OUAUMONT Village appears to be the only point of doubtful possession in the second battle of Verdun, which has been raging since Thursday, with the ebb and flow in the tide surging in out of this little hamlet. The French have firmly resisted all German attempts to drive them from the present line, Pepper Hill-Douaumont heights-Vaux ridge, for seven or eight days, checking the German advance in the first battle, and holding it up in the second battle. It is believed in Paris that the Germans have been checked for good and all; that the tactics of General Petain has deprived the Germans of all chances of winning a success in this section of the front. The latest news confirms the conclusions reached in these columns several days ago. The Germans were checked in the first fight by the awful losses that they sustained. To begin the second light, they brought up a quarter of a million fresh troops. At the opening of the first advance the Germans fired away about 2,000,000 shells in two days. This lavish use of shells about exhausted their don.-The following official communiaccumulation of heavy projectiles. boasted in the height of the German offensive against Russia last show that our troops attacked the spring, that the German and Austrian shell production averaged 250,000 a week, but their expenditure of shells in the nine months' fighting since then has never justified this boast. So the shells fired against the French advanced positions before Verdun represent the presistance, were dislodged. is now believed that, seeing certain failure in their offensive against Verdun, the Germans will be forced to begin an offensive "On the position and in pursuit of elsewhere against the British or the French. But the possession of Verdun salient by the Germans is practically a necessary preliminary for the making of any other advance into France with hope of success. It will probably be seen that the enemy cannot burst thru the allied lines in the mating of gun and rifle cartridges lines in the western theatre of the war, and failure to do this spells and in Bitlis itself a large depot of failure to win the war for the war, and failure to do this spells artillery munitions. But while the British navy rules the waves, Germany cannot hope to make a peace without surrendering. It is a chance that the German admiralty will be forced to send its tleet out to destruction in a final, despairing effort to win the war. No infantry attacks were made by the Germans on the French lines at Verdun during yesterday. The pause may have been caused by the delay bringing up reinforcements, the enemy not improbably having used up the quarter of a million fresh men that he threw into the fight in the middle last week. An explanation of the cession of ground by the French is furnished by the statement that the Germans are using burning liquid proeral court martial. octors, which shoot flames 60 to 90 feet, and burn soldiers who come in contact with them to a crisp. PETROGRAD, March 5 .-- The Russians reported in Sunday night's com-munique that their scouts on the front of General Ivanoff have occupied an advanced trench of the enemy near the bridge head in the Mika.uche re-gion, northwest of Uscieczko, on the Dniester River. Three counter-attacks of the enemy who attempted to regain this trench were repulsed. The Russians took the method of exploding 14 mines near Illoukst to inform the enemy that their supplies of munitions are growing more plentiful. In the terrific struggle for the possession of these craters, the Russians occupied six of them solidly and in another crater, they have surrounded the Ger-mans in half of a demolished block-house. A German attack on Alsevitch Village, six and a half miles east of the Baronovichi railway station, was repulsed by Russian fire. Near Zamuschine in the Dniester region, the Russians fired a mine which demolished a portion of the enemy's barricades, and the crater and a number of advanced trenches were oc-sanctioned by Von Falkenhayen, chief of staff, whose word is absolute, and who is responsible solely to the kaiser.

The German admiralty announces that the German armed commerce raider Moewe has arrived safely in Wilhelmshaven after a cruise of several months, in which she sank 15 British vessels and laid mines, one of which, the enemy says, sank the King Edward VII. She had on board many passengers and crews of her maritime victims, whom, in defiance of international law and humanity, she had kept on board, on the principle that German troops adopted of sending Belgian women and children in front of them as a screen and defence against allied fire. It is probable that the presence of these helpless people on the Moewe saved her from destruction by about 15 swift British cruisers which had been out scouring the seas for her, and her flight to a German port was probably occasioned by the closing in on her of these avengers. The retention of helpless people on board the Moewe, and the dastardly crime of laying mines on the high seas, bespeaks her commander a sa modern Captain Kidd, and spares one the necessity of paying him any compliments for alleged skilfulness as a seaman.

* * * * The British have been conducting severe fights with grenades in the craters which they recently won and retain to the north of Vermelles. The German artillery was active on Sunday about Loos and Ypres. The which they took the trenches which they took Friday from the Germans on the Ypres-Comines Canal.

Extensive movements of Russian troops in southern Bessarabia are reported from Bucharest. The Russians, who have thrown an advanced guard across the Dniester River at a village, may be on the point of attempting to push their advance into Bukowina and across the Carpathians. Scout observations are reported from the Dvinsk-Jacobstadt section of the front, and the usual exchange of fire is reported from the southern Galician front.

The Russian war office has issued a statement describing the capture of Bitlis, Turkish Armenia. This town was stormed with the bayonet, not a shot being fired, and the Turks who stood to resist the Russian soldiers were mostly all killed. A despatch from Athens says that it is believed that Bagdad will soon be captured. No information is given as to the manner in which it will fall, nor is any inkling given of the reasons for this prediction. . Other alarming reports have begun to filter thru concerning the internal condition of Turkey, which must be in a bad way after fighting four wars in a few years. These were: The Italian, the first Balkan, the Yemen, and the present campaign. The Turks have no more than nine millions of a population to draw on for soldiers, for the Greeks, Armenians and Syrians refuse to fight and take to the mountains of Asia Minor when any, attempt is made to conscript them. Turkey lost heavily in men in the Balkan war and in the Yemen campaigns, where whole battalions were killed off by the deadly climate in a few months. The Greeks have in Turkey evidently a widespread secret society which has rapid facilities for forwarding information to Athens.

a more mysterious part of the Athens message is that part reporting that the Turks are taking up the mines in the Dardanelles. Till further information is received, little by way of illumination can be said about it except that, perhaps, the Turks are rearranging their underwater defences in an endeavor to catch any allied submarines which may venture on a voyage to Constantinople.

power, yet not without the bloody baptism of fratricidal war. The peasantry of France, maddened beyond endurance by misery, whirl court and king and church into a red gulf of Revolution. Then from the smoke wreaths that encloud his cannons in the streets of Paris, arises the dazzling star of Napoleon, blazes across the heavens with meteoric splendor and sinks forever beneath the desolate marshes at Waterloo.

Watt invents the steam engine; Stephenson mounts it on wheels; Fulton instals it in a ship; Morse invents the electric telegraph; and the world begins to shrink to the proportions of a village. The ancient east may no longer bide in silent isolation behind its bristling walls. Perry leads an American fleet to Japan and, out-doing in haughtiness the haughty Shogun, opens a rich commerce to the western world.

Man becomes monarch of the earth. The air is no longer an unconquered element. The waters under the sea receive new denizens, strange, steel-clad monsters. But still nation masses strength against nation, mighty armaments confront each other in watchful preparedness.

The rescued men said that the submarine, flying the Austrian flag, was met 130 miles from Cape Mattanan while the Giava was en route from Leghorn, Italy, to Greek ports. While the submersible gave no warning and did not visit the freighter, they stated passengers and crew were allowed to leave in three boats which after being rowed for five hours, met the Trevelvan, which rescued them. The Giava offered no resistance, the survivors said. They describe the submarine as a large one similar to that which sank the Ancona.

Despatches received yesterday from London and Leghorn, regarding the Giava's fate announced that a British steamer had picked up 54 survivors at sea and that the Giava carried no

Holding London Down to a Three Point Win at Forest City. City Playgrounds won the junior On-tario basketball championship. for the second successive year by holding Lon-don "Ys" team on the London floor on saturday night to a score of 25-22. The Playgrounds won on their floor in To-ronto the week before, 42-30, and so win the round by nine points, or with a total score of 64-55. — Tose checking was the feature of the score of 7-6 in favor of the Playgrounds. Grant and Campbell for the "Y" were high scorers with three baskets, while Crilly and Burbidge for the Playgrounds. Grant and Ramsay was almost perfect, and to them and Harrison at centre, too much praise cannot be given. — The team winning the championship than that of last year. Four of the present team will be eligible for the same series next year.
