Early in the day a number of buyers went to meet the droves, and several were sold cre they reached the village. The prices ruled from 3c. for poor to 6½. for prime, and we heard of one offer of 7½ for one of the prize cattle.

Tea-Meeting.—The tea-meeting in aid of the British Methodist Episcopal Church, which took place in the Town Hall last night, was quite a successful affair, about 250 persons being present. After doing justice to the good things provided in the Council Chamber, an adjournment was made to the Town Hall, to hear the various addresses. John Hogg, Eeq., occupied the chair. The first speaker, Rev. Mr. Benson, spoke at some length on the anatomy of man, and alluded to the doctrine of the Trinity, as exhibited and proved in nature, under various circumstances. He was followed by Rev. Mr. Ball, Rev. Mr. Woods (who sang a German hymn, much to the delight of his sudience.) Rev. Seth Smith, of Halifax, Mr. D. Moulton, and theres. The addresses were interspersed with mouse and singing by the choir, and the proceedings were brough to a close by singing the national anthem, followed by three cheers for the Queen and the good TEA-MEETING.—The tea-meeting in aid of the British Methodist Episcopal Church, which took place in the Town Hall last night, was quite a successful affair, about 250 persons being present. As might be expected, they looked upon the invitation as the production of the brain of a lunatic, and paid no attention to it. The man wrote again with a like result; and still he wrote a third time, telling them that they had failed to go to the vaults at the hour named upon the two former occasions, and he invited them a third time to meet him in the vault. Thinking that there might be something in the circumstances, the directors went into the vault at the hour appointed, and sure enough the ratcatcher pushed some stones aside, and stepped out of the adjoining sewer into the wallt, to the great surprise of the directors, who had previously considered the vault unapproachable from the ground. They thanked the strange man for the valuable information he had given of the insecurity of the vault, and settled a pension of £200 a year unon him. seigh were also thrown out, and escaped unburt. thing wonderfully interesting this morning. As I passed the Old Granary burial-ground, I saw that the tonb was open in which I knew were the remains of James Otis; and, with the help of the sexton, I opened the lid of Otis's coffin, and behold! the coffin was full of the fibrous roots of the elm, especially thick and matted about the skull; and going out, I looked up at the noble, verdant elm, and there, in transfigured glory, was all that was material of James Otis." thing wonderfully interesting this mornAn Unfair Attack.

Nearly a column of the Guelph Herald of Thursday is devoted to a very unfair attack on Mr. Richard of this office. It will be remembered that Mr. Brodie received an appointment in the office of the Provincial Secretary, early in January last, since engaged in the discharge of his oner ous duties. When he left here he had considerable private business of his own to transact, which he came to attend to on Wednesday last, the day on which our Easter fat cattle show and monthly fair was held, and when he got through, the four o'clock train bore him back to his accus tomed employment. It will thus be seen that Mr. Brodie's visit to Guelph was not for the purpose of reporting for either the Canada Farmer or Daily Globe, but to attend to his own private affairs. If Mr. Brodie did take notes of the fair, for the sake of "Auld Lang Syne," we presume he had a perfect right to do so, as his time was his own. When man is privileged to enjoy a holiday we think it wrong that his steps should be dogged by a political enemy. Will the Herald have the fairness to make the amende honor able?

Sir John has, at last, it appears been forced into action regarding Mr. Huntington's resolution on the Pacific Railway job, and has declared that lie will, on Tuesday next, ask for the appointment of a Special Committee to inquire into the charges against the Government, embocourse would, under the circumstan ces he satisfactory to the country at large. The subject is one of far too much importance to be dealt with lightly, and such charges cannot be suffered to pass unchallenged and uhanswered. Sir John's notice is a tacit acknowledgment on his part that Mr. Huntington's motion was a just and proper one, and one that was absolately necessary : and that any attempt to stifle enquiry would be unsuccessful. He has taken the only course open to him, and the progress of the investigation will be looked forward to with interest by all parties not only in Canada, but in England and the States. Mr. Huntington is not a man to make charges without having the means to substantiate them: and if the Government have committed the crime with which they have been charged, there can be no doubt as to the punishment they deserve, and will receive at the

REFUSES AN EXPLANATION .- It is the opinion in Ottawa that had the Opposition forced the discussion on fluntington's motion, the Government would have been driven to the wall. Sir John was told yesterday by several who voted with him that he owes them an explanation of the Pacific Railway allair, but he plainly replied that he would give no explanations: they have voted confidence in him, and as they had taken their stand he had now confidence in them, but they must ask no disagreeable questions. All inquiries are consequently crushed for the present, but since the above conversation it is believed that were the vote to be taken again it would show a far different result. position forced the discussion on Requests on the Cars.—The Lendon Advertises says that a young man coming to this city from Chatham yesterday to look for employment at his trade (painting) had the misfortune to leave his coat pocket unprotected in too close preximity to some member of the light fingered tace. By this thoughtless precedure he was relieved of his purse, containing some $11 in cash and a number of valu.

ANNABEL

THE TEMPTATION.

CHAPTER XIII.

CHAPTER XIII.

PARTINGS—THE TEMPTATION CROWNING INTO FORM.

Having but few preparations to make for his journey to America, Philip Weston was soon ready to depart on his mission, and the evening came when he and Annabel had to bid each other a long goodbye. She would have gone to Liverpool to see the vessel which carried him pass away down the river, but insamuch as it was to sail early in the morning, he persuaded her not to do so, but remained with barrat Rockstone till the last moment, having arranged that he and Jim Potts should leave with the night mail and reach Liverpool only an hour or two before the vessel sailed.

It was a beautiful evening in the beginning of June as he and Annabel sauntered along a narrow pathway which fringed the park. It was a freet, sequestered spot, for while on one side stretched the level surface of the far-spreading park, on the other was a deep dell, along the side of which the path winded, while down the centre flowed with sweetest murmur, ing sound a little stream which, after passing through the shady hollow, watered the open meadows beyond.

The evening was calm and radiant, and all nature was hushed in repose and full of exceeding beauty. A rich fragrance scented the air, watted from clovery lea, and flower-strewn dingle from the blossoms of the hedge-rows, and the leaves of aromatic shrubs which grew upon the slopes. What a mass of verdure and wesith of foliage covered the landscape, for it was "leafy June," when the summer had unfolded her gorgeous garment to its fullest extent, while its hues were at the freshest, and gave to the scene was such as to awaken every sensot a delicious pleasure, thrilling, to the scene was such as to awaken every sensot a delicious pleasure, thrilling, to the scene was such as to awaken every sensot a delicious pleasure, thrilling, to the scene was such as to awaken every sensot on with outward things, realised a blevsed calm, a holy peace, and a quiet gladness, which had a natural teniency to keep earth's troubles excluded, as if the re

Seene, where all was rest and love and peace.

The blessed outward influence was not unfelt by the lovers, as arm in arm they sauntered down the path, but they had thoughts and feelings to occupy them which rendered them silent and pensive amid a scene so inspiring. They were about to part, and knew not how long their separation might last. Philip was going away to a far distant land, where perchance dangers and perils awaited him—perils on the deep, perils in the wilderness, perils among wild beasts or wilder men. Would he caeape these, would he pass through them safely, and return to gladden the eyes and rejoice the heart of her who so fondly and so truly loved him? Who could tell? Annabel could not, but her heart was sad through foreboding possibilities, and uneo asciously she clung to his arm with a trembling tenderness, as if she would keep him by her side and refuse to let him go.

Philip on his part was heavy at heart likewise—heavier than be could understand or necount for even by the circumstances in which they were placed. He had no fears for himself on account of the journey on which he was about to enter. Far as it, was, protracted as it might be, and pregnant with unknown danger, he was full of faith and hope and courage, which made him contidently expect a happy and satisfactory issue. But he had a strange and unaccountable anxiety regarding Annabel. It was foolish he knew, and wholly unjustifable, for he was leaving ner, surrounded with every safety and comfort, with friends who would take care of her, anxiety to annoy her, save that connected with his own absence. He told himself that he ought to feel nothing of the anxiety which oppressed him, that he should shake it off; and talk cheerfully and hopefully, so as to lessen the sadness which a glance at her pale face showed him she experienced. Yet ever and anon, as he made an effort to throw aside the feeling, it care back upon him like a shadow, which seemed to darken the sadness which a glance at her pale face showed him she experienced. Yet e and listened in sad and pensive silence to the music made by the singing of the birds, the murmur of the water, and the low parpetual hum of insect life in the branches overhead.

accident could not have occurred.

Hon. Mr. Mitchell read telegrams received by his department giving the particulars of the shipwreck, and explained how the Government had failedin having this dangerous locality properly guarded.

Mr. Tobin repeated his impression that had the pecantion which the Government should have taken not been neglected, the world would have been spared this heart-rending calamity.

On motion of Mr. Mills, the House went into Committee on the Bill to abolish Pual Representation.

The Committee rose and reported the Bill without amendment.

The report was received, and the Bill fixed for the third reading.

Mr. Mills moved the second reading of the Bill to amend the Act to compel members of the Local Legislature in any Province where Dual Representation is not allowed, to resign their seats before becoming candidates for seats in the Dominion Parlament, and to make further provision in case of the election of disqualified candidates. which can be cured by a timely resort to this standard preparation, as has been proved by the hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors. It is acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most reliable preparation ever in-troduced for the relief, and cure of all Lung complaints, and is offered to the public, sanctioned by the experience of over forty years. When resorted to in season it seldom fails to effect a speedy cure in the most severe cases of Coughs, Bronchitis, Croup, Whooping Cough, Influenza, Asthma, Colds, Sore Throat, Pains or Soreness in the Chest and Side, Liver Complaint, Bleeding at the Lungs, &c. Wistar's Balsam does not dry up a Cough, and leave the cause behind, as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs, and allays irritation,
