CHAPTER I

"This is my first visit to London, and I begged aunt to bring me here; I had heard and read so much of it. I am so fond of animals."

"Yes?" he nodded.

"Yes," she went on, as freely and frankly as if she had known him for years. "I have a horse of my own, two dogs, three cats, some white mice and a guinea-pig. I had a monkey, but it broke my aunt's best tea set—old Crown Derby, you know—and it had to go; it was like a dear little baby with wicked eyes."

He nodded again—he seemed to be scarcely listening—and the impression her talk and voice gave him was, that he had taken charge of a girl who was a mere child.

"I once bought a parrot of a sailor—we live near a port—but aunt said it talked bad language, so I exchanged it for some Belgian hares."

"You must have a perfect menagerie," he remarked.

She laughed. How soon was the man to thrill from head to foot at that laugh! And yet, now it affected him not the least bit in the world. It struck him as musical, pleasant—that was all.

"It was awfully hard to part with them. I brought the dogs, and the guinea-pig, and the white mice, but I had to leave the rest behind—Oh, there is the place—but my aunt is not there!" she broke off.

The man looked round, as a man does when he has undertaken to do something which he knows will be a nuisance.

"Perhaps she is searching for you, as you have been searching for her," he said. "We had better go round the Gardens. What is your aunt like? But you will see her, of course, if we run against her."

"She is tall and stately," said the girl; "and she is dressed in gray, like I am; but in silk. Oh, of course I should see her ever so far off!"

"Then let us go round," he said; "there is no cause for anxiety."

"I am not anxious," said the girl, frankly. "Of course aunt will be a little angry—well, not angry; she never would look up at his face laughingly, and call his attention to some odd bird or quadruped, and the man would come down out of the clouds and smile gravely.

He answered all her questions with calm exactitude, and once or twice volunteered some information.

"You must know a great deal about animals," she remarked. "I wish I did," and she sighed.

"I've traveled a little," he responded.

"I wish I had!" she said, with a half smile and a half sigh. "But girls don't travel, do they?"

"I don't know; I've met a few," he replied, grimly. She did not detect the irony.

"Girls are so different to me. Now, it wouldn't matter if you were lost instead of me."

"Not much," he said.

"No; you would not be scolded and told—oh, all sorts of things. I don't see aunt anywhere—and oh, I am so thirsty!"

"Are you? Why didn't you say so before?" he asked.

"I didn't think of it before I saw the refreshment-place," she replied, frankly.

He led her up the path and put a chair for her at one of the tables under the trees, full in sight of the elephants, promenading with their cages of assorted human beings, and ordered tea for two.

The waiter brought it and set it down with the usual rattle in front of the girl, and she poured it out with simple gravity, as if—well, as if they were brother and sister, or man and wife.

He leaned back in his chair, and regarded her with a slight increase of interest. She was certainly very beautiful. Her eyes were rather a strange blue—the blue that darkens quickly under any swift or deep emotion. The lashes were black and long, and the brows—as he looked at her with the calm, cool regard of a man of the world to whom a woman's looks count for just as much or so little, he remembered a picture in the old gallery at Rotterdam. It was a picture of one of the saints, and it had a brow like this girl's, and soft, reddish-brown hair, all fluffy and tenderly—in an odd kind of way, he felt sure that it waved and fluffed naturally—and red, mobile lips as expressive as lips could be; and when the girl before him smiled, and then laughed softly at the antics of a couple of children dodging a dromedary, he caught himself wondering whether the saint of the picture ever laughed or smiled. Then he looked at her dress, and seeing its simplicity, pondered over her social position. It was evident that the girl was a lady. Her very innocence and frankness would prove that, if her voice and manner had not done so.

"Do you take sugar?" she asked, lifting her eyes to his so suddenly that he found it necessary to drop his own critical ones. "No? How strange that seems! I do—as much as I can get."

"You can pour the contents of the sugar-basin into your cup if you like," he said.

"I wonder what the waiter would say! No; I am going to be content with three lumps. Oh, how nice the tea is! I was so very, very thirsty—weren't you?"

"Yes," he said, simply. He beckoned a waiter, and told him to bring some cake. The girl brightened up at it, and after helping herself, cut a slice for him.

"Not like cake?" she said. "That's strange, too; I thought every one liked cake."

"Most young people do," he said, with the half-weary smile.

She looked at him with something like actual attention, her cake poised in her hand.

"Are you—old?" she said. The simplicity of the question, to say nothing of its frankness, brought a full-blown smile to his face; and certainly he did not look old at that moment.

is; she couldn't be; but I know that the carriage was ordered to pick us up at one of the gates at six o'clock, and I think I could find it. Are we going through the lions' house? I hope we can. I've been through twice; but I should never get tired of it—should you?"

"Eh?" he said, absently. Her voice was musical, but he was not paying much attention to her words. "Oh, I don't know. I go to it very often."

"I saw you just now," she said. "I saw you come out from the back of the dens with the keeper."

"Did you?" he said, listlessly. "Yes; I had been round to see a young lion I brought over."

She stopped dead short and looked at him, her limpid eyes wide as saucers, and, it must be confessed, her by no means small mouth almost as open.

"A lion you brought over! You, yourself?" she exclaimed.

He smiled a little wearily and listlessly.

"There is nothing wonderful in that," he said; "I have just come from Africa; there are lions there still, strange to say. I caught this one, after shooting its mother. It's a fine young lion, and doing very well."

"Oh, how I should like to see it!" she exclaimed, not shyly or hesitatingly, but frankly, like a girl, a child, if you like, whose wishes have always been granted.

"Should you? Nothing easier!" he said, just in the same tone. "The keeper shall show it to you."

He took her into the house beckoned to the keeper, who touched his hat as respectfully as before, and, to the girl's ecstatic delight, led them through the passage, between the cages, to the back of the dens.

"Just show us the youngster, keeper," he said.

The keeper touched his hat again.

"Yes, my lord," he said, obsequiously.

They had passed into a kind of covered yard in which were standing several huge travelling-cages. Some of these were covered with tarpaulin, and from one of these the keeper drew aside the covering and revealed a fine young lion. As the light streamed in upon him he blinked and snarled, showing his white even teeth angrily.

"Oh, what a beauty!" exclaimed the girl. "And you really caught it! Oh, how I envy you! What a lovely mane it has!"

As she spoke, she went down on one knee, and, all unconsciously, got a little too close to the cage.

Every one knows how quickly a cat's paw shoots out after a bird or a mouse. Like a flash of lightning the young lord of the forest darted out his paw at the girl. But the gentleman had caught the vicious look in the animal's eyes, and before the sharp claws could reach her, he had caught her by the arm and drawn her back. He was only just in time to save her, and not in time to save himself; for the sound of rent cloth mixed with the snarl and roar of disappointment which the lion sent forth.

The keeper struck at the cage, shouted, and let the tarpaulin down.

"Hope he didn't catch you, my lord," he said, with anxious respect.

The gentleman shook his head, and slipped his arm with the torn sleeve behind him.

"Not at all," he said, quietly. "Show us that young panther, keeper."

The girl looked from one to the other. She was a little pale.

"Are you sure it did not touch your arm?" she said, her sweet eyes fixed upon his face with a troubled expression. "I—I thought I heard the cloth tear. Are you sure, please?"

"Quite sure," he said, a little wearily. "There is the most dangerous animal in the Gardens."

He nodded toward the panther, who regarded them with a sullen ferocity, and as he nodded he took her arm, and held her away from the cage.

The keeper showed them several other animals in the private yard, and now and again the gentleman dropped a word of criticism and advice, which, the girl noticed, the keeper received with marked deference. It seemed to her that her guardian for the time being must be a man of some importance.

But presently he appeared to remember that they were not very likely to find her people at the back of the lions' den, and with a nod to the keeper, he led her out again. They walked round and round the most frequented parts of the gardens for some time, stopping to look at the various cages, and the girl chatted and asked questions with a perfect freedom from shyness. Every now and then she would look up at his face laughingly, and call his attention to some odd bird or quadruped, and the man would come down out of the clouds and smile gravely.

He answered all her questions with calm exactitude, and once or twice volunteered some information.

"You must know a great deal about animals," she remarked. "I wish I did," and she sighed.

"I've traveled a little," he responded.

"I wish I had!" she said, with a half smile and a half sigh. "But girls don't travel, do they?"

"I don't know; I've met a few," he replied, grimly. She did not detect the irony.

"Girls are so different to me. Now, it wouldn't matter if you were lost instead of me."

"Not much," he said.

"No; you would not be scolded and told—oh, all sorts of things. I don't see aunt anywhere—and oh, I am so thirsty!"

"Are you? Why didn't you say so before?" he asked.

"I didn't think of it before I saw the refreshment-place," she replied, frankly.

He led her up the path and put a chair for her at one of the tables under the trees, full in sight of the elephants, promenading with their cages of assorted human beings, and ordered tea for two.

The waiter brought it and set it down with the usual rattle in front of the girl, and she poured it out with simple gravity, as if—well, as if they were brother and sister, or man and wife.

He leaned back in his chair, and regarded her with a slight increase of interest. She was certainly very beautiful. Her eyes were rather a strange blue—the blue that darkens quickly under any swift or deep emotion. The lashes were black and long, and the brows—as he looked at her with the calm, cool regard of a man of the world to whom a woman's looks count for just as much or so little, he remembered a picture in the old gallery at Rotterdam. It was a picture of one of the saints, and it had a brow like this girl's, and soft, reddish-brown hair, all fluffy and tenderly—in an odd kind of way, he felt sure that it waved and fluffed naturally—and red, mobile lips as expressive as lips could be; and when the girl before him smiled, and then laughed softly at the antics of a couple of children dodging a dromedary, he caught himself wondering whether the saint of the picture ever laughed or smiled. Then he looked at her dress, and seeing its simplicity, pondered over her social position. It was evident that the girl was a lady. Her very innocence and frankness would prove that, if her voice and manner had not done so.

"Do you take sugar?" she asked, lifting her eyes to his so suddenly that he found it necessary to drop his own critical ones. "No? How strange that seems! I do—as much as I can get."

"You can pour the contents of the sugar-basin into your cup if you like," he said.

"I wonder what the waiter would say! No; I am going to be content with three lumps. Oh, how nice the tea is! I was so very, very thirsty—weren't you?"

"Yes," he said, simply. He beckoned a waiter, and told him to bring some cake. The girl brightened up at it, and after helping herself, cut a slice for him.

"Not like cake?" she said. "That's strange, too; I thought every one liked cake."

"Most young people do," he said, with the half-weary smile.

She looked at him with something like actual attention, her cake poised in her hand.

"Are you—old?" she said. The simplicity of the question, to say nothing of its frankness, brought a full-blown smile to his face; and certainly he did not look old at that moment.

It hardly seems possible that there is a woman in this country who will continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial after all the evidence that is continually being published, proving beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved more suffering among women than any other medicine in the world.

THIS WOMAN'S RECOVERY

Shows Remarkable Curative Power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Chesley, Ont.—"Before using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was a total wreck. I had terrible pains in my sides and was not regular. Finally I got so weak I could not go up stairs without stopping to rest half way up the steps. I tried two doctors but they did me no good. I saw your medicine advertised in the newspapers and thought I would give it a trial. I took four bottles of the Vegetable Compound and was restored to health. I am married, am the mother of two children, and do all my household, milk eight cows, and do a hired man's work and enjoy the best of health. I also found Vegetable Compound a great help for my weak back before my babies were born. I recommend it to all my friends who are in need of medicine, and you may print this letter if you wish."

Another Gun-powder Plot.

Frustrated By Scotland Yard--Armed Men Attack Belfast Workers--Irish Secretary Denies Connivance at Reprisals.

PLOT FRUSTRATED.
LONDON, Sept. 28. Scotland Yard has frustrated a plot to blow up the Irish Office and the Treasury Building here, a Scotland Yard official declared today. He said, "Sinn Feiners and Bolsheviks planned the explosion in reprisals for police activities against them. The Irish planned to send taxi cabs loaded with high explosives into the street before the two buildings. After the explosion, it was declared, it was planned to have a large body of armed men rush into the district, inflict as much damage as possible, and escape in the confusion which was certain to follow." The official said a number of secret arrests had been made and a number of others were implicated. The leaders, it was admitted, were unknown yet.

BARRACKS RAIDED.
MALLON, County Cork, Sept. 28. The military barracks were raided this morning, the raiders succeeding in escaping with arms. One soldier was shot down.

RIOTING RENEWED IN BELFAST.
BELFAST, Sept. 28. There was a recurrence last night of the rioting and shooting, which have been in progress at intervals since the week-end. The outbreak occurred in the Old Lodge Road District, where shipyard workers were attacked by armed men. Seven persons were wounded by the revolver firing. The military dispersed the rioters by bayonet charges. There were seventeen arrests for violations of the curfew law.

DO NOT COUNTENANCE REPRISALS.
LONDON, Sept. 28. Reprisals in Ireland are neither condoned nor supported by the government, it was declared today by Sir Hamar Greenwood, the Chief Secretary for Ireland. Sir Hamar made this statement in reply to the storm of criticism which has been raised in the British press over the recent declaration of General Sir Neville MacReady, commander of the military forces in Ireland. "The government condemn reprisals, have issued orders condemning them, and have taken steps to prevent them," said Sir Hamar. Nearly 100 policemen have been brutally murdered, five recently in Clare, on one day, by expanding bullets, resulting in horrible mutilation. In spite of the intolerable provocation the police forces maintain their discipline, are increasing in number and efficiency, and command the support of every law-abiding citizen. The number of alleged reprisals is few and the damage done exaggerated.

TREATY RECEIVES ROYAL ASSENT.
ROME, Sept. 28. King Victor Emmanuel yesterday gave royal assent to the treaty of St. Germain, re-establishing peace between Italy and Austria.

HUGHES TO RETIRE.
LONDON, Sept. 28. The Sydney, New South Wales, correspondent of the Morning Post, in a cable issued today, hints at the retirement from political life of Prime Minister Hughes, of the Australian Federal Government. The correspondent says that a testimonial in recognition of Premier Hughes' services to the Australian Commonwealth is being raised in view of the possibility of his retirement. The correspondent adds Premier Hughes would leave public life a poor man.

A ROTTEN DEAL EXPOSED.
CHICAGO, Sept. 28. Eddie Cicotte confessed that he engineered the deal by which the White Sox lost last year's world series, an official of the court announced this afternoon. Cicotte told the Grand Jury, it was announced, that he received $10,000 for his part in losing the series. Eight of the White Sox players have been suspended.

FATAL RAILWAY COLLISION.
YORKTON, Sask., Sept. 28. Four men were killed and several injured in a rear-end collision between Canadian National freight trains at Canora, Sask.

UKRAINIANS ADVANCING.
BERNE, Sept. 28. The Ukrainian Mission here reported today that the Ukrainian army is advancing continually against the Russian Soviet forces and is being supported by the peasants who are mobilizing.

SUPPLYING WRANGLER WITH MUNITIONS.
CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 28. Forty-five thousand rifles and eight million cartridges, which were captured from the Germans by the Russians during the World War, are being shipped to General Wrangel, head of the anti-Bolshevik government in South Russia.

NEW YORK "DRY" STATISTICS.
NEW YORK, Sept. 28. Chief Magistrate McAdoo, of New York city, yesterday made public figures showing a great increase in drunkenness here since the dry law came into effect. The statistics reveal a tremendous increase in arrests for drunkenness during May and June of this year.

AIR RACE ON.
ETAMPES, Sept. 28. The International Air Race for the James Gordon Bennett trophy started this afternoon when Kirach, one of the three French entrants, took the air and crossed the starting line at one thirty-seven. The weather cleared this afternoon.

PRIZE FOR SCHOONER RACE.
HALIFAX, Sept. 28. The sum of two thousand dollars has been subscribed as prizes for the schooner race from Lunenburg to Halifax, which will be a feature of the carnival here from October fourth to ninth.

TURK OFFICERS DEMAND BACK PAY.
CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 28. Five hundred reserve Turkish officers went to the war office last week demanding that two months back pensions be paid seven thousand men whom they represented. They declared they would resort to violence if their demands were not met within two days. The government is reported to have no money for any purpose.

FRENCH AVIATOR WINNER; RAYNHAM WITHDRAWS.
ETAMPES, Sept. 28. Sodi Laconte, the famous French aviator, today won the international airplane race for the James Gordon Bennett Trophy. He covered the course of 183.3 miles in one hour, six minutes, 17 1-5 seconds. F. P. Raynham, sole British representative, withdrew after covering the first lap.

The Price of Sugar.
(From the Toronto Christian Guardian.)

The sugar market is in a strangely disturbed condition. The Canadian refiners have been charging 24 cents a pound, and they declared that they were only making a very small profit. And the United States market was about the same as ours. And then suddenly the Arbuckle Bros. dropped the price to 17 cents. The other American refiners, however, refused to meet this, and kept their price at 24 cents. But inside of a few days the strain became too much, and the Federal and Howell Sugar Refineries both met the Arbuckle cut. Not only so, but the retail price dropped in Detroit to 18 cents. Our Canadian refiners have cut their price to 22 cents, but this is the limit at the time of writing. What is going to happen? It was generally argued that there was a sugar shortage upon this continent, and it is not long since our Canadian housewives were warned that there was not enough sugar to go around. And yet, during the four months ending July 31st, 1920, Canada exported $10,055,054 worth of sugar, while her imports during the same period were $41,397,580, or three times the value of our whole sugar import for the year 1911. And while Canadian refiners received an average of 17 cents a pound for refined sugar sold in the United States

It cleans perfectly and hygienically every pore of the skin and scalp while its c. p. glycerine is most soothing.

More than that, JAP ROSE is so absolutely soluble in any kind of water, that just a dip and a rub or two, and almost at once, like magic you have the most profuse, bubbly lather—a lather in which there is no sediment or scum and which rinses quickly and easily. No undissolved soap left in the delicate skin pores to clog them and cause skin trouble—not when you use the pure, golden cake of transparent JAP ROSE soap.

Every touch a soothing, refreshing delight for the grown-ups as well as the kiddies, when it's JAP ROSE, either for the bath, for the hair or for the face and hands.

Mainly About People.
They wanted U.S. Secretary of State Bainbridge Colby to pose in a motion picture comedy film, according to a New York paper, and he refused to do it.

Gilbert K. Chesterton, the famous English essayist, in criticizing certain extreme modern theories of easy divorce, says: "I have just returned from an eastern country where an eastern gentleman apologized to me for the fact that little girls were forcibly married at the age of 8, by saying that after all, they could be easily divorced at any time."

Rodman Wanamaker, deputy commissioner of police of New York city, is a son of John Wanamaker, the famous merchant. At the funeral of Mrs. John Wanamaker this week, in Philadelphia, a choir of 32 men of the New York police department attended in full police uniform and sang hymns as a tribute to the younger Wanamaker.

An interesting fact comes to memory in the candidacy of Senator John J. Walsh for the Democratic nomination for governor. Mr. Walsh's first speech in the Massachusetts senate was his eulogy after the latter's death. It was a unique tribute to Senator

Walsh's oratorical powers to be selected to make this speech immediately after taking his seat in the upper branch of the state legislature.

General John J. Pershing observed his sixtieth birthday on last Tuesday at his home in Chevy Chase. It was on the eve of his fifty-eighth birthday, Sept. 12, 1918, that the American army launched its drive in the St. Mihiel salient, which was destined to pave the way for the decisive blow in the world war. At his birthday dinner the general was surrounded by members of his staff and the evening was brim full of reminiscences.

Lord Rathcreedan, who will head the British delegation coming to Washington, Oct. 2, as the advance guard of the Pilgrim Tercentenary, is an Irishman. Before he became peer in 1916, his name was Cecil William Norton. He is a native of County Wicklow, Ireland and the son of an Irish Protestant clergyman. He is a graduate of Erin's famed Trinity College, Dublin. Lord Rathcreedan adopted the army as a career, and served with the celebrated Fifth Royal Irish Lancers in India for several years. He has held minor positions in the Lloyd George Government.

Governor Cox is quite a horse fancier, and has driven his own horses in races. Horseback riding is his favorite means of exercise. The Democratic candidate for president showed how keen he was for this sport following a speech at the Minnesota State Fair. Riding in a sulky, he drove a pacing horse named Peter Nash, time 2:01 1-2. The horse had had been entered for one of the races. The governor pulled down his soft black hat, but did not remove his eyeglasses. While he drove

LOOKING BACK ON YOUR PRESENT BLESSINGS.

Just like paradise. "And didn't you think it was then?" I asked.

She Didn't Know What "Harried" Meant, Then.

"Mercy, no!" she said. "I was so disappointed because they promised us in our cottage, and because I had to give up that trip I planned, and so upset because I had to have two of John's cousins for two weeks when I wanted some friends of my own, that I thought I was having a horrid summer. Horrid—as if I knew what horrid meant, then! Oh, why can't we recognize we're happy when we are? We look back at blessings and know they are blessings. I guess I must learn to look back on my present blessings instead of my past ones. Next time I have any, I certainly will."

"Next time," I asked. "Isn't that what you'd have said last summer?"

"You mean—"

"That you have some now that you might look back at some other time."

She looked doubtful for a minute and then she nodded.

Blessings She Might Look Back On.

"Yes," she said, "you're right. Jack did have the infantile paralysis, but he is getting better and so many children die or are lame for life. And of course it is a blessing that father has money enough so that he can have everything done for him. And of course John's business isn't as good as it was during the war, but he isn't carrying any heavy credits like some men."

"Then you can imagine conditions in which you would look back upon this time as blessed?"

"I certainly can," she said with real energy. "Aren't you wonderful to make me realize it?"

"Wonderful!" said I. "Hardly. The wonderful thing would be to make myself realize the same thing when I'm blue. That's where the hard part comes."

"The next time you feel you need to look back on your present blessings," she said, "you call on me."

I promised, and on that contract we parted.

Why Didn't We Realize?

Of course I know such a way of looking at things doesn't actually change circumstances, but to convince me that it doesn't help would be a hundred times harder than to put Humpty Dumpty back on his wall.

I don't suppose there is anyone who, after the loss of some blessing, especially such a blessing as health, hasn't said, "Oh, why didn't we realize our blessings when we had them?"

Well, why don't we? Why don't we, to use my neighbor's phrase, look back on our present blessings instead of our past ones?

Try it with us some day and see if it doesn't help.

Household Notes.

Never flavor a custard until cold.

Rice water may be used in meatless tomato soup.

Dye stained white stockings with a good black dye.

Cauliflower is delicious served with cheese sauce.

A low temperature is required for all egg cookery.

Muscovites are jellies whipped like snow pudding.

Serve hot cooked turnips cubed in lemon butter sauce.

Cook all cereals over hot water; never let the water boil.

An old chiffonier can be painted white and be useful in the kitchen.

One cup of unsifted flour makes almost a cup and a half of sifted flour.

Meriques should be cooked in a very slow oven, and watched carefully.

A clever use of different sauces is a great help toward variety in the menu.

Allow extra cretonne for bureau scarfs when buying it for bedroom windows.

Three tablespoonfuls of cracker crumbs make a pleasant addition to an omelet.

Never grease the pan for a sponge cake, and bake it in a very slow oven.

Grape juice can be bottled now and used for making jelly as occasion requires.

To remove a worn stair carpet, apply a good dye to the worn spots with a brush.

Never buy pecans which have a "varnished" look. They are not the highest grade.

If a lamp is placed so as to reflect properly, a mirror will light up a dark corner.

After browning veal cutlets, cook them for thirty minutes in water-cress sauce.

Apples for canning should be blanched for one minute, as they shrink greatly.

Grape juice is an excellent substitute for wine in preparing grape fruit for table use.

Mix cereal with cold water before adding the hot water. Don't stir it while cooking.

If you skuff your colored shoes, take a wax crayon of the same color and rub over the spot.

It is better to save cauliflower, summer cabbage and cucumbers in brine than to can them.

To make starch for black waists, cook one tablespoonful of starch in one pint of boiling coffee.

Beat cocoa with a Dover egg beater just before serving, and scum will not form on the cups.

Baste a roasting ham with a few tablespoonfuls of grape juice. This gives it a delicious flavor.

Small fruits which are not whole or firm enough to use for preserves should be made into jams.

The envelopes which have transparent name-spaces make excellent holders for buttons and tape.

Wild grapes, gathered just before they are fully ripe, are the best kind for jellies and preserves.

WON'T, THE GIANT.

"There are no giants to-day," said he. "As big as the ones that used to be."

"Oh! who told you that?" said I. "And where did they go and why did they die?"

And if they existed in olden times To frighten the people with all their crimes.

In spite of what somebody else may say I am certain the giants still live to-day.

"Now I happen to know of a giant here With a mouth that stretches from ear to ear.

And a terrible face and his hair's like wire And it stands on end and it shoots out fire.

His particular joy is to make boys bad And their fathers and mothers and grandfolds sad.

The grown-ups see him, but children don't. And the name of this horrible man is Wont."

"That's a funny name, but it's his all right. And he comes by day and he comes by night.

When you least expect him or never should To spoil the peace of the neighbourhood.

Why don't we kill him? Well, that is queer; The grown-ups have tried it year after year.

But it's something we haven't the power to do;

"You see, it's this way: Every girl and boy This terrible giant can soon destroy. But men can't do it, and so to-day You had a chance when I heard you say:

"I won't!" to your mother when she asked you Just to do something you ought to do. Now if you had smiled when she called, and said:

"Why, sure I will!" you'd have killed him dead."

This is to certify that I have used MINARD'S LINIMENT in my family for years and consider it the best liniment on the market. I have found it excellent for horse flesh.

It is a strange and savage time; there is a carnival of crime, that never stops or rests; the slayer to his victim wends, and voters kill their l a d y friends and ship them off in chests. Assassinations fill the land; we find dead gents on every hand, they clutter up the mews, and peelers and detectives toil, and vainly burn the midnight oil to thrash out stacks of clues. Here where Pacific billows roar three murdered guys were washed ashore within two weeks or one; and inland other chaps were slain, and no one offered to explain just why the deeds were done. These beastly crimes we all abhor are but the outcome of the war, the years of deadly strife, where men who fought for flag or king soon felt that nature's cheapest thing is stuff called human life. For years we talked of doom and death and every time we drew a breath it seemed to taste of gore; we read of dead men piled in ricks, and all the boats upon the Sixty were freighted corpses o'er. The peoples all have learned to slay, and now, if some one's in their way, they see that some one dies; oh, may we see the times again when gents won't swat their fellowmen, as they would swat the flies!

The Tragedy of the West Coast.

In referring yesterday to the brighter and more promising aspect that has made its appearance, we were speaking of St. John's alone, and we would that the same thing could be made apply to the West Coast. There—and deplorable it is to be compelled to make the statement—there is no brightening up, neither is there any early prospect of such a condition visible. True, cargoes of fish have been allowed to sail from ports there, but these should have been away weeks if not months, ago. Yet after all these cargoes are but made up of the fall and spring catches of fish. Very little summer fish are in them because the regulations, which prevented the cargoes from being marketed at the time when the West Coast ships its voyage, were enforced against their export, an enactment tying up the industry of the whole coast, for when shippers could not get their collections to market it was obvious that they would not enter extensively into further purchases and have them tied up also. Thus there was no encouragement to fishermen to continue their avocation and the result was that they reeled up their lines, dried out their trawls and stared a gloomy future in the face.

In proof of this there is no need to go further than submit the gist of the correspondence between the people of Burnt Islands, district of Burgeo and LaPoile and Hon. W. F. Coaker, Acting Premier and Minister of Marine and Fisheries. Burnt Islands is essentially a fishing settlement. All its interests are devoted to the fishery, and its people were prosperous, industrious, and especially energetic in wresting their livelihood from the depths of the sea. Men owned the skiffs in which they fished and were independent in the sense that they could go whither they pleased for supplies. They were not bound to any merchant by debt or other obligations. They fished from January to December and the fruits of their toil made them comfortable and free from fear of the future. Many of them perchance had a little capital laid by in the event of an emergency and progress was the motto of the population. Let us see how the Fish Regulations have changed a thriving settlement into a place of despondency and gloom. Conditions became so acute at Burnt Islands because of trade stagnation consequent upon the enforcement of the regulations that the people called a mass meeting, and at that meeting memorialised Mr. Coaker to the effect that incalculable harm was being done by his enactments. This memorial contained the following: "The acute situation now prevailing has been hastened and aggravated by ill-thought out rules and badly applied regulations, and we now find ourselves—ALONG WITH PRACTICAL—LY THE WHOLE DISTRICT—cut off from the means of existence. We have not AS A CLASS, sufficient means to enable us to fit out for fishing or to provide coal and other absolute necessities to carry on our work. Further, AS A CLASS, we are unable to pay our passages away to obtain employment elsewhere or to keep our families while we are away.

"This statement is not in the nature of a whim. IT IS A PLAIN STATEMENT OF FACTS AS THEY EXIST. We are not sleeping and do not want charity. We realise that regulations, which never should have been put into force before proper notice was given, have completely crippled our industry everywhere and thrown us on our backs."

Such is the opening chapter of the tragedy within a tragedy,—that of Burnt Islands. In the next article other phases of the memorial and Mr. Coaker's reply thereto will be considered.

How It Affects Fishermen.

Whatever the effect of shutting out New York buyers of fish in this country may be to the merchants, there is no doubt at all that it is a bad thing for the fishermen. It was the men buying for New York firms in St. John's and outports the past ten years or more that always kept rising the price here for the fishermen. They always offered 10 and 20 cents per quintal more than the merchants, and as a result the latter had to follow and give the same price if not more, in order to get the fish from independent fishermen. This is too obvious to need any discussion. The fishermen know it and will again know it to their grief this fall, if the New York buyers are driven out of the fish buying business. It was the New York buyers competition that made the fish advance by ten and twenty cent steps every fall. In cutting them out therefore is a direct blow at the fishermen. It should make no difference to the fishermen who buys his fish as long as he gets the highest possible price in the local market.

Emigration Exodus Continues.

The S.S. Kyle on her outward trip Monday night was crowded with second class passengers, bound to the U.S.A. and Canada to seek a living.

Schr. Harriet at Fogo.

Messrs. T. H. Carter & Co. received a message yesterday saying that the Danish schooner Harriet had arrived at Fogo, all well. The wreckage reported as picked up last week off Fogo was supposed to have come from this vessel.

LeMarchant Road.

LeMarchant Road has lately been put in first class condition. A coat of tar has been applied to the surface making it as smooth as an asphalt pavement. It is advisable that all heavy traffic be diverted from the thoroughfare for the time being.

Fish Plentiful.

Fishermen on the local grounds are doing well and yesterday evening the coves were well stocked. At Portugal Cove fishermen are also doing well and during last week boats returned from the grounds with 4 and 5 qtls. of codfish each.

A meeting of the members of Spencer Club will be held in Spencer College Hall on Thursday, the 30th inst., at 4.15 p.m. J. TAYLOR, Hon. Secretary.

Steamer Trawler Sebastopol

Work is being rushed on the steam trawler Sebastopol, now at the dock pier, to fit her for service on the Humbermouth-Battle Hill route, and it is expected that she will get away about Friday, other work to be completed later. This little boat in conjunction with the S. S. Diana is being put on a service for which they are wholly unsuitable. The cost of having two ships run where one suitable one would do seems not to give the Government any concern. The trawlers were bought at a cost of thousands of dollars and their price has been doubled fitting them up. The Sebastopol has accommodation for about five cars of freight, is fitted with 10 bunks in the cabin and 16 in the steerage, which is forward on deck; quarters for the crew being below.

Norwegian Fish Consumption Increasing

By reference to the Oporto Stocks, as received by the Board of Trade and published elsewhere, it will be seen that the consumption of our fish for the past week has increased by little more than 100 qtls., whilst the consumption of Norwegian has increased nearly 1000 with practically the same stocks. There is now about 49,000 qtls. of our fish in Portugal and on the way.

Schr. "Portia" Lost.

CREW SAFE.

The Collector of Customs is in receipt of a message saying that the schooner Portia, coming from the straits, has gone ashore near Raleigh, District of St. Barbe, and is a total loss. Capt. Belbin and crew landed safely. The vessel belonged to Hant's Harbor, Short Bros. being the owners.

Miss Katherine Hughes Coming.

Citizens of St. John's will shortly have an unprecedented opportunity of hearing the real facts and getting to the bottom of the Irish question. We learn that Miss Katherine Hughes of Montreal, the noted Canadian writer and lecturer, is expected in the city this week. Miss Hughes has recently visited Ireland for herself and embodied her impressions in a little book "Ireland", which is a model of concise statement, vivid presentation and restrained but forcible appeal. She is also the author of other writings on Irish and Canadian affairs. Miss Hughes has, since August, been making a coast to coast tour of Canada, lecturing at the principal points, and has everywhere made a deep and favourable impression by her well-nigh irresistible eloquence and irrefutable logic. If we may judge by her writings and by the accounts of her speeches, Miss Hughes knows her subject as few know it and can expound it better than most. All seekers for the truth and all who wish food for thought will look forward with pleasure to Miss Hughes' arrival.—Com.

G. W. V. A. Meeting.

LT.-COL. BERNARD RESIGNS.

A meeting of the Great War Veterans' Association was held in the T. A. Armoury last night. Colonel Bernard presided and considerable business came up for discussion. Comrade J. G. Higgins read the report of the Special Committee with regard to the 20% increase in Pensions which have been granted and paid to all widows, orphans, totally disabled men and dependents, this being retro-active to January 1st. The matter of the 20% increase for all other Pensioners is receiving the earnest attention of the Special Committee and they informed the Meeting that they were awaiting the report of Major Parsons of the Pensions Department, who went far into the matter of the granting of Pensions while in Ottawa. We understand this report is now being laid before the Government and it is hoped to have their decision in short.

Comrade Mitchell spoke for some length regarding the responsibilities himself and the late Secretary had taken with regard to the Building Funds. He pointed out that this Association was not incorporated. It would be most desirable to have this done as soon as possible.

The Financial Statement was read by the Secretary and copies of same distributed to the members. The President, in his remarks, said in part that the Association was on a fairly sound financial basis but that the earnings of the Club-Rooms, unfortunately, fell short of all anticipations, it being only $245.90 since being opened. It was pointed out that the expenditure required to run the Club Rooms in the same period was in the vicinity of $3,000.00 and it was felt that it was up to the members of the Association to discuss this and say how they thought the receipts of the Club Rooms could be increased.

The President informed the meeting that having the Financial Statement in view he desired to place a proposition before the members. This being an offer of $1500.00 which had been received for the ground flat including the Secretary's Office and basement. The present tenant, Comrade Matthews' rent being much below this figure, and as he had the matter of accepting the offer of $1500 up for discussion, the members were asked to express a sound view. Much discussion followed and on a motion from Comrade Higgins who felt that as the matter was of an urgent nature that it be held over till the next meeting. An amendment being put to this the motion was sustained and it was ordered that a Special meeting be called for Tuesday, October 5th, when it is hoped that the members will have a chance of thinking it over and giving expression to their views.

The President said he had much pleasure in taking advantage of the opportunity to express his sincere thanks to the late Secretary, Mr. P. A. Brien, who has at all times been conscientious and faithful in the discharge of his duties. He also paid tribute to the members of the Executive who had unstintingly given him assistance and help at all times and he wished to place on record his appreciation of their valuable services. He informed the meeting that it would probably be the last occasion when he would preside, as he was leaving the Country very shortly and asked the Vice-President to assume the duties of President until the Annual Meeting which takes place next month. In placing his resignation before the Association he desired to assure them that their welfare would always be his first consideration and he wished them well. He asked the members to stand together as they did when Overseas and he would then feel sure that all was well.

The Vice-President was sorry to hear that the President was taking his departure from amongst us but felt that he had the good wishes of everybody and thanked him for the efficient and self-sacrificing way in which he served the Association. He called upon the members to rise with him and give three hearty cheers for Colonel Bernard.

Comrade Garland spoke for some length with regard to having a representative of the G.W.V.A. placed on the Board of Pensions. In this he was ably sustained by Comrade Thistle and on the motion being put to the Association it was unanimously carried.

The Meeting then adjourned until Tuesday, Oct. 5th, when it is hoped that all members will make an effort to be present, concluding with the singing of the National Anthem.

Obituary.

MR. RICHARD BYRNE.

The many friends of Mr. Richard Byrne, Water Street, will learn with regret of his passing to the Great Beyond, at the General Hospital this morning. He entered the Hospital about a week ago to undergo a serious operation, which was successfully performed, and hope was held out for recovery, but the strain eventually proved too much for the once rugged constitution, and Mr. Byrne entered into rest.

The deceased was well and favourably known in St. John's, where he carried on business for a number of years at the corner of Water and Queen Streets. He leaves to mourn him a wife, one daughter in the Royal Bank of Canada, this city, and a son, at school, one brother in Canada, and a sister, Mrs. J. Flynn, of St. John's.

In his passing St. John's loses a good citizen, and his family an exemplary husband and father, to whom is extended general sympathy in their bereavement. May his soul rest in peace.—Com.

Dear Sir.—At a meeting of the members of the College held here a few days ago, I was asked to thank you on behalf of all interested in the welfare of the college, for the splendid service you rendered to our cause through the columns of your paper, while we were making our collection for this Institution. It was most good of you and we, one and all, very much appreciate all that you did. On behalf therefore of all the members of the college and myself I thank you most warmly.

Died at Hospital.

WITHOUT REGAINING CONSCIOUSNESS.

Mr. Jas. Kenny, who met with severe injuries by falling from a ladder while preparing to paint his house on York Street, Monday, died at the General Hospital last night, without having regained consciousness. A widow and one son, two brothers, William and Walton, and two sisters, Mrs. E. J. Kennedy, and a Sister of Mercy in the U.S.A., are left to mourn, to whom the Telegram extends sympathy.

A Correction.

In item No. 11 of the 13 questions asked Hon. H. J. Brownrigg in yesterday's issue, there was a mistake in the figures of the estimated Revenue announced by him in the House last spring. It should have read "where do you expect to raise the $11,400,000 that you said you were going to raise in the House last spring?" Put your valuation on the whole catch of fish this season and it will not—cannot realize this revenue. Figure it out for yourself.

Enjoyable Dance.

Last night, in the C.C.C. Hall, about 80 couples attended the first of a series of dances to be given by the Jazzola Orchestra. The ballroom was decorated in a very attractive manner. Mrs. Alderice, Mrs. H. Anderson, Miss J. Rendell, and Miss M. Clouston, who were mainly responsible for the work, received well merited and unstinted praise. The music included all the latest jazz hits and was thoroughly enjoyed. Mr. J. Robinson attended to the catering in a manner which left nothing to be desired.

Child Hidden for Seventeen Years.

Indications are that the health authorities of Joliet, Ill., will request the State and county officials to take action against the persons responsible for the condition of Marie Kolwiski, who was found in a subterranean vault in the cellar of her home, where she has been kept hidden from the world for 17 or her 19 years of life. Crippled a burden to her family, she had been stowed away in the basement when she was two years old. It was a ghastly sight that confronted the investigators when they pushed open the door of the cellar room where the child lives. A cadaverous body covered with filth, limbs twisted and shriveled, face gaunt and discolored, her eyes, the only sign of human intelligence about her, assumed the proportions of orbs in the uncanny pallor of a face which bears every indication of famine. The crib where the girl slept was reeking with filth, as was the tattered quilt over it. Light from a small window, slightly elevated above the ground, showed the wasted form of a girl not larger than a six-year-old child lying in the crib. Since she was two years old she has lived in the basement, the mother said. She was too dirty to keep upstairs, was her mother's explanation. The upper part of the house is clean and comfortable. There are three other children, all in normal health.

The Value of Reindeer.

Editor Evening Telegram
Dear Sir.—I wish you would very kindly publish the enclosed.
I was called some time ago to a conference at Ottawa with Mr. Stefansson, and also with the head of the Hudson's Bay Company, as to my experience with Reindeer in Newfoundland. As you know, my herd of 250 increased to 1500, but that when the War came on and the increase of expenses became too great for me to keep a sufficient number of herders, I was unable to protect them against poaching in summer and winter. My plea for a national reserve for the Reindeer north of Hare Bay was refused, and I practically had no protection for them, and we were forced to ship the remnant of the herd, about 150, to the Canadian Labrador where the Canadian Government took them over; about 40 escaped and many were driven south and shot. The herd in Canadian Labrador is increasing again under proper protection. The Alaskan herd is 400,000, and the export of Reindeer meat is becoming quite an important item.

The people of Newfoundland, I am given to understand, think that our experiment did not succeed in this country, because the Reindeer did not flourish, but the herd increased with the utmost regularity so long as it was protected. Those of us who watched the experiment at close quarters feel that by now we should have had about 10,000. I want to put on record that there should be no question about the possibility of the domesticated Reindeer being a valuable asset to the country; it would be a double failure of our outlay and trouble if any future attempt to introduce Reindeer into this country were discredited through misunderstanding of the reason why we did not succeed finally. Thanking you for space, Mr. Editor, believe me to remain,
Faithfully yours,
W. T. GREENFELL,
M.D., F.R.C.S., C.M.G.

VENISON SOON TO BE IN MARKETS OF ALL AMERICA.
Hudson Bay Company Backs Reindeer Farming Project.

Within two years reindeer meat will be on sale in butchers' shops in all cities of the United States and Canada and before many more years have passed it will have supplanted beef, to a large extent, in the diet of the people of this continent.

This promise is read into the revelation, just made, that the oldest and wealthiest trading concern in the world, the Hudson's Bay Company, is backing the Reindeer ranching project of Vilhjalmur Stefansson, famous arctic explorer, and into an announcement at Ottawa that the Canadian Government itself is going into the Reindeer business.

The first commercial Reindeer ranch is to be established next spring in Baffin land, where the Hudson's Bay Co. has leased a large tract of land from the Government for the purpose. It is reliably reported that a shipload of Reindeer is to be transported from Norway as soon as the ice has broken up sufficiently in the spring to enable the cargo to be landed.

"A Labrador Doctor."

With considerable reluctance—the modesty of the man who has done most to say least—Dr. Grenfell, the devoted missionary of the Labrador coast, has yielded to the persuasion of his friends to tell the story of his heroic and adventurous life. The book is entitled, "A Labrador Doctor." The autobiography of Wilfred Thomason Grenfell, M.D., C.M.G. Hodder and Stoughton, Toronto. In his preface the doctor frankly admits that he dislikes the idea of having to live alongside his own autobiography, and that he also dislikes the feeling which the writing of it conveyed, that to use his own phrase, he has passed the post that marks the last lap. Readers will not sympathize with him on these points, for to have withheld the narrative of his career would probably have deprived them altogether of a most interesting and inspiring book.—Ex.

Something New in Wages.

One of the strangest and most unusual occurrences which has been heard of for some time past in connection with work and wages is reported from London, G.B., where a watchman employed on lighterage duties in that port have asked for their wages to be reduced because they think it will lead to more work. How the employers took the remarkable request is not reported, but it must have created a certain amount of surprise. As the Manchester despatch says in editorially discussing the matter, "Probably few of the many who read the report would consider it, and fewer still would believe it. It would be dismissed as a fairy tale and no doubt capitalists, whose backs in these days have to be very broad, would be credited with having invented it. Yet strange as the statement may appear, the watchmen really did ask for a reduction in their wages and in doing so proved that they were wise in their generation. The request came as a result of the men obtaining what they wanted and asked for last Spring. They applied for increased wages and obtained them. This increase placed them on the same level as the lightermen, and with wages on a level, employers in search of men for a job gave the preference to the lightermen. So it happened that the increase instead of giving more money to the men brought them less work. Now they are glad to plead for less money but more work. The opinion is now very freely expressed that during the coming winter many others will find themselves in the position of these watchmen. No employer, whether a private employer, a municipality or a government, can for long continue to pay employees more for work than the work is worth. The point is certain to be reached where the employer will be faced with the choice between less wages and full work or no work and no wages, or it may be in some circumstances, increased production and full work, or again no increase and in that case no work and no wages."—Acadian Recorder.

The Whisker Horror.

London.—There is a plot on foot among a certain set of ultra-smart young men to revive side-whiskers. The late Mr. Frank Richardson, to whom every sort of "face fungus" was abhorrent, practically killed whiskers with ridicule. But now there is no face reformer with the burning zeal and energy to nip in the bud these Victorian monstrosities. You may hate whiskers with a deadly hatred, but the time may come when you will have to wear them or be a marked man, unless you take a strong stand now. It is only a few years since long moustaches were in fashion. Their proud possessors vowed they would never part with a hair of them. But, one by one, they fell to the scissors. Those who would not compromise with half-measures became clean-shaven. The rest wore tooth-brush moustaches. Beware the whisker habit. It grows upon one.

That being ignorant is not so much a shame as being unwilling to learn.
That a good many people spend most of their time in telling others how busy they are.
That opportunity may make a man is in his remembrance, when he has makes the opportunity.
That the man who is satisfied to sit down and wait for something to turn up will need a good soft seat.
That when you have a number of disagreeable duties to perform, always do the most disagreeable first.
That the test of a man's qualities is in his remembrance, when he has reached the top, of the friends he left behind lower down.
That depression, gloom, pessimism, despair, discouragement slay ten human beings to every one murdered by typhoid, influenza, diabetes, or pneumonia.
"Some Gramophone!"
Miss Violet Loraine told of an amusing incident which happened recently. She was practising her latest song success, "The Gipsy Warned Me," with the windows open, when a tradesman's boy happened to call. Her maid answered the bell, when the youth, nodding in the direction of the room where Miss Loraine was singing, remarked:—"I say, miss, some gramophone you've got here!"

Seeking Notoriety.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—(Canadian Press).—The offices of the British Consul were picketed yesterday by American women, apparently of Irish Mayor MacSweeney of Cork. Three were on duty, dressed in black, and carried immense signs bearing the legends:
"Great Britain forbids S. S. Panhandle State, United States Mail Steamship Company entering Irish ports."
"Americans! Are ye asleep." "British officials closely guarded as MacSweeney sinks. Special body guard watches over Lloyd George."
"George Bernard Shaw says: "I would not be in Lloyd George's shoes for a good deal. MacSweeney is near death. Lloyd George's shoes may soon be empty."
"American ships flying the American flag barred from entering Queens-town harbor. Well Americans."
There are about 25 women altogether acknowledging no special leadership to headquarters they say.

Very Sarcastic.

A witty Irishman was invited to a dinner party in Dublin in the hope that he would amuse and divert his host's guests. But from the beginning to the end of the dinner he preserved a solemn and serious face. The host thought this very strange.
"Why, old fellow," he remarked, "I don't believe the biggest fool in Ireland could make you laugh to-night."
"Try," was the wit's cutting rejoinder.

Where Shall the League of Nations Find a Home?

By Major David Davies, Member of the British Parliament.

One of the most important matters to be determined by the Assembly of the League of Nations, when it meets on November 15th, is the location of the permanent home of the League of Nations. Geneva is mentioned in the Covenant, but the Council have decided to refer the final choice to the Assembly. It has taken this action partly because it is aware that there was no time for adequate consideration when Geneva was selected, and partly because it realises the tremendous influence which the decision may have on the future of international relations.

There have been many attempts in the past to form Leagues of Nations, although none has yet been established on the present scale. All have failed. Why? Because the former Leagues have never gripped the imagination of the public. They have lacked substance. They have been regarded as paper instruments contrived for the convenience of princes and diplomats. When difficulties have arisen, the public have placed no trust in them. In fact, they have been immediately forgotten.

How can such a fate be averted in the case of the League of Nations—the only alternative to the slaughter, the suffering, the envy, the hate and the waste of war? The answer is very simple and very difficult. It is—by popularising the League. The people must be taught to regard it as a permanent, businesslike institution, as substantial, as just and as inevitable as the Law Courts. When one man has a dispute with another man which he cannot settle amicably, he immediately thinks of the Law Courts. So when one nation has a dispute with another nation, the citizens of each must instinctively turn to the League.

The first step towards this popularising is to select as Headquarters a city of such universal fame and significance as to keep the existence of the League always fresh in the minds of everyone. The capital must appeal equally to all the world. It must be as well-known in the East as in the West, and it must not belong too much to either. It must be away from the atmosphere of the Chancelleries, ex-territorial, international, and be endowed with the pomp and circumstance which are as necessary in peace as in war. Religion is a bond among countless millions. The seat of the League should therefore be of interest to the religious. Historical associations must preserve continuity between the old and the new. But above all, a place must be found which will demonstrate that the League seeks to benefit equally every single State—that it does not exist for the sake of a few great powers.

Is there a city which possesses the qualifications outlined above? Let us look around. What are the names that spring to the mind? Geneva, singled out in the Covenant, Jerusalem, the old-time City of Peace, Rome, so full of renown, Brussels, Versailles and Strassburg, convenient to Great Powers, Constantinople, junction of East and West, the Hague, home of Congresses, Washington, seat of the League of States—these are the places from which the choice must surely be made.

The reasons advanced in favour of Geneva are two-fold: firstly, it was a neutral city throughout the Great War, and secondly it is associated with a famous International Convention. The replies to these arguments are that the principles of the League are entirely at variance with neutrality when oppression is afoot, that what occurred during the war should not affect our decisions now, and that the relation with the Geneva Convention is one of singular ill-omen, because no other agreement was more universally abused. The city is far from the sea and cannot be internationalised. Just as Geneva is too closely identified with the West, so Jerusalem is too Eastern in character. Its distance from the sea and difficulty of access must weigh heavily in the scale. Rome is a city with an atmosphere of politics which cannot be internationalised. The latter overwhelming disadvantage applies equally to Brussels, Versailles, Strassburg and the Hague. The selection of any of those cities would suggest that the League was purely an instrument for the powers of Western Europe—an idea which would be absolutely fatal to its permanent success.

When all these famous names are considered, a process of elimination points to Constantinople, but elimination is far from being the only argument. The advantages of Constantinople are solid, surpassing and unique. The name grips the imagination. This has ever been a capital city. It possesses a romance and prestige matched by no other place. It figures in the history books of all the world.

The actual seat of the League can be built, near the city, in the Zone of the Straits. By the terms of the Turkish Peace, this Zone comes under the control of an International Commission. The home of the League would thus be on international soil. It would be the freehold of the world, just as Washington, the seat of the American Parliament, is the freehold of the United States as a whole and owes allegiance to no single state.

Historical and religious associations will appeal to all creeds and countries. Roots, sunk deep into the past, will link the historical with the present. This was once the capital of Christendom. It is intimately associated with Mohammedanism and with the Greek Church. Its selection would greatly impress the myriad followers of the Prophet, for the League could be housed within a mile or two of the palace of the Sultan, Commander of the Faithful.

From time immemorial Constantinople has been regarded as the meeting-place of East and West. It therefore possesses natural claims for its selection as the political capital of the World. In the opinion of many well qualified judges, the East will play a more important part in the evolution of the World during the next hundred years than it has in past decades. The choice of Constantinople as the seat of the League will impress Eastern peoples that the League is a World institution—not another alliance of Western powers.

How magnificent is the strategical situation of the Bosphorus! Here is the only access to the riches of Black Sea ports, the waterway from the mighty Danube to Western Europe, a submarine base of infinite menace to the Suez Canal. Small wonder that the city of Constantinople has been a potential cause of war since earliest history.

A strong power is made too strong by its ownership. In the hands of a weak power it is a menace to international relations, because sooner or later covetous eyes are certain to be cast towards it. Russia will become a great nation again. If Germany should keep apart from the League of Nations and should form an alliance with Russia, the future of Constantinople may be raised anew. Experience has shown that conflicts concerning Constantinople invariably embroil many nations in addition to those who are directly concerned.

Constantinople is a traditional disturber of the peace. The city would be freed from all risks of further attack if the League were established near by. No power would then dare to face the prejudice which it would incur if it threatened a place made so sacred to the world.

Yet another danger would be averted. Everyone knows that the Balkans are the cradle of wars. Constantinople is the ideal situation for studying the insidious influences ever at work in this part of the Globe. Disputes are best settled, and policies are best planned, "on the spot." Here the influence of the League will be close at hand to extinguish smouldering flames before the breath of intrigue has fanned up a conflagration.

The only argument that can be raised against Constantinople is that it is not at present very readily accessible to some of the Western powers. For the world generally, there is no more central city than the Junction of the East and West. Its selection for the purpose in view would greatly stimulate the development of transit routes by land, sea, and air, which would bring it within easy reach of countries at present remote from the Bosphorus. Delegates will undoubtedly be willing to suffer at first a little inconvenience in order to assist so great a cause. They will remember that the League will succeed only if it unites all the nations of the World, and that a location is required which will be of unanimous acceptability. No State will think that Constantinople has been chosen for the convenience of others.

Steps have been taken to bring the foregoing considerations to the direct notice of every President, of every Prime Minister and of every delegate who attends the first meeting of the Assembly. It is not suggested that the League of Nations should go at once to Constantinople. What is urged is this—that the delegates should look ahead, should search now for the location that will prove ideal when normal conditions reign again throughout the world. The choice is of paramount importance. This is no matter for haste. A small commission might be appointed to investigate the question. The planning and building will occupy from five to ten years.

Here is an opportunity to demonstrate to our children our faith and our foresight. It is an opportunity that will come once only during the life of the League. Let it be grasped before it has been stolen by the hand of time.

Germany to Ask Holland to Expel Kaiser.

Owing to the former Kaiser's active propaganda to regain the German Throne the German Government may request Holland to expel him. He is seeking to organise a strong Royalist movement, aiming at the restoration of the Hohenzollerns, and ultimately at the reconstruction of a Bismarck-made empire. The backbone of the movement is a Prussian Council of twenty Junker militarists, who are in constant communication with Wilhelm. Their programme calls for the maintenance of Prussian superiority above other Germans, holding that the restoration of the absolute hegemony of Prussia is essential to German unity, because Prussian qualities made Germany a great world power. An attempt is being made to keep fresh in the mind of Germans the magnificent record of the Monarchy which it seeks to restore out of "gratitude to the Hohenzollerns."

Negroes Besieged in Chicago Church.

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—Three negroes were besieged for more than an hour in St. Gabriel's Church on the south side last night. A mob of a thousand people were after the negroes, who had killed a white man, Charles Barrett, who is said to have gone to the rescue of a white girl insulted by negroes. They were rescued and placed in jail, when squads of policemen were sent to avoid a possible race riot. Shortly after Barrett had been killed, three negroes were dragged from a street car two blocks away and severely beaten.

The negroes who killed Barrett, cutting his throat with a razor, were chased several blocks by a continually increasing crowd and finally dashed into the church. Two hid in the confessional and one back of the altar. Sticks and stones were thrown at the church and frequent yells of "Lynch them" came from the crowd. Father Burke, pastor of the church, appeared at the entrance and for several minutes pleaded with the crowd to disperse but without avail. Only when policemen armed with rifles appeared did the mob break up.

Dr. F. Stafford & Son, Wholesale and Retail Chemists and Druggists, Self-Determination.

(From the Charlottetown Examiner.) Self-determination does not, we apprehend, mean that any section of any nation may detach itself when a majority of that section has voted to do so. The principle of "self-determination" involves the "determination" of the whole nation.

British Columbia could not, for instance, be permitted to go out of the Canadian Confederation if a majority of its people were to take it into their heads that they would do better as an independent republic. A few years ago the United States underwent a terrible civil war rather than let the Southern States go because they were "self-determined" to go.

The principle of "self-determination" implies that the majority of the whole nation shall "determine"—not that any section of the nation shall have the power to rend the nation.

Secrets Told in Letters.

Some Episodes in the Life of Lord Beaconsfield.

(From the Standard.)

No career in British history is more marvellous than that of Disraeli, and none has hitherto been enshrouded in greater mystery. In the closing volumes of Mr. Buckle's "Life of Disraeli" (Murray; Vols. 5 and 6) the mystery is at last dispelled. The man whom his opponents overwhelmed with abuse—"the Jew boy," "the adventurer," "the superlative Hebrew conjurer" (as Carlyle called him)—is revealed to the world as he really was—magnanimous, farseeing, brave—in what is beyond question the greatest political biography in our language.

The period covered is that from 1838 to his death in 1881, including the great Premiership of 1874-1880. It shows this "gentleman of the Press"—as Disraeli was proud to call himself—triumphing over all patriotic prejudices by sheer capacity, winning the deep affection of Queen Victoria as no other of her Prime Ministers had done, raising Britain to the highest position in the world, securing the great and abiding regard of his country, checkmating Bismarck (who declared, "the old Jew, that is the man"), and then in the very hour of his greatest fame falling from power to die in lonely and sad old age.

It is a very human and touching story, and its secret is that Disraeli Britain was his Israel, and her greatness the passion of his life. It is touched with the romance of his personal relations with Queen Victoria and with the great woman whose sympathy was such a precious support in his closing years. "I live for power and the affections," he said of himself. The details of his septuagenarian courtship are quite new.

A Royal Favourite.

By the special consent of the King, his correspondence with Queen Victoria and her letters to him are published for the first time. He was an accomplished courtier, but though he spoke of himself, with the flippancy which he affected and which made him so mysterious a figure in his contemporaries, as laying on flattery to royalties "with a trowel," it is quite clear that his devotion to the Queen was chivalrous and sincere. He talked to her on literary subjects and on her books with the words, "We authors, Ma'am." When she sent him the primrose which he loved and which have become his emblem, he wrote to her:

"He liked the primroses so much better for their being wild. They seem an offering from the Fauns and Dryads of the woods of Olympus."

For him and him only she unbent: "This morning the Queen paid me a visit. What do you think of that?" he wrote to Lady Bradford. She liked his wise talk and his directness:

He was never in the least shy; he did not trouble to insinuate; he said what he meant in terms the most surprising, the most unconventional; and the Queen thought she had never in her life seen so amusing a person. . . . It is still remembered how much more she used to smile in conversation with him than she did with any other of her Ministers.

He has often to use clever diplomacy to overcome her prejudices. When the Czar Alexander II. of Russia paid a visit to London, Disraeli discovered to his horror that she proposed to go to Balmoral in the midst of the visit, leaving the guest; and not without considerable difficulty did he induce her to change her plan. In the crisis of negotiations with Russia some time later, her Russophobia caused him qualms. Thus she wrote:

Be firm and rally your party round you. . . . Oh, if the Queen were a man, she would like to go and give those Russians, whose word she cannot believe, such a beating! We shall never be friends again till we have it out.

He had no wish for war and he succeeded in calming her. To him she poured out her heart as perhaps to no other:

None of her Ministers (she wrote) has ever shown her more consideration and kindness than he has.

She followed his last illness with anxious regard, and the sad news of his death brought from her this cry of sorrow:

Words are too weak to say what the Queen feels; how overwhelmed she is with the terrible, irreplaceable loss—which is a national one—and indeed a great one to the world at large! His kindness and devotion to the Queen on all and every occasion—his anxiety to lighten her cares and difficulties she never, never can forget and feels cruelly.

His Faith in Feminine Counsel. Four days after his funeral she visited and wept over his grave, and laid on his coffin a wreath; and from her privy purse she erected a personal memorial to him with the noble text: "Kings love him that speaketh right."

Disraeli believed in the counsel and judgment of women and delighted in their company. "I made clubs," he said, "not being fond of male society;" and again, "There is nothing I so much appreciate in life as a female critic." He wrote more than once, "marriage is the happiest state in the world," and his marriage, despite his wife's many oddities, was one of the happiest.

The Phrase-Maker.

He was brilliant as a phrase-maker and talker, and these sayings are characteristic of his insight:

Bismarck talks as Montagne writes; he is another Napoleon and must be bridled.

I know not why Japan should not become the Sardinia of the Mongolian East. They are by far the cleverest of the Mongol race.

Talk not to me of dukes; dukes can be made.

The House of Commons is a senate, not a vestry.

He made mistakes, of course, as when he said that Browning was "a noisy, conceited poet," and of Mr. Chamberlain, that "he looked and spoke like a cheesemonger." But they were few.

Many secrets of history are revealed here, among them Bismarck's offer of a German alliance, rejected from friendship for France by the Queen and himself; and the full story of that magnificent stroke, the purchase of the Suez Canal shares, bought for $20,000,000 and to-day worth $150,000,000. The secret of this great career is that Disraeli combined will and imagination with a devotion to high national ideals rarely equalled and never surpassed. And that is why, in Mr. Buckle's final verdict, to this generation he—

"Appears a grand and magnificent figure, standing solitary, towering above his contemporaries, the man of fervid imagination and vision wide and deep, amid a nation of narrow, practical minds, phillistine, Puritan-riden; his life at once a romance and a tragedy, but a splendid tragedy; himself the greatest of our statesmen since the days of Chatham and Pitt."

W. H. MORSE, of Seattle, Wash., who says he can now turn out as much work as he could thirty years ago, in spite of his age. Gives Tanlac credit for his splendid health.

"I am in my eighty-fifth year, but since taking Tanlac I am as hale and hearty as I ever was and can do as much work as I could thirty years ago," declared W. H. Morse, of 52 Blaine St., Seattle, Wash. Although in his eighty-fifth year, Mr. Morse is still daily to be found engaged in hard work down at the Ames Shipyard and is remarkably well preserved for his years.

"Last spring I had an attack of the flu that left me in a very badly run-down condition and so weak that I could hardly get around. For a long while I had a very bad cold that I couldn't shake off and my bronchial tubes were so choked up that I was coughing all the time. I had no appetite and in fact ate so little that I was steadily losing weight. I couldn't sleep at nights and became very much worried about my condition, because I couldn't find anything to straighten me up and restore my lost strength."

"I saw by the papers what fine work Tanlac was doing for other folks, so I got some for myself. It did me good right from the start, for in a very short while my cough left me, and I was eating fine and sure did enjoy every mouthful. I sleep better at nights and was soon feeling much better in every way. I have gained seven pounds in weight and am so much stronger that I can turn out about as much work as most any other man, in spite of my years. Tanlac certainly must be a great medicine to put me on my feet like it has, and I'm glad of the chance to tell everybody about it."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, in Paradise by Mrs. Martin F. Byrne, in Upper Gullies by Heber Andrews, in Portland by H. C. Haines, in St. Joseph, Salmonier, by Mrs. J. Gushue, in Millertown by Exports Valley Royal Stores, Ltd., in Flat Island by William Samson, in Jamestown by Christopher Haines, and in Lewisporte by Uriah Freake.—adv.

Technical.

(From the Wall Street Journal.)

"Some of these Railroad Commissioners," remarked a railroad officer, "remind me of the story about the two timber cruisers who were snowed in years ago in one of our northern forests. The weather turned bitterly cold after the snowstorm, and their camp was none too comfortable, especially at night. To conserve heat the two agreed that their big dog should sleep between them. The first night the dog dreamed that he was chasing rabbits. Making the motions of running, he severely scratched the back of one of the men with his feet, and then nipped him in the back of the neck. In the morning the victim protested against allowing the animal to sleep in bed.

"Why, what's the matter with the dog?" demanded his partner.

"Oh, he's all right," was the answer, "but he—well! he's too technical."

The New Germany.

In Germany a national commission is at work studying the problem which has been brought about by the replacement of the monarchical form of government by the republican form.

Under the monarchy Germany was a group of states united under the King of Prussia as its emperor. The present problem is to work out the proper relations between the central republican government and the several individual states of the country. There is little information available so far as to the progress which the commission has been making or the direction which its report will advise the country to take. It may be taken for granted that it will have as an obstacle to satisfactory decision the desire of Prussia to remain the most powerful force among the units of the nation. The Prussians are an arrogant, domineering people, and they will not take kindly to any proposal which would lessen their power in German affairs while, on the other hand, it may be doubtful if all the other sections of Germany—having tasted bitter consequences of Prussian leadership in national affairs—will be satisfied to have Prussia exercising any such dominant influence under the republican form of government as it exercised in the days of Hohenzollern rule. There is a difficulty here which the commission may not find it easy to overcome. There is probably the further difficulty that there is a strong body of monarchists in Prussia, and their efforts will certainly not be employed in assisting any plan that might tend to make more likely the perpetuation of the republican system and end to the hopes of fallen royalty of ultimate return to the throne.

Another fact to be kept in mind is that German states, which were held together under a common ruler in other days, may not be so easily held together when the common ruler has disappeared. Independence may have its lure, though what hope there would be for any of these small German states as independent countries is something that it would puzzle them to explain. The natural expectation is that Germany will work out some system which will leave national affairs definitely in the hands of a central republican administration, and the affairs of the several states in the hands of their respective state government as in the United States. It is not so certain that the finished system will be worked out very swiftly and without sharp political struggles.—Sydney Record.

Famous Jaeger Underwear

Dropped from $17.50 to $15.00. Even at the old prices these garments were wonderful values. Marching Back to '14.

Marking the Doom of High Prices.

Kearney says:

I care not for those who clamor that I can't do it. I have done it. To-day brings the proof. I have dared to take the situation by the forelock, marching back to '14 with big American manufacturers. Whether prices will lower sufficiently to make my scheme come true—whether the drop will be permanent—these are the risks I take. I am depending upon my gains in English Exchange to see me through. I am sharing that exchange with you. I am the first to do it. Let those follow who will. Kearney is first.

What $1 will Buy

A dollar is a mighty small amount these days—most men find it difficult to think up what they can buy for a dollar, when they have a spare one—much less such dressy appearing neckwear as we offer for . . . $1.00. The reason's apparent; these are all $1.50 Scarves—and you'll never get such an opportunity again to lay in a stock. Even half a dozen won't be too much, and you save $3.00 on the lot.

BATWING BOWS CUT TO $1.00.

A dollar is not so much to pay to have a different look to your turnout every other day. And these Bows certainly do give that. If you don't know how—we'll teach you to make up a neat appearing Bow. These were $1.25. All colours; all lengths.

WHAT ONE DOLLAR WILL BUY.

Many were the expressions of satisfaction made by Collar buyers when we announced a reduction in Famous Arrow Brand Collars, 40c. each regular price, 3 for $1.00.

It will pay you now to buy at least a dozen at a saving of 80c. Take them any way you wish, any size, any style. You'll not get this chance again—we are handling an entirely new line when these are sold.

THAT USEFUL DOLLAR AGAIN!

Yes, sir, we reckoned that the dollar was about the most common piece of money in circulation, so we cut all our Soft Collars accordingly. These range from 40c. up to 60c. Piques, silk stripe and plain; assorted styles, all sizes. Choose them as you wish. Why not a dozen assorted to your taste? Wear a new style every day. 3 for $1.00.

Bride Drowns While on Honeymoon

After clinging for eighteen hours to his overturned motor boat, six miles off Racine, John A. Jones—Jack Jones of Chicago—was rescued by a tug and now is in a serious condition at a hospital in this city. In addition to the exposure and injuries, Jones witnessed the drowning of the bride of a few weeks. She clung to the overturned boat for ten hours, but her strength was exhausted, and an unusually heavy wave swept her away. She was Anna Mitchell, a portrait painter, of New York. The pair were on a honeymoon trip. Jones secured a divorce last July from his first wife, who was Elizabeth Flynn, a widely-known Socialist. The parents of Miss Mitchell objected to her marrying Jones, so they eloped and were married in Crown Point, Ind., Aug. 13.

The Successful Organist

WHY DOES ORGAN MUSIC ON THE average interest the public less than certain other branches of music? Why do many great artists hold audience spellbound? In the first place, they have "something to say" and the technique and musicianship by means of which it can be said effectively. In the second place, they have little or nothing of a mechanical nature to deal with which might interrupt their intimate personal contact with an audience. The violin strings vibrate with emotion by the pressure of the player's own flesh upon them. In the case of singers the entire vocal mechanism is a part of their physical being. Organ playing will always lack this intimate appeal to a certain extent. But the term "dead tone" applied to organs often means that the organist is a "dead one" so far as mastering the organ is concerned. The organist cannot communicate his emotions to the audience unless he has a broad comprehensive theoretical and a technical training and a wide knowledge of all forms of music itself and hearing it performed by the leading artists.

Engaged to Four People.

Mrs. Edith M. Snook, of Kansas City, fifty, mother of two children, and happily married, obtained four complete trousseaus from other men after becoming engaged to them and refusing at the last moment to make the journey to the altar. She used the mails to beguile the prospective bridegrooms-to-be. She has been arrested by post office inspectors on a charge of using the mails to defraud. Mrs. Snook, the inspectors revealed, wanted pretty clothes and she hit upon a matrimonial agency as the medium through which to procure them. After obtaining the names of her victims from the agency she would enter upon a lively correspondence, representing herself as a youthful divorcee. She became engaged to four men, but when they insisted on setting a wedding date, she wrote that her parents had objected. Mrs. Snook was held under bonds for the Federal Grand Jury.

A Problem for Irishmen.

(From The Westminster Gazette.) These terrible outbreaks in districts where Sinn Feiners and Unionists live in close connection demonstrates how great a part of the Irish problem is Irish first and last. The English cannot solve it for them, though they can make its solution easier or more difficult. No Sinn Feiner can argue, in face of these events, that British rule in the north is the best. In view of the fact that the worst disturbances have taken place in Ulster itself, can any Ulsterman maintain that his province is compact and untroubled by political conditions in the rest of Ireland. Somehow or other Ulster and Sinn Fein will have to come to terms. Until and unless they do there can be no peace under any system of government.

Shoe Industry Threatened

LYNN, Mass., Sept. 23.—The situation in the shoe industry here threatens to cause a stoppage of work in many factories within a day or two. Some of the employers declare that the end of material or of orders was likely to be reached to-day or to-morrow and that it would be impracticable to turn further work over to the cutters after that time. There are eighty shoe factories in this city employing about 22,000 persons under normal conditions.

He Does Not.

Why the Shamrock Failed to Win.

SOUTHAMPTON, Eng.—(C. A. P. By Mail)—When Mr. Nicholson, the designer of Shamrock IV, arrived in England, he placed the superior seamanship of the Resolute's captain and crew among the reasons for the challenger's failure to lift the America's Cup.

Members of the Shamrock's crew who have returned to England, resent the slur which they consider Mr. Nicholson has thrown upon their efficiency as yachtsmen, and declare that the Shamrock's faulty handling was largely due to interference. It was a case of too many cooks and on the only occasion Captain Burton was free from interruption and advice the Shamrock won. Diaper, one of the crew, said all of the crew felt convinced that had a professional skipper been in full command Shamrock would have won the first 3 races. He claimed that she could point as close to the wind as the Resolute, but the latter was superior in reaching.

He declared that Shamrock was very awkward to handle, and her canvas was about three times as heavy as that of the Resolute. The halliards are arranged in such a manner that the work of the men was made extremely difficult. What could be done by ten men on the 23 meter Shamrock required 30 to do on Shamrock IV. On one occasion in setting the mainsail they had 36 men on the halliards and could not move the sail.

"In fact," said Diaper, "I have never seen such a heavy canvas on a racing yacht." And then, on the return of the yacht to City Island, after the race, they found a complete set of light racing canvas for Shamrock IV, stored in Jacob's yard.

Diaper, "is the constant changing of gear which was in progress throughout the period of the races. The topmast was changed no less than seven times in the course of three weeks and eventually they finished with the original one."

Strange Railway Accident.

Just as a locomotive which had run off the track at La Pallice, near Bordeaux, on Saturday, had been hauled back to the rails and was ready to start, the boiler exploded, killing eleven workmen. Twelve others were badly injured, says the Paris correspondent of the "Daily Express." The engine was blown to pieces, fragments of the machinery falling on houses several hundred feet away, and causing serious damage. It is believed that the sudden entry of cold water into the overheated boiler caused the disaster.

Tests.

(From the Writer's Monthly.) The late Ambassador Walter Hines Page was formerly Editor of The World's Work and, like all editors, was obliged to refuse a great many stories. A lady once wrote him: "Sir:—You sent back last week a story of mine. I know that you did not read the story, for as a test I had pasted together pages 18, 19 and 20, and the story come back with these pages still pasted; and so I know you are a fraud, and turn down stories without reading the same." Mr. Page wrote back: "Madame:—At breakfast when I opened an egg I don't have to eat the whole egg to discover if it is bad."

Avaunt, Unrest.

(From the Vancouver Province.) The time is ripe for preachers to proclaim the very gospel of peace in calm and assured language, for reformers to appeal to reason and conscience and not passion and resentment, for poets to bring healing and reconciliation instead of bitterness and reproach, for more of Wordsworth and less of Bernard Shaw, for more of the Sermon on the Mount and less of imprecation. One would think to hear some of the teachers of the time that the cure of the world's unrest could only be found by making it worse. There are well-meaning men who think that they are doing some good by thundering out railing accusations indiscriminately and without evidence against whole classes of society or against society in general. The doctrine of total depravity has been revived in a new way by making it appear that most of us are criminals living in a community of criminals.

Marshal Petain Weds Early Sweetheart.

Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, Commander-in-Chief of French Armies in France during the latter years of the Great War, and the French General whose work at Verdun made him a national figure, was married September 13 in Paris. The marriage is the realization of a life-long dream of the Marshal, who knew the bride, Madame Hardon, when she was a very young girl, long before her first marriage. He always cherished a tender memory of her and hoped that, some day, circumstances would enable him to marry her. The bride, according to The Excelsior, is very wealthy.

He Saw the Joke.

(From an Exchange.) Erskine and Lord Balmuto were walking in the country when they met Lord Balfour. Balfour was suffering from lameness. Erskine asked what had happened, and Balfour informed him in labored and tortuous phraseology that he had fallen in getting over a stile on his brother's property. "Well, Balfour," Erskine smiled, "it was a mercy that it was not your own stile, or you would certainly have broken your neck." Balfour grinned his appreciation of the witty pun, and went limping down the road. But Lord Balmuto didn't smile. His face was puckered with perplexity. In silence they walked a mile or more. Suddenly Balmuto burst into a roar of laughter, exclaiming: "I hae ye noo, Harry! I hae ye noo!" The meaning of the witty pun Erskine had uttered to Balfour had just dawned upon the Scotchman.

Would-Be Canadians Must Learn English.

Believing that a knowledge of the English language is necessary before a man should be naturalized as a Canadian citizen, Judge Denton, of Toronto, advised three of the 85 foreigners appearing before him for naturalization, on September 13, to wait until they had improved their knowledge of English. Michael Abram, a Galician, and Sam Wilder, a Pole, were asked to reappear in six months to show whether they then had a working knowledge of the language, and Staris Tashion was given a year in which to improve his linguistic abilities before being granted the right to vote.

Capitals in Rivalry.

Wrexham is pressing its claims to be the administrative centre of Wales, under the new scheme of Federal Home Rule, while the local leaders of Shrewsbury are organizing for a fight.

In Cornwall, too, there is a perennial quarrel as to which is the capital city of the ancient duchy.

The position is most curious. Launceston, of course, is the ancient capital. Up to about 1840 the Assizes were held there, and at the coronation of King Edward the Mayor of Launceston received a summons to attend Westminster Abbey as mayor of "the county town of Cornwall."

But the Court of Assizes and the County Offices were long ago shifted to Bodmin, and it is Bodmin which considers itself capital of the duchy. But Truro is the cathedral city of Cornwall, and for that reason, if for no other, claims precedence.

These squabbles, however, sink into insignificance compared with the battle that raged over the question of the new capital for the Australian Commonwealth. The quarrels began in the year 1899, two years before the official birth of the Federation.

Many people wanted to know what reason there was for a new capital at all, and why the great expense of building a new town was necessary. But it was essential that the new Government should be on Federal soil, and to take Sydney from New South Wales or Melbourne from Victoria was not to be thought of.

A Curious Compromise.

It was not until five years after the Federation of the Commonwealth that the present site was chosen, although Canberra, the future capital, is still in the embryo stage.

When South Africa became federated, ten years ago, the controversy as to the capital city was settled by one of the most curious compromises in history. Pretoria became the administrative and Cape Town the legislative centre. So United South Africa has two capitals, which are almost exactly one thousand miles, or two days' train journey, apart.

There are two instances of newly-formed capitals proving complete failures. The most notable is that of La Plata, built in 1882 as the capital city of the Province of Buenos Ayres. La Plata is only thirty miles from the city of Buenos Ayres, the superior attractions of which have ruined La Plata as a residential centre.

The other instance is that of Cahaba, built as capital of the State of Alabama when, in 1818, that state was admitted to the Union.

The town's rise was meteoric, but in 1826 a great flood in Alabama swept away the State House. The site of Government was removed to Montgomery, and to-day Cahaba is a heap of ruins.—Answers.

A Romance of the North

(From the Toronto Globe.)

An Anglican missionary-clergyman, Rev. W. F. Walton, has for many years devoted himself to the spiritual and temporal welfare of the Eskimos who live on the eastern shores of James Bay. In that vast solitude the only white persons he sees are the Hudson Bay Company's officials at widely separated trading posts. To reach civilization entailed a toilsome voyage of three weeks by canoe up the Moose River and one of its tributaries, a trip to be taken only in the summer months. It was a journey involving so much preparation and so long an absence from the post of duty that Mr. Walton's visits to the outer world were necessarily infrequent. When Mr. Walton went back a few months ago to his spacious but lonely parish, after a well-earned furlough, during which he placed the needs of the Eskimos before many audiences in Ontario, he had no expectation of returning for years. Saturday's newspapers announced that he had arrived in Toronto again, having covered the distance between Moose Port and Cochrane by aeroplane in two and a half hours. With close train connections he could have made the entire journey from Moose Port to Toronto in less than twenty-four hours. The possibilities of man's conquest of the air has so dramatic a manner. Canada's remotest outposts may be brought in future into almost immediate touch with the frontiers of settlement.

The Weak-Minded.

Five persons killed, a mother driven insane, two children robbed of both father and mother, a wife made a widow, twelve children left fatherless.

That is the toll of tragedy in the little Lunenburg settlement where Havelock Venlott ran amuck on Sunday, Sept. 19.

And all this tale of horrors would never have been written if the weak-minded man had been taken in charge when his diseased mentality had become known.

The story gives compelling emphasis to the need of more active steps in Nova Scotia to deal with the problem of the weak-minded. Venlott's condition had evidently been known to the people of his settlement. But he seemed harmless and so he was left home, free to come and go as he pleased. Then came the disagreement with his father, and suddenly, the weak-minded, harmless man was turned into a murderous maniac.

His mother will go to the insane asylum, his father, three of their neighbors and Venlott himself go to the cemetery, and a widow and orphaned children go forward in the struggle of life without husband and father. Most of the unfortunate weak-minded in Nova Scotia will never be dangerous to themselves or to others. That is no doubt true. But the one terrible case of Sunday

The Miners' Case.

The miners' case remains as bad as it ever was, and public opinion has shown an unmistakable sense of the selfishness and unreason of the demands put forward by Mr. Smillie in their name. The five or six millions of trade unionists in other trades—few of which can run long without coal supplies—realize now that the miners' ought to quicken effort in the Province to see that there is more thorough systematic supervision of the weak-minded not only that unfortunates may be cared for properly, but that there may be safeguard against danger of repetition of the Lunenburg horror even on a less awful scale.—Sydney Record.

Rebuking the Private.

(From the New York Evening Post.)

Private Sparks, on guard, probably wasn't looking when the general passed nearby; anyway, he failed to salute. Something terrible was due to happen to Private Sparks.

"Colonel," the general said, "the man on post 7 failed to salute the general this morning. See that he is severely reprimanded."

"Lieutenant," the captain said, some time later, "Private Sparks failed to salute the general to-day. See that he is severely reprimanded!"

"Yes, sir!" responded the lieutenant and when he encountered the first sergeant that evening, told him!

general this morning. You will severely reprimand him!"

"Yes, sir!" responded the sergeant, and when he came across Private Sparks he said:

"Look here, you pie-faced mutt, you let Old Ironback go by this morning without throwing him a kiss, and it near broke his little heart. Let me catch you doing anything like that again and I'll make you wash the back of your ears and take away your chewing gum."

Margin Trading!

The great advantage of an account on margin is this: You can control at least three times as many shares of the stocks you desire as is possible by buying outright, and you thus have the opportunity of netting considerable profit on any advance in the value of the shares.

Take McKinley-Darragh for example. $20 buys outright about 33 shares on which the yield is approximately 20 per cent., but on margin, $20 controls 100 shares on which the income yield is 60 per cent.—and all from a 12 per cent. stock.

We are fully equipped to execute your orders on any stock or bond listed in New York.
