The export shipments of farmers the importance of green manuring. It is not an easy matter to get stable or barnyard manure enough on the farm to supply every place where it is needed. Then it is, though not so good, that green manure can be made, in time, to supply the domand. It is not only convenient, but is much cheaper also than any other thing attainable for back on the prespects of better prices after February.— Winnipeg Call.

Wheat Growing.

In wheat culture the best mechanical condition of the soil is needful to insure good crops. As well plant corn on unbroken ground, keeping down the weeds and expecting good results without thorough preparation of the field. Before sowing the soil must be pulverised and mixed again

Reduce the area-reduce it and prepare it more carefully, and you will be sure to reap more profitable harvests. This is a secret also which not combine in favoring the full preparation and thorough cultivation policy. In the course of experiments to learn what quantity of wheat is needed in seeding an acre, it has long been held that eight pecks of wheat were none to much for an acre of land, but on the average test there appears to be much to prove that less seed will yield much grain. More send is necessary where it is sowed broad-cast and harrowed in, or where rough, unbroken land is sowed and the seed ploughed in than on mallow, drilled

The Race of Gypsies,

The conclusion that the gypsies wandered forth from India is now almost universally accepted, but when or from what part of India are questions on which few have done more than idly speculate. The indentification of the gypsies with the Jats, who in Punjab alone numbered 1,300,399 in 1871, has received the support of many of those whose opinions on such matters must receive the greatest respect. In a metrical paraphrase of Genesis, made by an Austrian monk about 1122 they are noticed as Ishmaelites, and their déscent thus credited to Hagar. There is a tale extant that the wandering instinct their descent thus credited to Hagar. There is a tale extant that the wandering instinct of the gypsy is due to the fact that their ancesters refused to shelter the Virgin and child in their flight into Egypt. The race has many other names in addition to that of gypsy, such as Bohemians, in France; Olganes in Portugal; Gitanos, in Spain; Htedens, in Holland; Pharaoh-nepek, in Hungary; Tariar, in Denmark and Sweden; Walachians, in Italy; Zigeunner, in Germany, and so on.

A Soldier's Letter.

(To the Editor of the Farmer.) Mn. Enron.—In the Reporter of the 10th inst., there appears a communication signed a "Uhristian Woman," in which she states "she was greatly surprised on visiting the city prison to see two seldiers of the Military School there undergoing a sentence for drunk-School there undergoing a seatence for drunk-enness, and since then another soldier for a like offence." Now, sir, I would like to inform this Christian wor liers spoken of left the barracks sober and were brought in dramb by the piquet sent out after them, and in the case of the latter he was undergoing punishment for striking a non-commissioned officer. If these Christian woman and temperance workers would only turn their attention to the dozen or more turn their attention to the dozen or more "canteene" that they must be aware exists in this Scott Act city, where the vilest of stuff is sold for liquor, and which is sure "to floor" its victim every time, they would confer a great "favor and humane act," ca he military authorities. If they do this, I will guarantee that this "Christian Woman" will not meet any more soldiers of the Military School (and I may add civiliane) undergoing punishment for drunkenness in the County gaol.

Yours, respectfully, A CHRISTIAN SOLDIER. Fredericton, Dec. 13, 1887.

Sometimes, happening along, I have heard the semi-song, And I alon used to smile More to sympathy than galle, But I never said a word In regard to what I heard, As she sung about her friend Who would keep her to the end

Not in sorrow, not in glee,
Working all day long was she,
As her children—three or four—riayed around her on the foor;
But h menotone the song
She was humming all day long;
With a Saviour for a friend,
He will keep me to the end."

Just a trific lonely she;
Just as power as poor can be,
But her spirits always rose
Like the bubbles in her clothes;
And, though widowed and alone,
Cheered her with the monotone
Of a Saviour and a friend
Who would keep her to the end.

I have seen her rub and semb
On the washboard in the tub,
While the baby sopped in suds,
Rolled and tumbled in the duds,
Of was puddling in the pools
With old scissors stuck in spools;
She still humming of the friend
Who would keep her to the end. lust a trifle lonely she;

And I would not wish to strip
From that washerwoman's lip
Any song that sine could sing,
Any hope that song may bring,
For the woman has a friend
Who will keep her to the end.

CHAPTER XI. THE WEDDING DAY.

Pearle Radoliffe's wedding-day broke as perfect and cloudless as the previous morning had been. The birds sang as fresh and sweet, the whole earth bloomed fresh and sweet, the whole earth bloomed and glowed with as rich a beauty, and "God smiled everywhere." But for the pale bellow syed bride, lying m her darkened chamber, all the beauty in the world was dead; all the beauty now, she thought; her heart was broken bound a co and the sconer her life's drama was played out and ended, the better it would be.

strove to consider if with calmass and fortitude.

She could at least save him from a felou's doom, from diagrace, and a name for ever blighted; she could, like some heathen wife, build the funeral pyre for her dead love, and then sacrifice herself upon it; and perhaps some time Richard might repent, and right the wrong he had done Ariel and her child.

Richard frowned at this presumptuous act, but more intent upon his betrothed's appearance than anything else, he bent near her and whispered:

"Pearle—Margaret ! are you ill? Why is dropped the earl's arm and moved farther away from him, an icy shiver shaking her from head to foot.

Knock after knock came upon the chamber door, and the sweet voices of the bridemaids begged to come in and wish the fair bride elect "joy," that the day was so propitious; but to all she turned a deaf ear; she would not permit one to enter, not even the gentle Alice Arnaut, who went away grieved and troubled on account of it.

To her brother's wife she excused herself, and she did not even appear to hear him.

"Margaret, speak!" commanded the Earle, in low, repressed tones.

"Tell me, Pearle, is it true, as he says, that you wish to be released from your to speak of old maids in words of ridication to the toth to me, here and now?"

She shuddered at his words, but bowed har head in prompt assent.
