The sultan is likely to take the fullest advantage of this favorable turn in his affairs and to exact conditions humiliating to England. The belief in Europe is generally that under no circumstances will the Gladstone government employ force.

MONDAY MORNING, JUNE 5, 1882,

Nearly Two Fatal Cases of Suffocation On Friday night Miss Maggie Mitchell. a pretty young lady about 18 years of age from Hamilton, arrived in the city and registered at the Simcoe house, at Simcoe and Front streets. She retired to bed at 10 o'clock, and occupied a room on the second story. About 3 o'clock on Saturday morning a little dog in the room of the proprietor of the house, Mr. Green, who slept just across the hall, commenced barking in a demonstrative manner. The night porter and Mr. Green readily smelt a strong odor of gas issuing from Miss gas. She was black in the face and the gas cock on the burner was turued on three quarters. No time was lost in summoning. Dr. Cooke, who pronounced it a serious case.

After two hours work the doctor noticed returning signs of animation and said that she was out of danger. She remained unconscious until 11 o'clock, when she was able to faintly articulate. Her fri ends in the city were communicated with and they gave the alarm. The farmer was found in much the same state as Miss Mitchell, but it was 30 hours before Drs. Ross and Morton, who were summoned, could wake him up. People are raking up the past in regard to this matter, and a very spicy piece of reading timely to the present discussion is the following speech of William Macdougall on John O'Donohoe made in January, 1874:

Mr. Macdougall said: I hear expressions of dissent from a few whom I recognize as of dissent from a few whom I recognize as men against whom statements were made to the government of which I was a member during the Fenian raid sensation. [Tremendous cheering and excitement.] I do not say that Mr. O'Donohoe is guilty of all that is alleged against him but I do say that at the time I refer to men were prepared to come before a cour of justice and lay charges against him that would have connected him indirectly at least of a share of complicity in the infamous crimes committed by the ruffans anyone in 1 foronto to show him one laid down in the bible. Then men separate the means from the end, as if God had put the means above the end. He never did. There were two gypsies £ghting on opposite sides in one of the bloodiest battle-fields of Spain. MR. PHIPPS' NEXT ARTICLE. We shall to-morrow publish an article from the pen of Mr. Phipps, giving a vivid picture of the manner of address and oratorical qualifications of Sir John Mac donald and Mr. Blake, with some reflections on the present electoral contest.

WORKINGMEN'S QUESTIONS The N. P. amphitheatre is conducted by the Workingmen's national union. We would suggest that its conductors appoint a night for workingmen's questions and invite the six candidates to come there and give their views on any questions affecting workingmen. The night should be devoted to these questions and only candidates should be allowed to speak.

The sooner independent representatives can obtain a voice in parliament the sooner will partyism lose its corrupt control, and the true interests of the people be the guiding influence in the government of the country.

One of many heroic lessons to be derived from the life of the great standard-bearer of Italian freedom just passed away at Caprera, has its interest for us Canadians. It is the fact that to him is largely owing the fusion of the race and creed and antaoni ms, the jarring local and state interests. of the various sections of the Italian peninsula into one united Italy. He taught them to regard themselves, not as Piedmontese, or Florentines, or Romans, but as Italians. The lesson for us is, to use race or sectional differences, and to hold together as Canadians. Garibaldi's high moral character enabled him to do this. National character can never be elevated by the worn-out school of political leaders whose moral purity as statesmen is only to be discussed in our comic journals, and party, would be likely to jerrymander the New Jerusalem itself, and jeopardise the four rivers of Eden by a streams boundary

DISREPUTABLE TACTICS.

Some of the conservatives have taken a mean and unchivalrous way to fight Mr. Blake. Not being able to say anything against him personally, they attack his family. His father that is dead has been to settle a grave and difficult question of brought up time after time on the politica platform in order to wound the feelings of his son; his brother has been attacked time after time for the same reason; and now Mr. John Hague of Yorkville in a and nephew. We are no apologists for the which goes by his name, that the population young men or their conduct, if they were of a country tends to increase more rapidly guilty, but we protest against the attempt than the means of subsistence. Especially is this the case at times like the present, when a general election is en. Candidates may declare themselves as they please on the award, and what not else, but all will be of or the Canadian vote, simply as such. But own vote with his own conscience; don't the Irish vote—that is a very different matter-and rival candidates all but break their necks trying to obtain it. The cur-Rev. The World suggests that independent candidates be brought out, and says that if they were put up in thirty constituencies and twenty of them were elected the country would be saved. Twenty independent men could control the next house. This is quite correct, but the difficulty would be in electing the independent candidates. The whole mass of the people is largely leavened with independent views, but it is very deubtful whether there are yet a sufficient number of such voters to return a representative in any one 'riding in the province, that is as against two faction candidates. What is needed and what Mr. Blake has admitted his desire for, is some system by which minorities can combine their forces, and so obtain representation. If a man were not compelled to votes the riding in which his property is siture; if the elector could east his vote in any richethought proper, then a combination of minorities, for whist upon for the representation of minorities, for whist upon for the representation. In spite of the spurious humanitarian ism of a few impractical individuals the Chinese question is one that is rapidly coming to the front for serious consideration, and on one side or the other of it men every endeavor to discountenance creed, will be compelled to range themselves. The real matter at issue is not whether individual celestials shall be allowed to land on our shores as individual Englishmen, Irishmen, Scotchmen or Germans are allowed and invited to do; it is whether the traffic in Chinese passengers shall be allowed to continue in its present form, who if admitted to the upper regions to whether they shall be permitted to come in watch over the interests of the conservative as quasi chattels in the interests and under the auspices of wealthy speculators and contractors, and whether their presence as an element of Canadian population is so desirable that special forms of transportation shall be encouraged in order to send them over to us more rapidly that they would come of their own accord. To call those who are opposed to the present system of importing Chinese labor "hoodlums" is not the way social dynamics, though it is not a bad specimen of the way in which the odium theologicum leads clerical polemics to deal with each other.

There is no principle in political economy letter to the Mail tries to wound more indisputably established than the Mr. Blake by a word assault on his son one which was discovered by Malthus, and sent to this province for the very purpose of defending the character of the minister of railway and canals. To THE WORLD: The tories feel sanguine in West Durham, and comfort themselves with the thought that Mr. Burke's majority of 46 in 1878 can be reduced. There they are mistaken, for two causes were at work to produce that small majority that are not now existing. One—In Carc-wright—the tory stronghold—a large number of farmers' sons were entered on the as-sessment rolls, whilst in Darlington, the great liberal centre, the grange element was in favor of protection for farm products. Both of these influences are now counteracted. The Darlington and Clarke farmers' sons are also enrolled: and the grangers have seen the fallacy of their ideas of 1878.

Many people, who do not take the trouble to investigate, believe that all companies are about alike; and because all charge about the same premium, they absurdly imagine it is as well to insure with one as another, or with the office or the agent nearest their own door. There could be no greater mistake, as the above figures, from a thirteen years' experience, so clearly show. So long as intelligent business men allow themselves to be drawn into expensively managed companies, so long will there be a poor investment, instead of a good one, to most of the insured.

How Christianity has Come to Stink Certain Quarters -People Who Don't Want Morality to be Preached.

At the Reformed Episcopal church, corner

Simcoe and Caer-Howell streets, Rev. R. A. Bilkey preached the following sermon last night :-

give diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things, ye shall never fall: for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, for so a entrance shall be ministered unto you bundantly into the everlasting kingdom of ur. Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

I ask your special attention to that one clause, "For if ye do these things, ye shall never fall." What these things are, by doing which we shall never fall, we are told in the feregoing verses, where we are urged to add to our faith virtue, and knowledge, and temperance, and patience, and godliness, and brotherly kindness and charity. It is therefore with direct reference to these christian virtues and duties that we are here admonished to make our calling and election sure; for if we do these things we shall never fall, and not only never fall, but as an entrance shall be ministered unto us, etc. From all this, the importance of christian morality is very plain. See what is said of it. It secures on the human side our christian calling and election—it keeps us from ever falling—it the desires for duty nor creed for conduct, the desires for duty nor creed for conduct. things we shall never fall, and not only never fall, but as an entrance shall be ministered unto us, etc. From all this, the importance of christian morality is very plain. See what is said of it. It secures on the human side our christian calling and election—it keeps us from ever falling—it opens wide for our triumphant entrance the gates of the kingdom eternal, one thing, then, is clear enough, and that the desires for duty, nor creed for conduct, nor sentiment for sanctity. We cannot substitute desires for duty, nor creed for conduct, nor sentiment for sanctity. We cannot substitute desires for duty, nor creed for conduct, nor sentiment for sanctity. We cannot substitute desires for duty, nor creed for conduct, nor sentiment for sanctity. We cannot substitute desires for duty, nor creed for conduct, nor sentiment for sanctity. is, that St. Peter took up a very strong position. Nothing could be more deliberate or definite. There was occasion at the position. Nothing could be more deliberate or definite. There was occasion at the time, no doubt, for saying what he so plainly and pointedly did say. The christian people of his time were, some of them, forgetting, what christian people have largely been forgetting all along, that the religion of Jesus Christ, rightly and sensibly interpreted, means a godly character. largely been forgetting all along, that the religion of Jesus Christ, rightly and sensibly interpreted, means a godly character and a sanctified life. What amount of criticism, if any, the apostle met with in his defence of christien morality, I do not know; but I do know that for anyone to take up the same position now, is to put himself at issue with perhaps as much as two-thirds of the popular religion of the tay. The low ebb to which christian life lias fallen to in our time is a fact of very general remark, yet you must do nothing in the matter. From certain quarters comes the old cry, "Preach the gospel! Leave cold morality alone." We have preached the gospel, and verily, within sound of our presching christian people have been going to the devil! It seems to me that another word altogether is now yearted for our times. The gospel, certainly have been going to the devil! It seems to me that another word altogether is now yearted for our times. The gospel, certainly have been goten forgetting all along, that the religion of the ethings, in these plain and ordinary graces which are the crown of men as well as of christians—and God help us to see it thus, that so we nay not burlesque and belie our profession. to begin with, nor disgrace or defame it in the end!

The matter looks us all in the face to night, as we sit here, sootned by these sacred services. Passing good we all are. Not to be thought christians, would be the worst insult some of us could receive. Not to be thought Protostants and evangelicals, and champions of the "pure gospel," would be a greater insult still. We are lovers of morrow? We are seekers of trum—what shall we be seekers of trum—what shall we have the same position in these things, in yanted for our times. The gospel, certainly, but not the weak and sickly thing meant by "the gospel" in common can't. Another word altogether. "If ye do these things, ye shall never fall."

looked up to in the church—how do we stand in our own homes? From these safe Sabbath services we shall go back into the world, as we call it. There will be lying done there. Who will do it? There will Let no one so misunderstand me as to say just here than, if these things be so imant, then it does not so much matter ong as he goes in sincerely and strenuously long as he goes in sincerely and stremously for morality. That is always either a silly subterfuge or a mostdangerous deception; let us dispose of it at once. None of these things are required for any man except on the assumption that he is a christian, be-cause it is understood that perfect morality O the scandal of our fair-seeming christi-anity! O the moral stench of our churches! Yet we must never preach morfor its inspiration and sanction upon the price of christians.

I have no objection to people being of liberal ways of thinking in religious affairs, up to a certain point, and anyone who to a certain point, and anyone who to a certain point, and anyone who take the contract of the cont essays to be good without founding his goodness upon the new testament is welcome to try the experiment; only he might save himself the trouble by remembering that wiser men than he have been making m has come forward vet and mind the one truth which lies at the back of all true goodness, and which is not more a truth of scripture than it is of universal history and experience, that "without me ye can do nothing."

That is a degression, though not a needless one. My proper business is not with such as think they can be moral without being christian, but rather with those who seem to think, and practically do thin they can be christians without being mo There is more of this than than some may suppose. We are not to preach about morality; we must preach faith, feeling, and the rest of it—we must be evangelical. Yet scarcely a day passes but some well-known christian man or woman brings crying disgrace and scandal upon religion by some startling act of commonplace immor-ality. And when we look into such a case we find the fault to lie, not in any lack of of christian intelligence, christian orthodoxy, christian sentiment or zeal, but simply and entirely in a lack of ordinary, every day goodness. Add to these more striking and otorious cases thousand lesser ones, occurring daily in such cities as ours, and of which we only know, for the most part, by general impression and report, and you get at a state of things which should set us all thinking pretty seriously. I suppose one may speak the truth in church as well as eleewhere and if I do I must ask you to bear me out in what I say, for you have met with such cases yourselves, and per-haps know more about some of them than it would be good for your own credit to tell! You see I am not disposed know how many, are bound to come within range of the pulpit's fire to-night. For, alas, this thing of which I am speaking is very general and widespread. Christians favor as far as this particular case is convery general and widespread. Christians who are man, christians who are untruthful, christians who are slanderous, christians who are untrustworthy—why, such christians are everywhere. There is a certain amount of christianity amongst its in which a respectable Hindoo would be unable to find anything worth having. There is a kind of piety going about which I would hardly trust with a bad five cent piece—and never with a secret. There is a faithful christian friendship, from whose cruel clutch and venomous tonge, the Lord deliver us. I tell you things have got to such a pass that sometimes in business circles, as I am credibly assured, the very fact of a man's profession of religion actu-ally raises a suspicion of his honesty. Yet we mustn't preach morality! And, bethat some part at least of the responsibility for this state of things might be laid, without any great injustice, at the doors of our evangelicalism, of which we are so proud—our

—that we must look with a proper disdain upon "the world," and live for heaven. All of which is blessedly true in its own way, though a good deal distorted as so applied, and only half the truth at best. Those, however, are the pet points of evangelicalism, and a very useful and needful work it has done by putting them forth. But here often have we heard anything.

MADDALENA, June 3.—During the attack of broachitis to which Garibaldi succumbed, he several times inquired if the steamer conveying Dr. Albanesi to Caprera had been sighted. Being answered in the negative, he seemed disturbed. He also asked for news of his son Manlio, and shortly afterwards he quietly expired. His features appear as if he slept. The death chamber is arranged as a mortuary chapel.

The body is dressed in white poncho and an embroidered cap which he habitually wore. A body of marines are posted in the chamber as a guard of honor.

THE OUTLOOK IN AQUATIC CIRCLES. Reports from all over the country indicate that the present season will be a brisk one in amateur squatic circles, and although the weather has been so unfavorable, the different rowing clubs are putting crews into training and otherwise preparing for the campaign. The Argonauts have suffered considerably by the loss of two of their last year's crew. Especially that of their captain, Geo. F. Galt, who has removed to Winnipeg. This gentleman gave at no little persona inconvenience much time and attention to the work of bringing the Arganout four up to the forward position which they now occupy, and his removal causes a vacancy which will be difficult to fill. There is still plenty of material among the rowing men of the club, and it is expected that with training and plenty of practice the Argnauts will turn out a pair capable of defending their title against any other four in Canada The Torontos although they did but little to distinguish themselves last season, are this year getting into good shape and it is expected they will set affort a couple o fours that will do much towards redeeming the old time prestige of the club. Having found their old premises entirely too small to supply storage for their boats and accommodation for their increasing member ship, they built a large club house at Arm our's wharf. This is a vast improvement on the old one, being supplied with bath rooms, a nicely furnished parlor, smoking, reading and committee rooms, besides al most unlimited space below for boats. Now that they are in such comfortable quart

The Baysides although comparatively The Baysides although comparatively a young club as yet, have made for themselves a good reputation and give promise of doing good work this season. Although a number of their members seceded from them to join the Torontos their membership list has been largely increased and the financial standing of the club is very satisfactory. At the association regatta last year their pair-cared crew wen first prize and the pair-oared crew wen first prize and the junion single scull prize fell to a member of the Baysides. They are now putting into training a four, pair-oared, and a single, so that with plenty of practice they should make a record even better than that of last season.

It is a matter for regret that location cannot be found for the Canadian location cannot be found for the Canadian association regard, as the present feeling in regard to that matter is apt to bring the sport into disrepute. Toronto and Hamilton did their part creditably, and Ottawa or Montreal should now come to the front, and by offering, liberal inducements, make the regatta one worthy of the city in which it is held.
