CHATHAM EXHIBITION WILL BE THE GREATEST AND BEST IN 1911

Very Fine Program Has Been Prepared With Many Attractions.

$2300 TO BE GIVEN IN HORSE RACES

Mr. George E. Fisher, the hustling manager of the Chatham Exhibition Association, was in Millerton on Thursday last. Mr. Fisher gave the News a very pleasant call during his short stay here. In conversation with Mr. Fisher he informed us that the big Fair to be held in Chatham Sept. 11-16, promises to surpass anything yet attempted by the M. A. E. A.

Manager Fisher is very busy getting the various departments over which he has charge, in splendid working order. The prize list is now well advanced and will, it is expected, be ready for distribution in another week or two.

The exhibition will open on Monday, September 11th and it is intended that each of the days on which it remains open shall have some special significance. Tuesday will be citizens' day, when it is hoped that all the inhabitants of the town and district including all those former residents who are spending "Old Home" week with their relatives and friends, will make it a point of attending.

Wednesday will be Commercial Travellers day, and as there are some five or six hundred "Knights of the grip" in the Maritime Provinces it is hoped all those who can will make it a point to be in Chatham on that day.

Thursday will be specially devoted to Farmers and it is intended to revive the old fashioned ploughing match, for which prizes will be awarded.

Friday will be Children's day when all the children attending the various schools in the town will be admitted to the show free.

Nothing has been left undone to provide the greatest variety of high class amusements ever seen at any function on the North Shore. On Thursday and Friday, Gaynor & Graff will present their comedy "The Silent Lady." The Unriddable Mule and the German ringmaster will again be in evidence with a change of programme.

In addition to the exhibition and other entertainments, there will be three days racing, at which purses aggregating $2300 will be offered.

The following tentative programme has been prepared, which is subject to alteration.

1st day	—2.19 trot and pace	$300
	2.14 " " "	300
2nd day	—2.21 " " "	300
	4 yr. old " " "	300
	2.30 " " "	300
3rd day	—	Free for all $500
	2.20 Trot	300

Taken altogether, Chatham's 1911 Exhibition bids fair to rival any that have ever taken place in the province and will be far and away the best thing in that line that has ever taken place on the North Shore.

THE INDIANTOWN BRANCH.

District Superintendent Evan Price of the I. R. C. was a passenger on the Indiantown Branch on Thursday afternoon. The superintendent was on an official tour of the road.

Mr. Price among other things looked into the matter of sidings along the branch and is endeavoring to make it more convenient for the travelling public.

The train stops at Barnett's and at McLaggan's and there is no platform at either places. This is certainly not as it should be and no doubt will receive proper attention.

Mr. Price has been very prompt in looking after the interests of his division and no doubt will do all in his power to make everything convenient for passengers travelling on the busy Indiantown branch.

BOOM THE MIRAMICHI!

Dual Purpose Sheep.

The day of the single purpose sheep is clearly past. The breeder who will not meet competition based upon a combination of fleece and carcass is facing certain defeat. This has been recognized by the large sheep interests of the country for a number of years, and under present conditions it is equally applicable to flocks kept under farm conditions. The foundation of the herd should be well graded ewes which will shear a fairly heavy fleece and at the same time produce a lamb which will fatten readily and dress out a good percentage of high class mutton. Selection and breeding should include these two objects.

IF YOU ARE WISE.

Don't look for the flaws as you go through life;

And even when you find them

It is wise and kind to be somewhat blind

And look for the virtue behind them'

For the cloudiest night has a hint of light

Somewhere in its shadows hiding;

It is better by far to hunt for a star

Than the spots on the sun abiding.

The current of life runs ever away

To the bosom of God's great ocean,

Don't set your course 'gainst the river's course

And think to alter its motion,

Don't waste a curse on the universe—

Remember, it lived before you.

Don't butt at the storm with your puny form—

But bend and let it go o'er you.

The world will never adjust itself

To suit your whims to the letter,

Some things must go wrong your whole life long,

And the sooner you know it the better.

It is folly to fight with the Infinite,

And go under at last in the wrestle.

The wiser man shapes into God's plan

As the water shapes into a vessel.

A Sealed Paper.

Miss Hubbell was much shocked at hearing the news. Death coming between two betrothed or married persons when young is best described as a shock. It is not the prolonged suffering of later years. I delicately hinted that it would be a comfort to Bernard if he could be united to her before his death, saying nothing about the inheritance. She acquiesced at once, and I had the satisfaction of telling him that she knew nothing of the marriage giving her a fortune.

There was a marriage, and as soon as it was over Bernard signified that he wished to see me alone. His young wife went sorrowfully away, and as soon as the door was closed behind her he asked me to reach under his pillow and take out what I would find there. I found a sealed letter addressed to his wife.

"Keep it," he said, "for six months without mentioning it to her, then give it to her."

I made the promise and at his request left him, since he said that after the excitement he had passed through he must rest.

Bernard died that night. I suggested to his widow that she remain abroad, where she might the sooner recover from her sad experience, and I took the body of my friend to America. Before leaving I told her that the marriage was partly a plan to insure her inheritance of Bernard's property. She was overwhelmed with the kindly act of the man who had loved her so well.

My trip to join Bernard Carey was my first visit to Europe, and, since it had been very short and circumscribed, after having remained at home a few months I concluded to return there. I had interested myself in the settlement of his estate, and, since it was necessary either that his widow should return to sign certain papers, that she might be put in possession of her inheritance, or that she should sign them abroad, I arranged with the attorneys in the case to take them to her. In deed, if she signed them abroad it was necessary that some one should instruct her in the matter.

My stay at Thun had been during the autumn, and now February had come. Mrs. Carey was at Naples, where Americans gather in great numbers during the early months of the year. So I took a steamer for that port via the Atlantic ocean and the Mediterranean. On reaching Naples I learned that my quest was at Sorrento, on the southern part of the bay, and in a couple of hours I was at her hotel. It was built on the edge of the cliff overhanging the beautiful waters and in the center of an orange grove.

There are stories the principal part of which is left out. So it is with this one. But it is time for me to admit that my return abroad was rather to see Mrs. Carey than to see Europe. The bay of Naples is beautiful, but my eyes did not view it with the same pleasure as that with which I looked upon the face and figure of Edith Carey. There was so much about us that was beautiful that we enjoyed it, she acting as my pilot, before settling down to dry legal documents. She knew that I had the papers pertaining to her inheritance with me, but she did not speak of them, and when I did she asked if tomorrow would not do as well. I assured her that it would, and she informed me that, not being with a party, she had no one to go about with her and longed to see some of the attractive sights near at hand. So we went to Paestum and Amalfi and Capri—indeed, any place that we could reach and return the same day. We were both young and had largely recovered from our melancholy experience at Thun.

"Why," I remarked to her one day while sitting on the steps of the ruined temple of Jupiter in the forum at Pompeii, "should we be long moved by the death of a single person when the many who were formerly hurrying about in the open space before us all passed away eighteen centuries ago?"

It was nearly seven months from the day of Carey's death that I sat down beside his widow with the inheritance papers I had brought with me. She signed them as I directed without reading them or asking a question. When the work was finished we went out and sat on a marble balcony overlooking the bay. The moon was at the full, and its light in Italy is very bright.

"By the bye," I said, "here is a paper Bernard asked me to give you after six months from the date of his death had expired."

"Please open it," she said, with a shudder.

I did as she asked. I could easily read it by the light of the moon. I started to read it aloud to her, but stopped suddenly.

It expressed a wish that she should marry his friend—myself. And then and there we agreed to comply.

A Sealed Paper

It Was to Be Given to a Dying Man's Widow

By Evan C. Hunter

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Strolling into my bankers in Paris for any mail there might be for me, I was handed a letter from Bernard Carey, dated at Thun, Switzerland. Carey and I had been chums ever since we were five years old. He had lost his health in the Spanish-American war and had gone abroad for its recovery. He had asked me to go with him, but at the time a matter of importance prevented. However, I was worried about him, and as soon as I could get away I followed him, for I loved him like a brother and wished to do what I could to enable him to get well.

His letter told me that he was at a hotel in the town of Thun, on the lake of that name. The town, he said, was a quaint old place, taking one's fancy back to the middle ages. The Kursaal (or casino) was but a stone's throw from his hotel; from the window of his room he had a view of the lake and the Bernese Alps beyond. Altogether it was a charming spot. Unfortunately, however, he was in such poor health that he took but little pleasure in anything. He looked eagerly for my coming.

A night journey brought me to Thun and the same hotel as my friend. I was shown at once to his room and found him in bed. I was troubled at having left him so long alone, but when I began to reproach myself to him he stopped me to tell me that although he would have been glad to have me with him he had all the attention he required. Then he let me into a secret that both surprised and pained me.

I need to preface what he told me by saying that travelers in Europe are constantly meeting American girls there who go from place to place relying entirely on themselves. Sometimes two or three will travel together; some times they will be found singly; some times they will attach themselves to parties they happen to meet on their travels, for Americans abroad quickly become acquainted and often become warm friends.

Carey had met a party that had been joined by an American girl, a Miss Edith Hubbell. He had traveled with her, and they had been very kind to him. Miss Hubbell had nursed him and unfortunately an attachment had sprung up between them. I say unfortunately, for I did not believe Carey would ever recover his health. This party, including Miss Hubbell, were at the same hotel with him at Thun. While I was sitting beside him he rang for a maid and told her to ask Miss Hubbell if she would come to him. When the young lady entered I naturally looked at her somewhat inquisitively, which brought a slight blush to her face. I have, or think I have, a faculty of reading character in faces and I judged that Miss Hubbell was one of those kindly disposed persons who would sacrifice herself for one who needed her good offices. As to how much love had to do with her attentions to Carey, I could not judge of that without seeing more of her. She said at once that she was glad of my arrival since Bernard had been looking forward to my coming eagerly, and, I being there, she would feel more free in her visits to him.

Carey was not well enough to leave his room and, fearful that both I and his fiancée would devote too much time to him, urged us to take walks and trips together. We would stroll along the banks of the lake some times to Oberhofen, sometimes farther and when we went too far to care to walk back would return on one of the pleasure boats constantly plying on the lake. Then at Carey's suggestion we took trips to Interlaken and thence up into the mountains. These outings were a great relief to me from attendance upon an invalid, and I noticed that Miss Hubbell, who on my arrival was pale and thin, began to take on a rosier hue.

One afternoon on returning from Lauterbrunnen Carey sent for me to come to him. I found a great change in him.

"Dick," he said to me, "I'm going to die."

I tried to reassure him.

"No," he persisted, "I'm going to die and I wish to speak to you about Edith. I must take steps to secure to her my property, which is about $30,000. I don't know anything of the law covering cases where the parties are Americans in a foreign land, do you?"

"No."

"How shall I manage it?"

I thought a few moments, then told him that the safest way I could suggest was marriage.

He took to the idea so quickly it was evident to me that marriage was what he wished me to suggest. He asked me to go at once to the girl, break the news to her that he had given up all hope and suggest to her the plan by which she should inherit his property.

I did not see how I could refuse anything to my dying friend and promised him I would do so.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

WHEN CARE SAVES PROFITS IN SHEEP.

When lambs are expected provide warm quarters for the ewes, deeply bedded with straw. Allow no one or any dog to frighten the sheep at any time now, for a sudden fright is likely to either cause premature birth or at least to have bad effects on both ewe and offspring, writes C. E. Davis in Farm and Fireside.

Go to the lambing house every hour until bedtime, and be ready to assist any ewe that needs it and to attend to the youngsters. If possible it is a good plan to sleep near the sheep yard and look in on them several times during the night. As soon as a lamb is dropped wrap the tiny bunch of bones in warmed cloths until dry and well warmed, then unwrap and nestle it in the straw. The mother will do the rest. Within six hours see that it takes nourishment from the ewe. This takes patience and often some teaching, but it pays to persist.

As soon as the ewe has dropped the lamb or two give her a bucket of milk warm water, for the act of lambing will leave her very thirsty. The drink will soothe her nerves, quiet her anxiety, and she will give down her milk freely and chew her cud contentedly. Cold water would be very hurtful, if not fatal, at this time.

When lambs are due separate such ewes from the rest of the flock to prevent injury and keep them in the fold where you can watch them every hour. It pays to let other things wait rather than be careless now and see all your year's profit fall and die. I have known sheep owners to turn

The splendid Cheviot ram shown above was a prize winner in the eastern circuit of fairs last fall. The Cheviots are a mountainous breed, hardy and do fairly well where pasture is scant. pregnant ewes out in the pasture and lose three to five lambs that were born away out in the field, were chilled and died of neglect.

Always speak low and gently to the ewe at this time, for a sheep knows by your voice if you are angry or joy

HORSE WISDOM.

The driver should be the horse's best friend.

It is everybody's business to interfere with cruelty.

You can get no more power from your horse than you give him in his food.

Jerking the bit and yelling confuse a horse and advertise a blockhead.

Your horse needs water often-er than you.

Any fool can ruin a team, but a wise driver maintains its value.

A sandy or muddy road doubles the work.

A rise of one foot in ten doubles the work.

Checkreins are injurious unless left slack.

Your horse may intend to please you, but does not understand your wishes.

Axle grease pays 100 per cent profit.

There isn't a thing wrong with some horses except their owners.

The full feed to the idle horse has cost the life of many a good one. Adjust the feed to the work the horse does.

Anybody can raise an ordinary horse and sell it for an ordinary price. It takes blood and feed and care to beat the average.

ous, and it is the singing shepherd they love:

If you get the lamb safely over the first forty hours it is likely to grow all right after that, but warmth, care and attention must be there when needed. If three are born to one ewe, as I have had happen, you must raise one with nipple and bottle or else get another ewe that has lost her own lamb to adopt the odd triplet.

Warming a Chilled Pig.

Of all the means of warming a chilled pig and restoring his interest in things earthly probably there is nothing better than a vessel of water heated to about 95 or 98 degrees, in which his body and limbs can be submerged for ten to twenty minutes. In many instances it will well nigh revive the dead. If after this hot bath Mr. Pig is dried and placed where he can suck a well filled teat his outlook on the future will be much improved. —Coburn's "Swine in America."

Keep the Cow Clean.

A cow with a back that itches and burns with chaff and dust cannot be so comfortable as one that's groomed every day. But that is not all. She will not digest feed so well as she would if her skin were nice and clean. When caring for your cows do not neglect their tails. Clean these clear to the end. A clean brush is a beauty to a cow.

Dusty Hay Bad For Horses.

Don't feed dusty hay to horses. If you have no other kind sprinkle it with water just before feeding. Many horse troubles may be traced directly to dusty hay, and these are much more easily prevented than cured.

Feeding the Calf.

It's a shame to keep the calf in a small place that smells so you can hardly endure it long enough to feed him. And talk about raising calves on bran water, hay tea, etc. If it's a case of "have to," all right, go ahead, but you can't raise as good calves on any substitute as you can on good milk direct from the cow. This is our way of raising fat, sleek calves. —Farm Journal.

Tying Up Horses.

Horses that are unable to cast themselves in their stalls should be tied with neck halter, which gives them much more freedom of the head than the nose halter allows.

Cost of Silage.

Professor A. L. Haacker of the Nebraska station has worked out some interesting data on the cost of producing a ton of silage. Figuring in the rent of land, plowing, cost of seed, planting and cultivating, he found that it cost 72 cents per ton. The cost of filling the silo, allowing a liberal wage for men and teams, he found to be 74 cents per ton. The cost of machinery and storage, including all items such as interest on money invested, depreciation and repairs and even taxes and insurance, was 48 cents per ton. Adding these three initial costs together, we find that the cost of producing a ton of corn silage to be $1.94. Professor John Bowers of Iowa has another way of figuring it in which he arrives at about the same figures.

About Rickets.

Rickets—or "progressive rachitis," as veterinarians call it—is a disease the cause of which is not fully determined. It is, however, most common in regions where the soil is deficient in lime salts and in cases where the mare has been fed corn largely when in foal. This disease does not always, as many suppose, manifest itself soon after the birth of the colt or other young animal, especially when it takes on the progressive form of the disease. There is no known specific for it. However, many recover when fed liberally on oats.

HOW THE SILO HELPS.

By means of the silo more of the food value of forage can be saved than by any other method of preservation.

The silo affords the means of keeping in small compass a large quantity of forage safe from the weather and in convenient form to feed.

Forage placed in the silo keeps at a uniform quality, whereas field cured forage constantly deteriorates.

Considering the food value saved, the silo affords the cheapest means for forage preservation.

Because of the palatability and succulence silage possesses higher feeding value than does the same forage dry cured. Conservative feeders estimate that the silo doubles the value of the forage crop.

Silage can be used in summer and fall to supplement pasture.

It has been conclusively proved that the silo effects a considerable saving in the cost of production of beef, mutton and milk.

The silo enables the farmer to keep more live stock, which promotes the rotation of crops and the preservation of soil fertility.

PASTERNS OF THE DRAFT HORSE.

The time was not very long ago when a draft horse was supposed to have a short, upright pastern and an upright shoulder. The inference was that a horse with a short, upright pastern was stronger than a horse that had a long sloping pastern. I am not prepared to deny that statement, says Dr. Henry G. Reed. I don't know but that there is something in it. If you take a draft horse with a straight up and down formation there is a possibility, everything else being equal, that that horse might move a heavier load than a horse with a springing pastern. Why do not we want that? That is what draft horses are for, and if they have a formation which will enable them to move a heavier load why is not that the correct formation? It is simply because these horses will not wear.

You all know that the best of these draft horses get into the city; they spend their lives drawing drays up and down the paved streets of the city, and every time the horse with a straight up and down formation puts his foot on the hard pavement it is a straight up and down impact, and the horse will become sore before he is on the pavement any considerable time.

Take a horse with a pastern fairly long and sloping; every time he puts his foot down there is a spring which relieves the concussion, and as a result of that the hoof will stand the wear and tear a much greater period than a horse with a short up and down formation. We like a fairly sloping shoulder for the same reason. We ought not to be carried away with the fact that because a horse has a straight up and down pastern and shoulder he is a better draft horse. The market today does not want it, though I think possibly in some cases a long pastern and sloping shoulder are becoming a fad.

The Shire mare Finstall Bonnie Princess, herewith shown, was a first prize winner at the international show last year. The showing of Shires at the international was about the biggest thing of its kind ever pulled off on the American continent. This strong, heavily built, active English horse seems to be gaining a good deal of favor among American horsemen in recent years. A noticeable feature was the large number of grays exhibited in striking contrast to the solid dark colors prevalent a few years ago.

I have seen horses that were too long and sloping in the pastern and sloping too much in the shoulder, but we want to get away from that short, upright formation, and we ought not to go too far the other way—there is always danger of going to the other extreme. Here we have a mare with a fairly well sloping pastern and a fairly sloping shoulder, far from the old fashioned formation and not at all too much for the up to date draft horse.
