaller) that Norna gave credit to a word of so odd a story; and I daresay that wals the reason that she received us, I must needs say, ill it very dry manner. I rather think she knew that I'Iriptolemus, mur friend here, had found some other hiding-hole for the money, and that the story of the goblin was all his own invention. For my part, I will never believe there was such a dwarf to be seen as the creature Master Yellowley describes mutil I set ny own eyes on him.'
'Then yon may do so at this moment,' said the fietor: 'for, by ——' he muttered a deep asseveration as he sproms on his feet in great horror, ' there the ereature is!'

All turned their eyes in the direction in which he puinted. and saw the hideons, misshapen figure of l'atenlet, with his eyes fixed and glaring at them through the smoke. He hand stolen upon their conversation muperceiven, until the factors eye lighted upon him in the mamer we have deseribed. There was something so ghastly in his sudden and unexpected appear. ance that even the Udaller, to whom his form was familinr, conld not help starting. Neither pleased with himself for having testified this degree of emotion, however slight, nor with the dwarf who had givell canse to it, Magnus asked him sharply what was lis business there. Pacolet replied by producing a letter, whieh he gave to the Viduller, inttering a sound resembling the wurd 'shogh.'
'That is the Highlanhmun's language,' sail the Cilaller ; 'didst thou learn that, Nieholas, when you lost your own?'
Pacolet nodlded, and signed to him to rend his letter.
'That is no sneh easy nuater by firelight, my gool friend,' replied the Udaller ; 'but it may coneern Dlinm, and we mast try.'
Brenda offered her assistance, Intt the Viduller answered, ' No - 110 , my girl; Noma's letters must be real by those they are written to. Give the knave, Strumpfer, a drop of brandy the while, though he little deserves it at my hands, eonsidering the grin with which he sent the goorl Nantz down the erag this morning, as if it had been as much ditch-water.'
'Will you be this honest gentleman's enp-bearer - his Ganymede, friend Yellowley, or shull I?' said Clnul Halero aside to the faetor ; while Magnus 'Troil, having carefully wipel his spectaeles, whieh he prohnced from a lirge copper case, had disposed them on his nose and was stndying the epistle of Nuria.
'I woukl not toueh him, or go near him, fur all the Carse of Gowrie,' said the faetor, whose fears were by un means entirely removed, though he saw that the dwarf was receivel as a ereature of flesh and blood by the rest of the company; 'but I pray you to ask him what he has done with my horn of eoins?'
The dwarf, who heard the question, threw back his head and displayed his enormous throat, pointing to it with his finger.
'Nay, if he has swallowed them, there is no more to he said,' replied the factor: 'only I hope he will thrive on them as a eow on wet clover. He is dane Noma's servant, it's like sneh man, sueh mistress: But if theft and witchoraft are to go nupunished in this land, my lowd mist find inmether fietor ; for I have been used to live in a comutry where menis worldly gear was keepit from infang and ontfing thief, as well as their immortal souls from the elaws of the deil and his eummers spin and save us!'

\footnotetext{
2 In Gaelle, therc.
}

The agriculturist was perhaps the less reserved in expressing his complaints that the Udaller was for the prevent ont if hearing, having drawn Claud Halcro apart into another corner of the hut.
'And tell me,' said he, 'friend Halcro, what orrand took thee to Sumburgh, since I reckon it was scarce the mere pleasure of sailing in partnership, with yonder barnacle?'
'In faith, Fowd,' said the bard, 'and if you will have the truth, I went to speak to Norua on your affairs.'
'On, my affairs?' replied the Udaller; 'on what affairs of mine ?'
'Just touching your daughter's health. I hearl that Nirma refused your message, and would not see Eric Scambester. "Now," said I to myself, "I have scarce joyed in meat, or trink. or music, or aught else, since Jarto Minna has been so ill ; suil I may say, literally as well as figuratively, that my day num night have been made sorrowful to me." In short, I thonght I might have some more interest with old Norna than another, as Scalds and wise women were always accounted something akin ; and I undertook the journey with the hope to be of some use to my old friend and his lovely daughter.'
'And it was most kindly done of you, good, warm-hearted Claud,' said the Udaller, shaking him wannly by the haul: - I ever said you showed the good old Norse heart amongst all thy fiddling and thy folly. Tut, man, never wince for the matter, but be blithe that thy heart is better than thy heal. Well - and I warrant you got no answer from Norua?
'None to purpose,' replied Claud Halcro ; 'but she held me close to question about Minna's illness, too; and I told her how I had met her abroad the other morning in no very gool weather, and how her sister Brenda said she had hurt her fiout -in short, I told her all and everything I knew.'
'And something more besides, it would seem,' said the Udaller ; 'for I, at least, never heard before that Mimua had hurt herself.'
'0, a scratch ! - a mere scratch!' suid the old man! 'but I was startled abont it - terrified lest it had been the bite of it dog, or some hurt from a venomous thing. I told all to Norna, however.'
'And what,' answered the Udaller, 'did she say, in the way' of reply ?'
'She bade me begone about my bnsiness, and told me that the issue would be known at the Kirkwall fair ; and said ju:t
the like to this noodle of a factor ; it was all that either of us got for our labour,' said Halero.
'That is strauge,' snid Magniss. 'My kinswoman writes me in this letter not to fail going thither with my daughters. This fair runs strongly in her head; one would think she intended to lead the market, mid yet she lins nothing to huy or to sell there that I know of. And so yom cume away as wise as yon went, and swamper your boat at the month of the voe?'
'Why, how evuld I help it ?' said the puet. 'I had set the lwy to steer, mind as the flaw came suddenly off shore, I conld! not let go the tack and play on the fiddle at the same time. But it is all well enough - salt-water never harmed Zetlander, so as le could get out of it, and, as Heaven wonld have it, we were within man's depth of the shore, and chancing to find this skeo, we should have done well enough, with shelter and fire, and are much better than well with your goorl cheer and goud compuny. But it wears late, and Night and Day must be both as slecpy as whd Midnight can make them. 'There is an inner crib here, where the fishers slept - somewhat fragrant with the smell of their tish, but that is wholesome. They shall bestow themselves there, with the help of what cloaks you have, and then we will have one cup of brandy, and one stave of glorions John, or some little trifte of iny own, and so sleep as sound as cobblers.'
'I'wo glasses of brandy, if you please,' said the Udaller, 'if uur stores do not run dry ; but not a single stave of glorions John, or of any one else to-night.'

And this being arranged and executed agreeably to the perenptory pleasure of the Udaller, the whole party consigned themselves to slumber for the night, and on the next day departed for their several habitations, Claud Halcro having previously arranged with the Udaller that he would accompany hinu and his daughters on their proposed visit to Kirkwall.

\section*{CHAPTER XXXI}

By this hand, thon think'st me an far in the devil's book as thon and fal. staff, for ubluracy and prorxistency. let the end try the man. . . . Albeit I conld telf to thee (as to one it pleases me, for fault of a lietler, to call my frien(l), I could he sad, and mand indeed tow.

Henry IV. Part II.

WE must now change the seene from Zetland to Orkney, and request our readers to accompany us to the ruins of an elegant, thonef ancient, structure calleed the Earl's Palace. 'Theso remains, thongh much dilapidated, still exist in the neighbourhoul of the massive and venerable pile which Norwegian devotion dedicaterl to St. Magnus the Martyr, and, being contiguous to the Bishop's Palace, which is also ruinous, the place is impressive, as exhibiting vestiges of the mutations both in church and state which have affectel Orkney, as well as countries more exposed to such convulsions. Several parts of these ruinous buildings might be selected (under suitable modifications) as the model of a Gothic mansion, provided architects would be contented rather to imitate what is really beautiful in that species of building than to make a medley of the caprices of the order, confounding the militury: ecclesiastical, and domestic styles of all ages at randon, with additional fantasies and combinations of their own device, 'all formed out of the builder's brain.'
'The Earl's Palace forms three sides of an oblong square and has, even in its ruins, the air of an elegant yet massive structure, uniting, as was usual in the residence of feudal princes. the character of a palace and of a castle. A great banqueting- hall, commmicating with several large rounds, or projecting turretrooms, and having at either end an immense chimney, testifies: the ancient Northern hospitality of the Earls of Orkney, anil communicates, aluost in the morlern äshion, with a gallery or withdrawing rom of corresponding dimensions, and having, like the hall, its projecting turrets. The lordly ball itself is lighted by a fine Gothic wimbow of shafted stome at one end, and is entered ly a spucions und eleg口ut stair ase. ennsisting of three flighte of stome stepms. The exterion ormanents and proportions of the ancient building are also, very hankome; hat, being totally mprotected, thio rmmant if the promp and grandeur of earls, who, aenmel the lirense as well as the dignity of petty sovereigns, is misw fint rammiling to decay, and has suffered considerably sume the date of our story.
With folded arms und downeat lonks, the pirate Clevamed was pacing slowly the ruineed hall which we have just deseribed -a place of rotirement which he had prombly chosen heconne it was ilistant from public resort. His Iress was' emsiderahly alterel from that which he nsinally wore in Zetlani, and seemenl a sort of uniforn, richly lacell, an exhihiting no small qumity of embroidery; a hat with a plame, and a small sworl very landsomely mometel, then the constant compmion of every one who assumed the rank of a gentleman, showed his pretensions to that character. But if his exterior was sil fir in frovel, it seemed to be otherwise with his health and spirits. He was pale, and had lost both the fire of his eyes and the vivacity of his stup, and his whote appearante indieated melancholy of mind, or suffering of borly, or a eombination of both evils.

As Cleveland thins pated these ancient ruins, a yomug man, of a light and slender form, whose showy dress seemeil to have been studied with care, yet exlibited nore extravagance than iulgment or taste, whose manner was a junty uffectation of the free and easy rake of the perion, and the expression of whose countenance was lively, with a cast of effrontery, tripped up the ataircase, entered the hall, and presented himself to Cleveland, who merely nodded to him, und pulling his hat deeper over his, brows, resmmed his solitary and ifiscontented promenale.

The stranger aljusted his own hat, nowlied in return, tomik snuff, with the air of a petit maitre, from a richly chased gold box, offeren it to Clevelind as he passen, and being repulsed rather collly, rephaced the box in his pocket, foldenl his arms in his turn, and stood looking with fixed attention on his motions wh ne solitule he had interrupted. It length Cleveland stopped short, as if impatient of bemg longer the subject of his ollservation, and said nbruptly, 'Why can I not be left alme for hulf an hour, and what the devil is it that you want?'
'I an glad you spoke first,' answered the stranger, carelessly ; 'I was determined to know whether yon were Clement Cleveland or Cleveland's ghost and they say ghosts never thise the first word, so I now set it down fcr yourself in life and limb; and here is a fine old hurly-house you have found out fior an owl to hide himself in at mid-day, or a ghost to revisit the pale glimpses of the moon, as the divine Shakspeare say:
'Well - well,' answered Cleveland, abruptly, 'your jest is made, and uow let us have your earnest.'
'In eamest, then, Captain Cleveland,' replied his companion, ' I think you know me for your friend.'
' I am content to suppose so,' said Cleveland.
'It is more than supposition,' replied the young man: •I have proved it - proved it both here and elsewhere.'
'Well - well,' answered Cleveland, 'aduit you have been always a friendly fellow - and what then?'
'Well, well - and what then!' replied the other ; 'this is but a brief way of thanking folk. Look you, captain, here is Benson, Barlowe, Diek Fletcher, and a few others of nis whu wished you well, have kept your old comrade Captain (inifie in these seas upon the look-out for you, when he and Hawkilis, and the greater part of the ship's company, would fain laive been down on the Spanish Main, and at the old trale.
'And I wish to God that you had all gone about your business,' said Clevelanc., 'and left me to my fate.'
' Whieh would have been to be informed against aud hangell, captain, the first time that any of these Dutch or Eindish rascals whom you have lightened of their cargoes cane to set their eyes upon you; and no plaee more likely to meet with seafaring men than in these islands. And here, to sereen yinu from such a risk, we have been wasting our precions tinu, till folk are grown very peery; and when we have no more gontio or money to spend amongst them, the fellows will be for grailhin! the ship.'
'Well, then, why do you not sail off withort me ?' sail (lleve. land. 'There has been fair partition, and all have han thuir share; let all do as they like. I have lost my ship, and havint been onee a captain, I will not go to sea under command if (i,flic or any other man. Besides, you know well enongh that hith Hawkins and le bear me ill-will for keeping them from sinking the Spanish brig, with the poor devils of negroes on boart!:
'Why, what the foul fiend is the matter with thee!' silid his companion. 'Are yon Clement Cleveland, our own o! trme hearted Clem of the Clengh, and do you talk of being afisial if Hawkins and Goffe, and a score of such fellows, when yon hate masself, anl Barlowe, and Dick Fletcher at your back? When was it we deserted you, either in council or in fight, that yon should be afraid of our flinching now? And as for serving muler Goffe, I hope it is no new thing for gentlemen of fortune who are going on the account to change a captain now and then! let us alone for that - captain you shall be ; for death rock me asleep if I serve under that fellow Goffe, who is as very a bloorlhound as ever sueked bitch! No, no, I thank you - my captain must have a little of the gentleman abont him, howsoever. Besides, you know, it was you who first dipped my hands in the dirty water, and turned me from a stroller by land to a rover by sea.'
'Alas, poor Bunce!' said Cleveland, 'yon owe me little thanks for that service.'
'That is as yon take it,' replied Bunce ; 'for my part, I see mo harm in levying contributions on the public either one way or t'other. But 1 wish yon wonld forget that name of Bunce and call ine Altannont, as I lave often desired you to do. I linpe a gentcman of the roving trade has as goorl a right to have an alias as a stroiler, and I never stepped on the boards lout what I was Altamont at the least.'
'Well, then, Jack Altamont,' replied Cleveland, 'since Altamont is the word -'
'Yes, but, captain, Jack is not the word, though Altamont he so. Jack Altamont! why, 't is a velvet coat with paper lace. Let it be Frederick, captain : Frederiek Altamont is all of a piece.'
'Frederick be it then, with all my heart,' said Cleveland; 'and pray tell me, which of your names will somul best at the lieal of the "Last Speech, Confession, and Dying Words of Jolm Bunce, alins Frederick Altamont, who was this morning hanged at Execution Dock for the crime of Piracy upon the High Seas "?"
'raith, 1 cannot answer that question without another cill of grog, captain; so, if you will go down with me to Bet Haldane's on the quay, 1 will bestow some thought on the matter, with the help of a right pipe of I'rinidado. We will have the gallon bowl filled with the best stnff yon ever tasted, and 1 know some smart wencles who will help us to drain it. But you shake your heal - yon're not \(i\) ' the vein? Well, then, I will stay with you; for, by this hand, Clem, you slift me not off. Only I will ferret you ont of this burrow of old stomes, and carry you into sunshine and fair air. Where shall we go ?'
'Where you will,' said Cleveland, 'so that you keep ont if the way of our own rascals and all others.'
'Why, then,' replied Bunce, 'you and I will go mp to the Hill of Whitford, which overlooks the town, and walk tugether as gravely and honestly as a pair of well-employed attonneys:

As they proceeded to leave the ruinous castle, Bunce, turning back to look at it, thus addressed his companion :
'Hark ye, captain, dost thou know who last inhabited this old cockloft?
'An earl of the Orkneys, they say,' replied Cleveland.
'And are you avised what death he died of?' said Bunce; ' for I have heard that it was of a tight neek-collar - a hempen fever, or the like.'
' 'The people here do say,' replied Cleveland, 'that his lurilship, some hundred years ago, had the mishap to becone accuainted with the nature of a loop and a leap in the air.
'Why, la ye there now !' said Bunce; 'therc was sme credit in being hanged in those days, and in sueh wor-hiutinl company. And what might his lordship have done to ilenerve such promotion ?'
'Plundered the liege subjeets, they say,' replied Cleveland: 'slain and wounded them, fired upon his Majesty's tlag, anil so forth.'
'Near akin to a gentleman rover, then,' said Bunce, makiug a theatrical bow towards the old building; 'and, therefure, my most potent, grave, and reverend Signior Earl, I crave leave to call you my loving cousin, and bid you most heartily alien. I leave you in the good company of rats and mice, and so forth, and I carry with me an honest gentleman, who, having of late had no more heart than a mouse, is now desirous to run away from his profession and friends like a rat, and would therefure be a most fitting denizen of your earlship's palace.'
'I would advise you not to speak so loud, my good friend Frederiek Altamont, or John Bunee,' said Cleveland: 'when you were on the stage, you might safely rant as lond as youn listed; but, in your present profession, of whieh you are sin fond, every man speaks under correetion of the yari-arm and a ruming noose.'

The eonrades left the little town of Kirkwall in silen (a, and ascended the IVill of whitforl, which raises its brow of dauk heath, minterrupted by inclosures or cultivation of any limel. to the northward of the ancient burgh of St. Magnus: The plain at the foot of the hill was already oeeupied by number, of persons who were engaged in making preparations for the fair of St. Otla, to be held upon the eusuing day, and which forms a general rendezvous to all the neighbouring islands of Orkney, and is even frequented by many persons from the more distant archipelago of Zetland. It is, in the words of the proclamation, 'A free mercat and fair, holden at the goorl burgh of Kirkwall on the third of August, being St. Olla's day, and continuing for an indefinite space thereafter, extending from three days to a week and upwards. 'The fair is of great antiquity, and derives its name from Olaus, Olave, Ollaw, the celebrated monarch of Norway, who, rather by the edge of his sword than any milder argument, introduced Christianity into these isles, and was respected as the patron of Kirkwall some time before he shared that honour with St. Magins the Martyr.
It was no part of Cleveland's purpose to miurle in the busy seene which was here going on; and, tuming their ronte to the left, they soon ascended into mulisturbed solitule, save where the grouse, \({ }^{1}\) more plentiful in (Orkney, perhap.s, than in any other part of the British dominions, rose in covey, and went off before them. Having continned to ascend till they had wellnigh reached the summit of the conical hill, buth turued romul, as with one consent, to look at and admire the prospect beneath.
The lively bustle which extended between the foot of the hill and the town gave life and variety to that part of the scene ; then was seen the town itself, ont of which urose, like a great mass, superior in proportion as it seemed to the whole burgh, the ancient cathedral of St. Magnus, of the heuviest order of Gothic architecture, but grand, solemn, and stately, the work of a distant age and of a powerful hand. The ynay, with the shipping, lent additional vivacity to the srene; and not only the whole beantiful bay, which hes betwixt the promontories of Ingamess and Quanterness, at the botton of which Kirkwall is sitnated, but all the sea, so far as visible, and in particular the whole strait hetwixt the island of Shapinshat and that called Pomona, or the Mainland, was covered and enlivened by a variety of boats and small vessels, freighted from distant islands to convey passengers or merchandise to the fair of St. Olla.

Having attained the point by which this fair and busy prospect was most completely commanded, each of the strangers., in seaman fashion, had recourse to his spy-rlass, to assist the naked eye in considering the Bay of Lirkwall and the numerons

\footnotetext{
1 See Note 40.
}
vessels by which it was traversed. But the attention of the two companions seemed to be arrested by different obje:ct. 'Ihat of Bunce, or Altamont, as he chose to call himself, w:is riveted to the armed sloop, where, conspicuous by her sinure rigging and length of beam, with the Euglish jack and pemun, which they had the precaution to keep flying, slie lay amm, the merchant vessels, as distinguished from them by the trim neatness of her appearance as a trained soldier amongst a cruwd of elowns.
' Yonder she lies,' said Bunce ; 'I wish to God she was in the Bay of Honduras - you, captain, on the quarter-deck, I your lieutenant, and Fletcher quarter-master, and fifty stomit fellows under us - I should not wish to see these blasted heathis: and rocks again for a while! And captain you shall soon he. The old brute Goffe gets drunk as a lord every day, swaggers, and shoots, and cuts among the crew; and, besides, hic has quarrelled with the people here so damnably that they will scarce let water or provisions go on board of us, and we expect an open breach every day.'

As Bunce received no answer, he turned short round int his companion, and, perceiving his attention otherwise engared, exclaimed - 'What the devil is the matter with you? or what, can you see in all that trumpery snall craft, which is ouly loaded with stock-fish, and ling, and smoked geese, and tubs if butter that is worse than tallow 1-the cargoes of the whole lumped together would not be worth the fiash of a pistol. No no, give me such a chase as we might see from the mast-heal off the island of Trinidado. Your Don, rolling as deep in the water as a grampus, deep-loaden with rum, sugar, and bales of tobacco, and all the rest ingots, moidores, and gold dust ; then set all sail, clear tho deck, stand to quarters, up with the Jolly Roger; \({ }^{1}\) we near her - we make her out to be well mannel and armed \(\qquad\) '
''Twenty guns on her lower deck,' said Cleveland.
'Forty, if you will,' retorted Bunce, 'and we have but teln mounted - never mind. The Don blazes away - never mind yet, my brave lads - run her alongside, and on board with you - to work, with your gremadoes, your cutlasses, pole-axes, anil pistols. The Don cries "Misericordia," and we sharc the cargo without co licencio, Seignior!"
' By my faith,' said Cleveland, 'thou takest so kindly to the

\footnotetext{
1 The pirates gave this name to the hack flag. Which. with many horrlble devices to enhance its terrors, was their favourlte ensign.
}
trude that all the world may see that no honest man was spuileii when you were made a pirate. But you shall nut prevail on me to go farther in the devil's road with you; for jou know yourself that what is got over his back is spent - you wot how. In a week, or a month at most, the rum and the sugar are vut, the bales of tobacco have become smoke, the moidures, ingots, and gold dust have got out of our hands into those of the yuiet, honest, eonseientious folks who dwell at Port Royal and elsewhere, wink hard on our trade as long as we have money, but not a jot beyond. Then we have cold looks, and it may be a lint is given to the julge marshal ; for, when our pockets are worth nothing, our honest friends, rather than want, will make money upon our heads. Then comes a high gallows and a short halter, and so dies the gentleman rover. I tell thee, I will leave this trade; and, when I turn my glass from one of these harks and boats to another, there is not the worst of them which I would not row for life rather than eontime to be what I have been. These poor men make the sea a means of homest livelihood and friendly communication between shore and shore, for the mutual benefit of the inhabitants; but we have made it a road to the ruin of others and to our own destruction here and in eternity. I am determined to turn honest man and use this life no longer!'
'And where will your honesty take up its abode, if it please you ?' said Bunce. 'You have broken the laws of every nation, and the hand of the law will detect and erush you wherever you may take refuge. Cleveland, I speak to you more seriously than I am wont to do. I have had my reflections, too ; and they have been bad enough, though they have lasted but a few minutes, to spoil me weeks of joviality. But here is the matter - what can we do but go on as we have done, unless we have a direct purpose of adorning the yard-arm ?'
'We may claim the benefit of the proclanation to those of our sort who come in and surrender,' said Cleveland.
'Umph!' answered his companion, drily; 'the date of that day of grace has been for some time over, and they may take the penalty or grant the pardon at their pleasure. Were I you, I would not put my neek in such a venture.'
' Why, others have been admitted but lately to favour, and why should not I ?' said Cleveland.
'Ay,' replied his associate, 'Harry Glashy and some others have been spared; but Glasby did what was called good servine, in betraying his comrades and retaking the "Jolly Fortme"; and that I think you wonld scom, even to be revenged of the brute Goffe youder.'
'I would die a thousand times sooner,' said Cleveland.
'I will be sworn for it,' said Bunce; 'and the others were forecastle fellows - petty larceny rogues, searce worth the hemp it would have cost to hang then. But your mane has stocul too high amongst the gentlemen of fortune for yon to get off so easily. You are the prime buek of the herd, and will be marked accordingly.'
'And why so, I pray you I' said Cleveland; 'you know well enongh my aim, Jack.'
'Frederiek, if you please,' said Bunce.
'The devil take your folly! Prithee keep thy wit, atill let us be grave for a moment.'
'For a moment - be it so,' said Bunce ; 'but I feel the - jirit of Altanont eoming fast upon me. I have been a grave man for ten minutes already.'
'Be so then for a little longer,' said Cleveland. 'I kuw, Jack, that you really love me; and, since we have come this far in this talk, I will trust you entirely. Now tell me, why should I be refused the benefit of this gracious proclamation? I have borne a rough outside, as thou knowest ; but, in time of need, I can show the number of lives which I lave been the neans of saving, the property which I have restored to thine who owned it, when, withòut my intercession, it would have been wantonly destroyed. In short, Bunce, I can show -_'
'That you were as gentle a thief as Robin Hood himself,' said Bunce ; 'aind, for that reason, I, Fletcher, and the better sort among us, love yon, as one who saves the character of 1 is gentlemen rovers from utter reprobation. Well, suppose your pardon made out, what are you to do next? - what class in: society will receive you? - with whom will you associate? Old Drake, in Queen Bess's time, could plunder Peru and Mexien without a line of commission to show for \(i t\), and, hessed be her memory! he was knighted for it on his return. And there was Hal Morgan, the Welshman, nearer our time, in the days of merry King Clarles, brought all his gettings home, had lis estate and his comitry honse, and who but he? But that is all ended now : once a pirate, and an ontcast for ever. The poor devil may go and live, shmmed and despised by every ,nin, in some obscure seaport, with such part of his guilty caminto as courtiers and clerks leave him - for pardons do not pas- the seals for nothing - and, when he takes his walk along the pier, if a stranger asks who is the duwn-lookin!, swarthy, meluncholy man for whom all make way, as if he bromght the plague in lis person, the answer shall be, that is such a one, the pardoned pirate! No honest man will speak to him, no woman of repute will give him her hand.'
' Your picture is too highly colourenl, Jack,' said Cleveland, suddenly interrupting his friend: 'there are women - there is one, at least, that would be true to her lover, evelu if he were what you have described.'
Bunce was silent for a moment, and lowked fixedly at his friend. 'By iny soul!' he said, at lengrth, 'I begin to think myself a conjurer. Unlikely as it all was, I could not help susprecting from the beginning that there was a girl in the case. Why, this is worse than Prince Volscins in love - ha ! ha! ha!'
'Laugh as you will,' said Cleveland, 'it is true : there is a maiden who is contented to love me, pirate as I am; and I will fairly own to you, Jack, that, though I have often at times detested our roving life, and myself for following it, yet I dombt if I could have found resolution to make the break which I have now resolved on but for her sake.'
'Why, then, God-a-uercy!' replied Bunce, 'there is mu speaking sense to a madman; and love in ouc of your trade, captain, is little better than lunacy. 'The girl must be a rare creature, for a wise man to risk langing for her. But, hark ye, may she not be a little touched, as well as yourself? and is it not sympathy that las done it 1 She cannot be one of onr ordinary cockatrices, but a girl of conduct and character.'
'Both are as undoubted as that she is the most beautiful and bewitcling creature whom the eye ever opened upon,' answered Cleveland.
'And she loves thee, knowing thee, most noble captain, to be a commander amoug those gentlemen of fortunc whom the volgar call pirates ?'
'Even so - I ann assured of it,' swid Cleveland.
'Why, then,' nuswered Bmee, 'she is either mad in groul earnest, as I said before, or she does not know what a pirate is.'
'You are right in the last point,' replied Cleveland. 'She has been bred in such remote simplicity, and utter innmance of what is evil, that she compares sur neempation with that of the old Norscmen, who swept sea and haveu with their victurinns galleys, cstablished, colonics, comnuered comutrics, and towk the mame of sea-kings.'
'And a better one it is than that of pirate, and comes much to the name purpose, I daresay,' said Bunce. 'But this must be a mettled wench ! Why did you not bring her ubourd! Methinks it was pity to baulk her fancy.
'And do you think,' said Cleveland, 'that I could so aiterly play the part of a fallen spirit as to avail myself of her enthusiastic error, and bring an angel of beauty and innocenre acquainted with such a hell as exists on lward of yourler infernal ship of ours? I tell you, my friend, that, were all my forner sins doubled in weight and in dye, such a villany wonlif have outglared and outweigherl them all.'
' Why, then, Captain Cleveland,' said his confidlant, 'methink, it was but a fool's part to come hither at all. The news munst one day have gone abroad that the celcbratel pirate Captain Cleveland, with his good sloop the "Revenge," had becn lost nu the Mainland of Zetland, and all hands perishel ; so you winlid have remained hid both from friend and enemy, and might have: married your pretty Zetlander, and converted your sash ani scarf into fishing-nets, and your cutlass into a harpoon, anil swept the seas for fish instead of florins.'
'And so I had determined,' said the captain ; 'but a jasfor, as they call them here, like a meddling, peddling thief as he is; brought down intelligence to Zetland of your lying herc, anill was fain to set off, to see if you were the consort of whom 1 hial told them, long before I thought of leaving the roviug tradc.'
'Ay,' said Bunce, 'and so far you judged well. For, as youl had heard of our being at Kirkwall, so we should have sonn learned that you were at Zetland; and some of us for friem? ship, some for hatred, and some for fear of your playing Harry. Glasby upon us, would have come down for the purpose if getting you into our conupany again.'
'I suspected as much,' said the captain, 'and therefore wili fain to decline the courteous offer of a friend who proposed to bring me here about this time. Besides, Jack, I recollecterl that, as you say, my pardon will not pass the seals with wit money; my own was waxing low - no wonder, thou knowe.t I was never a churl of it ; and so \(\qquad\) 110
'And so you came for your share of the cobs?' replied his friend. 'It was wisely done; and we shared homomrably : wn far Goffe has acted up to articles, it must be allowed. But keep your purpose of leaving him close in your breast, for I dread his playing you some dog's trick or other: for he certainly thought himself sure of your share, and will hardly forgive yum coming alive to disappoint him.'
'I fear him not,' said Cleveland, 'and he knows that well. I would I were as well elear of the consequences of having been his commale as I hold myself tu be of all those which may attend his ill-will. Another mahaply joh I may lwe tronbled with: I hart a young fellow, who has heen my phage for mome time, in an mhappy browl that chancel the morning I left \%ethand.'
'Is he deanl?' anked Bunce. 'It is a more serimens question here than it wonld be on the Grand Caimains or the Bahama Isles, where a brace or two of fellows may be shot in a morning, and no more heard of, or asked about, them than if they wero si) many wood-pigeons. But here it may be otherwise ; so I hope yon have not made your friend immortal.'
'I hope not,' said the captann, 'though my anger has en fiatal to those who have given me less provocation. To say the truth, I was sorry for the lad notwithstanding, and enjecerially as I was forced to leave him in mad keeping.
'In mad keeping!' said Bunce ; 'why, what means that?'
' You shall hear,' replied his friend. 'In the first phace, you are to know, this young man came suddenly on me white 1 was trying to gain. Minna's ear for a private interview befire I set sail, that I might explain my purpose to her. Now, to be broken in on by the accursed rideness of this yoming fellow at such a monent
'IThe interruption deserved death,' said Bunce, 'by all the laws of love and honour!'
'A truce with your ends of plays, Jack, and listen one moment. 'I'he brisk youth thought proper to returt, when I commanded him to be gone. I am not, thou knowest, very patient, and enforced my commands with it blow, which lie returned as roundly. We struggled, till I became desirons that we should part at any rate, which I could only effect by a stroke of my poniard, which, according to old use, I have, thon knowest, always about me. I had scarce done this when 1 repenterl; but there was no time to think of anything save escape and concealment, for, if the house rose on me, I was lost ; as the fiery old man, who is head of the family, would have done justice on me had I been lis brother. I twok the body hastily on my shoulders. to carry it down to the sea-shore, with the purpose of throwing it into a riva, as they cell them, on chasm of great dey, where it would have been long emmgh in being discovered "this done, I intended to jump intw the losit which I had ly ing realy, and set sail for Kithoull. But.

\footnotetext{
Vul., N111-:
}

\section*{THE PILATE}
as I was walking hastily towards the beaeh with my burden, the poor yomig fellow groaned, and su) apprised me that the wound haid not beon instuntly fatal. I was hy this time well concealed amongst the rocks, and, far from desiring to complete my crime, I laid the yomig man on the grominl, anil was doing what I conld to stanes the blood, when sindenly an olld woman stood befare me. Slie was a persmin whin! lhal frepnently seell while in Zethanl, and to whom they aseribe the character of a sorceress, or, as the negroes say, ant Obi woman. She demanded the womided man of me, anil I was tow much preswend for time to hesitate in complying with her request. More sho was about to say to me, when we heard the voice of a silly will man, belonging to the family, singing at some distance. Sho then pressed her finger on her lip as a sign of secrecy, whisthond very low, and a shapeless, deformed brnte of a dwarf coming: to her assistance, they carried the wommed man into one if the caverns with which the place abounds, and I fot t" luy boat and to sen with all expedition. If that old hag be, as they say, eomected with the King of the Air, she favomren me that morning with a turn of her calling; for not even the West Indian tomadves, which we have weatliered tugether, made a wilder racket than the squall that drove me so far out of our course that, without a pocket-compass, which I ehanced to have about ne, I should never have recoverect the Fair Isle, for whieh we run, and where I found a brig whirlh brought me to this place. But, whether the old woman meant me weal or woe, here we came at length in safety from the sea, and here I remain in doubts and difficulties of more kinh. than one.'
'(Oh, the devil take the Sumburgh Hearl,' said Bunce, 'or whatever they call the rock that you knocked our clever little "Revenge " against!'
'Do not say I knocked her on the rock,' said Clevelanul: 'lave I not told you fifty times, if the cowards hal not take'l to their boat, though I showed them the danger, and told the'lin they would all be swamped, which happened the instant they cast off the painter, she would lave been afloat at this moment? Hal they stood by me and the ship, their lives wonld have been saved ; harl I gonc with them, mine would have been lost ; whin can say which is for the best?'
'Well,' replied his friend, 'I know your case now, anll c:un the better help and advise. I will be true to yon, (lement, an the blade to the hilt; but I cannot think that you shonld leave us. As the old Scottish song rays, "Wae's my heart that we shonld sunder!" But come, you will aboaril with us to-day, at nay rate?'
'I have no other place of refinge,' said Cloveland, with a sigh. He the nonce turre ran his eyes over the hay, directed his spy.glases upon several of the vessels which traversed its surface, in hopes, doubtless, of discerning the vessel if Magnus T'ruil, and then followed his companion down the hill in silence.

(ANSI and ISO TEST CHART Na. 2)

\section*{CHAP'IER XXXII}

I strive like to the vessel in the tide-way, Which, lacking favouring breeze, hath not the power, To stem the powerful current. Even so, Resolving daily to forsake my vices, Habits, strong circumstance, renew'd temptation, Sweep me to sea again. O heavenly breath, Fill thou iny sails, and aid the feeble vessel, Which ne'er can reach the blessed port without thee!
'T' is Odds when Evens mro.

CLEVELAND, with his friend Bunce, descended the liill for a time in silence, until at length the latter renewed their conversation.
'You have taken this fellow's wound more on your consciene than you need, captain : I have known you do more, and think less on 't.'
' Not on such slight provocation, Jack,' replied Clevelaul. 'Besides, the lad saved my life ; and, say that I requited him the favour, still we should not have met on such evil terns: but I trust that he may receive aid from that woman, who has certainly strange skill in simples.'
'Anl over simpletons, captain,' said his friend, 'in which class I must e'en put you down, if you think more on this mul. ject. That you should be made a fool of by a young winnan, why it is many an honest man's case ; but to puzzle yonr prite' about the mummeries of an old one is far too great a folly th indulge a friend in. Talk to me of your Minna, since yuin su call her, as much as you will ; but you have no title to trumb your faithful squire-errant with your old mumping magiviall. And now here we are once more amongst the boothi :lnil tents which these good folk are pitching; let us look, and wie whether we may not find some fun and frolic amongst then. In merry England, now, you would have seen, on such :Int occasion, two or three bands of strollers, as many fire-eater: : mil conjurers, as many shows of wild beasts; but, amongst these grave fulks, there is nothing but what savours of business atul of commodity - no, not so much as a single squall from my merry gossip Punch and his rib Joan.'
As Bunce thus spoke, Cleveland cast his eyes on some very ray clothes, which, with other articles, hung out upon one of the booths, that had a good deal more of ornament and exterior decoration than the rest. There was in front a small sign of canvas painted, amouncing the variety of goots which the owner of the booth, Bryce Snaila:" mt , had on sale, and the reasonable prices at which he propused to offer them to the public. For the further gratification of the spectator, the sign bore on the opposite side an emblematic device, resembling our first parents in their vegetable garments, with this legend -

> 'Poor simuers whom the suake deceives Are fain to cover them with leaves. Zetland hath no leaves, 't is true, Because that trees are none, or few ; But we have flax and taits of woo', For linen cloth and wadmaal blue ; And we have nany of fureign knacks Of finer waft than woo' or flax. Ye gallanty Lamumas lads, \({ }^{1}\) appear, And briug your lambmas sisters here, Bryce Snailsfoot slares not cost or care, To pleasure every gentle pair.'

While Cleveland was perusing these goodly rhymes, which brought to his mind Claud Halcro, to whom, as the poct laureate of the island, ready with his talent alike in the service of the sreat and small, they probably owed their origin, the worthy proprietor of the booth, having cast his eye upon him, began with hasty and trembling hand to remove some of the garments, which, as the sale did not commence till the ensuing day, he had exposed either for the purpose of airing them or to excite the admiration of the spertators.
'By iny word, captain,' whispered Bunce to Cleveland, 'you must have had that fellow under your clutches one day, and he remembers one gripe of your talons and fears another. See how fast he is packing his wares out of sight, so som as he set cyes on you!'
'His wares!' said Cleveland, on looking more attentively at his proceedings. 'By Heaven, they are my chothes which I left in a chest at Jarlshof when the "Revenge" was lost there. Why, Bryce Snailsfoot, thou thief, dog, and villain, what means this? Have you not made enough of us by cheap buying and

\footnotetext{
\({ }^{1}\) See Note 41.
}
dear selling, that you have seized on my trunk and wea apparel?'
Bryee Snailsfoot, who probably would otherwise not been willing to see his friend the captain, was now by the \(v\) ity of his attack obliged to pay attention to him. He first pered to his little foot-page, by whom, as we liave alr notieed, he was usuaily attended, 'Rim to the town-con house, jarto, and tell the provost and bailies they mann some of their officers speedily, for liere is like to be wild in the fair.'
So having said, and having seconded his commands by a I on the shoulder of his messenger, which sent him spinning of the shop as fast as heels conld carry him, Bryce Suails thrned to his old acquaintanee, and, with that amplifieation words and exaggeration of manner which in Scotland is ca making a phrase,' he ejaculated - 'IThe Lord be gude to the worthy Captain Cleveland, that we were all so grie about, returned to relieve our hearts again! Wat have cheeks been for you (here Bryee wiped his eyes), and bli am I now to see you restored to your sorrowing friends!' ' My sorrowing friends, you rascal!' said Cleveland; 'I give you better cause for sorrow than ever you had on 1 account, if you do not tell e e instantly where you stole all 'Stole !' ejaculated Bryet, easting up his eyes ; 'now t] Powers be gude to us :- the poor gentleman has lost his reati in that weary gale of wind.'
'Why, you insolent rascal!' said Cleveland, grasping tl cane which he carried, 'do yon think to bamboozle me wit your impudence? As you would have a whole head on yom shoulders, and your bones in a whole skin, one minnte longel tell me where the devil yon stole my wearing-apparel?'
Bryce Snailsfoot ejaculated once more a repetition of the word 'Stole! Now Heaven be gude to ns:' but at the same time, conscions that the captain was likely to be suldenn "1 execntion, cast an anxions look to the town, to see the loiterinn aid of the civil power alsance to his rescue.
'I insist on an instant answer,' sail the captain, with npraisel weapon, 'or else I will beat yon to a mummy, and throw ont all your frippery upon the common"'
Meanwhile, Master Jolm Brance, who considered the whole affair as an excellent good jest, and not the worse one that it made Cleveland angry, seized hold of the captain's arm, e not have \(y\) the vivaee first whis ave alrearly Wr-councilmaun send e wild wark by a push inning out Snailsfmet ification of id is callerl ude to us: ogrieved have my and blithe iends !' d; 'I will ad on my ole all my
'now the is reasul ping the me with on your e longer, of the he same ilden in oitering praisen row out whole ie that s arm,

"Give me back my goods, you rascally thief," said cleveland. From a painting by Kecky Halswelle, A.R.S.A.
and, without any iden of ultimately preventing him from exeent ing his threats, interfered just so much as was necessary to protract a liseussion so amusing.
'Nay, let the honest man speak;' he sail, 'messmate : he las as fine a cozening face as ever stood on a kavish pair of shoulders, and his are the true flomrishes of eloguence, in the course of whieh men snip, the eloth an inch too short. Now, I wish you to eonsider that you are both of a trade : he measures bales by the yard, and you by the sword; and so I will not have him chopped up till he has had a fair chase.'
'You are a fool!' said Cleveland, endeavouring to shake his friend off. 'Let me go : for, by Heaven, I will be foul of him:'
'Hold him fast,' sand the pedlar - 'gool dear merry gentleman, hold him fust !'
"I'hen say something for yourself,' said Bunce; 'use your gob-box man ; patter away, or, by my soul, I will let him luose (ill you!'
'He says I stole these goods,' said Bryce, who now saw himself run so close that pleading to the charge became inevitable. 'Now, how could I steal them when they are mine by fair and lawful purchase ?'
'Purchase! you beggarly vagrant!' said Cleveland; 'from whom did you dare to buy my clothes? or who hal the impudence to sell them ?'
'Just that worthy professor Mrs. Swertha, the honsekeeper at Jarlshof, who acted as your executor,' said the pedlar ; 'and a arieved heart slie had.'
- And so sle was resolved to make a heavy pocket of it, I suppose,' said the captain; 'but how did she dare to sell the thurs left in lier charge?
'Why, she aeted all for the best, good wom:m!' said the pellar, anxious to protract the discussion mitil the arrival of succours ; 'and, if you will but hear reason, I am ready to account with you for the chest amb all that it liolds.'
'Speak ont, then, and let ns have nome of thy dammable evasions,' said Captain Cleveland: 'if you show ever s" little pupose of being somewhat homest for once in thy lifie, I will nut beat thee.'
'Why, you see, noble capt ,', salit the perllar, and then muttered to himself, 'Plasue wa P'ate Paterson's cripple knee, they will be waiting for him, himpling, useless borly:' - then resumed aloud - 'the country, ye see, is in great perplexity - great perplexity, inded - much perplexity, truly. There was your honour missing, that was loved by great and small arm missing - nowhere to be heard of - a lost man - umynhil dead - defunct!'
'You shall find tue alive to your cost, you scoumlrel:' vil the irritated capluin.
'Weel, but take patience, ye w."' not hear a bouly npeak,' "nial the jagger. "Ihen there was the lad Morihunt Mertoun
'Ha!' said the captain, 'what of him ?'
'Cannot be heard of,' said the pedlar; 'clean and elear tint - a gone youth - fallen, it is thought, from the craig into the sea: he was aye venturous. I have had dealings with him fin furs and feathers, whilk he swapped against powder and lint, and the like ; and now he has worn out from among ns - d.men retired - utterly vanished, like the last puff of an auld wife', tobreco pipe.'
'But what is all this to the captain's clothes, my dear friend \(\}\) ' said Bunce. 'I must presently beat you myself miless you come to 'ie point.'
'Weel, weel - patience, patience,' said Bryce, wavine hiihand; 'you will get all time cnough. Weel, there are twio folks gane, as I said, forbye the distress at Burgh-Westra alnunt Mistress Miuna's sad ailment \(\qquad\) ,'
'Bring not her into your buffoonery, sirrah,' said Clevelanl, in a tone of anger, not so loud, but far deeper and more rim. centrated than he had hitherto used; 'for, if you name her with less than reverence, I will crop the ears out of your heald and make you swallow them on the spot!'
'He, he, he!' faintly laughed the jagger; 'that were it pleasant jest! you are pleased to be witty. But, to say nitcthing of Burgh-Westra, there is the carle at Jarlshof, he that was the auld Mertoun, Mordaunt's father, whom men thourht as fast bound to the place he dwelt in as the Sumburgh Head itsell, naething maun serve him but he is lost as weel ass the lave about whom I have spoken. Anel there's Magnus 'Trimil - wi' favour be he named - taking horse ; and there is pleationt Maister Cland Malero taking boat, whilk he steers worst of :ay man in Zetland, his head ruming on rambling rlymes: :nil the factor: borly is on the stir-the Seots factur, himin that i. aye speaking of dikes and delving, and such unprofitable, warl, which has naething of merchandise in it, and he is on the lang trot, too; so that ye might say, upon a mamer, the the half of the Mainland of Zetlane is lost, and the other is ruming to and fro sceking it-awfu' times!'

Captain Cleveland had subhed his prassinn and listened to this tirade of the worthy men of merchamches, with impatience indeed, jet not withont the hope of hearing momething that might concern him. But his companion nas now become impatient in his turn. 'I'lie clutles :' he exchamed - - the clothes the clothes - the clothes!' ncompunying each repetition of the words with a flourish of his cane, the dexterity of which conisted in coming mighty near the jagger's ears without actmilly tonching them.
'The jagger, shrinking from each of these denmonstrations, contimned to excham, 'Nay, sir - good sir -- worthy sir - for the rluthes - I foume the worthy dame in great distress on aceomnt of her old maister, and on accome of her yommgaister, and inl account of worthy Captain Cleveland, and becmse of the distress of the worthy fowd's family, and the trouble of the grent fowd himself, and because of the factor, and in rexpe:t of Claud Halcro, and on other accounts and respects. Alsin we mingled our sorrows and our tears with a bottle, as the holy text lath it, and called in the Ranzelman to our council, a worthy man, Neil Ronaldson by uame, who hath a good reputation.'
Here another flourish of the cane came so very near that it partly touched his ear. The jagger started back, anl the truth, or that which he desired should be considered as such, bolted from him without more circumlocution; as a cork, after much umnecessary buzzing and fizzing, springs forth from a buttle of spruce beer.
'In brief, what the deil mair would you have of it 1 The oman sold we the kist of clothes: they are mine by purchuse, 'und that is what I will live and die upon.'
'In other words,' said Cleveland, 'this greedy old hag hail the impudence to sell what was none of hers; aud yon, honest Bryce Snailsfoot, had the assurance to be the purchaser?'
'Ou dear, captain,' said the conscientious pellar, 'what warl ye hae hall twa poor folk to do ? There was yoursell gane that aught the things, and Maister Mordaunt was gane that hal them in keeping, and the things were but danply put up, where they were rotting with moth and mould, and -
'And so this old thief sold them, and you bonglit then, I suppose, just to keep them from spoiling?' said Cleveland.
' Weel then,' said the merchant, 'I'm thinking, noble cap tain, that wad be just the gate of it.'
'Well then, hark ye, you impudent scomudrel,' said the captain, 'I do not wish to dirty my fingers with you, or to make any disturbmee in this plate -
'Goorl reason for that, enptain-aha!' saill the jaksere, slyly.
'I will hrenk your lomes if pon speak another worl,' rephend Cleveland. "Plike notice - 1 offer yom fair tomis: give nie Ineck the black leathern pocket-lmek with the locen inn it, min! the purse with the dombloons, with some few of the chither, I want, and keep the rext in the levil's name!'
'Donblowns:!!' exclamed the jagger, with an exaltation of vaice intended to indiate the uthonst extremity of shimion. 'What do 1 ken of dumblooms? my dealing was fior dumblet, and not fur domblems.s. If there were demblomens in the hiv, donbtless Swertha will have them in safe keeping lin jomb hmonr ; the damp womhlha harm the gold, ye ken.'
'(Jive me back my poeket-book and my govels, yin masally thief,' said Cleveland, 'or without a word more I will heat ynur brains out!

The wily jagger, casting eye around him, saw thut sumemr was near, in the shupe of a party of officers, six in mumury : fin several rencoutres with the erew of the pirate had tanght the magistrates of Kirkwall to strengthen their yolice purties when these strangers wers in question.
'Ye had better keep the thief' to suit yoursell, hommend captain,' said the jagger, emboldened by the approach of the eivil power ; 'for wha kens how a' these fine goorls and bumy dies were come by ?'
This was inttered with such provoking slyness in look and tone, that Cleveland made no further delay, but, seizi ' 1 "," the jagger by the collar, dragged him over his tempulitary comnter, which was, with all the goods displayed therem, werset in the scuffle ; ant, holding him with one hund, iuflicted on him with the other a severe beating with his cane. All this was done so suddenly and with such energy that Bryon Snails foot, though rather a stout mun, was totally surprised hy the vivacity of the attack, and made scarce any other effint :at extricating limiself than by roaring fior assistmnce like a bullcalf. 'The 'loitering nid' ' laving at length come up, the offiesmade an effort to seize on Cleveliand, and by their mited exer tions succeeded in compelling him to quit hold of the prelliar in order to defend himself from their assanlt. This he dint with infinite strength, resolntion, and dexterity, being at the same time well secouded by his friend Jack Bunce, who hand seen with glee the drubbing sustained by the pellar，and now cumbated tightly to ave his companion from the consennences． But，as there lumd heen for sonle time a growing femd letween tioe townspeople and the crew of the rover，the former，pro－ voked by the insalent deportment of the senmen，lumb resolved to stand by eneh other，and to aid the civil power unon such eccasions of riot as ：lanald ceeor in finture ；and so many ussint－ ants came np to ti．，eseue of the constables，that Cleveland， after fighting most mainfully，was at leugth brought to the ground and made prisoner．His move fortmate companion haul escaped by speed of foot，as soon as he saw that the day minst needs be determined against them．
The prond heart of Cleveland，which，even in its perversim， had in its feelings something of origina！nobleness，was like to burst when he felt himself borne down in this unworthy brawl， Iruged into the town as a prisoner，and hurried throught the streets towards the council－honse，where the magistrates of the burgh were then seated in council．＇Ithe probability of im－ prisomment，with all its consequences，rushed alsis npon his mind，and he cursed a huadred times the folly which had not nuther submitted to the pedlar＇s knavery than involved him in so perilons an embarrassment．
But，just as they approached the door of the council－honse， which is situated in the midille of the hitle town，the face of nuetters was suddenly clunged by a new and nuexpected incident．

Bunce，who had designed，by his precipitate retreat，to serve as well his friend as himself，had hied him to the haven，where the boa \({ }^{*}\) the rover was then lying，and callen the cockswain and bom－crew to the assistance of Clevelanl．They unw appeared on the scene－fierce desperadoes，as became their call－ ing，with features bronzed by the tropienl sun under which they hail pursued it．They rushed at once annongst the erowil，lay ing about them with their streteleers；and，forcing their way ill to Cleveland，speedily delivered him from the kands of th： wficers，who were totally mipreparel to resist an attack no furinis． and so sudden，and carried him off in trimmph towards the प！ni！， －two or three of their number facing abont from time to tinn： to keep back the erowl，whose effiorts to reeover the pisisher were the less voient that most of the seamen were armed with pistols and eutlasses，as well as with the les．s lethal weapmes whieh alone they har as yet mate use of．

They gained their boat in saffety，amd jmiped into it，carry－ ing along with them Cleveland, to whom circumstances reemend to offor no other refuge, and pushed off for their vensel, simging in chorus to their oars an old ditty, of wisch the matives of Kirkwall could only liear the first stanza:
- Robin Rover

Said to his crow,
"Up with the black Alap, Dowu with the blue !
Fire on the main-top,
Fire on the bow,
Fire on the guntleck:,
The wild chorns of their voices was heard long after the words ceased to bo intelligent. And thas was the pirate Cleveland again thrown almost involuntarily amongst those de:per ate associates from whom he had so often resolved to detach himself.

\section*{CHAPTER XXXIII}

Parental love, my frlemal, has juswer o'er wisdom, And in the charm which, like the falooner's hire: Can bring from heaven the highent somring mpirita. So, when fumed Prosper dotid his magic rolne, It was Miranda pluck'd it from lils shonhlers. Old PIay.

OUR wandyring narrative must now return to Moriaurit Mertoun. We left him in the perilous condition of one who has received a severe womml, and we now finul him in the situation of a convalescent - pale, indeed, and feeble from the loss of much blood and the effects of a fever which had followed the injury, but an far fortunate, that the weapon, having glanced on the rihs, had only necasioned a great effusion of blood, without tonching any vital part, and was now wellnigh healed; so efficacious were the vuluerary plants and salves with which it had been treated by the sage Norna of Fitful Head.
The matron and her patient now sat toge \({ }^{-}, r\) in a dwelling in a remote island. He had been transport. . during lis illneess, and ere he had perfect conse. ussuess, fir . to her singular habitation near Fitful Head and lhence fur her present abode, hy one of the fishing-boats in the sirtion of Burgh-Westra. For such was the command !nessed 1 , Corua over the superstitious character of her ec rymen, that she never failed to find faithful agents to execnte her commanls, whatever these lappened to be; and, as her orders were generally given muler injunctions of the strictest secrecy, men reciprocally wondered at occurrences which had in fact heen prodnced hy their own agency and that of their neighbours, and in shich, had they communicated freely with each other, no shallow of the marvellons: would have remained:

Mordaunt was now seated by the fire, in an apartment inulifferently well furnished, having a book in his hand, which he looked upon from time to time with signs of emnui and impatience - feelings whieh at length so far overcame him that, Hinging the volume on the table, he fixed his eyes on the fire, and assumed the attitude of one who is engaged in unplanamt meditation.
Norna, who sat opposite to him, and appeared busy in the eomposition of some drug or unguent, anxionsly left her seat, and, approaehing Mordaunt, felt his pulse, making at the situe time the most affeetionate inguiries whether he felt any sulden pain, and where it was seated. The mamer in whieh Mlorlamet replied to these earnest inquiries, although worded so at th express gratitude for her kindness, while he disclamed iny feeling of indisposition, did not seem to give satisfaction to the pythoness.
'Ungratefirl boy !' she said, 'for whom I have done so much; you whom I have reseued, by my power and skill, from the very gates of death - are you already so weary of me, that yon callnot reirain from showing how desirous you are to spend at a distance from me the very first intelligent days of the life which I have restored you?'
'You do me injustiee, my kind preserver,' replied Morlanut: ' I am not tired of your soeiety; but I have duties whith recall me to ordinary life.'
'Duties!' repeated Norna; ' and what duties can or ought to interfere with the gratitude which you owe to me? Duties: Your thoughts are on the use of your gim, or on clambering among the roeks in quest of sea-fowl. For these exercises your strength doth not yet fit you ; and yet these are the duties to whieh you are so anxious to return!'
' Not so, my good and kind mistress,' said Murdamut. 'I'" name one duty, out of many, which makes me seek to leave you, now that my strength permits, let me mention that of a son to his father.'
'To your father!' said Norna, with a laugh that had something in it almost frantic. 'Oh! you know not how we can, in these islands, at once cancel suel duties! And, for your father,' she added, proeeeding more calmly, 'what has he dowe for you, to deserve the regaril and duty you speak of? Is he: not the sane who, as you have long since toll me, left you for so many years poorly nourished among strangers, without inquiring whether you were alive or dead, and only sendius, from time to time, supplies in such fashion as men relicve the leprons wretch to whom they fling alms from a distance? Anl, in these later years, when he had made you the compuninn it his misery, he has been by starts your pedagogue, by starts your tormentor, but never, Mordaunt - - never your father.'
'Something of truth there is in what yom say,' replied Mordaunt. 'My father is not fond; but he is, and has ever been, effectively kind. Men lave not their affections in their power ; and it is a child's duty to he nateful for the benefits which he receives, even when collly bestowed. My father has conferred instruction on me, and I ann convinced he loves me. If is unfortmate ; and, even if he lived me not \(\qquad\) ',
'And he dues not love yon,' said Noma, hastily; 'he never loved anything, or any one, save himself. He is mufortunate, but well are his misfortmes deserved. O Mordamit, yon have one parent only - one parent, who loves you as the drops of the heart-blood!'
'I know I have but one parent,' replied Mordant: 'my mother has been long dead. But your words contradiet each other.'
'They do not - they do not,' said Norna, in a paroxysm of the deepest feeling; 'you have but one parent. Your mhappy mother is not dead - I would to Good that she were:-but she is not dead. Thy mother is the only parent that loves thee ; and I - I, Mordaunt,' throwing herself' on his neck, 'am that most unhappy, yet most happy, mother.'.
She closed him in a strict and convulsive embrace ; and tears, the first, perhaps, which she harl shel for many years, burst in torrents as she sobbed on his neck. Astonisised at what he heard, felt, and san, moved ly the excess of her agitation, yet disposed to ascribe this burst of passion to insanity, Mordamet. vainly endeavoured to tranguillise the mind of this extramerinary person.
'Ungrateful boy!' she said, ' who but a mother would have watched over thee as I have watched? From the instant I saw thy father, when he little thonght by whom he was observel. a space now many years back, I knew him well ; and, muler his charge, I saw you, then a stripling ; while natmre, speaking houd in my bosom, assmred me thon wert henod of my honed and bone of my bone. 'Ilink how often you have wimlered to see me, when least expected, in your places of partime and resort! Think how often my eye lats wateleed yon on the gilldy. precipices, and muttered those charms which sublue the evit demons, who show themselves to the climber on the giddiest point of his path, and force him to yuit his hold: Did I nint hang around thy neek, in pledge of thy safety, that chain of gold, which an elfin king gave to the founder of our race? Would I have given that dear gift to any but the son of my bosom 3 Mordaunt, my power has done that for thee that a mere mortal mother would dread to think of. I have conjinenl the mermaid at midnight, that thy bark might be proplerims on the haaf! I have hushed the winds, and navies lave flapped their empty sails against the mast in inactivity, that you might safely indulge your sport upon the crags!'

Mordaunt, perceiving that she was growing yet wilter in her talk, endeavoured to frame an answer which should be at once indulgent, soothing, and calculated to allay the riving warnth of her inuagination.
'Dear Norna,' he said, 'I have indeed many reasons to call you mother, who have bestowed so many benefits upon me; and from me you shall ever receive the affection and duty if : child. But the chain you mentioned, - it has vanished from my neck: I have not seen it since the ruffian stabbed me.'
'Alas ! and can you think of it at this monent ?' sail Norna, in a sorrowful accent. 'But be it so ; and know, it wis I took it from thy neck, and tied it around the neck of her who is dearest to yon ; in token that the union betwist rinn. which has been the only earthly wish which I have hial the power to form, shall yet - even yet, be accomplishen -ay, although hell should open to forbid the banns!'
'Alas!' said Mordaunt, with a sigh, 'you remember not the difference betwixt our situation - her father is wealthy, anit if ancient birth.'
' Not more wealthy than will be the heir of Norna of Fitful Head,' answered the pythoness ; 'not of better or more ancient blood than that which flows in thy veins, derived from thy mother, the descendant of the same jarls and sea-kings from whom Magnus boasts his origin. Or dost thou think, like the pelant and fanatic strangers who have come amongst us, that thy blood is dishonoured because my union with thy father did nint receive the sanction of a priest? Know, that we were wedled after the ancient manner of the Norse : our hands were clasped within the circle of Odin, \({ }^{1}\) with such deep vows of eternial fidelity as even the laws of these usurping Scots would have sanctioned as equivalent to a blessing before the altar. 'I', the offspring of such a union, Magnus has nouglit to object. It was weak, it was criminal, on my part, but it conveyed nu infany to the birth of my son.'

\footnotetext{
\({ }^{2}\) See au explanation of this promise, note, p. 402.
}

The composed and collected manner in which Norna argued these points began to impose upon Mordannt an incipient belief in the truth of what she said ; and indeed, she added sin miny circumstances, satisfactorily and rationally conneeted with each other, as seemed to confute the notion that her story was altogether the delusion of that insanity which sometimes showed itself in her speech and actions. A thousand confused ideas: rushed upon him, when he supposed it possible that the unhappy person before him might actually have a right to claim from him the respeet and affection due to a parent from a son. IIe could only surmount them by turning his mind to a different, and scarce less interesting, topie, resolving within himself to take time for farther inquiry and mature consideration ere he either rejeeted or admitted the elaim which Norna preferred nuon his affection and duty. His benefactress, at least, she mudoubtedly was, and he could not err in paying her, as such, the respeet and attention due from a son to a mother ; and so far, therefore, he might gratify Norna without otherwise standing committed.
'And do you then really think, my mother - sinee so you hid une term you,' said Mordaunt, 'that the prond Magnus 'Iroil may, by any inducement, be prevailed upon to relinguish the angry feelings which he has of late adopted towarls me, and to permit my addresses to his daughter Brenda?'
'Brenda!' repeated Norna - 'who talks of Brenda? it is of Mima that I spoke to you.'
'But it was of Brenda that I thoug'1t,' replied Mordannt, 'of her that I now think, and of her alone that I will ever think.'
'Impossible, my son!' reijlied Norna. 'You camuct be so dull of heart, so poor of spirit, as to prefer the idle inirth and honsewife simplicity of the younger sister to the deep feeling and high mind of the noble-spirited Minna? Who would stoop to gatier the lowly violet that might have the rose for stretching out his hand ?'
'Some think the lowliest flowers are the sweetest,' replied Mordaunt, 'and in that faith will I live and die.'
'You dare not tell me so!' answered Norna, fiercely; then, instantly ehanging her tone, and taking his hand in the most affectionate manner, she proceeded: 'You must not - you will not tell me so, my dear son : you will not break a mother's heart in the very first hour in whieh she has embrated her child! Nay, do not answer, but liear me. Yon must wed Minna; I have bound around her neek a fatal amulet, on which the happiness of hoth depends. The labours of my life lave for years had this direction. Thus it must be, and not otherwise : Minna must be the bride of my son!'
'But is not Brenda equally near, equally dear to yon?' replied Mordaunt.
'As near in blood,' said Norna, 'but not so dear - no, not half so dear, in affection. Minna's mild, yet high anid contenplative, spirit renders her a companion meet for one whase ways, like mine, are beyond the ordinary paths of this worlt. Brenda is a thing of common and ordinary life, an idle langle" and scoffer, who would level art with ignorance, and reduce power to weakness, hy disbelieving and turning into ridicule whatever is beyond the grasp of her shallow intellect.'
'She is, indeed,' answered Mordaunt, 'neither superstitions nor enthusiastic, and I love her the better for it. Remember also, my mother, that she returns my affection, and that Minna, if she loves any one, loves the stranger Cleve'aud.'
'She does not - she dares not,' answered Norna, ' nor dares he pursue her farther. I told him, when first he came to Burgh-Westra, that I destined her for you.'
'And to that rash annunciation,' said Mordaunt, 'I owe this man's persevering enmity, my wound, and wellnigh the loss of my life. See, my mother, to what point your intrigues have already conducted us, and, in Heaven's name, prosecute them no farther!'

It seemed as if this reproach struck Norna with the force at once and vivacity of lightning; for she struck her foreheard with her hand, and seemed about to drop from her scat. Mordaunt, greatly shocked, hastened to catch her in his arms, and, though scarce knowing what to say, attempted to utter some incoherent expressions.
'Spare me, Heaven - spare me!' were the first words which she muttered' ; 'do not let my crime be avenged by his means: Yes, young man,' she said, after a pause, 'you lave dared to tell what I dared not tell myself. You have pressed that up" me which, if it be truth, I cannot believe and yet contimue tn live!'

Mordaunt in vain endeavoured to interript her with pur testations of his ignormee how he had offended or grieved her. and of his extreme regret that he had mintentionally done either. She proceeded, while her voice trembled wildly, with vehemence.
'Yes! you have touched on that dark suspicion which have other. yon?' 0 , not intellwhinse world. uyle" edhee lieule itions cmber that nd.'
dares ce to

\section*{owe} ithe ignes ecute

\section*{force} hean Mreranll, solle rhich rans: al to
M! le t1
poisons the conscionsness of my power - the sole boon which was givell me in exehange for innueenee and for peate of mind : Your voiee joins that of the demon which, even while the elements confess me thair mistress, whippers to me, "Noma, this is but delusion : your power rests bnt t:s the ille belief of the ignorant, supported by a thousand petty artifices of your orn." This is what Brenda says - this is what you wonld say; and false, seandalonsly false, as it in, there ars rehellinus thoughts in this wild brain of mine (tonehing her foreheand with her finger as she spoke), that, like an insmrestion in an invaded eountry, arise to take part against their ilistresseld sovereign. Spare me, my son!' she continued, in a voice of supplieation - spare me! the sovereignty of which your words would deprive me is no enviable exaltation. Few would covet to rule over gibbering glosts, and howling winds, and raging currents. My throne is a cloud, my sceptre a meteor, my realm is only peopled with fantasies; but I must either cease to be, or continne to be the mightiest as well as the most miserable of beings !' \({ }^{1}\)
- Do not speak thins mourufully, wy dear and unhappy benefactress,' said Mordaunt, muel affecten; 'I will think of your power whatever you would have me helieve. But, for your own sake, view the matter otherwise. Thrin your thoughts from such agitating and mystical stndies - from sinch wild subieets of con templation, into another and a better chamel. Life will again have charms, and religion will have comforts, for yon.'
She listened to him with some compusure, as if she weighed lis counsel, and desired to be guided by it ; but, as he ended, she shook her head and exelaimed -
'It cannot be. I must remain the drealed - the mystical the Rein-kennar - the controller of the elements, or \(l\) innst be no more ! I have no alternative, no mildle station. My post must be high on yon lofty headland, where never stood hmman foot site mine, or 1 minst sleep at the botion of the unfathomable ocean, its white billows boming over my senseless conpse. The parricide shall never also he denouncel ins the implistor:'
' The parricide!' edned Mordant, steppine bank in horr:
-Yes, my som: "anwered Noma, with a stem conspusin even more frightiul than her firmer impetmosity, 'within then, fatal walls my father met his death by my means. In yomer chamber was he fomm a livid and lifeless corpse. Beware of filial disobedience, for such are its fruits:'

\footnotetext{
\({ }^{1}\) See Character of Norna. Nute 42.
}

So saying, she arose and left the apartment, where Morlaunt remained alone to ineditate at leisure upon the extraordinary communication which he had received. He himself harl been taught by his father a disbelief in the ordinary superstitions of Zetland ; and he now saw that Norna, however ingeniuus int duping others, could not altogether impose on herse.f. This was a strong circumstance in favour of her sanity of intellect : but, on the other hand, her imputing to herself the guilt of parricide seemed so wild and improbable as, in Mordannt's opinion, to throw much doubt upon her other assertions.

He had leisure enough to make up his mind on these particulars, for no one approached the solitary dwelling, of which Norna, her dwarf, and he himself were the sole inhabitints. The Hoy Island in which it stood is rude, bold, and lofty, cinsisting entirely of three hills, or rather one huge monntain divided into three summits, with the chasms, rents, and valley: which descend from its summit to the sea, while its crest, rising to great height, and shivered into rocks which seem almust inaccessible, intercepts the mists as they drive from the Athantic, and, often obscured from the human eye, forms the dark :unl unmolested retreat of hawks, eagles, and other birds of pres: \({ }^{1}\)
The soil of the island is wet, mossy, cold, and unproductive, presenting a starile and desolate appearance, excepting where the sides of small rivulets, or mountain ravines. are fringed with dwarf bushes of birch, hazel, and wild currant, some of them sin tall as to be denominated trees in that bleak and bare country.

But the view of the sea-beach, which was Mordaunt's favourite walk, when his convalescent state began to permit him to take exercise, had charins which compensated the wild appearance if the interior. A broad and beautiful sound, or strait, divides this lonely and mountainous island from Pomona, and in the centre of that sound lies, like a tablet composed of enerald, the beautiful and verdant little island of Graemsay. On the distant Mainland is seen the town or village of Stromness, the excellence of whose haren is generally evinced by a considerable number of shipping in the roadstead, and, from the bay growing nartuwer and lessening as it recedes, rms inland into Ponona, where it.tide fills the fine sheet of water called the Looch of Stemis.

On this beach Mordaunt was wont to wander for hours, with an eye not insensible to the beauties of the view, though his thoughts were agitated with the most embarrassing meditations on his own situation. He was resolved to leave the island it soon as the establishment of his health should permit him to travel; yet gratitude to Noma, of whom he was at least the adopted, if not the real, son, would not allow him to depart without her permission, even if he could obtain means of conveyance, of which he saw little possibility. It was only by innportunity that he extorted from his hostess a promise that, if he would consent to regulate his motions according to her directions, she would herself convey him to the capital of the Orkney Islands, when the approaching fair of St. Olla should take place there.

\footnotetext{
\({ }^{1}\) See Note 43.
}

\section*{CHAPTER XXXIV}

Hark to the insult loud, the bitter sneer, The fierce throat answering to the brutal jeer ; Oathe fy like pistol-shots, and vengefil words Clash with each other likr rontlieting swords. The robber's quarrel by such sounds is shown, And true men have solue chaner to gain their own.

Captivily, "Poem.

WHEN Cleveland, bome off in trimuph from his assail ants in Kirkwall, fommd himself once more on lumal the pirate vessel, his "arrival was hailed with heart! cheers by a considerable part of the crew, who rushed to shake hands with him and offer their congratulations on his, return ; for the situation of a buccusi \(\mathbf{r}\) captain raised him very little above the level of the lowest of his crew, who, in all social intercourse, claimed the privilege of being his equal.

When his faction, for so these clamorons friends might be termed, had expressed their own greetings, they hurried Cleveland forward to the stern, where Goffe, their present commanler, was seated on a gun, listening in a sullen and discontented m..nner to the shout which announced Cleveland's welcome. He was a man betwixt forty and fifty, rather under the middle size, but so very strongly made that his crew used to compare him to a sixty-four cut down. Black-haired, bull-necken, anl beetle-browed, his clumsy strength and ferocions comntenance? contrasted strongly with the manly figure and open comitenume of Cleveland, in which even the practice of his atrocions profes sion lad not been able to eradicate a natural grace of motinn and generosity of expression. The two piraticul captains lowkell upon each other for some time in silence, while the partizans in each gathered around him. The elder part of the crew were the principal adherents of Goffe, while the young fellows, amonsst whom Jack Bunce was a principal leader and agitator, were in general attached to Cleveland.

At length Goffe broke silence - 'You are welcome alumin, Captain Cleveland. Smash my taffrail I I suppose yon think yonmelf eommodure yet I but that was over, liy ( \(i\), when you lost your ship, and be 1-d! !'

And here, onee for all, we may take notice that it was the gracions custom of this commander to mix his words and onths int nearly equal proportions, which he was wont to call shattiny his diseonrse. As we delight not, however, in the diselarge of such artillery, wo shall mily indicate by a space like this the places in which these expletives ocemrred; mal thus, if the reader will pardon a very poor pmi, we will rednce Captain (Goffe's yolley of slarp-shot into mexplosion of blank cartridges. 'I'O his insimations that he was come on board to assmme the chief eommand, Cleveland replied, that he neither desired nor would aecept any such promotion, hut wonld only ask Chitain (ioffe for a cast of the boat to put him ashore in one of the other islands, as he had no wish either to eommand Giofic or ta remain in a vessel muder his orders.
'And why not under my orders, brother?' demandel Goffe, very austerely; "- - o ore you the good a man, -- with your cheese-touster and your jib there, - - to serve nonder my orders, and be d-id to yon, where there are so many gentlemen that are elder and better scamen than yourself?'
'I wonder which of these capital seamen it was,' said Cleveland, eoolly, 'that laid the ship mider the fire of yon six-gun battery, that eould blow her ont of the water, if they had a mind, before you could either cut or slip? Elder and better sailors than I may like to serve under such a lubber, but I beg to be excused for my own share, captain - that's all I have got to tell you.'
' By G-, I think yon are both mad!' said Hawkins, the boatswain: 'a meeting with sword and pistol may be devilish good fun in its way when no better is to the had ; but who the devil that had eommon sense anongst a set of gentlomen in our condition would fall a-pluarrelling with cach other, to let these duck-winged, web-footed islanders have a chance of kumeking us all "pon the head?'
' Well said, old Hawkins!' said Derrick, the quarter-master, who was an officer of very considerable inportance among these rovers; 'I say, if the two captaius won't agree to live together quietly, and elub both heart and head to defond the vessel," why, d- 11 me, depose them both, say I, and choose another in their stead!'
'Meaning yourself, I suppose, Master (Quirter-Master !' saill

Jeck Bunce; 'but that cock won't fight. He that is tur finl mand gentlemen should be a gentleman himself, I think; ; min I give iny vote for Captain Clevelund, as spirited and ax genthe. man-like a man as ever daffed the workl uside anill hisl it pasw:'
'What! you call yourself a gentleman, I warran!:' retmitel Derrick; 'why, - your eyes! a tuilor woild make a better out of the worst suit of rags in your strolling wurilrule: It is a shame for men of spirit to have such a Jack-a-lanly searecrow on board!'

Jack Bunce was so incensed at these base compurisons that, without more allo, he laid his hame on his sworl. The "ar penter, however, and boatswain interfered, the former hranli/h ing his broad axe, and swearing he would put the shinll of ther first who should strike a blow past clonting, and the latter reminding them that, by their articles, all quarrelling, strikius. or more especially fighting, on bourd was strictly prohilititil: and that, if any gentleman had a quarrel to settle, they were wi. go ashore and decide it with cutlass and pistol in prevente if two of their messmates.
'I have no quarrel with any one, - - !' said (i.flis. sullenly. 'Captain Cleveland has wandered about ammir thi" islands here, amusing himself, - - : and we lave nialed our time and property in waiting for him, when we miyhn have been adding twenty or thirty thousand dullars to the stock-purse. However, if it pleases the rest of the gentlemen adventurers, - - - ! why, f shall not grumble ahmit it.
'I propose,' said the boatswain, 'that there should \(\mathrm{l}_{\mathrm{x}}\) : a general council called in the great cabin, acerorling to our articles, that we may consider what conrse we are to holl in this matter.'

A general assent followed the boatswain's proposal ; fur every one found his own account in thesc general conncils, in whirls each of the rovers had a free vote. By far the greater part if the crew only valued this franchise as it allowed them, mp, such solemn occasions, an mulimited quantity of liquor -a right which they failed not to exercise to the uttermost - by way ul aiding their deliberations. But a few amongst the alventmers, who united some degrec of juilgnent with the daring and protligate character of their profession, were wont, at such perims, to limit themselves within the bomels of comparative sobriety, and by these, under the apparent form of a vote of the general council, all things of moment relating to the voyage and mulertakings of the pirates were in fact determined. The rest of thu arew, when they recoven from their intoxication, were easily prersmaded that the resolntion adopted lad heen the legitimate effort of the combined wisdon of the whole semate.
I'pon the present oreasion the delnatheh land proceeded nutil the greater part of the crew wers, as nsmal, dixplaying inebriation in all its most bratal and disgrowefinl shapes: swearing empty and unmeaning ouths: venting the most horrid impre "ations in the mere gaiety of their heart ; singing somgs, the riballity of which was ouly equalled by their profancoess: ame, from the middle of this carthly hell, the two captains, thgether with one or two of their prineipal adherente, ats also the carpenter and bontswain, who always took a lend om such orensions, nan! drawn together into a panlemonimm, or privy emmeil, of their own, to consider what was to be dote ; firr, as the luntawain metaphorically observel, they were in a narrow elan:nel, and behoved to keep sounding the tide-way.
When they begm their consultations, the friemls of Gioffe remarked, to their great diypleasure, that he had not olserved the wholesome rule to which we have just allinded; but that, in endeavouring to drown his mortification at the sudden ap. pearance of Cleve!and, and the reception he met with from the crew, the elder captain hail not been able to do) so without overlluwing his reason at the same time. His nuturni sullen taciturnity han! prevented this from being observed until the comeil began its deliberations, when it proved impossible to hide it.
'I'he first person who spoke was Clevelaml, whos said that, si) far from wishing the command of the vessel, he desired no fiavour at any one's hand, except to land him umon some island or holm at a distance from Kirkwall, and leave him to shift fir limself.
The boatswain remonstrated strongly against this resolution. 'The lads,' he said, 'all knew Clevelani, aum conld trust his seamanship, as well as his courane; besides, lo never let the grog get phite upermost, aud wals always in proper trim, either to sail the ship or to fight the ship, wherely she was never withont sume one to keep, her comse when he was on thart.
 -he is ass stmut a heart as ever broke hisenit, and that I witl mphold him; but then, when he has his grope alnatel - 1 speak to his face - he is so d -d flmmy with his cramks and his jests, that there is no living with him. Youn all remember how nigh lie had rum the ship on that eursed Hone of Copinsha, as they call it, juat by wny of frolic ; and then yon know how he finm of his pistol muler the table when we were at the great minmil and shot Jack Jenkins in the knee, nud cost the proor devil his. leg with his pleasantry.' '
'Jack Jenkine was not a chip the worse,' maid the carpenter. 'I took the leg off with my naw as well na my loblolly: fry in the land could have done, heated my bromd axe, and seared the stimp-ay, by - : and male a jury leg that he shamblio. nbout with as well as ever he did; for Jnek conld never ritt is feather.'
'You are a clever fellow, carpenter,' replied the bontawill -'a d-d clever fellow: but I had rather you tried your siw and red-hot axe upon the ship's knee-timbers than on mine, sink me! But that here is not the case. The questinn is, if we shall part with Captain Cleveland here, who is an natu of thonght and action, whereby it is my belief it would be heaving the pilot overboard when the gale is bloving on a lee whure? And, I must say, it is not the part of a true heart to leare hii, maten, who have been here waiting for him till they have missed stays. Our water is wellnigh out, and we lave jmiketen till provisions are low with us. We cannot sail with at pro. visions; we cannot get provisions withont the good-will of h... Kirkwall folks. If we renain here longer, the "Malcyon" frisate will be down npon us - she was seen of Peterheal rwo diys since - mad we shall hang up at the yard-arm to be sin-dried. Now, Cuptain Cleveland will get ns out the hoble, if miy can. He can play the gentleman with these Kirkwall folk:, and knows how to deal with them on tair terms, and fonl tw, if there be occasion for it.'
'And so' you would turn honest Captain Goffe a prazius, wonld ye?' sail an ohd weather-beaten pirate, who hanl hint nite eye; 'what though he has his humonrs, anl male my eye donse the glim in his fancies and frolies, he is as honest a mam as ever walked a quarter-deck, for all that ; and d-11 me but I stand by him so loug as t'other lantern is lit!'
'Why, you would not hear me ont,' said Huwkins: 'a man might as well talk to so many negers! I tell jom, I propmes that Cleveland shall omly be captain from one \(p\) mist mervilim to five A. M., during which time Goffe is always drmen.'

The captain of whom I last spoke gave sufficient prouf of the truth of his Wirls by ittering un inarticulate growl, and attempting to present a pistol at the mediator Hawkins.

\footnotetext{
\({ }^{2}\) See Avery's Ileasantry. Note 44.
}
－Why，I k ye nuw ！＇maid Derrick，＇there is all the mense ho has，to ge drunk oll council－day，like one of thene poor silly fellown！
＇Ay，＇maid Bunce，＇drunk an Davy＇s sow，int the face of the field，the fray，and the senute！＇
＇But，nevertheless，＇continued Derrick，＇it will never（lo tu have two captains in the sume day．I think week abont might suit better；and let Cleveland take the first turn．＇
＇I＇here are as good here as miy of them，＇maid Hawkins； －howsondever，I object nothing to Captain Clevelmind，and I think lee may help us into deep water as well as mother．
＇Aj；exclaimed Bunce，＇and a better tigure he will make at brimpng these liirkwallers to orler than his sober prodecessor： Su Captain Cleveland fore ever：＇
＇Stop，gentlemen，＇saisl Clevehnol，who hard hitherto lwen silent；＇I hope yon will not chonse me captain withont my own consent？＇
＇Ay，by the blne vault of heaven will we，＇said Bunce，＇if it be pro brono publico ！＇
－But hear ue，at least，＇mail Cleveland．＇I lu eonsent to take command of the ressel，since yon wish it，and becanse I see yon will ill get out of the serape withont me．
＇Why，then，I say，Cleveland for ever，agnin！＇shouted Bunce．
＇Be quiet，prithee，lear Bunce！－honest Altammat：＂said Cleveland．II undertake the binsiness on this condition－that， when I have got the ship cleared for her voyage，with provisions and so forth，you will be content to restore Captain（hofle，to the command，as 1 suid before，ind put me rishore simewhere，to shift for myself．You will then ho sure it is impossible I ren betray yon，since I will remain with yon to \(1 \cdot \boldsymbol{y}\) last \(n: \cdot m\) ment．＇
＇Ay，and after the last moment，ton，by the blue vanlt：or I mistake the matter；＇muttered Bunee to himself．
The matter was now put to the vote；and so confident wrem the crow in Cleveland＇s superior address and management，that． the temporary deposition of Goffe fomind little rexistance even among lis own partizans，who reasomably enough observel．＇He might at least have kept sober to hook after his own busimess． lien let him pat it to rights again himself next morning，if he will．＇

But when the next monning came，the drmiken part of the crew，being informed of the issue of the deliberations of the council，to which they were virtually held to have assented， showed such a superior sense of Clevelaml＇s merits，that（iuhe， sulky and malcontent as he was, judged it wisest for the prewnit to suppress his feelings of resentment, until a safer opprortmint: for suffering them to explode, and to submit to the degradiatinin which so frequently took place among a piratical crew.

Cleveland, on his part, resolved to take upon him, with yinit and without loss of time, the task of extricating his :hip; company from their perilous situation. l'or this purpose, he ordered the boat, with the purpose of going ashore in peran, carrying with him twelve of the stoutest and best men of the ship's company, all very landsomely appointed (for the sirrems of their nefarious profession had enabled the pirates to ansmue nearly as gay dresses as their offieers), and above all, each min being sufficiently amned with eutlass and pistols, and several having pole-axes and poniards.

Cleveland himself was gallantly attired in a blue coat, lineed with erinson silk, and laced with gold very richly, crimwn drmask waistcoat and breeches, a velvet cap, richly embroiderel, with a white feather, white silk stockings, and red-heeled slowe, which were the extrenity of finery among the gallants of the day. He had a gold ehain several times folded round his nerk, which sustained a whistle of the same metal, the ensign of his; authority. Above all, he wore a decoration peculiar to those daring depredators, who, besides one, or perhaps two, brace of pistols at their belt, had usually two additional brace, of the fine.nt mounting and workmanship, suspended over their shoulders in a sort of sling or scarf of crinson ribbon. The hilt and momuting of the eaptain's sword corresponded in value to the rest if his appointments, and his natural good mien was so well adiaptel to the whole equipment that, when he appeared on deck, he was received with a general shout by the crew, who, as in other popular societies, judged a great deal by the eye.

Cleveland took with him in the boat, amongst others, his predecessor in office, Goffe, who was also very richly dressel, but who, not having the advantage of such an exterior as C'eveland's, looked like a boorish clown in the dress of a courtier, or rather like a vulgar-faced fuot-pad decked in the spoils of some one whom he has murderel, and whose claim to the property of his garments is rendered donbtful in the eyes of all who louk upon him by the mixture of awkwardness, remorse, cruelty, and insolence which clonds his countenance. Cleveland prob. ably chose to take Goffe as. ore with him to prevent his. having any opportmity, during his absence, to debanch the crew from their allegiance. In this guise they left the ship, nond, singing to their oars, while the water foamed higher at the choras, som reached the quay of Kirkwall.

The command of the vessel was in the meantime entrnsted to Bunce, mon whose allogianee Cleveland knew that he might perfeetly depend, and, in a private eonversation with him of some length, he gave him directions how to act in sueh emergencies as might occur.

I'hese arrugrements being made, and Bunee having been repeatedly charged to stand upon his guard alike against the adherents of Goffe and any attempt fiom the shore, the hoat put off. As she approached the harbonr, Cleveland displayed a white flag, and could observe that their appearance seemed to vecasion a good deal of bustle and alarm. People were seen roming to and fro, and some of them appeared to be getting muler arms. The battery was manned hastily, and the Finglish colours displayed. These were alarming symptoms, the rather that Cleveland knew that, though there were no artillerymen in Kirkwall, yet there were many sailors, perfeetly competent to the management of great guns, and willing enough to undertake such serviee in case of need.

Noting these hostile preparations with a heelfin! eye, but suffering nothing like donbt or anxiety to appear on his cometenance, Cleveland ran the boat right for the quay, on which several people, armed with nuskets, ritles, and fowling-pieces, and others with half-pikes and whaling-knives, were now assembled, as if to oppose his landing. Apparently, however, they had not positively determined what measures they were to pursue; for, when the boat reached the quay, those immediately opposite bore back, and suffered Cleveland and his party to leap ashore without hindrance. They immediately drew up, on the quay, excent two, who, as their captain had eummanded, remained in the boat, whieh they put off to a little distance - a mannenvre which, while it placed the boat (the only one belonging to the sloop) out of danger of being seized, indicated a sort of careless confidence in Cleveland and his party, which was calconlated to intimidate their opponents.
'Ihe Kirkwallers, however, showed the old Northran boorl, put a manly face mon the matter, and stood mon the quay, with their arms shouldered, directly opposite to the rovers, and hocking mp against them the street which leads to the town.

Cleveland was the first who spoke, as the parties stood thns lowking non each other. 'How is this, gentlemen burghers?' he said; 'are you Orkney folks tmmed' Mighlandmen, that you are all under arms so early this morning ; or have yom manned the quay to give me the honour of a salute, upon taking the command of my ship?'
The burghers looked on each other, and one of them replied to Cleveland -'We do not know who you are ; it wats that other man,' pointing to Goffe, 'who used to come ashinre its captain.'
'That other gentleman is my mate, and eommanuls in my absence,' said Cleveland; 'but what is that to the purpuse? 'i wish to speak with your lord nayor, or whatever you tall him.
'The provost is sitting in eouncil with the magistrate., answered the spokesman.
'So mueh the better,' replied Cleveland. 'Where du their worships meet?'
'In the couneil-house,' answered the other.
'Then make way for us, gentlemen, if you please, for miy people and I are wing there.'
There was a whisper among the townspeople; but several were unresolved upon engaging in a desperate, and perlaps: an mneeessary, eonfliet with desperate men ; and the more determined citizens formed the hasty refleetion that the strangers might be more easily mastered in the house, or perlaps in the narrow streets which they had to traverse, than when they stood drawn up and prepared for battle upon the quay. They suffered them, therefore, to proeeed unmolested ; and Cleveland, moving very slowly, keeping his people elose together, suffering no one to press upon the flanks of his little detaelment, and making four men, who constituted his rear-guarl, turn rumind and faee to the rear from time to time, rendered it, by lisis cantion, a very dangerous task to make any attempt upon them.

In this manner they aseended the narrow street, anil reachen the comeil-house, where the magistrates were actnally sitting, as the citizen had informed Cleveland. Here the inlahitant: began to press forward, with the purpose of mingling with the pirates, and availing themselves of the erowd in the narrow entranee to seenre as many as they eonld, without allowing them room for the free use of their weapons. But this alsin hail Cleveland foreseen, and, ere entering the commeil-rom, he camsed the entrance to be cleared and secured, commanding four of his men to faee down the street, and as many to confront the crowd who were thristing each other from above. The hirghers reeoiled baek from the ferocions, swarthy, and sumburnt somitenanees, as well as the levelled arms, of these desperadocs, and Cleveland, with the rest of his party; entered the cumcil-room, where the magistrates were sitting in council, with very little attendance. "These gentlemen were thus separated effeetually from the citizens, who looked to them for orders, and wero perhaps more completely at the merey of Cleveland than he, with his little handful of men, conld be said to be at that of the multitude by whom they were surrounded.

The magistrates seemed sensible of their dauger ; for they looked upon each other in some eonfusion, when Cleveland thus addressed them :
'Good morrow, gentlemen; I hope there is no unkindness betwixt us. I am come to talk with you about getting supplics for my ship yonder in the roadstead; we camot sail without them.
'Yourship, sir!' said the provost, who was a man of sense and spirit ; 'how do we know chat you are her captain ?'
'Look at me,' said Cleveland, 'and you will, I think, scarce ask the question again.'
The magistrate looked at him, and accordingly did not think proper to pursue that part of the inquiry, but procceded to say - 'And if you are her captain, whence comes she, and where is she bound for? You look too much like a man-of-war's-man to be master of a trader, and we know that you do not belong to the British navy.'
'There are more men-of-war on the sea than sail under the British flag,' replied Cleveland ; 'but say that I were commander of a free-trader here, willing to exehange tobaeco, brandy, gin, and such-like for cured fish and hides, why, I do not think I deserve so very bad usage from the merchants of Kirkwall as to deny me provisions for my moncy?'
'Look you, captain,' said the town-ilerk, 'it is not that we are so very strait-laced neither; for, when gentlemen of your eloth come this way, it is as weel, as I tanld the provost, just to do as the collier did when he met the devil ; and that is, to have naething to say to them, if they have nachiing to say to us; and there is the gentlenan,' pointing to Goffe, 'that was captain before you, and may be captain after you- - ('The cuckold speaks truth in that,' muttercd Goffe) - he knows well how handsomely we entertained him, till he and his men took upon them to run through the town like hellicat devils. I see one of them there! that was the very fellow that stopped my servant-wench on the strect, as she carried the lantern home before me, and insulted her before my face!'

\section*{THE PIRATE}
'If it please your noble mayorship's honour and glory', sinid Derrick, the fellow at whom the town-clerk pointed, it wiss not I that brought-to the bit of a tender that carried the lantern in the poop: it was quite a different sort of a person.'
'Who was it, then, sir?' said the provost.
' Why, please your majesty's worship,' said Derriek, makiny several sea bows, and describing as nearly as he could the exterior of the worthy magistrate hinself, 'he was an ellderly gentleman, Dutch-built, round in the stern, with a white wig and a red nose - very like your majesty, I think'; then, turn ing to a comrade, he added, 'Jack, don't you think the fellnw that wanted to kiss the pretty girl with the lantern t'uther uight was very like his worship?'
'By G-, Tom Derrick,' answered the party appealed t", 'I believe it is the very man!'
'This is insolence which we can make you repent of, gentlemen!'said the magistrate, justly irritated at their effrontery : 'you have behaved in this town as if you were in an hidiall village at Madagascar. You yourself, captain, if capt: Youn be, were at the head of another riot no longer sine than yesterday. We will give you no provisions till we know better whom we are supplying. And do not think to bully us; when I shake this handkerchief out at the window which is at my elbow, your ship goes to the bottom. Remember she lies miler the guns of our battery.'
'And how many of these guns are honeyeombed, Mr. Mayor? said Cleveland. He put the question by chance ; but instantly perceived, from a sort of confusion which the provost in vaili endeavoured to hide, that the artillery of Kirkwall was nut in the best order. 'Come - come, Mr. Mayor,' he said, 'bullyin!s will go down with us as little as with you. Your guns yound will do more harm to the poor old sailors who are to work then than to our sloop; and if we bring a broadside to bear on the: town, why, your wives' croekery will be in some danger. Anil then to talk to us of seanen being a little frolicsome assure, why, when are they otherwise? You have the Greenland whalers playing the devil among you every now and then: and the very Dutchmen eut capers in the streets of Kirkwall, like porpoises before a gale of wind. I am told yon are a main of sense, and I ams sure you and I could settle this matter i! the course of a five minutes' palaver.'
' Well, sir,', said the provost, 'I will hear what you lave in say, if you will walk this way.'

Cleveland aecordingly followed lim into a small interior apartment, and, when there, addre:sed the provost thus: 'I will lay aside my pistols, sir, if yom atre afraid of them.'
' \(\mathrm{D}-11\) your pistols!' answered the provost ; ' 1 have served the king, and fear the smell of powder as little as you do:'
'So much the hetter,' said Cleveliml, 'for yom will hear me? the more coolly. Now, sir, let us be what perliaps yon minspect nis, or let us be anything else, what, in the name of Heaven, can yon get by keeping ns here but blows and bhoothed? for which, believe ne, we are much better provided thail you can pretend to be. Ilie point is a plain one: yon are desirons to the rill of us, we are desirous to be gone. Let us have the means of departure, and we leave you instantly.'
'Look ye, eaptain,' said the provost, 'I thirst for no man's hlood. You are a pretty fellow, as there were many among the lmecaniers in my time; but there is no harn in wishing you a better trade. Yoin should have the stores and welcome, fir your money, so you would make these seas clear of yon. But then, here lies the rub. The "Haleyon" frigate is expected here in these parts immediately; when she hears of you she will be at you ; for there is nothing the white lapelle loves better than a rover: you are se'tom withont a cargo of dollars. Well, he comes down, gets you under his steru-,'
' Blows us into the air, if you please,' said Cleveland.
' Nay, that mist be as yine please, captain,' said the provost ; 'but then, what is to cone of the good tnwn of Kirkwall, that has been packing and peeling with the king's enemies? 'The burgh will be laid under a round fine, and it may be that the provost may not come off so casily.'
' Well, then,' said Cleveland, 'I see where your pineh lies. Now, suppose that I run rund this island of yours, and get into the roadstead at Strommess? We could get what we want put on board there, without Kirkwal! or the provost seeming to have any hand in it; or, if it should be ever questioneil, your want of foree and our superior strength will make a sufticient apology.',
'Ihat may be,' said the provost: 'but, if I suffer you to leave your present station and go elsewhere, I must have some security that you will not do harm to the conntry.'
'And we,' said Cleveland, 'must have some security, on our side, that you will not detain us, by dribhling out our time, till the "Halcyon"" is on the const. Nuw, I imn myself perfectly willing to continue on shore as a hostage, on the une side, pru-

\footnotetext{
vol. xill-24
}
vided you will give me your word not to betray me, and selil some magistrate, or person of consequence, aboard the sloulp, where his safety will be a guarantee for mine.'

The provost shook his head, and intimated it would iw difficult to find a person willing to place himself as hostage in such a perilons condition; but said he would propose the arrangement to such of the council as were fit to be trusted with a matter of such weight.

\section*{CHAPTER XXXV}

I left my poor plough to go ploughing the deep!
Dibdin.

WHEN the provost and Cleveland had returned into the pmblic comeci-room, the former retired a second time with such of his brethren as he thought pruper \(t o\) advise with ; and, while they were engaged in disconssing Cleveland's proposal, refreshments were offered to him and his people. 'These the captain permitted his people to partake of, but with the greatest precaution against surprisal, one party relieving the guard whilst the others were at their food.

He himself, in the meanwhile, walked up and down the apartment, and conversed upon indifferent subjects with those present, like a person quite at his ease.
Amongst these individuals he saw, somewhat to his surprise, Triptolemus Yellowley, who, chancing to be at Kirkwall, had been summoned by the magistrates, as representative, in a certain degree, of the Lord Chamberlain, to attend council on this occasion. Cleveland immediately renewed the acquaintance which he had formed with the agriculturist at Burgh-Westra, and asked him his present business in Orkney.
'Just to look after some of my little plans, Captain Cleveland. I am weary of fighting with wild beasts at Ephesus yonder, and I just cam ower to see how my orchard was … :ving, whilk I had planted four or five miles from Kirkwall, it may be a year bygane, and how the bees were thriving, whereof I had imported nine skeps, for the improvement of the country, and for the turning of the heather-bloom into wax and honey.
'And they thrive, I hope?' said Cleveland, who, however little interested in the matter, sustained the conversation, as if to break the chilly and embarrassed silence which hming upon the company assembled.
'Thrive I' replied 'Triptolemus ; 'they thrive like everything' else in this country, and that is the hackward way.'
' Want of care, I suppose ?' said Cleveland.
'The contrary, sir - quite aud clean the contrary,' replied the factor; 'they died of ower mackle care, like Lacky Christie's chickens. I asked to see the skeps, and emaning and joyfut diad the fallow look who was to have taken care of thenl. "Harl there been ony body in charge but inysell," Le saill, "ye might have seen the skeps, or whatever you ca' them; but there wal hae been as mony solan-geese as thees in them, if it hadua betel for my four quarters; for I watched them so closely, that I siul them a' creeping out at the little holes one sumy morning, and if l had not stopped the leak on the instant with a bit of clay, the deil a bee, or flee, or whatever they are, would have beenl left in the skeps, as ye ca' them !"" In a word, sir, he had claggel up the hives, as if the puir things had had the pestilence, anll my bees were as dead as if they had been smeaked; mud :u ends my hope generandi gloria mellis, as Virgilius hath it.'
'There is an end of your mead, then,' roplied Clevelant : 'but what is your chance of cider! How does the orcharil thrive ?'
' 0 captain I this same Solomon of the Orcadian Ophir-1 am sure no man need to send thither to fetch either talents of gold or talents of sense !-I say, this wise man had watered the young apple-trees, in his great tenderness, with hot water, and they are perished, root and branch! But what avails grieving ? And I wish you would tell me, instead, what is all the din that these good folks are making about pirates? anl what for are all these ill-looking men, that are armed like sil mony Highlandmen, assembled in the judgment-chamber ! fur I am just come from the other side of the island, and I have heard nothing distinct about it. And, now 1 look at you yomrsell, captain, I think you have mair of these foolish pistolets about you than should suffice an honest man in quiet times ?'
'Aud so I think, too,' said the pacific triton, old Hatrent, who had been an unwilling follower of the daring Montrue: 'if you had been in the Glen of Edderachyllis, when we were sae sair worried by Sir John Worry _-'
'Yon have forgot the whole matter, neighbour Hatgen.' said the factor: 'Sir John Urry was on your side, and wits? ta'en with Montrose ; by the same token, he lost his head.'
'Did he?' said the triton. 'I believe you may be right: for he changed sides mair than ance, and wha keus whilk lie died for 1 But always he was there, and so was I; \(n\) fight there was, and I never wish to see another!
'The entrance of the provost here interrmpted their desultory conversation. 'We have determinel,' he said, 'cuptain, that your ship shall go round to Stromness, or Scalpa Flow, to take in stores, in order that there may be no mure pharrels hetween the fair folks and your seamen. And as yon wish to stay on shore to see the fair, we intend to seud a respectable gentleman on board your vessel to pilot her round the Mainland, as the navigation is but tieklish.'
'Spoken like a quiet and sensible magistrate, Mr. Mayor, snid Cleveland, 'and no otherwise than as I expeeten. And what gentleman is to honour our quarter-leck during my absence ?'
'We have fixed that, too, Captain Cleveland,', said the provost; ' you may be sure we were each more desirous than another to go upon so pleasant a voyage, and in suel gool company ; but, being fair time, most of us have some affairs in hand. I myself, in respeet of my office, cannot be well spared - the eldest bailie's wife is lying-in - the treasurer does not agree with the sea - two bailies have the gont - the other two are absent from town - and the other fifteen members of comncil are all engaged on partieular business.'
'All that I can tell you, Mr. Mayor,' said Cleveland, raising his voice, 'is, that I expeet
'A moment's patience, if you please, captain,' sail the provost, interrupting him - 'So that we have come to the resolntion that our worthy Mr. Triptolemus Yellowley, who is factor to the Lord Chamberlain of these islands, shall, in respect of his offieial situation, be preferred to the honour and pleasure of aceompanying you.'
'Me!' said the astonished Triptolenus: ' what the devil shonld I do going on your voyages ? my business is on dry land.'
'The gentlemen want a pilot,' said the provost, whispering to him, 'and there is no eviting to give them one.
'Do they want to go bump on shore, then?' said the factor, 'how the devil should I pilot them, that never touchel rudler in my life?'
'Hush! - hush ! - be silent!' said the prorost : 'if the people of this town heard ye say sueh a word, your utility, and respect, and rank, and everything else, is clean gone! No man is mything with us island folks miless he ean hand, reef, and steer.

Besides, it is but a mere furm; and we will send old Pate Sinclair to help you. You will have nothing to do but to ent, drink, and be 'ieviry all day.'
' Bat and drink!' said the fuctor, not able to comprehend exactly why this piece of duty was pressed upou hiin so lastily, and yet not very capable of resisting or extricating himself frinn the toils of the more knowing provo:t -- 'eat and Irink!' 'Ilhat is all very well; but, to speak truth, the sca does not agree with me any more than with the treasurer, and I have always a better appetite for cating an! drinking ashore.'
'Hush! hush! hush!' again said the provost, in an mudertone of earnest expostulation; 'would you actually ruin your character out and out? A factor of the Iligh Chamberlain of the Isles of Orkney and Zetland, and not like the sca ! you minght as well say you are a Highlander, and do not like whisky !
' You must settle it somehow, gentlcmen,' said Captain ( 'leveland; 'it is time we were under weigh. Mr. I'riptolemuss Yellowley, are we to be honoured with your company?
'I am sure, Captain Cleveland,' stammered the factor, 'I would have no objection to go anywhere with you, only -
'He has no objection,' said the provost, catcling at the first limb of the sentence, without awaiting the conclusion.
'He has no objection,' cricd the treasurer.
'He has no objection,' sung out the whole four lailies together; and the fiftecn commeillors, all catching u! the sane phrase of assent, repeated it in chorus, with the alditions of 'good man' - 'public-spiriteld' - 'honourables gentlentian' burgh eternally obliged' - 'where will you find such a wirtly factor ?' and so forth.

Astonished and confused at the praises with which he was overwhelmed on all sides, and in no shape understanting the mature of thie transaction that was going forwarl, the astumuled and overwhelmed agriculturist became incapable of resistiug the part of the Kirkwall Curtius thus insidionsly funcel mpon him, and was delivered up by Captain Cleveland to lis party; with the strictest injmetions to treat him with hum, nir ami attention. Goffe and his companions began now tu lend him off, amid the applanscs of the whole meetins, after the mamer in which the victim of ancient days was sarlambled and grented by shouts, when consigned to the priests, for the purpuse of being led to the altar and knocked on the heal, a sacrifice for the commonweal. It was whin they thus coulncted, and in a manner forced, him out of the uncil-chamber, that poor 'l'ip-triomus, much alarmed at finding that Cleveland, in whim he had some confidence, was to remain behind the party, tried, when just going out at the door, the effect of une remonstruting hellow. Ray, Qut, provost ! - captain: - - builies! - treasurer: -couneillors! if Captain Clevehand does not ge nboarl to nroteet me, it is nae bargain, and gol will not, unlens I am trailed with cart-ropes !'
His protest was, however, drowned in the unanimous elorns of the magistrates and councillors, returning him thanks for his publie spirit - wishing him a goorl voyage - and praying to Heaven for his happy anil speedy returu. Stmmed mid overwhelmed, and thinking, if he lad any distinet thoughts at all, that remonstranee was vain, where friemels mul strangers seemed alike determined to carry the point uguinst him, 'Triptolemus, without farther resistanee, suffered himself to be conducted into the street, where the pirute's boat's crew, assembling arommd him, began to move slowly towards the quay, many of the townsfolk following out of euriosity, but withont any attempt at interference or annoyance; for the paeific compromise which the dexterity of the first magistrate had aehieved was unanimously approved of as a much better settlement of the disputes betwixt them and the strangers than might have been attained by the dubious issue of an appeal to amos.

Meanwhile, as they went slowly ulong, 'Iriptolemus had time to study the appearance, eountenanee, and lress of those into whose hands he had been thus delivered, and began to imagine that he read in their looks not only the general expression of a desperate charaeter, but some sinister intentions directed particularly towards himself. He was alarmed by the truenlent looks of Goffe, in partieular, who, holding his arm with a gripe which resembled in delieacy of touch the compression of a smith's viee, cast on him from the outer corner of his eye oblique glances, like those whiel the eagle throws upon the prey which she has clutchen, ere yet she proceeds, as it is technically culled, to plame it. At length Yellowley's fears got so far the hetter of his prudenee that he fairly asked his. terrible combetor, in a sort of crying whisper, 'Are yon gome tomurder me, cuptain, in the fate of the laws baith of Gom and man!
'Hold your peace, if you are wise,' saill (iulte, who han his own reasons for desiring to incrense the panic of his captive ; 'we have not murdered a nan these three months, and why should you put us in mind of it ?'
'You are but juking, I hope, gooll worthy capptain :' replied Triptulemus. "This is worne than witehes, dwarfe, dirking if whales, couping of cobles, put all together! - thin is anl away ganging crop, with a vengeance! What goord, in Iteuven's name, would murdering me do to you?'

'We might have some pleasure in it, at lenst,' maill (infle. 'Look these fellows in the face, and see if you see one minning them that would not rather kill a man than let it alone? But we will speak more of that when you have first had a tuste if the bilbues - muless, indeed, you come down with a handsone round handful of Chili boards \({ }^{1}\) for your ransom.'
'As I shall live by bread, captain,' answered the fartor, 'that misbegotten dwarf has carried off the whole horuful of silver!'
'A cat-and-nine-tails will make you find it again,' snid (iontle, grufly, 'flogging and pickling is an excellent receipt to hinire a man's wealth into his mind; twisting a bowstring romul liiskull till the eyes start a little is a very good remembrancer too.'
'Captain,' replied Yellowley, stontly, 'I have no muney; seldom can improvers have. We turn pasture to tillave anil barley into aits, and heather into greensward, and the bunir "yarpha," as the benighted creatures here call their peat-hno, into baittle grass-land; but we seldonn make anything of it that comes back to our ain pouch. The carles and the relt avers make it all, and the carles and the cart-avers eat it all. and the deil clink doun with it!'
'Well - well,' said Goffe, 'if you be ree!!y a pour tnllnw, as you pretend, I'll stand your friend'; then, inclining hiin luad so as to reach the ear of the factor, who stood on tiptwe with anxiety, he said, "if you love your life, do not enter the lunat with us.'
'But how am I to get away from you, while yon luld me so fast by the arm that I could not get off if the whole gent: crop of Scotland depended on it ?'
'Hark ye, you gnilgeon,' said Goffe, 'just when yon? (rimn' to the water's edge, and when the fellows are jnmping in :mil taking their oars, slue yourself romed suldenly to the larlmand -I will let go your arm-and then cont and rum fin y.ur life!'
I'riptolemus did as he was desired, Goffe's willing lami relaxed the grasp as he had promised, the agriculturist tranillont off like a football that has just received a stroug impulse firm

\footnotetext{
\({ }^{1}\) Commonly called by landsmen spaulsh dullars.
}
the foot of one of the players, mul, with celerity which nurprised linuself as well as all beholders, Hod through the town of Kirkwall. Nay, such was the inlpetns of his retreat that, as if the arat-p of the pirate was still opent to ponnce niphom him, he never stopped till he hal traversed the whole cown mind attained the epen comitry on the other side. 'They who luad seen him that day .-- his hat and wig lost in the sudden elfort he had made to In) \({ }^{2}\) forward, his cravat awry, and his waistemat mbinttoned and who had an opportnity of comparing his romul spherical form and short logs with the portentons speed at which he scouren through the street, might well say that, if fury ministers arms, fear confers wings. His very mode of ruming seemed to be that peculiar to his fleecy care, for, like a ran in the midst of his mee, he ever and anon encouraged himself by a great bomucing attempt at a leap, though there were no obstacles in his way.
There was no pursuit after the agriculturist ; and though a musket or two were presented, for the pupose of sending a leaden messenger ufter him, yet Goffe, turning pencemaker for once in his life, so exaggerated the dangers that wonlld attend a breach of the truce with the people of Kirkwnll, that he prevailed upon the boat's erew to forbear any active hustilities, and to pull off for their vessel with all despatelı.
The burghers, who regarled the escape of l'riptolemns as a trimmph on their side, gave the boat three cheers by way of an iusultung farewell; while the magistrates, on the other haud, entertained great anxiety respecting the probable consequences of this breach of articles between them and the pirates; and, could they have seized npon the fugitive very privately, instend of eomplimenting him with a eivic fenst in honour of the arility which he displayed, it is likely they might have delivered the runaway hostage once more into the hands of his foemen. But it was inpossible to set their faee publicy to sueh an met ,f violence, and therefore they contenten themselves with clasely watching Cleveland, whom they determined to make respmuible for any aggression which might be attempted by the pirates. Cleveland, on his part, easily eonjectured that the motive which Goffe had for suffering his hostage to eseape was to leave him answerable for all consequenees, and, relying more on the attachment and intelligence of his friend and adherent, l'rederich Altanont, "linss Jaek Bunce, than on anything else, expectend the result with consilerable anxiety, since the mawistrates, though they emintined to treat lim with civility, plainly intimated they would regulate his treatment by the behaviour of the crew, though he no longer commanded them.

It was not, however, withont some reason that he reckinel on the devoted fidelity of Bunce ; for no sooner did that trusty adherent receive from Goffe and the boat's erew the news if the escape of 'Iriptolemus, than he immediately concluded it had been favoured by the late captain, in order that, Clevelind being either put to death or consigned to hopeless innprisomment, Gcffe might be called upon to resume the command of the vessel.
'But the drunken old boatswain shall miss his mark,' sail Bunce to his confederate F'letcher; 'or else I am contenten to quit the name of Altamont, and be called Jack Bunce, or Jowt Dunce, if you like it better, to the end of the chapter.'

Availing hinself aceordingly of a sort of nautical elonnence, which his enemies termed slack-jaw, Bunce set before the crew, in a most animated manmer, the disgrace which they all sustained by their captain remaining, as he was pleased to term it, in the bilboes, without any hostage to answer for his safety ; and suceeeded so far that, besides exeiting a goold deal of discontent against Goffe, he brought the crew to the resolution of seizing the first vessel of a tolerable appearance, annil declaring that the ship, crew, and cargo should be dealt with according to the usage which Cleveland should receive on shrre. It was judged at the same tine proper to try the faith of the Orcadians, by removing from the roadstead of Kirkwall, and going round to that of Stromess, where, according to the treaty betwixt Provost 'Torfe and Captain Cleveland, they were to victual their sloop. They resolved, in the meantime, to entrust the command of the vessel to a enuncil, consisting of Goffe, the boatswain, and Bunce himself, until Cleveland should be in a situation to resmme his command.
These resolutions having been proposed and acceded to, they weighed anchor and got their sloup mader sail, without experiencing any opposition or amoyance from the battery, which relieved them of one important apprehension incidental to their situation.

\section*{CHAPTER XXXVI}

Cla; ou more ssal, ursur, up with your fights,
Give ir: - lac it hy prize, or ceean whelut them all!
Shaksifeabe.

AVERY handsome brig, whieh, with several other vessels, was the property of Magnns 'Iroil, the great Zestland udaller, harl received on board that macnate himself, his two lovely daughters, and the facetions Clard Hakero, who, for friendship's sake ehiefly, mill the love of beanty proper to his poetical calling, attended them on their journey from Zetland to the eapital of Orkney, to which Norna had referred them, as the place where her mystical oracles should at length receive a satisfactory explanation.

I'liey passed, at a distance, the tremendons cliffs of the lonely spot of earth called the Fair Isle, which, at an equal distance from either archipelago, lies in the sea whielı divides Orkney from Zetland; and at length, after some baftling winds, made the Start of Sanda. Off the headland so named, they becume involved in a strong current, well known, by those who frequent these seas, as the Roost of the Start, which earried them considerably out of their course, and, joined to an adverse wind, forced them to keep, on the east side of the island of Stronsa, and finally compelled them to lie by for the night in Papa Somml, sinee the navigation in dark or thick weather, amongst so many low islands, is neither pleasant nor safe.

On the ensning morning they resumed their voyage muler more favourable auspices; and, coasting along the island of Stronsa, whose flat, verlant, and comparatively fertile shores formed a strong eontrast to the dim hills and dark eliffs of their own islands, they doubled the cape called the Lamb Heal, and stood away for Kirkwall.

I'hey had scarce opened the beautifnl bay betwist P'munna and Shapinsha, and the sisters were admiring the massive elhurd of St. Magms, as it was first seen to rise from amongit the:
inferior buildings of Kirkwall, when the eyes of Magnus ann of Claud Halcro were attracted by an object which they thumght more interesting. 'This was an arned sloop, with her sails set, which had just lett the anchorage in the hay, and was ruminus before the wind by which the brig of the Udaller was leating in.
'A tight thing that, by my ancestors' bones!' sail the whe Udaller ; 'but 1 camint make out of what country, as she shows no colours. Spanish built, I should think her.'
'Ay - ay,' said Claud Halcro, 'she has all the look of it. She :uns before the wind that we must battle with, which is the wonted way of the world. As glorious John says -

> With roomy deck, and guns of mighty strength, Whose low-luid mouths each mountain billow laves, Deep in her draught, and warlike in her length, She seens a sea-wasp flying on the waves.

Brenda could not help telling Halcro, when he had spouted this stanza with great enthusiasm, 'That though the description was more like a first-rate than a sloop, yct the simile of the setiwasp served but indifferently for either.'
'A sea-wasp!' said Magnus, looking with some surprise, as the sloop, shifting her course, suldenly bore down on them. 'Mraul, I wish she may not show us presently that she has a sting !'

What the Udaller said in jest was fulfilled in earnest ; for, without hoisting colours or hailing, two shots were distharsed from the sloop, onc of which ran dipping and dancing upon the water just ahead of the Zetlander's bows, while the other went through his mainsail.

Magnus caught up a speaking-trumpet and hailed the slopp, to denand what she was and what was the meaning of this unprovoked aggression. He was only answered by the stern command, 'Down topsails instantly, and lay your mainsail to the mast ; you shall see who we are presently.'

There were no means within tiee reach of possibility by which obedience could be evaded, where it would instantly have been enforced by a broadside : and, with much fear on the part of th:: sisters and Claud Halcro, mixed with anger and astonishment on that of the Udaller, the brig lay-to to await the commandof the captors.

The shop immediately lowered a boat, with six armed hands, commanded by Jack Bunce, which rowed directly for their prize. As they approached her, Claud Halcro whispered to the Cdialler, 'If what we hear of buccaniers be true, these men, with their silk scarfs and vests, have the very cut of them.'
'My daughters! my daughters !' muttered Magnus to himself, with such an agony as only a father could feel. 'Go down below and hide yourselves, girls, while I --

He threw down his speaking-trnmpet, and seized on a handspike, while his daughters, more afrail of the consernences of his fiery temper to himself than of anything else, hung round him and begged him to make no resistance. Cland Halero mited his entreaties, addling, 'It were best pacify the fellows with fair words. 'They might,' he said, 'be Dunkirkers, or insolent man-of-war's-men on a frolic.'
' No - no,' answered Magnns, 'it is the sloop which the jagger told us of. But I will take your advice: I will have patience fur these girls' sakes ; yet

He had no time to conclude the sentence, for Bunce jimnped un board with his party, and drawing his cutlass, struck it upon the companion-ladder and declared the ship was theirs.
'By what warrant or authority do you stop us on the ligh seas ?' said Magnus.
'Here are half a dozen of warrants,' said Bunce, showing the pistols which were hung round him, according to a pirate fashion already mentioned, 'choose which yon like, old gentleman, and you shall have the perusal of it presently.'
'That is to say, you intend to rob us?' said Marnus. 'So be it - we have no means to help it -only be civil to the women, and take what yon please from the vessel. There is not much hat I will and can make it worth more if yon use is wel'.
'Civi: " women!' said Fletcher, who had also come on board wi ': ue gang - 'when were we else than civil to them? ay, and kind to boot? Look here, Jack Bumce! what a trimgoing little thing here is! By G-, she shall make a crnise with us, come of old Squaretoes what will!'

He seized upon the terrified Brenda with one hand, and insolently pulled back with the other the hood of the mantle in which she had innffled herself.
'Help, father ! - help, Minna !' exclained the affrighted girl ; unconse s at the moment, thot they were unable to render her assistance.

Magnu* again uplifted the hamlspike, but Bunce stopped his: hand. 'A ist, father !' he said, 'or you will make a bad voyage of it preseascly. And you, Fletrcher, let go the girl !'
'And d-n me! why should I let her go ?' said Flctcher.
'Because I command you, Dick,' said the other, 'aul because I'll make it a quarrel else. And now let me know, beauties, is there one of you bears that queer heathen name of Minma, for which I have a certaiu sort of regard?'

'Gallant sir!' said Halcro, 'muquestionably it is. hecanse yon have some poetry in your heart.'
'I have had enough of it in my mouth in my time,' answerel Bunce ; 'but that day is by, old gentleman; however, I shall soon find out which of these girls is Minna. Throw back your mufflings from your faces, and don't be afraid, my Lindamiras: no one here shall meddle with you to do you wrong. (On my soul, two pretty wenches! I wish I were at sea in an egy shell, and a rock under my lee-bow, if I would wish a better leasner lass than the worst of them! Hark you, my girls; which of you would like to swing in a rover's hammock ? yon should have gold for the gathering!'

The terrified maidens clung close together, and grew pate at the bold and familiar language of the desperate libertine.
'Nay, don't be frightenel,' said he ; 'no one slall serve under the noble Altamont but by her own free clioice : there is no pressing amongst gentlemen of fortune. And do nut lowk so shy upon me neither, as if I spoke of what you never thought of before. One of you, at least, has heard of Captain Cleveland, the rover.'
Brenda grew still paler, but the blood mounted at once in Minna's cheeks, on hearing the name of her lover thus unex. pectedly introduced; for the scene was in itself so confounlinc, that the idea of the vesssel's being the consort of which Clevelanl had spoken at Burgh-Westra had occurred to no one sive the Udaller.
'I see how it is,' said Bunce with a familiar nod, 'and I will hold my course accordingly. You need not be afraid of ally injury, father,' he added, addressing Magnus familiarly; 'anil though I have made many a pretty girl pay tribute in my time. yet yours shall \(g u\) ashore without either wrong or ranson.
'If you will assure me of that,' said Magnus, 'you are as welcome to the brig and cargo as ever I made man welcone th, a can of punch.'
'And it is no bad thing that same can of punch,' said Bume, 'if we had any one that could mix it well.'
'I will do it,' sa:. Claud Halcro, 'with any man that ever squeezed lemon - Eric Scambester, the punch-maker of BurghWestra, being alone excepted.'
'And you are within a grapnel's length of him, too,' sai! the Udaller. 'Go down below, my girls,' he aulded, 'and send up the rare old man and the punch-bowl.'

'The punch-bowl!' said Fleteher ; 'I say, the bucket, d--11 me ! 'Talk of bow' in the cabin of a paltry merchantman, but not to gentlemen st. lers - rovers, I would aay,' correcting himself, as he observed that Bunce luoked sour at the mistake.
'And I say, these two pretty girls shall stay on dech and fill my can,' said Bunce ; 'I deserve some attendance, at leenst, for all my generosity.'
'And they shall fill mine, too,' said Fleicher - 'they shall till it to the brim : and I will have a kiss for every drop they spill - broil me if I won't!'
'Why, then, I tell yon, you shan't !' said Bunce ; ' forr I 'll be \(d\)-d if any one shall kiss Mima but one, and that's neitheryon nor I ; and her other little bit of a consurt shall 'scape fur company ; there are plenty of willing wenches in Orkney. And so, now I think on it, these girls shall go duwn below and bolt themselves into the cabin; and we shall have the punch up here on deck, ol fresen, as the old gentleman proposes.
' Why, Jack, I wish you knew your uwn minul,' said Fleteler; 'I have been your messmate these two years, and I love you; and yet flay me like a wild bullock, if you have not as many humours as a monkey! And what shall we have to make a little fun of, sinee you have sent the girls down below?'
'Why, we will have Master Punch-maker here,' :nswered Bunce, 'to give us toasts and sing us songs. Ana, in the meantime, you there, stand by sheets and tacks, and get her under way! and you, steersman, as yon would keep your brains in your skull, keep her under the stern of the show. If yon attempt to play us any trick, I will scuttle your sconce as if it were an old calabash!
The vessel was accordingly got under way, and moved slowly on in the wake of the sloop, which, as had been previonsly agreed upon, held her course, not to return to the Bay of Kirkwall, but for an excellent roadstead called luganess Bay, formed by a promontory which extends to the eastward two on three miles from the Orcadian metropolis, and where the vessisls: might eonveniently lie at anchor, while the rovers maintained any communication with the magistrates which the new state of thinge seemed to require.
Meantime, Cland Halero had exerted his ntmost talents in compounding a bucketful of punch for the use of the pirates, which they drank out of large cins; the ordinary seamen, as well as Bunce and Fletcher, who acted as officers, dipping them into the bucket with very little ceremony, as they canne and went upon their duty. Magnus, who was particularly an ine hensive that liquor might awaken the brutal passions of the:e desperadoes, was yet so much astonished the the yantitio which he saw them drink, without producing any visible eflert upon their reason, that he could not help expressing his sumpe.e to Bunce himself, who, wild as he was, yet appeared by fir thu" most civil and conversable of his party, and whom lee w:perhaps, desirous to conciliate by a compliment of which ati boon topers know the value.
'Bones of St. Magnus!' said the Udaller, 'I nsed to think I took off my can like a gentleman; but to see your metl swallow, captain, one would think their stonachs were at bottomless as the hole of Laifell in Foula, which I have summled myself with a line of a hundred fathoms. By my sonl, the bicker of St. Magnus were but a sip to them!'
' In our way of life, sir,' answered Bunce, 'there is no stint till duty calls or the puncheon is drink ont.'
' By my word, sir,' said Claud Halcro, 'I believe there is mot one of your people but could drink out the mickle hicker if Scarpa, which was always offered to the Bishop of Orkney brimful of the best bummock that ever was brewed. ' \({ }^{1}\)
'If drinking could make them bishops,' said Bunce, 'I shuml| have a reverend crew of them; but as they have nu wther clerical qualities about them, I do not propose that they hall get drunk to-day ; so we will cut our drink with a song.'
'And I ll sing it, by -! ' said or swore Dick Fletcher, and instantly struck up the old ditty -

> ' It was s ship, and a ship, of fame, Iaunch'd off the stocks, bound for the main, With an hundred and fifty brisk young men, All pick'd and chosen every one.'
'I would sooner be keel-hauled than hear that song neer again,' said Bunce ; 'and confound your lantern jaws, you cell squeeze nothing else out of them!'
'By ——,' said Fletcher, 'I will sing my song, whether ! \(1, \ldots\) like it or no'; and again he sung, with the doleful tone if : north-easter whistling through sheets and shronds -

\footnotetext{
- Captain Glen was our captain's name ; A very gallant and brisk young man, As bold a sailor as c'er went to sea; And we were bomed fur High Barbary.'
}

\footnotetext{
\({ }^{1}\) Ifiguor brewed for a Chrlstmas treat.
}
'I tell you again,'said Bunce, 'we will lave none of your sereech-owl music here ; and I'll be d-d if you shall sit here and make that infernal noise!'
'Why, then, I 'll tell you what,' said Fletcher, getting up, 'I'll sing when I walk about, and I hope there is no harm in that, Jack Bunce.' And so, getting up from his seat, he began to walk up and down the sloop, croaking out his long and disastrous ballad.
'You see how I manage them,' said Bunce, with a smile ci self-app' 'use. 'Allow that fellow two strides on his own way. and you make a mutineer of him for life ; but 1 tie him strict up, and he follows me as kindly as a fowler's spaniel after he has got a good beating. And now your toast and your song, sir,' addressing Halcro ; 'or rather your song without your toast. I have got a toast for myself. Here is success to all roving blades, and confusion to all honest men!'
'I should be sorry to driuk that toast, if I could help it,' said Magnus Troil.
'What! you reckon yourself one of the honest folks, I warrant?' said Bunce. 'Tell me your trade, and I'll tell you what I think of it. As for the punch-maker here, I knew him at first glance to be a tailor, who has, therefore, no more pretensions to be honest than he has not to be mangy. Bnt you are some High-Dutch skipper, I warrant me, that tramples on the cross when he is in Japan, and denies his religion for a day's gain!.
'No,' replied the Udaller, 'I am a gentleman of Zetland.'
'Oh, what!' retorted the satirical Mr. Bunce, 'you are come from the happy climate where gin is a groat a-bottle, and where there is daylight for ever?'
'At your service, captain,' said the Lilaller, suppressing with much pain some disposition to resent these jests on his comintry, although under every risk and at all dssadvantage.
'At my service!' said Bunce. 'Ay, if there was a rope stretched from the wreck to the beach, you wonld be at my service to cut the lawser, make Hotsone and jetsome of shin) and cargo, and well if you dide not give me a rap on the hemd with the back of the entty-axe; and you call yourself honest: But never mind - here goes the aforesaid toast - and do you sing ine a song, Mr. Fashioner; and look it be as good as your punch.'
Halcro, internally praying for the powers of a new Timothens, to turn lis strain and check his auditor's pride, as glorious vol. NIII-3:

John had it, began a heart-soothing ditty with the following lines :-

> ' Maideus fresh as fairest rose, Listen to this lay of mine,'
'I will hear nothing of maidens or roses,' said Bume: puts me in mind what sort of a cargo we have got on buaril: a :d, by —— I will be true to my messmate and my captain as long as I can! And now I think on't, I 'll have no nurice punch eitlier ; that last cup made innovation, and I am nint to play Cassio to-night ; and if I drink not, nobody else shall.

So saying, he manfully kicked over the bucket, which, motwithstanding the repented applications made to it, was still half full, got up from his seat, shook himself a little to rights, as he expressed it, cocked his hat, and, walking the quarterdeck with an air of dignity, gave, by word and signal, the orilers for bringing the ships to anchor, which were readily obeyell liy both, Goffe being then, in all probability, past any rational state of interference.

The Udaller, in the meantime, condoled with Halcro on their situation. 'It is bad enough,' said the tough old Norseman, 'for these are rank rogues; and yet, were it not for the girls, I should not fear them. That young vapouring fellow, who seems to command, is not such a born devil as he might have been.'
'He has queer humours, thongh,' said Halcro: 'and I wish we were loose from him. To kick down a bucket half full ,f the best punch ever was made, and to cut me chort in the sweetest song I ever wrote - I promise you, I do not know what he may do next - it is 1 ; \(3 x t\) door to madness.'

Meanwhile, the ships being brought to anchor, the valiant Lientenant Bunce called upon Fletcher, and, resuming his seat by his unwilling passengers, he tolit them they should see whit message he was about to send to the wittols of Kirkwall, is they were something concerned in it. 'It shall run in lick': name,' he coid, 'as well as in mine. I love to give the pmen' young felt : little conntenance now and then - don't I, Dick, you d-d stupid ass ?'
'Why, yes, Jack Bunce,' said Dick, 'I can't say but as you do, only yon are always bollocking one about something or other, tour ; but, howsondever, d' ye see -_'
'Enough said - belay your jaw, Dick,' said Bunce, and proceeded to write his epistle, which, being read aloud, proved to he of the following tenor:- ' For the Mayor and Aldermen of Kirkwall - Gentlemen, As, contrary to your good faith given, you bave not sent us on board a hostage fur the safety of our captain, remaining on shore at your reguest, these come to tell you, we are not thins to be trifled with. We have already in our possession a brig, with a family of distinction, its owners and passengers ; and an yon deal with nur cenptain, so will we deal with then in every respect. Amb as this is the first, so assure yourselves it shafl not be the last, damage which we will do to your town and trade, if you do not send on board onr captain, and supply us with stores according to treaty.
"Given on luard the brig "Mergouse" of Burgh-Westra, lying in luganess Bay., Witness our hands, commanders of the "Fortune's Favourite," and gentlemen adventurers.'

He then subseribed himself Frederick Altamont, and handed the letter to Fletcher, who read the said subscription with much difficulty; and, admiring the sound of it very much, swore he would have a new nume himself, and the rather that Fletcher was the most crabbed word to spell and conster, he believed, in the whole dictionary. He subscribed himself accordingly, Timothy T'ugmutton.
'Will you not add a few lines to the coxcombs?' said Bunce, aldressing Magnus.
' Not \(I\),' returned the Udaller, stubborn in his ideas of right and wrong, even in so formidable an emergency. 'The magistrates of Kirkwall know their duty, and were I they --' But here the recollection that his daughters were at the mercy of these rutfians blanked the bold visage of Magnus 'Iroil, and checked the defiance which was just about to issue from his lips.
' \(D-11\) me.' said Bunce, who easily conjectured what was passing in the mind of his prisoner - 'that panse would have told well on the stage : it would have brought down pit, box, and yallery, egad, as Bayes has it.'
'I will hear nothing of Bayes,' said Cland Halcro, himself a little elevated, 'it is an impudent satire on glorious John ; but he tickled Buckingham off for it -

> In the first tank of these did Ziunri stand, A man so various -

'Hold your peace!' said Bunce, drowning the voice of the admirer of Dryden in londer and more vehement asseveration, 'the Rehearsal is the best farce ever was written; and I'll nake him kiss the gumer's danghter that denics it. If In me, I was the best Prince l'rettyman ever walked the boarih -

\section*{Sometimes a fisher's son, sometimes a prince.}

But let us to business. Hark ye, old gentlenan (to Magnu-), you have a sort of sulkiness about you, for which some inf niy profession would cut your cars out of your heal, annl hirifl then for your dinner with red pepper. I have known (i, fli: do so to a poor devil, for looking sour and dangerous when hur saw his sloop go to Davy Jones's locker with his only som board. But I'm a spirit of another sort; and if you ur the ladies are ill-used, it shall be the Kirkwall people's fault, null not mine, and that's fair; and so you had better let thinn know your condition, and your circunstances, and so furth and that 's fair, too.'

Magnus, thus exhorted, took up the pen and attemptel to write; but his high spirit so struggled with his paternal anxiety that his hand refused its office. 'I camnot help it,' lo said, after one or two illegible attempts to write - 'I cumut form a letter, if all our lives depended npon it.'

An'? he could not, with his utmost efforts, so suppress the convu'siv3 enotions which he experienced, but that they agitated his whole frame. The willow which bends to the tempest often escapes better than the oak which resists it : and so, in great calamities, it sometimes happens that light and frivolous spirits recover their elasticity and presence of mind sooner than those of a loftier character. In the present case, Claud Halcro was fortunately able to perform the task which the deeper feelings of his friend and patron refisend. He took the pen, and, in as few words as possible, explaineil the situation in which they were placel, and the crnel rikk tn which they were exposed, insinnating at the same time, at delicately as he could express it, that, to the magistrates of the country, the life and honour of its citizens should lee a dearer object than even the apprehension or punishment of the guilty ; taking care, however, to qualify the last expression it much as possible, for fear of giving mombage to the pirates.

Bunce read over the letter, which fortunately met his appro bation; and, on seeing the name of Claud Halcro at the buttom, lee exclained, in great surprise, and with more energetic expre:sions of asseveration than we choose to record - 'Why, you are the little fellow that played the fiddle to old Manager Gad.
nbout's company, at Hogs Norton, the first season I came out there! I thought I knew your catchworl of glorious John.'

At another time this reeognition might not have been very grateful to Halero's minstrel pride : but, as mutters stoml with him, the diveovery of a golilen mine comlil not have made him more happy. He imstuntly remembered the very hope. ful young performer who cane out in /hon Nelnastian, and judiciously adden, that the muse of glorions John had never received such excollent support dnring the time that he wis first (he might have added, and only) violin to Mr. Gadabout's company.
- Why, yes,' said Bunce, 'I believe you are right : I think I might have shaken the seene as well us Booth or Betterton either. But I was destined to figure on other boards (striking his foot npon the deck), and I believe I nust stick by them till I find no board at all to support me. Bnt now, old aepmintance, I will do sonething for you; she yourself this way it bit -I would have yon solus.' Ihey lenned over the taffrail, white Bunce whispered with more serionsmess than he usually showed, 'I ann sorry for this honest old henrt of Norway pino - blight ine if I am not -anll for the rluaghters too ; besides, I have my own reasons for befriending one of them. I can be a wild fellow with a willing lass of the game ; but to such lecent und imnocent creatures - 1 -n me, I am Scipion at Numantin, and Alexnader in the tent of Darins. Yon remember how I touch off Alexander ? (here he started into heroics) -

> Thus from the grave I rise to save my love ;
> All draw your swords, with wings of lightning move. When I rush on, sure none will dare to stay; 'T is beauty calls, and glory shows the way.

Claud Halcro failed not to bestow the necessary commendations on his declamation, declaring that, in his opinion as an honest man, he had ahways thought Mr. Altamont's giving that speech far superior in tone and energy to Betterton.

Bunce, or Altamont, wrung his hand tenderly. 'Ah, youl Hatter me, my lear frienl,' he sail ; 'yet, why had not the public some of your judgment! I shouhl not then have heen at this pass. Heaven knows, my dear Mr. Halcro - Heaven knows with what pleasure I conld keep you on board with me, just that I might have one friend who loves as much to hear as I du to recite the choicest pieces of our fuest Iramatic anthors. The most of us are bensin; ; and, for the Kirkwall hostare youder, he uses me, egal, as I nwe Fletcher, I think, and buffs me the mure. the more ifo for him. But how delightfinl would it her in, " tropic night, when the ship was hanging on the hreeze, will. hroad and steady mnil, for me to reltearie . Iferemider, with ! ...1 for my pit, box, anll gallery! Nay - for yon are a filll, wit is the Muses, as I remember - who knows but you and I mi;hin I.. the means of inupiring, like (Irpheus mul tianydice, a pure ta-t" into our companions, and softening their maners, while we excited their better feelings \({ }^{\prime}\)
This was spoken with so much unction, that Clanil Hallo.. began to be afraid he had loith made the actual pmich user potent and mixed two many bewitching ingredicuts in the "ul of Hattery which he had administerel ; an! that, muder thi. influence of both potions, the sentimental pirate might detain him by force, merely to realise the scenes which his imagination presented. The conjuncture was, however, too delicate to athit of any active effort on Halcro's part to redeem his blunder, nunt therefore he only returned the tender pressure of his friemlis hand, and uttered the interjection 'alas!' in as pathetic a twie as he could.

Bunce inmediately resumed: 'Yonare right, my frienl, there are but vain visions of felicity, and it remains bit for the me. happy Altamont to serve the friend to whom he is now to hid fareweil. I have deternined to put you and the two girls ashore, with Fletcher for your protection ; and so call mp the young women, and let thein begone before the devii get amairl of me or of some one else. Yon will carry my lette; to the magistrates, and second it with your own elonuence, and assure them that, if they hurt but one hair of Cleveland's head, there will be the devil to pay, and no pitch hot.'

Relieved at heart by this unexpeeted termination of Bumes: harangue, Halcro descended the companion-ladder two steps at a time, and, knocking at the cabin door, could scaree find intelligible langnage enough to say his errand. The sisters hearing, with unexpected joy, that they were to be set ashore, mufled themselves in their cloaks, amb, when they learned that the boat was hoisted out, came hastily on deck, where they were apprisel, for the first time, to their great horror, that thwir father was still to remain on board of the pirate.
'We will remain with him at every risk.' saill Mimati ; "w' may be of some assistance to him, were it bui for an instant : we will live and die with him!'
'We shall aid him more surely,' said Brenda, who compre-hemded the mature of their sitmation better than Minna, 'by interesting the poople of Kirkwall to grant these gentlemen: demands.
'Spoken like an angel of sense unl heanty;' said bunare: 'null now away with yon! for, \(1-11\) me, it this is nut like having a lighted linstock in the phwder-room: if your monk another word more, comfond mu if I know how I slull ling myself to part with you:"
'Go, in Gorl's mane, my danghters,' snid Magnus. 'I atm in God's hand; and when you are gone I slall care little for myself; and I shall think nuld suy, as long as I live, that this good gentleman deverves a better trale. Go - go - away with you! for they yet lingered in mwillingness to leave him.
'Stay not to kiss,' said Bunce, 'for fear I le tempted to ask my share. Into the bont with yon - yet stop an instant.' He drew the three enptives apart. 'Fletcher,' said he, 'will answer for the rest of the fellows, and will see yon safe off the seabeach. But how to answer for Fletcher [ know not, except by trusting Mr. Halcro with this little gumrantee.

He offered the minstrel a small double-harrelled pistol, which, he aaid, was londed with a brace of balls. Minmat observed Halcro'shand tremble as hestretelied it out to take the weapoln. 'Give it to me, sir,' she said, taking it from the ontlaw ; 'and trust to me for defending my sister and myself.'
'Bravo-hravo!' shonted Bunce. "Ihere spoke a wench worthy of Cleveland, the King of Rovers:
'Cleveland:' repeated Dimia, 'do yon then know that Cleveland whom you have twice mamed?'
'Know him! Is there a mun alive,' said Bunce, 'that knows better than I do the best mill stontest fellow ever stepped betwixt stem and stern? When he is ont of the bilboes, as please Heaven, he shall soon lne, I reckon to see you eome on board of us and reign the glleen of every sea we sail over. You have got the little guardian; I suppuse yon know how to use it? If Fletcher belaves ill to yon, you need only draw "! this pieee of iron with yom thmm, su: and if he persists, it is but erooking your pretty forefinger thins, inn I shall lose the most dutiful messmate that ever man had, thongh, il-a the log, he will deserve his death if he disobeys my orders. Amd now, into the boat ; but stay, one kiss for Clevelanl's salie.'

Bremda, in deadly terror, emdnred his comrtesy: bint Minna, stepping back with dishan, offered her hamd. Bunce langhed, but lissed, with a theatrical air, the fair haml which she extended as a ransom for her lips, and at length the sisters aum Halcro were placed in the boat, which rowed off under Fleteher; command.

\section*{'IHE PIRATE}

Bunce stood on the quarter-deck, soliloquising after the manner of his original profession. 'Were this told at P'ortRoyal now, or at the Isle of Providence, or in the Petits Givares, I wonder what they would say of \(m e!\) Why, that I was a stuml. natured milksop - a Jack-a-Lent-an ass. Well, let them. I have done enough of bad to think about it ; it is worth while doing one good action, if it were but for the rarity of the thing, and to put one in good humour with oneself.' 'Then turning, to Magnus Troil, he proceeded, 'By - these are brina-robas, these daughters of yours! The eldest would make her fortme on the London boards. What a dashing attitude the welw had with her, as she seized the pistol!d-n me, that tomelh would have brought the house down! What a Roxalana the jade would have made !' for, in his oratory, Bunce, like Sanchu's gossip, Thomas Cecial, was apt to use the most energetic wirl which came to hand, without accurately considering its \(\mathrm{prw}^{\mathrm{m}}\) priety. 'I would give my share of the next prize to hear here spout -

> Away, begone, and give a whirlwind room, Or I will blow you p like dust. Avaunt! Madness but meanly represents my rage.

And then, again, that little, soft, shy, tearful trembler, fin Statira, to hear her recite -

He speaks the kindest words, and looks such things, Vows with such passion, swears with so much grace, That 't is a kind of heaven to be deluded by him.

What a play we might have run up! I was a beast not tu think of it before I sent them off - I to be Alexander - Claud Halcro, Lysimachus - this old gentleman might have made a Clytus for a pinch. I was an idiot not to think of it!',
There was much in this effusion which might have displeased the Udaller ; but, to speak truth, he paid no attention to it. His eye, and finally his spy-glass, were employed in watching the return of his daughters to the shore. He saw them land on the bearh, and, accompanied by Halcro and another man (Fletcher, doubtless), he saw them ascend the acclivity anll proceed upon the road to Kirkwall; and he could even distinguish that Minna, as if considering herself as the guardian of the party, walked a little aloof from the rest, on the watch, as it seemed, against surprise, and ready to act as occasion should requirs. At leugth, as the lidaler was just about to los sight of them, he had the exyuisite satisfaction to see the party halt, and the pirate leave them, ifter a space just long enough for a civil farewell, and proceed sluwly back, on his return to the beach. Blessing the Great Being who had thus relieved hin from the most agonising fears which a father can feel, the worthy Udaller, from that instant, stond resigned to his own fate, whatever that might be.

\section*{CHAPTER XXXVII}

> Over the mountains and under the waves, Over the fountains and under the graves, Over floods that are deepest, Which Neptune obey, Over rocks that are steepest, Love will find out the way.

Old Song.

THE parting of Fletcher from Claud Halcro and the sisters of Burgh-Westra, on the spot where it took place, was partly occasioned by a small party of ammel men being seen at a distance in the act of advancing from Kirkwall, an apparition hidden from the Udaller's spy-glass ly the swell of the ground, but quite visible to the pirate, whom it determined to consult his own safety by a speedy return to his boat. He was just turning away, when Minua occasioned the short delay which hir father had observed.
'Stop,' she said, 'I command you! Tell your leader from me that, whatever the answer may be from Kirkwall, he shall carry his vessel, nevertheless, round to Stromness ; and, being: anchored there, let him send a boat ashore for Captain Cleveland when he shall see a smoke on the Bridge of Broisgar.'

Fletcher had thought, like his messmate Bunce, of asking a kiss, at least, for the trouble of escorting these beautiful yount: women; and, perhaps, neither the terror of the approachins: Kirkwall men nor of Minna's weapon might have prevented his being insolent. But the name of his captain, and, still more, the unappalled, dignified, and commanding mamer of Minna Troil, overawed him. He made a sea bow, promised tu keep a sharp look-out, and, returning to his hait, went on bourd with his message.

As Halcro and the sisters advanced towards the pasty whom they saw on the Kirkwall road, and who, on their part, had halted as if to observe them, Brenda, relieved from the fears of Fletcher's presence, which had hitherto kept her silent, exclaimed, 'Merciful Heaven! Minna, in what hands have we left our dear father?'
'In the hands of brave men,' said Minna, steadily. 'I fear not for him.'
'As brave as you please,' said Claud Halero, 'but very dangerous rogues for all that. I know that fellow Altamont, as he calls himself, though that is not his right name neither as deboshed a dog as ever made a barn ring with blood and blank verse. He began with Barnwell, and everybody thought he would end with the gallows, like the last scene in Venice Preserved.'
' It matters not,' said Minna - 'the wilder the waves, the more powerful is the voice that rules them. 'Ihe name alone of Cleveland ruled the mood of the ficreest annongst them.'
'I ann sorry for Cleveland,' said Brenda, 'if such are his companions; but I care little for him in comparison to my father.'
' Reserve your compassion for those who need it,' said Minna, 'and fear nothing for our father. God knows, every silver hair on his head is to me worth the treasule of an unsunned mine; but I know that he is safe while in yonder vessel, and I know that he will be soon safe on shore.'
' I would I could see it,' said Claud Halcro ; 'but I fear the Kirkwall people, supposing Clcveland to be such as I dread, will not dare to exchange him against the Udailer. The Scots have very severe laws against theft-boot, as they call it.'
'But who are those on the road before us?' said Brenda; 'and why do they halt there so jealously?'
'They are a patrol of the militia,' answered Halcro. 'Glorious John touches them off a little sharply; but then John was a Jacobite, -

> Mouths without hands, maintain'd at vast expense, In peace a charge, in war a weak defence ; Stout once a-month, they march, a blustering band, And ever, but in time of need, at hand.

I fancy they halted just now, taking us, as they saw us on the brow of the hill, for a party of the sloop's ment and now they can distinguish that you wear petticoats, they are moving on again.'
They came on accordingly, and proved to be, as Claud Halcro had suggested, a patrol sent out to watch the motions of the pirates, and to prevent their attempting descent. in damage the country.

They heartily congratulated Claud Halcro, who was well known to more than one of them, upon his escape from captivity: and the commander of the party, while offering every assistance to the ladies, could not help condoling with them on the circumstances in which their father stood, linting, though in a dulicate and doubtful manner, the difticulties which might be in the way of his liberation.

When they arrived at Kirkwall, and obtained an audience of the provost and one or two of the magistrates, these difficinlties were more plainly insisted upon. "I'he "Halcyon" frigate is upon the coast,' said the provost : 'she was seen off Duncanshay Head ; and, though I have the deepest respect for Mr. Troil of Burgh-Westra, yet I shall be answerable to law if I release from prison the captain of this suspicions vessel, on account of the safety of any individual who may be muhappily endangered by his detention. This man is now known to be the heart and soul of these buccaniers, and am I at liberty to send him abruat, that he may plunder the country, or perhaps go fight the king: ship ? for he has impudence enough for anything.'
'Courage enough for anything, you mean, Mr. Provost,' said Minna, unable to restrain her displeasure.
'Why, you may call it as you please, Miss 'Troil,' said the worthy magistrate; 'but, in my opinion, that sort of courage which proposes to fight singly against two is little better than a kind of practical impudence.'
'But our father ?' said Brenda, in a tone of the most earnest entreaty - 'our father - the friend, I may say the father, of his country - to whom so many look for kinduess, aud so many for actual support - whose loss would be the extinction of a beacon in a storm - will you indeed weigh the risk which he rmins against such a trifling thing as letting an unfortunate man from prison, to seek his unhappy fate elsewhere?'
'Miss Brenda is right,' said Claud Halcro ; 'I am for let-a-be for let-a-be, as the boys say; and never fash abont a warraut of liberation, provost, but just take a fool's connsel, and let the goodman of the jail forget to draw his bolt on thie wicket, in leave a chink of a window open, or the like, and we shall he rid of the rover, and have the one best honest fellow in ()rkne? ur Letland on the lee-side of a bowl of punch with ns in five hours.'

The provost replied in nearly the same terms as befire, that he had the highest respect for Mr. Magnus Troil of Burgh-Westra, but that he could not suffer his cousideration for any individual, however respectable, to interfere with the discharge of his duty.

Minna then addressed her sister in a tone of caln and sarcastic displeasure. 'You forget,' she said, 'Brenda, that yon are talking of the safety of a poor insignificant udaller of Zetland to no less a person than the chief magistrato of the metropolis of Orkney - can you expect so great a person to condescend to such a tritting subject of consideration? It will be time enough for the provost to think of complying with the terms sent to him - for comply with them at length he both must and will - when the church of St. Magnus is beat down about his ears.'
' You may be angry with me, my pretty young lady,' said the good-humoured Provost 'lorfe, 'but I cannot be offended with you. The church of St. Magnus has stood many a day, and, I think, will outlive both you and me, much more yonder pack of unhanged dogs. And besides that your father is half an Orkneyman, and has both estate and friends among us, I would, I give you my word, do as much for a Zetlander in distress as I would for any one, excepting one of our own native Kirkwallers, who are doubtless to be preferred. And if you will take up your lodgings, here with my wife and myself, we will endeavour to show you,' continued he, 'that you are as welcone in Kirkwall as ever you could be in Lerwick or Scalloway.'
Minua deigned no reply to this goorl-humoured invitation ; but Brenda declined it in civil terms, pleading the necessity of taking up their abode with a wealthy widow of Kirkwall, a relation, who already expected them.
Halcro made another attempt to move the provost, but found him inexorable. 'The collector of the custons had already threatened,' he said, 'to inform against him for entering into treaty, or, as he called it, packing and peeling, with those strangers, even when it seened the only means of preventing a bloody affray in the town; and, should he now forego the advantage affurded by the imprisonment of Cleveland and the escape of the factor, he might incur something worse than censure.' 'The burden of the whole was, 'That he was sorry for the Udaller, he was sorry even for the lad Cleveland, who had some sparks of honour about him ; but his duty was imperious, and must be obeyed.' The provost then precluded farther argument by observing that another affair from Zetland called for his immediate attention. A gentlenan named Mertour:
residing at Jarlshof, had made complaint against Suailsfoot, the jagger, for having assisted a domestic of his in embezzling some valuable articles which had been deposited in his custoly, and he was about to take examination on the subject, and canse them to be restored to Mr. Mertoun, who was accountable fir them to the right owner.

In all this infornation there was nuthing which sectued interesting to the sisters excepting the word 'Mertoun,' which went like a dagger to the heart of Minua, when she recollecten! the eireumstances under which Murdannt Mertonn had di..appeared, and whieh, with ann emotion less painful, thongh still of a melaneholy nature, called a faint blush into Brenda's cheek, and a slight degree of moisture into her eye. But it was soon evident that the magistrate spoke nut of Mordann, but of his father; and the daughters of Magnus, little interested in his detail, took leave of the provost to go to their own lodgings.

When they arrived at their relation's, Minna made it her business to learn, by sueh inquiries as she could make withont exciting suspieion, what was the situation of the unfurtunate Cleveland, which she soon discovered to be exceedingly precariuns. The provost had not, indeed, committed him to close custody, as Claude Halero had antieipated, reeolleeting, perlaps, the favourable eircumstanees under whieh he had surrenderend himself, and loth, till the moment of the last necessity, altogether to break faith with him. But although left apparently at large, he was strietly watched by persons well armed anid ippointed for the purpose, who had directions to detain him by force, if he attempted to pass certain narrow precincts which were allotted to him. He was quartered in a strong roun within what is called the King's Castle, and at night his chamber door was loeked on the outside, and a sufficient guard momited to prevent his escape. He therefore enjoyed only the degree of liberty which the eat, in her cruel sport, is sometimes pleaved to permit to the mouse whieh she has clutched; and yet, such was the terror of the resources, the conrage, and ferocity of the pirate captain, that the provost was blamed by the collectur and many other sage citizens of Kirkwall for permitting lim to be at large upon any conditions.

It may be well believed that, under such cireunstances, Cleveland had no desire to seek iny place of public resort, emscious that he was the ubject of a mixed feeling of curiosity and terror. His favourite place of exercise, therefore, was the external aisles of the cathedral of St. Magnus, of which the castern end alone is fitted up for public worship. This solennn old edifice, having escaped the ravage which attended the first convulsions of the Refornnation, still retains some appearance of Episcopal dignity. T'bis place of worship is separated by a screen from the nave and western limb of the cross, and the whole is preserved in a state of cleanliness anul decency which might be well proposed as an example to the proud piles of Westminster and St. Paul's.
It was in this exterior part of the cathedral that Cleveland was permitted to walk, the rather that his gnards, by watching the single open entrance, had the means, with very little inconvenience to themselves, of preventing any possible attempt at escape. The place itself was well suited to his melancholy eircumstances. The lofty and vaulted roof rises upon ranges of Saxon pillars, of nassive size, four of which, still larger thm the rest, once supported the lofty spire, which, long sinee destroyed by accident, has been rebuilt upon a disproportion \(n\) and truncated plan. The light is admitted at the castern end through a lofty, well-proportioned, and richly-ornamented Gothic window; and the pavement is eovered with inseriptions, in different languages, distinguishing the graves of nothle Orcadians, whe have at different times been deposited within the sacred recincts.
Here walked Cleveland, musing over the events of a misspent life, which, it seemed probable, might be brought to a violent and shameful close, while he was yet in the prine of youth. 'With these dead,' he said, looking on the pavement, 'shall I soon be numbered; but no holy mant will speak a blessing, no friendly hand register an inscription, no prond descendant sculpture armorial bearings, over the grave of the pirate Cleveland. My whitening bones will swing in the gibhet irons, on some wild beach or lonely eape, that will be esteemen fatal and aceursed for my sake. 'The old mariner, as he passes the sound, will shaka his heal, and tell of my name and actions, as a warning to his younger conrades. But, Minna!-Mima: what will be thy thonghts when the news reaches thee? Would to God the tidings were drowned in the deepest whirlpool betwixt Kirkwall and Butgh-Westra, ere they came to her ear : and oh! would to Heaven that we had never met, since we never can meet again!'

He lifted up his eyes as he spoke, and Minaa 'Iroil stome before him. Her face was pale, and her hair dishevelled; lnit her look was composed and finm, with its usual expression of high-minded melancholy. She was still shrouded in the large mantle which she had assumed on leaving the vessel. . C'ereland's first emution was astonishment; his next was joy, nut ummixed with awe. He would have exclaimed - he would lave thrown himself at her feet; but she imposed at once silene and composure on him by mising her finger and saying, in a low but commanding accent - ' Be cautious - we are observel; there are men without - they let me enter with difticulty. I dare not remain long ; they wonld think - they might believe Oh, Cleveland! I have hazarded everything to save you!'
'T'o save me? Alas! poor Mima!' answered Cleveland, 'to save me is inapossible. "Gnough that I have seen you once more, were it but to say, "For ever farewell!"'
'We must indeed say farewell,' said Minna ; 'for fate, and your guilt, have divided us for ever. Cleveland, I have seen your associates; need I tell you more - need I say, that I know now what a pirate is?'
'You have been in the ruffians' power !' said Cleveland, with a start of agony. 'Did they presume
'Cleveland,' replied Minna, 'they presumed nothing: your name was a spell over them. By the power of that spell over these ferocious banditti, and by that alone, I was reminded of the qualities I once thought my Cleveland's!
'Yes,' said Cleveland, proudly, 'my name has and shall lave power over them, when they are at the wildest; anul, had they harned you by one rude word, they should lave found - Yet what do I rave about I I am a prisoner!’
'You shall be so no longer,' said Minna. 'Your safety - the safety of my dear father - all demand your instant freedom. I have formed a scheme for your liberty, which, boldly executel. cannot fail. The light is fading without; muffle yourself in my cloak, and you will easily pass the guards. I have given them the means of carousing, and they are deeply engaged. Haste to the Loch of Stennis, and hide yourself till day dawns: then make a smoke on the point, where the land, stretching, into the lake on each side, divides it nearly in two at the Bridge of Broisgar. Your vessel, which lies not far distant, will send a boat ashore. Do not hesitate an instant!'
'But you, Minna! Should this wild scheme succeed,' saill Cleveland, 'what is to become of \(y r^{\prime} 1\) ?'
'For my share in your escape,' a.swered the maiden, 'the honesty of my own intention will vindicate me in the sight of

Heaven ; and the safety of my father, whose fate depends on yours, will be iny excuse to man.'

In a few words, she gave him the history of their capture, and its consequenees. Cleveland cast up his eyes mud raised his hands to Ileaven, in thankfuness for the excape of the sisters from his evil companions, mud then hastily added - 'But yon ure right, Minns: I must fly at all rates - for your father's sake 1 mist fly. Here, then, we part - yet not, I trunt, for ever.'
'l'or ever!' answered a voice, that sommed as from a sepulechral vault.
They started, looked around them, and then gazed on each wther. It seemed as if the echoes of the building had returned C'leveland's last words, but the pronunciation was too emplatically accented.
'Yes, for ever!' said Noma of the Fitful Head, stepping forward from behind one of the massive Saxon pillars which support the roof' of the cathedral. 'Here meet the crimson foot and the crimson hand. Well for both that the womnd is healed whence that crimson was derived - well for both, but best for him who shed it. Here, then, you meet, and meet for the last time!'
' Not so,' said Cleveland, as if abont to take Minna's hand; ' to separate me from Minna, while I have life, must be the work of herself alone.'
'Away!' said Norna, stepping betwixt them - 'away with such idle folly ! Nourish no vain dreans of finture meetings: you part here, and you part for ever. The havk pairs not with the dove; guilt matches not with innocence. Minna 'Iroil, you look for the last time on this bold and criminal man. Cleveland, you behold Minna for the last time !'
'And dream you,' said Cleveland, indignantly, 'that your mmmnery imposes on me, and that \(I\) an among the fools that see inore than trick in your pretentel art ?'
'Forbear, Cleveland - forbear!' said Mima, her hereditary awe of Norna augmented by the circumstance of her sudden appearance. 'Oh, forbear! she is powerful - she is but too powerful. And do you, O Norna, remember my father's safety is linked with Cleveland's.'
'And it is well for Cleveland that I do remember it,' replied the pythoness ; 'and that, for the sake of one, I am here to airl both. You, with your childish purpose of passing one of his bulk and stature under the disguise of a few paltry folds. of wadnaal - what would your device have procured lim but invul. x ILI- \(\because 6\) stant restraint with bolt and sluackle? I will save him - I will place him in security on board lis hark. But let lim remmun. these shores for ever, and carry elsewhere the terrors al his vill. flag and his yet blacker name; for if the smin rises twiow inn finds hum still at anchor, hi blom be on his wiwn heand. Is. look to pach other - look the last look that I permit to triail affection, and say, if yon crm say it, "Parewell for ever :"
'Obey her,' stammered Minna - 'rennonstrato not, bit olrey her.'

Cleveland, grasping har hand and kissing it ardent'y, siill, but so low that she unly could hear it, 'Farewell, Minna, but not for ever.'
'And now, maiden, begone,' said Noma, 'and leave the rest to the Reim-kemiar.'
'(One word more,' said Minna, 'and I obey you. 'Tell me lut if I have caught aright your meaning. Is Mordannt Mertonn safe and recovered?
'Reeovered, and safo,' said Norna; 'else woe to the hallid that shed his blood!'

Minna slowly sought the door of the cathedral, and turned baek from time to time to look at the shadowy form of Nornia, and the stately and military figure of Cleveland, as they stonel together in the deepening gloom of the ancient cathedral. When she looked back a second time they were in motion, and Cleve land followed the matron as, with a slow and solemm step, slic glided towards one of the side aisles. When Minna looked harck a third time, their figures were no longer visible. She collected herself, and walked on to the eastern door by whieh she hail entered, and listened for an instant to the lard, who talkel together on the outside.
'The Zetland girl stays a long time with tais pirate fellow,' said one. 'I wish they have not more to stzak about than the rausom of her father.'
'Ay, truly,' answered another, 'the wenehes will have more 5 ympathy with a handsome young pirate than an old bed-ridilen burgher.'
T'Their diseourse was here interrupted by her of whom they were speaking; and, as if taken in the mamer, they pulled ofli their hats, made their awkward obeisanees, and looked wot a little e ’arrassed and confused.

Minua returned to the house where she lodged, much affectel.' yet, on the whole, pleased with the result of herexpedition, which seemed to put her father ont of danger, and assured her at ource of the escape of Cleveland and of the safoty of young Mordaunt. She hastened to communiente both pieces of intelligenee to Brenda, wha joined her in thankfulness. to llenven, and was herself welluigh persinaded to believo in Normis supermutural pretensions, sin much was she pleased with the manaer in whieh they had beon employed. Some time was spent in exelanging their mutual congratulations, and mingling tenrs of hope, mixed with apprehension, when, at a late hanr in the evenng, they were interrupted by Claud Halcro, who, full of a tidgeting sort of importance, not muminglel with fear, came to acyunint them that the prisoner, Cleveland, had disappeured from the cathedral, ill whieh he had been permitted to walk, and that the pruvosis, laving been informed that Mima was accessary to his flight, was coming, in a mighty quandary, to make iugniry inta the circumstances.
When the worthy magistrate arrived, Minua did not concenl from him her own wish that Cleveland should make his escape, as the only means whieh she saw of redeeming her father from imminent danger. But that she had any actmal accession to his Hight, she positively denied; and stated, "Ihant she had parted from Cleveland in the cathedral, more than two hours since, and then left him in company with a third person, whose name she did not conceive herself ohliged to eommunicate.'
' It is not needful, Miss Minna 'Troil,' answered Provost'Torfe; - for, although no person but this Captain Cleveland and yourself was seen to enter the kirk of St. Maynus this day, we know well enough your eonsin, old Clla 'Iroil, whom you Zetlanders call Norna of Fitful Head, has been eruising np and down, upon sea and land, and air, for what I know, in loats and on ponies, and it may be on broomsticks; and here has been her dumb Drow, too, coming and going, and playing the spy on every one; and a good suy he is, for he can hear everything, and tells nothing again, unless to lis mistress. And we know, besides, that she can euter the kirk when all the doors are fast, and has been seen there more than onee, God save us from the Evil Une: and so, without farther questions asked, I conclurle it was old Norna whom you left in the kirk with this slashing blade; and if so, they may catch them again that enn. I canlnot but say, however, pretty Mistress Mima, that yon Zellimil fulks seem to forget both law and Gospel, when you nse the help of witchc:aft to fetch delinquents out of a legal prison ; and the least that you, or your consin, or your father, can do, is to ine: influence with this wild fellow to go away as som as possible, without hurting the town or trade, and then there will te little harm in whit has chanced; for, Heaven knows, I did not seek the poor luil's life, so I could get my hands free of him without blame; and far less did I wish that, through his impris. onment, uny h.irm should come to worthy Magnus 'Iroil of Burgh-Westra
'I see s'lin 'he shoe pinches you, Mr. Provost,' said Claud Halcro, an I im sure I can answer for my friend Mr. 'Iroil, as well :- - 1 nself, that we will say and do all in our prwer with thi. \(\ldots, 1\), aptain Clevelund, to make him leave the mav: directly 'And I, 'mil! Minna, 'am so convincel that what you Tew,u to morrow , romes to House of Stemnis, if Mr. Haler nill give \(w 1\) that we ary a cuin him with your wish, and to use every inflanence ig ind net is unhappy man to leave the comntry.

Provost Torfe lowked upon her with some surprise. It is not every young woman,' he said, 'would wish to move cishit miles nearer to a band of pirates.'
'We run no risk,' said Claud Halcro, interfering. 'Illue House oî Stennis is strong; and my cousin, whom it belons- tin, has men and arms within it. The young ladies are an silfie there as in Kirkwall ; and much good may arise from tul cerly comunnication between Magnus 'I roil and his daughters. Anil happy an I to see that, in your case, my good old frient, is glorious John says -

> After much debate,

The man prevails above the inagistrate.'
The provost smiled, nordded his head, and indicated, a far as he thought he conld do with decency, how haply he should be if the 'Fortune's Favourite' and her disorlerly :mew would leave Orkney without further interference or vindenre "in either side. He could not authorise their being supplied from the shore, he said; but, either for fear or favour, they wimi certnin to get provisions at Stromuess. This pacitic macistrath' then took leave of Halcro and the two ladies, who proposel iti. next morning to transfer their residence to the H Stemnis, situated upon the banks of the salt-water lake if tha same name, and about four miles by water from the kuad of Stromness, where the rover's vessel was lying.

\section*{CHAPTER XXXVII}

Fly, Fleance, fly! Thou mayest encape.
Macbeth.

IT was one branch of the various arts by which Norna endeavoured to maintain her pretensions to supermutural powers, that she umale herseff familiarly und practically acquainted with ull the secret passes and recesses, whether natural or artificial, which she could hear of, whether by tradition or otherwise, and was, by such knowledge, often enabled to perform feat- which were otherwise unacemmitable. I'Ins, when she escuped from the tabernacle at Burgh-Westra, it was by a slisling boarl whieh covered a secret passage in the wall, known to none hut herself and Magnus, who, she was well assured, woulh not betray her. The profusion, also, with which she lavished a consinderable income, otherwise of 110 use to her, enabled her to procuse the earliest intelligence respecting whatever she desired to know. mind, at the same time, to secure all other assistance necessary to carry her plans into effect. (leveland, unn the present vecasion, had reason to admire both her sagacity and her resources.
Upon her applying a little forcible pressure, it in which was concealed under some rich wooden sculpture he sereen which divides the eastern aisle from the rext of the athedral, opened, and disclosed a dark, narvow, wiml passace, into which she entered, telling Cleveland, in in whisper, to milow, and be sure he shat the dowr behind hims. He uheyed, and followed her in darkncss and silenee, some nur demending steps. of the number of which she always appri-al him, smmetimes asemuling, and often turning at slort angles. The air wat more free than he could have expected, the assage being ventilated at different parts by msecn and ingenionsly contrived spiracles, which communicated with the open air. At length their hing course conded by Norna drawing aside a - iding pancl which, opening behind a wooden, or box-bed, as it is called in Scotland, admitted them into an ancient, but very mean, apartment, having a lattieed window and a groined roof. The furniture was mueh dilapidated; and its only ornaments were, on the one sile of the wall, a garland of faded ribbons, such as are nsed to decorate whale-vessels ; and, on the other, an escntcheon, bearing an earl's arms and coronet, surrounded with the usual emblems of mortality. The mattoek and spade, which lay in one corner, together with the appearance of an old man, who, in a rusty black coat and slouehed hat, sat reading by a table, annonnced that they were in the habitation of the chureh beadle, or sextom, and in the presence of that respectable functionary.

When his attention was attracted by the noise of the sliding panel, he arose, and, testifying much respeet, but no surprise, took his shadowy hat from his thin grey locks, and stom mincovered in the presence of Norna with an air of profomind humility.
'Be faithful,' said Norna to the old man, 'and beware yon show not any living mortal the secret path to the sanctuary.'

The old man bowed, in token of obedience and of thanks, for she put money in his hand as she spoke. With a falteriug voice, he expressed lis hope that she would remember lis son, who was on the Greenland voyage, that he night return fortunate and safe, as he had done last year, when he brought back the garland, pointing to that upon the wall.
' My cauldron shall boil, and my rhyme shall be said, in his behalf,' answered Norna. 'Waits Pacolet without with the horses ?'

The old sexn"1 assented, and the pythoness, commanlin! Cleveland to follow her, went through a back door of the apartment into a small garden, corresponding, in its desulate appearance, to the habitation they had just yuitted. The low turd broken wall easily permitted them to pass into another and larger garden, though not much better kept, and a gate, which was upon the latch, let them into a long and winding lane, through which, Norna having whispered to her companim that it was the only dangerous place o. their roall, they walked with a hasty pace. It was now nearly dark, and the inhabitants of the poor dwellings on either hiand had hetaken themselves to their houses. They saw only one woman, whin was looking from her door, but blessed herself, and retired into her house with precipitation, when she saw the tall figure of Norua stalk past her with long strides. The lane conducted them into the country, where the dumb dwarf waited with three horses, ensconced behind the wall of a deserted shed. On one of these Norna instantly seated herself, Cleveland mounted another, and, followed by Paeolet on the third, they moved sharply on throngh the darkness; the active and spirited animals on which they rode being of a breed rather taller than those reared in Zetland.

After more than anl hour's smart riding, in which Norna acted as guide, they stopped before a hovel, sio interly desolate in appearance that it resembled rather a cattle-shed than a cottage.
'Here you must remain till dawn, when your signal can be seen from your vessel,' said Norna, consirning the horses to the care of Pacolet, and lealing the way into the wretched hovel, whieh she presently illuninated by lighting the small iron lamp which she usually carried along with her. 'It is a \(\mu^{n}\) нr,', she said, 'but a safe, place of refuge; for, were we pursued hither, the earth would yawn and adnit ns into its recesses ere you were taken. For know, that tuis gromnd is sacred to the gods of old Valhalla. And now say, man of mischief and of blood, are you friend or foe to Norna, the sole priestess of these disowned deities?'
'How is it possitle for me to be your enemy ?' said Cleveland. 'Common gratitude - '
'Common gratitude,' said Norma, interrupting him, 'is a conmon word: and words are the common pay which fools accept at the hands of kuaves; but Norna must be requited by actions - by saerifiees.'
'Well, inother, name your request.'
'That you never seek to see Minua 'Troil again, and that you leave this coast in twenty-four hours,' answered Norna.
'It is impossible,' said the eaptain : 'I camot be soon enongh found in the sea-stores which the sloop must have.'
'You can. I will take care you are fully supplied ; and Caithuess and the Hebrides are not far distant-you can depart if yon will.'
'And why shoull I,' said Cleveland, 'if I will not?'
' Because your stay endangers others,' said Norna, 'and will prove your own destruction. Hear me with attention. lrom the first moment I saw you lyiner senseless on the sand beneath the cliffs of Sumburgh, I real that in your comitenance which linked you with me, and those who were dear to me; but whether for goorl or evil, was hidden from mine eyes. I aided in saving your life, in preserving your property. I aidel in doing so the very youth whom you have crossed in his demut affections - crossed by tale-bearing and slander.'
'I slander Mertoun !' exclaimed the captain. 'By Heaven, I scarce mentioned his name at Burgh-Westra, if it is that which you mean. The peddling fellow Bryce, meaning, 1 believe, t" be my friend, because he found something could be made by me, did, I have since heard, carry tattle, or truth, I know hut which, to the old man, which was confirmed by the repurt in the whole island. But for me, I scarce thought of him as a rival; else I had taken a more honourable way to rid myscii of him.'
'Was the point of your double-edged knife, directed to the bosom of an unarmed man, intended to carve out that mure hunuurable way '' said Norna, sternly.

Cleveland was conscience-struck, and remained silent for an instant, ere he replied, 'There, indeed, I was wrong; but he is, I thank Heaven, recuvered, and welcome to an honouralic se: tisfaction.'
'Cleveland,' said the pythoness, 'no! The fiend who entploys you as his implement is powerful ; but with me he shatl not strive. You are of that temperament which the dark liftuences desire as the tools of their agency - bold, haughty, and undaunted, unrestrained by principle, and having only in it, room a wild sense of indomitable pride, which such meen call honour. Such you are, and as such your course through life las been - onward and unrestrained, bloody and tempesturns. By me, however, it shall be controlled,' she concluded, stretch. ing out her staff, as if in the attitude of determined authority - 'ay, even although the demon who presides over it shoulit now arise in his terrors.'

Cleveland laughed scornfully. 'Good mother,' he said, 'reserve such language for the rude sailor that implores you tol le stow on him fair wind, or the poor fisherman that asks succe:- 1. his nets and lines. I have been long inaccessible buth to fiar and to superstition. Call forth your demon, if yon command one, and place him before me. IThe man that has spent ytinin company with incarnate devils can scarce dread the presem. of a disembodied fiend.'

This was said with a careless and desperate bitternes. if spirit which proved too powerfully energetic even for the delusions of Norna's insanity ; and it was with a hollow and tremulous voice that she asked Cleveland - ' For what, then, do you hold me, if you deny the power that I have bought so dearly \(\mathbf{1}^{\prime}\)
'Yon have wisdom, mother,' said Cleveland ; 'at least you have art, and art is power. I hold you for one who knows how to steer upon the current of events, bnt I deny your power to change its coursc. Do not, therefore, waste words in quoting terrors for which I have no feeling, but tell me at once, wherefore you would have me depart?'
'Because I will have you see Minna no more,' answered Nurna. 'Because Minna is the destined bride of him whom men call Mordaunt Mertoun. Because, if you depart not within twenty-four hours, utter destruction awaits you. In these plain words there is no metaphysical delusion. Answer me as plainly.'
'In as plain words, then,' answered Cleveland, 'I will not leave these islands - not, at least, till I have seen Minna 'Troil ; and never shall your Mordaunt possess her while I live.'
'Hear him!' said Noma - 'hear a mortal man spurn at the means of prolonging his life: Hear a sinful - a nost siuful being, refuse the time which fate yet affords for repentance, and for the salvation of an immortal soul! Behold him how he stands erect, bold and confident in his youtliful strength and courage! My eyes, unused to tears - even my eyes, which have so little cause to weep for him, are blinded with sorrow, to think what so fair a form will be ere the second sun set!'
'Mother,' said Cleveland, firmly, yet with some touch of sorrow in his voice, 'I in part understand your threats. You know more than we do of the course of the "Halcyon," perhaps lave the means - for I acknowledge you have shown wonderful skill of combination in such affairs - of direcing her cruise our way. Be it so, I will not depart from my. purpose for that risk. If the frigate comes hither, we have still our shoal water to trust to ; and I think they will scarce cut us out with boats, as if we were a Spanish xebeck. I am therefore resolved I will hoist once more the flag under which I have cruised, avail ourselves of the thousand chances which have helped us in greater odds, and, at the worst, fight the vessel to the very last; and, when mortal man can do no more, it is but suapping a pistol in the powder-room, and, as we have lived, so will we die.'
There was a dead panse as Cleveland ended ; and it was broken by his resuming, in a softer tone - 'You have heard my answer, mother; let us debate it no further, but part in peace. I would willingly leave you a remembrance, that you nay not forget a poor fellow to whom your services have been useful, and who parts with you in no unkindness, however unfrieudly you are to his dearest interests. Nay, do not shm to aterep such a trille,' he said, forcing upon Noma the little silver enchased box which had been once the subject of strife betwist Mertoun and him ; 'it is not for the sake of the metal, which I know you value not, but simply as a menorial that you hatw met hin of whom many a strange tale will hereafter be toll in the seas which he has traversed.'

\section*{'IHE PIRATE}
'I accept your gift,' said Norna, 'in token that, if I have in aught been accessary to your fate, it was as the involumtary and grieving agent of other powers. Well did you say we dirent not the current of the events which hurry us forward, :lnil render our utmost efforts unavailing; even as the wells \({ }^{1}\), if 'I'uftiloe can wheel the stontest vessel round and rumul in despite of either sail or steerage. Pacolet!' she exclaimed in a louder voice - 'what, ho! Pacelot!'

A large stone, which lay at the side of the wall of the hovel, fell as she sprke, and to Cleveland's surprise, if not somewhit to his fear, the misshapen form of the dwarf was seen, like some overgrown reptile, extricating himself out of a subterranean passage, the entrance to which the stone had coverel.

Norna, as if impressed by what Cleveland had said on the subject of her supermatural pretensions, was so far from endeavouring to avail herself of this opportunity to enforce them, that she hastened to explain the phenomenon he had witnessel.
'Such passages,' she said, 'to which the entrances are cart'fully concealed, are frequently found in these islands - the places of retreat of the ancient inhabitants, where they somsht refuge from the rage of the Normans, the pirates of that diay: It was that you might avail yourself of this, in case of need, that I brought you hither. Should you observe signs of pursuit, you may either lurk in the bowels of the earth until it has passed by, or escape, if you will, through the farther entrance near the lake, by which Pacolet entered but nuw. And now farewell! Think on what I have said; for as sure ics you now move and breathe a living man, so surely is your doom fixed and sealed, muless, within four-and-twenty homrs, you have doubled the Burgh Head.'
'Farewell, mother!' said Cleveland, as she departed, bending a look upon him, in which, as he conld perceive by the lamp, sorrow was mingled with displeasure.

\footnotetext{
\({ }^{1}\) See Wells and Waves. Note 45.
}

The interview, which thus concluded, left a strong effeet even upon the mind of Cleveland, acenstomed as he was to imminent dangers and to hair-brealth escapes. He in vain attempted to shake off the impression left ly the words of Noma, which he felt the more powerfin, becanse they were in a great measnre divested of her wonted mystical tone, which he contemned. A thousand times he regrettel that he harl from time to time delayed the resolution, whieh he had long adopted, to quit his dreadful and dangerous trade ; and as often he firmly determined that, could he but see Minna 'Iroil once more, were it but for a last farewell, he would leave the sloon as soon as his comrades were extricated from their perilons: situation, endeavour to obtain the benefit of the king's pardon, and distinguish limself, if possible, in some more honourable course of warfare.
'Ihis resolution, to which he again and again pledged himself, had at length a sedative effeet on his mental perturbation, and, wrapt in his eloak, he enjoyed, for a time, that imperfeet refose which exhausted nature demands as her tribute, even from those who are situated on the verge of the most imminent danger. But, how far soever the guilty may satisfy his own mind and stupify the feelings of remorse by such a conditional repentance, we may well question whether it is not, in the sight of Heaven, rather a presumptuous aggravation than an expiation of his sins.
When Cleveland awoke, the grey dawn was already ningling with the twilight of an Orcalian night. He found himself on the verge of a beautiful sheet of water, whieh, elose by the place where he had rested, was nearly divided by two tongues of land that approach each other from the opposing sides of the lake, and are in some degree mited by the Brilge of Broisgar, a long canseway, containing openings to pernit the How and reflux of the tide. Behin! him, and fronting to the bridge, stood that remarkabie semieirele of huge muright stones which has no rival in Britain, exeepting the inimitable in" 11 . ment at Stonehenge. These immense blocks of stome, al. of them above twelve feet, and several being even fourteen in fifteen feet in height, stood aromin the pirate in the grey light of the dawning like the phanton forms of antediluvian giants, who, shronded in the habiliments of the deanl, came to revisit, by this pale light, the earth which they had plagued by their oppression and polluted by their sins, till they brought down upon it the vengeanee of long-sulfering Heaven. \({ }^{1}\)

\footnotetext{
1 See The Standing Stones of Steunis, Nute 46.
}

Cleveland was less interested by this singular monument of antiquity than by the distant view of Stromness, whieh he could as yet scarce discover. He lost no time in striking a light, by the assistance of one of his pistols, and some wet fern supplied hin with fuel sufficient to make the appointed signal. It hall been earnestly watched for on board the sloop; for (Gofie's; incapacity became daily more apparent; and even his nunt steady allherents agreed that it would be best to subnit to Cleveland's command till they got back to the West Indies.

Bunce, who came with the boat to bring off lis fiveurite commander, danced, cursed, shouted, and spouted for joy when he saw hin once more at freedom. 'They had alrealy,' he said, 'made some progress in victualling the sloop, and they might have made more but for that drunken old swab (iuffe, who minded nothing but splicing the main-brace.'

The boat's crew were inspired with the same enthusiasin, and rowed so hard that, although the tide was against them, and the air of wind failed, they soon placed Clevelan! once more on the quarter-deck of the vessel which it was his misfortune to command.

The first exercise of the captain's power was to make known to Magnus Troil that he was at full freedom to depart ; that he was willing to make him any compensation in his power fior the interruption of his voyage to Kirkwall ; and that Captain Cleveland was desirous, if agreeable to Mr . Troil, to pay his respects to him on board his brig, thank him for former favours, and apologise for the circumstances attending his detention.
To Bunce, who, as the most civilised of the crew, Cleveland had entrusted this message, the old plain-dealing Udaller made the following answer : 'Tell your captain that I should be glail to think he had never stopped any one upon the high sea save such as have suffered as little as I have. Say, too, that, if we are to continue friends, we shall be most so at a distance : fir ilike the sound of his cannon-balls as little by sea as he winlid like the whistle of a bullet by land from my rifle-gnn. Say, in a word, that I am sorry I was mistaken in him, and that he would have done better to have reserved for the Spaniard the usage he is bestowing on his countrymen.'
'And so that is your message, old Snapcholerick?' said Bunce. 'Now, stap my vitals if 1 have not a mind to do your errand for you over the left shoulder, and teach you more respect for gentlemen of fortune! But I won't, and chiefly for the sake of your two pretty wenches, not to mention my old friend Claud Halcro, the very visage of whom brought back all the old days of scene-shifting and candle-snuffing. So good morrow to you, Gaffer Seal's-cap, and all is said that need pass between us.'
No sooner did the boat put off with the pirates, who left the brig and now returned to their own vessel, than Magnus, in order to avoid reposing unnecessary confidence in the honour of these gentlemen of fortune, as they called themselves, got his brig under way; and, the wind coming favourably round, and increasing as the sun rose, he crowded all sail for Scalpu Flow, intending there to disembark and go by land to Kirkwall, where he expected to meet his daughters and his friend Claud Halcro.

\section*{CHAPTER XXXIX}

Now, Emma, now the last reflection make, What thou wouldat follow, what thou must forsake. By our ill-omen'd stars and adverse Heaven, No middle object to thy choice is given.

Henry aul Ëmma.

THE sun was high in heaven; the boats were busily fetching off from the shore the promised supply if provisions and water, which, as many fishing skiffis were employed in the service, were got on board with mexpected speed, and stowed away by the crew of the sloop with equal despatch. All worked with good will; for all, save Cleveland himself, were weary of a coast where every noment increased their danger, and where, which they esteened a worse misfortune, there was no booty to be woll. Bunce and Derrick took the immediate direction of this duty, while Cleveland, walking the deck alone, and in silence, only interfered from time to time, to give some order which circunstances required, and then relapsed into his own sad reflections.
There are two sorts of men whom situations of guilt, and terror, and commotion bring forward as prominent agents. The first are spirits so naturally moulded and fitted for deeds in horror that they stalk forth from their lnrking-places like actual demons, to work in their native element, as the hideous apparition of the Bearded Man came forth at Versailles, on the memorable 5th October 1789, the delighted executioner of the victims delivered up to hin: by a bloodthirsty rabble. But Cleveland belonged to the second class of these unfortunate beings, who are involved in evil rather by the crosurrence of external circumstances than by natural inclinati. being, indeed, one in whom his first engaging in this law wo mote of life, as the follower of his father, nay, perhaps, even his pursuing it as his father's avenger, carried witl it something of mitigation and apology ; one also who often convidered his guilty situation with horror, and had made repeated, though ineffectual, efforts to escape from it.
Such thoughts of remorse were now rolling in his mind, and he may be forgiven if recollections of Minma mingled with and aided them. He looked around, too, on his mates, and, prolligate and hardened as he knew them to be, he conld not think of their paying the penalty of his obstinaey. 'We shall loe realy to sail with the ebb tide,' he suid to himself; ' why should 1 endanger these men by detaining them till the hour of danger predieted by that singular woman shall arrive? Her intelligence, howsoever acquired, has been always strangely accurate ; and her warining was as solemm as if a mother were to apprise an erring son of his crimes and of his approaching punishment. Besides, what chance is there that I can again see Minna? She is at Kirkwall, doubtless, and to hold my course thither would be to steer right upon the rocks. No, I will not endanger these poor fellows : I will sail with the ebl tide. On the desolate Hebrides, or on the north-west coast of ireland, I will leave the vessel and return lither in some disguise ; yet, why should I return, since it will perhaps be only to see Minna the bride of Mordaunt ? No ; let the vessel sail with this ebb tide without me. I will abide and take my fate.'

His meditations were here interrnpted by Jack Bunce, who, hailing him noble captain, said they were ready to sail when he pleased.
'When you please, Bunce; for I shall leave the command with you, and go ashore at Stromness,' said Cleveland.
'You shall do no such matter, by Heaven!' answered Bunce. 'The command with me, truly ! and how the devil an I to get the crew to obey me? Why, even Diek Fletcher rides rusty on we now and then. You know well enough that, without you, we shall be all at each other's throats in half an hour; and, if you desert us, what a rope's end does it signify whether we are destroyed by the king's eruisers or by each other? Come -come, noble captain, there are blaek-eyed girls enongh in the world, but where will you find so tight a sea-boat as the little "Favourite" here, mamed as she is with a set of tearing lals,

> Fit to disturb the peace of all the world, And rule it when 't is wildest?'
- You are a preeious fool, Jack Bunce,' sail Cleveland, halfangry, and, in despite of himself, half-divertel, by the false tones and exaggerated gesture of the stage-struck pirate.
' It may be so, noble captain,' answered Bunce, 'and it may be that I have my comrades in my folly. Here are you, nuw, going to play All for Love, and the World well Last, anil yet you cannot bear a harmless bounce in blank verse. Well, l ciul talk prose for the matter, for I have news enough to tell - and strange news, too - ay, and stirring news to boot.'
'Well, prithee deliver them - to speak thy own caut - like a man of this world.'
'The Stromness fishers will accept nothing for their provisions and trouble,' said Bunce - 'there is a wonder for you!"
'And for what reason, I pray I' said Cleveland; 'it is the first time I have ever heard of cash being refused at a seapurt.'
'True! they commonly lay the charges on as thick as if they were caulking. But here is the matter. The owner of the brig yonder, the father of your fair Imoinda, stands puynanter, by way of thanks for the civility with which we treated his daughters, and that we may not meet our due, as he calls it, on these shores.'
'It is like the frank-hearted old Udaller!' said Cleveland. 'But is he then at Stromness? I thought he was to have crossed the island for Kirkwall.'
'He did so purpose,' said Bunce ; 'Lut more folks than Kings Duncan change the course of their vovage. He was no somin'r ashore than he was met with by a meddling old witch of the.e.e parts, who has her finger in every man's pie, and by her connsel he changed his purpose of going to Kirkwall, and lies at auchor: for the present in yonder white house, that you may see with your glass up the lake yonder. I an tuld the old woman clubbed also to pay for the sloop's stores. Why she should shell out the boards I cannot conceive an idea, except that she is said to be a witch, and may befriend us as so many devils:
'But who told you all this ?' said Cleveland, withont using his spy-glass, or seeming so much interested in the news as his comrade hard expected.
' Why,' replied Bunce, 'I made a trip ashore this mornin! to the village, and had a can with an old acquaintance, win had been sent by Master Troil to look after matters, :mal| fished it ail out of him, and more, too, than I ann desirmis if relling you, noble captain.'
'And who is your intelligencer?' said Cleveland ; 'lits he got no name?'
'Why, he is an old, fiddling, foppish acquaintance of mine criled Halero, if you m'ist know,' said Bunce.
'Halero !' echoed Cleveland, his eyen sparkling with surprise 'Cland Halcro? why, he went ashore at luganess with Minua and her sister. Where are they?'
' Why, that is just what 1 did not want to tell yon,' replied the contidant ; 'yet hang we if J can help it, for I cannot baulk a tine situation. That start had a fine effect. Oh ay, and the spy-glass is turned on the Honse of Stemis now! Well, youler they are, it mu \(t\) be confessed - indiffercutly well guarded, two. some of the old witch's people are cone over from that mountain of an island - Hoy, as they call it ; and the old gentleman las got some fellows muler arms himself. But what of all that, noble captain ! give you but the word, and we snap up the wenches to-night - elap them under hatches - man the capstem by daybreak - up topsails - and sail with the morning tide.'
'You sicken me with your villany,' said Cleveland, turning away from him.
'Cmph! villany, and sicken you!' said Bunce. 'Now, pray, what have I said but what has been done a thonsand times by gentlenen of fortune like ourselves?'
'Mention it not agaiu,' said Cleveland; then took a turn along the deck, in deep meditation, and, coming baek to Bunce, took him by the hand, and said, 'Jack, I will see ber once more.'
' With all my heart,' sail Bunce, sullenly.
'Ouce more will I see her, and it may be to abjure at her feet this cursed trade, and expiate my offences
'At the gallows!' said Bunce, completing the sentence. ' With all my heart ! confess and be hanged is a most reverend proverb.'
'Nay — but, dear Jack !' sail Cleveland.
'Dear Jack!' answered Bunce, in the same sullen tone, 'a dear sight you have been to dear Jack. But hold your own course; I have done with caring for you for ever. I should but sicken you with my villanons comesels.'
' Now, minst I soothe this silly fellow as if he were a spoiled child,' said Cleveland, speakin! at Bunce, but not to him; 'and yet he has sense conough, und bravery enough, too ; and, one would think, kindness enough to know that men don't pick their words during a gale of wind.'
'Why, that's true, Clement;' said Bunce, 'and there is my hand upon it. And, now I think upon't, you shall have your last interview, for it's out of my line to prevent a parting

\footnotetext{
rul. XIII-27
}
meene ; and what signifios a tide ? We can sail by to-morrow's ebb as well as by this.'

Cleveland sighed, for Norna's prediction rushed on his minul ; but the opportunity of a last meeting with Minun was \(t(x)\) tempting to te resigned either for presentiment or prediction.
'I will go presently ashore to the place where they all are, said Bunce; 'aind the payment of these stores shall serve me for a pretext; and I will carry any letters or message from you to Minna with the dexterity of a valet-de-chamlire.'
'But they heve armed men; you may be in danger,' said Cleveland.
' Not a whit - not a whit,' replied Bunce. 'I protected the wenches when they were in my power; I warrant their fither will neitller wrong me nor see me wronged.'
'You say true,' said Cleveland, 'it is not in his nature. I will instantly write a note to Minna.' And he ran lown tu the cahin for that purpose, where he wasted much paper ere, with a trembling hand and throbbing heart, he achievel such : letter as he hoped might prevail on Minna to permit him a farewell meeting on the succeeding morming.
His adherent, Bunce, in the meanwhile, sought out Fletcher. of whose support to second any motion whatever he acconnted himself perfectly sure ; and, followed by this trusty sitellite, he intruded himself on the awful presence of Hawkins, the boatswain, and Derrick, the quarter-master, who were regaling themselves with a can of rumbo, after the fatiguing duty of the day.
'Here comes he can tell nss', said Derrick. 'So, Master Licatenant, for so we must call you now, I think, let ns have a peep into your counsels. When will the anchor be a-trip!'
'When it pleases Heaven, Master Quarter-Master,' answered Bunce, 'for I know no more than the stern-post.'
' Why, d-n my bnttons,' said Derrick, 'do we nut weigh this tide?'
'Or to-morrow's tide, at farthest?' said the loatswain. 'Why, what have we been slaving the whole company for, t" get all these stores aboard \(3^{\prime}\)
'Gentlemen,', said Bunce, 'you are to know that Cupil has laid our captain on board, carried the vessel, and nailed down his wits under latches.'
'What sort of play-stuff is all this ?' said the lnatswain, grufly. 'If you have anything to tell us, say it in a word, like a man.'
'Howsomdever,' said Fleteher, 'I always think Jack Bnnce speaks like a man, and acts like a man too ; and no, d'ye see -
- Hold your peace, dear Dick - hest of bully-bueks, lee silent,' said Bunee. 'Gentlemen, in one word, the enptain is in love.'
'Why, now, only think of that!' said the boatswinin; 'not but that I have beon in love as often as any man, when the ship was laid up.'
'Woll, but,' eontinued Bnuee, 'Cuptain Cleveland is in love. Yes-Prinee Volseius is in love; mil, thongh that's the cne for laughing on the stage, it is min lamghing matter here. He expects to meet the girl to-murrow, for the last time; and that, we all know, leads to another meeting, and mother, and so on till the "Halcyon" is down on ns, and then we uay look for more kicks than halfpenee.'
' By -,' said the boatswain, with a sonnding onth, 'we 'll have a mutiny, and not allow him to go ashore - eh, Derrick?'
'And the lest way too,' sail Derrick
'What d' ye think of it, Juck Bunce !' saill Pleteher, in whose ears this counsel sonndel very sagely, but who still bent a wistful look upon his companion.
'Why, look ye, gentlemen,' saill Bunce, 'I will mutiny none, and stap \(m y\) vitals if any of yon shall!
'Why, then I won't for one,' said Fletcher ; 'but what are we to do, since howsondever
'Stopper your jaw, Diek, will you?' said Bunce. 'Now, twatswain, I am partly of your mind, that the captain must he brought to reason ly a little wholesome force. But you ail know he has the spirit of a lion, and will do nothing unles. in. is allowed to hold on his own eourse. Well, I'll go ashore me: make this appointment. The girl comes to the rendezvous in the mornimg, and the captain goes ashore; we take a good boat's erew with us, to row against tide and current, and we will be realy at the signal to jnup, ashore and hring off the eaptain and the girl, whether they will or 111. The pet-child will nut quarrel with us, since we bring off his whirligig along with him ; and if he is still fractions, why, we will weigh anehor without his orders, and let him come to his senses at leisure, and know his friends another time.'
'Why, this has a face with it, Maste: Derrick,' said Hawkius.
'Jaek Bunce is always right,' sail Fletcher ; 'lowsomdever, the captain will shoot some of us, that is certain.'

\section*{THE PIRATE}
'Hold your jaw, Dick,' said Bunce ; 'pray, who the devil cares, do you think, whether you are shot or hanged ?'
'Why, it don't much argufy for the matter of that,' replied Dick; 'howsomdever
'Be quiet, I tell you,' said his inexorable patroi, • and hear me out. We will take him at unawares, so that he shall neither have time to use cutlass nor pops; and I myself, for the dear love I bear him, will be the first to lay him on his back. 'There is a nice tight-going bit of a pinnace that is a consort of this chase of the captain's ; if I have an opportunity, I'll snap her up on my own account.'
' Yes - yes,' said Derrick, 'let you alone for keeping on the look-out for your own comforts.'
'Faith, nay,' said Bunce, 'I only snatch at them when they come fairly in my way, or are purchased by dint of my own wit; and none of you could have fallen on such a plan as this. We shall have the captain with us, head, hand, and heart and all, besides making a scene fit to finish a comedy. Su I will go ashore to make the appointment, and do you possess some of the gentlemen who are still sober, and fit to be trusted, with the knowledge of our intentions.'

Bunce, with his friend Fletcher, departed accordingly, and the two veteran pirates remained looking at each other in silence, until the boatswain spoke at last. 'Blow me, Derrick, if I like these two daffadandilly young fellows: they are not the true breed. Why, they are no more like the rovers I have known than this sloop is to a first-rate. Why, there was old Sharpe, that read prayers to his ship's company every Sunday, what would he have said to have heard it proposed to bring two wenches on board?'
'And what would tough old Black Beard have said,' answered his companion, 'if they had expected to keep them to theinselves? They deserve to be made to walk the plank for their impudence ; or to be tied back to back and set a-diving, and I care not how soon.'
"Ay, but who is to command the ship, then ?' said Hawkins.
'Why, what ails you at old Goffe?' answered Derrick.
'Why, he has sucked the monkey so long and so often,' said the boatswain, 'that the best of him is buffed. He is little better than an! old woman when he is sober, and he is roaring mad when he is drunk; we have had enough of (ioffe.'
'Why, then, what d' ye say to yourself, or to me, boatswain?', demanded the que ter-master. 'I am content to toss up for it.'
'Rot it, no,' answered the boatswain, after a moment's consideration; 'if we were within reach of the trade winds, we might either of us make a shift; but it will take all Cleveland's navigation to get us there; and so, I think, there is nothing like Bunce's project for the present. Hark, he alls for the boat; I must go on deck and have her lowered for his honour, d--n his eycs.'

The boat was lowered accordingly, made its voyage up the lake with safety, and landed Bunce within a few hundred yards of the old mansion-house of Stennis. Upon arriving in front of the house, he found that hasty measures had been taken to put it in a state of defence, the lower windows being barricaded, with places left for use of musketry, and a ship-gun being placed so as to command the entrance, which was besides guarded by two sentinels. Bunce demanded admission at the gate, which was briefly and unceremoniously refused, with an exhortation to him, at the same time, to be gone about his business before worse came of it. As he continued, however, importunately to insist on seeing some one of the family, and stated his business to be of the most urgent nature, Claud Halcro at length appeared, and, with more peevishncss than belonged to his usual mauner, that admirer of glorious John expostnlated with his old acquaintance upon his pertinacious folly.
'You are,' he said, 'like foolish moths flinttering about a candle, which is sure at last to consume you.'
'And you,' said Bunce, 'are a set of stingless drones, whom we can smoke out of your defences at our pleasure, with half a dozen of hand-grenades.'
'Smoke a fool's head!' said Halcro; 'take my advice, and mind your own matters, or there will be those upon yon will smoke you to purpose. Either begone or tell me in two words what you want; for you are like to receive no welcome here save from a blunderbuss. We are men enough of ourselves; and here is young Mordaunt Mertoun come from Hoy, whom your captain so nearly murdered.'
'Tush, man,' said Bunce, 'he did but let ont a little malapert blood.'
'We want no such phlebotomy here,' said Claud Halcro ; 'and, besides, your patient turns out to be nearer allied to us than cither you or we thought of; so you may think how little welcome the captain or any of his crew are like to be here.'
'Well, but what if I bring money for the stores sent on board ?'
'Keep it till it is asked of you,' said Halcro. 'There are two bad paymasters - he that pays too soon, and he that does nut pay at all.'
'Well, then, let me at least give our thanks to the dmur,' said Bunce.
'Keep them, too, till they are asked for,' answered the puet.
'So this is all the welcome I havc of you for old acquaintance' sake ?' said Bunce.
'Why, what can I do for you, Master Altamont?' sail Halero, somewhat moved. 'If young Mordaunt had lad his. own will, he wonld have welcomed you with "the red Burgumly, No. 1000." Por God's sake begone, else the stage directiom will be, "Enter guard, and seize Altamont."
'I will not give you the trouble,' suid Bunce, 'but will makr. my exit instantly. Stay a moment; I had almost forgot that I have a slip of paper for the tallest of your girls there - Nimina, ay, Minna is her name. It is a farewell from Captain Clevelanil : you cannot refuse to give it her ?'
'Ah, poor fellow !' said Halcro ; 'I comprehend - I comprehend. Farewell, fair Armida -

> 'Mid pikes and 'mid bullets, 'mid tempest and fire, The danger is less than in hopeless desire !

Tell me but this - is there poetry in it ?'
'Chokeful to the seal with song, sonnet, and elegy,' answere.. Bunce ; 'but let her have it cantiously and secretly.'
'Tush, man! teach me to deliver a billet-doux :-me, who have been in the Wits' Coffce-house, and have seen all the toasts of the Kit-Cat Club! Minna shall have it, then, for old acquaintance' sake, Mr. Altamont, and for your taptain's sake too, who has less of the core of devil about him than his trade requires. There can be no harm in a farewell letter.'
'Farewell, then, old boy, for ever and a day!' said Bunce: and seizing the poet's hand, gave it so hearty a gripe that he left him roaring and shaking his fist, like a dog when a hot cinder has fallen on his foot.

Leaving the rover to return on board the vessel, we remain with the family of Magnus Troil, assembled at their kinsmani: mansion of Stennis, where they maintained a constant anil careful watch against surprise.

Mordaunt Merton had been received with much kindness hy Magnus Troil, when he came to his assistance, with a small party of Norna's dependants, placed by her under his command. The Cdaller was easily satisfied that the reports instilled into his ears by the jagger, zealous to augnent his favour towards his more profitable customer, Cleveland, by diminishing that of Mertonn, were without foundation. They had, indeed, been confirmed by the good Lady Glowrowrimn and by common fime, both of whom were pleased to represent Mordanut Mertonn as an arrogant pretender to the favour of the sisters of Burgh-Westra, who ouly hesitated, sultan-like, on whom he should bestows the handkerchief. But common fame, Magnns considered, was a common liar, and he was sometimes disposed, where scandal was concerned, to regard the good Lady Glowrowrum as rather an nucommon specimen of the same genus. He therefore received Mordaunt once more into full favour, listened with much surprise to the claim which Norna laid to the young man's duty, and with no less interest to her intention of surrendering to him the considerable property whieh she had inherited from her father. Nay, it is even probable that, though he gave no immediate answer to her hints concerning an union betwixt his eldest daughter and her lieir, he might think such an aliance recominended as well by the young man's personal merits as by the chance it gave of renniting the very large estate which had been divided betwixt his own father and that of Norna. At all events, the Udaller received his young friend with much kindness, and he and the proprietor of the mansion joined in entrusting to him, as the youngest and most active of the party, the charge of commanding the night-watch, and relieving the sentinels around the House of Stennis.

\section*{CHAPTER XL}

Of an outlawe, this is the lawe That men him take and bind, Without pitie hangil to be, And waive with the wind.

The Ballad of the Nut-Brown Muid.

MOKDAUNT had caused the sentinels who had been יni duty since midnight to be relieved ere the peep of day, and having given directions that the gnard should be again changed at sumise, he had retired to a small parlour, and, placing his arms beside him, was slumbering in in easy-chair, when he felt himself pulled by the watch-chaik in which he was enveloped.
'Is it sunrise,' said he, 'already?' as, starting up, he dis. covered the first beams lying level upon the horizon.
'Mordaunt!' said a voice, every note of which thrillet tw his heart.

He turned his eyes on the speaker, and Brenda 'I'ruil, to his joyful astonishment, stood before him. As he was about t. address her eagerly, he was checked by observing the sigur of sorrow and discomposure in her pale cheeks, trembling lipe, innl brimful eyes.
'Mordaunt,' she said, 'you must do Minna and me a favour : you must allow us to leave the house quietly, and with int alarming any one, in order to go as far as the Standing Stme'; of Stennis.'
'What freak can this be, dearest Brenda ?' said Mordamt. much amazed at the request - 'some Orcadian observance of superstition, perhaps; but the time is too dangerous, anl my charge from your father too strict, that I should pernit you tw pass without his consent. Consider, dearest Brenda, I an a soldier on duty, and must obey orders.'
'Mordaunt,' said Brenda, 'this is no jesting matter : Mima'reason - nay, Mima's life, depends on your giving ns this prymission.'
'And for what purpose ?' suil Mordaunt ; 'let me at least know that.'
'For a wild and a desperate purpose,' replied Brenda. 'It is that she may meet Cleveland.'
'Cleveland:' said Mordaunt. 'Shonld the villain come ashore, he siall be weleomed with a shower of rifle-balls. Let me within a hundred yards of him,' he added, grasping his pieee, 'and all the misehief he has done me shall be balaneed with an ounce bullet!'
'His death will drive Minua frantic,' said Brenda ; 'and he who injures Minna, Brenda will never again look upon.'
'This is madness - raving madness !'said Mordaunt. 'Consider your honour - consider your dity.'
'I can consider nothing but Minna's danger,' said Brenda, hreaking into a flood of tears: 'lier furmer illhess was nothing to the state she has been in all night. She holds in her hand his letter, written in charaeters of fire rather than of ink, imploring her to see him, for a last farewell, as she would save a mortal body and an inmortal soul ; pledging himself for her safety ; and deelaring no power shall foree him from the eoast till he has seen her. You must let us pass.'
'It is impossible !' replied Mordannt, in great perplexity. 'This ruffian has imprecations cnough, doubtless, at his tingers' cunds ; but what better pledge has he to offer? I cannot permit Mimia to go.'
'I suppose,' said Brenda, somewhat reproaehfully, while she dried her tears, yet still continued sobbing, 'that there is something in what Norna spoke of hetwixt Mina and yon: and that you are too jealous of this poor wretch to allow him even to speak with her an instant befure his departure.'
'You are unjust,' said Mordamut, hurt, and yet somewhat flattered, by her suspicions - ' you are as minnst as you are imprudent. You know - you camot but know - that Slima is chiefly dear to me as your sister. Tell me, Brenda - and tell me truly - if I aid you in this folly, have you no suspicion of the pirate's faith ?'
' No, none,' said Brenda ; 'if I had any, do you think I would urge you thins? He is wild and mhappy, but I think we may in this trust him.'
'Is the appointed place the Standing Stones, and the time daybreak?' again demanded Mordannt.
'It is, and the time is come,' said Brenda; 'for Heaven's sake, let us depart!'
'I will myself, said Mordaunt, 'relieve the sentinel at the front door for a few minutes, and suffer you to pass. Yon will not protract this interview, so full of danger \(1^{\prime}\)
'We will not,', said Brenda ; 'and you, on your part, will nut avail yourself of this unhappy man's venturing hither to harm or to seize him 1'
'Rely on my honour,' said Mordaunt. 'He shall have nf harm unless he offers any.'
'Then I go to call my sister,' said Brenda, and quickly left the apartment.

Mordaunt considered the matter for an instant, and then going to the sentinel at the front door, he desired lim to rum instantly to the main-gnard, and order the whole to turn ont with their arns; to see the order obeyed, and to return when they were in readiness. Meantime, he himself, he said, wonld remain upon the post.

During the interval of the sentinel's absence, the front duor was slowly opened, and Mima and Brenda appeared, munfiled in their mantles. The former leaned on her sister, and kept heer face bent on the ground, as one who felt ashamed of the step she was about to take. Brenda also passed her lover in silence, but threw back upon him a look of gratitude and affection, which doubled, if possible, his anxiety for their safety.
The sisters, in the meanwhile, passed out of sight of the honse ; when Minna, whose step till that time had been faint and feelle. began to erect her person and to walk with a pace so firm and so swift that Brenda, who had some diffieulty to keep up with her, could not forbear renonstrating on the imprudence of hurrying her spirits and exhausting her foree by such unnecessary haste.
'Fear not, my dearest sister,' said Minna: 'the spirit which I now feel will, and must, sustain me through the dreadful interview. I eould not but move with a drooping head and it dejeeted pace while I was in view of one who must necessarily deem me deserving of his pity or his seorn. But you know, my dearest Brenda, and Mordant shall also know, that the love I bore to that mulappy man was as pure as the rays of that sim that is now reflected on the waves. And 1 dare atten that glorimes smin and yonder blue heaven to bear me witures that, but to urge him to change his minapy course of life, I had not, for all the temptations this romed world holds, ever consented to see him more.'
As she spoke thus, in a tone which afforded much contilence to Brenda, the sisters attained the summit of a rising ground, whenee they commanded a full view of the Orcalian Stonehenge, consisting of a huge cirele and semicircle of the Standing Stones, as they are called, which already glimmered a greyishl white in the rising sun, and projected far to the westward their long gigantic shadows. At another time, the scene would have operated powerfully on the imaginative mind of Minna, and interested the euriosity at least of her less sensitive sister. But at this moment neither was at leisure to reeeive the impressions whieh this stupendous monu:uent of antiquity is so well calculated to impress on the feelings of those who behold it: for they saw in the lower lake, beneath what is termed the Brilge of Broisgar, a boat well manned and armed, which had disemharked one of its crew, who advanced alone, and wrapped in a naval cloak, towards that monumental circle which they theinselves were about to reach from another qumrter.
'They are many, and they are armed,' said the startled Brenda, in a whisper to her sister.
'It is for precaution's sake,' answered Minna, 'which, alas : their condition renders but too necessary. l'ear no treachery from hinn ; that, at least, is not his viee.'
As she spoke, or shortly afterwards, she attainel the centre of the circle, on which, in the midst of the tall, erect pillars of rude stone that are raised around, lies one flat and prostrate, supported by short stone pillars, of which some relics are still visible, that had once served, perlaps, the purpose of an altar.
'Here,' she said, 'in heathen times (if we may believe legends which have cost me but too dear), our ancesturs offered saerifices to heathen deities; and here will I, from my soul, renounce, aljure, and offer np to a better and a more merviful God than was known to them the vain ideas with which my youthful imagination has lieen seducel.'
She stood by the prostrate table of stone, and saw Cleveland advance towards her, with a timid paee and a downcast look, as different from his nsmul character and bearing as Minna's high air and lofty demeanomr, ank calm, contemplative pesture, were distant from those of the love-lurn and broken-hearten maiden whose weight had ahmost home down the support of her sister as she left the Honse of Stemis. If the belief of those is true who assign these simgular momments exclusi vely to the Druids, Mima might have seemed the Haxa, or high priestess, of the order, from whom some chanmion of the tribe expected inanguration. Or, if we hold the cireles of Ginthir and

Scandinavian origin, she might have seemed a descended vision of Freya, the spouse of the Thundering Deity, before whom some bold sea-king or champion bent with anl awe which … mere mortal terror could have inflicted upon him. Brenda, overwhelmed with inexpressible fear and doubt, remained a pree or two behind, anxiously observing the motions of Cleveland. and attending to nothing around save to him and to her si-ter

Cleveland approached within two yards of Minna, and hent his head to the ground. There was a dead pause, until Minua said, in a firm but melancholy tone, 'Unhappy man, why didst thou seek this aggravation of our woe? Depart in peace, and may Heaven direct thee to a better course than that which thy life has yet held!'
'Heaveu will not aid me,' said Cleveland, 'excepting by your voice. I came hither rude and wild, scarce knowing that iny trade - my desperate trade, was more criminal in the sight of man or of Heaven than that of those privateers whon your law acknowledges. I was bred in it, and, but for the wishes you have encouraged me to form, I should have perhaps sheil in it, desperate and impenitent. Oh, do not throw ne from you! let me do something to redeem what I have done amis.s, and do not leave your own work half-finished!'
'Cleveland,' said Minna, 'I will not reproach you with abus. ing my inexperience, or with availing yourself of those deln sions which the credulity of early youth had flung around me, and which led me to confound your fatal course of life with the deeds of our ancient heroes. Alas, when I saw your followers that illusion was no more! but I do not upbraid you with its having existed. Go, Cleveland ; detach yourself froun those miserable wretches with whom you are associated, and believe me that, if Heaven yet grants you the means of di-tinguishing your name by one good or glorious action, there are eyes left in these lonely islands that will weep as much for joy as - as - they must now do for sorrow.'
'And is this all?' said Cleveland ; 'and may I not hope that, if I extricate myself from my present associates; if I can gain, my pardon by being as bold in the right as I have been tim often in the wrong cause; if, after a term, I care not how lons, but still a term which may have an enll, I aan broast if having redeemed my fame, may I not-may I not hope that Minna may, forgive what my God and my country shall have pardoned i'
'Never, Cleveland - never!' said Minna, with the uthest

Crmnoss ; 'on this spot we part, and part fur ever, and part without longer indulgence. Think of me as of one deall, if you continue as you now are ; but if, which may Heaven grant, you change your fatal course, think of me then as one whose morning and evening prayers will be for your happiness, though she has lost her own. Farewell, Cleveland!'
He kneeled, overpowered by his own bitter feelings, to take the hand which slie held out to him, and in that instant his confidant Bunee, starting from belind one of the large upright pillars, his eyes wet with tears, exclained -
' Never saw sueh a parting seenc on any stage : But I'll be d-d if you make your exit as you expert!'

And so saying, ere Cleveland could employ either remonstrance or resistance, and indeed before he could get upon his feet, he easily seeured him by pulling liin down on his baek, so that two or three of the boat's erew seized him by the arms and legs, and began to hurry him towards the lake. Mimia an! Brenda slrieked, and attempted to Hy ; but Derriek snatehed 川1 the former with as much ease as a faleon pounees on a pigen, while Bunce, with an oath or two which were intended to be of a consolatory nature, seized on Brenda; and the whole party, with two or three of the other pirates, who, stealing from the water-side, had aeconpanied them on the ambuseade, began hastily to run towards the boat, whieh was left in charge of two of their number. Their course, however, was unexpectedly interrupted, and their criminal purpose entirely frustrated.
When Mordaunt Mertoun had turned out his guard in arms, it was with the natural purpose of watching over the safety of the two sisters. They had aecordingly elosely observed the motions of the pirates, and when they saw so many of them leave the boat and steal towards the plaee of rendezvons assigned to Cleveland, they naturally suspected treachery, and by eover of an old hollow way or trench, which perliaps had anciently been eonnected with the munumental circle, they had thrown themselves unpereeived between the pirates and their boat. At the eries of the sisters, they started up and placed themselves in the way of the ruffians, presenting their pieces, whieh, notwithstanding, they dared not fire, for fear of hurting the young ladies, seeured as they were in the rude grasp of the marauders. Mordaunt, however, adranced with the speed of a wild deer on Bunce, who, loth to quit his prey, yet unable to defend himself otherwise, turned to this side and that alternately, exposing Brenda to the blows which Mordaunt offered at him. This defence, however, proved in vain against a youth possessed of the lightest fuot and most netive lumel ever known int Zetland. and, after a feint or two, Murdanmt brought the pirate to the gronud with a stroke from the but: of the carabine, whieh he dared not nse otherwise. At the sume time firearms were discharged on either sile by those who were liable to no such cause of forbearance, and the pirates who hard hold of Cleveland dropped him, naturally enough, to prom ile for their own defence or retreat. But they only added to the unmbers of their enemies; for Cleveland, perceiving Minna in the nrms of Derriek, snatched her from the ruffinm with me hand, and with the other shot him dead on the spot. 'I'win in three more of the pirates fell or were taken, the rest lled to their boat, pushed off, then turned their broadside to the shure, and fired repeatedly on the Orcadian party, which they returned, with little iujury on either side. Meanwhile Mordannt, having first seen that the sisters were at liberty nul in full Hight towards the honse, advanced on Cleveland with his cutlass drawn. 'The pirate presented a pistol, and calling out at the same time, 'Mordaunt, I never missed my aim,' he fired into the air, and threw it into the lake; then drew his cutlass, braudished it round his head, and flung that also as far is his arm could send it, in the same direction. Yet such wis the universal belief of his personal strength and resources, that Mordaunt still used precaution, as, advancing on Clevelanl, he asked if he surrendered.
'I surrender to no man,' said the pirate captain ; 'but you may see I have thrown away my weapons.'

He was immediately seized by some of the Orcadians with out his offering any resistance ; but the instant interference of Mordaunt prevented his being roughly treated or bomul. The victors conducted him to a well-secured upper apartment in the House of Stennis, and placed a sentinel at the door. Bunce and Fletcher, both of whom had been stretched on the fiehd during the skimish, were lodged in the same chamber ; anl two prisoners, who appeared of lower rank, were confined in a vault belouging to the mansion.

Withont pretending to deserike the juy of Magmes Truil. who, when awakened by the noise and firing, fomud his davedtem: safe and his enemy a prisoner, we shall only say, it wa* - " great that he forgot, for the time at least, to inquire what circunsiances were thowe which had placed then in danger ; and that be hugged Mordaunt to his breast a thu sand times, as their proserver; and swore as often by the bones of his suinted mamesake that, if he hal a thousanid daughters, so tight ul lad and so true a friend should have the choice of then, let Lady Glowrowrum say what she would.

A very different scene was passing in the prison-chamher of the unfortunate Cleveland and his associates. The captain sat by the window, his eyes bent on the prospect of the sea which it presented, and was seemingly so mintent on it as to he insensible of the presence of the others. Jack Binuce stonsl meditating some ends of verse, in order to make his mivances towards a reconeilintion with Cleveland ; for he hegan to tre sensible, from the consequenees, that the part he had played towards his captain, however well intended, was neither lucky in its issue nor likely to be well taken. His mhimirer nud adherent, Flotcher, lay half asleep, as it seemed, on a trucklebed in the room, without the least attempt to interfere 'in the conversation which ensued.
' Nay, but speak to me, Clement,' said the penitent lieutenant, ' if it be but to swear at me for my stupidity :

What! not an oath? Nay, then the world goes hard, If Clifford cannot spare his friends ant oath.
'I prithee peace, and begone :' said Cleveland; 'I have one bosom friend left yet, and you will make me bestow its contents on you or on myself.'
'I have it!' said Bunce - 'I have it!' and on he went in the vein of Jaffier -
'Then, by the hell I merit, I'Il not leave thee, Till to thyself at least thou'rt reconciled, However thy resentment deal with me!'
'I pray yon once more to be silent,' said Cleveland. 'Is it not enough that you have mudone me with your treachery, hut you must stun ne with your silly buffoonery? I would not have believed you would have lifted a finger arainst me, Jack, of any man or devil in youler muhapy slin.'.
'Who, I?' exclained Bunce. 'I lift a finger against yon : and if I did, it was in pure love, and to make you the happiest fellow that ever trole a dech, with yomr mistress heside yon, and fifty fine fellows at yomr eommand. Here is bick Pletelee can bear witness. I did all fur the best, if he wonld but yeak, instead of holloping there like a Dutch dugher laid ify to be careened. Get up, Dick, and speak for me, won't you?

(ANSI and ISO TEST CHART No. 2)

```

APPLIED IMAGE Inc
1653 East Moin Street
Rochester. New York 14609 USA
(716) 482 - 0300 - Phone
(716) 288-5989 - Fox

```
'Why, yes, Jack Bunce,' answered Fletcher, raising him-el with difficulty, and speaking feebly, 'I will if I can, anll always knew you spoke and did for the best; but howsomelever. d' ye see, it has turned out for the worst for me this time, for am blecding to death, I think.'
'You cannot be such an ass!' said Jack Bunce, springin! til his assistance, as did Cleveland. But human aid came too late he sank back on the bed, and, turning on his face, expiret without a groan.
'I always thought him a d-d fool,' said Bunce, as he wiperl a tear from his eye, 'but never such a consummate idiot as th hop the perch so sillily. I have lost the best follower he again wiped his eye.

Cleveland looked on the dead body, the rugged features if which had remained maltered by the death-pang. 'A bulldog,' he said, 'of the true British breed, and, with a better counsellor, would have been a better man.'
'You may say that of some, other folks, too, captain, if you are minded to do them justice,' said Bunce.
'I may indeed, and especially of yourself,' said Cleveland in reply.
"Why then, say, "Jack, I forgive you,"' said Bunce ; 'it's but a short word, and soon spoken.'
'I forgive you from all my soul, Jack,' said Cleveland, who had resumed his situation at the window; 'and the rather that your folly is of little consequence : the morning is come that must bring ruin on us all.'
'What ! you are thinking of the old woman's prophecy you spoke of \(\}\) ' said Bunce.
'It will be soon accomplished,' answered Oleveland. 'Come hither ; what do you take yon large square-rigged vessel for, that you see doubling the headland on the east, and opening the Bay of Stromness?'
'Why, I can't make her well out,' said Bunce, 'but yonder is old Goffe takes her for a West Indiaman loaded with rum and sugar, I suppose, for \(\mathrm{d}-\mathrm{n}\) me if he does not slip cable and stand out to her!'
'Instead of running into the shoal-water, which was his only safety,' said Cleveland. 'The fool! the dotard! the drivelling, drunken idiot! he will get his flip hot enough ; for yon is the "Halcyon." See, she hoists her colours and fires a broadside : and there will soon be an cud of the "Fortune's Favourite": I only hope they will fight her to the last plank. The boatswain used to be stanch enough, and so is Goffe, though an incarnate demon. Now she shoots away, with all the sail she can spread, and that shows some sellse.
'Up goes the Jolly Hodge, the ohl hack flag, with the death's head and hour-glass, and that shows some spunk,' added his comrade.
'The hour-glass is turned for us, Jack, for this hout: our sand is rummg fast. Fire away yet, my roving lads! The leep sea or the blue sky rather than a rope :. ad a yard-arm!'
there was a moment of anxious aid dead silenee; the sloop, though hard pressed, maintaining still a ruming fight, and the frigate eontinuing in full ehase, but scarce returning a shot. At length the vessels neared each other, so as to show that the man-of-war intended to board the sloop, instead of sinking her, probably to seeure the plunder which might be in the pirate vessel.
'Now, Goffe - now, boatswain!' exclaimed Cleveland, in an ecstacy of impatience, and as if they could have heard his commands, 'stand by sheets and taeks - rake her with a broadside, when you are under her bows, then about ship, and go off on the other taek like a wild goose. 'IThe sails shiver- - the helm's a-lee. Ah! deep sea sink the lubbers ! they miss stays, and the frigate runs them aboard!'
Accordingly, the various manœuvres of the chase had brought them so near that Cleveland, with his spy-glass, could see the man-of-war's-men boarding by the yards and bowsprit, in irresistible numbers, their naked cutlasses flashing in the sum, when, at that aritical moment, both ships vere enveloper in a eloud of thick black smoke, which suddenly arose on board the captured pirate, 'Exeunt omnes!' said Bunce, with clasped hands.
'There went the "Fortune's Favourite," ship and crew !' said Cleveland, at the same instant.

But the smoke immediately clearing away, showed that the damage had only been partial, and that from want of a sufficient quantity of powder, the pirates had failed in their desperate attempt to blow up their vessel with the "Halcyon."
Shortly after the action was over, Captain Weatherport of the "Haleyon" sent an officer and a party of marines to the House of Stennis, to demand from the little garrison the pirate seanen who were their prisoners, and, in particular, Cleveland and Bunce, who acted as captain and inentenant of the gang.
'lhis was a demand which was not to be resinted, though ver., sill- 28

Magmus Troil could have wished sincerely that the roof minder which he lived had been allowed as an asylum at least tu Cleveland. But the officer's orders were peremptory ; and he added, it was Captain Weatherport's intention to laud the other prisoners, and send the whole, with a sufficient esent, across the island to Kirkwall, in order to mergo an examination there before the civil anthorities, previous to their being sent off to Loudon for trial at the High Court of Admiralty: Magnus could therefore only intercede for good usage to Cleveland, and that he might not be stripped or plundered, which the officer, struck by his good mien, and compassionating his situation, readily promised. The honest Vdaller would have said something in the way of comfort to Cleveland himself, but he could not find words to express it, and only shook his heaul.
'Old friend,' said Cleveland, 'you may have much to complain of, yet you pity instead of exulting over me; for the sake of you and yours, I will never harm liuman being more. Take this from me - my last hope, but my last temptation also'; he drew from his bosom a pocket-pistol, and gave it to Magnus Troil. 'Remember me to -_But no, let every one forget me. I atn your prisoner, sir,' said he to the officer.
'And I also,' said poor Bunce; and putting on a theatrical comntenance, he ranted, with no very perce ible faltering in his tone, the words of Pierre :

\footnotetext{
'Captain, you should be a gentleman of honour ; Keep off the rabble, that I may have room To entertain my fate, and die with decency.'
}

\title{
CHAPTER XLI
}

Joy, joy, al London now !

\author{
Southey.
}

THE news of the capture of the rover reached Kirkwall about an honr before noon, and filled all men with wonder and with joy. Little business was that day done at the fair, whilst preople of all ages and occupations streamed from the place to see the prisoners as they were marchell towards Kirkwall, and to triumph in the different appearance which they now bore from that which they had formerly exhibited when ranting, swaggering, and bullying in the streets of that town. The bayonets of the marines ware soon seen to glisten in the sun, and then came on the melancholy troop of captives, handcuffed two and two together. Thcir finory had been partly torn from then by their captors, partly hung in rags about then! ; many were wounded and covercd with olooa, many blackencd and scorched with the explosion by which a few of the most desperate had in vain striven to blow up the vessel. Most of them seemed sullen and impenitent, some were more becomingly affected with their condition, and a few braved it out, and sung the same ribald sougs to which they had made the streets of Kirkwall ring when they were in their frolics.
The boatswain and Goffe, coupled together, exhansted themselves in threats and imprecations against each other; the former charging Goffe with want of seamanship, and the latter alleging that the boatswain had prevented him from firing the powder that was stowed forward, and so sending them all to the other world together. Last came Cleveland and Bunce, were permitted to walk unshackled; the decent melancholy, yer resolved manner, of the former contrasting strougly with the stage strut and swagger which poor Jack thought it fitting to assume, in order to conccial some less dignified emotions. The former was looked upon with compassion, the latter with a mixtnre of scorn and pity; while most' of the others inspired horror, and even fear, by their looks and their language.

There was one individual in Kirkwall "ho was so far from hastening to see the sight which attracted all eyes, that he was not even aware of the event which agitated the town. This was the elder Mertom, whose residence Kirkwall ha, been for two or three days, part of which had heen spent in attending to some judicial proceedings, mudertaken at the instance of the procurator-fiscal, against that grave professor, Bryce Snailsfoot. In consequence of an inquisition into thi proceedings of this worthy trader, Cleveland's chest, with hi papers and other matters therein contained, had been restomen to Mertoun, as the lawful custodier thereof, until the right owner should be in a situation to establish his right to then. Mertoun was at first desirous to throw back upon justice the cha rge which she was disposed to entrust him with ; but, 'י" perusing one or two of the papers, he hastily changed his mini - in broken words, requested the magistrate to let the chesi be sent to his lodgings, and, hastening homeward, boltel hiin self into the room, to consider and digest the singular infur mation which chance had thus conveyed to him, and whicl increased, in a tenfold derree, his impatience for an intervie" with the mysterious Norna of the Fitful Head.
It may be remembered that she had required of him, whel they met in the clurchyard of St. Ninian, to attend in the outer aisle of the cathedral of St. Magnus, at the hour " noon, on the fifth day of the fair of St . Olla, there to meet : person by whom the fate of Mordaunt would be explained t. him. 'It must be herself,' he said ; 'and that I should see he" at this moment is indispensable. How to find her sooner know not; and better lose a few hours even in this exigen... than offend her by a premature attempt to force myself on he presence.'

Long, therefore, before noon - long before the town " Kirkwall was agitated by the news of the events on the othe side of the island, the elder Mertoun was pacing the desert"." aisle of the cathedral, awaiting, with agonising eagerness, the expected communication from Norna. The bell tolled twell - no door opened - no one was seen to enter the cathedral but the last sounds had not ceased to reverberate through the vaulted roof when, gliding from one of the interior side-aisleNorna stood before him. Mertom, indifferent to the almar"un niystery of ler sudden approach (with the secret of which tha reader is acquainted), went up to her at once, with the earnent ejaculation - 'Ulla - Ulla 'Iroil, aid me to save our unhapyy boy''
'I'o Ulla 'I'roil,' said Nc"na, 'I ans wer nut: 1 gave that name to the winds on the night that cost me a father!'
'Speak not of that night of horror,' said Mertoun ; 'we have need of our reason - let us not think on recollections which may destroy it; but aid me, if thou canst, to save our unfortunate child!'
'Vaughan,' answered Norna, 'he is already saved - long since saved ; think you a mother's hand - and that of snch a mothen as I am - vould await your crawling, tarly, ineffeetial assistance? No, Vaughan, I inake myself known to you but to show my triumph over you: it is the only revenge which the powerful Norna permits herself to take for the wrongs of Clla ' mil.'

Have you indeed saved tim - saved him from the murderous erew ?' said Mertoun, or Vanghan - 'speak! and speak truth! I will believe everything -all you would require me to assent to :- prove to me only he is escaped and safe !'
'Eseaped and safe, by my means,' said Noma - 'safe, and in assurance of an honoured and happy alliance. Yes, great unbeliever!-yes, wise and self-opinioned intidel! these were the works of Norna! I knew you many a year since; but never had I made myself known to you save with the triumphant consciousness of having controlled the destiny that threatened my son. All combined against him : planets which threatened drowning - combinations which menaced blood; but my skill was superior to all. I arranged - I combined - I found means - I made them - each disaster has been averted; and what infidel on earth, or stubborn demon beyond the bounds of earth, shall hereafter deny my power ?'
The wild ecstasy with which she spoke so much resembled triumphant insanity that Mertom answered - 'Were your pretensions less lofty, and your speech more phain, I should be better assured of my son's safety.'
'Doubt on, vain sceptie!' said Noma. 'And yet know, that not only is our son safe, but vengeance is mine, thongh I sought it not - vengeance on the powerful:, plement of the darker Influences by whom my schenes were , ffen thwarted, and even the life of my son endangered. \(\mathrm{i} c \mathrm{cs}\), take it as a guarantee of the truth of my speech that Clevelant - the pirate Cleveland - even now enters liirkwall as a prisoner, and will soon expiate with his life the having shed blood which is of kin to Norna's.'
'Who didst thon say was prisoner?' exclaimed Mertoun, with a voice of thunder - 'who, woman, didst thou say should expiate his crimes with his life ?'
'Cleveland -- the pirate Cleveland!' answered Nomm ; 'num by me, whose counsel he scorned, he has be'.. permitted t" meet his fate.'
'Thou most wretched of women!' said Mertoum, speaking from between his clenched teeth, 'thou hast slain thy son as well as thy father!'
'My son! what son? what mean you? Mordaunt is your son - your only son!' exclaimed Norna, 'is he not ? - tell we quickly, is he not?'
'Mordaunt is indeed \(m y\) son,' said Mertoun ; 'the laws, it least, gave him to me as such. But, 0 ) unhappy Ulla! Cleveland is your son as well as mine - blood of our blood, bone of our bone : and if you hav siven him to death, I will end my wretched life along with him!'
'Stay - hold - sti.p, Vaughan!' said Norna; 'I am not yet overcome - prove but to me the truth of what you say, I woild find help, if I should evoke hell! But prove your words, else believe them I cannot.'
'Thou help! wretched, overweening woman! In whit have thy combinations and thy stratageus - the legerdemain of lunacy - the mere quackery of insanity - in what have these involved thee? And yet I will speak to thee as reasonable nay, I will admit thee as powerful. Hear, then, Ulla, the proofs which you demand, and find a remedy, if thon canst : -
'When I fled from Orkney,' he continued, after a pause 'it is now five-and-twenty years since - I bore with me the unhappy offspring to whom you had given light. It was sent to me by one of your kinswomen, with an account of your illness, which was soon followed by a generally received belief of your death. It avails not to tell in what misery I left Europe. I fuund refuge in Hispaniola, wherein a fair yonus Spaniard undertook the task of comforter. I married her; she becane mother of : he youth called Mordannt Mertomn.'
'You narried her!' said Norna, in a tone of deep reproach.
'I did, Ulla,' answered Mertoun ; 'but yon were avenged. She proved faithless, and her infidelity left me in doubts whether the child she bore had a right to call me father. But I also was avenged.'
' You murdered her !' said Norna, with n dremdful shrick.
'I did that,' said Mertoun, withont a more direct reply, - which made an instant Hight from Hispuniola nereswary. Your son I carried with me to 'lortuga, where we hadi it swall settlement. Mordannt Vaughm, my son by marriage, abont three or four years younger, was residing in Port Royal, for the advantages of an English education. I resolved never to see him again, but I eontinued to support him. Onr settlement was plundered by the Spaniards when Clement was bint fifteen. Want came to aid despair and a trombled conscience. I became a corsair, and involved Clement in the same desperate trade. His skill and bravery, though then a mere boy, gnined him a separate command; and after a lapse of two or three ycars, while we were on different cruises, my crew rose on me, and left me for dead on the beneh of one of the Bermudas. I reeovered, however, and my first imuiries, after a tedioms illness, were after Clement. He, 1 hearl, had been also marooned by a rebellions erew, and put ashore on a desert islet, to perish with want. I believed he had so perished.'
'And what assures you that he diel not ?' sainl C'lla; 'or how comes this Cleveland to be identified with Vanghan?'
'To change a name is common with such adventurers,' answered Mertoun; 'and Clement had apparently found that of Vaughan had beeome too notorious; and this elauge, in his ease, prevented me from hearing any tidiugs of him. It was then that remorse seized me, and that, detesting all mature, but espucially the sex to which Lomisa belonged, I resolved to do penrnce in the wild islands of Zetlaul for the rest of my life. advi : holy Catholic priests whom I consulted. But I dev al 'er penanee: I determined to bring with me the unh. -y Mordaunt, and to keep always before me the living memorial of my misery aud my gnilt. I have done so, and I have thonght over both till reason has often trembled on her throne. And now, to drive me to ntter nadness, my Clement - my own, my undonbted son - revives from the deal to be consigned to an infamons death by the machinations of his own mother!'
'Away -away !' said Norna, with a laugh, when she had heard the story to an end, 'this, is a legend framed by the old corsair to interest my aid in favour of a guilty colurale. How could I mistake Mordaunt for my son, their ages being so different?'
'The dark complexion and manly stature may have done much,' said Basil Mertoun; 'strong imagination must have done the rest.'
- But give me proofs - give me proofs that this Clevelaul is my son, and, believe me, this sun shall sooner sink in the eint than they shall luve power to harm a hair of his heall.'
'These papers - these journals,' ssid Mertoun, offering t , pocket-book.
'I cannot read them,' she said, after an effort : 'uny brain is dizzy.'
- Clement had also tokens which you may remember, liut they must have become the booty of his captors. He land : silver box with a Runic inseription, with which in far wher days you presented me - a golden chaplet.'
'A box!' said Norna, hastily. 'Cleveland gave me one hut a day since ; I have never looked at it till now.'

Eagerly she pulled it out, eagerly examined the legend around the lid, and as eagerly excluimed - 'They may nuw indeed call me Reim-kenar, for by this rhyme I know myself murderess of my son as well as of my father!'

The conviction of the strong delusion under which she hat laboured was so overwhelming that she sunk dowi: at the foot of one of the pillars. Mertoun shouted for help, though in despair of receiving any ; the sexton, however, entcred, and, hopeless of all assistance from Norna, the distracted father rushed out, to learn, if possible, the fate of his som.

CAP'AAN WEATHERPORT had, before this time, reached Kirkwall in person, and was received with great joy and thankfulness by the magistrates, who hail assembled in council for the purpose. The provost, in particular, expressed himself delighted with the providential arrival of the 'Halcyon' at the very conjuncture when the pirate could not escape her. The captain looked a little surprised, and said, 'For that, sir, you may thank the information you yourself supplied.'
'That I supplied I' said the provost, somewhat astonished.
' Yes, sir,' answered Captain Weatherport, 'I understand you to be George Torfe, chief magistrate of Kii`wall, who subscribes this letter.'
The astonished provost took the letter addressed to Captain Weatherport of the 'Halcyon,' stating the arrival, force, etc., of the pirates' vessel; but adding, that they had heard of the 'Halcyon' beins. I the coast, and that they were on their guard and read, . baffle her, by going among the shoals, and through the islands and holms, where the frigate could not easily follow; and, at the worst, they were desperate enongh to propose running the sloop ashore and blowing her up, by which muth booty and treasure would be lost to the captors. The letter, therefore, suggested that the 'Halcyon' should cruise betwixt Duncansbay Head and Cape Wrath for two or three days, to relieve the pirates of the alarm her neighbourhood occasioncel, and luil them into security, the more especially as the letterwriter knew it to be thoir intention, if the frigate left the coast, to go into Stromness - ay, and there put their guns ashore for some necessary repairs, or even for careening their vessel, if they could find means. 'T?; letter concluded by assuriug ('iptain Weatherport that, if he conld bring his frigate into Stromness Bay on the morning of the 24 th of August, he womil have a good bargain of the pirates; if moonor, he wu* but mulikely to miss them.

'This letter is not of my writing or anbweribing, Cnptain Weatherport,' said the provost ; 'nor woild I have ventureel to alvine any delay in your coming hither.'
'The eaptall was surprisel in his 2 : min. 'All I know is, that it reached me when I was in the Bay of 'lhurso, and thut I Lavi the boat's crew that brought it five dollars for erossing the Pentland l'irth in very roush weather. 'They had in duml, dwarf as cockswain, the upliest urchin my eyes ever openell upon. I give you molh credit for the accuracy of your intelligence, Mr. Provost.'
'It is lueky as it is,' said the provost ; 'yet I questim whether the writer of this letter wonld not rather that yon hail fonnd the nest cold and the birl flown.'
So saying, he handed the letter to Magnus Troil, who te. turned it with a smile, but without any observation, awne, donbtless, with the sagacious reader, that Norma laul her own reasons for calculating with aecuracy on the dhte of the 'Haleyon's' arrival.
Without puzzling himself farther concerning a circumstance which seemed inexplieable, the captain requestell that the examinations might proceed ; and Cleveland and Altamont, ans he chose to be called, were brought up, the first of the pirate erew, on the eharge of having acted as eaptain and lientemut. They had just commenced the examination when, after some expostulation with the officers who kept the door, Basil Mertom! burst into the apartment and exelaimed, "Take the old victim" for the young one! I zim Basil Vaughan, too well known (111 the Windward station - take my life, and spare my son's:'

All were astonished, and none more than Magnus 'Iroil, whn hastily explained to the magistrates and Captain Weatherport that this gentlemmn had been living peaceably and honestly on the Mainland of Zetland for many years.
'In that case,' said the captain, 'I wash my hands of the poor man, for he is safe, user iwo proclamations of merer: and, loy my soul, when I see them, the father and his offypring, hanging on each other's neck, I wish I eould say as muth for the son.'
'But how is it - how can it be "' said the provost : 'we always called the old man Mertoun, ant the young Cleveland, and now it seems they are both named Vaughan.'
'Vaughan,' answered Mugmas, 'is a name which I have some reason to remember; and, from what ! lave lately heard from my consin Norma, that old mm has a right to thar it.
'And I trust, the yonng man also,' suid ! ine captain, who lual heen looking over a memommimm. ©Disten th me a moment,' addidel he, addressing the yonger Vinghin, whim we lave hitherto called Clevelaml. 'Ilark yon, sir, your mame is suill to te Clement Vauginan - are you the sume who, then a tuere boy, commanded a party of rovers, who, alomit eight or nine years ago, pilluged a Spmish village called (puempa, on: the Spanish Dhain, with the purpose of seizing some treasure ?'
'It will avnil me nothing to deny it,' answered the prismor.
' No,' said Captain Weatherport, 'but it may do yom servies) to adnit it. Well, the muleteers escaped with the treasure, while you were engaged in protecting, at the hazard of your own hife, the honour of two Snanish ladies agnanst the brntality of your followers. Do you \(t\) th: mber anything of this?
'I an sure I du,' suid Jack Bunce ; 'for our captain here was maromed for his gallantry; and I narrowly escaped thogging and pickling for having taken his part.'
'When these points are extahlished,' said Captain Wcatherpurt, 'Vaughan's life is safe: the women he saved were persons of quality, danghters to the governor of the provinee, and apnlication was long since made by the grateful Spmiard to our govermuent for favour to be shown to their preserver. I hal special orders about Clement Vanghan when I haul a commission for cruising upom the pirates, in the West hadies, six or seven years since. But Vaughan was gone then a, n name mr.-цst them ; and I heard enough of Cleveland in his room. Iio ."er, captain, be you Cleveland or Vaughan, I think that, a he Quempoa hero, I can assure you a free pardon when ju arrive in Loudon.'
Cleveland bowod, and the bhood mot at. 1 to his firee. Mertom fell on his knees and exhausted '. Self in thanksgiving to Heaven. They were removen, muilst the sympathising sols of the spectators.
'Andnow, good Master Lientenamt, what have you got to say for yourself \(\eta^{\prime}\) said Cap,tain Weatherport to the \(\mathbf{c i}\)-derant Rovcius.
'Why, little or nothing, please your honour; only tl: at I wish your honour could find my name in that book of merey yon have in your hand ; for I stool by Captain Clement Vanghan in that Quempor husiness.
'You call yourself Frederick Altamont,' sail Captain

Weatherport. 'I can see no such name here; one Jolun Bounce, or Bunce, the lady put on her tablets.'
'Why, that is me - that is I myself, captain - I can prove it and I an determined, though the sornd be something plebeian, rather to live Jack Bunce than to hang as Frederick Altamont.
'In that case,' said the captain, 'I can give you some hopes as John Bunce.'
'Thank your noble worship!' shouted Bunce ; then changin!, his tone, he said, ' Ab , since an alias has such virtne, pour Dick Fletcher might have come off as Timothy 'I'ugmutton; but howsomdever, d'ye see, to use his own phrase '
'Away with the lieutenant,' said the captain, 'and brin!: forward Goffc and the other fellows; there will be ropes reeve, il for some of them, I think.' And this prediction promised to the amply fulfilled, so strong was the proof which was brought against them.
'The 'Halcyon' was accordingly ordered round to carry the whole prisoners to London, for which she set sail in the course of two days.

During the time that the unfortunate Cleveland remainel at Kirkwall, he was treated with civility by the captain of the 'Halcyon'; and the kindness of his old acquaintance, Magnus 'Iroil, who knew in secret how closely he was allied to his bloul, pressed on him accommodations of every kind, more than he could be prevailed on to accept.

Norna, whose interest in the unlappy prisoner was still more deep, was at this time unable to express it. The sexton had found her lying on the pavement in a swoon, and when she recovered, her mind for the time had totally lost its equipuise, and it became necessary to place her under the restraint of watchful atteudants.

Of the sisters of Burgh-Westra, Cleveland only heard that they remained ill, in consequence of the fright to which they, had been subjected, until the evening before the 'Halcyon sailed, when he received, by a private conveyance, the followius billet :- 'Farewell, Cleveland; we part for ever, and it is right that we should. Be virtuous and be happy. The delusions which a solitary education and limited acquaintance with the modern world had spread around me are gone and dissipated for ever. But in you, I am sure, I have been thus far frec from error, that you are one to whom good is naturally more attractive than evil, and whom only necessity, example, and babit have forced into your late course of life. Think of me as une rove it : lebeian, amont.' e hopes

\section*{langing} e, poor autton ;
\(\qquad\)
d brills reeval ed to be brought rry the course mainel of the Magnus s bleonl, thau he hen she uipuise, raint of rd thi:t ch they alcyon llowing is right elusimis ith the sipated ee from attract\(d\) babit as une who no longer exists, unless you should become as much the object of general praise as now of general reproach; and then think of ne as one who will rejoice in your reviving fime, thongh she nust never see you more!' 'The note was sisned 'M. 'T?'; and Clevelame, with a deep enotion, which he tentified even by tears, read it an hundred times over, and then claiped it to his bosom.
Mordaunt Mertoun heard by letter from lis father, but in a very different style. Basil bade him farewell for ever, and acquitted him henceforward of the duties of a son, as one on whom he, notwithstanding the exertions of many years, had found himself unable to bestow the affections of a parent. 'The letter informed him of a recess in the old house of Jarlshof, in which the writer had deposited a considerable quantity of specie and of treasure, which he desired Morlannt to nse as his own. 'You need not fear,' the letter bore, 'either that you lay yourself under ooligation to me or that yon are shariug the spoils of piracy. What is now given over to you is almost entirely the property of your deceased muther, Louisa Gonzago, and is yours by every right. Let us forgive each other,' was the conclusion, 'as they who must meet no more.' And they never met more; for the elder Mertoun, against whom no charge was ever preferred, disappeared after the fate of Cleveland was determined, and was generally believed to have retired into a forcign convent.
'The fate of Cleveland will be most briefly expressed in a letter, which Minna received within two months after the 'Halcyon' left Kirkwall. The fanily were then assembled at Burgh-Westra, and Mordaunt was a member of it for the time, the good Udaller thinking he could never sufticiently repay the activity which he had shown in the defence of his daughters. Norna, then begimning to recover from her temporary alienation of mind, was a guest in the family, and Minna, who was sedulons in her attention upon this unfortunate victim of mental delusion, was seated with her, watching each symptom of returuing reason, when the letter we allude to was placed in her hands.
'Minna,' it said - 'learest Minma! firewell, and for ever: Believe me, I never meant you wrong - never. From the moment I came to know you, I resolved to detach myself from my hateful conrades, and had framed a thousand schemes, which have proved as vain as they deserved to be ; for why, or how, should the fate of her that is solovely, pure, and innocent be involved with that of one so gnilty? Of these dreams I will sjeak no more. The stern reality of my situation is much milder than I either expected or deserved; and the little goun I did has outweighed, in the minds of honourable and merciful judges, much that was evil and criminal. I have not only been exempted from the ignominious death to which several of my compeers are sentenced; but Captain Weatherport, about onci more to sail for the Spanish Main, under the apprehension o an immediate war with that country, has generously solicite and obtained permission to employ me, and two or three mare of my less guilty associates, in the same service - a measure recommended to himself by his own generous compassion, and tu others by our knowledge of the coast, and of local circuinstance which, by whatever means acquired, we now hope to use for the service of our country. Minua, you will hear my name pro nounced with honour, or you will never hear it again. If virtue can give happiness, I need not wish it to you, for it is vour: already. - Farewell, Minna.'

Minna wept so bitterly over this letter that it attracted the attention of the convalescent Norna. She snatched it from the hand of her kinswoman, and read it over at first with the confused air of one to whom it conveyed no intelligence, then with a dawn of recollection, then with a burst of mingled joy ani grief, in which she dropped it from her hand. Minua snatchen it up and retired with her treasure to her own apartment.

From that time Norna appeared to assume a different char acter. Her dress was changed to one of a more simple and les: imposing appearance. Her dwarf was dismissed, with ample pro vision for his future comfort. She showed no desire of resumint her erratic life; and directed her observatory, as it might bi called, on Fitful Head, to be dismantled. She refused the name of Norna, and would only be addressed by her real appellation of Ulla Troil. But the most important change remained behind Formerly, from the dreadful dictates of spiritual despair arisin! out of the circumstances of her father's death, she seemed to havt considered herself as an outcast from Divine grace ; besides that enveloped in the vain uccult sciences which she pretended t practise, her study, like that of Chaucer's physician, had beel 'but little in the Bible.' Now the sacred volume was seldon laid aside ; and to the poor ignorant people who came as for merly to invoke her power over the elements she only replier - 'The winds are in the hollow of His hand.' Her conversion wa: not, perhaps, altogether rational ; for this the state of a winu disordered by such a complication of horrid incidents probably prevented. But it seemed to be sincere, and was certainly use ful. She appeared deeply to repent of her former presumptuous attempts to interfere with the course of human events, superintended as they are by far higher powers, and expressed bitter compunction when such her former pretensions were in any manner recalled to her memory. She still showed a partiality to Mordaunt, though, perhaps, arising chiefly from habit ; nor was it easy to know how much or how little she remembered of the complicated events in which she had been connected. When she died, which was about four years after the events we have commemorated, it was found that, at the special and earnest request of Minna Troil, she had conveyed her very considerable property to Brenda. A clause in her will specially directed that all the books, implements of her laboratory, and other things connected with her former studies, should be committed to the flames.

About two years before Norna's death, Brenda was wed led to Mordaunt Mertoun. It was some time before old Magnus Troil, with all his affection for his daughter, and all his partiality for Mordaunt, was able frankly to reconcile himself to this match. But Mordaunt's accomplishments were peculiarly to the Udaller's taste, and the old man felt the impossibility of supplying his place in his family so absolutely, that at length his Norse blood gave way to the natural feeling of the heart, and he comforted his pride, while he looked around him, and saw what he considered as the encroachments of the Scottish gentry upon the country (so Zetland is fondly termed by its inhabitants), that as well 'his daughter married the son of an English pirate as of a Scottish thief,' in scornful .llusion to the Highland and Border families, to whom Zetland owes many respectable landholders, but whose ancestors were generally esteemed more renowned for ancient family and ligh courage than for accurately regarding the trifling distinctions of meum and tuum. The jovial old man lived to the extremity of human life, with the happy prospect of a numerous succession in the family of his younger daughter; and having his board cheered alternately by the minstrelsy of Claud Halcro and enlightened by the lucubrations of Mr. Triptolemus Yellowley, who, lay ing aside his high pretensions, was, when he became better acquainted with the manners of the islanders, and remembered the various misadventures which had attended his premature attempts at reformation, an horest and useful representative of his principal, and never so hapoy as when he could escape from the spare commons of his sister Barbara to the genial table of the Udaller. Barbara's temper also was much softened by the unexpected restoration of the horn of silver coins, the property of Norna, which she had concealed in the mansion of oid Stourburgh, for achieving some of her mysterious plans, but which she now restored to those by whom it had heen accidentally discovered, with an intimation, however, that it would again disappear unless a reasonable portion was expenled on the sustenance of the family - a precaution to which T'rouda Dronsdaughter (probably an agent of Norna's) owed her escupe from a slow and wasting death by inanition.

Mordaunt and Brenda were as happy as our mortal condition permits us to be. They admired and loved each other, enjoyel easy circumstances, had duties to discharge which they did nut neglect, and, clear in conscience as light of heart, laughech sung, danced, daffed the world aside, and bid it pass.
But Minna - the high-minded and imaginative Minna - slie, gifted with such depth of feeling and enthusiasm, yet doomed to see both blighted in early youth, because, with the inexperience of a disposition equally romantic and ignorant, she had built the fabric of her happiness on a quicksand insteal of a rock - was she, could she be happy? Reader, she was happy; for, whatever may be alleged to the contrary by the sceptic and the scorner, to each duty performed there is assigned a degree of mental peace and high consciousness of honourable exertion, corresponding to the difficulty of the task accomplisherl. That rest of the body which succeeds to hard and industrions toil is not to be compared to the repose which the spirit enjog: under similar circumstances. Her resignation, however, and the constant attention which she paid to her father, her sister, the afflicted Norna, and to all who had claims on her, were neither Minna's sole nor her most precious source of comnfort. Like Norna, but under a more regulated judgment, she learuel to exchange the visions of wild enthusiasm, which had exerter and misled her imagination, for a truer and purer comexim with the world beyond us than could be learned from the sagas of heathen bards or the visions of later rhymers. 'Tu this she owed the support by which she was enabled, after various accounts of the honourable and gallant conduct if Cleveland, to read with resignation, and even with a sense of comfort mingled with sorrow, that he had at length fallen, leading the way in a gallant and honourable enterprise, which wito successfully accomplished by those companions to whom his determined bravery had opened the road. Bunce, his fantastic follower in good as formerly in evil, transmitted an a.comnt to Minna of this melancholy event, in terms which showed that, though his head was weak, his heart had not been utterly corrnpted by the lawless life which he hal for some time led, or at least that it had been amended by the change; and that lie limself had gained credit and promotion in the same action seemed to be of little consequence to him compared with the loss of his old captain and courade. \({ }^{1}\) Mima read the intelligence, and thanked Heaven, even while the eyes which she lifted up were streaming with tears, that the death of Cleveland had been in the bed of honour; nay, she even had the conrage to add to her gratitude that he had been snatched from a sitnation of temptation ere circumstances.s had overcome his new-born virtue ; and so strongly did this reflection operate tliat her life. after the immediate pain of this event had passed away, seemed not only as resigned, but even more cheerful than before. Her thoughts, however, were detached from the world, and only visited it, with an interest like that which guardian spirits take for their charge, in behalf of those friends with whom she lived in love, or of the poor whom she could serve and comfort. Thins passed her life, enjoying from all who approached her an affection enhanced by reverence ; insomuch that, when her friends sorrowed for her death, which arrived at a late period of her existence, they were coniforted by the fond reflection that the humanity which she then laid down was the only circumstance which had placed her, in the words of Scripture, 'a little lower than the angels!'

\footnotetext{
\({ }^{1}\) see Bunce's Fate. Note 47.
}

\section*{NOTES TO THE PIRATE}

\section*{Note 1. - Udallers, p. 7}

The udaliers are the aliodiai possessors of Zetiand, who hold their possesslons under the old Norweglan law, Instead of the fendal tenures introduced among them from Scotinnd.

\section*{Note 2. - 'Plantie Chcive, p. 8}

Patch of ground for vegetables. The llheral custom of the country permits any person, who has occasion for such a convenlence, to select out of the uninciosed moorland a smail patch, whlch he surrounds with a drystone wall and cuitivates as a kail-yard, tlii he exhausts the soll with cropplng, and then he deserts it and Incioses another. This ilberty is so far from laferring an invasion of the right of proprletor and tenant, that the last degree of contempt is inferred of an avarlcious man when a Zetlander saye be would not hold a 'plantie crulve' of him.

\section*{Note 3. - The Belisenkary, p. 12}

The sagas of the Scalds are fuli of descriptlons of these champions, and do not permit us to doubt that the Berserkars, so cailed from fighting withont armour, used some physical means of working themselves into a frenzy, durling which they possessed the strength and energy of madness. The Indian warriors are well known to do the same by dint of oplum and bang.

\section*{Note 4. - Accidents to Fowlers, p. 14}

Fatai accidents, however, sometlmes happeu. When I visited the Fair Isle in 1814, a poor lad of fourteen had been klled by a fall from the rocks about a foutnight before our arrisal. The accldent happoned almost withln slght of his mother, who was casting peats at no great ilistunce. The body fell Into the sea, and was seen no more. But the lslanders account thls au honourabie mode of death; and as the chlldren hegin the practlee of climbing very eariy, fewer accldents occur than ulght be experted.

\section*{Note 5. - Norse Flagments, p. 15}

Near the conclusion of chapter li. It is notleed that the old Norweglan sagas were preserved and often repented by the lishermen of orkney and Zetland, while that langtage was not yet qulte furgotten. Mr. Balkle of Tankerness, a most respectable Inhabltant of Klrkwail, and an Orkney proprietor, assured me of the following curlous fact : -

A clergyman, who wan not long deceased, remembered well when mome reminante of the Norse were stlli spoken In the Island called North Monnlifina.
 firnt renched that remote laland, the reverend gentimman had the well-Julsed curionlty to read it to some of the old permons of the Imle, as a poein whirh regarded the hletory of their own country. They ilstened wlth great attentlon to the prellminary etanzas:

> Now the storm beging to lour,
> Hante the loom of hell prepare, Iron aleet of arrowy ahower

> Hurties in the darken'd air.

But when they heard a verse or two inore, they Interrupted the readir, telling him they knew the song well in the Norse language, and had often sing It to him when he asked them for an old song. They called it the 'Maglclans.' or the 'Enchantresses." It would have been slngular news in the elegant translator, when executing hls verslon from the text of Bartholin, to have learzed that the Norse original was stlil preserved by tradition In n remnte corner of the British dominions. The clrcumetance will probably justify what is sald in the text concerning the traditlons of the Inhabitants of those remote isles at the beginning of the \(18 t h\) century.

Fven yet, though the Norse language is entirely disused, excent in so far as partlcular words and phrases are still retalned, these fishers of the Uitima Thule are a generation much atiached to these anclent legends. of this the Author learned a singular instance.

About twenty years ago, a milsslonary clergman had taken the resolutinn of traversing those wild islands, where he supposed there might be a lack of rellgious Instruction, which he belleved himseli capable of supplying. After belng some days at sea in an open boat, be arrlved : North Ronaldsha, Where his appearance exclted great speculation. II uris a very little man. dart-complexioned, and from the fatigue he had sustaiaed In removing from one Island to another. lie appeared before them \(111-d r e s s e d\), and unshnved; so that the Inhahltants set him down as otie of the anclent I'lets, or, as they call them with the usual strong guttural, Peghts. IIow they might have recelved the poor preacher In this character was at least dublons: nnd the schoolmaster of the parlsh, who had glven quarters to the fatlgued traveller. set off to consult with Mr. Stevcnson, the able and Ingenious engineer of the Scottish Lighthouse Service, who chanced to be on the Island. As his skill and knowledge were In the higheat repute, It was concelved that Mr. Stevenson could deelde at once whether the stranger was a Peght, or ought to be treated as such. Mr. Stevenson was so good-natured as to attend the summons, with the vlew of rendering the preacher some service. The porio misslonary, who had watched for three nights, was now fact asleep. IItilo dreaming what odlons susplelons were current respectlag him. The inhablants were assembled round the door. Mr. Stevenson, understaniln: the traveller's conditlon, decilned disturbing him, upon which the lslandprs produced a palr of very little, unconth-looking boots, with prodigionsly thlck soles, and appealed to him whether it was posslble such artleles of ralment could beloug to any une hut a Peght. Mr. Stevenson. finding the prejudices of the natlves so strong. was Induced to enter the sleepling. npartment of the traveller. and was surprised to recognise In the supposell feght a person whom he had known in hls worldy professlon of an Eidinburgh shopkeeper, before he had assumed his prescnt vocation. Of course he was enabled to refute all susplcions of I'eghtism.

Note 6. - Sea Monsters, p. 16
1 have sald, in the text, that the wondrous tales told by Pontoppidan, the Archblshon of Upsal, shall find bellevers In the Northern Archlpelag.

\section*{NOTLS 'TO 'IHE PIRA'TE}

It in in valn they are cancelied even in the later editions of Guthrie's Grummar. of which liniructive work they uned to form the chapter far mont attractive to Juvenile readera. But the mane canses whifh probubly kave hirth to the legends concerning mermalds, men-snaken. krakens, and other narveflome inhulitante of the Northern oceani, are atili nthat in thome cllmaten where they took their rine. They had their origin probabily from the eagernens of curlosity maniferted by our elegant poetesa, Mrs. Llemans:

What bldent thou in thy treasure-cavea and cellm
Thou ovor-sounding and myaterlous sea?
The additionnl mystic gloom which resth on these Northern hiliown for half the year. Joined to the linperfect glance obtalaed of oceanlonal oldjectn, ancourage the timid or the fanclful to give way to lmasination, and fre. fueutly to shape out a distlnct story from wome olject half-neen and luper. feetly examined. Thus, some years slace, a large injort wins mein fil the lunnilful Bny of scallowny in zatind, so much in vilgur opinton resembllag the kraken, that though it milght he distingulalied for several days, if the exchange of darkness to twillght can he termed so, yet the hardy buat. men mhadder to npiproach 11, for fenr of helng drawn down ly the suction supposed to attend its sinking. It was prolabiy the bull of some vessel which had foundered at men.

The bellef in mermalds, so fanciful and pleasing in itself, is ever and anon refreshed ly a strange tale from the remote shores of nome molitary fifiet.

The Author heard a mariner of some reputation in his class vouch for Laviag seen the celehrated sea-serpent. It appeared, so far as conld he guessed, to be ahout a hundred feet long, with the wild mane and flery eges which old writers nserilse to the monster; but it ls not unilkely the speetntor might. In the doubtful light, be deceived by the appenrance of a good Norway log flonting on the waves. I have oniy to add, that the remains of an aulmal. supposcd to belong to this latter species, were driven on whore In the Yetland isles whithin the recollection of man. Part of the bones were sent to London, and prouounced by Sir Joneph Hanks to be those of a basking shark: yet it would seem that an anlmal so well known ought to have been Immediately distinguished by the Northern fishermen.

\section*{Note 7. - The Scart on Cobmorast, p. 25}

The scart or cormorant may be seen frefuently dashing in wild fight along the roosts and tldes of Zetland. and yet uole oflen drawn up in ranks on some ledge of rock, like a body of the Lhack Hrumswickers la 1815.

Note 8. - Tusiser's Poverty, p. 36
This is admitted by the English agriculturlst:
My zusic since han been the plough, Entaugled with some care amoug;
The gain not great, the paln enough,
Hath made me sing another song.
Note 9. - Administration of Zetland, p. 38
At the perfod supposed. the liall of Morton held the Islands of Orkney and Zetland, orlginally grunted In 1643 , contrmed \(\ln 1707\), and rendered alisolute in 174!. Tllis gave the family mineh property and Inthence, whed they usually exerclsed by factors, uamed chamberlatis. lu 1 fifit thes property was sold by the then Lurl of Morton tosir Iawrone dundas, ly whose sun, Lord Dundas, It is auw held. - Thomas lard bundas of Aske, in York. shire, was created Earl of Zetland Iu 18:5s (Luiny).

\section*{Nort 10. - 'To 1 ERE: p. 47}

When a person changes his condition muddenly, at when a miner heronips lliberal or a churl good-hnmonred, he If sald, in Bcoteh, to be 'fey'; that Iw, predentined to apeedy death, of which such mutatlons of homour are recelved an a sure indication. IThe mame word fot, whe the name menilu:. Is current amongat the peogile of the North Frialan Ialsads - Nylt, Fibur, etc.l

Note 11. - The Bittle, on Beetla, p. 56
The beetle with whlch the Scottish hounewlver uned to perform the offic: of the modern mangle, hy beating newly-waohed Ilsen on amooth atone for the purpose, called the beetllog-itone.

\section*{Not: 12. - Chapman's Drouttr, p. 62}

The chapman's drouth - that in, the pedar's thlrit - Is proverbial In Bcotland, because these pedestrlan traders were in the use of tuodently unk. Ing only for a drint of water, when, In fact, they were dealroun of food.

\section*{Noti 18. - An ORANUS to St. Ronald, p. 62}

Although the Zetlanders were early reconclled to the Reformed falth, some anclent practlces of Cathollc superstition survived long among thrim. In very tormy weather a fisher would vow an oramus to Bt. Honaid, und equilted hlmeelf of the ohllgation hy throwlige amall plece of money lu at the window of a rulnous chapel.

\section*{Note 14. - Sale of Winds, p. 70}

The King of Bweden, the same Erlck quoted hy Mordaunt, 'was,' says Olaus Magnus, 'In his time lieid scrond to none in the magical art: auil he was \(t 0\) famillar with the evll spirits whom he worshipped, that what way boever he turned hls cap, the wind would presently hlow that way. For thls he was called WIndycap.' - IIstoria le Dentibua Septentrionullbun; Rome. 1555. It is well known that the laphnders drlve a protitabie trude in selling vinds; but it ls perhaps less notorlous that wlthin these few yearw such a commodity might be purchased on British ground, where it wis Ilkely to be in great request. At the vllage of Stromness, on the Orkuey maln Island, called lomona, IIved, in 1814, an aged dame called Hessi" Mi!lle, who heiped out her subslstence by seiling tavourable winds to mariners. He was a venturous master of a vessel who left the roadstend of Stromness wlthout paying his offering to propltlate Bessle Mulle: lier fer was extremely moderate, being exactly slxpence, for whleh, as she explalned herself, she bolled her kettle and gave the bark advantage of her proyers, for she discialmed all unlawful arts. The wind thus petitioned for was sure, she said, to arrive, though sometlmes the mariners had to walt somithme for 1 t . The woman's dwelling and appearance were not unbecomin': her pretensions: her house, which was on the brow of the steep hill on whifit Stromness la founded, was only accessible by a serles of dirty and prechpi tous lanes, and for exposure might have been the abode of Eolus himself. In whose commoditles the lnhahltant deait. She herself was, us she told us, nearly one hundred years old, wlthered and drled up like a mimmy. . clay-coloured kerchief, folded round her head, corresponded in colonr to her corpse-llke complexion. Two light blne eyes that gleamed with a lustre lik. that of insanity, an utterance of astonishln; rapldity, a nose and chin that almost met together, and a ghastly expresslon of cunning, gave her the effect of thecate. She remembered Gow, the pirate, who had breu a natlve of these inlandm. in which he clomed hin ent rr, as mentloam In the preface. Anch was Ifenale Millif, to whom the marincrs pald a mort of tribute, with a feellog betwixt jent and enpbent.

\section*{Notte 15. - Helcctancef to mavf lhowning Men, p. 70}

It In retuarkahin that, In all archlpelngo where ar many permona must be necrasarlly endangered by the waves, su atrange and Inlinman maxim should have Ingenfted ltaelf upon the minda of a people otherwise kind. moral, and lompltahle. Bint all with whom 1 liave spoken apree that it wan almost general in the legioning of the isth century, and wan with dificilty weeded out liy the nedulous instructlons of the clergy, and the rigormis in. Junctlons of the proprletora. There is little doubt it had been originally introdiced as an excume for sufferlag thone who attempted to escape fromi The wreck to perlsh unamsisted, so that, there belng no aurvivor, whe might be conaldered an lawful plunder. A story wan told me, I bope an untrue one, that a rensel having got anhore among the breskers on one of the remote Zetland Islanda, Ilve or alx men, the whole or grenter part of the unforcunate crew, endea voured to land by assletance of a hawber, whlch they had secured to a rock ; the inhabltanta were amapmliled, and lowked on with momp uncertalnty, till an old mnn sald, slrm, If these men come ashore, the ad. ditlonal months wlll eat all the ueal we have in atore for winter; and how are we to get more?' A yoling fellow, moved with thls argument, ntruck the rope asunder with hla axe, and all the poor wretches were lamersed among the breakers, and perished.

\section*{Note 16. - Mair Whecks bhe Winten,' p. 81}

The anclent Zetlander looked upon the sen na the provider of bia living, not only liy the plenty produced ly the flabings, lint hy the spoil of wrerks. Some particular lalands have fallen of very conslderaily in their remt sin the commlesloners of the llghthouses have ordered lhhits oll the isie of saila and the l'entland akerrles. A gentieman, famillar with thope seas, espressed surprise at seeing the farmer of one of the isles in a lout with a very old pair of ealls. 'Ilad It heen Ills will,' sald the man, with an affected teference to I'rovilience very inconslatent with the seuthinent of his speech - 'had it been His will that llaht had not been placed yunder, I would have had enough of new salls last winter.'

\section*{Note 17. - The Drows, or Trows, p. 102}

The Drows, or Trown, the legitimate successors of the Northern duergar, and somewhat allled to the falrles, reside, like them, In the interlor of green hills and caverns, and are most powerful at midnlght. They are curlous artlfcers in Iron, as well as in the preclous metals, and are sometlmes pro. pitlous to mortals, but more frejuently caprlclons and mulevolent. Among the comuon people of 7ethand, thelr exlstence stili furms an article of unlversal bellef. In the nelghinourling Isles of Feroe they are enlied Foddenskencand, or subterranean penple: and Lacas Jocolson lioles, well acrinainted with thelr nature, assures us that they Inhailt those places which are polluted with the effuslon of blood or the practice of any crying sin. They have a government. which seems to be monarchlcal.

\section*{Notr 18. - Cons-milis. p. 116}

There is certalnly womething very extraordinary to a stranger In Zetiand corn-mills. They are of the smallest possibie slza: the whefi which drires them is horizontal, and the cogs are turued diagounity to titw water. The beam itwelf alanda upright, and falamerted in a stone quern of the nid. fanhloned ronatrictlon, which it firnm rouad, and time gurfurma itm dily,
 In eontriving a tuaclilne fur wrinilige corn in hla ipmert inintul. Theme milis Thece may ive tive himiterl auch milia on one island, wot enpuble any whe conatruction to theme, and very Ilitle Iarger la mac, may be eeen fo Norway at the present time, in the year 1803.)

\section*{Notn 10. - Moxtmonle in Zettand, p. 166}

Vontrame, In hif Iant and Ill-adviaed attempt to Invade Scolland, aut of eeprice, behaved int indifferently when they came into action.

\section*{Note 20. - Sta Johs Ukry, p. \(1: 10\)}

Ilere, as afterwards remarked In the text, the Zetinnder'm memory ilo. ceived : an grommy. Nir John Iirry, a brave moldier of forfunp, wink mi lhal tlae in Montrome'n army, und made prlmaner along will him. Ile ladd changed so often that the mintake is fardonable. After the actlon, he wis ezecuted by the Covenanters: and Wlud-changluy Farwick thon could change no more.

Strachan commanded the body by which Montrose was rollted.

\section*{Notm 21. - The Sword-dances, p. 157}

The sword-dance In celelirnted in general terma ly Olans Magnin. It* seema to bave consluered It as pectillar to the Norweglann, from Whom " ,hity have pasmed to the Orkneymen and Zetinnilers. Wlth olher Northerli e. is.

\section*{Of thein Dancime an Aama}

Mnreover, the northern Gothe and 8wedes had another aport to exercle youti, with all, that they will dance and skip amongat unked sworde and dangeroun weagoms; and thin they dc after the manner of mantera of defence, an they are taugit from thelr yomih by akilful teachern, that dance before thera, and sing to it. And thin piay in wiowni empectally about Sifrovethe, called in Italian macherarum. For, before carnivala, all the gouth dance for eigit daye togsther, holding their sworis up, lint within tike ralibarda, for three times turning about ; and then they do it with their naked swortin liftend up. After thia, turning more moderately, taking the polith and pummela one of the other, they clange ranks, and place themselven in an tringoual figure, ani tipis they call rosam; and presently they diasolve it by drawing back tireir aworiln and lifting then! up, that upon every one's hend there may be maile a square rosif, and then ly a must ulmbly whinking their awords about collaterally, they quirkly lenj) la.vk, aml eull th. aport, wlilch they gulde with pipea or songe, or both together; firt hy a more havis. then by a more vehement, anil lantly by a mont velpment, dancing. But thin mperulation in ecarce to be underntood but hy those who look on, how conuely and decent it ha, when at one word, or one comululling, the whole armed mnititude is direrted to fail to fight. and clergyinen niay exercise themmelves, and ningle themrelves amoug others at this sport, became it is all gulded by most wise reamon.

To the Irimate's account of the sword-hance, im alle to ndd the nords sung or chanted on oceasion of this dance, us it is still performed in lap:a Stonr, a remote lainnd of Zetinnd, where ulone the cistom kepis lis gromind. It ln, It will be olserved by antlgurles, a specles of piny or mysiery. In whleh the Seven Champlons of Christendom make thelr appearance, as ia

\section*{NOTES 'TO TIIF: IIRATE:}

 non of niy frlemil Mr. Neoti of Mowhle, Retland. Mr. Illhert liam, In his but somewhat leas full than the tullowlar: -

Peanomar IMamatia!
(Einter Mastime, In the chururtor of ST. Geomen.)
Brave gentlem all within this locor,'
If ye ilolight fil any puart,
Cume mee the datiere njwiti this floo.:
Which to you all mlail yimh comfort.
Thets whall 1 danere ill nuels a mort,

Yoni, minutrut tum, 1 lay me a porte. \({ }^{3}\)
That I out thin tirer many jrove of Man.
(IIf borra, nenl) ifuncpa in a Ilwe.)
Sow have I lancell with lieart anil hausi,
Bruve sentlem all, an you may moe,
For 1 luave buati tried fin waily a laud,
An yot the truth can tentify;
In finglani, Ancotland, Irwhanl, Framer, Italy, amel Apain
Have I leven triml with that gowl aworl uf ateol.
(/Irunt, , ind jlonrishes.)
Yet, I deny that ever a mant ill make me yleld 1
For in my fumly there is atrength,
As by uy manlumal may in ween:
And 1, with that goonl sword of length, Have oftentimes fin jeriln buen,
And over chanpponim I was king.
And by the strength of this right hand, Gure un a day 1 kill'd fiftewn,
And left thesn deal upon the land.
Therefore, brave imlastrel, do not care, lint play to me a porte nowt light, That I no longer ilo forbear.
But dance In all thene gention" might ; Althougl? my mernuth maken you almaed, Brave rentles all, be wot ufrahl,
For here are wix champlonim, with me, stald, Aal by uly manhooml l have ralmed.
(/Ie dllmers.)
Shice I Inave danced, I think it lant
To call wy brethren fin your alght, That I inay lave a little reat, And they may dance with all their might ; With heart and hand as they are knighte, Aud shake thelia nword of steel wo hright,
And show thafy main atrength on this Hoor,
For we shall have another bont
Before we pasa out of thim boor.
Therefore, brave minint rel, do not
To play to me a pirte must light, That I lno lunger fo forleear, Ifit lianure fil all theme sonitles' night.
(/Ie dimies, illul then histroulures his dnighte, as umier.)
Stont Jameen of Spain, both tripd and atonr,' Thine acts are known fill well findeal ;

\footnotetext{
So placed in the ohl MS.
" Bonr - Bo spelt to accorl with the vilgar pronnuchation of the worl 'lmwer.'
3 Porte - m npelt fis the oriphal. The wuril f, kuown as inlicathig a piece of musio on the lagpipe, to which ancient inatrument, which in of Scanlinavian origho, the sworddance may lave been originally composed.

1 stour-great.
}

\section*{NOTES TO THE IPRATE}

And champlon Dennif, a French knight,
Who stout and bold in to be seen;
And David, a Welahman born,
Who is come of unble blood;
And Patrick also, who blew the horn, An Irieh knight, amongst the wood; Of Italy, brare Anthony the good, And Andrew of Beotland king; 8t. George of England, brave indeod, Who to the Jews wrought muckle tinte. \({ }^{1}\) Away with this! Let un come to sport, Bince thit ye have a mind to war,
Bince that ye have thil bargain sought,
Come let us fight and do not fear.
Therefore, brave minatrel, do not care
To play to me a porte mont light,
That I no longer do forbear,
But dance in all these gentlen' sight.
(He dances, and advances to James or Bpain.)
Stout James of Spain, both tried and stour,
Thine acts are known full well indeed,
Prement thyself within our sight,
Wlthout either fear or dread.
Count not for favour or for feid,
Since of thy acts thou hat been sure; Brave Jamen of Spain, I will thee lead, To prove thy manhood on this floor.
(Jayes dances.)
Brave champlou Dennis, a French knight, Who stout and bold is to be seen, Present thyself here in our sight,
Thou brave French knight,
Who bold hast been ;
Since thou such valiant acta hast done,
Come let us see some of them now
With courtesy, thou brave French knight, Draw out thy sword of noble hue.
(Dexnte dances, while the others retire to a sids.)
Brave David a bow must string, and with awe
Set up a wand upon a stand,
And that brave David will cleave In twa. \({ }^{2}\)
(David dances solus.)
Here is, 1 think, an Irish knlght,
Who does not fear, or doen not fright,
To prove thyself a valiant man
As thou hast done full often bright;
Brave Patrick, dence, if that thou can.
(He dances.)
Thou stout Italian, come thou here;
Thy name is Anthony, most stout ;
Draw out thy sword that is most clear,
And do thou fight without any doubt;
Thy leg thou shake, thy neck thou lout, \({ }^{3}\)
And show some courtesy on this floor, zrut we shall have another bout
Before we pass out of this boor.
Thou kindly Scotsman come thou here ;
Thy name is Andrew of Fair Scotland;
Draw out thy sword that is most clear,
Fight for thy ling with thy right hand;
And aye as long as thou canst stand,
Fight for thy king with all thy heart ; Ald then, for to confirm liis baid, Make all his enemies for to smart.
(He dances.) (Music begins.)

\footnotetext{
\({ }^{1}\) Muckle tinte - much loss or harm ; so in M8.
\({ }_{2}^{1}\) Sornething is evidently amiss or omitted here. David prebably exhibited some feat of archery.
\({ }^{3}\) Lout - to bend or bow down, pronounced loot, as doubt is doot in Scotland.
}

\section*{Fievis \({ }^{1}\)}

The six stand in rank with thelr awords reclining on thelr whouldern. The master (St. Ceorge) dances, and then atriken the aword of James of Spain, who follows George, then dances, strikes the sword of Dennis, who follows behind James. In llke manner the rest - the music playing - wordy as before. After the six are brought out of rank, they and the nustor form a clrcle, and hold the swords point and hit. This clrcle in danced round twice. The whole, headed by the master, pass under the swords held in a vanlted manner. They jump over the swords. This naturally places the sworde across, which they disentangle by passing under their right sword. They take up the seven swords and form a clrcle, in which they dance round

The master ruus under the sword opposite, which he juups over hackwards. The others do the same. He then passes uuder the right-hand sword, which the others follow, in which position they dance, untll commauded hy the master, when they form into circle, and dance round as before. They then jump overs thelr backs. They dance round means their backs are to thaster calls 'Loose,' when they pass under the right aword, and are In that form untll

The master lays down his sword, and lays hold of the point of Janes's sword. He then turns himself, James, and the others, into a clne. When so formed, he passes under out of the midst of the clrcle; the others follow; they vault as before. After several other evolutions, they throw themselves into a circle, with their arms across the hreast. They afterwards form such figures as to form a shield of their swords, and the shifil is so compact that the master and hls knights dance alternately with this shield upon their heads. It is then laid down upon the foor. Each knight lays hoid of their former points and hilts with their hands across, which disentangie by flguirs directly contrary to those that formed the shield. This finishc 3 the baliet.

\section*{Efilogue}

Mars does rule, lie bends his brows,
He makes us all agast ; -
After the few hours that we stay here,
Venus will rule at last.
Farewell, farewell, brave gentles all, That hereln do remain, I wish you health and happiness Tll we return again.

\section*{[Exeunt.}

The manuscript from which the above was copled was transcribed from n very old one by Mr. Willam Henderson, Jun., of I'apa Stour, In Zetland. Mr. Henderson's copy Is not dated, but bears his own signature, and, from various circumstances, it is known to have been written about the year 1788.

Note 22. - The Law-ting, p. 202
The Law-ting was the comltia. or supreme court, of the country, being retalned ioth In Orkney and Zetland, and presentligg, in their constitution, the rude origin of a parilament.

\section*{Note 23. - Ilill of Hoy, p. \(20^{\circ}\)}

And from which \(11 i l l\) of Hoy, at midsummer, the sun may be seen, it is said, at mldniglit. So says the geographer Bleau, although, according to Dr. Wallace, It cannot be the true body of the sun which is vislbie, bit oniy its image refracted through some watery cloud upon the horlzon.

Note 24. - The Dwarfie Stone, p. 202
This is one of the wonders of the Orkney Islands, though it has been rather undervalued by their late historian, Mr. Barry. The Island of Moy

\footnotetext{
\({ }^{1}\) Figuir - so spelt in MS.
}
\({ }^{2}\) Agrst - Bo spelt in MS.
risen abruptiy, starting as it were out of the sea, whieh is contrary to the gentie and flat character of the other Isies of Orkney. It conslsts of a mumtaln, having different eminences or peaks. It is very steep, furrowed with ravines, and piaced so as to catch the mists of the Western Ocean, and has a noble and picturesque effect from all points of view. The highest peak is dlvided from another eminence called the Ward \(111 i i\) by a long swampy valleg If of peat-logs. Upon the slope of this last hilii, and just wiffin the \(p\) lpal mountaln of Iloy opens into a holiow swamp, or corri, iles what Is calleu the Dwarfle Stone. It is a great fragment of sandstone, compossing one solid mass, which has long slace been detucherl from a belt uf the same materiais, cresting the eminence above the spot where it now fles, and which has slid down tili it reached its present situntlon. The rock is ulout geven feet high, twenty-t wo feet long, and seventeen feet broad. The mprir end of It is hollowed by Iron tools, of which the marks are evident, into it sort of apartment, containing two beds of stone, with n passage ietweou them. The uppermost and in rgest bed is tive feet eight inches long, ly two feet broad, which was supiosed to be used by the dwarf himself : the lower couch is shorter, and rounded off. Instead of being signnred at the corners. There is an entrance of about three feet and a haif scuare, and a stone iles before it calculated to tit the opening. A sort of skylight window gives lignt to the apartment. We can only guess at the purpose of this monument, ind different ldeas have been suggested. So!re have supposed it the work of some traveling inason : int the rni bomo would remain to be accounted for. The Rev. Mr. Barry conjectures it to be a hermit's celi : but it displays no symbol of Christianity, and the door opens to the west ward. The Orcadian traditions allege the work to be that of a dwarf, to whom they ascribe supelnatiral powers and a maievolent disposition, the attributes of that race In Norse mythoiogy. Whoever inhabited this singuiar den certainiy enjoycd

\section*{Pillow coid, and sheets not warm.}

I observed that, commencing fust opposite to the Dwarfle Stone, and extendIng In a llne to the sea-beach, there are a number of smail barrows, or cairns, Whlch seem to connect the stone with a very iarge cairn where we innded. Thls curlous monument may therefore have been intended as a temple of some kind to the Northern Dit Manes, to whleb tbe cairns might direct worshippers.

\section*{Note 25. - Carbus, le on the Ward Hill, p. 203}
- At the west end of tbls stone (i.e. the Dwarfle Stone) stands an exceeding high mountaln of in steep ascent, calied the Ward IIII of iIoy, ne:r the top of which, in the months ne May, June, and July, about midday, is seen something that shlnes and rparkles adminaily, and which is often seril a great way off. It bath shined more brlghtiy beiore than it does now: and though many have cilmbed ilp the hill and inttempted to seareh for it. yet they couid find nothing. The vuigar taik of it as some enchanted carbuncle, bit I take it rather to be some water silding down the face of a smooth rock, which, when the sun, at such a time, shines upon, the reficetion causeth that admirable splendomr.' - Dr. Wallace's Description of the Islands of Orkney, \(12 \mathrm{mo}, 1700,11.5 \geq\).

\section*{Note 26. - Fortune-telifing Rifyes, p. 220}

The Author has in chapter xxi. supposed that a very anclent Northern custom, used by those who were accounted soothsaying women, might liare survived, thongh in jest rather than earnest, mmong the Zetlanders, their descendants. Tine following original account of sucb a scene will shor the ancient importance and consequence of such a prophetic character as was assumed by Norna: -

\section*{NOTES TO THE PIRATE}

There Ifved In the amme territory (Greeuland) a woman named Thorbiorga, who was a propheteas, and called the littl. Vola (or fatal slater), the only one of nine siaters who survived. Thorbiorga durlug the whiter used to frequent the festivities of the neason, Invited by those who were lesirous of lenruing tisir own fortune and the finture events which lompended. Turpuil being a suan of consequence in this comutry, it fell to his hot to inquire how long the dearth was to endure whth which the comit! was then allieted; he therefore invited the prophetess to hls house, havhug make liheral preparation, ay was placed in :m eminent slthation, and covered with pillows hilled with the softest "derdown. In the evening she arriven, togethe: with a person wha hal been sent to meet her and show her the way to 'Puryuil's habitation. She was attireal as foliown - She had a sky-blue thaice, having the front ornamented with genns from the top to the bottom, and wore aromid her throat a necklace of glass hrinls. Her head-gear was of black lambskin, the lining being the fur of a white wild cat. She heant on a siafi, having a ball at the top. \({ }^{2}\) The stalf was ormamented with bras., abl the ball we ghow with gems or pebbles. She wore a Hinnand (or Humgarian) girdle, to which was attached a large ponch, fil which sle kept her magieal inphumuts. Her shose were of sealskin, dermed with the hair ontside, and serored by loug ann\} thick straps, fintened by brazen cilin..\%. She wore gloves of the whld cat's akin, with the fur inuost. An this ienerable peison entered the hall, all saluted lier with due respert; but she only ruturneal the comp, iments of shlh as were agreeable to her. Torunll condurted her with reveronce to the seat preparen for her, and 1 puested she wonld purify the apartment an! comp:ny assemblen by casting her eyes \(u\),ar them. She was by \(1 t\) mpans sparing of leer worls. The table being at length eovered, sueh viands were placed before Thorbiorga as suited her character of a soothsayar. These were, a preparation of goat's miik and a mess composed of the hearts of variona minnals; the prophetess male ume of a brazen spoon anu. pointless knife, the handle of which was compused of a whale's tooth, and ormamentec. with two rings of bras.. The table being removed, Torguil addressed Thorbiorga, reguesting her opinion of his house and gnests, at the same time intimating the subjects on which he and the compai;g were desirous to consult her.

Thorbiorga replied, it was inpossible for her to answer their inpuiries until she lad slept a night nuder his roof. The mext morning, therefore, the magival apparatus mecessary for her purpose was prepared, and she then infuired, as a mecessary part of the ceremony, whether there was any female present who conld sing a magical song called l'irullokur. When no songatress such as sime desired conld be fonnd, Gimhida, the daughter of Torquil, replied, 'I ann 110 sorceress or soothsayer; lut my unrst, Hallisa, tanght me, when in Iceland, a song called l"ardlokur.' 'Thent thon knowest more than I was aware of, waid Torquil. 'But as I am a Christian,' continned Gndrha, 'I consider these rites as matters which it is unlawfil to promote, and the song liself as milawfinl.' 'Nevertheless,' answered the sonthsayer, 'thon mayest help, us in this inatter withont any harm to thy religion, since the task must remaln with Torquil to provhle everything necessary for the present purpose.' Torunil also earnestly entreated Gudrinla, till she consented to grant his request. The females then smrronnded Thorbiorgit, who took her p'a.... .m a sort of elevated stage; Gulritia thensung the magic song, with a voice so swere fitil tuneful as to excel anything that had been heard by any present. The goothsayer, delighted with the melody, retnrned thinks to the singer, and then waid, 'thw'h I have now learned of death and disease approwhing the conntry, and many things are: nuw elear to ine whirli before were hidden as well from ine as others. Our present dearth of substane shall not long endure for the present, and phenty will in the spring sumeded tosareity. The rontagions diseases also, with whidh the comntry has beenfor some time allioted, will in a ance on this occasion, amomere afortme of higher inport than anyone romblhive ronjectured. Yon shall be married to a man of mane here in Greenhan; but gon shall met long enjoy that mion, for your late reealls yon to helimi, where gom shall berome the mothre of a mumerons and honourable family, whirh shall le antightune liy a huminoms ray of gomel fortme. Su, luy danghter, wishing there heabth, I bik thee farewell.' The prophetess, having afterwably given ansucon to all gheries which were put to her, "ither l'y Torquil or his quests, leparted to show lor skill at another festival, to which she hat been invited for that purpose. But all which me presaged, either concerning the public os individuals, came truly to pass.

\footnotetext{
1 We may suppose the beals to have been of the potent abler-stone, to which so many virtıes were ascribed.
\({ }_{2}\) Like those anciently borue by porters at the gatu: of di tinguished persons, as a badge of office.
}

The ahove narrative is taken from the Saga of Erick Itanda, as quoted \(\mathbf{h}\) the iearned Bartholin in hls curlous work. He mentlons simllar instance particuiarly of one Helda, celebrated for her predictions, who attended fest vais for the purpose, as a modern Scotsman might say, of 'spaeing' fol tunes, with a galiant 'tail;' or retlnue, of thirty male and fifteen fema attendants. - See De Causis Contempte a Danis adhuc Gentilibus Morti iib. iii. cap. 4.

\section*{Note 27. - Whaling Cestoms, p. 222}

The gariand is an artificial coronet, composed of rlbbons by those youn women who take an interest in a whallng vessei or her crew; it is always dle piayed from the rigging, and preserved with great care during the voyag

The best oil exudes from the jaw-bones of the whale, which, for the pu pose of collecting it, are suspended to the masts of the vessel.

Note 28. - Abmada in Zetiand, p. 296
The admiral of the Spanlsh Armada was wrecked un the Falr Isle. hal Fay betwixt the Orkney and Zetland Archipelago. The Duke of Medin Sidonla landed, with some of his people, and pillaged the lslanders of thei winter stores. These strangers are remembered as having remalned on th laland by force, and on bad terms with the inhabitants, till spring returneri when they effected their escape. - [The Spanish admirai who was wrecker on Falr Island was not the Duke of Medina Sidonia, but Don Juan Gome de Medina. See Diary of James Melville, Bannatyne Club ed., 1829.]

\section*{Note 29. - Fisherbien's Wives, p. 231}

Dr. Edmonston, the Ingenious author of a Fiew of the Ancient and Pres ent State of the Zetland Islands, has piaced this part of the subject In a Interesting ilght: -

It is truly painful to witness the anxiety and distress which the wives of these pon men suffer on the approach of a storm. Regardless of fatigue, they leave their home and fly to the spot where they expect their husbands to land, or ascend the summit of rock, to look out for them on the bosom of the deep. Should they get the glimpse of a sail they watch with trembling solicitude its alternate rlse and disappearauce on the waves and though often tranquillised by the safe arrival of the objects of their search, yet \(i\) cometimes is their lot 'to hail the bark that never can return.' Subject to the influen of a variable climate, and engaged on a sea naturally tempestuous, with rapid currents acarcely a season passes over without the occurrence of some fatal accident or halrbrealt oscape. - View, etc., of the Zelland Islands, vol. 1. p. 238.

Many interesting particulars respecting the fisheries and agriculture \(o\) Zetiand, as well as its antiguities, may be found in the work we have quoted

Note 30. - Promise of Odin, p. 240
Aithough the father of Scandinavlan mythology has been as a delty lons forgotten in the archlpelago, whlch was once a very small part of hls reatio yet even at thls day his name contlnues to be orcaslonaliy atrested as serm rity for a promise.

It is curlous to observe that the rites whth which such attestations ar stlll made in Orkney correspond to thosc of the anclent Northmen. It ap pears from several authorltles that In the Norse ritual, when an oath wat imposed, he by whom it was pledged passed his hand, whlle pronounclng it through a masslve ring of silver kept for that purpose. \({ }^{1}\) In llke manner

\footnotetext{
\({ }^{1}\) See the Eyrbiggia Saga.
} aded fest1elng' foren femaie us Mortis, iways disne voyage. r the pur-

Isie. halfof Medina of of their ed on the retiment. \(s\) wrecked an Gomez 829.]
and Pres. ject In an these poor heir homes summit of a pee of a sail. the waves; arch, yet it e m thenence d currents, halrbrealth culture of ve quoted.
delty iong als reatm. 1 as secuations are n. It aip onth was nncing it. manner, two persons, generally lovers, desirous to take the promis. of Odin. which they considered as pecullarly binding, jolned hands through a cusilar hole in a sacrificial stone which iles in the Urcadian stonehenge, cailed the circle of Stennls, of which we shali speak more in Note 46. p. 466. The ceremony is now confined to the troth-plighting of the fower classes, but at an cariipr period may be supposed to have intluenced a character IIke Minna in the higher ranks.

\section*{Note 31. - Coffin Key, p. 242}

An elder brother, now no more, who was educated in the nary, and hand been a midshipman in Rodney's squadron in the West Indies, used to astonish the Author's boyhood with taies of those hannted Islets. Un one of them, called, 1 belleve, Coftin Key, the seamen positively rofused to pass the night, and came of every evening whlle they were engnged in completing the watering of the vessei, returning the following suncise.

\section*{Note 32. - Motto tu Cilap. xxvi., p. 278}

It is worth while saying that this notto, and the ascriptlon of the beantlful baliad from which it is taken to the Right Ilonourabie Lady Ann Iindsay, occasloned the Ingenlous authoress's acknowiedgment of the linilad, of which the Editor, by her permission, published a smail impression, Inscrlbed to the Bannatyne Club.

\section*{Note 33. - Frawa-Stack, p. 287}

The Frawa-Stack, or Maiden-Llock, an lnarcessible clitt, divided by a narrow gulf from the Island of I'apa, has on the summit some ruius, concernlog which there is a legend similar to that of Danaë.

\section*{Note 34. - The Pictish Burgil, p. 288}

The Pictlsh burgh, a fort which Norna is supposed to have convelted into her dwelling-house, has been fuliy described in Iranhoe (Note 27, p. 480 of thls edition). An account of the celebrated Castie of Mousa is there given, to afford an opportunity of comparing it with the Saxon Castie of ConIngsburgh. It should, however, have been mentloned that the Castie of Mousa underwent conslderable repairs at a comparatively recent period. Accordingly, Torfeus assures us that even this aucient pigeon-honse, composed of dry stones, was fortlication enough, not indeed to hoid out a ten years' slege, like 'Iroy in simliar circumstances, but to wear out the patience of the besiegers. Erland, \({ }^{1}\) the son of Harold the Fiair-spokeu, had carrled of a beautlful woman, the mother of a Norwegian carl, also calied Harold, and sheltered himseif with his fail prize iu the c'astie of Mousa. Earl Llarold followed with all army, and, findiag the piare too strong for assault, endeavonred to reduce it by famine: but such was the length of the slege, that the offended earil fonnd it necessary to ilstea to a treaty of accommodation, and agreed that hils huthe:'s fonour shoud be restored by marriage. This transaction took place in the beginniug of tine \(1: 3\) th century, In the reign of Willam the lion of scotiand." It is probabin that the Improvements adopted by Eriand on this occasion were those which finished the parapet of the custie, by making it project out wards, so that the Tower of Mousa rather resembles the figure of a dice-iox, whereas others of the same kind have the form of a truncated cone. It is easy to see how the protection of the highest parapet would render the defence more easy and effectuai. --

\footnotetext{
\({ }^{1}\) [See Glossary.]
- See Torfiai Orendes, p. 131.
}

In \(185 n\) the Socicty of Antigurarles exerted theinseives in effecting repalrs on the tower (Luinj). - [It is now lacluded among the bulidings protected by the Ancient Monument Irotection Act, 1882.]

\section*{Note 35. - Tife MacRaws, p. 205}

The Maclaws were followers of the Mackenzles, whose chlef has the name of Caberfae, or Buckshead, from the cugnlzance lorne on hls standards. Unquestlonably the worthy plper tralned the seal on the same prinelple of respect to the clan term whlch I have heard lias lieen taught to dogs, who, conused to any other air, dance after thelr fashion to the tune of 'Caberfac.

Note 36. - Norna's Spelle, p. 200
The spells described in chapter xivill. are not altogether lmaginary. By thls mode of pourlng lead Into water, and selecting the part whlel chances to assume a resemblance to the human henrt, which must le worn by the patlent around her or hls neck, the sage persons of Zetland pretend to cure the fatal disorder called the loss of a heart.

\section*{Nute 37. - Bicker of St. Magnus, p. 315}

The bicker of St. Magnus, a ressel of enormous dimenslons, was prescrved at KIrkwall, and presented to each blshop of the Orkneys. If the now Incumbent was able to quaff it out at one draught, whlel was a task for IIercules or llory Mohr of Dunvegan, the omen boded a crop of unusual fertllity.

\section*{Note 38. - Luggie, p. 315}

Luggie, a famous conjurer, was wont, when storms prevented him from golng to hls usual employment of fishlng, to angle over a stcep rock at the place called, from hls name, Luggle's Knoll. At other tlmes he drew up dressed food whlle they were out at sea, of whlch hls comrades partook boldly from natural courage, wlthout carlng who stood cook. The poor man was finally condemned and burnt at Scalloway.

\section*{Note 39. - Antique Coins found in Zetland, p. 318}

While these sheets were passing through the press, I recelved a lettcr from an honourable and learned frlend, contalning the following passage relatlig to a discovery in Zetland:- Withln a few weeks the workmen. taklng up the foundatlon of an old wall, came on a hearthstone, unde: whlch they foum a horn, surrounded with masslve silver rlags, like bracelets, and filled with colns of the IIeptarchy ln perfect prescrvation. The plare of finding is withln a very short distance of the supposed resideuce of Norna of the Fitful Ilead.' Thus oac of the very luprobable fictions of the tale is verificd by a slagular colucidence.

\section*{Note 40. - Grouse in Orkney, p. 331}

It is very curlous that the grouse, plenty In Orkney as the text deciares, should be totally unknown In the nelghbourlng archipelago of Zetland, whlelt Is only about slity mlies' distance, with the Fair Isle as a step between.

\title{
NOTES TO THE IIRA'TE
}
ling re ulldinge has the indards. elple of 4s, who, berfac.
glnary. which be worn pretend

\author{
Note 41. - Ihamman lados, p. \(3+1\)
}

It was anclently a custom at \(: 5\). Oha's fair at libkwall that the goung people of the lower chass, and of elther sex. nssuchited in palrs for the period of the fuir, during witheh the couphe were termed lanimans firother and sister. It is easy to roncelve that the excfusive fambilitity arlshag out of thls custom was hinhle to nimse. the ratimer that it is sald llttie scandal was attacited to the indlscretions whicit it uccasioned.

Note 42. - Chalactar of Notiva. p. 3ini
The character of Norna is meant to he an Instance of that singular kind of and address for the power of hoposing upun of here, is stith more fingenhus lu eudeavouring to Impose ugon themselves. Indeod, manines of this kind may be often ohserved to possiess a surt of douhte character. In onfor' w. helh they are the behge whom thelr distempered lmagination shapes out, and th the of donble conschousness makes wild work whit the puthentix huaginuthon, and, judichously nsed. is perlagis a frepuent menns of restoring satity of inteilect. Exterlor circmastances striking the sensesuften have a powerful effect in undermining or battering the airy casthes which the disorder has exeficul.

A late medical gentleman. my hartlcuiar friend, twill the the rase of a lunatle patlent confined In the Ediniurgh Inflrmary. Ile was su far happy that his mental alrenation was of a gay and pleasant cluractor. giving a kind of joyous explanation to all that eame in contart whil hhm. He consldered the large house, numerons servants. "tc.. if the hospltai us ail matters of state and consequence belonging to hls own personai estailishtuent, and had no doubt of his own wealth and grandeur. One thing alome muzaled this man of wealth. Although he was provided with a tirst-rate cook and proper assistants, aithough his table was regulariy smpplied witir every delicacy of the season, set he coniessed to my frhend that, hy wome unconmon depravity of the patate. everythlug which he ate tasted uf purridye. Thls pecullarlty. of course, arose from the poor man betner fed upon nothing else, and because bls stomach was not so easlly decelved as hifs other senses.

\section*{Note 43. - Binds of Prey, p. 35̈́}

So favourable a retreat does the Island of lioy afford for birds of prey. that instances of thetr ravages, which seldom occur in other purts of tive country, are not unusual there. An individual was living in orkney nut long shace, whom, while a child in its swadiling-rhtios, ath eache actunity transported to its nest in the llill of lloy. llappily, dite derife being kuown and the bird Instantiy pursued. the child was fombl muinjured, playing with the young eagies. A story of a more hadierous transpurtation wis told me by the revand ciergyman who is minister of the isiant. Ilenring one day a strange grunting, he suspected his servants liad pernitiol a sow and plgs, whicl: were tennots of his farm-gard, ta get anmog his harley crop. llaving in vain looked for the trunsgressors upon solfi carth, he at fength cast his eves buwirts, whon he diseovered one of the litere in the talons of a large eagie, whleh was soaring away whth the unfortunate pig, sulteaking all the whlle whth terror, towards her nest in the crest of lloy.

\section*{}

Thls was really an exploit of the celohrated Avery, the phrate, who suddents, and whthout prowocation, tired his phitols under the tillie where he FUL. SIII-:30 nat drinking with him mesmmates, wounded one man severely, and thoug the matter a good jest. What is stIll more extraordinary, hls crew \(r\) carded It In the same light.

\section*{Note 45. - Wris.a and Wateg, p. 410}

A 'well; In the Inagnage of thone seas, denotes one of the whirlpool or clrcular eddles, which whecl and Inll with astonlshing wirength, and a very dangerous. Hence the distluction, In old Bagliah, betwixt wells an waves, the latter sfanifylng the dlrect onward course of the tide, and th former the mooth, glassy, olly-lookIng whirlponis, whose atrength seen to the eye almost Irremintible.

\section*{Note 46. - The Standina Stonen of Stennin, p. 411}

The Standing Stoncs of Stennls, as by a little pleonasm this remarkais moanment is termed, furnishes an Irresistlble refutation of the oplalou such antlquarles as hold that the clrcles usually called Irmidlcal were per llar to that race of prlests. There is every reasoa to belleve that the custo was ne prevaleut In Niondinavia as In (inul or Britaln, and am common loti mythology of odia as to ibuldical nuperstitlon. 'fhore is cvery ronson thlnk that the i)rulds never occupled any part of the Orkneys, and traditio as well as history, ascribes the Stones of Stennis to the Scandinavian Two large sheets of water, communleating with the sca, are conaected a canseway, with openlags permittlng the tlae to rise and recede, whlch called the Brldge of Brolsgar. Upon the enstern tongue of land nppear \(t\) Standing Stones, urranged In the form of a half clrcle, or rather a hors shoe, the helght of the pllars belng fifteen feet and upwards. Within th circle lles a stoae, probably sacrificial. One of the pillars, a ilttle to th westward, Is perforated with a clrcular hole, through which loving coupl are wont to join hands when they take the promise of Odin, as has bee repeatedly mentloned In the text. The Inclosure is surrouaded by barrow and on the opposite Isthmus, advancing towards the Bridge of Brolsga there Is another monumeat of standing stones, whlch, In this case, is coa pletely clrcular. They are less la slze than those on the eastern slde of th lake, thelr helght running only from ten or twelve to fourteea feet. Th western clrcle ls survouaded iy a dcep trench drawn on the outside , the pllars ; aad I remarked four tuntull, or mouads of earth, regulari disposed around it. Stonehenge excels thls Orcadlan monumeaí: but the of Stennis is. I concelve, the only one In Britaln which can be said to at proach it In consequeace. Ali the Northern nations marked by those hup inclosures the places of popular meetlng, elther for rellglous worship the traasaction of publle business of a temporal nature. The Norther Popular Antiquitices contaln, la an abstract of the E'yrbigyia Naya, a pa ticular account of the manner la which the Ilelga Fels, or Holy Rock, wa set apart by the Pontlif Thorolf for solemn occasions.

I need oniy add that, different from the monument on Sallsbury Plalt the stoncs whlch were used In the Orcadian circle seem to have beea raise from a quarry upon the spot, of which the marks are visible.

Note 47. - Bunce's Fate, p. 449
We have iseen able to learn nothing with certalnty of Bunce's fate: bu our frlend, Ir. Dryasdust, believes he may be identified with an old sentlit man who. In the begianing of the relgn of George I., attended the ikos Coffee-house regularly, went to the theatre every night, told mercllessi long slorlas abont the spanish Main, controlled reckoalngs, bulled walter: and was generally known by the name of Captaln Buance.
dhought crew re-wilripooln, In, and are wells and e, and the igth neems emarkal) oplalon of were pectithe custom mon to litr rinsion to tradition, dinavlans. nected by , whleh is uppear the r a horsefithin thls ttle to the ng couples has been barrows. Brolsgar. se, is com. side of the eet. This outside of regulariy but that ald to ap. hose hut. orshlip or Northern ya, a pal' Rock, was ury Plain, een raisell fate : but ld sentle the Rose ercliessiy d walters,

\title{
GLOSSARY
}

\section*{OF}

\section*{WORDS, PHRASES, ANI) ALIJUSIONS}

Abcom, above
Account, went ufon the, took part in plratlcal ex. curalons
Adsum, here I am
A 10RE, sour, acrimonloun
AIE, oak
Ani at, have objection to, diesatisfactlon with Als, own
Aif, an opon eom-boach
Aimen, iron
Arta, oate
Ahexamdem, the hero of Nathaniel Lee's Alerander the Grent, one of Betterton's great rôlem
Alexandin me the tent of Damius, a reference to Alexander's generous treatment of the wife and inother of the Perslan king, Dariun, when, after hle defeat, they were brought prisoners before the conqueror
All for Love, or the World well Lost, a tragedy hy Dryden
Alow, ahlaze
Altamont, the name of the hero of Sir Wm. D'Avenant's Just Italian (1630)
- Amono all living creatuaEs, etc. (p. 127), adapted from Spenser, Faelrit Queene, the fragmeut entitled 'Two Cantos of Mutablity,' canto vli.
Amphitreyon with whom onz Dinsis, the wealthy and lospltable provider of the feast. Both Plautis, and Moliere liave written a comedy with this title
Aves, once

Axoumbina, anclent name for Forfarahire
A-pea, mald of ant anchor, when before drawlug lt up the veanel la hrought lumediately above it
Asion, a celehrated Greek mualelan, who, driven luto the tem hy covetoris mallors, wan carried safely to lami by 2 dolphin
AEMida, a character in Tasso's Gerusalemme Liberatu, who was smitten with a frantle passlon for Rinaldo
Amoint, avaunt, begone
A-taif, just raised (all auchor) perpendicularly off the ground wheu it is being welghed Avoht, owned
Aunimia, a prophetess of the anclent Germans, mentloned ln Tacltus, (ierm., ch. vill.
Aver, in cart-horse
'AWAy, begone,' etc. (p. 392), from Lee's Rivill Queens, Act ill. sc. 1
Awayeanoina crop, a crop sown in the last year of tenancy, to be reaped by the Incoming tenant
Awnous, alms

Baby, affectionate diminntive of Barhara
Back-spautd, the back of the shoulder
Baittle, rich with grass
Bang, or Bhana, the Indian saue of the common liemp, from which a strong narcutic is unade

Barmadoes watera, a cordial Havoured with orange and lemon perl Balswhle, rhlef character In (leorge Lillo's trageds, Cirurue Bianucell (173:)
haubling, contemptibly, paltry
Bean, or bera, a variety of barley; bear-araird, bprouting bear or barley beamdedmanat Ver. sailles, Matthieu Jouve Juurlan, who belemed two of the royal guardn in the Marble Conrt at Vermailles, on Cth Octuler lind herl-the-cat, beard tho lion
Bends, or enis (of mer. maids). See the passage In Antony and Cleopatru. Act li. me. 2
Bern, a bairn, or child
Berserear, Scamlinavian warrlor, of proved valour and unnsual strength, in a martlal frenzy
Bicker, a wooden dimle, drinkling-cup
Bide, endure, bpar; bide the bang, bear the brunt Bra, or bioa, to build ; biaan, buildlug, dwelling
Brenoes, an iron bar, with sliding kliackles for confinlug prisonera
Billir, a familiar mole of address, brother
Bismaz, a small steelyaril
Blacebeard, OLit, the huccanier captain, Elward Teach, or rather brimmomd, who terroriwal the Spanlsh Min lutwem 1710 and 1:18

\section*{468}

Blary Beunawirseman reimont, weariug a hiact mifurm, who fought along with the Fuglish In the Penlamalar War and at Waterioo
Blacemoae, Bum Rifuamlo, a Hymbinalabl writer of the hestoration sum पueen Alum perion
Hlasin, a Irint made fron luttermilik
HLate, modent, miy
luigr (un with her glanionr), tirmaten lioble. or bublez, amall Hototch colli = fth penny lhes., a minall apertury husally, or monaillia, a priting arink bosa-mosa, a boll wench Ihinsie-walhes, gool thingn, gewgawn lhinwy mie, toy, trinket llosxiz, the skina-gull
Bonoveh Monim, ntretched Inctweren Craigmillar and Merrhimton Cnstlen, on the south side of Bdloburgh ; there criminala were hanged, and usually burled
Budacsque, ot moumasioum, smiden squail, storm
Bowis, a wooden dlah for millk, pall Brali, broad
Braws, the clothee
Bumamess, trowserlesn
Beinnastig, presumably Brludiater, on the west wide of the Majuland
Bnosm, י'atmeill over which bufling watre has been poured
B eows, Tom, a satirical writer, dled in 1704
Bucxie, the amall black whelk
Burved, fit for nnthlug, uneless; perhapm from 'butt;' to putf ont, lutlate
Bulloceine, bullying
Bully-bace, onk bully who hacks up another
Bummina, buzzing, humming, drouling
Bummocm, ale brewed for a merty-makiug
Buraforoth, or Burbafbith, on the island of Uust, in Shetland

Cabalist, a practiser of makie, spirit-raising, ute.
Cacique, a native Indian chief in and arontud the Carilumean Sea
CAIBN, a monntain; the Graupians, behind which

\section*{(il.OSANRY} was the country of the predatury Hishlanilery
Callant. lai! camty cal. lan.o elicerful, lively lad, turm of afrection
Camacho': netten. Nee Bunchus
Canny, pmpitioua, lurky
Cantul, tifouw with a nullign Jerk Capa, a granimit mautle
Cafia, privateer
- Captaim, you mould me,' etr. (1. 4: 14 ), froni Otway'n Vender I'reacried, Aet v.
Carle, farm-mervait
CARLIXA, anl old woman, witch
Carmb or Cownim, a very fertile diatrict on the north side of the Firth of E'urth, in Pertinhire
Camt-avini, cart-horsem
Canting plate, digring turf
Cathean, a Higilaud robler
Caut, or caf, a wondell bowi for holding fool cacial, thoman. See nom 'finirole, Part 11. chap. xiv.
Cha membotba, lim, country tavern
Chival de mataille, atock anecdote
Chield, a fellow
Choomahs of the Slaughtera, more usually Choomera of the Slain, f. 6. the Valkyrlor, or Maidens of Fite, in Scaudinavlan mythology Clacm-omasm, baruacle geea, probably called clackgense frou the cry they make Claged, clogged, obstructed, with clay
Clarhes and chaverb, scandal mud goselp
Clacdio. Nee Stiakenpeare's Much Alfo Alout Nothing, A' lif. Bc. 2; but it 13 P'edro, not Clandio, who gives utterauce to the sentimeut
Clavering, chattering
Clem, or Clym, of the Clergh, a notel outlaw of Englewood Forest, near Carllsle, as famons a: archer as Robin Ifond. Sere a ballail In Percy's Reliques, vol. i.
Clirroni, ill Shakespeare's Henry l'I. Part III. Act ii. sp. 6

Clochna-ben, a hill In Kincardinesluire, nearly 2010 fret ligh
Choutina, mending, patching
cirtun, a rlaranter in Lue'm Alerumiler, or y"uern.
Clat-hmeon, roul.pit
Conce, a muali lonat
Cuan, fyanlah , iollar pinvere of elght. See tugnl plecrem Gho, a wooden bnwlic coe a wouden bowl full
Co licercio, mionioa, your leave, alr
Collear and tum deyid the olld piay of Grim ciollier of Crounton Culumalea, a lichan w on agricuiture, of the century A. 11 .
Conhte, or constura, \(t\) terpret, make ont
Cour, to exclinugy, hatt couring of comika, 0 turning of lкuits
Ceaca abutt, talk, alwout
Canig, neck
Crral, to be in A. to totapararily confu dintractenl
Croft land, thue lent qui of land, alwayn ln e vation
Crownir, a thick put nuade of oatmenl utirre water
Crowna, John, a Jram of Charles II.'s tiune CUmprey, or compue water-plant, used a "cooler of the blocul \({ }^{\circ}\)
Cumyena, goinifis, womeи
Сuдсн, woman'm keic for covering the inemi
Curtiun, according tome Roman legend, macrlf limself for hif count grod ly leaplug Int. chanm that opened in clty
Cusser, a stallion
Cut a feathez, to in swiftly through the wa so that the ripules stin off from the shilip's bow both sides
Cutty-axi, a short axe
Daprid, put aslde
Darring, larking, merriu:
Dart, erazy
Daikering, amuteriug
Darsae, Danimh
Darbaign battalle, jus himself by combat
:'Ayenant, Will or \(\because\) 'llas D'Avesia:T, wh hanatist of the i - entury

Imetar in Nat. miler, or A'inil

OHI-pit
1 lvast
mis slollirm nr dit. Aip I'or. bowl; coare' w 1 full alr
TIE DEViL, fis (of firim. the "uylon
Ifishan 4 ritar tw, of tín Int 1.
(IN&TRI'E, to ins. K W U1t romiks, otor finuts T, talk, buant fiv A, to lyo lly confuserl, lie leent quality way: ln eultithlek jottage neal atirred in
4. dramatiot II. 's tiue or compaey, a used an a be blowl' boEslps, oll
pan'm ke;clict the ietui dling toancicut ud, narelficwlias country's apling into a opened in the \section*{ion}

Ez, to move igh the water, ripples strean ship's bow utI

\section*{lıort axe} dide
IR, merrin:sout
ntering
Taile, jhati'
mbat
Cill, or Sire vesin:r, phe I of the lith

Dan-tmatw, death-throen
Dear aut, a wit that hae no keruel
Ineman, Lutandacusmon, iman of Thorahaten, In the Faeroe Islanile, in the 17 th century, wrote in Danlsh a demerfition of thobe inianda mud their inhabitant:
Dectrato viaus, an octilar deception bemmane, oun paremt coun. rey. Norway, which wan tho real parent moinitry of Orkney and Shetland, wan whbjert to llmmark Irom I3yf wislt. Orkney anl Bhetland were given up to Scotland In 14tis DenNie, Jonn, an amociate of the coffer-house witn, attorwarisa literary critle, dind in 1734
Dis, a toy, ornament
Dit Marim, protectiug Ileities
Dimo, kuock
Divot, chin turf uned for roofing cottagen
IOITED, atripid
Dis Efeastiak, a tragedy by Ihryden (1630)
Ihoor-ciliesex, loor-pont
Dovaloon, a Epanialı gold coiu, egital to the ilouble pistole, and worth about \(30 \%\).
Douck, reapectable
Dove, atubhorn, sullen, hard
Dutpe TKE OLIM, put out the light
Iowin, dark, melancholy
DowLAs, strong coarme linen cloth, supposed to derlve lts name from Doullens, In dept. Somine, France Downa, cannot, will not
Drammoce, raw meal and water
Drese'd, ondured
Drow, Spe Trow
Drune an Dayr's moy. A Welmlunan, David IJoyd, hud a now with six logn. A visitor wionn ho brought to mo the corriosity fouml David's wife tying deall drunk beside tho animal, and exclaimed, 'It 's the drunkellest sow I ever وaw'
Dide rlothes
Holst. a apecies of neawred
DUNr, owER, beatent, master.d
DONEIREERS, piraten
Durt, to knock, bang

Pdonmacwitlis, or Finota. cwillis, (ilam of, in the went of Entherianimine Lian, Pyem.
Hinteacht, mantm éon. coril,' 'ruity'
Ked, antiphity, oll men of olfon time
Emathian rieloa, a juati uf ancient Theanaly, practically inentioal witts the dintrict of Pharmalia Fmpenoz or Etmopia, Hegecl, its Itr. Johnmun's firmbler, Nom. 24,204
Frland, nut Parl firlanul, the mont of Harolil the Fairspoken, hut a mbor Orrisdian cheffenlled Firland tho Yonnger, who carried off Margaret, muotlier of Kari Haroll and wife of Mal. dailh, a Beottimh cliinf
Kтhemeong Sig Omorom, a witty Iramatint of Charlen 11. 's relgn

Vitraice Fognat, a furtifer royal lumting-ground ln Selkirtwhire
Kvirian, avoldiag, escaping fruta

\section*{Pair teadmen, mingelepa}

FAECIE ON KIS PACE, u malediction
Pasi, fagheet, trouble
Featiran, cut a, Se Cut a feather
Fece, maint, the greatent part
Feblite make forls fain, woulers astonimli funls: vemix, woulerfully
Fry, fated, or pretestined to apeerly denth
Fifinh, crazy, eccentri.
Finner, a nimall whale
Fia-clog, a log of fir-wood
PLichtise, to Hitter or treuible
Fhinch, or thange, a whale, mlice the blubler from thr bones
Fitip, ale or cider, wwedteltell. splced, and made hot, generally by planging the red-hot poker intu the lingial
Fouzye, besidem
Forfit, the fourth part of a lurk
Funt guarters, haula and fiet, apmlind to help
Fowd, or poon, diat rliet julge or magistrate
Freit, clarm, superatition
Froos, fasteninge for a cuat, consisting of ormatuental buttons and loops

FuNEIMA, hwking up the livela
Fun, a fiarrow
(lamemivazie, a leggar or tinkur Ualbmaguin, mirmiten! from liw Niors milli,t, to ime. witelh, ainl hrinele, or

GANR, ROHI: OAnOING, goling
 bayrait
(i) AE, to oblige, forere, muke treuthing RTintul, mhationl like a eurrimern knife, witls H crombel hatule Gate, way, roml, manifr
Qatheminu-peat, the jíce loft tis karp the fire alight (iAvbn, tlimey ormamenta, gitmrralkn
Gat mont, gowi many (ieate, fit)urty
(IENEEANHI DIORA MELLIS, the glory of producing hontey (brineva, gin
©jakVabi, In Ofe corrmetly muntioned in tie fiyr. big! ion Singu (ho, a deepl raviue whichs mluits tife men
Girdle, an lron fraing for rooking caken m
GLere, land lu-longing to than parimh minintor fill right of his oflice (ifim, moune the Fife Duhme ther glinu
Glower, to gazu fixedly
Garate, lıuij, fraghupht
Gob-box, innutil
Guluen-myz, a mperiem of will dinck Gotimen Warser, or (int.in WAxGKR, a li.juar mixed and rolobred whth golitleaf sronloid dowat the (inusk, at tailur's anowithing. irin (iovernante, louspkepper
(3)及k. fool
 Carse of (iuwrie
(iRATIMEST. it is (tromk
Graif, a threejoringed rt.hle-fork
Graith, gearf, fittings
Cibind Catmaink, or Catmass, threr morai i: i.unin int the Caribluan Ka:d (fREW, or GRUE, to shiser, "reepl (af thw Hesh)
Grey Mivi, ity of coal-finh, sillockn

Oraboacoeta, contman vemeel, Epanish war-vemel
GuDayam and eveawirt, the hoads of the bowes
Oum a two-stifused fot horsohalp) violln Qutse, male (rood) uno of, trmet, behave to Guisasisi, or ovicason, New Yaplo mesters of muminore
Crepochim, witch, hob goblla

Hacp, of Map, the deop nea
Hart, to fis or mottle
Hagains of mooazid, my. men for liberty to cut pes.
Hantw, whole, ontlon
Hary, op Hetm, In all prob. bluty the dant Hymir, Who in the Jymiakulata of the Filder Fidia ls onllod 'Hure-rice, or mecedInaly wle
Hawna, or mesta, 1 emvorn Into which the tlde fown
Halluameraed an, ragubond, oturdy ragamumin
Halas, the throat
Hane on, itlck fant ou
Habold Haspaenat firnt tug of all Norway couquered the bheilsud rulanda in 875

\section*{Has'ot, harvent}

HaEtht, gaytur, a friend of Milton, and suthor of numeroni pamphlete on huebandry
Havizac, beheviour, manuera
Hawnimy, or hazensm, hewlif exacted by the royal falconer on his vialt to the Jalande, in force till 1839
Haza, of Hexs a generic uame for 8 witch or eor. cereas
Hruhcat, wild, giddy
Hmbrem. See Haller
HEETBA, Mothen, or Nenthus, the earti-goddens of the ancient Gerunan racen Worns ' etc. (p. 39:), froiu Lee'm Rivul (weens, Act i.
Haus tisi, Dave! Hallo there, Davu!! Davus was a common name for a slave in Rome HEve tu, Ixieftic! Hallo there, you fool!
HIALTLAMD, or Hjalthand, the old Norie name for Bhetland
Hioh-DUTCH, German

\section*{Glossary}
kimmi, honey, B term of owdearinent
Itaplen nobble
Ilrmaner to move or allde down
Haparboca, thefisland of IAayth is the Weat Iadien Hovnswix tant, houeewifory Hown, haunt, harea
Ifvetronots, larg houm In st bad metate of derepals

\section*{Iuch, each}

IMEsproose or aysen. cocen varioty of north. sta diver or loon
InotMDA, the lerolne of Mra. Aphre Bohn's novel, The Iliblery of Oropneko or the Roval Slave (1003)
If apicievt sulus, amonget the anotty polate of law
Imen-Mitatir, of Irom-Mon. sum, an ibland mear the mouth ond of Loch Lomond, Ropt as 1 doer parts by the Dulie of I ontroce
Imyane aybo outrame, the rifht of trying thieven, whother taken within or ontside of the foudel doinaln
Ixpialdy land perfodically manured and in reguler cultivation
 DID Gillat takd. See Absalom and Achilophel, Part 1.
Iovin Jor, or Jus, Yulethe, Chriatman
Ibze of Pmovidemes, one of the Bahamas, mad I notorlous rendezvous lor buccauler:

Jace-a-Liset, puppet at which boye threw sticks in Lent, 8 blockheal
Jacombi, Twawty-aHuLINe, goid coln lamued by James 1. of Eugland

Jacta Eet alea, the die in cant, the decialon ln takeu JAMERE, one of the cunmpiratorn in Otway's Ienice Preserved

\section*{Jagate, pedinp}

Jam weminey antipones Catom, no one is to be proterred to Cato

\section*{JARL, earl}

Jarkshot, means 'the earl'm manalon or house'
JABTO, OF HSAETA, (my) heart, sweotheart
Javd, jade
Joavi, yet, ais

Josepm, an oll-fant rldiey eant
Joves, plllory
Karl-iamb, eabbage-gas BABLOT, lare bollung broth
RAim, contribution in a poulery, tant ole., by the fenant to Imallond KEMpioxs, chempl Warrlope reapectable people
Kit, of quat, ev IandIng-itey
Lisypen nivpis, champlon, werrior
Lian trie oummeat paven be fiogred on chip-b whllet lid slong the bi of a gun Rest chest
Bry-Cat Clue, He soclety, of Hanov pollelea, that exister London between 1700 17:0
Eitchem (to), s relish to brema, 15 cheew, fioh, or the like Krtrim, dimeult, tloklial Krapped Laten, apole 1 KBABAM, & Rbulous moniter
Kineth-DOLLAE, or ase: Thal这, the 'crome' called also the 'cro dollar, colned by Am for lies Nethorls puesensfons
ErLons, mall black H laud cattle

Lais, learning
LaxDLOUFEE, sdventurep Laxomprit, lind of h formerly ln use In Shetlands
Lapenti, whitm, alludim the white turned-up pete worn by oflicers the Rojal Nary
Lave, rent, realdue
Lawboirt-many, on 0 m whose chle? duty was regulatlou of weight. manares
LAW-rnie, the supreme co In macient Shetlaud Orkney
Leacure-mass, fumale ca follower
Lenmoz, a former count Bcotiand, emibraclng \(D_{1}\) barton and parts of 8 link, Perth, and Lonark
Lsyure, ldle huspy

\section*{bbtapegardon:} larre pot for black Eligis-dventurer kind of harp, use in the , alluding to urned-up lapby ofilcern of avy diue
- an offcer duty wan the weighte and supreme court Shetland amd female campner county of bracling Dumparte of Btirnd Lanark 188y

\section*{glossally}

Empamma, the ealy ledy who cecordive to eleme In Appontmr, No. 41 , misht jucthably peint hor feeo
Laroub, a wolght, im BrasAlmavian countries \(=17\). B Tha, evoindupole varied in Ehetlaud from 12 to 31 lbe . avoif., and wa divided Into \(3 /\) merke
Loak, a tano between stome walle
Lomioht-cot, ahlp-mur. gnon's boy or ationdant
Lochlim, mace on. The Normomen are so caliod in Osthem Loom, any hand of tub or demilar veseol
Loom, led, fellow
Loet, to bond or bow down
Lown, flatue
Lum, chlmany
Lrimacmue, chanacter in Nat. Lee's Aleramier, or Ritral Gucens

Mals, to momn
Man, mope ; masa ar touin, particularly Maint Dece. Nee Feck, malet
Mallaizd, the mala of the common wild duck
Mames, parionage
Maxroan, Virif. who was bora at Martui lu Nurth Italy
Maneal, or masala, a rude wooden ploughishare
Mancomid, abundoned on a desert inland
Masiche-Fat, amohing vat or tub
Madx, muet
Measme, old maze for Kincardineshlire
Meat-mzerarease. In Nof. way the milatren of the house is now sometimen called In famillar language the meat.mother (matm\%)
Mgleap, struggle, contant
MRLTITE, foodi a meal
Mersa AmD eman, honow; gratitude
Menx, acotch coin \(=1 \mathrm{~s}\). 1hd.; the twenty-fourth part of a lispund (\%.v.); meEE or LAND, a measure varyling from one to thee acres
'Methinge 1 ser tha naw Anion' etc. (p. 1st), from MacFlecknoe, Dryden'b natire on Shadwell
Mсния мА місно, skulking villany
Man, 8сотe \(=0\) furlongs

Mesa', abme
Monar oveculaman bisco, Ilearn to succour thome in diotrese
Mmeat ofati, fullod io su sbout from one taik to another, lowt the opportualty Moinose, a rold coln of Portugal \(=27 \mathrm{f}\).
MoLß man or, man of character
Molemptianty, rolating to a maill places and watercournen noved moand, that part of the plough whleh furme over the eround, the plough broant Mocele, much
Molevese, dupe pald for Erluding aralin: pk-rown MOLTERE, poferting (t) corn growi on cultivated land near the homestemal; oftrow multimen, to corn rrown on land ocensionally cultivated
Mum, atrong ale brewed from whoat and bltter herbe

Nachet, a prortabie luncheon
Nascien of the hilla on dakes, an allumiut to Shenstone's poem, Ainacy of the Pale Nantz, or Namtin, brandy

\section*{Nathalens, nevertheleas}

Nemt, иest
Nemomy avamua, the murmur of the grove?
veфfinyepira Zusis, Zeue the ciond-gatherer
Niaveror, a handful
Noaval, a peamant's con in Home's tragedy, Doughs
NOEWOOD facophataes, Margaret Finch, a gipsy, Who told fortunes at Nor. wood, near London, for ten yeara before her death in 1740, aged 108
Noup, headland, preelpitolly to the ena und sloping lulanel
Nowr, bluck euttle
Nut, biaf. sife leaf nut
O portunati mimiun, 0 too fortunate 1
Olar Tryoualson, or Olar Thyouveson, old Norne klug and hero, threw hin self into the waven during a cea-fight in the year lu( 4 ) polnted archhlahop of Upala in the lith rentury Olave plawtib twa chons. The Orkwey Ialamin were conquepiat by llamid Pairchalr in heachen times (Ni5). The Nartemues wara chrintianteod by Bt. Olaf, their king, a contury and - hall liter

Oratay et oleom memoth, I have lomt ny labour and my oll Opmin. A part of the Main. land (Pumoma) of Orkney lo calleal Orphir Omacmis, of daamue, a now, prayef, and offerling. Nee Note 1:3, p. th
OEEA tima, oeratonally, evary how and then Outie in the cava of folfo phanum, fie. Ulymman, whell raptured by tha moniter Polyphotan: (M/yas., 㫙. Mx.)
Oит-тAдEK, exenpt
0 wralay, a weck -eloth
Owern, oxpll
Pallabseq, Koman writer on akricuiturr, of the th centiry A. b .
pabcel-muatciam, an lidifterent musidelan
Ралиттсн, ןwrildge
Paktan, a crab
Prant, luquietive, pryiug
Pmonti, Pleta, the anclent inhabitante of Scothanh!, looked upon by the vuigar an superuatural beiugs
Paltasi, or palitay, furs
Phant scomm = fd. Eauglinh
Petit maitan, dunly
Petite Guave, or Patit
Gua va, a small harbour on the Weat ludian island of Hayti Phagaclia, in Themaly, where \(\ln\) in E.c. Cipear gained him great victory over hin rival Pompey
Philomatu, a lover of learnlug, aluatace- nucker
Piarrab, nt-plyed with a high, siow, showy action matid of a hormes Plarge, oune of the cou. aphaturnin (Otway'н I'rnice Preserved Pintule, a gold cohn of Spain, worth about 15 s .
Pizta, a falry
Plantiz cruive, a kail-yard l'lay Cabsio, to get Jrunk arol be made a cat spaw of Ponona, the Mainluad, of priucipal island of Orkney

\section*{\(4 \%\)}

Pontoprinas, Fme, the Younger, wiome f'orsïg Iul Norges Saturlige llisreferral to (p. 452), was bishop of Bergen, not arcilbishop of Upala. See Olaus Magnum Pors, piatols
Porto Bello, a town on the norti side of the lsthmus of Panama
Portueal piecre, Portaoues, picces of eight (rcals) \(=\) 4s., silver coins struck in Portugal
Primate (p. 45f), Oiat? Maginis. See Pontoppldan
Paince Puettrman, a character, nometimes a fisherman's son, wometimes a prince, In the Duke of Buckingham's farce, The Rehenrsal (16i!)
Prince Volacius, \(n\) character in Buckillghain's The Rehearsal
Prior, Matthew, poet, died in 1721
Pro bono publico, for tile puhlic good Providmee Island. See Isle of Providence
Pund scots, ls. 8d. sterling
Quadrupmoveque fetrex sonitu quattr angula Campum, the hoofs of the horses shake the crumbling fieid
Quaigh, a mall w ooden cup or drinking-bowl
Quean, a woman, weuch; ranty quean, disorderly, vagrant woman
Quen in the old plat. See Mucbeth, Act v. sc. 1. Shakespeare's play was alterel and put on the stage by Sir William D'Avenant in 1674
Qoern, hand-mill
Quid faciunt labtas seGITRs, how the crops are getting on Race or Portland, a dangerous current sonth of Portland Bill in Dorset

Raddman, or raadman, a councillor
Ranzelaan, or bancellob, a kind of parish constabie, one of lis chief duties being to 'rancel' or search for stolen goods
Raven flao (of Vikings), the raven was aacred to Odiu or Woden

\section*{(ild)SSARY}

ReDDina-kilm, midetoothed comh for the hair REIM-EExAAR, one who knows myatlo rhyme
Rubet, place of, reaort of heggars and loose characters
Restift, or restive, stubborn, obstinate
Rines rusty, or turns musty, sets at definnce, behaves obstinateiy
Ritt, a seratch or Incision
Riva, a cleft in a rock
Rochestea, EadL or, the witty but dissolute favourite of Charien II.

\section*{Roci, a dintaff}

Roxelay, a short cioak
Rollo the Waleze, or Hzoly the Ganoer, according to traditional hittory, the ancestor of tho Dukes of Normandy and Norman kinga of Ringland
Rona's carst, the highent hill ( 1500 ft .) in Shetland, in the nortil of the Mainland
Roose, to praise, commend Roost, a Atrong and boistervus current Rory Mohr of Dunvroan. See Boswell's Tour to the Hebriles, under date Sept. 15, and scott's Lord of the Isles, Appcudix, Note M
Roscius, a celebrated actor of nucient Rome
Roseberry Tupping, a conspicuous hill in Cleveland, North Riding of Yorkshire Robe tavian, in Rushell Street, Covent Garden, a celebrated resort of wits and men of fashion
Roxalana, or Roxana, a character in Nathanlel Lee's Rival Queens, or Alexander the Greal (16i7)

\section*{Rveso, rum}

Runes, letters of the ancient Norse alphabet ; a nuytic saying or verse of poetry

\section*{Sacelegs, innocent}

Sain, hems
St. John, restival or, one of the principal festivals of the year in all Scandinavian countries St. Leonard's one of the colleges of the University of St. Andrews gt. Mandus, an earl of Orkiey, assassinated by his consin Haco the the lsland of Egilshay on luth April 1116.

St. Olate, or Olaf, kine of Norway, mont z.ealous for the introdurthon of Chis thanity into that connitry lin the 11 th century
St. Ronald, or limenyald, a famolia jarl or earl of Orkney of tho 12th erntury, built the catheiral of St. Magnus at Kirkwnll
Sair, sore, sorty; saiker, greatly Samphzaz, a succulent plant growing amongst rocks and on salt marches near the sea, used for making pickles. See King Lfar, Act iv. sc. 6
Sancho (on the scumi of Camacho's kettle). See Don Quirete, Pt. 11. Chap. xx. The 'scimn' consinted of 'three pullets and a conple of geese'
Sandit-laverock, a lark
SAUNT, maint
Saut, nalt
Scald, an ancient scandinavian bard or poet
Scart, a cormorait; to seratch
Scat, \(n\) land-tax paid to the crowi; scathold, a com. mon. On p. 129 we should probably read 'scatland,' land paying skat or tribute, instead of 'scathold'
Scaur, a precipitous bank, rock
Schwartz benz, black beer
Scipio at Numantia. Scipio Africanus Minor found amongst the Spanish (Celtiberian) captives, after the surrender of Numantla ( 134 в.c.), a beautiful maidon, whorn he generously restored to her betrothed
Sclate btane, piece of rongh slate
Scounies, or scadries, young sea-gills
Sealoh, bealchit, a seal
Sea-wabe, seaweed
Sebastiay and Dorax, in Dryden's trapedy Dons Sebastion (1689), disput" and beconie reconcicid
Sadley, Sir Charles, a wi and poet of Charles 11.'s reign Sell of her, herbelf
SEt him Up, foraooth, a teril expressive of contempt for an assuming person Setrino, beconing, befitting Sevrrat, an inclosed field as opposed to au opencommon kimg of ouns for 1 Clиі comint ry

3NYALD, earl of th remtheriral irkwrll satilen, it plant rocks en near making um of See i. chap. masisted and a

\section*{GLOSSARY}

Shanwer.f., a dramatint sutirined ly Dryden under the name of Og in A bsillom and Arlitophel, and an Mar-Fireknoe ln the poem mic calied
Starney ibeat, fuel male of drical cow's dung
Slahpr, Ohit, the buccanier captain, Bartholotinew slarpe, who was active on the Spanisil Main about liso Shegrwater, of shearwater, a seabird of the petrel family, so callei from its low thlght, skimming close to the water shalrie, a Shetland pony
Surpueril of Salisrery Plain, by Hamali More, setting forth the homely widon aud piety of one David Saunders
Shoon (Gaelle), there
Shot, a field, plot of land
Shot-wisiow, a small projecting window
Shoupzetis, a triton Sic, such Siccar, bure, safe
Slllocks, or batthe, the fry of the coal-fish
Sinchair (malcolm) op Quendale, whell asked by the shipwrecked Duke of Medina Sidonla, or rather by his brother, whether he had ever seen such a great man as stood befure him, wade the reply in the text. See Hibbert's Description of the Zetland IsLunds, pp. 52, etc.
Sinales, talous of a hawk
Sim Arthegal, the inpersourtion of Justice in Spenser's Faërie queene, from the fifth book (Canto iv.) of which the passage on p. 90 is taken
Siz Lucius O'Thoger, in Sheridan's hituls
Skelping, nizble-footed
Sizeo, a hut for drying thbh
SKERIY, a bart, rocky islet
Sillifina, Danish = one farthing
Suirl, acreain
SKubler, the leader of a band of maskers, dancers, etc.
Slap, a gap, breach Slocirkn, to cool, drench
Sueakrd, killed by suoke
Snack, b hasty meal
Snece, the latch of tite duer

Smagled, cainght ly dmpping bait into the (eel"s) lurking-place
Sock, plonglishare
Soleclout, the lowest part of a plougit, which runs along the lottom of the furrow Sonsy richt ac.e! inan !amme bol. 'g bor 1. whic, "atorts furt y or lesth is thromgle inti \(u\) idat 1.1
Sovoh, .t sisi.; ! ! con over, lum a tuue
SPaEd, foretold; sparwomin, sorceresses, for-tune-tellers
Sparaz nucrs, pueri, bcatter the nuts, boys
Speranas, inguiries
Spriacherir, or spatcheat, insiguifleaut moveables especially such ms have been purluined or gathered ill a raid
SPRUCE-RERR, beer made from the young leaves of the spruce fir
SpuNE, match, torcil
Staci, an lusulnted, preclpitous rock
Staig, a young, umbroken hurse
Statira, a character in Nathunicl Lee's tragedy, Rival Queens
Stilts (of plongh), handles
Stuck-pısn, dried cod-fish and ling
Stor, a steer, young bullock Stour, stalwart, stont and stroug Stounsurg may be literpreted 'great fort'
Stbaif, gtrike, a meanire of capacity, about two bushels Strathnavern, r valley lealing sonthwards from the coant of Sutherlandshire. Montrosc's last fight took place at Invercarron, on the burders of Ross-shire Striex, stretch, measure oueself with STrinnes, straddle
Stroma, an island in the Pentland Firth, north of Scotland scceme, tine jurimiction attaching to a mill meder fendal tenure
Suce the monkey, to drink rum or uther hiquor
Sut juris, in possesmion of full legal rigits

SUMPI, a lublerly fellow, hockhead
Sune or myare, sooner or latir Shum cright trimito, give every one his due Swabie, swartback, the great hlack-backel gill
SWATTER, to swim 'fuickly mul awkwarilly
Swrlchie, whirlpool
swana, of of the Orkuey islands in the Pentland Firth Syne, nince
Buver, a sewer, covered Irain tacksman, an iuterluenliate tehaut
Ta'en, takeli
Tait of Won', a tuft or amall piece of wool
Tate, Nahum, pet-lamreate? amd dramatist, died in 1 F 15
Templars, law-studente of the Templie
Terentius Varro, Ruman writer on agricilture, of the lat century e. c.
Thalrm, catgit
тивft-bоот, hush-mmey, receivink stuien genils from a thef againet pecinniary conside rution
'Then, av the hell I mehit,' etc. (p. 431), from Otway'm l'enice l'reserved, Act iv. sco:

Thiogeh, a common Inggar
Thirl, the obligation on a tenant to have lim tomer ground at a certan mill and to pay dues for its maintenunce
Thole, endure, stand
Thrawart, perverse
'Thus prom the oraye,' atc. (p. 389), from Lee's liiril (!!"ens, Act iv.
Fill, a blitf cold clay
Timotheses, an ancient Grrek musicinn, celehrated from the innovations he mate: in the art he practisell. Sce also Pope's E'sw!y m Criticis"
Tint, lont; tinte, losn tirbacke, or tabbick, the kittiwake gull, a guillellot Titrie, little sistur Tucher-600D, dowry, purtinu Tollsrle, or tollsey, the place where inprefiants usmally assemble, exchange Tиom, empty
Tonsk, Aried roul-flah
Tortion, an intinl in the West Indies, off the Venezuelan coast

\section*{474}

Tow, rope
Town, the homentead, farme houce and its buildings
Tor, a woman's linen or woollen head-dress hanging down over the shoulders
Thap, to undeastand, to be knowing, wide-swake Thimctio's motrie. See Tempest, Act iv. sc. 1
Tanidado, Trinidad tobacco
Taiptoremes, in \(a_{i} \cdot\) ient Greek miythology, the inventor of the plough and of agriculture
Troce, or TRuCE, to barter, bargain
Trow, or TROLD, a monster, demon of the mountains and of the sea; in thils romance, a fairy
Turf-Einaz, or Torv-Einar, an Illegitimate son of Earl Rognvald of Norway, and the founder of the dynasty of the Earls of Orkney
Tusser, Thomas, a famous \(16 t h\) century writer on husbandry
Twiscar, tubhicar, or torvskar, a spade for cutting peats

UDALIEE, or ODALEE, a freehold proprietor
Uosove, frightful, horrible
Ulare, oil
Uyquhite, the late, decersed
UMCANMT, dangerous, not quite sane
Unco, strange, particularly Understamd Trap. See Trap, understand
Unialsed, unhailed or unsaluted
UNICO CONTEXTU, all of a piece

Une, the eighth part of a mork of land ( \(q . v\). )
Usoutizatea, whinty
Verieda, a prophatest of the ancient Germans, mon tioned in Tacitus, Germ. ch, vili.
VELVET, PROPHESIR OPON, foretells what ale certainly knows. Colupare the racing phrase 'to stand on velvet, to bet in such a wayas to win with certainty
VENTIS surgmitieus, with rising winds
Virda, or vivda, beef dried without salt
Vision or Mirza, by Addison, in No. 189 of Spectator
Vivers, victuals
Vor, an inlet of the sea, creek
Voluara, voluspe, strictly a part of the I'oetic Édda; in this romance Incorrectly used for prophetess, sybil

WADIAAL, or vabled, homespun woollen cloth. The Norwegian peasantry still make their clothes of It at the present day
Wart, or wert, the crose thread or woof of a web
WaEErife, wakeful, watchful
WAN (water), flthy, darkcoloured
Warloce, wizard
WA's, walls
WatER-DRAGONs. The ancient Norsemen loved to call their vessels "The Dragon,' 'Serpent,' etc. King Olai Tryggveson's ship, one of the wonders of the North in shipbuilding, was called Long Serpent'
Watthe, an assemment the salary of the (magistrate)
Wade, worme
Waw, wave. See Note p. 466

Wawhs, looks wildly, (his) eyes
Weather-caws, the bec ary or reflected rainbo
Wrmb, destiny, fate
WELEING, fading, d pearing
WELL, a whirlpool, Spe Note 45, p. 46
Went upon the acco See Account, weut the Whian, few
Whigamore, Coveuantin
Whmes, at, sometimes times
Whivger, large kuife, di Whittis-whattienso, n tering, talking frivolo Whitcle, a large k usually worn at the be Whozled, turned over Wick, an open bay
WindLestraw, bent grae 'With roomy dece,' (p. 380), from Dryd Annus Mirnbilis
Wirs' Copres-house, in James's Street, the re of the bluest old Torl Queen Anne's reign. also Rose Taveru
W00', wool
Wowr, crazy
Xebect, amall th masted vessel, used in Mediterranean

Yarn windle, a yarn-wit Yewoched, yelled, ahriel Yett, a gate called 'The semment for of the fowd

See Note 45 , wildly, rolls 8, the secondted rainbow \(y\), fate fading, disapirlpool, eddy. , p. 46
THE ACCOUNT. it, weut upon

Soveuanting sometimes, e knife, dirk rinive, muting irivolously a large knlfe, n at the belt ned over bay bent grass
; DEcz, etc. rom Drydeu's bilis RHouse, in gt. eet, the resort it old Tories in 's reign. Sre avern mall three. el, used in the an a yarn-wiuder lled, ahrieked

\section*{INDEX}

Agicultuge, writers on, 33; at time of tale, 35
Altamont. See Bunce, Jack
'And you shall deal the funeral dole,' 252
Armada, in Zetland, 226, 462
' A thousand winters dark,' 205
Anthor's Introduction, vil
A very, the pirate, 465
Bartholes, De Causis Cont. a Danis, quoted, 461
' Be mine the iuber-goose to play,' 225
' Be patient, he patient,' 303
Herserkars, 12, 451
Bicker, of St. Magnus, 315, 404; of Scarpa, 384
Bimhister, Margery, 85
Birds of prey in Orkney, 356, 4 fr
Bistle, 56,454
Buccaniers, life of, 241. See also Pirates
Bume, Jack, his meeting with Cleveland, 32 ; is told of his love-9" cues him, 347; boards. brig, 380 ; writes to the \(\mathrm{p}_{\text {. }}\) wall, 387; recoguises Clau conversation with Clevelan jrkno; his plot, 418; carrien Cleveland's letter to Minna, 421 ; attempts to carry off Cleveland, 429; In prison, 431 ; his fate, 466
Burgh-Westra, 22,122 ; festivities at, 119260; banquet, 134 ; dance, 150 ; nnaskers, 160 ; hreakfast, 172 ; whale-hunt, 173 ; fortune-telling, 219 ; departure of boats for the white-fishing, 231

Carbuncle on Ward Hill of Hoy, 203, 460
Chamberlain, Lord, of Zetland, 38
-Chaunion, famed for warlike tr: ', 272
Chapman's drouth, 62, 454
Cleveland, Clement, saved from the wreck, i4; in the Ranzelman's cottage, 85 ; gives Mordaunt his fowling-piece, \(8^{\prime}\) : his footing at Burgh-Westra, 124; att tions to Minna, 158; rescues Mordauut, 1 1; huys Snailsfoot's wares, 190 ; his fo. me told, 225 ; love-meeting with Minna, 233; story of his life, 239 ; serenades Mima, 249 ; ominous interruption, 251 ; meeting with Bunce, 327 ; altercation with Suailsfoot, 341 ; arrested and rescued, 347 ; chosen pirate captain, 363; negotiates with the towa-conncil, 305; interview with Minna in the cathedral, \(3: 9\); set free br Norma, 405,411 ; retlections on his situation, 415 ; at the Standing Stones of Stemis, \(42 \%\); in prison, 431 ; accouut of his hirth, 433 ; his fate, \(44 \overline{5}\)
Clinkscale, Miss Bahy, 29
Confn Key, 242, 463
Coins, antlque, in Zetland, 318, 4i4
Commissioners of Northern Lightiouse Service, vii
Cormorant, 25,453
Corn-mills in Zetland, 116, 455
'Dari are thy words,' \({ }^{206}\)
Derrick, pirate, quartermaster, 359, 368, 418
Drowning men, reluctance to save, \(\mathbf{i} 6,45\)
Drows, \(70,45 \overline{5}\)
Dryden, Halcro's story of, 130, 143; ijuoted, 387
Dwarfie Stone, 202, 459
' Dwellers of the mountain, rise,' 204
Earl's Palacz, Klikwall, 320
Edmonston, l'iew of Zellund Islumdr, quoted, 462
Ericksou, Sweyn, fisherman, 10
Erskine, W., of Kinedder, ix
'Fabewill, farewell, the voice jou hear,' 950
'Farewell, merry maidens,' \({ }^{232}\)
'Farewell to Northmaven,' 132
'Fathoms deep beneath the wave,' 101
Fea, Euphaue, housekeeper, 300, 210, \(2: 0\)
Fea, James, captures pirate Gow, ix
Fey, to be, 47,454
Fishermen's wives, in Zetland, 231, 462
Fishery, white, of Zetland, 231
Flctcher, pirate, 381 ; intimidated by Minna.
394 ; supports Bunce, 418 ; death of, 43 :!
'For lengues along the watery way,' 199
'Fortune's Favourite,' pirate vessel, 33', 380; hlowu up, 432
Fortune-telling, 220
Fowlers, 14; accidents to, 451
Frawa Stack, 287, 463

Clonazry, 4 i7
Glowrowrum, Lady, 151, 423; her opinlon of the Truils, 9.55
Goffe, pirate capitain, 358 ; lets Triptolemus евсаре, 3 ті
'Gold in ruldy,' 'ي!";
Cow, plirate, xi
Gray'f Fitul Nisters, 452
Green Loch, 1 (M)
Guthrie, Mr. James, 31
Hangen, old soldier, 150, 372
Halcro, Claud, 123 ; his story of the tailor, 130; song, 'Mary, 13:; story of Dryden, 143; song, 'Harold Harfager,' 153 ; inediates beiween Clevelaml and Mordanut, 193; frames the fortme-telling rhynes. 220 ; hls fortune told, 244 ; neets Minua In distress, \(25{ }^{2}\); in the lint, 314; recognised by Bunce, 382 ; quotes Dryden, 387 ; cool reception of Bunce, 421
'Halcyon,' frigate, 369
Harira. See Stourburgh
'Harold Harfager,' song, 153
Hawklus, plrate boatsw tiu, 359, 413
Helyer of Swartaster, 233
Hospitality lin Zetlaud, 5, 134, 172
Hoy, Isle of, 202, 3 JLf ; Hill of, 202, 459
Introduction, Author's, vii
'It was a ship,' 384
Jarlshor, 2
'Jolly Mariuel of C=nton,' 141
Kir.xwall, Earl's Palace, 326 ; fair, 331 ; magistrates, 3G6; St. Maguus's cathedral, 399
Kraken, sea-monster, 15
Laiso, Malcolm, \(x 11\)
Lambmas lads, 341,465
Law-ting, 202,450
Lindsay, Lady Ann, 463
'Love wakes and weeps,' 249
Luggie, the warlock, 315,464
MacRaws, 205, 464
Mainland of Zetland, 1
' Mark me, for the word I speak,' 302
Marriage, rellections on, 137
'Mary, song, 132
Maskers, at Burgh-Westra, 160
'Menseful maiden, ne'er should rise,' 255
Mertoun, lisail, 3 ; reuts Jarlshof, 6 ; anger against Swertha, 10 ; questions Mordannt, 65 ; climbs Sumburgh Head, 68 ; aroused by Mordaunt's absence, 262; his relatious with Norna, 274; laat interview with her, 436 ; offers his life for his son's, 442 ; end of, 445
Mertonn, Mordannt, advises Swertha, 12; his education, 13; relations to Mima and Brenda, 22 ; resolves to go honc, 24 ; forces his way into Stourburgh, 43 ; awakens Swertha, 64; questioned by hls father, 65 ; accompanien lis father up Sumburgh Head, 88 ; rescues Cleveland, i4; reproves Swertha, 83; visits

Cleveland, 85 ; hears unwelcome m 03; warned by Norna, 101 ; joina Yellowleys, 111 cold reception Burgh-Weatra, 121, 125; explanat frou Brenda, lina resum by \(\mathbf{C l}\) land, 18n; dispute an to the bex, alarm at his prolongenl absence, Norna's communication to him, restored to favour with Magius \(T\) 422 ; remenes the sisters, \(4: 99\); stors liis birth, 438 ; marriage, 44
Millie, Bessif, \(4-4\)
Montrose, in Zetlanl, 156, 456
'Mother darknome, mother dread,' 222, \(225,2 x y\)
'Mother, speak, and do uot tarry,' 228 Mousa Castle, 463
Norna of Fitful Heal, at Stourburgh, stills the tempest, 57 ; at the wr 78; warns Mordannt, 101 ; in the sist chamber, 198; her tale, 201 ; tells tunea, \(2=0\); song in St. Ringan's, interview with Mertom, 254; Ma! Troil's account of her, 282 ; her ab '288; visited by the Troils, 294; her over Minna, 208; throws out the pi sions, 307 ; clalms Mordaunt as her 351; separates Miuna and Clevelend, helps Cleveland to escape, 405 ; inter with Mertomn, 436 ; last days of, 446 ; spells, 464 ; Author on, 465, x
Norse fragruents, 15,451 ; Norse rovers, 153

Odis, promise of, 240, 462,466
Olaus Magmins, his book, 306 ; quoted, 4 Oramus to St. Ronald, 62,45
Orkney, grouse in, 331, 46t ; birds of p 356, 465
Pacolet. Sec Strumpfer, Nick
Peghts, or Picts, 452
Pictish burgh, 288, 463
Pirate, the novel, vii
Pirate, the. See Cleveland, Clement
Pirates, flag of, 332, 433 ; council of, capture of, 435
Plantie cruive, 8, 451
Ponies, Zetland, 113
- Poor sinuers whom the suake decei 341
Provost of Kirkwall. See Torfe, Provo Punch-bowl, Magnus Troil's, 141 Ranzelman. Sep Ronaldson, Neil
'Robin Rover anid to his crew,' 348
Ronaldson, Neil, 11, 80; gossips Swertha, 108; interview with Mert 265

Saras, Norse, 15, 451
St. Magnus cathedral, Kirkwall, 399
'St. Magnus control thee,' 25 .
St. Ninian's, ruins of, 269
St. Olla's fair, Kirkwall, 331, 341, 465 Scambester, Eric, his punch, 141; at whale-hunt, 182
Ecart, or cormorant, 25,453 elcome newn, 01 ; jolns the reception at explanatione ad by Cleve tlaf lowx, 1!11 ; absence, til: 10 lim, isril: Mapines Troil, 4:9) ; story of end, 222,224
TrFy; 228
ourburgh, 50 ; the wreck, in the slaters 01 ; tells forRIngan's, \(22^{2}\); 25; Maguıs 2 ; her abode, 294 ; her spe' 1 out the provint as her son, levela.nd, 401 ; 405 ; interview ys of, 446; her I rse rovers, 143, quoted, 456
blrds of prey, lement
uncll of, 360 ;

Shetlinul. Wre Zethand

Suallefoot, bryee, at Stourlmigh, int; r funes leelp to the half-lrowned nu:n, if glvee Mordanut newa of Burgh-Wo tra, [14; carries news to Burgh-Westra, 1 H ; sells his wares there, 1se; at Klrkwall falr, 31 ; leaten lyy Cles.ilame, 34 ;
'Soug of Haroll Hariuger,' 1:3
'Bong of the Reliu-kemar', 5
Stemins, St unding Stomes of, 111, His;
'Stern engle of the far nerth-weot,'si
Stewart, latrick, kanl of (Okno-y, 11
Stourburgh, ar Harfat, 如, ex, \(3:\);
Strumber, Nlek, the dwart, en:i, :":l earries the lettrer to the Hisherma is hati, 3:2
Bumburgh Ifeal, 1; the roost of, 1 , il; Erick's Stepes on, it Superstitions of Zet lanulure, 1:\%
8 warthater, liely.r of, em
Swertha, the homsekerper, 10 ; wit* in Mordanit's alvee, \(1 \because\); awakruel by lim, fit; goes dlown to the wrerk, sit; defend herself, XD; roosip: with tho Ranzeluan, lus; ansiety alont Mordamin, 2011; instructions to the binizelman, 2l:
Sworl-diucc, 1.75, tin;
'The infant loves the rattle's noinc;' \({ }^{2}\) ? 1
'The sun is rising dimly reil,' 1:\%
'The thonght of the agel, ' \({ }^{2} \times 2\) Thimblethwalte. Tim, Halero'm story of, 1:s)
'Thou an neelful, yet so ireal,' enh'
'Thou that over billows dark,' 3(n)
Torfaus, Orcules, cited, ti3
Torfe, Provost, of Kirkw:ll, \(3 i \mathrm{i}\); selerts Triptolemns as hostage, 333 ; rerajwey Mimat aml Brondia, 3:ni, Hz; intervien with Captain Wratherport, +il
Troil, Brenda, 18 ; cool recuption of Murdamut, 121; seeks an explanation with lim, 102; her relations with Minna, 1!!:; night-visit by Norna to leer, lis; talk visit to Norua's abmbe, esss; in the fivherman's lint, 319; in thes pirates' hatud., 381; sent ashome, 3:5; persmades Mor-her marriage, \(4{ }^{7}\)
Troil, Erland, \(2(11\)
Troil, Jaguns, 3,5 ; welcones his, glests, 1:11: coldusas t" Mordamt, 1:21; scom of Triptulemus's improvements, it4; at the whale-lmut, \(1: \bar{i}\); his fortune toll, 2en; journess to Norna's abode, evo: his accomint of her. ese; at her home, 24 ; finds shelter in the liut, 31t; boarded by the pirates, 3 in 0 ; set at liberty, \(41:\); takes Morilaunt into favour again, tes
Troil, Minna, 18; cold rewchition of Murdannt, 124; attentious from Cleveland,

1:N: relations nith limemla, 1mi: night. sisit trumi Nomin, lim; talk with liremula, 3193; her fortune told, cess; mecting with Cleveland, 3:3; proulses him the troth of Odin 241; s.reuaded, 210 ; : ilirmed, 251 ; blow thecovered ont lur feet, 257; lier peruliar state, \(278 ;\) under Norna's apell, 298; ill the Halpriman's liut, 322; in the pirates' hands, isl ; takes the platol, 391 ; sent aslurr, 3:2: : ixith Cleveland in the resignitlom, H:
Truil, 1solfoc: 201

Trondi, liellowley'm rervant, 50

Tusser, 3t, tixi
Uwhener of Yetlaml, 7,45

Ury, Sir John, lint, tin"
Vacolas. Se Mertom, Basil
Viking*, ancient, 143, 1, ïs
" whace, Iheirription of Ishands of Orkney, 'plotecl, 4tin
Ward Hill of Hoy. 802,460
Watherport, Captain, 441
Wrells and waves, t10, 41:
Whate-lunt. \(183 ;\) whaling custons, 2 ;es, tite
Wild-toul, 2 ai ; ratching of, 14
Winds, Nolma's invocations to, 5\%, 300; rale uf, Il, tit
Wrock, in the roont, II ; Zetlanders' ideas reg:alink, 81,45 , Iellowley, Barbara, 3:- ; her parsimony, 37,41 ; takes Noma's coin, 60 ; goes to Burgh. We....a, 111 ; welcomed by Magnms Troil, 121 ; at Burgh. Westra. 135 ; at the whale-linut, 174

Yellowley, Jasper, 29
Fellowley; Triptolemus, birth of, 30 ; educa tion, 33 : settled in Zetland, 38 ; inhospi tality of, 41; personal appearance, 45 ; astonished ly Norua, 60 ; hls ideas of agricultural reform, 115 ; thrown by the pony, 117 ; welconsed by Magnus Troil, 1:1: his improvements, 144 made to sing, 170 ; at the wale-linnt, 174 ; in the fisherman's hut, 314 ; diseovery of the treasure, 317 : eelected as lostage, 373 ; cocapes, 376 ; last days of, 447

Zftland, Mainlame of 1 ; hospitality, 5, 134, 17: : tempest in, e7; adninistration of, 38 , fin ; Green Lorlı in, 100 ; ponies, 113 ; corm-mills, 116, 4in; Armada in, "thi, 46 ; ; foherinen's wives, 231,402 ; white-fichime, 231; Pictiml lurgh, 288, 403 ; coins fonmd in, 318 , 464 ; wells and waves of, 410,466```

[^0]:    1 As 11 maty in ressary, In the present $/ 1820-331$ edition. to speak upon the stuare. the If far lilinks it proper to own that the communlcation allumed to is entiti Imaginary.

[^1]:    ${ }^{1}$ [For a later and more corract version, see a note to the Introtuetion to A Legend of Montrose. 1

    2 I have been informed that, at no very remote perlod, it was mroposed to take this large stone which marks the grave of Wugald Clar fohr and convert it to the purpose of the ilntel of a window, the thresinold of a door, or some such mean use. A inan of the Clan Mackregor, who was somewhat deranged, took fire at this lnsult, and when the workmen came to remove the stone, planted hiniself upou it. wlth a broad-axe In hls hand, swearing lie would dasli out the bralns of nny nne who should disturb the monument. Athietic in person, and insane enough to be totally regardiess of consequences, It was thought best to glve way to his humour: nad the poor madman kept sentinel on the stone day and night, till the proposal of removing it was entlrely dropped.
    ${ }_{3}$ The above is the account which 1 find in a manuscript history of the Clan Mactiregor, of whleh I was Induked whth a perinsal lyy bonald MacGregor, Esif. late Major of the 3idd regiment, where great pulns hawe heen taken to colieet traditlons and written documents concerning the fumily. But an anclent and constant traditlon, preserved among the inhabitants of the country. and partleularly those of the cian MarFarlane, relleyes Dugald Clar Mohn of the gullt of murdering the gouths, and lass the hame on a ecrain Thanald or linnain laban. Wha performed the act of cruedty. with the asslstance of a ghlip who nttendeal him. named charlluen or Charlle. They say that the limaldides damed mot agaln foln their chan, but that they resided in a wid and sollturg state as outiaws ln an unfrequented part of the Mackarlanes peritors. llere they liwed for shme the less women, a mother and dimghter of the Mar Foxlane clan. In revenge of thls atroclty. the Maclarlanes lamed thend dww and shot theng. It la sald the youngei rumbin. Charlloch, might hawe asenped, beingr erkably swlft of foot. But his crime beceme his punlshmant. for the far: loon he had ontraged had defended heiself desperntely, and had st: . hlm with hls own dirk on the thlgh. Ife was lame from the womind. il was the more easlly overtaken and kllled. I Incllne to think that this last is the trae edlton of the story, and that the guilt was transferred to Ingald Ciar Mohr as a man of hagher name or it is posslhe these sulworlmate persons had only exechted hls oriers. - I have learnt that burald clar Mohr was in truth dead several yars befori the batile, my muthorlty belng his representative, Mr. Gregorson of Ardurnish (Later Note).

[^2]:    1 See stutistical account of Newtland, vol. xvill. page 332 . I'arish of Kippen.

[^3]:    ${ }^{1}$ See Appendix No. I.

[^4]:    1 lis collrage and affectation of foppery were unlted, which is less frequently the case, with a spirit of lunate modests: Il: is thins described In Lord Binnlug's satirical verses, emittied 'Argye's levee' -

    Six thes fiad Harry frwid unseen lefore he dared advance:
    The puke then. turning round well pleased,
    Sadd, sure you ve heell In France.
    A more prifte ind jnunty meln 1 never salw before?
    Thw Harry bow d. and blush'd, and bow'd. Alad stritted to the dome.
    See a Collertion of original lurms. by scoteh Gentlemen, vol. II. page $\mathbf{1 2 5}$.

[^5]:
     Appendix, vol. II. j. $\mathbf{3 4 8}$.

[^6]:    The flrst of these ancedotes, whleh brings the hlyhest plteh of elvillsathon so closely la contact whth the haifsavace state of soclety, I have heard told by the late dlistlagulsined lir. Gire story with thelr recolicetlons famlly have lind the kIndness to whinte the story with thers recone second and famlly documents, and fimmsthe the nentic parthenlars, The second rests on the "ecollection of an old mun, whin present when lion tow French lea fhls llterury cousin on hearing the drums bent, and com munleated th Ireumstanee to Mr. Nicxander Forbes, a connexion of 1 Hr . Gregory by marringe, who is stlli alive.

[^7]:    1 The roader will lind two orininal letters of the lluke of Montrose, whth that whtelı Mr. Iiraham of liflearı dosputched from lils prlson-house by the outinw's cominind, In the Appendix No. II.

     of Montrose lifmself: but his cunnluf uad dexterlty agala freed nluifrom certaln death. Nee Appendix No. VII.

[^8]:    'The confusion and disorders of that rountry were so great, and the government so absolitely neglected it, that the sober people there were obliged to purchase some sumbity to ther afrets by shamefnll mad ignomini ous contracts of back-mnill. I $l^{m i s m}$ who had the greatest correnpond

[^9]:    1 About 1002, when the Author chanced to pass that way whlle on $n$

     tance to remose ourselves, li. fold us we would tind the key of the fort under the door.

[^10]:    ${ }^{1}$ Lefters from the North of Scotland, vol. il. pp. 344-45.

[^11]:    ${ }^{2}$ The winds whleh sweep a wild glen in Badenoch are so called.

[^12]:    ${ }^{2}$ Appendix No. IV.

[^13]:    ${ }^{1}$ Such an admission is ascribed to the robber, Donald Bean Lean, In Waverlcy, chap. Ixil.

[^14]:    1 Some acconnts state that Appin himself was Rob Roy's antagonist on this oceaslon. Ny recollection, from the ariount of Invernuliyle himself, was as stated in the texi. IBnt the prion when l rereived the information is now so distant that it is possible 1 may be mlstakru. Invernahyle was rather of low stature, but very weli wade athietic, and an excellent swordsman.

[^15]:    ${ }^{1}$ This fatal plece was taken from Rohin Oig when he was seized many years afterwards. It rematned in possesston of the magistrate before Whom he was brought for examination. and now makes part of a smail

[^16]:    When sold the farm was purchased (I thluk by the late Laird of MacNab) at a prlce higher In proportlon that what even the modern rent authorised the partles Interested to home for:
    ${ }^{1}$ Publisled in bluckicoods yagazine, vol. II. page 290 .

[^17]:    ${ }^{1}$ Chil. e Ifarold's Pilgrimage, Canto II.

    - See appendix Nu. V.

[^18]:    1 Sulif, at hast. was his general character: for when James Mohr.

     fdent Glengyte wonld nevor conntenance so scoundreliy a business.

[^19]:    ${ }^{1}$ Alian Breck Stewart was a man likeiy in such a matter to keep his Word. Jamps IIrnmmond Maediregor and he. Ifke liatherine and Petriehio, were weli natehed for a couple uf quiet ones.' Alian breek lived thil the beginning of the French Kevolition. Alout 1789 a friend of nilne, then residing at linris. was invited fore some procession which was snpposed ilkely to interest him, from the windows of an apartment oceupied liy a Noottish lienedietine priest. He found, sitting ly tire ife, a taif, thili. raw-boned, grim-iooking old man, with the pritit eroix af st. Lonls. Iils visage was strongiy marked by the Irregular projectioms of the cleekbones and chin. lils eyes were grey. Ilis grizzied hair exhibited marks of having bepll red, and his complexion was weather-beaten, and remarkabiy freckied. Sonie civilities in French passed betwerd the old man and my fifond. In the eourse of which they talked of the streets and squares of laris, 1 ili at lengtio the old soldier, for such he seemed and suef be [^20]:    ${ }^{1}$ The Trials of . . . Sons of Rob Roy, with Infedintes of Himself and his Fomily, were mibisised at Edinimrgh. 181s, in 12 mo .

    a James died near tifree months hefore hit his fanily might easily remain a iong time without the news of that event. [Bint compare the dates in the text.]

[^21]:    vol. $15-1$

[^22]:    1 The tmporturtion of gatgers. subrervinirs, and nyaminers was one of the grogt emmpiaints of the scottish uatlun, though a watural conseguence of the Unlon.

[^23]:    1 This seems to have bern writted ahout the tlme of Wilikes and liberty. vol. 15 - 3

[^24]:    ${ }^{1}$ Now called Don Juan.

[^25]:    He that gallops his larse on Blackstone edge
    Say chance to catcha fall.'

[^26]:    ${ }^{1}$ See Horses of the Catholles. Note 1.

[^27]:    ${ }^{2}$ See Tobacco. Note 2.

[^28]:    ${ }^{1}$ See Nuunery of Wilton. Note 3.

[^29]:    Amiddes tile ronte you might discern one Brave knight, with pipes on shield, ycleped Vernon;
    Like a borne fiend atong the plainh he thundered,
    Prest to be carving throtes, while others plundered.

[^30]:    ${ }^{1}$ See Note 4.

[^31]:    ${ }^{1}$ See Note 5.

[^32]:    ${ }^{1}$ This I belleve to be an anachronism, as Saint Enoch's Church was not bulit at the date of the story. - It was founded in 1780 (Laing).

[^33]:    ${ }^{1}$ See Note 6.

[^34]:    ${ }^{3}$ See Boys ${ }^{\circ}$ Snow-Balling. Note, $\mathbf{Z}_{n}$

[^35]:    ${ }^{1}$ Ste 'To fight like Heury Wynd. Note 8.

[^36]:    ${ }^{1}$ Sce Note 0.

[^37]:    ' See Vairy Superstition. Note 10.

[^38]:    ${ }^{2}$ Lochow and the adjacent districts formed the original seat of the Campbells. The expression of a 'far cry to Lochow' was proverbial.

[^39]:    ${ }^{1}$ See Slaughter of MacLaren. Note 11.

[^40]:    ${ }^{2}$ See Alerfoll. Note 12.

[^41]:    ${ }^{1}$ see Note 13.

[^42]:    vol. iv-20

[^43]:    1 The affilrs of Prestonpans and Falkirk are probably alluded to, which marks th." tlme of writing the Memoirs as subseineut to $\mathbf{1 7 4 5}$.

[^44]:    'Your great ancestor never said so, my lord,' answer Major Galbraith ; 'and, with submission, neither would you'

[^45]:    ${ }^{1}$ See Note 14.

[^46]:    ${ }^{1}$ A pike.
    See Nute 15.

[^47]:    1 This pithy verse occurs, it is believed, In Shadwell's play of Bury Vair.

[^48]:    1 It does not appear to whom this letter was alliressed. Certainly, from its style and tenor, it was designed for some person high in rank and office, perhaps the King's Advocate for the time. (But sec Postscript, p. 403.)

[^49]:    ' A pass on the eastern margin of Loch Lomom, and an entrance to the Hightmid.

[^50]:    1 i. e. Johbithe Reit - John Duke of Argyle, so called from his complexlon, more commonly styted 'Rel John the Warriour.'

[^51]:    ' See MacGregor l'apers. Nute 16.

[^52]:    ${ }^{1}$ [See Lockhart's Life, voi. Iv. pp. 180-370.]

[^53]:

     whom scoth had frobia boylomd been dorphy atticelied, wan a most ambable and necompllslued man.

    In $17 \times 5$ when the Ode on the Popular. Nuperestitions of the lli!hlands

     Iu the Eidinburth Jlayazine for April 1 İss (Lainy).

[^54]:    ${ }^{1}$ This gentleman was called to the Scotch Rar in the year 1784, hut the infirm state of hls health Induced him. In 1sior to leave the professithe, and to reside on his paternal property near Klrkwall, devoting limsifif to agricultural pursuts. He dled In November 1818, aged fifty-flve, and was interred in the nave of St. Magnus's Cathedral (Lining).
    $z$ This ballad of 'Wille's Ghost ' Is printed in Herd's Collection. wil 1 , p. 76. it is not so well known as Mallet's verslon, 'Wille aud Margaret; which beglns, " T was at the fearful midnight hour ' (Laing).

[^55]:    see Nute 1.

[^56]:    Salt-water lake.
    2 Nee Note:3.
    A Inpund is about thirty pounds English, and the value is averaged by Dr. Edmonston at ten shillings sterllog.

[^57]:    ${ }^{1}$ i. $c$. the deep-sea fisining, in distinction to that which is practised along shore.
    The operation of sifing the biubber from the bones of the winate is called, techaically, finching.

[^58]:    I Meaning, probably. atrlck stewart. Earl of orkney, executed for vianny and oppressio... practised on the inhabliants of these remote islands, in the besinning of the 17th contury. - Ills father, Lord leolect Stuart, was a natural son of James V. (Lain!/.

[^59]:    ${ }^{1}$ Finner, small whale.

[^60]:    ${ }^{2}$ See Note 3.

[^61]:    t Nee Accidents to Fowlers. Note 4.

[^62]:    ${ }^{1}$ See Norse liragments. Nute B .

[^63]:    - See Sea Monsters. Note \%.

[^64]:    ${ }^{1}$ see Note 7.

[^65]:    ${ }^{1}$ [See Waverley, Note 29, p. 4 (6.]

[^66]:    ${ }^{2}$ Mr. James Guthrle, minlster of strling. and anthor of che conses of the Lordis IV rath, 16:is, was executed at bidinburgh in 16isi, and his head atlixed on the Netherbow l'ort or (iate (Lainy).

[^67]:    ${ }^{1}$ Guadrupedumque putrem soultu guadt ungula campum.
    vol. sill-3

[^68]:    ${ }^{2}$ See Tusser's Poverty. Note 8.

[^69]:    2 SNer Bride of Lammermonr, Note or p. 318.]
    2 Nee Admlulsirution of Zetland. Note 9.

[^70]:    ${ }^{1}$ Nee Note 10.
    ${ }^{3}$ A pedlar.

[^71]:    ㄴ... Ninl-4

[^72]:    ${ }^{2}$ See Note 11.

[^73]:    ${ }^{1}$ See Note 12.
    2 Test upoon it, $i$. . leave it in my will-a mode of bestowing charity to which many are partial as well as the good dame in the text.

    3 Ner Note 13 .

[^74]:    ${ }^{2}$ Nee Note 14.

[^75]:    ${ }^{1}$ Nee Reluctance to save Drowning Men. Note 15.

[^76]:    1 spe Nole 10.

[^77]:    ${ }^{2}$ These are welghts of Norweglan origin, still used in Zetland.

[^78]:    - Barter.

[^79]:    ${ }^{2}$ See Note 17.
    2 The larger seal, or sea-calf, whleh seeks the most solitary recesses for Its abode. See Inr. Edmonstone's Zetianl, vol. II. p. 294.

[^80]:    ${ }^{2}$ [See Lockhart's Lafe of Scott, vol. iv. 1. :202.]

[^81]:    ${ }^{1}$ Nee Note 18.

[^82]:

[^83]:    ${ }^{3}$ What is eat by way of relisin to dry bread is called kitchen in scotland, as cheese, drled fish, or the like relishlng is called [^84]:    See Illbbert's Description of the Zetlind Ialandy. [D. 4 ().

[^85]:    vol. xiII- 10

[^86]:    ${ }^{1}$ See note, p. 451.

[^87]:    & See Montivose in Zetland. Note 19.
    ${ }^{2}$ See Note 20.

[^88]:    - see Nute 21 .

[^89]:    'St. ,john, or St. James either, may be mistaken in the matter,' said Eric ; 'for I think neither of them livel in \%etland. I only say that, if there is faith in ohl saws, these twin lads will do each other a mischiof; and if they do, 1 trunt it will light on Mordamnt Mertom.'
    'And why, Eric Scambester,' said Halcro, hastily anni ansrils, 'should you wish ill to that poor young man, that is worth fifity of the other?'
    'Let every one roose the ford as he finds it,' replied lirii. - Master Mordaunt is all for wan water, like his old dog-fish of [^90]:    1 The contest about the whaie wili remind the poeticai reader of Walier's buttle of the Summer Islands.

[^91]:    :011. xиI- 13

[^92]:    ${ }^{2}$ See Note 22.
    a See Note $2: \%$
    ${ }^{3}$ See Note $\geq 4$.

[^93]:    See Note $2 \overline{5}$.

[^94]:    Or ronsurvalal monntalli. Hsed by the siambinavian prlests for the mirnuses of ther- Idul-worshtp.

[^95]:    ; Stack - a preetpifous rock rising out of the sen.
    ${ }^{2}$ Skerry - a flat Insilated roek, mot subject to the overflowigg of the stat
    ${ }^{3}$ Noup-a rommthended eminnence

    - Vour - a creek or lillet of the sen.
    ${ }^{5}$ Air - an open nea-leath.
    a Wirk-a॥ olwn buy.
    ? Helyer - a cavern into whith the tide flows.
    ato - a deep ravine which alluils the sea.

[^96]:    1 This cruelty is practised by some fishers, out of a vindictive hatred to these ravenous fishes.

[^97]:    ' Hev. Geurge ('rable (Lainy).

[^98]:    －Neど ドortune－telling kligmes．Note 20.

[^99]:    ${ }^{2}$ The Description of the Isics of Orkney and Zetland was publlshed by Sir Robert Slbbaid, M.I)., Edinburgh, 1711, follo (Laing).

    2 See Whallng Customs. Note 27.

[^100]:    ${ }^{1}$ There is established among whalers a sori of telegraphle sigusi, in Whith a certaln number of motlonk, made with a liroom, express to any uther vessel the number of fish which they have caught.

[^101]:    ${ }^{2}$ See Armada in cetland. Note 28.

[^102]:    ' Guidra Kinna - the Norse for a sorceress.

[^103]:    ' See lilshermen's Wives. Note 29.

[^104]:    ${ }^{1}$ See Note 30.

[^105]:    a To maroon a seaman slgnified to abandon on a desolate coast or islunil-a plece of crueity often practised by pirates and buccanhers.
    $z$ See Note 31 .

