THE Lady of the Night

Amelia Makes a Success

CHAPTER XXV. THE RESCUE.

Almost swooning, Nora felt herself clutched by eager hands, and lifted into the boat; a man caught her, laid her down gently, and poured some brandy through her lips; the raw spirit brought her to, but she lay still and closed her eyes. The boat returned to the barque, and she was carried on board; she was too weak to stand, and one of her rescuers supported her while the captain came down from the bridge to inspect her.

"Why, it's a boy!" he said. "What was it—a wreck, my lad?" he asked bluntly, but not unkindly. "There! We won't bother you with questions now; turn in between the blankets and get a good sleep; you can tell us all about it afterwards."

"Captain Marks!" panted Nora. "There is some one else—Captain Marks—She fought hard for consciousness, for strength. I was not alone, the Captain was with me—the Happy Lucy was run down—Oh, go in search of him at once—try and find him—Let me go in a boat—"

The captain looked grave and scratched his head. "You haven't seen anything," he asked of the first mate.

"Nothing, sir," replied the mate, "and we've kept a good look-out; if there's been anything of the kind in our course we must have sighted it as we sighted this young gentleman," he added, glancing at Nora.

Noticing the mate's hesitation, the captain looked another look at Nora, and his tone grew less blunt as he said: "I'm afraid we can't do that. A boat's out of the question; but we'll cruise round a bit, and see if we can come across the cap'n."

"I'll stay on deck," panted Nora eagerly.

"No, no," said the captain, "there's plenty here to look out for him; you go below and turn in. Don't fret, youngster; most like he's been picked up by some other vessel, just as we picked you up."

He nodded to the man who was supporting Nora and the man firmly led her away. The captain looked after them, rubbing his chin thoughtfully.

BABY COLEMAN.
"Altogether brighter and happier"

161, Cambridge Road, Seven Kings, Essex.

Dear Sirs,
My baby seemed to be quite healthy at birth, but being unable to feed him I tried different foods at various times. At first he appeared to be making progress, but after a few months it became evident he was wasting, and I was advised to try Virol. He soon began to put on weight, and in a short time made considerable weight. This satisfactory progress has continued, thanks to Virol, which has built up his strength, making him a splendidly sturdy little fellow. In view of the gratifying results obtained, I do not hesitate to recommend Virol whenever the question arises of the best alternative food for baby.—Yours truly,
G. C. Coleman.

For tiredness, nervous exhaustion, and sleeplessness take Virol with milk three times a day. (A teaspoonful in half-pint of warm milk.)

VIROL, LTD.,

British Made & British Owned.

"Hi! Jackson," he called out, "give the young gentleman the mislans's cabin, next to mine."

"Ay, ay, sir!" responded Jackson. "Come along, young gentleman."

Nora tried to resist, begging them to allow her to remain on deck; but Jackson kept a tight hold of her, and took her down below.

"You can get off them wet things, and get into the blankets, as the cap'n says, sir," he said. "Pitch your clothes outside the door, and I'll find a rig-up for you while these are drying. I'll bring a cup of tea with 'em, with a dash of rum in it; nothing like rum, when you've been half-drowned, and that's what's happened to you. It's lucky we got out of our course in the fog; it's the first time in my life that I've ever knowned a fog good for anything. Keep up your spirits, sir! You'll be as right as a trivet when you've had that cup of tea and a good snooze. And don't you 'worry about your friends; if he's anywhere about, the cap'n'll find him; for the cap'n's a man of his word, and what he says he does."

Nora staggered into the cabin, took off her soaking things half-unconsciously, and crept into the berth; very soon afterwards Jackson came with the tea and some dry things, which he had commandeered from one of the apprentices. There must have been a large quantity of the liquor, inasmuch as Jackson placed such touching faith in the huge-cup of tea, for after drinking it Nora fell into a deep sleep. So deep that she did not dream.

She slept for ten hours, and woke with a start and a cry of anxiety; her first thought was of Captain Marks. She dressed quickly and went on deck; the vessel was going at full speed, and she caught the arm of the first mate, with—

"Have you found him on her lips?" the mate shook his head.

"No," he said; "we beat about for hours, but saw nothing of any wreck." She ran up upon the bridge to the captain.

"He has not been found?" she cried.

"Oh, can't you go on looking for him? He was near me, quite near; there was no wind, he cannot have drifted far from me. Oh, pray, pray, search for him!"

The captain laid his hand on her shoulder, and looked down at the beseeching face with a kindly pity.

"No, my lad," he said; "we can't give any more time to it; we're all behind as it is. Besides, it would be useless; and depend upon it, he's been picked up long before this. Sit down there, and tell me who you are and all about you. I shall have to set it down in the log-book, you know. What's your name, to begin with?"

"Cyril Merton," replied Nora, hastily dashing away her tears, for she had to play her boy's part. "I come from Lonaway Island, I was crossing to Porthash with—with Captain Marks." Her tears threatened her again. "We were run down by a vessel in the fog."

The captain nodded. "I see, Lonaway Island? We shall have to telegraph to your friends directly we touch port. What's their name—your father's?"

Nora hung her head.

"They're no use to telegraph," she said. "I can do so all right when we land. Will it be to-day?"

"No," he said, "not for some days. We are making for London, to take in a cargo for Singapore."

"London?" echoed Nora, aghast. "I thought you might be going to Plymouth. Could you not put me ashore there?"

The captain shook his head again.

"Pard! I couldn't," he said. "You see, I'm late already, my lad; and there'll be a row with the owners as it is. What's the matter with London? Besides, I naps I can speak a passing ship and tell them I've picked you up. I'm sorry I can't oblige you, my boy; but it's out of my power. You set your mind at rest, and have as good a time as you can. You'll be all the better for the trip; it will make a man of you. Now, don't fret, there's a good boy. Why, dash it all, you ought to be thankful for being on board the Araminta, instead of lying at the bottom of Davy Jones's locker. Had anything to eat yet? I thought not. You go down and make friends with the cook, and get a square meal. You'll feel ever so much better for it."

Nora saw that further appeal would be useless, and she went down; but she stood for a moment, gripping the rigging, and looked out to sea, as if it were still possible she might see the captain. The mate good-heartedly drew her away, and insisted upon her taking some food, and assuring her repeatedly and earnestly that the chances were all in favour of Captain Marks having been picked up. Nora tried to share his conviction, and sought down her apprehension and her grief.

The weather was fine, and after a while her youthful spirit asserted itself, and she became more cheerful; for it was difficult to keep her thoughts on so fair a sea. She spent a great deal of time on the bridge with the captain, who had taken an immense fancy to her, and chatted about his misadand the children at Bristol, and sometimes explained the theory of navigation while he took an observation or issued some orders to the engineer-room.

He asked her no more questions for, of course, he saw that Nora was concealing something, and he shrewdly suspected that any interrogatories might receive evasive or untruthful answers. There were few books in the saloon, and Nora sometimes read; but very often she wiled away the time by setting the captain's cabin in order, or assisting in the lighter work of the crew. They were always pleased to welcome her when she descended to the fo'c'sle; and she would listen for hours to their simple and almost childish stories of the sea. As the days passed she regained her health and strength, and looked a very different lad to the one who had been found floating on the wreckage of the Happy Lucy.

They neared London rapidly, and Nora began to think of her future plans. She resolved sadly enough that she would not go back to Devonshire. She had no longer a home at the Grange, was not wanted there. If she returned to Miss Deborah's she would inevitably meet Elliott; and, intensely as she longed to see him again she told herself that it would be better if he could think of him no more; he would find it impossible to forgive her for the deception she had practised—in a word, she was afraid to meet him again.

They entered the mouth of the Thames at night, and as they steamed up the river, Nora gazed with wonder and awe at the innumerable lights, the crowds of shipping, and listened in a kind of dream to the multitudinous noises which proclaimed the fact that she was approaching the heart of the greatest city in the world. The captain called her on the bridge, and spoke of her immediate future.

"Have you any friends in London?" he asked, "because if you haven't, you can come with me. I put up at a quiet little hotel near the docks."

Nora considered for a moment or two, then thanked him earnestly, and said that she would go straight to her friend.

She had now and again written letters for her father to a certain distant relation or connection; and she was thinking of this person when she decided the captain's offer.

"And how about money, youngster?" asked the captain a trifle shyly. "If you haven't enough to get along with, you must let me lend you some. You don't want to turn up at your friend's short of cash; it'll make all the difference in the way they receive you. I've got a five-pound note down in the cabin, and it's yours free and welcome; you can send it back when you like, or not at all; if you should be pressed for money, I've a boy of my own, and I know how fast it goes with youngsters."

Nora could scarcely speak for a moment, she was so overcome with thankfulness, but in so broken a voice that the captain seemed quite disappointed when Nora assured him that she had enough money to carry on with.

"Now, about those letters," he said, after he had vainly pressed her to accept the loan. "I know what boys are; you'd put off telegraphing or writing, and perhaps forget it altogether. Of course, I shall report my finding you to the owners; but I am afraid they won't worry to communicate with your friends. You go down into the cabin right away now and write the letters, and I'll post them—or you can post them yourself." he put in, as he saw Nora colour.

An Invisible Detective.

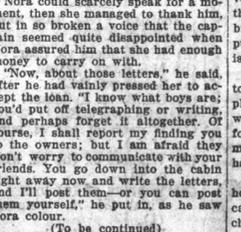

An English scientist some years ago invented a wireless device by which one could hear in a telephone when anybody entered a certain room.

This, of course necessitated someone listening at the telephone always, and so was not of much real value.

A new device will actually record on a paper chart the entry into a safe-room or other room of any person, and the exact time at which he enters.

This is a recording device known as a hygrometer—which draws on a revolving chart a line showing the amount of moisture in the air in the room.

The presence of a person in the room sufficiently affects the degree of moisture to cause a deflection, or variation, in the line made by this extremely delicate instrument, and the position of such a mark makes it easy to ascertain the time it was made, as the chart is revolved on a clock-work drum.

THE BUSINESS MAN AND THE BOY.
A very angry business man. Discharged a boy this other day. "Because," said he, "he seems to be too slow to do the work my way."

"I've told him twice what I expect of office boys who work for me. And how to walk and how to talk. And how to greet men courteously."

"I've told him just the way to stand. And what to do and what to say. But he persists and he insists in blundering from day to day."

"I cannot stand dull-witted brains. That will not grasp what is explained. The man or boy that I employ must very readily be trained."

It was a golf professional who tried to teach this business man. Just how to turn his wrists and learn to hit the ball as golfers can.

He told him forty times and more. The way to hold and throw his club; in simple speech, the art he'd teach. But still the man remained a dub.

Though he'd explained a thousand times. The club must pass from left to right. To make the swing a graceful thing. The man would slug with all his might.

Day after day he would return. Unto the teacher, sad and sore. And ask of him in manner grim. To tell him what he'd told before.

And though he knew what he would say. And knew the way his wrists must turn. Once more in vain the pro'd explain. Once more the man would fail to learn.

Oh, busy business men, when you Grow vexed with boys whose wits are slow. Tell them again, remembering then. How dull you seem unto the pro.

Oil-Driven Vessels Spell Death to Fish.

Half a gallon per hour of any oil except petroleum, dribbled down a waste-pipe on the windward bow of a quarter of a ship, ensures her safety in the biggest sea. The swell remains, but that, however, mountainous, is harmless.

The broken water on top of the swell is stilled and mangled into harmless-ness. If the ship is being dismembered by breaking water her peril is at an end. If she has a disabled vessel in tow, that vessel is saved, and the water cannot break, no bubbles of air can be driven below the surface. The seaweeds breathe these bubbles. The fishes breathe the bubbles, and their gills select the oxygen, without which they drown. So the oil kills both the fish and their forage, reducing the sea floor to a condition of lifeless desert.

So far, the oilied waters void of organic life have been ports and channels where oil cargo is shipped and discharged in bulk.

The industry threatened.

But a new condition is coming into notice. Three-fourths of the shipping under construction now consists of vessels driven by oil-fuel. In these there is always a leakage of oil to the bilges. These bilges have to be pumped clean, so their fuel, oily water is discharged into the sea.

Just when Whames fishing appeared to be re-established, there are complaints that from London River, coast-wise as far as Harwich, a main street for shipping, the fish are reported missing. They may be dead, or perhaps have emigrated.

Just as the North Sea fishermen hoped that the five years close-season caused by war had given the fishes a chance to re-stock the waters, reports are coming in from the research stations that the year-crops of plaice for 1915-16-17 seem to be missing or only represented very slightly.

Is Life of King George Threatened?

Week End Savagery in Ireland--Aged Clergyman One of Victims--Admiral Sims Ordered Home--British Carrying on in Silesia.

UNBRIDLED SAVAGERY.
BELFAST, June 12. The question is being widely raised in Belfast as to whether the killings here, over the week-end, will interfere with the visit of King George, to participate in the State opening of the Ulster Parliament on June 22. The series of tragedies during the week-end, eclipsed in savagery, any previous shootings. Victims included an aged clergyman and three young business men, the latter being found dead in the northern section of the city. The Very Rev. James Finlay, of Bawnboy, County Cavan, 80 years old and former Dean of Leighlin, who had been a clergyman since 1867, on answering a knock at his door last night, was confronted by a number of masked men. Without parley they took him outside and shot him dead, then battered his head with a brick and burned his residence. The other three men killed were William Kerr, Barber; Malachy Halpin, Postman; and Alexander McBride, Saloon keeper; all residents of Belfast. As their deaths occurred during the curfew hours, the killings are generally believed here to have been in reprisal for the shooting of a police sergeant and two constables on Friday. Many men, strangely attired, were concerned in the grim episodes. In each instance the assassins carried in a motor car, took the intended victim from bed and riddled him with bullets outside his house. Then the body was placed in the car and removed to the northern heights of the city, where it was placed in lonely fields. The relatives say the murdered men were assured they were wanted for identification purposes, and would be allowed to return to their homes. Kerr and McBride leave wives and infant children. Halpin was unmarried. Sharp rioting occurred in York Street area here to-night, resulting in one man being shot in the stomach and thirteen otherwise wounded. Three men were found shot to death in various parts of the city.

THE ADMIRAL EXPLAINS.
WASHINGTON, June 12. Remarks attributed to him in press reports of his recent address before the English-speaking Union in London, in which he criticized the activities of Sinn Fein sympathizers in the United States, were not correctly quoted and were misleading, Admiral Sims declared in a cablegram received by Secretary Donby. "Statements that were attributed to me," said the message, "were not correctly quoted." Contents misleading and garbled. Reports of statements in incorrect and inferentially wrong. Statement actually made was substantially same as reported in public in U.S.A., and in my book "The Victory at Sea" and in a public address at the meeting held for increasing good relations between English-speaking peoples."

DISCIPLINING THE ADMIRAL.
WASHINGTON, June 12. Rear Admiral Sims' leave of absence in England was revoked today by Secretary of the Navy Denby, and he was ordered to report at once to the Secretary of the Navy.

CLEARING SILESIA OF INSURGENTS.
BERLIN, June 12. British General Henkner, in command of the British troops in Upper Silesia, has assumed the responsibility for clearing the region of insurgents and is operating without the official sanction of the French head of the Inter-Allied Commission, General Lerond, but has the co-operation of the Italian forces, according to advices printed in Berlin newspapers. Advices stated that the entire area is expected again to be under Allied control within ten days. The killing of a Polish insurgent in any way controlled until the whole cargo has been removed. A large number of people visited Shee's premises yesterday to see the damage done by the icebergs with which she collided.

Sir John Crosbie's Criticisms of the Budget.

Newfoundland Has Met Her Waterloo--Schoolboy Financing Puts Ship of State on Rocks.

(Concluded)
We have got to do something about it. We are only just out of one problem when another comes, and they must be handled. If we don't do something, make some attempt, then I say we are going to be in a sorry plight. For instance, take my district to-day, Port de Grave. I know the condition there to-day just as well as the clock when it chimes twelve. I know the position of my people, and I want to say that I know that your Government has endeavored to assist them in getting away. You are doing what I think is your best in this matter, and I don't intend to condemn you for it, but I am sure you are not doing it generally admitted, we must make producers of these men if we can, and we are endeavoring to get the most of Conception Bay. The fishermen there is another crowd who don't go to the fishery, don't go to the Labrador in my district, and the question they ask me so often is: "What can I do this summer, can you get me a job?" And my answer is that I cannot, and these people are unable to earn their winter's supplies I fear that there is trouble brewing.

Let me look at this taxation that you have placed on just a minute ago. This twenty-five per cent. cannot produce the amount estimated in your Budget Speech, and I will tell you why, and I want you to prepare your mind for what I am saying. The tax is one million one hundred and seventeen thousand five hundred dollars. It is a tax on the fishery, and I will tell you why. Here is why. The men last year, when in the fishery, earned past couple of years could earn from fifteen to twenty-five dollars a week. I will not the coming year earn more than ten dollars a week. What is the good of your surtax. The earning power is not in Newfoundland to-day to produce the revenue as forecast in this Budget. It cannot and will not be produced because we have not the earning power nor the purchasing power for the coming year. The fishery is to-day unseizable. Only yesterday a man followed me to the Royal Bank of Canada to my office and said that he had no money. He had been for years, a cooper, who begged me to take one hundred and twenty half-drum from him at forty cents. He said that he had no money to pay for the fish. He had sold a drum for the past three months. What can he give towards the tax? It is very little, and that is why the estimate for the coming year is impossible. I want to tell you that next year you will be dealing with something else beside the revenue, and if something is not done to save the situation, the flow of water will be controlled until the whole cargo has been removed. A large number of people visited Shee's premises yesterday to see the damage done by the icebergs with which she collided.

Doing Well With Salmon.
Salmon are reported to be more plentiful at Port de Grave than for a number of years, and fishermen who have nets out are doing remarkably well. Mr. Michael Kelly, who has a number of nets, took 100 fish on Monday last week, the haul netting him nearly $100.00. His average daily haul since the season opened has been 40.

Practice Boats Out.
Two of the practice boats Elsie T. and Doctor belonging to the Avalon Boat Club were placed on Quidi Vidi pond this morning. It is likely that during the week some of the crews will have a try out. Two of the dhows were placed in position during the past week and a number of men are engaged fixing up the boat houses.

Repairing Road.
Those who use the Long Pond Road will thank the Minister of Public Works for moving in the matter of repairing this much frequented highway. Along by Reenies Mill up to O'Brien's Bridge, the road has been but a heap of stones for the past 18 months, and though repeated efforts were made to have repairs effected, to more was made until this morning. It is hoped that a permanent job will be done.

A CORRODED MAIN.—The old water main on King's Row, between Flavin's Lane is so much corroded that the wonder is how any water could be conducted by it. The main is being replaced with a new 6 inch pipe and the men engaged at the work are making excellent progress.

Splendid Exhibition at Feild Hall.

On Saturday evening a fine exhibition of geological specimens was given at Feild Hall, which came about in the following manner: Some two years ago the authorities of Bishop Feild College concluded that the institution could not do its full duty to Newfoundland unless it afforded the students facilities for the study of geology. Consequently a professor of this important and fascinating subject was sought and the services of Mr. Thornley, graduate in geology of the University of Manchester, engaged. Through the current school year Mr. Thornley has conducted his classes in the subject both for the boys of Bishop Feild College and the girls of Bishop Spencer College and with striking success. He has succeeded in enthusing the students in the study, and has so succeeded because geology is a real joy to him. He loves to teach it, and because he loves it, he teaches it well.

Some weeks ago Dr. Elrick took lunch at Feild Hall and availed himself of the opportunity to offer a prize for the boarder who would before the end of the school year make the best collection of geological specimens from the locality within ten miles of St. John's. The exhibition was held and the award made on Saturday evening. Over twenty of the three dozen boarders made collections varying in numbers from about a score to six score. The prize was awarded to N. J. Miles, J. Quinton running him very very close. Mr. Thornley, in making the award, declared that such a collection, an exhibition in England, would interest and attract all the geologists of the country. It appears that the rock formation of the Peninsula of Avalon is unique so that it is specially classified as Avalonian. Undoubtedly the success of the collection and exhibition was due in large measure to Mr. Thornley's enthusiasm and love for the subject. It seems to the writer a pity that a larger public cannot be afforded an opportunity of seeing this collection and hearing Mr. Thornley describe it. It is also his opinion that if there is any country in the wide world in which geology should form an important part of the school curriculum, it is Newfoundland. Congratulations to Bishop Feild College for its enterprise in this connection.

The work of discharging S.S. Charlot is still continuing under the supervision of Godden and Bartlett. An additional pump is being placed in position to-day, but it is highly improbable that the flow of water will be controlled until the whole cargo has been removed. A large number of people visited Shee's premises yesterday to see the damage done by the icebergs with which she collided.

Prospero From Northward.
S.S. Prospero, Capt. Feild, reached port at 4 p. m. yesterday from points as far North as Quirpon. No ice was sighted during the voyage, which was made in 10 days. Besides 3 small freight, the Prospero brought the following passengers: Messrs. Martin Morgan, Pippy, Robbins, Parsons, Starke, Milley, Bryan, Harding, Hancock, Ryan, Reys, Parsons, Nolan, Summers, Davis, Medeiros, Davis, Starks, McLoughlin, Connolly, Lee and child, Roberts, Oakley, McLoughlin, Templeman, Connolly and 100 in steerage.

THE GREEK OFFENSIVE.
CONSTANTINOPLE, June 12. Greek destroyers have bombarded Karamusal, a village on the northern shore of the Gulf of Ismid, and there have been several skirmishes along the Turkish front in Asia Minor. Coast towns along the Black Sea, Sea of Marmora and the Aegean Sea, are filled with refugees, who have fled from the interior because of the imminence of the Greek offensive against Doing Well With Salmon.

Salmon are reported to be more plentiful at Port de Grave than for a number of years, and fishermen who have nets out are doing remarkably well. Mr. Michael Kelly, who has a number of nets, took 100 fish on Monday last week, the haul netting him nearly $100.00. His average daily haul since the season opened has been 40.

Practice Boats Out.
Two of the practice boats Elsie T. and Doctor belonging to the Avalon Boat Club were placed on Quidi Vidi pond this morning. It is likely that during the week some of the crews will have a try out. Two of the dhows were placed in position during the past week and a number of men are engaged fixing up the boat houses.

Newfoundland Has Met Her Waterloo--Schoolboy Financing Puts Ship of State on Rocks.

We have got to do something about it. We are only just out of one problem when another comes, and they must be handled. If we don't do something, make some attempt, then I say we are going to be in a sorry plight. For instance, take my district to-day, Port de Grave. I know the condition there to-day just as well as the clock when it chimes twelve. I know the position of my people, and I want to say that I know that your Government has endeavored to assist them in getting away. You are doing what I think is your best in this matter, and I don't intend to condemn you for it, but I am sure you are not doing it generally admitted, we must make producers of these men if we can, and we are endeavoring to get the most of Conception Bay. The fishermen there is another crowd who don't go to the fishery, don't go to the Labrador in my district, and the question they ask me so often is: "What can I do this summer, can you get me a job?" And my answer is that I cannot, and these people are unable to earn their winter's supplies I fear that there is trouble brewing.

Let me look at this taxation that you have placed on just a minute ago. This twenty-five per cent. cannot produce the amount estimated in your Budget Speech, and I will tell you why, and I want you to prepare your mind for what I am saying. The tax is one million one hundred and seventeen thousand five hundred dollars. It is a tax on the fishery, and I will tell you why. Here is why. The men last year, when in the fishery, earned past couple of years could earn from fifteen to twenty-five dollars a week. I will not the coming year earn more than ten dollars a week. What is the good of your surtax. The earning power is not in Newfoundland to-day to produce the revenue as forecast in this Budget. It cannot and will not be produced because we have not the earning power nor the purchasing power for the coming year. The fishery is to-day unseizable. Only yesterday a man followed me to the Royal Bank of Canada to my office and said that he had no money. He had been for years, a cooper, who begged me to take one hundred and twenty half-drum from him at forty cents. He said that he had no money to pay for the fish. He had sold a drum for the past three months. What can he give towards the tax? It is very little, and that is why the estimate for the coming year is impossible. I want to tell you that next year you will be dealing with something else beside the revenue, and if something is not done to save the situation, the flow of water will be controlled until the whole cargo has been removed. A large number of people visited Shee's premises yesterday to see the damage done by the icebergs with which she collided.

HONOR. REV. DR. BOND.

Cochrane Street Methodist Centennial Sunday School held its Anniversary Services in the Church yesterday under most favorable auspices...

Rev. Dr. Bond presided over the afternoon gathering, which had an exceptionally bright programme...

ADDRESS. June 12th, 1921. The Rev. G. J. Bond, LL.D., CITY.

Dear Dr. Bond.—On this the Anniversary day of Cochrane Street Methodist Centennial Sunday School, with which you have been connected for the past five years...

We regret having to bid you farewell, but we know that in your new sphere of labor you will have the sympathy and assistance of all your young people...

On behalf of the Boys and Girls: ANNIE G. GILES, TED. DROVER, NORMA BURN, BRENDA MARSHALL, R. A. YOUNG, OLGA CROSBIE.

Rev. Dr. Bond, who was entirely taken by surprise, made a brief reply, thanking the school for the kindness shown him.

The Pastor delivered one of his best sermons, especially addressed to the young people, at the evening service, taking as his text, "I must be about my Father's business."

Wedding Bells.

WOODFORD—ROSS.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Patrick's Church on Thursday afternoon, June 9th, when Mr. William Woodford, son of Mrs. and the late John Woodford, Postal Telegraph Operator...

The bride was attired in a white satin dress, with veil and wreath of orange blossoms, carrying a bouquet of carnations.

After the health of the bride and groom was excellently toasted by Mr. Christopher, to which the groom splendidly responded, the newly wedded couple, with immediate friends, motored to Waterford Bridge, where the train was taken for Foxtrap, where the honeymoon is being spent.

McMurdo's Store News.

MONDAY, June 13.

In hot weather our Soda Fountain is the Mecca of many tired and thirsty folk, who lay themselves out to enjoy the cold drinks, the Ice Cream, Ice Cream Sodas, Sundae, and College Ice that we dispense.

The Imperial Press Tour.

A very handsome volume, entitled "The Imperial Press Conference in Canada," and intended to be the official record of that notable event, has just been issued in London by Robert Donald, L.L.D., Chairman of the Empire Press Union, with a foreword by Viscount Burrell, President of the second Imperial Press Conference. It is published by Hodder and Stoughton, sells at 25 shillings, and contains an account of the visit to Canada in August and September of 1920 of the delegates representing newspapers in all parts of the British Empire, tells of their welcome by the Press, Government and people of the Dominion; describes what they saw and the impressions which they received and adds full reports of the conference proceedings at Ottawa on August 5th, 6th and 7th. It is sumptuously printed, handsomely illustrated, and enriched with beautiful illustrations and besides being an admirable book of reference of the conference, is a valuable compendium of facts in relation to Canada. It is rather complimentary to Newfoundland, in that of all the material in the way of articles, letters, and other contributions published by the different pressmen who took part in the conference, the only one to which Mr. Donald makes reference is the somewhat complimentary comment on the articles published by Sir Patrick McGrath of this city, in the Herald after his return. This is made the subject of a very complimentary comment, while Sir Patrick's final article, reviewing the tour and the likely results is quoted in full, to the extent of a page and a half of the volume. It is acknowledged with acceptance by the King of a copy of the book on the Empire Press Union, Lord Stamfordham, His Majesty's Private Secretary, writes:—

"The King is glad to have this interesting account of the great achievement which must always be a notable landmark in the history of the Press and, notes with pleasure, the feeling of happy comradeship that characterized the proceedings of the Conference."

Salvage Notes.

The salmon fishermen made great hauls yesterday and hauled for as high as fifty-seven (57) fish—for one boat of nets. Some of these earlier catches were disposed of at 10 cents per lb.

Codfish are very scarce, only one trapman secured more than a few fish yesterday, and he had but a barrel, and both morning and evening hauls. Herrings are plentiful.

The fishing schooners that have been ready for so long, left for St. John's to-day. In my former notes I stated they were loaded with pilchard. As a matter of fact, they have only a deck load of props, being filled up below with birch junk, etc.

Mention has previously been made of the partial destitution around. Now there is actually a famine—but a famine of tobacco. If you meet a smoker, rest assured that his "first quest" will be for a pipe full. We trust the habitues of the weed will not suffer from their forced fast.

Some of the men of Bishop's River are engaged in repairing the Government wharf at Back Side.

Mr. Edward Oldford and Mr. John Most of Salvage and Bishop's River, respectively, are in St. John's buying their spring and summer stocks.

Some of the younger children of the district are suffering from Whooping Cough and German Measles. Diphtheria is stamped out.

The motor boat that goes around the Bay, collecting fresh salmon for the Atlantic Fisheries Co., Ltd., arrived for the first time today. They are offering 6 cents per lb., which price is a cent less than that of 1920.

With what ardour and patriotism Squires is fulfilling his manifest utterance on "Reduced Taxation." Yes! Indeed a two million dollar increase says nothing, if it does not eloquently portray Squires' genius for incapacity and governmental abuse. 100 per cent on Sugar, is only one of the items of taxation levied by Squires on his faithful followers. Where is Coaker, the friend of the underdog? Echo answer, where?

We are in accord with the reasoning of Mr. G. W. B. Ayre that June 24 should be the public holiday of this month. Nay, more, June 24th should be "Our National Holiday." It is time we awoke to the fitness of things.

"Coronation Day" is forgotten by more people than it is remembered by, while the day of our discovery, also too little remembered, should be kept more clear in our memories. What better history lesson, in the concrete, than the actual celebration of our National Day. Then here's to the success of "Our George" and may June 24 be acclaimed from now on, as its importance in our history merits.

PILES

Do not suffer another day with itching, bleeding, or protruding piles. No surgical operation required. Dr. Chase's Ointment will relieve you at once, and afford lasting benefit. Priceless Gifts to the Welsh National Library.

Through the generosity of the Misses Davies, of Plasdiman, an addition has just been made to the National Library of Wales of four printed books and two manuscripts of exceptional value for their beauty and rarity. They formed part of the valuable Peniarth Library, but for family reasons were not included among the Peniarth manuscripts acquired some years ago by Sir John Williams, and given by him to the National Library. The four printed books include two by Causton, one printed by his successor, Wynkyn de Worde, and a copy of the English Bible of 1539, printed on vellum. The two manuscripts are a passionate of the fifteenth century—it was probably prepared for King Henry VII.—on vellum, with 34 large and beautiful miniatures in gold and colours, and a fifteenth century manuscript containing an English translation of the Disticha of Cato. "The Wars of Alexander the Great" (Latin), and "The Story of the Three Kings of Cologne" (Latin). This manuscript is also on vellum, and is illustrated with full-page and smaller miniatures, beautifully illuminated in gold and colors.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

SOME FUN THAT COSTS LITTLE.

I have such a happy feeling inside me to-day. On my desk, waiting for leisure to read it, is a nice fat letter from an old friend from whom I had not heard, except for the exchange of Christmas cards, for seven years. It looks to me as if it had oodles of gossip about all our mutual friends in it, and very likely some snapshots of my friends and her two children. I'm going to have a most wonderful time with it after supper-to-night when the lamp is lit and my chair by the fire is ready for me (and I for it).

I earned that letter, too. And that's why I am writing you about it. It has been a very quiet winter for me. There have not been as many amusements in it as usual, not quite as much pressure of work. I wanted most cherished high school friend, the more interests and this is one of the ways I took to get them. I made wrote them each a long newsy letter with snapshots that I thought might interest them and bits of news about old friends who are theirs well as mine, and asking for a similar letter in return.

Two have already answered in kind; a third reply lies on my desk; two more are yet to be heard from, or never to be heard from (I have faith to believe the former).

Don't Try to Write Too Often.

You can't imagine how much enjoyment I have had out of opening up this communication. Of course I don't write them long letters every few days, but a few times a year I am going to try to write and be answered.

It's going to be lots of fun, and such inexpensive fun too. And in these days of the H. C. of L. who can afford to neglect any opportunity for inexpensive fun?

I wonder if Mr. Hays will have cause to note the results of this suggestion.

MY COLUMN

A BUSY LIFE.

I doubt if any of my readers are aware of the busy life which I lead and to prove that I am one of the world's workers, to show that like the busy bee I am always improving the shining hour, and to make plain that I am earning, and doing it well, the seven cents which is my weekly dole. I reproduce here an account of how my day is usually spent.

9.00 a.m.—I arrive at the office.

9.05 a.m.—Editor pokes his nose around the door and wants to know why I'm late.

9.08 a.m.—I reply cuttingly.

9.07 a.m.—Editor disappears.

9.15 a.m.—I get to work, and my pencil is busy for fifteen minutes.

A disturbance then occurs and a cat jumps over my table holly pursued by a mongrel which is barking and yelping to its caudal appendage. My papers are scattered and drenched by the contents of an overturned inkpot. After chastising Horace, who is, of course, the cause of the uproar, I again settle down (9.25 a.m.) to work.

9.40 a.m.—Scott the Editor again pokes his nose inside the doorway.

"Well," he says, "is that Obituary notice done yet?"

9.41 a.m.—I reply as cuttingly as I can that if it were his obituary notice I would be doing it with the greatest of pleasure. He retires—Again I 9.52½ a.m. get to work. Hardly have I begun when the Editor once more interrupts with "Look here, my son, you've brought the Woman's Suffrage Committee down on me with that last article of yours about the Editor. I reply that I am surprised that the Woman's Suffrage Committee or any one else should think for a moment that I write stuff as rotten as he does."

Editor: "Here, I've had enough of this. Get on with your 'pome' and dry up."

Now you see I've got on his sore spot. Well, perhaps not. I may have said enough.

(No doubt about it.—Editor.)

REMEX OF THE TIMES.

A WELCOME TO FOOTBALL.

Every night at seven-thirty be the weather fine or dirty. Many hundreds were their way to where king football now holds. And round the rails they stand about. And often raise a clamorous shout. In voices shrill you hear girls scream. Encouragement to the favoured team. As when down field they take the ball. And pandemonium reigns o'er all. When now we see a sign of rain. We swear. For football's here again.

HUMOROUS POKES.

Lady: "I should like to purchase a muff, please."
Shopman: "Yes, madam. What fur?"
Lady: "Why, to keep my hands warm, of course!"

WHY WORRY?

A blacksmith engaged a man as a "striker," but the new hand had not been long when he accidentally struck the smith on the side of the head with the hammer.

This kind of striking was naturally not to the liking of the smith, who angrily informed his assistant that he would have to go at once, and make room for a practical man.

"Why, man, you're making an awful fuss about nothing," returned the striker, surprised that the other should see anything in what he had done. "Let's work away; it might be an hour before I hit you again."

She: "How did you know I was going to wear my hair curled this evening?"
He: "I saw it in the papers this morning."

The inspector was talking about adverbs and adjectives.
"Does your master use adverbs and adjectives?" he asked.
"Yes, sir," chorused the scholars.

"Well, what does he use when he does not use adverbs and adjectives?"
There was silence. Finally, a little fellow waved his hand. "He generally uses a ruler, sir."

Mar: "My shoes come untied so easily. It's too bad to put you to so much trouble."
Fred: "It's a pleasure. I wish you were a centipede!"

A man went into an hotel and left his umbrella in the stand, with a card bearing the inscription attached to it: "This umbrella belongs to a man who can deal a blow of 250 pounds' weight. I will be back in ten minutes."

On returning to seek his property, he found in its place a card thus inscribed: "This card was left by a man who can run twelve miles an hour. I will not return."

Self-Praise.

The man who tells how good he is should drop that stunt in haste; he merely makes men sigh. "Gee whiz," and think he shows poor taste. I hope that I have sterling worth, of which my neighbors tell; I hope that I adorn the earth on which I deign to dwell; I hope I'm loaded to the guards with qualities so fine that I'm a model to all bards who write the lifting line. But I must show them by my deeds, which are in daily view, and not by empty words or screeds, or with my loud basson. My merits will be known to all though I am like a clam; I do not need to hire a hall to tell how good I am. If I in anything excel, the town will know the fact; I do not need to ring a bell attention to attract. The man who's prone to emphasize his claim to harp and crown soon finds that all the other guys expect he'll jump the town. True worth in modesty arrayed is sweet and passing fair, but when it's brazenly displayed we guess it isn't there. With blue prints of my merits bright your ears I shall not vex, though I may be a shining light, a credit to my sex.

Find of 1128 Old Coins.

TREASURE TROVE OF 16th CENTURY.

A hoard of 1,128 coins has been discovered during excavations for the foundation of a picture theatre in Perth, Scotland. The coins, which were claimed as treasure trove by the King's Remembrancer, dated from the reign of Edward III. to James IV. Dr. George Macdonald told the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland that the discovery was of great importance to numismatists, and he regarded it as extremely fortunate that such a hoard, cleaning up debatable questions relating to 15th century coinages, was secured practically intact by the King's Remembrancer.

Five gold coins and 122 of silver and bullion were retained for the National Museum of Antiquities and the Royal Scottish Museum, and the balance was returned to the finders, who were recompensed for those retained.

For afternoon models, taffeta-glace, soft silken tissues, charmouze, morocain, Georgette and crepe are used.

Welsh Tinsplate.

Tinsplate has for generations been one of the most important productions exported from South Wales. The industry was started in Wales two centuries ago, and exporting had begun half a century later. At first the plates were made from iron, but when steel was introduced a great expansion of the trade took place. The experience of generations of experts and workmen and the latest equipment which has been produced for tinsplate manufacture combine to produce the Welsh tinsplate as it is known to-day, and the fame of the tinsplate thus produced had before the war reached every country in the world, so that half a million tons of tinsplate per year were required from South Wales to meet the overseas demand alone.

Tinsplate is produced from steel plate coated with tin. The steel bars are heated to redness and then rolled out flat. The flattened steel strip thus made is re-heated, doubled over and rolled out, doubled and rolled out again and again until the required thickness is reached. The sheets are then trimmed to size in the shearing press, and are pickled in acid baths, followed by water baths, and annealed. When cold the sheets are again rolled under great pressures to give them a good surface, and are then again annealed and again pickled. They are then passed through mottin tin and palm oil, and cleaned and brightened and packed for shipment.

Tinsplate has a thousand uses, the chief of which is the preservation of food and milk for the use of mankind. Without tinsplate many of the most lucrative trades of the over-seas portions of the Empire could never have existed—the canning of meat, fish, milk, and fruit, and the packing of oil, drugs, and tobacco—and without this wonderful food-preserving material the crowded populations of Europe would have difficulty in providing for their requirements.

Produce and Provisions.

(From Saturday's Trade Review.)

Codfish.—The export of dry codfish this week from St. John's and the Outports were very much below a week's average and totalled only 12,250 quintals, as follows: From Outports—1,000 quintals from Port Union shipped by the Union Export Co., per schr. Hattie A. Hickman, to Oporto; From St. John's—By schr. "Over the Top", 2,248 quintals from Messrs. Bawring Bros., Ltd., for Bahia; 2,490 qts. by the Monroe Export Co., in the schr. Azores; 2,000 for Pernambuco; and by the Rosalind for New York for trans-shipment, 3,331 qts.

Cod Oil.—Small shipments are going forward to New York and Boston every outgoing steamer to these destinations, but there is no life in the Cod Oil market. The Export Tax on this oil, which is $5.00 per ton makes it hard in these times of low markets. By the Canadian Sapper, this week, 2,895 gallons were sent out by Job Bips, and the Rosalind took 15,383 gallons from different shippers, making a total from St. John's since New Year, about 1,578 tons roundly, against 1,300 tons this date last year.

Codliver Oil.—There is no improvement in the foreign markets. Prices have gone to such a low ebb that it is really too far below the cost of production for the average dealer to continue the business. It is only a few manufacturers in favored localities that can now run this business themselves without paying wages to helpers that can hope to make it pay. We hear that refiners are petitioning the Government to remove the export tax on Codliver Oil, which is four cents per gallon on shipments, or over $10.00 per ton.

Pork.—The imports of Pork are very slack these days and only 40 barrels arrived by the Rosalind, this week, a sufficient indication of a poor demand, even though the trade is right in the middle of the supplying season for the Pork. This is certified by the fact that the planters and fishermen are buying on strictly economic lines this season, and are to a large extent substituting beef which is 10 to 15 cents cheaper than pork. The following is a cablegram received by a leading pork importer this week from New York: "Pork market continues inactive with export demand very limited and domestic enquiries moderate." The short-haul imports to date are 2,408 tons, the quotations are: Morris Family, $28.00; Ham Butt, $27.00, and Family, Mess. (Rib) $25.00 per barrel, wholesale.

Beef.—The imports of Beef by s.s. Rosalind this week were 675 barrels. The market continues dull and steady at last week's quotations. It is believed by importers that a still further gradual lowering of prices will supervene throughout the summer as the accumulations are still large at packing centres and the export demand is poor. There is no factor in the outlook to warrant an expectation of any activity in the demand during the summer, and the feeling amongst the trade is one of confidence that low prices will rule all the season. The St. John's imports to date since New Year are 6,378 barrels, showing a shortage of 4,432 barrels as against last year at this date. The local quotations are: Libby's Special Family and Bos Flank, $29.00; Family, $28.00, and Boneless, $22.00 per barrel, wholesale.

Flour.—There was a serious scarcity of flour in town the early days of this week, and planters and schooner masters waiting to proceed to the wharves had great "scraping," as one of them expressed it, to supply their requirements by picking up a few barrels here and there to make up their total. Many schooners had to wait till yesterday to get their flour from the "Winona" which arrived in port Thursday from Montreal. In closing wheat came by the Sabie I, and some consignments due next Monday. It is thought that there will be enough in to supply the immediate requirements. Leading brands are selling at $13.50 per barrel, wholesale.

Molasses.—The schr. Marjory Mahaffey, the fourth to arrive here with new molasses this season, came in from Barbados this week with 304 puncheons, 54 barrels and 100 half-barrels to Messrs. Harvey & Co., Ltd., and Ayre & Sons, Ltd. The quotation for Fancy Molasses in the local market this week is 80 cents; Choice, 70c. per gallon wholesale in puncheons (old). The total imports since the season for new imports opened is 1,772 puncheons as compared with 3,042 this date last year. The Regal Moore and the Dazila are on the way from Barbados with cargoes and the Hazel Trashy is there loading.

Sugar.—The sugar market is unchanged and quotations stand at last week's figures, viz. $22.50 per 100 lb. wholesale and 33 to 35 cents per pound retail. The Rosalind brought in 1,350 barrels of American White Granulated. It is estimated that the total quantity now in stock here including what has been distributed, about 7,000 barrels, together with the local imports will suffice for all local needs till late in July. It is the opinion of most importers that the present prices will rule all summer. The imports are 2,774 hundredweight as against 4,421 this date last year.

Potatoes.—Prices are unchanged. There is a good stock of P.E.I.'s in selling at $9.30 to $9.50 per sack of 100 lb. Contrary to expectation, there were very little home-grown offering this week. Very few of the schooners that arrived from Bonaville had any. Disappointed after holding all winter for a big price, they prefer to keep them for themselves rather than sell at $3.00 in St. John's. The imports this week were 168 sacks by the Sabie I.

Hay.—The market is unchanged and the local quotations stand at $43 per ton and $45 by the single bale. Cables received from Western Canada this week indicate that there will likely be no change in prices till new crop comes on the market. Sales here are slow since grazing time began. The importations by the Sabie I last trip amounted to 3,287 bales so that the market is well supplied.

Oats.—There was a great scarcity of oats in the local market all the week and only for the arrival of 2,244 sacks by the Sabie I. There would have been an absolute oat famine. These were quickly absorbed and the market is again almost bare. Prices have stiffened up in Western Canada with an increase of four to five cents a bushel or twenty cents each. Mixed oats now quoted in the local market at $5.50 to $5.70; White, $5.70 to $5.90; Black—none in the market.

Feeds.—All feeds show a slight tendency upwards this week owing to the advance in the corn market, which on Wednesday showed an increase of five to seven cents per sack. The local demand is slack as the live stock can now get fresh green grass on the grazing lands.

Dried Fruits.—The dried fruit market is very strong in nearly all lines. It seems to be back to pre-war days when it fluctuated a few cents every week. Raisins are very strong and scarce, and it is expected that supplies will be short of the demand. Evaporated Apples have advanced one cent per lb. and all dealers forced up to a new level. Currants are in a strong position with a more active demand.

Gambo County Mill Owner Gets Over Serious Trouble

Middlebrook Lumberman De-Neved He'd Have to Quit, But Gets Help Just in Time.

"When a man gets over eight years as he ever did in his life it is time for him to speak out and that's the reason I am taking 'Tangle,'" said Allen L. Fritchett, a well-known mill owner and lumberman of Middlebrook, Gambo County, N.F.

"I used to suffer agonies after eating, no matter how careful I was. Neither medicine nor dieting reached any case, and I kept going down hill steadily till I got to the point where I had to lay off work for weeks at a time and I began to think it wasn't long before I would have to quit altogether.

"I think I did what everything else I had tried for eight years failed to do. I am as hungry as a bear at meal times, eat anything I want and never have a trace of indigestion. I gained weight and strength until I feel like a new man. I have even gotten rid of headaches that used to bother me a good deal. 'Tangle' did a hundred per cent. job for me and I am strong for it."

Whitewash is an excellent purifier. Always start coffee with cold water. Lemon juice improves a whitewash salad. Sopsends is an excellent tonic for rose bushes. Lemon juice will improve the flavor of stewed figs. Small new potatoes and peas make a good soup. Keep on hand a small brush for washing vegetables.

Egg and milk dishes should be baked in a slow oven. Too much care cannot be taken in selecting babies' shoes. The clean hairbrush makes the hair bright and glossy. Icing made with brown sugar has a delicious nutty flavor. All meat pots can be rendered and put into the soap fat. Add a cupful of strawberry jam to muffin batter. Delicious. Steamed strawberry dumplings are excellent served hot with cream.

Dominion Steel Co.

Will Use Only 270,000 Tons Wabana Ore—Scotia Does Not Require Any. We copy the following interesting item from the North Sydney Herald of Saturday, June 11:

The Dominion Iron and Steel Co. are expected to bring in about 270,000 tons of iron ore from the Wabana mines this summer.

The company has been operating only one blast furnace at the Sydney plant for some months, but a second furnace is expected to be blown in shortly. Each furnace when in operation requires from fifteen to eighteen thousand tons of ore per month. Figuring on one furnace working steadily during the year, and the second in operation for the remaining six months of the year, the amount of ore required would be approximately 270,000 tons. There is some ore in stock at the Sydney plant at present, but it is possible the company may decide to largely increase their stock pile, and in this event, the tonnage of ore to be brought in would reach a figure considerably larger than the one mentioned above. The Scotia Co. has sufficient ore in stock here to keep one blast furnace in continuous operation for eight or nine months' time, and there is little likelihood of any more ore being stocked here under the present industrial conditions.

At the present time both the Scotia and Dominion Steel Co. are working their respective mines, but operations are being carried on at a reduced scale. This condition will likely continue until next spring, when it is hoped that the steel trade will have so far recovered from its present slump as to warrant both mines being operated to capacity.

Exciting Cricket.

Spencer Lodge Loses to Field Hall.

A cricket match of more than ordinary interest was played on Friday afternoon between teams from Field Hall and Spencer Lodge, the former captained by Miss A. M. Richards, P.A., and the latter by R. Arkile (Grand Falls). The game was exceedingly exciting and the spectators were unable to keep their enthusiasm under proper control, and loudly encouraged the respective teams. Field Hall batted first and lost several wickets without obtaining any runs. The fall, however, did very well and rolled up an excellent total. Spencer Lodge showed signs of doing well at first, and before their second wicket had fallen, had attained a score of only 30 runs behind their opponents total. Field Hall then essayed a change of bowlers who sent down some weird "googlies" which caused collapse of the ladies' team, the last wicket falling amidst breathless excitement. Field Hall batted left-handed throughout.

Careless Sprinkling.

The youthful—and other Aquarii—who handle the watering hoses in flushing the pavement in front of the various stores, are requested to be a little less free with their water. Pedestrians have certain rights left yet, and it may be that some morning one or more proprietors may have to undergo an action at law for careless collapse of the ladies' team, the last wicket falling amidst breathless excitement. Field Hall batted left-handed throughout.

Outport Rugger.

A rugger game was played recently on the Bishop Field College grounds between two teams representing various outports. Despite the fact that several players had never seen the game before, the contest was better than could possibly have been expected. Port Union was not amongst the outports represented, and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries was not even consulted in the matter of representatives from his district.

Express Passengers.

The express which left Port aux Basques yesterday after the arrival of s.s. Kyle, reached town early this afternoon, bringing the following passengers: H. and Mrs. Crawford, Mrs. M. Lemmon, Miss J. Milfin, C. B. Whelan, Y. Alba, E. Brine, A. B. Gunn, A. B. Harding, Miss S. F. Crowley, Mrs. H. E. Whitworth, F. H. and Mrs. White, C. Huld, E. H. Mighel, J. Cook, J. Foster, S. G. Miller, J. J. Duser, Miss A. Noseworthy, Mrs. J. Pittman and son, Mrs. J. Hodder, J. M. Baird, Mrs. L. Yeargherg, Mrs. A. Pope.

Kirk Men's Association.

Professor Kent, D.D. will deliver an address to the members of the above Association in the Presbyterian Hall to-night at 9 o'clock. A social evening has been planned by the Executive and after the address refreshments will be served by the ladies.

Steering by Sound.

Unusual interest has been aroused by the working of the "radio" pilot-cable laid at the bottom of the Channel leading to Portsmouth, which enables fog-bound vessels to steer an accurate course into the harbour by means of sound.

This cable, which is about twenty miles long, is laid from the entrance to Portsmouth Harbour to the Warner Light on the Channel side of the Isle of Wight. It is beneath the exact course to be followed by vessels, and its "free" end is out at sea. The high-frequency electric current in the cable emits a certain "note" in Morse code.

The navigating officer on board a ship wears a set of ordinary wireless telephone receivers. These are connected to a battery, a set of "amplifiers" similar to those used in wireless telephony, and two coils, the latter being hung one over each side of the vessel, above the water line.

When approaching the harbour the officer listens first through one coil and then through the other for the "note" of the guiding cable. It may come to him through the starboard coil; if so he knows his vessel is to the left of the cable.

As soon as he knows the "note" equally loud through both port and starboard coils, he knows that his ship is directly above the cable, and in the correct channel.

Oil the Streets.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir.—Might I suggest through your columns, to the City Council that they lay the dust on Military Road and Queen's Road with oil. The water used on these important thoroughfares is entirely inadequate to serve the purpose for which it is intended and in fact, oil is the only really satisfactory dust layer.

Yours faithfully,

ELECTRICAL APPARATUS FOR EVERY PURPOSE

Westinghouse Glue Pots and Solder Pots

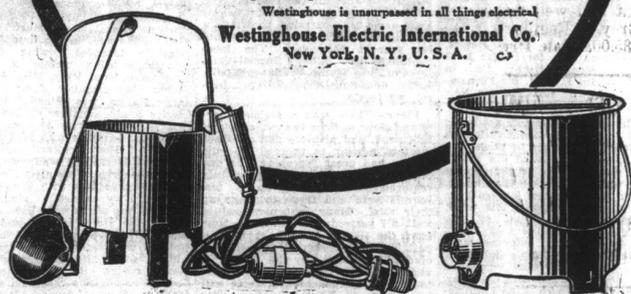

The great advantage of Westinghouse electrically heated glue pots over the old wet-type pots is so obvious that industrial establishments the world over are rapidly installing them.

Westinghouse electrically heated glue pots are easily connected and started; they quickly bring the glue to the right temperature and keep it there without attention; they cannot burn the glue; they save time, attention and labor.

For melting solder, lead, tin, babbitt and similar metals, Westinghouse electric solder pots are unequalled. They are safe and economical, and by keeping the metal in an even molten state assure a strong joint.

Westinghouse electric glue pots and soldering pots are built with characteristic Westinghouse workmanship. Like all Westinghouse products they are ruggedly made and will stand rough handling.

Westinghouse is unsurpassed in all things electrical.

"Hobson's Choice."

There is a romance of success in the story of the origin of the popular catch-phrase, "Hobson's choice."

Towards the end of the seventeenth century there lived at Cambridge, Tobias Hobson, a carrier. He was the first man in this country to let out hackney horses.

Hobson noticed how fond the students were of riding, and, starting in a small way, he ultimately established a large stable of horses with boots, bridles, and whips.

His horses were always ready and fit for riding, and he treated every customer alike. When one called for a horse he was conducted to the stable.

But although there was a great choice of horses, Hobson always asked the customer to take the animal standing next to the stable door. Hence it became a saying, when something was forced upon you which you would not have chosen yourself, that it was Hobson's choice.

Trees That Cause Fires.

Can a forest be fired through the rubbing together of tree branches in a gale?

So many doubts have arisen on the point that a well known naturalist has tried to settle the question once and for all.

He has come to the conclusion that the friction of branches against each other can start a fire.

It is not claimed that this extraordinary event occurs in our own damp climate, but there is evidence that it does occur in some of those regions where the air is dry and the sun scorching.

In the immense bamboo jungles of India and South-Eastern Asia it is felt to be a certainty by travellers that the extremely hard outer covering of the tall growths are capable of striking fire.

May not this have led to primitive man discovering how to make fire by artificial means?

Be that as it may, there is no doubt that ignition by tree branches rubbing briskly against one another in a very dry, hot climate explains many a supposed mysterious forest fire.

Prepare to Perspire.

The average man is more or less physically inactive during the winter. The result is that poisons accumulate in his body. That is why there is much illness in the spring and a vast consumption of "spring medicine."

But there is something far more efficient and beneficial. That because it is natural, "something" is perspiration. The perspiration ducts are the appointed channels by which the winter-accumulated poisons in the system should be expelled.

So perspire and perspire profusely and productively. In other words, go and dig. That's perspiration and productive. It will stir your whole system up—muscles, heart, mind, liver, lungs, everything. Spring digging means summer production, and as the drops fall from your brow with them comes the poison. A cheap and effective expulsion!

"Perspire with care," though. Have a warm overcoat to put on when you have finished. Walk home briskly, and slip into a warm bath. A tablespoonful of vinegar in the water will banish all aches from your muscles, and you will be clean inside and out!

Nature has more than one sweet restorer. Sleep may come first, but perspiration is a close second.

There Must Be a Reason

That a great many of the garments that we have received in the past month were from new customers who had those garments mishandled by other dyers and were sent to us as a last resort before a settlement was made with the owners. We were able to doctor up the majority of those crippled garments to the entire satisfaction of those owners. If you have any sick garments of this character send them to us. If our customers don't accept the garments after we doctor them, don't pay us. No cure no pay. We have received a new shipment of dye, the best on the market. Re-dye, cleaned, and dyed at shortest notice. Outport orders get my personal attention.

The German Fleet Revolt

A carefully recorded impression of the mutiny in the German High Sea Fleet on October 29 and 30, 1918, is published in the "Deutsche Wehr," a Berlin military review. The author of this is Lieutenant-Commander Fikentscher, of the battleship "Thuringen," who has related, with the minuteness of one accustomed to log-keeping, the events on board his ship. The article is summarized in the London Times.

He describes how, on the night of October 29th, the entire fleet lying in the Schilling Road received the order to prepare for sea. In accordance with the usual practice, a boat was called away to fetch the secret orders from the flagship. This envisaged night operations with light vessels against that part of the British fleet which was operating on the Belgian coast, but, of course, this was not then known to either officers or men in the "Thuringen."

The boat crew did not respond to the summons, and it was with difficulty that the boat was got away. Next morning's great part of the crew refused to jump out and remained in their hammocks. About 8 o'clock came the order to put to sea, but the crew refused to carry it out and shut themselves in the forward battery, where they began to sing. The commander then gave the order, "Muster by divisions," to be piped, even then the ship's company was only got to the deck by personal appeals and orders on the part of the officers.

In the circumstances the order to put to sea was postponed, which was their being given as the ostensible reason. The day's duty was got through in an atmosphere of suspense, and when in the evening the order came to get ready for sea the mutiny broke out.

The officers waited impatiently to see what steps would be taken by the authorities. After the midday meal the signal was given from the flagship to be ready for sea at a certain time. The order had hardly reached the captain when the mutineers again gathered forward and barricaded themselves in the battery. All exits were then covered by the officers. At the same moment a steamer from Wilhelmshaven brought alongside a company of marines, old and tried men, and these men were at once posted about the ship. Then the captain, with some of the officers, threw open the doors leading to the fore battery and ordered the men to come up on deck.

His order was greeted with howls from the mutineers. Meanwhile two torpedo boats had come alongside and brought the squadron chief on board. A third torpedo boat lay cleared for action, with guns loaded and the gun crews standing by, two hundred yards away. A submarine also approached and prepared for action. Then on the battleship "Helgoland," five hundred yards from the "Thuringen," the crew swarmed on deck and turned the casement guns on the submarine.

Finally, the order came to unload, and the dangerous moment passed. In one respect it was only apparently dangerous, since the mutineers on the "Helgoland" had not a single shell. The "Thuringen's" mutineers next offered to negotiate with the captain, who demanded unconditional surrender. They refused, and the squadron commander issued the order, "Resistance will be broken by force." The other deck was cleared, and the torpedo boat received instructions where to put its shells into the ship.

At that moment a seaman who had remained loyal undertook to persuade the men to come on deck to save bloodshed, and the order was countermanded while he tried. Ultimately he succeeded.

the seeds of weeds could live deep in the ground, some interesting experiments have been carried out.

A field was chosen which had been under grass for thirty-two years—from 1878 to 1910. This field was so far from the nearest cultivated land that seeds could hardly have been carried there by wind.

A sampling-iron—a kind of huge cheese-scoop—was driven into the grass, and the soil beneath carefully removed to a depth of twelve inches. This soil—stiff clay—was taken away in paper bags, and placed in clean, sterilized pans under glass. It was kept moist, and left alone.

Hidden in the Soil.

Soon seedlings began to show, and each was allowed to grow until large enough to identify.

The result was startling. In this soil there appeared no fewer than 365 seedlings belonging to eight different varieties. Among these were the scarlet pimpernel, the common blue forget-me-not, poppy, speedwell, bindweed, and, particularly, that foe of the farmer, the detestable knot-grass.

None of these plants, except the forget-me-not, are to be seen growing on the surface in this particular field.

We therefore have proof positive that these particular weeds can exist and maintain their germinating powers intact for at least thirty-two years.

These experiments have since been carried further, and we can now add a number of other plants to the list, such as charlock, shepherd's purse, sandwort, etc.

But enough has been said to prove that the farmer who is ploughing up old pasture need not be surprised if, mixed with his new crops, he discovers all sorts of new weeds.

Queer Cures.

What would you do if you caught malaria far away from civilization? Probably, if you hadn't any knowledge of the very wonderful native remedies that exist, you'd give it up as a bad job, and that would be the end of your story.

A woman traveller, back from the wilds of the Bush, tells of malaria being cured by lemon-juice. The patient, who had been given up as hopeless, was treated to a number of compresses made from lemons, which covered him from head to foot, and he speedily recovered from the fever.

In warmer climates, where a certain virulent and dangerous miasma comes from a fly, an old native woman brought the inflammation down rapidly by the following process. Spreading cotton-wool lightly over the portion affected, she deliberately set fire to the wool, and, blowing the ash away gently, smeared butter over the wound. It immediately healed.

PYORRHEA.
Pyorrhoea is the most destructive, the most difficult to treat, yet one of the commonest of all the diseases of the teeth. It is present in the mouths of countless thousands of adults who fondly think their teeth are in perfect condition. It progresses slowly, and in its early stages, painlessly. The gums become soft and bleed easily, then they grow sore and become inflamed. Pus forms at the roots of the teeth and they loosen in their sockets. When the disease reaches this stage it affects the general health and usually extraction is the only remedy.
