telegram received this morning from Marshal Kappel, which reads: "Aurora, Ind., July 8.—Have

This bears out the supposition of the London detectives that the fugitive, after successfully evading the police at Strathroy, made his way to

It is two weeks tonight since Toohey met his death, and Aurora is a flourishing town 24 miles from Cincinnati, on the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad.

ANOTHER ARREST.

A one-legged tramp was arrested at Mount Forest yesterday, but he was released on instructions from Chief Williams that he was not the man wanted. This tramp was minus the right leg and failed to answer the description in other respects.

He has been there for two days past, and was seen on Thursday crossing the road and entering the woods.

The last stand was made in an old Roman Catholic Church, which had been converted into a blockhouse, with loopholes in the walls. A dozen soldiers were perched in the old belfry. This church is now used as a hospital and prison for Spanish captives. The walls are shattered with the blood of its defenders. Senor Sagasta, like all the persons consulted, said he felt most uneasy about what would happen when the news of the fall of Manila and Santiago comes. Steps have been taken already to break the expected news slowly, especially in the provinces, where the irritation and discontent are more intense even than in Madrid. Those counsellors agree also that the government ought not to hesitate about displaying the utmost severity in repressing disturbances, because the discipline and loyalty of the army will be brought out by the first collision with the republicans and the Carlists. United States. The London Chronicle's Correspondent and His Impressions.

Changes That Henry Norman Calls a New American Revolution and the New American Revolution and the battles. How far will that lesson Event of the Century-Powerful carry them? Will it build up a great

The London Chronicle publishes today a copyright article, dated London, June 30, written by its special commissioner, Henry Norman, and treating of New America and its Army and Navy. Extracts from it are given herewith. "The vision of a new heaven and a new earth is still unfulfilled, but there is a new America. The second American revolution has occurred, and its consequences may be as great as those of the first. I have waited till the end of my visit before putting my impression on paper, for it is easy to be mistaken about popular senti-ment in this country. The American people are as sensitive to emotional or intellectual stimulus as a photographic film is to light, but they are also, to a remarkable degree, a people of second thoughts. Their nerves are quick, but their convictions are slow. The apparent change was so great and so unexpected that at first I could not bring myself to believe in its reality or its endurance. Unless all signs fail, however, or I fail to interpret them, the old America, the America obedient to the founders of the republic, is passing away, and a new Amarica, the America standing armed, alert and exigent in the arena of the worldstruggle, is taking its place. "The change is threefold:

"1 The United States is about to ed powers of the world.

"2. By the seizure and retention of territory not only not contiguous to the borders of the republic, but rethe borders of the republic, but residue to the popular arm; it has covered itself mote from them, the United States be- with glory during the war. The fear comes a colonizing nation, and enters of an aggressive policy, it is true, has the field of international rivalries. 3. The growth of good will and mutual understanding between Great for coast defense ships, and difficult to Britain and the United States, and the settlement of all pending disputes be- cruisers. But this will be less the tween Canada and America, now vir- case, now that America has possesmon ends, whether any formal agreement is reached or not. Fric R, ch. g., J. W. Horten, trio of changes may be described with-Shedden, Ont. ... 9 3 4 out exaggeration as the event of the Gloriana, b. m., J. Westcott, Toit that has not already been said, but as a subject for comment it has this advantage, that there is little mystery about it. One great element of uncertainty, of course remains—the boat destroyers, of 400 tons; 12 torlic opinion, but with that exception could be promptly raised. This ludic-rous notion undoubtedly corresponded to the popular view of the country's capabilities. Anybody who remembers certain statements during the Venezuelan dispute will not think this remark extravagant. It was known that the patriotism of the people was equal to the supply of any number of volunteers, the resources of the country were known to be limitless-the combination of innumerable men with limitless resources is all that is required for a vast army. Such was the reasoning, but nobody is misled by it today. The president has called out 200,000 men, and they have responded with extraordinary promptitude. But in a few days two months will have elapsed and the whole force is yet far from ready to take the field. Fifteen thousand men-nearly all regulars-have gone with Gen. Shafter to Santiago; a few thousand are to be sent to reinforce him as quickly as possible; about 7,000 have gone to Manila; 20,000 are wanted for Porto Rico and are not available, while the main army of Cuban invasion will barely be ready I should suppose, for another month

"Two weeks hence, Gen. Alger has assured me, every man will be equipped, down to two suits of uniforms for the tropics; 'the 'hardships' they have suffered are not such as soldiers should talk much about; 32,000 tons of rations have been provided for them; 50 transports have been chartered and fitted out; besides all this, the war department has laid 1,500 submarine mines, set up 40 searchlights, and armed a large number of forts—often building them first. After admitting every reasonable criticism, it is a triumph of organization. I doubt if so much, from so little, has ever been accomplished so expeditiously and so un-

"And look at the display of American patriotism. When the volunteers were summoned by the president they walked on the scene as if they had been waiting in the wings. They were subjected to a physical examination as searching as that of a life insurance company. A man was rejected for two or three filled teeth. They came from all ranks of life. Young lawyers, doctors, bankers, well-paid clerks are marching by the thousands in the Fourth race, 2:17 class, pacing; purse ranks. The first surgeon to be killed at Guantanamo left a New York practice of $10,000 a year to volunteer. As I was standing on the steps of the Arlington Hotel one evening, a tall, thin man, carrying a large suit case, walked out and got on the street car for the railway station, on his way to Tampa. It was John Jacob Astor, the possessor of a hundred millions of dol-Theodore Roosevelt's rough riders contain a number of the smartest young men in New York society. A Harvard classmate of mine, a ris ing young lawyer, is working like a laborer at the Brooklyn navy yard, not knowing when he may be ordered to Cuba or Manila. He is a navy re-serve man and sent in his application for any post, 'from the stoke hole up-ward.' The same is true of women. When I called to say good by to Mrs John Addison Porter, the wife of the secretary to the president, whose charming hospitality I had enjoyed, She had gone to Tampa to ship as a nurse on the Red Cross steamer for the coast of Cuba. And all this, be it remembered, was for a war in which the country is not in the remotest danger, and when the ultimate summons of patriotism is unspoken. Fin-ally consider the reference to the war loan. A New York syndicate offered to take half of it at a premium, which would have given the government a clear profit of $1,000,000. But the loan The Fly is a bald-headed fact. Stiff the small investor gets all he can buy before the capitalist is even permit-ted to invest. And from Canada to the Gulf, from Long Island to Seattle, the money of the people is pouring in. As I write, it is said the loan will all be taken up in small amounts. "It is true that soldiers in Florida should not be fed on pork and beans, and that campaigners in Cuba should not wear thick cloth uniforms. But while these truths should be remem-bered another should not be forgot-ten—that the American people have responded to their country's call with instant and flawless patriotism.

"The lesson they have learned in that patriotism alone will not fight

Navy Sure To Be Maintained in army and navy? The question requires a two-fold answer. In the Unit-Future-The Outburst of Patriotism ed States there is a curious antipathy to a large standing army. The masses of the people dread such a centralization of power. Nothing excites more hostility than the employment of Federal troops to settle state difficulties; witness the outcry when President Cleveland sent regulars to quell labor disturbances in Chicago. It is feared that a large standing army might lead to aggressive campaigns abroad, but a hundredfold greater is the fear that it might become an instrument of oppression at home. So strong is this sentiment that the army will assuredly not be increased to any great extent. Hitherto its strength has been nominally 25,000 men-actually, perhaps, 18,-000. Congress has recently authorized its ornaments 268 diamonds, 360 rubies a total of 60,000, a tiny force for 70.— and 15 emeralds. 000,000 people, according to European standards. But as a result of the war the local regiments will gain vastly in popularity, and they will probably kept up to full strength with capable men and complete equipment. Moreover, there are signs that the famous Seventh Regiment of New York will not have incurred its terrible unpopu larity in vain. In future every local regiment will probably be allowed to go to the front as a unit, and will not be dependent for its separate existence upon the whim of the governor of its

With the navy, however, the case is take its place among the great armexecutive for oppression at home; the influenced past naval estimates also. It has always been easy to get money tween Canada and America, now virtually assured, constitute a working union of the English-speaking people against the rest of the world for common ends, whether any formal agreeent is reached or not.
"Viewed in the light of the events great additions to the shipbuilding recommended by the naval construction committee—a course without parallel in American history. The official recommendation was for one battleship and four torpedo boats; what congress authorized on May 4 were 3 battleships of 11.500 tons; 4 monitors, of 2,-700 tons, for harbor defense; 16 torpedo final direction taken by American pub- pedo boats of 150 tons, and one gunboat as a prophet.

"First, then, with regard to the future Army and Navy of the United States. The war has taught this coun-forces will be largely increased in reality, though not nominally.

First-class battleships..... Second-class battleships..... Monitors. Protected cruisers..... Unprotected cruisers.....

Torpedo boats..... Torpedo-boat destroyers... "This list comprises only first-rate modern vessels: it does not include a number of gunboats, the monitors built during the rebellion, the Vesuvius and the Katahdin.

Armored cruisers.

"With no further increase, therefore, the American navy takes an important comparative place upon the seas. but its increase is certain. Its admirable record during the war, as regards both material and personnel; the voyage of the Oregon; the Russian summons to her builder and the Russian order to Cramp & Sons, giving the nation such confidence in American ship-yards, with the keenly felt necessity for instant foreign purchases on a declaration of war, that a further large shipbuilding programme will undoubtedly receive the sanction of congress.

"Here, then, is the new America in one aspect-armed for a wider influence and a harder fight than any she has envisaged before. And what a fight she will make! Dewey, with his dash upon Manila; Hobson and his companions, going quietly to ap-parently certain death, and ships offering the whole muster-roll as volunteers to accompany him; Rowan, with his life in his hand at every minute of his journey to Gomez and back, worse than death awaiting him if caught; Blue, making his 70-mile reconnoissance about Santiago; Whitney, with compass and notebook in pocket, dishwashing his perilous way round Porto Rico-this is the old daring of our common race. London, Friday, July 8, 1898.

Public Men and Public Office. Some of the Opposition newspapers express dissatisfaction at the fact that a few members of the House of Commons have been appointed to office, and that vacancies have hereby been created. On principle, there is no oblection to the appointment to office of members of the House of Commons. The practice has always existed in the mother country. In fact, it is an admitted rule that a member of the legal profession is better qualified for the discharge of judicial duties by having been a member of the House of Commons. His views are broadened, and from the period of the revolution until today the law officers of the crown have been considered specially eligible for the position of chief justice of the common law courts, and of Chief Baron of the Court of Exchequer, while these courts existed, and one who has served as a law officer of the crown in the House of Commons is also regarded as specially fitted for the discharge of the duties of Lord

We are quite aware that a cry was raised during last parliament by some members of the then Opposition that a member of the House of Commons should not be eligible for any office of emolument in the gift of the crown. This position was taken because it was said that offices in the gift of the Government had been promised to members of the House of Commons, who, nevertheless, were allowed continue for several sessions after promises had been made, and so were really placemen of the Ministry. We speak of what is really in our personal best qualified to form an opinion on that the wrong was not in the elevation of the member, but in permitting him to believe that he would be appointed, and still allowing him to continue

There are many members of House of Commons who do not aspire to seats in the Administration, who, nevertheless, are men of great industry, of weighty experience, and sound judgment; and to say that the training that these men have received for a long series of years in the House of Commons, instead of being a qualification, is to be a barrier to their promotion to the Senate is a most preposterous contention. One of the strong objections to the Presidential system of the United States is that when a man has served two terms in the chief executive office, he is regarded as no longer eligible, when, by experience, he could be of real service to his country. He is by an absurd usage, precluded from benefiting the public by his proved abilities.

things that have been said, both in and outside Parliament are equally preposterous. One of these is that a man who has for a series of years enjoyed the public confidence as a representative in the House of Commons is thereby rendered ineligible for appointment to the Second Chamber, where the public may still have the advantage of the experience which he has acquired in the work of legisla-

If the Government of Canada did ot feel that they were supported by opinion in what they are dothe would not have taken the se of which some of their critics plain. If they supposed that the lic confidence was being withdrawn it likely that constituencies would opened by appointment to the bench to the discharge of other official luties? Mr. M. C. Cameron served of Commons for more than a quarte of a century. Mr. James Lister has represented the riding of West Lamb ton since 1882. Mr. Langelier has served the country as a member of the House of Commons for upwards of 30 years. Many public servants were retired by the late Government who had served less than half that period of time.

Members of the House of Commons are, in election contests, frequently put to no inconsiderable expense. They certainly subordinate their private business to the public service, and we should be sorry, indeed, to see a rule laid down that would have the effect of preventing able public men from entering Parliament at all. They really able man who is elected to serve the public in the House of Commons doing them a service, in most cases, to his own detriment, and we cannot conceive of a greater misfortune bealling a country than that the senseless cry raised against men, who may have felt that the road to the highest political office is practically closed to them, and who are disposed, before they are rendered unfit for other service by advancing years, to withdraw from the arena of practical politics.

The Education of Agitation.

In connection with the present aspect of the temperance movement important questions have been raised as to the relation of sentiment to law, and as to how far it is correct to say that any particular law has an educating force. It would perhaps be more correct to say that the agitation which precedes the enactment of a law, and the effort to maintain it are educational in their effect. Thoughtful men agree that it is worse than useless to place a law or the statute book which is likely to be a dead letter or to be the subject of wholesale evasion. Such law-making as that is either useless tinkering or it is a thing that breeds contempt for There are certain fundamental laws the observance of which is absolutely necessary not only to the wellbeing but to the very existence of society. If reckless men were allowed to plunder and slay, or if there were laxity in dealing with the thief and murderer, the very foundations of social order would be threatened. But there are other laws of relative worth and expediency that must be proportioned to public sentiment, and to gain the law without the public opinion to enforce it is like having a machine without steam. law which is too far above public sentiment may not only fail to educate, it may even provoke a reaction which is in proportion to the amount of coercion required to enforce it. Bu healthful agitation must, by its very nature, educate the public conscience, and lead men to think out the important questions of civic privilege and duty. However much majorities may tation implies the right and duty of each individual citizen to canvass the question and form an honest conviction. Without discussing the English bish- disastrous state of affairs. would rather see his countrymen free than sober, we must admit that freedom is essential to the highest forms of virtue, and to the kind of soberness that is most prized. Unless a man gives his deep, strong conviction, his opinion is not worth anything, and his vote may be a delusion and a snare. No great moral reform can be real and lasting that is the result of a mere snatch vote and that expresses a moment of emotion without fighting energy and staying power. Some of us may be disposed to be too critical and to spend out strength balancing conflicting probabilities when we should be striking a strong blow for righteousness, but that which pertains to the life of the nation and is not merely for today or tomorrow demands out most earnest thought. A great question of social life is of necessity complex We do well to consider the meaning of a vote. It involves not merely a passive willingness to be prohibited, but a readiness to support the law without fee or reward, simply from the solemr sense of a citizen's right and duty. So long as we are content to wink the eye and shrug the shoulder when laws are broken, which are meant to guard the weakness of youth, and brace the moral life of society, no great advance can be made. There is room for heroic action and true patriotism in the every-

and the community. Mr. Davin compares Sir Charles Tupper to Moses, but if we recollect aright Moses never reached the promised land. The Conservative party is more in need of a Joshua.

day life of society, which may be as Important as the more brilliant display always in place, and the effort to discriminate between that which is our personal duty or ideal, and that which we may fairly demand from our fellow-citizen-between that which belongs to the sphere of individual conscience and that which is the legitimate province of church courts; between the nature of a point, and its deep religious significance of mental exercise, in so far as it is not captious quibbling or mere academic discussion, but the pursuit of social righteousness, must have a beneficial influence on the individual thinker

The Oldest Living Canadian Author.

Mrs. Catharine Parr Traill, of Lakefield, Peterboro county, Ontario, now in her 97th year, is not only the oldest living author in the British Empire, having maintained a life of literary activity for over 80 years, 66 of which have been spent in this province. She is one of the celebrated Strickland sisters, two of whom were the authors of "The Queens of England," in twelve volumes, and "The Queens of Scotland." in eight. Another sister. Susanna, was well known as Mrs. Moodie, the author of "Roughing It in the Bush."

Mrs. Traill's first literary work, a collection of stories. "The Swiss Herd Boy," was written in her father's home in Suffolk, England, and published in 1817; her last-two books, entitled, respectively, "Pearls and Pebbles, Notes of an Old Naturalist," and "Cot and Cradle Stories." went through the prese of Wm. Briggs & Co., Toronto, in 1894 and 1895. The titles of some of her other books are: "Afar in the Forest," "Canadian Crusoes," "A Guide for Female Emigrants," "Rambles in Canadian Forests," and "Studies of Plant Life in Canada."

In 1832 she married Capt. Traill, an Arcadian, with whom, in the same year, she came to Canada, and settled on a bush farm in Peterboro. Since then her life has been a busy one, not unlike that of other pioneers, cave that she devoted to literary work every moment which she could snatch from the ordinary and peculiar duties devolving upon immigrants in those early, diffi-

Two years before her husband's death (which took place in 1859) their buildings, books, manuscripts, etc., were totally destroyed by fire. After her husband's death her small income was supplemented by the proceeds of sales of botanical collections, which she sent to the old country, and in recognition Lord Palmerston, a single grant of a hundred pounds. Readers and admirers of her work will regret to learn that the death of the gentleman with whom most of her principal sum was intrust ed for investment has revealed a very

The councilors of Osgoode township, Carleton county, hasten to correct the report that they will allow no bicycles in the township. A resolution was passed forbidding wheelmen to use the sidewalks, but some wag substituted "highways" for "sidewalks" in the resolution. The result was an explosion of ridicule and bicycle indignation all over the province. We are pleased to make the amende honorable to the legislators of Osgoode, and incidentally to let the public know they have sidewalks down there.

Hon, G. W. Ross' views on the Senate have been widely discussed. La Patrie, the leading French-Canadian Liberal daily, thinks Mr. Ross does not go far enough. It believes, with him, in a bicameral parliament, but it would have the senators elected by Legislatures as in the United States, or by limited suffrage as in France. The co-existence of two responsible legislative bodies, save La Patrie, would be always a protection to the liberties of the public and of the minorities and a guarantee of good administration.

The Advertiser's test of the new fast mail delivery in London proved much more satisfactory than similar news paper trials in Toronto and Hamilton. This is creditable to the local authorities. The system in every city will no doubt be made as effective as possible when the machinery gets in full working order. It has been a decided success wherever tried in other countries, and it will probably grow in favor here. Mr. Mulock's administration of his department has been marked by an enterprise and vigor that have earned general praise.

It is one of the freaks of fortune that Commodores Schley and Dewey get the real fighting and the glory, while their superior in rank, Admiral Sampson. gets little or none. At the outbreak of the war Dewey, at Hong Kong, was hardly thought of, and Schley's squadron was anchored for weeks at Hampton Roads as a coast defense. It was Sampson who was first sent to Cuban waters to engage the enemy, and who was hailed as a future Nelson. But Dewey annihilated one fleet and Schley bottled up and swallowed another, while Sampson has had to be content with target practice on a few forts.

There is a marked revulsion of feeling in the United States regarding the Cuban insurgents. Their courage and bush-whacking skill are not doubted but the army officials have found it hard to discipline them. Hard work such as building roads and hauling supplies, they deem beneath their dignity as soldiers. It may be that their better qualities have been crushed out by years of oppression and savage warfare, but the fact remains that they are, in their present condi-The Americans have an easy excuse to relieve them of the duty.

A PLUCKY PRIEST

Rev. Father Gosselin's Brave Resistance of the Onslaught of Two Murderous Tramps.

Sherbrooke, Que., July 8.—Grappling with burglars in his house early yesterday morning, the Rev. Father Gos selin, a rich priest of Ascot and an old man of 62 years, unarmed, fought with the robbers for more than half an hour. The clergyman was awakened during the night by a slight noise in the adjoining room. There was no one in sight and he entered, only to be met with a vicious blow in the face which almost stunned him. Two burly tramps confronted him, both armed with revolvers and heavy cudgels. Quick as a flash one of the burglars seized a poker which stood near him and aimed a vicious blow at the priest. who grabbed a chair and made a plucky resistance. Exhausted by the struggle with face and head beaten to a jelly he finally sank back unconscious. While the burglars were making a reconnoissance he recovered his senses and managed to drag himself to a neighbor's and give the alarm. While a party was being organized, however tramps escaped to the woods. Robbery was certainly the motive, as the old priest was supposed to have a large amount of money in the house. Father Gosselin was brought to the Sacred Heart Hospital, Sherbrooke, yesterday afternoon, and is in a very precarious condition. Armed posses have been for the malefactors.

Restoration of Reduced Wages Previous Rates.

Winnipeg, July 8.—General Manager Kendrick, of the Northern Pacific, has issued notices to the effect that wages of train employes over the entire system have been restored to the figures existing before the reduction in 1894. The increase was made in view of the excellent financial showing of the company, and without any action on ANOTHER CUT IN IN COAL PRICES New York, July 8.-The Times says: Much uneasiness was caused in the anthracite coal trade by the news that a further cut in the price of coal had been made by the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad. An open circular issued by the Lackawanna company announces a reduction in the quoted price of stove size from $4 50 to $4 per ton. This is the third cut in price made by the same company with-in the past three or four weeks, and it is regarded by the officers of other coal carrying railroads as of serious import.

The Value of the Dynamite Cruiser Has Been Proved.

Naval Officers Who Formerly Doubted Now Among Her Strongest Advocates-Proof of Her Efficiency Given Santiago.

Some of those who have not believed in the value of the dynamite cruiser Vesuvius as an instrument of naval warfare are now among her strongest advocates since her wonderfully effective work against the defenses of Santiago in the fast two weeks. Admiral Sampson reported that the ship had thrown charges of guncotton ashore with the most satisfactory results and that her value in operating against fortifications has been of the highest character. For years, ever since the completion of the vessel, in fact, the navy has been divided as to her usefulness in war time, and until some practical experi-ments could be made it was argued that it would be foolish to build more ships of her type. She was one of the early ships completed for the navy and the fastest in the service for many years, but she was always regarded as a failure except by a few officers who had tested her and had the amplest confidence that she would do everything she was designed for. Toronto, July 8.—Joseph Alilett, of 3 to turn rapidly, but this is owing to Her one great defect is her inability Argyle street, machinist, and promi-nent labor man, was struck by an It is difficult for her to turn in a radifficult for her to turn in a ra- dead. the dius of less than 400 yards, although thrown violently to the ground, an's officers have pointed out that another was taken to the hospital suffering defect is the fact that her three tubes are stationary and can be trained only by the rudder. To train them therefore is sometimes a difficult matter in heavy seaway. Down off the Cuban she has had apparently little trouble in hitting her targets and backing out in the fields yet. of range in short order.

No opportunity has been afforded until the present, her advocates say, to prove the real efficiency of the ship, and the trials that have taken place heretofore were of such a nature as to prove nothing except the accuracy of her fire. Several years ago an extended series of trials was conducted off Port Royal and elaborate reports were made to the Navy Department, and the conclusion reached was that the Vesuvius was not of much value to the navy. Now all officers are willing to admit that she is a wonderfully efficient boat for certain clases of work and that her tubes have done more destruction to the outer harbor of Santiago than a bombardment by the entire fleet could have accomplished in a day. While it is an expensive process of inflicting destruction, the experts agree that it really costs far less than firing many broadsides of heavy shells against fortifications. The tubes of the Vesuvius are of 15inches calibre, but she has never yet fired the full charge they are capable of throwing. Sub-callibre charges of , 8, and 10 inch projectiles, containing from 200 to 500 pounds of gun-cotton. were used in the attacks on Santiago's defenses and it is not regarded as probable that higher charges will be hereafter used by the ship. It is regarded now as practically settled that the Vesuvius will play as important a part in completing the destruction of Morro Castle at Havana as she has done in knocking down large sections of the defenses at Santiago. Her range of effectiveness is from one mile to one mile and a half for smaller charges, and confidence is expressed by the torpedo experts here that she will be able to run up at night close under Morro and let go her pro-jectiles and back away before being caught by the fire of rapid-firing machine guns. Capt. Sigsbee is one of the strongest believes in the Vesuvius in navy next years. One of the first messages sent to the Navy Department after the Maine disaster was a request that the Vesuvius be at once ordered to Havana. If there was to be any trouble with Spain it was thought the Vesuvius could do more effective work by tossing several projectiles of gun-cotton into the city than larger vessels could in a bombardment. rius was at once prepared for service and has been in commission since the war began.

PICNICKED AT PORT. The Talbot Street Church Sunday school, accompanied by parents and friends, held their annual picnic at Port Stanley yesterday. The picnic was one of the most successful ever held. If all newspaper stories are true, lawyers meet with many reverses in their attempts to browbeat feminine witnesses. One of the latest examples comes from the Cleveland Leader. "Now." said the lawyer who conducting the cross-examination, "you will please state how and where you

She had been sitting at her window a long time, watching first how a sunset that is golden in the west will look in the north; then seeing how the stars come out, first a doubt, then a hint, then a twinkle, and lastly a lamp. Then she had wondered why there came first a breath of rose, then a sigh of migmonette, then a rush of orange flower, or a dream of a breath of pansies, then, all at once, a full sigh of them al mingled in inextricable sweetness, and

There was an instant's pause; then three figures hurried to the gate. One, a man wrapped in a cloak, ran up Via Claudia, entered the carriage standing there, and was driven away; after a moment the other two came out into the street walked off in opposite directions, looked about, and came back. These were Bruno, and a man who had sometimes worked in the garden, one Tito, a large black-browed man, with a seamed and wicked face. Seated in the garden window, with the curtains almost drawn together before her, and shaking as with an ague in that heat, Valeria fixed her eyes on the shadows and waited. There vas not a sound, except one of breathing that came from under the arch, and showed that the two men below were also waiting.

They waited in vain; for there was no stir amid the shadows under the camelias. But after awhile a figure came rustMng along the flower-beds from the direction of the palace, and Bruno went out to meet it. There was a whis-pered conversation. Then the Countess Belvedere's maid went back to her ordinary series, the dimensions of the mistress, and Bruno returned to his

The waning moon came up in the east, pale and languid, like the ghost of an exhausted passion. It threw a melancholy white light over the tree-tops; the beams moved downward, and blanched the lower shrubs, and slid along the walks, and touched the edges of the heavy shadows. Inch by inch it crept over the grass, and two dark heads stretched out from under the archway of the gate, and followed its course. There were three pairs of eyes strained to see what would come next. First appeared a daisy, and grasses that looked stiffened; and then a hand, as white as though it belonged to a marble statue fallen there, lay out, the palm upward.

One of the three who saw it slipped down to her knees. The two men stole forward, lifted the motionless figure, and bore it towards the gardener's house, stepping carefully over the

There was no lamp, but the moon shone in, and laid a square of white-ness on the floor. Hearing a slight noise the two turned their heads, and saw Marco gazing out from the darkness of an inner door. His head was stretched out, his body invisible, and his eyes were fixed upon the mute form on the floor. At the first glimpse of him Bruno started up, and with a faint cry of terror fled out of the room and through the garden. 'You here, Marco! I'm glad of it!" said Tito, looking steadily into hi rible face. "But it's a pity you hadn't been awake to prevent this. Poor Vittorio has had a fight with somebody. Marco came forward and stooped down over the prostrate form.

"I'm afraid it's all over," said Tito. The words were scarcely uttered before Marco was on the track of the fugitive. Their swift steps flew over the garden walks, out through gate and into the silent street. Bruno, winged with terror, flew he knew not whither: Marco, nerved to the energy by the wild spirit of vengeance, followed the echo of his footsteps in the close-shut walls, and his Leeting shade

It Costs Ten Cents and Is for Special Delivery.

Began Its Usefulness With the Celebration of the Dominion's Birthday in 1898-Some Particulars of Its Purpose and What It Will Effect for Its Purchaser.

The Post-Office Department on the 1st of July this year began a special delivery service, whereby a letter bearing, in addition to the ordinary postage, a special delivery stamp of the face value of ten cents, posted at any post-office in Canada and addressed to a city post-office having now free delivery by letter carrier, shall be specially and promptly delivered to the person to whom it is addressed, within the limits of letter carrier delivery, at any one of the following post-offices in cities, viz.: Halifax, St. John, N.B., Fredericton, Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa, Kingston, Toronto, Brantford, Hamilton, London, Winnipeg, Victoria and Van couver. Whilst the delivery of such letters will, for the present, be restricted to the city post-offices named, they may be mailed at any post-office in the Dominion. Special delivery stamps will be on sale at all money order post-offices.

The special delivery stamp, as will be seen by the accompanying cut, differs materially in design and size from the engraved work being 11/4 inches long by 7-8 of an inch wide. The advantage of such a contrast is obvious. The letter to which a special delivery stamp is affixed can thus be at once picked out by those handling the mails including it, and its delivery greatly hastened.

The design of the special delivery stamp is without any vignette, and consists substantially of a panel across the top of the stamp, containing the words "Canada Post-Office," with a lathe work border around the other three sides of the stamp. The centre of the stamp is occuby an oval, containing lathe work, with the word "Ten" in the centre, and the phrase "Special Delivery Within City Limits" in a white letter on a solid panel encircling the word "Ten." On each side of the stamp, connecting the oval with the border, is a circle with the numerical "10;" the space between the oval and the

The regulations relating to first-class matter (inland post) will apply with equal force to special delivery letters, the only difference being the special treasment which the latter receive, with view to accelerating their delivery. The object sought by the establishment of special delivery-namely, the special delivery of letters transmitted thereunder -will be much promoted if the senders ot all such letters are careful to address them plainly and fully, giving, if possible, the street and number in every case. Such care will serve not only to prevent mistakes, but also to facilitate delivery. In the circular to postmasters the following instructions are given to go into force on July 1st: The hours of delivery to be within 7 a.m. and 11 p.m. daily, except Sunday. These hours are subject to change as dic tated by local circumstances. Drop-letters posted for local delivery and bearing special delivery stamps, in addition to the postage, will also be entitled to special delivery in the same manner as letters received at the Post-Office by mail.

Registered letters may likewise come under the operations of this scheme of special delivery, in the same way as ordinary letters, provided they bear special delivery, in the same way as the full postage and the registration fee fixed by law, and the regulations respecting the record and receipting of registered matter are observed.

Special delivery stamps will be sold at all money order post-offices in Canada (which may secure a supply of such stamps in the same way as ordinary stamps are obtained), for which the postmasters will have to account as they do for ordinary stamps, and on the sales of which a total commission of 10 per cent. shall be allowed to postmasters, except to postmasters having fixed salaries. Under no circumstances will special delivery stamps be recognized in payment of postage or of registration fee, nor can any other stamp be used to secure special delivery, except the special delivery stamp. Special delivery stamps are not redeem-

Letters intended for special delivery at any one of the city post-offices above mentioned, and prepaid as directed, may be mailed at any post-office in Canada. All employes of the post-office are enoined to expedite, in every way in their power, the posting, transmission and delivery of letters intended for special delivery.

Tracked by His Thumb-Mark.

An extraordinary example of the efficacy of the thumb impression method of identification has happened in Bengal. Some months ago the manager of a tea garden in the Dooars was brutally murdered, the murderer getting clean away, as the crime was not discovered until some time after its commission. For some time the police were at fault until it was discovered that the murderer, in rummaging among some papers of the deceased, had smudged a Bengali atlas with his thumb. The atlas was forwarded to the Bureau, where the thumb

POWHATAN PIPES.

Made From a Peculiar Kind of Virginia

Clay and Made Sweet by Fire. The old coasting captain was gazing apon a crudely shaped red clay pipe which he smoked at the end of a long, many jointed reed stem, while he filled the ears of the observant Jerseyman with its praises. "If you want the sweetest pipe in the world," he said, "you must get one of these. They are the original Powhatan pipes, made in Powhatan county. Va., out of a peculiar blue clay which is found there in little nodules and finished in a peculiar way.

"The genuine Powhatan pipe can never be found north of Baltimore, and it is easier to get one in Norfolk than in Baltimore. If you begin smoking one, you will discard your meerschaums brier woods and smoke nothing When it gets strong, you merely put it into the fire and burn it sweet again. The imitation Powhatan pipes would crack to pieces if you try to burn them sweet, but the genuine can be thrust in safety right into the bright coals, although, of course, it is better to let them heat more gradually:" Under the stimulus of this praise the observant Jerseyman sent to a friend in Norfolk for half a dozen of the pipes. After a time he received them, with a bill for 75 cents for the pipes and $5 for the trouble of finding them. 'If you had not told me that the pipes sold two for a quarter," his friend wrote, "I should never have got the right kind for you. I went to almost every tobacconist in Norfolk hunting for them. Each one showed me a pipe which looked about the same as these, but was only 10 cents. Finally, one day, after I had about given up the search, I happened to mention it to a longshoreman. 'There is only one shop in Norfolk.' he said, 'where you can get the genuine Powhatan pipe. That is a little place down along the river front.' He gave me the address, and there I found them."

The observant Jerseyman has smoked the Powhatan pipe many times since then, and he still believes the old captain's praise was warranted. On the caution label which came about each ties of the genuine pipes are due to the fact that they are finished by hand polishing instead of a glazing, thus leaving to the clay all of its natural porosity and absorbent qualities. - New York

HAPPENS ONLY IN NOVELS. British Emigration as English Writers See

It and as It Really Is. England no doubt loves us dearly, but the English authors have not yet discovered that fact in its entirety. Clark Russell, Max Pemberton and Anthony Hope, to say nothing of Conan Doyle and Rudyard Kipling, will have it that all Americans are Yankees, although they would resent the charge that all Englishmen are cockneys.

Another symptom of the drift is in relation to emigration from Great Britain. Statistics show that an enormous number of people come to this country from Great Britain, but the novelists never heard of it. Micawber and his interesting family went to Australia and got rich. So did every other emigrant that Dickens sent abroad, unless, like Martin Chuzzlewit and Mark Tapley, they were sent to this country to point a moral and adorn a tale. All English writers resemble Dickens in that respect. In their stories the emigrants all go to Australia, Canada, Africa-anywhere but the United States. This trait comes under the head of 'loyalty to the crown." They know perfectly well that the British emigrant. unless assisted by a British society, takes himself and belongings to this country, and even if the society kindly lands him in Canada he takes the first chance of skipping over the border. The only time he goes to the "colonies" with cheerful alacrity is in the pages of a British novel.—Chicago Times-Her-

Swayed by a Play.

An impressive instance of a play that influenced a human life comes from one of the northern towns, where a very striking play was being performed in which the disastrous consequences following on the love of two men for the same woman were realistically presented. A young engineer who had conceived a violent affection for a girl who had resented his attentions in view of the cure it for you.

fact that she loved another man, who chanced to be the engineer's bosom friend, witnessed this play one evening, and it made a very deep impression on him, as it seemed almost to have been written to apply to his own unhappy situation. Act by act the tragio story was unfolded, jealousy of the disappointed lover ending in crime and punishment, and when at length the curtain fell the engineer had come to a decision. He went home, packed up a few necessaries and a week later set out for Australia, where, by a lucky stroke a year later, he made a mighty fortune. He attributed all his success to the play in question, for had he never seen it he would never have gone away from England, and perhaps some awful occurrence might have arisen from his unrequited passion.—London Standard.

Why Princeton Appealed to the Clevelands "Shortly after the removal of the Cleveland family to Princeton an unmarried lady, a close friend of Mrs. Cleveland, was visiting her," writes a close friend of the former mistress of the White House in The Ladies' Home Journal. "One day while the two women were in the nursery with the three little Cleveland girls, the friend said jokingly to Mrs. Cleveland:

"'Mercy me, Frances, how are you ever going to get all your daughters married off? You see from me that mamma could not do it in New York.' "'Exactly,' replied Mrs. Cleveland.

'But what better place could there be than a college town like Princeton, I should like to know?"

Ald. Cooper Thinks the City Is Too Lax With Sewer Contractors

By Not Making Them Put the Streets in Proper Shape-Board of Works Thinks Little of the Springbank Cinder Path.

The board of works met last night, with Ald. Douglass (chairman), Dreaney, Greenlees, Cooper, Belton and Carrothers and the officials present. The expenditure of the money set aside at the beginning of the year from the sewer debentures to be used in putting in repair the streets in which new sewers are laid furnished Ald. Cooper with material for a warm argument. He now sees that the sewer contractors should put the streets in repair themselves, and holds the city is too lax with them. Mr. W. R. Waugh, secretary of the Bicycle Cinder Path Association, wrote asking the council to apply the $300 voted for the purposes of bicycle paths in the city towards a cinder path to Springbank. The request was supported by Ald. Belton, but Ald. Dreaney, Cooper and Douglass said it would be better to spend the money on the city streets.

"You have no right to touch that $7,000 taken from the sewerage account for that purpose," said Ald. Cooper, and was told he was late in taking that view of it. "Well, I'm going to move that no work be done on those streets until they are taken off the contractors' hands," continued Ald. Cooper. "The contractors should put them in shape." No action taken. Another effort will be made by the chairman and engineer to adjust the difference between the city and Mr. George T. Hiscox, regarding assessment for a stone walk in front of the Hiscox block. Ald. Jury Unable to Say Whether It Was Suicidal or Accidental Death.

The jury to inquire into the circumstances surrounding the death of Arthur Carron, whose body was found in the cove on Wednesday afternoon, resumed the inquest before Coroner Ferguson at the police station last night. They returned a non-committal verdict as follows: "That Arthur Carron was found drowned in the cove, but whether or not the drowning was accidental or suicidal the jury cannot from the evidence decide." John G. Orchard identified the body s that of 'Arthur Carron. Gilbert McLaren had seen the dothes in the place where the police found them, on Tuesday morning and they were there the next morning.

Mary Carron, sister of deceased, said Arthur left their home, at No. 3 York street, about 8 or 9 o'clock Monday morning. When he did not return at noon she was under the impression that he was gone to Springbank, because he could get a job there; never knew him to fret over the lack of work; he was of a cheerful disposition and strictly temperate; never knew him to have a fit of any kind or to go gathering klies. Chas. Brennen, barber, knew Arthur Carron; saw him Saturday night, when he appeared more talkative than usual; Carron then said that he was nervous and could not sleep at night; did not say why; witness saw Carron two or three days previously and learned that somebody had recommended whisky; Carron said no. "I haven't had a drink for fifteen years and I won't start

Chas. McMillen had known deceased for 25 or 30 years; helped Geo. Able take the body out of the water; witness described its position; the water where the body was found was about fourteen feet deep and Carron could not have got into it without swimming. Geo. Able corroborated Mr. McMillen's evidence. David Dibbs and Robt. Topping were examined, but their evdence was immaterial.
