Canada's Credit. Sir Charles Tupper, on asking the The Commercial Metropolis of Cana-House of Commons yesterday to empower the Government to make offered some explanations of the ated cities in the world, and says ments effered by chartered banks, and that as a consequence the Government had of late borrowed in England, where there is now a floating debt of a million sterling. As the fact of the Government asking for another loan will be handled in a political way by the Opposition, Sir Charles seemed to think the moment favorable fer showing that, although the public debt was nominal to the fact of the Government asking for another loan will be handled in the memory of the oldest inhabitant has the mountain attempted to come down town and interfere with the lusiness interests of the city. The best of the first of the moment faverable for showing that, although the public debt was nominally increasing, in reality the burthen imposed upon the people would not increase in the same proportion, in spring its fancy lightly turns to the subspaced credit of Canally and the subspaced credit of Canally a miss flaygood is of small stature, of the care wheels required in the United States alone taking more than 2,000, owing to the enhanced credit of Can and, which enables it to berrow at a reduced rate of interest. Sir Charles starts with the proposition that the principal of the public debt is not to be paid off as an ordinary debt must necessarily be, but is a debt in perpetuity, renewed from time to time by the issue of new securities. Holds, therefore, that the measure of the burthen on the public is the interest account. The reduction of the interest account. The reduction of the interest, as the country's credit improves, is therefore tantamount to a reduction of the principal and, viewed from this standpoint, not withstanding the heavy recent expenditures of the country, nearly the whole of which were for the actual construction or the principal and, viewed from this standpoint, not withstanding the heavy recent expenditures of the country, nearly the whole of which were for the actual construction or the principal and, viewed from this standpoint, not withstanding the heavy recent expenditures of the country, nearly the whole of which were for the actual construction or the principal and the germanent and will be built and the river and will be built, and there is a chance that it will be made permanent and will be built, and there is a chance that it will be made permanent and will be built, and the river and will be built, and the prevent of the carried in the United States alone taking more than 2,000 tons.

The Question Discussed in Parliament.

Quite a sensation has been created in England by Lord Wolseley's benquet speech and Lord Salisburgs extictures upon it, consequently the House of Lords was crowded last Monday afternoon by persons auxisted by the top of the property of the propert as the navy was as weak as it was now the army could not hold its own, dispersed as it was all over the world. The defences at home and abroad were in a bad condition. The military forces were not organized as they should be; they did not guarantee even the safety of the capital. He did not want to create a panic, but he maintained that the condition of the country was such that if a force of 100,000 men succeeded in effecting a landing and were properly handled there was no reason why they might not take possession of the country. He made this statement with a full appreciation of the responsibility attaching to it. He had been tempted to resign after reading what Lord Salisbury had said. The House could take the initiative in the matter. He placed himself in the hands of the premier. He did not intend te cast s slur upon the Government; he had endeavored as best he could to serve his sovereign and country.

SACKVILLE SCHOOLS.—Inspector
Smith concluded the inspection of the schools in this district last Friday and reports that they are in a fairly creditable condition. Owing to complaints by some of the teachers that part of the pupils are in the habit of leaving school under the direction of their parents at three o'clock, the Inspector suggested that the noon recess he extended half an hour, thus shortening the alternoon session by the same length of time. The suggestion has been adopted and the scholars now have adopted and the scholars now have an hour and a half noon, which prean hour and a half noon, which prevents any undue haste in eating their dinners, and leaves the afternoon session quite as long as is pronoon session quite as long as is pro-fitable. The Inspector reports that the Central School house needs cleaning and whitewashing and suggests that the work should be one on Arbor day and the follow-og Saturday, instead of waiting nervous, especially as my client was a consummate scoundrel—a bad egg any way you took him; but when I was beginning my practice he was a man of good family, the reputation of which would have been fatally tarnished had he been convicted, so I took the case and got the rascal off."

WOOD After dinner enters an important personage, great friend of the host, who presents the lawyer to him. Great Personage (patronizingly)—"I do not need to be introduced to this gentleman; I met him long ago; in fact I may say I gave him his first start in life; I was his first client."

-A South Australian paper makes the following comments on the receipt of a gift from an admirer of the journal: "A present in the shape of a bottle of fine old Scotch whiskey, was kindly sent to the office at two p. m. on Thursday; ten minutes past that hour not a drain of the liquor remained; ten seconds later the office boy had sold the bottle at the rag and bone shop next door. At 2.30 three men were charged with being drunk and disorderly. The editor of this pa-per returns thanks for this handsome gift, and would feel obliged if the donor of this would send along 72s., a policeman's hemlet, a new office boy, four panes of glass, a new street door knecker, and—no more whiskey.

The Buttercup.

BY SAMUEL MINTURN PROB When morning caught the fairy band
A-fessing in the dell,
From out Titanie's trembling hand
The dainty goblet fell;
And with her tresses blown askew,
She fied across the peeping dew.

The sun god viewed the frighted train,
And laughed along the green;
When lo! just where the cup had lain
A lovely eight was seen:
The beaker bloomed a floweret gay,
The blithest blossom of the May.

PART IV.

Cherry, Another moment or two, and a young man appeared, coming hastily along the path by which Despard had himself made his way into the shrubbery. He was quite young, two or three and twenty at most, fair, slight, and boyish-looking. He passed by Mr. Norreys with but the slightest glance in his direction, but just as Despard was congratulating himself on this, the new-comer stopped short. on this, the new-comer stopped short, hesitated, and then, turning round

"Excuse me," he said, "do you know lady you know."

I have not he passed this way?"

Despard shook his head.

"It was Mr. Conrad Fforde, Lord Southwold's nephew and heir—heir at least to the title, but to little else."

"So I should suppose," said Nor-reys indifferently. "The Southwolds are very poor."

"How queer that he knew your name if you have never met him before," said Mrs. Selby. "But I dare say it's through the Flores-Carters; there's nothing the matter, is there's You've not hurt yourself—or anything! You look rather—as if a cricket-ball had hit you, you know."
