Not Sisters

Now and again you see two women passing down the street who look like sisters. You are astonished to learn that they are mother and daughter, and you realize that a woman at forty or forty-five ought to be at the head and hairest. Why is it so?
The general health of women is so intimately associated with the local health of the essentially feminine organ that there can be no red cheeks and round form where there is femal weakness.

Women who have suffered from this trouble have found prompt relief and cure in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It gives vigor and vitality to the organs of womanhood. It clears the complexion, brightens the eyes and reddens the cheeks.

No alcohol, or habit-forming drugs is contained in "Favorite Prescription." Any sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. Every letter is held as strictly confidential, and answered in a plain envelope. Address: World Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R.V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N.Y.

It now appears that the Mexican Revolution is a very real thing, and at the bottom the grievances of the people have to do with the land question. Senor Limator is quoted in a recent dispatch from Paris to the effect that the great estates in the north which have been passed from family to family must be distributed among the people.

A Richibucto School Teacher

Once a Dyspeptic—Now Well,
Thanks to Father Morrissy's No. 11.

Richibucto, N. B., Nov. 17th 1909.
Father Morrissy Med. Co., Ltd.,
I have been teaching school for upwards of thirty years, during the last two, my life of which I have suffered seriously with stomach trouble, indigestion and dyspepsia.
I have tried many remedies, and while I would get temporary relief from some of them, yet the old trouble would return, and with it the sufferings only known to the chronic dyspeptic.
Last year I had made up my mind to abandon my profession, feeling that in any condition I could neither do justice to myself or to the many pupils under my charge. A friend suggested to me that I try Father Morrissy's No. 11 Stomach Tablets; I did so, and have continued to use them with the result that my stomach trouble is cured—my indigestion and dyspepsia gone and I feel as well as I ever did.

I have, thanks to the Tablets, been able to continue in my profession, and feel that I am once more enjoying my work and am able to give justice to the fifty-four pupils under my care.
Yours Gratefully,
(Signed) MARY CHERVAL.

Are you one of the many thousands who, like Miss Cherval, are prevented from doing their best work, or really enjoying life, by stomach trouble?
If you are you cannot do better than take Father Morrissy's No. 11 Tablets.

Each No. 11 Tablet, when dissolved in the stomach, will digest 1 1/2 pounds of food—a good, hearty meal—so that no matter how weak your stomach may be No. 11 Tablets will enable you to get the nourishment out of your food and build up your strength, while the stomach, thus relieved, recovers its vigor, so, a box at your dealer's or from the Father Morrissy Medicine Co., Ltd., Montreal, Que.

Vital Problems Must Be Faced.

When Dr. J. A. Macdonald of the Toronto Globe is announced to speak one move along the lines of least resistance, that never makes for freedom and stability.

What is conserved for the people here is lost by giving away some franchise rights there. Education for useful service is thwarted by the access to opportunity being blocked by special privileges. Advantages which the God of Nations lavished without stint, in the soil, in the stream, in the mine, in the water-power, in the forest, have been alienated from the people to make a few millionaires. The question which needs to be put to the men of wealth, and which will be put in the new day of just dealing, is not, "how much money have you got?" but "how did you get it?" Sq. Deal.

The Last Of A Dying Race.

Normally the Tehuelches, as the Patagonian Indians are called, are a peaceful and kindly people, yet they are impulsive capable of strong prejudices, very revengeful, and often with good reason suspicious of strangers. They are not to be trifled with, and when under the influence of drink are brutal and dangerous. They show love for their children and wives and kindness to their old people. They are divided into numerous tribes or groups, each having its own chief or cacique, upon whom the burdens of government rest but lightly. The cacique of the tribe to whom this village belonged was then at another camp. They believe in a good and evil spirit, whom they propitiate, and have many stories, myths, and superstitions connected with the sun, moon, and stars, while the slaying of horses and drinking of blood form a conspicuous part in their superstitions, birth, marriage, and death ceremonies, many of which are most repulsive.

When Magellan first passed through the strait there were perhaps no less than 10,000 Patagonians roaming from the Rio Negro to the Strait, while today, driven back from the littoral to the high pampas and the four-hills of the Andes, altogether they would probably not total over 500.

Making Sawdust Valuable.

The processes for making use of sawdust that have been worked out in France and Norway in the past few years have proved of immense value to these countries. The making of money out of sawdust not only produces wealth from the material, but keeps it out of the streams and thus adds nearly one hundred per cent to the chances for fish doing well in the fresh waters and furnishing more economical food for the people.

The French have perfected a process that extracts 27 gallons of high grade alcohol from a ton of sawdust, 42 pounds of acetic acid and lesser material of value, and leaves enough wood to make briquets that are sold for about $10 a ton because they are extra fine for making fires. All that pays a large profit for handling the sawdust, and there is no waste material to throw into streams. In Norway they make wood flour of the

Humor and Philosophy

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

A MAN thinks the cool, bright days of autumn were made for football. A woman knows they were intended for house-keeping.

A widow says husbands are like automobiles—you are apt to use one up learning how to run them.

The smarties' mission on earth must be to teach others self control.

None is so poor as the man who is touched for a ten.

If every one voted a bore were to hang himself, who would be left to view the catastrophe?

When a man never worries there is usually a woman around somewhere who does the job for him.

A man is always sensitive about his age till he gets old enough to be proud of it.

If our own follies looked as ridiculous to us as the follies of others look to us we would soon grow wise.

However, all the fellows up in the air are not aviators.

Not being able to make a bit is responsible for most of us missing many a good time.

The Difference That Makes. I used to think the man a crank who talked a way about his kid with language undergrowth as rank as any in a forest.

But with one of my own on hand His angle I can understand. I own he wanted me a bit. Remaining so close smart and bright. You ought to know what he meant. I listen with a strange delight. And how he opened up a way. One on my duty to relate.

I spot him half a block away And wait for coming without fear. And he is what I want to hear. And he will have to listen then. My kiddy talk to hear again.

It gives to life a different twist When you a wee one have to hold. Or childish stories, new and old. The while you wait a chance to get. A few ones in about your pet.

Yes, on the whole, you like to know The father of a baby ought. Who pours on you the overflow Of baby songs day and night. But he must fairly play the game—Half time for him, for you the same.

Apology in The British Navy.

(Cleveland Plain Dealer.) Official reparation is a blossom of tedious growth. An English youth, a cadet at the Osborne Royal Naval College, was expelled from that institution in 1908, charged with theft and forgery. He asserted his innocence, and his father believed him. Lawyers were engaged and an independent investigation conducted. With the new evidence thus secured, the attorneys asked the Admiralty to reopen the case and permit the boy to be represented by counsel.

The Admiralty refused this request but announced that another inquiry would be held. Then the father's attorneys demanded that the case be referred to an impartial referee, and this, too was refused. The last resort was a petition in right which was prepared and received the King's sanction. Six months later the Attorney General representing the Admiralty, declared the petition was bad in substance and law. Eight months afterwards, however, the case came to trial, the Admiralty winning on a technicality. Then an appeal was taken and allowed and the case came up for trial, last July, here the boy triumphed the Attorney General, admitting that he had committed neither forgery nor theft. But this was merely an admission, not an apology. Then the father's lawyers wrote to the Admiralty demanding an official apology worth $27,000 recompense.

Here was a case of unparalleled assurance. For the admiralty to apologize to a mere boy was quite serious enough, but to pay damages, was out of the question.

Nevertheless, the Secretary of the Navy had apologized in the Commons and a formal tender of recompense will be made.

The mills of justice grind slowly, more especially when they grind backwards.

Let me think about it. I have been trying to decide whether I should try to win a prize, or if I should try to win a prize.

I have just decided that the saddest part in the world is that of a man who marries in his dress and then has to work for the purpose of earning his own spending money.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Mean Trick. We waited for the bride and groom to start their trip. There was enough rice in the room to make a ship.

Each fellow held a rusty shoe behind a trick. And there were ribbons, pink and blue, upon the neck.

The bride and groom, they held aloof, to our dismay. Then took an airship from the roof And got away.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Geometric Finance. "Do you call that merger you effected for those monopolists a square deal?"

"Certainly," replied Mr. Dustin Stax, with a chuckle. "It represented a quarter of our greatest and most far-reaching enterprises. Since the deal has four corners in it it must be square."—Washington Star.

The wise man carries two kinds of cigars, one kind that he himself smokes and the other that he gives to people who bore him.

It is like a man to buy his wife a dress and select a blond dress for a brunette woman.

Salesclerks are apt to prefer male customers because they are such easy marks.

The small boy's ambition has shifted from baseball to aviation.

Some of our most upright legislators are those who never let the tip of a tribe pulling them into oblique courses.

Look out for the woman who feels it her duty to tell you the mean things that Mrs. Brown said about you.

It takes a great mind to prefer criticism to praise.

Any man can advise another how to build a house, but no man can build one that will suit himself a week.

Face a problem firmly and you can sometimes stare it out of countenance.

He who is gifted with a strong sense of his own importance is never at a loss for a grievance.

On Getting. Get money, run the saying—At once, without hesitating. But in the getting frantic Be sure you do not make The mistake of not making That keeps a man awake.

It is pleasant to have plenty. To make things come across. So you may be a plenty. And never see the work. But if the world is limited It isn't you who earn.

As soon as you are wanted. Ad you as he pointed. To have the work to burn. A consequence than can slumber. In hours to come the eyes. You may see that gutter. As something of a prize. One that is not really. Your many ways to rap. Even you would lose a rap.

Get money, that's the ticket. But have a little care. When from the man you pick it That you are on the square. True peace that is coming. It comes in a steady stream. When you are getting staid The steady state of life.

Friends No Longer. "Jones doesn't speak to Brown now." "Is that a fact?" "True as breathing." "Money matters?" "No, babies." "How is that?" "Brown's baby can climb up and say 'love!'"

"The Jones' baby, the same age, can just creep."

Nothing Doing. "Temperament never fools with me my-h."

"Indeed?"

"No."

"Are you so stern and unrelenting?"

"Not at all. I throw up my hands at once and it goes on its way."

Advertise in Greetings.

Action has had a street-flushing with peer, while many dry and municipalities are vainly crying out for water. Favors have been unevenly distributed.

The anti-reciprocity Press seems to forget that many housewives had pressed by the increasing cost of living are reading eagerly the articles on the fall in prices predicted by the opponents of reciprocity if free trade in natural products comes into effect. X.

The clearing off of some eight million dollars of Canadian debt, the balance remaining on a twenty million loan of 1874 without the issue of new debentures is an achievement which must further strengthen Canada's position in the eyes of the financial world.

Mr. Charles Cummings, the builder of the Lumisden Building, recently purchased the block of land No. 462-464 466 Young St., Toronto, paying for it $150,000. The property is 126 feet deep to the lane and has a frontage of 60 feet making the price about $3,500 a foot. It is supposed he will build a skyscraper on the property.

A recent dispatch from Berlin states that an increase in the dog tax from $5 to $7.50 resulted in the immediate slaughter of 700 dogs.

No doubt the people of Berlin understand what has caused the sudden scarcity of dogs in their city. In Ontario people have not yet learned what it is that causes the scarcity of houses.—Square Deal.

Profitable Ownership.

(Kingston Standard.) Lethbridge, Alta. has made so large a profit out of its municipal electric light and power plant that it has reduced the civic tax rate 25 per cent. The next profit of the plant for the last year was over $30,000. Kingston's plant has not done quite so well, but the profit has been considerable. Municipal management is not always a success, but Lethbridge and Kingston are examples of it.

The first session of the Parliament of the Union of South Africa is over. It occupied over three months, and did a large amount of work, but of course, only a beginning was made, for the large and important questions looming up in the country require time for serious consideration. From what was done and what was said there is reason to believe the union will result in general good. A measure which excited much discussion was one dealing with a question that is coming more to the front in Canada. The Immigrants' Restriction Act, by which any person could be excluded who fails to write to the satisfaction of the immigration officer fifty words dictated in a language selected by the officer, was withdrawn as unsatisfactory, but will be presented again at the next session in another form. The complaint in South Africa is against East Indians S. J. Globe.

Standing For Progress.

(New York Times, Dem.) The Canadian Premier and the American President are alike and equally agree that on this reciprocity issue they will not surrender, or dodge, or compromise in the miserable manner which has so long baffled progress in so many nations. The world over, people are sick of politics full of sound and fury and signifying nothing but disappointment. In no country is there a more eager desire than in the United States for the selection of some one issue and a settlement of it as the preliminary to attacking the next most important thing. There are at least as many campaigns in the freedom of trade as there were in the production of prosperity by taxation. The bait was of the polls in the immediate future will be between the taxpayers and the untaxers. The issue has been ripe since the days of McKinley and Garfield. Let us make it his own.

A Bad Stomach.

Mrs. S. Keast, of Clarksburg, Ont. says: "A bad stomach trouble that had bothered me for years, baffled and puzzled skilled physicians, was nicely relieved by Mi-o-na. My food would not digest, fermenting in my stomach forming a gas that gave me untold suffering and pain and also made me weak, nervous, irritable and unable to rest. Since using Mi-o-na I can go to bed at night and sleep and wake up in the morning refreshed. I cannot speak too highly of Mi-o-na."

The dyspeptic nervous or otherwise, who does not give Mi-o-na a trial is losing an opportunity to regain health, for Mi-o-na tablets are guaranteed to cure dyspepsia and all stomach disturbances, such as vomiting, pregnancy, sea or car sickness and the stomach sickness after excessive indulgence. In an interesting interview with the editor of the Toronto Globe, the Hon. Dr. Finlay, Minister of Justice of the Government of New Zealand, who with the Prime Minister, Sir, Jos. Ward, was on his way to the Conference of the Colonial Premiers in London, gave some interesting information regarding the solving of the vexed land question in New Zealand.

With only a limited area, and with private estates of 200,000 acres devoted to sheep raising and supporting only a few shepherds, the situation grew up akin to that in Britain.

The Government "reclaimed" much of the land, leased it to small farmers, loaned capital upon it, provided needed facilities, and conveniences, and in the end disproved every argument of the obstructionist by showing wide spread prosperity and trebled land values. One-sixth of all New Zealand is now held by the Crown and will not be sold, but only leased in small holdings at reasonable rentals and revealed after sixty-six years.

Absolutely and in every particular our land policy has been justified, said Mr. Finlay, and he did not refuse the refrain of the campaign song of the British radicals, "God made the land for the people."

The policy of the Government of New Zealand, as Dr. Finlay describes it, is very different from that of Ontario. "The policy of our Government," says Dr. Finlay, "is not to delay Legislation until unrest here, or clamor there, or the pressure of half-instructed public opinion venter, crowds us into action. Our plan is to lead. There came a time when it was plain that New Zealand was face to face with a crisis. Things could not go on as they had been going, without revolt and reaction. The ideal was received of what kind of place New Zealand ought to be and it has been the aim of our policy to work steadily and determinedly towards that ideal. We have six million acres and one million people, and our purpose is to make each of those acres yield the utmost good for the people, and to secure to each of those people access to all the opportunities which life in New Zealand affords."

Access to opportunity, as Dr. Finlay understood it, meant access to the land as source of wealth, access to education free and efficient as essential to the right use of opportunity; access to wholesome conditions of labor and just reward; access to justice, such as gives the poorest court as fair a chance before the court as the wealthiest corporation; access to capital at moderate rates of interest and easy terms of payment; access to all the conveniences provided by railways, telegraphs, telephones, and other public services at the minimum cost to the state, and access to insurance against accident and a pension for old age.—Square Deal.

The city of Prince Rupert, British Columbia, recently paid to the Prince Rupert Power and Light Company $15,018.75 for the water and power rights of Woodworth Lake and its outlet to Shastan Lake.

The important thing to note is that the city pays not for the privilege of using one of the undeveloped natural resources of the country, and that the city paid the money not to the British Columbia Government, but to a private corporation.

THE BARRIER

"Nobody else can understand but me. I know how it is. I had even a harder thing to bear, for you'll know she's happy at least, while I'm— His voice trembled, but after a pause he continued: "They neither of them understand what you've done for them, for it was you that brought her back. But some time they'll learn how great their debt is and thank you, if I take them years and years, however, and when they do they'll tell their babies of you. Please, so that your name will never die. I loved her mother, but I don't think I could have done what you did."

"She's pretty hard 'tine, for sure, but I ain't 'bout nothin' Dorset none w'en I'm 'bout it. No, I'm 'bout 'ber all de tam. She's 't' gal, an' I'm 'long, strong feller w'at don' matter much an' w'at ain't know much, 'cep 'sizin' an' lovin' her. I'm see for sure now dat I ain't 't' for her. I'm being rough, 't' little feller w'at can't read, an' she's de beam of sunlight w'at blind my eyes."

"If I was a fool I'd say you'd forget in time, but I've lived my life in the open, and I know you won't. I didn't. I don't want to forget." The brown man cried bitterly. "Le bou Dieu would not let us forget. It's all I've got to keep w'it me w'en I'm lookin' for my new country."

"You're not goin' to look for that new country any more," Gale replied. "Today," said the other quietly, "dis afternoon. De blood in me is callin' for travel, John. I'm drivin' an' dis place five year dis fall, an' dat's long tam for voyager. I'm hungry for bear de f'x in de woods an' de massive blow at sundown de here, for see de campfire trouge de brush w'en I come from trap de fox an' den little wild fellers. I want to smell smoke in de dusk. My wif's 't' little here, so I'm piddle away today, an' I'll 't' dat place dis tam, for sure. She's over dere."

"He raised his long arm and pointed to the dim mountains that hid the valley of the Koyukuk, the valley that called good men and strong men after year and took them to itself. "Have you heard the news from the creek? Your claims are blank. Your man have quit." The Frenchman shook his head sadly, then smiled a wistful little smile. "Waal, it's better I lose dan you or Necla. I ain't de lucky kid, dat's all, an' after all, w'at good to me is rich go' mine? I ain't got no use for money any more."

They stood in the doorway together, two rugged, stalwart figures, different in blood and birth and every other thing, yet brothers without whom the ebb and flow of the fair places had thrown together and now drew apart again. And they were sad, these two, for this love was deeper than comes to other people, and they knew this was farewell, so they remained thus side by side, two dumb, sorrowful men until they were addressed by a person who hurried from the town.

He came as an apparition bearing the voice of "No Creek! Lee, the mingling king, but in no other way showing sign or symbol of their old friend. Its style of face and curious outfit were utterly foreign to the mine, for he had been beset with the robust, unkept growth of many years, tanned to a leathery hue and marked perched in the habit of a scarecrow, while this creature was shaven and clipped and curled, and the clothes it stood up in were of many startling hues. Its face was seamed so clean of whiskers as to be a pallid white, but the lack of adornment ended at this point, and the rest was overlaid wondrously, while from the center of the half brown, half white face the long, red nose of Lee ran out. Beside it rolled his lonesome eye, alive with excitement.

He came up with a strut, illuminating the landscape and inquired: "Well, how do I look?" "I'm darned if I know," said Gale. "But it's plum unusual." "These here shoes leak," said the spectacle, pulling up his lumpy trousers to display his tan footgear, "because they was made for dry gold. That's why they left the tops off, but they've got a nice, healthy color, ain't they? As a whole, it seems to me I'm sort of fifty. But I'm a plain man without conceit. Now let's proceed with the obsequies."

It was a very simple, unpretentious ceremony that took place inside the long, low house of logs, and yet it was a wonderful thing to the dark, shy man who hearkened so breathlessly beside the man who had singled out. When they had done he turned and took her reverently in his arms and kissed her before them all. Then she went and stood beside Gale and the red wife who was no wife and said simply: "I am very happy."

The old man stooped and for the first time in her memory pressed his lips to hers, then went out into the sunlight, where he might be alone with himself and the memory of that

A blanketed man upon a stretcher carried by a doctor and a priest.

The discord of the wedding was borne by Father Barnum, who went alone to the cabin where the girl's father lay, entering with trepidation. He was there a long time alone with Stark, and when he returned to Gale's house he would answer no questions.

"He is a strange man, a wonderful, strange man—unrepentant and wicked. But I can't tell you what he said. Have a little patience and you will see know."

The mail boat, which had arrived an hour after the mission boat, was ready to continue its run when just as it blew a warning blast down the street of the camp came a procession so strange for this land that men stopped, eyed it curiously and whispered among themselves. It was a reluctant man upon a stretcher, carried by a doctor and a priest. The face was muffled so that the others could not make it out, and when they mouthed they received no answer from the carriers, who pursued their course impassively down the runway to the water's edge and up the gangplank to the deck. When the boat had gone and the last faint cough of its towering stacks had died away Father Barnum turned to his friends.

"He has gone away, not for a day but for all time. He is a strange man, and some things he said I could not understand. At first I feared greatly, for when I told him what had occurred of Necla's return and of her marriage—he became so outraged I thought he would burst upon his wounds and die from his very fury. But I talked a long, long time with him, and gradually I came to know somewhat of his queer, disordered soul. He could not bring himself to face defeat in the eyes of men or to see the knowledge of his life and that of his enemies would search him out to take advantage of him. He said the only decent thing he could do would be to never to the daughter he had never known to that happiness he had never experienced and wished me to tell her that she was very much like her mother who was the best woman in the world."

CHAPTER XIX.

THE CALL OF THE WINDS.

THERE WERE MIXED JOYFUL and lamentation in the household of John Gale this afternoon. Molly and Johnny were in the throes of an overwhelming sorrow the noise of which might be heard from the barracks to the Indian village. They were starting of tears, at a rule, but when they did give to weep they published it abroad, yelling with utter abandon, their black eyes glistened, their mouths distended into squares, from which came out a measure of sound as to rick the ears and burden the air heavily with sadness. Necla was going away—this was particularly painful. They had found the French Canadian at the river with their father loading his canoe, and they had asked him whether he feared. When the meaning of his words struck home they looked at each other in dismay; then, bred as they were to mask emotion, they joined hands and trudged silently back up the bank with filling eyes and chin-a-quirer until they gained the rear of the house. Here they sat down all forlorn and began to weep bitterly and in an ascending crescendo.

"What's the matter with you tikes, anyhow?" inquired the lieutenant. He had always filled them with a speechless awe. He was a nice man, they had both agreed long ago, and very splendid to the eye, but he was nothing like Poleon, who was one of them, only somewhat bigger.

"Come, now! Tell me all about it," the soldier insisted. "Has something happened to the three-legged puppy?" Molly denied the occurrence of any such catastrophe.

"Then you've lost the little shly rifle that shoots with air?" But Johnny dispeled the horrible suspicion by jutting the formidable weapon out of the grass behind him.

"Well, there isn't anything else bad enough to cause all this outlay of anguish. Can't I help you out?" "Poleon's gone away," said Johnny. "Now, that's too bad, of course," the young man assented. "But think what nice things he'll bring you when he comes back."

"He ain't comin' back!" wailed the little girl and, being a woman, yielded again to her weakness, unattended. "Burrell tried to extract a more detailed explanation, but this was as far as their knowledge ran. So he sought out the Canadian and found him with Gale in the store, a scanty pile of food and ammunition on the counter between them.

"Poleon," said he, "you're not going away?" "Yes," said Doret. "I'm takin' 't' trip."

"Oh, but you can't," cried Burrell. "I-I— He paused awkwardly, while down the breeze came the faintest of the two little Gales. "Well, I feel just as they do," he murmured in the direction of the sound. "I wanted you for a friend, Doret. I hate to lose you."

"I ain't never got my satisfy yet, so I'm pass on—all de tam pass on Mebbe dis trip I'll de place."

"I'm sorry—because—well, I'm a self-sort of cuss—and— I uttrel pulled up blushing, with a strong man's display of shame at his own emotion. "I owe all my happiness to you, old man. I can't thank you neither of us can. We shall never live long enough for that. But you must go without knowing that I feel more than I'll ever have words to say."

He was making it very hard for the Frenchman, whose heart was aching already, with a dull, unending pain. And then, as if he were not tired sufficiently, the girl herself came flying in.

"What's this I hear?" she cried. "A-John, she says." She saw the tall, pale pile on the counter, and her face grew white. "Then it's true? Oh, Poleon!"

He smiled and spoke cheerily. "Yes, I been thinkin' 'bout dis trip long tam. 'It's the wanderlust," murmured Burrell to himself. "He'll never rest."

"What a child you are!" cried Necla, half angrily. "Don't you remember that roving spirit and settle down like a man?" She laid her hand on his arm appealingly. "Haven't I told you there isn't any 'fin country?"

He laughed aloud, for all the world as if the sun were bright and the fret for adventure were still keen in him. Then, picking up his lance, he said: "Dere's no use argue w'it. Can'ten man. Mebbe some day I come piddle back round de ben down youder an' you hear me singin' dese chawson. But now de day she's too fine, de river she's laugh too loud, an' de birds she's sing too purty for Frenchman to stop on shore. Ba goah, I'm glad."

He began to hum, and they heard him singing all the way down to the river bank as if the spirit of youth and hope and gladness were not dead within him.

"Chante, rossignol, chante! Toi qui a le couer gai, Tu as le couer a rose, Mai j'ai a-ta pleurer. He's a wanderlust, I t'ame. Jamais je ne t'oublis."

"Sing, little bird, oh, sing away! You with the voice so high and gay! Yours is a heart that laughter cheers, Mine is a heart that's full of tears. Long have I loved, I love no yet, Leave her I can, but not forget. A moment later they heard him expostulating with some one at the water's edge, and then a child's treble rose on high.

"No, no," he said. "I'm goin', too. I'm goin', too—o-o-o."

"Hey! John Gale!" called Poleon. "Come 'ere! Ba goah, you better 'ere. I can't be no no no, I can't be no no no." When they appeared on the bank above him, he continued, "Look 'ere w'at I 't' on my buttress, and heid up the wriggling form of Johnny Gale. "He's stow hisself away under dem blankets. Sare! He's had feller dis man-dog pay for bees ticket at all: he's reet 't' off me!"

It took the efforts of Necla and the trader combined to tear the lad from the Frenchman, and even then the fat deed was accomplished only at the cost of such wild acclaim and evidence of undying sorrow that little Molly came hurrying from the house, her round face stained and tearful, her mouth an inverted crescent. She had some to the lame puppy for comfort and now stretched him absent-mindedly in her arms, clenching him to her breast so tightly that his tongue lolled out and his three legs protruded stiffly, rawing an aimless pantomime. When Johnny found that no hope remained he smiled his demonstrations of emotion and, as befitted a stout hearted gentleman of the woods, gave a final present to his friends. He took his little air gun and gave it into Poleon's hands against that black night when the bears would come, and no man ever made a greater sacrifice. Doret picked him up by the elbows and kissed him again and again, then set him down gently, at which Molly scrambled forward and without word or presentation speech gave him her heart's first treasure. She held out the three-legged puppy, for a gun and a dog should ever go together; then, being of the womankind aforesaid, she began to cry as she kissed her pet goodly on its cold, wet nose.

"What's dis?" said Poleon, and his voice quavered, for these childish fingers tore at his heartstrings terribly.

"He's a very brave doggie," said the little girl. "He will scare de bears away." And then she became dissolved in tears at the anguish her offering cost her.

The time had come for the last good-by—that awkward moment when human hearts are full and spoken words are empty. Burrell gripped the Frenchman's hand. He was grateful, but he did not know.

"Good luck and better hunting," he said, "a heavy purse and a light heart for you always, Poleon. I have learned to love you."

"I want you to be good husband, m'sieu. Dat's de bes' 'ting I can wish for you."

Gale spoke to him in patois, and all he said was: "May you not forget my son."

Burrell tried to extract a more detailed explanation, but this was as far eyes. There was no need. The man stooped and, taking both his children by the hand, walked slowly toward the house.

"Dis tam I'll fin' it for sure," smiled Poleon to Necla.

Her eyes were shining through the tears, and she whispered fervently: "I hope so, brother. God love you—always."

It was grief at losing a playmate, a dear and well-beloved companion. He knew it well, and he was glad now that he had never said a word of love to her. It added to his pain, but it lightened hers, and that had ever been his wish. He gazed on her for a long moment, taking in that blessed image which would ever live with him.

"Godsdy, 't' gal," he said, then dropped his hand and entered his canoe. With one great stroke he drove it out into the flood, then heeded away toward the mist and colors of the distant hills, where the oars were calling to him. He turned for one last look and flung his paddle high; then, fearing lest they might see the tears that came at last unblinded, he began to sing:

"Chante, rossignol, chante! Toi qui a le couer gai, Tu as le couer a rose, Mai j'ai a-ta pleurer."

He sang long and lustily, keeping time to the dip of his flashing paddle and defying his aching heart. After all, was he not a voyager and life but a song and a tear and then a dream or two?

"I wish I might have known him better," sighed Meade Burrell as he watched the receding form of the boatman.

I hope some time he will be happy.

"No, no," he said. "I would have loved him as we do," said Necla, "and you would have missed him as we will."

"I hope some time he will be happy." "As happy as you, my soldier?" "Yes, but that he can never be," said her husband, "for no man could love as I love you."

"Yours is a heart that laughter cheers, Mine is a heart that's full of tears. Long have I loved, I love no yet, Leave her I can, but not forget. came the voice of the slinger far down the stream.

And thus Poleon of the great heart went away.

THE END.

No Linguist. "How are you coming on with your new auto?" "Pretty fair." "Understand it yet?" "Not altogether. It speaks a simple spitting language, and I haven't appropriated all of the words as yet."

The Waiter. "All things come round to him who waits." "Don't you believe it?" "No." "No. They have abolished tips."

Why? "Can you sing?" "Yes." "But you never do." "No." "Why not?" "If I were to do so all the other singers would be silenced."

Modern Ways. "Will you marry me?" "Let me see. I can't tell just now." "Why not?" "I must first look at my date book. Thanks, no; I shan't be able to do so this year, but perhaps may be able to do so next."

Exception. "The whole is greater than a part, is that we fire the cell. It may be true in books and art, it's not so in a well."

The tariff relief agreement is opposed not for what is in it, but for what it is supposed to lead to. This is to be expected. Opponents do not know what is in it, but have unlimited imaginations regarding direful consequences. X.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. During the past year of great prosperity, according to the census Monthly for January, the average wages for farm help have increased by $1 25 a month!

The prices asked for land in Toronto advanced much more rapidly than that. The revenues from Crown lands in England today amount to two million six hundred and fifty thousand dollars. When Queen Victoria surrendered the hereditary revenues of the Crown for life their annual value did not nearly equal the grant of one million nine hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars which Parliament granted to the Sovereign Lady as her civil list. The increase is mainly due to the increase of land values in the city of London.

In the city of London alone the Crown holds 4,250 houses with a combined rental of over $1,500,000 a year. Besides these the Crown owns his Majesty's Theatre which brings in a ground rent of over $20,000, and the land on which the Holborn restaurant is built which pays a ground rent of over $100,000 a year. There is also a huge block of business buildings which brings in a rental of $35,000.

The Crown also owns the beautiful new forest which, though the rent derived from it is only a few hundred dollars a year, would realize a gigantic sum put up for sale.

When we remember that originally the whole land of England was originally held by the Crown, we see how a wiser administration through the centuries would have given the present government almost unlimited revenues without a penny of taxation. X.

Distressing Headaches

Headaches are largely the result of disordered kidneys.

Mrs. Hall, 84 Flora Street, St. Thomas, Ont. says: "I suffered for years with headaches of a most distressing nature. They would come on me suddenly, and would last for days at a time. These attacks usually accompanied by spells of dizziness that would leave me unable to tend to my house duties. My back was weak and caused me much suffering through the night. I had doctored for years but all to no avail. Nothing benefited me and my condition was gradually becoming worse. I learned of Booth's Kidney Pills. One box gave me a complete and lasting cure. I have not had a headache or dizzy spell since and I feel like a new person."

Booth's Kidney Pills are sold by all druggists, 50c. box, under a guarantee to refund your money if they fail to relieve any disease having its origin in the kidneys or bladder. Postpaid from the R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Port Erie, Ont. Sold and guaranteed by J. Sutton Clark.

Ottawa, May 10. A bulletin of the Census Office issued today makes the following report on the crops and live stock of Canada.

The seeding and growing season for the whole of Canada has opened late this year, and the month of April has been marked by hard frosts. But May has been favorable to cultivation of the land, and the rainfall has been sufficient for healthy vegetation.

Fall wheat, which is grown chiefly in Ontario and Alberta, showed an average condition of 82 per cent. at the end of April, being 89 per cent in Alberta and 81 per cent in Ontario. In Ontario however the April frosts were destructive in some regions; and from 12 to 34 per cent of the area sown has been reported as winter-killed. The central counties, north of Lake Ontario, suffered worst, the average loss as reported being 34 per cent. In the western counties 27 per cent of the area in crop has been destroyed. In the southern counties and districts 12.6 per cent; and in the eastern counties, between St. Lawrence and Ottawa rivers, 15 per cent. For the area of Canada winter killed is reported 21 per cent, and the per cent condition is 82.

About 12 1-2 per cent of the clover was heaved out by the spring frosts, and the average condition of hay and clover at the end of April was 89 per cent. Alberta shows better than any other part of Canada, its average being 94 1-2 per cent. Nova Scotia comes next, with 93.75; and in Quebec, British Columbia and Saskatchewan the condition is over 90. In Ontario it is 86 and in Manitoba 85 per cent.

The percentage of total seeding completed at the end of April was 21.35 in Quebec, 44 in Ontario, 47 in Manitoba, 47.30 in Saskatchewan, 66.81 in Alberta and 76.90 in British Columbia.

The Maritime Provinces had scarcely made a beginning of seeding operations at the end of April, and in Quebec barely one fourth of the spring wheat, oats and barley were sown. In Ontario 51 per cent of the spring wheat was in the ground, 44 per cent of the oats and 42 1-2 per cent of the barley.

The report on the condition of live stock is good for all the Provinces, being 95 for horses, 92.43 for milch cows, 90.56 for other cattle, 93.32 for sheep and 94.51 for swine. Alberta is below 90 for horses, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia for other cattle, and Alberta and British Columbia for sheep; but generally the condition ranges about 90 per cent.

Obituary

On Thursday evening, 11th May, Jas. Ash of Elmcroft, parish of St. George, peacefully passed away after an illness of some weeks. The deceased, who was nearly eighty-five years of age, was one of the oldest inhabitants of the village and has resided there all his life. His wife died in February last after a very brief illness, aged eighty-one years and he did not long survive the shock of her loss. Mr. Ash was married sixty-one years ago and is survived by one sister residing at Elmcroft, two sons, one living in Minnesota and the other with whom he made his home at Elmcroft. There are also three daughters living, two in U. S. and one at Bonny River. One daughter died eight years ago, he also leaves eight grand-children and ten great grand children.

The interment took place at the cemetery at Second Falls on Monday, 15th May, at the pastor of the Baptist church there, Rev. Mr. McPhee officiated.

The deceased was a man who stood high in the estimation of the community, where he spent his long life and has been a consistent member of the Baptist church for many years.

"Earth to earth and dust to dust. Calmly now the words we say, Leaving him to sleep in trust Till the Resurrection day. Father, in thy gracious keeping, Leave me now Thy Servant sleeping."

Work Of Prisoners.

Toronto, May 2.-Now that all the prison labor contracts have expired the government is confronted with the problem of keeping the prisoners at Central prison employed.

At the new Central prison at Guelph several hundred men are employed in building operations, but those who have to remain in Toronto until the completion of the new building will make furniture. The samples sent to the buildings for inspection comprise very favorable without furniture which could be purchased. The prisoners will make desks, chairs, tables, filing cabinets and other furniture, which will be placed in the various public institutions in the province.

The agreement for better trade relations between Canada and the United States is likely to be a double blessing to Canada. Germany, it is now said, is preparing to make overtures for the removal of vexatious tariff obstructions so that Canadians and Germans may exchange commodities with greater freedom. Intelligent Canadians will not object to these prudent reductions in their taxation.

Ningara is attacked by power development at home and rivals abroad. Labrador and South Africa have greater catarracts, and British Guiana now publishes measurements of a catarract 829 ft. high and 400 ft. wide. If we are surpassed in catarracts we still have the world's only great reservoir of pure fresh water.

CEMENT MERGER SENSATION IN CHARGES OF SIR S. FLEMING.

Ottawa, May 12.—That over $13,000,000 per value of securities improperly passed into the hands of one man and his associates in the creation of the Canadian cement merger was the extraordinary charge made to the private bills committee today in a letter written by Sir Sandford Fleming one of the most prominent men in Canada, who is president of the International Portland Cement Company of Hull, and until recently honorary president of the Canada Cement Company, which is the title under which eleven of the leading cement companies in Canada were merged two years ago with a capital of $30,000,000, eleven millions of which was preferred.

The letter was addressed to the private bills committee and was a protest against the enactment of legislation authorizing the merger to substitute $11,000,000 debenture five and a half per cent stock for $11,000,000 seven per cent cumulative preference stock.

It was previously pointed out that the proposal was to make the debenture stock a first claim on the earnings of the company, and in that way displace the preference stock to the injury of the holders of that stock.

The cement merger was put through by W. M. Aitken, a young Canadian financier of Montreal who was elected to the British house of commons in the last general election as Unionist representative for Ashton-under-Lyne. He is the head of the Bond and Share Company of Montreal, which contracted for the securities of the eleven cement companies which enabled the merger to be made.

Sir Sandford, in his letter states that at a meeting of the Canada Cement Company three documents were laid before him. One was his resignation; one was a letter to Sir Wilfrid Laurier asking for investigation, and the other a circular letter he had sent to the directors.

"In these letters will be found evidence to establish that an extraordinary misappropriation of capital has been effected through an intermediary agency at the very inception of the Canada Cement Company, and that such misappropriation was effected by deliberate artifice under the guise of law," wrote Sir Sandford.

"Moreover, as results now demonstrate, the first act of wrong doing appears to have led to the necessity of seeking power from parliament to substitute five per cent debenture stock for seven per cent preference stock. It will be seen that large amounts have been appropriated and not accounted for."

Sir Sandford states that in the formation of the merger the appropriations consisted of the following securities of the Canada Cement Company: Bonds, $5,000,000; common stock, $15,000,000; preferred stock, $15,000,000; common stock, $15,400,000; a total of $29,998,400.

"The same agency paid on behalf of the merger: Cash, $1,770,000, and $14,827,250 securities in the purchase of $27,250 securities, total payment, face value, $16,597,250. Which deducted from the securities appointed by the intermediary agency leaves a balance face value of $27,467,250 which on behalf of the intermediary agency requires to be accounted for."

"Appreciating the great importance of these matters," continues Sir Sandford in his letter, "it is impossible not to feel that the circumstances outlined in the foregoing point very decidedly to the need, on behalf of the public, of a searching inquiry before any legislation is effected."

The communication came as a great surprise and created consternation among the promoters of the bill. In view of the seriousness of the allegation, the committee decided to take no further action upon the bill at the present time but at a later meeting consider what will be done respecting it and the letter of Sir Sandford Fleming.

The majority of the members of the committee have gone thoroughly into the case.

J. F. Orlé, K. C., of Ottawa, on behalf of the Canada Cement Company, maintained that the transaction had been legally and absolutely regular.—Ex.

Of course as is usual in such cases the other side sent forth counter charges and claim Sir Fleming was foiled in some of his schemes in the matter, and it looks as if may be a case of Rogues falling out. All large mergers have more or less graft and robbery in their make up and this appears to be a case of the promoter Aitken being so successful that he has got wreckless and went beyond even what his fellow schemers could stand for.

The Magician And The Bump In.

That the unlooked for thing will most times upset the most carefully laid plans is made evident by the following incident. A magician travelling through the West in the "good old days" stopped at a small town in Kansas. The feature of his entertainment was the passing of a coin into the centre of an apple. He used a marked half dollar and emphasized the trick by passing the coin into the pocket of one of his audience, whom he would invite on the stage. Of course this person had to be a confederate.

As he entered the town hall, where his performance was to take place, he noticed a tall, raw boned youth looking at the entrance.

"My boy," said he, "I will get you admittance and a seat in the front row this evening if you will promise to do as I tell you."

The youngster fairly jumped at this chance to see the show and was willing to agree to almost anything.

"I am a Magician," said the faker "and I need the services of a bright young man like you. I want you to put this marked half dollar in the right hand pocket of your trousers. When I invite one of the audience to come upon the stage you must be the one."

After giving explicit instructions as to when he should produce the coin the magician left the youngster at the door.

When the time came for coin trick the youngster was in his place in the front row and very interested in the performance. The magician had another confederate in the audience, who passed him when he called for it a coin marked as the one he had given to the boy. He passed the borrowed coin into the centre of the apple, cut the apple open and the coin dropped into his palm. Turning to his audience, he said:—

"Now, ladies and gentlemen, to wind up the entertainment this evening I will endeavor to perform for you an almost impossible feat in magic. I will invite one of you to come on to the stage and, standing ten feet away, I will drop the coin into his pocket."

He asked the youngster whom he had instructed to come upon the stage and said:—

"I have here a half dollar coin which I am going to put into your trousers pocket."

After going through the usual rigmorole of the faker of those days he turned to his audience and, smiling confidently said:—

"Now, to prove there is no deception, that I'm not a hypnotist and have no psychic influence over this boy, I will face the audience and the young man will kindly put his hand into his right hand pocket and produce the coin."

He did not notice the boy was very red and embarrassed and was slowly backing off toward the side of the stage, where he suddenly seemed to pluck up courage but one big red hand into his trousers pocket, and to the utter horror of the magician blurted out:—"Gee, mister, I've only got thirty cents of it left!"

Coronation Salute Throughout Empire.

Simultaneous World-Wide Salvo of Guns Not only in London not only in the British Isles, but also in every part of the greatest Empire the world has ever known, guns will boom simultaneously at the exact moment when the crown is placed upon the head of the king in Westminster Abbey on Thursday, June 22. The shouts of "Long live the King" as they resound through the Abbey will find an echo in the most distant parts of the world.

In the great cities of the self-governing Dominions, at every military station throughout the vast Indian Empire, and in small islands in many seas and oceans the triumphant boom and shout will be heard. Men of all colors and all races will join in an acclamation such as was never given to monarch before.

The Colonial Office has made a request to the Earl Marshal to be informed of the exact minute the crown will be placed upon the King's head, and the information, it is expected that the time will be within a few minutes of two o'clock, will be communicated by the Colonial Office to every part of the Empire so that arrangements for saluting the King can be made well in advance.

In those parts where it is day-time when it is two o'clock at Westminster guns will be fired, and in those places where it is night rockets or bombs will be let off. Taking two o'clock as the actual time when the King will be crowned, the coronation salutes will be given at the following hours in the places mentioned:

Impossible To Drown If Thus Garbed

Discovery Of German Given Remarkable Test In Montreal Water: Tank It Is A Silk Fabric.

Montreal, May 15.—To walk calmly into the water, completely dressed, and without the slightest fear of coming to grief has been made possible for those who do not swim as for those who do. A waist-coat that looks quite ordinary and is extraordinary only as far as the lining is concerned, will do the trick; or, if a coat suits the individual better he can have his every-day "sack" so made that if he happens to get upset while boating or washed overboard by a big wave while crossing the Atlantic he can "vie" himself to the water with a comfortable feeling that there is nothing for him to do but sit tight till he is picked up.

This was demonstrated here when a man made a painstaking endeavor to drown in the M. A. A. swimming tank. He was wearing down-proof clothes, however, and he found it impossible to do the trick.

This was the first demonstration in Canada of this style of clothing. The exhibition was a private one, only members of the association being present with the exception of a few representatives of the press.

Anyone who cared to experiment with the drowning proof clothing and bathing suits was asked to do so. The services of a demonstrator had been enlisted, but it was clearly announced that any person might convince himself of the reliability of the stuff by putting on either coat or a waist-coat and jumping into one of the bathing suits, if they did not choose to suffer the inconvenience of having their garments wet through.

Dr. Hartwig, a German scientist, is responsible for the invention, or discovery of a silk fibre which, wrapped around a person in any shape or form, will keep him or her afloat for any indefinite length of time. This can be used in the making of bathing suits or in the putting together of clothes for ordinary wear. Moreover coats can be so made that this life saving lining can be taken out or put in at a minute's notice, and without altering the appearance of the garment.

To look at this stuff is very innocent. It is put up in pads, covered with a fine sort of cloth which feels like silk and is water-proof. The fibre itself feels very much like wool, it is twenty-five times lighter than cork, and will support twenty-times as much weight. There is just enough warmth in it to make a coat filled out in this way rather more comfortable on board ship in cool weather than a garment made without, and it is thin enough not to be in the least bulky. To sink while wearing this material, which seems to be as yet without any picturesque name, is absolutely impossible.

A Strange Court Trial.

The following strange incident is related during his stay on the West Coast of Africa about ten years ago. A chimpanzee named John who was owned by a high official one day broke from his chain and strolling unconcernedly down the main thoroughfare, scattered the crowds before him. A native woman who was vending dainties dropped her tray and, even forgetting her small child, fled with the crowd.

The chimpanzee soon spied the tray of dainties and devoured them in a most convincing manner. The child, seeing all the sweets disappear, attacked the chimpanzee by the tail, but a bite from the brute sent the child yelling at the top of his lung power.

This so infuriated the natives that they made a combined attack on John, and his lease of life would have been cut short had not his owner appeared. He faced the crowd and assured them that every man would be tendered his due. For a similar offence he inquired whether a man would not have to stand his trial in court.

"Yah! Yah!" was the shout.

"Then," said John's owner, "let the woman appear in court to-morrow with the child and the witnesses and I promise you that John will be there like a man to stand trial and take whatever punishment may be doled out to him."

Mexico In State Of Anarchy.

The despatches from various parts of Mexico to New York papers make it appear that Mexico is perilously close to a condition of utter anarchy, that the Diaz Government is no longer able to control the country or protect foreigners and that it is doubtful whether the revolutionary Commander-in-Chief, General Madero, will be able to control the storm he and other insurgents have raised. Over many of the Mexican States the National or Federal Government now exercises not even the semblance of authority, and revolutionary parties are actually threatening the capital itself. The only safe prediction to make is that President Diaz will never be able to suppress the insurrection against his authority, and that some radical reconstruction of national scope is impending.

Grace Stewart is spending a few days at Letete.

Edith Chambers returned home from Letete Friday.

Mr. Penn entertained a number of young folks at his camp on Tuesday evening. Games and music were the chief amusements. At a late hour refreshments were served after which the happy party broke up.

Mr. Wentworth passed through here Saturday enroute to Letete.

Mrs. Silas Wilcox spent Monday in St. George.

Matthew Mitchell received quite a bad kick from his horse while exercising in the yard.

Menzie Chambers returned to Deer Island on Wednesday.

Has Earned A Fortune With Nimble Fingers.

A prepossessing young lady with fine eyes and a pleasant manner is the champion typist of the world, Miss Rose L. Fritz, who arrived in the city yesterday, and will give a public demonstration of her skill on Wednesday evening in Keith assembly rooms. She has taken part in 30 contests, 13 of which were championships, and she has made the best showing to all. She holds three international trophies, having won each three years in succession. She did not complete last year, but she has beaten Mr. Blaisdall who won last year's trophy several times.

Miss Fritz can operate the typewriter with her eyes blindfolded, and carry on conversation or exercises in mental arithmetic at the same time. She has a record of 265 words per minute and her best hour's work was at the rate of 130 words a minute. She has made another record of 36, 872 finger movements with only 3 errors.

"Anybody can do fast work if they learn the keyboard as a pianist learns his instrument, and practice hard enough," Miss Fritz to a Standard reporter. That is if your fingers are not all thumbs. Unless you learn the touch system—that is learn the keyboard so thoroughly that you don't have to look at it—you are not likely to make any speed records. The business colleges of Canada are now teaching the touch system.

"I use all my fingers and my right thumb. You can judge of the agility required and the responsiveness of the machine from the fact that my highest rate of speed involves 13 distinct movements of a second."

Miss Fritz is stopping at the Royal.

Notorious Fact Declares Writer That Many in Society Haggle Over Their Bills.

It is notorious that the rich are often scandalously slow in paying their bills. I recall one instance where the wife of a multi-millionaire (she was a forward divorcée) took no notice, month after month of a bill amounting to over $20,000 for her daughter's wedding trousseau, and that bill was not paid, some time a year after the ceremony, and only then because a resolute collector called upon her and told her she must pay it the next day, and finally, of his check, she checked Cleveland Moffett, in success.

I have been told of several rich women in the smart set, two of them very rich, who are wont to haggle over prices in the same way if they were in genteel poverty. One of these ladies, whose name I do not give, told me a story of a dinner she had given at her house one day, and finally, of his check, she checked Cleveland Moffett, in success.

When I was in Newport last summer people were laughing at the latest petty economy of this same husband, who is certainly one of the "oldest" of our idle millionaires. He had heard of a new aluminized paint, warranted to keep shining without much rubbing, and he had forthwith given orders that the brasses on his beautiful yacht be smeared over with this paint so that it might reduce his pay roll by the wages of two sailers previously needed to clean those brasses! This gentleman's income must be at least $4,000, 000!

Lost All.

"A burglar came to my room and took my diamonds, and I lost everything I possess," said the actress.

"Why didn't you use your voice?" asked the reporter.

"Oh, I lost that, too,"—Yonkers Statesman.

Looking for Dollars.

The woman candidate faced the unhappy man who wished to sell his vote.

"No, sir," she said, "I will not give you a dollar for your vote. It is not worth it. But, say, I'll give you $1.37 if you can manage to vote twice!"

His Credit Was Good.

"What was the price of it?"

"Five dollars."

"You pay him net?"

"No; I paid him net."—Houston Post.

Johnnie's Gossip.

"Now, children," said the teacher, "what do you understand from this passage: 'Nothing was to be heard except the monotonous snap, slap of the waves?'"

"That they was killin' mosquitoes," ventured Johnnie Wise.—Baltimore American.

THE GRANITE TOWN GREETINGS

PANTRY TALKS

I am the Queen of the Flour Bin, the lady-in-chief of the Royal Pantry, the oracle of the Royal Household.

I want the attention of Big Folks and Little Folks, of Experienced housewives and Inexperienced—of Rich housewives and Poor—Young housewives and Old.

For I have stories to tell.

Secrets—flour secrets—to unfold.

And these secrets have come by Experience—by actual knowledge of flour, actual study of different grades of flour.

If I can tell you the secret of making better Bread and Cakes and Pies and Pastry, that will be profitable to you.

And if I can tell you why one flour is more economical as well as more wholesome than another, that, too, will be profitable.

For I mean to go into the flour question deeply, giving Whys and Wherefores, Facts and Figures.

So if you follow my little stories from time to time, as they appear, you will learn lots of things about flour that nobody has told you before. These Pantry Talks of mine will be chiefly about so named because it was the flour selected for use in the Royal Household of Great Britain. It is the one flour in Canada which stands out head and shoulders above all the rest. It is made in Canada by the largest millers in the British Empire—The Ogilvie Flour Mills Co. Limited, and, because of its high quality and absolute uniformity, has given the greatest satisfaction both for Bread and for Pastry.

HYOMEI Death to Catarrh Germs!

Hyomei (pronounced High-me) means death to Catarrh germs in a few hours. It is the only guaranteed Catarrh Cure.

When you use Hyomei, you don't swallow massing drugs. You simply breathe in the soothing, pleasant and anesthetic Hyomei air through a little pocket inhaler. As this medicated vaporized air passes over the inflamed parts relief comes almost at once and a cure follows.

Your druggist J. Sutton Clark will sell you a complete outfit for $1.00 and what is more he will refund you your money if after using Hyomei according to directions, it fails to do all that we claim. Hyomei is guaranteed to cure catarrh, croup, grip, cold in the head, asthma, etc. Hyomei can be obtained from all druggists and dealers, or postpaid on receipt of price from the R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., 107 Erie, Ont.

The Third Transcontinental.

The decision of the Dominion Government and of the Liberal party in Parliament to make provision for such a guarantee of the lands of the Canadian Northern as will enable the Mackenzie-Mann syndicate to build a continuous line of steel from the Rockies to Quebec marks a great forward step in the construction of a third transcontinental railway on Canadian soil. For years the resourceful builders of the Canadian Northern have been putting together their system bit by bit with the patience and perseverance of men engaged upon a task in which their whole energies of mind and body were concentrated. The results have been most remarkable. The lines of the Canadian Northern and the various links already acquired or built of the system as it will be when complete are to be found in every part of the Dominion from the coast of Nova Scotia to Vancouver Island.

Two important links are still missing, and there have been many prophets who have declared with the finality of assured knowledge that the Canadian Northern would never be able to build across the great expanse of unoccupied land lying between Sudbury and Port Arthur in this Province, and the mountains of British Columbia from the present terminus of the company's lines in Alberta to Vancouver Island. The British Columbia Government undertook to guarantee the company's bonds for the lines across that Province, but it is manifest that some hitch has arisen, for the work of construction on the Pacific slope has not been pursued with the vigor that was anticipated when the McFriede Government made its bargain with the C. N. R. It is not improbable that a rearrangement of the terms will be found advisable. The credit of British Columbia may not be held in as high esteem in Britain when it comes to guaranteeing railway bonds as that of the Dominion of Canada.

While there may be doubt as to the ultimate form of financing to be adopted for the Pacific section, there is no longer any in regard to the backbone of the system. The fact that the guarantee of the Dominion Government will be given upon the bonds to be issued to an amount of $35,000,000 per mile for that part of the railway from Port Arthur across northern Ontario to the Ottawa River assures construction at the earliest possible period. The main line of the Canadian Northern will not be at any point less than sixty miles south of the Grand Trunk Pacific in the region of fertile land known as the clay belt, and the railways will therefore each aid vitally in the development and the permanent settlement of a great tract of agricultural country. The forest wealth and the mineral possibilities along the line of both the G. T. P. and the C. N. R. in the Ontario northland are admittedly among the greatest in the world to-day. It seems probable therefore that the C. N. R. will be able to earn immediately upon its completion an amount quite sufficient to pay the interest on the bonds, and that the assistance of the Government will be confined to "standing by."

But even "standing by," when that means the assumption of a contingent liability to pay a large sum of money in default of payment by the company to which it will be advanced by the financiers of Britain, requires firm faith in the future of Canada and great confidence in her high destiny. That faith and that confidence have animated the Laurier Government and the Liberal party in the granting of financial backing to the Canadian Northern. Had any less worthy motive been the motivating of their action it is quite certain that the C. N. R. would have remained much longer a disjointed collection of links intended to be welded together when occasion served. It is only a few weeks since one of the most prominent of the C. N. R. group of financiers, Mr. Lash, stood on the platform in Toronto and denounced the Government for its adoption of a policy that would cut the Dominion in two north of the great lakes. It was followed by others, notably Mr. W. T. White, who pressed home the same argument with the utmost insistence. Now, unbelieving these denunciations, underterred by the knowledge that they are strengthening the financial credit of men who have been most active political foes in the past and are not unlikely to be as active foes in the future, the Government and the Liberal party take the decisive step that will result in the completion, before many years have passed, of a third great railway on Canadian soil from ocean to ocean.

There may be anger and discontent among a few Liberals who still hold by the Mosaic law, but revenge can have no place in the program of a Government and a party that stand pledged to do all that men can do to make Canada a nation, strong, self-reliant, popular, free, yet bound to the motherland by the most enduring ties of affection, and so developing its material resources as to become of real value should Britain ever need to call her sons overseas for her defence.

Why Lie wept.
"Death is a sad thing," said the stranger to the man who stood weeping beside a grave.
"It is indeed," sobbed the other.
"I suppose," remarked the stranger, "you are sorrowing over the grave of a very dear friend."
"I am sorrowing over the grave of a man I never knew," replied the mourner, "yet I deeply regret his demise. He was my wife's first husband."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Excused with a Crown.
A juror having applied to the judge to be excused from serving on account of deafness, the judge said:
"Could you hear my charge, to the jury, sir?"
"Yes, I heard your honor's charge," said the juror, "but I couldn't make any sense out of it."
He was excused.—Pitt-D. Ex.

THE ROADS OF OLD.
The roads of old, how fair they gleamed,
How long they winded, how they seemed,
To dash upon the hills and down the high,
Their little lakes and houses seemed.
The morning mist that lay so soft and cool,
Was in it of its dew, that clung as cool
To the grass, yet as waves that beat
About the summits in a pool.
The river road that crept beside
The dreamy and re-bordered tide,
Where some day play on Saturday
Let some young boys ungratified.
The valley road that wandered through
The woods, and heard to wind that view:
The cow-bell's clank from either bank
Was all the noise it ever knew.
The village road that used to drop
Its line at the blacksmith's shop,
And leave some trace of ruts, scarce
To tempt the loiterer's eye to stop.
The woodland road whose whistles dim
Were blown to watchers straight and dim;
How slow it moved, and how it moved
Each flashing, and arching dim;
The market road that felt the charm
Of hubbub on many a sleepy farm,
Where stirring clock and crowing cock
Gave forth the marketman's alarm;
These all renew their olden spell,
With ready cliff and sunny dell,
With purple brook and grassy nook,
Their bordered childhood's country well,
And we who near them used to dwell
Can but the same sweet story tell.
That on them went a song—yes, content—
That on them entered childhood's country well.
—Elizabeth Wetherald, in Youth's Companion.

American capitalists recently paid $24,000 for a 100-acre farm near Weston, 30 acres at the corner of Woodbine Ave. and Gerrard St. East Toronto recently sold for $60,000.

The building and lot No. 149 Young St., Toronto, were recently sold by Mr. Cawthra Mulock for $170,000. The building is valued at $6,800, leaving the price of the land at about $6,800 per foot frontage. The assessment was $71,000 or considerably less than 50 per cent. of the sale value.

The property at 541 Young St., Tor., just above Shuter St., was recently sold for $32,000. The property has a frontage of 20 ft. and a depth of 121 ft. The building is valued at $1,500. The assessment for the land was $21,000, or a little less than 50 per cent. The lot is about one eighteenth of an acre, so that the purchase price figures up at the rate of $965,000 per acre, for the bare land alone.

Fifteen acres of the Tyrrel Estate at Weston was recently sold for $14,000.

On Jones St., north of the village of Weston, 120 acres were recently sold for $24,000. The farm will be divided into acre market gardens in the spring. X.

The usual discouraging news of forest fires marks the advance of spring. With out waiting for further destruction a really efficient means of protection should be devised. X.
