Encyclopedia Britannica.
We live in a reading age, which is distinguished for the almost interminable multiplication of books. The most of them are, however, of a very inferior quality, and the exhibitions of vague theories that they excite a transient interest, and then sink into morbid oblivion. The greater number of volumes in modern libraries are mere literary chaff. The acquisition of knowledge, on the part of readers, depends not so much on the number of books read, as on the character and substantiality of their contents, thoroughly studied, and the thoughts and activities of men. It leaves no subject unmentioned, that is of theoretical or practical utility, in our busy modern life. It is a companion, a constant informant. As a book of reference, it cannot be over-estimated. There is scarcely a subject in it, from beginning to end, which is not fraught with instruction. It contains the concentration of all knowledge by earth's mightiest intellects. Such a book in a reading family is a living spring, a fountain of wisdom, and a source of information. Its teachings are inexhaustible.
Subscriptions will be taken at this office. Payments are made very easy and extend over a period of five or six years. The price is $25.00 in advance, or by instalments of $5.00 per month. It is a means to secure this invaluable work.

Poetry.
Rest—Only Rest.
My feet are weary, and my hands are tired, My soul oppressed—
And with desire have I long desired
Rest—only rest.
'Tis hard to toil—when toil is almost vain In heaven's way;
'Tis hard to sow and never garner grain In harvest days.
The burden of my days is hard to bear—But God knows best;
And I have prayed, but vain has been my prayer;
For rest—sweet rest.
'Tis hard to plant in spring and never reap The autumn yield;
'Tis hard to till—and find when 'tis tilled to Weep
O'er fruitless seed.
And so I cry a weak and human cry,
For down the west,
And so I sigh a weak and human sigh For rest—for rest.
My way has wound across the desert years,
And care is infest
My path; and through the howling of hot Tears,
I pined for rest.
'Twas always so; when still a child, I laid On mother's breast
My weary head; 'e'en then I prayed, As now, for rest.
And I am restless still, 'Till soon be o'er—
For down the west,
Life's sun is setting, and I see the shore Where I shall rest.
—Father Ryan.

had clasped her arms round him, and pillowed his head upon her breast.
'Philip,' she said, 'you will hear those bells every Christmas. As first they will be young and strong, full of health, hope, and happiness—you will not know what 'tired souls' means; but the years will roll on, and the hopes of youth will die.
'These curly locks will grow gray. So many hopes, and then you will know what 'tired souls' means. Little Philip, the bells say 'Come to heaven.' Promise me that you will live a good life and seek to reach that happy place.' He promised with the facility of a child, and for many a long year afterwards the bells had reminded him of that promise.
His eyes grew dim with tears even now as he remembered it.
If my mother had lived, I said aloud,
'I should have been a better man.' He could almost hear the music of the winter wind, the gentle beat of the snow, the noise made by the leafless swaying boughs, the carol, the chiming of the Christmas morn, the light of the stars; but he could not put away the memory of his young mother's face, the sound of her voice, the clasp of her arms, the plaintive pleading of the bells, 'Come to heaven, tired souls—come to heaven.'
I have read of men haunted by a Christmas fire, he said. 'I must drive dull care away.' He rang again—this time for a bottle of champagne, to check the thoughts and memories that haunted him. When he could not bear the memory of his mother, he drank champagne.
Indeed, this handsome Earl was tired of everything. He suffered from that most terrible ailment, ennui. He had been spoiled by prosperity, for in all his life he had never known what it was to wish for a thing and not have it.
The Lauraines of Bainswood were one of the oldest families in England. The Lan-raunes had set their foot on the Saxon neck.
They had possessed themselves of one of the finest estates in Sussex, and had called it Bainswood. They held it through all changes—all wars. They were a fine race, — brave, handsome, truthful, and of great heart's core, but they had their dark faults; that often go with and mar great virtues. They were proud, stern, and jacitious. There could be no divided love for Lauraine. No shared sorrow, no divided loyalty to the snow or the holly—I need not list to their carols. The only sound I cannot shut my ears to, was the clank of their church-bells. Still I need not listen to them.'
He murmured these words to himself, for he was alone this Christmas Eve; neither friends nor kinsmen were with him. He turned round sharply as the door opened and a footman entered with several parcels.
'These are the diamonds purchased for Earl and Lady Lauraine, by Messrs. Stour and Stour, jewellers, 15, Abchurch Lane, London. Unfasten the parcels, directed the Earl quietly.
But, when the pins lay on the table before him, he barely glanced either at the superb stones or at the beautiful settings.
What mattered a few diamonds more or less to him who had been through the same routine of duty; he made the usual glance at the table untouched.
Half an hour later another servant came supposed to be the finest in France—the winner of the Grand Prix; and the Earl had purchased—had acquired, he had cost a fabulous sum of money, and had been brought over to England with far more care and attention than was often bestowed on a boat-load of passengers.
Most men would have rushed to the stable to welcome such an arrival; the Earl, however, he barely glanced at the diamonds, and then he said to himself, 'I will look to it tomorrow.' There was a knock at the door, and the table was covered with notes and letters.
He looked at them wearily; he selected a few—those with envelopes on the envelopes and delicately perfumed—the remainder he placed together for his secretary, Gerald Dunmore. Lately and languidly he opened the one which he had selected, and he read them and laid them aside. There was one with a delicate scent of violet perfume, and he murmured as he read it:
'From Lady Ethel; she murmured as he broke the seal.
Each tender eloquent words, full of poetry, with a tinge of passion, and sighed as he put the note away with the rest.
There were invitations to various parties; Lauraine, he had said to himself, he would attend to them all.
It was quite by an accident that he was alone in his study on Christmas Eve. He had promised to join a large party at the dike of Myrtle; but, in riding across country, he had injured his foot—so he gave up all his engagements and remained at home.
There came to him a faint sound of music; he sat at the table, and again he rang the bell. To the man who answered the bell, he said:
'Go and tell the waiter not to come here —at least not to sing. I am not in the humor for it. See that they have a good supper, but let me hear no music.' There was a sound as of muffled footsteps over the snow, and then all was still. With something like a sigh of relief the Earl took up his newspaper—he had almost got rid of Christmas heraldings. But in a short time there came floating over the air a soft sweet sound—the music of the Christmas bells. The window-shutters were closed, but he could not get rid of that music; it came clear and distinct upon the frosty air. When the winter wind fell, it was loud and distinct; when the wind rose, it was faint and low. In one way or the other it was always there.
He tried at first to pay no attention to it; but it had a way of getting into his ears, and he had his head back in his chair to think.
He saw himself a child again in that same room, and his fair young sister, sitting at the window with the glow of the fire light on her face and golden hair. He had been listening to the Christmas bells for some time, and he went to her in his childish sympathy.
Mamma, he said, 'those bells are speaking; what words are they saying?'
'She looked a few minutes with a smile on her face, and then she raised him in her arms and set him upon her knee.
'I can hear them, Philip; they are saying, 'Come to heaven, tired souls—come to heaven.' He repeated the words after her, and found that they harmonized with the ring and fall of the bells. 'Tired souls, come to heaven,' he sang with them.
He remembered how his young mother all. He felt the influence of Nature's fresh fair beauty. He was improved, both in body and mind, since the last Christmas Eve, when he had shut out the snow and the music. He had thought a great deal of his old guardian's words, that he needed to be stirred by true, honest affection. It was speaking so him, this voice of Nature. It had told him many things that he had never known the joy of true love; that he had lived for himself and no other; that he wanted some one to love—some one to love him and make his life nobler, purer, and better.

He walked on until he came to a brook which was broad and deep, and which seemed to sing of all the beautiful places it had passed through. It sang so sweetly, so merrily, that he followed it. It ran from among the trees at last into a level open space where water-lilies grew in profusion. There stepping-stones had been placed that the country people might cross the brook and so reach the pretty village of the town of Calderwood; and there Lauraine, passing from the green shade of the woods into the open light of day, saw his fate.
It was a picture that for beauty and grace was unrivalled. Transferred to canvas, it would have immortalized a gazing at it; for he saw in it what he had never seen before. Yet it was simple nature, as he saw little but the glitter of golden hair and the scarlet gleam of a mantle—a girl, young, tall, slender, with rounded supple limbs and a figure graceful in every line and curve, bolting on her shoulder a little child as she moved to cross the brook. Her arms, bare to the whole figure was full of grace. The bare white feet were perfect—the or bowed over the brook and seemed to kiss his fate.
She had a figure like the Diana of the Louvre,' he said to himself.
'She went from one stone to another, and he saw her face.
She was a young girl, as lovely as the dawn of a poet—a girl superb in her beauty—fair sweet face with lovely red lips, hair that fell in golden waves over her shoulders, and eyes of the deepest, darkest blue, with long silken fringes, a brow white, clear, unruined, and poetical. He had seen beautiful women, but he had not seen like this. Looking at her, he could not take his eyes from her. He did not know what was coming over him, but he did care. His only idea was—if he could but look at that face for ever!
She did not see him. She laughed with delight as she passed from that most lovely child from one shoulder to the other, talking to him, laughing with him. Lauraine was of lofty and clear mind; the picture; he stood and watched her for some time. What was she going to do in this running, tripping, laughing step? She came to the third stone, she took the child from her shoulder—she was only loosely clad over him, and the little one was delighted with this open-air bath.
Lord Lauraine did not understand why he could not leave her—why he must stand there watching her. What was she to him? What could she be to him? He saw the glitter of the golden hair, the gleam of a smile, the red lips laughing kisses on the child. Who was she? Why should she cast a spell over him?
They were on the other side of the brook now. She dressed the little child, and then she put on her own shoes. With a laugh she caught up the little one, but Lord Lauraine could not hear what she said.
'I will be a lot later,' he said to himself. 'I will lie here in the shade and watch her. I could imagine that Venus had come to earth, and I could imagine dresses to play with Cupid. I will never see such a picture again. I will look at her while I can, and then go away and forget her.'
So he said to himself in his blindness.
He had yet to find out that he could never forget her again.
Until the sun set she played with the child by the brook-side. Once the little one fell asleep. She clasped the child to her, and his little head upon her breast, burning sweet words; then she sang a lullaby so sweet that Lord Lauraine's heart softened as he listened. She laid her fair young face on the rosy flushed face of the child, loving and caressing him even in his sleep.
He could not have told why, but, as he sat there watching them both, bitter passionate jealousy entered his heart. He could stand the child from her arms and flung him aside. Why were those sweet careless—those loving kisses—given to that child? He could not be her own surety?
She looked so young, and the little one was at least two years old; yet, if not her own, why should he rest upon her bosom?
He tried to laugh at himself; the Lauraine jealousy lived in him after all. Of none of the beautiful women he had believed he loved had he ever felt jealous; and now his face flushed with jealousy over a child.
His face flushed again as he said to himself that with the Lauraine love and jealousy went hand in hand. Love? Why, granted that this tall fair-haired girl was graceful and beautiful as Venus herself, she was but a daughter of the people!
Presently she raised the child, and they went away together.
As quickly as possible he crossed the brook and followed her. She went through the wood, out at the white gate where the tall ferns and the larkspur grew, down the high-road where the elms cast such great shades, right into the pretty town of Calderwood. He saw her stop and speak to a little girl, and then she disappeared at the end of the street. Lord Lauraine did the most sensible thing under the circumstances—he spoke to the girl.
'Who is that?' he said—'what is her name—she who has just spoken to you?' The girl opened her eyes widely.
'That is Gladys Heston,' she replied.
'Gladys? He might have guessed that she had some such name. Full of poetry and passion, with a ring of sweet wild music in it. He said to himself that the name just startled him.
'Gladys Heston?' he repeated. 'And is that her child?'
'Yes, that is her boy; Leo she calls him—mother says it is an outlandish name.'
He hesitated for a moment before he asked the next question. Seeing mother and child alone, he had a feeling that the sunlight fell through them, the flickering shadows of the boughs trembled on the grass.
Lord Lauraine walked silently through

BRIDGE TOWN, DECEMBER 24, 1879. CHRISTMAS.

Tomorrow morning, before sunrise, multitudes of juveniles will be gladdened by the beautiful benefactions of Santa Claus. Their laughter on Christmas day seems like the merry ringing of a marriage bell.

Some denominations of christians regard Christmas as a day of sacred religious observance. In the venerated cathedrals and other ancient ecclesiastical structures of the old world, with the solemnizing interests of successive centuries resting upon them, the sacred esteem in which the day is held, will be manifested by appropriate decorations of walls and altars, as well as by ritualistic characteristics, peculiar to the day.

The believer in christianity hails Christmas as the anniversary of the advent of the world's Saviour. It awakens remembrance of that thrilling anthem, which was heard at midnight by Jewish shepherds. "That song was the utterance of Divine Love. Peace on earth—good will to men!" which was angelically proclaimed in strains of heaven-born music, indicated the opening of the Christian Era. Prophecy was fulfilled—the Child was born—Divinity was incarnate. A luminary, unknown to star-gazers, was a heavenly beacon of guidance to oriental sages who were divinely impelled to journey from a far country to worship the infant Immanuel. In importance and far-reaching consequences, the birth of Mary's Child transcends every other that ever transpired on earth.

Great Britain just now is perplexed with troubles both at home and abroad. The scanty agricultural yield—the prevailing depression in trade and commerce—the crippled condition of manufacturing operation—the increase of pauperism—and lack of activity in most of the industrial pursuits—are matters of vast difficulty and national discomfiture. In Great Britain, affairs are bad and disheartening; but in Ireland matters are immensely worse. The elements of social order are in a state of ineffectual dissolution. The ignorant populace are on the verge of insurrection, and sets of alarming lawlessness and head-like atrocity are being daily perpetrated. The principal trouble is not so much between landlord and tenant as between the majesty of law and social hostility arrayed against legitimate rule and authority. This is a state of internal discordance which demands much wisdom, forbearance and firmness on the part of Government. If mild means and conciliatory measures are unavailing to restore order, a harsher and sterner course must be adopted. Lawlessness must be put down by moderate means, if possible; but the obstinate spirit of persistence and social turbulence must be quelled at the point of the bayonet, if necessary.—In Afghanistan far away, Great Britain is contending with a difficulty of magnificent proportions. The people of that country are only semi-civilized, and restive under those popular restraints that are deemed essential to order and to the observance of treaties in more enlightened communities. They are vindictive, treacherous and vengeful. No faith can be put in their pledges of peace. Of course Great Britain has the power to coerce them into submission; but in effecting that object, the lives of our soldiers may be sacrificed on a large scale, and enormous expenditures be drawn from the national treasury. Great Britain is a good deal entangled with vexatious complications in Turkish affairs. The Porte has been lately complying with the stipulated arrangements of the European Conference at Berlin, and this has caused our Government no small amount of anxiety and led to a good deal of uneasiness on the part of our Foreign Secretary. The foregoing causes of national troubles, pressing simultaneously on Great Britain, have a formidable aspect. With the British Government it is a time of emergency. But the power and resources of the Empire are such, that she can surmount none of these bearing difficulties that present.

Our Town. At this season of the year we cannot do better than give our business men a short notice, so that our citizens may form an idea of the size of this portion of our fair Province. J. B. Reed has a steam furniture factory, turning out work that will bear favorable comparison with any imported. He has a large factory filled up with machinery, a building for upholstery and painting, and a large two-story establishment used for a show rooms and office. Undertaking is also attended to. W. A. Craig—Iron Foundry—turning out excellent work. A commodious building for the moulders—and a large two-story fitting up and sample shop with engine room and smithy—comprise the premises. Geo. Munroe—Steam Tannery—one of the largest buildings in the town. Turns out a large amount of good work, and also manufactures first class harnesses. FALCONER & WHITMAN—Marble, Granite and Freestone Works—one building with yard attached, and a rental room in Reed's factory for polishing the stones by machinery. This is such grave subject we cannot work up much enthusiasm; but we say soberly that any one wanting work in their line would do well to give them a call. You will save money and have work fully equal to that imported. J. Z. Best—Strictly speaking not a manufacturer; but Mr. Best's well known mechanical ability, enables him to turn out first-class work in the furniture and undertaking line. He also keeps on hand a good stock of excellent imported furniture, beside that of his own make. W. HART—Carriage Manufactory—Mr. Hart has deservedly earned a good reputation as a builder of carriages and sleighs. COX BROTHERS—Tin Shop—well fitted up with every of the latest style machines. This firm has supplied a large number of cheese factories with necessary apparatus, and have an excellent reputation for work. STORES. RUDMAN, RANDOLPH & Co.—Full and complete stock of Dry Goods, Boots and Shoes & Staple Groceries.—In this same connection we may mention that Mr. Randolph owns two saw mills (one gang) on the Morse Road. Thousands of feet of lumber are piled up, ready for shipment. R. R. & Co. intend moving in the spring, to their commodious premises in the centre of the town. J. LOCKETT—Full lines in first-class Dry Goods, Boots and Shoes and General Groceries. Wm. Tupper—same. HARRIS & Co.—Groceries, Crockery, Glassware, etc. Full, well appointed shop. MURDOCH & Co.—Groceries, Boots and Shoes, Hardware, etc. Full complete lines in two first, and good stock in smaller articles of latter. W. W. CHESLEY—Groceries, Crockery, Dry Goods, well appointed in two first, small but well selected stock in latter. A. D. CAMELON—Groceries, Boots and Shoes. Full in both lines. Mrs. S. B. GIBBS—Groceries and Fancy wares. Good stock. Mrs. MILLER, Mrs. LOCKETT, Mrs. FRASER, Mrs. T. J. and Mrs. GIBBS—have each well appointed Millinery stores. J. F. SANBORN—Watchmaker and Jeweller—keeps a good assortment of Watches, Clocks and Jewellery. E. LOCKETT—in the same line—keeps the same assortment, with the addition of Toys and Fancy Goods. Dr. DENISON—Drug Store.—Every thing in this line you can crave for. E. BROWN—Stationery and Fancy goods. His stock is not large but of choice and well selected. Mrs. WALKER—Confectionery shop—good assortment. CLOTHING. J. H. FISHER, and S. N. FALLISER—both merchant tailors—can supply you with excellent clothes and give you a good fit besides. MISCELLANEOUS. In addition to the above, we have three public hotels, and two or three private boarding houses. A branch of the Nova Scotia Bank, the Montreal Newspaper Office, Court House, several Halls, two good Smithies, besides one at Carleton's Corner, (a general store kept by W. St. Clair, is also located there.) Livestock, several Carpenters, Cooper and Shoemaker's shops, Photograph Studio, Meat Markets, and the requisite number of Doctors, and Lawyers to keep us from getting sick or into trouble. Three packets ply regularly, during the summer months from this port, one to Boston and two to St. John. Of course some of the firms enumerated above are absent of others; both in amount of stock and commercial standing; but they are well known, and there is no need for us to particularize. We have endeavored to treat all alike, as we merely wish to give an idea of the size of the town.

LOCAL AND GENERAL EDITORIAL ITEMS. Last Sunday the thermometer stood 21° below zero. A company has been formed in N. E. Island for the purpose of canning beef, mutton, geese, turkeys, etc. A Sabbath School Concert, we understand, will be held in the Baptist Church of this town on Sunday evening next. We hope the subjects touched upon by our correspondents of this week will be followed up by others of the same stamp. Ice closed the navigation on our river on Thursday night last. There have been years when it was closed a month earlier. Many of our farmers, for the first time in many years, are eating bread of their own raising, and have a sufficient supply to last the whole year round. The S. S. Entertainment last night in the basement of the Methodist Church was a success beyond all occasion of praise. The classes of the Lawrenston High School have just completed a successful term Jan. 2nd, 1880. All departments in a successful operation. Mr. W. W. Saunders' house last Tuesday evening, on the occasion of the social, was filled to overflowing—and a good time was enjoyed. Something over twenty dollars was realized. The Digby Courier has changed hands. Friend Dick steps down and out, and in place of his old self, we have seen the Digby Publishing Co. How many of 'em there is to fill the editorial chair we are not prepared to say. To be REPEATED.—The L. H. S. concert, held at Lawrenston on Monday night, is to be repeated on Saturday next, 27th inst. The unfavorable weathering of the programme of the evening, therefore Professor McDonald concluded he could not do better than repeat it. Don't forget the entertainment in the hall next Tuesday evening. In addition to the programme of the evening, a gentleman of well known ability is to give a reading of one of Tennyson's choicest poems, and a rental room in Reed's factory for polishing the stones by machinery. This is such grave subject we cannot work up much enthusiasm; but we say soberly that any one wanting work in their line would do well to give them a call. You will save money and have work fully equal to that imported. J. Z. We have endeavored to treat all alike, as we merely wish to give an idea of the size of the town.

LOCAL AND GENERAL EDITORIAL ITEMS. Last Sunday the thermometer stood 21° below zero. A company has been formed in N. E. Island for the purpose of canning beef, mutton, geese, turkeys, etc. A Sabbath School Concert, we understand, will be held in the Baptist Church of this town on Sunday evening next. We hope the subjects touched upon by our correspondents of this week will be followed up by others of the same stamp. Ice closed the navigation on our river on Thursday night last. There have been years when it was closed a month earlier. Many of our farmers, for the first time in many years, are eating bread of their own raising, and have a sufficient supply to last the whole year round. The S. S. Entertainment last night in the basement of the Methodist Church was a success beyond all occasion of praise. The classes of the Lawrenston High School have just completed a successful term Jan. 2nd, 1880. All departments in a successful operation. Mr. W. W. Saunders' house last Tuesday evening, on the occasion of the social, was filled to overflowing—and a good time was enjoyed. Something over twenty dollars was realized. The Digby Courier has changed hands. Friend Dick steps down and out, and in place of his old self, we have seen the Digby Publishing Co. How many of 'em there is to fill the editorial chair we are not prepared to say. To be REPEATED.—The L. H. S. concert, held at Lawrenston on Monday night, is to be repeated on Saturday next, 27th inst. The unfavorable weathering of the programme of the evening, therefore Professor McDonald concluded he could not do better than repeat it. Don't forget the entertainment in the hall next Tuesday evening. In addition to the programme of the evening, a gentleman of well known ability is to give a reading of one of Tennyson's choicest poems, and a rental room in Reed's factory for polishing the stones by machinery. This is such grave subject we cannot work up much enthusiasm; but we say soberly that any one wanting work in their line would do well to give them a call. You will save money and have work fully equal to that imported. J. Z. Best—Strictly speaking not a manufacturer; but Mr. Best's well known mechanical ability, enables him to turn out first-class work in the furniture and undertaking line. He also keeps on hand a good stock of excellent imported furniture, beside that of his own make. W. HART—Carriage Manufactory—Mr. Hart has deservedly earned a good reputation as a builder of carriages and sleighs. COX BROTHERS—Tin Shop—well fitted up with every of the latest style machines. This firm has supplied a large number of cheese factories with necessary apparatus, and have an excellent reputation for work. STORES. RUDMAN, RANDOLPH & Co.—Full and complete stock of Dry Goods, Boots and Shoes & Staple Groceries.—In this same connection we may mention that Mr. Randolph owns two saw mills (one gang) on the Morse Road. Thousands of feet of lumber are piled up, ready for shipment. R. R. & Co. intend moving in the spring, to their commodious premises in the centre of the town. J. General News.

London, Dec. 18.—The Pall Mall Gazette yesterday asserted that Yakob Khan's "buried treasure," recently found at Calcutta, were all in Russian gold, and that some of the Afghan regulars were dressed in Russian uniforms, which in many cases had the Russian eagle on the buttons.

Broxy Warren.—The schr. Ripple, Capt. Sully, on Grand Manan, on coming down from Round Hill on Thursday, grounded on Troop's Point, and remained till the following tide floated her off. A piece of knotted rope, but she luckily escaped no serious damage. The captain says he was aware the reef extended so far out, and wonders—that drawing mild, but he put it—why the place is not buoyed. Will our M. F. make a note? The Ripple will run as a packet during the winter between Grand Manan and Eastport.—Journal.

New Methodist Church. The new church was opened at Grandville Ferry on the 14th inst., and from a correspondence to the "Worshiper," we select the following account:—

THE EDIFICE. The building is thirty-six by fifty-four feet, with tower fourteen by fourteen. The basement contains a vestry for St. School lectures, social meetings, etc., and two class rooms. The entrance is from the front, and the auditorium, which is thirty-six by forty-four feet, and capable of seating two hundred and fifty persons, is reached by stairs on either side of the pulpit. The platform for the use of the choir is in the rear of the pulpit, thus enabling the audience to face both the speaker and the singers. The pews are circular in form, and the wood-work of the interior finished in ash with black walnut trimmings. Three handsome black walnut chairs in Gothic style and upholstered with green plush are on the platform in the rear of a very handsome desk. The communion rail is a very neat one, made of solid black walnut. The walls are laid off in black work and painted in imitation of stone. The altar, pulpit, stairs and aisles are carpeted, and three handsome chandeliers light the auditorium room splendidly. The edifice and its appendages cost $1404. It is one of the best built churches in the Province and presents a very handsome appearance.

THE DEDICATORY SERVICE. At the tones of the 111, a. m., bell died away, Rev. S. F. Bennett, President of the N. S. Conference, arose and said:—

"Dearly Beloved, the Scriptures teach us that God will be pleased with those who build temples to his name. We have heard how he filled the Temple of Solomon with his glory and how in the Second Temple he manifested himself more gloriously. Let us not doubt that he will approve our purpose of dedicating this house for the performance of the several offices of religious worship; and let us now devoutly join in praise to Almighty God that this godly undertaking hath been so far completed, and in prayer for his further blessing upon all who have been engaged therein, and upon all who shall hereafter worship in this place."

The hymn commencing as follows was then sung:—

"How pleasant, how divinely fair, O Lord of Hosts, thy dwellings are."

Prayer was offered by Rev. A. W. Nicholson, ex-president of the N. S. Conference. After reading the lesson the President preached a very excellent discourse from the words found in Nehemiah 12:22, 23, 24, and 25, and 15 verses.

At the conclusion of the sermon, the 122 Psalm was read, the President and Ministers reading the verses alternately.

The Trustees of the Church then came forward and said:—

"We present unto you this building, to be dedicated as a church for worship and the service of Almighty God."

The "Dedicatory" was then read by the President and the congregation knelt in prayer was offered. An appropriate hymn and the Benediction terminated the very interesting service.

At the opening of the afternoon service Rev. F. Bennett, resident Baptist Minister, led in prayer. Rev. C. Parisot, of the town, preached a very interesting discourse from Second Epistle of Paul to Timothy, 2nd chap, and the last clause of the third verse. At the conclusion of the sermon, Rev. Mr. Bennett delivered an excellent address.

In the evening Rev. A. W. Nicholson preached an excellent sermon from Zachariah 4th chap, and the last clause of the 7th verse. At the close of the sermon, Rev. W. H. Hearty, Pastor of the Church, in a few earnest remarks, tendered the thanks of the congregation to the several gentlemen who had assisted him in the very interesting opening services about the church, and to the building committee on the successful completion of their labors. In the course of his remarks he paid a well deserved compliment to Mr. J. A. Brown, the Contractor, for the excellent workmanship and superior materials used in the construction of the church. It was built to the entire satisfaction of the Committee and Trustees.

The congregation at all the services were large. The choir discoursed excellent music; and we were much pleased that the handsome organ used on the occasion was built by the Annapolis Organ Company, at Annapolis and kindly loaned for the occasion.

On Monday at 10 o'clock, a. m., the sale of the pews took place, and 46 of the 50 were sold for the handsome sum of $3,355.00. In the evening quite a large number of the congregation met in the church to hear the statement of the building Committee. After devotional exercises, Rev. Mr. Hearty, read the items in connection with the cost of the church and the amount obtained from subscriptions, sale of pews, etc., which showed the whole indebtedness to be only $246.00. He stated that he would like to see this debt wiped off at once, and said he would give a sum equal to the deficiency might be met; or if they would raise the four hundred dollars he would present them with a $150 organ. Upwards of $300 was soon subscribed, and two or three of the gentleman present offered to take the four pews unsold and furnish the amount wanted, which was agreed to by the trustees, and the church was consequently declared free of debt. We congratulate the Methodist congregation of Grandville Ferry on the possession of such a splendid church and trust that they may long be spared to worship the God of their fathers in it.

TELEGRAPH NOTES FOR THE WEEK. Bombay, Dec. 18.—Details of the fighting at Calcutta show that the people of the city and villages fled with their families and property to the British strongholds and wounded men, some being actually murdered within 200 yards of the wall of Shipur. Limerick, Dec. 17.—The Lord Fermoy, knocking him senseless and the pavement with a heavy cudgel in the porch of the Limerick County Club house on Saturday last, has been sentenced to six years penal servitude. The sentence caused much sensation in the court.

West Winchester, Ont., Dec. 17.—Mr. Brown, moderator of Clark's Brown, recently held, was arrested yesterday, charged as accomplice in the murder of her husband and daughter. He is now in custody of the police at Calcutta and London. This feeling is intensified from the fact that the late outbreaks have shown how little European generals know of the intention and character of those barbarous hill tribes with whom they are now in contact.

EUROPE. London, Dec. 20.—The Russian press is very violent in its criticism of affairs in Afghanistan. The Gazette de St. Petersburg says: "We must frankly confess that Russia would not break her heart in the prosecution of General Roberts' campaign, although the fate of Cavagnari's embassy."

EGYPT. Alexandria, Dec. 19.—It is announced that all the powers which are parties to the present judicial system in Egypt have sanctioned a decree making Rothschil's mortgage the first charge on the surrender, and last obstacle to Anglo-French financial control in Egypt.

UNITED STATES. Courtney writes to Blakie that he will now Hanah under the present terms, in April, either at Washington or Saratoga.

KISS COLEMAN.—Michaels Term ends Saturday, December 20. Lent Term commences Saturday, January 10.

Mr. Robert Robertson, of Nicholville, Aylesford, fell from a hay mow in his barn, on Tuesday the 4th inst, and was seriously injured that he died from the effect four days afterwards.

Those who sowed wheat in Cape Breton last spring are more than satisfied with the result.

Valuable information.—Johnson's Analyze Liniment will positively prevent diphtheria that most be dreaded of all dreadful diseases. Don't delay a moment, prevention is better than cure. No family should be without the Anodyne in the house.

OTTAWA, Dec. 20.—Late cablegrams give no further details of Afghanistana, affair, except that matters are not improved, and a feeling of suspense and anxiety is hourly felt both at Calcutta and London. This feeling is intensified from the fact that the late outbreaks have shown how little European generals know of the intention and character of those barbarous hill tribes with whom they are now in contact.

To partially atone for our many sins during the year now closing we wish to expose to the public the large packages of horse and cattle powder now and imminently valuable. This statement is true.

The Great Shoshone Remedy is an Indian vegetable compound, composed of the juices of a variety of remarkable medicinal plants, and has the various properties of these different ingredients, when combined, is so constituted as to act simultaneously upon the Blood, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Digestive Organs, Nervous System, &c., restoring their functions to healthy action, and being purely medicinal, is as harmless as water, and is a most valuable medicine in all cases of Cholera, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Canker, Pimples, &c. In prescribing this medicine we do not claim that it always performs cures; but this we do say, that it purifies and enriches the blood, permanently curing a large majority of diseases arising from its impurities. It stands far above and unequalled among the hundreds of competing medicines of the day. It has stood the test time, and has been used for many years, and is as popular today as ever. As a summer remedy it stands unrivalled; it enables the system to resist the constant drain to which it is subjected by high temperature. Persons who are subject to bilious Colic, Dysentery, Indigestion, &c., should take the Shoshone Remedy. Price of the remedy in pint bottles, $1; 25 cts. a box. Sold by all medicine dealers.

Pause, Ponder and Peruse! The renowned Superior and Complete Sewing Machine (The Family Sewing Machine) is the most important article in the history of mankind, when we consider its great usefulness and extremely low price ($25). It is very difficult to conceive of any invention for domestic use of more equal importance to families. It has great value for work; beautiful, smooth, and quiet movement; rapid execution, and a delightful ease of operation, that at once commends it above all others. Its working parts are all steel, strong and durable, will last a lifetime; and the finished articles are made neat and regular, and can be regulated in a moment to suit stitches from an inch length to coarse material, and with a rapidity rarely met with in any other machine. It is so simple in its construction that any one can use it, and it is so light and portable that it can be taken to any place. It is a most valuable and economical article, and one that every family should possess. Price of the Sewing Machine, $25.00. Sent by mail, $27.50.
