PLAIN TALK TO "URIAH."

This Star last week tried to deny that the editor of that journal had given his correspondence columns into the hands of "blackguard correspondents" for the purpose of personally abusing the editors of THE SIGNAL and others whom he dare not comment on editorially.

Will the Star go over its Bayfield correspondence for the past year or two and take the responsibility for the personal references there made to us by a wretched being whom we never saw or our knowledge, and to whom we never referred but once in our columns?

And again, will the Star assume the responsibility of the "blackguard's" letter that appeared in that sheet on February 6th last, signed "A Listener" and which abused in the lowest language the proprietors of this paper and the chairman of the School Board—Mr. Crabb?

The editor of the Star says he does not seek to "shift the responsibility from his shoulders" in these matters;—in which event we know who is the blackguard, and henceforth we will treat him as such.

The editor of the Star endeavors to assume an air of superiority. He doesn't remember ever having occupied his time on a platform or elsewhere in kindly reference to Mr. Thos. McGillivuddy. It's a pity Mr. Mitchell's memory is so bad, for there are hundreds of people who know that in making that statement he uttered a falsehood. For some three years Messrs. Mitchell and T. McGillivuddy were closely associated in Sunday-school work, and during those years they each had on many occasions to refer in a kindly manner to the other. But that was before Mr. Mitchell had to bend his neck to the yoke of the oligue who now control the Star. As to his assumed & of superiority, we can afford to laugh at that, for even his best friends find fault with him as a slow-coach journalist. He is unknown outside the corporation limits, and is not so bright a star in the social or business firmament that his twinkling should dazzle ordinary folk.

Some five years ago he came to Goderich, and assumed editorial charge of the Star—a Tory paper. He had no political views, and the political complexion of the paper had been clear Grit. He would have taken hold of the concern with equal zest. He never polled a Tory vote until he came to Goderich, and he wouldn't do so now, if his bread and butter were not involved. The consequence was that his political columns had to be run by every volunteer scribe in the local Tory ranks who thought he could put pen to paper, and the result has been that "too many cooks have spoiled the broth."

Mr. Mitchell also speaks about making himself too conspicuous. Well, Mr. Mitchell ought to be the last man in town to refer to the subject. As we said before, he knew nothing about Conservative politics until he came to Goderich, yet he was here but a short time until he got himself pitched into the position of secretary of the West Huron Conservative association. His effort to make himself seen and heard at the Blake meeting on the courthouse square on June 19, 1882, showed that he had a mania for notoriety, and on no occasion during the past five years has he lost an opportunity of sounding his own trumpet. In his last effusion he says the editor of the Star is a "public man." Well, no one would have thought it if he himself hadn't said it. We are of opinion that he is a marionette, and jumps every time the wire-pullers pull the string. If he is a public man, let him act like one, and not go sneaking behind blackguard correspondents if he has anything to say derogatory to a business rival. And if he knows anything about conducting a newspaper he should know that an editor should not allow language to go into his correspondence columns that he would not place in

NAILING LIES.

On the 30th of October the Star copied from the Hamilton Spectator the following item:—

"As late as October 23 the Goderich Signal prints the statement that Sir John Macdonald is about to proceed to England, and tells its readers all about the reasons for the tricky politician's visit. The publication of that article is at so late a date."

Well, a month has not elapsed since that item appeared, and Sir John has gone to England. The Spectator on Monday last, has the following item, which the Goderich Tory echo of a newspaper will copy, we presume, forgetful of the fact that not many days ago it characterized the statement that Sir John would go to England as an "old Grit lie."

"Again Sir John Macdonald has gone to England without consulting the Grits."

Now, who has lied?

Again, a month ago the Star had the following:—

"The Mail of Tuesday last gives publicity to what seems to be a well-founded statement to the effect that Hon. Edward Blake has formally tendered his resignation of the leadership of the Reform party; and that he will henceforth reside in England to conduct cases of appeal to the Privy Council. The feeble reference to the matter which appeared in the Globe next morning rather strengthens than weakens the statement."

Mr. Blake has not retired. What about that "well-founded statement"?

The Blyth Advocate says:—

"We are indebted to Mr. James Harrison, of Belgrave, for a quantity of nice turnips suitable for table use."

If some one would furnish the Blyth editor with a quota of potatoes, he would be well-fitted for root crops during the coming winter, as his list of back subscribers will supply him with "beats."

SIXTY JONAH incontinently took ship from Tarshish to flee from the presence of God, no man ever trod the deck of a vessel with a more miserable conscience than the one whose gross mismanagement of the affairs of the country led to a bloody intestine strife in Canada. But unlike Jonah, Sir John A. Macdonald will find no place for repentance, in a political sense.

OUR Tory friends around town and throughout the Province are in a terrible way lest the Dominion will hereafter be subjected to French domination. Bless their innocent hearts! but are they not conscious of the fact that we in Ontario have always been subject to French domination, and that it was in the vain effort to get rid of French domination that George Brown and his Reform colleagues took up the scheme of Confederation. Our Tory friends have the blues, because they now think they haven't the blues.

"We must admit the force of the remark made by a lady reader that it was a good deal of space and fine English to devote to so small a subject as the editor of the Signal—Star, on Embury's letter."

We pity that poor woman from the bottom of our heart. Her education has evidently been neglected. She would no doubt go into ecstasies listening to a jaw-breaking discourse by Rev. Solomon Peter Hale, D.D.—darkey divine. Last week's Star exhibits a falling off in "fine English." The "lady reader" of the Star, who is such a lover of "fine English," will have to betake herself to the sensational novel once more.

The Huron Signal says:—

"Two Scott Act violators are putting in a term in the Barrie Jail, and yet their friends in Huron say the Act is a prohibitory law which doesn't prohibit."

Well, to put one or two men in jail does not prohibit. It only illustrates the absurdity of a law which makes a penal offence in one county of a business which is perfectly legal and authorized in another.—London Free Press.

Our esteemed contemporary has fallen into a common mistake. It is absurd to say that the selling of liquor without a license in a license law municipality is not a penal offence. The offence is practically the same whether it is committed in a Scott Act or Crooks' Act county or city. Men have been fined and sent to gaol in London for selling liquor without a license.

Most of our Reform contemporaries appear to be very angry because the people of Canada had cause to give thanks.—Hamilton Spectator.

The Reform papers have not been very angry over the matter of thanksgiving. However, a bloody uprising in the North-west, caused by the mal-administration of affairs by a Tory Minister of the Interior who afterwards was driven from office, and a deficit of two and a half millions which crushed the heart of the Tory finance minister and caused him to resign his position, are not reasons for special thanksgiving by Grit or Tory. There is reason for thanksgiving that the Tory night of miracle is far spent, and the day of Liberalism and good government is at hand.

THE SCOTT ACT.

A Large Meeting Held on Friday Night.

A Memorial to the License Commissioners.—Plain Speaking About the Inspectors.

The temperance hall was filled on Friday evening to hear addresses on the present aspect of the Scott Act in Huron. Mr. Stephen Yates, the veteran temperance man, occupied the chair. Mrs. Toms sang two songs in a very acceptable style. Miss and Master Rines sang a duet in a most pleasing manner, and E. Becher in his bass solo went up another rung in popular estimation as a vocalist. All the singers were deservedly applauded. Miss A. Henderson and Mr. Jos. Williams each gave good readings bearing on temperance. There were three speakers:

Rev. T. E. Calvert, M.A., the first speaker, said that all the threats and purposes of the Scott Act in the County of Huron was a dead letter. It was well known that there were places where strong drink was for sale, and that certain men could always buy it there. In Goderich the drunkard was sometimes seen reeling to and fro, and young men with a chuckle will tell you that they can get a glass of beer whenever they want it. The arm of the law was out of joint. It was not the law that was the question before the meeting. There were two ways of getting men to walk in a certain path; one was that of brute force, and the other was moral suasion. For his own part he preferred the latter. However a vocalist he declared the will done by intemperance, he did not feel like taking too narrow or prescribed a method of dealing with his fellow man. If a man is a total abstainer because he is weak, we have no right to flout him with his weakness. On the other hand if a man is strong, and like the old warriors could carry the weight of a brass helmet and steel armor and feel it no weight, the speaker had no right to say he was not setting contrary to conscience. Some might say, but does not this open the door to the objection, "What right, then, have you to close public houses, and so far prescribe what I shall drink." This is a common objection, but it would not hold water. As well might the soldier say, why enforce me with rules of discipline; the lawyer, why force me along certain lines of study, or keep me in certain lines in pleading; or the clergyman, why make me submit to a course of confession of faith in the Society, like the army, the courts, and the church has certain fixed laws, and if society is to be a cosmos and not a chaos it must obey the law, and obey it just because it is the law. By what right might he be asked. By the right of manly discipline. Then there was the objection, "It is an oppressive law. The rich man can have his barrels in his cellar, and the poor man cannot buy his glass of beer." The majority comprise rich and poor, and the majority have a right to remove public houses, because they are an eyesore to our own dear ones. They enter our youth at the most critical time of life. The very smell of liquor in tap rooms is a sore temptation to many. The objection was a selfish one. To disobey the temperance laws, was as bad as to disobey any of the other laws of the land. If a man was honest and a true subject he should honor and keep this law, and a master of loyalty, conscience and religion. No man need wipe his mouth and say that he had done no wrong after assisting in the breaking of the law by drinking in a hole-and-corner fashion.

The following memorial was then read by Mr. Thos. McGillivuddy, and carried:—

To the Board of License Commissioners for the County of Huron.

The memorial of electors of the town of Goderich, in public meeting assembled, respectfully shew:

1. That it is a notorious fact that provisions of the "Canada Temperance Act, 1878," and amending acts, have been and are being grossly violated by many of the holders of licenses issued by your honorable board under the provisions of the 99th section of the said Act, and that the conduct of such persons in the premises constitutes one of the greatest stumbling blocks to the observance and enforcement of that law in this county.

2. That the difficulties which stand in the way of legal proof by legal evidence of the particular facts and instances of such violation are such as we are satisfied your honorable board will at once understand and appreciate.

3. That the granting of such licenses to hotel keepers and former liquor vendors (instead of to druggists whenever available) for the sale of intoxicating liquors for medicinal, sacramental and manufacturing purposes is in the opinion of your memorialists, not in accordance with the true spirit and intention of the law, and is highly pernicious and prejudicial to the enforcement of that law, which, with other laws of the land, it is the earnest desire of every law-abiding citizen of all classes should be respected and obeyed.

4. That your memorialists are of the strong opinion that if such licenses were granted only to respectable druggists whenever available, the which avenue to the breach of the law would be closed, and that unless that policy be adopted by your honorable board the Act will continue to be violated and put to defiance, and cannot be fully enforced, to the great scandal and discredit of all law, order and authority.

KING ALFONSO, of Spain, is dead.

Causes consumption.

THOS. HENDERSON, Vice-President of the United States, died suddenly on Wednesday of paralysis of the brain.

The Montreal Star, an independent newspaper whose editorial utterances have not in the past been over friendly to the Liberal party, admits editorially that "if Sir John ventures to meet the present parliament again, he will in all likelihood find himself in a minority. His best chance of retaining power is an appeal to the country." Our contemporary in saying this gives expression to the prevailing opinion.

The inquiry into the loss of the steamer Algona has been concluded, but the report of the commissioners is kept secret till the opinion of the Government thereon is made known. It has been discovered, however, that no correct list of the passengers and crew were kept, and thus the full loss of life may never be known. Surely the company could, without much difficulty, arrange to have a duplicate list of its passengers and crew left at the port of departure, as is done in the case of ocean vessels. By so providing, when anything happens to a vessel, a great deal of unnecessary anxiety to friends of those on board would be prevented.—Hamilton Times.

GALT, Ont., Nov. 25.—While Alexander Gordon, a laborer, aged about 35, who was drunk, was on his way home he met some of the girl pupils coming from the Collegiate Institute and fired off a revolver just as he was passing them, frightening the girls, who ran for their lives. Gordon continued his homeward journey until he was opposite the Collegiate Institute grounds, where several of the younger boy pupils were playing, when he stopped outside the fence and deliberately shot among the boys. The ball lodged in Charles Stewart's arm. It has been extracted, and Gordon is now in the lock-up.

Wedlock's Peaceful Repose.

Josiah Allen's Wife, in Peter's Magazine. They have been havin' a female lecturer here to Jonesville, as pretty a girl as I ever see in my life; and it was a pretty lecture, too—dreadful pretty. The name of the lecturer was "Wedlock's Peaceful and Restful Repose."

He did; he cried like a infant babe, and I looked close and searchin' to see if my handkerchief covered up all his rest. He didn't seem to take no notice of his clothes at all, he was a weepin' in his clothes as the hall school-house wept—weep like a babe.

And I think a little better. But there are things that have to be done. A married woman that has a house and family to see to, and don't keep a hired girl, can't get along without some work and care.

asked: "How in thunder he was goin' to get in?" And then he wanted to know if I wanted him squashed into jelly by comin' in by the side of it—or if I thought he was a crane, that he could step over it, or a stream of water, that he could run in under it—or what did I think?

The decided beneficial effect of Robinson's PROFOUND EXERCISES in the treatment of female weakness, and nervous prostration, has given it a wide-spread reputation, and in every case the story is the same: "My health is so improved since using it."

Poetical Courtship.

Some years ago in a far-off town there lived a girl named Susan Brown, who, through the country, up and down obtained considerable renown; not for any special grace or intellect, or form, or face, for certainly it would be vain to deny that she was extremely plain.

Her form was remarkably short and stout; her complexion was like a speckled trout; her eyes were the color of well-kissed milk, and her hair like a snail of crimson silk, tinged with the vivid tint that lies in the glowing autumn sunset skies.

Now, in the self-same village where dwell the heirs of a millionaire, there lived a youth surpassing fair, with coal-black eyes and raven hair, named Cass, Augustus James St. Clair; his accomplishments were many and rare, and he bore himself with a courtly air which a modern school girl would declare was quite distinctive and desirable.

And, as for any one could see, only a single fault had he, which was impecuniosity; for the truth must be told, that in silver and gold (like Lazarus of old), he was poor as poor could be. For as a pauper without a cent; poor as a church mouse—during Lent; or even poorer still than that; poor as a country parson's rat.

But to resume: one summer night, when moon and stars were shining bright, our Charles Augustus James St. Clair arrayed himself with special care in a broadcloth suit, glossy and new (for which he had paid with an I O U), and sallied forth to meet the maid on whom his future hopes were staid, determined, without more debate, that night he would decide his fate.

And, amidst wondering on his way, and carefully pondering what to say, he framed a speech brim full of lies, such as we know all ladies prize, of features fair, and glossy hair, and mental graces rich and rare, and ruby lips and sparkling eyes.

One Consolation. Sir John Macdonald will now have one consolation. Riel in the flesh can give him no more trouble. Never again will Sir John Macdonald have occasion to stand up before an audience and with impious hypocrisy "wish to God he could catch him."

And yet Sir John Macdonald cannot help thinking: "If I had only done my duty as minister of the crown; if I had only read with care the petitions of the poor half breeds and remedied their grievances, dealing with them as their special needs and customs required; if I had laid a heavy hand on Macpherson, restrained Bowell's colonialist company, kept the land for the settler and the timber for the country; if I had done all these things with an honest and single-hearted desire for the good of the country and the people, there would have been no trouble, no rebellion, and Riel would have been living peacefully with his family, and I would not have had to decide whether he should hang or I should go. Why was he not hanged for the murder of Scott? Is this the end? Or is his disembodied spirit to haunt me, and shall I be—

Headache Biliousness. Whenever I feel out of sorts, bilious, my liver not working right, or racked with a headache I take Chase's Liver Cure. There is more relief benefit from one dose of your Liver Cure than from any other medicine. Jno. McNasser, Bond Head. For sale by Jas. Wilson, sole agent.

Abominations of the Back Yard. Many back yards are abominations to the eye and nose. One finds in them all sorts of litter and refuse, from oyster shells to old boots. Here the slops of the kitchen are poured to increase the odors which ought to war every thoughtful person of the malarial influence breeding there, to break out eventually in fever or diphtheria.

Dropsey, Gravel, Bright's Disease. These common and dangerous complaints are due to a bad condition of the fluids, unhealthy changes in the blood and secretions—the liver being equally at fault with the kidneys. Regulate these conditions with Burdock Blood Bitters, one of the best system renovators known to medical science.

Mr. Cockburn and the Senate. At the Reform convention in Beaverton last week Mr. Cockburn said his name had been freely used without any authority from him with respect to a certain vacancy in the Senate from this part of the country.

The Horse's Petition. Whilst making an earnest appeal to public opinion on behalf of cab-drivers Lord Hampden also appeals to the cab-drivers on behalf of their horses, commending to their best consideration the following lines, entitled, "The Horse's Petition to His Driver."

Cured of Deafness. Harry Ricardo, of Toronto, was deaf for eight years, and also suffered with Chronic Rheumatism. After all else failed, Hagar's Yellow Oil cured both affections. Yellow Oil is a reliable internal and external remedy for all painful and inflammatory complaints.

Moral: Young men whenever you go to propose, pray be contented with simple prose, for if you attempt to appear sublime by putting your sentiments into rhyme, you're sure to get muddled every time; and ten to one, you'll lose your bride, and perhaps the tail of your coat beside.

COUNTY CLIPPINGS.

Items from All Parts of Huron got on the News Exchange.

W. F. May, formerly of Exeter, has been re-engaged as head teacher of the Ontario public school at an increased salary.

Dr. Rose, formerly of London, has removed to Belgrave, has rented Mr. Duncan's premises and will open a drug store in connection with practice of his profession.

A number of Exeter sports, accompanied by Mr. Shoff, P. M., of Clarendon, left for the sand hills on Tuesday morning, on a hunting expedition. It is said Mr. Shoff is an old huntsman, and will assuredly cause a deer or two to bite the dust.

D. Campbell, reeve of Lucknow, and lieutenant of the volunteer company, has been presented with a beautiful sword and belt, by the members of the company. Mr. Campbell is a very popular and efficient officer—we congratulate him upon this recognition of merit at the hands of the men.—[Sentinel.]

L. H. AND B. TRAINS.—An additional passenger train was placed upon this line last week, thus making two passenger trains each day. The morning train, which is a rather slow one, will be made considerably faster. The morning train going north will leave London at 7:55 a.m., arriving in Wingham at 10:50 a.m., and the afternoon train will depart at 4:50 p.m. as before. The morning train from the north will henceforth arrive in London at 10:30 a.m. instead of 10:45, as hitherto; and the afternoon train will reach London at 6 p.m.

Alex. Stewart, proprietor of the hotel at Belgrave, met with a terrible accident last week, which may be attended with fatal results. It appears that Mr. Stewart has purchased a cow, a rather wild animal, and had just placed it in the stable. The animal was almost frantic with excitement, and when Mr. Stewart was attempting to pacify it, it knocked him down with a toss of the head. It then gored him in the back, and about the loss and grief in a terrible manner, lacerating the unfortunate man horribly. It also trampled upon his chest and body. He was removed to the house and Dr. McKenzie was called in. Dr. Bethune was also sent for, and the two did all in their power to relieve the poor man's sufferings. He is likely to recover.

HURON PRESBYTERY.—The Presbytery of Huron met in Exeter, on Tuesday the 19th inst. There was a good attendance of members. A remit from the General Assembly on the unionification of the eastern and western sections of the Foreign Mission committee occupied the attention of the Presbytery for a considerable time. W. McIntyre, principal of the Ladies' College, Brantford, addressed the court. A motion was passed expressing confidence in the college and recommending it to the confidence and support of Presbyterians. As Mr. Henderson, of Hyde Park, London Presbytery, declines the call from Union Church, Brucefield, Mr. McCoy was authorized to moderate in a call there whenever the congregation is ready. A remit from the General Assembly on the unionification of firm ministers' fees received considerable attention and with a few amendments was approved. Mr. Barr read a minute respecting the death of the late Rev. Chas. Fletcher, of Goderich, and the clerk was instructed to send a copy of it to the widow. A plan for holding missionary meetings and exchange of pulpits was submitted by Mr. Ramsay, and, after a few corrections were made was adopted. The next meeting of Presbytery will be held in Clinton the third Wednesday in January next.

Storing the Mind in Winter. I wish to enter a plea at this time in behalf of the young people on the farm. Many of them are not having or will not have the opportunities for home education that they deserve. How shall they employ the long evenings that are just before them? Shall they spend them at the village store or tavern, or shall they find their homes the more dreary and lonely because they are so far from them? One thing is certain—if they do remain at home their minds will crave some stimulus. They will want to read something and how important it is that they should have only the best literature placed before them. Nothing so pains one as to see a boy or girl throwing away precious time on trashy novels. It is wasted. For a farmer's son there should be a goodly number of agricultural books and papers provided, besides religious and strictly secular ones. If farmers are to be intelligent tillers of the soil, they must be reading and thinking farmers, and boyhood is the season when habits of reading and thinking are formed.

How to Make Apple Butter.

Where apple butter is not made on a large scale a very good article may be made as follows: Take twenty gallons of cider just from the press and made from good, sound apples, and boil down to ten gallons. Then apples enough are bruised and taken out, and the apples quartered to make from ten to twelve gallons dry measure. If the cider is much acid the apples should be less so, and vice versa. Rambo apples make the best of apple butter, although the most ordinary apples usually found in the market will do as well. These twenty gallons of apples, when properly cooked, will make about seven gallons of good old-fashioned butter, providing the stirring is kept constantly going on during the process, otherwise the butter is very apt to acquire a burn's taste. It usually takes from six to eight hours' constant stirring before being taken off the fire. Spices to suit the taste are added some minutes before the kettle and contents are removed from the fire. There is no getting over the fact, however, that such butter costs all it will sell for if we consider the labor it takes. But a supply of this favorite article of 'creature comforts' is a treasure which no good housewife would deny herself merely for the sake of the little extra labor it requires.—[Baltimore Sun.]

Malaria is the action of disease germs in bad air, poor drainage, swampy regions, etc., upon the system, producing chills, neuralgia, and many dangerous diseases. Burdock Blood Bitters regulates the bowels, liver and blood and wards off the cure Malaria.

Being Quite Well.

Tilley, in health or in sickness, in sunshine or in rain, has for many years been able to bob up serenely and make a living at the expense of his country. He was in office when the Pacific Scandal came up, but he knew better than stay and brave the gathering storm. He jumped into the Lieutenant-Governorship of New Brunswick. As the holder of that sinecure, he drew $10,000 a year with ease and dispatch till Sir John got into power in 1878. Then Tilley was on deck once more. Now that the storm is gathering the New Brunswick knight reaches forth for a "hard" job as of yore. He is sick and must cease working, and so the Lieutenant-Governorship and $10,000 a year are turned over to him. As a contemporary fitty remarks, when Sir Leonard Tilley is alive and has not an office paying from $5,000 to $10,000 per annum, we can count on him. He is at hand, and that the Canadian section of the battle of Armaggedon is soon to be fought.—[Hamilton Times.]

A BIG SALE.—As Mr. Wm. McLean's family have gone to California to reside, and he intends living in Montreal for some months, he has instructed John Knox to sell at Martin's Hotel, on Saturday, Dec. 12th, beginning at 12 o'clock, all his driving stock, vehicles, harness, etc., and a large number of cattle and sheep. The opportunity is a good one to choose from the best lot of animals and farming and other implements ever offered for sale. Don't fail to attend the biggest and best sale of the season.

ABOUT KEEPING BUTTER.—Something like a concerted arrangement has been entered into by shopkeepers in quite a number of towns and villages in Ontario, not to take butter or account after November 1st each year, but only to take it for goods sold over the counter at the time of delivering the butter. The reason of this resolve is that the butter makers in Ontario have long been a disposition to hold their butter in casks or tubs in their cellars until far into the fall, when it has lost its flavor, and it is besides too late in the season to be shipped to the old country markets.

THE PALMISTE SILVER MINE.—We see by the Port Arthur Sentinel that there has been a valuable discovery at Palmiste mine. Messrs. Gendron and Morin returned on Nov. 18 from the silver mining district where they have been engaged in opening up the Palmiste mine for Messrs. Doussin, McIntosh and Johnston. They report having struck the vein, the hanging wall of which carries sulphate silver, as seen by the samples they brought in. They return tomorrow with a fresh supply of provisions and material to still further develop the vein. The owners are well satisfied with their present prospects. Messrs. McIntosh and Johnston have sent today a large lot of supplies with Joseph Mantouane, Mr. Doussin's father-in-law, to open up another new discovery in the Silver Mountain district. Mr. McIntosh is a former Goderich merchant, and his many friends here will be glad to learn that the strike is one of the richest yet.

PETTY THIEVING.

A Warning to a Class of Bad Boys in Town.

Three lads sent to Gaol for Stealing Young Burglars after Candies and Tobacco.

The following report of Saturday's police court proceedings shows that there is a class of boys in town who need constant watching. The Mayor has intimated that offenders of this sort will in future stand a good chance of being sent to the Reformatory. We give these cases prominence as a warning.

Saturday, Nov. 21, 1885.

Before Mayor Horton and P. Adamson, J.P.

HECTOR MCKAY, aged 15, and Patrick Burns, aged 14, on the information of John Burke, of Goderich township, with stealing a horse blanket on the night of the 12th inst., the theft having been effected in the shed of the North street Methodist church. The boys requested to be tried summarily. J. T. Garrow, Q. C., watched the case on behalf of the mother of the lad Burns.

The complainant gave evidence to the effect that on the evening of Thanksgiving day he lost a blanket while at the North street Methodist church. The boys identified the blanket found in the prisoner McKay's possession as the one stolen.

E. McCann, the owner of the blanket, also identified it as his.

Constable Yale swore that he had been informed that a blanket, overcoat and whip had been stolen from the church on the 12th of Nov. On enquiries he found who had taken the articles.

He went to McKay's house and asked him for them, and he sent upstairs and he identified the blanket produced in court, when he was taken to the lock-up. The witness then went to Mrs. Burns, and she handed him the coat. Burns had nothing to do with the blanket.

The young man who owned the overcoat and the blanket took, but had neglected to do so. The witness also said that there had been some minor offences charged against the lad McKay in the past, but not against Burns.

The Mayor said that McKay was old enough to know better, but that he was getting to be a public nuisance. He would therefore send him to gaol for two months, and the other prisoner, who had stolen Burns, the other prisoner, was then discharged.

YOUTHFUL BURGLARS.

Michael Burns, aged 15 years, (brother of the former prisoner) and Norman McLeod, alias "Scratch," were charged on the information of George H. Nairn with feloniously entering the premises of the late John McKay on the night of the 18th of November, and stealing a quantity of candies, tobacco, pipes, etc.

The boys pleaded "guilty."

Constable Yale testified that George Nairn had sent him on the 19th inst., to tell him that someone had gone into the store the night before by the cellar window, and had taken a quantity of candies, tobacco, pipes, chocolate, etc.

He went down the street past James Bailey's and saw Michael Burns entering the house, but he did not see the candies. He had some boys with him. The witness afterwards asked some of the boys if Burns was chewing tobacco, and they told him no, they were eating candies, and gave him some of the same.

When he was asked to identify the prisoners, he recognized the candies, and he found that Bingham was the only other dealer who had any of that sort, except Nairn. On that suspicion he arrested Burns. Upon being asked where he got the candies from, the prisoner said he got them from a lad named Stoddard in trade for pigeons, and afterwards said he had got them from Fred Martin. Being further told that Martin was outside, he then stated that he got them at Johnny McIntosh's. McIntosh said that the prisoner had been removed and put back in the lock-up, and he did not see him since.

George H. Nairn gave testimony to the following effect: He was a clerk in the store of his brother, Chas. A. Nairn. Early on the morning of the 19th inst., he noticed that there was something wrong from the fact that the cellar gratings had been removed and put back in its place. On going into the shop he noticed that things were out of place, there were candy lying on the floor, and the till had been tried but had not been opened. He noticed also that some goods were missing, but could not say how much. He then sent for constable Yale. He had often noticed the prisoner McLeod looking suspiciously in the window. He could swear that the candies brought by Yale from the boys were the same kind as they had in stock, and Bingham was the only one who kept the same sort in town.

The Mayor said the case was a very serious one, and he almost felt like sending them up for trial. They could be tried at once, and sent to Penitentiary. He must say he had little sympathy for them.

Mr. Adamson spoke to the same effect.

Mr. Garrow said that the parents and relatives of the lad Burns were most respectable people. He hoped this would be a warning to the prisoners and to others, for there were a number of very bad boys in Goderich. He didn't feel that he could say anything further for the prisoners.

The two boys were then each sentenced to one month in gaol.

A crowd of about thirty youngsters, from six to sixteen years of age, hung around the door of the hall during the trial, but Constable McKay would not allow them in.

CALLED TO HIS REST.

Death of Donald Fraser, Deputy Registrar of Huron.

A man beloved by all in Goderich who had the honor of his acquaintance, has been called to his reward. After a short illness, Donald Fraser, deputy registrar, died early on Saturday morning. The deceased was the son of a Presbyterian minister, and was born in the manse of his native parish, at Stornoway, Isle of Lewis, in 1827. When about thirty years of age he came to this country at the solicitation of Hon. George Brown, and served as book-keeper in the Toronto Globe office for about six months. He then went to Hamilton, and acted as book-keeper with a railway company. He was married in 1854, and shortly afterwards came to Goderich, and was appointed deputy registrar by the then registrar, John Galt, and retained that position up to the day of his death. He was a painstaking and accurate official.

Both his career here, covering thirty years, was one of such high public servant might be proud. He was an elder of Knox church, and at one time was superintendent of the Sunday school.

Mr. Fraser was a fine specimen of an earnest, devoted, and loving Christian man. He was a faithful servant in his office, and in his daily walk before his Master. He was known to snatch moments during the busiest days when, believing himself to be unobserved, he would close his eyes and offer a brief, ejaculatory prayer or thanksgiving. His daily conversation was flavored with a spiritual tone—and of late he appeared to move in an atmosphere of piety. He was of that sterling class of whom the poet writes:

"Bending their lives' sublimest needs With work of every day. They went about their greatest deeds Like noble hermits."

To some of us his memory will be as fragrant as ointment poured forth. He had a big heart for other Christians who had not seen eye to eye with him in all the lesser details of his life. Yet every soul could contract his sympathies; his loving heart drew him time and again to mingle his praises in other churches at seasons when his own was closed. No more faithful Presbyterian ever turned the leaves of his psalm book, or filled the office of elder than he. Let every faithful and true member of the denomination be comforted by the bright vision of the cheerful saint.

"The white flower of a blameless life."

The funeral was largely attended. The pall bearers were Mr. Cameron, M.P., J. T. Garrow, Q. C., James Dickson, Registrar, Alexander Dickson, P. Adamson and Dr. McLean. Three clergymen took part in the funeral obsequies. His widow and children have the sympathy of the entire community in their bereavement. There is sorrow in many other homes over his decease, but that sorrow is tempered with joy at the bright testimony left behind by the departed saint.

Colborne.

Mrs. Thos. Campbell and daughter left for a three months' visit to the old country on Thursday, of last week.

Abraham Shelton, of Dashwood, formerly of Hullett, gave his many friends here a flying visit the other day.

Mr. and Mrs. Ginder Meyer, of Brucefield, spent a few days at the beginning of the week visiting friends in this vicinity.

W. C. Scharf has removed with his family from the Maitland coat to the house lately occupied by Mr. Weber, on the 2nd con.

Whilst the threshers were at work on the premises of Wm. Young, near Dunlop, on Wednesday morning, the sparks from the steamer got into the stack and set it in a blaze. The employees with great exertion managed to get it under.

Dungannon.

I give the following to the public, hoping that those whom it concerns may take warning: Often have I observed young and old men congregate in our public houses, and there hold such midnight revels as are a disgrace to civilization. I am ashamed to have to state that the principal participants in these orgies are young men who have a bright future before them, if their talents and morals are not perverted by the accursed drink. The only consideration that causes me to keep the names of these young men from the public is the respectability of their parents, who are totally unaware of these Bacchanalian revels. In conclusion, I hope that this warning will be sufficient, or both the author of this law breaking and the participants in it may be unpleasantly surprised.

LENTYASANTS.

A most disgraceful row took place at the Central Hotel, Blyth, on the evening of Thanksgiving Day between Wm. Boyd and Robt. Haggart, both of Blyth. The dispute seems to have arisen out of an old quarrel which happened some months ago. While in the hottest of the battle constable Davis appeared on the scene, and succeeded after some difficulty in lodging them in the cells. At seven o'clock the same evening Wm. Boyd appeared before Magistrates Young and Kelly, on a charge preferred by R. Haggart for assault and battery.

As no evidence could be procured to substantiate the charge made by Haggart, the defendant was accordingly fined $4, and $3 costs.

Miss Maggie Sanaburn, of Wheatland, Dakota, who has been visiting friends near Lucknow of late, left for her home on Tuesday of last week. She, however, had nearly reached Windsor, when she suddenly took ill and died at the residence of her uncle on Sunday.

THE SINGING EVANGELIST.

Union Revival Meetings Begun in Goderich.

The Way in which Revivalist Crossley carries on the Work.

Sunday morning last the Presbyterian pulpit was occupied by the Rev. Mr. Crossley, a man of medium height, about fifty years of age, with dark brown hair and beard, (the hair being inclined to light growth in front and heavy growth behind), a face of pleasant cast, and lit up with a personal smile, a well-modulated voice, and a style of impressive gesture peculiarly his own. On Sunday evening the same man occupied North street Methodist church, which was crowded with an overflowing congregation to listen to a song service by the preacher—who was none other than Mr. H. T. Crossley, the well-known singing evangelist.

In the morning he had spoken on the three rests for the Christian—the rest of faith, the rest of service and the rest of prayer. He described the rest of faith, as being a perfect belief in the efficacy of Christ and Him crucified; the rest of service as being a consecration of physical and mental power to the work of God; and the everlasting rest, as being a rest prepared for all who, having fought the good fight and finished the work, were called to pass into the glory. The discourse was a most impressive one, and when the preacher uttered the words "I have loved the world," he uttered them with a fervor that was a type of the Christian who, being faithful in the rest of faith, and in the rest of service, had recently been called by the Master to enter into the everlasting rest, there was hardly a dry eye in the large congregation, composed as it was of so many of those who knew and loved the deceased for his sterling worth, consistent life and Christian character.

The sermon on Sunday evening was on the subject, "From Guilt to Glory," and was a most impressive discourse, interspersed with appropriate sacred songs by the preacher, and was appreciated to the fullest extent by the large congregation.

During the week revival services have been held in the North street Methodist church, and each evening the attendance has been large. There appears to have been a great quickening of spiritual power in the congregation, and already a good work has resulted, with every indication of a continued increase. Thus far a large number have signed their intention of identifying themselves with one or other of the church organizations, and many who have not yet come out have asked for private and public prayer in their behalf. Beyond question a great revival of spiritual life is in progress at the union meetings.

The methods of the revivalist are not of an extreme order, and it is a difficult thing to discern wherein his strength in moving audiences lies. But he possesses a power, nevertheless, and a manly spirit, which it has been apparent at every meeting thus far. The meetings are opened punctually at 7.30 each evening, by the singing of a hymn or two, until such time as the large congregation has had time to gather, and then prayer has been offered, a discourse is delivered by the evangelist. At the conclusion of the regular discourse the unsaved members of the gathering are exhorted to flee from the wrath to come, and to make manifestation (by uplifted hand or by standing up) that they are persuaded to relinquish their past courses, and are desirous of starting anew, with trust in the Saviour, and hope in heaven. Prayer is next made for all who have intimated a desire to that effect, after which a hymn is started, and during the singing a number of brethren and sisters go through the audience, and interview any "anxious seeker" who may have indicated that he or she has been touched of the Spirit. The meeting is brought to a close usually about 10 o'clock by the benediction.

We understand that the union services, under the guidance of Mr. Crossley, will be continued next week, and will be held in Knox church. An open invitation is extended to the public.

VACCINATION.—A number of our young people have been vaccinated by the Goderich medicals, which fact has given much satisfaction to our local nurses.

A number of porkers have been killed hereabouts already, and during the week an old resident who turned up last week directed the execution of a large number of the swine.

George Neibergall, our enterprising lumber merchant, has purchased the Centennial saw mill at Shepparton from Nicholas Murray. Mr. Neibergall is the best business man we have yet had in the lumber trade, and we believe he will make his new venture pay.

A LIVELY TUB WASHING.—At a slipping last week Frank Nicholson thrashed into a pond of water while helping to fill the tank, and was fished out by his comrade Martin Finland. Two hours afterwards the rescuer got a header by his horse thinking he was anti-Scott, on account of the rider carrying a can containing oil for the machine. There was also a lively wrestling match in the now, in which John McAllister figured as the hero.

R. Jamieson, of Howick, was awarded the contract, by the Turbary council, for putting a bridge over the Maitland on Job's line. His tender was $575.

The Seaforth creamery has disposed of the remainder of its season's make of butter at 20¢ per lb. for August and 23¢ cents for September and October.

The Poet's Corner.

It matters much. It matters little where I'm born. If my parents were rich or poor...

A Woman's Thought. BY MRS. E. V. WILSON. "I am so very weary of my home," she cried. "And of its endless tasks and mean and small...

MRS. FERGUSON'S STORY. "Yes, sir, I am Mrs. Ferguson and I do take boarders; but you say your friend is an invalid, and I can't believe...

"He was brought in in a chair, wrapped up in a counterpane, and I must say I thought he had a very red face, but that might be the effect of the cold...

"Mr. Bolter," says I, "that was his name—Mr. Bolter, is there anything I can do for you?" "And he says, as politely as you could wish: 'No, ma'am, there is not. All I shall need is a little water-gruel at 6 in the morning, and if the boarders have any of 'em a habit of singing hymns in the evening, as I've known in pious boarding houses, to set the parlor door open that I may hear 'em.'"

"And it was a remarkable incident that the widow of the Rev. Mr. Spicer did board with us, and did sing hymns; and she sang 'em that night, and set the parlor door open; and Mr. Bolter rung his bell, and sent down word that he was 'very much refreshed,' with his compliments, by the waiter. He did take stimulants, I melt; and I said to myself: 'And you can't blame him if it's ordered?' And it was brandy, if I have a nose."

"Well, as we parted for the night we all spoke of the poor, dear gentleman. "Another gentleman had called to speak of him, just as you have called about your invalid friend. Yes, and you mustn't think I mean any hints or anything. And he told us he couldn't put his feet to the ground, and hadn't for 10 years. "And what would he do in case of fire? says Mrs. Tibbs, who was timid. "I should rescue him, of course," said Mr. Becket, our young boarder, who was in a dry goods store, and who was as big, take him altogether, as one of the invalid's arms. "But you'd have the ladies to save, you know," said Mrs. Squeeze, the widow, who always flirted with everything and anything like a man, from 80 to 18. "The ladies first," said Mr. Becket, "of course." Only if he'd started with Mrs. Squeeze he'd never have got back for any more, for she weighed 200 pounds, and he'd have been squashed at the first step. "I shall keep my eye on him, said Mrs. Smith, and I'll tell Mr. Smith to do so. I'll step in tomorrow and tell him our views about magnetism. I wonder if he's ever tried magnetism. "Poor gentleman," said Mrs. Jerrop, "how he is afflicted to be sure. I've had neuralgia myself, and I know. He ought to go to the Sulphur Springs; that is what cured me. I shall tell him so."

"I shall pray for him," said Rev. Mr. Spicer's widow. "And I shall take him my late husband's excellent tract on the uses of affliction tomorrow." "And I wouldn't mind reading the Bible to him one bit," said Miss Annie Spicer, "if he liked it."

"How you express yourself," said her mother. "You should determine to do so whether he liked it or not, and you should rejoice to do it. Wouldn't mind, indeed?" "Then we went to bed. There was a light in his room, still, and I called through the key-hole (he slept in his remaining chair). 'Mr. Bolter, are you comfortable for the night?' and he answered: "Thank you, ma'am, I am. I am having an hour of meditation."

"Excuse me for interrupting you," says I. "Oh, not at all," says he, and away I went; and I went to sleep thinking how glad I was, with all my troubles, I was not an invalid. "I guess it was about 1 o'clock when I woke up with a noise of bursting in my ears, and there was a light in the room. It was a queer light, bright all in one spot, and I thought, though I don't believe in 'em, it was a ghost. And says I, out loud, 'Oh, Lord!' and covered my head with the sheet. I hadn't had it covered but a minute, though, when I felt a big hand on my throat and just the roughest voice ever I heard growled in my ear: "Now, old lady, be sensible. I ain't going to hurt you if you're quiet. Keep your head covered and lay still. I've got a six-shooter here, and if you screech I'll fire."

"Are you a burglar?" says I. "Form your own conclusions," says he, "only don't shriek. I wouldn't want to live if I was an old woman, but I prep you do." "Well, I kinder wondered what for myself, but I did, and I laid still and only shrank inwardly. "After awhile there was no more poking at the bureau and rattling at the closet; and then I heard creaking all over the house and a shriek somewhere, and I didn't know but there was murder done, and I thought of my poor invalid, and if he was in that water-proof cloak, poor man, and I thought of all the stories I'd read of dreadful tragedies, and I felt for all my boarders, but most of all for the poor invalid that couldn't help himself; but it wasn't till all was quiet as the grave that I dared to sit up, and then it was daylight. And then courage came to me and I put my head out of the window and shrieked. Nobody heard me at first, but at last there were two policemen with their clubs, and then I put on my waterproof and went down stairs. "Murdered in their beds, I've no doubt," says I. And I thought it must be so, but it was better than that. "Some were gagged and some were tied, and dear little Mr. Becket was rolled up in a blanket like a roly-poly pudding, and pined in. And diamonds and clothes and everything was gone, poor dears. And even the Indian idol from Mrs. Smith's mantlepiece. And as for me, I hadn't a spoon left, and nothing to put on but the waterproof cloak. But nothing dreadful happened except to the invalid gentleman. He disappeared. "They have murdered him," says I. "They've carried him off for a ransom," says Mrs. Squeeze. "The Italians do that you know. "Maybe he's thrown himself out of the window in a fright," says Mrs. Smith. "There we all stood, mostly in blankets and such, and making suggestions. I, for one, knew I had a roly-poly pudding, water-proof in his gore. What did you say? Did we? Oh, no we didn't. No; the policemen gave the first hint of the truth. "Your invalid is your burglar," says he. "It's easier to open a door from inside than from out. I reckon I know the man. It's Sly Tom, as they call him. He's been up to this dodge before. "And so it was, sir; so it was. Mrs. Jerrop got back her diamonds, but I never got back my spoon. And no offense, sir; no insinuations. I'm sure this invalid gentleman is all that one could wish—all! Oh, I feel quite positive of that and no offense; but with an invalid in the house I should be obliged to sit up in the bed all night. I should have nerves to that extent. No, no invalids for me; but Mrs. Tompkins over the way has never had such an experience, and I'd recommend you to call there."

Words of Wisdom.

We should avoid the vexation and impatience of patients, who affect to talk in a language not to be understood. Irresistible fidelity, good humor and complacency of temper outdo all the charms of a fine face, or make the decay of it invisible. Ugliness of the right sort is a kind of beauty. It has some of the best qualities of beauty—it attracts observation and fixes the memory. Whatever difference there may appear to be in men's fortunes there is still a certain compensation of good and ill in all that makes them equal. A restless mind, like a rolling stone, gathers nothing but dirt and mire. Little or no good will cleave to it, and it is sure to leave peace and quietness behind it.

Household Hints.

CUCUMBER PICKLES.—Lay the cucumbers in weak brine four days; drain off the brine and cover with good cider vinegar. Let them lie in this one week; then place in fresh vinegar, spiced to suit your taste. The first vinegar can be used several times. I have made pickles by this recipe for several years, and can safely say they are good and will keep. LEMON CREAM PIE.—One and a half pints of milk; three tablespoonfuls corn starch; one cup sugar; two tablespoonfuls butter; one teaspoonful lemon extract; juice of two lemons; yolks of four eggs. Beat milk and add cornstarch dissolved in a little milk; when it boils again take off and beat in the yolks, butter, lemon juice and extract; pour at once into pie plates lined with paste; bake in hot oven 20 minutes; then cover with meringue of the whites, beaten with a tablespoonful of sugar. POT-PIE CORN.—One and a half cups buttermilk; one and a half teaspoonfuls salt; mix and add sufficient flour to make a stiff dough. Let stand in a warm place to rise an hour or more; then cut off pieces with a spoon, drop in the kettle, and boil half an hour. Drain the meat well seasoned and gravy thickened. For baked chicken pie, take one cupful each of buttermilk, water and lard; one teaspoonful soda, and a little salt; mix these crust for two chickens, baked in a pan. Bake in a slow oven one hour.

Proper Care of a Piano.

It is evident that if a piano is to remain in good order for many years, proper care must be taken of it. The instrument should be closed when not in use, in order to prevent the collection of dust, pins, etc., on the sound-board. However, it must be left closed for a period of several months, or longer, but be opened occasionally, and the daylight allowed to strike the keys, or else the ivory may turn yellow. Any hard substance, no matter how small, dropped inside of the piano will cause a rattling, jarring noise. It is in every case desirable that an India-rubber or cloth cover should protect the instrument from bruises or scratches. The piano should not be placed in a damp room, or left open in a draft or air—dampness is its most dangerous enemy, causing the strings and tuning pins to rust, and the cloth used in the construction of the keys and action to swell, whereby the mechanism will move sluggishly, and often stick together. This occurs chiefly during the summer season, and the best piano, made of thoroughly seasoned material, are necessarily affected by dampness, the absorption being rapid. Extreme heat is scarcely less injurious. The piano should not be placed very near to an open fire, or a heated stove, nor open or close to the air from a furnace or stove. Moths are very destructive to the cloth and felt used in the piano, and may be kept off by placing a lump of camphor, wrapped in soft paper, in the inside corner, care being taken to renew it from time to time. Many persons are unaware of the great importance of having their pianos kept in order, and tuned only by a competent tuner. A new piano should be tuned at least once every three or four months during the first year, and at longer intervals afterwards. (Trade Circular.)

How to Finish the Back of a Basque.

A simple and easy way of finishing the back forms of basques is to shape them in four scallops, one in each form, and line them with satin. Below these are two larger scallops gathered at the top and sewed underneath the two middle scallops of the four forms. In other basques, especially those of velvet, only two scallops are seen, one in each of the middle forms of the back. The short side forms are then separated about two inches from these and pointed below. An easy and stylish way of trimming sleeves is to use inch-wide galloon or else velvet ribbon instead of cuffs. Begin by sewing it at the end of the sleeve at its outside seam, crossing to the inside seam, then taking it gradually upward just above the row that is already there, stopping there when half way across, finishing by turning in the ends in a point. The economist is advised to use watered silks in remodeling last seasons dresses of cloth or of velvet, and in combining with cashmere for house dresses. Black cashmere draped over black watered silk remains a favorite for house dresses. The heliotrope colors are also especially liked in these two fabrics. A smooth cloth basque of dark brown, red, grey or blue is in great favor for wearing with skirts left over from last winter, and is in keeping with skirts of striped woads, striped silks, dark plaid woads, and also with plain woads of a lighter shade. These basques are of the plainest shape, without trimming, unless drooping cords be used on the chest, or else passing under the arms from an epaulette.

In the history of medicines no preparation has received such universal commendation, for the alleviation it affords and the permanent cure it effects in kidney diseases as Dr. Van Buren's Kidney Cure. Its action in these distressing complaints is simply wonderful. Sold by J. Wilson.

In the Country Lawyer's Office.

He wanted justice. You could see that in his eyes afar off. He didn't want a little bit of justice weighed out in a gingerly manner and done up in coarse brown paper, but he wanted justice by the carload and at wholesale rates. He hit upon his old white horse and dilapidated buggy in front of the drug store, mounted the stairs running up outside to the second story, and his eyes brightened as they rested on the tin sign on the door. "George Boxer, Attorney-at-Law." The lawyer was so sure of a two-dollar desk, two fifteen-cent chairs, a huge cuspidor and a rusty stove. "Morning."

"I'm Jim White, sir. Live out by Gray's Corners. Bought the Tompkins farm, you know." "Ah."

"Skinner jines farms with me. His steers got into my corn. I want damages, but he laughs at me. I turn my hogs into the later patch."

"And he kills one of 'em." "What?" "He kills a hog worth $2."

"You don't say! Well, that man ought to be made to understand that he doesn't own this country. What an outrage! Have you demanded pay?" "Oh, yes, and he said he'd like to shoot me."

"If it possible! Well, he's a dangerous man, very dangerous."

"I came to ask you if—if—" "Why, of course, you have the best kind of case against him, and its your duty to push it."

"Yes, I want justice, but how—how much will—"

"Oh, the cost will be nothing. Just leave me $5 as a retainer and we'll make Skinner sweat. I haven't heard of such an outrage for years. He probably reasons that you are chicken-hearted and afraid of him."

"Well, he'll find that the Whites have as much grit as the Skinners."

"And as much money to law with?" "You bet."

"That's the talk! We'll make him as a citizen as well as a lawyer. Now, we'll secure a warrant as a starter."

Next day on his way home, he stopped at a village inn and ordered dinner. He wore a long coat over a dress suit, and had a white necktie. The landlord took him for a clergyman.

"There is to be a meeting of clergy here to-day, Sir, and they are to dine. I'm sure the dean would be glad to have you join them."

"Thank you," said Compton, who was very hungry; "I shall be glad."

"I will take in your card," said the landlord.

"I have no card," replied Compton; "you can say Rev. Mr. Payne, who is passing through the town."

The dean said they would be glad to give a strange brother a seat at the table. The Rev. Mr. Payne appeared and the dean with courtesy placed him at his right hand, and asked him to say grace.

Compton flinched and hid his face behind his hands, but with perfect presence of mind recalled the opening portion of the Church service, and hit upon the very words for his purpose. In his rich melodious voice he said:

"Our Lord, open Thou our lips, and our mouths shall show forth thy praise."

Tell us, good people, if you have heard anything newer than that.

The Woods in Winter.

Let us walk out into the inviting woods. The trees can never be so fully seen as now. Their painted trunks, lined and varnished with frost, disclose a surprising wealth of color, and the exquisite tracery of branch and twig, the essential elements of a tree's beauty and character, burst forth largely concealed by the perishable garniture of foliage, is now revealed. The true tree, freed from all disguise, stands forth like an athlete stripped for the contest.

Observe the soft, blending tones on the bole of this smooth, dappled beech. See the infinitely refined grays, browns and greens, which everywhere spread and interpenetrate upon its surface. "The painted beech," it has been happily called. Yes, it is the palette of the sylvan studio.

It is Dame Nature's sampler. Upon its gray surface mixes and tints her sober and subtler tints, to be afterwards disposed in those artfully artless contrasts throughout the landscape. You shall find this silvery sample on yonder rock-aspens, disposed in one telling splash, shaded vertically by the brown sutures in the bark. This bright ochery remnant reappears on the hickory beyond, in strong brilliant touches here and there upon the shingly shales; and the broad rock hard by has received a dash of decorative in the mosaic of this pale green. Here is the array of tints which she paints the antiquated stone walls, and here the shaggy bark by which she has reclaimed the rambling miles of splintered rail, or of the brown sapling, in the midst of the mossy bowlder, all find their complement here.

With its clean, trim contour and bright, smooth complexion we may readily appreciate the estimate of Thoreau. There is no such thing as a tree without some an inset as the beech." This latter feature, however, is often lost in the winter woods, as the trees stand knee deep in snow, and the comely slope of their feet, clad in velvety moss is concealed from view.

It is a common error to suppose that winter effaces the distinctions of individuality among the various trees. "Are you the friend of your friend's thought, or of his neighbor's?" asks Emerson, as though we should know our companion only by his dress. Many of our trees announce themselves even more distinctly in February than in June. The shagbark was never barked as now. The white birch never shows her more distinctive pallid features, and in this unseasonable weather the tattooed buff satin dress of her cousin, the yellow birch, seems more than ever conspicuous.

The tupelo never more effectively asserted its precious whiteness. The white oak audibly rattles its identity; and the marble butternut tree hangs out a tell-tale label from every twig. Look at this scraggly silhouette against the sky over this lichen-painted wall. Who needs the hint of the brown from apple Jack among the twigs to call its name? Is it not written in every angle of its eccentric spray, or even in its shadow in the snow? Likewise the elm with pendant nest, the spiral steeple of the spruce, maple, etc. Who would not know each from a fragment of its bark? Scarcely in a less degree do the linden, the ash, the various willows, oaks and maples, the chestnut and the sallow tree, assert their individuality and claim recognition. To the curious observer they soon become familiar, and he can name them all at a glance.—(W. F. Gibson, in Harper's Magazine for December.)

fore th's high court of the nation, Sir John and his Ministers must answer for the policy that has brought so much of disaster to our people. After the events of recent years, many men have lost faith both in the morality and intelligence of the electorate. We have no come to that point yet. We believe that the majority of Canadians recognize the monstrous political evils of the present regime. They hold the Dominion Government responsible for the recent rebellion and all its expenses, horror and subsequent bitterness. And they will not be satisfied with the punishment of one offender. They will overthrow the real authors of it—the politicians who are leading Canada to the brink of national disaster.—(Woodstock Sentinel-Review.)

A MILD RETORT.

In answer to the last screed of a collapsed...

Had Allan Embury held his peace last week, I would have left him severely alone. But against the advice of his friends he rushed into print again.

Embury openly admits my leading charge, and tacitly admits all the others. Curiously enough, this extraordinary letter had no heading—some one has wittily remarked there was neither head nor tail to it.

Then there is a period in his career to which these certificates do not refer—the time when he savagely assaulted that feeble man; the year in which his certificate was suspended for his rowdiness. Until our principal of the public school gets down from his chair of assumption and denounces these charges, there is no need of furnishing proof; because in Goderich my statements are accepted as true until disproved.

He attempts to bring out the matter of his apology to me for using what he himself admits in his letter to be "terrible profanity," but it can easily be perceived that the swaggar is assumed. In this connection he makes a false charge which utterly shows his lack of judgment, because it forces me to still further throw light upon his deeds of ruffianism and disgrace.

The charge was not laid until weeks after the offence, and the information was partly obtained by Mr. Thos. McGillicuddy, bringing a little boy who overheard the terrible profanity. The public can judge of Mr. McGillicuddy's motives.

The oaths and obscenity were used against me on Christmas Eve last. Thinking it was but a bit of semi-drunk-braggadocio, and knowing that "barking dogs seldom bite," I paid little heed to the language used, a report which I obtained solely from the two gentlemen before whom Embury poured out his filth, each of whom were friendly to him as well as to me, and one of whom was largely interested in the welfare and prosperity of the erratic educationist.

About midnight of January the 5th, while returning from my duties at a late sitting of the school board, I was the witness of a most disgraceful scene which was cunningly planned by the writer of the letter in last week's Star. He was endeavoring to engineer affairs so as to "lick me from head to toe" (to use his own words), by proxy. I thought it well to bring this matter of street violence to a head, and then laid a charge against Embury for his language and conduct of twelve days before. Then to save himself, and only then, he came to his senses, and sent me a written apology. No boy overheard the profanity. When the case was coming up, both the gentlemen who were to appear as witnesses desired me to see the other persons who were in the store at the time the foul language was used. I asked Mr. Deacon and his young nephew about Mr. Embury's conduct, but both of them said they were not listening at the time. There was no bribe given, there was no bribe offered, there was no bribe needed.

The case was so clear and strong, that a reference was impossible, and the boaster of the previous fortnight was brought to his knees. My kind one in the time when I could have crushed him, has been repaid by torrents of abuse in very filthy Latinized English, which he uses for charity, to cover his multitude of sins, and by a succession of digressed snipes written anonymously at intervals since last January by the man who never dared write but two public letters during that period.

Unlike my adversary, I take no pleasure in controversy. I do not say, either, that he is a bad man beyond all hope of redemption. He has ability of a certain sort that could be utilized to make him a successful teacher and a useful man, but his reform.
