WATFORD, AUG. 17, 1906.

The Ontario Farmer.

While the press of this country is continually shouting for the young man to go west, let us not forget the old man at home. We heartily join in the chorus of the times, "Young man, go west!" Now, let us look to the old man, in old Ontario. He is not doing much hollering neither one way or the other, just simply peggin' away and a kind Providence is smiling down upon him, bestowing bountiful harvests, and incidentally, lifting the heavy old mortgage that has weighed him down for years. To his more fortunate neighbor who has not been burdened in this way, Old Ontario is pouring forth her goodness with a bountiful hand, andour rural friend, who is our best friend, is erecting a handsome home for his old days, or if he already possesses such, the addition of another 100-acre plot is being added to his domain for the grown-up son who remained at home, and in some instances the prospective son-in-law. The present year gives every promise of a banner year for the Ontario farmer.-Haldimand Banner.

Good Roads.

The subject of good roads is always a live one, especially in this county where there is so much need for more attention towards the betterment of the public highways and thorough-fares. This matter has been sadly neglected of late, notwithstanding the inducements offered by the Ontario Government in the way of grants. The Municipal World has the following advice to offer to municipalities where roadway is needed:

"The repair of roads is an important as their construction. Neglect to keep the roads in repair, failure to repair them when repair is first need-

To allow roads to degenerate for want of repair, means an immense waste of labor, material and money, which has to be made up in their construction. Whenever good roads are made arrangements should be made for a careful attention to their repair."

Farm. The Best.

There does not seem to be quite as great a craze among the young men of our farming community to leave the farm and go into the towns and cities as there was a few years ago, but there is still two much of it, remarks the Aylmer Express. The freedom and independence of a life on the farm is being appreciated more than it used to be, and it is too often a great mistake when the young man leaves the farm for the city, expecting that he can get rich quickly without hard work. Our cities are full of people who live from "hand to mouth," and whose total wealth is represented by the clothes they have on. Years go by and these persons have no home. They lose that independence that the proud owner of a farm has with the labor-saving machinery now in use, the rural tele phone system, the fine comfortable homes, etc. The boy who gives up a good farm for life in the city makes the mistake of his life in nine cases out of ten. Stick to the farm, boys, if you have a good one.

Keep Down the Weeds

On how many farms do we see weeds growing up in the fence corners and along the roadside? There may be some excuse for this in some cases, but as a rule there is none. The weeds should be cut just as religiously out of the fence corners and along the roadside as on any other part of the farm—in the cornfield for example. Many farmers keep the weeds from going to seed in their cultivated fields year after year, and they wonder why their farms still produce just as many weeds as they did. If they will notice some time as they ride along the road to town past their farms they will see that the weeds growing there are the that the weeds growing there are the ones that are seeding the farm for the next year's crop. Not only is your own farm seeded by this plan, but your neighbor's is also. The scythe comes in handy along these places. If the mower could be used probably more fence corner weeds would be cut, but this is one place where the scythe is still useful. is still useful.

Mystery Solved-

Montreal, Aug. 1.—A mystery which has engrossed the attention of the morgue authorities for the past two weeks was solved to day, when Oscar Fulton of Portapique, Londonderry, N. S., proved conclusively that the man who had been killed at early dawn on the morning of July 16 by a G. T. R. train at Dorval was his cousin, Joseph N. Fulton, who was en route from Seattle to Nova Scotia.

The Old Trouble.

[New York Tribune.] A curious thing noticed at once by visitors at Moscow is the absence of whips among the cab drivers. There is a law prohibiting their use in Moscow. The excellent condition of the horses attests the benefit of this humane law. Moderation varies the world over. The whip is not in disuse in Moscow. They use it there on men and women.

Hide your hammer and s well of others, no matter how small well of others, no matter how small you may really know yourself to be. When a stranger drops in, jolly him. Tell him this is the greatest town on earth, and it is. Don't discourage him by speaking ill of your neighbors. Lead him to believe he has at last struck a town where white people live. Don't knock. Help yourself along by becoming popular and push your friends along with you. Be a good fellow and soon you will have a procession—following you. No man ever cession following you. No man ever helped himself by kuocking other people down in character and business. There are others and they have brains as well as you. There is no end of fun minding your own business. #### How We Got Our Name.

The name Canada perpetuates a blundder. According to an eminent authority when the Portuguese under Gasper Cor-ereal, in 1590, first ascended the great St. Lawrence they believed it to be the strait Lawrence they believed it to be the strait of which they were in quest, through which a passage might be discovered into the Indian sea. When, however, they arrived at the point whence they could clearly ascertain that this was no strait, clearly ascertain that this was no strait, but a river, they exclaimed repeatedly in their disappointment, "Ca Nada" ("Here nothing,") These words, remembered by the natives, were repeated to the next Europeans who visited the land. The newcomers, hearing the phrase so frequently used, conjectured that it must be the name of the country, so "Ca Neda". he name of the country, so "Ca Nada" it remains.

Complaints made some time ago about negligent health officials at Dresden, Township of Dawn, by Medical Health Officer Hall, ot Chatham, have resulted in an investigation by Dr. Bell, inspector for the Provincial Board of Health, who found the complaints fully justified, One family suffering from smallpox moved from the Township of Dawn to the city while the disease was at its height, and no medical disease was at its height, and no medical attendance was procured. In the township many cases were looked upon as chickenpox, and infection was carried widely. Neither vaccination nor disinfection was employed, but as a result of Dr. Bell's visit precautions have been taken.

GOHANN SEBASTIAN BACH was born in 1685 and died in 1750, aged 65. From childhood he grew up, as all should grow, in an atmosphere of good music in the home. He made such rapid progress in his music lessons that he soon knew more, could play better and compose better than all his teachers.

Bach is the greatest musician that ever lived. He was the inventor; all who came after him were followers or imitators. He wrote nearly 1,000 compositions, founded modern orchestral music, perfected organ methods and choral composition, discovered most of the methods in instrumental composition, rearranged the 24 scales, making it possible to play in every key, and established the chief principles of modern piano playing. No one can hope to become even a good concert pianist who has not first mastered Bach's Inventions, Well-tempered Clavier and Fugues. and Fugues.

WHY GIRLS ARE PALE.

They Need the Rich Red Blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Actually Make.

Three years ago Miss Ellen Roberts, who holds the position of saleslady in one of the leading stores in Halifax, N. S., was a pale delicate looking young woman, who then lived at home with her parents at Amherst, N. S. She complainof general weakness and loss of appetite. Her blood was thin and watery and she grew thinner day by day until she looked almost a shadow. Her cheeks were sunken, all trace of color had left her face and her friends feared she was going into a decline. "I had no energy," says Miss Roberts, "and suffered so much from the headaches and dizziness and other symptoms of anaemia that I felt I did not care whether I lived or died. One day, however, when reading our local paper I read a testimonial given by a young girl in favor of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and as her symptoms were almost identical with my own I determined to try this medicine. Before I had used the second box I began to find benefit, and I continued taking the pills until I had used seven or eight boxes, by which time I was fully restored to health." To-day Miss Roberts looks as though she had never been ill a day in her life, and she has no hesitation is saying she owes her present energy and health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

In its review of the happenings of twenty years ago the Forest Free Press has the following concerning an incident that caused a profound sensetion in this vicinity. Three of the victims of the disaster were from Watford and the body of Morrison was never found:—Wm. M. Vidal, G. T. R. station agent at Watford; Thos. A. Telfer, agent of the Bank of London, Watford; Walter C. Morrison, station agent at Jarvis: Wm. J. Sinclair, London, Wattord; Walter C. Morrison, station agent at Jarvis; Wm. J. Sinclair, of Sarnia; Fleming Mackenzie, and Hope Mackenzie, (cousins) of Sarnia, chartered O'Gorman's yacht, the Cruiser, and started on a trip to Manitoulin Island. Not returning at the time they intended and a violent "norther" having sprung up anxiety was felt and a search was made for them. The Cruiser with the bodies of the two Mackenzie's and Telfer was found on the beach two miles and a was found on the beach two miles and a half from Port Frank, the latter being almost unrecognizable. Fleming and Telter's bodies had been lashed to the boat and Hope lay in the bow. The three other bodies were not recovered, though a close search by 35 Sarnia men was made from Pt. Edward to Grand Bend. The Cruiser gave evidence of having battled with a fierce storm. Most intense anxiety and great excitement prevailed from Saturday, July 31st, to Thursday, August 5th, when the three bodies were found by Mr. O'Gorman and John Mayor of Sarnia. The search was then anxiously and carefully continued the tug International being chartered by a volunteer party, but was refuetlantly abandoned after days of fruitless search. Mr. O'Gorman had no desire to see the Cruiser back in Sarnia Bay so after a careful inspection of her condition had been made and careful notes of her position taken the luckless craft was set fire to by the searching party when they are to by the searching party when they arrived at Port Frank on the 8th, of August, when he with the 35 others from Sarnia returned from their unsuccessful search. There was a throng of people there from Watford, Thedford, Forest and surrounding country. Before the boat was burned scores of those present secured pieces of the boat, rigging and contents to keep as mementos of the sad offeir.

Gerald's Mife By.... FORRESTER

Broderick swung off the 4:35 express, walked quickly up the steps leading from the railroad platform and took his first look at Pineville. Those who lived in Pineville proper were con-tent to call it Pineville. Gerald had written that they did not live in Pine-ville proper, but in Pineville-by-the-Sea,

Copyright, 1906, by Ruby Douglas otherwise Pineville improper.

All that Broderick saw were pines, plenty of them, a flat white ribbon of roadway and a bit of a postoffice, roughly shingled, in the midst of the mearest clump of pines. He stepped Tato the postofice as the central spot of civilization. Some one was stamp-ing letters behind the glass inclosure, a girl with smooth dark hair. Beatrice had smooth dark hair.

He watched the girl stamping letters with interest and wondered why some one did not tell her to wear her smooth head, crown fashion, as Beatrice did.

"Where do the Vaughans live, please?" he asked finally, when the stamping ceased.

"The Vaughans? Oh, Mr. Gerald Waughan and his wife? It's a brown use down near the shore, with mide veranda and a funny roof. About mile straight down the road."

A wide veranda and a funny woof. dered how Gerald's wife liked it. Bea-trice was artistic, but not artistically accentric. She had a horror of things et she had married Gerald. And Gerald's brother knew that Gerald was afterly odd, bizarre and bohemian, so

He walked on down the flat white ribboned roadway and wondered whether he would find her like the girls Gerald had always admired. A lithesome, limp, blessed damozel type, with close silky gowns and loose floppy hair. Last summer she had not been that type. He thought of the trim girl figure holding the rudder of the Water Lily that last day. She had been more than the sort of a girl to fall in love with. She had been a good fellow, a stanch friend. And as he watched her had stopped rowing, and they had drifted slowly in the sunset glow that flooded the lake while he told her.

There had been no actual engage ment. He had nothing to reproach her with. He had not been in a position to ask her to be his wife then, but he had thought a girl like Beatrice had meant more by a kiss, a hand clasp, a few vague words of understanding, than other girls. He had thought she might wait until next summer. And now in April, he had returned to New York to learn that Gerald was in disgrace, had married on nothing, eloped to Pineville-by-the-Sea, N. C., and his wife was Beatrice Stafford.

Gerald's mother had said they were penniless. Gerald's father had remarked that he didn't give a rap. They could exist upon love and art.

More or less for Beatrice's sake and a little for Gerald's, Gerald's brother had taken it upon himself to visit the bridal couple and help Gerald. Smothering his own love, he had made up his mind that as long as Beatrice had married a Vaughan she should not suffer from it.

There was no bell at the door of the little brown house with the funny roof. It was merely a bungalow in weathered shingles, and he pounded on the door lustily until it opened and Beatrice stood before him.

She was not the blessed damozel type yet. Her smooth dark hair was wound about her head in just the same crown fashion, and she wore a short dark blue linen skirt and a white shirt waist. The sleeves were rolled to her elbows, and from her finger tips to elbow dimples there was flour sprinkled. He had not expected to see her face to face so soon or alone. Neither had he expected her to act as she did. The color rose in her cheeks, tipping even her ears with pink. It was an old hab-it. He remembered it.

"I thought you were in London," she said. "You don't give a fellow a very decent welcome after he's traveled from London to this wilderness to say congratulations."

He stepped into the hall after her. She hesitated and laughed, looking at her floured hands. "I can't shake hands with you, andand the biscuits are in the oven. I shall have to watch them. Do you mind coming out to the kitchen?" He didn't mind. There appeared to be only three rooms-the studio-sitting room, the dining room and the kitchen, Collapsible ready-in-a-minute studio divans were in the sitting room and dining room in lieu of bedrooms. It was all charmingly, most uncomfortably odd, bizarre and bohemian.

"Where's Gerald?" he asked when he had found a chair in the kitchen. Beatrice knelt beside the stove to look at the biscuit. He could not see "He went to the postoffice for the last mail. You must have missed

"Well, what ever made him come to this lost corner?"

"Oh, because it was the chance of something definite, you know! Don't you know?" she added quickly, seeing the puzzled look on his face. "Well, Gerald's chum, Netherby Ames, broke all to pieces last fall from overwork and so on, and he was ordered down here. And he couldn't afford to come and stay indefinitely, so he pulled a few wires, and things happened. He was made postmaster here at Pineville. And he got lonesome and healthy and workful again a month ago, so very definite and businesslike and right under the circumstances." "Oh, certainly, under the circumstances," agreed Broderick. "So old Gerry's postmaster instead of artist."

Gerald's in his place, and he's in New York. Don't you see? It was really

"Both," she corrected, "He has lots of time to study, and it's good for him -the responsibility, I mean. You wouldn't know him."

"I suppose not," assented Broderick uneasily. He tried to reconcile his little circle of the universe, to make the chaotic jumble fall into place and harmonize. Gerald, Gerald the helpless, erratic, fantastic, irrational, joyous hearted, penniless artist, a person of matrimonial responsibility, a postmas-ter. But then he remembered the young smooth haired person stamping letters. Of course Gerald had found his usual way out of the difficulty. He had hired some Pineville lass to do the heavy work, and he drew the salary. It was like Gerald. But there was Beatrice, Beatrice making biscuit. He looked at her with troubled eyes, seeing endless vistas of Beatrices making biscuit throughout the years. "Don't you miss New York?" "Oh, so much!" she said. "I'll never be happy until I get back." Have you given up your own

"Only for the time being. I shall take it up again, of course. I shall Broderick's hands tightened in a sudden grip. So she was to work again, turn out her endless succession of little wash illustrations for second rate monthly magazines. Gerald would not mind, would not see the point. He would think he was being broadminded and bohemian to let his wife carry, her own art irrespective of him. But Beatrice saw the point.

He rose from his chair suddenly, his face white with the anger and love he had smothered. Before he could stop himself the words came leaping to his

"Why did you do it?" "Do what?"

She stood beside the little bare kitchen table, her face raised to his, her eyes bright with startled wonderment at his tone. "Why did you marry Gerald?"

"Marry Gerald! I?" Some one was coming along the white roadway. From the kitchen window two figures could be seen, and she pointed to them. "There is Gerald, and that is his wife, my sister Barbara. I am merely attendant star to the honeymoon. They brought me along to-well, to make the biscuit."

A minute later and Broderick met the bridal couple on the wide veranda under the funny roof. The bride was the girl with the smooth dark hair who had been stamping letters, and she laughed at him

"I knew who you were, but I wanted Gerald all to myself, and I knew Beatrice would take care of you."

"She did," answered Broderick hap-pily, and as the rest went into the house he paused to brush off traces of flour from his coat collar. But Beatrice burned the biscuit.

The "Father of Leprosy."

The gecko belongs to a family of thick tongued lizards, which are widely distributed over the tropical and subtropical countries of Europe and Asia, and in all countries where he is known he is thoroughly despised. Because of his repulsive appearance he is called the "father of leprosy." Down to times comparatively modern it was firmly believed that contact either directly or indirectly with the little reptile was sure to communicate leprosy. The investigations of modern zoolo gists have proved that the little animal is undeserving of his name of "father of leprosy" and that he is indeed a most harmless and useful creature. Since the old belief in the ability of this reptile to communicate leprosy to any human flesh which might come in contact with his warty, sore looking skin was exploded he has retained his objectionable name solely on account of the bad appearance he makes. His skin is one mass of scaly and tuberculous excrescences that cover his body from the tip of his tail to the end of his nose. Every quarter inch section of this repulsive looking body has a general resemblance to the thickened. callous protuberances that appear on the human body in cases of leprosy. On this account and no other the harmless little gecko was given the name of being the progenitor of the worst form

Ugly Athenian Coins.

It is little surprising that the Athenian coins are less beautiful than some others. They always preserved an affectation of archaism. The Attic drachmas bore the head of Athene and on the reverse an owl often standing on a lyre, the whole in a myrtle wreath. Plutarch in his "Lysander" tells an amusing tale how Glippus had been sent to Sparta with a great sum of money as a bribe and how he unripped the bottoms of the sacks and stole large sums, sewing up the sacks again, not knowing that there was a writing in each sack saying how much coin it held. On coming to Sparta he hid his showing the Ephors the unbroken seals on the mouths of the sacks. When the Ephors opened these they were in great perplexity, but Glippus' servant betrayed him, saying "that under the tiles roosted the owls." The consternation was great. Glippus fled, and the stern Spartans declared that for the future they would use iron coinage made redhot and quenched in vinegar to make it hard and unpliable. In the laws of Solon, 600 B. C., the punishment of death is recorded against forging the coinage.

Very curious are the nests of the sun bird, scarcely larger than a butterfly It chooses some exposed spot, probably close to the public road, and proceeds to build on an overhanging twig. The finishing touches being put to the small abode, it is left, according to one authority, severely alone until spiders have woven their webs over and around ft. Another naturalist says that the birds themselves turn ragmen and, collecting any rubbish they can find in the way of moss, faded leaves, ends of cotton and other such trifles, stick them on the outside of the nest by means of pieces of purloined webs. In either case the result is the same, and they make their future home a thoroughly disreputable object. Then, and not till then, does the little hen sunbird lay her two greenish white eggs, which she hatches under the shelter of a small porch which has been constructed over the nest, shielding her from sun and rain.

Bread made from banana flour is common enough in Europe and England. One pound is said to contain more nourishment and energy producing material than one pound of the finest beefsteak, is much more digestible and less than one-sixth the price. Sir Henry Stanley was a firm believer in the banana. He went so far as to advise that its consumption would cure rheumatism, gout and all liver affections. When lying at the point of death from gastritis a light gruel of banana flour mixed with milk was the only food he could retain and digest. The secret of the banana as a health and strength producing food lies in its great number of its calories, respectively 20 and 391.71. It is a perfectly balanced ration if sliced for breakfast and served with milk and sugar.

The Nose.
The nose is intended for breathing, the mouth for speaking and eating. Who has ever seen a horse breathing otherwise than through his nostrils? Minute scientific investigation has revealed the fact that the number of people who breathe through their nostrils are becoming gradually but surely fewer in number. The consequence is that the nostrils decrease in size, while it has been found that the prevailing nose is quite an inferior organ to that of our forefathers. It is a well known phys iological fact that unused muscles and bones gradually disappear. Fish who live in the dark, for instance, or the mole, who resides underground, become blind. Thus if we cease to use our noses for breathing they will cease to exist. They will become superflu-Mozart's Quick Work.

On one occasion Mozart was making merry with his friends at midnight when not a single note was written of the overture to "Don Giovanni," which was to be produced on the following evening. When he had said goodby to his friends he calmly went to bed and slept until 5 o'clock in the morning. Awaking refreshed, he set to work on the overture, dashing off sheet after sheet with incredible rapidity and dispatching them to the copyists. The opera was to begin at 7 in the evening, and a few minutes after that hour Mozart was in his place as conductor, baton in hand, while the parts with the ink still wet on some of them were being handed to the orchestra.

A Wonderful Island of Chalk. The English island of Thanet, form ing a part of the county of Kent, is almost wholly composed of chalk. island is ten miles in length and about five in breadth and has more chalk exposed on its surface than has any other spot of equal area on the globe. British geologists say that there are not less than 42,000,000,000 tons of chalk "in sight" on Thanet and that it would take 10,000 men and 5,000 horses and carts 20,000 years to move it, providing it were dug up ready to be carted away.

A Peculiar Tree.

A singular maple tree on the left bank of the Oder, in Germany, is at least a century old and has been twist-ed and cut into a kind of circular house of two stories. A firm, leafy floor has been formed by causing the branches to become gradually woven together. Above this is a smaller second floor, similarly formed, and the ends of the branches have been woven into solid walls, in which eight windows on each story have been cut.

Catholic Priests and Marriage, Marriage by the clergy was first posi-tively forbidden in the year 1074 by Pope Gregory VII. The controversy, however, which had been going on for centuries on that subject was not altogether settled by Gregory's decree. The council of Trent in 1593 was the ecclesiastical body which formally pro hibited priests from forming marriage alliances. the matter. That permanently settled

When Forks Succeeded Fingers.

Table forks are a comparatively modern invention. They have been in general use only during the last few hundred years. They were first used by the Italians as early as the twelfth century, but it was not until the end of the fifteenth that they came into general use.

In other countries at that time the use of table forks was considered a contemptuous vice, and in 1450 Marius praised the King of Hungary for eating with his fingers without solling his clothes. In the sixteenth century forks were not used in Sweden, and at the end of the same century they were novelties at the French court, where the French beauties soiled their dainty fingers in conveying their food to their mouths.

Strange to say, our parent country mouths.

Strange to say, our parent country England was one of the last among the larger nations to adopt the use of table forks, and Ben Jonson, in his play, "The Devil Is An Ass," says: "The laudable use of forks is being trought into custom here as in Italy, to the sparing of napkins."

In monasterie, the use of forks in eating was considered sinful, and was strictly torbidden, and i was not until Shakepeare had been in his grave for twenty years that torks came into general use in England.

MIDDLETON-DAVIS.

A very happy event took place at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Robt. Davis, Wyoming on Wednesday, August 1st, when her daughter, Miss Edythe Isabella. was united in marriage to Clarence Middleton. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. M. Gunne, rector of St. John's church, in the presence of only the immediate relatives of the conducting parties. The bride wore her travil ing suit of brown broadcloth and both bride and groom were unattended.

The happy couple left on the 2.37 train from Wanstead on a trip to the West.

The Simple Facts.

From the Calgary Herald. From the Calgary Herald.

"Children," said the teacher, instructing the class in composition, "you should not attempt any flights of fancy, but simply be yourselves and write what is in you. Do not imitate any other person's writings or draw inspiration from outside sources."

As a result of this advice Tommy Wise turned out the following composition: "We should not attempt any flights of fancy, but write what is in us. In me there is my stummick, lurgs, hart, liver, two apples, one piece of pie, one stick of lemon candy, and my dinner."

Winnipeg Is Annoyed Over Recent Census Bulletin.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 3—Assessment Commissioner Harris vigorously assailed the estimate of winnipeg's population given in the first bulletin issued from Ottawa, which fixes the population at 90,216.

Mr. Harris considers the work as done was a farce, and decleares that the population is nearer 115,000, and certainly not less than 110,000.

Mr. Harris points out that the census was taken at the worst time of the year, when hundreds of people are away at summer resorts and their honses are actually closed up, so that it is impossible for enumerators to cover the work efficiently.

Toronto, August 14.—The run at the City Cattle Market to day was 60 loads with 384 head of cattle, 1,400 sheep and lambs, 250 hogs and 197 calves.

with 384 head of cattle, 1,400 sheep and lambs, 250 hogs and 197 calves.

There was a very light run of butcher cattle in the market to-day, with the result that basiness was brisk while it lasted, but it did not last long. Prices were also held up tairly stiff for anything choice in the butcher line, the market on the whole, showing a little firmer than the best of last week. This condition applies, however, only to the butcher cattle. Export cattle, if anything, were a little on the decline. There was nothing very choice in this class offering, but for the present, with vessel space at a premium, and the old country market not very firm, there is not a very favorable market for the choicest export cattle, of which there is said to be quite a few in the country ready for the fall trade.

The market for stockers and teeders is still very dull, except tor anything extra choice. The rough and common light stuff is not wanted, and there is practically no market for it just now.
