POETRY.

My Guests.

If the dull walls that narrow my vision
Were all that mine eyes might behold,
If the knowledge that comes to my cottage
By the lips of my neighbor were told;
If they who were coming and going
Each day were of number so small
As the few who come in by the doorway—
Perhaps I might tire of them all!

But now as I sit in the silence
My vision holds vistas so wide
That I would not exchange with a princeess
The halls where my fancied abide.
I walk amid limitless forests,
I wander again on the shore
And hear the grand hymn of the ages
With the rhythm of the surf-beating oar.

I summon my guests of the proudest,
The best and the wisest of men,
They are mine by the magic of printing,
Mine by the gift of the pen.
And they come to the hush of my chamber
And tell me their thoughts and their ways
Till I walk where their footsteps have trodden
In the twilight far distant day.

And even the friends who have left me
Come near me to wander again
'Mid fields of bright thought all ungathered
And mysteries far from my ken.
The path of my fancy grows whiter—
Too holy for unbidden feet—
The wind whirps of memory murmur
In cadences maddeningly sweet.

If the pall and the dust of the churchyard
Were all that our visions could see
Of those to whom death brought his silence
How bitter remembrance would be!
But the white wings of guardian angels
Are nesting the dust of the sod,
And the low grave is only a threshold
Of the beautiful palace of God.

So the walls are made broad in my chamber
And the vista grows wide to my fancy
And the sunshine of faith fills my heart.
But if they were coming and going
Each day were of number so small
As the few who come in by the doorway,
Perchance I might tire of them all.

SELECT STORY.

THE WINNING TICKET.

"I hardly think, Ezra, that she would suit you for a wife."

Friend Mary Minton stood at the kitchen table kneading the bread, a snowy cap surrounding her sweet old face like a sort of working-day halo, a white apron tied around her ample waist. At sixty-six her color was as fresh as that of a girl, her eyes blue as the blue heavens above.

Ezra, her adopted son—Friend Minton and his wife had been childless—had just brought in a basket of russet apples, the very last in the corner bin of the barn cellar. He had lanced against the kitchen window, playing unceremoniously with the big velvet leaves of the monster fish geranium that bloomed there. He was a tall manly looking young fellow, with clear brown eyes, a fresh complexion and hair that grew in a curly mat all over his head. Friend Mary's glance softened as she looked at him. It was evident that he was the very apple of her eye.

"Why not, mother?" said he. "I know the village gossip don't like the Calverly family, but you're not one of the gossiping kind."

"She's very young, Ezra," meditatively answered Friend Mary, "and very pretty."

"Oh, if you call those crimes"—

"Wait a minute, Ezra; she has not heard me out. I regret deeply that instead of going to live with friend Warburton, the minister's wife, she has preferred to enter the factory, where there are so many giddy girls and careless young men."

"But the pay was so much better, mother."

"Man doth not live by bread alone," oracularly answered Friend Mary.—

"There has been carefully brought up, Ezra. There must consider what is right and seemly in the way of matrimony. Thy father and I would break our hearts if this went wrong after all our hopes and prayers."

"But I shall never do that, mother."

"I trust not, remember, Ezra, how powerful an influence the wife exerts over her husband."

"Mother, are you very much set against Eveline Calverly?"

"Friend Mary hesitated for a moment. "I think it would break my heart, Ezra," she answered, "if I were to wed with a daughter of Hoth, like Eveline."

"Then that settles the question," said Ezra quickly. "You have done everything for me, mother. I was houseless, homeless, friendless, when you took me in and cared for me, and I should be an ingrate indeed to turn against your wishes now. But mother, let me go away for awhile. Let me go to Uncle Aaron, out in Montana, until—until I get over this."

Friend Mary lifted her tender blue eyes with a pining light to his face. "Is it so hard with thee as that, my son?" said she. "Oh, I am sorry! I—I could almost find it in my heart!"

"Although," he interrupted with a forced laugh, "I am not by any means so certain that Eveline would have me even if I asked her. Gerald Winthrop is going there a good deal of late."

"Yes," quietly spoke Friend Mary, who by this time had parted her white, firm leaves into their shape in the shining oblong pans all ready for the oven, "and that is one thing I do not like. He is interested, they tell me, in a great lottery scheme; he is the agent for a company down south. The factory young people have bought tickets, Eveline among the rest."

"Mother, I can hardly believe that."

"The Superintendent himself told me, Ezra," said Friend Mary, closing the oven door with a gentle click. "He regretted exceedingly that Winthrop had gained such a footing there. Yes, my son, perhaps that had better go to Brother Aaron for a few months. Those needs change."

So Ezra Minton decided to take the step that seemed like wrenching soul and body apart. Friend Mary counted out his socks, saw to the buttons on his shirt, relined the little leather trunk with pretty paper, and shed a few tears into the neat box of handkerchiefs as she packed them away.

"If Montana was not such a distance off," she sighed to herself. "Or if he could go any other way except by those dreadful flying trains! Thank goodness I never was on one, and, please heaven, I never will be!" To me it seems little short of a tempting of Providence."

She sat sorrowfully in the chimney corner on the evening of Ezra's departure, pining the russet apples to make a dish of apple sauce. How lonely the great silent room seemed!

"I think I did right," she said to herself, "and yet!"

Hush! There was a knock at the door. The minister's wife, or Janet Golbe, the old carpet weaver who lived under the mountain, came in to borrow the dye kettle.

"Come in, friend, whenever thee may be," said Friend Mary.

And Eveline Calverly entered the room looking under her little daisy-trimmed bonnet, like a veritable daisy herself.

"Are you alone, Mrs. Minton?" said she, glancing timidly around. "Oh, I want to talk to you so much!"

"I'm alone, Eveline," said the widow, her heart involuntarily warming to wards the pretty flower-like young thing whom Ezra had cared for, "but if thee does not mind thee may call me 'Friend Mary.' It sounds more suitable to my ears."

"If it isn't too familiar," faltered Eveline. "You see I wanted to talk to some one whom I could depend on in the way of loving her. There is good meat in the child. Thee must come back home with me, Ezra."

"Do you mean it, mother—that she loves me?"

"Come and put the question to her thyself, Ezra," cooed Friend Mary. "I feel that I have done her some injustice. Thee must set that right. Oh, my boy, my boy? I always felt that I should be jealous of thy wife, be she whom she might. But Ezra, I don't feel so any more."

She stooped and kissed his forehead. "Thee must make haste, Ezra. The flying dragon goes back at 7. I do not know that Eveline expect thee, but—"

Ezra Minton went back with Friend Mary. And though she had lost the hundred dollars, poor, lonely little Eveline had gained a double recompense—a loving husband and a mother-in-law who helped her in all weak places and fully appreciated her strong points.

"For," softly spoke Friend Mary, "I am always willing to confess when I have been altogether in the wrong."

Fatal Result of Delay.

Sickness generally follows in the path of neglect. Don't be reckless! But prudently take a few doses of Scott's Emulsion immediately following exposure to cold. It will save you many painful days and sleepless nights.

man's invitation to drive with him. I've been reading "Macaulay's History of England" and "Gibson's Rome" of evenings, and I loved him, Mrs. Minton—oh, I did indeed—and he never came to bid me good-bye? I suppose I oughtn't to tell you this but I cannot help it."

Friend Mary moved uneasily in her seat. Her heart warmed towards the impulsive young girl. She began to think that perhaps she had been too precipitate in her decision. Suddenly Eveline started. So did Friend Mary. "There is some one coming up the steps," said she; "several people. Dry thy eyes, my child!"

It was two of the factory girls, eager and breathless. They could scarcely snatch time to salute Friend Mary Minton before they addressed Eveline Calverly.

"Evy! Evy! your ticket has won a prize No. 3,003! A hundred dollars! They read out the list to-night. Oh, aren't you a lucky girl, though! We only wish it was us!"

Eveline's glance involuntarily sought the floor, where lay the two torn pieces of ticket. Jane Chertsey made a grasp at them.

"Why, what has happened?" exclaimed she, "but the number is all right. We can paste it together again." Eveline looked at Friend Mary Minton.

"Give me the pieces, Jane," said she, and in another second they were blazing in the fire. "I will have nothing to do with the lottery, good or bad," she added. "I'm sorry I ever bought the ticket."

"But, Evy, you burned up a hundred dollars!" screamed Lucy Leslie.

"I've burned up a temptation," cried the girl. "Do you think I would sell my soul for a hundred dollars?"

And once more she burst out crying. Friend Mary sat that night by the kitchen fire, she was thinking. Early the next morning she arose and dressed herself and trotted down to the railway station in time for the 7 o'clock train.

"I was never on the cars before," she murmured, "and it's just like riding behind a flying dragon; but for Ezra's sake I must risk it. He won't leave Edgfield before night. I must see him first."

Great was Ezra Minton's amazement that afternoon when the quiet Quakeress, in her dove-colored gown and pinks bonnet, came into the house of her sister, Friend Ruhamah Simmons, where he was stopping while he made sundry preparations for his journey.

"Mother, what has happened?" he cried.

"Nothing has happened, Ezra," said Friend Mary, her cheeks very pink, her blue eyes sparkling. "I have travelled on a railway train. The Lord has been very good to me, and I have not been dashed to destruction, and I think, Ezra, that thee had better change thy plans."

"Change my plans, mother?"

"Eveline has been with me, Ezra.—She loves thee, I think, and I am far on the way of loving her. There is good meat in the child. Thee must come back home with me, Ezra."

"Do you mean it, mother—that she loves me?"

"Come and put the question to her thyself, Ezra," cooed Friend Mary. "I feel that I have done her some injustice. Thee must set that right. Oh, my boy, my boy? I always felt that I should be jealous of thy wife, be she whom she might. But Ezra, I don't feel so any more."

She stooped and kissed his forehead. "Thee must make haste, Ezra. The flying dragon goes back at 7. I do not know that Eveline expect thee, but—"

Ezra Minton went back with Friend Mary. And though she had lost the hundred dollars, poor, lonely little Eveline had gained a double recompense—a loving husband and a mother-in-law who helped her in all weak places and fully appreciated her strong points.

"For," softly spoke Friend Mary, "I am always willing to confess when I have been altogether in the wrong."

The Tramp Musician.

The household goods of a ruined millionaire were being sold at auction and a fashionable assembly of bidders were present. The auctioneer came to a handsome grand square piano, and, as he opened it, he observed that the maker's catalogue price for the instrument was $1,400. Then he invited anyone present to try the instrument, so all might hear its tone.

"Please come forward and play some thing, someone—anyone," he urged, noticing nobody seemed inclined to accept the invitation.

At this second call, there was a stir near the door, and then a man advanced—a man who seemed strangely out of place among the elegantly attired people assembled in that grand parlor. It was a ragged, soiled tramp, on whose face hardship and disipation had left their imprints.

A murmur of astonishment and disgust ran around the room. How came such a creature there? What right had he in that room with decent people? How did he gain admittance? The faultlessly attired men fell back as the tramp approached, and the women drew aside their skirts as if the touch of such a being were contamination. Some looked around for the auctioneer's assistants, and one man half lifted his cane to strike the vagabond.

"Put him out!"

The words were uttered by more than one pair of lips.

Headless of the looks or words of those around, the tramp walk d—rather staggered—toward the piano. His step was that of a drunken man, but his cheeks were sunken and pallid, as if hunger gnawed at his vitals, and his eyes gleamed with a wild, unnatural light—a light that caused the auctioneer to shiver and fall back with a hand upraised.

Without a word the vagrant sat himself at the piano, and his fingers touched the ivory keys. For a single moment he seemed to hesitate, his fingers wandering aimlessly, yet producing a few soft and harmonious notes. Then, of a sudden, a burst of melody came from the piano—a flood of music that thrilled the souls of all who heard. It was Beethoven's grandest march, and it was rendered by a master musician. Never before in that magnificent parlor was such music heard. Could it be the ragged tramp who was playing?

Amazed, stricken dumb and motionless by what they saw and heard, the people who had gathered there stared and listened, holding their breath while their ears drank in the soul intoxicating strain conjured from the faultless instrument by the wizard musician in rags. The march ended, but the flood of music still poured from the piano. Beethoven, Mozart, Wagner, Liszt—the strange man knew them all, and their best work he rendered with a master's touch.

"Wonderful! Amazing!"

The enthralled listeners looked into each other's face and whispered the words.

"Who is he?"

No one could answer, but one thought he must be some great musician masquerading.

Listen! He is improvising now. How sweet is the strain! Soft and low, yet full of joy and sunshine, it flows on and off like a laughing, glancing brook. Slowly a touch of sadness creeps into the melody. It is like the gentle fall of summer rain on a new made grave—it is like the faintly heard sobbing of a mother as she bends above the dead face of her first-born. It moves the heart of many a woman as she listens, and more than one pair of eyes are dim with unbidden tears.

At length comes the sweetest, saddest, grandest tune ever composed—"Home, Sweet Home." All else is forgotten now. One of the women is sobbing softly in the depths of her handkerchief. Softer and softer, slower and slower the strain is sinking—dying. It is like the last effort of a soul passing from earth. Finally it ceases, and then the tramp musician sinks forward on the instrument and remains motionless.

A sigh runs round the room. The auctioneer touches the tramp on the shoulder. The vagabond does not stir. They lift his senseless body and look into his face.

He has gone home.—WILLIAM G. PATTEN.—Detroit Free Press.

An Episode of Life.

The time was a cold October afternoon. The place was a lonely junction waiting room in northern Michigan.

The people of the drama were an old lumberman in "store clothes" and a man whose apparel proclaimed the city.

And then there was a rough pine box about six feet long, on a truck outside. Perhaps that might have been called "the properties."

There is no more desolate place than the Sault Ste. Marie junction. And it was raining that afternoon. There is a dirty little station, and the train dispatcher's house on one side of the main track. Opposite is a deserted log cabin. There is nothing else to be seen. In summer the commonest flowers shun the spot. The old man with craps on his hat sat looking at the box on the truck. The young commercial traveller, or advance agent, or whoever he was, stared vacantly at his companion. The time passed slowly and drearily. Once a freight train rattled by. The young man got all the enjoyment he could out of that, and carefully viewed the caboose fading away into the fog.

At length, as if compelled to speak, the old man said: "Say, I hate 't' see 't' rain fall on that 'ere coffin so. They oughter made 't' carry 't' this year station bigger. I tried to bring him in, but that truck's too wide. Jim was a fine boy, he was, afore he went up 't' Marquette. That's him out there. It warn't unusual for him 't' want to be there hain't nothing to keep a bright boy 't' home in a town what's got nothing in it but my ole saw mill an' 't' store. But O Lord, I wish he'd stayed—I wish he'd stayed! A country boy ain't got no sto'r in one o' them tough iron towns. I ain't a blame Jim fer leavin' me. But he was all I had. He didn't know how much I wanted him 't' stay or how 't' do it. He didn't have no sort o' raises. His mother died when he was just a little fellow. When he grew up nothing 'ud do but he mus' go away. He goes up 't' Marquette an' gits him a good job on the dock, being strong an' handy. He aster write me 't' times 't' letters you ever seen 't' Sunday reg'lar. He was up there jry four months when he quit 't' work. I stood it a month an' then I went up. He was sick in a meanly boardin'-house. He was consider'ble sick but we fetched him through an' 't' took him home. He got good and well again. He said he'd stay with me 't' home. But he didn't. He runned off one night. I didn't care for what he took, if he'd only a come back. He kept a writin' for money 't' come home on, and I kep' a sendin' it—but I had to go for my boy. He was shot through the heart in a saloon at the Soo. That's him out there. I ain't a blame him. I didn't raise him as I—"

St John's Church Parish Meeting.

On Monday afternoon last a parish meeting was held in St John's church, Wolfville. At this meeting the Rev. Henry DeBlas, M. A., of Round Hill was unanimously elected Rector of the Parish of Horton. It is hoped that he may shortly be able to come to reside in Wolfville. Meanwhile the Rev. Canon Brock, D. D., now Rector of Kentville was asked by the parish meeting to take charge of this portion of his old parish. He has consented to do so, and will take the service next Sunday afternoon, April 30th, in St John's church, at three o'clock. Subject of sermon: "The Soul's Thirst for the Living God."

Obituary.

It becomes our sad duty this week to record the death of one of our most esteemed young men. Mr. Kenneth E. Bishop, son of Mrs. S. B. Bishop, passed to his rest about noon yesterday, a victim of the fall disease—consumption—at the early age of 25 years. The deceased was a consistent member of the Baptist church, a faithful member of Wolfville Division, an energetic member of the land, and was deservedly held in high respect by all. For the last 13 years he has been in the employ of Mr. Burpee Witter, during which time he won the friendship of his employer and customers alike. He leaves a wife and one child who, with other relatives, have the sympathy of the entire community. The funeral will take place on Saturday, at 2 p. m., service to be held at the Baptist church.

We regret to learn of the death of Mrs. Johnson, widow of the late Rev. George Johnson, of Grand Pre, which occurred at Halifax on Wednesday. Mrs. Johnson's maiden name was Carter (the old Carter family, of Uffington, Berkshire, England). Her father was a member of an eminent London legal firm, and for some time an under sheriff of the city of London, and she was born within sound of Bow bells. In early life she was a pupil of the eminent musician, Count M. Zinghi, and was one of the first to teach classic style of music in New Brunswick. She came to this country as governess to the Rev. S. Busby's family. Mrs. Johnson was woman of fine intelligence and well beloved by all who knew her. Her family of five children survive her. The funeral will take place at Grand Pre this morning on the arrival of the express from Halifax.

The regular spring meeting of the county council convened at the Court House, Kentville, on Tuesday, at 10 A. M., Warden Roscoe presiding. All the councillors were present except J. L. Gertridge, Esq. Warden Roscoe read the resignation of Councillor Gertridge. W. E. Anderson, who was returned by acclamation in Ward VII, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation, was sworn into office by the Warden and took his seat in the Council. The minutes of the January meeting were read and approved. A number of changes in list of Town officers were made. Revisors were appointed as follows: Dist. 1, Wards 1 & 2—Chas. R. Pines, Richmond Kinsman, Leader Cox; Dist. 2, Wards 3 & 4—Wells E. Rockwell, John L. Kinsman, Robert E. Rockwell; Dist. 3, Wards 5, 14 & 12—John W. Selfridge, A. C. Hall, Jos. H. Eaton; Dist. 4, Wards 7, 8 & 9—D. W. Benjamin, J. W. Caldwell, H. Chipman; Dist. 5, Wards 6 & 13—D. A. MacDonald, Lorenzo Roush, S. C. Parker; Dist. 6, Wards 10 & 11—Henry Ewing, Levi Gates, Walter Wilson. A petition from the inhabitants of Berwick asking that the village be made one highway labor district and that commissioners of streets be appointed was read. Action was deferred until January term, 1894, it being considered that the petition was not so generally signed as to justify the council in acting upon it at this session. Inhabitants of Grand Pre petitioned that the post road to Long Island across Grand Pre dike, having become a public road, be fenced at the expense of the municipality, the present arrangement of gates at the ends of the road causing great inconvenience and danger when the dike is in pasture. The petition was referred to the committee on roads and bridge, which reported recommending that a commissioner be appointed to lay out a public road two rods wide on the lines of the present road. The report was adopted and Jas. Leard appointed commissioner. Albert J. Henson and John Wilson were permitted to build culvert across Hal road in Aylesford to allow their cattle access to water. Wm. Lockwood was appointed caretaker of public lands at Port Williams. The action of the council in January permitting the road leading to C. L. Borden's house to be reduced in width to three rods was reconsidered, pursuant to notice then given, and it was decided that the width of the road be not reduced. Road grant was appropriated as follows: Kentville, $20,000; Wolfville, $20,000; bridges over Cornwallis river, $115,000; bridges in Ward 10 over Annapolis, Pales and South rivers, $52,000. The balance of $405,000 was divided equally between north and south Kings on the same scale as last year. Committees on roads and bridges reported favorably upon a number of petitions referred to them, among them one for road from Post road to Aylesford station, damages $110.75, which report was accepted. Action on petition of residents of Rochford road for change in road districts was deferred to January term. The commissioners appointed in January to consider claims of Dr. G. E. Outbet for fencing of road reported recommending that he be allowed $30. Report adopted. The committee appointed to consider claim of H. D. Woodworth for damages reported that they did not feel justified in recommending that such claim be entertained. Mr. Rapert Caldwell was heard in reference to his claim for damages. On motion of Councillor Lyons, the further consideration of the matter was postponed indefinitely. County line bridge at Kingston, or so much of it as belongs to King's Co., Spectacle Lake bridge in Dalhousie and Benjamin bridge in Gaspereau, were put under the Bridge Act. By resolution it was decided that the following bounds be substituted for the district bounds in Road Districts Nos. 2, 8, 9 and 11 of Ward VIII. Road District No. 2, East Wolfville, commencing at the east boundary of the Town of Wolfville, thence easterly to the McGormon Road including the road leading by R. E. Reid's to the dike. Road District No. 8, Martin Road, commencing at the junction of the road east of Andrew Westcott's house, thence northerly to the boundary line of the Town of Wolfville, including the road leading by Samuel Moore's to the North Gaspereau and also the Stone Quarry road westerly to the limit of the town of Wolfville. Road District No. 9, North Gaspereau, commencing at the Gaspereau Bridge, thence northerly to the south boundary of the Town of Wolfville. Road District No. 11, Ridge Road, commencing at the angle of the Gaspereau road near the late James Coldwell's gate, thence westerly to the Dug Road to the north west Gaspereau District and also the road leading northerly from Nathan Coldwell's to the south limit of the Town of Wolfville. F. A. Forsythe and Wm. Stevens were granted permission to erect telephone posts from Port Williams to Canning and from Port Williams to Town Plot under direction of the councillor for Ward 2. Bad rates were struck off in a number of the wards. C. W. Rand brought up the question of a dog tax and urged that some effort be taken to enforce the bye laws. A discussion took place in reference to a super lunatic in township of Aylesford, but no action was taken. Council adjourned to July term.

Twilight Thoughts.

Sitting in the dark 'ning twilight As the shadows round me fall, While the sunset seems to recede Ere the darkness casts its pall Over land and sky and water, Over all the world calls fair, Over hearts that once were blithesome, Over lives once free from care. While the shades are creeping slowly 'Round the corners of the room, How my brain with thoughts is busy, Busy as the weaver's loom, When the shuttles' constant motion 'Tween the threads pass to and fro, Each thread doing its own duty, As the whole will sometimes show. When the ends are all entangled And the treadles get unstrung, When the threads of warp are breaking, Everything seems going wrong, Then the watchful, patient weaver Gathers up the broken ends, Smooths out all the tangled places And the several portions mends. Then he gently puts in motion Each part, for he understands How the work can be made easy Guided by unerring hands; Until the last thread is woven, Then the final knot he ties; All his labor now is ended, Finished, it before him lies. Still I sit here, idly dreaming, While the twilight turns to night, Even though 'tis darkness o'er us, Soon will come the morning light. And I think how oft the weaving Of our lives all go astray, When the web of life gets tangled With the trials of the day. When our faith seems growing dimmer, And we see no ray ahead, When our dearest plans all fail us, And our hopes and joys seem dead, Then the tender, patient Master, Who in our great wondrous love, Sees in us every trouble, Watches o'er us from above; Comes and with a touch so loving, Gathers up our tangled lives, Smooths out all uneven places, Bids us wipe our tearful eyes, So beside the stream of gladness, By his side we walk along; And our lives are filled with sunshine, And our hearts awake to song. Then when the last thread is broken, Severed are all earthly ties; Then the loving Master cometh, And beyond the azure skies Bears the sample of our work, And before the great white throne, All the threads now woven perfect, Claims and crowns it as his own. "Gentlemen Farmers."

Another large party of immigrants are coming in to-morrow from Quebec over the C. P. R. The latter company in conjunction with the agents of the Manitoba and British Columbia Governments have arranged pretty nearly every city, town, and village in the three Kingdoms, during the past year. The fruit of their labors is now seen. The batches of immigrants now entering the North-West are not the city loafers who never worked, and never wanted to work for a living, but respectable farmers who for farming is played out in England. They have to compete with the whole world, and they are rather tired of it. Everything comes in free and the Manitoba wheat sells have taken the hope out of the farmers. They can get no prices. There is no prospect of better times. Hundreds of farms are deserted all over England. To this the Rev. Rural Dean Renard testified the other day. The farmer cannot compete with Manitoba wheat, but perhaps he can come out and grow it himself, and make money by sending it home. That is his hope now. Even if the English landlord marries out his leases to suit the farmer, the latter could not make headway against the breadstuffs of the world which pour in from all quarters. The wheat of Manitoba and the big apples and pumpkins of British Columbia, industriously exhibited have done their work. The country is now getting the gentleman farmer. The man who will be heard above the bark of the gopher and the coyote. The magazine will have its place as well as the milking pail. There will be refinement as well as the thrashing machine and the reaper. The man who when the lowing of the cows is still, and knowledge and grace will assist nature to adjust its necktie and a new type will be evolved upon the Canadian prairie. The gentleman farmer is bringing money and energy, and gentle-educated women, to start a new life in a new country. There are hardships to face and difficulties to overcome which may well test courage; but that the change will ultimately make for every kind of betterment there can be no question. Montreal Witness.

One of the disgraceful sights of our town and city streets is to see sickly-looking lads in knickerbockers puffing away at the stub of a cigar or cigarette. If a policeman brought every such offender to his home, and had an interview with his parents, it might tend to prevent these youngsters from becoming mental and physical imbeciles. The law against selling cigarettes to lads should be rigidly enforced.

Mr. Ennon, California is a lovely country, the sick get well, the poor get rich, cyclones and frosts are practically unknown. A hundred to three hundred dollars per acre is made each year on fruits with irrigation. The California Land and Water Exchange, of Dayton, O., control large quantities of land in California, which they plant, cultivate, pay taxes on for ten years, paying you $40 per acre as your part of the profit, they keeping the balance for the care and cultivation. They give an acre of land away with each 4 certificates. All you do to do is to pay for the irrigation, which can be done in small payments each month. They will send you the names of 90 persons who last year received from $25 to $500 on one year's investment. President Harrison says, "Half of the good things of California have not been told." The Hon. Jeremiah Rank says, "Truly California is a poor man's paradise." To five-acre holders the California Land and Water Exchange, of Dayton, O., give a free return ticket to view the property. Why should anyone be poor when such a chance remains open and you do not have to do any labor or work to get the profits, and do not have to leave home. Write them to-day and get full particulars. Watering Flowers. There is nothing that conduces to success in floriculture as care in watering. This work should be done systematically and the early morning is the best time; examine each plant. The majority of plants thrive best if they are watered daily. Aquatic plants like calla lily and others, during the period of blooming should be kept very moist with water in the saucer under them. Dry plants like scudams do not require watering so often than once a week. Plants of average habits like geraniums, roses and heliotropes thrive best if watered daily, though the soil should not become damp enough to become sour. A teaspoon of guano dissolved in water applied around the roots once a week will help to fertilize roses and some other house plants and induce them to bloom. The mixture should never be allowed to touch the stem or leaves. The temperature of water used on the window garden should be about the same as the temperature of the room. Apply water around the roots of the plant; do not wet the leaves often than once a month, when they should be removed from the window and thoroughly sprinkled in order to wash off the dust which may have collected on them. Callas, India-rubber plants and many others should be thoroughly sponged off to remove the dust. Begonias and a few other plants should never be wet except around the roots.

The Strawberry. The principal points involved in the successful culture of the strawberry are: 1. Prepare the ground by deep plowing and subsoiling; apply a dressing of rotted manure, equal to twenty cords per acre; spread it over the surface and mix it with the soil by repeated disintegration with a harrow. The best crops are produced on strong, loamy soil; if somewhat clayey it will be all the better, provided it is drained.

Wedding Gift Burdens. A young couple just starting life, with only enough for simple and economical living, received at their wedding several hundred handsome, expensive, and many of them ornamental presents; presents from relatives whom they had never seen, from mere acquaintances, and from people for whom they cared nothing. It took them years, as they said, to live down these presents. Many of them they simply put in a safe deposit vault; but they felt under obligation to each giver of gifts, and when, in turn, their friends and acquaintances were invited, the young couple felt in duty bound not only to send them a present, but one that as nearly as possible approached in financial value the gift given them. It behooves us to call a halt in the giving of engagement presents, and to curb as much as possible promiscuous giving in wedding presents. A wedding is a family affair, and an intimate sharing in it belongs to those alone who are nearest the bride and groom in blood and in sympathy.

Good Citizen. The good citizen does not wear side-whiskers. He keeps his children in the country or in the attic. His conversation on the cars is not punctuated with the words "deal" ten thousand dollars. On the cars he does not stare into the poor woman's purse. He does not act so religious on Sundays that he neglects his duties to embrace paganism. He does not furnish his boy with a sign and with letters of manure to prey upon the lives of his neighbor's children. He rightly mistrusts his own boy more than any other boy on the street. He does not run to you with trumped up falsehoods about your boy. Such is the good citizen. It is unnecessary to say of such a man as this that he does not keep a dog.

Daily Heroism. What if we cannot be a Napoleon inspiring to action mighty armies that change the destinies of a continent; what if we cannot be a Joan of Arc, and rescue our country from the invaders; what if we cannot be a Florence Nightingale carrying peace and comfort to the wounded and suffering in the hospitals; what if we cannot be a Lincoln, striking the shackles from four million slaves; what if we cannot lead in the halls of congress, or stir men's blood by the power of our eloquence; what if we were born in time of peace when the thunder of cannon no longer reverberates among our hills to rouse the sluggish heart to action; what if we live in times of plenty when there is no cry going up from the starving to awake sympathetic tears; what if everything is tame and commonplace about us, why then, greater is the effort that brings nobility to the service, more honorable the heroism of daily life that is born not of excitement, but of the intrinsic heroism of our nature.

What is the difference between dumbness and sense? "I am," replied the candid man, "is represented by the joke you make yourself; nonsense is represented by the joke some other fellow makes."

The meetings are always open to any who wish to become members. ...Gospel Temperance meetings, conducted by members of the W. C. T. U., are held every Sunday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock, in the vestry of the Methodist church. All are welcome. Charles Baxton, years ago one of the well known brewers of England, after years of experience and study of the great question, deliberately wrote as follows: "Looking at the manifold and frightful evils that spring from drunkenness, we think we are justified in saying that it is the most dreadful of all the ills that afflict the British Isles. We are convinced that if a statesman who heartily wished to do the utmost possible good to his country were thoughtfully to inquire which of the topics of the day deserved the most intense force of his ability, the true reply would be that he should study the means by which this worst of plagues should be stayed." What say our truly patriotic Canadians of to-day? The need is now even more urgent than ever before. God send us the men with hearts and brains for this great work!

On Sunday, April 16th, a children's meeting was held in the Methodist vestry, in place of the regular evangelistic service conducted by the W. C. T. U. The meeting was left chiefly to the care of Miss Scott, who arranged for and conducted the service. "Our Young Lives for Christ" was the very appropriate topic chosen. Addresses bearing more or less directly upon this topic were given by Mrs G. F. Curry, Mrs J. F. Tufts, Mrs Morrison and Mr. McDonald, of the Manual Training School of Horton Academy. The two last speakers gave special emphasis to purity and temperance. All the remarks were earnest and pointed and very appropriate for the occasion. The chief interest of the meeting, however, centered in the efforts of the children themselves. The beautiful songs given by some, and the more beautiful scripture texts recited by others, added a great charm to the meeting, and we would not have missed the power there may be in young lives given to Christ and His work. Other meetings of this kind may be held by the W. C. T. U. from time to time, and it is earnestly hoped they may prove as interesting and instructive as the first children's meeting.

Blasts from the Ram's Horn. Fear to die until you have done some good that will always live. The man who worships a golden calf is burning incense to himself. There is nothing easier to believe than a pleasing lie about ourselves. The strongest man in the world is the one who can best control himself. We sometimes think we need more grace, when all we need is more rest. No man believes the bible to be true who is not trying to be true to the bible. Had the woman who gave the two mites been trying to see how many tickets she could sell for a concert in the temple to repair the roof, it may be that she would not have attracted the Lord's attention.

Talks on Temperance. The statement of the Brewers' Gazette that America manufactures thirty-one million barrels of beer in a year is startling. Who drinks it? Half the people of the country never touch it. Another one-fourth drink much less than the half barrel which would be their proportion. Possibly an eighth or three-sixteenths drink their half barrel. The rest goes to the craving of the "old guard" of the saloons. Of this old guard every city has its quota. We know its members by sight. Every man wears the badge of dishonor in plain sight, and in fact, all over him. One of them was fined last week in a neighboring city for assault and battery. He threw stones at bad boys who called him "an old beer barrel." The boys were hoodlums, but they knew where he got his immense girth and his lurid complexion. Members of the old guard wear their badge not only all over, but all through them. Physicians assure us that no class of men are so incapable of resisting disease as the habitual beer drinker. Medicine does not do its work. All their organs are diseased. A slight injury, a severe cold, or a shock of the mind, will commonly provoke acute attacks, ending fatally. Compared with even their other inebriates, who use different kinds of alcohol, they are more generally diseased and harder to cure. The Scientific American says that in its observations "beer-drinking produces the lowest kind of inebriety, closely allied to criminal insanity. The most dangerous class of ruffians in our large cities are beer drinkers. Intellectually, a stupor amounting almost to paralysis, arrests the reason, changing all the higher faculties into a mere animalism—sensual, selfish, sluggish, varied only with paroxysms of anger, remorseless and brutal."
