est constitution can stand the dressing, the driving, the shing, and dancing of those fashionable watering places. We want rest, or, rather, change. Now, what do you say to White's Inlet?"

"White's Inlet? Never heard of such a place," replied Casper.

"Then I'll enlighten you," said Alick Freeman, stepping in the midst of packing his trunk and turning to his friend, "White Inlet is a beautiful bay."

"Down on the Jersey coast?"

"Certainly, the fishing is good, the shooting tip-top, and there is no such place for boating and bathing. And then it is pretty well out of the world, and the chances are we'll be the only visitors within miles."

"And we can wear out our old clothes," interrupted Casper Burns.

"Of course no one would think of wearing anything but old clothes down at White's Inlet. Oh, we'll have a splendid time, free as the winds and almost like being in a state of nature."

"I know, Alick, but people in a state of nature eat and sleep; how are we to obtain these necessary comforts?"

"The point is well taken," said Alick, slapping down the lid and facing his friend. "Right at the mouth of the Inlet there lives a fisherman named White."

"The inlet takes its name from him."

"Just so; and he has all the accommodations necessary. I sent him word we'd be down next week, and he's expecting us."

"Got any pretty daughters?"

"No; that's the beauty of it; has no one but his wife, and the only neighbor is a mile and a half away across the inlet. Oh, we'll have peace and no end of a good time," said Alick Freeman, rubbing his hands in anticipation of the pleasure in store for them.

The result of this interview was that the young men found themselves at White's Inlet within a week. After leaving the cars they had to go in a wagon some twenty miles over a sandy road that ran through a forest of fencerail pines and distorted scrub oaks, on which the sun beat with tropical intensity and along which the mosquitoes prowled in fierce bloodthirsty bands.

The fisherman's house was perched on a verdant bluff of white sand, with a swamp in the background and a glorious expanse of blue ocean in front.

One end of the cabin was the stern section of a wrecked schooner, with the name "Eliza Jane" still visible; the chimney of rusty iron had once done duty on a tugboat, and the gothic doorway was the utter jaw of a whale which Sam White had killed on the bar, about a mile from his cabin.

"It doesn't look promising, I must admit," said Alick Freeman, as they got out of the wagon which they had hired at a round price to fetch them over, "but it looks as if we might have all the quiet here that heart could wish for." This was Alick's first visit to the place, which had been recommended to him by a bachelor friend, and though he pretended to like it he felt in his heart that it was not all he desired.

"It must be a splendid place for fish," said Casper with a grim smile.

"Oh, it is! Why, there's no end of fish out there," said Alick, waving his hand at the water.

"If it isn't a good place for fish," continued Alick, "then it's about the most worthless place I ever set eyes on."

Sam White, a weather-beaten man of 50, came out of the cabin to welcome his guests, and help them in with their "traps," as he called the goodly array of baggage they had brought with them.

Mrs. White looked enough like her husband to be a twin, but she was a clean, wholesome, hearty woman, and conventional as the most ardent admirer of nature could wish.

The young men were given a room—there were only four apartments in the house—in the annex made of the section of the wrecked "Eliza Jane." The window had once admitted light to the captain's cabin, and it required no stretch of the imagination to picture themselves on shipboard. The very decorations of the chamber had a very marine aspect, from the high-colored print of a naval battle to the shell that answered for a soap cup.

The young men were hungry and dusty and in no good humour; so that while washing and exchanging their travelling dress for natty sailor costumes they did not exchange many words, though Alick ventured to say:

"I'm sure, old fellow, we'll like it hugely after we get used to it."

"People like whiskey and opium after they get used to them, but it is worth while acquiring the habit?" said Casper Burns, with a shade of sarcasm in his voice.

Alick was about to respond at a venture, but at that moment Mrs. White, without the formality of knocking, put in her head to say that dinner was ready and to add that in her opinion were "purty nigh starved."

There was roast duck, two or three kinds of fish, potatoes like snowballs, hot biscuits and yellow butter, and a pot of steaming coffee, all served on a clean crash tablecloth.

Sam White asked a long, and old-fashioned blessing, to the great amazement of the young men, who expected to find him a profane old sea dog, and then he said:

"You must make a long arm, boys, and help yourselves."

"Well," said Casper, "I must confess I haven't enjoyed a meal so much for years. I was hungry and it went right to the spot."

"Oh, this is just the place for an appetite. You can find one here sooner than in any other part of the country," said Alick, handing Casper a cigar, and feeling that there was something to commend the place in the eyes of his friend.

As they stood on the shore the sun was setting, and the bins expiate took on a crimson tinge. They sat down on the white sand, and they could see away up the shore and across the inlet two figures—females. One of them had a white scarf about her head and the other a scarlet one, but beyond this the young men could not make them out.

"Ah! it's a comfort to know we are not wholly shut out from the world," said Casper, blowing a whiff of smoke from his cigar in the direction of the figures.

"I am willing to worship at a distance," said Alick. "I'm glad the inlet separates us, but I've no doubt they are the wives or daughters of some of the fishermen up the beach."

"Them?" said Sam White, when one of the young men asked him who his fair neighbors were, "them's some folks from the city as have taken the old Benner place for the summer. It's more loonier over there than it's here; but when ole Cap's Benner he was a-livin', there was no end of company over there, but that's years and years ago."

"I suppose there's no danger of any of the strangers coming over here?"

"Not the least bit," replied Sam White, but as there's two young ladies over there and two young men over here, why, the chances is that some how they'll get together afore long."

"That's human nature," said Mrs. White, looking up from the potatoes she was peeling; "the boys'll seek out the gals just as the ducks goes barefooted to the water."

Alick hinted that he was an exception, and that while he did not positively hate the other sex, their presence was essential to his misery, and much more to the same effect, all of which Mrs. White heard with a strange twinkle in her gray eyes that plainly told she had doubts not of the young man's sincerity, but of his reasoning.

The friends stepped in the cabin that night, as they had not slept for years. Through the little windows the cool sea-breezes poured in, laden with health and the balmy odor that brings sleep.

When they awoke the sun was flashing on the sea and transforming into a snow bank the bar about two miles out, where a great black buoy rose and fell on the waves.

They had a dip in the ocean that sharpened their appetites, and after breakfast they started off with Sam White to fish outside the bar over a spot known to the fishermen of that coast as the "wreck," though there was nothing on the surface to indicate that ever a wreck had taken place there.

The fishing was all that had been reported—indeed the fish bit so hard as to change the sport into hard work and rob it of much of its pleasure. On their return they caught a glimpse of the two female figures beyond the inlet and far up the beach, and Casper Burns waved his hat to them, and the two white handkerchiefs were waved back in reply.

The friends soon grew to like this strange life, and they began to feel that the earth had lots much less desirable than that of a fisherman—but so far they had only played with the ocean in sleep.

They frequently saw the ladies up the beach, and they made an effort to learn who they were, but Sam White either could not or would not gratify them.

Three days before the expiration of their leave of absence, Sam White proposed to take them up the shore to a point from which they could get a good view of the New York yacht regatta, which was to have a race.

Alick Freeman, still declaring he wanted to see nothing that might remind him of the world he had left until he returned to it, decided to remain back.

Alick did not long enjoy the part of hermit which he had volunteered to play. He strolled along the shore with his fishing pole on his shoulder, and cast many an anxious glance in the direction where he had often seen the young ladies but they did not gladden his sight. No doubt they had gone off to look at the regatta.

About three o'clock in the afternoon Alick Freeman put on his bathing dress and went down the beach. He was a good swimmer although until this summer all his practice had been in tideless, fresh-water lakes or streams.

He boldly plunged through the rim of surf and swam out for a hundred yards, rising and falling on the swells that rolled in and broke on white shingle.

"I'll lie on my back and let the waves wash me in." Suiting the action to the thought, he threw himself on his back—he could float without moving a muscle—and, closing his eyes, he was rocked by the swells, which he imagined were drawing him nearer and nearer to the shore.

Five, ten, fifteen, minutes passed, and, wondering why he was not thrown among the breakers, as he expected, Alick Freeman turned over on his face and rubbed the water from his eyes.

Instead of being near the shore he was half a mile out, and the tide on which he had not counted was bearing him rapidly to sea. He took in the situation in an instant and, though realizing his danger, did not lose his presence of mind. His safety depended on his coolness.

He struck out for the shore, half throwing himself from the water by the powerful strokes, but all in vain. The tide still dragged him out farther and farther toward the foaming bar, on whose white crest tossed the black buoy.

He took off his wide brimmed straw bathing hat and waved it in the hope that some one might see him; then, anxious to reserve his strength, he again threw himself on his back and

POETRY.

The Marked Door.

Long ago, when the children played in the poplar's greenness of light and shade, Or danced at will through the dim old hall, Where the flickering shadows of vine leaves fall, Never a birthday brought its joy, To the lightsome hearts of the girls and boys, But they marked their bright on the old hall door, To compare with the inches they'd gained before.

Every fleeting and happy year, Has left the trace of its passing here— There's the first-born's height at four— The earliest mark on the old hall door— And again at six and eight and ten; Ah me! How tall he has grown since then!

The stern, gray soldier in army blue, Might scarcely pass this low door-way through.

Yet he stands to-night by his mother's chair, With his harmless eyes and his sunny hair, A lad of ten summers forever more, Charmed out of the past by the old hall door.

The upward rows of the tains are here, And, between them, their sisters, sweet and fair, With calm blue eyes and braided hair.

One lad has written his boyhood's name, After years of toil on the roll of fame, But the grave of the other is far away, And the girls are mothers and wives to-day.

Yet they're here unchanged—they have grown no more, Since the last mark made on the old hall door.

Long, long since have the children strayed From the farmhouse old in the poplar shade.

One by one they have slipped away— The nest is empty of all to-day, Hardly the mother her own may know, Where are the children of long ago! Here alone at the old hall door, In the hour of twilight they come once more.

And the mother at rest in the same old chair, Men and women no longer, they are here; but the children of yesterday, With their old-time frolics, and glee, and noise, Their April griefs and their childish joys, Their fresh young hopes and their souls of truth, Their fair ambitions and dreams of youth, Oh! mother heart! Though they all have grown, So tall and strange they are here your own, Always the same as in days of yore, You may find them still at the old hall door.

SELECT STORY.

AGAINST THE TIDE.

"No, sir, no fashionable watering place for me; I want rest and comfort during my holidays," said Alick Freeman to his friend, Casper Burns, with whom he was discussing the place where they would spend the two weeks' vacation allowed them by the bank in which they were both clerks, and of which their respective fathers were directors.

"We had a good time at Saratoga last year," added Casper Burns, adding with a sly laugh, "but you are afraid of meeting Miss Julia Fletcher there again; well, I don't blame you; she is as rich and pretty and heartless as you find them—"

"No, confound it, Casper, Miss Fletcher is all right, it is I who was the fool, and a presumptuous one at that, to think she looked more favorably on me than she did on the score of fellows who danced her like midgets in the sun. I hate fashion. Why, only the strong

The Marvellous Virtues of Paine's Celery Compound Conquer and Banish a Lady's Troubles.

Five Doctors Were Unable To Help the Sufferer.

Twelve years of misery and agony from female kidney and stomach troubles! Physicians were utterly perplexed and unable to cure the lady! In a time of gloom and despondency the magic virtues of Paine's Celery Compound bring joy and new life! These are the leading facts in the following statement made by Mrs. G. Stone, of Egungville, Ont.

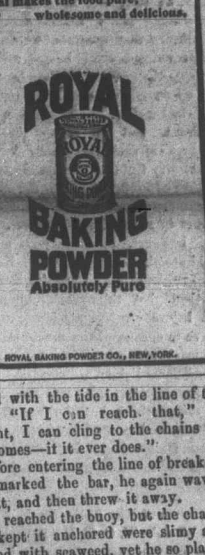

"For more than twelve years I was afflicted with kidney, stomach and female troubles, and had been attended by five doctors, and tried medicine after medicine, without any good result.

My sufferings a year ago from the kidneys and stomach were dreadful. I was in such a state that I thought I could not live, and concluded there was no use trying other medicines.

I was advised, however, to try Paine's Celery Compound, and finally decided to give it a trial. Before I had finished the first bottle I had improved very much, and after the use of a few more bottles I had not been so well for long years, and am now altogether a different person. The use of Paine's Celery Compound also banished my nervousness. I can therefore recommend Paine's Celery Compound to anyone suffering from kidney, stomach and female troubles."

drifted with the tide in the line of the buoy. "If I can reach that," he thought, "I can cling to the chains till help comes—it is ever done."

Before entering the line of breakers that marked the bar, he again waved his hat, and then threw it away.

He reached the buoy, but the chains that kept it anchored were slimy and covered with seaweed, yet he so placed his body across the chains as to keep his body from drifting farther out to sea, and there he hung for what seemed an age.

The sun was setting, and he was losing heart, as well as all strength, when he heard a shrill voice above the thunder of the breakers.

"The next moment a boat with a single occupant—a girl—at the oars, shot past him and turned toward the buoy.

"Where are you?" she shouted.

"Here! Here!"

Alick let go his hold, and, with a new strength, made for the boat.

The young heroine caught him and helped him on board, and the moment he was safe he fainted.

When he came to he was back on the shore, and Sam White and Casper Burns, who had come up, were chasing him with the aid of a gentleman whom Alick recognized as Julia Fletcher's father.

"Take him up to the house," said Mr. Fletcher, "and then go to your cabin for his clothes. Poor fellow he had a hard tussle for life!"

But the heroine? Well, as the fates would have it, Mr. Fletcher, his wife and his niece, Dora Weldon, had gone off to see the regatta, and Julia, governing under a whim, as the others supposed, remained at home, and interpreted his signals, though she knew not at the time who he was. She ran to the inlet, got a boat and boldly started out with the result already shown.

Next day Alick was himself, and he sent word to the bank about his accident, the result being that he and Casper had an extension of another week.

How the time was spent we need not say. Alick owed it to his fair preserver to become her servant, and so he was with her nearly all the time, strolling on the sandy roads and salt marshy byways.

Never had such a pleasant summer in my life as at White's Inlet," said Alick to a friend some years after, "it's so nice and quiet there. Casper and I were unmarried and clerks then, but we roughed it, and enjoyed it, eh, Casper?"

was in its infancy half a century ago. To-day it doth "bestride the narrow world like a colossus." What is the secret of its power? Its cures! The number of them! The wonder of them! Imitators have followed it from the beginning of its success. They are still behind it. Wearing the only medal granted to sarsaparilla in the World's Fair of 1893, it points proudly to its record. Others imitate the remedy; they can't imitate the record!

WOLFVILLE, N. S., SEPT. 24, 1897.

A Caution to Fruit Growers.

The temptation for Kings' County apple growers to ship inferior fruit will be more than usually strong this season. Not only is the crop small and prices large, but misshapen and unsaleable apples predominate to a much greater extent than usual and the producer will in consequence be tempted to discriminate not so very closely in the grading of his fruit. Apples are apples this year, and the result, we fear, will be that in the middle of some "No. 1" barrels, many an apple will find cosy quarters, which, in an ordinary season would be cast aside. Of course the number of those in this county who would systematically pursue a fraudulent method of packing is quite insignificant. But this season the circumstances are such that really honest exporters may feel that they cannot, with any degree of profit at all, suffer their fruit to undergo such a rigid grading as it receives in more favorable years. It would, however, be ultimately more profitable to the fruit grower of Kings who ships apples to the provinces than to those who ship to the provinces. We should like to see the fruit grower of Kings who ships to the provinces to encounter too much rivalry in our markets to permit us to esteem our good name lightly. Let our exporters this year, and in all years, ship nothing but the best apples and those well packed, and in a short time our fruit will win the reputation it deserves and command good prices in any season.

The name of Miss Agnes Slack, Sec'y of the World's W. C. T. U., is probably new to many of our readers, but is well known among philanthropic circles in London. She has frequently addressed crowded houses in that city with great acceptance. She came to America in 1896 bringing strong testimonials as to her Christian character and her ability as a speaker, from Lady Henry Somerset, Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, W. T. Stead, Dr. Stephenson, Mrs. James Whyte, Sec'y of the United Kingdom Alliance, and other persons equally well-known. The London papers are unanimous in placing Miss Slack among the very front rank of temperance advocates in England.

The W. C. T. U. consider themselves fortunate in having secured the services of this lady as lecturer. She will speak in this town on the evening of October, 6th. The place of meeting and the subject of address will be announced later.

The Baptist congregation of this town had the privilege on last Lord's Day of listening to their former pastor, Rev. T. A. Higgins, D. D., who for more than twelve years ministered to them in religious matters. Dr. Higgins preached with his usual thoughtfulness and presented his views in clear idiomatic English without parade of language or delivery. In the morning he preached on, "Thou hast the words of eternal life." He spoke of the words that went away from Christ and said that as to the question of falling from grace a good many would not have far to go even if they fell from the grace which they professed to have. He showed at length the power of the Gospel. In the evening Dr. Higgins preached on the barren fig tree and drew pointed lessons therefrom.

While the Manitoba farmer is regarding with complacency the rise in wheat which is establishing his prosperity, and the farmer of Ontario is smiling over good crops and prices in almost every department, the agriculturist of Nova Scotia, has, in truth, "the bitter herb to chew." No potatoes, no apples, grain crop scarcely up to the average, and no prices for hay, is not a record well adapted to brighten the face of the long-suffering Nova Scotia farmer. However, there is another year coming, and then we may be up, and the other fellows may have to take their turn at hard times.

The Messenger and Visitor comes to us this week in a very artistic and attractive form. Illustrations of the college buildings of Acadia, of picturesque scenery in the neighborhood of Wolfville, of the different gentlemen who have occupied the presidential chair of the College, and the present principals of the Academy and Seminary embellish its pages. Among others, articles appear from the pens of Dr. Sawyer, Dr. Keirstead, Dr. Trotter, Chancellor O. C. S. Wallace, J. Edmund Bars and A. V. Pines.

The attention of our readers is directed to the announcement of the Yarmouth Steamship Co. which appears in another column. The exceedingly liberal excursion rates which are offered on the steamers of this popular line for the next month, affords an excellent opportunity to visit Boston and vicinity at a most favorable time. No doubt a goodly number will avail themselves of the chance of paying such a visit.

The other day at a gathering at one of the Experimental Farms there was a spirited discussion about the value of newspapers. There was not a dissenting voice in the view that the Family Herald and Weekly Star, Montreal, is the best all round family newspaper to America, and it will hold its own with any in the world.

Teachers who would like, during the summer vacation, to extend their knowledge of Book-keeping, or learn shorthand or Typewriting, or both, are hereby notified that we will, beginning July 5th, give a six weeks course covering these branches. Personal Mention.

(Contributions to this department will be gladly received.) Miss Agnes LeCain, of Boston, is visiting in Wolfville.

Mrs. J. W. Vaughn is visiting Boston and vicinity for a few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Harris visited St. John last week and saw the exhibition.

Mr. C. E. Samaan, returned to his duties at Harvard University on Wednesday.

Prof. Haley returned on Saturday last. During his absence he visited London and Paris, and spent considerable time in Germany.

The many friends of Mrs. A. J. MacKenzie will be glad to learn that she is recovering from her late illness, which has kept her housed for a number of weeks.

Mr. Bennet S. Cleveland, of Brockton, Mass., is visiting friends in Gasperau after an absence of ten years. He paid the ACADIAN a pleasant call and four dollars on Wednesday.

Mrs. J. P. Longard and little daughter, of Halifax, who have been spending a few weeks with Mrs. Longard's mother, Mrs. J. E. Woodworth, this town, returned home one day last week.

The following Acadia students are attending Dalhousie Law School: E. Hart Nichols, '93, W. R. Parsons, '95, George H. Parsons, Harry A. Purdy, Ingram B. Oaks, and Clifford A. Telfer, '96, Frank W. Nichols and Church L. Freeman, '97. The last named two are taking their second year work and the others that of the third year.

Mr. L. S. Gove, formerly of this office, left Wolfville on Wednesday for Parrboro, where he is to take charge of his recently purchased journal the Parrboro Leader. Mr. Gove possesses all the requisites of a first-class newspaper man and under the influence of his genius we expect the Leader to become one of the brightest weeklies in the Province. Mr. Gove has many friends in Wolfville who will join us in wishing him no small degree of success in his new venture.

Billtown Bits. Lake Diviston is now in a flourishing condition, the average attendance at present being about sixty.

Preparations are being made for a "Harvest Concert" to be held in the church about the middle of next month. From the successful nature of past entertainments of this kind we predict a treat.

Miss Gertrude Taylor, who for the past year has been taking a course at the Rhode Island Hospital, at Providence, spent last week at her home in this place. She returned on Friday.

Master Lorne S. Whitney has left for New York, where he proposes to enter a commercial college. His sister Adelaide had left a few weeks previously for the purpose of attending school in the same city.

Mr. Stephen Steadman, who has been visiting his friends here, returned to Boston last week.

Mrs. Asa Steele is visiting friends in Wolfville.

Miss Winnie Card is visiting friends in Berwick.

Dr. Belle Bill is home on a short visit to her parents, Mr and Mrs W. C. E. M's Cox, of Isaac's Harbor, and Miss Whyman of St. John, are visiting Mr. Harding Sweet.

Mrs. Reuben Thorp, of Centreville, is on a visit to friends in Boston.

Mr. Thomas Fitch, son of the Doctor, leaves shortly for Shurtleff College, Illinois.

Rev. Jas. Williams, of Gasperau, preached here and at Woodville, on Sabbath, the 13th inst., with much acceptance.

Mrs. E. O. Devison, of Wolfville, and four little boys, were last week on a visit to her mother, Mrs. Judson Card.

The Chute family, to whom reference has been made in the papers, continues to call for the sympathy of their friends. The oldest son is convalescent and is at the parsonage. Of the nine other children seven are thought to be recovering. The mother is also recovering slowly. Mr. Chute, who was supposed to be having it tightly, was a few days ago compelled to take to his bed. They have the Christian sympathy of many who are doing nobly in the help they are giving them in their affliction.

Blomidon Budget. The pie-social, held in the Hall, on Wednesday evening, the 15th inst., was a success. Its object was to pay off the debt on the new organ for the Sunday school. Something over eleven dollars was raised, cancelling the debt all but a dollar, or two. Thirty-nine pies were sold. The highest bid was forty-three cents. Before now, pies have been known to bring five dollars. Mrs. M. N. Lyons acted as auctioneer.

The Sunday-school have got thirty new books for their library from the Methodist Sunday-school in Canaan.

The public school opened on Monday, the 13th, with an attendance of nineteen. The Blackbird, Capt Benjamin West, is loading apples for Parrboro.

The work on the new wharf at White Waters is progressing rapidly.

The weekly prayer-meeting at Lower Blomidon has been changed from Sunday to Wednesday evening, so as not to interfere with the Christian Endeavor here, which is held Sunday evening.

It does not seem possible that the table for eight people can be provided for ten dollars a week. But Mrs. Roer, the most famous cook in America, says it can be done. She has tried it and knows. She proves her case in the Ladies' Home Journal for October. She gives twenty-five menus covering a week's meals and gives full, practical directions by which any woman can make as attractive meals as Mrs. Roer explains, for this small sum of ten dollars.

While Mrs D. A. Munro was driving along Main street on Wednesday evening a boy on a bicycle ran into her horse which shied, throwing Mrs Munro from the carriage. She fell with considerable force, but we are glad to say was not apparently seriously injured—although she will probably be confined to her room for some time. Bicyclists should either exercise more care or keep on streets where there is less traffic.

There is no question about it, the Drug store is the place to get your spices. See adv.

The horse attached to the delivery wagon of Starr, Son & Franklin, became frightened when near the Academy House on Tuesday morning, by the bolt which holds the shafts in place, coming out and allowing the shafts to drop. The driver was thrown off and the horse dashed madly down Main street. When it reached Herbin's jewelry store, the team was on the sidewalk, and colliding with the window, smashed two large panes of plate glass. The horse was afterwards caught near the Hotel American.

The business establishment of Messrs Starr, Son & Franklin was gayly decked with bunting on Wednesday, in honor of the marriage of Mr George Starr, which took place at Fredericton on that day. The bride was Miss Ida Earle Simmons, one of the most popular young ladies of the New Brunswick capital. The ACADIAN joins a host of friends in wishing our esteemed young townsman and his fair bride every possible happiness. Mr Starr and Mrs Starr are expected to arrive in Wolfville to-day, and they will no doubt be given a most cordial welcome.

Harris, of the Glasgow House, indicates his faith in the efficacy of printer's ink, this week, by increasing his advertising space in the ACADIAN. He is now busy in opening and arranging new goods, and from the number of cases arriving at his store this week, he will be in a position "to do the trade." Watch his ads. in subsequent issues. Dress Suit Cases in heather and canvas, Telescope Bags, Club Bags, newest colors, Trunks all prices, a very large assortment just received at Borden's. On Monday afternoon as Miss Lina Forbes was riding down Main street on her bicycle she collided with the delivery team of Messrs Starr, Son & Franklin. She was thrown down and the horse and wagon passed completely over her. The bicycle was badly wrecked, but Miss Forbes fortunately escaped with no serious injury, although badly bruised. She is now getting around again. MONEY TO LOAN ON MORTGAGE.—Apply to E. S. Crawley, Solicitor, Wolfville, N. S.

Better Than Gold. IS THE RARE TREASURE OF PERFECT HEALTH.

A Young Lady Says: 'I Consider Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a Priceless Boon to Suffering Humanity.'

The rugged and the strong do not appreciate to its full extent the blessing of perfect health. It is only those who have passed through a trying illness...

When a minister or a teacher refuses to speak out on this question, he is ruled by the liquor interests, said John Wanamaker, in 1899.

What Drink Does For Public Men. A newspaper correspondent tells some of the excess which he saw in the Washington almshouse.

The Real Work. The real work before the Christian church to-day is to show that, while the gospel of love has displaced the gospel of fear, it has done so in the interest of higher Christian living.

John Howard Payne. The life of John Howard Payne extended over 60 years, from 1792 to 1852. The only literary work by which he is now remembered is 'Home, Sweet Home,' which was originally a song in an opera entitled 'Clari, the Maid of Milan.'
