OF LEEDS ADVERTISER.

London, April 4.-George T. Curzo Parliamentary Secretary of the For-eign Office, addressed his constituents at Southport yesterday. He made an xtended reference to the arbitrati with which, he said, the name treaty, with which, he said, the habit of the Marquis of Salisbury would be perpetually linked in history. If the motives and tactics, which were alien to the spirit of the proposals they appriving its authors, either on this side or the other side of the Atlantic, of the credit of its parentage, and a later date would surely come when their date would surely come when their treaty, if not completed now, would take its place as a part of the code of the Angic-Saxon brotherhood, and perhaps a part of the international law of the world. The law-givers who originated it would ever afterward be held in honored remembrance. Speaking of the eastern question, Secretary Curzon said that a war cloud was daily growing on the horizon, but he was hopeful that prudent statesmanship and the unselfish aims of the powers might yet dispet the cloud before it breaks into a cyclone of universal destruction. He presumed that the British people had two objects in view, the welfare of Crete and the avoidance of European war. The speaker excepted the Radicals, who,

It is all changed now. Foreign Admirals to Blame.

London, April 3.—Several of the correspondents of London newspapers, telegraphing from Canea, represent that the foreign admirals were seriously blameable for the fighting that occurred to-day between insurgents and Turkish irregular forces on the peninsula of Akrotiri. MR. BLAEE'S MOTION

St. Petersburg April 4.—The semi-official Journal de St. Petersburg says that the aggressive, provocative atti-tude that Grece continues to main-tain with such deplorable obstinacy, forces the powers, much against their wish, to have recourse to a blockade of the Gulf of Athens. The paper de-nounces the retention of Col. Vassos in Crete, and says it refuses to believe it possible that Greece will indulge in such an extraordinary act of folly as a declaration of war would be. In reply to Mr. Maclean, Mr. Laurier said it was not the intention of the Government to disallow the "British Columbia Southera Railway Aki Amendment Act, 1896." Mr. Blair informed Mr. Maclean that 17 tenders were received for sections 4 to 7 of the Soulanges Canal, and 13 for section 12. He did not consider it proper to say who the tenderers were. Mr. Laurier informed Mr. Casgrain that the Government did not know whether Mr. Dobell had promised a subsidy of $1.000,000 for a new bridge over the St. Lawrence. The policy of the Government was the same as last year, when it was announced that material assistance would be given to anterior servers. it was announced that material assistance would be given to any responsible persons or company who were prepared to undertake the construction of the bridge. Mr. Laurier told Mr. La Riviere that the negotiations between the Dominion and Manitoba Governments on the school question were verbal. There was no record of them. All the papers will be brought down. Mr. Laurier declined to give Mr. Foster any informan regarding the passing of an order-in-council granting $399,090 to the G.T.R. for reconstruction of Victoria bridge, Montreal. He asked him to make a formal motion for papers. Mr. Maxwell resumed the debate on the address, and he was followed by Messrs. Hughes, Mulock, Richardson. Chaure. E. F. She has just returned her insignia to St. Petersburg with the remark that she cannot hold rank in a fleet that has fired upon the Greeks. Olga is the eldest daughter of the Grand Duke Constantine of Russia and a niece of the late Czar Alexander II. She is tall and stately and realizes the traditional idea of a Queen in her. appearance and manner. She is a blonde, with brown hair, regular features, and a beautiful neck and shoulders. She goes about Athens unattended, even by a maid, and dresses in the most simple fashion. On state occasions she costumes herself royally. She is very fond of pearls and has a small fortune in these ornaments. She is most popular among the Athenian radies and has a wide circle of acquaintances among them. Like all the rest of this singularly democratic royal family the Queen never deports herself in the nanner assumed by royalty in general, and while dignified is gentle, affable, and whole. Olga is a great scholar. She loves sciency and the classics, and can speak fluently in Russian, Italian. Greek, French, German and English. Lately she has mastered Albanian also. She is interested in music and art, devotes much of her time to charity and public education, and has founded one of two prosperous schools in Athens. Her recent patriotic display will make her all the more loved by the and ane even are the discoss of her jealousy. In his talk with the Queen, Capt. Gibbons, who had met her daughter, the ruling princess of Seaheke, and her husband, spoke in laudatory terms of them. A full translation of her reply is: "Oh they are merely small fry. I and Lewanika are the big wige in this part of the world."

Mokwal and her brother, the King, have signed a treaty, placing their country under the British flag, but as yet the British have not established any semblance of authority over the land, and this savage Queen is still at liberty to kill as many husbands and other persons as she pleases.

In Scandinavia to be our purveyor of semantions? It would seem so. At the present moment two sons of the Vikings are the most prominent figures in the European play—Dr. Nansen, with his happily ended Arctic drama, and King George of Greece, with his "Liberty of Crete," which may be tragedy or—as likely as not—unsatis-factory farce.

The first fine detonation of the Nansen boom has died down; the hero is gone a-lecturing. But George of Greece occupies the center of the stage, the lime light is full on him, and one hopes for a good old-fashioned drama before the curtain falls—Vice deposed and Virtue triumphant, in the "Grectan" manner. Looking at King George one recalls Byron's line:

These Greeks, indeed, were proper men (The Curse of Minerva), and alters the tense to the present. He History museums, that fill us with horror, and stir within us the alarm which finds vent in nightmares besides which the creatures of a wests rabbit are as nothing at all.

She preserved and is at the present time engaged in cultivating all sorts of curious monsters which are to be found traveling about the waters of the ocean and crawing along its bottom. These are growing in Jars, and form one of the oddest collections that is to be seen anywhere.

At present the particular feature of Miss Ten Eyck's work is the cultivation of those little marine puzzles known as deep sea anemones. There is, however, in addition, a very interesting collection of various sorts of fish and corals, which commands much of the young scientist's attention. One of the most curious of the fish is the sea porcupine. It has the faculty of These Greeks, indeed, were proper men of the Curse of Minerva), and alters the tense to the present. He is a "proper man," and all he wants is a worthy poet. There are no Byrons nowadays (Byron, by-the-bye, was, if not a Scandinavian, at least a Northman, for he was a half Scot), to write the record of a nation's struggles in a ringing line and celebrate its ancient glories in a couplet. But is there any need? Did not Byron bimself leave enough to make Greece something more than a mere assibletic memory? Why, what could be more applicable at this moment than his translation of "Sons of the Greeks, arisel"?

It is to be hoped the last couplet is not sad prophecy. That famous interpolated poem in "Don Juan" is full of quotable and splendid things. What school boy does not know:

The Isles of Greece! the Isles of Greece! Where burning Sappho loved and sung, where grew the arts of war and peace. Where Delos rose and Phoebus sprung! Eiternal summer glids them yet, But all, except their sun, is set

Among the various specimens which Miss Ten Eyck is carefully watching are a number of young sharks. Just what she will do with these marine cannibals when they become too large for their present quarters she does not know, but she has hopes that ere that time arrives the society of which she is a member will provide an aquarium for the specimens.

Blown Up by Dynamite

Blown Up by Dynamite.

Blown Up by Dynamite.

Gen. Dudley Avery is one manamong a million; he has been blown up by dynamite and lives to tell the tale. How it happened and how he felt is seen from his own account of the matter as printed in The New Orleans Times-Democrat.

One of the most exciting episodes of my life took place on Avery's Island, when ten thousand pounds of dynamite exploded.

I was in the neighborhood of the building in which the dynamite was stored, and when the storm came on I took shelter under a shed which was some distance from the explosive and was used as a blacksmith shop by a man, who had served with me during the war.

We were chatting together when I reit a shock, and, then, to my surprise, I saw the blacksmith going up in the air, I watched him pass through the root of the shed, but the man, who, by the way, was an Irishman, did not seem to get any further from me.

Then I realized that I was going up, too. I suppose we must have ascended for thirty or forty feet, and then we came down with a rush, reaching the earth a little disfigured and with-lungs in a state of collapse. When, we caught our breath the Irishman remarked between his gasps that a little thing like that couldn't scare us, as we'd both been in explosions before.

He was wounded badly, however, while I escaped with a few scratches. We found that the lightning had exploded the ten thousand pounds of dynamite. Where the storehouse had slood there—was a hole in the ground about thirty feet deep, and with a diameter of fully sixty feet, shaped like a funnel. Trees in the vicinity were burned black, and an oak tree two feet thick, that had stood twenty were burned black, and an oak tree two feet thick, that had stood twenty were burned black, and an oak tree two feet thick, that had stood twenty were burned black, and an oak tree two feet thick, that had stood twenty were burned black, and an oak tree two feet thick, that had stood twenty were burned black. Why William Hates the Greek.

Newspaper readers following the present European compilications have doubtless wondered at the German Emperor's attitude toward Greece, of which country his sister Sophia hopes to be queen some day.

The former princess Sophia of Prussia now Crown Princess of the Hellenes and Duchess of Sparta, has not been on good terms with her imperial and imperious brother, from the day, three or four years ago, when she first declared her intention to join the Greek Church. The Emperor made strenuous opposition to this resolve, but the Duchess, after explaining that she had been in no way coerced, either by her husand or his family, to take the step, quietly put an end to the discussion by embracing the faith of her future subjects.

Since then the Princess Sophia has become a stranger in her native city, and her name is never even mentioned at the Berlin court.

The Cretan incident afforded the Kaiser the first opportunity to punish Princess Sophia and her husband. It was he who proposed that the Piracus be blockaded at once. The rown Princess of the Hellenes has become one of the most popular women of Athens, where she leads all movements to benefit womankind and aid the poor. Of late she has become the patroness of a society for the introduction of a new national dress. She is also at the head of an organization for furnishing wholesome food to the poor at cost price, and poor school children receive every day in the year.

It Ceased Publication.

The editor of a petty newspaper in France was extremely sad. He sat in his office with bowed head and troubled brow. Long had he fought against adversity's strides, but at last they had overtaken him, and now, with no money to bring out the future issues, his only alternative was to cease publishing. The once paying circulation had dwindled to a mere nothing and the wielder of the blue pencil and scissors racked his brains for an honorable excuse for quitting. It took hours, and at last he jumped up, "Jacques," he called to his printer. "we will get out one more issue, and that will be the last. I will devote every page of it to the festivities occasioned by the visit of the Czar of Russia, and on the head of the sheet put in large display type this line: "In commemoration of his illustrious majesty the Czar of Russia's visit, this paper, always an exponent of the nation's welfare, will cease publication."—Harper's Round Table.

"Will you allow me to stand?" asked a gentheman, getting into an English rallway carriage already containing the specified number.

"Certainly nct," exclaimed a man occupying a cyrner seat.

"As you are the only person objecting to my presence," replied the gentleman, "I shak, remain here,"

"Then I shall call the guard and have you removed," said the aggrieved passenger, getting up and putting his head out of the window, The newcomer saw his opportunity and slipped into the vacant seat.

"What's up?" said the guard, appearing at the door.

"One over the number," replied the new comer. one over the number, replied the new comer, "You must come out; the train's going!" and, without waiting for further explanation, the guard pulled out the amazed passenger, who was left willly gesticulating on the platform.—Lon-

The orchestra came in and played the overture, but she still kept the hat on.
The bell rang, the curtain rose, and she sat there wholly unconcerned.
Chapple's expressions of admiration changed to remarks of disgust, but the damse noticed him not.
The play was well under way, and Chapple was about to utter a good round protest, when his revenge came in a different way.
The-two comedians came down to the footlights and sang a topical song. They sang of various things of interest, and gradually drifted around to the theatre hat. Right in the midst of the song they stopped and looked down at the pretty blonde in the first row. The audience began to titter and chapple laughed aloud. The damsel hesitated a moment, then ralsed her hands to her head, pulled out two long hat pins, and lifted off her hat.
The house roared, and Chapple yelled "Good," at the top of his voice. The comedians finished their song, and then the pretty blonde got up and went out. As she passed Chapple she smiled at him, but he had hardened his heart against her and took no notice of her.
"That's a good thing," said a young man to Chapple as they strolled out. "What's a good thing," said a young man to Chapple so the smiled as stely smille, but kept his peace.—Detroit Free Press.

Your Vitality?

The essence of life is force. Every breath you breathe, every heart best, every motion of your hand, takes force. The measure of force we call vital-ity. If this is lacking, there is loss of flesh, lack of resistive power, a tendency to catch disease easily, especially a tendency to Consumption. For low vitality nothing is better than Scott's Emu'sion. TO STUDY THE SUN.

has just been completed by Prof. Johns A. Brashear, the famous instrument maker of Aliegheny, Pa. It has been made specially for Dr. Hans Hausmaldt, a weathy scientist of Magdeburg, Germany, where it will be used in physical research, and it is expected that many important discoveries will be made with its aid. The two most powerful spectroscopes now in use are at the Royal University of Dublin, and the University of Toronto, Canada, These instruments were also made by Prof. Brashear.

The powerful concave grating instrument is 21 feet long, and will require a room about 28 feet square in which to operate it. It is to be used for physical investigations of a very high character and the design and construction were settled upon by Prof. Brashear and Dr. H. Kayser of the University of Bonn.

It is also very probable that Dr. Hauswaldt will have other powerful instruments of research made by Prof. Brashear, as correspondence is now ging on in regard to great physical and astronomical instruments that are to be placed in the new laboratory now being equipped by him in Magdeburg.

are burning in our great luminary as those that we burn in the furnaces of the metallurgists. So it is with the gases and, indeed, all the chemical elements. Yet, strange to say, while we here on earth recognize oxygen as the great supporter of combustion, the most careful researches with the spectroscope have failed to show the existance of oxygen in the sun. I have in my library an elaborate little manual giving Prof. Draper's scientific reasons and proofs that oxygen is burning in the sun, but it has been strongly proved the opposite. "Extraordinary care has been taken to make the instrument as absolutely perfect as is possible for human hands. The German physicists are the most exacting scientists in the world, and their tests of the great spectroscope will be most rigorous. Dr. Hauswaldt has established one of the finest laboratories of its kind in the world, and he has associated with him in his work the best German physicists of the day. He intends, I understand, to devote his fortune and the rest of his days in making advanced researches. His ging on in regard to greet physical and astronomical instruments that are to be placed in the new laboratory now being equipped by him in Magdeburg. Dr. Hauswaldt has gained considerable fame in Germany by his experiments, and he is sparing nothing in the equipment of his laboratory, which, when complete, will be one of the finest in Europe, and will far excel any in this country.

The grating to be used on the powerful spectryscope has a six-inch aperture, and his ruled with 110,000 lines. So accurately are these lines ruled that there is no difference any greater than three-millionths of an inch between any of them. This instrument is so powerful that where an ordinary spectroscope would show from 100 to 200 lines belonging to the spectrum of iron, it will reveal more than 2000. It used to be considered that a spectroscope that could show the sodium lines double was one of great power. The great instrument to be sent to Geriron, it will reveal more than 2000. It used to be considered that a spectroscope that could show the sodium lines double was one of great power. The great instrument to be sent to Germany not only shows each of these lines double, but with the sun low in the meridian, as many as 15 lines may be seen between the sodium lines. The new spectroscope has its greatest power, however, in the way of photography. The spectrum of the sun has been photographed to a length of over 60 feet, literally crowded with lines from one end to the other. It is so arranged that ne matter what part of the spectrum it is desired to photograph the photographic plate is always in focus for every part of the spectrum. This large instrument is also valuable in making comparisons of anything that may be burning in the sun. We have light that is coming from the sun. We have light that is coming from the sun. We have light that is coming from the sun. The hat is now placed over this part of the plate which has received the impression of the solar spectrum, and now we turn on an electric light, in which we have placed a small plece of pure calcium. In a very brief time the spectrum of the calcium is photographed above and below the spectrum that came from the sun. The plate is now developed, and here we have a picture of the solar spectrum, running as a narrow strip between the photograph of the metal we have taken. We can see at once the coincidence of the lines of the metal with any lines that may be in the sun. If the lines are in obsolute coincidence, we may infer from the law of probabilities, which increases as the lines increase, that the metal we have taken we want as the sun. "Many hundreds of these photographs have been taken, and we are now alleviant and we have taken we want to the sun.

m. "Many hundreds of these photographs have been taken, and we are now almost as certain of the elements that are burning in our great luminary as those that we burn in the furnaces of the best German physicists of the day. He intends, I understand, to devote his fortune and the rest of his days in making advanced researches. His laboratory now far excels those in this country, and the instruments he is talking of adding to the equipment will make it even more admirable. I look for important discoveries in physical science from the famous little town. The circumstances and sursoundings certainly favor it.

"It has been my great regret that I have been unable to photograph the instrument just made. I have tried, but it is so large that some part of it is always placed out of focus in an exaggerated fashion. A camera would have to be placed 50 feet away to get any results at all, and then they would have to be placed 50 feet away to get

Great and prominent people in all probability dislike to be ridiculed and lampooned as much at the present day as their ancestors ever did, but the penalty for the offender, provided he keep himself within bounds, can hardly be more than the disfavor of the object of his ridicule, instead of being really serious, as it too often was one or two centuries ago.

The severest wit of his time. Voltaire, was more than once imprisoned in the Bastille for having directed his satire against the powers that were. His first incarceration for such an offence was in ITI, when he levelled a biting set of verses, and later a satirical composition in Latin, against the regent, the Duke of Orleans.

The justly incensed regent ordered bim to be taken to the Bastille, but forgetting his insulter almost immediately, he left the wretched Voltaire in prison for elevan months.

When the poet was remembered and released, the generous duke, unmindful of anything save the tedious imprisonment his lampooner had suffered, sent for him and granted him a pension of four hundred dollars a year, to soothe his wounded feelings.

Voltaire accepted the gift with as much witty grace as gruikude.

"Monseigneur," he said, "I must humbly thank your royal highness for continuing to charge yourself with the expense of my board, but I beg you never again to trouble yourself about my lodging."

The speech from the throne includes promises of tariff reform, a new franchise act, the enlargement of the St. Lawrence Canals and the submission of the prohibition question to the electors.

The Supreme Court at Ottawa gave judgment of the election appeals. The effect is to unseat the members for Winnipeg, Macdonald and West Frincand to send the Beauharnois, Lunenburg and West Assimbioia cases back for trial. All these seats were held by Conservatives. Mr. Roche, Conservative, is affirmed in his seat for Marquette.

ranking next, then small "lingerie" tucks. Three ruffles of the goods or of lace arranged separately or in overlapping style are popular as garniture on skirts.

The ribbons in plain colors, floral designs and stripes are chiefly in taffeta weaves, and will be worn in large shoulder bows, belts, sashes having long ends collars and bows across the bust. An entire piece of ribbon lavished upon a dimity gown or dainty organide is not unusual—a style for which ribbon manufacturers should be duly thankful.

Fronts of bodices and tops of sleeves are quaintly decorated with tucking. The close-fitting parts of some sleeves are trimmed with lengthwise tucks, developing near the shoulder into a short puff.

Besides plenty of lace and ribbon large buttons matching the keynote of color will be used on the pretty cotton frocks.

Hitherto one of the canons of good dressing has been the harmony of color in eyes and gown. We have always been taught to believe that no woman can make a false step as researds suitability of tone so long as the essays to match in some way the color of her eyes. But a French woman, whose exquisite dressing is the entry of all the belies of Paris, now declares this to be a complete mistake, and that nothing is more fatal for a brown-eyed woman to dress herself in blue. The reason the gives for arriving at this conclusion is that an artificial dyed color, or placed in proximity to a natural color cone combination of color, which suits each individual woman, and it is this which must be sought for and diligently adhered to when found.—Londing the later of the color of the colo

HOTBEDS.

I fancy there are a good many peo-ple who are deterred from making a hotbed by an erroneous impression as to its cost. This need be but a triffe fike skylight sash with glass not less than 10x1 laid with not more than one quarter inch lap.

Fresh horse manure is the best heating material that is easily secured. It is all the better for having a good mixture of leaves or straw. It should be forked up in a compact pile, and if dry watered. After a few days fork it over again, and allow it to heat a second time. The object of this frequent turning is to secure a uniform degree of fermentation. In a few days after the second turning it will be ready to use.

The making of the bed requires careful attention. A dry location should be selected, and one never flooded by rain. Excavate a pit one or two feet deep and one foot longer and broader than the frame. Sometimes straw, coarse manure or corn stalks are put in pe seiected, and one never nooded by rain. Excavate a pit one or two feet deep and one foot longer and broader than the frame. Sometimes straw, coarse manure or corn stalks are put in the bottom for drainage and on this place the fermenting manure and tramp it down to a depth of twenty or more inches. It is then ready for the box and sash. The box should be banked up with warm manure on the outside all around. Place on top of the manure three or four inches of the richest and most finely pulverized soil that can be secured. Cover the sash with mats or blankets. In a day or two the temperature should rise to 120 degrees, When the tmperature has fallen to 90 degrees stir the soil thoroughly to kill the weeds that have sprouted and sow the seed. We usually sow Grand Rapids lettuce, early scarlet erfurt and early deep scarlet olive radishes. These we have found good varieties for forcing. Cover the sash every night to prevent freezing and air in the middle of the day, if needed for a few minutes, never allowing the temperature to fall below 70 degrees, or rise above 90 degrees, air and molsture are all required to produce strong, healthy plants. Water every evening as a rule. A thermometer is indispfunishe in the care of a hotbed, especially to a beginner. It will not do to guess at temperatures and expect to succeed. A very good one can be bought for from 25 to 40 cents. It is not well to remove the mats before 9 o'clock in the morning unless the weather is quite moderate and they should be replaced before sundown. Give the plants all the sunlight, and it requires watchfulness to see that one is not neglected at the expense of the other. We depnd on the manure for bottom heat—the sun warms the top, and we must see that the proper amount of water and air are given when needed. Seeds are usually sown in rows three inches apart. It is not well to crowd the plants so closely that they grow eak and spindling ones. While not absolutely necessary it is a material aid in securing good results, to have the hotbed prottecte
