POETRY.

Life's Mirror.

There are loyal hearts, there are spirits brave,
There are souls that are pure and true!
Then give to the world the best you have
And the best will come back to you.

Give love, and love to your life will flow
A strength in your utmost need;
Have faith, and a score of hearts will show
Their faith in your word and deed.

Give truth, and your gifts will be paid in kind,
And honor will honor meet;
And a smile that is sweet will surely find
A smile that is just as sweet!

Give pity and sorrow to those who mourn;
You will gather in flowers again,
The scattered seeds from your thought
Out-borne,
Though the sowing seemed but vain.

For life is the mirror of king and slave,
'Tis just what we are and do—
Then give to the world the best you have
And the best will come back to you.

SELECT STORY.

A FAIR AMAZON.

Half way up the summit of Mount Serrat

There was the usual crowd around the little, one-storied hostelry. There were the canes out from the glossy mountain woods, the glittering rows of minerals, the birch-basket of freshly gathered berries, the new milk, the stone bottles of home-brewed root-beer.

The landlord, a bald-headed old man, stood beaming behind his counter—the landlady nestled to make a cup of tea for the ladies in the stage, who were wearied with travel—the passengers strolled hither and yon with the idle, aimless curiosity of those who have nothing to do. All except Gordon Wray.

"But, driver," he exclaimed, "all this seems perfectly idiotic to me. Can't you understand that people are in a hurry to go ahead? What's the meaning of this unnecessary delay?"

The driver sat calm and undismayed on the edge of a cliff, where had he varied in the slightest degree from his equilibrium, he would have fallen a hundred feet into a chasm below.

"Opinions differ as to that, squire," said he, carelessly swinging his legs.

"Just look at them horses! They've got to have a hour's rest."

"But why can't you change horses?" imperiously demanded Wray, chafing with annoyance.

"Teams ain't to be had like blackberries along the mountain ledge," was the curt reply.

"But there are horses in the barn back of this. I saw them there," persisted Wray.

"Don't belong to this line," said the driver.

"But I tell you, man, I'm in a hurry."

"Can't help that," said the driver. And Gordon Wray, quite well aware that no amount of argument or remonstrance would avail with this rugged son of the soil or induce him to start his team one second before the regular time, strode indignantly away, muttering to himself, and hardly conscious where he went.

Under a low archway of passion vines, past a hedge of blossoming fuchsias and the scarlet pendants of a monster pomegranate tree, he came in to a green little nook at the back of the house, where a tall, dark-browed girl was putting a pair of spirited little mustang ponies into a light box wagon.

"We don't receive company at the back of the house," she said, looking at him with dark, long-lashed eyes, which sparkled with displeasure at his abrupt appearance.

"But I am an exception," said Mr Wray with his most insinuating voice and smile.

"My good girl, can I hire this team to take me to Climax Valley?" and at the same time he slipped a gold coin into her hand.

She frowned at him, but she half laughed at the same moment.

"But it's my team," said she.

"I'm going to use it."

Wray looked at her. Was he in the country of Amazons? Did the bright-eyed rustic lassie supplant the Helen of the stage-coach line?

"Why can't I use it, too?" he asked, coaxingly.

"Because," said the Amazon, leaning up against the neck of the high horse, who turned his velvet nostrils toward her and made a soft whinnying noise, as if he liked it. "I do not know whether I want to take a passenger or not."

"Isn't it enough?" he asked, glancing at the gold pieces which still lay in her hand.

"It's enough to purchase a teamster I dare say," said the Amazonian. But whether I shall choose to overburden my horse with your extra weight or not is another question."

Gordon Wray was a man who prided himself on his skill with the fair sex. He fully made up his mind not to be rebuffed by this slender girl, with the raven down on her upper lip, the coils of blue-black braids beneath her hat brim. She was pretty, after her wild, semi-Indian way, and perhaps this helped to spur him on.

"Well, if that is not enough," he placatedly, "I'll tell you your fortune while you are taking me to Climax Valley."

And, with laughing audacity, he sprang lightly into the wagon.

The girl looked at him for a second. "You must be a man who is pretty well accustomed to have his own way," said she, curtly.

"Exactly," smiled our hero. "Can I help you in?"

"No, I will get in myself." She smiled as she did so. "And now for the fortune," she added, as they sat side by side.

"Drive on, then," said he.

Without touching the little whip in its socket she chirruped softly to the horses, who cantered obediently down a winding slope to the east. Involuntarily Wray clung to the side of the light vehicle.

"Is this the way you shoot along the edge of precipices in this country?" he asked.

"I am driving," she answered recklessly.

"Well, if I am going to tell you my own fortune," she said, with something of a forced laugh, "I should say that it was extremely likely to land me at the bottom of yonder gorge."

"That shows how little you know of my ponies," she said. "But it was not your fortune that we were talking about; it was mine."

"Well, then, to begin at the beginning, your name is Alma," he said.

Her dusky eyes flashed.

"More jugglery!" she exclaimed.

"You saw it on the hem of my handkerchief just now."

"You have come out here to meet a lover," he pursued.

"You think so?"

"And you are returning home disappointed."

"And," he added, catching once more at the side of the wagon, "you certainly will break my neck if you drive at this rate, my good girl. No, a truce to all nonsense," he resumed, more gravely. "You are the daughter of the landlord at the Half Way House, and I am very much obliged to you for forwarding me on my way. I am anxious to arrive at Climax Valley as soon as possible. Mr Arden is my father's old friend, and I have long been under promise to visit him in his Western home. And when I found myself in San Francisco the temptation was too strong not to come hither. But if I had known in what sort of mountains Climax Valley was settled I might have thought twice about it. Look at the dying splendors of the sunset; surely it is getting late."

"Ah," said the girl with a scarcely perceptible shrug of her shoulders. "I see that you distrust me. Here we are now. Do you see the chimney of Climax Valley rising out from among the eucalyptus trees? And there is the porch itself. Jump out quickly. The horses are in a hurry to reach their stable."

"But you? Oh, I see," he said, slightly chagrined to think of the conditions he had made. "You are a seamstress, or perhaps one of the maids?"

"At your service," she returned, with a slight mocking inclination of the head as he sprang lightly out; and driving her horses around towards the stable, she called merrily: "Many thanks for your fortune! The gold piece you will find in your coat pocket!"

"The little gypsy!" he exclaimed, half vexed, half laughing, "he has got the better of me, after all."

Mr Arden was delighted to receive his young friend with the wide, generous Western hospitality concerning which those who live on the other side of the Continental Divide know nothing. He insisted on showing all the fine views, the bits of tropic scenery, to Mr Wray; he asked numberless questions, and finally exclaimed before they could be answered:

"But dinner is served already, and here is my daughter Alma to do the honors. Alma, this is Mr Wray, the son of my old college chum, Gilbert Wray. Wray, let me introduce you to my daughter."

"We have met before," said Alma, calmly.

"I—I drove down from the Half Way House with Miss Arden," stammered our discomfited hero.

"And he told my fortune," merrily added the young beauty, who, in her satin dress, with a priceless lace scarf around her neck and white roses in her hair, was still the fair Amazon of his afternoon's adventure. "Papa come in to dinner. The soup will be spoiling, and you know how despairingly Fernando will be?"

Wray cast an appealing glance towards her, as if to say: "Do not betray my idiotic folly." A little nod of her queenly head made answer: "You are safe."

"But how came you to be harnessing your horses?" he asked. "You must allow that my blunder had some foundation of reason."

"Do you suppose I would allow those inn-burglers to touch my darlings?" she cried, with spirit. "I had driven down to get the mails, and often do so. We California maidens are free as our own air."

"Well," Wray said, after a brief interval of silence, "I was wrong about the items of your fortune."

"Explain yourself, please."

"You did not come out to meet a lover?"

She nodded gayly.

"No," said she, "I did not."

"And you did not return home disappointed?"

"That is as time may show," she said, scarcely knowing whether to smile or frown.

"I shall wait expectantly," he said. And this time Alma Arden smiled. When Wray went East he took her with him. Their wedding was long remembered in Climax Valley.

Too Personal.

A singular dilemma in which a young Washington lady recently found herself is described by the Post of that city. The young lady, it should be premised, is a member of a certain patriotic society, which lately held an "open meeting."

The woman who had the affair in charge notified each member of the toast she would be expected to respond to ten days or so before the meeting. To one young woman, whom, as it happened, she did not know personally, she sent the toast, "Our Flag."

The young woman received it, and at once went to call on the head of the society, in a state of great distress. She simply could not respond to the toast, she said. She didn't know whether a joke was intended, but she had been chafed so mercifully about it already, and wouldn't go near the meeting if she were to be called on to speak on that subject.

"Why, what on earth is wrong with that sentiment?" asked the head of the society.

The pretty young woman hesitated. She blushed.

"Well," she said, "you see I'm going to marry a man named Flagg."

The Comfort of Labor.

"I suppose," said Mr Staybolt, "that most of us, as between wealth with idleness and poverty with occupation, would choose wealth, but I am not so sure that I would myself. In fact, the older I grow the more I am convinced that next to the love of those we hold dearest, of parents, wives and children, the greatest boon to man is labor. Poverty with occupation would imply the power to labor, and that would mean freedom from want. And occupation means also freedom from care. The man who becomes interested in his work forgets his troubles, and he finds besides a pleasure in seeing the results of his labor take form and grow, the pleasure of attainment.

"The man who does not find enjoyment in labor misses the most satisfactory of life's pleasures."—New York Sun.

Christian Manhood.

It is eminently manly to be a Christian. If the contrary should be believed, alas for our young men! Jesus Christ was above all in Christian manhood. He has followers to-day in all walks of life. What nobler example than Thomas Hughes and Bishop Brooks? These two, perhaps more than others, showed that to be Christians meant that one was a man in every sense of the word. There is a loud call in everyday life for men of conviction. We need men of high ideals, and it is Christianity that gives perfection. You may be the greatest scholar in the world, but without Christ you will find the world is hardly worth living in.

Hot Cross Buns.

One quart of milk, twelve ounces of butter, one pound of sugar, one fourth of an ounce of mixed spice, two eggs, two ounces German yeast, four pounds of flour. Make the milk slightly warm, put in a pan with half the sugar, six ounces of flour, the yeast and the eggs mixed together, and cover down in a warm place to rise. When risen with a frothy head and again fallen and become almost flat it is ready for the remainder of the ingredients to be mixed with it. The butter should be rubbed in the rest of the flour and mixed together into a mellow dough. Bake in a quick oven.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Reached the Muscles of the Heart.

Paine's Celery Compound Never Disappoints the Rheumatic Sufferer.

The Marvellous Spring Medicine Should Be Used This Month.

It Drives All Poisons From the System.

WELLS & RICHARDSON CO.,
GENTLEMEN:—It is with extreme pleasure I give you a testimonial in favor of your wonderful remedy, Paine's Celery Compound. Last January I had grippa, and it left me suffering with that dread disease, inflammatory rheumatism. My hands and feet were swollen badly; I also had the rheumatism in my sides and shoulders, and in the muscles of my heart.

I suffered very much until a friend advised my husband to procure Paine's Celery Compound for me. I commenced taking the compound in April; I have used ten bottles, and am perfectly cured. The compound has given me a good appetite and made a new person of me. I hear Paine's Celery Compound praised every day by people who have used it, and I heartily recommend it to all who suffer from rheumatism.

Yours sincerely,

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., MAY 13, 1898.

A letter from Dr. Keirstead, strongly commending the effort to be made in Wolfville in favor of the Forward Movement fund of Acadia, will appear next week, the crowded state of our columns compelling us to hold it over.

A somewhat lengthy epistle appears in this issue from the pen of Warden Roscoe, in reply to our article on assessment. We regret that owing to lack of the necessary space this week we are unable to review it fully. Next week, however, we shall probably have something to say in reply.

Since the Forward Movement has claims upon the Baptist people of this community, not only as residents of the town, but as Baptists, in common with the Baptists of the province generally, President Trotter feels that his appeals should naturally be made to the Baptists first. When they have responded, however, as he hopes they will, he will then feel free to ask the rest of the community, on the grounds of public spirit and a common citizenship, to show their good-will.

The interior of St. Francis' (R. C.) church, this town, has been undergoing considerable change during the past few weeks, and the result is a greatly improved appearance. The ceiling has been newly celled in native woods, the design being in three strips. The centre is made up of square panels placed diagonally, with Gothic mouldings and centre blocks. The sides are done plain in diagonal patterns, with plain division moulding and brackets. The wood used is spruce, stained oak, the mouldings being stained walnut. Mr. G. A. Pratt had charge of the work, and has done a good job. The funds derived from the concert held under the auspices of the church last summer were employed in the undertaking, much of the credit of which is due to Mr. J. A. Thomson, of the People's bank.

The reception to Rev. H. R. Hatch and Mrs. Hatch on Tuesday evening was well attended and the exercises interesting throughout. From 7 to 8 o'clock members of the congregation were received in the vestry. At 8 o'clock the formal exercises took place in the audience room. Prof. Higgins presided. Dr. T. A. Higgins presented the right hand of fellowship in Mr. and Mrs. Hatch and offered prayer on their behalf. Dr. Trotter gave an address of welcome on behalf of the church and college. Mayor Thomson spoke briefly but very fittingly as mayor of the town and as a member of another denomination. Rev. B. N. Noble, of Kentville, gave much good advice, and a cordial welcome on behalf of the ministers of the county and province. Rev. Mr. Hatch spoke with much feeling and appropriateness in his reply. Rev. Mr. Hale and Rev. Mr. Macdonald sent letters expressing a hope at their unavoidable absence and wishing the new Baptist pastor abundant success.

The "Princesses."

The dramatic production of Tenby's "Princesses" by the education students of Acadia Seminary, in College hall, last Friday evening, was an unqualified success. The large platform was for the time converted into a stage, with footlights and all the necessary fittings. A good audience was present, the hall being well filled, and the play attracted general attention. The costumes of the princesses were very pretty and dainty, and the piece in grouping and posing in the part of the young ladies gave evidence of careful preparation. Miss May Stuart as the Princess, was stately and beautiful enough for her part, and was, of course, the "star" of the evening. Miss Ethel Emmonson impressed the price in her usual happy and fascinating fashion. Miss Grace Hanna, as Lady Psyche, captivated the audience in the "dual room" and reconciliation scenes, while Miss Mr. Pratt, with her catchings, childish ways, made a perfect Melissa. Although each one of the characters fitted nicely in her piece, still the trio of disguised young men, viz.: Miss Emmonson, Miss Crandall and Miss Schumann—very bewitchingly and effectively carried through their rather difficult part. Miss Smith deserves compliment for the strong intonation of Lady Blanche. The effect of the drama was heightened by a judicious interweaving of tasteful and appropriate "living pictures." "The Best of the Nation" in scene three, was particularly good. All who were there will carry for many a day pleasant memories of sweet girl faces framed in circles of evergreen and mayflowers. The cross arrangement was, perhaps, the prettiest grouping. The acting throughout was very natural, and the whole performance reflected the greatest credit upon those who took part, as well as upon Miss Hall, the talented instructor in elocution, under whose supervision the drama was prepared. We are glad to learn that there is a probability of a repetition in the near future, probably during anniversary week.

Warden Roscoe on Assessment.

To the Editor of the Acadian. Mr. Editor,—I suppose it is rather a venturesome proceeding to step into the columns of a paper in opposition to the very emphatically expressed opinion of the editor. The old experiment of going into a lion's den to engage in battle with the occupant is, I suppose, in point, and nothing but a sense of the existence of an extreme necessity of vindicating the right of much care, thought and time in devising a system of assessment induces me to write this letter to your paper.

The situation is peculiar. The press has a wondrous leverage in the formation of public opinion and in producing a state of unrest and dissatisfaction in a community where efforts in such direction are put forth, and although our local papers should be reasonable and fair towards the community where the papers largely circulate, extreme views are violently asserted in favor of towns where the papers are published.

A reader of your paper, having no independent information on the subject, after the perusal of your article on Town vs. County Assessments could not be blamed, I think, if he came to the conclusion not only that the Towns were very unselfish and high minded and wise municipalities, to which conclusion I offer no objection, but that the County as a municipality is senseless, and unfair and dishonest, audacious and mendacious to which result I offer a humble protest. Let us examine the propositions from which these strong representations creep out. And the first is that the property in the towns is assessed for an amount very much nearer as a whole to its actual selling cash value than property in the county. That assertion has never yet been proved, nor do I believe, Mr. Editor, it is capable of proof. There is no doubt but what there are instances here and there all over the county of properties assessed lower than the ordinary principle of assessment in towns warrants, and also lower than the ordinary basis of assessment in the county warrants, but I shall be surprised if instances cannot be found in the town of Wolfville of the same character. That this was the case in Kentville was fully demonstrated not long since at a meeting of a joint committee for regulating the amount payable to the county by the town. Have you ever taken the trouble of comparing the assessment on stocks carried by merchants of your town with their value? Have you ever compared the value of the visible property of the wealthiest men of your town with the amount for which it is assessed. Look around you, Mr. Editor, and you will find that "the rigid and business scrutiny to which the town assessment is subjected" cannot be said to have dissipated the infirmities that have so far always attached to practical assessment in this country. I beg to submit that the claim put forward of perfection in town assessments deserves the epithet of "transparent sham and delusion" and certainly is that of the system of which you speak as to the county. But the fact is that neither system deserves such hard words. There are inequalities and improprieties in town assessments and in county assessments and it is not a difficult matter in either case to gather such a number of independent instances of the kind as to justify criticism as to the assessment and as to the judgment or attention of the assessor to the matter in hand. The best and only way to settle the question as to comparative basis of assessments is by valuation in town and county, and to embrace the opportunity the statute gives to have the matter passed upon by the Courts, and if the towns are so sure as to their position in this matter their duty, it would seem to me, to the people they govern would make such a step necessary. I believe the county would welcome it.

I wish to refer to one more matter in this letter—that which has been dealt with in your article I have referred to under the heading As to Income. I strike a very heavy grade here. I have to deal with an allegation involving "audacity" and "mendacity." These are strong words. To what are they applied? To men selected by the Municipal Council for the purpose of putting on an assessment roll a statement as to the rateable value of people's property and income. Now, Mr. Editor, there is one way to come at this matter—pretty nearly anyway. You know the local assessors in Ward 3. Tell me are they audacious or mendacious or both? Extend your range a little. Go to Ward 2. Are they there audacious or mendacious or both. You will agree with me that they are gentlemen of standing character and capacity. And what is true of these wards is true of the whole county. The assessors are honorable men in the main and competent men as a class.

Let us see what is the matter. An assessor begins his roll. He knows every individual in the ward and his business and his circumstances, or informs himself by inquiry. He is seeing who should be assessed for income. He says he thinks there are but two persons in the ward whose income is large enough to require assessment. Is he mendacious? I know Ward 3 pretty well, Mr. Editor. I do not believe there is more than one man living in that ward to-day whose income is large enough to require assessment. The income of a farmer is not his gross receipts. You think the assessors are mendacious because they have not said there are more. It would be well if some facts could be given to establish such an assertion.

Aylesford has three wards—10, 11 and 12. What do you say about income in Ward 11—Dalhousie? The question is one who knows the place answers itself. Ward 12 is nearly half mountain—a good place to hunt for income. In the Valley the assessors have found two persons entitled as they think to be rated for income. You say they have reported none. You are in error. But I judge that the number they have reported would not satisfy you. Who is to say they are wrong, leave alone that they are audacious and mendacious? A careful enquiry, such as the assessors make, who, I believe, induce to withdraw the words audacious and mendacious as applied to our assessors. Strong assertions, which do not necessarily establish facts, do not necessarily establish facts. I want to end my letter with my judgment—perhaps I am biased—that there is more of a difference between the aggregate assessable income of the towns of Kentville and Wolfville and the actual assessed income than exists for the whole assessed income of Kings County. And yet I would be long sorry to say that this is evidence either of audacity or mendacity.

Yours truly, W. E. ROSECOE.

Berwick.

J. Parsons, Esq., of Halifax, paid an official visit to Oglivie's Wharf on the 7th inst., passing the wharf on his return via Berwick, which he tarried over Sunday and assisted pastor Simpson in conducting public worship here in the p.m. and addressed the Sunday-school. He also taught a class of ladies in the a.m. in the Baptist Sunday-school in Berwick. Mr. Parsons' visitation was highly appreciated and will not soon be forgotten, especially by the children of the Sunday-school.

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Nichols, of Berwick, and their friend, Mr. Albert Marshall, of Clarence, also attended public worship here last Sunday.

On account of the rain on Friday last Arbor Day was observed on Monday. The school was enthusiastic in tidying up the grounds, planting flowering shrubs and lawn and ornamental trees. The teacher, Miss Kirkpatrick, has done well in developing in her pupils a taste along these lines.

ported would not satisfy you. Who is to say they are wrong, leave alone that they are audacious and mendacious? A careful enquiry, such as the assessors make, who, I believe, induce to withdraw the words audacious and mendacious as applied to our assessors. Strong assertions, which do not necessarily establish facts, do not necessarily establish facts. I want to end my letter with my judgment—perhaps I am biased—that there is more of a difference between the aggregate assessable income of the towns of Kentville and Wolfville and the actual assessed income than exists for the whole assessed income of Kings County. And yet I would be long sorry to say that this is evidence either of audacity or mendacity.

Yours truly, W. E. ROSECOE.

Berwick.

J. Parsons, Esq., of Halifax, paid an official visit to Oglivie's Wharf on the 7th inst., passing the wharf on his return via Berwick, which he tarried over Sunday and assisted pastor Simpson in conducting public worship here in the p.m. and addressed the Sunday-school. He also taught a class of ladies in the a.m. in the Baptist Sunday-school in Berwick. Mr. Parsons' visitation was highly appreciated and will not soon be forgotten, especially by the children of the Sunday-school.

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Nichols, of Berwick, and their friend, Mr. Albert Marshall, of Clarence, also attended public worship here last Sunday.

Talk it Over.

I have learned some things in the course of a long business life and still have a great many others to learn.

But the chief thing I have learned can be condensed into one suggestion of wisdom in three words "Talk it over."

If thy business enemy offend thee, don't smite him on the cheek. Take him by the buttonhole in a friendly manner and talk it over.

Some one tells you that Smith, down the street, has said or done something to your detriment. Perhaps he has, and perhaps he has not. If he has, your best policy is to prevent his repeating his remark or deed in the future. If he has not, you don't want to do him an injustice, even in your own mind.

Put in your hat, leave your temper at home, go down and make a friendly call. Be neighborly, frank, open. Tell him the truth and ask him for the same frankness. Nine hundred and ninety-nine times out of a thousand the whole matter will be explained and straightened out in five minutes, and you will part as personal friends rather than as personal and business enemies.

You will both feel better, you will live side by side in harmony; the earth will be brighter, the sunshine clearer, your own heart lighter and merrier take on a more friendly aspect. Don't get mad and rush to your desk and send a scorching letter; be a man and a Christian and go yourself.

Talk it over.—Hawthorne.

No Uncertain Verdict.

The Ladies are Continually Praising Diamond Dyes.

The strong assertion can be made, without fear of contradiction, that no other package dyes for home dyeing ever commanded the praise and admiration of the millions as have the wonderful and popular Diamond Dyes.

Mrs W. F. Curtis, Albany, P. E. I., says: "I have used Diamond Dyes for seven years, and have always had success with them."

Mrs J. H. Johnson, Manitoulin Island, Ont., says: "I have used your Diamond Dyes for many years with greatest success, and like them better than any other make of dyes."

Mrs Jas. McCellan, Surrey Centre, B. C., says: "I have bought your Diamond Dyes for a great many years, and they have proved good and true."

Mrs W. J. Porter, Peterboro, Ont., says: "I have been using your Diamond Dyes for years, and they do all that is claimed for them."

Mrs Annie, Sheffield, Vt., P. Q., says: "I have used Diamond Dyes for many years and think they are the best; do not wish to try any other make."

Mrs Chas. Gagne, St. Chrysostome, P. Q., says: "Your Diamond Dyes are splendid and should be kept in every home."

Mrs Chas. Lewis, Hamilton, Ont., says: "The Diamond Dyes are far ahead of other dyes I have tried; they give the clearest and brightest color. No wonder your dyes are the most popular."

The Quest of Fortune.

"The longer I live the more firmly I am convinced," said Mr. Gizeletou, "that a man who waits a fortune has got to do something besides wish for it. Fortune, large and small, are shy, very shy. In one form and another they are passing by all the time, but they won't stop for the mere asking, however polite and graceful and earnest the invitation may be. We might sit out on the veranda from now till doomsday and rise and howl and scrape at every one of 'em that comes along and ask 'em all in, but never one of 'em would stop. They might want to come in, but nothing short of actual coaxing would bring 'em in. The fact is that if we want a fortune we've got to work for it."

"Men have made fortunes to be sure without working. Oil may spout out of the ground one owns and covers him with riches. Another man may find iron ore in his land, and so on. But such cases are so few in number that they don't count, the chances of our getting rich in that way are really not worth considering. If we would like to make our work for it. And we'll easily and late; all the time. Plung at it and keep plunging at it. There is practically no other way."

"The man who idles away his time, or fails to make the best possible use of it, stays poor; the man who works for all he knows how and keeps forever at it is bound to get ahead."

Language.

If a pioneer goes forth, how is he first? If a tramp takes a tramp to the woods, are there two of him? If a man is fast in the meshes of bill, is he leading a fast life? If 3 and 2 make five after dinner, why could they not before? If a business firm is shaky, how is it that it is a firm business? If a prisoner turns pale, can he be on bail or the bail on him? If a capitalist gives consent to a scheme he can not give a million? If a sight-lover cannot express himself, why not send himself by mail? If bread is five cents a loaf, can a baker's boy take a loaf for five cents any time he feels lazy?

There is not a single female voice in the choir at St. Peter's, in Rome, and yet the most difficult oratorios and sacred music written are rendered in such a manner as to make one think that Adeline Patti's high soprano is lending. The choir is composed of sixty boys. They are trained for the work from the time they get control of their vocal chords, and some of the best singers are not over nine years old. At the age of seventeen all boys leave the choir.

The Plebiscite Act.

The Prohibition Plebiscite Act now before the Dominion Parliament, provides that there shall be submitted to the vote of the electors the following question:

Are you in favor of the passing of an Act prohibiting the importation, manufacture or sale of spirits, wine, ale, beer, cider, and all other alcoholic liquors for use as beverages?

The persons entitled to vote are all persons who would be entitled to vote at a Dominion election at the time at which the plebiscite shall be held. For the purpose of submitting the question to the electors and ascertaining the result of the vote, it is provided that the same proceedings, as nearly as may be, shall be had as in the case of a general Dominion election, and the Dominion Elections Act and the North West Territory Representation Act and their amendments, and the Franchise Act, 1898, shall, subject to the provisions of this Act, and of any regulations, orders or instructions, made or given by the Governor-in-Council thereunder, apply, "mutatis mutandis," to the conduct of such proceedings, and with respect to the powers to be exercised, and the duties to be performed by, and the rights, obligations, liabilities, qualifications and disqualifications of judges, officers, electors, and all other persons, and with respect to offences and the penalties which may be incurred.

It is provided that the ballot papers for the purpose of the plebiscite shall be in the following form:

Table with 2 columns: YES, NO. The table is empty for the purpose of this transcription.

Are you in favor of the passing of an Act prohibiting the importation, manufacture or sale of spirits, wine, ale, beer, cider, and all other alcoholic liquors for use as beverages?

An affirmative vote on the question submitted shall be marked by placing a "Yes," and a negative vote by placing a similar cross in the column headed "No."

The Montreal Witness thinks it might be better not to have a blank space above the question, and suggests that it should be used to tell the voters where to put their X, thus: "If you wish prohibition, put a cross (thus X) in the blank space under 'YES.' If you oppose it, put a cross in the blank space under 'NO.'—Messenger and Visitor.

The Saloon in Politics.

From an able sermon recently preached in St. Anne's church, Montreal, by Rev. Father Cavanagh, S. J., of Loyola College, we clip the following paragraphs, and cordially commend them to the careful consideration of the friends of temperance, who are, we fear, paying too little attention to the growing and dangerous influence that the liquor traffic is exercising in political affairs:

"The saloons are almost everywhere. There is not one of you but must unfortunately know many who are victims of intemperance. Among these there must be at least one of whom you once thought it impossible that he should ever be the slave of drink. He used to be as well conducted, as strong of will as you are now. You have been wise in your own interest to hedge yourselves round with the safeguards of your temperance pledge. But besides the personal motives you who have such power for good, should exert that power."

"Let us be practical, and see what we can do. There is plenty of opportunity for good work, for there is a lot to be done. Think of it; there are hundreds of licensed saloons in the city of Montreal alone. These are four hundred agencies working against you. The saloon keepers have organized themselves into the Licensed Victuallers' Association, with an organ of their own, The Licensed Victuallers' Gazette. They are very much in earnest and closely watch whatever affects their interests. They take a very active, a very telling part in municipal and even in national politics."

"Compared with this, what are you doing? You know that the saloon keepers are a power in politics. What would the chances of a candidate in St. Ann's Ward be, if the saloon keepers were to pronounce against him? But, if you men were, as you must be, just as much as practically in earnest as they are, you, and not they, would decide and give the seat to whom you pleased. Then do, for God's sake and for the sake of your neighbor, only one-half as much as is done by the enemy."

"Teach your political party, if necessary, that the man who is working in the cause of humanity are to be reckoned with. Insist on a wisely restrictive legislation as regards the sale of intoxicants. At best it is a dangerous trade, and it is dangerous because it cannot be stored indiscriminately. Dangerous substances cannot be sold even by druggists otherwise than under certain assurances. Therefore, the selling of drink which leads so often to madness and crime, and is the cause of many a broken heart, should be compassed round with even greater guards and guarantees."

"Bring your unquestioned power to bear. Stand for temperance always and everywhere. Make your influence felt in elections. See that the names of good men are registered on the voters' list. Make yourselves a power in the land. Then success will crown your worthy efforts; you will have done a noble, a holy and a patriotic work, and God, who has promised the recompense for a cup of cold water given in his name, will reward and bless you here and hereafter forevermore."—Comp. Dr. Austin is the Editor; Dr. Badgley, Professor of Philosophy, Victoria University, writes the Introduction. The contributors are scholarly and devoted men, among whom are Rev. Dr. Thomas, Judge Green, Rev. G. W. Henderson, Rev. Wm. Kettlewell, J. H. Coyne, M. A. Chaplin, George, Evangelist Crossley and many others. Contains experience of Wesley, Mark Twain, Dr. Buckley, W. T. Stead, and a host of similar men. The veil separating the spirit land is drawn back so that all may at least have a "glimpse." Full bound canvassing book, 75 cents; work twice that. Experience unnecessary. Books on sale. Freight paid. Big commission. -Sells on sight. BRADLEY-GARRETTSON CO., LIMITED, TORONTO, ONT.

Catarrh Shackles

Broken in 60 Minutes. It's an alarming fact, but statistics bear it out, that at least in every hundred persons in this country an ailment in the nose or throat of a more or less degree is suffering from the disease—Catarrh. It symptoms appear, such as: In the head, dizziness, pain in the forehead and head, headache, dropping in the most potent Catarrhal powder recommended.

For years I was a victim of chronic Catarrh; the first application of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal powder gave me instant relief, and in an incredibly short while I was permanently cured.—James Headley, Dundas, N.Y.—

To secure to our citizens "life, liberty and a chance to be happy," our government exists, but through a legalized drink traffic thousands of citizens are deprived of one, and sometimes all of those "inalienable rights."—War Cry.

In selecting flour for bread cheese that which is yellowish white, rather granulated, and which does not pack easily. Such flour makes a strong and elastic dough and is next in quality to whole wheat flour.

Minards Liniment Cures Dandruff.

Scraps for Odd Moments.

Mrs. A.—Do you think Mr. G. is in the habit of... Mrs. B.—My dear, she couldn't be.

Teacher (showing off his pupil)—New Johnny, tell us how the earth is divided? Johnny (viciously)—By earthquake, sir.

The Rejected One—I have a rival, then? The Girl—Hardly that, I have promised to marry him.

Teacher—How do you spell weather? Little Bill—W-o-o-t-h-e-r.

Minards Liniment Cures Burns, etc. Mrs. Smith—My husband has been enjoying very poor health of late. Mrs. Brown—How fortunate that he can enjoy it. Very few people do.

"Have you any illustrious ancestor, Perkins?" "No, I can't trace it back any further than Adam and Eve, and they weren't any account."

Young Mother (leaning over the cradle)—James, I should like to call Isabel. Young Father—Isabel! Yes, but what if she isn't you know, when she grows up?"

"I'm sorry, madam, but it's against the rules of the house. I can't change that good again." "But my husband doesn't like it." "Why not exchange your husband?"

Mamma—Now, Edward, the best portions of the fowl are for the guests, what are you going to say when you see what you will have! Edward—Just a few of the fowl, if you please.

Jasper—I have noticed a peculiar thing about men who claim to believe in nothing. Jump-ups—What is it? Jasper—They have an unshakable belief in themselves."

Father—Do you think my son is any more of a fool than I? Mother—Well, yes. In one line of drawing he can give me pointers. "Indeed! In what branch?" "Drawing curls."

Captain (to young cadet just striding on board)—Well, youngster, the old story, I suppose—the fool of the family sent to sea. Young Cadet—Oh, no, sir. That's been altered since your day.

Minards Liniment Relieves Neuralgia. Mrs. Marykook (severely)—"John! I bear a man talking loudly with 'John' in the kitchen just now, Mary?" Mary (complacently)—"Oh, hoops, ma'am, for this Oh can call 'yes' ma'am, in a case av' brace av' present suit, ma'am."

Tommy—Mamma, is baby well? Mamma—Dear my son, child's health is an extraordinary question. "As well bred as my territory, Gyp?" "Certainly!" "Then hold her up by the ear and let see if she'll howl. Gyp do!"

The following letter, which was recently picked up in the street, is full of homely pathos: Dear Jane—I hope as you will give me for best last night. I have a bad under my arm, and can't last as I would like to.—Yours affectionately, John.

Minards Liniment for sale every where. "Do you see that gentleman over there, the handsome fellow twisting his mouthache?" said one woman to another who had just been introduced. "He has been watching me all the evening, and making eyes at me, I think he must be smitten. Do you know who he is?" "Yes; he's my husband."

You have possibly heard of the story of the president of Oberlin college, who a young man asked him if he could not take a shorter course. "Oh, yes," said the president, "but that depends on you; you intend to make of yourself. What God wants to make an oak, he starts hundred years; but when he only wants a squab, he takes six months."

A city physician was summoned to the bedside of an injured man in an eastern Maine town recently. When asked by the wife how badly the man was injured, he said: "I will make a diagnosis at once." The poor woman said quickly: "Doctor, all I have in the house to make it with is a piece of red flannel. Will that do?"

GRUBBIER.—While driving down a very steep hill last August my horse stumbled and fell, cutting himself fully about the head and body. I used Minards' Liniment freely on him and in a few days he was as well as ever.

Sherbrooke. J. R. A. BRADCHIE.

Attorney—You say you had called on Mrs. Billings and was at the house at the time the burglary was committed? Witness—Yes, sir.

"Then how did it happen that when the prisoner dashed into the room and assaulted you, you leaped through the window and went home, making no attempt to defend the lady or give the alarm?" "I thought it was her father."

Who Was Right?—A young lady who was about to change her name once asked at an evening party, "To what city is a young man going when he marries?" "Modest young lady," "Oh, I should say it's Nixa." "So said said: 'I declare it's to Hamburg.' Solid Dutchman lowering his bridge: "Yar, Baboos, Sprightly Bridget: 'It's to Dribble, going to have.' Stuttering old bachelor: "Who's likely he's going to Rosen."
