I suggest that selling the plant to the hon. member for Swift Current-Maple Creek would not be the solution to the economic problems of Renfrew county. The hon. member went on:

> It would have been far better for the minister to have closed the factory and given it to the town, because it might have been of some benefit to the town.

This plant is located in a rural township, not in an incorporated town. What concerns me is that a member of the Conservative party is suggesting that an industry in my constituency should be closed. This is indicative of the attitude to eastern Ontario taken by the Conservative party for several years. They say nothing about the employment that this plant has provided in Renfrew county over the years.

In view of some of the losses that have been recorded I think I should point out that the magnesium business is very competitive internationally. It has also been stated that at the present time the plant has 184 employees, including 30 who have been added to the staff since Bartaco took over. It is said that 30 per cent of these employees have been with the plant for over seven years and the other 70 per cent for a lesser period.

It should also be noted that some special trades are employed such as metallurgists, radiographers, pattern-makers, core-makers, machinists, and so on. These people have homes in the area and deserve the consideration that the government has given them by keeping the plant open. I want to express my sincere appreciation to the government for so doing.

Another fact which should be stated is that since this is a magnesium foundry it is of limited use so far as any changeover or readjustment to another industry is concerned. Therefore the market for such a plant is relatively small. If this arrangement had not been made many families would have found themselves without income. Yet the hon. member for Swift Current-Maple Creek suggests that it should have been closed down. I say this shows a callous disregard for humanity.

• (5:40 p.m.)

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Hopkins: This government—

An hon. Member: What page was this on?

Mr. Hopkins: —is spending millions of dollars to keep people employed in the Cape Breton area and as a Canadian and a friend of the Minister of National Health and Welfare I support this program wholeheartedly.

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): Would the hon. member allow one simple question? Would he outline what program he speaks of?

Mr. Hopkins: The Dosco program.

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): But let us have the details of the program.

Mr. Hopkins: The hon. member can make his own speech later.

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): On a point of order—

An hon. Member: Oh, no.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The hon. member for Cape Breton South on a point of order.

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): I rise on a point of order to tell the committee that in referring to a Cape Breton matter the hon. member is speaking of something of which he has absolutely no knowledge.

Mr. Choquette: That is not a point of order.

An hon. Member: What is it?

Mr. Choquette: It is a stupidity.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Will the hon. member clarify the point of order for the Chair?

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): May we have some order, Mr. Chairman? I do not think an hon. member is allowed to speak from his seat. When I am on my feet making some remarks I think it behooves the Chair to ask other hon. members not to interject from their seats. The hon. member for Renfrew North was talking of something he knows absolutely nothing about. When he directs his remarks at what the hon. member for Swift Current—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. Actually the hon. member has no point of order. He is making an argumentative representation.

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): The Chairman is jumping the gun. I have not arrived at my point of order. I was clarifying my remarks.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The Chair would appreciate it if the hon. member would not keep him in suspense too long.

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): Speaking of suspense, everyone is anxious to get the estimates through but the hon. member for Renfrew North has been speaking for the last 15 minutes and has not contributed anything to their passage.

The hon. member for Swift Current-Maple Creek spoke last night of a situation in Renfrew county. The hon. member for Renfrew North referred to the same situation, described the attitude of the hon. member for Swift Current-Maple Creek as callous and also referred to the steel situation in Cape Breton. If he wants to discuss that matter he had better do some homework so he will know what is going on.

Mr. Hopkins: The hon. member for Cape Breton South is so far out in left field he cannot see the batter.

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): On a point of order, Mr. Chairman, the hon. member is perfectly free to speak about Cape Breton as long as he can substantiate what he is saying. If he does not understand what he is saying he should consult someone who knows about the matter, and in this case I am not suggesting he go to the Minister of National Health and Welfare.

Mr. Hopkins: Before we hear any more suppositions I want to say that as a Canadian I am referring to programs elsewhere in Canada. Wherever problems are faced in Canada and people are in trouble my humanitarian instinct is on their side. I ask that the same consideration be given by hon. members opposite, and that consideration is not being extended by suggesting that a plant in my riding be closed.

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): On a question of privilege, at no time have I objected to government aid being given in Renfrew county or elsewhere. The hon. member should remove that implication from his remarks.

Mr. Hopkins: I did not imply anything like the hon. member suggests. I am only asking for Canadians to be interested in Canada. As a Canadian I support programs that are being implemented to help others in Canada. We must look after all Canadians in all regions, and I wish to make a few comments along these lines.

So far as I am concerned the people of my area deserve as much consideration as the people of other areas in Canada. As a humanitarian I compliment the government on making arrangements with the plant concerned so that our local people can be employed. This seems to be such an issue with the opposition, and it proves once again that they are not interested in eastern Ontario. Any party that wants to see an industry close down in an area that needs economic growth has proved its callous disregard for the people of that area, and the people of my area are going to know the attitude of the opposition on this issue.

The jobs of the employees of Bartaco at Haley are being protected by the government and I thank the government for the arrangements that have been made. If they had not been made many families would have been left without an income. As I said, notwithstanding the interruptions, I extend the same humanitarian sympathy to other areas that face circumstances similar to ours. I know that the people of Renfrew county and some in Pontiac county in Quebec are grateful for the arrangements that have been made, and I do not think the minister should back away one inch from his position. On behalf of Renfrew county I thank him.

Mr. McIntosh: Inasmuch as the hon. member brought me into his argument one might have expected him not to quote me out of context. I wish he had given me the consideration that I hope to give him. I commend him for the protection he is extending to the people he represents. I do not know whether he was here last night to hear the minister's reply. I thought the Minister of Agriculture, a potential leader of the Liberal party, was from Renfrew and that that was where the factory in question was. I admire the humanitarian instinct of the hon. member but I wish he would go back to the opening remarks of my speech. I was glad to hear the hon. member say he does not believe in discrimination.

I brought the matter up and made the comparison because I understood that this factory in the hon. member's area had been sold for $1. Last night I asked the minister if he would sell the armoury in my area for $1 so that there would be no discrimination. If the hon. member had been here last night he would have heard the minister say, "No". I asked the minister why the government would sell a factory in the hon. member's area for $1 and not do the same in my area.

Mr. Hopkins: On a point of order, I say to the hon. member for Swift Current-Maple Creek that I was in the house last night.

[Mr. Hopkins.]

Mr. McIntosh: I apologize.

Mr. Hopkins: I was here when the statement was made so no inferences can be drawn based on absence. So far as I am concerned the minister answers for the minister, but I am here representing the constituency of Renfrew North. As a member of parliament I have a job to do and that is why I am on my feet today. The matter the hon. member raised is a departmental one and he ought to refer to the department concerned.

• (5:50 p.m.)

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): On a question of privilege, the hon. member rose on a point of order to indicate that he was present in the house last night. We all know the rules. If a statement was made in the house last night to which he takes objection, last night was the time he should have raised his question of privilege. If the hon. member was here last night he should have raised his question of privilege then, not 24 hours later.

Mr. Nicholson: On a point of order, my hon. friend, the hon. member for Renfrew North, did not rise on a question of privilege but to take part in this debate. In the course of doing so he drew attention to a statement which was erroneous, not in accordance with the facts.

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): On the question of privilege, the Minister of Labour ought to know better. I was referring to the rules of this house. Questions of privilege should be raised immediately, not 24 hours later. The Minister of Labour has interjected a point of order which is nonsense. I suggest he should go back to India and look after his work. The government of which he is a member has indicated to the people of Canada that the hon. member for Verdun is looking after his portfolio. Why doesn't the hon. gentleman go back to India?

Mr. Hopkins: There is a matter I wish to clear up with the hon. member for Cape Breton South.

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): Mr. Chairman, there is a point of order before you and I think you should rule on it.

An hon. Member: Who is your doctor?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: If the hon. member would resume his seat—

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): The hon. member over there is still on his feet. Talk to him, not to me.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I shall try to rule on the point of order submitted to the Chair. There was no question of privilege; it was merely a contribution to a debate. I think everyone is taking part in a debate. There are no points of order.

Mr. Hopkins: Nor questions of privilege.

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): I am speaking on a question of privilege right now.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: There can only be one question of privilege before us at one time and I wish the hon. member would not make the task of the Chair more difficult. I have been looking at the clock for the last 15 minutes hoping it will be six o'clock.

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): Am I to understand the Chair is now ruling that questions of privilege can be brought up at any time and need not be raised at the earliest opportunity?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The question is hypothetical. The Chair ruled there were no valid points of order raised on either side of the house.

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): There was a question of privilege before you, if not a point of order.

Mr. Hopkins: I should like to clarify this point. The hon. member for Swift Current-Maple Creek knows that I rose on a question of privilege a couple of minutes ago specifically because he implied I was not in the house last night. The question of privilege I raised followed the comment he made not five minutes ago. It was not something which arose 24 hours ago as the hon. member for Cape Breton South has suggested. I rose this afternoon to deliver a speech, and that speech is obviously not a question of privilege. I am speaking on behalf of my riding. The question of privilege related to something which occurred immediately before I rose and has no connection with anything which happened last night.

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): Why were you quoting from Hansard?

Mr. McIntosh: It is quite correct that the hon. member for Renfrew North spoke on a question of privilege arising from a statement I made that he was not in the house last night. I apologize for making that statement; I did not know he was in the house. But I will make another suggestion right now. His speech today was intended for consumption in his own area, looking toward the next election. He says he does not want to see discrimination. When I asked him a question he said: Let the minister answer it. If he is in favour of equal rights for all he should be supporting the idea I am putting forward. If he did not support ministers who make deals in this way we would have less trouble in Canada than we are experiencing today.

Mr. Nasserden: I have one or two questions to ask the minister. Was an item in respect of prepaid expenses included in the financial statement of this organization and was there an amount reserved for bad debts?

Mr. Drury: I mentioned that there was no reserve for bad debts in the balance sheet of September 29, but there is an item for prepaid expenses in the amount of some $9,000.

Mr. Peters: Was this previously a crown corporation? If so, for how long had it been a crown corporation?

Mr. Drury: I am sorry the hon. member did not hear my outline. This is a plant built and owned by the crown but operated by a number of private operators.

Mr. Peters: I am prompted to rise by the remarks of the hon. member for Renfrew North who told the committee he was happy the minister had been able to solve this problem by the sale of the Renfrew plant. There has been some suggestion that the Polymer Corporation should be sold but if that happened I presume the transaction would be handled in a totally different way, possibly through the Crown Assets Disposal Corporation, a course which would, I imagine, result in a great deal of extra prestige for that corporation.

The hon. member pointed out that the maintenance and operation of this plant were a matter of great importance to more than 200 workers and said he was pleased about the decision which had been reached. However, it seems to me we should be given a much clearer understanding of the means by which crown corporations are disposed of. Several weeks ago another crown corporation, Northern Ontario Pipe Line Crown Corporation, was wound up. It had been set up by parliament for a specific purpose and when that purpose had been achieved it was disposed of by an act of parliament. The machinery used to close that corporation down was the same as that used to establish it but in reverse, one might say. I admit the bill was passed more quietly than the bill for its establishment in 1956. However, the process was the same and legislation had to be passed. In this case action is being taken through a supplementary estimate and it seems to me the house is not getting the whole story. I am not sure I understand part of the minister's submission and I should certainly like some time in which to consider the observations he made. I would therefore call it six o'clock.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall I rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again?

Mr. Starr: I wonder whether there is a disposition on the part of the committee to sit for a while longer and pass these estimates of the Department of Defence Production in view of the fact that getting answers from the minister has proved to be a hopeless task. Apparently we will not get any answers anyway.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Is the committee in agreement with the suggestion made by the hon. member?

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, taking into account your words of a few moments ago with regard to your desire to be elsewhere, I call it six o'clock.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall I rise, report progress and request leave to sit again at the next sitting of the house?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Progress reported.

At six o'clock the house adjourned, without question put, pursuant to standing order.

TRADE

APPROVAL OF INTERNATIONAL GRAINS ARRANGEMENT 1967

On the order: Government notices of motions:

March 19, 1968—Hon. Jean Marchand (for the Minister of Trade and Commerce)—The following proposed motion:—That the Houses of Parliament do approve the Wheat Trade Convention and the Food Aid Convention comprising the International Grains Arrangement 1967 scheduled to take effect July 1, 1968.

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to section 2 of standing order 21 this government notice of motion is transferred to and ordered for consideration under government orders.

FINANCE

PURCHASE OF BOND ISSUE BY BANK OF CANADA

On the orders of the day:

Mr. G. H. Aiken (Parry Sound-Muskoka): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Finance. Can the minister now answer my question of yesterday as to the amount of the current bond issue which was taken up by the Bank of Canada?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I cannot answer as to the actual disposition of the bonds because the books have not yet been closed, but the Bank of Canada had agreed to acquire a minimum of $85 million of these issues, open as to maturity.

[Translation]

INCREASE IN INTEREST RATES ON GOVERNMENT BONDS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Roland Godin (Portneuf): Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a question to the hon. Minister of Finance.

This morning, a newspaper carried an article on the new Canada government bond issue for $175 million at rates of interest varying between 5½ per cent and 7.30 per cent.

Further on in the article, we are told that the new bonds are authorized under an act of the parliament of Canada. Can the hon. Minister of Finance tell us what act this is, when it was passed—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I suggest to the hon. member that it is out of order to put a question requiring an interpretation of an act.

HEALTH AND WELFARE

MEDICARE—REQUEST FOR ASSURANCE AS TO IMPLEMENTATION OF PLAN

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the right hon. Prime Minister a question. Having regard to the statement of the Minister of Finance that prior to July 1 he is prepared to undertake discussions with the provinces regarding the implementation of medicare, I ask the Prime Minister whether the commitment he gave to the house on February 12, that medicare would commence on July 1 of this year, is binding upon the Liberal government irrespective of who may head the administration.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, there has been no change in that commitment.

Mr. Douglas: May I ask a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Is it possible for a minister to remain in the cabinet when he is advocating policies which are diametrically opposed to the policy enunciated by the Prime Minister?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Pearson: It is also possible for the minister's remarks to be misinterpreted, and they were—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

PROPOSED INCREASE IN PENALTIES FOR MARIJUANA USE

On the orders of the day:

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I would ask the Minister of Justice whether in view of police statements made in the last couple of days regarding the explosive degree to which marijuana is being used in this country, consideration is being given by the government to bringing in legislation to increase the minimum penalty so there will be some deterrent to this very serious offence which is affecting the people of Canada in all the provinces.

Hon. P.-E. Trudeau (Minister of Justice): No, Mr. Speaker, such consideration is not being given, but action is being taken now by the courts to increase the deterrent. Whereas previously the courts had very often taken the view that on the first offence possession would be met with a suspended sentence, now the inclination of the courts is to give a prison sentence and sometimes impose a very heavy fine in addition, precisely in order to increase that deterrent.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Was a suggestion made to the courts that the giving of suspended sentences was not in the interests of the administration of justice, and did that come from the Department of Justice?

Mr. Trudeau: On the contrary, Mr. Speaker, the Department of Justice has taken the position that if the courts requested a recommendation, the department would not ordinarily suggest a suspended sentence but would ask the courts to consider the position which was stated by the court of appeal in British Columbia, that is the position I have just stated, that a first offence would not automatically be met with a suspended sentence.

[Later:]

Mr. Arnold Peters (Timiskaming): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Minister of Justice whether it is the intention of his department to establish a study of the marijuana problem, in the light of changing social conditions and the harsh sentences that have been imposed recently on high school and college students.

[Translation]

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, I answered part of that question earlier, but I must say that the whole problem of drug addiction and of the rehabilitation of the offenders interests me greatly. I feel that quite often it would be more advisable to treat drug addicts than to send them to prison, but that matter is under consideration.

[English]

Mr. Diefenbaker: Treat them with what?

AGRICULTURE

EFFECT OF IMPORTS OF PROCESSED FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. W. Danforth (Kent (Ont.)): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct my question to the Minister of Agriculture. Can the minister inform the house whether the government has instigated any type of survey or any other action to ascertain to what degree increasing imports of processed fruits and vegetables will curtail Canadian farm contracts this year?

Hon. J. J. Greene (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, last Thursday, in answer to a question put to me by the hon. member for Okanagan Boundary with respect to the importation of Australian canned fruits, I indicated that this matter has been under study by an interdepartmental committee. A report has been received from that committee, which is presently under consideration. As any determination or resolution from the study of that report would involve government policy, any decision that is taken will be announced in the proper manner.

Mr. Danforth: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. May I ask the minister whether this investigation is being expanded to cover imports from other countries such as canned or processed fruits which we get into this country from Australia.

Mr. Greene: So far as I know to date, the specific study to which I referred was limited to Australian canned peaches, as this was the complaint which was brought to our department by the peach growers and peach canners who have specifically complained about Australian imports.

Mr. H. W. Herridge (Kootenay West): I wish to address a supplementary question to the minister because this matter is of urgent importance to some 5,000 fruit growers in British Columbia. I know several members of the cabinet have received telegrams recently in connection with it. In view of the possible early prorogation of parliament they are very anxious that remedial action be taken. Can the minister inform the house what is going to be done in the near future about this question?

Mr. Greene: I concur in the hon. gentleman's statement as to the urgency of consideration, and I appreciate that the matter is a serious one to the fruit growers, particularly those in the Okanagan valley. I can assure the hon. member that I will do everything possible to hasten the resolution of this problem.

Mr. George Muir (Lisgar): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I should like to ask the minister if he has looked into the importation of vegetable oils, as he said he would do last week?

Mr. Greene: Mr. Speaker, I do not have a report on that specific question at the moment. I believe I had it here the other day but somehow did not get an opportunity to report to the hon. member. I will undertake to have that report in his office this afternoon.

POTATOES—ASSISTANCE TO IMPROVE RETURNS TO GROWERS

On the orders of the day:

Hon. J. A. MacLean (Queens): I should like to ask the Minister of Agriculture, in the light of the resolution passed by the Canadian Horticultural Council within the last three weeks and the representations from other interested bodies, whether he is in a position to announce any action which will improve the market and the returns to the producers of Canadian potatoes.

Hon. J. J. Greene (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I have had such representations from the potato industry generally, and there is at present under consideration a program for helping the potato growers who are extremely hard pressed by reason of low prices this year. If such a program is determined upon it will be announced in the proper manner.

Mr. MacLean (Queens): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address a related question to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. Is his department looking into what appears to be a very inefficient and extremely costly distribution system for unprocessed potatoes and other vegetables, under which less than one third of the price paid by consumers in Ottawa and other cities at the present time is getting through to the primary producer?

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I will have to look into this matter. I imagine that a good deal of the jurisdiction lies with the marketing boards as well.

Mr. Ed. Schreyer (Springfield): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question I should like to put to the Minister of Agriculture. Inasmuch as the minister has stated that he is keeping continuing watch on the imports of potatoes into western Canada, has the minister now made a decision whether he will accede to the request for the imposition of a value for duty?

Mr. Greene: Mr. Speaker, up to now the decision has been not to place a value for duty on potatoes in the western region owing to the fact that such action would entail retaliatory action by the United States which might very seriously impair the position of other segments of agriculture, and certainly the position of the potato growers in Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick. However, in view of the serious situation created by these prices other action is being contemplated which, if it is determined upon, I believe will be in the best interests of and of great help to the western potato growers as well as those in eastern Canada.

Mr. Schreyer: A further supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Without being argumentative and challenging the minister's decision, may I simply ask whether his department has made any calculation whether the importation of United States potatoes is at a price level that constitutes dumping?

Mr. Greene: Mr. Speaker, the advice I have is that while United States potatoes are entering Canada, and western Canada in particular, under such circumstances as to constitute an unfair competition in the economic sense, it is not dumping technically according to the definition of that term as laid down in the current GATT agreements.

Mr. W. H. Jorgenson (Provencher): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question.

Has the minister been advised by the United States government that retaliatory action would be taken?

Mr. Greene: Mr. Speaker, we have been looking into this matter very carefully. We visited Washington on several occasions to try to help the western potato growers in their very difficult position. The best information we could get and the most complete conclusion that we could arrive at was that if in fact unilateral action were taken by Canada in placing a value for duty on these imports, retaliatory action would be taken—that is to say, if we were not able to reach a bilateral agreement with the United States regarding a value for duty imposition.

DRUGS

REPORTED LARGE SCALE COUNTERFEITING OF PRODUCTS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. L. M. Brand (Saskatoon): I have a question for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. I wonder if the minister has been made aware of a serious situation which could endanger the health and safety of the public, which has now come to light. Is the minister aware that counterfeiters of drug products have recently commenced large scale operations in Canada?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of National Health and Welfare): No, Mr. Speaker, and I should like to have details to substantiate the claim.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I suggest that this could be done by direct communication between the minister and the hon. member who has raised the matter.

HOUSING

CO-ORDINATION OF ACTIVITIES RESPECTING RENTAL ACCOMMODATION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Reid Scott (Danforth): I should like to direct a question to the President of the Treasury Board in his capacity as the minister who speaks for Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. Before the house adjourns, in two or three weeks, and in view of the continuing spiral in rents which is taking place in Canada, I wonder if the minister would bring the house up to date with some sort of statement on the success he is having in co-ordinating the activities of his department and those of the provinces with a view to expediting the construction of rental accommodation.

Mr. Speaker: Well, perhaps the minister might want to indicate whether such a statement could be made, but certainly he could not make such a statement just now.

Hon. E. J. Benson (President of the Treasury Board): First of all, Mr. Speaker, if the house adjourns in two or three weeks I probably will not be President of the Treasury Board by that time. Quite aside from that, I had the pleasure of meeting with the ministers responsible for housing in the Atlantic provinces yesterday with a view to moving toward the objective to which my hon. friend referred. We had a very pleasant and very useful meeting. At this time I should like also to again assure the hon. member that this year there will be more houses built than ever before in Canadian history, including more rental housing units.

Mr. Scott (Danforth): In view of the fact that the houses being built under N.H.A. are acknowledged by all parties to be beyond the monetary capacity of 85 per cent of our people, will the minister concentrate in his statement on the low rental housing problem in this country?

Mr. Benson: On the contrary, this year N.H.A. is concentrating its money in public housing.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

DIVORCE

PREPARATION OF RULES OF COURT—PROCLAMATION OF LEGISLATION

On the orders of the day:

Hon. R. A. Bell (Carleton): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Minister of Justice whether a meeting of chief justices on the subject of divorce rules has taken place, what progress has been made, and whether he is able to forecast when the new legislation may be proclaimed.

Hon. P.-E. Trudeau (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, I have also been given notice of this question by the hon. member for Halifax, and I have an answer I should like to give.

First of all with regard to the chief justices' meeting, a meeting was held last week of chief justices from all across Canada. Considerable progress was made. It is the intention of the government to have the Divorce Act proclaimed and in force as soon as this can be done. However, in any event this cannot be before May 2 in view of section 27 of the act. There are a number of matters that have to be dealt with, including the ironing out of these rules and the establishment of exchequer courts where required. These matters are well in hand and we are very optimistic that we will be able to proclaim the act as soon as possible.

Mr. Bell (Carleton): Is the minister indicating that the government expects to be able to proclaim the act on May 2?

Mr. Trudeau: I am indicating that this is the date we are aiming for. I cannot, of course, promise that it will be absolutely fulfilled on that date. The law is out of our hands now, and it really depends on whether the chief justices can work out rules to ensure sufficient uniformity within that time. As I say, we are quite optimistic about it.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

NORTH SYDNEY, N.S.—REQUEST FOR ASSISTANCE FOR DOCK WORKERS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): My question is for the Prime Minister. Some days ago I asked what the government proposes to do about the large scale lay-off of dock workers at the port of North Sydney. I also asked him to make a statement on government policy indicating what will be done to assist those who will be affected. May I ask if he or the Minister of Manpower and Immigration is in a position to make a statement now? The reason I am raising this matter is that we may be leaving here shortly, and who knows if we shall return.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): I might be able to make that statement, or perhaps the minister concerned will make it tomorrow. I think we shall be here tomorrow, Mr. Speaker.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

VIET NAM—INQUIRY AS TO CANADIAN EFFORTS TO END WAR

On the orders of the day:

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Thirteen days ago I asked the Prime Minister about representations made to the United States relative to the cessation of bombing. I also placed before him the suggestion that to give support, sinew and muscle to the government's views, this house might consider a resolution respecting the cessation of bombing.

Can the Prime Minister now say whether the government has given these suggestions consideration? Also, when replying, will he say what if any advance has been made in achieving that objective as the result of representations to the Department of State of the United States?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): As to the latter part of the question, I cannot say that any advance has been made in recent weeks in bringing about the cessation of bombing of the north. So far as a resolution of the house is concerned, I have given serious consideration to its possibility and, indeed, its desirability. It seems to me that if a resolution were to be of value it ought to be carried virtually unanimously by the house. It seems to me also, from the parliamentary discussions that have taken place on this matter in this last week or two, that a resolution of an effective kind would not get such unanimity; and if there were division on the type of resolution put forward I should think more harm than good would be done.

Mr. Diefenbaker: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Is the Prime Minister suggesting that he does not think the country as a whole agrees with the stand taken by his government?

Mr. Pearson: No, Mr. Speaker, but I suggest the right hon. gentleman should read some of the discussions that took place in the house in the external affairs debate.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Would the Prime Minister consider the possibility of having either the house leader or the parliamentary committee on external affairs draft a resolution that would win almost unanimous acceptance?

Mr. Pearson: I would be glad to take that up with the house leader and he will probably get in touch with the other house leaders. If that could be done in an effective way I should be very much in favour of it; but I would not be in favour of a resolution which would underline division rather than unity in the house.

Inquiries of the Ministry

HEALTH AND WELFARE

PAYMENT OF PREMIUMS FOR MEDICAL CARE OF INDIANS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. P. B. Rynard (Simcoe East): I wish to address a question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. If the medical care plan is universally applied to the provinces, that will be the source of medical care services. Now my question is, will the federal government pay the premium for Indians in the provinces on premium health care services?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, may I take that question as notice.

INQUIRIES OF THE MINISTRY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, may I direct my question to the Prime Minister. In view of the interesting interpretation made by last night's C.B.C. news with respect to the Prime Minister's reference yesterday to the period between now and April 25, can he indicate to the house the significance of his using that date, April 25?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): The significance of using that date, Mr. Speaker, is that I must be very tired, because I meant April 23.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Would the Prime Minister be prepared to take the house into his confidence and indicate whether his successor will take office prior to April 23, when parliament reassembles, or afterward?

Mr. Pearson: I will be glad to take the house into my confidence, Mr. Speaker. It will depend entirely on who the successor is.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Pearson: One hon. member on this side who might be the successor might like to take over the day after the convention; another one might want two or three weeks to get ready.

Mr. Knowles: Some of them would never be ready.

Mr. S. J. Korchinski (Mackenzie): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Agriculture. Following his recent advice to various farm organizations to unite and speak with one voice, has he since changed his mind because, as a member of the cabinet, he supports Bill C-186, which if passed would fragment unions rather than unite them.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The question is clearly argumentative.

Hon. J. J. Greene (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I don't agree with the premise of that question.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

REQUEST FOR RECONSTITUTION OF PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE

On the orders of the day:

Hon. W. G. Dinsdale (Brandon-Souris): I have a question for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. In view of growing problems affecting our native Canadians and the long delay in dealing with them, would the minister in his capacity as house leader assure hon. members that the committee on Indian affairs will be reconstituted at an early date so these problems can be dealt with expeditiously?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of National Health and Welfare): The question of the reconstitution of the committee is really one for the minister directly concerned with Indian affairs.

Mr. Dinsdale: Would the hon. gentleman discuss this matter with his colleague the minister of Indian affairs and make a specific announcement at the time he makes his statement with respect to the reduction in Indian health services?

Mr. MacEachen: I have already discussed the matter with him.

FINANCE

GOLD—INQUIRY AS TO SALES PROCEDURE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. M. W. Martin (Timmins): I have a question for the Minister of Finance arising out of an answer he gave yesterday. Having regard to the growing concern and confusion in the gold mining industry, could the minister inform the house whether a tentative date has been fixed for a decision as to the disposal of gold purchased from Canadian gold producers?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): I regret I cannot clarify the situation immediately; it is still being examined, and I doubt whether a final decision will be made until after the meeting in Stockholm, when this subject, among others will be discussed.

Mr. Douglas: Has the minister yet decided who will represent Canada at that meeting?

Mr. Sharp: No decision has yet been taken.

INCREASE IN INTEREST RATES ON GOVERNMENT BONDS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Henri Latulippe (Compton-Frontenac): Mr. Speaker, yesterday I put a question to the hon. Minister of Finance. I should like to put it to him again today, because I do not think that he understood it.

In the last few days the Minister of Finance announced an increase in the interest rate on government bonds which the government is unable to redeem at maturity. This rise in the interest rate varies between 2 and 2½ per cent and I should like to know whether this increase is included in the blue book containing the estimates for 1968.

Mr. Speaker: I remember that the question was asked by the hon. member, but I do not know whether it was thought in order at the time. However, if the hon. minister is willing to reply at this time, I have no objection.

[English]

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Finance): An attempt was made in the estimates which were tabled to forecast the requirements of the government in connection with the payment of interest.

[Translation]

Mr. Latulippe: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege.

Yesterday, in answer to my question, the minister said that there was no substance in my statement, but I have here assertions in support of the statement I made yesterday.

As the minister told me that my figures were wrong and without substance, I would like to come back to the question I asked him—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I point out to the hon. member that if there is a misunderstanding between himself and the minister with regard to the interpretation of certain figures, that is not sufficient grounds for a question of privilege. It would be simpler for the hon. member to put a supplementary question.

Mr. Latulippe: In that case I shall put a supplementary question to the minister.

I said yesterday that the interest rate was to be increased from 2 to 2½ per cent, because those bonds for $175 million were at 4½ per cent and they are bought back at 7¼ per cent—

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member should ask his question, if he has one.

Mr. Latulippe: Mr. Speaker, I ask the minister whether the difference between 7¼ and 4½ is really 2.8 per cent. Was I wrong when I asked this question relating to the increase in the interest rate on those bonds?

Mr. Speaker: I repeat what I suggested a moment ago. This is an argument between the minister and the hon. member. I do not think the question is really in order.

IMMIGRATION

ALLEGED INACCURATE INFORMATION GIVEN BY OFFICIALS ABROAD

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Michael Starr (Ontario): I wish to address a question to the Minister of Manpower and Immigration. I first put this question to him some days ago in view of charges which had been made by recently arrived immigrants that the information given to them by immigration offices outside this country was false, and that they had not found the situation here the same as that which had been described to them. Has an investigation been made of these charges, and is the minister prepared to make a statement either agreeing with them or refuting them?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Marchand (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, the question is not all that simple because in all our immigration offices we give out general information on Canada, on matters such as the average wages, the average temperature and the average rents. An immigrant can easily and quite honestly misinterpret the information given to him, and that gives rise to misunderstandings such as the ones brought to our attention. However, I think that Canadian immigration agents have always, and not just in the last year or two, informed immigrants as well as they could.

Unfortunately, one cannot always avoid certain misunderstandings such as those reported to the house by the hon. member.

[English]

Mr. Starr: In view of the fact that not one but quite a number of immigrants have made the same charge in connection with information given them by the immigration officers, does the minister not think an investigation should be undertaken as a basis for directing these officers not to give out false information?

[Translation]

Mr. Marchand: Mr. Speaker, continuing investigations are made. We keep in touch daily with our officials and we give them information about Canada.

Our immigration policy is well known. It is impossible to give precise information on a day to day basis to every immigrant, and that has always been the case. Misunderstandings such as those mentioned by the hon. member are unavoidable, but we try to prevent them as much as possible.

AIR TRANSPORT

REQUEST FOR AMENDMENT OF RESTRICTION ON FARM SPRAYING

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Lawrence Watson (Assiniboia): I should like to direct my question to the Minister of Agriculture and ask him whether, in the interests of western farmers, he will use his influence to permit them to make more effective use of their aircraft for spraying purposes by having an alteration made in the regulation which at present limits them to a 25-mile radius based on their home farms. I refer to air navigation order series VII, section 3(4).

Mr. Speaker: This is not a question which could normally be accepted at this time, but in view of the fact that there may be a recess some time soon it might be allowed.

Hon. J. J. Greene (Minister of Agriculture): This matter does not come specifically under the control of my department but I shall be pleased to take it up with the Minister of Transport, who I think is likely to be particularly sensitive to any requests made of him these days.

PENITENTIARIES

QUEBEC—INSTRUCTIONS RESPECTING PURCHASE OF FOOD

On the orders of the day:

Mr. J. R. Keays (Gaspé): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Solicitor General with reference to a query posed by the hon. member for Saint-Hyacinthe-Bagot on March 15, concerning statements that instructions had been given to the authorities of federal penitentiaries in the province of Quebec not to purchase meat stamped "Quebec Approved." Has the minister any information on this subject?

Hon. L. T. Pennell (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, following the question by the hon. member for Saint-Hyacinthe-Bagot I instructed the officials of my department to pursue the matter further with the officials of the Department of Agriculture, and I expect a report very shortly.

Mr. Keays: Mr. Speaker, it appears that the Minister of Agriculture may be in a position to answer the question I put to the Solicitor General. Is the minister in a position to answer it?

Hon. J. J. Greene (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, the question of the relative standards set by the province of Quebec in their meat grading regulations and those set by the federal department is now being considered by our meat grading section, and a report will be given to the Solicitor General in this regard very shortly.

Mr. Keays: Then may I ask the minister whether instructions have been issued to the authorities of the federal penitentiaries in Quebec as suggested?

Mr. Greene: Well, Mr. Speaker, the general instructions are that in all federal institutions, to the best of my knowledge and certainly in the penitentiary section, it is customary to buy only Canada graded products, so the inmates can be assured that their food is of this high quality. At present we are investigating the relative Canada and Quebec standards in this regard. Generally speaking Canada grade standards are in order as we know they are the best.

Mr. Keays: May I ask the minister whether this is a new development in the province of Quebec?

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

MILK—PROPOSED PRICE INCREASE IN ONTARIO

On the orders of the day:

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. In view of the fact that two Ontario dairies are going to raise the price of milk by 2 cents a quart, and in view of the importance of milk in the diet of Canadians, what action does the minister propose to take to protect the consumer in this matter?

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, if I may I think I should remind the hon. member that the government of Canada has no constitutional authority to impose pervasive controls over the prices of goods and services except in a national emergency. At the federal level we rely, as I have said on many occasions in this house, on the forces of competition. If there is any evidence to the effect that prices are being artificially maintained, then the director of investigation and research can be expected to make a statutory inquiry.

Mrs. MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): As a supplementary inquiry, will the minister consult with his colleague the Minister of Agriculture to find out what percentage of this increase is going to go to the dairy farmers?

Hon. Michael Starr (Ontario): As a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, can the minister tell us in a few words what precisely is the function of his department?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I suggest that might take more than a few words, and that it should not be done at this time.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): As a further supplementary question may I ask the minister, in view of the fact that one of the functions of his department as set out in the act is to investigate price increases and to provide publicity with respect to its findings, is his department looking into this increase in the price of milk, and will a report be made in the event that an investigation is carried on?

Mr. Turner: It is the statutory function of the director of investigation and research under the Combines Investigation Act to scrutinize all price movements that come to his attention, and I think he can be expected to fulfil his statutory duty.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I would just like to ask the minister how much worse things must get before there is a national emergency.

HOUSING

INTEREST RATES ON LOANS FOR STUDENT AND PUBLIC HOUSING

On the orders of the day:

Mr. G. L. Chatterton (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the President of the Treasury Board. Is the minister or the government considering an increase in the interest rates applicable to loans for student and public housing?

Hon. E. J. Benson (President of the Treasury Board): Not to my knowledge, Mr. Speaker.

AGRICULTURE

REPORTED SHORTAGE OF CHEMICALS TO CONTROL WILD OATS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. R. D. McLelland (Rosetown-Biggar): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Agriculture. Could he inform the house whether the Department of Agriculture has made any inquiries into the alleged shortage of chemicals to control wild oats, such as avadex—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. McLelland: — and, if so, is the department taking any steps to improve the situation, such as authorizing research into new chemicals to be licensed and made available to the farmers?

Hon. J. J. Greene (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, the members of this government are far too mature to be concerned with wild oats, but I will be very pleased to look into this particular question.

Mr. Ed. Schreyer (Springfield): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the mature Minister of Agriculture. When he was reported last week end as having said that when NATO was dropped Canada would have more money to devote to foreign aid, was he giving government policy?

Mr. Speaker: Order. A question, as the hon. member knows, cannot be asked in that form.

Inquiries of the Ministry

RURAL DEVELOPMENT

ARDA—ACTION ON REPORT RESPECTING NORTHERN NOVA SCOTIA

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. Russell MacEwan (Pictou): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Forestry and Rural Development. In view of the fact that the minister is in the mood for tabling reports today, would he now make available to interested parties the ARDA task force report on the nine northern counties in Nova Scotia?

[Translation]

Hon. Maurice Sauvé (Minister of Forestry and Rural Development): Yes, Mr. Speaker. We have arranged to have a summary of the report printed and as soon as it is ready it will be distributed to the members.

FORESTRY

INQUIRY AS TO STEPS TO INCREASE FOREST PRODUCTIVITY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. S. Barnett (Comox-Alberni): Mr. Speaker, I would like to change the focus of questions and direct mine also to the Minister of Forestry so as to give the mature Minister of Agriculture a rest. My question arises out of a statement made by the chief forester of MacMillan-Bloedel Ltd., one of Canada's leading producers of forest products. Does the minister share the concern expressed by that chief forester concerning the possible shortfall within the next few years in the available supply of merchantable softwoods to meet market requirements and, if so, can he advise the house whether the government has in view—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I suggest to the hon. member that this question is not in order. He is asking the minister if he shares the concern of an official or of an individual, and in view of this the question is not in order.

Mr. Barnett: Might I at least pose what I consider the operative part of my question and ask the minister whether the government has in mind any new initiatives to increase the productivity of our forest lands.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The type of statement the hon. member is asking for should really be made at the time of motions.

[Mr. Speaker.]

SPORTS

SKIING—SPONSORSHIP OF EVENT BY TOBACCO COMPANY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Barry Mather (New Westminster): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. I have in mind the fact that his department gives public funds to cigarette disease education, and also contributes funds to encourage skiing in Canada. Under these circumstances is he aware that a major skiing organization this month has accepted sponsorship of a major skiing event by a cigarette corporation and, if so—

Mr. Speaker: Order. Perhaps this is the type of question that might be considered at the time of adjournment, either this evening or next week.

POWER

COLUMBIA RIVER—REPORTED INCREASE IN COSTS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. W. Herridge (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, in view of the unavoidable and understandable absence of the Secretary of State for External Affairs I wish to direct a question to his parliamentary secretary. In view of the minister's continued, almost hypnotic interest in the costs of construction on the Columbia, has the government of British Columbia informed the minister to date of those costs?

[Translation]

Mr. Gérard Pelletier (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I shall take note of this question and bring it to the minister's attention.

SUPPLY

The house in committee of supply, Mr. Tardif in the chair.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. House again in committee of supply. When the committee rose on Wednesday, March 20, item 6c of the Department of Defence Production was under consideration.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENCE PRODUCTION

6c. Reimbursement of the Defence Production Revolving Fund established by section 16(1) of the Defence Production Act for losses sustained in the operation of the crown-owned magnesium foundry at Haley, Ontario, prior to its sale in December, 1967, $480,000.

Some hon. Members: Carried.

[English]

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, as a result of inquiries I made since last night I am concerned about the closing of the Haley operation as a crown corporation and the other arrangements which followed. I am surprised and disappointed that the hon. member for Swift Current-Maple Creek is not with us today because he raised a very important question in relation to this matter.

After looking at the act I am convinced that the minister was correct when he suggested that he had the right to make the arrangement he did but I am wondering whether the arrangement was appropriate. I drew the inference last night that there is a similarity between this operation and other crown corporations which could be sold in the same manner if the government so desired. I have never been satisfied about the method of sale engaged in by the war assets corporation, later the Crown Assets Disposal Corporation, in that it seems to be a wholesale operation. I realize it is difficult to retail an entire plant of this type. However, when certain of my constituents have wanted to purchase a jeep, a land rover or a Bren gun carrier to be used in a tourist operation they were informed they would be put on the list provided they could prove financial responsibility and were told that the equipment would be sold in blocks of perhaps 50 units. It does not seem to be in our interest to offer blocks of 50 Bren gun carriers, 20 Sherman tanks or other lots of equipment in this way. I suggest that the difficulties resulting from that type of sale are greater than the difficulties involved in selling single units at a reasonable price. While I agree that the minister has a right to make the arrangement he did, I am not sure we should operate on that basis.

The hon. member for Renfrew North made some very interesting observations and was obviously pleased that this plant was continuing in operation. I agree that it should continue to operate. But it seems to be strange that the corporation should sell this plant to a private operator and expect that operator to carry on the operation successfully without the advantages that a crown corporation would have, particularly when we realize that when the company was operated by the corporation it was unsuccessful.

From my own experience I can say that it is very difficult to establish an industry in either Renfrew North or Renfrew South and it has been very difficult to keep the industries going that were established there on a wartime basis. Most of these plants connected with the aircraft industry have been in difficulty ever since they changed over to peacetime production. It seems to me that a crown corporation would have a better chance of success because the government could direct certain purchase orders to that corporation. Purchases from private industries by the government must be done on a tender basis. or this reason I fail to understand the enthusiasm of the hon. member for Renfrew North in relation to the plant being turned over to a private operator on the basis of a very short term guarantee.

The minister was quite frank regarding land values and the potential in this area. We are all convinced that federal assistance will have to be given to maintain employment and the standard of living in this section of the country. While the minister has some responsibility in relation to the assistance provided in that area he is not involved as Minister of Defence Production in all the assistance programs. This area has a surplus of labour. We have been able to train highly skilled labour in specific areas of production who are capable of doing work such as is done in operations like de Havilland and in other areas where the Department of Defence Production has established operations with government subsidies to produce instruments and other things for the Department of National Defence.

It would have been wise for the hon. member for Renfrew North to have considered this whole operation in terms of a government contribution to the area to help maintain the labour force there. Surely a crown corporation could adapt to the changing circumstances if a private operator can do so in this area. The new company is required to operate for two years and it will be operating in exactly the same field and with the same facilities as the Haley operation.

It has been suggested that the plant and the machinery are quite old and that the operation is antiquated. Apparently the plant cannot be modified in order to perform some other function than that for which it was designed. If this is the case it would seem to me that the hon. member is very shortsighted in not looking at what has developed in other areas and realizing that this type of operation must have assistance and must have government orders.

Supply—Defence Production

Let me refer to an operation in my area as an example of what I have in mind. There has been a large foundry in my area for some time. It was developed some 25 years ago under the aegis of the British government. A young engineer was sent out from England to look after the Wabi iron works. He was sent out on the basis of either making the plant a paying proposition in two years or closing it down. He came out, looked at the foundry and decided it could be made a paying proposition. Through some managerial arrangement he eventually became the owner of the plant and it developed into one of the largest foundries in Ontario.

The aging of the plant and other considerations led him to decide to sell it and he did so to Canada Foundries (Wabi) Limited. For 25 years the plant operated in the foundry business on a full time basis. Very seldom was there a lay-off at the plant. If there was a lay-off it was always occasioned by a changeover in the operations of the plant. Continuous employment was provided for the people working at the plant. When it was sold this year Canada Foundries took into consideration their over-all operation and decided that they had to lay off people somewhere. Where did they lay them off? They were laid off at the Wabi plant at New Liskeard. For the first time in the operation of the plant most of the employees were laid off on a short term basis which stretched beyond what was anticipated in the initial stages. There is now some doubt about the efficiency and continued operation of the plant.

I also draw to the attention of the hon. member for Renfrew North the fact that we had in New Liskeard a pea-canning factory. Northern Ontario, particularly the clay belt of Timiskaming, produces the best peas in the world. Our peas have been exhibited at the Toronto Exhibition, the Royal Winter Fair and the World Exhibition in Chicago. We took top honours for the production of peas and therefore I can safely say that we grow the best peas in the world.

That plant had very good sales in the limited field in which it operated and this came to the attention of Canada Packers because of competition. Canada Packers bought the plant and within two years shut it down. They did not close it down because the plant was necessarily antiquated, although they said it was. They did not close it down because of its limited production which was serving a need. It was not closed down because we did not have the best product on the North American continent but simply because the plant did not fit into their trading pattern. It did not fit into their corporate practice.

I suggest that the hon. member for Renfrew North is very shortsighted if he does not consider what has happened in other areas and does not realize that private industry is in no way capable of taking advantage of dealing with the Department of Defence Production to the extent that a crown corporation can. We have an obligation to the people of Renfrew North. We established a crown corporation plant in the town of Haley. It is true that the plant is not right in the town but the town of Haley exists only because of Haley Industries. It is situated on a railway and is a small community. Its only purpose is as a shopping facility for those employed at Haley Industries and local farmers.

The employment picture of the people who live there and have been trained there has been presented to us. It appears that most of the employees can be considered permanent and have served with the company for some time. It seems to me that we have an obligation to keep the plant in operation.

The minister is also in charge of the area development plan. He is the minister responsible for the development of secondary industry in areas where such industry has not been provided. It seems to me that a changeover from a government operated plant to one operated by private enterprise is a step backward, not a step forward. I challenge the minister to rise and say that anyone has challenged the deficits which Haley Industries has had over the years. It was not aware that it had been a crown corporation.

Mr. Drury: It was not.

Mr. Peters: That is a debatable point because I am of the opinion that it had the same kind of relationship enjoyed by crown corporations. As I understand the definition applied to Polymer, for example, would apply in much the same way to Haley Industries. However, that does not matter to my argument. I may be wrong semantically.

I make this argument not to the minister but to the hon. member for Renfrew North. The crown took this step because of necessity, not because of any desire to become involved in the establishment of plants. I am fully aware that if there are to be new plants in northern Ontario or Renfrew North they will have to be sponsored by the crown and receive assistance from the crown.

One of the problems in this regard is the very thing that the minister said caused the demise of this plant, namely, our grave inability to supply entrepreneurial acumen. I have heard people in northern Ontario talk about what they would do if they had $1 million to invest. There are in my part of northern Ontario hundreds of millions of dollars which could be invested. They play the stock market every day with that kind of money. The town next to the one from which I come at one time during the depression had less than 2,000 inhabitants but 13 millionaires. So the people of Haileybury could probably put up an immense amount of capital to build plants provided personnel were available to decide what types of industry were best suited to the area and to operate them.

In my opinion this is what is wrong with the area development program. We do not know what we have to sell and we would not know how to run the business even if we could sell the product. We therefore follow the old practice of establishing industries in major cities where there are closer and more extensive markets, and the small plants in the hinterland fall by the wayside. If this plant served a purpose for the Department of Defence Production, that purpose is probably as useful today as it was in the initial stages.

Under the National Research Council there are a large number of projects which will be brought to fruition if plants and trained people are available. I remember listening not long ago to the national research people talking about this very problem. They said they had developed a particular process that they thought was a "first" in the world. They looked around for people to operate in the field but had to get American companies to operate the project because no Canadian company would do so.

There are still free enterprisers in the government. There are free enterprisers in the minister's department, because I am certain that the whole operation of the area development program is carried out on a free enterprise basis. We are giving assistance in this field. But I am sure there are also other people who are shocked at the fact that so much interest is shown in closing down crown corporations when the obvious need for them has disappeared. Everyone can remember when the Polymer corporation went around asking various rubber companies to take over their operation. I understand that Polymer was offered to the Firestone company for $1 after the war. If we had 100 Polymer corporations the Minister of Finance would now have less difficulty in balancing the budget because this corporation is making an unusually large profit. Its operations have been of advantage to Canada because the company developed a totally new process for making synthetic rubber which is being used in many countries and is of great potential value to us.

I am not too familiar with mouldings and castings, nor do I understand why the Haley plant found it necessary to tie itself to the production of a particular aircraft engine. But I do think that the Department of National Defence should decide that a certain amount of business should be directed to this plant, and I suggest that if this is not done now the Bartaco company will not be successful.

It seems to me that the hon. member representing that area should forget about his desire and the desire of the department to establish a free enterprise operation and should think in terms of the development of an industry in his area which will have the effect of bringing about secondary industries around the primary development. Obviously castings must be used on something and for something, and they create a demand for raw materials. A plant which would use the raw materials available in the area is sufficient justification for its existence. If the whole machinery of the Department of Defence Production cannot be directed toward developing this plant to meet the current needs of the department, then I think the department has failed to justify its usefulness.

I do not know whether it was ever intended that the Department of Defence Production should enter into manufacturing. I am aware of the buying potential of the department, not only for the Department of National Defence but for all departments of the government. However, the Department of Defence Production has never really looked at industrial development in Canada in terms of the distribution of the Canadian potential and Canadian needs. We have purchasing needs in Canada, and I do not think that the sole responsibility of the Department of Defence Production is to do the purchasing. Its responsibility lies also in the distribution of the purchasing all across the country. So far as the part of northern Ontario which I represent is concerned, I suggest that the Department of Defence Production makes no purchases at all from primary producers there. None of the paper which the department purchases comes from primary producers but rather is purchased from agents of paper companies after it leaves the pulp and paper mills. Even that primary product is not purchased by the department for the needs of the government.

I am very surprised at the attitude of the hon. member for Renfrew North in agreeing to the closing down of the plant. When the plant closes down at the end of the contract two years from now, as no doubt it will, it will likely be integrated into the over-all operation of Bartaco and its principals and there will be no further need for the development of these castings. The money they have made will go into the amalgamation of the whole operation and little consideration will be given to the people in north Renfrew who will be laid off.

I think the hon. member's attitude is very shortsighted and is limited to taking advantage of the present opportunity. I suggest to him that he reconsider his attitude and become more concerned with the development of a number of plants in the area with the assistance of the government. I am very familiar with the difficulties several of these plants are facing and the fact that the low wages of the people in this area are the only thing that has made it possible for a large number of the plants in Renfrew to stay in operation in towns such as Arnprior, Pembroke and adjacent communities. Were it not for the fact that the wages of these people are 40 or 50 cents below the provincial level these plants would not be able to stay in operation. I suggest that the subsidization of these plants by the workers is not the correct method of keeping the plants in production.

It would be my wish, and perhaps the wish of other members of the house, that this matter be referred for study to a standing committee of the house. I do not disagree with the minister's policy in this respect but I doubt that this is the kind of operation in which the government should be involved. I have not had the opportunity to ascertain why this plant was started 40 years ago but I surmise that it operated for a number of years under the Department of Defence Production for the purpose of manufacturing specific commodities.

I am familiar to a certain extent with the difficulties in the production of aircraft faced by Sperry of Ottawa and a number of other plants in the Ottawa area. I am aware of the fact that these companies were subsidized to some degree and that they have continued to receive subsidies since they have ceased major production of aircraft. I am also aware of the operations of the de Havilland company and the fact that the company's operation in Toronto was developed for the purpose of building the Avro Arrow. When that program was scrapped, we not only lost an industry but we lost the potential ability to develop an aircraft industry. In my opinion we had a sufficient number of engineers in Canada. For a number of years I was in the ferry squadron in the air force. We had types of aircraft which were flown by the United States and British air forces and I had an opportunity to see the inside and the outside of those planes. I am of the opinion that no other plane flying at that time could have outclassed the Avro Arrow. We brought the best people from England and we were able to encourage them to come here and build the basis for an aircraft industry which should have put Canada in the forefront.

We are all familiar with the story of Avro Arrow in which both fact and fancy are involved. There is no point in going over it. The fact is that we lost an industry and the potential for an aircraft industry.

The same is true of the shipbuilding industry. It is interesting to note—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. member but the time allotted to him has expired.

Mr. Mather: Mr. Chairman, the consideration of the estimates of this department gives us an opportunity to comment on the expenditure of very large sums of money. How significant some of these sums of money are was very well summarized in the leading editorial of this morning's Globe and Mail in which it was pointed out that the four new destroyers the department has on its drawing boards will cost some $200 million or, as the paper says, about $50 million more than the Minister of Finance hopes to raise by the recent 3 per cent surtax on personal and corporation income taxes. This is certainly a very significant sum of money, particularly in the light of the urging by the same government which proposes to spend it that Canadians use restraint in their own spending. Can you imagine the reaction of the working people of Canada, the pensioners or, for that matter, the business people, when they learn that the government which is asking them to "cool it" proposes to spend some $200 million on what I believe to be questionable vessels of war?

I say "questionable vessels" because as is reported these ships were first conceived four years ago. They were to be part of the new integrated defence equipment program. These vessels were to be the first surface to air missile equipped destroyers to meet our NATO requirements. They were designed four years ago and apparently will be in operation four years hence. In the meanwhile we have not really redefined our NATO responsibilities.

This is a curious situation, Mr. Chairman. As I understand it, these boats were to have cost $20 million each. They are now estimated to cost $50 million each. If I may quote the Globe and Mail again, it says in the editorial:

> In what strange unreal world does the government live, where it can preach restraint to us and proceed, almost casually, with a huge and open-ended expenditure on what the judgment of Canadians—if it could be totalled up—would almost certainly decide was an unnecessary and even undesirable project?

I think that is a very good question, a $200 million question. There is another aspect of the Department of Defence Production in which I am sure many Canadians are interested. I refer to our defence production sharing agreement with the United States. My colleague, the hon. member for Greenwood, recently made what I thought was an excellent presentation of his views regarding the position of Canada in supplying war materials to be used in Viet Nam. As he said, the original agreement to share defence production with the United States was of some benefit to Canada. It gave Canadian firms a share in the production of military equipment used by the United States.

Certainly it was natural for Canada to enter into this type of agreement with a close ally. However, Canada is not and cannot be an ally of the United States in Viet Nam. As my colleague suggested, it is time Canada had a new look at that agreement. It may be necessary for us to assert control over the export of war materials which no doubt will be used in Viet Nam. We have, of course, already limited the export of Canadian war materials to another NATO ally, Portugal, because we feared they would be used against African states rather than for NATO purposes.

There is one other aspect of defence production contracts which I should like to mention. A while ago the Financial Post contained an article in which it was stated:

> Continued high Viet Nam war spending by the U.S. will keep up the big flow of contracts and orders to Canadian companies for both military and civilian goods.

Of course, some plants in the United States are so busy with war production that they have to give civilian production to other plants. The Financial Post article continues:

> The question is this ... is additional Viet Nam related production in Canadian plants more than offset by the adverse effects of war spending on the Canadian economy as a whole?

In so far as inflation is concerned, Viet Nam was responsible for one-third of the rise in consumer prices in the United States last year. Certainly the effect of this has carried over into our own country. It seems to me that Canada's relationship to United States defence contracts is something like that of the man who warms his hands at the fire of a neighbour. It is very comfortable at times but, as is well known, as well as having a capacity to warm fire also has the capacity to burn and scorch. I think we should be very much aware of this capacity. It is surely not exhibiting friendship for the United States for us to go along with the policy on Viet Nam of the present United States administration, a policy that is costing billions of dollars and thousands of lives. In my view this policy also leaves the United States open to possible weakness to attack from other sources.

I believe that the defence production sharing agreement with the United States gives Canada the opportunity to express her opposition, and I am sure that opposition exists in many Canadian households, to being considered an ally of the United States in a dangerous, hopeless and very costly mistake. In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, I invite the minister to comment on the remarks I have made, particularly those involving the quotations from the Globe and Mail and the Financial Post.

Mr. Schreyer: I will try to be brief, Mr. Chairman, but there are certain aspects of the operations of this department to which I feel I must make reference before the vote carries. I wonder whether the minister would care to deny the charge that in its operations the Department of Defence Production shows a very strong regional bias? Last year I put a question on the order paper inquiring as to what proportion of defence production contracts had been allocated to firms in the four western provinces of Canada. The reply indicated that the four western provinces, which have 25 per cent of the population of the country, received only 8 per cent of the total value of contracts let by the department.

Of course the minister may have a very facile reply to that charge. He may say it so happens that most of the industries set up for the production of goods such as weapons systems, and so on, happen to be located in other parts of the country. The fact is, however, that I am referring to the total value of contracts let by the department, not just for weapons systems but also for ordinary, less sophisticated parts, supplies, clothing, food and so on. It seems to me there is no point in overlooking the fact that for years now, out of $700 million or $800 million per year of prime contracts let by the Department of Defence Production an inordinately small proportion has been placed in western Canada.

Some of the contracts, of course, are let under the bid system, so the answer will be that firms in eastern Canada are bidding lower prices. This answer would not cover the whole point because many of the contracts let by the department are on a cost plus basis and some are on the basis of a bid with a clear stipulation for adjustment for unforeseen expenses. However, I believe it is clear the Department of Defence Production is allocating to the four western provinces, containing 25 per cent of the population, contracts representing only 8 per cent of the total value of contracts let by the department. The situation may vary from year to year, but I challenge the minister to show that it varies greatly.

I think it is a mixed blessing for a regional economy to have to depend on defence production industries, because they have undesirable side effects. Defence production industries do bring considerable employment and, through the multiplier effect, considerable indirect employment to a community. Many industries grow out of defence production which can transfer their operations to non-military production. Industries high in research and development content grow up around defence production industries and certainly that does no harm to any regional economy. However, as I said, there are certain undesirable side effects in that regions of the country that depend heavily on defence production industries have, to use a colloquial expression, a tiger by the tail.

In the course of the past two or three months most hon. members have received a pamphlet containing reprints from the Financial Post which indicate that the war in Viet Nam is doing wonders for Canadian business and the Canadian economy. This is particularly the case in those regions of the country that are heavily dependent on defence production industries. Since 1963-64 there has been virtually a 100 per cent increase in the amount of defence production exports to the United States. According to the pamphlet the minister is quoted as saying that defence production contracts in 1966 resulted in full time employment of between 13,000 and 15,000 Canadians, and that an additional 110,000 persons are estimated to be affected indirectly as a result of contracts to ship that materiel to the United States.

Without getting into the philosophical ramifications of the war in Viet Nam, Mr. Chairman, I know all hon. members hope and pray that very soon it will be ended. However, I should like to ask the minister what contingency plans his department and the government are making to take care of those employees who will be directly and immediately affected by the cessation of hostilities in Viet Nam and thereby faced with a prospective loss of employment. Plants producing such materiel are geared to full and overtime production. But when the war is over they will be working at less than full production, either on a part shift basis or on a slow shift basis. Some will be on the verge of closure. Although we all hope and pray the war will soon be over, there are thousands of people who are depending on the war for their livelihood and I should like to ask what contingency plans exist to meet the decrease in production on the termination of the war. I suspect that not very much is being done about the matter.

Some continue to express great enthusiasm over the fact that our defence production sales to the United States have been surging upward so dramatically in the past two years. I am not questioning the defence production sharing agreement between Canada and the United States. The country to the south has been our ally over the decades. At one time Franklin Roosevelt referred to that country as the arsenal of democracy, and that is still my view.

During the first few years of the life of the defence production sharing agreement both countries benefited mutually. However, we now find ourselves in a situation where we must not only look at the direct economic benefits but also at the moral and philosophical implications of the war. We have got ourselves into a hopeless position. Rather than take the time of the committee at this stage to berate the minister for something about which I concede there is very little of a tangible nature he can do at the moment to correct, I do accuse him and his colleagues of complacency if they are not now actively engaged in the drawing up of contingency plans so that people who are adversely affected by the cessation of hostilities in Viet Nam will be quickly accommodated with alternative employment.

I am sure the minister is aware that when former President Dwight Eisenhower made his farewell address to the nation, I believe in late 1960 or early 1961, surprisingly enough for an old professional soldier he took the opportunity to warn his fellow citizens about the very real danger that was poised to strike at the heart of democracy in the United States. He was referring to the danger created by the large and growing military-industrial complex, as he put it, in the United States. This complex, was getting so powerful that not only representatives in the state legislatures but some of the congressmen who represented areas of the nation heavily dependent upon defence production of munitions and armaments were being influenced to the point that they could hardly take a position other than one of support for more and more defence and armaments production.

I realize that it is not considered to be good taste to refer in this chamber to public personages in other countries, certainly not if one feels compelled to make critical comments about them. Therefore I will not mention any names. However, I think hon. members will agree with me when I say that many of the elected representatives in the United States do take a stance with respect to defence and foreign policy that might be roughly described as hawkish. It should also be noted that in most cases these same people represent areas of the United States that are heavily dependent upon the production of armaments and munitions.

When I was at the NATO conference in Brussels last fall I had occasion to get to know a distinguished United States congressman with flowing white hair who took such a hawkish position on most of the major issues then being discussed that even his colleagues were somewhat dismayed. I did not regard it as a coincidence that he happened to represent a particular region of one state which, if it had had one more defence production industry added to those already there, would have likely sunk into the Atlantic ocean.

Our defence production industry is much smaller, but we must resolve to plan our economy so that no region of this country will ever need to turn to defence production to give its inhabitants a livelihood. Western Canada, with its relatively abundant natural resources and fertile soil, does not much need industries which depend on armament production, though I suspect that other areas of the country which are not so lucky depend on armament production to give their inhabitants employment.

I hope that no minister of the crown will continue to wax enthusiastic, as some ministers have in the past 12 months, about increased arms exports to the United States resulting from the Viet Nam war. We are selling arms to the United States because of an agreement we feel bound to adhere to. Let us hope, for everybody's sake, that the war will soon end. If it does not, I suggest we ought to consider the desirability of terminating the export to the United States of materiel that is used directly in Viet Nam.

For the past two years, because I have been confused about the United States' role in Viet Nam I have not criticized United States' actions. I wondered how that country's determination to resist aggression could be balanced against the killing of innocent bystanders. Despite motives which I do not question, the war in Viet Nam by degrees has become genocide. This has been unintentional, but even intended actions often bring strange results. I am sure that when United States military advisers were sent to Viet Nam a few years ago they were sent to help the South Vietnamese resist aggression. By degrees the war has escalated and now it has become an exercise in genocide.

In Canada we say to the United States: Stop the bombing, do this and do that. While we continue to sell vital war materials to the United States—and this is germane to this discussion—we are in a poor position to criticize. As a matter of fact, I question our right to criticize United States actions. I agree with the United States senator who said yesterday in a public statement, while discussing positions that could be taken about the Viet Nam war, that Canada cannot criticize because she is benefiting directly from war material sales.

Yesterday the hon. members for Swift Current-Maple Creek and Rosthern spoke about the sale of the crown owned magnesium foundry at Haley, Ontario. I have not time to say everything I should like to about that transaction but I understand from the remarks of the hon. member for Renfrew North that the industry in question is essential for the economic well-being of his region. When he accused members of the Conservative party, the hon. members for Swift Current-Maple Creek and Rosthern in particular, of speaking against the interests of his district he was being silly. No one on this side of the chamber suggested that the industry should be closed down. We question the prudence and business judgment shown by the crown in disposing of this foundry to a privately owned company.

Though the terms of sale are somewhat cloudy, one gathers that this crown owned industry had accounts receivable of about $250,000 and inventory of about the same amount. For those assets the private company paid what? It is difficult to come to a concrete conclusion from the minister's words but I suspect the plant was sold for the nominal sum of $1. Though the terms are not clear it appears that in return for the inventory and accounts receivable the new owners had to pledge that the plant would be kept in operation for two years.

Significantly, the sale conditions do not prevent the purchaser from selling the foundry to a second party which in turn may sell it to a third party. I suspect that to the purchasing company this transaction represented a capital gain, one of those finagling little deals. I see no other reason for their getting involved in an industry the crown was anxious to get rid of. There is some onus on the minister to be more explicit than he was yesterday when he tried to answer questions asked by the hon. members for Swift Current-Maple Creek and Rosthern.

When the industry in question started losing money five years ago, surely the Department of Defence Production must have known that some day soon the plant would have to be closed down or sold. Why was there no contingency planning in 1963, 1964 or 1965? Why were plant operations allowed to go blithely along? Then, because the hon. member representing the area became concerned, as well he should, certain representations were made. The crown then enters into a deal with this private company on strange, almost incomprehensible terms of sale. The company takes possession and it has to keep the plant operating for two years but it need not remain as owner. I agree with my hon. friend from Timiskaming that the region of Renfrew North would have been much better served had the crown been kept in the picture, had the plant been kept operational by the crown or the crown had been responsible for transforming the operation into an operation of a different type.

There is one other aspect. The crown made this sale on generous terms. Can the minister tell us whether the company which purchased this foundry will be applying to the Department of Industry for grants under AIDA and PAIT? If such grants are made it seems to me the benevolence of the crown will have been compounded in favour of a group of entrepreneurs who I suspect went into this venture for the sake of capital gain. The people of Renfrew North deserve something better than to be left at the mercy of private monopolies such as this.

Mr. Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Chairman, I have for a long time felt it was time somebody in Canada attempted to take the self-applied wool from our eyes in connection with the whole question of defence production and expenditures. It is unfortunate that human beings appear to need comforting myths by which to live even though those myths lead in the end to their own destruction. In Canada we are loath to accept the real facts of our position in the world today when it comes to military expenditures.

I have watched two wars in my lifetime and taken part in one. I am observing now, as everybody else is doing, the progress of another war which has been condemned on all sides both in the United States and in the rest of the world. Yet we seem unable to draw lessons for our own policies in this regard from the harsh facts of modern warfare. It is estimated that the United States is spending some $30 billion to prosecute the war in Viet Nam. I suggest that in this context Canada and countries with similar resources can have no part to play and that we should not delude ourselves into thinking there might be a quiet, conventional war in which Canada could play a significant part.

As my hon. friend from Springfield pointed out, the war in Viet Nam started out on the assumption that it was to be a brushfire war, a police action to stem the tide of communist revolution in Viet Nam. But things rapidly got out of hand and the conflict developed into a major war. I suspect that all wars which are allowed to break out in the future will become major wars. There was a war in the Middle East recently which was not allowed to develop beyond a local conflict but it was more by luck than good guidance that the great powers were not involved in those hostilities which could have spread to the entire world.

I doubt whether there is anyone here who can tell me what particular advantage by way of defence Canada has received as a result of the defence expenditures which I have noted for the last 15 years since I first came to the House of Commons—sums running from $1¼ billion to $1½ billion a year during that period. I have been waiting for some minister of defence to tell me convincingly that these expenditures have resulted in any greater safety for the Canadian people than would have been the case had we made them on other things in our economy or on helping people in underdeveloped countries. No one has been able to come up with a case for these expenditures. We are always told, usually in vague terms, about the dangers which confront us but we are never told how the measures Canada takes will contribute to warding off those dangers. The latest folly is the pretence that there is a threat of armed bombers attacking Canada.

Mr. Drury: The hon. gentleman says he doubts whether anyone can give him a satisfactory answer to his question concerning the validity in terms of national security of expenditures made on defence. I think that is quite true. He will certainly have difficulty in getting an answer from me. But he will be provided with an opportunity later under item 16, when the estimates of the Department of National Defence are being considered, to put his question directly to the Minister of National Defence.

Mr. Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): I gather the minister is suggesting that my remarks are inappropriate at this point. I would remind him that we are discussing the estimates of the Department of Defence Production which is tied in very closely with defence expenditure in general. So it seems to me the subject I have raised could be discussed on the estimates of either department.

An hon. Member: Or on both.

Mr. Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Or on both, yes, though I would not presume to do that.

As the minister has admitted, no one is able to tell us with any conviction that we have gained any significant protection as a result of the expenditures we have made over the years. Why should we imagine there would be a reasonable argument in support of the policy we have been following? We have only to look at the quantities of material involved in a modern war to realize that Canada could play no part of any consequence in such an area.

I have been concerned about the attitude of a number of young men in our armed forces who feel ill at ease about the role in which they are cast, people who have a nagging suspicion that they are merely wasting their time and wasting the country's resources for no visible purpose. This is having a demoralizing effect on many of them. I have come across this attitude repeatedly in speaking to young men in the armed forces serving in various ranks. Perhaps they have a clearer picture of the situation than other Canadians have; they realize they have no part to play in the area of modern war.

What are we defending ourselves against? The only thing we have to fear is the use of modern weapons of offence and those weapons, we have been repeatedly told, are not susceptible to defence action. I have heard of no way by which an attack by intercontinental guided missiles can be repulsed. The only possibility, and I submit it is only a bare possibility, is by having what was described by the inimitable Mr. Dulles as a massive deterrent. It may be true that the massive deterrent the United States has been building up has warded off an attack by these sophisticated modern weapons, although I somewhat doubt that. But even if that is the case it merely supports my argument that there is no role for Canada to play because any contribution we can make cannot add to the massive deterrent force now amassed by the United States.

To pretend we can contribute in any way whatever, let alone any significant way, is self-delusion. I suspect it is based on two things, one being the wishes of interested parties in Canada who seek gain from the expenditures we make on defence, and the other being that some people refuse to accept the fact, although they have been told it over and over again, that there is no defence. To me it is a tragedy that the Canadian people, in possession of such a vast quantity of resources, with such tremendous capacities, are content to waste their efforts on this sort of expenditure rather than really entering into the field that is demanding so much in the modern world, the development of the underdeveloped countries of the world.

I have a very clear recollection of the day in this house when it looked as though we were coming to the end of things. I refer, of course, to the confrontation over Cuba. I have been interested to note in all my reading of the discussions on the matter that no one goes farther back than the situation that obtained after Fidel Castro succeeded in seizing power in Cuba. No one goes farther back in history where there are another few links in the chain of cause and effect which finally led us that day in the House of Commons to sit here wondering whether we were facing the end of all things. If people would go farther back they would find something else that Canada and other prosperous parts of the world should not be very proud of, namely, that for decades we had known that the Cuban people were suffering under one of the most brutal dictatorships in the history of the world. They were living in poverty, in misery and in fear, and we did nothing about it. As a consequence the chain of events led finally to the confrontation between the two great powers in the world.

I suggest that if we are interested in our own defence we should be bending all our efforts to coping with all the potential Cubas that exist throughout the world which may at any time produce the chain of cause and effect that will lead us to the brink of disaster. I can think of no more honourable, no more decisive and significant role for Canada at this time than to say to the rest of the world that we are not interested in this fatal game of military expenditures and military defiance because we know we can play no real role in it. We should say that we want to free our hands to undertake the task that lies ahead of all of us in the more affluent parts of the world, which is to remove to the best of our ability the causes of future disruption of peace in the world by removing the poverty and misery underlying those causes. But if we are going to go on playing, which is all we are doing—posturing, playing and pretending—that we in Canada can play any sort of role whatsoever in the military sense we are not going to have the resources, the energies and the time to engage in the real peace keeping operation of trying to build up the submerged areas of the world to the level of affluence that we enjoy on this continent.

I cannot think of anything that would enhance the prestige of Canada and Canadians more than if tomorrow Canada were to announce to the world: This is the end, we are going to spend no more on useless military expenditures; we are taking steps within our own country to develop our own economy and labour force whereby we can make a massive contribution to world development. Canadians would then have reason to be proud of the role Canada was playing in the world. I have little reason to be proud of a people who through vanity, through pride, call it what you will, want to go on pretending and posturing that they cut some ice in the military world of today. Who wants to? Who wants to play in this evil game? I think that sensible people, responsible people, would be happy to see Canada withdraw from it, and throughout the world there would be other peoples and other nations who would draw a breath of relief that finally in one part of the world the light of common sense was prevailing and the follies of the past were finally being put behind us.

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Chairman, against the kind of background established by the speeches of the hon. member for Springfield and the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands I would like to take a few minutes of the committee's time to pinpoint the impact of some of the things they have been saying upon a particular area of Canada and the people of that area.

The hon. member for Springfield, said it was fortunate that in not too many places in western Canada were the people basically dependent upon the defence program and the establishments that exist because we have a Department of Defence Production and supply what some people once would have called our war machine and which some of us in this chamber have heard described as our peace machine. I happen to have a community of that kind in my constituency and whenever I listen to discussion of the estimates of a department like the Department of Defence Production I immediately think of these constituents who are in a very vulnerable position.

I do not know whether it is ironic or a hopeful sign that the Minister of Defence Production has another hat. He is also known as the Minister of Industry. There are many of us who are hopeful that some day he will be able to discard one of his hats and devote his entire energy to the Department of Industry. I am not restricting this observation merely to the present incumbent of this office but rather have in mine a future organization of the departments of the government of Canada which I would like to see take place. Nevertheless I feel that the remarks made by the hon. members for Springfield and Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands have clearly set out the fact that the minister's dual functions are so intertwined that they cannot really be separated. While one may hope that one area of his responsibility will be phased out and that the other will increase, nevertheless at this moment we are dealing with the estimates for the current fiscal year and therefore have to be concerned primarily with the present situation.

The concern I have expressed about the situation in which these constituents of mine find themselves is not wholly mine but is widely shared by many of the residents of the area. I would like to refer to a brief circulated by the Courtenay-Comox chamber of commerce around the end of last year in which some attention is focused on the situation in which the ordinary citizens, business people and professional people in that area find themselves. The brief points out the following:

Over the last ten years in the Comox valley we have seen a gradual decline in the number of wage earners in the logging and woods industries until today this payroll is estimated to be less than 500.

I might interpolate here and say that during an earlier era the basic industry in the area was coal mining but apparently what has been happening in Cape Breton happened there. One of the economic bases of this community has been non-existent now for quite a number of years. Logging and other forest production industries were available and perhaps in some measure eased the blow when coal mining ceased to a greater extent than the blow in Cape Breton is being eased. I point out to the minister that the decline in the number of wage earners arises in part from changing technology in the forest industry. This means that more logs can be produced with fewer people. The brief then continues:

Farming has shown a steady decline in employment opportunities and many of the small farmers have to supplement their income with other employment.

I do not see the Minister of Agriculture here so I can do nothing but ask the Minister of Defence Production to make note of that for his colleague's benefit. The brief then states:

Against this there has been a steady increase in the number of wage earners who are directly dependent on the Canadian Forces Base, Comox, for their income.

A great deal of the money that the minister supervises has been spent in this area, as I am sure the minister will agree. Farther on in the brief it is pointed out:

In summary we have reached a situation where an estimated amount of between 60 per cent and 70 per cent of the total income in the area is directly dependent on the Department of National Defence base at Comox. This places our economy in a very vulnerable position should there be any change in D.N.D. policies in the future which might lead to retrenchment and a cut-back in defence spending. At the moment there is no alternative or additional source of payroll income in sight for this area and it is considered that urgent action is necessary to remedy this deficiency and to attract more sources of employment to the Comox Valley.

The brief then goes on to detail the efforts made over the past 15 years or so by the local body to stimulate other industrial development in the area. I will not go into that in detail. However, in responding to this brief and the covering letter I said to the people of the Comox-Courtenay chamber of commerce:

While I do not know of any current planning of the government in the defence field which is likely to alter in a major way the functioning of Canadian Forces Base Comox on its current scale, I have long been concerned about the increasing vulnerability of the economy of your area to any change which would eliminate or reduce the present establishment, on top of which I am sure there are none of us who do not hope for a state of affairs in the world where that kind of an establishment will become redundant.

I might say for the benefit of the minister and the committee that what I had in mind when I used that last phrase was redundant as far as the thinking of the government of Canada is concerned.

The hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands very ably developed the idea that basically our defence effort is a redundant operation at the present time. I share this view and I have made that clear on more than one occasion when I have addressed audiences in the area. In other words, the plain fact of the matter is that the spending of the number of millions of dollars supervised by the Minister of Defence Production represents a wasteful expenditure of Canadian taxpayers' money, to say nothing of any other considerations regarding the future of the world. Be that as it may, I do not believe that a view has so far been held by the Minister of National Defence or the Minister of Defence Production who is responsible for the spending of some of this money. From any indication we have had, even from some of the more hopeful of the aspirants to the office of the Prime Minister, it is not likely that there will be any basic change in policy on the part of the Canadian government as long as the party across the way remains in office.

The Minister of Defence Production should be reminded that he has another hat. We welcomed the establishment of the Department of Industry. I am sure the minister knows the terms of reference which set him up as the Minister of Industry much better than most members of the committee. Section 7 sets out some of the responsibilities and along others it states that he should promote the establishment, growth, efficiency and improvement of manufacturing industries in Canada, and develop and carry out such programs and projects as may be appropriate. He is concerned with spending money as Minister of Defence Production but I would urge upon him that he be even more concerned about fulfilling his other role and that he should not lose sight of the fact that his operations and those of his colleague, the Minister of National Defence, have placed whole segments of the Canadian population in a very vulnerable economic position.

Even in the minister's new role as Minister of Industry there has been no real assurance from anything that has happened so far that the federal government has taken any real initiative to ensure that an alternative economic base for this community is being developed to counterbalance the vulnerable situation in which the community finds itself because it is dependent on the defence establishment. This is true of other places where the people are more directly dependent on the defence manufacturing field.

Even though the minister is sitting here at the moment as the Minister of Defence Production I should like to point out that I recognize his other role. I have made inquiries of the area development agency of the Department of Industry and have been assured of the willingness of that agency to co-operate with the local people if they wish to set up an industry commissioner. I was told that the appropriate officer of the department, a man who has spent some time in British Columbia, will do everything he can.

As the minister knows, we have had recent discussions about the question of designated areas, but this area does not fall within that particular classification. Therefore, except for a little advice and counselling in his role as Minister of Industry, the minister, as far as I can ascertain, has not really done very much to bring forward policies with any meaningful weight in relation to the provisions of the act for the purpose of developing and carrying out such programs and projects as may be appropriate. I suggest to him that he should not lose sight of this.

The minister quite properly suggested to the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands that we might be dealing with defence department estimates later. I agree that if I have questions to ask in relation to changes, if any, to be made in respect of this establishment they should properly be directed to the Minister of National Defence. I do not mind saying that I have discussed these matters on occasion with the minister and I am not asking him to answer at this time any of my questions relating to possible changes in the actual establishment.

Bearing in mind statements of the kind just made by the hon. members for Springfield and Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands, the minister should be prepared, even when appearing before us as Minister of Defence Production, to give some indication of what he really thinks about the relative importance of the two roles he is playing in the context of the operation of the government of Canada. The minister should be willing to give us answers of some kind about where we are going and what kind of leadership the government of Canada intends to give in order to deal with the changed focus in the economic situation that would occur if the war in Viet Nam were to stop tomorrow. He should be prepared to tell us the situation that would be likely to arise in a relatively small community such as I have been speaking about, if his colleague the Minister of National Defence recommended, and the recommendation was accepted by the government, that the Comox forces base should be closed next month.

These are real and important questions in the context of the world situation and the total economy of the country and its industrial health. They are also of very direct and immediate importance to the people whose lives, interests, savings, homes and businesses have become wrapped up in certain communities because of the requirements resulting from policies followed by the government. This question is deserving of full consideration by the minister. The house is entitled to know where we are heading in the wide policy fields, and also what will be the immediate impact upon communities affected by these policies, whether they be manufacturing areas or communities which are dependent upon establishments of the Department of National Defence.

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, the minister has not answered any of the questions that have been asked and I should like to put a couple more to him before he does answer. The questions raised with respect to the Haley plant are serious enough in themselves, but I should like to have some more information on the matter. How many plants other than Haley Industries are there in this category? How many of them have been operated by management consultants, and why does the minister consider that there is a great difference between what is technically a crown corporation and a crown operated and owned industry? Also, how many plants of this nature that were used for war purposes—they may not be so used now—had government sponsored management during their period of operation under the Department of Defence Production?

Mr. Drury: Mr. Chairman, a number of questions have been asked to which I shall try to give brief answers. The allegation was made that the cost of the d.d.h.'s had risen overnight. The evidence cited in support of this argument was an editorial which appeared in the current issue of a Toronto newspaper. I am sorry that the hon. gentleman who derived this information from the newspaper was not in the house when the question of costs was under discussion. At that time it was made clear that a number of figures had been bandied about in respect of naval construction which represented only parts of the total contract, that this had led to misunderstandings in the past and it was my intention to see that whenever questions relating to costs or estimates of costs for naval construction were asked the full cost would be provided on each occasion in addition to the costs asked for.

The hon. member for Springfield suggested that a regional bias was evident on the part of the Department of Defence Production and this bias was given effect to by the use of cost plus contracts or contracts with adjustments for unforeseen circumstances. I suggest that cost plus contracts or contracts carrying—and I am not too clear what the hon. member meant by this—clauses for adjustment due to unforeseen circumstances, are rather unusual. I cannot think of one in which we are currently engaged.

It is the practice and policy of the department to seek to purchase by way of tender, based on the specifications and stated delivery times, and to award the contract to the lowest tenderer capable of meeting the terms of the tender. This in itself will serve to distribute in quite an automatic way the majority of contracts to those areas where most production is carried out. It is quite obvious that if a very small fraction of the total Canadian production is performed in a given area of Canada a correspondingly small number of contracts will emanate from the Department of Defence Production to that particular area.

In respect of the prairies, I think it is well known that the density of manufacturing there is much lower in relation to the population of the area than it is in other parts of Canada, notably Ontario, Quebec, the maritimes and British Columbia. I might tell the hon. gentlemen, however, that the policy of consolidation of purchases and awarding the contract to the lowest tenderer, rather than making individual purchases locally, has resulted in the department being able to fulfil in quite a substantial way one of the main functions for which it was set up, namely, the acquisition of goods and services for the government of Canada at the lowest economical price.

As a consequence of the consolidation of fine paper requirements and seeking tenders for these in bulk, in the past year in respect of one kind of paper only, namely, No. 7 bond, a saving of $500,000 was achieved compared with previous purchasing practices, where this item was purchased on a frequent, repetitive and small quantity basis. By introducing a national credit card system for personnel in civilian departments to obtain gasoline, oil and minor repairs to government vehicles, annual savings estimated at $158,000 a year have been achieved. By introducing government-wide rates for newspaper advertising, annual savings of about $200,000 have been brought about.

Supply—Defence Production

We are now continuing this consolidation operation in respect of advertising in other media and we hope to be able to reflect corresponding savings in this field. As members will recollect from a discussion we had last year on defence production estimates, through the policy of consolidating government needs for motor vehicles into a single purchase contract and by seeking tenders directly from the manufacturer, the department realized savings of between $100 and $400 per vehicle purchased.

I will not continue to give the many more examples of what I think the hon. gentleman has described as a bias in favour of certain areas in Canada, but I would say that the policy has had the result of concentrating purchasing in those areas where most of the production takes place. But while this concentration may have brought about some changes from previous practice I would point out that it has had the beneficial effect of effecting substantial savings in dollars to the taxpayers of Canada and that, I may say, is what I conceive my role as Minister of Defence Production to be.

Mr. Peters: I am sure the committee would be interested in having from the minister at this point an indication of the degree of purchasing on behalf of departments in relation to their requirements. Is his department purchasing 10 per cent, 50 per cent or most of the requirements for all government agencies? Perhaps he would also indicate how much of the purchasing is made in relation to defence.

Mr. Drury: As recommended by the Glassco commission, purchasing for all departments is being consolidated on an orderly and progressive basis under the Department of Defence Production. We have been taking over departments in their entirety one at a time. If my memory serves me right, we are about half way through this process now. In another year and a half or two years' time I would hope the Department of Defence Production will be doing all the purchasing on a consolidated basis for all the departments and agencies of the government, with the exception of certain specialized purchasing related particularly to high technology, scientific disciplines, and research activities in which the researchers are much closer, both in terms of physical location, and certainly in terms of intercommunication, with the source of supply, than a larger generalized department would be.

[Mr. Drury.]

We are making satisfactory progress. In addition, there are some fields where we have taken over department by department and consolidated our policy in respect of certain commodities purchased for all government departments. Motor cars are one example, newspaper advertising is another, and stationery is still another. So in a sense we are going ahead in two directions and on two fronts, and this is being converted, I hope, into a coherent, integrated operation.

The hon. member for Springfield also asked what contingency plans were being made to look after people who would be unemployed as a consequence of a shrinkage of the consumption of materials produced in Canada now being used to support the war effort in Viet Nam. Let me say right away that I share fully his hope that this unfortunate conflict can be brought to a conclusion at the earliest possible moment and, along with my colleagues in the government, spare no effort to bring this about.

In so far as those who are engaged now in production related to current warlike operations are concerned, we have been consciously, so far as this is possible in a free enterprise society, endeavouring to see that no one firm becomes solely dependent on the production of articles of military use and military equipment for the armed forces. This is true whether the firm is producing solely for Canadian consumption or is producing also for other countries such as the United States, European countries, and others. We do what we can to produce a diversification from military equipment into appropriate related civilian lines so that, should the demand for military items of any kind and for any reason fall off, there will be an alternative to which to turn people's efforts from a base which we hope will be reasonably soundly established.

Perhaps I could cite some examples. Canadair, the firm manufacturing military aircraft such as the CF-5, both for Canada and for the Netherlands, has been encouraged by us to do research and development and even prototype construction work on aircraft which have a purely civilian role, the principal one of which would be for water bombing against forest fires. They are also concerned with research and development of vertical take-off aircraft, also for civilian purposes. This we endeavour to bring about in all those firms with which we have contact, which are currently engaged in the production of items for the various departments of defence, Canadian and foreign.

I may say that from the point of view of the necessity for a substantial readjustment I think we in Canada are fortunate in one way in that the kinds of military equipment or components of military equipment on which Canadian firms have been concentrating are largely of a quasi-civilian character. An example of this is the doppler navigation system, a system of aerial navigation which was developed in Canada and is being manufactured here. It is essential for military operations and military aircraft. At the same time it is rapidly becoming very important in civil aircraft. So if for one reason or another the demand for doppler navigation equipment in military aircraft dries up, there will be an alternative civilian demand to be catered to which will continue to provide economic activities to these firms.

We are conscious of the possibility and, we hope, the probability, that military operations with their consequent loss of life and material in Viet Nam will cease and have envisaged the circumstances of the changeover. We are working toward making it as reasonable and as easy as possible.

As I mentioned to the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands, I am sure the Minister of National Defence will read his remarks in Hansard and when the defence estimates are being considered it will not be necessary for him to repeat them. I leave it to my colleague the Minister of National Defence to make an adequate response.

Mr. Schreyer: Will the minister permit a question?

Mr. Drury: The hon. member for Comox-Alberni also asked about transitional arrangements in respect of communities which are wholly dependent on military activity in Canada. He wanted to know what would happen if this military activity ceased. This is a possibility which is clearly present in the mind of the government when looking at the disposition of military bases across Canada. In instances where these do have to be phased out, it is recognized that consideration has to be given to easing the dislocation caused by such phasing out. I think the hon. gentleman will be aware of discussions taking place in this house concerning the possibility of phasing out a base in Prince Edward Island. Intense efforts are being made by my colleague the Minister of National Defence to make this change in military operations, this change in military needs, with as little difficulty and a minimal amount of dislocation to the people in the region as possible. I am sure he will continue to do this. I, for my part, through the Department of Industry and the Department of Defence Production, will provide him with such assistance and such advice as I can.

Mr. Schreyer: Will the minister permit one question? Would the minister care to use his powers of articulation to refute my charge that the Department of Defence Production, in its allocation of prime contracts, shows a strong regional bias which adversely affects the western provinces?

Mr. Drury: I am sorry, but the hon. gentleman was not in the house when I did refute it. Perhaps if he looks at Hansard he will see the answer.

Mr. Peters: I should still like to deal with the specifics of vote 6c. I presume we are dealing with the phasing out of one particular plant. The sums of $480,000 and $740,000 are both allocated to the Haley plant. I should like to know how many plants which were operated on a wartime basis are still in operation or are being utilized on a federal managerial basis.

Mr. Drury: I am told, Mr. Chairman, that at the end of the war there were approximately 104. Over the years these have been disposed of gradually and only a few remain. I am told there is an engine repair and overhaul plant at Downsview currently operated by de Havilland aircraft. When I say "operated" I mean it is a crown owned property which de Havilland is leasing from the government and operating for its own purposes. In that sense it is not a crown managed operation at all.

In the city of Edmonton there is a hangar which is leased to Northwest Industries Limited to do repair and overhaul work. In the city of La Salle, Quebec, there is a naval test laboratory which is owned by the government and operated by Peacock Brothers Limited on a management or operations contract. They are merely operators on behalf of the crown, as this is a crown owned laboratory. In addition, there is a 7,000 ton press in Trenton, Nova Scotia, which was secured to handle the very large forgings required for our naval engines. This is currently being operated under a lease arrangement with the main steel operation in Trenton which is Dosco.

Mr. Saltsman: I should like to direct a question to the minister.

Mr. Drury: If the hon. gentleman will permit an interruption, there is one other operation which I forgot, and which Canadian Arsenals owned. This is an establishment for the manufacture of cartridge cases at Louise Basin in Quebec. It is currently being operated by a contractor which is the same firm that purchased the arsenal at Valcartier, Valcartier Industries Limited. We are now in the process of selling the Louise Basin facility to Valcartier Industries, so that it will be operated, again without loss to the crown, but with the continuing maintenance there of a cartridge case producing facility.

Mr. Saltsman: Mr. Chairman, I was interested in the minister's statement that his department was giving considerable attention to the problem of changing from wartime products to peacetime products and that they had been looking at the various factors. Can we take it from this statement that the transition from the production of war material to peacetime products can be made easily and without serious disruption?

Mr. Drury: Easy, Mr. Chairman, is a relative term. Whether something is easy, whether dislocation is major or minor, whether it is easy or difficult, depends a lot on where you sit. If you were a man who had been gainfully employed in a job for a great many years and it suddenly disappeared, then it would be very difficult for you as an individual. However, if there is only one such instance in a year in the country, then that could hardly be regarded as a national problem. Such a transition would be easy for the government of Canada, indeed even easy for the opposition, but it would be very difficult indeed for that one man. I was endeavouring to say that the problem of transition is not a major one and we are seized of the importance of it. We are continuously taking steps to facilitate this transition on the day that we hope will come.

I mentioned to the hon. member for Timiskaming the sale to Valcartier Industries Limited of Canadian Arsenals ammunitions producing plant at Valcartier. As a consequence of this, the crown has been able to secure the continuance in being of an ammunition producing facility to meet the needs of the Department of National Defence. At the same time, by introducing an entrepreneurial management with other interests, the plant and machinery at Valcartier are being used not only for the production of small arms ammunition on a limited scale, which is all we need now, but for the manufacture of another range of both plastic and metal items. As a result, when the day arrives that small arms ammunition is no longer required, the plant at Valcartier and its employees will already be well launched into the production of civilian goods.

Mr. Saltsman: The importance of the minister's statement at this time, Mr. Chairman, is simply this. A great deal of fear has been created in the public mind about the war materials that are being produced in this country in connection with the war in Viet Nam. For the sake of the record and for the knowledge of the Canadian public, the minister's statement today is of considerable importance. Regardless of the earlier part of his oration which, if he will excuse the allusion, sounded very much like a statement from the minister of external affairs—

Mr. Drury: From the N.D.P.

Mr. Saltsman: —I think the implication of what he said is that Canada should get out of the production of war materials and that the transition from war to civilian production could be made reasonably successfully and without major disruption.

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, I was pleased to hear about the plants disposed of by the department. We will all be happy when the transfer from wartime operations is completed. I was also pleased to hear that the department had changed its role in terms of defence production. While I presume the department still buys material for the army, it has adopted the Glassco recommendation of bulk purchasing. I assume that this involves a distributive system, which will create new problems. For example, when you buy paper in bulk you have to store it, and I can envisage storage problems for the department.

I have one final question for the minister. If I had any further questions I would ask them of the parliamentary secretary who has sat silent throughout. Has the department considered changing its name to a more suitable one in keeping with its purchasing policies which were recommended by the Glassco commission? If I and my colleagues had anything to do with it defence costs would come down; therefore that particular function of the department would eventually disappear. At the same time, its purchasing activities are going to increase. Would it be in keeping with the minister's avowed N.D.P. philosophy to change the name of the Department of Defence Production to something more appropriate?

Mr. Drury: Mr. Chairman, it is our intention to do so in about one year's time. It will require legislative enactment and the matter does not seem to be terribly urgent. Although progress is being made on the matter I would be glad to receive suggestions for a new name, though not now.

Mrs. MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Chairman, I cannot let the estimates of this department go through without making a brief but none the less strong protest about the way defence contracts have increased so tremendously during the last year. I am afraid that the minister's talk of phasing out military production is not too convincing in view of the number of defence contracts entered into last year. Indeed, instead of military production being phased out it has been going the other way. We have been building up an intricate network of defence production that will be very hard to undo or to turn to civilian use. I am worried about this because it means we must devote a great part of Canadian industry, resources and manpower to the production of war materials for military needs at a time when civilian needs are increasing.

Because it puts the case much better and more succinctly than I could I should like to quote an editorial that appeared in this morning's Globe and Mail. It commences as follows:

> It came out almost incidentally. Michael Forrestall (P.C. Halifax) was talking about cost control during the Commons debate on supplementary spending estimates for the defence production department, and mentioned a figure of $20 million a ship for four new destroyers the department has on its drawing board.
> Not $20 million, corrected defence production minister C. M. Drury, by now it was "a lot closer to $50 million", and maybe more. The ships would be built over four years and changes in naval warfare might dictate design changes at increased cost—
> Designed four years ago for service four years hence and dubious service at that. We have yet to redefine our NATO commitments, we can have no certainty that any of our U.N. roles will require such vessels; and if there is one thing most Canadians feel they could do without, it is a ship that fires surface to air missiles. At what?
> But four of them will cost us $200 million. There goes $50 million more than will be raised by finance minister Mitchell Sharp's 3 per cent surtax on personal and corporate income taxes for the 1968-69 fiscal year, there goes nearly double the $105 million aid Canada sent to Indian last year—our biggest foreign aid item.
> In what strange unreal world does the government live, where it can preach restraint to us and proceed, almost casually, with a huge and open-ended expenditure on what the judgment of Canadians—if it could be totalled up—would almost certainly decide was an unnecessary and even undesirable project?

I think the Globe and Mail has hit the nail on the head. From what I have heard during the last two days it seems we are living in a strange and unreal world. The minister is hoping that we can phase out military needs in order to meet other needs. Certainly the needs of the people of this country are tremendous. They require new housing. There is the problem of pollution control in its various phases. There are requirements for education and training from one coast to the other. There are pension problems both civil and military. The elderly need a pension increase and medicare expenses are coming along. This is why it is so unreal to spend such tremendous sums on defence production. Against what and against whom will these weapons be used?

Our country faces real and growing needs and it is high time we got down to reality and came down to earth. The people of this country are being taxed for services they hope they will receive. Yet much of their money is being spent for what? Battleships, tanks and so on. If we put our full weight behind the United Nations we should not need those items as they were once needed in the past.

I will not take up the time of the committee further except to say that in my view, and I am sure I speak for most Canadians, we have started down a long and dangerous road. I do not want to be told that I have neglected to ask on behalf of my area for any armament contracts that are going. If military expenditures are to be incurred by the government I hope that Vancouver will be given its share.

Mr. Drury: You just want your share.

Mrs. MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): I would much rather see armament production stopped. Instead of concentrating on defence production I would prefer to see the government concentrating on civilian production. Just in case some hon. members find my remarks amusing, just in case they think I am in cloud cuckoo-cuckoo land, I ask them to note what is happening to the south where civilian needs have been badly neglected and police forces have had to be increased to contain the violence that has been created through misery and social injustice. We need not have that state of affairs in Canada and that is why I urge the minister to do away with one part of his job. He should concentrate on the Department of Industry. Instead of wearing his two hats I would prefer to see him wearing only one, the hat of the Department of Industry. One hat would suit him, and I think most Canadians agree with me.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall vote 6c carry?

Item agreed to.

(The following items were agreed to:)

7c. Payment of the obligations of the Crown-owned magnesium foundry at Haley, Ontario, outstanding as of September 30, 1967, $740,000.

8c. Reimbursement of the Defence Production Revolving Fund established by Section 16(1) of the Defence Production Act for losses sustained in the 1966-67 fiscal year in the disposition of strategic materials, $77,287.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall vote 9c carry?

9c. Reimbursement of the Supply Service Revolving Fund established by Loans, Investments and Advances Vote L18e, Appropriation Act No. 4, 1966, for the supply of certain goods and services to federal government departments and agencies for the value of stores which have become obsolete or unserviceable, $7,253.

Mr. Peters: I presume that vote 9c has to do with the revolving fund which is applicable to government purchases for other than national defence requirements. I should like to see some sort of supervisory machinery set up over such government purchasing procedures. Over the years I have heard stories of salesmen going to Department of Defence Production offices, offering their wares and being granted interviews if what they had to sell was important to the department. The salesmen also used all sort of sales gimmicks, and no one can blame them for that. At the same time, even though the Auditor General or the public accounts committee might examine at the appropriate time some of the purchases which the government has made, some sort of supervisory set-up ought to be created to deal with government purchases. Since government purchases represent the big end of government operations I think that a formal supervisory set-up of the kind I have mentioned ought to be brought into being.

[Mrs. MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway).]

I commend the government for implementing some Glassco commission recommendations much more rapidly than has been realized by some. The minister ought to bring this fact to the attention of all concerned much more forcefully than he has done.

I welcome the minister's remarks about administrative procedures and I wish to bring to his attention some problems in connection with purchasing which have arisen in various ridings. For instance, in certain ridings where the government purchased automobiles the dealers who were not successful in tendering were very upset and told their member of their dissatisfaction. On the other hand, dealers who were successful in tendering soon found that the service commitments of their contracts meant that they had to spend more in servicing government cars than they would have spent in servicing the general public's cars. In other words, the dealers are damned if they win and damned if they don't. I think there is an obligation on the part of the department to make certain that automobile manufacturers stand behind their dealers. Often the manufacturers dodge their responsibilities and the dealer winds up making nothing or next to nothing.

When a dealer sells a standard Chevrolet, he makes a mark-up of $700, $400 of which is earmarked for service for engines, rear ends or other servicing needs that may arise. Usually the manufacturer stands behind his product but I have been told that some manufacturers have blackmailed local dealers into doing certain work without compensation. Originally the dealer arranged with the manufacturer to be compensated for the work. Actually the dealer got a kickback from the manufacturer for servicing the car, but I have been told that General Motors has stopped giving this kickback to its dealers. I have received many letters and I have heard many opinions expressed about whether General Motors is or is not in some way reimbursing its dealers for work being done.

I do not ask the minister to comment. I merely wish to say that since all these dealings affect the government in some way it would be a good idea to institute some kind of machinery to supervise purchasing procedures, and here I am thinking of what the Glassco commission recommended. Within the minister's department that supervisory body could control purchases, and where difficulties in connection with purchases arose the supervisory body could bring them to the minister's attention. As purchasing requirements within a department become more complicated and as more items with which the minister is not familiar are purchased, the services of a supervisory body would be invaluable. It would not be to his disadvantage and it might well be to the advantage of the country if such a supervisory agency were established in the department to act as a watchdog. Its work might even involve supervision of the way in which supplies are used by other departments of government.

The agency might come to the conclusion, for instance, that there was an unusually high consumption of certain material for which there did not appear to be a great and continuing demand. The building up of stocks can lead to such situations as arose when the defence department found itself in possession of enormous supplies, surplus to requirement, of overpants for females in military service. The supervisory agency I have in mind could check the demand for such items when it was felt the quantity demanded was excessive, and instigate investigations which I am sure would eliminate unnecessary waste.

I am glad the minister has been able to go as far as he has done in connection with the Glassco recommendations. I think he should look carefully at the recommendation to set up machinery for continued supervision during the period of purchasing rather than wait for the Auditor General to find out what went wrong—obviously an exercise in hindsight.

Mr. Saltsman: I should like to direct another question to the minister. In view of the evidence given before the drug committee that his department is able to purchase drugs at great savings, has the minister ever been approached by provincial governments to act on their behalf in purchasing drugs for hospitals? If he were so approached, would he consider making such purchases for hospitals in Canada?

Mr. Drury: We have never at any stage been approached with this request from the provinces.

Mr. Saltsman: What would be the position of the department if such requests were made?

Mr. Drury: We would be glad to co-operate, Mr. Chairman.

Item agreed to.

The following item was agreed to:

10c. Reimbursement of the Queen's Printer's Advance Account for the value of stores which have become obsolete or unserviceable, $996.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: This concludes the supplementary estimates of the Department of Defence Production. The committee will now consider the supplementary estimates of the Department of Industry.

Mr. Peters: It was my understanding that the minister would be away and that we had agreed these estimates would stand while he was absent.

Mr. Drury: I did not know I was going to be away.

Mr. Peters: Pardon me. I thought we were on the estimates of the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources.

DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRY

1c. Departmental Administration, including grants as detailed in the Estimates, $1.

Item agreed to.

25c. Amount to be credited to the Area Development Account established by sub-section 1 of section 5 of the Area Development Incentives Act and to authorize, notwithstanding section 30 of the Financial Administration Act, an increase to $275,000,000 in the total amount of commitments in the current and subsequent fiscal years for development grants under the said Act, $11,000,000.

[Translation]

Mr. Laprise: Mr. Chairman, I should like to say a few words with regard to item 25c which deals with designated areas.

A few days ago, on the orders of the day, I asked the hon. minister whether he had received requests from public bodies of the Abitibi area to the effect that this part of the Quebec province should be designated as a low-employment area in order that the industries which are prepared to settle there might benefit thereby.

Every year, the hon. minister publishes a report on the activities of his department. In the 1965-66 report, the role of the Department of Industry is defined as follows:

The duty of the Department of Industry is to encourage and facilitate the efficient development of secondary industry in Canada.

In my opinion, Mr. Chairman, this is quite a commendable purpose which should be carried out. I think that the incentive given by the department made it possible for many industries to settle and create new jobs in areas which otherwise would have registered a high concentration of unemployed, which would have affected them adversely. I wonder whether, in the country as a whole, some areas have not been at a disadvantage due to the system used by the department to designate those areas.

I should like to continue with the description of the role of the department.

In more precise economic terms, the department seeks to attain a dual objective: to raise the level of productivity and to make it possible for our industries to compete on the domestic and foreign markets. Furthermore, its purpose is to prepare and implement programs intended to create new job opportunities and to raise incomes through the industrial development of the areas of Canada which have been designated because of chronic unemployment, underemployment or low incomes.

One or two days ago, in answer to the hon. member for Trois-Rivières (Mr. Mongrain), the minister stated that the areas were not designated by the Department of Industry but rather by the Department of Manpower and Immigration, according to the level of unemployment prevailing in those areas. The minister is basing himself on the report of the Department of Manpower and Immigration in giving assistance to the industries wishing to settle in those areas.

I fully understand the situation. However, I wonder whether this procedure is fair to all the areas, for in the region in which I am interested, that of Abitibi, there are between 400 and 500 men who have to travel to the province of Ontario to work in lumber camps, sawing wood or transporting it to mills where it is converted and prepared for the market.

These men must travel over a hundred miles to come back to their homes during the weekend, which increases their expenses considerably. Moreover, they cannot be considered as unemployed. In fact, they are not unemployed but must earn a living in an area located in a neighbouring province and designated as an economically depressed area.

Therefore, I think that, in so doing, an injustice is committed against northwestern Quebec, for as far as I know, two lumber processing industries at least would be interested in coming to a northwestern Quebec town, namely La Sarre; but being unable to get any aid under the Designated Areas Act, they will probably settle down in the neighbouring province, where they will be entitled to the subsidies granted in designated areas.

I agree with the hon. minister and the hon. member for Cochrane (Mr. Habel) that northern Ontario can supply raw materials to this lumber industry. But, I should like to point to the hon. minister that northwestern Quebec can also supply many species of wood to those processing industries.

Last Sunday, I had the opportunity of visiting the new road that was cut out of the forest, north of La Sarre, towards James Bay and the sea. I know that the La Sarre Chamber of Commerce, led by most enthusiastic and enterprising men, decided last year without waiting for support or help from the Quebec government, to build that road so that the area's resources, that is timber, mines, tourism, etc. could be developed.

As I said, last Sunday I was present at the official opening of a section of that road. I could see for myself the vastness and the beauty of the forests which border the Wawagosic and Harricana rivers and all the other streams which run through that wooded area in northern Quebec.

The reports submitted by the engineer, Michel Tissé, and by others, indicate that there are huge expanses of forests which are waiting to be developed. I would say that that whole area of the forest in northwestern Quebec has more than 100 years of growth and that the wood is ready to be cut down. Consequently, I feel that we should not postpone exploiting those natural resources. Moreover, the establishment of new industries would reduce unemployment in northwestern Quebec.

Unemployment is very high in the Abitibi area; there was unemployment last fall, there will be this spring, and even next summer. A great number of workers are not entitled to unemployment insurance benefits, and when they report to the welfare service, they are told: Move somewhere else where you can find work. By so doing, they are indirectly invited to expatriate themselves, to head for other areas, indeed other provinces, to seek work which they could get on the spot, at home.

Industry in that area is not very diversified. There is the forest, the mines and a little agriculture. We do not have much potential for industries, compared to great centres, because for some industries, raw materials would have to be imported, processed and then, re-exported. It is something practically impossible and uneconomic. But, on the other hand, we can process our wood products and export them later.

I ask the minister whether those areas could not be determined in some other way, because I feel that situation is peculiar to our district and is not to be found elsewhere perhaps. In my opinion, some thought should be given to that problem in order to attract some industries to our area.

A beautiful polyvalent school has been built in La Sarre; the federal government has contributed $3,510,808, and the Quebec department of education has supplied the equipment and the teachers. It is a generous grant from the government in Ottawa, for the construction of a school which will dispense learning to our young people. This is all quite commendable, but when those young people will be trained, I wonder what will happen to them. In fact, we do not have any industry to hire them and they will be compelled to go away, and thus the Abitibi area will be deserted.

In my opinion, some efforts should be made to help an industry to establish itself in the Abitibi area, in order to keep our young people.

In the September 30, 1967 issue of the Montreal newspaper La Presse, there was an article signed by Mr. Maurice Giroux, entitled: "Manufacturing investments". The article said:

> Since 1963, Ontario has been increasingly outdistancing Quebec. In 1967, there is apparently a difference of 211 per cent.

That is, money is invested much more quickly in Ontario than in Quebec, and in 1967 there was a difference of 211 per cent. Mr. Giroux goes on to say:

> The Quebec Advisory Council, during the summer—

That is, the summer of 1967.

> —made a study of the investments made in the manufacturing industry in the province, and the preliminary report recently completed shows an increasing gap between investment expenditure in Quebec and in Ontario.
> The difference in favour of Ontario will reach, it seems 211.1 per cent this year and, excluding the paper industry, the difference exceeds 250 per cent. The general manager of the Council had already been warned of the situation last year by an official of the department of industry and trade and Mr. Roland Parenteau had received a series of comparative charts from that official.

And so, in closing my remarks, I should like to put on record the graph of those investments—it will only take me a minute —to show the difference between the investments in Quebec and in Ontario, from 1955 to 1967. I quote:

> Those graphs indicate that, since 1963, investments in Quebec manufactures have increased by an average of approximately $100 million a year. In Ontario, twice as much was invested, that is from $1,071 million in 1963, to $1,813 million in 1967, as shown in the following table.

This table was prepared by Mr. Giroux.

Now, this table shows that in 1955, total investments in Ontario were $664,600,000, compared to $406,300,000 in Quebec. Examining the figures for 1965, it can be seen that Ontario benefited from $1,685,400,000 in investments, and Quebec $787,300,000 only.

So, Mr. Chairman, I think that investments in Quebec should be encouraged and that some means should be found, as regards the Abitibi area, to have it declared a designated area, in order to encourage the businessmen who want to invest in the area, but would like to have the government's help.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order.

Mr. Laprise: Mr. Chairman, I have comleted my remarks.

PRIVATE BILLS

LONDON AND MIDLAND GENERAL INSURANCE COMPANY

The house in committee on Bill No. S-25, respecting London and Midland General Insurance Company—Mr. Lind—Mr. Batten in the chair.

On clause 1.—Change of name.

Mr. Lind: Mr. Chairman, the sole purpose of this bill is to change the name of this company from London Midland General Insurance Company to Avco General Insurance Company. There are two reasons for the desired change. This company is a member of the Avco group of companies, and the Avco corporation is the parent company of the entire group. Last year there was a company in the United Kingdom which used the names "London" and "Midland" as the main names of that company. It went into bankruptcy and there have been some inquiries as a result. The company has been asked whether there was any connection between these two companies. There is no connection between these two companies whatsoever, but this is the reason for this change.

Let me point out to hon. members that Avco Holding Corporation of Canada is not the sole owner of the London and Midland General Insurance Company. Approximately 50,000 shares are held by Canadian citizens. I hope that hon. members will see fit to allow this change of name, which is all that is being sought.

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, I agree with the sponsor of this bill that all that is being asked is a change of name. I do not agree that that is all this bill may do. The name of this company would indicate that its operations or offices are located in the main insurance area of Canada. The hon. member sponsoring the bill is also from the province of Ontario. This would give reason for assuming that this is an Ontario company, not a company of English origin. This is the sort of difficulty we have in Canada when companies use names that do not indicate explicitly the location of the company. This bill does not do much to clarify the situation, unless one is familiar with the background of the company.

The change of name is not the significant part of this whole matter. The former president of the privy council recently received a report from a tax force that was set up to decide what influence foreign ownership had on our industry. It contained a great deal of information about the ownership of insurance companies and other financial institutions. It has been our contention for some time that the ownership of insurance companies is of vital importance to the Canadian economy. The fact that many of them are owned by foreign companies raises a question regarding the use of profits in the best interests of this nation. This matter has been the subject of a number of discussions and editorials. Many of these federally incorporated insurance companies engage in the same practice as totally owned subsidiary—

The Chairman: Order. Before the hon. member progresses too far along the line he is now taking I should point out to him that the bill before the committee is a very simple one dealing with a change of name. It does not permit the hon. member to make general remarks about the operations of insurance companies.

Mr. Peters: I agree, Mr. Chairman, that this is a very simple bill, but it is my understanding that this type of an amendment does open up the subject matter of the incorporation of the company, having regard to chapter 48 of the Statutes of Canada, 1957—

The Chairman: Order, please. I should advise the hon. member that under the rules of this house an amending bill does not open up the original act for general discussion. Only the clause which is being amended is before the committee.

Mr. Mackasey: Tom will help you.

Mr. Peters: I accept your ruling, Mr. Chairman. However, I must suggest that this company seeking a change in name was the subject of discussions in the committee on banking and commerce of the other place. There is a relationship between the change of name and the ownership of this company as indicated by the discussion which took place in that committee. The superintendent of insurance at that time had this to say as recorded on page 79 of the proceedings of that committee:

• (6:10 p.m.)

—the purpose of this bill is very simple.

It is merely to change the name of the London and Midland General Insurance Company to Avco General Insurance Company, and, in French, L'Avco, Compagnie d'Assurance Générale. That is the sole purpose of the bill.

May I say that the existing company, the London and Midland General Insurance Company, is a federally incorporated company, having been formed by special act of parliament in 1948. It is registered with our department. It is owned by the Avco group of companies, the parent company being in the United States. There is a holding company in Canada that holds a group of companies engaged in the business of acceptance, lending and insurance. All companies in the group are using the name Avco as part of their name, to identify the family of corporations. This is the purpose in seeking this authority.

I suggest that the company referred to as the London and Midland General Insurance Company is not the same company that we incorporated. Therefore the change in name of the company carries with it a change in ownership under this bill and is pertinent in our discussion. While it may be true that it is a change in name to allow for a correction of the situation indicated by the sponsor of the bill, in other words, a duplication of name that has caused the company regrettable inconvenience over a period of time, I understand from the evidence given before the committee of the other place that the reason the company wants to change its name is that the company itself has changed. The bill changes the London and Midland General Insurance Company, a company incorporated in England, to a company owned by the Avco group in the United States which has in its portfolio a large number of companies.

I suggest that in this instance the change in name implies also a change in ownership. By changing the name of the company we will be effecting a transfer of ownership to the Avco group which is a holding company for a number of insurance companies. The questioning in the committee of the other place continued in this way. Senator Pearson asked:

How many subsidiary companies are affected in Canada?

In other words, the members of that committee were not inquiring about the name of the company but about its ownership. Mr. Humphrys answered in this way:

This change will affect only this one insurance company. They have a number of other companies in the group but they are not our concern.

Senator Pearson: They have the name?

Mr. Humphrys: Many of them have the word Avco in the name.

The Chairman: Some representatives of the company are here, namely, Mr. H. P. Paterno, president of Avco Delta Corporation Canada Limited, and president of the London and Midland General Insurance Company; Mr. C. J. Connell, group vice-president, Avco Delta Corporation of Canada Limited, and vice-president, London and Midland General Insurance Company; and Mr. K. R. Kirkpatrick, vice-president and general manager, London and Midland General Insurance Company; and Mr. David F. Alexandor, parliamentary agent.

The chairman of the committee then suggested that with the brief explanation given by the superintendent of insurance the committee might be ready to report the bill without amendment. Mr. Alexandor, the parliamentary agent, then said:

Mr. Chairman, all I would like to say is that the primary reason for the request to this honourable Senate for the change of name is to make the name Avco part of a corporate name of this insurance company, in line with six other companies in the same group. There is one other point. There is a company by the name London and Midland Insurance Company, in the United Kingdom, which went bankrupt recently. There is no relationship between the British company and this group, but it caused considerable embarrassment to this company, which had to contact 6,000 Canadian representatives and many policyholders as well.

I would also add that there are a number of companies in Canada with the word "London" included in the name. Those are basically the three major reasons for the change requested.

I suggest that in this case the change of name also carries with it a change in ownership. This company is being added to a group of companies under the name Avco. Therefore the problem is opened up of the ownership of the company. This is not only a change in name because implied in this change is also a change in ownership. I suggest that the bill therefore raises the whole problem of ownership and the question of Canadian content in the ownership of the company. As the name changes, so will the ownership of the company change and it will be a subsidiary of the Avco group of companies. On many occasions we have raised the problem of ownership.

The Chairman: Order, please. I must again say to the hon. member that the bill before the committee is indeed a very simple one. From the information which the Chair can derive from the bill before the committee, it has nothing to do with ownership and deals only with a change of name. I am going to ask hon. members to confine their remarks to the two particular clauses in the bill.

Private Bills

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, we shall certainly co-operate with the Chair and concentrate on the name of this company, which limits the discussion and makes it more difficult. Avco is the name of a company established in the United States as a holding company for a number of insurance companies. I presume the name is made up of the initials of the original participants in the company. The name Avco is, of course, not a word at all. I doubt that we should allow this change of name, for the reasons I have given. The name does not appear in italics and really cannot be called a word. There is a great deal of difference between the word "London" which is a noun, and "Avco" which is a word made up of four initials. I wonder whether it is proper for us to allow a company to use a name that really does not have any significance at all. The French translation of the name sounds much better than the English version.

I would have thought it would have been better if the name had been changed to one more in keeping with their activities, namely, the selling of insurance in Canada, because there are a number of other insurance companies involved which might have found it better for this company to have called itself the Delta General Insurance Company or might have found it wiser for the company to have used its whole name. Is the sponsor in a position to say — why this company is not named the Avco Delta insurance company? In view of its ownership this would be a more realistic name. The company is owned by Avco Delta Corporation of Canada Limited, and it would seem to me that since the president of this company was also president of the London and Midland General Insurance Company it would be more realistic to identify it under this name.

I suggest that the company should be named the Avco Delta Corporation of Canada Limited and that that name should appear in the bill rather than the name proposed, Avco General Insurance Company. It may be that the name I have suggested would be more difficult to translate and it may also be that the name proposed in the bill has more meaning in French, because L'Avco, Compagnie d'Assurance Générale sounds nice. It might not sound as well if we added to the name the word "Delta", and it might well be that this word has some significance in French while the word "L'Avco" may have a different connotation in the French language than it does in English. But I think most hon. members will agree that "L'Avco" really does not mean anything at all. All it is is a grouping of letters. I think that the change of name does not make the designation of this company any clearer. If we want to clarify the meaning of the name by adding the word "Delta" this might be an appropriate thing to do.

It seems to me that the letters a,v,c,o do not make up a name. Perhaps this word might have some significance if it were but between brackets. What we would do in that case would be to patent a new name. The sponsor may see fit to withdraw the word "Avco" and just call the company "General Insurance Company", which would not mean anything at all because most insurance companies deal with general insurance. On the other hand, it might be wise to take "Avco" out and put in "Delta". I think this might have some significance. I also wonder whether it would not be possible to call the company Avco Delta London and Midland Insurance Company because this name could easily be identified by people who previously had insurance policies with the London and Midland General Insurance Company. The extra words would then be included in brackets as is the case with many other companies which have changed their names, such as National Branch (1956) Limited. The date in the name stands for the date of the incorporation of the company and the legal profession sees some significance in its inclusion.

The Chairman: Order, please. I must advise the hon. member that the time allotted to him has expired.

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Chairman—

Some hon. Members: Filibuster.

Mr. Barnett: I am not sure what that moan from over there means but in any event I am sure hon. members are familiar with the rather well worn saying that a rose by any other name would smell as sweet. Perhaps you could permit me to remind the committee that the same could also be said to apply in reverse to skunk cabbage. There is another quotation which has to do with names. I am no authority on such matters but I think the following phrase was authored by a man named Shakespeare who said "what's in a name", or words to that effect.

This bill has a fairly accurate explanatory note which explains the sole purpose of the bill, namely, to change the name of the company to Avco General Insurance Company, in French L'Avco, Compagnie d'Assurance Générale, from the London and Midland General Insurance Company. I have been looking at the evidence which was given in the other place when this bill was considered on November 22, 1967. On the basis of that evidence perhaps a reasonable case could be made for the desirability of changing the name.

Despite what my colleague, the hon. member for Timiskaming, said about the rather meaningless grouping of letters which make up the name, it would be interesting if the sponsor of the bill could inform the committee on the meaning of the word "Avco" and how it came into being. As I understand the evidence there is some virtue in the proposed change of name in that at least it serves to clarify the real position of this company as a member of the so-called group of Avco corporations. Perhaps it would serve to identify it as being what the sponsor has stated, namely, an appendix to a company located outside Canada. To that extent at least I find myself favourably disposed to the proposition set out in the bill. It makes it clear that this is a company associated with Avco Delta Corporation of Canada Limited, and through it with a group of companies in the United States. It does also—and this is where I think the bill has some import beyond the mere change of name—signify the fact that at some point or other a company originally started by a group of Canadians in the city of London was bought out by the Avco holding corporation in the United States.

In changing the name of the company we are in effect recognizing in retrospect something that may have happened a number of years ago which is not made quite clear in the evidence I have read nor in what was said by the sponsor of the bill earlier. If my assumptions are correct, in that sense this bill could properly be considered to be a sort of requiem to a one-time Canadian company. I suppose one could say "may it rest in peace" except, as we all realize, it has every intention, according to the evidence given by the superintendent of insurance of continuing to operate as a very active participant in the general insurance field in Canada.

To this extent at least, Mr. Chairman, I have no quarrel with the proposal that the name be changed. In fact perhaps this is something that should have been done a long time ago. On the other hand, unfortunately, I realize that the terms of the bill do confine us to a rather narrow area of debate. The very fact that even at this late date we are being asked to sanction this proposed change of name, indirectly at least, does call upon us to give our blessing to something which has taken place, namely the transfer to foreign control of ownership of a Canadian corporation. I realize the rules do not permit, as you reminded us, sir, to expand upon that fact in detail. However, I believe that this change of name symbolizes this very situation which has been pointed out in certain other discussions with reference to applications that have come before us from various insurance companies.

One of the reasons given for desiring this change of name is the similarity of this name to that of a firm which apparently went into bankruptcy, and which had its origin in the United Kingdom. Apparently this was the cause of some embarrassment. Here again, we are dealing ex post facto with a situation which presumably most people have now forgotten. If I had been a patron of this particular company I might have been concerned about that matter at the time, but quite frankly it is something of which I was unaware until this bill came before the house.

Another reason advanced by the parliamentary agent for desiring the change of name is that there have been a number of companies in Canada in the insurance field with the word "London" included in the name. I have been looking at a list of insurance companies registered to do business in Canada, and I feel that perhaps this point has some foundation. The list I have before me is a supplement to the Canada Gazette for January 27, 1968. The list contains the names of insurance companies registered to do business in Canada under the Canadian and British Insurance Companies Act and the Foreign Insurance Companies Act. We do have the Liverpool and London and Globe Insurance Company Limited; the word "London" appears in that name. Apparently this company is registered to do business in the field of fire, accident, aircraft, automobile, boiler, earthquake, explosion, forgery, guarantee, limited hail, inland transportation, personal property, plate glass, sprinkler leakage, theft, wind storm and additional classes of insurance. Then, we have the London and Edinburgh Insurance Company Limited, William N.

Johnston, chief agent, Montreal, which limits itself to accident and automobile insurance.

We have the London and Lancashire Guarantee and Accident Company of Canada, which deals in fire, accident, aircraft, automobile, boiler—

The Chairman: Order. The Chair fails to see the relevance of the remarks now being made by the hon. member for Comox-Alberni respecting the very simple bill before the committee. There is no need for the Chair to quote to the hon. member the rule regarding relevancy in committee. I hope that he will co-operate with the Chair in trying to complete the work of the committee.

Mr. Peters: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Chairman. The hon. member was talking about the name this company had, and the choice of the new name which we are being asked to approve. I submit that a discussion of the two names would be quite in order.

Mr. Barnett: Well, Mr. Chairman, I seek some guidance from you. I was dealing with one of the arguments that has been advanced by the applicant company in respect of its desire to have the name changed from London insurance company to another name. This desire arose partly because a number of companies operating in Canada used this name. I was in effect underlining that argument. I seek guidance as to whether it was this aspect of my remarks to which objection was taken, or whether you were suggesting that a reference to the different types of insurance in which these companies engaged breached the rule of relevancy.

The Chairman: The hon. member is an experienced parliamentarian, and he knows that the Chair is not going to argue with him. The Chair does suggest that the question before the committee is a simple one and expects hon. members to confine their remarks to the question before the committee.

Mr. Barnett: I certainly know the rules well enough to realize that the Chair is not going to argue with a member. I also know the rules well enough to realize that it is not normally expected a member will argue with the Chair, although from time to time we are permitted to make certain representations. However I will attempt to follow your suggestion to the best of my ability. If I do stray from the point, I know you will call it to my attention, Mr. Chairman.

[Mr. Barnett.]

As I said at the outset of this portion of my remarks, I was making reference to the argument advanced by the applicant company through its parliamentary agent, that the name London and Midland General Insurance Company, under which they are operating, is duplicated by quite a number of other companies operating in the same field of general insurance. I referred to a list of companies, and gave the source of that list. I was going to indicate that not only was there duplication of name but also duplication in the nature of the operations of these companies. I had made reference to the existence of the London and Edinburgh Insurance Company Limited. Then, there is the London and Lancashire Guarantee and Accident Company of Canada.

• (6:40 p.m.)

Now we come, somewhere at midpoint in this list of companies with the name "London" in their title, to the London and Midland General Insurance Company, Keith R. Kirkpatrick, manager, London, Ontario. Then we have the London and Scottish Assurance Corporation, Limited; the London Assurance, E. A. W. Paterson, chief agent, Toronto; the London-Canada Insurance Company, H. Douglas Coo, president and managing director, Toronto; the London Life Insurance Company, R. H. Reid, president and managing director, London, Ontario. So apparently there are two companies operating in London, Ontario with "London" in the name of the companies at the present time. At this point we move to a slightly different set of alphabetical letters and come to the Loyal Protective Life Insurance Company and the Lumbermen's Mutual Casualty Company, terminating the list of companies in which the name "London" is used by existing incorporations in Canada.

To that extent, Mr. Chairman, one cannot argue that the desire of this company for a more distinctive name is not well founded. In my view that consideration is more important than the temporary situation of embarrassment that was created prior to the going into bankruptcy of London and Midland Insurance Company in the United Kingdom—that is, unless the Avco group, the owners of the London and Midland General Insurance Company of Canada, are fearful that some of the other companies operating under the name "London" are likely to follow the sad course that led to the going into bankruptcy of the London and Midland Company that was operating in the United Kingdom.

It seems to me there is some legitimacy in the desire to change their name on the score of duplication. As I have said, there may be some validity in the suggestion that they should be clearly identified for what they are—a foreign owned company controlled by some sort of holding corporation in the United States.

I think these are considerations properly of concern to this committee, though I sometimes wonder when it comes to a question of changing a name. In recent times we have had quite a few bills before us to change names. Many of these were concerned only with adding a French language name to the official name of existing corporation. The proposal in this bill does both these things, and presumably we will not require another bill requesting authority for a name in Canada's other official language.

I remember the time when a lot of small loans companies were asking to change their names to those having a more salubrious sound. Beneficial Finance Corporation is one that comes to mind. I think it is clear that the company named in this bill has no motive of that kind in seeking to have its name changed.

As the hon. member for Timiskaming pointed out, the name itself is a very unintelligible grouping of words.

The Chairman: Order. I must advise the hon. member that the time allotted to him has expired.

Mr. Germa: Mr. Chairman, on first inspection this bill appears to be a simple one, unworthy of more than two or three minutes consideration. However, it is deceptive in that it does more than change the name of a company. It is in fact losing a company, so that in future we will not be able to identify this company by a known and a given name, that of London and Midland Insurance Company.

Each of us has a name, Mr. Chairman, and we have a name for a reason. If I did not have a name you would not know who was standing here. You might think that I was Sir Arnold Peters from Timiskaming. But you know in fact I am not, because I have another name. This is how we know one another. Therefore more importance should be placed on the names of people and companies, so that they can be clearly identified. This reminds me of a song that is quite high on the hit parade titled "People Have No Faces". It tells of a person who goes to a town where everyone has the same face and name, and he does not know one person from another.

I think we are sailing into dangerous waters by granting names to various companies without considering the confusion that this may cause among the general population. Recently I was informed by an insurance company with which I have a policy that the company had changed its name. I forget the company's original name, but the new one is Zurich Life Insurance Corporation. I do not know whether the new name appeared in a bill that went through the house, but as the Chairman knows I have not been here long and it could have been before my time.

At the time the company notified me that I was no longer insured with, I believe it was Continental, but was now a victim of the Zurich Life Insurance Company, they sent me all sorts of stamps and stickers to paste over the old name on my policy, so that I would not become confused when I had to refer to them. However, despite their attempt to try to straighten me out, there was some confusion. When you multiply my confusion by that of another 150,000 policyholders who had done business with Continental, it becomes easy to believe that a lot of these people are not sure whether Zurich is a legal entity, or even whether they are insured.

The same situation prevails in connection with this bill. A company, which had a rather formidable and identifiable name, has now turned to abbreviation, following what seems to be a trend in government circles. For example the Department of National Defence is abbreviated to D.N.D.

Mr. Mackasey: N.D.P.

Mr. Germa: Yes, everyone knows the N.D.P. is the socialist party. These initials are identified with the New Democratic party. We are quite proud of that, and if it makes it easier for hon. members, we do not mind being identified as the N.D.P. As long as you know who we are and what we stand for, then we are in business. Certainly there is no confusion in Canada about what the N.D.P. stands for.

• (6:50 p.m.)

Mr. Mackasey: What does it stand for?

Mr. Peters: We shall be pleased to answer that.

Mr. Germa: The hon. member for Verdun knows what the N.D.P. stands for, having at one time been addicted to our ideals. I do not know why he changed his outlook.

Mr. Mackasey: He grew up and matured.

Mr. Germa: I suspect the hon. member's reasons for changing, and one day I will tell him of my suspicions. I believe we are one of the foremost political parties in Canada.

An hon. Member: That's what you say.

Mr. Germa: I am saying that because it happens to be—

The Chairman: Order, please. I hope the hon. member will keep within the confines of this bill. I ask him again to pay attention to the narrow limits that are laid down in the bill, and to confine his remarks thereto.

Mr. Germa: Thank you, Mr. Chairman, I shall so confine my remarks.

I was talking about identifying various organizations. As the hon. member for Comox-Alberni said, because so many companies have the word "London" appended to their names—London and Scottish, London and Midland, and so on—this company wants to change its name to Avco General Insurance Company. I do not know whether it will be better off, since I am told the word "Avco" appears in the names of at least six Canadian companies, and that seven companies which include that word in their names operate in the United States.

Though this company seeks to remove the word "London" from its name I doubt whether the name change will accomplish anything. Never having dealt with them, I am not in a position to say. I was also wondering about the significance of remarks by the bill's sponsor, that 50,000 company shareholders live in Canada. That has nothing to do with the company's name, but I wonder if he was trying to say that the change of name will make the company Canadian owned. I hope that was not the intention of his remarks, because the Senate committee report says clearly that this company is a subsidiary of a United States parent which has "Avco" in its name.

We should scrutinize this bill more carefully than some members seem to have done. The Senate committee says the company is changing its name to protect its reputation, and to get away from a similar name that has been associated with a company that went bankrupt. Whether that is the real reason for the change we cannot say. The reasons why entities and persons in society sometimes change their names are not always clear. When a person wants to change his name, either to escape from the law or for some other reason, he goes before the courts and they decide whether the change can be made. The ordinary person bears his father name. My name is that of my father.

An hon. Member: What is it?

Mr. Germa: It is on the list of members, if the hon. member cares to look at it. I am the member for Sudbury. You see, already there is an identification problem: He did not know who I was. My name is not written on my forehead the way an insurance company's name is written on its door. This insurance company seems to want to escape from some stigma associated with a name; yet I doubt if the change will accomplish very much.

Mr. Peters: Can the sponsor of the bill tell us why this company, formerly known as La Progressive Compagnie d'Assurances du Canada or, Progressive Insurance Company of Canada, changed its name to London and Midland General Insurance Company. It was incorporated under its original name in 1947, and in 1957 it adopted the second name. They change their name about every ten years —they are one year late this time, but maybe that is our fault and not theirs. Why did they change their name the first time?

The Chairman: Shall clause 1 carry?

Clause agreed to.

On clause 2—Coming into force.

Mr. Peters: Why shall this act come into force on the ninetieth day following the day on which this act is assented to, Mr. Chairman? Could the sponsor of the bill answer that? I do not see why these changes are to be made. We have allowed the company to transfer debts and so on. Why is it necessary to have this 90-day delay?

Mr. Mackasey: It has to do with the printing of the policies.

The Chairman: Shall clause 2 carry?

Mr. Peters: Evidently the sponsor of the bill will not explain. I just point out that here we have run into one of the difficulties we often encounter in this type of legislation.

Clause agreed to.

Preamble agreed to.

Title agreed to.

The Chairman: Shall I report the bill?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Mr. Badanai reports that committee of the whole has considered a certain bill and have directed him to report it, with amendment to the title of the French version. When shall the report be received?

Some hon. Members: Now.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Mr. Lind, seconded by Mr. Neveu, moves that the amendment to the title of the French version of Bill S-25 be now concurred in. Is it the pleasure of the house to adopt the said motion.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Peters: On division.

Bill reported.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: When shall the said bill be read a third time?

Some hon. Members: Now.

Mr. Peters: Next sitting of the house.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: At the next sitting of the house.

Mr. Barnett: Seven o'clock.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hour set aside for the consideration of private members business having expired, the house will now resume the business interrupted at six o'clock.

SUPPLY

The house in committee of supply, Mr. Batten in the chair.

The Chairman: It being seven o'clock I do now leave the chair.

At seven o'clock the committee took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The committee resumed at 8 p.m.

DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRY

25c. Amount to be credited to the area development account established by subsection 1 of section 5 of the Area Development Incentives Act and to authorise, notwithstanding section 39 of the Financial Administration Act, an increase to $275,000,000 in the total amount of commitments in the current and subsequent fiscal years for development grants under the said act, $11,000,000.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall item 25c carry?

Mr. Saltsman: I thought the item before us, 25c, would provide an appropriate occasion for considering some of the problems which have arisen in connection with the designated area program. What the program really underlines is the inadequacy of the entire Department of Industry and the failure of that department to live up to the high hopes which were held for it.

When I say this, I also want to indicate that I have been much impressed by the staff of the department. In many ways the department has some of the best personnel of any government department. I have on many occasions had the opportunity of consulting them on various questions which have arisen in connection with our local industries and on all those occasions I have found them only too anxious to be of help—and they have been helpful—and to do their best to assist.

The failures as I see them do not stem from any unwillingness on the part of the staff to be helpful but from the fact that frequently, I suspect, they are hamstrung by government policies originating outside the department, including tariff policies designed to protect certain of our large industries. For instance, an attempt to bring in certain kinds of raw or semi-finished material for additional processing in Canada ran into a wall. In these circumstances it is difficult for small companies to get off the ground, as it were. In one case we had an opportunity to assist a small company which needed raw material from the United States. The companies which were able to make this material in Canada did not wish to do so, certainly not in the quantities desired. Yet they behaved like dogs in the manger and stopped the material coming in by using the argument that some day they might choose to make this material, and therefore they needed protection.

The department has been hesitant and cautious in its operations. Too much so, in my opinion. The program began with one set of criteria and then another was introduced. Neither has proved adequate. It seems to me the department is confused about its objectives. I would have thought the Department of Industry would have been primarily interested in the growth of secondary manufacturing in Canada. Unfortunately this has not apparently been the case, despite the fact that our growth in this area has certainly not been adequate in terms of our resources or potential. We have fallen behind other countries in our productivity, until at the present time I believe we are in thirteenth or fourteenth place on the list of industrialized nations as far as per capita productivity growth is concerned. Our industrial efficiency has, I feel, been sacrificed for the sake of limiting unemployment in some areas. No one argues against the great need to limit unemployment whenever possible. It is deplorable, and it must be lessened wherever it exists. The question, however, is: Can one correct this situation through a program such as the designated area program? I think the answer must be, no.

Consider the areas which have the highest levels of unemployment, areas which do not have much potential for growth. We can see that the designated area program has not been of great assistance to them. It seems the program has been most successful in introducing industry into areas close to industrial centres. One has the feeling that industries have simply been persuaded by bonuses into locating in areas where they might well have gone anyway.

One of the central problems with which the department should be dealing is the slow rate of increase in productivity. The record in Canada is not good. One recent study indicated that in Canada there was probably 29 per cent more capital invested per worker in secondary manufacturing industry than in the United States, yet despite this our productivity was some 30 per cent lower than productivity south of the border.

I do not think the blame for this can be attributed to labour. I think the responsibility for productivity is a responsibility of management. Even the responsibility of management is limited to a certain extent by the fact that in this country we have an unfortunate, dinky toy industrial structure, modelled on that of the United States, a structure which is inefficient by American standards because of the small size of the domestic market. Yet despite this limitation it contains almost as many competing firms as does the vastly larger United States market.

There is a need for rationalization of our industries. People in the department are aware of the problem; it is not news to them. They have written on the subject and made speeches on it. They have pointed out the problems in our furniture industry. I understand a study is taking place at present, but I can find nothing that has been done in the rationalization program.

The minister may reply that a type of rationalization has taken place under the Canada-United States auto agreement. I would agree with him that it is a type of rationalization, but I hope it is the last of this type of rationalization that we will see. Because of the long runs that are necessary, almost continental runs, because of the wide range of lines and choices in automobiles required by the public, when the agreement was made we may not have been in a discretionary position regarding rationalization of the automobile industry; but had we taken action years ago in anticipation of the developing problem, something might have been done. We might have done what European countries did. They developed specialities. They developed particular automobiles suitable for their climate. They exported those to other nations, and in return imported models not available from their own production. In that way we could have established a rational automobile industry. However, that possibility is no longer open to us.

While many of us have been forced to give reluctant approval to the kind of rationalization that took place under the Canada—United States auto agreement, we feel quite strongly that this kind of approach should be dropped. It is sometimes argued that continental integration brings great benefits to Canada. Some of the benefits can be demonstrated; others cannot.

I would like to deal with farm machinery, which for a long time has been an integrated industry. There has been free trade in farm equipment between Canada and the United States, yet it is hard to see that major benefits have resulted from this type of North American integration. A report was prepared for the Massey-Ferguson Company by Hedland and Menzies, the purpose of which was to demonstrate why Massey-Ferguson could not pay parity wages with the United States. Had I been in a position to make a decision on that report I think I would have hidden it, because its conclusions are frightening.

The argument used to show why Massey-Ferguson cannot have parity wages in Canada is that the company has built its labour intensive factories in Canada and its automated factories in the United States, and if the wage rates were the same it would have to close down its factories in Canada. This may or may not be the case; I am not in a position to judge, but the implication of this must surely shock every Canadian, to think that, after the opportunities for continental integration had been worked out, what the company was doing was placing in its factories in the United States rather than in its factories in Canada, the advantages and benefits to be gained from automation.

The only conclusion that can be drawn from that report is that unless we in Canada are prepared to operate on a permanently lower wage scale there will be few factories in this country. If our goal is to be that Canadians must continue to be placid hewers of wood and drawers of water, then continental integration will permanently condemn Canada to a lower standard of living.

The great need in this country is to find a more rational way of organizing our production. Professor Watkins' task force report, tabled recently, pointed out the fundamental problem of Canadian industry as being too many plants producing too many goods in too small a volume. Others pointed this out previously, but when the question of rationalization is raised everyone begins to picture deserted towns and factories, with this plant shut down and that plant shut down. I suggest that this does not have to be one of the end results of rationalization.

We need more specialization in our plants. Instead of our plants trying to duplicate each other's efforts, trying to make a complete range of products, they could effect economies by specializing in a few items. If this were done, all the plants now in existence could continue to operate. A study made comparing plant sizes in Canada with plant sizes in the United States showed that in many cases Canada had better and larger sized plants than the United States, but in most instances the Canadian plant was producing an infinitely greater range of products than its counterpart across the border.

As I say, the department is aware of this problem. The minister's officials know about it. What are they doing about it, and why are they not proceeding faster with the rationalization program? I would like to believe that the minister and his officials wish to do something about the problem, but are under certain constraints. In personal discussions I have had with the minister he has expressed his concern. He has demonstrated his knowledge and awareness of the problem. In his gentle way he has said to me, "Well, it isn't easy, and it's going to take a long time." We on this side are impatient. We know it is not easy but we are not prepared to accept that it is going to take a long time. I think the time can be shortened if there is sufficient political courage to act.

I hope that before too long some concrete proposals will emanate from the department to solve the lack of specialization and the high costs of our secondary industry. It is not good enough, as some economists suggest, to take away tariff protection from our industries and let them compete internationally. I am sure some of our industries would survive, but given the present structure of Canadian industry as a whole many of them would go down, and go down rapidly. Parent companies in the United States would say, "There is no point in our having a plant in Canada any more. We will simply ship our over production from the United States to Canada." A program other than simple tariff removal has to be developed. Tariff removal could be very useful once the rationalization program is implemented.

Perhaps there should be consultation with the various industries involved. They should be called together. The seriousness of the problem to Canada should be pointed out to them, and they should be asked to suggest some solution. They should be asked to find a way of co-operating with the federal government in achieving what in the long run would be a common objective for themselves and the nation.

• (8:20 p.m.)

One of the industries under consideration by the department was the furniture industry. About a year ago I read an article which expressed some concern about this industry. I do not remember the exact figures, but something in the neighbourhood of over 1,000 small furniture manufacturing industries are located in small towns, and in many cases they are the only sources of employment. What can be done about a situation of this kind? I think the Department of Industry could act as a marketing board for various small manufacturing firms. This would prevent many of them from duplicating sales efforts. Perhaps the department could act in the same way as do the automobile parts suppliers. It could seek out orders and then inform the various small companies of the orders, so that they in turn could place their bids. This would allow the small companies to specialize, rather than produce a wide range of products at tremendous expense because of tooling costs. I think the Department of Industry should give serious consideration to this idea.

Perhaps the efforts of the Canada Development Corporation could be directed toward rationalization of industry, or perhaps that corporation and the Department of Industry could work together in this regard. These are some of the areas I hope the minister and his department will explore. Much of the work of this department seems to be isolated from the work done by other government agencies, provincial departments and their planning agencies. Agencies in the maritimes make recommendations which are negated or frustrated by proposals of the Department of Industry. One of these is the designated area program.

The entire maritime area, with the exception of the main cities of Halifax and Saint John, have been designated. Apparently these two cities are the only places in the maritimes where industrial growth is possible. If the objective of the department is to establish a small industry in every small town, perhaps it is carrying out its function. But if its objective is to foster growth and make sure that potential is realized, then it must change its attitude toward the designated area program. This program will not work out in the long run because various industries grow and then decline.

An example of this type of difficulty can be found in the electronics industry in Nova Scotia. The government of that province has had to bail that industry out of difficulty. As long as we continue to have one or two small industries in our small towns we are not being fair to them. I suggest that we are doing nothing but fooling them. At one time during the course of the debate in respect of the Department of Industry my remarks were not as mild as they are tonight. I referred to the designated area program as a cruel hoax. In this regard we are fooling the people and giving them a false sense of security. Because an industry has been established in a small community, the people look forward to employment and feel there may be a future for their children. Technological advances create rapid growth and rapid decline in industry. Very often the employment that exists today will disappear in the future.

For humanitarian and social reasons I should not like to see the development of a program which would take people away from their homes, and the associations which are important to them. Even if it can be demonstrated that this is the most efficient way of doing things, there must be some balance between efficiency and humanitarianism. There has to be some balance between social plans and industrial efficiency. One of the areas we should examine, to obtain the maximum benefit from both, is the concept of growth centers. I have in mind specific areas in all parts of Canada which could absorb the surplus working population, and the young people who are moving from the farms and small towns where growth is negligible. In this way employment opportunities could be provided for these people.

It is possible in a city such as Halifax to have a variety of industries. There is stability in this situation, because as one industry declines another may grow; yet the employment opportunities remain about the same. The people who might be moved into Halifax could be moved from other parts of the province and would not be far from their homes or associations. They would be much happier under these circumstances than if they were moved from that province to Vancouver, for instance. Anyone who knows the maritime people is aware of how deep their roots are and how important to them are their associations. With growth centres and long range employment prospects we would have employment opportunities and an improved standard of living.

In some ways the designated area program gives us the worst of two worlds. In a private enterprise system people are supposed to know the best places to locate, because of long range employment prospects. The argument in that regard is being offset by the designated area program because it interferes with that type of planning. These areas do not get the benefits of industrial organization or planning on the basis of growth potential. As a result of this program we see a distortion of industrial planning.

Although this program may have been conceived with the best intentions it simply is not adequate in this country, which is rapidly becoming industrialized and needs greater growth and productivity than now seems to be taking place. It seems to me that the department has been saddled with impossible government decisions. It seems as though the cabinet does not know this department exists or what it is trying to accomplish, and perversely tries to destroy whatever good work it may be doing.

We had an example of this recently when the Minister of Finance brought in a budget that was intentionally designed, in our opinion, to create unemployment. When you have rising unemployment, such a policy aggravates the situation. If the designated area program is supposed to have been created for the relief of unemployment or to assist in solving the unemployment problem, why is the Minister of Finance trying to create unemployment? These two approaches are self-cancelling, and I am sure frustrating.

The manpower program is not adequate to meet our needs. We have a limited manpower program, especially in the mobility sector, which pays small sums of money to those who wish to move out of certain areas. The money paid is not sufficient to induce people to leave their homes, because when an area starts to decline there is a rapid decline in all aspects of its economy; there is a loss of market for things like housing and the other assets that are built up over the years by the ordinary workingman.

If we are to have a proper mobility program we must be willing to pay adequate sums of money to those who have to be moved. It is not enough to pay a man $500 or $1,000 to leave his home, especially if his home cannot be sold because of a declining market. You have to ensure that he suffers no loss.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. gentleman but the time alloted to him has terminated. The hon. member for Timmins.

Mr. Martin (Timmins): Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Clancy: Sit down.

Mr. Martin (Timmins): I feel very badly, Mr. Chairman, because the first time I rise to take part in this debate somebody invites me to sit down. We have just listened to a very interesting and worth-while speech by the hon. member for Waterloo South who represents in the house a very highly industrialized riding. It is only natural that the remarks I make on this subject will be quite different from those made by the hon. member for Waterloo South, because I represent a very different type of constituency. My area does not have the problem of too much industrialization and all the other complex problems the hon. member brought forward with regard to the interplay between the United States and Canada—subsidiary companies, and so on and so forth. The area I represent would welcome a few of the problems outlined by the hon. member for Waterloo South. If they are very difficult problems to cope with, at least they would be very different from those with which we have always had to cope. As I think most hon. members know, my constituency is what is known in Canada as elephant country; it is an area of vast resources. We have only scratched the surface of some of these resources in the last 50 years. Anybody who knows this country realizes that its potential has scarcely been tapped.

The problems that have developed over the very short history of the north country are not those of overindustrialization but of no industrialization. The problems in this part of the country have been, ever since the first settlement in the area, like those of the milk cow; the produce has been taken away from the area, and that is the last its people have seen of it. It is only in recent years that governments both provincial and federal have seemed to take any cognizance of these facts, and two attempts have been made under the federal program to bring this area within those regions of Canada which need federal attention and assistance.

Unfortunately, as was pointed out so well by the hon. member for Waterloo South, while these programs have made great headlines in the newspapers, as far as the region I represent is concerned they have had very little, if any, effect. In fact under the first designated area program not one industry was induced to open up a business in my constituency. Then the government realized that perhaps the plan was not as effective as it might be and some changes were made. I am sure the minister would like the program to be effective. I do not think it is natural that any minister responsible for a program that received as much attention, headlines and whoop-de-doo as this one, would want it to be a complete failure. I think the minister would very much like this program to be successful and really accomplish something. But unfortunately, even under the changed terms of the program we have yet to see very much effect in the region I represent. I think the reason is quite simple. I do not believe the government has really looked into this area and considered the problems that it has. I do not think the government has made any really serious effort to try to cope with the problems of the area. If the government were really interested in its program being successful and carried out any kind of study of the situation, it would find that the first place at which to start dealing with the problems is the transportation field. Many difficulties have been caused by the transportation policy of this country in the last 100 years.

It is quite possible that this policy had some sense at the time it was first introduced—and I am referring specifically to the policy which subsidizes the transportation of raw materials. We dip into the pocket of the taxpayer in order to subsidize the transportation of raw materials from outlying areas to built up areas or foreign markets in the United States, Europe, Asia or somewhere else in the world. Then we try to compensate for this by again dipping into the pocket of the taxpayer, and more particularly into the pocket of the consumers of the north, in order to pay artificially high rates for bringing back finished products.

This has been the history of the north country and other resource areas of Canada. We should appreciate the problem inherent in this situation, because for many years the United States was a country of tremendous raw materials and natural resources; but most of these resources have either been depleted or are within a few years of being totally depleted. Only in the northern part of this hemisphere and the northern part of our country do we have left vast amounts of natural resources. More and more the hungry maw of the manufacturing and processing industries of the United States and the whole North American continent will be looking with covetous eyes at the resources left on this continent. As I said before, these resources are not in the southern part of this country, but they are in the north.

Even in southern Canada, let alone in the rest of this continent, we have built up tremendous problems; problems of pollution, overcrowding, housing and land development. For example in eastern Canada we are even taking away some of the few fruit growing areas that we have left. They are bulldozing the fruit trees out and putting in factories to add to the congestion, the pollution problems, the overcrowding and the housing problems. We have two things in abundance in the great north country: natural resources—raw materials—and all kinds of space. But many years ago we got into the habit of thinking the economical thing to do is to dig out these resources in the north, reach into our pockets to subsidize the raw materials, take them down south to the factories where the population is, and then dig into our pockets to try to find some way to assist in housing, to clean up pollution, or to do this, that and the other thing.

I wonder if we have ever really looked at the over-all situation and stopped to figure out just what is costly and what is economical. If we do this sensibly, we will find that the so-called programs of assistance for the undeveloped areas, as the hon. member for Waterloo South pointed out, have worked reasonably effectively in areas close to industrial regions. This is the only place where we have seen any really effective result from these programs put out by the federal government.

But it is time we took a closer look at the over-all situation. Let us take a look at the region I represent. We produce gold, copper, zinc, silver, asbestos, iron: You name it, it is there. But what do we do? We ship the copper to the province of Quebec, to Sweden or to Japan. We ship zinc to the United States. We ship silver God knows where. We ship asbestos to the United States over railways which we built and subsidized with the taxpayers' money to provide jobs for people in other countries to process our raw material. Yet we have in the north country the problem of underdevelopment.

The people of the north country are sick and tired, when this problem is brought to the federal attention, of hearing from officials that this is under provincial jurisdiction, and, in turn, of hearing from provincial authorities that there is nothing they can do about it, that this is under federal jurisdiction. They are sick and tired of this game of ping-pong which has been going on for so long. I attended meetings last year where it was suggested, and I know there is a strong feeling that it is time the north country broke away from the rest of Canada. This feeling does not go by provinces, but runs right across northern Manitoba, northern Ontario and northern Quebec, because the people in northern Quebec feel they have far more in common with northern Ontario than they have with Quebec city, and the people of northern Ontario say they have far more in common with the people in Noranda, Rouyn, and Val d'Or than they have with the city of Toronto. The same thing occurs right across the northern resource area. The reason for the great difficulties we are experiencing at this time in holding our country together is this lack of realization and lack of understanding of the problem. This is why our country is in danger of flying apart at the seams. I think it is high time this government, or any government, realized this.

Mr. Korchinski: This sounds like the C.C.F. in the years from 1934 to 1944.

Mr. Martin (Timmins): In 1934 to 1944 they saved one province. Perhaps we now have a chance of saving the country.

This is a problem which I would like to draw to the attention of the minister. If he can show me where the present designated area program or the one preceding it has established one industry in this area, I would like to know about it. I have attended meetings at which officials of the department have explained the program and the benefits to be derived from it. It looked very good and the people attending the meetings were very enthusiastic. However, when they looked a little deeper into it they realized it would not work. This program was completely ineffective in areas in which they hoped to develop industries. I think it would be far better if the government devoted its energy, its brains and its time to linking secondary industries to the resources of the north.

Two or three years ago all of us in Canada were very impressed and very pleased by the tremendous discoveries by the Texas Gulf Sulphur Company ten miles north of Timmins which brought in possibly the biggest ore deposit in the world of zinc, copper and silver. By the time this company is fully developed it will be the biggest silver mine in the world, it will certainly be the biggest zinc mine in the world, and if the copper content comes up to expectation it will be one of the biggest copper mines in the world. From the information which I could gather there is a sufficient supply there for the next 75 to 100 years. However, a year after the mine went into production, processing 10,000 tons a day all we saw were trainloads of zinc concentrate being taken south and trainloads of copper concentrate heading for Noranda.

Gold mines were closing down, and I will have some more to say on this when we reach the estimates of the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources. Gold mines are closing down again, as a result of the policy pursued by this government, and the future of this tremendous area is as uncertain now as it was ten years ago. As I said, if the energy, brains and resources of this government were directed toward a sensible policy with regard to the smelting, processing and manufacturing of the ores that are right there, the jobs would be where the ore is. Surely with all the waste contained in the concentrates, it is far more sensible and economical to ship the finished product, particularly in view of the transportation problem in this country of large areas. Surely it would be much more economical to ship only the finished product than it is to ship the concentrates, with their 40 to 70 per cent waste which has to be transported and eventually thrown away after being processed at some future time, and in some other country.

I can recall being told many years ago about the big asbestos mine 15 or 20 miles from where I was born, in the constituency of the hon. member for Compton-Frontenac, one of the biggest asbestos mines in the world for the last 90 to 100 years. Even at its peak production Thetford mine at Black Lake employed only some 1,500 or 1,600 men. The processing and manufacture of that product provided 20,000 to 28,000 jobs.

This is what the government should look at and try to correct. This is what we should be doing if we want to build up this country. This is what we should be doing if we want to hold this country together and not make people so frustrated they will expend their energies in trying to break loose to go out on their own because they cannot get people to understand their problems, or what should be done about them. This is the message I should like to bring to the minister tonight. I feel this government should look at the problem in this light, to see if something cannot be done this year.

Mr. Barnett: As I was listening to the hon. member for Timmins talk about the area he represents, I was looking at this map, which has some green areas on it. You have a lot of little Irelands in Canada. These are the designated areas under the area development program. Just by way of an aside, I heard the hon. member for Timmins talking about the north. I feel this is quite a relative term in Canada, because the area to which he refers is actually south of the area I represent in Canada, and that is considered to be in southern British Columbia. This area has some similarity to the area surrounding Timmins, to the extent that it is basically referred to as a resource area. On more than one occasion in this house I have listened to members representing resource areas discuss the problems of the people they represent, whether it be a gold mining area in northern Ontario or a coal mining area in Cape Breton.

On these occasions, I have had some inward tremors concerning the future of the area I represent, which is generally regarded as a fairly productive area now and one of the higher wage districts in Canada. Unemployment levels have been relatively low. I am as aware as the hon. member for Timmins of what is happening to some of the resources that lie within the area I represent. When he talks about trainloads of concentrates moving out from the new Texas Gulf sulphur mine in the Timmins area, I immediately think of the shiploads of iron and copper concentrates that are moving out of the area I represent. It would appear, on the surface at least, that certain interests are being allowed to high-grade the most easily accessible sources of these minerals. The concentrates containing very little Canadian labour content, are shipped overseas to another part of the world.

Like many Canadians, I find myself asking whether this procedure is in the long range interests of this country. What do we get out of this? Somebody gets a few dollars. I have in my constituency what I have been told is the second largest underground mine in British Columbia, next only to the famous Sullivan mine in the constituency represented by the hon. member for Kootenay East. I have no way of knowing what this mine is providing for its owners, because I understand it is owned by a private United States corporation which is under no requirement to make public its financial position. All of the product from this mine, after some preliminary processing, goes by conveyor belt directly into the hold of a ship. There are probably a couple of hundred men employed in this operation.

These are the kinds of questions we find ourselves asking. It is true that what is often referred to as the major resource in my area is called a renewable resource, because we grow some rather large quantities of trees in the area. As I pointed out in a question to the minister of forestry, we have in my constituency one of the major companies in this field in the whole of Canada, one which in its own right is rapidly becoming something of an international corporation. The chief forester of this corporation has been suggesting that under present methods of using forest products we are going to experience a shortfall in available supplies to meet expected market demands. This raises the whole question of whether the present methods for perpetuating, managing and developing the future of this resource industry are adequate.

Now, Mr. Chairman, there is not one of these little green Irelands, as somebody called them, on this map within the area I represent. There is one which covers the coal mining area in the southeastern corner of British Columbia and the adjacent area of Alberta. The only other one is in the famous Okanagan valley. I have never had the opportunity of really looking into the reason this area is a designated area. I have travelled through the area on a number of occasions and a good many of the communities appear to be rather prosperous. Some facetious questions have been asked in British Columbia concerning why the only depressed area in British Columbia should be the one represented in the legislature by the premier of that province.

However, it has been suggested to me seriously that the only reason this particular area of British Columbia qualified was the rather artificial definition for these areas as contained in the act. The criterion flows from the exceptional nature of the degree of unemployment in the area. It has been suggested that this calculation was arrived at because the figures for the unemployed included a large number of people who are only seasonal workers in the fruit industry, and who have no serious intention or desire of being permanently in the labour force. I do not know whether the minister would care to reply to these allegations, but certainly I have heard them made on a number of occasions. This does lead one to wonder whether or not the two acts to which the estimate before us is related, the Area Incentive Development Act and the Department of Industry Act, are as they should be.

The Department of Industry bill was assented to and became law on July 22, 1963. The other act was assented to on June 30, 1965. So that the area of operation under which this particular vote comes is one that has been in existence long enough for us to begin seriously to attempt to assess whether or not the objectives outlined by the government in introducing the bill to parliament are justifiable, and whether the act is fulfilling the purposes stated for it.

I am glad the minister who is piloting this estimate through the committee is here tonight wearing, as I suggested this afternoon, his other hat from the one he was wearing as the Minister of Defence Production. The minister will recall that I raised certain questions arising out of communications I received about there being established in part of my constituency a designated area, and also expressing concern over the obvious vulnerability of the economy to any change in the scale of operations, or possible closure of a major defence production installation. The minister gave me a very brief answer this afternoon on this matter, and I did not press him further because I felt that the questions that needed to be answered in some detail should more properly come within his responsibility as Minister of Industry.

This was the first inquiry with which I had had any first-hand experience. I have always had the feeling that any piece of legislation passed by this house could be assessed only in what I might describe as a microcosm, to see how it is actually working out and affecting the people involved in a particular set of circumstances. I have always attempted to assess the value of any particular piece of legislation or any operation of the federal government in those terms, as and when I had suitable opportunity to do so.

It is in this context that I make no apology for focusing the attention of the minister on a situation of which I have some first-hand knowledge. It was only by assessing that situation that I could best arrive at some conclusions of a very general nature, as to the validity of the act as it exists in its current form, as well as the degree of success of the operations of the Department of Industry, and in particular the area development program.

One of the matters I have been examining as a result of the inquiry I have received, in which I was assisted by the very fine co-operation given by the area development agency, is the manner in which the operation is conducted under the act. I should like to draw the attention of the minister to the terms of the sections that are comprised in parts II and III of the Department of Industry Act. As I read Part II, which has to do with the setting up of the area development agency, its terms of operation would appear to be very well restricted to those areas which are, or which are requesting to be, designated. In part III, which is headed "General", section 14 states:

> The minister, in exercising his powers and carrying out his duties and functions under this act
> (a) shall, where appropriate, make use of the services and facilities of other departments, branches or agencies of the government of Canada;—

Paragraph (b) provides for entering into agreements with agencies of the provincial governments; and paragraph (c) states that the minister—> —may consult with, and organize conferences of, representatives of industry and labour, provincial and municipal authorities and other interested persons.

One of the questions on which I should like some clarification is whether or not in actual practice the area development agency and its officers are carrying out those functions of the minister that are described under part III of the act. That would appear to be the claim that was made by the regional co-ordinating officer for British Columbia when he indicated that he was endeavouring to work in close co-operation with the provincial department of industry and the minister of industrial development, trade and commerce of the province. He also indicated that he would be quite willing to discuss with the local interested parties and to advise on a proposal to establish a regional industrial development ocmmission, which was one of the proposals made in the brief to which I referred this afternoon when we were discussing the estimates of the Department of Defence Production. I did not wish to pursue this matter earlier in any depth because I thought it was more properly one outside the activities of Defence production and should be raised here.

There is another question I should like to ask the minister. In the correspondence I had with the local agencies I drew their attention to efforts that were being made in another direction to establish in this same area some sort of body under the ARDA program. I indicated that I had discussed this matter with the minister of agriculture of the province of British Columbia, who I understand is head of the ARDA agency for that province.

I also discussed this matter with the federal Minister of Fisheries in the hope that there might be a joint program under ARDA, and the legislation of the Department of Fisheries —because the matter to which I am referring related in part to some salmon spawning streams—which would result in the development, expansion and stabilization of the economic base of this community, both in the field of agriculture and in the perpetuation of the fishery. This would be important not only from the point of view of the commercial fishermen, but also from that of the local tourist activity of salt water sports fishing.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, co-operation is involved here under this particular area development program of the minister. I notice that the minister who is responsible for the application of the ARDA program is sitting not far from the Minister of Industry at the moment, so perhaps this is a good opportunity to ask questions that arise from the act.

Section 14 reads:

The minister—

That is the Minister of Industry.

—in exercising his powers and carrying out his duties and functions under this act

(a) shall, where appropriate, make use of the services and facilities of other departments, branches or agencies of the government of Canada;—

I assume that this includes the ARDA program and the agencies that operate under his colleague the Minister of Forestry and Rural Development.

• (9:10 p.m.)

It has been indicated to me that as matters stand in the area that I have been discussing, which I refer to as the Comox valley, at the present moment the incidence of unemployment is sufficient for there to be no question of the area being designated under the terms of the Area Development Incentives Act. On the other hand, as I said to the Minister of Defence Production this afternoon, this is the major segment of the local economy at the present time, and it has developed in the post-war period as a result of the retransfer of the Comox base, which was originally built as a world war II operating base, from the Department of Transport to the Department of National Defence. Can the Minister of Industry tell me what, in addition to the assistance that has been referred to by the original co-ordinating officer for British Columbia, he, in co-operation with the ARDA minister, as I will call him, and the Minister of Fisheries will do to ensure a stable economic future for this area, which I am convinced has real potential.

I tie these remarks in with the broader picture that was dealt with in more detail than I shall go into. I am speaking about the potential future of a resource area and the desirability of having people enter the area, either as workmen or as people setting up commercial enterprises or service industries, and of having the area developed for their benefit. The high grade minerals ought not to be taken out of it, so to speak, and the people who go in there should not be left high and dry, with the area reverting to some sort of barren wilderness at some point in the future.

In order to gain some appreciation of the operation of the departments concerned I have pinpointed the areas of operation of at least four operating agencies or departments of the federal government. If the Department of Industry Act means anything, somewhere in it should be the answers to the questions I have asked the minister. Perhaps he might give an answer, a joint answer, after consulting several of his colleagues who are responsible for the other departments concerned.

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, I am interested in the area development program and I appreciate the concessions which allowed my part of northern Ontario to be designated. I am afraid I listened to our own propaganda and believed that when our area became designated the problems of northern Ontario would be solved. I am sorry to say that that is not necessarily true.

The designated areas program has a number of weaknesses, one of them being that it asks for provincial government co-operation. I am always unhappy when the federal government passes legislation that calls for the co-operation of provincial governments, since the legislation can only be as good as the lowest common denominator applicable to it permits it to be. Ontario I am afraid is not interested in development, and in this program the province of Ontario represents the lowest common denominator.

Not long ago we had an election in Ontario and as a result some interesting changes took place in northern Ontario. In particular, I wish to refer to the ridings of Timiskaming and Timmins. In both ridings the election was contested by an N.D.P. candidate and in each campaign the central issue was the need for additional development in northern Ontario and the lack of interest being shown in that development by the province. The Ontario cabinet minister who represented Cochrane South, which included Timmins and Cochrane, is without doubt a most capable administrator; we shall hear more of him when the greater Ottawa metropolitan area is finally created. The Ontario cabinet minister in question did much for his area; in a Conservative way he did as much as he could. He was instrumental in having a hospital built, though there was some namby-pamby with that. It has not opened yet, because they have had difficulty getting staff. Also, he brought a college to the area, not because it was the best area for the college but because he could get the college to the area.

The Ontario cabinet minister fought his election, saying he had done as much as could be expected for his area. Shortly after that election I met the Speaker of the Ontario legislature overseas and I said, "What happened in northern Ontario?" He said, "Well, every time that cabinet minister asked us for something, we gave it to him; he got his new school and hospital—he got whatever he asked for."

I say, Mr. Chairman, that he did not bring to the area what the people of northern Ontario really needed, development. The people in the designated areas want jobs, but there is no potential for the employment of educated men in northern Ontario. Basic industry does not need educated men, except in a limited way; it wants a strong back and a weak mind. Our people in northern Ontario are being well educated; our educational system is as good as southern Ontario's—however good that may be.

An hon. Member: That isn't much.

Mr. Peters: That may not be much, I grant you, but in northern Ontario we are now as well educated as people are anywhere else. The meaning of this is that after a child has been educated, he must leave his area to get a job. Our general public has cottoned to this and they are not interested in quitting the area. They want jobs to be created in the area so that their children will have a future. That is what the area development program is about. Bearing that in mind, the area development program has been a failure, because the provincial government has not made it work.

In northern Ontario, where there are designated areas, the Ontario government has gone to the extent of taking over the original associations which they paid for and controlled, and that were set up by the municipalities. In my area there is the North Eastern Development Association, and in the Kenora area there is the North Western Development Association, both of which received contributions from municipalities making up their membership. It was said that these associations did not have enough money for what they were trying to do. They lacked any solid organization and they contained so many components that should a sentence be devoted to each component in a brief, the document would be unwieldy and almost impossible to understand.

That may have been true of our development associations, but under the Ontario government they are entirely useless and serve no function toward developing northern Ontario. Oh, sure, when it is election time candidates speak about this and that. They say, "The world is fine, so why rock the boat." Since these associations are now under the provincial government we should not rock the boat, especially since there are vested interests involved. That is the extent of the matter.

I, like the hon. member for Waterloo South, am impressed by the area development people. It is possible to be more impressed with them, but I agree that the people servicing the area development program are competent, top calibre people. Once the potential of an area had been established, further studies should be made to decide to what extent the nation is capable of transferring industries to take advantage of the opportunities there—the type of carrot, or inducement necessary to coax along the rabbit. The department would then be in a position to make some contribution to industrial development, especially in the field of secondary industry. But I think this is impossible when we are stupid enough to negotiate with provincial governments and say that the administration of the program is to be in provincial hands.

The provincial government in Ontario is Toronto—only Toronto. They are so stupid in government in Toronto that if they cannot see a thing from the legislative buildings it does not exist. I have heard people on the fringes of Scarborough say that they, too, are living in an outpost. If we are ever to benefit the areas of greatest need under this program it will be necessary to drop our partnership with the provincial governments and go it alone, providing not only money and know-how but leadership.

If the Minister of Industry is really concerned about the area development program he will have to look at projects from the national point of view, and to hell with the provincial governments. I do not believe provincial governments are a sacred cow, and I do not believe all this junk about having a constitution. Anyone in his right mind knows that we have a British North America Act, which is not a constitution, and that this act can be amended when you are willing to give people what they want, as has been done before on a number of occasions. It is said the provincial governments will not go along with suggestions for change. I have heard people connected with the area development program say they have not been able to arrange meetings with their counterparts in the provincial governments. No wonder we cannot get the program off the ground when we are unable to talk with the people who are supposed to be our partners.

I should like to see more leadership. If necessary, the minister should begin by taking action in connection with only one or two projects. I would be willing to have those projects carried out in an area other than my own—Renfrew, for instance, or any other area where they have some hope of success. They should be carried through by the federal government, and I can tell hon. members that the people of Ontario are not going to raise objections on the ground of provincial rights; they will be happy to accept such programs in the absence of authority from the provincial government. It seems to me that this constitutional argument is a week excuse. The provinces are not really involved, in many cases, and should not be involved.

We hear a great deal of talk about separatism in Quebec.

An hon. Member: What do you have against it?

Mr. Peters: We have nothing against separatism. I am sure that the hon. member for Chapleau, the hon. member for Villeneuve, the hon. member for Timmins and myself, representing most of northeastern Ontario and the northwestern part of Quebec, have no differences of opinion on the subject we are discussing.

The problems which the hon. member for Chapleau raised this afternoon are the problems which affect Timiskaming, Timmins, Cochrane—yes, I am sure they also affect Sault Ste. Marie, Nickel Belt, Sudbury and the whole area. We are closer in our needs to the people of northwestern Quebec than we are to the southern part of Ontario—Toronto. Their problems are the exact opposite of ours, and they spend all their time trying to solve them. They have too many industries, industries which are growing so fast as to create all kinds of difficulties; we would be happy to have some of them.

The other day I was listening to a discussion among several people in the city of Montreal. One of those taking part is a millionaire who recently moved to Montreal—I suppose he has been there for three years now. He comes from northern Ontario. This man was talking to one of my hon. friends about the desirability of moving from Montreal; he did not find it a good place in which to invest and he was thinking of moving out of the area. He indicated that 600 companies were transferring from Quebec.

We have all heard about firms transferring from Ontario to Quebec, or from Quebec to Ontario. The flow has been taking place between Toronto and Montreal. I was surprised to find that this was not the way in which industry was flowing now; it was flowing into the state of Vermont to the south. This man is very interested in speculation; he is much concerned about the quality of his investments because he makes his living that way. For many years the state of Vermont has been considered as a backward rural area. Yet I understand the encouragement now being given by its government has already resulted in the transfer from Quebec of a large number of factories, and that other firms are considering locating in that state.

I am not familiar with the legislation in Vermont, but I have always been of the opinion that if suitable encouragement is given industry can be moved wherever a government wishes it to move.

• (9:30 p.m.)

It was not surprising that hydro developed in Quebec, a region which has one asset, power. They brought help in from Jamaica.

An hon. Member: Cheap labour.

Mr. Peters: I think the claim about cheap labour is a myth. A company may start with cheap labour but it does not take long for the unions to get it organized. There was one example of this in Barrie, where wages were 65 cents an hour, but that situation did not last long. There are a number of carrots that can be offered to have the bauxite industry established in Canada and not in Jamaica.

At one stage the Bata Shoe Company thought of moving its total enterprise to Canada, but the encouragement given it here was not sufficient. Other countries made concessions, and Bata plants were established in them. The old Massey-Harris company was a Canadian company. There was no tariff on farm machinery. A tractor cost the same price in one country as in another, except for transportation costs. One would have expected the Massey-Harris company to do all its manufacturing in Canada, yet today the Massey-Ferguson Company manufactures only three or four major commodities in Canada. The rest it builds in other factories across the world.

We in the Timiskaming area are happy with the federal government's share of the development that has taken place under the area development plan. Two factories have been built there, and they are modern and efficient. They are the first to make full utilization of forest products in northern Ontario, but eventually we must find other ways to develop new plants in that area.

On a number of occasions we in this group have mentioned how the authorities in England can direct industry into special areas where social capital, housing and employees are available for it. Industry over there has been refused permission to settle in areas where there is a shortage of social capital, of schools, hospitals, fire departments, police departments, housing, and land for industrial development. Other countries have tackled this problem much more effectively than we have in Canada.

I know that other hon. members from Northern Ontario would like to have their areas designated under the area development plan. When my area was designated we said we would do our utmost to help bring industry to it. Possibly I have failed in my efforts, but certainly the municipalities and the province have failed also in the assistance they could give.

The minister's officials have done all they could do. He has the people and the machinery to do the job. I am pleased with the type of entrepreneur assistance he provides, but I am unhappy about the program because of its weakness in securing participation and co-operation from the provincial government. I do not know what "Joey" Smallwood would do with this plan, but I think he would go for broke so far as his province is concerned if he knew the federal government was going to match its expenditures.

All the province of Ontario has done is provide salaries for two or three people on a council that the province is going to control. Such councils are so bad that I had great difficulty urging the municipalities in my area to support them. Obviously these councils are not making the contribution they should make. The minister should ask his officials what kind of support, assistance and co-operation they are receiving from the provincial authorities.

I am quite happy with the provincial representation we now have for northern Ontario. For the first time we have a number of people going to Toronto who are interested only in our problems. Previously we had members who went down to Toronto with their hands out and asked, "Would you give us something?" Now our representatives are demanding the machinery that will allow them to participate in the development of the entire area.

If this program fails, the minister may find that we in northern Ontario will develop co-operation of a very close political nature with our colleagues in northern Quebec, because we will be faced with the problem of doing the job ourselves. I do not know what the minister's answer will be, but I am sure he will not go to Toronto and knock his counterpart on the head. Instead he will be nice to him. In effect Ontario is Toronto, and that is as selfish as they come; it is an exceptionally selfish place. I speak not of the people but of the government that we have at Queen's Park, and it seems to me the change has to be made at that level. I am sure that my hon. friend from Kenora-Rainy River will agree with me that the co-operation we get from Toronto does nothing to further the development of the north. If his area were designated I am sure he would find exactly the same problem we are having. He would meet with a bottleneck at the provincial level.

The minister has an obligation to see that this plan works. If it works we will have increased employment, and the economy of northern Ontario will expand rapidly. Service industries will develop.

Mr. Reid: May I ask the hon. gentleman a question?

Mr. Peters: Certainly.

Mr. Reid: I would like to ask him if the much ballyhooed Ontario government loan grant plan has had any impact at all on his area? He will recall that this was a plan designed to solve all the problems of the north.

Mr. Peters: It had absolutely no effect except at an election and even then it did not win any seats. It did not serve any purpose at all. If the provincial authority had spent all the money they said they were going to spend on solving the problems of the north there would be factories everywhere. It is not the government which will put in the factories that are needed, although I would not be opposed to that. If I were the responsible minister I would build factories and sell them to entrepreneurs, or find somebody to operate them.

The minister has an immense amount of talent in his department. If this talent were used, perhaps we could have one or two successful factories in each one of our areas. The situation would then be 100 per cent better than it is now. There is no point in waiting for the provincial government to give us some assistance because the Ontario cabinet does not appreciate our problems. Whenever they come to northern Ontario the officers of our chambers of commerce wine and dine them, and they end up with a great big northern Ontario hangover. Whatever they get while there does not stay with them long. They go back to Toronto, take a few aspirins, and then everything is cleared up again. Because they do no understand our problems they are unwilling to co-operate.

If the minister is dedicated to the idea of area development, and I think he is, he will have to consider the establishment of pilot plants in given areas. I think it would be better to do this under the area development plan than in the way it has been done in Nova Scotia in respect of Dosco and the Atlantic Development Board. I think by doing it under the area development program we could provide medicine that would be effective much more quickly. If the minister could establish one factory which would employ three or four hundred skilled people we could for the first time utilize all the graduate students from the technical school at Kirkland Lake. These people are highly trained, but there is no possibility of employment for them in northern Ontario. If a factory could employ these skilled individuals at high salaries this would in turn be of benefit to the established services in the area and would at least give us some hope of solving our problems.

[Mr. Reid.]

The hon. member for Kenora-Rainy River referred to a program which received headline coverage in the papers of northern Ontario. The provincial government announced that it intended to give funds at low rates of interest to help industrial development, and they suggested $1 million would be available. That sounds like a nice tidy sum, but anyone knows that it would only cover the cost of a small industrial development or factory, with a minimum of machinery. Not long ago the hopes of the people in northern Ontario were raised by newspaper stories to the effect that there was some anticipation of locating diamonds in the Kirkland Lake area. This never proved to be the case. We seem to be flipping from one promise or expectation to another, but none of them has paid off.

I do not know what the minister's views are about the constitutional issues the government seems to raise every time it decides not to do something. This is a bogey which is not of benefit to the people, but rather of benefit to vested interests. It seems to me that the minister will have to declare himself in regard to this kind of issue, and indicate what he is going to do regarding—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. gentleman but his allotted time has now expired.

Item agreed to.

30c. To provide for the insurance, on a shared risk basis with the lender, in the current and subsequent fiscal years, up to an aggregate amount of $100,000,000 on such terms and conditions including the payment of such fees therefor as may be prescribed by the governor in council, of loans made before January 1, 1973, under the adjustment assistance program related to the Kennedy round agreements, by private lenders approved by a board established under section 15 of the Department of Industry Act to manufacturers in Canada who, in the opinion of the said board,

(a) require such loans to restructure their operations but are unable to obtain sufficient financing on reasonable terms without the insurance; and

(b) either

(i) are or are likely to be seriously injured by an increase in imports attributable to the Kennedy round tariff reductions made by Canada, or

(ii) have significant export opportunities arising out of the Kennedy round agreements; and for greater certainty to deem the insurance referred to above to be a guarantee for purposes of section 27 of the Financial Administration Act, $1.

Mr. Gilbert: Mr. Chairman, item 30C refers directly to the adjustment assistance program which became necessary because of the Kennedy round negotiations. Perhaps I should read it so that we will all be familiar with what it says. It states:

To provide for the insurance, on a shared risk basis with the lender, in the current and subsequent fiscal years, up to an aggregate amount of $100,000,000 on such terms and conditions including the payment of such fees therefor as may be prescribed by the governor in council, or loans made before January 1, 1973, under the adjustment assistance program related to the Kennedy round agreements, by private lenders approved by a board established under section 15 of the Department of Industry Act to manufacturers in Canada who, in the opinion of the said board,

(a) require such loans to reconstruct their operations but are unable to obtain sufficient financing on reasonable terms without the insurance; and

(b) either

(i) are or are likely to be seriously injured by an increase in imports attributable to the Kennedy round tariff reductions made by Canada, or

(ii) have significant export opportunities, arising out of the Kennedy round agreements; and for greater certainty to deem the insurance referred to above to be a guarantee for the purposes of section 27 of the Financial Administration Act.

You will notice that this is going to be done for the sum of $1. When the committee on finance, trade and economic affairs met after Christmas it studied the Kennedy round agreements, and the implications to Canadian manufacturers, industry, labour and agriculture. The Prime Minister made a statement to the effect that there would be help for manufacturers in three main areas; by government insured loans, by direct loans and by shared agreement in respect of consultative services provided by the government. When he made that statement he said $10 million would be available for industry. Last year when the Minister of Finance presented his budget he said we must fight inflation by the traditional methods of taxation and cutting down on government expenditures. He was roundly applauded by the Conservative opposition when he suggested we should cut down on government expenditure. A short time later the President of the Treasury Board set forth in an hour-long discourse what those cutbacks would be. I think the government is going too far in cutting the promised $10 million to $1.

The purpose of the adjustment assistance program was to help manufacturers only. We in this party believe this is gross discrimination. Other ministers informed the committee that labour would get some support through additional benefits under the Unemployment Insurance Act. It was stated that before insurance was granted there would be some protection for the employees, in that the companies would have to give notice before any layoff. These were the only two items set forth in respect of labour.

The Minister of Industry and other ministers were questioned about this situation and it was obvious that they had not consulted with labour prior to entering into the Kennedy round negotiations. There was no consultation during the negotiations and none as a result of the negotiations. Therefore labour was completely left out and workers were forced to accept whatever small help would be provided under the increase in unemployment insurance benefits.

We spoke to members representing the agricultural industry. I asked them direct whether any government officials had consulted representatives of agriculture with regard to the Kennedy round negotiations. The answer was that prior to the negotiations there had been rather informal discussions with representatives of the agricultural industry, but during and after the discussions on the Kennedy round these representatives were not consulted.

The main bodies representing agriculture and industry were almost totally ignored by the government with regard to the effects of the Kennedy round negotiations. The only group the government is concerned with are the manufacturers. That is the reason the minister brings forth this item this evening, in order to help manufacturers in certain areas. The minister says: As a result of the Kennedy round we would like to restructure their operations. They may be seriously injured. That is the first ground. Second, the minister says that as a result of the Kennedy round negotiations there may be export opportunities with regard to which we should assist manufacturers. This is the help the minister is prepared to give industry to get it over the difficulty that has arisen as a result of the Kennedy round.

There was no consultation with labour, very limited consultation with agriculture, but full consultation and participation with the representatives of industry. That is the attitude adopted by the government with regard to this very serious problem. There are several questions I should like to ask the minister. The first is why we have this item of $1, when the Prime Minister said at the time that the government would make $10 million available. I should like to know why the minister is setting up an insurance fund under which the government will guarantee loans that manufacturers obtain either from approved lenders of the government or direct from the government. Why is it necessary that the government act as a lender of last resort in assisting manufacturers? One would think manufacturers could go to the banks and other lending institutions and make arrangements with regard to the changes that will take place as a result of the Kennedy round, without having to depend upon the government to insure loans they obtain through the banks and other lending institutions.

Why cannot the banks themselves, which have shown enormous profits in recent years—it has been a continual pattern of increasing profits for banks—take some of the risk in this matter? Why should loans they make be insured by the government? This means that if a manufacturer cannot keep up the payments on a loan, the government will step in. Surely if the government is going to step in it will cost more than the $1 provided in these supplementary estimates.

I should like the minister to make a statement about how much he anticipates this program will cost. I know that according to the item the loans will continue for a period of five years. A projection should be made by the high priced officials in the minister's department, who are always ready to guide and service him with regard to these problems, as to the cost of the program. The minister should tell us what the actual cost will be.

We should also have from the minister a statement with regard to the interest rates that banks and lending institutions will be allowed to charge in respect of these loans. The government is to be the lender of last resort, much like the Industrial Development Bank. We know that the Industrial Development Bank is a lender of last resort for industries which cannot obtain loans direct from the chartered banks. We know that the interest rates of the Industrial Development Bank are a little higher than those of the banks. Surely the minister should place some limitation on the interest rates that will be chargeable by the banks in respect of loans which will be insured by the government. I think we should be given the answers to these questions.

When the minister appeared before the committee he gave a very glowing report of how beneficially Canadian manufacturers will be affected as a result of the Kennedy round. He was all encouragement to the manufacturers, but he forgot to mention that the government has made a value judgment and is going to depend upon the development of secondary industry, much to the detriment of Canadian manufacturers in the development of exports. This is one matter he did not really develop in his report to the committee.

Another matter on which the minister should give us more enlightenment is whether he is prepared, even at this late stage, to consider the TAB, the transitional assistance benefits, payments which some industries received when the Canada-United States auto pact came into play. I think he should give us the reasons for the TAB program not applying to the Kennedy round negotiations in respect of labour. When one considers the shabby treatment labour has received as a result of these negotiations, the least the minister and the government can do is set forth a TAB program to help workers who will suffer as a result of the Kennedy round negotiations.

These are some of the problems with which the minister should deal. When I questioned him about the Canada-United States auto pact he waxed eloquent and said what a wonderful pact it has been. However, he dealt quite lightly with the problem of parity of prices as a result of the Kennedy round. I should like to hear what the minister has to say about this policy.

Mr. Chairman, it is ten o'clock. Perhaps the minister wants the evening to prepare the answers to some of the questions that have been asked.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall vote 30c carry?

Some hon. Members: Carried.

Mr. Peters: Ten o'clock.

Mr. Drury: Mr. Chairman, this discussion is so interesting that I would be quite willing to continue if we could get agreement to pass the estimates tonight. Let us not interrupt these estimates.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Peters: Ten o'clock, Mr. Chairman.

Some hon. Members: Filibuster.

Resolution adopted in committee of supply this day reported and concurred in.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

A motion to adjourn the house under provisional standing order 39A deemed to have been moved.

INCOME TAX ACT—INQUIRY AS TO EXAMINATION AND APPROVAL BY JUSTICE MINISTER

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax): Mr. Speaker, last week B.S.A., before the silly age, set in, I asked the Minister of Justice (Mr. Trudeau) a question on March 13 which may be found at page 7587 of Hansard. I asked him whether he had examined and approved the tax bill ruled upon Monday in this house. The minister replied:

> Mr. Speaker, this is a question of departmental administration. I am not sure that I am required to answer it under the rules.

I wish to suggest this evening that this is not a matter of departmental administration but a question of ministerial responsibility. I will refer to the Bill of Rights, chapter 44 of the acts of parliament of 1960. Section 3 reads as follows:

> The Minister of Justice shall, in accordance with such regulations as may be prescribed by the governor in council, examine every proposed regulation submitted in draft form to the clerk of the Privy Council pursuant to the Regulations Act and every bill introduced in or presented to the House of Commons—

What it boils down to is that section 3 requires that the Minister of Justice examine every bill introduced in the House of Commons. Apart from the requirements of the Bill of Rights, I think it would be obvious that it is the duty of the Minister of Justice to examine every piece of government legislation. After all, he is the chief law officer in this place and the chief legal adviser of the government, and unless times have changed drastically, he is probably head of the cabinet legislative committee, which at least existed under former administrations and I suppose also exists under the present one.

The minister's answer seems to me to suggest that it was the duty of his departmental officials and not of himself to examine the particular legislation, the taxation measure part of which was found out of order. I suggest that in a parliamentary democracy a minister cannot hide behind public servants or his officials. Indeed I suggest that the reverse is true, and that public servants are entitled to every last ounce of protection that a minister can give them. I find the answer even stranger when it comes from a man who aspires to the highest office, the head of the government of this country with 200,000 or more public servants to speak for.

Perhaps there are some reasons for it. The minister in chapter 2 of his "Canadian Charter of Human Rights" tends to make light of the Bill of Rights. He properly points out that it is not enshrined in our constitution, that therefore it can be repealed, and thus is subject to the whim of any parliament. This is true. The Bill of Rights brought in in 1960 could be changed by act of parliament and could be repealed. But until parliament deals with it, I suggest that the minister's responsibility is to carry out every last provision of the Bill of Rights, to be its champion and protector; and above all, if the Bill of Rights tells the Minister of Justice or anyone else in the cabinet to do something, then that minister should hop to it and do exactly what the Bill of Rights tells him to do.

I am driven to make these remarks for two reasons. First, I think the minister has an obligation under the law to do what the law in fact directs him to do. We all recall some rather amusing answers given by ministers of justice in former years when asked whether they read all the provisions of the simple divorce bills which used to bedevil us. Ministers of justice at that time used to say stoutly that they had to see that individual rights were protected. No measure, whether it deals with the plight of specific individuals or deals with larger measures such as the taxes that are imposed on all of us, should escape the eagle eye of the Minister of Justice, if he is doing his duty.

The second reason I rise at this time to make the point arises from a sense of fair play. I believe the Minister of Finance (Mr. Sharp) has been pilloried unmercifully, particularly by the members of his own party, for the venture he was forced to embark upon when his taxation measure fell. It seems to me that the Minister of Justice, in his rather cavalier answer, should not be allowed to escape the fact that not only had he part of the collective responsibility for the health and welfare of that measure, but also he had a particular duty under the Bill of Rights to examine the measure to ascertain whether Canadian taxpayers, for example, were being put in double jeopardy in the sense that the issue had been decided one way, and then some attempt was being made to reverse that decision. For these two reasons, one a sense of fair play and the other that the minister had a duty under the Bill of Rights, I have been moved to make these few remarks this evening.

Mr. Albert Béchard (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, first of all I want to apologize to the hon. member for the fact that the Minister of Justice, as a result of a very important commitment tonight, is unable to be present to give the answer.

As hon. members know, section 3 of the Canadian Bill of Rights requires the Minister of Justice to examine every bill that is introduced in the House of Commons to ensure that none of its provisions is in any way inconsistent with the purposes of the Bill of Rights. The minister is further required to report any inconsistency to the House of Commons at the first convenient opportunity.

The procedure is set out in order in council P.C. 1960-1782, "Canadian Bill of Rights—examination regulations". Under these procedures, the Clerk of the House of Commons transmits two copies of each bill to the Department of Justice after it has had first reading. When these are received, the deputy minister of justice examines the bill and certifies it as having been examined in accordance with the requirements of the Bill of Rights. One certified copy is then returned to the Clerk of the House of Commons and the other to the Clerk of the Privy Council.

In the specific case which prompted the hon. member's question, that is to say in the case of Bill No. C-207, the procedure I have just described was duly complied with. The minister was familiar with the substance of the bill and in his opinion it did not offend, in any way, the terms of the Canadian Bill of Rights.

He points out also that, quite apart from the strict requirements of the examination regulations, every government bill receives the most careful consideration during the drafting stage and before it is introduced in the House of Commons. This consideration includes an examination of the bill with a view to determining whether its various clauses are, in all respects, consistent with the requirements of the Bill of Rights.

WINTER WORKS—INQUIRY AS TO PROJECT AT DESBIENS, P.Q.

Mr. Alcide Simard (Lac-Saint-Jean): Mr. Speaker, on March 19 I took the liberty of directing the following question to the hon. Minister of Manpower and Immigration, as reported on page 7793 of Hansard.

What was the answer given by the minister to the letter sent to him by the mayor of Desbiens, on March 15, with regard to a winter work project estimated at $40,000?

I do not know whether the minister or his parliamentary secretary have on hand the letter signed by the mayor of Desbiens, a small municipality in my district, who is complaining, and rightly so, about the attitude of the federal government, and particularly of the Department of Manpower and Immigration, which appears discriminatory towards him.

The reasons on which the request of the mayor of Desbiens was based can be summarized as follows: That municipality has some 2,000 inhabitants, 4 or 5 of whom are farmers. This means that the remainder of the population is made up of labourers who, in part, are working at the St. Raymond paper mill. Now, since that paper mill has been operating at about 60 per cent of capacity, about 100 persons have been out of work for some time.

In December last, I understand that the municipality of Desbiens submitted a winter work project amounting to $28,000 but it was reduced by half. I do not know if the provincial or the federal government is responsible, but that project was reduced to $14,000. Imagine, Mr. Speaker, it was not an exorbitant amount to help 100 unemployed.

The municipal council then submitted another winter works program for $40,000; it was flatly turned down by the Department of Manpower and Immigration. It was claimed that the program did not meet the standards of the act. But, on reading very closely the letter to the mayor of Desbiens, one can rightly wonder whether all the neighbouring municipalities had met the legal requirements. I do not want to insinuate anything unkind about those municipalities, like Chambord and Saint-Jérôme, for instance, which carried out winter works programs worth $80,000 and $75,000 respectively, while Desbiens was limited to $14,000.

I sincerely believe that the request addressed to the Minister of Manpower and Immigration by the mayor of Desbiens is motivated, and I am willing to state positively that the department showed a lack of distributive fairness in allotting the winter works program.

As I said a while ago, I do not want to insinuate anything unkind about Chambord or Saint-Jérôme, but it is still permissible to make comparisons.

Mr. Speaker, I protest energetically against the discrimination shown in the case of Desbiens, and I beg the hon. minister to revise his decision which deprives that municipality of the help to which it is entitled, on the same footing as neighbouring municipalities.

[English]

Hon. B. S. Mackasey (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, I listened with a great deal of attention to the representations made by the hon. member on behalf of one of the municipalities in the province of Quebec. I was very pleased he stressed that he was not insinuating that there was any malpractice on the part of the department, or that the Minister of Manpower and Immigration (Mr. Marchand) was favouring one municipality over another. The hon. member was quick to emphasize this, so it is obvious that the decision in favour of one municipality as opposed to another must have been based on some criterion other than that of political patronage or favouritism of one sort or another.

I do not have the criteria in front of me but I am familiar with the winter works program. I was an alderman in the city of Verdun, in the province of Quebec, and I do know what an important role winter works projects play in some municipalities. If the municipality of Desbiens was refused a winter works project, then I am sure there must have been a logical reason. I do not think the hon. member can make much of a case if he pleads that some municipalities have received winter works they are not necessarily entitled to. For the most part the department applies the same criterion in each case.

I shall bring to the attention of the Minister of Manpower and Immigration tomorrow the particular case of this municipality and recommend that their application be reviewd, so that at least we can tell the hon. member the reason it was refused. I shall speak to the minister, if not tomorrow, then as early as Monday and try to ascertain why this particular project was refused and why similar projects in nearby municipalities were accepted.

POWER—COLUMBIA RIVER—REPORTED INCREASE IN COSTS

Mr. H. W. Herridge (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, this afternoon in the unavoidable and understandable absence of the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Martin) I asked the hon. gentleman's parliamentary secretary whether the minister had been informed by the government of British Columbia of the expenditure to date on the Columbia river project. I am glad to have the opportunity to deal with this question for a few minutes because some persons in my riding who are staunch supporters of the Liberal party have asked me to raise it, as have some supporters of the Tory party and of my own party. So I am strictly non-partisan on this issue.

I wish to deal briefly with the sequence of events. On April 13, 1962 the Prime Minister (Mr. Pearson) wrote the following letter to the secretary of the water resources committee of the chamber of commerce of Nakusp:

> Dear Mr. Waterfield:
> Your letter of April 12th has just arrived and I would like to assure you that it is imperative to renegotiate the Columbia river treaty.
> May I also assure you that all B.C. interests, particularly those of the water resources committee of Nakusp Chamber of Commerce, will be consulted by a new Liberal government before a final decision is reached.
> Kindest regards,
> Yours sincerely,
> L. B. Pearson

The Prime Minister sent the Secretary of State for External Affairs to undertake this chore for him. Need I add that the water resources committee of the chamber of commerce at Nakusp never saw the hon. gentleman at all; he completely overlooked them in his trip down the river on behalf of the Prime Minister. To indicate how much faith was placed in the Secretary of State for External Affairs I would remind hon. members that in 1965 the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. MacEachen), then minister of labour, had this to say addressing a Columbia river treaty ceremony on Thursday, May 20:

> While there are many who deserve credit for what has been made possible, there is one man who perhaps was most responsible for the project going through. This is Paul Martin, who took over the negotiations at the time I spoke of when it looked as if the great gains made by the previous negotiations might be lost, and who proceeded to work so closely with Premier Bennett and his colleagues and with the United States representatives. It was this close association, marked by an atmosphere of determination and good-will, that made possible the results reflected in this ceremony here today.

Apparently this close association and this determination on the part of the Secretary of State for External Affairs was not enough for

Mr. Bennett, because I read in the Vancouver Sun of Thursday, May 11, 1967:

Asked for his opinion of the treaty, he said: "The treaty missed out. The thing that's at fault in the treaty is that it was signed too quickly."

He blamed federal authorities.

He was referring, of course, to the Secretary of State for External Affairs and expressing dissatisfaction with the hon. gentleman's role in this affair. He recognized him as the key man. The report continues:

Bennett said the arrangement made with Kaiser Aluminum for a dam on the Arrow lakes "was three times better than the treaty".

Imagine that.

The deal concerned the proposed construction in 1954 by Kaiser Aluminum or a $25 million dam on the Arrow lakes. It was championed by former Lands Minister Robert Sommers.

Here is the premier of British Columbia expressing serious dissatisfaction with what the Secretary of State for External Affairs had done in signing this treaty.

I might say that upon being questioned in the external affairs committee on Friday, April 10, 1964, Mr. MacNabb, now a deputy minister, gave certain assurances when asked about the costs of the project. I asked him whether he was sure that his estimate of the cost was correct. The question reads:

In view of the experience of British Columbia Hydro over a number of years—of course their projects would be much smaller than these—we know that the average exceeded the estimated cost by 50 per cent. I have figures supplied by a friend in the British Columbia Hydro. In view of that, what do you think of the assurance that these costs will not greatly increase over the next ten years?

In reply, both Mr. MacNabb and the Secretary of State for External Affairs assured us that the cost had been so accurately estimated that they would have $55 million left over with which to put generators into the Mica Creek dam. Later on, the Secretary of State for External Affairs paid tribute to Mr. MacNabb as a man who knew exactly what he was talking about.

I find, however, on reference to the votes and proceedings of the legislature of British Columbia for Thursday, March 14, that Mr. Strachan asked the premier a number of questions, among which was the following:

With reference to the payment of $274,800,000 received October 1, 1964, under the Columbia river treaty, was any of this money expended to December 31, 1967?

[Mr. Herridge.]

I will not go into the other details of the questions. Mr. Bennett replied as follows:

Yes. Duncan Storage, $30,090,387; Arrow storage, $144,119,555; Mica storage, $85,184,179; general development costs, $1,818,502; total including interest during construction and overhead, $261,212,623.

The government of British Columbia has now practically admitted that the figures which were vouched for by the minister and by Mr. MacNabb are inaccurate and that the government of British Columbia is being obliged to spend over $200 million more than was provided in the treaty signed by the Secretary of State for External Affairs.

When the Secretary of State for External Affairs was in Castlegar he addressed members of the Castlegar chamber of commerce at which time he assured them that the government of Canada—

—would not sign any treaty with the United States which did not provide sufficient money to pay for all the costs of construction of Columbia river projects in Canada.

These various gentlemen whom I have mentioned earlier want this question answered. They are extremely interested in it. I am glad the parliamentary secretary is here this evening; I apologize for keeping him out of bed. I hope that when he comes to reply he will answer this question. In conclusion let me say that in the joint engineering board reports Mr. MacNabb never refers once to the total expenditures on the Columbia to date. I should like the parliamentary secretary to tell me whether the Secretary of State for External Affairs has received these figures and, if not, why not.

Mr. Jack Davis (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, in his remarks tonight the hon. member for Kootenay West (Mr. Herridge) has inferred that Canada got a poor deal out of the Columbia river treaty. The authorities, the people competent not only in the fields of engineering and finance, but also economists, differ with this view. Canada did in fact get a good deal out of the Columbia river treaty.

I have time tonight to refer to only one authority, a world renowned authority, Dr. John V. Krutilla. In a book entitled "The Columbia River Treaty" published late last year by the well known independent organization, Resources for the Future Incorporated, he said:

The benefit—on the order of $225 million to $275 million—can be regarded as the benefit to Canada from the Columbia River Treaty.

This, he said, is——measured by the savings in cost as compared with alternatives available to Canada.

I want to stress the fact that he said it is a savings in cost of $275 million. Dr. Krutilla, interestingly enough, did not think that the United States negotiators did anything like as good a job for the United States as the Canadian negotiators did for Canada. He went on to say:

After considering the problem of meeting the power supply and flood management objectives by such means as developing domestic storage and the Northwest-Southwest inter-tie, we find that the Columbia river treaty results in a relative loss to the United States of about $250 million to $375 million.

To recap, Dr. Krutilla is saying that Canada, as a result of the Columbia river treaty, is about one quarter of a billion dollars better off. The United States, on the other hand, will have lost at least a quarter of a billion dollars as compared with other alternatives. If I have a moment, Mr. Speaker, I would like to quote one further short paragraph from his book.

There is no doubt—

—said this world renowned authority—

—that Canada figured with a very sharp pencil. Analysis was used to illuminate policy choices and to evaluate the magnitudes in the trade-offs when economic and political, long run and short run, and similar conflicting objectives were being weighed in the balance—

Whatever its origin, maintenance of the distinction between technical analysis and policy choice was an outstanding Canadian accomplishment.

This is a world wide authority's opinion on the Columbia river treaty.

NORTHERN AFFAIRS

REQUEST FOR STATEMENT ON REPORT RESPECTING ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Prime Minister. I ask the question of the right hon. gentleman because it affects the operation of several departments of government. In the light of the very excellent report by Mr. Justice Morrow dealing with the administration of justice in the Northwest Territories, and in the light of some of the omission and defects which are indicated in the report, relating to the administration of justice and the needs of the people, would the government be prepared before prorogation to issue a statement indicating its views and opinions with regard to these recommendations?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, this report has been given the careful examination its importance warrants, and I would certainly expect that a statement would be made regarding it before prorogation.

COMMONWEALTH RELATIONS

RHODESIA—REQUEST BY JAMAICA THAT CONFERENCE BE CALLED

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the right hon. Prime Minister. Recently the government of Jamaica has urged that a conference of Commonwealth countries be held to look into the situation in Rhodesia to see if anything further could be done because of the deteriorating situation there. Has the Prime Minister received any such request, and is he favourable to such a proposition?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Yes, Mr. Speaker. I know the views of the government of Jamaica on this subject and I know they have made this request, but I also know that other members of the Commonwealth, including the United Kingdom, the member most directly concerned, felt that a conference on this subject at this time would not be constructive, although a Commonwealth prime minister's meeting is to be held, I believe, in the month of September.

Mr. Douglas: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. May I ask the Prime Minister whether, in view of the fact that most likely the Commonwealth conference will not be held fairly soon, the government is pressing for a review of the mandatory sanctions by the Security Council so as to discuss their effectiveness and see if anything can be done to deal more effectively with the Rhodesian situation.

Mr. Pearson: Yes, Mr. Speaker. The possibility of extending the sanctions and making them more effective is now being considered by the Security Council. There was also a meeting of the sanctions committee of the Commonwealth in London last week on the same subject, and the direction in which moves are being made now is to make sanctions more effective and to have those members of the United Nations who have accepted the sanctions which are already in operation apply those sanctions as they should be applied.

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the fact that the hopes for success of the sanctions which were voiced not only in this parliament but also in the United Kingdom 15 or 16 months ago and that things have turned out quite to the reverse of the expectations voiced by the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom and the government of Canada, will the Prime Minister say whether there is any foundation for the suggestion that Canada is in agreement with action being taken to deny mail being received from or transmitted to Rhodesia?

Mr. Pearson: We are considering the extension of sanctions, as I have just said, but there are forms of action which would do more harm to the neighbours of Rhodesia than to Rhodesia itself. One has to be careful about applying sanctions which could hurt the victim rather than the other party.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Does the Prime Minister not agree with the suggestion that a veto on the mails would be a step contrary to international development and one that would constitute a dangerous precedent in the years ahead?

Mr. Pearson: There are international agreements covering the mails, Mr. Speaker, which would have to be considered in the light of any action that was proposed.

WATER RESOURCES

PEMBINA RIVER—INQUIRY AS TO MEETING TO CONCLUDE NEGOTIATIONS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. George Muir (Lisgar): I have a question for the Prime Minister. Has the government of Canada received a request from the minister of agriculture of Manitoba for a meeting on March 29, to finalize the negotiations between the two governments on the cost sharing of the Canadian portion of the Pembina river project in Manitoba and North Dakota?

Mr. Speaker: I doubt whether the question is acceptable, but because of the particular circumstances it might be allowed at this time.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): A request went to the Secretary of State for External Affairs, Mr. Speaker, and I have also been in communication with Mr. Weir on the subject. We are planning a meeting in the coming weeks.

SHIPPING

HALIFAX—PROTEST AGAINST PROPOSED INCREASES IN HARBOUR AND PILOTAGE FEES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax): I have a question for the Prime Minister of which I have given him notice in the absence of the Minister of Transport. Will the government look into the request of shippers and longshoremen that the proposed increases in pilotage and boat charges at Halifax be re-examined? The urgency arises from the proposed effective date of April 1.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): I shall be glad to look into that matter at once with the minister. I will talk to him on the telephone about it.

BILINGUALISM AND BICULTURALISM

ST. LEONARD, QUE.—ALLEGED REFUSAL TO ALLOW BILINGUAL TEACHING

On the orders of the day:

Mr. A. D. Alkenbrack (Prince Edward-Lennox): I have a question for the Prime Minister. In the light of the recommendations of the B and B commission regarding linguistic rights and the conclusions of the constitutional conference on the same question, can the Prime Minister say whether there has been any reference or protest to the bilingual and bicultural commission concerning the refusal of the school board at St. Leonard, near Montreal, to allow bilingual teaching in an area where 80 per cent of the taxpayers have requested English language schools?

Mr. Speaker: Order. I have some doubt whether the matter raised by the hon. member comes within the jurisdiction of any federal minister. However, if it does the question should be placed on the order paper.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

MIDDLE EAST—INQUIRY AS TO RENEWED HOSTILITIES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. W. Herridge (Kootenay West): I should like to address a question to the Prime Minister. Has the Prime Minister anything to report to the house with regard to the very frightening development in the Middle East? Has any action been undertaken by the United Nations to improve the situation?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): As my hon. friend and the house know, yesterday Israeli armed forces carried out attacks into Jordanian territory. These Israeli forces, I understand, have now been or are being withdrawn. There seem to have been losses in men and equipment on both sides. As my hon. friend undoubtedly knows, the Security Council has been meeting since yesterday afternoon to consider the situation, and it is our hope that the council will be able to take action to bring about not only a restoration of the cease fire but a more effective observance of the cease fire in the future. I understand that resolutions are being considered now informally pending a meeting of the Security Council later this day.

These attacks have to be considered, Mr. Speaker, in relation to a series of exchanges that have taken place in recent weeks between Israeli and Jordanian forces and continued sabotage activities in Israel. The government, and I am sure the house, deplore the acts of violence that have taken place between the two countries which, in addition to inflicting needless suffering on the local population, have prejudiced and made more difficult the task of the United Nations special representative, Mr. Gunnar Jarring, who is trying to assist the parties to attain a just and lasting settlement in the area.

We hope, and I know the house hopes, that both sides will exercise moderation and restraint and avoid steps that can only impede the establishment of peace. I hope it will also be possible to put United Nations observers into this particular area with the hope that this might help prevent a recurrence of these actions.

NIGERIA—PROPOSED INVESTIGATION BY UN HUMAN RIGHTS COMMISSION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. David MacDonald (Prince): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Prime Minister and is with regard to the difficult and tragic war that is taking place in Nigeria at the present time. I wonder whether the Prime Minister can inform the house whether our government has made representations at the United Nations for the UN commission on human rights to investigate this tragic war and make a report on the situation.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of any such initiative being taken by the Canadian representative at the United Nations, but I will be glad to look into this matter and see whether it is under consideration.

Mr. MacDonald (Prince): A supplementary question on the same matter. Has our government expressed some dissatisfaction with the government of the United Kingdom and the Soviet union for taking sides in this bitter war?

Mr. Pearson: Mr. Speaker, I will be glad to look into this, but I do not know of any evidence that would warrant an intervention on our part with the U.S.S.R. and the United Kingdom in this connection or, indeed, an intervention on the other side.

PUBLIC WORKS

FRASER RIVER—INQUIRY AS TO AGREEMENT ON CONTROL PROJECTS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Barry Mather (New Westminster): Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether I could direct a question to the attention of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Can the minister indicate whether an agreement has been reached between Canada and British Columbia with regard to the multi-million dollar flood control program in the Fraser valley?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I think the right hon. Prime Minister will allow me to say that the cabinet has given its approval to a draft agreement between British Columbia and Canada, subject to a few amendments I am to discuss with Mr. Williston, minister of lands, forests and water resources of British Columbia. I have every reason to believe that an agreement will be finalized within the next few days.

[English]

VETERANS AFFAIRS

INQUIRY AS TO REPORT ON PENSION COMMISSION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. John R. Matheson (Parliamentary Secretary to Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Veterans Affairs. Has the minister anything new to report in connection with the Woods committee study?

Hon. Roger Teillet (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I expect that the report will be presented to me some time later today by the chairman of the committee.

INDUSTRY

CAPE BRETON, N.S.—CONTINUED OPERATION OF MCBEAN MINE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. Russell MacEwan (Pictou): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources further to the answer that he gave me on Tuesday last. Has he now received a report from the Cape Breton Development Corporation regarding the operation of the McBean mine, which employs 400 men?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the situation of the McBean mine is becoming increasingly difficult, because Dosco now proposes, I am told, to announce the closing down of the mine. But as we wanted to avoid that situation, at least for some time, I just got in touch with Premier Smith of Nova Scotia whom I am to meet tomorrow in this connection.

[English]

FINANCE

INQUIRY AS TO SALES OF GOVERNMENT HOLDINGS OF U.S. SECURITIES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Max Saltsman (Waterloo South): Mr. Speaker, I should have liked to direct my question to the Minister of Finance but in his absence perhaps the Prime Minister would accept it. It is in connection with the announcement of the Minister of Finance on March 7 to the effect that Canada had agreed to invest our holdings of United States dollars in non-liquid United States government securities.

Have any sales of our present holdings of United States treasuries taken place? If so, has the government sustained a capital loss on the sales?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): I would have to look into that matter, Mr. Speaker.

HEALTH AND WELFARE

PAYMENT OF PREMIUMS FOR MEDICAL CARE OF INDIANS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. P. B. Rynard (Simcoe East): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the minister of health and welfare whether he has had an opportunity to look into the question I asked him yesterday.

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I have not been able to complete my inquiries, but I will do so as soon as possible.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

PROPOSED MEETING OF FEDERAL AND PROVINCIAL WELFARE MINISTERS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Ed. Schreyer (Springfield): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the minister of health and welfare. It arises from a recent statement by the minister of welfare of the province of Manitoba to the effect that three years ago the federal government made a commitment to convene a meeting of provincial ministers of welfare to discuss matters relating to Indian and Metis citizens. I should like to ask the minister whether his department or the government is making any concrete plans to convene such a meeting.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Prince.

Mr. Schreyer: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I suppose the Minister of National Health and Welfare did not hear my question. Perhaps he could take it as notice.

Mr. MacEachen: Yes.

STUDENT LOANS

REPORTED PLANS FOR REDUCTION IN PROGRAM

On the orders of the day:

Mr. David MacDonald (Prince): Mr. Speaker, normally my question would be for the Minister of Finance. Before I ask my question I ought to ask the Prime Minister whether he is considering some special award for the Minister of National Health and Welfare, who has stuck to his post while others have gone off elsewhere.

My question is about the Canada student loan plan. There have been disturbing reports over the last few days from Charlottetown that these loans are to be reduced by about 50 per cent. In the light of rising tuition and residence fees, can the Prime Minister assure us that the program is not to be reduced?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): As a matter of fact I ought to consider a special award for my hon. friend who, I understand, became the father of a daughter yesterday.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Pearson: All of which gives me an opportunity of avoiding the question by saying I do not know the answer, but I shall look into it.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

HAL BANKS—REFUSAL OF EXTRADITION BY U.S. GOVERNMENT

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton South): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. Has the government received any reply to the protest note sent to Washington in connection with the Hal Banks extradition?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): I do not recall receiving one. I shall look into the matter as soon as I get to my office.

Mr. Ed. Schreyer (Springfield): I have a supplementary question for the Prime Minister. I am sure that the Prime Minister will recall a statement by his colleague the Secretary of State for External Affairs that the government was investigating the possibility of seeking international arbitration. Has this situation been explored?

Mr. Pearson: It has been, but I am not sure what the result is. Perhaps I shall be able to report to the house on this some time next week.

BRITISH COLUMBIA—REFUSAL TO HOLD TRIAL IN FRENCH

On the orders of the day:

Mr. J. R. Keays (Gaspé): Mr. Speaker, last week the Solicitor General took as notice a question concerning Suzanne Poulin, who was denied the right of defence in her own language in the courts of British Columbia. Has the minister now any information on the subject?

Hon. L. T. Pennell (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, I believe this matter comes under provincial jurisdiction. However, I am pleased to advise the hon. member that I have been informed that an interpreter will be provided to the lady in question and she will be able to give her evidence in French. All the proceedings will also be translated to her in French.

ADVERSE EFFECTS OF IMPORTS OF VEGETABLE OILS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. George Muir (Lisgar): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Agriculture, and in his absence perhaps his parliamentary secretary might take it as notice. Yesterday the minister promised to give me an answer to a question I had asked about the importation of vegetable oils which are having an adverse effect on the production of vegetable oil seeds in Canada.

Mr. Bruce S. Beer (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): May I take that question as notice, Mr. Speaker. If any information is available I shall try to give it to the hon. member today.

HUMAN RIGHTS

REPORTED DISCRIMINATION IN EMPLOYMENT CONTRACT IN NORTH

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, two days ago I asked the Prime Minister a question about reported discrimination in an employment contract in the north. The Prime Minister said a statement was being prepared and that the Minister of Justice might have that ready for yesterday. I wonder whether the Prime Minister or any other minister has that statement for today?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): I have that statement, Mr. Speaker. It is very long, and the Minister of Justice hoped to make a shorter statement on the subject this morning. I understand he has been held up by the weather but hopes to be here by twelve o'clock, in time to make the statement. Otherwise he will make it on Monday.

Mr. Knowles: Perhaps he could make it on Monday on his estimates, if we get to them.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

OPERATION OF RETAIL OUTLETS AT ARMED FORCES BASES

On the orders of the day:

Hon. W. G. Dinsdale (Brandon-Souris): I have a question for the Minister of National Defence. In view of the fact that the Minister of Agriculture in a speech at Pembroke has criticized the policy of establishing Canadian forces exchange services in other than remote posts, could I ask the hon. gentleman whether the Department of National Defence intends to compete directly with private enterprise in this manner?

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member knows he cannot ask that question in that particular form.

[Later:]

Mr. Dinsdale: I believe the Minister of National Defence wishes to answer the question I tried to direct to him a few moments ago, so perhaps I can rephrase it.

Mr. Speaker: Order. What I was suggesting to the hon. member was that his question should have been directed to the Prime Minister, to ascertain whether a statement made outside the house represented government policy.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Mr. Dinsdale: Perhaps I could rephrase the question in a way which would be acceptable to Your Honour while still directing it to the Minister of National Defence. Will the Canex marketing facilities to set up in settled areas as well as in remote posts, thereby competing directly with private enterprise?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): I think I will put it this way. Although I am not a candidate for the leadership, I disagree with the Minister of Agriculture.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

VIET NAM—POSSIBLE VISIT TO HANOI BY CANADIAN REPRESENTATIVE

On the orders of the day:

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Would the Prime Minister bring the house and the country up to date with regard to any visit to Hanoi which may have been made by a Canadian ambassador or representative of Canada in recent days? Would he tell us whether as a result of the discussions which have taken place between a Canadian representative and government leaders in Hanoi there has been any softening of the attitude of Hanoi in the direction of the negotiating table?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): There have been no visits to Hanoi since that made by the Canadian commissioner a couple of months ago, I think, on which the Secretary of State for External Affairs reported to the house. The report, as the right hon. gentleman will recall, was not very encouraging. There has been no development since that time that I know of, certainly none which involves our commissioner, though I would be glad to look into it.

Mr. Diefenbaker: I wish the Prime Minister would, because there was a report on the radio this morning quoting the Secretary of State for External Affairs in Edmonton in connection with some visits which had taken place around or about March 6, visits which have not been brought to the attention of the house.

Mr. Pearson: I noticed that date, Mr. Speaker, and I made inquiries. I think that date was either misreported or given by inadvertence, and that the Secretary of State for External Affairs was referring to the earlier visit. But I have made inquiries.

INDUSTRY

CONTRACT BETWEEN ATOMIC ENERGY AND CANADIAN GENERAL ELECTRIC

On the orders of the day:

Mr. G. H. Aiken (Parry Sound-Muskoka): I have a question for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources; it relates to the announcement of a combined project as between Atomic Energy of Canada Limited and Canadian General Electric. Can the minister advise the house as to the purpose of this rather unusual situation in which a crown agency is combining with a private company?

Mr. Speaker: Order. I do not think this question is in order. The hon. member is asking for an explanation which should perhaps be made on motions or in the form of a written reply to a question on the order paper.

Mr. Aiken: Your Honour has been very lenient in view of the situation respecting the session. I was drawing attention to an unusual situation, and I thought the minister would be prepared to comment on it.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Such a "merger", as it is called in the press today, did take place yesterday, Mr. Speaker. The contract is for one year only, but it is expected to be renewed for a period of five years. It can be broken by Atomic Energy of Canada Limited after one year. I might add that there is enough work to keep Canadian General Electric going for one year on a contract with Pakistan, in particular. No extra expenditure is involved in connection with the 1968-69 budget. The purpose of the merger is to keep together the nuclear energy design capacity available in Canada partly in view of the possibility of selling Canadian type nuclear reactors in Rumania, Finland and elsewhere.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS

INQUIRY AS TO AWARD OF CONTRACTS TO NON-UNION FIRMS

On the orders of the day:

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Labour and his parliamentary secretary I direct this question to the Prime Minister. Does the government's policy on awarding contracts for federal buildings permit the award of contracts to non-union firms?

Mr. Speaker: Order. This question could be placed on the order paper.

POWER

MINAS BASIN—CONTINUATION OF DEVELOPMENTAL STUDIES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Halifax): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Would the minister be good enough to reassure the house before the session adjourns that there will be no cut-back in developmental studies for Minas basin tidal power?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): The possibility has not been mentioned to me, Mr. Speaker. I will inquire.

AGRICULTURE

PROPOSED ESTABLISHMENT OF BEEF FUTURES MARKET

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Ed. Schreyer (Springfield): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Agriculture my question is directed to his parliamentary secretary. In view of a recent news report that the federal government is understood to be giving support to the establishment of a beef futures market as an adjunct to the Winnipeg grain exchange, I would like to ask what is the nature of this support?

Mr. Speaker: Order. I suggest the question be placed on the order paper.

[Later:]

Mr. Schreyer: Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Prime Minister. Will the Prime Minister undertake to look into reports that the federal government will give support to the establishment of a beef futures market at the Winnipeg grain exchange?

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member asked a question a moment ago and it was suggested to him that it be placed on the order paper. He is now making a suggestion to the right hon. Prime Minister along the same lines.

INQUIRY OF THE MINISTRY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. S. Barnett (Comox-Alberni): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Public Works which arises from my urgent desire to see a new program of regional highway development in Canada, with federal participation. I would like to ask the minister whether he considers the resignation of the peripatetic minister of highways in British Columbia might facilitate the development of such a program.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Orders of the day. Before calling orders of the day may I say I was given to understand a minute ago that the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs wishes leave of the house to return to motions for the purpose of tabling a document. Is this agreed?

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): On a point of order, sir, I was attempting to get the floor to pose a question.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Cape Breton North and Victoria.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

NORTH SYDNEY, N.S.—REQUEST FOR ASSISTANCE FOR DOCK WORKERS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): Mr. Speaker, I apologize for disturbing the complacent Minister of Manpower and Immigration, but I wish to ask whether he is in a position to give the statement that the right hon. Prime Minister promised yesterday with regard to the impending large scale lay-off of dock workers in North Sydney.

Hon. Jean Marchand (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I am ready to do it but I am just wondering if it would be preferable to revert to motions, because the statement occupies a full page.

An hon. Member: No.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): I think that would be an excellent idea.

Mr. Speaker: There is no agreement to return to motions. Will the minister be granted leave to table the document to which he has referred, which contains the information required by the hon. member?

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, I think we should ask for unanimous consent to return to motions because this statement is quite important.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member has already suggested that, and it cannot be done without unanimous agreement. There is obviously no such agreement, but there may be agreement to the minister reading this lengthy document at this time without reverting to motions. Is this agreed?

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): Mr. Speaker, the unanimous consent was given by this side. I would like to know who opposed the minister within his own party.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. We cannot go on with this point of order too long. Is there agreement for the minister to read the document as an answer to the question?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): On a question of timing—

Mr. Marchand: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Is the hon. member for Cape Breton South objecting to the proposal?

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): No, I am not objecting.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Marchand: Mr. Speaker, in recent days—

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, when I said I was not objecting this seemed to amuse the Liberal party. I think the hon. member for Cape Breton North and Victoria is entitled to an answer. When the minister suggested reverting to motions it was somebody within his own party who refused permission. Laugh that off.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Marchand: Mr. Speaker, in recent days the hon. member for Cape Breton North and Victoria has asked a number of questions concerning the manpower situation at the North Sydney terminal of the C.N.R. ferry service to Newfoundland. The changes in the ferry service were announced in 1965. It was then estimated that they will result in the displacement of between 500 to 700 longshoremen at North Sydney.

The government has therefore decided to assess the situation through its manpower consultative service program. To date several hundred men were counselled as to the possibilities of alternative employment. Some 150 men have received or are receiving intensive retraining, close to 80 men accepted alternative employment with the C.N.R., and another 100 found employment elsewhere.

Our efforts under this consultative arrangement with the company and the union are, of course, continuing. Our manpower officers are on the spot and doing their utmost to assist the affected men. In some cases the solution is not easy. The company has made more than 1,000 offers of employment but the men are reluctant to leave the immediate area. The consultative committee has retained the services of motivation specialists in trying to overcome these difficulties.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): Mr. Speaker, do I have permission to reply to this statement in the usual form?

Mr. Speaker: Of course not. The hon. member should ask a supplementary question. He knows he cannot reply to the statement.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): Well, it was a good try. In view of the fact that the minister has not outlined anything new this morning, other than what we already know—and we appreciate what has been done, and I think the leaders of the unions should be commended for their leadership in this training and so on—may I ask the minister has the government no other plans with regard to providing these people with jobs in the immediate area, because they are reluctant to move out of the area?

Mr. Marchand: Mr. Speaker, all our plans are public plans, and I think they are well known. We have consultative services, we have placement services, we have mobility programs and we have retraining programs. They are all known, and these are the only instruments we have to correct this situation.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): As a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, may I ask the minister is this his basic program, the manpower mobility program? Is this the only thing, to move people out of the area? Is this all?

Mr. Marchand: Mr. Speaker, it is not the only program. We have the retraining programs which do not compel the workers to move somewhere else, if of course there are jobs in the area.

Mr. Speaker: Before calling orders of the day I wonder if the house is now disposed to consider the request of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs that we revert to motions for the purpose of tabling a document?

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): No.

Mr. Speaker: There is objection. Orders of the day.

SUPPLY

The house in committee of supply, Mr. Batten in the chair.

The Chairman: Order. House again in committee of supply. When the committee rose on Thursday, March 21, item 30c of the Department of Industry was under consideration.

DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRY

30c. To provide for the insurance, on a shared risk basis with the lender, in the current and subsequent fiscal years, up to an aggregate amount of $100,000,000 on such terms and conditions including the payment of such fees therefor as may be prescribed by the Governor in Council, of loans made before January 1, 1973, under the Adjustment Assistance Program related to the Kennedy round agreements, by private lenders approved by a board established under section 15 of the Department of Industry Act to manufacturers in Canada who, in the opinion of the said board,

(a) require such loans to restructure their operations but are unable to obtain sufficient financing on reasonable terms without the insurance; and

(b) either

(i) are or are likely to be seriously injured by an increase in imports attributable to the Kennedy round tariff reductions made by Canada, or

(ii) have significant export opportunities arising out of the Kennedy round agreements; and for greater certainty to deem the insurance referred to above to be guarantee for purposes of section 27 of the Financial Administration Act, $11,000,002.

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Minister of Industry a question regarding this item, and perhaps in doing so I am boiling down the question that my colleague from Broadview asked him last night. The heart of this item, the wording of which is rather lengthy, is found in the phrase "the adjustment assistance program related to the Kennedy round agreements."

• (11:40 a.m.)

May I ask the minister about that adjustment assistance program. Is it in effect through some other action, such as by order in council, or are we bringing it into effect by this item that is now before us?

Mr. Drury: Mr. Chairman, this item seeks the approval of parliament for the scheme outlined in this particular item, namely authority for the government to enter into a scheme of insured loans for the purpose of enabling those who have been affected by the Kennedy round, and who are desirous of and able to take advantage of the opportunities offered by this, to secure financial help.

Mr. Knowles: In other words we are not just appropriating the sum of $1 by passing this item; we are in effect passing the legislation under which the adjustment assistance program will be operated. Do I take it, therefore, that the only details governing this program are those set out in this wording that is now before the house?

Mr. Drury: No, Mr. Chairman. The hon. member will recollect that in the main estimates there is an item of $10 million which covers another aspect of the assistance program, namely the making available of loan funds as a matter of last resort to individuals who have been adversely affected by the Kennedy round.

Mr. Knowles: Is that item in the estimates for the current year or is it in the estimates for the coming year?

Mr. Drury: It is in the estimates for the coming year.

Mr. Martin (Timmins): Mr. Chairman, I wonder whether the minister could give the house any indication concerning just what the government has in mind in respect of paragraph (a) of item 30c, where it refers to "financing on reasonable terms". Could the minister inform the house what the government has in mind with regard to what constitutes reasonable terms?

Mr. Drury: Mr. Chairman, this was described at some length during the sittings of the parliamentary committee which examined the Kennedy round arrangements. Generally speaking, however, it would be hoped that the normal commercial channels would be made use of. It would be only when a person would seek to take advantage of the Kennedy round arrangements and had been unable for reasons of risk, lack of familiarity, or for some other reason to effectively make use of the normal commercial financing arrangements that he would have resort to the facilities of the board and an insured loan.

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, not long ago when he was in opposition, I believe the Prime Minister was one of those who objected violently to the implementation of statutory legislation by means of estimates. As I understand it we have not passed the adjustment assistance program and in fact have not completed any discussion of the Kennedy round in the legislative sense in respect of what our liability would be and what displacement would take place. Yet we are being asked by means of this statutory item to implement a program about which we have not had any previous knowledge.

I was particularly interested in the minister's reply when he said this supplementary estimate is related to another item of $10 million which appears in the projected estimates with which we are not yet concerned. Therefore I wonder why the Prime Minister has agreed to the implementation of this legislative process by estimates. Personally I am opposed to statutory items except on an emergency basis. If this is an emergency I should hope the minister would give the committee a much fuller report than he has given concerning what might be the implications. Without knowing what displacement is taking place because of the Kennedy round tariff agreement we now are being asked, I presume, to compensate companies which already have gone through the process of establishing what their losses may be and which have gone through the process of appeal to the financial institutions which would be in a position to make loans available to them.

As I read paragraph (a) we are now being asked to underwrite or provide for a loan in a situation where a loan would not otherwise be available. I presume this is similar to the situation in respect of programs where after a company has made application to two banks and has been turned down, a loan can be made through the fund. Since this item is asking for $1 obviously it is not really asking for the establishment of a fund but rather is asking for a statutory authority. Therefore I think these items should be noted very carefully. Certainly this is not the proper way to pass legislation. I believe the Prime Minister was one of those when in opposition who were very much opposed to statutory items, because this would mean that parliament would not be allowed any opportunity to examine the legislation.

I can only guess, because it is not so stated, that if we pass this item we will be passing in some measure the adjustment assistance program. Personally I am of the opinion that this is not the way it should be passed. I believe we should have the full discussion which was promised in respect of the implications of the Kennedy round. This type of item is not one which allows the full discussion which I believe should take place.

Mr. Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Chairman, I also have been much concerned about this item. I wonder whether the minister is in a position to give more particulars than those which are set out here. I presume this item has reference to section 7 of the Department of Industry Act although no mention is made of this in the item. Can the minister give us any information concerning the details of the adjustment assistance program which, as my colleague the hon. member for Timiskaming suggested, we are now being asked to legislate by means of this item?

Mr. Drury: Mr. Chairman, I am sorry the hon. members apparently were unable to participate in the proceedings of the committee which studied the implications of the Kennedy round, and before which the measure proposed by the government was rather exhaustively examined. This resulted in a report which was made to the house on Friday, March 1. The report points out that the committee held 22 meetings and heard the following witnesses: the Minister of Finance, the Minister of Trade and Commerce, the Minister of Industry and the parliamentary secretary to the Minister of Manpower and Immigration.

In addition the committee also obtained information from the assistant deputy minister of finance, the director of tariffs and a member of the tariff division of the Department of Finance, the director of the machinery branch, the industrial policy adviser and chief of the commercial policy division of the Department of Industry, and for the Department of Trade and Commerce the assistant deputy minister of trade policy and director of the office of trade relations. Perhaps I should not go on reading the list of witnesses, which runs on for another page. The report of the committee which was submitted to the house together with the proceedings of the committee would, I think, serve to inform the hon. member of some of the details he is seeking.

Mr. Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Chairman, as a member of that committee I have no recollection of any details of this assistance program being presented to us. It seems to me the minister must have these details in his mind or somewhere in his department. Rather vague references were made during the hearings at which, as the minister has said, a great many witnesses appeared, to some consideration of compensation for those who might be adversely affected by the Kennedy round; but we have no details of it.

Mr. Drury: Mr. Chairman, I am sure the committee would not want me to repeat the statement I made to the standing committee. It would seem to render really useless the work of committees if testimony is to be repeated in extenso in the house. If there are some particular aspects of particular items in relation to this program that hon. gentlemen feel at a loss about, and which were not adequately covered in the proceedings of the committee, I would be glad to answer questions on those particular matters. But I would hope not to waste the time of the house and of parliament by rehashing or repeating here what has been given in evidence and reported in the minutes of the committee.

Mr. Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Then, Mr. Chairman, perhaps the minister could give us some specific information. Are interest rates set under this assistance program? Have they been set? What type of loans are to be guaranteed? What responsibility is the government taking with regard to the guaranteeing of these loans? We certainly heard nothing as to what interest rates are to be charged, and I wonder whether the minister can give us the details in this respect.

Mr. Drury: In so far as the interest rates are concerned, they will be normal commercial rates. I think the hon. gentleman understands that the role of the government of Canada in this program is to act as insurer of loans which the banking community might feel, in light of their normal policy, involve too great a risk. To remove some of this risk the government will act as insurer with respect to a major portion of the loan. But the rates of interest will be those normally chargeable by the institutions for commercial loans. No dollar limit has been set on the loan or the amount to be insured. The borrower will be charged a premium for the insurance, and it is expected that over the course of this program the premiums on the insurance will cover any losses that might be required to be made good under the insurance.

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Chairman, I should like to point out to the minister that he is really begging the question when he tells us these matters have been discussed in the committee and therefore that discussion should not be repeated on the floor of the house. I am inclined to agree with that statement as a matter of general practice, but it is still true that even if a committee has recommended something, it is up to parliament to do the actual legislating.

What rather startles us this morning is the shoehorn way in which we are being given this legislation. When I asked the minister whether this wording in the item now before us, vote 30c, is something new he said there is a similar item in next year's main estimates. When I look it up I find an item in next year's estimates, item L95, for $10 million which again refers to the adjustment assistance program.

So we have two references to the adjustment assistance program. There have been press releases about it, there has been talk about it; but until one of these items is passed it does not legally exist, unless the minister can show me some way in which it has been brought into being. I submit that his earlier answer is correct, and that we are doing it now. If we are being asked now to bring into effect an adjustment assistance program, I think we are entitled to some details about it or should know who is going to work out the details.

I also find it rather interesting when I look at the wording of the item now before us. The wording of vote 30c which is now before us is not the same as that of item L95 in the main estimates for next year. So not only is this item supplementary to something we have not yet passed, but that something we have not yet passed reads differently. Please, Mr. Minister, the shoehorn method does work, but let us have a little more candour about it.

Mr. Drury: Mr. Chairman, when the hon. gentleman says "Let us have a little more candour" I would point out that a standing committee of the house has examined at considerable length the Kennedy round, its implications, the proposals under the general heading of the adjustment assistance program and the steps proposed by the government to deal with the program. The steps proposed involve a number of actions by more than one department comprising a program of the government. It is quite an extensive program.

Some of the elements of the program require legislative authority. In so far as my department is concerned there are two elements requiring legislative authority; one, the launching of an insured loans program to make available financial means to those who wish and are able to take advantage of the opportunities offered by the Kennedy round. We anticipate that another element will be required at a later date, although not nearly as early in the chain of events as the insured loans scheme; indeed, the insured loans scheme should be in operation now. That is why it is in the supplementary estimates.

The second element of the program is for a different purpose and a different set of circumstances, and that is the reason for the change in wording of the vote in the main estimates to which the hon. gentleman has just referred. It is designed to deal with hardship rather than the exploitation of opportunity. It is not expected that these cases of hardship will develop to the point where they can be adequately dealt with at an earlier date, and consequently the provision in the main estimates will meet the time frame.

In addition to that—and this was pointed out at the time as part of the problem of dealing with the change brought about by the Kennedy round—the Minister of Labour, in a different act and at a different time, has sought and obtained the approval of the house to the scaling upward of the unemployment insurance benefits. This is part of the program also, as was outlined to the committee. I am sure the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre will not wish me to recite again in the house the detailed exposition which was given before the committee at a series of 22 meetings.

Mr. Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): I rise on a point of order, Mr. Chairman. I was present at every meeting of the committee and I can say that no details were given to us at any time.

Mr. Drury: Mr. Chairman, I do not want to get into a debate with the hon. gentleman, but I wonder what the committee which produced a report on the implications of the Kennedy round meant to do and what in fact it did in 22 meetings.

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Chairman, like the minister, I do not want to have to spin this out but I do think that in legislative terms this is a rather serious matter. As a result of our exchange this morning we have already dicovered that in addition to item 30c in the present supplementary estimates there is item L95 on page 597 of the estimate for next year.

I have been doing some further checking and I find that on page 257 of the estimates for next year there is another item under the Department of Industry for $1 million for grants to manufacturers in Canada who have applied for government insured or direct loans under the adjustment assistance program. Thus there are three different items in the estimates of this department, one in the present supplementary estimates and two in next year's main estimates, all referring to the adjustment assistance program. I think it is significant that in all cases the first letters of the words "adjustment assistance program" are printed in capital letters. This is a program of substance, not just one of words.

The minister says that the changes in the unemployment insurance rates and benefits were part of this program. I recollect quite well that when the government made its announcement about what it was going to do as a result of the Kennedy round it said it was going to work on two fronts. It was going to do something for industry and something for workers. May I point out to the minister that in the case of unemployment insurance benefits, in the case of what was done for workers, a regular statute was passed by the house amending the Unemployment Insurance Act. Nothing was said in that legislation to the effect that it was part of some nebulous adjustment assistance program. It stood on its own feet. This makes me believe that the adjustment assistance program is mainly under the purview of the Minister of Industry, although I gather from the discussions which may or may not have taken place in the committee that it does not yet exist in legislative terms. But once we have passed this item containing the words "adjustment assistance program" in capital letters we will have enacted it. Perhaps this is a good thing and the house wants to do it this way, but I still think that legislating in this way by these $1 items is a questionable procedure except in ad hoc emergencies or in special cases. I think under some conditions, perhaps involving a retired civil servant's pension, it might be appropriate, but a major program of adjustment assistance should be on a legislative par with the amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act.

I am not examining the substance of the issue but, if I may go back to the phrase I used, I think this is a shoehorning method of getting on to the statute books something which until now is not there. There is no adjustment assistance program of legal effect on the statute books of Canada as of now. When we pass this $1 item and the estimate becomes part of the supplementary estimates and a supply bill is passed, then it becomes statutory and we will have the adjustment assistance program which may lead to a lot of things. Perhaps it is desirable, but I think the least the minister could do is to admit he is getting this piece of legislation through in the easiest possible way.

Mr. Gilbert: Mr. Chairman, I am sure the minister does not want to mislead hon. members when he says the standing committee on finance, trade and economic affairs went into the full details of the adjustment assistance program. What actually happened was that prior to the first meeting the Prime Minister issued a statement setting forth the areas in which assistance would be given, and some of the witnesses before the committee were deliberately evasive with regard to the details. I am not complaining about that because they probably had not worked out the details at that time. However, the minister is not correct when he says that the committee went into it in detail. I do not think the minister's officials had worked out the details at that time.

I recall that three areas were discussed. The first was government insured loans, the second was direct loans, and the third was consultative services. It was only today that the minister said that this item referred directly to government insured loans and that the $10 million to which I referred last night is for direct assistance to companies which do not qualify for government assistance loans.

I ask the minister to give us some details with regard to the item for $10 million which is now in the main estimates because I would like to know what type of loans will be offered, to whom, at what rates, for what length of time, and whether this sum will be considered as a direct contribution to business to take care of the effects of the Kennedy round or whether the government hopes to get back the moneys from these companies to which they are making loans. I should also like to know whether the $10 million includes the consultative services, which was the third area of help which the government intented to give. I am sure the minister has these details. They were not available at the time the witnesses appeared before the committee, and if the minister has them we would like to hear what they are.

Mr. Drury: I do not want to take refuge in points of order but perhaps I should because, according to the press, there appears to be an attempt to prolong this debate. I think even the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre will agree what we should not examine the details of items contained in the main estimates. We are now concerned with the supplementary estimates, and I have just been asked for details of vote L95 in the main estimates and for some details in relation to another item in the main estimates dealing with assistance, which incidentally is planned to be a payment of up to half the cost of consultative services for those who are unable to afford the full cost. There is an item provided which would allow money to be used for this purpose. I point out to the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre that this is the normal way in which the department functions. There is a statute which lays out the objectives, duties and powers of the department and which enables the minister to execute these powers by way of parliamentary appropriation.

In the case of the item we are looking at now, the dollar item, that is all the expenditure it is contemplated will be required to carry through the program of insured loans.

Mr. Peters: You do not need even a dollar.

Mr. Drury: No, I hope that one dollar will be in excess of what the government will have to spend on this program of insured loans. This should commend itself to hon. gentlemen opposite. The program is good and fills what is clearly a need. It is designed to enable people to take advantage of opportunities that are being created and to provide a stimulus to the growth of our economy. I suggest that placing the item in the supplementary estimates for passage now makes it effective immediately rather than waiting for the main estimates which would be subject to approval only at a later date. We are endeavouring to get on with the task that we have, that of seizing an opportunity and making the most of it.

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Chairman, regardless of the observations of the minister concerning the discussion of the details of this item I think he would not deny that vote 30c has an important aspect to it. The minister may or may not recall that there have been occasions in the house when the whole question of one dollar legislative items has been the subject of considerable discussion. In my view the question has never been properly resolved. It is a matter of continuing concern to many members in addition to the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre that this method of legislating appears with increasing frequency. It may have merit. However, there appears to be an increasing tendency to carry through significant and important legislative measures by means of one dollar items in the supplementary estimates. Sometimes these items go through with little or no examination in the committee. If we are going to follow this practice, then ministers should pay particular attention to trying to make sure that these proposals fit into some orderly legislative framework by giving a detailed statement in the vote. In this case, as the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre has pointed out, approval of this item will mean—I am not discussing the desirability or otherwise of the program—we will bring into being a capitalized adjustment assistance program.

As it happens, I have a copy of the Department of Industry Act with me because of some discussion we had on another matter yesterday. Section 15 of that act clearly states:

> The governor in council may establish advisory and other committees to advise or aid the minister or to perform such duties and exercise such powers as the governor in council may specify, and may fix the remuneration and expenses to be paid to the persons so appointed.

I wonder whether the minister would be prepared to consider some clarification of the wording of vote 30c which would perhaps help to clarify the existing legislative authority from which the proposal in this vote flows?

[Mr. Drury.]

I have been looking at the act and section 7 reads in part:

> The minister shall—
> (c) develop and carry out such programs and projects as may be appropriate
> (i) to assist the adaptation of manufacturing industries to changing conditions on domestic and export markets, and to changes in the techniques of production,

I may be wrong in my assessment but it would appear to me there is some flow of authority from section 7 of the Department of Industry Act with regard to this one dollar item. To that extent I assume the minister would be prepared to argue that he has acted within the scope of his authority in bringing forward this proposal. I am not quarrelling with him on that score. However, it does seem to me it would be much easier to have an understanding of what we are doing if there were a clear reference to the basic parliamentary statute from which this authority flows. If my assessment is correct, I wonder whether the minister might be prepared to consider an amendment to the wording of vote 30c somewhat to this effect: "To provide, as provided in section 7 of the Department of Industry Act." In this way there would be a ready reference which would enable anyone concerned with this measure to understand what we were doing when in effect we pass a bill without going through first, second or third reading stages. Would the minister indicate his reaction to what I sincerely feel is a helpful suggestion under the circumstances?

Mr. Drury: Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the efforts of the hon. member in attempting a clarification. However, if one were to follow this particular technique throughout all the estimates one would be documenting the authority of the various departments to take the action involved in the expenditure of moneys that are voted. This is a basic assumption underlying all of the estimates, that the expenditure of the money provided does fall within the statutory authority accorded to the department and the minister concerned. All the hon. gentleman is doing here is documenting the statutory authority of the Minister of Industry to engage in this particular activity. I suggest that this would be a rather unfortunate precedent and would raise a question whether the department is within its authority and whether its assertion of authority is well founded. Second, it would increase the physical volume of the book of estimates quite substantially. While I appreciate his endeavour to provide clarification, I suggest that while it might be useful in one respect it would have disadvantages in another.

• (12:20 p.m.)

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Chairman, I thought I had made it quite clear that I was referring to these so-called one dollar items, the only purpose of which is to legislate. I think the minister is begging the point I am trying to make.

As I have said, reference is made to section 15 of the industry act. I should like to give the minister a parallel situation. There is in existence in Canada a fisheries research board. Items are brought forward from year to year asking for funds for that board. If there were before us a parallel item to this to establish a specific new program of fisheries research, to which we would agree by a simple vote in committee of supply and subsequently through the bill that followed, then I would feel we should have to spell out carefully in the terms of such vote the authority we were giving the minister. I think the minister is trying to muddy the water on this point by suggesting that this is parallel to the voting of expenditures under well established programs.

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, as I say I am not in favour of this item. The minister is passing judgment on the assistance program and I have heard my colleagues say that they do not know what the terms of this program are. The minister said that three programs were involved, the second of which was an increase in the benefits under the unemployment insurance fund. When the house approved of those benefits I am sure the minister did not say that as a result of the Kennedy round tariff negotiations the workers of the country would be required to increase their contributions to the fund. They feel that since wage conditions have improved a different category entirely should be covered by unemployment insurance. However, I am sure they did not realize they would have to compensate the fund.

No department is more qualified than the minister's department to establish a new program. The minister is calling it the A.A.P. instead of the ADA or FRED or one of several other programs in his department. The program will be established by passage of a one dollar item. The minister agreed that he was not going to spend that dollar; it is simply an indication that this item has a statutory effect. However, I suggest that if a new program is to be established by this item we are entitled to discuss the matter as we would discuss any piece of legislation introduced into this house.

If I remember correctly, when the area development assistance program was passed it was preceded by a piece of legislation. There is no doubt that the minister has authority to establish programs under the act. However, the act does not provide for establishment of such programs by interdepartmental action; they must be established by legislative action on the part of this house. My objection is to legislative action being taken by means of a statutory item of one dollar when we are unfamiliar with the details of the program.

The hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre pointed out that if an important person died without provision being made for a pension for his widow, a statutory item could be introduced for that purpose. I am sure everyone would agree, even the members of another party who are not at all interested in estimates, that problems of particular individuals cannot be considered even though we admit there may be an oversight in a specific case. However, payments may be made out of the general revenue fund provided a one dollar item is passed.

This adjustment assistance plan is going to involve a great deal of money in many fields and I am sure will be in existence for some time. Situations will change; indeed, things have changed since the initial discussions took place on the Kennedy round. For this reason alone the minister should not only be willing to introduce this item in some other manner but should welcome the opportunity to do so.

The minister mentioned three programs, one of which was in relation to unemployment insurance. I am sure he agrees this is not the most important program of the three. I cannot see much relationship between the amendments to the unemployment insurance plan that we passed and this program except as it indirectly affects displacement of workers.

I am sure that the minister will agree that this program is no different from any other. Certainly this is not the way to pass legislation. Although there may be difficulties, these can be overcome in another way. I have always maintained that there are some smart people in the ministers' department, and the discussion this morning is an indication that this is not a facetious observation. However, they are doing something that the Department of Labour did not try to do, namely, putting forward a major part of a program as a one dollar item in the supplementary estimates instead of introducing it in the form of government legislation. Although this may not be an illegal method, it is one that I cannot support.

I am prepared to move a motion to reduce the item but will not do so because that would kill it. Though I am prepared to kill the item I am not prepared to kill the principle and therefore I face a dilemma. Look around, Mr. Chairman. If my motion carried, as well it might, that would be the end of the adjustment assistance program, and I do not want that. Frankly I do not know how good the program is. My colleagues asked questions about it but they got no answers. They got no answers in committee either. If we had referred the program to the committee it would have been sent back here in any event. Committees do not initiate legislation. They do not initiate discussion on any subject that is not referred to them.

Mr. Drury: But it was referred to them.

Mr. Peters: I presume it was referred to them in the context of the over-all picture of the Kennedy round discussions. This program in particular was not referred to the committee. It was introduced to us by the minister. The minister probably introduced discussion of it in the committee. Certainly the minister talked to the press about the program.

Obviously the $1 in these estimates means nothing. It is only a legal gimmick. It establishes the program in the legal sense. Since the minister is an administrator as well as a politician he will agree that his officials like this procedure. In any event, during the last four or five years many programs have been introduced by means of a dollar item in the estimates instead of by a bill. When a program is good the government takes credit for it, and when it is bad it must also accept responsibility. By introducing programs in this way the government is clearly sidestepping the necessity of bringing in a bill. This method of legislating is tantamount to denying certain members the privilege of discussion under the parliamentary system.

Before the item is introduced in the house the minister knows what the regulations applicable to it are. Yet I suggest that he does not know exactly what money will be needed since the administrative machinery under this program will be cumbersome and any applicant seeking money under this insurance program will have to go through certain procedures before getting the money. The minister knows how all this will work. He probably knows the timetable that is involved. That being so, will he not argee with me that he is being unfair with us and with himself by not divulging what form the administrative machinery will take? I urge the minister to consider these remarks because there are other, similar statutory items in these estimates to which my remarks also apply.

In the minister's department there are these young go-go fellows who dream up initials like A.A.P.—adjustment assistance program—N.D.P., and so on. We shall have a hard time identifying all these programs at this rate. In any event, I want to warn the minister that if he or others are considering the introduction of other legislative items in this manner, our party will probably take a hard look at them. We are prepared to make a major issue of this type of implementation of an otherwise appropriate piece of legislation.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): Mr. Chairman, I have a few questions to ask. Unlike the hon. member for Timiskaming who has just taken his seat, I am really interested in securing information about this vote. I attempted to catch the chairman's eye on several occasions but was prevented from speaking because N.D.P. members were given the opportunity to speak. I am sure they will not begrudge me this opportunity since the hon. member for Antigonish-Guysborough prevented my replying to the minister's statement on motions regarding the dock workers at North Sydney. I point out that the minister had asked for information. I do not know what the hon. member for Antigonish-Guysborough has against the North Sydney dock workers, but that is another story and we shall take it up another day.

I have digressed for a moment from the subject the former speaker dealt with. I wish to ask the minister whether under this adjustment assistance program which is connected with the Kennedy round agreements Sysco—that the Sydney Steel Corporation—will be eligible for assistance. If so, will the minister be kind enough to explain how it will be eligible for assistance?

Mr. Drury: Mr. Chairman, as my hon. friend knows, as a consequence of the agreements achieved at Geneva in respect of lowering tariffs around the world a considerable number of export opportunities have been presented to Canadians through the lowering of the tariffs of other countries. In order for Canadian manufacturers and processors to take advantage of these opportunities, changes in their previous modus operandi have to be made. If they are to seize the opportunity they must change what they have been doing in type, kind, skill or volume. Generally speaking this has required some physical changes, and physical changes normally require financing.

The object of the Department of Industry is to provide all the assistance it can to enable Canadian manufacturers and processors to take advantage of these increased opportunities. This particular item is related to the process of taking advantage of opportunities. In the case of those who for one reason or another, either because they are high risk borrowers under normal commercial arrangements or because they have an inadequate corporate financial structure, are unable to secure commercial loans to take advantage of opportunities, then the department under this arrangement, if in the opinion of the board which is mentioned here the changes are economically sound and viable and are directed toward taking advantage of the opportunity, will undertake to provide on behalf of the government insurance with a commercial lender. We are prepared to make loan insurance available to cover the added risk of this kind of loan.

The hon. gentleman has asked me whether Sysco would be eligible for assistance under this provision. That would depend on the plans Sysco may have to take advantage of the increased export opportunities offered by the Kennedy round. Whether Sysco has any such plans I confess I do not know. If the company does have such plans involving additional financing and if it is unable through its own normal commercial financing to carry out these changes, then this section will come into operation.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): I thank the minister for that statement. I am sure he will be the first to agree that if he and his cabinet colleagues do not get off their asses and do something in a hurry Sysco will probably not be in a position to make plans in the future with regard to any operation. In any event, with the assistance of all the go-go whiz kids the minister has at his disposal in the department I trust he is in a position to give me a little information.

The minister mentioned the benefits which will be derived from the Kennedy round. What benefits has steel received as a result of the Kennedy round and what disadvantages with respect to the importation of cheaper steel into this country? Will the minister indicate the benefits which the steel industry of this country and, I hope, the workers employed in it, are to receive through the Kennedy round? As Minister of Industry I am sure he has this information at his fingertips. I am confident that he, knowing industry as well as he does, will have no difficulty in telling us just what the advantages are. I am equally sure he must be in a position to inform the committee about the difference in tariffs on the importation of steel into Canada since this agreement was reached in Geneva.

Mr. Drury: I do not have the detailed information as to tariff changes in connection with steel, though this can be obtained. I believe the hon. gentleman is fully aware that in tariff terms the duty on steel is a complicated affair. There is no such thing as just "steel". The word covers a great many categories, a great many forms, and as a consequence there are a great many specialized tariff arrangements. I confess I do not pretend to carry in my head all these classifications and all the changes which have been made, but if these are of interest to the hon. gentleman I will see that the information is provided.

So far as benefits to the steelmakers of Canada are concerned I can only point out that there has been a reduction in the tariff affecting the import by foreigners of steel produced in Canada. This does, of course, provide more opportunity for those who are interested in exporting steel, and some of our producers have been very successful in this field. I admit there is a counterpart to this benefit, namely, a lowering of the barriers against the inflow of steel into Canada, which permits increased competition domestically. But in the case of steel the tariff changes have perhaps not been too significant because the tariffs on most forms of steel have, in international terms, been relatively low, not an item of major significance. Of more significance are the provisions relating to dumping. But that is another story unrelated to the point we have been considering and it will be the object of legislation to be introduced at a later date. It has formed the subject of an exhaustive examination by the committee on finance and trade.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): Since we are dealing with industry, the manufacture of steel and the effect of the Kennedy round on steel production, in particular its effect on Sysco, is the minister in a position to provide the committee today with any further information respecting measures which may be taken to assist that company? Will it be given terms similar to those provided to other industries in this country? For example, since the Emergency Gold Mining Assistance Act was proclaimed I believe between $180 and $190 million has been poured into that industry. And the expenditure has been well worth while. I am wondering whether the minister is in a position at this late hour and late date before the house adjourns to give us some encouraging news on behalf of the cabinet as to what the federal government has in mind in connection with the future of more than 3,000 steel workers and their families at Sydney? Will they be faced with unemployment?

I am sure the minister will agree that the province of Nova Scotia has gone as far as it can in trying to operate this steel mill. But the treasury of the province is simply too small to enable it to finance this industry. All the province has asked for, as I understand it, is a loan from the federal government. I hope this loan will be forthcoming. At the present time I understand the situation is that the request has been rejected and an alternative offer made to provide $2 million plus some other benefits.

Is nothing to be done, or can the minister tell us that a decision was reached at the cabinet meeting this morning, if there were enough cabinet members around to hold a meeting?

An hon. Member: Ask him what the provincial Liberal leader said in Nova Scotia.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): He said the premier of Nova Scotia should have asked for an outright grant from the government to purchase this steel plant, not for a loan. I hope the minister will agree with the leader of the Liberal party in Nova Scotia and be in a position to advise us, as Mr. Regan said in Halifax, that there will be a grant of $10 million or $12 million.

• (12:50 p.m.)

When we can finance some of the crazy things that the government devises, surely we can assist to finance industry. The Minister of Industry in particular should realize that. He should impress upon his cabinet colleagues that this is important. He has to provide jobs.

[Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria).]

That is his job as Minister of Industry. If the cabinet minister from Nova Scotia is such a weak sister that he cannot get very much to assist the thousands of steel workers at Sydney and their families, plus the service trades, etc., surely this minister from the province of Quebec, this minister who knows how important it is to have at least bread and butter on the table, should be in a position to do something to assist the cabinet minister from Nova Scotia and to fight against all the Goldwaters in the cabinet. Maybe I am looking at one right now; I don't know, but I often think so.

I ask the minister to rise to his feet now and give us some words of encouragement, not just the sympathy he expressed the other night with regard to the dock workers at North Sydney. We have got the sympathy of the government, the Minister of Manpower and Immigration, the Prime Minister and the Minister of Industry, but this does not put money in the pockets of the unemployed workers, be they steel workers or dock workers, I ask the minister to kindly rise to his feet and bring us up to date on what the government has done or is going to do with reference to the very serious and tragic situation facing the steel workers in the city of Sydney and the surrounding areas.

Mr. Drury: Mr. Chairman, I cannot help but respond to an eloquent plea on behalf of the steel workers in Sydney. Unfortunately the sympathy to which the hon. gentleman has referred rather has the edge taken off it by referring to one of my cabinet colleagues as week-kneed—

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): No, no. Weak sister.

Mr. Drury: —and unnamed others, perhaps including myself, as Goldwaters. I take it this is meant in a pejorative sense. Scoring a few little digs rather takes the edge off—

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): Please don't be so thin-skinned. Don't be so childish. Go on with your remarks.

Mr. Drury: Again the hon. gentleman's attitude—

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): You are not in Sunday school, you know.

Mr. Drury: Again the hon. gentleman's advocacy of the case of the Sydney steel workers is a plea for understanding and sympathy, the reception of which is hardly inproved by the objurgation not to be so thin-skinned and childish. I would like to assure the hon. gentleman that I have a great deal of feeling for the difficult position in which the people in northern Cape Breton find themselves and I have been interested in trying to devise viable, sound solutions to the very difficult problems that face the area. But I do feel rather badly when attempts are made to use this situation in order to score either debating or political advantage. In so far as the main question is concerned I regret to say that to the best of my knowledge, in spite of the fact that we had a cabinet meeting yesterday and in spite of the rather sly suggestion that probably there were not enough cabinet ministers around to have one—there were enough and we had a meeting—no further developments have taken place subsequent to those which the Prime Minister has already made public.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): Mr. Chairman, I am very pleased to hear the minister say that there have been further developments. Undoubtedly in a very short period of time we will hear good news that not only will the federal government assist but that they will do so not in the form of loan but in the form of an outright grant. Grants have been made by the government in many instances—

Mr. Drury: Mr. Chairman, I said I was sorry to announce that there were no further developments. I think the hon. member may not have heard me.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): The minister now straightens it out but I am sure the minister, and others heard him, said there had been other developments. However, I take the minister's word for it. I am rather surprised and shocked that this man of the world, this man who has had lots of experience throughout his lifetime, has been hurt so badly and has possibly had his pride injured by remarks I made. The first thing we know he will be telling us to keep politics out of the House of Commons, as the hon. member for Red Deer did one day. I wonder how the minister got here? Was it through politics? Did he not speak about parties and individuals in other parties? Right. He agrees with me. That is fine. We have got him agreeing so I assume he will not feel too badly if I suggest he might be a Goldwater or something like that. I suggest he give a second thought to what he said.

Not many weeks ago a member quoted the old adage attributed to Harry Truman, "If it is too hot in the kitchen stay the hell out of it." The minister should not stay here if he finds it too hot. We will wait and see if this minister who states he is not a Goldwaterite—he isn't this, he isn't that, he is a good guy—is going to do everything he can to assist the steel workers in Sydney. I hope he will and will have the assistance of the other cabinet ministers.

We have been rather patient, Mr. Chairman. Someone said in the house not too many weeks ago, "I am a very patient man." But the patience of the steel workers in Sydney can only go on so long. It was on October 13, 1967, that the original statement was made by Dosco that they were going to close down the Sydney steel industry. They announced it in a very cruel and harsh manner. As we all know, the house adjourned to debate the matter. Everyone in the house thought it was a national issue, and apparently it was because there was no real opposition to adjourning the house.

In any event, time is going by and time is of the essence. That is why I am trying to point out to the minister today the urgency of doing something. The matter is very much tied in with the Kennedy round. If more steel is brought into Canada, under a lower tariff it is going to affect Hamilton, Sault Ste. Marie and Sydney, if Sydney is still in operation then, and I hope and pray to God it will be. It is going to affect all these steel manufacturers.

I may have a few words to say a little later but in closing I hope the minister will give very serious consideration to his job, to the question of trying to do something to help the Sydney steel workers, and not worry too much and not lose too much sleep because someone throws a remark across the floor. My heavens, I have heard the right hon. member for Prince Albert say that we are a bunch of pansies compared with members 100 years ago or 50 years ago. So why should we feel so hurt, feel so badly if someone says something that might offend? If I did, I truly apologize.

Mr. Peters: One o'clock.

Mr. Drury: Mr. Chairman, there has possibly been some loss of time as a consequence of digressions, and in order to expedite the business I would be glad to see the committee sit through the lunch hour so that we can get through these estimates.

Mr. Peters: One o'clock.

Mr. Drury: I am sorry, Mr. Chairman, I see that the N.D.P. insists on calling it one o'clock.

The Chairman: If there is any disposition for the committee to sit through the lunch hour it would be necessary for the decision to be made in the proper way and not by the committee itself.

Mr. Peters: One o'clock, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Order. It being one o'clock I do now leave the chair.

At one o'clock the committee took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The committee resumed at 2.30 p.m.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. House again in committee of supply. When the committee rose at one o'clock it was considering item 30c of the Department of Industry. Shall the item carry?

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): Mr. Chairman, we all realize that the government is very anxious to get the estimates through the house. It is unfortunate that the minister concerned is not as anxious as are other members.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Chairman, if the hon. member would permit I should like to say that the minister has been seeing a delegation in company with his colleague, the hon. member for Portage-Neepawa. He will be in the house instantly.

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): Mr. Chairman, if it is a matter of an instant I would prefer to wait until the minister arrives.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall item 30c carry?

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): No, Mr. Chairman. Of necessity I must be repetitious because what I say now I shall repeat when the minister returns to the house. It is regrettable that the hon. member for Cape Breton North and Victoria, when making inquiries of the minister this morning, did not receive the co-operation of the house. When the Minister of Manpower and Immigration asked for permission to revert to motions in order to make a statement with regard to the very serious aspects of the employment situation in Cape Breton he was not permitted to do so because the hon. member for Antigonish-Guysborough rejected the request that a statement be made. The only choice left open to the minister at that time was to ask for supplementary questions.

Now that the Minister of Industry has returned to the house I should like for a few moments to refer to a remark he made when questioned about the Kennedy round. The minister referred to dumping. It is a well known fact that any nation in the world which is making progress must have a basic steel industry. In Canada the basic steel industry is very badly affected because of the fact that cheap steel is imported. I realize that quite often this is referred to as dumping, but it is dumping only if the imported steel which is undermining the basic Canadian steel industry comes into Canada at a price cheaper than the cost of production in the country of origin. I realize that if the request I am about to make were granted there might be repercussions on the international scene. However, since steel is so basic to the Canadian economy perhaps the minister would consider consulting with his colleagues about the possibility of bringing about a change in the definition of dumping.

I believe the government should take steps to redefine the meaning of dumping if this could be done to the advantage of Canada. Although we understand it is not dumping as long as the product is landed in this country at a price which is not below the production cost in the country of origin, nevertheless there is a great difference in this case between the landed price and the Canadian production cost. Therefore I ask the minister and his colleagues to review the situation so that possibly the definition of dumping could be related to the Canadian production cost rather than the production cost in the country of origin. In this way I believe a great deal of the disparity in prices could be eliminated to the advantage of the Canadian steel industry. If it would appear that the advantages would be greater than the disadvantages, then I think the government should take a hard look at the situation and bring in a redefinition of the term "dumping".

With reference to the Sydney steel industry the minister apparently is not aware of the representations which have been made with regard to this matter by some of his own colleagues. In respect of the negotiations between the federal and provincial governments he said earlier that further developments were taking place. But after he had resumed his seat someone whispered in his ear and he jumped to his feet again. At that time he said that there were no further developments. Either the minister or whoever whispered in his ear is not up to date in respect of the situation which prevails now with regard to the negotiations between the federal and provincial governments. If they are, then what the Prime Minister said in the house the other day was not completely in accordance with the facts.

When answering that question directly the Prime Minister said—the minister looks at me now with some interest—that he was awaiting a reply from Premier Smith on the latest correspondence which had been forwarded to him. So for the minister to stand up one moment and say there are developments, and then to immediately deny it, is further evidence of the fact that attention is not being paid to the negotiations going on between the federal and provincial governments respecting the Sydney steel industry. This should shame the minister who professes to have an interest in and to be concerned about the problem in Sydney.

I also remind the minister that one of his colleagues, the Minister of National Health and Welfare, told an audience of 20,000 people in Sydney that the federal government was searching desperately for a way which would assist in bringing about a satisfactory solution of the problem faced by the Sydney steel industry. "Searching desperately" were the words used by the Minister of National Health and Welfare.

This is no longer a Cape Breton problem; it has become a Nova Scotia problem because all the people of Nova Scotia are assisting in this regard. The taxpayers of Nova Scotia are carrying the load. The government of Nova Scotia put a very simple solution before the federal government. The government of Nova Scotia asked that the federal government lend them 50 per cent of the purchase price of this plant. The federal government took the callous attitude that this assistance would not be made available, which is a complete denial of the Minister of National Health and Welfare who said that his government was searching desperately for a way in which to assist the industry. The federal government has a simple out, namely, to lend the government of Nova Scotia 50 per cent of the funds necessary to purchase this plant.

How desperately has this government been searching for ways in which to solve this problem? How honest has it been in its promise to assist the Sydney steelworkers? On Monday of this week the Prime Minister, in a nationally televised program, said that if it was a matter of spending money to keep men employed he would be happy to spend that money.

The province of Nova Scotia has asked for a loan of about $12 million for this purpose but the federal government has callously refused to make that loan. At the time this appeal was before the government the Minister of Trade and Commerce signed an agreement to lend $20 million to the government of India. What I have said in this regard has been interpreted as a stand on my part against foreign aid. This is not the case at all. The fact that I object to the government lending a foreign country $20 million, while it refuses to lend a provincial government a little better than 50 per cent of that amount, is another indication that this government is not at all concerned about the problem and is not supporting the statements made by the Minister of National Health and Welfare who, I repeat, said that the federal government was searching desperately for a way in which to help the steel industry of Sydney. Hon. members opposite like to interpret the stand I have taken in this respect as one that is against foreign aid. They like to say I am against feeding the starving children of India. This is the inference that has been drawn respecting my objection to $20 million being lent to India while a loan of $12 million is refused to a province of Canada in order to assist Canadian citizens.

I think that in the long run the federal government would benefit from such a loan being made to the province of Nova Scotia. If the government lent that money to Nova Scotia, in the next few years it would be collecting income tax on the wages earned by Sydney steelworkers. If the government continues its callous attitude, 3,000 Canadian citizens will be out of work, and not only will the government not collect income tax on the wages that would have been earned but it will be compelled to pay unemployment insurance to these people. This represents a considerable amount of money.

I repeat, Mr. Chairman, that a government which professes to be searching desperately for a way in which to help these people has lent a foreign government $20 million while refusing Canadian citizens the opportunity to go to work. I say this is a complete denial of the statement made by the Prime Minister on Monday of this week, and it is a complete denial of the statement the Minister of National Health and Welfare made to the people of Cape Breton.

Mr. Schreyer: Mr. Chairman, would the hon. member permit a question?

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): Yes.

Mr. Schreyer: I would simply like to ask the hon. member whether he could tell us from whose mouth came the refusal by the federal government to extend this loan.

Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South): It is rather difficult to pin it down to individuals because the government has a spokesman, and in this case the spokesman appears to be the Prime Minister. I can truthfully say that at no time did the Prime Minister say there was an absolute refusal, but I do not think there is too much question about the attitude of the Minister of Trade and Commerce who is a Nova Scotian. He stated outside the house that this plant is not an economic unit and should therefore go down the drain. I cannot put my finger on any one individual as saying that there has been an absolute refusal in this regard, but there is certainly no agreement by the cabinet to give the assistance for which the Minister of National Health and Welfare said the government was searching desperately.

As I have pointed out, in refusing this help the government is denying Canadian citizens, its Prime Minister and the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Having made this statement, the Minister of National Health and Welfare during the campaign for the leadership of the Liberal party took great pleasure in being photographed in a province which is to benefit from something that will be lost to Nova Scotia, his own province. He took advantage of the publicity available to him whereby another province will gain at the expense of his own province of Nova Scotia. Evidence of this is to be found in the pictures and news stories emanating from the province of Prince Edward Island, where transfers will take place to the detriment of the Annapolis Valley area of Nova Scotia.

The minister from Nova Scotia, who I daresay is anxious to see something done to assist the Sydney steel plant, a few years ago on the eve of a federal election made the promise of $25 million in aid to the province. That aid was never forthcoming. However, the crisis that was developing in the coal industry of Nova Scotia at that time was alleviated somewhat by the establishment of the Cape Breton Development Corporation. Hon. members on the other side of the house are very free in making reference to that development corporation and what it will bring about, but they make only passing references to it and do not understand what the corporation is all about.

We are faced with a promise made by the Minister of National Health and Welfare before 20,000 people in Cape Breton last summer, and that promise has not yet been fulfilled. The promise of assistance in the amount of $25 million to help the coal industry open a new mine has also never been kept. The situation so far as the steel industry is concerned is very grave. The government insists that it is concerned about the situation, but what has it to offer in the way of a solution?

When questioning the Prime Minister the other day about certain promises he made to the government of Nova Scotia, I asked about the $1.7 million that was to be made available to that government to assist this industry. I quoted from a letter written by the Prime Minister. The only come-back of the Prime Minister was that he doubted that was the case and he asked for the date of the letter. This was a ridiculous request by the Prime Minister. When I told him the letter had been written on January 23, 1968, there was no further come-back from the Prime Minister or anybody on the government benches.

What do we find in the Prime Minister's letter of January 23, 1968, in respect of the Sydney steel industry? He made an ambiguous reference to $1.7 million which was lent to Dosco prior to their announced withdrawal from the industry, an amount of money which was made available under an agreement for the construction of pier facilities. There was also in the Prime Minister's letter an ambiguous reference to a possible claim which they had on that $1.7 million, and the Prime Minister offered to the province of Nova Scotia something which he is not sure he had himself.

As long ago as October 1967, the Minister of Justice was questioned on whether or not the company's withdrawal at that time was a breach of contract. Despite that fact this potential leader of the Liberal party, the Minister of Justice, has not yet, after six months, answered this simple question and has not made up his mind on the legality of the company's withdrawal. Yet the government wrote a letter to the province of Nova Scotia refusing that province something which was granted to India to a much greater extent. The government said to the province of Nova Scotia: We will give you $1.7 million although we do not know yet whether we have a claim on it, but it is there for you to take.

The Minister of Industry cannot get away from the fact that he first said in the house today that further developments were taking place. However, when he sat down he was whispered to and as a result he jumped up and corrected himself by saying that no further developments were taking place. It is a ridiculous situation for a minister of the crown to stand up in the house and say there are no further developments when only a few days prior the Prime Minister himself indicated in the house that he is awaiting an answer from the premier of Nova Scotia. The ministers of this government are free with generous phrases when they think it will be a popular thing to say and it will be of advantage to them to say it. However, so far as the area of Cape Breton and other parts of Nova Scotia are concerned they have not backed up anything they have said in a number of years. In fact, one minister has denied what another one has said.

Let me give the committee an example of one minister contradicting what another one said. Not too long ago one minister, when questioned about plans for phasing out the Sydney steel operation, said it would be foolish for the government to do so. However, on the same day his colleague, the Minister of Forestry and Rural Development, spoke in Alberta and said the government had plans in this respect. What kind of government is this when its members continually make contradictory statements? How can we rely upon anything stated by any minister? The Minister of National Health and Welfare makes statements freely about industry in Nova Scotia, whether it be the steel, coal or any other industry, and he does so all across Canada when he thinks these statements will gain him popularity. But when he comes back to the house the rules prohibit us from asking him questions about the statements he has made, despite the fact that the precedent has been well established over the years that when a minister of the crown speaks outside the house, unless he specifically states he is expressing a private opinion he is stating government policy.

We are continually faced with this problem. We cannot ask the Minister of National Health and Welfare questions about statements he makes outside the house in respect of the steel, coal, or any other industry because we are told this matter does not come under his jurisdiction. This is a ridiculous precedent which has been set under this government. As I pointed out, the minister himself has been caught in contradictions. I have only referred to one case when the Minister of Justice said it would be foolish for the government to make plans in a certain respect while his colleague, two seats away from him, when speaking in western Canada referred to the government's plans in the same connection. We do not have to go beyond today to encounter contradictions. When today's Hansard is printed we will find another denial on the government side of the house.

We have witnessed a rare occurrence in this house. I do not know whether it has ever happened before. Despite the fact some hon. members have had 30 years experience in the house, none of them has seen two ministers of the crown disagreeing on an issue in the house. Yet we witnessed this the day before yesterday. In Wednesday's Hansard we will find one minister contradicting the statement of another despite the fact that cabinet ministers are supposed to show solidarity. I suggest it might not be a bad idea if the word "solidarity" were emblazoned on a tablet placed on a wall outside the chamber so that each and every minister could look at it each day on his way to the house and realize the importance of cabinet solidarity.

Let me again refer to what happened in the house when the Minister of National Defence stood up today and said he disagreed with what was said by the Minister of Agriculture. This is not supposed to happen among cabinet ministers who should show solidarity and unity. It is an amazing thing to see the lack of unity amoung the ministers of this government who at the same time have appealed to members of the opposition to unite with them in passing these estimates so as to allow the Liberal party to get on with its campaign.

There are some amazing stories to be told such as the one about the minister who spoke to me yesterday and said that the longer we keep this debate going the better the chances are for the wrong man to become leader of the Liberal party. He was referring to one of his colleagues in the cabinet as the wrong man for the leadership, and he said that the longer we stay here the tougher it will be for the man whom he considers to be the right man for the position to win the leadership. This was a minister of the crown speaking about two of his own colleagues. He happens to support the Minister of Justice and he is very much against the idea of the Secretary of State for External Affairs becoming the prime minister of this country. What kind of co-operation, assistance, honesty and dedication can we expect from such a cabinet when its members contradict one another and, for example, do not bother acquainting themselves with the facts concerning the basic steel industry in this country?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall vote 30c carry?

Item agreed to.

L66c. Loans under the Pharmaceutical Industry Development Assistance program in the current and subsequent fiscal years in accordance with terms and conditions prescribed by the Governor in Council to companies in Canada for the purpose of improving their ability to manufacture and market lower priced prescription drugs at competitive prices through reorganization of any of their operations of manufacturing, marketing, distribution and research, and who are unable to obtain sufficient financing on reasonable terms from other sources for such purposes, $2,000,000.

Item agreed to.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: This completes the estimates of the Department of Industry.

Mr. Drury: I wonder if we could also consider vote L66c at page 31, which also comes under the Department of Industry.

• (3:00 p.m.)

Mr. Bell (Carleton): It has already been passed.

Mr. Drury: I am sorry, I understand it has been passed.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Is that vote L66c? This vote has been carried.

Mr. Barnett: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Chairman. Rather than proceeding immediately with the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources, could there be agreement in the committee to consider the item under the Department of National Defence? There is some urgency to this vote.

DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY, MINES AND RESOURCES

1c. Departmental Administration including grants and contributions as detailed in the Estimates, $144,000.

[Mr. MacInnis (Cape Breton South).]

Mr. Peters: This is an important department and we have been waiting for some time to discuss these estimates. I wonder whether the minister would make a report on the activities of his department?

[Translation]

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Chairman, I do not know exactly how to tackle this subject, so varied is the work of my department.

My department is indeed very active in numerous fields. As everyone knows, it comprises four large branches. The first is the geosciences division which conducts all types of research, from geology to astronomy.

The second is the mineral development division which is concerned mostly with mining economy and the administration of certain mining statutes relating, for instance, to gold and the continental shelf.

The third is the water division which has developed the most rapidly in the past year. I shall say a few words a little later about the water policy.

The fourth division is that of energy, which has started to develop and is headed by an assistant deputy minister. It will soon include a number of advisers in matters relating to hydro-electric energy, coal, uranium, gas and oil.

These are the main sectors.

The hon. member would perhaps like me to talk more specifically now about our water policy. This past year, we have developed a policy based on certain basic principles. We are often asked in the house: When will the government state its policy concerning water resources? I have the impression that some members think that a water policy is developed much in the same way as instant coffee is produced. That is not the case. There already exists a water policy at the federal level. It needs to be improved, which is what we are doing. However, the difficulties in this case should not be underestimated.

Everyone knows that water has many uses. It is used for shipping, for the production of energy. It is the natural habitat of small fish. It is also used in homes, industry, farming, etc. That is the multifunctional aspect of water.

Everyone knows also that there are conflicts between users. Some of them come to mind easily: conflicts between the interests of hydro-electric developments and those of shipping, conflicts between the recreational and the economic objectives.

In that field, as in some others, there are also conflicts of jurisdiction. I do not wish to repeat the speech I have made so many times to the effect that, in some cases, water comes under provincial jurisdiction and in others under federal jurisdiction.

I have outlined that situation many times. We have, in Canada, a federal system which has tremendous advantages but which presents some difficulties. I have often said that the water problems could be approached only in a multijurisdictional or comprehensive way, which implies a close co-operation between federal and provincial governments.

These principles which I have outlined very briefly will be found in the legislation which we hope to present during the next session, and we hope that parliament will accept it.

In the meantime, I must say that, in the best spirit of co-operative federalism, we have had conversations with the provinces last year at the administrative and political levels, directly and during meetings of the resource ministers council.

On the other hand, at the very time when new legislation is in the mill, my colleagues should not think that the minister and his department are inactive. On the contrary.

[English]

I might say a few words on the question of water supply. For years the department has been making an inventory of the water resources of Canada and we have special agreements with some provinces in this respect. May I mention two of them. We have an agreement with Ontario concerning the investigation of water supplies of northern Ontario rivers. We have been working on that for two years now. A few months ago we reached an agreement with the three prairie provinces on the creation of the Saskatchewan-Nelson River Board. This is an extremely important move, because, as hon. members realize, we will be taking in Canada more and more a basin by basin or region by region approach to water problems. I feel this should be an element of comfort to everyone who is interested in this problem.

In the field of flood control, which comes under the Canada Water Conservation Assistance Act, we have already spent $8 million and another $14 million is committed mostly for projects in Ontario and British Columbia. More important still, the Winnipeg floodway is coming to completion. The federal government has already spent $33 million on the construction of this great work. As I said this morning, we are about to enter into a most important water flood control project, the Fraser one. I see some of my hon. friends opposite nodding in satisfaction. Such an agreement has been talked about for a long time following the 1948 flood which caused extensive damage. Now, Mr. Chairman, after the accumulation of a tremendous number of documents dealing with the subject, we are finally coming to an agreement with British Columbia on this matter.

I do not want to spend too much time on it at the moment as I am sure there will be occasion to talk about it later, as everybody easily realizes the value of this project. The Fraser is an extremely important river in the economy of British Columbia and of the other western provinces. The federal government has a clear responsibility here not only in terms of flood control but in terms of navigation, fisheries, transportation and the prevention of national disasters. Therefore my department and I feel that this agreement will be a great accomplishment. In the first ten years both governments will share in an expenditure of some $30 million as was already paid last summer when agreement in principle was reached.

I will also be asked, so I might as well answer now, about what steps we are taking against pollution. This is a favourite subject of some of my hon. friends on the other side. Following the Montreal pollution conference my department made an analysis of the conclusions that were reached there. We then formulated a number of recommendations which we brought to the attention of the provincial ministers, this area being one of shared jurisdiction, as is well known. I brought these matters to the attention of my provincial colleagues at the Montreal meeting of the council of resource ministers last May and asked for their comments. These have been coming in. I do not have to tell hon. members that they are not all in agreement with the views of the federal government; as hon. members know, these subjects are debatable.

Mr. Barnett: Are they all in agreement with each other?

Mr. Pepin: No, Mr. Chairman, obviously not, and that is an added difficulty. I should not like to leave the impression that we are simply sitting around waiting; that would be wrong. One of the most important developments in this field is the decision to build at Burlington, near Hamilton, a Canadian inland water centre. Some $17 million will be spent on the construction of this centre. It is to be built at Burlington, on the Great Lakes, for very good reason: the main interest of the federal government in pollution matters has to do with pollution of the Great Lakes.

I think everyone will agree that this should be so. Obviously the federal government cannot be made responsible for depolluting every little creek in the country. This would normally be the responsibility of the municipalities and the provinces. However, the federal government does have clear responsibility for and jurisdiction over the Great Lakes. These are international waters and international waters fall mainly under the authority of the federal government. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I think it is a good idea to concentrate much of our financial, capacities and personnel in this Great Lakes area. The universities and provinces will be admitted of course to work with us on research leading to depollution of the waters of the Great Lakes. All of the work done at Burlington will be communicated across the country, even across the world.

There are already 80 people from my department located there. Temporary buildings are already built on pier 19, I think it is, and we will be acquiring land in the coming days. So things are moving ahead. My estimates have been cut on a number of occasions, as have the estimates of other departments in recent days—only a little more, I feel—but we have protected this project because it seems to us to be the most important measure the department can take in the coming months and years.

I might add that Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation is continuing to lend money for the construction of sewage treatment plants. The last time I checked, about $225 million had been allocated for that purpose. Again this is a very important contribution by the federal government in the field of anti-pollution control.

A few months ago, as my hon. friends remember, the provision in the income tax regulations allowing rapid depreciation of industrial anti-pollution equipment was extended in force until 1970, which again is a great contribution to anti-pollution. It is only in so far as there is an incentive in terms of tax deduction that the provinces can assume their full responsibilities in this field and through moral suasion, persuasion or governmental pressure bring industry to recognize its own responsibility to instal anti-pollution equipment in their new plants.

I could go on but I think I will stop at this point and give members of the committee an opportunity to question me more specifically.

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Chairman, before the minister concludes could he give any indication when the government may include anti-air pollution provisions in the same general regulations? I realize that he is not directly responsible for this but I know his general interest in pollution control.

Mr. Pepin: This matter has been brought up on a number of occasions and I am interested in it, as is my department. There have been discussions with national revenue on this matter. As is usual with these questions there are some technical difficulties but officials will be working on these in the coming months with the hope that next year something might be done.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The hon. member for Nickel Belt.

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The hon. member for Nickel Belt.

Mr. Peters: I just want to say something—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. The hon. member for Nickel Belt rose first so the Chair recognized him.

Mr. Fawcett: Mr. Chairman, I am not going to quarrel with my colleague from Timiskaming I will leave that to other members.

I welcome this opportunity to say a few words on these supplementary estimates. I realize this department is a relatively new one. It was born out of the Government Organization Act which was proclaimed on October 1, 1966, about a year and a half ago. It is the offspring of what was the department of mines and technical surveys but I understand that the scope of the minister has been enlarged to a considerable extent, his jurisdiction now covering a much wider field.

• (3:20 p.m.)

I was interested in the minister's remarks a few moments ago about a water supply inventory. I wonder whether the people of this country realize how much water we need.

The Ontario government recently issued a little pamphlet which gives some indication of how much water we need for our various activities. I read this paragraph from that pamphlet:

> Up to 62,000 gallons of water are required in the manufacture of one ton of newsprint; 750 gallons to process one barrel of oil; 25 to 200 gallons for one case of cannery products.

That clearly shows what the water requirements of this country are, and I hope to see the minister active in seeing that an inventory of our water supply is taken. I hope he will make certain that the water needs of this country are met before commitments with respect to water are made to other countries.

I wish to ask two or three questions. Looking back through Hansard I saw that on June 14, 1967, when the house was in committee of supply and dealing with the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources, the minister had this to say, as found on page 1518:

> At this point I should like to say a few words about each of the main sectors of my department, namely mines and geosciences, mineral development, water and energy. First of all, in respect of mines and geosciences, the principle objective of this sector is to keep up a high level of survey and research in mineral and geosciences so we can learn better the nation's potential mineral resources.

This raises an important point because I now want to speak about the survey of our mineral potential. I agree with my colleague from Timmins who said yesterday that our mineral resources have been barely tapped. We have almost unlimited mineral resources. I do not quarrel with that statement but we must look at the matter from the point of view of communities which have been built around mineral resources in any given area. Both I and the hon. member for Sudbury are concerned about resources that can still be mined in the Sudbury area.

Has the minister worked in co-operation with mining companies such as International Nickel at Falconbridge to ascertain to what extent ore bodies have been staked out in our area and for how long in the future it is expected that these ore bodies can be worked? I know that Falconbridge and International Nickel have been expanding their operations in the Sudbury area, as they have been doing at Thompson, Manitoba. I want to know if these operations are being expanded in an orderly and normal fashion. Is thought being given to managing these resources so that the affected communities will be kept viable not just for one or two generations but for many generations to come. That is an important consideration. If mining companies are permitted to mine out all of an ore body in a given area where communities are solidly established, it will be only a matter of time, perhaps not more than 10, 20 or 50 years, before those communities face serious economic difficulties. All this must be ironed out between the minister's department and the mining concerns involved. I wish to know if the minister has any control over this situation.

Too often in the past we have seen what has happened to worked-out areas. Hundreds of families have been dislocated and many hardships have followed that dislocation. Elliot Lake is a prime example. I have been saddened to see houses boarded up in Elliot Lake, to see houses ruined by burst water pipes because they have not been heated in winter. I have seen houses in a sad state of disrepair, verging on ruin. What effect that has on our total economy is hard to assess, but we must avoid this sort of thing in other mining localities.

Of course, there is a partial answer to what ought to happen to mining localities after an ore body has been mined out. The matter does not come under the minister's jurisdiction, I agree, since it involves secondary industry. Judging from the success we have had in establishing secondary industries in the Sudbury area, our best bet is to retain the mining companies for as long as possible.

Though it has been said we have unlimited natural resources in this country, I must say that sometimes I am sceptical. Not too many years ago we were told we had unlimited supplies of timber. Consequently I was amazed to see in the Globe and Mail yesterday a report that the chief forester of MacMillan Bloedel Limited, one of the largest timber operators on the west coast and perhaps in Canada, had said that within 20 or 30 years we shall face an extreme timber shortage. I say that we ought to be concerned about conserving our resources and our mining resources in particular. We ought to develop our mineral resources in an orderly way so that ultimately we do not create ghost towns with their dislocated families and so on. If the minister's department has not taken positive action in this field, it ought to do so.

I was interested to hear that the department is to be involved in Arctic exploration. This is a move in the right direction. In view of the fact that many of our oil fields are not producing at their potential capacity and that we allegedly have unlimited reserves in the Athabasca tar sands, it may be some years before the Arctic area will be developed.

The minister said something about air pollution. As I recall, he tied it in with water pollution. But I should like to remind the minister that where there is air pollution soil pollution and water pollution follow. In the area from which I come air pollution has killed trees and vegetation for miles around. The soil was poisoned and this poisoned soil wound up in our streams with the result that our streams too are polluted. The city of Sudbury faced a serious pollution problem two years ago when the city water was not fit to drink. I am sure the cause of this water pollution was originally the pollution of the air. It cost the taxpayers of Sudbury a great deal of money because the water had to be treated. I am not sure whether it is still being treated. I know it had to be treated for some months, and even if it has not been necessary to continue treatment during the winter I believe treatment measures will have to be resumed again this spring.

There is one aspect of water pollution with which the federal government is directly concerned. Some time ago I spoke on the ten o'clock show about the water pollution in the Elliot Lake and Bancroft areas. I referred particularly to conditions in the Elliot Lake area because I had visited that area myself and seen what was happening at first hand. I based my short speech at that time on a report known as the report on radiological water pollution in the Elliot Lake and Bancroft areas, presented, I understand, by a deputy ministers' committee of the provincial government. One of the statements made in that report is as follows:

> It now appears that provincial statutes are inoperative in view of the overriding authority assigned to federal agencies under the Atomic Energy Control Act.

I may be wrong but I believe the responsibility for the administration of that act comes within the duties of the minister. Recently I received a complaint from an individual with respect to what is happening at a new uranium mine opened between Sudbury and the Elliot Lake area. I had firmly intended to visit this area myself and perhaps to make a report to the minister, but as yet I have not had an opportunity to do so. The man who wrote to me said that nothing had been done to dam an effluent from this mine which was flowing directly into a creek known as John creek which in turn flows into Agnew lake. I understand that this is one of the best fishing grounds in the region. I have only this gentleman's word for what is happening but I believe I can rely on it. I hope to go there myself in the next two or three days to see what the situation is and I shall certainly bring this matter to the minister's attention if what is asserted is correct.

Let me say at this point that when I was making a tour of the Elliot Lake area I was told that Quirke lake, which not many years ago was one of the best fishing spots in that region, no longer held fish because of carelessness in damming effluents from various mining operations. I also heard that the Serpent river and its tributaries, as well as the lakes through which they flow, are almost devoid of fish. This is a serious situation and it concerns an aspect of pollution which closely involves the department.

I have the impression that arrangements for inspection in connection with this kind of pollution are very poor. Indeed, I believe on some authority that this is the case. I have visited a number of mine properties and it was evident that in many cases only a half-hearted effort had been made to do something about disposing of the waste from mining operations. In fact it is pointed out in the report to which I have referred that in some cases intervention was necessary to ensure that proper damming was carried out. In other cases no action was taken simply because the mines had been closed. We should bear in mind, however, the possibility that many of these mines will be re-opened. If this happens something positive should be done to ensure there is no further pollution of the kind I have described.

The effect of this type of pollution on an individual exposed to it is still obscure. This is another aspect which was brought out in the report to which I have referred. The committee said that more research work was needed before one could properly estimate just what harm was done to individuals working in the affected area or drinking the contaminated water.

I could go on and on talking about air pollution, but I shall leave the subject for my hon. friend from Sudbury because he is a little closer to those tall stacks than I am, though I do not think he gets as much of the sulphur dioxide as I do, 21 miles away, and perhaps not quite as much damage is done to the plants and gardens where he lives. I know there is considerable difference of opinion as to where jurisdiction lies, but it is my hope that the minister will yet provide the leadership which is required. Air pollution is something with which we are only too familiar in the Sudbury area, but without saying anything further I shall leave the subject. I think my hon. friend has something to say with regard to it and I wish to give him every opportunity.

I was somewhat heartened by the few words the minister had to say. I believe he is sincere and that he will try to do what needs to be done. But I am concerned over the possibility of conflict between different levels of government, particularly as this would affect air pollution control, one area in which the federal government has to show leadership.

Mr. Mather: Mr. Chairman, I wish to say a few words about a subject the minister touched on which is of particular significance to many people in British Columbia. It is the long awaited and extremely important Fraser river flood control project. I wish to do two things briefly. One is to give some praise and credit to the minister for what I know he has done to bring agreement with British Columbia nearer to completion. The other is to encourage his colleagues, or those of them who may be present this afternoon, to support him in concluding the agreement.

As the minister has said, this project involves many millions of dollars. The idea for the project goes back about 15 or 20 years. I hope that with co-operation between the federal government and the British Columbian government we shall actually see the agreement put into effect this year and flood control on a comprehensive basis begin in the lower mainland of British Columbia. I use the words "lower mainland of British Columbia" because it is through that area that the Fraser river flows and it is in that area that all too often flooding has taken its toll.

In British Columbia there are approximately 2 million people. Half of them live and work on less than one half of one per cent of the land area of the province, which in round terms encompasses the lower mainland of British Columbia. When the Fraser river running through that area, through the municipalities of Langley, Surrey and Delta and past the city of New Westminster, floods, the economic consequences to the people, the farmlands and the industries in the area run into millions of dollars.

There are two types of floods to which the area is subjected. One is winter flooding which particularly effects the municipalities of Langley and Surrey. The ground level flooding resulting from water coming down from the higher areas of the valley, the much less diked area of the valley, covers thousands of acres. I have seen photographs taken in the 1920's, 30's, 40's and 50's showing the effect of this flooding. Recently I saw photographs taken only a month ago showing its effect. Every winter thousands of acres are under water as a result of faulty drainage and lack of flood control in that part of the valley.

The other type of flood is the more spectacular one which threatens almost every spring. Hon. members may recall that last spring people in British Columbia felt that flooding was imminent and that it might result in a major disaster such as they had experienced in previous years. However, as it turned out there was no major flood. But there is no guarantee that there will not be one in any given year. This type of flood results from the melting snow in the upper areas coming into the river with the result that it overflows its banks. The economic losses from both types of floods can run into large sums of money, affecting a great number of people.

Many industries are concerned about the flood problem. The only regret I have is that this comprehensive co-ordinated plan among the federal, provincial and municipal administrations to grapple with the flood problem has taken so many years to come to fruition. I think inflation has resulted in a financial erosion in the last seven or eight years equal to the effect of a major flood in the lower valley. The original plan contemplated doing what the new plan aims to do in a bigger way and would have cost much less seven or eight years ago than the expenditure required now. At any rate, as I said, I merely want to commend the minister for reaching an agreement on action to combat the floods and I encourage his colleagues to give him every support.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I do not want to delay the business of the house, but I would still like to remind the hon. Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Pepin) of the problem I have repeatedly brought up in this house in the last four years, and ask him what decision his department has reached in this regard.

We know that the hon. Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources is responsible for the boundaries between the various provinces and the Northwest Territories. We also know that in the last few months the hon. minister has introduced bills in this house to delineate the boundaries between Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario and the Northwest Territories.

On those occasions, I suggested to the minister that the same thing should be done for Quebec, in particular as regards the islands surrounding Quebec which are twelve miles distant from the Quebec shore.

The minister knows that this problem interests many people in Quebec; no doubt he has read the book by Mr. Michel Brochu, geography professor at the École des hautes études commerciales. Besides, the minister knows that this is a problem that should be settled.

If the minister will also take the trouble of rereading some answers given in 1963, I think, before a standing committee of this house, he will realize that, at that time, the representative of the Northwest Territories had no objections at all to new boundary lines between Quebec and the Northwest Territories. These boundary lines would leave with Quebec the islands surrounding the province and located twelve miles from the shore at low tide.

Mr. Chairman, I should just like to ask the hon. minister whether he would tell us what the intentions of his department are on that subject? Does the hon. minister intend to introduce very soon a piece of legislation, as he did for the other provinces, so as to set the boundary lines between Quebec and the Northwest Territories? Could the hon. minister give us his viewpoint in that respect and tell us briefly what his department intends to do about this.

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Chairman, I will answer the last question of the hon. member for Lapointe (Mr. Grégoire).

Like the hon. member, I am interested in clarifying the physical borders as well as the intellectual borders.

I am deeply interested in the problem raised by the hon. member of Lapointe on many occasions in this house, with regard to the boundary lines between the Northwest Territories and the province of Quebec.

[Mr. Grégoire.]

I have asked the department to provide me with a report on the matter. It has been completed and it is on my desk. Unfortunately, I do not have enough time to examine it, but I will do so during the next few weeks and I will see afterwards what can be done about it.

By the way, I would like to remind the hon. member for Lapointe (Mr. Grégoire) that, to proceed in such a way, the federal government represented by my department would have to obtain the consent of the province or provinces in question. Under the circumstances, the province of Quebec would have to agree with the federal government —if such were the case—representing the Northwest Territories and an agreement would have to be signed, in order to proceed to a more exact determination of the boundary lines. It is not a matter of determining boundaries but of specifying more precisely where the boundary lines run. I will consider this problem further and I will have the opportunity, in a few weeks, either in reply to a question or otherwise, to give an answer to the hon. member.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, would the hon. minister allow me to take this opportunity to congratulate him? I see that he has done a good job, that he has been actively concerned with this problem and I want to congratulate him also on his work in his department.

In concluding my remarks, I would simply like to add this. I notice that the minister told us that the report is now ready, that he must study it and that he is waiting for the province of Quebec to show that it is also interested in dealing with that problem. Now that it has become a matter of public knowledge, the government of Quebec will have to show interest. I think that it is, in fact, quite interested in this matter and that it will take steps to sign agreements with the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. I hope all these efforts will be successful.

I wish to congratulate the minister on the interest he has shown and the work he has done in this regard.

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Chairman, since the hon. member for Lapointe is being nice today, I will even consider letting him see the document which is on my desk.

Mr. Grégoire: I thank the minister, Mr. Chairman.

[English]

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Chairman, at the same time perhaps I might reply to the previous speakers. I do not have much to say in answer to my friend the hon. member for New Westminster because his address was mostly informational and complimentary. I should like to pass the compliments on to my officials, as I believe every good minister should. I should also like to pay a compliment to Mr. Williston, the minister of lands, forests and water resources of the province of British Columbia. Often it is said that there are difficulties in federal-provincial relations. It is not often said that there also is a tremendous amount of good co-operation at the political and official level. Unfortunately what appears in the news reports is information concerning the clashes, while what does not appear in the headlines is the tremendous amount of co-operation that exists. This is regrettable, and I thought this would be a good opportunity to make the observation.

The hon. member for Nickel Belt made three main points. The first had to do with information in respect of mineral resources. I do not wish to labour the problem with regard to jurisdictional divisions because he is just as much aware of this as I am. The hon. member is also aware that the federal jurisdiction in respect of mining is a limited one. Besides scientific research and the administration of a few mineral acts, the officials of my department are mainly involved in the preparation of economic analysis for trade purposes, internal and international.

I think it is well known in Canada that we have in the department of Energy, Mines and Resources one of the best groups of mineral development analysts. For example, numerous articles describing the situation with regard to these resources and the trade possibilities are published every year by the department. While reading mineral magazines I sometimes have the impression—of course exagerated—that most of the writers in that field are members of my department. They are doing an extremely worthwhile job in keeping the industry and the public informed of the situation in the industry. Some of these articles appear under my name. It is obvious that I do not write them. They emanate from my department, and that is the reason why they are so good.

The information which is used is obtained from D.B.S. reports, annual reports of companies, correspondence with the companies, and in some instances from visits, inquiries and investigations. As my hon. friend knows there are a number of assistance programs administered by the department, for example the Emergency Gold Mining Assistance Act. In carrying out their duties in these cases the officials of the department do more than merely inquire; they go around and visit the mines in order to obtain the information they require for the proper administration of the laws.

Another point raised by the hon. member had to do with pollution in the Elliot Lake area, as a result I believe of the nuclear energy development. As he said, this comes under the jurisdiction of the Atomic Energy Control Board, which has limited personnel. For the purpose of carrying out its investigations this board wherever possible uses the existing facilities of the provincial health departments. I am quite sure my hon. friend would not like the Atomic Energy Control Board to double up on the services offered by the provinces. I have followed the development of the previous cases in which there has been federal-provincial co-operation. However, I am not familiar with the specific case the hon. member now raises. I will inform myself on this and be in touch with him in that regard.

On the question of pollution in general, and air pollution in particular in respect of which the hon. member placed a good deal of emphasis, may I say it sometimes seems that my hon. friends regard me as being the minister responsible for all water pollution, and the Minister of National Health and Welfare as being the minister responsible for all air pollution in our country. To a degree I am passing the buck, because my department has a responsibility over resources in general. I agree with the hon. member that sooner or later the federal and provincial governments must take an over-all approach to the problem of pollution—air, water and land. This will have to be done because there is an obvious inter-relationship between the different types of pollution.

The Minister of National Health and Welfare has stated that he is interested in presenting a "clean air" bill, and this, I am told is being prepared. In addition, as is well known a "water bill" administered by my department, will be introduced soon in the house. I believe we should proceed with what is most urgent, according to all the experts who have freely expressed opinions on this subject. They all believe that the most urgent aspect of the pollution problem is that which pertains to water. Then we could proceed to bring together the other aspects of pollution in what might be an environmental bill.

It is not necessary for me to remind my hon. friend that we are in a situation which involves a divided, shared, or overlapping jurisdiction. This is frequently ignored by members of the New Democratic party. I listened yesterday to one member who suggested that we should not be bothered by constitutional difficulties. That is easy to say but dangerous to do.

I believe all my hon. friends, especially those who sit opposite, but far to my right, will agree that the federal system is the only one under which this country can live politically. If one is to have that system of government, then its disadvantages as well as its advantages must be recognized. If we had had a unitary form of government in Canada we would have had also many troubles of course different from the ones we have now. It is vital that we recognize that we have divided jurisdiction in water matters, that the federal government has some responsibilities and that the provinces have some also. Having recognized this, we have to add immediately that unless the two levels of government get together, hardly anything will be done, because each level of government has the ability of preventing the other level from acting. This is what I have been repeating all along—and I think it is correct—that divided jurisdiction in this country is not un pis aller, as we say in French, or a second best; it is the only way to go, there is no other way to act under our federal system.

This is the mystique, if I may be lyrical for a few seconds, that has to be created, namely that there has to be federal-provincial co-operation because it is the only way to do things in this country in many areas of government activities, if not in most. Unless we are adult enough, mature enough to understand that, we will create all kinds of unnecessary troubles and will slow down our economic and political development.

Again I repeat that in the field of pollution the main responsibility is with the provinces. Hon. members may very well come back to me and say that air has a tendency to move from one province to another, and they may show me a map which illustrates that water has a tendency to move from one province to another and both air and water seem to ignore the constitutional system, but that does not change the fact that we have in Canada a divided jurisdiction in water matters.

While I am very willing to accept some of the suggestions made by the hon. member for Nickel Belt, I should also like to remind him that some of his friends in Toronto, and some of mine in Quebec city, should exercise pressure where it should be exercised in the first place. I am almost fanatical, if one can be fanatical about something of this kind, in building up with the provinces the policies of co-ordination which are very necessary in the whole field of resources development. Again may I repeat, Mr. Chairman, that this is the only way in which we can accomplish important things.

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Chairman, does the minister not agree that we have some responsibility in this house to urge and prod as we see necessary in order that the government may take its part in this federal state about which the minister has been speaking?

Mr. Pepin: Agreed.

Mr. Fawcett: Mr. Chairman, I do not intend to make another speech. I would just like to assure the minister that I was not trying to blame him or the Minister of National Health and Welfare for water and air pollution. I realize that jurisdictional problems are involved in these questions, and indeed I referred to them. My first question is the one in which I am most interested. I believe the minister answered in the negative and said it was impossible to obtain information from the mining companies with respect to their potential in given areas. I would like to know whether there is a yes or no in that answer. Is it a fact that it is impossible to obtain information from mining companies as to the potential of the areas in which they are operating?

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Chairman, I do not know about the details of every plant in this country, but there are ways and means by which the government gets to know about these things. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics, for example, distributes a tremendous amount of information, and my department gains a great deal of information through the investigations and visits to which I have referred. If you want to be dramatic about it, if you really need the information, we can always contact,

I presume, the Department of National Revenue which is a good source of information. But I do not think there is an atmosphere of mistrust between the government and industry in Canada. My visits to different industries, mining areas, gas and petroleum fields, and the like, have convinced me that there is a tremendous amount of good will on the part of industry toward the department. And vice-versa. It is, of course, easier to get information when you send a cheque, and I presume we may have gathered more information with regard to coal and gold, because of the assistance provided to those industries, than we have with regard to nickel, lead and zinc. But this is only a suggestion. I think we are well informed with regard to all minerals.

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, I would like to congratulate the minister on his summary of the operations of the department. I consider that this department has functioned very well since the changeover. I am one of those who came to the parliament of Canada from the mining industry, and when I came I was very surprised that the then department of mines and resources really did not have anything to do with mines, and very little to do with resources. It was a very archaic operation.

I hope that the recent additions to the minister's staff will not provide the kind of pollutant that we are trying to get rid of, and which plagued two other departments recently. I hope the minister will be able to continue the type of development in which he is engaged. His department is very important to the province of Ontario from which I come, and we have been very pleased with the development that has taken place. I have been interested in the work the department has done in regard to the development of minerals, particularly in the Arctic and off the northern coasts of Canada. I have also been interested in following the developments on the polar and continental shelves.

I believe the remarks made by my colleagues the hon. members for Timmins and Nickel Belt indicate that a tremendous amount of mineral resources will be made available to Canada. As development takes place in our outlying areas we will find that these natural resources are one of the basic sources of wealth of this nation. For this reason I am pleased by the work being undertaken by the department. The amalgamation in the department of mines with respect to the treating and processing carried out in various forms of mining has been very helpful. The people in my area are very appreciative of the work done by a previous deputy minister in the development of improved methods in the processing of the iron ore of the area in order to make it an economic product. The federal mines department did a great deal of work in this area.

I have also been very interested in the remarks of the minister over the months. In my opinion he has proven to be a very capable and progressive young minister. Because he is a capable and progressive minister I made the remarks that I did a few moments ago. I have seen other departments suffer because they have not been as fortunate as his. I do not say there is any similarity between the Minister of Industry and the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, because obviously they are two different people, but they are handling two departments which I think have a great deal in common, and there is a certain amount of overlapping in them.

I agree with the minister that there is a division of responsibility in this field. We have a federal state and therefore a problem with the division of jurisdiction between the federal and provincial governments. These problems do not necessarily arise out of our constitution but from the British North America Act, which in my opinion is amendable. That, however, is not the point I wish to make. If the minister sincerely believes that a program should be undertaken, it probably could be undertaken if the federal government gave leadership. The programs in which the federal government has given leadership over the years have been pretty broad and fairly progressive.

With regard to programs where we have sat back and waited for the federal government to co-operate with the provincial governments, such as the area development program, we have found that the provincial authorities either did not have the resources or did not have the foresight and the vision which would allow them to go beyond the established area. This is a field in which the federal government has a very good record.

The minister mentioned his responsibility in the realm of water. I was surprised, when I sat on a committee which was discussing the water level of the Great Lakes, to learn that there were approximately 15 departments in the Ontario provincial government and in the federal government involved in the matter of the water level in the Great Lakes. In addition to this, approximately 11 or 12 agencies in the United States and a number of Quebec provincial agencies are involved in this matter. So that when we were discussing the problem of the water level and pollution in the Great Lakes, and a number of other things, the federal government had a legitimate excuse to say they could not do anything about the water level in the Great Lakes until all the provincial departments had co-operated and made up their mind what they would do.

They also had a legitimate excuse to say they will get it all settled when they receive the co-operation of the states of New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan, and all the other states which border on the lakes. I am sure the minister realizes that the problem which faced the committee appears to have no solution. Yet some action was taken by the International Joint Commission which has made it possible, by an international treaty and by delegation of authority, to investigate some aspects of that problem which I do not think could have been investigated by mere co-operation among the various departments.

When I asked one of the members what was the level of the water in the Great Lakes, I was surprised to learn from him that the water level has risen approximately 11 inches in the last two years and that it is likely to rise another 11 inches. He had knowledge of this because he lived along the shore of one of the lakes. In my opinion this would go a long way toward compensating the four foot drop which that area experienced in a relatively short period of time.

The information the committee was lacking was of a kind which the minister's department could have supplied. We were very interested to learn that the only statistics which were available in the department for a long period of time were United States army statistics. I understand the United States army has been given certain responsibilities in this respect, although this is not confirmed by the International Joint Commission. I am informed that some type of survey was carried out by United States army officers in the area of the headwaters of the Nipigon, and that this is very hush-hush. I hope it is not secret so far as the minister is concerned because we have not been able to duplicate the services carried out by the United States army over a 50 year period. But I and the people in that area hope the day will come when we will be able to carry out the necessary type of survey. I am very pleased to learn that a Great Lakes centre is being established at Burlington and that it will be responsible for the level of the headwaters of the Great Lakes.

Unfortunately our discussions are limited to the estimates before us, but I would be very interested to know whether or not any work has been carried out in connection with the ripple control which was to be installed, or it was hoped would be installed in the lake St. Clair area, if we are to have a reasonable control over the level of water in the Great Lakes. It shocked me to hear, because I did not know it before, that a certain amount of water put into the lakes at lake Superior will take three years to reach the city of Montreal. This immediately raised the question as to what would happen if we found it to our advantage to go ahead with the arctic watershed diversion. If we dropped a year's water supply into the Great Lakes and a year later it was discharged at Montreal, at a time when an unsually heavy run-off and rainfall might occur we might find we had created a worse situation than we had anticipated.

Floods are to be expected, and with uncontrolled Great Lakes distribution the problem is intensified. This is the case particularly in Pennsylvania, where there can be as many floods as there are shortages of water but where the damage created as a result of floods is far greater than the difficulties created by a low-water level.

I was very pleased to hear the minister say that the two year study in northern Ontario was being pressed forward. I presume the report will be available in the near future, and I hope this will be done in conjunction with the diversion proposition. During every election campaign we hear politicians refer to the water diversion project from James bay. I was very surprised to see literature being distributed during one of the recent elections, describing barges going up and down the Ottawa river and across lake Timiskaming as far as James bay. While I presume this is feasible, to me it sounded rather like Buck Rogers, because I can see no reason why barges should be moving through that area. We have a great time driving logs down lake Timiskaming and down the Ottawa river, and I see no reason for the addition of barges which might create a considerable displacement. The argument was advanced that all the towns on the waterway from Montreal to James bay would be port cities with an import and export potential. This sounded like a very nice dream, but I think the sooner a survey is started which will indicate the potential of that type of diversion, the better will the people concerned understand the problem. I am not at all opposed to that diversion, and I am not opposed to the extension of the waterway over part of the area. But I think there is small possibility of running it from Montreal to James bay for heavy transport, and I do not expect to see it in my lifetime.

The minister explained in some detail his responsibility in the field of pollution, and what is being done about it. I was pleased to hear some Liberal leadership candidates making what I think are helpful statements with regard to pollution of the waterway in the Ottawa rivershed. One of the candidates said that it was a disgrace. We have known this for some time. It seems to me this is one of the fields in which the federal government would be wise to set up joint responsibility.

Mr. Cowan: Would the hon. member permit a question? I should like to ask him which minister said that the pollution of the Ottawa river is a disgrace, and how did he propose to correct it when he becomes the leader of the Liberal party? Did he explain why he does not do something about it now?

Mr. Peters: I suggest the solution is much easier for the candidate than it will be for the next prime minister of Canada. I am not suggesting that election promises, even those made by Liberal members, will necessarily be kept. I was just pleased to learn that he knew it was a problem.

I should like to refer to the Ottawa river watershed, which has been of great interest to me. I have been concerned with another department in connection with this matter because we seem to have no control over that waterway at all. There are 500,000 cords of pulpwood driven on lake Timiskaming, and this is a very important industry in northern Quebec as well as on the Ontario side. We have not been able to control the driving of the logs simply because the season extends over a long period of time. This is not really a river drive. The logs are hauled by tug and therefore it takes all summer to haul the quantity of logs that has to be hauled.

What really concerns me is the fluctuation in the river level, because that is associated with pollution in the area. On occasion the drains from the towns along the waterway are exposed to the air and one can see the raw sewage being dumped into the lake. I presume the minister was referring to the Ontario water resources branch when he said that occasionally we do not get the co-operation from Toronto that we should get. I felt that way myself when they insisted that I make a number of expansive changes where I live on the lake, but neglected the municipalities along the lake. It did not seem to me I was contributing to that problem nearly as much as they were.

Over the years there have been so many different changes in the act that Ontario Hydro and Quebec Hydro have been permitted to do certain things. For example the Department of Public Works allowed Quebec Hydro to open the new dam to allow a certain amount of water out, but they did not tell the power company when to shut it off. By the time the week end was over, the water level had risen 14 inches. Nobody really controls the thing. No one considers what is going to happen in Ottawa or the other areas below the dam. There has to be some control, but no control has been developed to this date.

I should like to say a word or two about the mapping service. This is an area in which I believe Canada is a long distance ahead of most other countries in the world. We have the longest shore line in the world and probably the largest uninhabited territory in the world. The mapping facilities we have been able to develop in Canada are second to none. The reproduction machinery we use for map compilation is probably as good as has been developed. I understand that many countries are interested in the technology we have been able to develop in this field.

Perhaps this is an area the minister could consider when we are talking about assistance to foreign countries. I had the opportunity of discussing with several cabinet ministers of countries in East Africa, the way in which Canada could be of assistance to those countries. Since many Canadians are reluctant to make a general contribution in the form of external aid but are willing to provide technical assistance, and since one of the problems of these countries is their inability to develop a mapping service to make surveys of the potential of their countries, I was wondering if the minister would give some consideration to making some of our people available to these countries. This would enable them to take advantage of the techniques we have developed to a very high degree.

The last point I should like to mention, Mr. Chairman, is the roads to resources program. I should like to ask the minister to extend this program this year. I have said that the work being done in remote areas by the federal government and by provincial governments in this field has been very extensive. When I look back at the history of northern Ontario, I am always impressed to find that when the initial survey crews went through northern Ontario before the turn of the century, about 1886, they made an assessment of the potential of northern Ontario in resource materials.

It is interesting to note that during that short period of time, probably not more than two years, the ten crews surveyed the whole potential of northern Ontario. They made a catalogue of the many resources of the area. Since that time both the federal department of mines and the provincial authorities have completed the catalogue. It is interesting to note that this survey of northern Ontario not only pinpointed where the mines were going to be, but where townships were going to be developed that would be suitable for cultivation. This is surprising when you recall that these areas were all covered with timber at the time. The townships indicated on the survey are almost identical with the farming areas and townships that exist today. The mineral areas were pointed out long before silver was found at Cobalt or gold at Kirkland Lake.

This roads to resources program is not the haphazard development it may seem. When we agree to a roads to resources project, we are not taking a chance on the development of some resource as a result of the implementation of that project. We are fairly sure, as a result of the outline that has been given by the geologists and other members of the mines branch. I hope therefore the minister will extend the life of the roads to resources program. I am aware of the fact that anomalies are produced. I am sure one of them will be the new road to resources from Timmins to Sudbury, which is being developed. It seems that if somebody has a friend about 20 miles off the route, the road is made to curve in that direction. The road may just as easily lead to resources 20 miles off the straight line as it would in a staight line, but I suggest the government should leave a little bit of the development to the entrepreneur. I consider that Brown Industries have enough money to look after themselves. I suggest that the route of roads to resources be plotted from the minister's point of view, rather than from that of the interests it may serve. We should look at it in a fairly detached light.

[Mr. Peters.]

At a later point I should like to say something about the Gold Mining Emergency Assistance Act and the problems connected with it. Perhaps the result of such a discussion will be a blueprint for the mining industry for the next two year period, that will enable that industry to make decisions.

Mr. Germa: I should like to concur in the opening statement made by my colleague, the hon. member for Timiskaming, in which he stated that this minister may be one of the more progressive ministers in the cabinet. I have no reason to believe that he is not. Therefore I have chosen to rise on this occasion to bring to his attention some of the matters that I think would contribute to the development of Canadian resources, to the benefit of the people rather than that of the foreign owned companies that seem to control the mineral wealth of the country.

That this parliament is not too much aware of our resources in Canada was brought home to me two or three years ago when the former member for Sudbury saw fit to bring 60 or 70 members of this house to the city of Sudbury where they were wined and dined by the mining companies. I was a member of the city council at the time and was invited to that function. I got into conversation with some of the members of the house who were quite elated at the wealth that they suspected was being produced and spread around the community of Sudbury, when they saw three mighty smokestacks 600 feet high belching forth their fumes. However, these members were quite surprised when I told them that although there were 125,000 people in the Sudbury district either directly or indirectly concerned with mining, not too much of the wealth was to be found in the city of Sudbury or its environs. They did not know about the three year tax exemption that the mining companies had been granted. Neither were they too familiar with the 33⅓ per cent depletion allowance given to the mining corporations. These members did not know that at the provincial level mining property is not subject to municipal taxation. So that even though it may have looked as though we were a wealthy community, and that the smoke and industry indicated this, in fact we were not.

Most of the mineral wealth in Canada is concentrated in that area known as the Laurentian shield, that great horseshoe that circles Hudson bay, extending all the way down through Quebec, into Ontario and up into the northeastern corner of Manitoba. This particular area has sparse representation in the house because of its small population. Therefore we do not hear as many orations about mineral wealth, as we do about wheat production from the wheat farmers, or about our fisheries from the fishermen of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Very few members of this house come from the Laurentian shield area, and it is for them to tell the house about what is going on there. I do not come to this house as an expert in mining, even though I did work for a mining company for over 30 years and know how the job is done.

I should like to correct what I think is a mistaken impression. Some people suppose that the companies that acquire the right to mine minerals have sole jurisdiction over the property. However, I think we must acknowledge that it is the people of Canada who are the original owners of the wealth of this nation, and that it is the responsibility of the government to intervene on their behalf at any moment they see the people not benefitting from the development of these resources.

There is no doubt in my mind that the day will come when every body of ore in the country, will have been depleted. Mining is a self-diminishing industry, and the faster you deplete its resources the sooner will this day come. Last night, Mr. Chairman, on the television news I heard an account of the closure of one of the biggest gold mines in Canada. This mine is laying off 500 men today. At one time the mine employed 3,000 people; today there are 500 and tomorrow there will be none. The newscaster pointed out that this mine had produced in its lifetime $600 million worth of gold.

Now that the gold has been depleted the mining company has seen fit to abandon the community that has been built to serve the mine. I am wondering whether the people of that community should not have some claim to part of the wealth produced by the mine. Could not a certain percentage of the wealth produced by natural resources be set aside to rehabilitate those who live in the community, and help develop those resources? Up until now no provision has been made for the diversification of these industrial workers within the community. Some provision should be made for the workers by way of the development of secondary industries, so that our miners could turn to some occupation other than mining when our natural resources are exhausted.

There are dozens of ghost mining towns in northern Ontario, Mr. Chairman, where nothing swings except the broken shutters on the windows of rundown houses. These dwellings have been abandoned by mining companies and of necessity the miners and their families have had to leave the community. It is a sad commentary that none of the wealth that has now been exhausted was ploughed back into the community, or used to place the workers in some other occupation.

No wealth in the world can be produced, Mr. Chairman, until somebody picks up a tool and does something with it. Wealth could lie in the ground for another thousand years and the world would not be one penny richer until somebody extracted that wealth from the earth and put it to use. The same thing applies to the lumber industry, a large industry in northern Ontario. Forests could stand for a thousand years and no wealth would come from those forests until someone lays an axe on the trees. When the chips start to fly we begin to generate wealth.

The mining companies of course would object if the government chose to impinge upon the free enterprise system by adopting the course that I have suggested; but let me remind you of the socialist aspect of the mining industry. This house was more or less forced to pass the Emergency Gold Mining Assistance Act. This is socialism for the rich and free enterprise for the poor. While gold mining companies were making vast profits they did not want interference in their operations. They wanted freedom to reap profits from the ground. When they got into trouble with production costs of gold, the government had to come in. It said, "We must help to keep these companies going because we must keep our people employed." If some part of the $600 million that Hollinger has extracted from the ground had been retained by the government, the money could have been used to rehabilitate Timmins or diversify industry there. You see, eventually the government has to step in and take over from free enterprise. Eventually an area's natural resources are depleted, and without government help the people would be at the mercy of the elements.

Supply—Energy, Mines and Resources

In his opening remarks the minister spoke about Canada's constitution and what the federal powers were 100 years ago. I agree that if they had tried, our founding fathers could not have evolved a more complicated form of government than we have at present. We are governed by three levels of government, the jurisdiction of one level often conflicting with that of another. In the beginning most powers were vested in the federal house; but as the years went on, either because we had weak federal governments or strong provincial governments, the power of the federal house was steadily eroded. The party that has been in power the longest during the past 100 years must take much responsibility for the erosion of federal power. This government ought to try to recapture some of that lost federal power. The power of the federal house has been eroded to the point where provincial premiers sometimes dictate to the federal government. That is untenable, and steps should be taken to recapture for the federal house some of its lost powers. The minister may have to step on some toes; though he has not prime responsibility in this matter he may well have to make enemies of people like Premier Robarts, in an attempt to recapture that power.

Among the minister's wide fields of interest, water resources come high on the list. Anyone flying over northern Ontario may be pardoned for thinking that there we have more water than land. That water is either in the Hudson Bay or the Great Lakes watershed. Since the Great Lakes are an international waterway they come under federal jurisdiction, where that jurisdiction may be exercised. The minister also intimated that his jurisdiction could not extend up every stream or creek that empties into the Great Lakes. These smaller waterways come under provincial jurisdiction.

I wonder how a certain fisherman on the north shore of lake Huron would reconcile those positions. This fisherman was fishing in the north channel, and shipping to New York. While he was so engaged the Kalamazoo Vegetable Parchment Company, now Brown Forest Industries Limited, a foreign owned pulp company, were dumping effluent into the Spanish river 50 miles from the Great Lakes. This effluent drifted down to the mouth of the Spanish river, to where fishermen were fishing. As I say, the fishermen shipped their catch to New York. One fisherman called Bishop got a letter from his New York outlet saying that the fish were received in good condition, but that the stuff was inedible because it tasted of some carbolic substance. That taste could be attributed directly to the pulp mill operation 50 miles from the Great Lakes.

So, clearly, if the minister has a responsibility to protect the Great Lakes he ought to extend his jurisdiction 50 miles from the Great Lakes shoreline. It is no good saying: Federal jurisdiction ends at the shoreline, and beyond that you are under provincial jurisdiction. Great Lakes water comes from the streams that feed the Great Lakes. I think this matter ought to be pursued with the provinces and pressure ought to be applied to clean our water.

The minister probably does not know that even though the fishermen and camp owners on the Spanish river obtained a court injunction against the then Kalamazoo Vegetable Parchment Company, the then premier of Ontario brought in special legislation giving Kalamazoo the special privilege to pollute the river. Understandably, on resigning that premier was appointed to the Kalamazoo board of directors. I believe at that time he was appointed to the boards of 17 different corporations.

I want to bring to the minister's attention a communication I received. I believe the minister also received a copy of it because his name appears on the long list of recipients. The letter in question was from a Mr. William R. Warnick, a professional engineer of R.R. 2, Lowbanks, Ontario, and in it he talks about the fertilizer plant near Dunnville, Ontario, which received wide publicity as a result of a C.B.C. program to do with fluoride pollution. The writer says that 12 tons of fluoride every day find their way to the lake Ontario area. He says that about 4,639 tons, or about 36 million pounds per year, are dumped. The writer's figures show that about 200 box carloads of fluoride every year find their way into the Great Lakes system. Fluoride flows down a number of creeks and the Grand river to the Great Lakes. I know that the water at Niagara Falls is polluted. One has only to walk on the street in Niagara Falls near the escarpment to know that the Great Lakes are polluted; you can smell the pollution as the mist passes over you. For many years our policy toward water in Canada was called the two stream policy by the medical officer of health for Sudbury: There was the downstream and there was the upstream. The lucky people lived upstream and the unlucky ones lived downstream. This worked pretty well when we were a very young nation with a small population. But today almost everyone lives downstream from someone else, so this policy has to be changed.

The minister mentioned a possible amendment to the Income Tax Act under which industry would be allowed a tax write-off in connection with money spent on pollution control equipment. It is debatable whether this would be a good policy because its application would mean we were asking the people of Canada to make a donation to enable industry to instal anti-pollution equipment, and I do not think this is a fair charge against the public.

I believe the cost of installing anti-pollution equipment is a fair charge against the profits of the company developing the resources. If those resources are worthy of being developed, then all the expenditure properly involved in their development should be borne by whomever is making a profit out of the operation, not by the rest of Canada. I do not see why Canadian citizens should have to subsidize profit making corporations in an area such as this.

In some countries a method of weighing pollution and imposing taxes accordingly has been adopted—the reverse of what has been suggested in this committee. As I pointed out, there is one plant which is dumping 4.8 tons of fluoride into lake Erie every eight hours. Why should we not levy a penalty of so much a ton in respect of the pollution which this plant sees fit to pour into the Great Lakes? The penalty could be $100 or $200 a ton, I do not care how much. But as the pollution is reduced, so would the penalty be reduced.

I understand that an incentive system of this type is in use in one of the most heavily industrialized areas of the world, namely the Ruhr valley. The money collected is used by the government to instal further anti-pollution equipment. In the long run the cost of this equipment is provided by industries contributing to pollution. I would point out that usually the pollution is in direct proportion to the profits a company makes, because if it is not considered necessary to install anti-pollution equipment, profit rises. This is why it is hard to persuade industry to spend money upon equipment which is regarded, in some cases, as non-productive. So instead of the taxpayer having to contribute to the cost of anti-pollution equipment I suggest a penalty tax imposed on a tonnage basis as an incentive to companies to clear up pollution, in order to rid themselves of extra taxation.

The letter I spoke of was addressed to the director of the Ontario water resources commission and in it the writer asks a total of 33 questions. I wonder whether the minister has taken the time to read this letter and whether he has replied to those questions which concern his jurisdiction. I do not intend to read out the 33 questions but I believe the minister should consider this letter and perhaps give an answer to some of the questions—for instance, to question No. 24 which asks whether there is any truth in rumours that there have recently been stillbirths in humans, and to question 25: "Can you account for my cat bearing her last few litters stillborn and deformed?"

Mr. Chairman, when we hear of animals being stillborn and deformed it is time we began to investigate. I have no doubt that human beings can endure more of these poisons than can small animals such as cats, but eventually the concentration builds up until it reaches a point where harm is done.

With these few words I would ask the minister to consider what I have said, especially about the cost of pollution abatement equipment needed by industry. I sincerely believe this should be a legitimate charge against industry and not a charge against the taxpayers of Canada.

Mr. Cadieux (Terrebonne): Mr. Chairman, it seems that it might be possible to pass the supplementary estimates for National Defence which represent salaries. We need those votes to complete this month's pay. I understand that both sides would agree to passing these at the present time.

Mr. Knowles: It is correct that there have been conversations on this point, and the minister has described the position as we understand it. We suggest that the item we are now discussing under the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources be allowed to stand and that the National Defence items be called and agreed to without debate.

Mr. MacLean (Queens): That is agreeable to us, provided it is without debate.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Does the committee agree that the supplementary estimates of the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources be allowed to stand and that the supplementary estimates of the Department of National Defence be now considered?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

IMMIGRATION ACT

PERMANENT STATUS FOLLOWING RECOVERY FROM MENTAL DISORDER

Mr. Hubert Badanai (Fort William) moved the second reading of Bill No. C-30, to amend the Immigration Act.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this proposed amendment is to give permanent status under the Immigration Act to immigrants who have suffered from a mental disease or disorder but who apparently have been cured. Persons who have been convicted of and imprisoned for crimes are granted permanent status after a period during which they have demonstrated their rehabilitation. Under the present provision of the act persons who have ever suffered a mental illness are not given a like opportunity to prove their recovery.

In the white paper on immigration the Minister of Manpower and Immigration (Mr. Marchand) has in fact recognized the sheer discrimination contained in the present regulations by indicating the government's general intention. At page 24, paragraph 58, the white paper contains the following statement:

> Scientific knowledge and medical skill have reduced substantially the element of risk once inherent in certain illnesses. The present grounds for prohibition do not altogether reflect this advance. Nor are they altogether in line with modern medical and sociological concepts, particularly in respect to mental illness and epilepsy. Persons actually insane or suffering from contagious or infectious diseases ought not to be admitted as immigrants or non-immigrants, unless they are coming to Canada by previous arrangement and under proper safeguards to take treatment. However, an illness that has been cured or brought under control, to the point where no danger to public health or safety exists, should not be a bar to either temporary or permanent admission. Nor should mental or physical defectives be excluded for that reason alone, but only if they represent a danger to society or are not assured of private care.

I am now very pleased to report, Mr. Speaker, that the minister has indicated to me that he approves the general intent of this bill. He agrees with me that one of the most urgent needs for change in the Immigration Act is the removal of that section which authorizes the minister to issue a deportation order on a legally entered immigrant if the said immigrant should have the misfortune to enter a mental home.

At present, under the Immigration Act, a landed immigrant who has the misfortune to be admitted to a mental hospital is immediately placed under deportation order, and this order is not removed after the patient has been discharged from hospital fully recovered, even though he may enjoy many years of good health and never suffer a relapse.

This is a total disregard of justice, for even though the unfortunate individual has completely recovered from his mental illness he cannot recover his status as a landed immigrant. Although he may live an honourable life, reaching old age, he cannot qualify for citizenship because the act as it stands does not give the minister the power to remove the deportation order.

The fact that a deportation order is never acted upon in instances such as this does not alter the fact of this outmoded legislation, which is the worst encroachment on the rights of individuals ever to be put on the statute books of Canada. For many years I have viewed with alarm the retention of the present provisions of section 5 of the Immigration Act dealing with insanity, and I am thankful that we have been promised the removal of these provisions. Immigrants who have suffered from a mental disorder and who have been discharged as cured from a mental hospital, if all other qualifications required under the Citizenship Act are met, should not be denied Canadian citizenship.

I know of cases of persons right now who are unable to qualify for Canadian citizenship because of this monstrous section in the Immigration Act. These unfortunate individuals, with families, directing their own businesses, even employers of labour, suffered a nervous breakdown and had to undergo treatment in an Ontario mental institution for a period of months, but they were later discharged as cured and they have never suffered a recurrence of the disease.

Until this legislation is amended not only is such a person unable to qualify for Canadian citizenship but he cannot leave the country, say, to visit his homeland, which is a perfectly normal desire, for if he were to do so he would find himself in the prohibited class of persons who could never re-enter the country.

Now, sir, I wish to give you some of the details of a case in my own constituency. Without requiring lengthy consideration, any reasonable person would come to the conclusion that here was a case of unparalleled inconsistency in government legislation. In 1954 an order of deportation was issued against a man in my constituency, whose name for obvious reasons I shall not divulge; but the facts are all too true. Two and a half years after his arrival in Canada from Italy he was confined in the Ontario Hospital at Port Arthur for a period of two months, following a nervous breakdown. After his discharge from hospital he continued to work for various companies, including the Canada Car Company of Fort William, until 1957, when he accepted a position with the Marathon Corporation of Canada. Then in 1961 he started a business of his own, which he still operates, employing three other persons. At about this time he applied for Canadian citizenship, but was of course rejected.

When the present government took office in April, 1963, this fellow appealed to me for help to obtain his Canadian citizenship. Although I received a sympathetic response from the department, my representations on his behalf met with no more success than his previous attempts. Nevertheless I kept at it in the hope that surely there would be a breakthrough in this unjust regulation, and today I am pleased to say that this breakthrough has occurred, or is about to occur.

I personally appealed to the then deputy minister of citizenship and immigration, and on March 26, 1964, I received a reply from which I wish to quote in part as follows:

> I have reviewed the immigration branch file concerning your constituent, which indicates that he was granted landed immigrant status in May, 1951. He was getting along satisfactorily but unfortunately, in August, 1953, he became ill and was committed to the Ontario Hospital at Fort William. He was discharged after a short time but within a matter of days was returned to the hospital where he remained for over a year.
> Full particulars of the case were referred to the immigration medical advisers who diagnosed his condition as "schizophrenia catatonic type". An immigration inquiry was held and in February, 1954, his deportation was ordered on the grounds that he had become an inmate of a hospital for mental diseases. Although his appeal was dismissed, as he had been discharged from the hospital and had resumed his employment, deportation proceedings were deferred indefinitely.

● (5:10 p.m.)

> Over the years, this individual has called periodically at the immigration office in Fort William, in an effort to have his landed immigrant status restored. Unfortunately, his history of mental illness places him within the categories of persons whose admission to Canada is prohibited by statute. Under the present Immigration Act there is no provision for removing him from the prohibited classes and unless legislation is passed to change this situation no action can be taken towards his landing.
> No unfavourable reports have been received concerning this individual and you may assure him that in his present circumstances he may be allowed to remain in this country indefinitely under deferred deportation proceedings. You might also wish to advise him that the immigration officials will review this matter from time to time and that if any change occurs which would allow for restoration of his status, his case will be considered.

In view of your interest I am sorry that my reply is not more encouraging. Yours sincerely.

On March 30, 1964, I replied to the deputy minister as follows:

Your letter of March 26th dealing with the case of the owner of an insurance and travel agency and resident of the city of Fort William is one which requires further explanation.

This individual was granted landed immigrant status in May 1951. According to your own statement, he was getting along fine. He was a good worker and I have the testimony of the firms he worked for.

In August 1953 he suffered a nervous breakdown, and was admitted to the Ontario Hospital at Port Arthur, Ontario. A few days later he left the hospital, to return for several months.

Because he was an immigrant, without a certificate of citizenship, the case was brought to the attention of the Immigration Department, the officials of which ordered his deportation on the grounds that he had become an inmate of a mental hospital. He appealed the deportation order, which was dismissed. However, as he had been discharged from the hospital and had returned to work, deportation proceedings were suspended.

Since 1954 he repeatedly visited the Immigration Office at Fort William, in an effort to have his landed immigrant status restored to enable him to apply for and obtain Canadian citizenship; this has been denied to him.

In your letter you state that, under the present Immigration Act, there is no provision for removing him from the prohibited classes and, unless legislation is passed to change present regulations, no action can be taken to have his deportation order removed.

In the next paragraph of your letter you state that no unfavourable reports have been received concerning this man and that, in his present circumstances, he may be allowed to remain in this country indefinitely under deferred deportation proceedings.

In the same paragraph you state the Immigration officials will review this matter from time to time, and if any change occurs which would allow for restoration of his status, his case will be considered

What is there to review, may I ask, when the man has been absolutely normal for ten years? I have spoken personally to the priest whose church he attends regularly. I have questioned people who know him and respect him, none of whom had even the slightest idea that he had been a mental case.

I look upon the disposition of this case by your department as being highly unsatisfactory, and I would ask you to be good enough to have an inquiry made by some competent person, as soon as possible.

On May 7, 1964, I received the following memorandum from the deputy minister:

As the result of your letter of March 30th and our subsequent telephone conversation, I have prepared a full report concerning all the circumstances in the case of the individual who has been allowed to remain in Canada under deferred deportation proceedings since 1954.

[Mr. Badanai.]

First, let me say that my letter of March 26th is factually correct. Under present legislation there is no provision for removing him from the prohibited classes and as his landed immigrant status cannot be restored, it is proposed to allow him to remain indefinitely under deferred deportation proceedings. His file is brought forward and reviewed periodically along with those of a number of other persons whose situation is identical. This review is carried out so that the cases will not be forgotten and to ensure that if it becomes possible to restore landed immigrant status to these persons, it will be done as quickly as possible.

Let me assure you that all concerned are as dissatisfied as you are with the old fashioned provisions of the act pertaining to mental disorders. I would be very pleased if there were some means by which the minister could exercise discretion to 'land' this individual and with this thought in mind, full particulars of the case have been referred to both the departmental legal adviser and the Department of National Health and Welfare for review.

Our legal adviser has expressed the opinion that the deportation order made against him was arrived at in a regular manner, in accord with the requirements of the Immigration Act and there was no error or irregularity in the proceedings that would afford grounds to quash it. When arrived at regularly in this way there is, of course, no discretion in the minister to quash the order—the minister being required in this respect to obey the law as much as other persons. The legal adviser has expressed the opinion that it is not possible to quash the deportation order.

The National Health and Welfare officials have reviewed the file and according to their report, he was treated in the Ontario Hospital, Fort William, on two occasions—from August 18, 1953, until September 8, 1953, and from September 27, 1953 until November 6, 1953. At each admission the diagnosis was the same—catatonic schizophrenia. Catatonic schizophrenia is a psychotic illness.

They state that 'insanity' is a legal, not a medical term. For practical purposes they regard psychotic illness and insanity as synonymous. Consequently, were he now being examined as an immigrant he would be certifiable under Section 5, s.s. (a) (i) of the Immigration Act for previous insanity (catatonic schizophrenia). The accuracy of the diagnosis in relation to the symptoms upon which it was based leaves no room for manoeuvre.

In their report it is explained that when the Immigration Act was framed, insanity was regarded as an incurable illness. It is now known to be temporary in certain cases. This individual, following successful treatment in 1953, has been well for over ten years and they would consider that the risk of recurrence is very small indeed. The certification under Section 5, s.s. (a) (ii) which would be applicable now would be based upon history alone. It is quite possible that his present condition would permit of no certification at all.

However, Section 5, s.s. (a) (ii) refers to immigrants who have been insane at any time. 'Upgrading' would require the 1953 diagnosis to be shown to be wrong and unfortunately, all the evidence in their possession indicates that it was correct.

I realize that this report is rather lengthy and somewhat involved but I do hope that it will convince you that we have not treated him unfairly and that his landed immigrant status is not being restored because the Immigration Act precludes this action.

Now, Mr. Speaker, one can readily understand what prompted me to introduce this bill, which has been on the order paper for over two years and which I hope the house will approve in principle without delay. I wish to express deep appreciation to the minister and his officials for their co-operation and understanding in respect of this vital question. I also express the hope that everyone present will vote for the passage of this bill.

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, before the hon. member resumes his seat I should like to direct a question to him. I was shocked by the callous disregard for the person involved in the letters which the hon. gentleman has received. Is it not the opinion of the hon. member that the very unfortunate attitude of the deputy minister in respect of this unfortunate immigrant is symptomatic of the schyzophrenic mind of the deputy minister concerned.

Mr. Badanai: I regret to say to the hon. member that I cannot agree with his definition. The deputy minister was merely following the legislation. It is up to parliament to change the legislation in order that the deputy minister or any other official would be in a position to do something for this person, under the legislation. If this bill should pass, the officials from now on would be a little more sympathetic.

Mr. John Gilbert (Broadview): Mr. Chairman, the members of the New Democratic party fully support the amendment brought forward by the hon. member. Possibly the reason he has brought this forward is that, having been born in a European country, I believe Italy, since coming to Canada he has experienced some of these problems at first hand in his area, and therefore has become very sensitve to them. No doubt he is very anxious that these problems be cleared up, not only for the benefit of the people whom he represents but also people all across Canada who are in a similar position.

If the hon. member for Greenwood (Mr. Brewin) were here, he could cite many examples of the same problem that the hon. member has experienced. He could give in detail the results he has obtained in trying to help these people. I also come from a riding in which many immigrants live. In the last ten years in particular a number of Italian, Greek, German and central European immigrants have come into my riding. Some of them have had problems which are quite similar to those cited by the hon. member. It gives me pleasure to rise and support this amendment because I also am sensitive to the problem and should like to see the amendment carried.

I was very glad that the hon. member gave the Minister of Manpower and Immigration (Mr. Marchand) full credit in this respect, because the hon. member knows as well as the rest of us that this minister is a man of great compassion and understanding. I do not doubt that this compassion and understanding derives from his training in the labour movement and experience as a former member of the C.C.F. party and the New Democratic party. I am sure that experience had a great deal of influence on him. We are happy to understand that he supports this amendment.

The provisions of this section were probably drafted at a time when there was not a great deal of immigration to Canada. It was probably passed when we had limited immigration to this country. It may be, therefore, that the problem did not arise with such severity as it does today. If I have any criticism of the section and this amendment it is with regard to the word "insane". Hon. members will notice that the section reads in part, "are insane or, if immigrants, have been insane at any time", and so on. The word "insane" is not generally accepted by Canadians today. It connotes something that we do not really like to think about. We have got rid of the title "insane institutions" and call them mental institutions. I would hope there would be a further amendment to the section and the word "insane" changed to the phrase "mental illness", because what the amendment is aimed at is that if a person suffers from mental illness, and through treatment is cured for at least seven years, this indicates that he should be considered to be a proper applicant for Canadian citizenship. We agree wholeheartedly with this principle and would like not only this amendment to be adopted but a change made in respect of the word "insane".

I notice that the hon. member for Spadina (Mr. Ryan) seconded the motion. I think he could tell us about this problem in dramatic terms, because he comes from a riding in which many European people live. He has probably had similar experiences with regard to the problems of immigrants. I should also like to think we were big enough and possessed enough understanding to make further amendments in order to deal with these problems.

I am sure hon. members have had the following experience. An applicant has applied for immigration to Canada, he and his wife have passed all the necessary tests, but they had one child who was mentally ill. As a result of the child being insane, in the rough words of the section, the applicant has been refused permission to enter Canada. I have heard of devious methods being employed to overcome this difficulty. The father and mother come into this country with the rest of their children and leave in Europe the youngester who is suffering from a mental illness. Then they get down on their knees and try to persuade the minister that the youngster should be admitted to this country now or at a later time. I should like to think we were big enough that if this type of case arose the youngster could be brought over here, and even if that child were not granted Canadian citizen status the family could live together and the child could be given the treatment and facilities necessary in order to cure the mental illness. He could later be made a Canadian citizen.

These are some of the improvements that we of the New Democratic party would like to see adopted in our immigration laws. As I said, if our main expert on the subject of immigration was in the house, the hon. member for Greenwood, I think he would be able to explain the problems in more detail and more persuasively than I have. We would like to see this amendment adopted, and other changes made to the legislation so that more applicants for immigration to Canada would be accepted.

Hon. J. A. MacLean (Queens): Mr. Speaker, I just want to say that we in this group approve of the suggested amendment and have no objection to it. We will not delay its passage by making any lengthy speeches. I just want to commend the hon. member for introducing this bill and the amendment contained therein.

Mr. S. Perry Ryan (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I thank hon. members opposite for their support of the proposed amendment to the Immigration Act. At the outset I should like sincerely to compliment the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Badanai) for initiating the amendment and presenting it so well. He has been not only the initiator of the amendment but also a strong advocate in this matter. The hon. member has anticipated many of us. We have been thinking about a measure of this kind, but he is the one who actually had it drafted and presented. He deserves all the credit in the world for bringing this measure so far.

I believe that apart from the Air Canada bill there has not been a private member's bill adopted by the government for a considerable length of time. Some of us in the house were members of the special joint committee of the Senate and House of Commons on immigration. We examined the Immigration Act with respect to the prohibition of individuals entering Canada on medical grounds. The committee considered submissions from both the Canadian Association for Retarded Children and the Canadian Mental Health Association. It might be useful to consider the remarks made by representatives of these associations, in the light of the proposed amendment.

A representative of both associations had this to say on the general nature of the medical prohibitions respecting mental disabilities:

> In framing certain principles which might be followed and are exemplary, it is felt that the history of mental disability or a mental hospitalization should not necessarily exclude immigration. The proper ground, it is believed, should be consideration of the person's present status, his potential, his prognosis, both medical and social and, in some cases—or perhaps all cases—the resources of himself and his family.

The spokesman felt that if one word should form the policy for such decisions it would be "flexibility". His words are reported in No. 7 of the minutes and proceedings of the special joint committee, dated February 16, 1967, at page 291.

Another representative of the Canadian Mental Health Association, Dr. John D. Griffin, who is not only the general director of the association which has 100,000 members but was also at that time the president elect of the Canadian Psychiatric Association told the Committee that mental illness is in most cases recoverable. That is also reported at page 299 of report No. 7 in the minutes and proceedings of the special joint committee on immigration.

The written brief to the joint committee from the Canadian Mental Health Association said the following:

> It is, however, submitted that the current grounds for refusal of entry because of mental disorder are illogical and deny the coming to Canada of many persons and their families who could make valuable contributions to our country.

I think it can be said that these experts in the field of mental problems feel that the existing immigration law is deficient in three respects. First of all it is medically unsound since the mentally ill do, in many cases, recover. Second, it is inflexible and restrictive because in deciding whether to admit these people we should not confine our consideration to their past illness but take into account many other factors, especially the medical opinion and their family circumstances. Third, the existing prohibition is costly to our country because many qualified people who could contribute something to this country are lost to Canada as a result of this absolute prohibition against immigrants who have been mentally ill, even for a short period of time.

I think it can be said that, subject to an amendment which I intend to move in committee at the request of the sponsor, Bill C-30 will meet with the general approval of the medical associations which gave the joint committee the benefit of their views. Certainly the bill would make the present Immigration Act much more flexible. It does recognize that these unfortunate people who have been afflicted with insanity can recover and make a worth-while contribution to the Canadian community. It allows the governor in council to take into account not only the advice of a medical practitioner but the general circumstances of each individual case.

I realize that the Canadian Mental Health Association was critical of a bill similar to Bill C-30 as it was presented to the house originally. I believe the basis for that criticism has for the most part been met by the revision to Bill C-30 made by its sponsor, and which I will be proposing. It is true it does not speak of mental diseases, but it speaks of symptoms of insanity, which is pretty much the same thing.

As members will recall, the government retained Mr. Joseph Sedgwick, Q.C. to report on immigration law. Part II of his report dated January 27, 1966 and later tabled in the house carried a recommendation on the section of the Immigration Act now under discussion. At page 5 he said:

> The provisions of the act dealing with "Prohibited Classes" on grounds of health, should, I think, be reviewed, particularly section 5(a)(ii) which bars persons who "are insane or, if immigrants, have been insane at any time".
> Many highly desirable immigrants may have had a mental breakdown which resulted in extended treatment, and even confinement in an institution. But such persons may, and often do, make a complete recovery, and if they have recovered their past misfortunes should not be, as it now is, an absolute bar to their admission.

I should like for a moment or two to review the law as it presently exists. First of all I will read section 5(a) of the Immigration Act, chapter 325 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1952, volume 5. It reads as follows:

> No person, other than a person referred to in subsection (2) of section 7, shall be admitted to Canada if he is a member of any of the following classes of persons:
> (a) persons who
> (i) are idiots, imbeciles or morons,
> (ii) are insane or, if immigrants, have been insane at any time,
> (iii) have constitutional psychopathic personalities, or
> (iv) if immigrants, are afflicted with epilepsy;

Then section 7 (2) reads as follows:

> In addition to the persons described in subsection (1), the following persons may be allowed to enter and remain in Canada as non-immigrants:
> (a) persons authorized by the minister to enter Canada for treatment and care at any health resort, hospital, sanitarium, asylum or other place or institution for their cure and care and, after entering Canada, while they are actually under such treatment and care;
> (b) persons passing in transit through Canada under escort or guard; and
> (c) holders of a permit.

This last subsection takes us to section 8 of the act which reads as follows:

> (1) The minister may issue a written permit authorizing any person to enter Canada or, being in Canada, to remain therein.
> (2) A permit shall be expressed to be in force for a specified period not exceeding twelve months, and during the time that it is in force a permit stays the execution of any deportation order that may have been made against the person concerned.
> (4) The minister may, upon the cancellation or expiration of a permit, make a deportation order respecting the person concerned and such person has no right of appeal from the deportation order and shall be deported as soon as practicable.
> (5) The minister shall submit to parliament within thirty days of the commencement of the first session of parliament in each year a report showing all permits, with particulars thereof, issued during the preceding calendar year.

So we have the situation where wealthy people in Canada can bring in a person who has suffered from a mental illness, temporary or otherwise, and have them hospitalized in Canada under a permit, provided they can make arrangements with the provincial government and can cover the cost which, I understand, is in some cases about $50 a day. Here we have people who in many cases may not recover from their illness, who can come into Canada—although it is true they may not be able to stay too long—whereas people who have recovered long ago from a temporary mental illness are still barred from coming.

There is a discrimination here, and the bill sponsored by the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Badanai) makes common sense to me and, it appears, does also to all hon. members of the house. The Minister of Manpower and Immigration is fully in favour of the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Fort William, which I will be moving at the request of the hon. member. This amendment was drafted after discussion with the minister and the government, and it is one which is acceptable to the government.

Before I resume my seat perhaps I should advise the house as to the number of permits which have been issued in the last couple of years pertaining to the classes of persons outlined in section 5, and who are permitted to come into Canada under section 8 of the Immigration Act.

In 1966-67 there were respectively 65 and 72 idiots, imbeciles and morons admitted under section 5(a)(i) which is the subparagraph before the one we are now seeking to have amended. In those years there were 37 and 41 respectively who were insane at some time. In so far as psychopathic personalities are concerned there were 2 and 6 in those years who were admitted. In 1966 there were 72 admitted who were suffering from epilepsy, and 60 in 1967. The total number of persons admitted in these classes was 176 in 1966, and 179 in 1967.

Mr. Schreyer: Will the hon. member permit a question?

Mr. Ryan: Yes.

Mr. Schreyer: Does the hon. member have any data to show how many were allowed entry who were mentally retarded?

Mr. Ryan: No, I do not have that figure. Mental retardation is a question of degree, and there may be some under one of these headings who were mentally retarded. However, I do not have a figure which I would regard as being good enough to answer the question specifically. These figures include both immigrants and non-immigrants to Canada, but they are based mainly on immigrants. I hope I will be able to move an amendment during committee consideration of the bill.

[Mr. Ryan.]

Mr. Jack Roxburgh (Norfolk): I should like to say a few words on this bill. It is a pleasure for me to take part in this debate on a measure moved by the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Badanai). I should like to concur in the statement on mental illness made by the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Germa). I just do not like this term "insane" and I believe some change should be made.

Before I sit down, Mr. Speaker, I should like to say that Canada has always prided itself on keeping families together. No matter what any person may think about immigration policy in the past, in the present or in the future, I hope this policy will be maintained. However, the area mentioned by the hon. member is one area in which we have been lax.

I should like to say a few words on a subject which is not related to mental retardates. In the last few years, under our immigration policy, a large number of university students have come to Canada to work, mostly in agriculture. Some 1,500 have come to the tobacco areas of Norfolk, Oxford, Elgin and Brant from different countries in the world. In view of the present labour situation, the Minister of Manpower and Immigration (Mr. Marchand), for whom I have the highest respect, has decided to cut down the number of university students coming to Canada.

Some hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Roxburgh: I should like the minister to take another look at that policy because, of that group coming to Canada, a large number are staying here. In this way we have attained a number of university graduates in Canada, so I believe the minister should take another look at the policy to make sure we get as many into this country as possible.

Motion agreed to, bill read the second time and the house went into committee thereon, Mr. Batten in the chair.

On clause 1—

Mr. Ryan: As I said, Mr. Chairman, I should like to move an amendment to clause 1 of this bill. The amendment does answer, at least in part, the objections of the hon. member for Broadview. The amendment refers to "symptoms of insanity" rather than using the stark term "insanity". The other change is that a medical opinion is required to the effect that the insanity symptoms are not likely to recur. I submit to the committee that this is a reasonable requirement. It does tighten slightly the control of admissions, but that may be a good thing.

I have pleasure in moving, therefore:

That Bill No. C-30 be amended by striking out lines 10 to 17 thereof and substituting therefor the following:

"in council upon evidence satisfactory to him, which shall include the evidence of a qualified medical practitioner, that

(A) for at least seven years immediately preceding the date of his application for admission he has neither been a patient in any hospital for the treatment of his insanity, nor suffered any significant recurrence of the symptoms thereof, and

(B) the symptoms of his insanity are unlikely to recur."

Mr. Gilbert: Mr. Chairman, the amendment proposed by the hon. member for Spadina appears to be acceptable with one exception. I notice that in (A) he has included the words "for at least seven years immediately preceding the date of his application for admission he has neither been a patient in any hospital". I am wondering whether the hon. member would agree to qualify that and insert the word "permanent" patient. Some people who have breakdowns do require outpatient treatment even though they are out working in society after treatment for their illness in hospital. In other words, they could be outpatients rather than inpatients.

One would like to think, Mr. Chairman, that the hon. member is referring to a permanent patient. There is this limitation of seven years, and it could easily be suggested that a person is a patient if he is receiving outpatient treatment. As you know, when persons recover from an illness they sometimes have a slight relapse. This usually means they have to go back to hospital for a week end or some short period for shock treatment, or some type of treatment, and this would mean that the seven year period would commence from the time they were discharged from hospital. Surely the hon. member for Spadina does not have that in mind.

Patients in hospital beds are usually sent to the hospital by medical doctors. Then after treatment they are discharged. However, sometimes the discharge is conditional upon their attending the outpatient clinic for further treatment. Therefore I would ask the hon. member to consider this change, in the interests of those who may be placed in this position.

Mr. Haidasz: Mr. Chairman, in support of this objection might I suggest that the amendment be changed to read "has neither been hospitalized for the treatment of his insanity" or mental illness. Perhaps that would be acceptable to the hon. member who proposed the amendment.

Mr. Ryan: Mr. Chairman, might I have a minute or two to consider this. There is some difficulty with the words that follow, "nor suffered any significant recurrence of the symptoms thereof". It might well be that if a person went to hospital as an outpatient and took two shock treatments he would be eliminated under this part in any event.

This question has been well considered by the minister of immigration, and I take it by the justice department, and it seems to me that at this point it would be dangerous to insert a word like "permanent". It would be too all embracing. It may go a little too far, even further than the hon. member for Broadview, who has the best intentions in the matter, would like to go.

As I say, Mr. Chairman, I am concerned about the latter part of paragraph (A), which says "nor suffered any significant recurrence of the symptoms thereof". It is a question of fact. If a person goes to hospital as an outpatient, it might be for treatment that is determined to have no relationship to mental illness. Or it may be for something so insignificant that it would have very little or no bearing on the decision. If it did, then I would think there would be quite an outcry about it.

If we do find, Mr. Chairman, that there are cases arising which give cause for concern, there is always the remedy of making further amendments. However, I submit to the hon. member for Broadview that we would be taking a great step forward if we were to put the bill through as amended at this point. Knowing he is favourable to the amendment I ask him to support it, even though the bill is not as perfect as he might like.

QUESTIONS

C.N.R. BRANCH LINES ABANDONED AND EMPLOYEES

Question No. 913—Mr. Douglas:

1. What were the total miles of branch lines abandoned by the C.N.R. in each province in each of the years 1963, 1964, 1965, 1966 and 1967?

2. How many scheduled employees were laid off in each province by the C.N.R. in each of the years 1963, 1964, 1965, 1966 and 1967?

3. How many non-scheduled employees were laid off in each province by the C.N.R. in each of the years 1963, 1964, 1965, 1966 and 1967?

4. How many scheduled employees were employed by the C.N.R. in Newfoundland in each of the years 1963, 1964, 1965, 1966 and 1967?

5. How many non-scheduled employees were employed by the C.N.R. in Newfoundland in each of the years 1963, 1964, 1965, 1966 and 1967?

Mr. J. A. Byrne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): The management of Canadian National Railways advises as follows: 1.

	1963	1964	1965	1966	1967	Total
Newfoundland	1.4	—	—	—	—	1.4
Prince Edward Is.	—	—	—	—	—	—

2 and 3. As the organizational structure of the company is on a regional and area basis, and with the exception of the Newfoundland area the boundaries thereof do not coincide with provincial boundaries, the company does not maintain records which would readily produce information to answer the question in the form asked. In so far as the question relates to the Newfoundland area; since 1965 the company has extracted aggregate data for those lay-offs exceeding 30 days or any complete month. In 1965, 1966 and up to November 30, 1967 such lay-off actions affecting scheduled employees numbered 151, 269 and 150 respectively. The classification "laid-off" is not normally used in respect of non-scheduled employees.

4. New hirings of scheduled employees during the years 1965, 1966 and up to November 30, 1967 totalled 1067, 591 and 384 respectively. In addition, employee recalls for those who had been laid-off in those years or prior years for more than 30 days or any complete calendar month numbered 704, 660 and 556 respectively.

5. New hirings of non-scheduled employees during the years 1965, 1966 and up to November 30, 1967 amounted to 12, 9 and 19 respectively.

Prior to 1965 this type of statistical records was not maintained in respect of the Newfoundland area.

DISCONTINUATION OF TELEGRAPH SERVICES

1. What are the names of the cities or towns, by province, where the C.P.R. propose to discontinue their telegraph services?

2. What are the names of the cities or towns, by province, where the C.N.R. propose to discontinue their telegraph services?

3. In cities or towns where both the C.N.R. and C.P.R. services are discontinued, from what center will telegraph services be provided?

Mr. J. A. Byrne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): The management of Canadian National Railways advises as follows: 1 and 2. Pursuant to a judgment dated January 24, 1968 and Order No. R-1514 dated February 16, 1968, issued by the Canadian Transport Commission, implementation of a proposal providing for the reciprocal withdrawal of telegraph offices in areas where the volume of business does not justify the retention of offices by both Canadian National and Canadian Pacific will commence with an initial group of 16 locations as undernoted. When this occurs, the remaining office will be set up to represent CN-CP telecommunications.

CN withdraws from	CP withdraws from
Kentville, N.S.	St. John's, Nfld.
Sherbrooke, Que.	North Sydney, N.S.
Chatham, Ont.	Moncton, N.B.

To ease the impact of the technological and operational changes arising from this plan, agreement was reached by the companies with representatives of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union. This agreement provides protective measures to assist telecommunications employees who may be adversely affected by changes under this plan.

3. Under the reciprocal withdrawal plan none of the communities involved will be without telegraph service.

Byrne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): The management of Canadian National Railways advises as follows: The following statement indicates the profit or loss, after allowing for depreciation, which the railway received from the operation of the individual hotels. The amounts listed for the Queen Elizabeth and Hotel Vancouver represent the Canadian National's return from the operations and not the profits or losses of those hotels.

FLAGS FLOWN ON PARLIAMENT HILL

Question No. 1,143—Mr. Macquarrie:

1. On how many days since January 1, 1967, has the Royal Union flag (Union Jack) been flown from the courtesy staff on Parliament Hill?

2. What special occasions or events were being recognized on these dates?

3. Are flags of foreign countries flown from this staff to honour the visit to Canada of (a) heads of state or (b) heads of government?

4. If (b) what heads of government were extended this courtesy in 1967?

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (Minister of Public Works): 1. Three days.

2. On May 24, 1967, on the official observance of the Queen's birthday. On December 11, 1967, on the anniversary of the Statute of Westminster. On February 10, 1968, on the occasion of the visit of Prime Minister Wilson of the United Kingdom, to parliament hill. On June 30, July 1, and July 5, 1967, the Queen's personal Canadian flag was flown, but from the Peace Tower, not from the courtesy pole.

3. Yes, if the head of state or head of government is visiting parliament hill. However, during centennial year, 1967, when heads of state or the representatives of heads of state visited parliament hill the courtesy flag poles were not used because the appropriate national flag was flown at ground level on the hill alternatively with the national flag of Canada and the centennial flag. Moreover, if the visiting head of state had a personal flag that flag was flown with the national flag of Canada on the state visit stand.

4. On October 25, 1967, the national flag of Poland was flown on the courtesy pole when the deputy head of state of Poland was here during the Polish parliamentary visit.

*PER CAPITA MEDICAL COSTS

Question No. 1,157—Mr. Rynard:

1. When was the last cost survey of medical care per capita made in Canada?

2. What was the cost of medical care per capita by province?

3. When was the previous survey made and what were the results?

Mrs. Margaret Rideout (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Health and Welfare): The answer to the first part of the question, Mr. Speaker, is February, 1968. It should be noted, however, that estimates of the cost of the medical care program are being consistently revised in the light of additional information as it is received. Such additional information would include changes in the provincial schedule of medical fees, changes in the level of payment in terms of the provincial schedule of fees made by public and private plans, changes in the pattern of medical practice, changes in the utilization experience and in the cost experience of private and public plans in the various provinces, changes in the doctor-patient ratio and changes in the population of each individual province. Thus the costs of the medical care program are not estimates at set intervals but are constantly updated as pertinent information is received.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

HEALTH AND WELFARE

POSSIBLE REDUCTION IN INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICES

On the orders of the day:

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): The question I have to ask I bring to the attention of the Prime Minister because it concerns two departments. I ask him, on behalf of the Indians in Alberta and Saskatchewan, whether he will look into their grave fears that there is to be a reduction in the amount of medical aid. They rely on treaty No. 6 which was agreed to by Governor Morris and the Indian tribes at Fort Carlton in 1876, under which the Indians were guaranteed medical treatment and drugs for all time in return for which they ceded 21,000 square miles to the crown. There is great resentment amongst them. I ask the Prime Minister if he will look into this situation because these people deserve the assurance of the Prime Minister that their rights will be preserved and protected.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): I will be glad to do that, Mr. Speaker. I should hope that any commitment entered into by the crown will be maintained. I hope the Minister of National Health and Welfare will be in a position to make a statement, at the latest by tomorrow, which will remove any fear that there is to be a reduction or deterioration in medical services for the Indians.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Prime Minister about the letter which Premier Manning quoted in the Alberta legislature, allegedly a letter from the Prime Minister regarding the curtailment of medical services to Indians. In view of the fact that the premier of Alberta has quoted this letter publicly, I wonder whether the Prime Minister would undertake to table the letter today so we can see its contents.

Mr. Pearson: Mr. Speaker, I will be very glad to look into that at once. I had rather assumed that it would not be made public until the minister made a statement; but I have no complaint about that, and I do not see why it should not be tabled.

Mr. Douglas: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. With regard to the Prime Minister's statement, would the government undertake to call the national health and welfare item in the supplementary estimates today so the minister will be able to make this statement?

Mr. Pearson: Mr. Speaker, I have already given an assurance in general terms. Since I am informed that we are going to be here tomorrow and the minister will be here tomorrow, perhaps a statement should be given tomorrow.

INQUIRIES OF THE MINISTRY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Roland Godin (Portneuf): Mr. Speaker, I also wish to put a question to the right hon. Prime Minister.

In view of the fact that there is more and more talk of national unity, can the right hon. Prime Minister tell us whether the new interest rate on Canada bonds was set jointly by St. James Street of Montreal and Bay Street of Toronto?

Mr. Speaker: I do not believe the question, in that form, is in order.

Mr. Roland Godin (Portneuf): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the right hon. Prime Minister.

In view of the fact that there was a 10 per cent increase in the salaries and expenses of the office of the Auditor General of Canada, for the year 1967-68, although the increase in national production was only 4½ per cent, will the right hon. Prime Minister consider advising his successor to retain the services of a less demanding auditor?

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

LAOS—REPORTED INVASION BY COMMUNIST FORCES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. Can he give the house any information as to the reported large scale eruption into Laos by communist troops from North Viet Nam, as reported by Prime Minister Souvanna Phouma on Saturday?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, we did receive such a report, and we are looking into it. I hope to be in a position to make a statement in regard to the matter tomorrow.

Mr. Nesbitt: Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question. Can the Prime Minister give an indication to the house of any reports received with regard to similar military penetration or infiltration into Cambodia and Thailand? Could he also tell us what is Canada's attitude and policy in the face of prospective communist escalation of the war into these countries on a widened scale?

Mr. Pearson: Mr. Speaker, we are very much aware of this danger. We are also distressed at the inability of the commission to get all the information that it should be able to get in matters of this kind. I hope to be able to make a longer statement on this question tomorrow.

HOUSING

INQUIRY AS TO INTEREST RATE FOR 1968 SECOND QUARTER

On the orders of the day:

Hon. R. A. Bell (Carleton): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the President of the Treasury Board may I direct my question to his parliamentary secretary. In view of the urgent need of house builders to make their spring plans, is the parliamentary secretary yet in a position to advise the house what the National Housing Act rate will be for the second quarter of 1968? Does he anticipate that it will be 9 per cent or more?

Mr. J. E. Walker (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I anticipate bringing this question to the attention of the minister.

UNITED NATIONS

CANADIAN REPRESENTATION AT CONFERENCE ON TRADE AND DEVELOPMENT

On the orders of the day:

Hon. D. S. Harkness (Calgary North): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Secretary of State for External Affairs I will direct my question to the Prime Minister. Who is Canada's chief representative in New Delhi, at the United Nations conference on trade and development which has been going on there now for the past month and which the Minister of Trade and Commerce and subsequently the Minister of Labour attended for short periods? Can the Prime Minister inform us whether any definite plans have been agreed to at this conference to improve the trade position of the underdeveloped countries?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I speak subject to correction but I believe the delegation is now being headed by the deputy minister of trade and commerce. However, I will check this and give my hon. friend the information regarding the personnel of the delegation. I know there have been long and difficult discussions on the subject of ways and means to assist underdeveloped countries. Perhaps I might be in a position to make a short report on that tomorrow, too.

LABOUR RELATIONS

MONTREAL—SETTLEMENT OF STRIKE OF DOCK WORKERS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. J.-A. Mongrain (Trois-Rivières): Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a question to the right hon. Prime Minister, and I apologize for not having sent him notice thereof.

In view of the fact that in the last few days newspapers have advised us that serious unrest threatens the ports on the St. Lawrence, can he tell us whether he has any information to give the house on this matter this afternoon?

[English]

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, perhaps I could ask the Minister without Portfolio, who has been following this question over the week end, to make a short report on it.

Hon. B. S. Mackasey (Member of the Administration): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the house will be pleased to know that at 2.30 p.m. today at Montreal Judge Allan Gold announced the signing of an agreement between the International Longshoremen's Association and the Shipping Federation of Canada which ensures peace on the three ports of the St. Lawrence river for the balance of the year.

Mr. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, to the Minister without Portfolio. Does this include any settlement of the disputed sections in the Picard report which were outstanding at the beginning of the year?

Mr. Mackasey: Mr. Speaker, both parties have agreed voluntarily to submit to arbitration on these contentious points. A decision clarifying all these points will be rendered by the conciliation board, which will remain in existence in some form for the next nine months.

Mr. D. V. Pugh (Okanagan Boundary): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Will the Minister without Portfolio now assure the house that he is taking steps to see that shipping surcharges on exports are immediately reduced to their pre-strike amounts? The minister well knows of my interest in British Columbia fruit shipments off-shore, the surcharges that were placed on them and the troubles we have had since.

[Mr. Pearson.]

Mr. Mackasey: I thank the hon. member for his question. He has shown much interest in this subject matter, having discussed it with me in private. I shall investigate further this afternoon and report back to him tomorrow.

FINANCE

REQUEST FOR INVESTIGATION INTO AUTOMOBILE INSURANCE INDUSTRY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Barry Mather (New Westminster): My question ought to be for the Minister of Transport. In his absence perhaps Your Honour would let somebody take note of it. Considering the action of the President of the United States in calling on the secretary of transportation of that country to conduct an investigation into the automobile insurance industry, will our minister consider similar action in Canada?

Mr. Speaker: I have let somebody take notice of the question.

AGRICULTURE

REQUEST FOR ANNOUNCEMENT OF DAIRY POLICY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. W. Danforth (Kent (Ont.)): In the absence of the Minister of Agriculture may I direct my question to his parliamentary secretary. Since the new dairy year in Canada begins next week can we anticipate a statement by the minister in this house outlining in detail government plans and dairy policies for the 1968 year?

Mr. Bruce S. Beer (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): I am not sure of the timing of the statement by the minister, but I am sure it will be made in the house at the appropriate time.

REPORTED SHORTAGE OF CHEMICALS TO CONTROL WILD OATS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Bruce S. Beer (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): On Thursday last the hon. member for Rosetown-Biggar asked a question about the availability of avadex for the control of wild oats. I am informed by department officials that the manufacturer expects to be able to meet all orders and that supplies of the chemical will be increased considerably as compared with last year.

The second part of the hon. member's question was about the availability of other products for the control of wild oats. I am advised that the research branch of the department is carrying out tests in an extensive research program with other products, which may result in a similar control of wild oats.

HEALTH AND WELFARE

ADMISSION OF INDIAN WOMEN TO MATERNITY HOSPITALS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. P. B. Rynard (Simcoe East): I wish to direct a question to the Prime Minister. In view of reports that Indian women are now being admitted to some institution some weeks before confinement and kept there for some weeks after, would the right hon. gentleman look into what arrangements are now being considered with respect to admitting all such patients?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): I shall be glad to look into it.

CAPE BRETON, N.S.—CONTINUED OPERATION OF McBEAN MINE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax): In the temporary absence of the hon. member for Pictou may I direct my question to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, and ask if he can report on the meeting held with Premier Smith of Nova Scotia over the week end concerning the McBean colliery.

Hon. Jean Luc Pepin (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): As hon. members know, the situation of the McBean mine is a difficult one. It is not located on Cape Breton Island proper and consequently it does not fall within the legislation creating DEVCO. It is not considered to be an independent mine in the sense used in the agreement between Canada and Nova Scotia. So it is a special problem. I went down to Halifax on Saturday to meet with the premier and his advisers. We tried to define the problem in terms of ownership of the mine, its future operation, arrangements for subventions and pension plans. I made a few suggestions, and both governments are considering the matter now.

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton South): Am I to understand that the minister intends to give the situation at McBean the attention which was desired by the hon. member for Pictou during the debate on the legislation in connection with the Cape Breton Development Corporation?

Mr. Pepin: The question is put in such a way that I find it difficult to reply.

[Later:]

Mr. McCleave: Mr. Speaker, I should like to inquire of the Prime Minister whether he has an answer to the question I raised earlier.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

POLICY RESPECTING VOLUNTARY WITHDRAWALS UNDER UNIFICATION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): May I direct a question to the Minister of National Defence. It is of importance now because April 1 is the deadline which affects men in the armed services who wish to leave the services because they do not desire to continue under the unification program. In view of the minister's earlier statement that these people would not be penalized in any way, I want to ask whether it is true that those leaving the armed services in these circumstances will not be granted the usual rehabilitation pay with leave of absence, nor will they receive any moving expenses, nor will they retain any pension rights. Is this the situation? If it is not, is anything being done to inform the men properly?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): People availing themselves of this particular provision in the act are considered on the same basis as anybody who asks for a voluntary release. There is no question of their being penalized; neither are they offered any incentive to avail themselves of this particular section of the legislation. This is the purpose of the whole exercise. We do not want to force people to stay in the services if they do not agree with the policy, and that is all.

Mr. Douglas: Are persons leaving the services not normally entitled to rehabilitation leave with pay, one month for every five years of service, I think? Will this be denied to men who leave the services under the provision to which the minister has referred?

Mr. Cadieux (Terrebonne): Not if they are normally entitled to it.

Inquiries of the Ministry

STUDENT LOANS

REPORTED PLANS FOR REDUCTION IN PROGRAM

On the orders of the day:

Mr. David MacDonald (Prince): On Friday I asked the Prime Minister about reports of a possible reduction of 50 per cent in loans under the Canada student loan plan, whether such a reduction was contemplated at a time of rising tuition and residence fees. The right hon. gentleman said he would look into the question. Is he now in a position to give any information to the house?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Yes, Mr. Speaker. Under the Canada Student Loans Act loans may be authorized only to those who are in need of a loan to continue their education. Federal and provincial officials responsible for the administration of the plan have been working out criteria for the assessment of needy students for assistance. These criteria have been reported to the house and made public from time to time. The officials concerned are currently discussing the more consistent application in practice of these criteria, and it may well be that some students who do not clearly need help under this plan will find that the allocations are being reserved for those students who do need help.

I can assure my hon. friend that these loans will certainly be available for students who really need them. That was the intent of parliament when it passed this act, and there is every intention of meeting both the spirit and the letter of the legislation.

Mr. MacDonald (Prince): As a supplementary question, in view of the fact that expenses have undoubtedly increased since the inception of the plan, and that new criteria are being drawn up, will the amount of money available be increased for people who now find difficulty in operating under the present provisions of the plan?

Mr. Pearson: I will have to look into that aspect of it, Mr. Speaker.

Hon. W. G. Dinsdale (Brandon-Souris): As a further supplementary to the Prime Minister, Mr. Speaker, may I ask is it the intention of the government to proceed with a bursary program that would supplement this loan program which seems to be in a decline?

Mr. Pearson: Not at the present time.

[Mr. Cadieux (Terrebonne).]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

NIGERIA—CANADIAN EFFORTS TO END CIVIL WAR

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Heath Macquarrie (Queens): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister, who is very answerable today. It is in connection with the Nigerian-Biafran conflict and is prompted by the welcome news of the joint appeal by the Roman Catholic church and the World Council of Churches calling for an end to the war between Nigeria and Biafra. Can the Prime Minister advise whether on the governmental level Canada is taking any new initiatives toward this same worthy goal?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Not any new initiative, Mr. Speaker, although we have been trying to do what we can to assist in bringing this conflict to an end; and I hope to have a talk, either tomorrow or the next day, with the Secretary General of the Commonwealth association who, as my hon. friend knows, has been very deeply concerned with this matter and who is at the present time in Ottawa.

Mr. David MacDonald (Prince): As a supplementary question, can the Prime Minister tell us whether officials of the Department of External Affairs have been instructed not to meet with any senior representatives from the secessionist province of Biafra?

Mr. Pearson: Mr. Speaker, I know of no such instruction, and I will be very interested to find out if there has been any such instruction.

FINANCE

FRENCH PROPOSAL FOR NEW INTERNATIONAL EXCHANGE UNIT

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Colin Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, my question would normally be directed to the Minister of Finance but in his absence perhaps the Prime Minister would take it. In view of the reported statements of the President of France, General de Gaulle, respecting France's attitude toward the development of a new international unit of exchange, can the Prime Minister tell the house what position the Canadian government will be taking at Stockholm, in view of what appears to me and to many others as a proposal by France that is even worse than its original one—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I wonder if the hon. member would not agree with me that he is asking for a very general statement, which I suggest should not be made at this time.

VETERANS AFFAIRS

INQUIRY AS TO REPORT ON PENSION COMMISSION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. D. V. Pugh (Okanagan Boundary): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Veterans Affairs. In view of his statement last Friday on the Woods committee study, would the minister now say whether he is prepared to table the document, and whether he will be making a statement on motions?

Hon. Roger Teillet (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I now have the report at hand, and I hope to be able to table it within the next day or so. As to making a statement, I think this would be premature. It is a very extensive report, and I would want a little more time before being prepared to speak on it.

Mr. Pugh: As a supplementary question, in view of the fact that the minister has had this report in his hands for quite some time, at least in one language, I am wondering if he would not think it is in the interests of the veterans of the country, particularly because the Legion is going to hold its convention very shortly, that he should make a statement on this very important document.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member's supplementary question is argumentative.

Mr. Teillet: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I would not want to deprive the minister of an opportunity to reply, if this is what the house would want. Certainly it is my feeling that the supplementary asked by the hon. member was argumentative in form and should not be replied to, but if it is the wish of the house I will recognize the Minister of Veterans Affairs.

Mr. Teillet: Mr. Speaker, I think in fact this would be a point of privilege because the premise of the question was quite erroneous. I stated clearly in the house last week that I had not received the report. I have had the report in my hands since last Friday afternoon, in English and in French, and I want to make it quite clear that I have not had the opportunity of studying it.

SUGGESTED INCREASED COMPENSATION FOR SLAUGHTERED CATTLE

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Théogène Ricard (Saint-Hyacinthe-Bagot): Mr. Speaker, in view of the absence of the hon. Minister of Agriculture, I wish to put a question to his parliamentary secretary.

In order to follow up the notice of motion which I introduced in the house a few weeks ago, does the hon. minister intend to announce, before the end of this session, the increase in allowances paid for slaughtered animals under the Animal Contagious Diseases Act?

[English]

Mr. Bruce S. Beer (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I am not able to answer this question directly. I will bring it to the attention of the minister in the hope that we can have an answer for the hon. member.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND—REQUEST FOR ACREAGE ASSISTANCE PAYMENTS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. David MacDonald (Prince): Mr. Speaker, this question is for the Minister of Agriculture. Perhaps his parliamentary assistant would take it as notice. Would the minister indicate to the house whether the government of Prince Edward Island has applied for acreage assistance payments in view of the very low prices for potatoes in the last few months, and whether the government is giving this request favourable consideration.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

REQUEST FOR CONSIDERATION OF VETERANS' PENSION SUPPLY ITEM

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Michael Starr (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the right hon. Prime Minister. Will he look into the possibility of taking out of the supplementary estimates now under consideration the item or resolution providing for the increase of 15 per cent in war veterans' allowances, to see whether it can be given royal assent, so the war veterans of the country will not be deprived of these benefits at this time, and so their receipt of the benefits could be expedited.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): I shall be glad to look into that, Mr. Speaker. There will not be any delay, because once the estimate is passed I believe it is to be antedated.

TRANSPORT

REQUEST FOR STATEMENT ON FERRY SERVICE, SAINT JOHN, N.B.-DIGBY, N.S.

On the orders of the day:

Mr. J. P. Nowlan (Digby-Annapolis-Kings): Mr. Speaker, ordinarily I would direct this question to the Minister of Transport, but in his absence I should like to direct it to the right hon. Prime Minister. In view of the hope the Minister of Transport expressed to me on March 19 that the long delayed announcement with regard to the Digby-Saint John ferry would be made soon, would the Prime Minister check with the minister or his officials and inform the house tomorrow whether the delay in respect of this announcement is on the part of the Canadian Pacific Railway or the government?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): I shall be glad to do that.

FINANCE

CANADIAN REPRESENTATION AT MEETING OF MONETARY FUND

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that the meeting of the ministers of finance of the countries which belong to the International Monetary Fund is to be held in Sweden commencing on Friday, may I ask the Prime Minister whether any decision has been made in respect of who will represent Canada in the absence of our Minister of Finance.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Not yet, Mr. Speaker. I have discussed the matter with the Minister of Finance and hope to discuss it with him again later this week.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

REQUEST FOR DELAY IN TRANSFERS BETWEEN MARITIME BASES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. J. P. Nowlan (Digby-Annapolis-Kings): Mr. Speaker, my question also is directed to the Prime Minister but in his capacity as Prime Minister rather than on behalf of one of his colleagues who is otherwise engaged.

[Mr. Starr.]

Has the Prime Minister received a telegram from Premier Smith of Nova Scotia requesting that no further move be made which would affect the Greenwood-Summerside matter until a delegation from Nova Scotia can meet with the Prime Minister? If the Prime Minister has received the telegram, will he give it favourable consideration.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have received it and propose to discuss it with the Minister of National Defence.

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

MILK—PROPOSED PRICE INCREASE IN ONTARIO

On the orders of the day:

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs may I direct this question to the acting minister. Has the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs had an opportunity to look into the matter I raised last week, namely the increase in the price of milk?

Hon. L. T. Pennell (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, I will take notice of the question.

SUPPLY

The house in committee of supply, Mr. Batten in the chair.

The Chairman: Order. House again in committee of supply. When the committee rose on Friday, March 22, 1968 item 1c of the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources was under consideration.

DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY, MINES AND RESOURCES

1c. Departmental administration including grants and contributions as detailed in the estimates, $144,000.

Mr. Martin (Timmins): Mr. Chairman, I was a little surprised the other day when the minister in making a statement made no reference to the gold mining industry as a whole. While some of the ramifications of this question do not come under the jurisdiction of the minister, certainly this matter has a very strong bearing on one department that is directly under the jurisdiction of the minister. Gold certainly is a question which has recently received a great deal of attention in the newspapers and in various countries throughout the world. The discussions which have been carried on in Washington and are soon to be carried on in Stockholm could have a very great bearing on the whole industry.

It may be that today the gold mining industry does not have the same place it once did in this country and does not have the same effect on the economy of the country that it did at one time. I can remember during my lifetime when gold mining was one of the major industries which contributed to the economy of this country and that is not very long ago. Over the years, however, because of policies established by the United States and followed faithfully by the Canadian government, this industry has declined to a great extent and certainly at the present time is in a very precarious position.

The Minister of Justice was in my constituency this past week end. In fact I was very pleased to see him when he appeared on the local television station last night. I am sure while he was there and spoke to the local people he must have had impressed on him just how urgent this matter is and how concerned the people of that neighbourhood are about the very unsettled situation pertaining to gold and the gold mining industry.

It was interesting that the minister was on display last night at $1 a head. I understand he had a fairly good turnout. I hope that before the evening was over he learned how the people of that neighbourhood feel about the situation. I hope also that he will be able to prevail on the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, and that that minister in turn will use his influence on the Minister of Finance who probably is more involved in the situation than any other minister, certainly so far as the international situation is concerned.

If I might digress for a moment it is interesting to note the very good answer that was given by a member of our executive in Timmins when he was approached and asked to buy a ticket for $1 to see the minister. This gentleman is an immigrant who has been here for 10 or 15 years. His reply was "Why should I pay $1 to see the Minister of Justice; all he knows is what we have taught him." I thought that was a very good assessment of the situation.

I think we might review for a short time what has happened in this industry. I believe the minister should be quite concerned about this. It is interesting to note that the last time the interest rate rose to what it is at the present time was just prior to the time the price of gold was raised from $20.40 to $35, in 1934. It has remained at that price ever since.

It was felt by many that the crash of 1929 followed by the depression of the 1930's came about as a direct result of those high interest rates across the country which strangled the economy. This is exactly what is happening at this time. The latest increase in the interest rate accompanied the latest announcement in respect of the price of gold. The interest rate is even higher now than it was prior to the crash which brought about the great depression of the 1930's.

Anyone who has spoken with people in the construction industry will know that the present level of interest rates is bringing this industry to a grinding halt. This will spread like a cancer throughout the country causing bankruptcies and business failures, which in turn will lead to unemployment through the closing down of factories. We will then be back in that vicious cycle we experienced some 35 years ago. Many people in today's working force do not remember that difficult time. I remember it because that is when I first entered the labour market. It was in the middle of that depression, about 1934 or 1935, when I went to work in the gold mining industry.

In looking back I can see the tremendous part this industry played in maintaining the economy of this country, such as it was, and the great contribution it made to the welfare of the country. The gold mining industry is a very substantial consumer in our society. It uses tremendous amounts of timber, steel, machinery and goods of all kinds. The effect of a shutdown in this industry is felt not only by the immediate community where the mines are located but throughout the country as a whole. When there is a curtailment of production in this industry employees are laid off in many other areas.

During the past 20 years or more we have witnessed the number of gold mines in this country shrink from 250 to about 25. About 10 per cent of the mines operating 20 or 30 years ago are still in operation. We have not felt the full impact of this reduction because the remainder of the economy has been growing. With the interest rate climbing to the point that it is strangling our whole economy, the closing down of the gold mining industry with the resulting loss to the economy cannot be offset by the rest of the economy. I think this industry is a weather vane to which we should pay attention. I am surprised the minister did not make any reference to it when he introduced his estimates on Friday.

We have obtained some information from the Minister of Finance in the last couple of weeks, since the decision was made in Washington to freeze gold reserves. Apparently we are not going to buy or sell any gold so far as our reserves are concerned. The understanding is that our reserves will be frozen at the present level. Everyone must realize that this is an impossible pipe dream. Apparently it is hoped that this step will buy the time needed for the powers to make up their minds what action to take.

When we questioned the minister we learned that the Canadian government is in a bit of a bind because of previous arrangements, agreements and regulations pertaining to the production and selling of gold. The government is still committed to purchase gold from Canadian producers at the fixed rate of $35 in United States funds per ounce. The answers given by the minister to our questions would indicate that the Canadian government does not know what to do at this time with the gold it is committed to purchase. Perhaps the government is waiting for some instruction from the United States. In any event we have been informed that the government intends to buy this gold and stockpile it in the mint until such time as a decision is made regarding its disposition.

I suggest that the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources should sit down with the Minister of Finance, if he can detain him long enough between trips, and put a bug in his ear. It has been reported in the last two or three days that the $20 Canadian gold coin minted last year is selling throughout the country for something between $80 and $140. Perhaps the minister could persuade the government to allow the mint to produce more of these gold coins rather than letting this gold sit in the mint. Apparently we could make a pretty fair profit on these coins, and this profit might help the Minister of Finance out of some of the difficulties in which he continually finds himself.

The gold mining industry has received pretty shabby treatment over the years. It should be clearly understood that I am not referring to the big companies which have been able to make large profits for reinvestment in other fields. Gold mining is a very small part of the total operations of these companies today. I am concerned about the men working in this industry and those who live in the communities which depend on it. These are the people I feel have had shabby treatment over the years

The people to whom I refer have subsidized this industry and this government, and indeed they have been subsidizing our great, wealthy neighbour to the south. That is the country which set the policy in the first place and has adhered to it rigidly over the years. These workers have subsidized this industry first by low wages. The industry has cried poverty and has received subsidies from the federal government in order to continue operations. The industry has said it cannot pay decent wages. As a result the federal government has subsidized the industry. It has done so over the years without being able to check in any way whether the subsidies have been justified. Some time ago the hon. member for Timiskaming and myself were able to discover from the minister that at no time did the federal government have a mines inspector in order to find out whether the reports upon which they were basing the subsidy were valid or just came out of somebody's head. It seems that the gold mining industry, like Caesar's wife, is beyond suspicion.

Over the years the federal government has paid $200 million to $250 million in taxpayer's money to the mining industry in the form of subsidies. The miners have received low wages, and have reached into another pocket and paid their share of taxes. Every time the United States was short of gold the Canadian government very willingly turned over whatever supply it had on hand. The last time it did so it turned over something in the neighbourhood of $114 million for which the United States paid $100 million. In this way the miners reached into a third pocket to subsidize the gold industry. The United States is supposed to be the wealthiest country in the world. Certainly it should be if every other country has subsidized it to the same extent that the Canadian government has in this particular field.

I was surprised that the minister did not see fit to say anything as to the future of this industry, and I was surprised that he did not mention any government plans for it. I should hope that before much more time passes we will receive a statement from the minister regarding the government's plans in this field. I think we are entitled to know what the government intends to do, or whether it intends to do anything.

• (3:20 p.m.)

Mr. McLean (Charlotte): I know the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources is as anxious as I am to see that the communities established across Canada which depend on the mining of gold for a livelihood should be maintained, and that the miners engaged in the industry should receive proper wages.

Under the present government and under previous governments the policy with regard to mining communities has been to phase them out of existence because rightly or wrongly the output of the mining communities, that is gold, has been considered as a monetary measure. People all across the world apparently still consider gold only as a monetary measure, but the recent man-made crisis in gold has made governments consider gold not only as a monetary measure but also as a commodity.

At the recent meeting in Washington the seven world central bankers came up with a solution to our problem by establishing two prices for gold. The first price, that of $35 per ounce, is for monetary purposes, that is for trading among central banks; the other price, which will be used in the market place, is the price of gold used in industry, the arts, and by investors and speculators. It seems to me this policy will be especially beneficial to Canada and the United States. At the present time all mines under subsidy must sell their output to the mint. I should like to quote the following from the Wall Street Journal:

> Canadian gold miners are eligible for aid of up to $10.27 an ounce if they sell their output to the mint and can prove the $35 an ounce selling price isn't profitable for them.
> Legislation authorizing the subsidies recently was extended until the end of 1970. Its main purpose is to bolster the small towns near the gold mines. About two thirds of the three million ounces of gold produced yearly in Canada is sold to the government, which pays out nearly $15 million a year in subsidies.

Here is the point I wish to make:

> U.S. officials interpret a sentence in last week end's gold pool communique stating members "no longer feel it necessary to buy gold from the market" to mean governments must stop buying gold from producers unless the metal isn't added to monetary stocks.
> Canada's legislation virtually forces Ottawa to buy gold from any producer who offers it and isn't making a profit.
> "Canada gave a general undertaking to co-operate with last weekend's announcement", a finance department official said. "Now we're looking at the details". He noted much depends on what other gold producing nations, notably South Africa, decide to do.
> One solution would be for Canada to re-sell to private buyers the gold it purchases from subsidized producers. Technically, the gold is purchased by the mint, which isn't a monetary authority, and it is only monetary authorities who are barred from buying gold. Thus, the mint, which purchases the gold because it has the refining facilities, could buy and sell gold without apparently going against the gold pool agreement.
> Such an outcome would create the possibility of the mint suffering losses if the market price falls below the $35 an ounce the law says it must pay producers, also, it might have to stockpile gold if it can't sell to private buyers all the output it buys.
> Until now, the mint hasn't been selling any gold to private buyers. All it purchased has been sold to the government for addition to Ottawa's foreign exchange reserves. Some of that has been resold to the United States.
> The finance department official said Canada probably is the only major country compelled by law to buy from and subsidize domestic producers of gold. It was indicated that because the major reason for the subsidies is to keep gold producing communities going, a way would be found to continue the aid. Canadian gold output has been declining steadily in recent years and a number of mines have closed due to exhausted reserves.

If this is true, then Canada has the best of two markets, and the mint could sell the gold to the highest bidder.

In view of the two price system it seems to me the Canadian mint should make an agreement with the United States mint that so long as we have a two price system the mining communities and the miners should benefit from it. The mints of Canada and the United States could agree to be the only buyers of gold and to buy all newly mined gold at a price of $70 an ounce. This price would be set for industry, the arts, investors and speculators. This is the price the U.S.S.R. is charging at the present time. We could then set the price at $70 for industry and $35 for use for monetary purposes.

In view of the fact that the United States and Canada at the present time are using $650 million worth of gold in industry and the arts—a great deal more gold than Canada and the United States are mining—the mines in both countries would benefit from the $70 price. No doubt this would bring into being a great many new gold mines and restore old ones. The danger of extinction faced by the small communities which depend on the gold mines would disappear, and gold miners would be able to look forward to better paying jobs. Indeed, this looks like a golden opportunity to set our house in order and revitalize our great gold mining industry.

Let me point out that a great deal more newly mined gold might be bought by the two government mints than would be needed for industry, the arts and investment. In such case the governments could use the surplus gold for monetary purposes at $35 per ounce, and give an average price of $60 or $65 per ounce to the mines. Monetary stocks of gold would then be increased at no expense to the government, and the taxpayers of Canada would save at least $15 million a year, which is now being paid to the mines in subsidies.

The financial press of Canada is full of propaganda against raising the price of gold, but why it should wish to subsidize the gold-using industry in both the United States and Canada by paying a price for their raw material which was equitable in 1934 is something which the financial press does not explain. If fish, butter, eggs, poultry, wheat or anything else is subsidized there is always an outcry in the financial press. However, the financial press remains silent when $15 million is taken out of the taxpayers' pockets to pay subsidies to the gold mines in order that those mines can supply private industry in the United States and Canada at a price of $35 per ounce, a price that was set in the depression days of 1934.

The question has been asked in this house, who would get the advantage if the price of gold were advanced? I have heard it said that Russia and South Africa would be the countries which would get the advantage if the price of gold were advanced. The fact is that gold cannot be used in Russia for internal purposes. It is not used in South Africa for internal purposes. Where is it used? It is used to buy goods from the western world. South Africa is now using $1 billion in gold to buy goods from the western world. If the price of gold were doubled, then South Africa would buy $2 billion worth of goods from the western world. Gold is no good for internal use in South Africa because paper money is used just as in Canada. Russia would have a billion dollars to spend. Russia can build all the ships and other things she wants by using her own paper money. However, when she comes to the west to buy she has to use gold or United States dollars.

I would say, therefore, that the countries that would benefit from an advance in the price of gold would be Canada, the United States and the United Kingdom, those countries which want to increase their export trade. These are the countries which would secure an advantage from an advance in the price of gold. It seems to me that the minister of mines, having not only the gold mining industry at heart but also the benefits which would accrue to Canada and the relief to the taxpayers, should get together with the Minister of Finance in order to have the two-price system worked out. This would be of benefit not only to Canada but to the United States and would add gold to our monetary supply as well as making industry and the arts pay the proper price for their raw material.

[Mr. McLean (Charlotte).]

The Chairman: Shall vote 1c carry?

Mr. Martin (Timmins): Is the minister going to make any statement in respect of this subject or is he going to ignore it?

Mr. Pepin: I have no intention of speaking for the simple reason that we had a debate on the Emergency Gold Mining Assistance Act only last December when the legislation was extended. We had a full debate at that time and I gave all possible information. In recent days the Minister of Finance has answered the questions now posed. He has admitted that the policy with respect to what is to be done with the gold the mint is now buying has not been fully evolved. This matter is essentially one under his jurisdiction and not under mine. I am responsible for the administration of gold mining assistance; I am not responsible for the monetary policy of the federal government.

Mr. Martin (Timmins): In the first place, is the minister trying to tell us that the situation has not changed since the last time we debated the Emergency Gold Mining Assistance Act? Is he also saying that he has no concern or thought at all for an industry which is as important to this country as the gold mining industry?

Mr. Pepin: I have not said that. I simply indicated that I was not going to participate in the filibuster. My hon. friends can repeat whatever they want to say on this subject. I feel that the answers they would like to have have already been given or will be given later by the Minister of Finance. If they want to keep on repeating that the federal government is providing money to the gold mining industry that should be used in other ways, that is all right, but it is not so. The Emergency Gold Mining Assistance Act is designed to help the communities which are dependent on these gold mines when they come to the end of their production or are in difficulty. My hon. friend saw the way the act operated the other day when the Hollinger mine was closed because it had come to the end of its ore. Other jobs were found in the area for the people who were laid off.

Mr. Martin (Timmins): There is only one other point I should like to make. I quite understand what the Minister of Finance has been saying over the years, and certainly his opinions are backed up by many other people in this country. What they are saying in effect is that gold is a terrible master which strangles and makes slaves of the economies of the world. This may or may not be so, but the fact still remains that before gold can be replaced as an international unit of liquidity something else will have to be found in which countries will put the same faith as they have had in gold. This may be a very laudable objective but for 5,000 years various nations, particularly those which were at the peak of their power and wealth, tried to control gold. They have always failed in the past. I think we must realize that we are not going to be able to pull a rabbit out of the hat overnight.

If Canada were not a gold producing country I could understand the Canadian government slavishly going along with the United States plan. However, Canada is a gold producing country. If the gold deposits in this country were developed we would be second only to South Africa in world production of gold. The Canadian government either does not realize this or does not care about it. One of two things should happen. The government should take more interest in this industry or it should come out boldly and tell the gold mining communities they have no future because the government is doing everything possible to destroy them. The sooner this occurs, the happier the government will be. This has been the attitude of the Canadian government, or, at least, that is the only conclusion we can draw from the minister's remarks today.

Item agreed to.

Geological Research—

40c. Construction or acquisition of buildings, works, land and equipment, $79,400.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, I should like to ask a question of the minister in this regard. I had no intention of speaking on the estimates of the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources but a deputation called on me on Sunday in Toronto when I was home. As hon. members know, my riding is York-Humber and the Humber river flows the full length of the riding. It is considered by the Canadian government to be a navigable stream. The deputation that called on me consisted of pleasure boat owners who have taken great offence at an action taken by the Ontario government with regard to the regulation of the disposal of the contents of toilets from pleasure boats.

As some members from Ontario will know, effective July 1 pleasure boat operators and owners were going to have to make arrangements to empty toilets on land rather than into navigable waters. However, such an uproar developed over the expenditure connected with the change in pleasure boats that the effective date of the regulation was changed to January, 1969. For the information of the minister I should like to say that the pleasure boat owners in the Toronto area, and those who have boats on the Humber river, are protesting because navigable waters come under the federal government. They are wondering whether the federal government will go along with a provincial government legislating in this field.

They point out that quite recently wide publicity was given to some action taken by the federal government against a boat at Nanaimo, British Columbia, which had dumped oil into the harbour there. If the federal government can move against boats that dump oil into navigable waters such as the harbour at Nanaimo, how can the province of Ontario legislate regarding boats that are using Lake Ontario which is an international body of water and is navigable? The Humber river also comes under the navigable waters legislation. Under vote 40c would the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources state whether the federal government will take action in this regard or allow the Ontario government to carry on?

• (3:40 p.m.)

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Chairman, very shortly, the question of pollution is a most difficult one. It is a difficult matter to rationalize. For example, why is it that under the Navigable Waters Protection Act, the federal government can impose fines on ships in harbour that spread oil on the waters and does not impose similar fines when the offence is committed on the shores of a navigable river? What my hon. friend referred to as a mystery, is one to me as well. Well, in a sense it is a mystery and in another it is not. My department and I think that the question of pollution is constitutionally impossible of solution unless a pragmatic approach is taken to it. Because the jurisdiction is divided or shared between Ottawa and the provinces we must approach the matter in a practical way. We will take action against ships that spread oil across harbours and they will take action against people who pollute the rivers.

I can find no other way of dealing with this problem, Mr. Chairman. As I said on Friday, the matter demands habitual co-operation between the federal and provincial governments. I also said last Friday that in fields of divided jurisdiction co-operation must be a matter of course, not something that one does when one cannot avoid it. Otherwise we will never get anywhere. The examples that have been cited by the hon. member for York-Humber are a good indication of that.

50c. Trans-Canada Highway—Construction through National Parks, $150,000.

The Chairman: This completes the supplementary estimates of the Department of Public Works. The committee will now deal with the estimates of the Department of Forestry and Rural Development.

The Chairman: This completes the supplementary estimates of the Department of Forestry and Rural Development. The committee will now consider the estimates of the Solicitor General.

SOLICITOR GENERAL

C—Royal Canadian Mounted Police—

20c. National Police Services, Federal Law Enforcement Duties and Provincial and Municipal Policing under contract—Construction or Acquisition of Buildings, Works, Land and Equipment, $505,000.

Item agreed to.

25c. Payment in the current and subsequent fiscal years of a pension to Mrs. Vera Middleton Ryder in an amount equal to the amount that would be payable in that year under Schedule B to the Pension Act if she were the widow of a Lt. Colonel and entitled to payment of a pension in that year at the rate set out in Schedule B to that Act, $665.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, I regret that I do not have before me at the moment a letter from the Minister of National Health and Welfare, but as you can see from vote 25c we are asked to authorize payment in the current and subsequent fiscal years of a pension to Mrs. Vera Middleton Ryder in an amount equal to the amount that would be payable in that year under schedule B to the Pension Act if she were the widow of a lieutenant colonel and entitled to payment of a pension in that year at the rate set out in schedule B to the act, namely, in the amount of $665. Before I make some detailed comments on this matter I should like to ask the Solicitor General who Mrs. Vera Middleton Ryder is and what rank her husband held at the time of his death, since we are asked to assume that she is the widow of a Lieutenant Colonel, which evidently he was not when he passed away. Would the Solicitor General give us some facts in this matter? I have some comments I wish to make, comments that are sincere.

Mr. Pennell: Mr. Chairman, I understand that the pensionee, Mrs. Vera Middleton Ryder, was the wife of an R.C.M.P. corporal who was killed while on duty. She then qualified for a pension. A short time after she remarried and the pension lapsed. When her second husband died, under the provisions of the act the pension was reinstated to her in the sum of $665 for this year.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, this item provides for the payment of a pension under the Pension Act as if she were the widow of a Lieutenant Colonel and entitled to payment of a pension at the rate set out in schedule B. I have received two letters within the last three weeks—I hope I am not going to be told that this comes under the Department of National Health and Welfare—from two widows those husbands died in the month of December, 1967. When they applied for payments under the new Canada pension act, which is one of the feathers in the cap of the Liberal government, they were advised that since their husbands had not lived until January, 1968 they were not going to get any payment under the Canada Pension Plan. These two women are left in dire straits. Their husbands contributed to the Canada Pension Plan as required by the law. They made their monthly or weekly contributions and the pension plan was built up.

I understand perfectly clearly why there had to be a starting date for the Canada Pension Plan so that people could not benefit from it until a certain number of payments had been made into the pension fund. I understand that under the Canada Pension Plan people had to contribute up to and including January, 1968 before their beneficiaries could draw any benefits from the plan. But how in the name of heaven can we legislate in this case as though Mrs. Vera Middleton Ryder was the widow of a Lieutenant Colonel when evidently she was not? I should like to see an amendment made by the Department of National Health and Welfare to the effect that widows who lost their husbands in December, 1967 are not to be considered as widows until January, 1968, thus entitling them to payments under the Canada Pension Plan.

I do not like seeing us extend a special benefit to Mrs. Vera Middleton Ryder when we are prepared to extend no special benefits to those whose husbands did not survive until January, 1968, but passed away almost at the wire, one might say, before they breasted it. I cannot see justice toward the people of Canada when under the Canada Pension Plan we cut off widows whose husbands have made the necessary contributions but did not live until January, 1968.

I do not like seeing special exceptions made. I should like to see payments in favour of all those who can benefit from them and I believe that widows who became widows in December, 1967, are entitled to as much consideration under the Canada Pension Plan as Mrs. Vera Middleton Ryder whom I do not know. I do not even know where she lives. But if this government and cabinet are going to ask parliament to extend special privileges to Mrs. Vera Middleton Ryder I think the same special privileges should be extended to all who became widows in December, 1967 and who were told: "Because your husband did not live until January, 1968, you cannot get any benefits under the Canada Pension Plan." I do not like this special vote in the Solicitor General's supplementary estimates.

Mr. Pennell: With respect, may I say to the hon. member that Mrs. Ryder does not come under the Canada Pension Plan. I should be pleased to take up the question raised by the hon. member regarding R.C.M.P. widows.

Mr. Cowan: I did not say anything about R.C.M.P. widows. I said they are just Canadian widows. This has nothing to do with the R.C.M.P.

Mr. Pennell: I am sorry, I misunderstood the hon. member. I shall be pleased to bring the question of these two widows to the attention of the Minister of National Health and Welfare, under whose department the pension plan is set up.

Mr. Cowan: It is very kind of the Solicitor General to offer to bring this matter to the attention of the Minister of National Health and Welfare, but I have already done so. I have had lengthy correspondence with the hon. gentleman and I have very full replies pointing out that nothing can be done. I will now refer the matter to the Solicitor General to see what kind of answer a fellow cabinet minister will get since a fellow Liberal could only get the answer: "These matters have been investigated fully and nothing can be done."

After I was given those answers in respect of the two widows to whom I am referring, lo and behold, I found on my desk supplementary estimates (C) in which I am asked to vote for a special provision for a widow as if she were the widow of a Lieutenant Colonel. I should like these other widows to be treated on the basis that their husbands died in January, 1968, instead of in December, 1967.

The Chairman: Shall vote 25c carry?

Mr. Cowan: On division.

Item agreed to.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police—

L92c. To increase to $750,000 the amount that may be charged at any time to the R.C.M.P. Cloth Revolving Fund established by Vote 547, Appropriation Act No. 3, 1953, for the purchase and sale of materials for the manufacture of uniforms; additional amount required, $300,000.

Mr. Pennell: Mr. Chairman, before my estimates are concluded I wish to recall the fact that earlier this year, as the house may recall, the hon. member for Kamloops asked certain questions relating to an alleged interference by the R.C.M.P. in the service of documents in the case of George Wilson. At that time I answered part of the question and refrained from making further comment because it was intimated that legal action might flow from the case. I have since learned that there is no intention to institute private legal action. I agree with the hon. member for Kamloops that the matter is of sufficient importance that I ought to investigate it. I wish to advise the house that I have asked for a full report. It is anticipated that inquiries will be made of some 32 people. I expect the report to be on my desk shortly.

Item agreed to.

The Chairman: That completes the supplementary estimates of the Department of the Solicitor General.

[Mr. Pennell.]

DEPARTMENT OF MANPOWER AND IMMIGRATION

Development and Utilization of Manpower—

5c. Administration, Operation and Maintenance—To extend the purposes of Manpower and Immigration Vote 5 of the Main Estimates for 1967-68 to authorize payments in respect of persons who will be afforded occupational training under the Adult Occupational Training Act and to provide that the provisions made by any Appropriation Act for the current fiscal year based on the said Vote in respect of occupational training for adults shall be applied for payments in respect of persons who will be afforded occupational training under the Adult Occupational Training Act and to provide a further amount of, $18,250,000.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Chairman, this item concerns the major part of the program dealing with the training and retraining of various classes of people. It also affects a point which some of us have raised, the difficulties in some of the larger cities with large numbers of immigrant families and their children. Despite the time of the session I think the minister owes the committee some kind of report of his stewardship of the new training program he has inaugurated.

One could make a lengthy speech about some of the failures of the program which have been reported, the lack of training facilities in many parts of the country, the substantial drop in the numbers taking advantage of the training facilities compared with earlier years, and the very great problems that have arisen as a result of the three-year requirement before the training allowance is paid. I do not want to do that unless I have to. Despite other considerations I think the minister owes this committee and the country some kind of outline of the policy and work which have been carried on before the committee passes this vote. When the minister came in with some sheets of paper in his hand I thought that perhaps he had notes for such a statement. I invite him to make one for our benefit.

[Translation]

Mr. Marchand: Mr. Chairman, as far as that matter is concerned, it is true that during the past year, the retraining program has been criticized. The main criticism was that fewer persons had been retrained than under former program no. 5, and that there were also very serious deficiencies with regard to language instruction.

The first statistics that we could obtain—since the program has only been in effect for a year—indicate that as many persons have been trained under the new program this year than under the previous program, last year, that is, 250,000.

I would not go as far as to say that this is enough and that it is a complete success, but, in my opinion, it is at least an answer to the objection raised to the effect that fewer persons were now being retrained under the new program. The figures now available—

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Chairman, I should like to direct a question to the hon. minister. What was the number he mentioned?

Mr. Marchand: I said 250,000, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Lewis: Could the hon. minister tell us how many people were trained per province?

Mr. Marchand: Unfortunately, Mr. Chairman, I shall only be able to supply this information a little later, since we get those figures from the provinces which are responsible for the training, which must supply the schools and which set up the programs. Therefore, we shall have to wait until they provide us with their own information. All I have at the present time is the probable number of 250,000, but I shall try to get more details.

Still, there is something extremely interesting about that figure of 250,000 and it is that there are many more people who take these courses assiduously than did under the former program. Contrary to what has just been said, there are fewer drop-outs under the new program than under the former, probably because of the allowance level, and that is a definite improvement.

Since the level of those allowances is, shall we say, more adequate, people tend to take courses right to the end. So, even though we have not reached the degree of perfection we should like to attain and our friends opposite would like to see us attain, the fact remains that the program, as I previously stated in this house, is now as efficient as the former and that it shall exceed it by far, unless the house refuses the necessary estimates to achieve those objectives.

Now, with regard to the teaching of languages, there have been deficiencies also, expecially in the Toronto area. Fortunately, they have been corrected. At the present time, a greater number of people attend language courses in the various provincial institutions, than a year ago, but this does not mean that everything is perfect. Improvements have yet to be made, but the defects and deficiencies mentioned in this house some months ago no longer exist.

Mr. Lewis: Are those courses for adults only or for children also?

Mr. Marchand: For adults only, Mr. Chairman. We have no jurisdiction in the field of education to children. That is the exclusive responsibility of the provinces and, unless agreements entered into with the provinces are amended, we will not assume any responsibility with regard to language instruction for the children.

[English]

Mr. Lewis: One does not suggest that the minister or the department should intervene in the education of children. But is the minister still adamant against giving some financial assistance to provinces where the load of providing immigrant children with an opportunity to learn the language so they may move into the educational or occupational stream is too great?

[Translation]

Mr. Marchand: Mr. Chairman, in that connection, I think that the line drawn between the provinces and the federal government should be maintained.

Now, it is argued that as it is the federal government which is responsible for the coming of immigrants, it should assume the whole responsibility.

We are not the only ones, Mr. Chairman, who want immigrants in the country. The province of Ontario has immigration offices; it wants immigration, and rightfully so. The same is true for most provinces having an adequate economic growth. Thus, it is not our sole responsibility. It is also the responsibility of the province concerned.

However, I have started to consider a project to assist not directly the teaching of languages but perhaps the adaptation of immigrants in Canada; that might be interpreted by the provinces as an assistance to the teaching of languages. We are working on such a project at the present time and I hope the right formula can be found, provided money is available.

[English]

Mr. Lewis: I thank the minister for his last statement. In developing this new project is the department consulting with the provinces and those interested in this field, or is this a project which is being developed in Ottawa to be shown subsequently to the provinces? I hope the latter is not the case because it seems to me many of these projects have gone awry precisely because there has been lack of communication during their development.

Mr. Marchand: We are in permanent contact with the provinces when studying these problems. I have been in personal contact with Quebec. I know that Mr. Davis will be coming to Ottawa, and this is the kind of subject we want to discuss with him. The sort of co-operation the hon. member has in mind will exist.

Item agreed to.

6c. Payments in accordance with terms and conditions approved by the Governor in Council to Provinces and in respect of Indian Bands under the Municipal Winter Works Incentive Program during the 1967-68 and 1968-69 fiscal years of amounts not exceeding fifty per cent of the cost of labour incurred in a five-month period commencing either November 1 or December 1, 1967, as selected by the Province or Indian Band, and in the case of projects in designated areas within the meaning of the Department of Industry Act, sixty per cent of such cost; and to authorize payments in those fiscal years to Provinces in respect of previous Municipal Winter Works Incentive Programs, $20,000,000.

[Translation]

Mr. Laprise: Mr. Chairman, as far as vote 6c is concerned, I would like to ask the minister if he has a statement to make about the extension of winter works this spring?

Mr. Marchand: Yes, Mr. Chairman. There will be no extension of the winter works season.

[English]

Item agreed to.

10c. Grants, Contributions and Subsidies in accordance with the terms and conditions specified in the sub-vote titles listed in the Details of the Estimates, $31,750,000.

Item agreed to.

Immigration—

15c. Administration, Operation and Maintenance, including trans-oceanic and inland transportation and other assistance for immigrants and settlers subject to the approval of Treasury Board, including care en route and while awaiting employment; and payments to the Provinces, pursuant to agreements entered into with the approval of the Governor in Council, in respect of expenses incurred by the Provinces for indigent immigrants, $900,000.

Mr. Cowan: I spoke to the Chair earlier and stated I wished to speak on the subject of immigration. I had no comment to make on the manpower estimates but I have some comments to make on the item before us, 15c.

Those who are interested in the operation of this department know that drastic changes have been made with regard to the treatment of immigrants and would-be immigrants coming into this country. At the present time I am wrapped up in the interests of three men from Greece who are anxious to settle in Canada. Two of them are in the riding of York-Humber at this time. The third returned voluntarily to Greece where he is endeavouring to get back to Canada with landed immigrant status. I must say that this shepherd boy is receiving fine co-operation from the Canadian immigration officers in Athens.

At the moment I am more interested in the two would-be immigrants now living in York-Humber. I have advised the minister more than once that I was anxious to see these supplementary estimates called so that we might discuss a few of the features of the Immigration Act. I have coming up on April 3 a hearing before a special immigration officer in Toronto regarding one would-be Greek immigrant, and on April 9 I have an appearance before the immigration appeal board in Ottawa regarding the second. There are circumstances arising in connection with these cases which I believe apply to the entire immigration department and which need to be straightened out in a hurry.

I am sorry I have not had the opportunity this year of attending the sittings of the special joint committee of the Senate and House of Commons on immigration. I did attend them at some length a year ago and two years ago. Although not a member of the committee I exercised my right as a member of parliament to attend. I believe some fine changes were made in the administration of the act after suggestions put forward by the hon. member for Essex West, the hon. member for Hamilton West and myself. But there are still some snags in the administration of the act which need to be straightened out and I trust hon. members will bear with me while I elucidate.

One of these Greek immigrants came to Canada on a visitor's visa. Everything was in order. His relatives in this country are well able to look after him until he is well established. Of course, there is a ukase to the effect that he cannot accept employment, but he is not protesting against that at all. I shall take first of all the case of a 39 year old would-be immigrant whose people have done so well in this land that they are now living the lives of a retired lady and gentleman, owning considerable property in the borough of York and the city of Toronto.

This man applied for landed immigrant status. What I protest against is the fact that when he was given a hearing by the immigration department no friends were asked to be with him. Then somebody shows up and gives him a written note assessing the kind of immigrant he is likely to be and the kind of man he is likely to be. According to the details set out in the regulations and according to the forms supplied by the Department of Manpower and Immigration, immigrants can sometimes qualify with 35 points, sometimes have to have 40 points and at other times 50 points.

What I have objected to and objected strenuously, and I do so again now, is the fact that when this man is given his rating and is not given enough points to qualify for landed immigrant status, there is nobody there to advise him and help him. It is almost an examination. In fact it is an examination that he is being given, but he does not realize that he is being given an examination. Then in due course he gets a letter through the mail telling him he has been assigned a certain number of points and that he has not made enough points to qualify for landed immigrant status.

When the would-be landed immigrant receives that notice, having had this first examination against which I protest because it is done in the dark and behind closed doors without any advice being available to the would-be immigrant, he has to leave the country. I hate to use the word deportation. I do not think it should be used by the Department of Immigration. When it tells a man he has to leave the country it does not have to tell him he is being deported, but this is what it does. He has to show up at the deportation office on a certain date and he is deported. When boys in the army overstay their leave they are not called deserters the very next day. They are described as absent without leave. Why don't you call the boys who overstay their leave in the army deserters just as you call these would-be immigrants to Canada deportees the moment someone says they do not have enough marks to qualify to remain in the country?

In the case of this 39-year old Greek, the gentleman with whom I am going to appear before a special inquiry officer on April 3, it does not take a lot of mathematics to subtract 39 from 1968 and find out that he was born in 1929. He came into this country in the month of July or August of last year to visit relatives, an aunt, an uncle and cousins. After he had been here a while he thought he would like to remain in the country and he made a formal application to the immigration department to remain. Unknown to his friends, and I call myself a friend of the family, he was given an examination in some office and later he was advised he had not secured enough marks to stay in the country.

In fact this 39-year old man got 24 marks on an examination that requires him to get 50 marks, and he was told that because he got only 24 points he could not stay. He got a letter from the department that I may yet read to the committee. He was told to get out of the country, that he was not wanted and had not got enough marks. He came to see me with his relations who are Canadian citizens well able to look after him. they asked me, "What goes now"? I said, "The only thing we can do now is fight a delaying action. The first thing to do is to enter an appeal to remain in the country."

We entered an appeal to remain in the country and we went before what is known as a special inquiry officer. They use the initials "S.I.O." in the immigration department to cover them. So we go before the special inquiry officer to argue that this gentleman, this 39-year old Greek, a fine looking man, should be allowed to remain in this country. He can be as big a success here as his uncle, aunt and cousins. The special inquiry officer goes through the usual bland questions and he comes to the point that under education and training, where a would-be immigrant can be given a total of up to 20 assigned points, this chap has been given a total of 4. He is 39 years old and under the immigration examination he can be given 20 points under section 1, education and training, one unit to be awarded for each successful year of education or occupational training. This chap was given 4 points by the first officer who examined him.

When the special inquiry officer who, you might say, was hearing the case again—I am not using the word "rehearing"—came to item No. 1 where this chap had been given only four points by a man I have never seen or met, I raised objection and pointed out that this fellow had been given four points on the basis of one point for each year of formal education that he could prove he had in his homeland. This man was born in Greece in 1929 and his people sent him to school when he was about seven years of age, about 1936. The young lad started school in 1936. He was going to school regularly and he was liking school. But in 1939 his school teacher was drafted into the Greek army because there was some fear of an invasion from the other side of the Adriatic. The young lad did not have a school teacher although he had a schoolhouse. All school teachers were drafted and his education stopped after three and a half years. We will call it four years because he was given four marks.

As there was no school teacher he worked around the farm with his father and the other members of the family. Very shortly, in came the Italians from the west and they burnt the village, they burnt the schoolhouse, and they burnt the boy's home. I asked him where he went when the Italians arrived. I am speaking of the war of 1939 to 1945. He said that his mother and dad took him up into the hills.

After a year or so in the hills they returned to their burned-out village. The lad remembers them rebuilding the place. They put up what you or I would call a ramshackle building because things were uncertain in Greece between 1939 and 1945. There were still no school teachers. They were in the Greek army, if they were still living. Then the partisans came up from the Aegean sea and internal war raged. They burnt the village again, they burnt the boy's home, and again his mother and father took him to the hills. At the meeting with the special inquiry officer I asked this lad, "What did you live in? Tents?" Through the interpreter he said "Tents? We lived in the hills. There were no tents. The army had the tents."

I give you this example of how this lad survived two invasions of his home town. He had no schoolhouse and no school teacher. When he comes to Canada in 1967 the immigration department wants to know why he quit school so early. I told the special inquiry officer that the fact this man had lived through two invasions was proof he was entitled to every mark in the book because he could survive under drastic conditions. How simpler it will be for him to live in Canada and establish his family in Canada when you consider the conditions under which he lived in Greece.

What is going on in the immigration department? I know of an Irish boy who was brought out to Canada in 1939 because there was a likelihood of bombers coming over from Germany to Ireland. This young lad came to Canada and went to school in Canada, but the Greek boy had to stay in Greece. He did not have the money. His schoolhouse was burnt down, his school teacher was in the Greek army, and his own house was burnt down.

[Mr. Cowan.]

What was the Irish boy doing at that time? He was getting the best education we could give him in all of Canada. He was going to school regularly. No German bombers landed in Ireland or bombed the village from which he came and, lo and behold, in time we gave him a seat in the Senate and he is a great success. He came over the ocean because there was a war in Europe. But when this Greek boy survives the Italian invasion and the war of the partisans we tell him, "You cannot stay because you do not have enough education. You have only four points and you could have 20." Why do we treat with kid gloves the Irish boy who came here in 1939 and remained far from the field of conflict, and then tell this Greek to go back and see how he makes out if the Turks come in should the Canadian army unit be withdrawn from Cyprus?

I have appealed before on behalf of that shepherd boy being allowed to remain in Canada. The immigration department went to the tremendous length of speaking to the Secretary of State for External Affairs last June, and the Secretary of State for External Affairs advised the immigration department that there was now a stable government in Greece. That was terrific. I have a letter here from the immigration department telling me that the Secretary of State for External Affairs says that conditions are fine in Greece, that they are very stable now following the revolution of a year ago. It will be a year ago in April.

But what do we have now in Greece? I have in my hand the Globe and Mail of last Wednesday, March 20. There is a report of a statement made in the House of Commons under the heading "Cyprus Force Likely To Stay, Martin Says". The report reads as follows:

• (4:20 p.m.)

The three-month extension to June 26 of the United Nations peacekeeping mandate on Cyprus probably will not be the last, External Affairs Minister Paul Martin indicated in the Commons yesterday.

Andrew Brewin (N.D.P., Greenwood) had asked whether, in view of the improved atmosphere on the Mediterranean island, Mr. Martin could say the recent extension would be the last.

Mr. Martin replied that there had been "some improvement" but not such that this would be the last renewal of the mandate.

About 900 Canadians are in the 4,500-man UN Cyprus force.

Now we have Mr. Martin's factual up to the minute statement on conditions in Cyprus. Do not forget that the Turks and the Greeks are facing each other there over a line of demarcation. The immigration department was putting pressure on this shepherd boy. His family thought that if he returned to Greece they could get him back here again more easily than if he stayed and fought with the officials and the appeal board. His Greek relatives in Canada raised the money and it cost them $424 to return the boy. I know their situation. They have a small restaurant.

Last Tuesday morning on the C.B.C. program "Preview Commentary" there was a ten minute commentary by Peter Mellors. We all know that since it was on the C.B.C. it must be true and factual. Mr. Peter Mellors was introduced as a resident of one of the islands of Greece. He gave a very factual rundown of the conditions there. I was interested in this rundown because I was waiting for an opportunity to speak about these two Greeks who wish to remain in Canada.

I wish to thank the C.B.C. for the very prompt co-operation I received in this regard. They gave me the transcript on Friday and I had asked for it on Tuesday morning. Some of you may have been waiting for Max Ferguson and may have missed Peter Mellors. He said:

> Nobody outside of Greece can have any idea of the unending flood of propaganda the Greeks have had drummed into them since dawn last April 21st. And in every other socially and economically backward, I should say developed, country the radio is the most powerful means of thought control. It gets right into the homes spreading its insidious message as the children are being got ready for school, as the housewife does her chores, as the husband has the mid-day dinner and as the family gathers in the evening. They might not agree with this, they don't even have to listen to it, but the poison does its work all the same.
> The Greek radio has never been anything but the mouthpiece of the party in power.

That is quite different from Canada, you know.

> So the colonels are really only following the principles of the despised politicians in offering every hour on the hour an orgy of self-congratulation. The Prime Minister, Mr. Papadopulos, has been inundated with telegrams from the length and breadth of the land praising him for his surprising leniency in extending the recent amnesty to all the regime's political prisoners. Surprising indeed, that the amnesty had extended to about 10 per cent of such prisoners, but that is the sort of details the radio doesn't bother to report. Th same selectivity is used about the U.S. and other nations of the free world. American space achievements are the wonder of the universe, while the Russian efforts in that direction are dismissed with hardly a mention. As for Vietnam, that war has been won by our gallant American allies over and over.
> In the grand old democratic days, Greeks could compare what the radio told them with what was in the newspapers. That would be a pointless exercise now. The newspapers outdo the radio and even vie with each other in piling praise on Mr. Papadopulos and his highminded, patriotic, incorruptible and, of course, tremendously efficient cabinet colleagues. Report control in Greece doesn't end with the radio and the press. Special stamps were issued celebrating the April 21st revolution, stamps were cancelled with slogans extolling the virtues of the national government, as the colonels call themselves.
> On the island where I live a big poster has appeared showing a labyrinth, sign-postered with those smears of a democratic society that Greeks were saved from by the national government. Anarchy, corruption, communism, of course, and something called red fascism. Most of the shopkeepers have put the posters up so that it hits you when you walk through the door. One or two, I have noticed, have tucked it away almost out of sight. It's little things like this that tell you what the Greeks think of their government.
> In fact, in spite of all the propaganda, not to mention a few good things the colonels have managed to do, the majority of Greeks seem to be thinking less and less of their rulers. What happens is that people have begun to compare the colonels' promises with their performance and no amount of propaganda can hide the fact that things are getting not better but worse, especially economically.
> But what can anybody do? The slightest whisper of discontent lands you in jail. The politicians have been cowed, the army purged, the King kicked out of the country. The colonels meanwhile continue on their merry way buoyed up, one can only assume, by their own propaganda.

That report was broadcast on the C.B.C. network as recently as last Tuesday morning. This gentleman whose comments I accept as being factual, and who spoke on the C.B.C. over a broad network, said that things in Greece are getting not better but worse, especially economically. There was a revolution in Greece in April of last year.

I should like now to refer to the revolution in Cuba of six years ago. You may have read about the 24-year old Cuban girl who was in Vancouver taking part in a gymnastic competition. One might say that she jumped ship. When it was time to return to her country she could not be found. The Cuban people on the team could not find her and returned to their country. The girl showed up a couple of days later in Vancouver. Shortly after I asked the Minister of Manpower and Immigration in the House what action the department intended taking with regard to this Cuban girl whom I have never met and know nothing about. He informed me that he did not have the details but would advise me further the next day. The next day he showed me a detailed statement he had received from the deputy minister of manpower and immigration in which the facts were given about the girl who had disappeared and was found again in Vancouver.

This girl was applying for political asylum against the Castro revolution of six or seven years ago. She was 24 years old. Since then the Minister of Manpower and Immigration has been his usual gracious self and has inquired into this matter in detail. He told me that he felt inclined to give the girl political asylum from the revolution in Cuba. I told him I thought that was the proper stand to take and congratulated him on it. He told me that in a few days some formal action would be taken. On Friday last the Minister of Manpower and Immigration advised me that a special order in council was going to be passed by the cabinet to grant this Cuban girl in Vancouver political asylum. I congratulated him and told him that he could not pass the special order in council too soon to please me. This situation pertains to a revolution of six years ago in Cuba. I am speaking of a revolution which took place as recently as last April.

That Greek who last summer did not want to return to Greece because of the revolution was told that everything was stable in Greece. I pointed out that things were stable in Paris between 1941 and 1944 under the heel of Hitler. There is no reason that we should play favourites with a Cuban girl with regard to a revolution six or seven years ago and give different treatment in respect of a revolution only 11 months old.

These Greek men do not want to return to Greece because war could break out there at any time, particularly in view of the situation in Cyprus. We have the assurance given to the Social Credit members some years ago, and I was in the house at the time, that if fighting breaks out in Cyprus the Canadian troops will be withdrawn immediately. We keep the peace as long as there is peace but when it is likely there will be a war we withdraw our peacekeeping troops, as shown by the Suez situation. The same thing will happen in Cyprus because the Social Credit members have the assurance that if fighting breaks out in Cyprus between the Greeks and the Turks the Canadian troops will be withdrawn right smartly.

Why should we send these Greeks back to Greece at this time when they might become involved in a war? They want to escape that possibility. This 39-year old man is married and has three children he wants to bring out to this country where his relatives can quite ably look after them. He has been told that although he may have survived the Italian campaign and the partisan campaign, he is not too smart and has only received four points for education. What does it matter that his school teacher was drafted? What does it matter that the schoolhouse was burned down? What does it matter to us that he was only 16 years old when the war was over? That is apparently of no interest to the immigration department because he has only four points for education.

In my riding of York-Humber there is a man who asked for landed immigrant status, having come here from Australia. The immigration people in Toronto went over him with a fine-tooth comb. I do not know what marks they gave him but he did receive a letter telling him that he had to get out of the country, that he was going to be deported. They again used this word "deported" which means to me Botany bay for the English and Devil's island for the French. We are still using this word "deported".

This young chap is 23. Individuals of this type never come to me until they receive these deportation letters. That is the first I ever heard from him. This young lad asked me for assistance so he could remain in Canada. I asked him why he had waited until the stable door was shut—it is not locked but it is certainly shut—before he came. I said that I would see what I could do and I made inquiries about this 23-year-old lad from Australia. I found out that he apparently lived until age 16 in a central European country. When he was 16 his father decided there were better prospects for himself and his boy in Australia. They moved to Australia seven years ago. The father took up hairdressing down there and this boy learned the trade along with him and became very proficient at it. This young man today lives within 300 yards of my home.

This young man asked me if I could assist him to remain in Canada. I asked this proficient hairdresser whether he had told the immigration department that he was an Australian citizen. I asked him if he was actually an Australian citizen. He said that the moment his five years were up he took out Australian citizenship. I asked him whether he had told the immigration department of this fact. He said he did not know whether he had done so. He said that he had come from Sydney and that they should know he was Australian. He said he did not know whether he had mentioned his Australian citizenship. I asked him to let me see his certificate. We went up to the place where he was rooming and he went into the bedroom and produced his certificate. It is really something. It has the Union Jack on it in red, white and blue, the Queen's picture, Australian leaves and everything else. This grants him Australian citizenship. He is an Australian citizen sworn before the deputy mayor of Sydney, Australia.

At this point I said to him that as far as I was aware we had not started deporting Australians yet and I told him I would go to see the immigration people the next morning. I went to the immigration department in Toronto and told them the facts of the matter as I have related them to you. I asked how many Australians we had deported in recent years. They could not recall deporting any Australians recently but they got on the phone and to my surprise—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. I regret to interrupt the hon. member but the time allotted to him has now expired.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Chairman, I have no intention of speaking for very long but certainly—

Mr. McCleave: Let the hon. member continue.

Mr. Lewis: If members of the committee would like to give the hon. member for York-Humber an opportunity to complete his speech I would be very pleased to sit down and rise after he has done so.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Does the committee give unanimous consent to the hon. member to complete his remarks?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Cowan: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I wish to thank hon. members for their co-operation. As we are in committee of the whole I was relying on having a break in my time so I could resume speaking later. If the committee wishes to give me unanimous consent to continue now I will do so. I thank the hon. member for York South for his co-operation.

As this chap from central Europe was an Australian citizen I went to the immigration people and informed them that they were deporting an Australian citizen. As this was something brand new to me I asked how many Australian citizens had been deported in the last 18 months. They replied that there had been very few deported, if any. I was very glad to hear that. In any event they made a telephone call and after a lot of whispered conversation I was advised that because of a shortage of hairdressers in Toronto they were going to allow this Australian to remain in Toronto. They filled out the necessary papers and everybody was happy.

It was about this time that I realized what was going on. This central European is single. He had left his homeland to go to Australia with his father seven years ago. He learned his trade in Australia and became very proficient. In 1967 he came to Canada alone without his father. The father would be somewhere between 50 and 60 years of age. One must realize that there is conscription in Australia of Australian and British subjects for the Viet Nam war. We do not have conscription in Canada for the Viet Nam war or for any other war. Here was this Australian citizen who had been seven years resident in Australia. After five years residence in Australia he took out his Australian citizenship. He has his Australian citizenship and now he is a safely landed immigrant in the Dominion of Canada.

What about the Greek? He does not want to go back to the revolution in Greece, but what does the immigration department care about him? We are only protecting those people who do not want to be conscripted for the war in Viet Nam. We may be a homeland for draft dodgers from the United States, but that is another matter. I am speaking now about an Australian citizen to whom the immigration department gave the status of a landed immigrant because there is a shortage of hairdressers in Toronto. Evidently there is no shortage of restaurant workers because the officials of the immigration department are telling Greeks to go back home. If a war breaks out with Turkey we will pull out our Canadian troops in Cyprus, but we will want someone to stand up to the Turks and the Greek people who come over here look like good cannon fodder.

I do not see how we can refuse this 39-year old Greek admission to this country on the basis of the number of points he gets. I have not been able to attend meetings of the immigration committee. However, I saw accounts of these meetings in the newspapers and I discussed some of the hearings with the hon. member for Cartier who was one of the joint chairmen of the committee. Miss Scott, the newly appointed chairman of the immigration appeal board, testified before the committee. I know the hon. member for Cartier questioned her rather closely on this point. He asked whether the immigration appeal board can reverse or upset the points score given by the first immigration inquiry to the would-be immigrant. Miss Scott said no, the points system cannot be reversed. She said they can only work on the grounds of humanitarianism as the facts are presented to them.

I should like to put a question to the Minister of Manpower and Immigration, who in my opinion is doing a fine job. I am not saying this because I am asking now for special consideration. My requests for consideration have never been turned down, with the exception of the case of the Greek shepherd. I cannot understand why the Greek to whom I referred a while ago is not considered to be admissable and yet there are thousands of Greeks in Toronto who have established themselves securely there. The Greek shepherd boy is in Greece now but there are two other Greeks in York-Humber who are requesting landed immigrant status at the present time. However, Miss Scott said there is no use going before the immigration appeal board because the points score cannot be reversed. This fellow was given 24 points out of the 45 or 50 which he is supposed to have. He did not have much schooling so he cannot get marks under that heading. At the first hearing of the special inquiry I let the inquiry officer know what I thought of the treatment given the Irish boy who fled from the European wars and became a senator, while we tell these Greek boys who went through the second world war and a revolution at home to go back home.

The inquiry officer at that point said he would like to adjourn the hearing, to which I agreed. Now my Greek friend has received a second call to appear before the inquiry officer on the morning of April 3, and he received a letter asking him to bring his educational certificates with him. I hope they are in French and English because this fellow went to school for only three and a half years, and no doubt his instructors in Greece thought the immigration department in Canada would want to see the certificates in the future when he was 39 years of age. I wonder how many boys who went through two invasions of upper Greece in the last war have their education papers ready for presentation to the special inquiry officer of the immigration department in Toronto. I will not bet any money on that, and this Greek fellow does not have such certificates. We have to take his word that he had about three and a half years of education before his teacher was drafted.

May I say to the minister, with all the feeling I can muster, that these men should not be given marks at a secret hearing and then be told later by the special inquiry officer that he does not have the power to change the decision on the number of points the man first received. In the case of the man to whom I referred, he was examined by somebody or other in Toronto for the duration of 20 minutes. During that time the telephone rang and the officer who was supposed to be examining him spoke over the telephone for six minutes on the subject of the employment of another immigrant somewhere in Toronto. So the man who was being examined was only given 14 minutes, at the end of which the inquiry officer decided to give him 24 points. We have such a clever immigration judge in Toronto that he was able to pass judgment and make a decision affecting the future life of this 39-year old man, his wife and three boys living in Greece after an examination lasting only 14 minutes as the result of which he gave the man 24 points out of the necessary 50. As a result this man cannot remain in this country, although his uncles and his aunts have established themselves successfully over here.

Why were other people not allowed to be present at the hearing so that the applicant could have received full credit for the conditions under which he had lived? Up to 15 points are given for the applicants, adaptability, motivation, initiative, and other similar qualities as they are assessed by the immigration officer. Yet this 39-year old Greek who went through two wars as a child, which showed some adaptability, motivation and initiative, was given by this wise examiner in Toronto 6 points out of 15. I wonder whether the special inquiry immigration officer would have survived the first invasion, let alone the second. The all-important examination in these cases is the first one. The special immigration officer admitted he cannot do anything to change the first decision on the points system, and so did the chairman of the immigration appeal board. She said she can only act on humanitarian grounds.

We know that under the new rules the minister does not have the authority to change or to supersede the final decision of the appeal board. The two Greek cases I have mentioned have not yet been before the appeal board under the new rules. I appeared before the immigration appeal board on two separate occasions. One involved a gentleman from Jamaica and the other involved a gentleman from Italy. The appeal board found against the applicants. I took the matter up with the minister of immigration and citizenship who in those days had the authority and who granted special permits to the Italian and the Jamaican. The two of them are now well established in Toronto, and their families are here with them. If anyone wished to look up the official government record he would find that it still says the applicants must leave the country. I took the matter up with the minister, a man with a big heart and with compassion, and he granted these two men special permits to stay. If I were to bring the case before a special immigration board now there would be no appeal.

In the case of the Greek fellow we could file an application for political asylum from the Greek revolution. If the little girl in Vancouver could escape from Cuba to Canada by a special order in council of the cabinet giving her political asylum in this country, then these two Greeks should not have to go before the special inquiry officer on April 3 and before the immigration appeal board on April 9. These men are trying to get away from the rule of a military junta which is controlling Greece today, particularly in view of what was said by the Secretary of State for External Affairs last week, and in view of what the C.B.C. reported as recently as last Tuesday morning.

I suggest to the minister that when the first hearing is held the relatives of the applicant be advised that this is the all-important hearing and that they should be present at it and bring their counsel if they wish so that the applicant will have the best chance of receiving the largest total number of points possible. If he is going to be examined behind a closed door the decision reached will be an anchor round his neck when he goes before a special inquiry officer to appeal the first decision. As we know, there is no use appealing because the anchor around his neck will drown him from the first hearing. I say to the minister, there must be a change in this regard.

I have here in my hands four recent copies of the New Statesman and Nation, the most recent ones to have come from London. Each of them contains an article on the situation in Greece which points out that democracy in that country is dead. How in the name of heaven can we give political asylum to a girl from Cuba where the revolution is six years old and not give asylum to these would-be immigrants from Greece who have paid their way over here and who have relatives here to look after them? Why should we have to go through the rigmarole of a special inquiry and a hearing before the appeal board? Can the minister give me an answer?

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Chairman, when I rose earlier I said I would not speak as long as the hon. member for York-Humber. I can say now quite definitely that I certainly will not. I have two or three brief remarks for the attention of the minister and the officials of his department. But before I make them I want to express my appreciation of the careful and considerate way in which the officials of the minister's department have always dealt with any matter I have brought to their attention, and I have had many of them.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Lewis: There is a large number of new Canadians in my constituency, particularly of Italian origin, and therefore I have had many dealings with the department. I am personally grateful to the minister's officials, on behalf of these people and indeed on behalf of the people of Canada, for the very intelligent, gracious and helpful way in which they have dealt with these cases. As a matter of fact, I have not had occasion to go to the minister himself or even to the deputy minister more than once or twice because the officials of the department were either able to give my appeal favourable consideration or else were able to persuade me that their rejection of it was based on unobjectionable grounds.

I am very concerned about the tests given to applicants. I appreciate the fact that when the minister and his department prepared these tests for applicants they tried to arrive at a much more objective set of questions than had previously been the case. I do not object to the intention or the objective which they set for themselves, but the tests have always worried me. It has always worried me that a person who gets 35 points has a passing score and the person who gets 33 points fails. The lower mark might easily be the result of a particular characteristic of the officer who is interviewing the applicant. It always worried me at school as well as at university and it worries me now when my children are going through school.

I have often wondered how a professor of English can say that an essay is worth 74 marks and not 75 marks when 75 would have given the youngster first class honours while 74 gives him second class. This is all right for an essay which does not matter very much, but it matters a great deal to an applicant. It matters a great deal to the person who is seeking to remain in Canada or to come to Canada. If because the examining officer has a certain attitude, was bitten by something or was abused by someone an hour before the examination takes place, his response to the applicant is different from what it might otherwise have been and the applicant loses, then I suggest to the minister he consider the possibility of rechecking so that the matter is not left to the judgment of one officer.

I appreciate that this would increase the load of work. In view of the large number of applications with which the department has to deal it may well be that this is not a practical suggestion. I really do not know. I am being frank and honest with the minister when I say this. However, I am worried as a result of the experience I have had about leaving the decision in the hands of one officer in a one-shot interview, which is generally the case. One officer, in a one-shot interview, may be fallible and is, may make errors and does. The only way I can see to overcome that is either by regular rechecking, automatic rechecking by another officer or, alternatively, rechecking at the request of the applicant or someone connected with him. This will not give perfection either. I appreciate that you can never arrive at perfection.

Mr. Clancy: Will the hon. member allow a question? What does he mean by old Canadian and new Canadian?

Mr. Lewis: I was not aware—

Mr. Clancy: Define it. Put it on the record.

Mr. Lewis: I was not aware I was speaking about that at all, Mr. Chairman. May I continue? I appreciate that even a recheck will not bring perfection, but at least if you had two officers independently agreeing on a situation you would have a much closer approximation to justice than you have now.

[Mr. Lewis.]

Another point I wanted to draw to the minister's attention is the difference between a person who comes to Canada as a tourist and applies for immigrant status while he is here, and a person who makes application in his own country. If he comes as a tourist and makes application while in Canada, eventually he has access to the appeal board. The new appeal legislation gives the appeal board not only permission but authority—I would suggest almost a direction—to take humanitarian and compassionate grounds into consideration. When an applicant has not met the test on the number of points required he is able to go before the appeal board, either himself or through someone else, and present a case on humanitarian and compassionate grounds. However, a person who makes application in Rome or, as in one of the most recent cases to come to my attention, makes application in London, does not have access to the appeal board in Canada. It is impossible for the higher officers in Ottawa to recheck the application. If he is rejected as a result of the one-shot examination over there, then really he is through except that he may start over again and keep pressing at this end. Therefore it seems to me, that unless something has happened of which I am not aware, and that could easily take place, the point system has to be changed or a difference should be made to take cognizance of this fact.

There is a case I have in mind of a person who has a very old aunt here who cannot nominate him for various reasons. She does not have enough income or she does not believe she can live as long as the five-year guarantee requires. He has no closer relatives except a large number of cousins in Canada who are very anxious to help him become established in this country and are able to do so. He makes application overseas without sponsorship as an independent applicant. He has to meet, if I remember correctly, roughly 50 points if he is an independent applicant. He does not quite meet that test. I do not yet have the information, and I am not at all sure whether I will get it, as to what points he did reach. He is through, except that I will probably be landing the case on the minister's desk because the information I have persuades me that this person ought to be admitted.

The minister may want to give the case favourable consideration, but he is in a spot. He cannot see the applicant because he is overseas. He can only go by the record in the file and presumably the record will show that this fellow lacks sufficient points in education, in training or in skills. Perhaps the officer who examined him thought that in the personal initiative category he was entitled to only 5 points out of 15. Perhaps he did not come within the category in which there may be a job for him. The minister, if he is to change the decision, will have to have a great deal more information than I may well be able to give to him.

Like all other hon members, I have some uneasiness about asking the minister or any one of his officers to make a special case without some valid argument. If the man were over here these valid arguments might be present but they are not in my hands to bring to the minister. It seems to me that since a person who makes application outside the country cannot have available to him the final appeal on humanitarian and compassionate grounds to the appeal board which someone who is resident here can have, the department should give very serious consideration to the possibility of varying the requirements. Perhaps they could be rearranged so that more weight would be given to one aspect than another to meet this situation.

I have raised two points which I hope will be helpful. Certainly they are concrete. It seems to me they are at the basis of immigration selection because the selection is now based on an objective test. I have said already that the officers certainly do their best but there were these two points that I wanted to bring to the minister's attention.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, I want to say a brief word about something that does not fall directly under these estimates. I will not take more than two minutes to do it, if that long. The subject is related to these estimates. When we bring immigrants into Canada we have to be concerned about the facilities available for them to become citizens. The more I deal with Canadians who have recently come to this country, the more I am impressed by the fact that a relatively small proportion of those who have lived here the required length of time become citizens. At every election, whether federal or provincial, when I finally see the voters' list for my riding I am astonished and discouraged by the fact that not only not all but I would say less than half of those who could be citizens as a result of the length of time they have been in this country are in fact citizens. And, Mr. Chairman, for the most part they want to be. I have talked to them and been given to understand that they feel they are not getting the opportunity to become citizens as a result of the requirements of the citizenship courts, the tests to which they are put, and the fact that they have to lose money by being off work when they are trying to save every penny they can.

I will not say anything else on this subject because I appreciate that it is not in order, but I would appeal to the minister of immigration, who is concerned about those whom his department assists and admits to Canada, that he do all he can to change the manner in which persons make application for citizenship and are tested for that purpose. I do not know whether the minister will take time to deal with the points I have raised; I am not at all sure he would want to at this stage. However, I hope his department will pay serious attention to the suggestions I have made, not because I make them but because from my experience they seem to be matters deserving attention.

[Translation]

Mr. Lachance: Mr. Chairman, I should like to say a few words at this stage.

I think that all members of the house have already joined in the tokens of sympathy expressed throughout the world towards the victims of the terrible earthquake which occurred in Sicily recently.

I know that the Minister of Manpower and Immigration (Mr. Marchand) has already assured the house that special arrangements would be made to make it easier for the greatest number possible of those victims to immigrate to Canada and settle here.

A great number of the electors of the Lafontaine riding that I represent in this house are of Italian origin. They are building great hopes on the special arrangements announced by the minister some time ago. But time goes by and results seem to be long in coming. Can the hon. member give us some details on the results of the special steps which were taken by his department in that instance?

In addition, Mr. Chairman, I should like to point out, as other members have done I am sure, that a large number of citizens who have immigrated to Canada in the last 10, 20 and 25 years have never asked to become Canadian citizens. That problem probably falls within the jurisdiction of the immigration service, but I wonder if the hon. minister might not be able to tell us something in this regard.

Recently, an immigrant, who was on the point of being married, needed a passport to go abroad, as he had lost the passport of his country of origin, and he could not obtain a new one within a reasonable period of time because the town where he was born had been destroyed during the war. Naturally, because he was on the point of being married, he was told that he would have to make an application and wait for months before getting his Canadian citizenship.

I wonder whether, in such cases, it might not be advisable to intensify our efforts with a view to encouraging the immigrants who have been in Canada for quite some time to become Canadian citizens.

Mr. Marchand: Mr. Chairman, just a few words in reply to those various questions.

The hon. member for York-Humber (Mr. Cowan) described in great detail the cases which were submitted to him. He will surely understand that I am not in a position to discuss those cases as he did this afternoon, because I have just been acquainted with them. In any event, I will surely look into what happened to ascertain whether our policy is really lacking.

As for the hon. member for York South (Mr. Lewis), I believe he is right in theory. Independent immigrants who have asked to come to Canada should have at least the same rights that tourists enjoy in Canada. Indeed, it is the tourists in Canada who have exceptional privileges. I do feel it is practically impossible to grant the right of appeal in the case of all direct applications that can be made.

But, in any case, the point system inaugurated last year is not sacred. It is still under study because we want to find out how it can influence immigration or what discrimination can result therefrom. Of course, suggestions made to us will be studied seriously and we will see to it that it is improved, if need be. In any case, it is a system which, in my opinion, has improved considerably our immigration policy, particularly with regard to sponsored immigrants. Moreover, it is a system which rests in part on discretionary power. It is difficult not to have discretionary power and, when a point system is applied, it can become too rigid. It is a matter of finding out if, in practice, the system works as well as it should.

That is all I want to say for the time being, Mr. Chairman.

[Mr. Lachance.]

[English]

Mr. Schreyer: Mr. Chairman, I want to take just three or four minutes to express to the minister of immigration my dissatisfaction with section 5 of the Immigration Act and in particular its application. Section 5, as hon. members know, spells out the categories of persons who are simply not admissible to Canada as immigrants by reason of mental incompetence. Section 5 stipulates clearly that:

> No person, other than a person referred to in subsection (2) of section 7—

That is the section dealing with the discretionary power of the minister.

> —shall be admitted to Canada if he is a member of any of the following classes of persons:
> (a) persons who
> (i) are idiots, imbeciles or morons,
> (ii) are insane or, if immigrants, have been insane at any time—

Last Friday, Mr. Chairman, the hon. member for Fort William sponsored a bill, No. C-30, the effect of which would be to grant permanent immigrant status to persons who until now have been denied it simply because they may have had a medical history of mental illness. Even if it had only lasted for short intervals, apparently this has barred them from being given permanent immigrant status. The bill debated last Friday would have changed the law in this respect. The hon. member made his case sa clearly and logically that I for one do not understand how this anomaly in the law has been allowed to exist.

In order not to digress I want to hark back to section 5 which prohibits the entry into this country of certain categories of persons who have a condition of mental illness or mental incompetence. Section 7 permits the minister to exercise discretionary powers. Although I am not challenging that provision it was my understanding until very recently that the minister felt he was under an extreme injunction not to exercise this discretionary power. Therefore I presumed that few, if any, persons in this category were allowed into this country.

My involvement with this section of the act comes about through an individual case. I shall not take up the time of the committee to relate all the particulars. Suffice it to say that two families from a South American country had satisfied all the requirements of Canadian immigration law and were deemed eligible to enter Canada as immigrants. However, they were prohibited from so doing because one person, one dependent, in this two-family group was considered mentally incompetent. In all other respects the applying families met the requirements of our immigration law. Ironclad guarantees were given with respect to the employment of these people in this country and with respect to financial arrangements for housing and so on. There was no good reason to deny these families entry as new Canadians except that possibly they could not leave one member of the family behind. The mother was very old and one brother was mentally incompetent.

The minister has the power to use discretion in these matters. I am not suggesting he should not have that discretion. I was surprised to learn from the hon. member for Spadina, who spoke last Friday, that 176 mentally incompetent persons in 1966 and 179 mentally incompetent persons in 1967 were allowed into this country despite the provisions of section 5 of the act. The minister was able to use his discretionary power and allow them in. I do not challenge that but I wish to ask the minister one question. He must use some criterion. He deals with every case on its merits and it would be hopeless for him to try to explain how he justifies every decision to allow persons into this country. I know he must take into account the circumstances applying to other members of the immigrant's family. But surely it is possible for him to indicate in a general way what circumstances must obtain before he is prepared to issue a permit for the entry into Canada of a dependent person who is mentally incompetent. If the minister will not answer now, perhaps he will take my question as notice. I intend to debate it with him at some opportune time in the future.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, I was waiting to hear what the minister might say in answer to the hon. member for Springfield. I do not wish to speak at length on the matter. I was happy to receive the assurance from the minister that the points system is not an established sacred cow. I must tell him that from the advice I have from the Toronto immigration office it is an established sacred cow there at the moment. I am glad to know that the minister will disestablish that situation.

There is one point I want to emphasize to the minister and it is this. What is the competence of the examining officers in the first place? I have already extended public thanks, and I have done so privately as well, to the minister for having granted a special permit to a gentleman and family from Jamaica. I sat through the hearing in Toronto before the special inquiry officer on the Jamaican's application. We were accompanied by the minister of his church, Pape Avenue Baptist Church, and heard the questioning of the Jamaican citizen who is now in Toronto. The questions were fired at him by the special inquiry officer. I would have presumed that he was an able, well educated man who knew what he was doing. He asked the Jamaican what was the date of the armistice in the first world war and the Jamaican said November 11, 1918.

The inquiry officer fired another question. He said, "What was the date of the armistice in the second world war?" That was the first moment I intervened. I was called a counsel, although I am not a lawyer. The only way I could get into the hearing was as the Jamaican's counsel. So I said to the special inquiry officer, "What are you talking about? No matter what answer this Jamaican gives you he will be wrong because there was no armistice in the second world war. It was unconditional surrender." Judging from what some members of parliament have told me, a peace treaty has not been signed yet between Germany and the allies, so the investigating officer's question was wrong. Peace not having been signed, the war is not over technically. So I said, "There was no armistice in the second world war. No matter how this fellow answers he is going to be wrong and either way you are going to dock marks off him."

To show the mental capacity of that special inquiry officer I would point out that there was a transcript made of the questions and answers, and because my interventon showed that the special inquiry officer was not master of the situation—he did not like to be shown up in this way—there were some changes made. If you will look at the departmental transcript of the hearing you will find that he has changed his question. In his question he now says, "What was the date of the end of the second world war." I am shown as objecting. "I object to the question because there was no armistice in the second world war." If the examining officer has no more intelligence than that shown by his secondary question, it does not say much for him. He altered his question without making any contact with me. I intervened because of the falseness of his first question. The altered transcript shows that the special inquiry officer is not very bright.

I think that in the first instance we should have higher quality judges in the department. I agree with the hon. member for York South. More than one man should be required to make this life or death decision affecting the welfare of families. I do not know whether I would agree that three people of the quality of the one I have just described are better than one good, intelligent man, but certainly I believe the quality of the examiners should be raised.

Since the minister has been kind enough to say that the point system is not sacred I should like to ask him what is the meaning of the paragraph on page 6 of the regulations dated September 12, 1967, which reads:

> The regulations also provide that either a nominated relative or an independent applicant who comes to Canada as a visitor and then applies to remain permanently will have to meet slightly higher selection standards than if he had applied overseas.

A 24-year old chap to whom I am referring, a Greek, got a total of 45 marks—I have the examination marks right here—on his examination. We were told by the special inquiry officer that he had to have 50 marks because he applied in Canada. Why does the man who applies in Canada have to have five more marks or points than the man who applies overseas? What is the difference? He is not a different man overseas than he is in Canada. In fact, he has had enough get up and go to pay his way out here and also to buy his return ticket. He must have the return half on his visa. And because he has shown some spunk and got here on his own he is told, "You must have five more points than if you had not come here and had applied through any average, regular immigration office in Europe, Asia or South America." I have had South American applicants. Why must people get five more points in Canada than if they applied elsewhere?

Mr. Minister, I have already said I have no complaints with the handling of these cases by the officers of your department. I have congratulated you for your fine spirit and deep concern about this matter. You have said that the points system is not sacred, that you are not going to sanctify the points system in this mundane world. I also wish you would drop the use of the word "deportation" on every piece of printing material that comes out of the immigration department for would-be immigrants.

[Mr. Cowan.]

Mr. Marchand: Mr. Chairman, I should like to give a brief answer to the question put by the hon. member for Lafontaine (Mr. Lachance) with regard to Sicilian and Italian immigrants.

We have given priority to all applications made in Sicily; we increased the number of our agents in Rome so that priority is given to all Sicilian immigrants and their applications are considered as fast as possible. Moreover, we have given priority to applications from sponsors of Sicilian immigrants coming from Canada, and that method proved effective. Unfortunately, I cannot give figures to the hon. member this afternoon.

As for the hon. member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Fawcett)—

• (5:20 p.m.)

I am no more satisfied than is the hon. member with section 5. We know that some illnesses which were incurable years ago can today be cured. This is where we can use our discretion. We shall amend this section as soon as we are able to do so. I shall not advance any argument on the point because I agree the provision should be changed in 1968.

The question has been raised: why should it be more difficult for would-be immigrants to obtain immigrant status when they apply here in Canada rather than in the countries from which they come? The answer is that if this policy were not followed people would not bother to go to our offices in Europe at all. They would come directly to Canada and make application here on the ground that it would be easier and processing would be quicker. If we are to maintain offices abroad, then those who respect our regulations should have some kind of preference. That is why there is a slight difference. We do not refuse applications made in Canada but we indicate it is preferable for application to be made in the immigrant's own country.

Mr. Cowan: To comment on the minister's last observation, I have the minister's remarks here, as he has made them for the past several years, and I notice he points out that in this modern day and age people can be transported much more quickly and easily from one country to another. People come here as visitors and after seeing the country they decide to stay. If a man comes as a visitor he does not apply to the immigration office overseas. Very likely he has only been tempted to remain as an immigrant because of the opportunity he has had to see the country at first hand.

The 24-year-old Greek I mentioned was given 45 points on his examination in Toronto. He was told he needed 50 points because he had applied in Toronto. The question which arises is: Can we send him back to Greece? With the 45 points he was given in Toronto he would be entitled to entry to Canada provided he made his application in Greece. He obtained 45 points in Toronto which he was told—and I was there when this took place—would be sufficient if he applied in Greece. It looks a little ridiculous if, having failed by only five points in Toronto, he buys a return ticket to Greece and passes on the marks he has established in Toronto. Of course, it is a good thing for the air lines. I wish that Air Canada flew to Greece so they could get all the revenue. But I believe the young lad would only pay Air Canada as far as New York and would fly Sabena from there to Athens. The hon. gentleman has been very kind to me in connection with my applications but I must say I do not see eye to eye with him 100 per cent in connection with that last statement.

Mr. Marchand: We could probably have a more lengthy discussion on this subject when we amend the Immigration Act, but I am sure the present policy is sound.

Item agreed to.

DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORT

2c. Acquisition of railway cars and other equipment, $76,500.

Mr. McCleave: I have just one question which I raised earlier in the absence of the minister. Perhaps the hon. gentleman can reply to it now; I have given him notice. It concerns a request by the Shipping Federation of Canada, Halifax branch, and by the longshoremen of the Halifax area for further consideration of a projected increase in pilotage and boat costs for Halifax harbour. I shall not put forward the argument which has been made to me. I think it is really a matter of their having time in which to present their case to the minister and the department. This would be the preferable course. It is a matter of some urgency because the expected increases which have been mentioned were to come through as of April 1. Perhaps the minister could indicate whether their pleas and mine have had some effect.

Mr. Hellyer: I am pleased to advise the hon. member that as a result of the representations which have been received I have given instructions that the date be extended by 15 days to give all interested parties a chance to make representations.

Mr. McCleave: I am very grateful to the minister.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The hon. member for Trois-Rivières.

Mr. Mongrain: I will relinquish my turn to the hon. lady from Vancouver-Kingsway.

Mrs. MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): Has the minister anything to tell us about the state of negotiations between Ottawa and the province of British Columbia with regard to the Roberts bank development?

Mr. Hellyer: We are carrying on negotiations. I have received another letter from the premier which crossed one I had sent to him. We are both interested in getting on with the job. In the meantime we are going ahead with the technical plans for the port. I hope we can reach a satisfactory conclusion because it is important that the port be opened in time to handle the first shipment called for in the contract with the Japanese. We have every intention of seeing that this is done.

Mrs. MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): I am well aware that the jurisdiction with regard to the deep-sea port is federal but is there any attempt being made to work out a satisfactory degree of co-operation which will allow some degree of provincial participation or control?

Mr. Hellyer: In my first letter I said we would be pleased to co-operate with the provincial government with respect to industrial estates, the land assembly program for industry which is associated with the port facilities. This could be worked out on the basis of a 50-50 partnership as suggested by the province, or under any other agreed formula.

So far as the port facilities are concerned, I indicated in my first letter that the federal government was willing to accept full responsibility. I also indicated subsequently that we were making a study of the question of ownership and control of port facilities in Canada and that this study might suggest some changes in connection with control, more particularly in connection with local participation in management. However, in view of the fact that this subject has not been studied for many years, not during the last 25 years to the best of my knowledge, I feel we should await the results of the study—I hope it will only take a couple of months—before agreeing to any new form of port control. I think this is particularly important because there are some basic questions involved which have to be answered. I do not believe we have sufficient information yet on which to base a policy as suggested.

On the other hand, it could well be that following the conclusion of the study there would be some recommendation for increased local participation. We have left the door open for this to happen at some future date and have suggested that in the interim it would be in the interests of all parties involved that the federal government go ahead with the technical plans so that the contracts could be called and there would be no delay on the physical works.

Mrs. MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): What has been the response of the provincial government to this proposal?

Mr. Hellyer: The response has been one of continuing negotiation. I have not yet received a reply to my last letter but I think the will exists to try to work the thing out co-operatively. I certainly hope that is the case.

[Translation]

Mr. Mongrain: Mr. Chairman, I want to assure the house right away that I shall be very brief. I only want to deal briefly with two points.

First of all, I must tell the minister that he made a very good impression during his visit to Trois-Rivières yesterday. I visited my riding this morning in order to listen to comments and read newspaper reports, and that does not surprise me, because such a welcome is customary in our area.

There is only one thing I wish to point out to the minister, and it is that the member for Trois-Rivières is an independent. Therefore, when the Prime Minister or the leader of any party pays a visit to his municipality, he is happy to welcome him on behalf of the entire population of Trois-Rivières. If I am saying this, it is because when certain candidates come to Trois-Rivières, they invite the member, through their organizers, who then makes a point of being present, but he would not want to give the impression that he favours a candidate more than another.

That was my preliminary remark.

My other remark is perhaps more substantial. I remember that the minister said either in the house or elsewhere, that he would consider the advisability of paying some compensation those who suffered damage caused by flooding.

A little later on, I understood the minister to say that he had some misgivings, because it was an act of God for which the government was not responsible.

In the name of all my constituents—and I think this also answers the expectations of some of my colleagues who received the same requests—I should like to ask the minister today to undertake a serious inquiry into the situation. Along with others, I believe there has been negligence on the part of some responsible officials of his department. I do not blame the minister, nor his senior officials, but those responsible who should have foreseen the situation and taken appropriate measures before it was too late.

In my opinion, the least the hon. minister can promise the house and those who have been greatly injured by what has happened, is to set up a neutral and responsible body to study the situation in detail and with all due objectivity so that, if it is proved that responsible officials in his department have been guilty of negligence, at least partial compensation can be given in the most serious cases.

There are some pathetic cases which I find extremely unfair. In fact, for many years, we proved to the people that we were able to make the necessary arrangements in order to avoid a similar disaster, and those people invested tremendous amounts in properties which, in several cases, have a certain value. Today, we condemn them to assume those damages without any compensation, especially if we take into consideration—as I have written myself—the fact that most of those victims are people of limited means, even poor in many cases and doomed to a precarious situation because of that act of God.

I repeat my question so that there may be no misunderstanding on the part of the minister. I do not ask him this afternoon to promise officially in the house that he will give a 100 per cent compensation to those who suffered damages, but at least I should like to know whether he is prepared to make the necessary arrangements so that one individual or a group of responsible, competent and unbiased individuals could study the situation in detail with a view to granting a partial compensation in the most extreme cases, if some deficiency, weakness or neglect can be proven.

[English]

Mr. Hellyer: Mr. Chairman, first of all I would like to thank my hon. friend for his kind words and I apologize for not having met him at the reception in Trois Rivières. Certainly I will see he is invited next time and will be most delighted to meet him there. It is also true, as he suggests, that I received a warm welcome. I was not surprised but I was certainly delighted with the degree of the welcoming warmth that I received there.

Mr. Mongrain: I will send you the clippings.

Mr. Hellyer: Merci bien. So far as the question that he has raised is concerned, I did have an inquiry made earlier because of the allegations which had been made, and there was no indication that there had been any negligence. If my hon. friend has any evidence to the contrary I would be glad to see it. In the meantime I would undertake to send him the report which sets out day by day exactly what was done so that he can study it. Perhaps this will assist him in reaching some conclusion in his own mind whether or not everything possible that could be done was done.

There were unusual circumstances. It was one of the most severe winters in many years. As my hon. friend knows, the only thing that the department can do is break a channel and let the ice flow out to the sea. If in certain parts of the river there is very little current and there are adverse winds, the ice does not move toward the sea. Then we get a jamming condition which can produce very serious results. Sometimes it brings about flood conditions. When that happens it is due to the weather and is beyond the control of the department. This, to the best of my knowledge and belief, is exactly what happened. I would be pleased to send my hon. friend the information I have and I think it will satisfy him. If after having read it there are any further questions in his mind or he has evidence over and beyond what has been made available to me, then I would be glad to reconsider the question.

• (5:40 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Godin: Mr. Chairman, the items before us now are public items and as we must consider ourselves as representatives of the Canadian people, we must either accept or reject those estimates.

Now, when we consider the way those estimates will be spent, we find out that one part will be used in favour of a company operating under the aegis of this department, and I am referring now to the Canadian National Railways.

Therefore, I avail myself of this opportunity to point out to the hon. minister that our constituents are asking for details as regards the administration of this crown corporation. We know that grants enable it to make both ends meet. We also know about the means used to put it on its feet again. It is public knowledge. But when the time comes to tell us how those amounts are spent, it becomes a question of internal administration, and the matter is taboo.

I personally placed on the order paper a few questions concerning the activities of the Canadian National Railways. As an example, I shall quote one question I considered then as being in order and the answer I was given. It was question No. 1068 of August 29, 1966.

> How many employees of the Canadian National Railway get a salary (a) between $4,000 and $6,000, (b) between $6,000 and $8,000, (c) between $8,000 and $10,000, (d) between $10,000 and $15,000, (e) between $15,000 and $25,000, (f) of $25,000 or more?

In order to support my previous statement, I will quote the answer given by the parliamentary secretary to the then minister of transport, the hon. member for Kootenay East (Mr. Byrne):

> The management of the Canadian National Railways gives the following information:
> It was not considered in the best interest of the company to disclose information as required on the earnings of the employees.

I often placed questions on the order paper and an employee, responsible for its editing, gave me a phone call and said: Mr. Godin, I did receive your question, but do not try to place it on the order paper or to have it accepted. It pertains to internal administration and you will not get an answer.

It is a fact that it is the company's interest to prevent its administrative methods from becoming public knowledge and to keep certain details secret.

However, when the company is faced with a deficit, when it requires 50 or 60 million dollars in order to make both ends meet, then it becomes public business and they come before parliament to make up for the deficit. Then, the government does not hesitate to make a grab for the handbags and pockets of Canadians. It is indeed revolting to learn about such things when we know how those deficits were created.

I wish, once again, to take this opportunity to point out to the minister how those deficits are created and what is their cause.

The main cause, I think, is patronage. When I speak about patronage, I refer to the ridiculous rates granted to certain companies by the Canadian National Railways.

I could name a member of the board of directors of the Canadian National Railways who is also an honorary member of a company in the province of Quebec. The company uses this official to obtain favorable prices.

Now the big companies contribute to election campaign funds, but I should like to point out to the minister that the companies' money does not always reach those funds, and that certain agents fatten their wallets with some of it. In fact, I know one of those agents who earns $1000 a month just by sitting as a honorary director of a company. Now, as soon as he goes back to sit on the board of the C.N.R., he can get advantageous prices for the company which pays him for his small services.

It is obvious then that the companies which do business in a territory other than that of the C.N.R., that is to say which must transport their goods by the C.P.R., which operates in a reasonable manner and with a profit, are left behind those which benefit from C.N.R. rates.

Since transport is more and more important in a country such as ours, where it must be admitted that a large number of people owe their success to the C.N.R., I think that a little more consideration should be given to the generous offers made by the C.N.R. to a few companies. Whether we like it or not, this can cause irreparable damage to those who want to hold their own by using other services. This can also cause irreparable damage in the sense that certain companies will be forced to close down, being unable to get rates similar to those of their competitors.

Mr. Chairman, I suggest that this is dishonest and unfair competition, since all those companies must live, they provide work for Canadians and they do not receive an equal treatment. Some companies can benefit from ridiculously low rates, while others get the short end of the stick.

Some truckers are hard hit by that situation, and I would like to read a resolution I received from the Fédération des associations de camionneurs de la Mauricie Inc. It is resolution No. 11 passed at their general meeting held in Saint-Adolphe on October 12, 1967, a copy of which was sent to the then member of the administration (Mr. Chrétien). I quote:

> Inquiry concerning the reason why the C.N.R. allegedly has reduced its freight rates with regard to the transportation of hard wood logs from Rapide Blanc to Ste-Thècle, Laviolette County, and from Rapide Blanc to Garneau Jonction, Laviolette County?
> As a result of such action, about 30 truck owners who are members of the Federation found themselves in a difficult situation. We would be much obliged to you if you could give us the reason of such a dractic measure, since the C.N.R. thus becomes an unfair competitor, which is unjustified since the C.N.R. is a crown corporation, therefore a company owned and subsidized by the people. We therefore ask you to take the necessary steps to remedy that state of affairs and to get things straightened out.

I can say that things have not been straightened out in that area, but also that other similar situations arose elsewhere and on a much wider scale.

Mr. Chairman, I would now like to bring up another matter. For the third time, I would like to tell the minister about the living conditions of the C.N.R. employees, especially those who work on mobile teams and must sleep in railway cars during the summer months.

During election campaigns, on great occasions, for instance last year for the centennial of confederation, some people expressed their appreciation in high sounding speeches to those who built our country. Of course, we counted deceased persons among them, because we know very well that they will ask us nothing; we also counted people who had worked on the construction of railroads.

Indeed, the construction of a railway is important, but I claim that its maintainance is not less important. In a vast country such as ours, which stretches for miles and miles, workers have to labour unsparingly and they must give service regularly, in extreme temperatures, while here, in parliament, where we have good heat and good lighting, we cannot imagine what it may be like for a man to work in all kinds of weather.

Now, many tasks are carried out by special machines, but machines will never replace manual labour, for accurate work for instance. There will always be impossible spots, where only a human being will do, and the worker will always be indispensable to operate the machine.

The workers which the Canadian National had to keep owing to the force of circumstances are more ill-treated than ever and that company can boast of being the one whose employees are treated the worst throughout Canada. Mobile teams are well paid, well fed, but, as far as rest is concerned, it can be said without fear of being mistaken that it is an absolute zero, for the reason that workers have to sleep in cars where there are still bunks. Last summer, we even found a car without an air-conditioning system. For five years, the inspector passed by that car but, because it was not on the list of those he had to inspect, he had no business going into it, inspecting it and reporting it. Five years went by before some smart guy disclosed the existence of that famous car.

Now, private companies that are managed by men who know business have admitted for years that it is to their advantage to lodge and feed their employees well, and that to obtain good results it is wise to take care of their health.

Now, for the guidance of those who might have wanted to forget common sense, the province of Quebec has passed a departmental order on double bunks. I am referring to a notice published by the Health Department on March 7, 1961:

Upper bunks are prohibited in new buildings to be used as sleeping quarters in camps, and the director of the industrial hygiene division—

These standards were adopted for the men who work on construction or in the bush and were meant for large companies that might have part-time employees. Now, we realize that business companies with full-time employees still do not treat them well. I continue:

—and the director of the industrial hygiene division can grant an extension to August 1, 1961 to allow employers to comply with the requirements of this amendment with regard to existing sleeping quarters.

Now, I feel that a good stretch of time has elapsed between 1961 and 1968. The employees of the Canadian National pay modern taxes but must sleep in old-fashion quarters, in upper bunks. We know that, in the lower bunk, the temperature is roughly 60 to 65°, while on very warm days, the temperature in the upper can reach 105°.

Last summer, I visited the experimental farm of the government, here, and I found it marvelous. Be it stable, or pigsty, the temperature was controlled. There is not an agronomist, not a government technician who would dare to keep animals in a temperature of 105°. Still, at the Canadian National, employees are kept in temperatures of 105°. I say this is nonsense. I feel that what cannot be allowed for animals, that might be detrimental to profits, to results, should not be allowed for men, because by so doing, it harms their health, their future, in short their whole life.

Mr. Chairman, our farms are well lit, well equipped, but I would like men to be better taken care of. Members of the opposition and even one member on the government side have pointed this out to the house repeatedly.

This is the fourth time I speak of this myself. The former minister of transport had made me a beautiful promise; he was to deal with the matter. It was urgent, but all the minister of transport did was to hand in his resignation, as recorded on page 2472 of Hansard for September 25, 1967. I do not intend to bring up this question again, but I hope the present minister will assume his responsibilities and deal with the matter.

The workers are not asking for a medal or a salary increase. They are simply asking to be allowed to rest under normal conditions.

I should like to mention again here that the former minister of transport, Hon. J. W. Pickersgill, only had to say that he was a little tired in order to be offered a job at $45,000 a year. Our workers are now tired of bad housing and of paying union dues for nothing. In 1965, their union had obtained a promise from the minister of transport that everything would be taken care of. Nothing has been taken care of.

If Hon. J. W. Pickersgill could say that he was tired, our workers say they are still tired, but they are unable to have a good rest. They are tired of those nice promises and after three years, I feel that the behaviour of the Canadian National Railways proves that this company does not keep its promises. A waiting period of 36 months is long enough to realize that this company is truly irresponsible.

I think that this is a most appropriate occasion to ask the minister to look seriously into the matter and to urge the Canadian National Railways to keep its promises made to the unions three years ago. I imagine that the Canadian National Railways was aware of the nature of those commitments. I also have the impression that it knew that those requests could be met. We are not asking the impossible or for something to be used abroad, we are merely asking for something quite in order for our own people.

Now, I should like to see the hon. minister at least make an effort to house the Canadian National workers in the same way he houses our soldiers, our sailors and our airmen. In any part of the world, even in the underdeveloped countries, we always find it possible to house them well and to feed them well, and I imagine that in our own country we could see to it that they all are well-housed and well-fed.

Mr. Chairman, may I call it six o'clock, because I still have a few remarks to make after the dinner recess.

[English]

Mr. Hellyer: Mr. Chairman, perhaps there would be some disposition on the part of the committee to sit for a few minutes to see whether others wish to speak.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

[Translation]

Mr. Godin: Mr. Chairman, if the house will permit, my remarks will not take too long.

Since I was talking about construction, I have before me a document which could assist the minister. It is an article written by Mr. Jean Côté in La Semaine Illustrée, in the June 5-11 issue, where he refers to the picnic car, and I quote:

> In order to enlighten the public with regard to the extravagance of the C.N.R., determined also to bring about an inquiry, we shall deal with the specific case of the picnic cars or the private cars of the privileged few of the company. After describing the situation, we shall see that it would be possible to reduce the deficits if the PASHAS, integrated within an overall policy of restraint, did not live in style at government expense.

When referring to style and all the rest, Mr. Côté illustrates his article with some revealing pictures.

> Throughout Canada, there would be more than 75 picnic cars, of which 25 are in Quebec. They are available to a small group of lucky people, vice-chairmen, foremen and other officials, and are being used for various purposes.
> Those luxurious cars, the building of which cost half a million dollars or more, are real palaces on steel wheels. By means of a masterly arrangement, all the modern-life advantages were gathered under the same roof, showers, kitchen, bedrooms, parlours, and so on.
> About 15 persons can sleep there comfortably, and a hundred of meals may be served every day without the guests being obliged, on account of the lack of space, to keep their hands in their pockets.

> The picnic car is a skilful version of the luxurious cars of the regular lines where, for a few dollars, you can take it easy whenever by chance you board a train for a restful trip to a distant city.
> Of course, the marquess' friends will spend unforgettable hours as guests on fishing or hunting trips in the most remote areas of Quebec.

We are told that the cars are not entirely new. The old can be made new.

> Today, palaces on wheels are no longer made. Rather the old is made new, that is to say existing cars are converted into picnic cars, which is just as costly.
> There is not enough space to give details on this scandalous situation, to give some names to our readers, to tell about some nice fishing parties amongst people who appreciate comfort and some spicy adventures that would be the talk of the town.

I do not intend to linger on this subject. I only wanted to show the minister that old cars could be made quite modern without adding all that was added to those picnic cars.

Mr. Chairman, since I would speak for ten more minutes, I would point out that it is six o'clock.

• (6:00 p.m.)

[English]

The Chairman: It is my duty, pursuant to provisional standing order 39A, to inform the house that the questions to be raised at ten o'clock this day are as follows: the hon. member for Brandon-Souris (Mr. Dinsdale), Indian Affairs—request for reconstitution of parliamentary committee; the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway, (Mrs. MacInnis), Consumer and Corporate Affairs—investigation into increase in price of milk.

It being six o'clock I do now leave the chair.

At six o'clock the committee took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The committee resumed at 8 p.m.

[Translation]

Mr. Godin: Mr. Chairman, it is true that I am the one who called it six o'clock upon consideration of item 2c, regarding the acquisition of railway cars and other equipment.

Now, I have other remarks to make but they will mainly deal with the other item.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, does item 2c not involve a general debate, as the—

Some hon. Members: —No.

Mr. Grégoire: Otherwise, Mr. Chairman, I could go back to another item which I see here, item 5c.

Some hon. Members: Carried.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I should like to get some information: Does item 2c, the first one to be considered at the present time, as in the case of other departments, not authorize a general debate on the overall policy of the Department of Transport, or do we have to wait for a specific item on this matter?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. At the present time the committee is considering a specific item.

[English]

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Chairman, I should like to ask a question or two directly related to this vote 2c which has to do with the acquisition of railway cars and other equipment. The supplementary amount being asked is $76,500. In checking the main estimates for the fiscal year that is about to conclude, I find there is an item for $200,000. The comparable amount asked for in 1966-1967 period was $610,000. Turning to the main estimates for the coming fiscal year, which have already been tabled, I notice that $200,000 is indicated as the amount required.

I wonder if the minister can explain just what this supplementary vote is for? Following that, perhaps he could explain whether the vote results from the termination of a certain program and, in being asked to vote this amount of $76,500 are we, in effect, only being asked for this amount for the current fiscal year, or will the full spending for this year be $276,500? As I asked earlier, does this indicate the completion of a certain program of acquiring equipment?

Mr. Hellyer: This additional amount is required to pay for the replacement of the Governor General's cars Nos. 1 and 2.

Mr. Orlikow: I wonder if I could use discussion of this item to ask the minister a question which is becoming of increasing concern to railway workers across Canada? Some months ago there was a very sharp lay-off on both railways, but we are concerned particularly with the Canadian National. Several thousand railway workers across the country were laid off and there were protests from every part of the country. Last week I think there was an announcement in Winnipeg by both the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National repair shops that they would be closed for a full month this summer. This means of course that every railway worker who works there will get at least one week's holiday without pay. Some of course will get more. There are recurring fears among railway workers that the lay-offs which I mentioned just a moment ago are going to continue.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. The committee is not studying item 2c and there is nothing in that item related to working conditions or lay-offs. I ask the hon. member to confine his remarks to the subject mentioned in vote 2c.

Mr. Orlikow: I have almost completed my remarks, and I am only going to ask a question. I assume that if the companies acquire railway cars, at some point those cars are going to need repair. Has the minister a statement to make as to whether we can expect more lay-offs of Canadian National Railway workers? This is the point I wanted to raise. If this is the wrong item, I can of course raise the matter farther along the line. It really does not make much difference.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall vote 2c carry?

Mr. Barnett: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Chairman. In view of the matters which were being raised for discussion on this item at six o'clock, I ask Your Honour to permit the minister to answer briefly the relatively simple question asked by the hon. member for Winnipeg North. The minister appears to be in a fairly amiable mood. I think he must have had a restful week end. I am sure he is ready to answer that question which is related to the operations of his department.

Mr. Hellyer: I do not want to transgress the rules of the committee, but during the last discussion I had with the management of the railway, which was just a few weeks ago, I received information that no lay-offs were planned, and that the special retirement arrangements which have been made in the Canadian National will permit the railway to reduce its total labour force to the extent required at the present time. As I indicated to my hon. friend, that information is not current, but I have no reason to believe it is not accurate now. I would be glad to make further inquiries of the railroad.

Mr. Orlikow: May I ask one more question? Has the minister any information as to the number of men that have been laid off since the large lay-off about which there were so many questions?

Mr. Hellyer: No, I do not have that information at my fingertips, I am sorry.

Mr. Orlikow: I do not want to hold up the estimates. Can the minister get that information in the next little while, as to the number of Canadian National employees who have been laid off since September 1, 1967? If the minister would agree to give me the information when he gets it, then I will be quite satisfied.

• (8:10 p.m.)

Mr. Hellyer: If my hon. friend would give me the time period in which he is interested, I would be glad to get the information for him.

Mr. Orlikow: September 1, 1967, Mr. Chairman.

Item agreed to.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, item 5c allows us to deal with the administration and maintenance of aids to navigation. Of course, that includes winter navigation on the St. Lawrence and the Minister of Transport (Mr. Hellyer) is well aware of my long-standing interest in that problem.

One hundred years ago, fifty years ago and even twenty-five years ago, there was not so much talk about winter navigation on the St. Lawrence. The best winter ports were located along the Atlantic shore and winter navigation on the St. Lawrence was practically inexistant.

Thanks to modern technology in the field of transport, to new ship-building methods—including stronger hulls—to more powerful engines, to new methods of keeping the St. Lawrence open and with the help of Scandinavian countries and of Russia—Canada has not necessarily led the way in that regard—it was realized that winter navigation was possible as far as Quebec city, Trois-Rivières, Sorel and Montreal. Today however there is a problem: the government must change its attitude towards winter navigation. There are there different trends of thought on that point.

First of all, according to those who live in the eastern part of the country, in Halifax and Saint John, the representatives of the ports of the maritimes—and I understand their attitude—no step should be taken to develop winter navigation on the St. Lawrence and no icebreakers should be sent on the St. Lawrence so as not to harm the harbours of the maritimes. I understand their attitude, since that means something to the maritime provinces.

Secondly, there are those who say, as the former minister of transport put it a year or two ago: We will do no more and no less than what we are doing now in respect of winter navigation on the St. Lawrence. They are the ones in between, those who do not want to give an opinion, who want neither to delay not to promote winter navigation. In other words they are neutral.

Thirdly, there are those who ask the Minister of Transport to establish a clearly progressive policy in that field and to take the necessary means to open the St. Lawrence to winter navigation, up to Montreal. Thanks to our knowledge of navigation on the St. Lawrence, even during the most bitter cold weather, to the new developments in ship-building, the improvement of engines, the reinforcement of hulls, etc. I think it is possible for us today—not in 20 years from now, but today to facilitate very easily winter navigation on the St. Lawrence up to Montreal.

We already have ice-breakers, maybe not enough, but it it is up to the minister to adjust his policy. Studies should perhaps be carried out concerning certain details but the greater difficulties have been overcome. What we need now is not technical knowledge or means, but that the Minister of Transport should take a decision, because he knows that we can carry on winter navigation on the St. Lawrence. What we need now is a decision from the minister.

I admit that he is caught between two groups—that of the maritimes and that of Quebec, that is the ports along the St. Lawrence—but progress means opening up navigation as far as possible inland. Once there is winter navigation up to Montreal, it will not be many years before there is navigation along the St. Lawrence seaway as far as Toronto, and then, the head of great lakes. Progress demands that the channels of communication be opened as far as possible.

The solution now lies in the decision the minister will reach. Is he willing to decide to keep the St. Lawrence open to winter navigation, not just so-so, or half way, but formally?

It will be remembered that last January, ships were trapped in the ice. Navigation was closed down for almost a month. Some will tell me that ice jams are caused by the cold but the real reason is that the minister who is responsible for keeping the channel open did not do so, when he should have.

Here is an article by an expert on winter navigation on the St. Lawrence, Mr. Denis Masse, the maritime correspondent for La Presse who wrote this on January 23 and I quote:

> In the city's shipping circles, it is said that the department could have prevented those ice jams by keeping the biggest and the most powerful ice-breaker in operation between Montreal and Quebec City. It is remembered that the d'Iberville was on patrol in the Saguenay and that the John A. Macdonald was in the gulf before the ice jams built up between Montreal and Quebec City.
> Past experience has shown also for quite some time that the ice jams which are never easy to break up build up in January. Although it is true that the ice jams formed earlier than usual this year, it remains that the situation should not have come as a surprise to anyone.
> As early as January 9, the air survey of the ice showed the possibility of ice jams in the narrow sections of the river. Then, what were the icebreakers doing that same day? The John A. Macdonald and the Simon Fraser stayed in Quebec City and the Montcalm alone went out for a routine trip. Shipping was at a standstill the next day.

Mr. Chairman, several of those ice-breakers have an helicopter on board. Last winter, before the famous ice jams which were responsible for the floods and the closing of the channel built up, the helicopter pilots from the ice-breakers had warned the authorities of the Department of Transport in Quebec city on January 7, 8 and 9, 1968, that ice jams were building up near the Quebec bridge and a little further upstream. Department of Transport authorities took no notice of that. Why? Because they were ordered not to prevent ice jams but to break them up after they have formed. The ice-breakers did not move, even if Department of Transport authorities in Quebec city were well aware, following reports made by the pilots of their helicopters which were watching the situation, that ice jams were forming at the Quebec bridge and upstream as far as Trois-Rivières—and that for three days. On the 9th, the day before the ice jams formed, despite the repeated warnings of the officials in the helicopters, two of the three ice-breakers in service at Quebec city remained alongside the wharf, and the third made only a routine trip, as reported by Mr. Denis Masse, maritime reporter for La Presse.

The mistake of the Department of Transport results from the order being given not to prevent ice-jams but to break them up after they have formed. If, as soon as the ice jams started building up, on January 6, 7, 8 and 9, the ice-breakers had begun their work, then the ice jams would not have formed and navigation on the St. Lawrence could have continued as usual in January. But after ice jams have formed, if there is a delay, whatever it is, they thicken; that is why on January 15 and 16, they had reached a thickness of 30 to 40 feet; ice-breakers in the maritimes had to be summoned then to help break them. But even if there were as many as 9 ice-breakers at a given time, due to the thickness of the ice, it took about ten days to break the jams, and navigation was closed for 26 days.

The main problem is not that the ice-breakers are unable to break the ice jams, but that they wait until the ice jams have built up and are too thick. Ice-breakers should be constantly kept in service, from the beginning of the winter, to prevent any accumulation of ice in the bends of the river and at the most narrow stretches. Today, with the equipment at its disposal, the Department of Transport can do it. But, since he is the authority in that field, the Minister of Transport will have to assume his responsibilities—a thing his predecessors avoided doing the past 8 or 9 years—and decide once for all that ice-breakers are not merely there to break up ice jams, but to prevent them. If ice-breakers were working continuously, 4 or 5 or them would be sufficient to prevent ice-jams from developing and the St. Lawrence could remain open up to Montreal all year round.

Mr. Chairman, it is as simple as that. All we need is a decision from the minister.

The minister told us this winter that he was studying the matter and that temporary islands were being tried in lac Saint-Pierre. But that is not the place where the worst ice jams developed last year and, moreover, it is not because of these that navigation was closed for 26 days. It was due to the ice jams which developed between Quebec and Trois-Rivières, and the reason why the river between Quebec and Trois-Rivières was so solidly jammed up is that the ice-breakers had waited too long before starting to do their job.

I do not want to put the blame on the captains of the ice-breakers, for all they did was to obey the orders they received from the department, that is to say break the ice-jams when they have formed, and not prevent them when they are forming. In view, Mr. Chairman, the minister should now announce in person the clear and definite policy of his department. What decisions have been taken by the Department of Transport with respect to winter navigation on the St. Lawrence? Does the minister intend to maintain the status quo, as did his predecessor, Mr. Pickersgill, that is to say do nothing more and nothing less? Does the present Minister of Transport really intend to take the decisions that must be taken in order that the channel may be kept open all year round? And when I speak of taking the decisions that must be taken, Mr. Chairman, I do not mean adding a large number of ice-breakers to those now in existence.

The studies made by Professor Michel Brochu of the École des hautes études commerciales of Montreal have shown that there were enough ice-breakers now to maintain open navigation all year round, but on condition that they do their work and that they constantly be at the ready to prevent ice-jams. The department has all the equipment needed, especially since other ice-breakers are to be added to the number already at its disposal. One of them, the Louis Saint-Laurent, I think, is practically finished, and my colleague the hon. member for Trois-Rivières (Mr. Mongrain) tells me that another one, the Tracy, will also be put into operation soon. So that if two ice-breakers are added to those already in service, this will make an amply sufficient fleet, as long as the ships are put to work. But at the present time, they spend most of their time at the docks. This is just as costly, for when an ice-breaker is idle in its home port, it has to keep its engines running in order to maintain heat inside the vessel.

The quantity of oil burned to keep the engines running is just about the same as if the ice-breakers were operating. Moreover, a full-time crew has to be maintained aboard. The employees have to be fed, accommodated and so on. Keeping an ice-breaker in its home port costs just as much as letting it run between Quebec and Trois-Rivières, between Trois-Rivières and Sorel or between Sorel and Montreal. That would not increase the expenses.

What we are asking for is simply a decision on the part of the Department of Transport, to the effect that the river must be open the year round. Should such a decision be made, one captain and the crew members of those ice-breakers assure me that they are able to keep the channel open the year round. Let them be free to keep the channel open and they will feel in honour bound to keep it open all year round and see to it that it is never ice-bound.

Mr. Chairman, I have been told by captains and crew members of icebreakers that they would be able and happy to keep it open. But nowadays, they are not put to work. They are only instructed to leave their home port when ice-jams are already formed and their work is then much harder, because once ice-jams are formed, the ice thickens and it takes several days to break them up.

Therefore, I ask the Minister of Transport not to increase expenditures, as mentioned earlier, but to take a definite stand this evening with regard to that very important problem, not only for Quebec, because the minister, who is from Toronto, must be well aware that once it is demonstrated that the channel can be kept open as far as Montreal, and that will be possible as early as next year, the same efforts could be made in future years to keep the seaway open as far as Toronto. Then, Toronto will also benefit from it. The Minister of Transport should keep that in mind. Not only St. Lawrence ports, but also those along the seaway, and as far as the lakehead, will benefit from it.

What a asset it would be to have such an inland seaway reaching almost to the heart of the continent and serving its largest industrial cities.

Under the circumstances, Mr. Chairman, I think Canada should no longer oppose progress. If special maritime subsidies are required in order to help these towns develop according to their situation and natural resources, I have no objection. On the contrary, I am in favour of these subsidies. But I do not think areas along the St. Lawrence or the St. Lawrence seaway should be prevented from developing. There can only be progress if it exists in all regions.

In the light of these arguments, Mr. Chairman, I would ask the hon. Minister of Transport to tell us—and he must have expected this—what is the definite policy of the Department of Transport concerning the opening of the St. Lawrence river to year-round navigation? I hope the minister is able to give us an answer tonight, and I would like him to give it now.

Mr. Mongrain: Mr. Chairman, this afternoon I called the minister's attention to damage suffered in the Trois-Rivières area last winter due to floods resulting in fact from the ice-jams which the hon. member for Lapointe (Mr. Grégoire) mentioned earlier and which were quite unusual, I admit.

The minister gave me an answer and I appreciate it, but I must tell him that I cannot accept it as it is and for very good reasons.

The minister offered to send me the report he mentioned. I have received it from his department and I thank him for it.

I read it very attentively several times. Unfortunately, I find many weak spots in it. First of all, I see that it was prepared by his officials who seem to hold the injured parties responsible for the negligence I deplored this afternoon—and for which I asked the government to pay compensation. Therefore, this should be an unsatisfactory report which should be revised by disinterested people outside the department.

Second, if, as the hon. member for Lapointe has been saying for years every time he criticizes the government for not keeping the St. Lawrence open in wintertime as it should, the government is really doing all it can, if it has the necessary equipment and assumes the responsibility for preventing ice-jams, then the government also has the moral obligation to compensate those who have suffered from the fact that winter navigation has not been possible at all times.

There is talk of acts of God which are not the responsibility of the government. I realize that the government can do nothing to prevent an earthquake, for example. I understand that if a hurricane destroys a section of a city or part of a county, or if there is a great tidal wave, there is nothing the government can do. I understand also—if that is true—that the government has everything it needs to maintain navigation on the St. Lawrence, to prevent ice-jams. Let them assume their responsibilities and if they are unable to do so, let them compensate people who invested large amounts along the St. Lawrence because they were told that there would be no more floods as there used to be 75 or 100 years ago, since the government was keeping the St. Lawrence open.

I do not agree with the hon. member for Lapointe when he says that the responsible people, like ship captains and area superintendents may not be at fault since they await orders. I cannot believe that it is proof of intelligence to interpret the department's orders so strictly as to wait until ice-jams are so thick that there is no way to break them. It strikes me that a most obtuse interpretation is given to the instructions of the department when he says that the icebreakers are there to prevent ice-jams from forming. There, as in other fields, the best defense is still attack. If the instructions of the department are poorly interpreted, it is up to the department to clarify them.

And now, I come back to the policy I asked the hon. minister, this afternoon, to kindly adopt, because I maintain it is the responsibility of the government to offer compensation, at least to some extent and in some serious cases. I maintain that the report the hon. minister mentioned a while ago is incomplete, inaccurate, and even tendencious. I should not want to embarrass him during his present campaign, which is important, but I warn him, as courteously as possible, that if he comes out victorious in his campaign—and even if he is still Minister of Transports—I shall go knocking at his door to refute some of the allegations contained in that report.

I will also go and knock on his door so that the people who have been so seriously wronged as a result of what I call neglect or lack of intelligence on the part of those who were supposed to interpret the instructions of the department, may get a compensation. Besides, if it is more serious than that, if the department was not clear enough in its explanations, then we shall know, because it must be written somewhere. But I say that a basic justice is required. Some poor people have been the victims of serious damage and, under the circumstances, it is the responsibility of the government to give them a compensation to a certain extent, or at least to study objectively the merits of their claims, in order to see whether or not they are justified.

Once again, I am sorry, but I cannot accept the answer given by the hon. minister. I shall not press the point any further tonight, because I should like to give him the opportunity to carry on his campaign in all peace of mind. But I warn him that as soon as it is all over, I shall make a fresh effort, and I will not be the only member to do so, because we already had the opportunity to talk about this and to examine closely the claims which have been presented.

[English]

Mr. Barnett: I can agree with the hon. member for Trois-Rivières that, in case the minister should one day find himself in another position, this may be a good opportunity to remind him of the unfinished business he has in front of him in his present capacity. One of the matters which I note comes under this item is the operation and maintenance of the Canadian Coast Guard service.

I want to remind the hon. gentleman that this is a matter of great concern on the west coast of Canada as a result of the announced intention to delay the construction of certain larger coast guard vessels. Many people had been looking forward to seeing these vessels in operation at a relatively early date. I am sure the minister has by now become fully aware of the generally accepted view on the Pacific coast, that while the present type may be suitable for some purposes they are not adequate to deal with the conditions which can be expected from time to time in the open Pacific.

When it was announced that plans were in preparation to develop larger and more adequate vessels for this work, a great deal of pleasure was expressed by those affected. Some of my hon. friends from areas where many people earn their livelihoods directly or indirectly from shipbuilding have, quite properly, sought occasions in this house to draw attention to the effect the delay in this construction program is having upon employment in those areas.

I, as a member representing a constituency where coast guard services are a very necessary item, have tended to look at the matter from the other end of the picture, keeping in mind the need and requirement for improved facilities. The two things go together so far as I am concerned. Nonetheless I think that when we talk about our shipbuilding industry we have to keep in mind that ships, if they are going to be built, should be built to serve a useful and necessary purpose, and it is from this point of view that I want to make my representations to the minister.

I have been looking at the general pattern as I see it, and while I am concerned with the kind of announcement made in the house some time ago by the President of the Treasury Board, when he singled out these two particular items, two new ships on the west coast, as an example of things being pruned from the proposed spending estimates of various government departments, I see a development arising from that announcement.

If I read the picture correctly from the estimates as they have been presented to the house from time to time, this announcement by the President of the Treasury Board simply appears to be an accentuation of an already existing trend, because under the item of marine services for the construction and acquisition of buildings, works, land, vessels and other equipment, we find in the main estimates for 1966-67 the sum of $51,507,300 was allocated. In the main estimates for the current fiscal year we find the sum is $50,387,700, which is a drop of $1,119,600 in round figures from the previous fiscal year; and if we turn to the more recently tabled estimates forecasting the future we find that the figure for 1968-69 is $48,328,000, which is a further decline of $2,059,700 from the estimates for the current fiscal year.

There is no provision in these supplementary estimates for any expenditure under this particular heading, and so we find that in a period extending over three fiscal years there is a drop of over $3 million in this particular area of government spending. Yet at the same time we recognize a growing and increasingly urgent need for the provision of such facilities as were proposed in the construction of these larger coast vessels.

I think the minister owes the committee some explanation of what is happening in the marine services operation of his department. Are we starting on a trend that is going to take us steadily downhill in the provision of this kind of service? I do not know whether the minister has the particulars before him tonight, but I would remind him that, in addition to the proposal for larger coast guard vessels his predecessor in office informed me, by correspondence, of plans and proposals which the department had under consideration for the establishment of additional life boat stations on the west coast of Vancouver island, as well as on the northeast coast in the Queen Charlotte strait area. At that time I was hopeful that at last we were going to have developed a really adequate system of coast guard coverage by the provision of larger vessels and by the provision of these useful life boat stations in areas along the west coast where previously we had no such services.

The proposal respecting life boat stations was that in addition to the existing stations of Tofino and Bamfield along that coast of Vancouver island, which at one time was known as the graveyard of the Pacific, there would be established two additional life guard stations. I had argued for the establishment of three additional stations, but it was suggested to me that for the time being there should be one established somewhere south of cape Cook and another one somewhere north of cape Cook, and I was told that investigations were going on to determine the exact locations of these stations. It was also suggested that there was a requirement for this kind of facility in the Queen Charlotte strait area off the northeast coast of Vancouver island.

In examining the total spending program of the department I realize that this is a nationwide program, and that certain sections of the program may have been completed in other parts of the country. But when we are faced with the kind of announcement that was made by the President of the Treasury Board last November, one begins to wonder whether the Department of Transport, in the over-all spending planning of the government, is being permanently bled of the necessary funds to improve the efficiency of services that many Canadians feel are a proper responsibility of the government.

I would like the minister to give us some indication of where we are heading, with particular reference to the expansion of the coast guard service through the provision of these very necessary larger vessels on the west coast and, if he has the information available, I would like to know what is happening with regard to the planning of the additional life boat stations I have mentioned.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, if the minister is not going to answer the hon. member for Comox-Alberni I would like to refer to a matter in his department that is of more than passing interest to the people of York-Humber, and to British Columbia as well. Since we last discussed estimates concerning water navigation I have been informed, by reading a letter to a private individual in York-Humber, that the administration of the Navigable Waters Protection Act has been transferred from the Department of Public Works to the Department of Transport. I want to congratulate Canada on this move because I believe that now this act will be enforced with the proper intention under the Minister of Transport, something which it has not been for the past several years under the Minister of Public Works.

My interest in the Navigable Waters Protection Act has to do with the illegal filling of navigable waters and with the inaction of the cabinet in enforcing the regulations. I now believe that under the Department of Transport we will get action on this matter in Toronto, and may I say that I believe the same situation is developing in British Columbia.

I am not a lawyer and I know that the Minister of Transport is not a lawyer. But the Minister of Public Works is, and in the past, when I raised objection to the fact that the provisions of the Navigable Waters Protection Act were not being enforced, I was given learned lectures by the Minister of Public Works as to what is legal and what is not legal. Mr. Chairman, I have had better lectures from better lawyers, including my brother-in-law, who for many years was deputy attorney general of Ontario, and who has forgotten more about that act than the Minister of Public Works will ever know.

The reason I refer to this act now is because of the lessons that the Minister of Public Works endeavoured to give me, a mere layman. He drew my attention to the legal nicety that the beds of rivers and the beds of lakes are in the jurisdiction of the provinces, and that the beds of the lakes and the beds of the rivers being in the jurisdiction of the provinces, when the provinces granted a patent on a water lot the federal government had no authority over such lots —which is 100 per cent wrong, but that was the lecture.

This is interesting, because in the borough of Etobicoke it is possible for real estate developers to pour all the land they want on to water lots in lake Ontario,—as the Minister of Public Works says, because he does not enforce the Navigable Waters Protection Act. Precedents are being established for the province of British Columbia, which may in time bring tears to the eyes of the federal government. In the last few months we have had a statement from the Supreme Court of Canada, after a reference from the federal government to the Supreme Court concerning whether or not offshore mineral rights belong to the federal government or the province.

Certainly it was a victory for the federal government when the Supreme Court ruled that the mineral rights off our shores belong to the federal government and not to the province of British Columbia.

If the province of British Columbia will take the lesson the Minister of Public Works has been giving me for nothing they will realize that all they have to do, since they have control over the water lots and the beds of the coastal waters, is issue patented water lots to themselves, and then they can fill in the patented water lots as far out as they want and start to mine because, according to the Minister of Public Works, the beds of a lake and of coastal waters belong to the province, and they can issue patented lots. They can go as far out as the sovereignty of the province extends. Now we have the Roberts Bank proposition in British Columbia, where the premier of British Columbia wishes to develop a port. Normally this would be considered to be under the jurisdiction of the federal government under the Navigable Waters Protection Act, but Wacky Bennett can go ahead and give himself all the land he wants off the coast of British Columbia, if he grants water lots to himself.

Very dangerous precedents are being set up by the federal government in not enforcing the Navigable Waters Protection Act in the borough of Etobicoke, in the riding I represent. The Minister of Transport is a Toronto man. He knows Toronto well and I believe he knows the waterfront well. Surely with an able man like the Minister of Transport we will be able to have a halt placed on the illegal filling of lake Ontario. Someone may say that this is a small matter involving York-Humber. It is not a small matter when it establishes a precedent for off-shore mineral rights. If a province wishes to provide patented water lots to themselves and then mine them, what is to stop them? Or if the province of British Columbia wishes to build a great harbour off the coast of British Columbia south of Vancouver, they need only to grant themselves patented water lots and then they would have control because the Minister of Public Works did not enforce the Navigable Waters Protection Act when it was in his jurisdiction. Patented lots come within provincial jurisdiction and the province can grant these to themselves.

I would ask the Minister of Transport to please consider enforcing the Navigable Waters Protection Act by declaring as national park land the illegal land that has been filled in on the north shore of lake Ontario in the borough of Etobicoke in metropolitan Toronto. This land is worth anywhere from $800,000 to $1 million an acre. If we have an uncooperative cabinet minister who is not going to enforce the Navigable Waters Protection Act, then we will soon have a lot of land in the heart of metropolitan Toronto worth $1 million an acre. If the cabinet is not willing to enforce the Navigable Waters Protection Act under the Minister of Public Works I believe the Minister of Transport will enforce it. If the cabinet is unwilling to enforce the act in the borough of Etobicoke, surely they can realize the danger of the precedent they are setting because lake Ontario is an international body of water.

There are dangerous precedents being established which I believe will only be avoided if the Department of Transport will start to enforce this act and see that the illegal fill that has been placed on the north shore of lake Ontario between the Humber river and Etobicoke creek, is declared to be national park land. By so declaring it they would stop the land developers putting acreage into the public waters of lake Ontario. I ask that the Minister of Transport give this his early consideration, after the leadership competition has been decided, and that he pay a visit to Toronto. I know where to look and I would be glad to accompany him along the lake shore of York-Humber and the section between there and Etobicoke creek.

Mr. Schreyer: Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. member for York-Humber whether many of these patented water lots which have been filled in have had commercial development on them.

Mr. Cowan: In answer to the hon. member for Springfield may I say that in the five years I have been talking about the patented water lots and casting aspersions on their title no one has as yet dared to proceed with commercial development on them. I will not live forever, although I presume I might be re-elected. However, the Minister of Transport, being a young man and a healthy specimen I would hope will survive me and would do something about this. He is engaged in a scrap right now. If he does not come out the winner, at least the others will know they have been in a fight.

While I am on my feet there is another matter which may not exactly come under the heading of vote 5c. It is, however, a matter which I should like to bring to the attention of the minister. I have in my hand a letter from the Bell Telephone Company of Canada written and signed by a vice president. During the last several months, each month I have been receiving a bill from the Bell Telephone Company of Canada which has been quite amusing to me. It is the only type of bill—I have received five—I have ever received that shows me owing zero.

I was interested when I received a bill from the Bell Telephone Company with five cents postage on it stating that I owed nothing. It came from Montreal. The following month I got a bill showing I owed nothing and there was postage on the envelope. Then I had a third, a fourth and a fifth. The fourth one came with a four cent stamp and I have referred the matter to the Postmaster General. He is looking into it. I wrote to the Bell Telephone Company asking why they send invoices to people who do not owe anything. When I was in active business we saved our money by not sending out bills to people who did not owe us anything. I have a letter here signed by a vice president. The minister will be interested in this paragraph:

> When this machine method of government irregular billing was arranged with the Administrative Telecommunications Agency of the Department of Transport it was mutually agreed that "nil" accounts would be rendered to inform members monthly that no long distance calls were made and that there was no balance outstanding.

I should like to ask the minister whether the administrative telecommunications agency of the Department of Transport has such a low opinion of the mental processes of the members of parliament that it feels they must be notified each month that they do not owe an account, so that they will be able to discover that they do not owe an account.

Of all the things I have read, this is certainly one of the most entertaining I have seen for a long time. It states:

> —it was mutually agreed that "nil" accounts would be rendered to inform members monthly that no long distance calls were made and that there was no balance outstanding.

I don't know why the Chateau Champlain in Montreal, the Nova Scotian hotel in Halifax or the Fort Garry hotel in Winnipeg do not write me monthly to tell me that I do not owe them anything. There are certainly enough people who write when one does owe something. In any event the Department of Transport has asked the Bell Telephone Company to send out an account each month to 265 members of parliament to inform them that no long distance calls were made and that there is no account outstanding. This seems to me to border on the ridiculous. Surely this can be corrected.

Mr. Hellyer: Before this vote carries, Mr. Chairman, I should like to say that so far as the question about fill is concerned, I will be glad to look into this matter. I remember hearing about this at an earlier stage when my hon. friend raised the matter.

I really cannot say why nil accounts are rendered by the telephone company, but I shall try to determine whether there is any reason for this, other than what my hon. friend has suggested.

Having regard to the question raised by the hon. member for Comox-Alberni, if he looks at page 514 of the estimates for 1968-69 he will find that although the amount being voted is reduced from $52.9 million to $50.4 million for marine services, in the text of the vote the amount given is $60,524,900. This shows a very substantial increase of about $10 million over the previous year. The reason for this seeming discrepancy is related to the difference in accounting method. The $50 million required for 1968-69 is the net figure after deducting revenues collected for services rendered, whereas the previous figure of $52 million was a gross figure. The amount of money being provided is substantially increased.

The hon. member also asks about life boats, and I am pleased to inform him that the life boat program is continuing, but the location of the stations has not yet been finally settled.

Mr. Barnett: While the minister is on this coast guard question regarding the west coast, perhaps he could say something about plans for larger coast guard vessels?

Mr. Hellyer: There is no immediate plan for the restoration of the program for larger boats. As my hon. friend knows, this was cut because of the necessity to effect economies. I think he is in agreement with us, that economies have to be made. As a matter of fact, I believe he was one of the members who voted against the recent increase in taxes, so he must have thought at that time that some reduction in expenditures was highly desirable. He will have to at least share the responsibility with other members of this house for the elimination of this program. You just cannot have it both ways. You cannot have more marine services, and less expenditures with consequently lower taxes. Things just do not work that way, and I am sure the hon. member would be the first to admit that.

Mr. Barnett: Does the minister not recall that the proposed tax increase and the cut in respect of coast guard vessels were announced simultaneously, or in close sequence, by the government? How can he suggest that my vote against the tax proposal was a vote against larger coast guard vessels?

Mr. Hellyer: I do not think the hon. member can accept responsibility for one and avoid responsibility for the other. If he is going to have a reduction in expenditures, then cuts have to be made somewhere. This was one of the items which had to be cut. I know my hon. friend regrets this, as much as many other people, but there was not sufficient money available to provide all the services demanded in all parts of the country.

Mr. Barnett: Why don't you ask me to support a tax measure which would provide for construction of vessels, and see what happens?

Mr. Hellyer: If my hon. friend would agree to vote for the next tax measure, perhaps this would reinforce his suggestion that we should provide additional services.

Having regard to the question of navigation on the St. Lawrence, I think if my friend will refer back to an earlier discussion in the house he will discover that I indicated it was the policy of the government to keep the river open from the beginning of freeze-up. There is no policy to wait; rather the directive is to open the channel at the earliest possible date and keep it open in so far as is possible during the winter, to allow the ice to flow out to sea. It was also pointed out that it is better from a mechanical standpoint not to start this until an ice cover forms. If you break up the ice too soon, a lot of needle ice forms. This is likely to increase jamming, making it more difficult to keep the channel open. I have looked at this situation and cannot find any discrepancies in the information given me by my departmental officials. If hon. members have some information which I do not have, then I would be pleased to look at it. If I find the information to be sound I will ask for another investigation. In the meantime I cannot see that an investigation involving a further expenditure of public funds is warranted. I cannot do this just on the basis of hearsay.

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Chairman, there is one other matter about which I should like to question the minister. He will recall that from time to time I have raised questions regarding action flowing from the report on small vessels harbour administration presented to the department by Dr. Tom How. On the most recent occasion when I asked the minister about this report he indicated he would consider the idea of making at least part of that report public. I am sure the minister is as aware as I am of the great desire on the part of commercial fishermen and others on the west coast that there be some early conclusion to the present unsatisfactory state of affairs as far as administration of small vessels harbours is concerned, with particular reference to the present method of levying side wharfage charges.

The minister is probably aware that there exists what one might almost describe as a state of incipient revolution on the part of commercial fishermen and others in this connection. This is certainly true in areas of my constituency, and from what I read in the press it is true in the large centres of the neighbouring constituency of Coast-Capilano. I would be very surprised if the minister has not heard something about this from his colleague, the hon. member for Coast-Capilano. While there is a great deal of unhappiness about this, there is also a genuine desire not only on the part of vessel owners but also on the part of local administrative bodies, such as town councils, to assist in finding a constructive solution to what is readily agreed to be an unsatisfactory situation at this time.

I think it would be useful if the minister could expand somewhat on the statements he has made very briefly in reply to questions raised on orders of the day. If he could give us some indication as to what the department has in mind, or at least in what general direction it is thinking of moving, I think this would serve to give some hope to those who are faced with an unhappy situation in the coming year that perhaps things will get better in the near future. What can the minister tell us at this point about the progress that is being made, and in particular what information on this whole question can he make public now, because until now he has not been prepared to do so?

Mr. Hellyer: As my hon. friend knows, this is a very complex subject on which there is a very thorough report. There are a number of recommendations involving substantial expenditures. I know from my hon. friend's action earlier that he does not wish to propose any additional expenditures at this time. Therefore he will realize that any further works, regardless of how desirable they may be, will have to be postponed, at least temporarily.

I have given some consideration to publishing part of the report, and I still have this under consideration. However, it is the feeling of some of my officials at least that it would require a very large amount of work, and that the results would not justify the expenditure involved. However, at the moment this is not a closed matter. It is being considered interdepartmentally, and I hope to receive some recommendations within a few months on which a policy could be based, assuming that revenues were available at some future time in order to implement policy changes which might be adopted by the government.

Mr. Barnett: The minister keeps harping on revenues being available. I think perhaps in return I should remind him that while there are situations when additional revenues are required, there are also situations when better use could be made of existing revenue. I do not have detailed figures before me, but I think if he looks back he will find that either my colleague, the hon. member for Skeena, or I took pains to put on the record the situation about revenues from mortgage charges accruing at the present time. If my memory serves me correctly, under the present system something like 80 per cent or 90 per cent of the total revenue collected is spent in the cost of collecting it. I suggest to the minister that this is not a very effective or efficient way of collecting revenue, and that it has been argued in this connection that it would be far better to have a system whereby the revenue collected could be put to some more useful purpose than simply to allow it to go into the pocket of the man who collects it.

Not only ministers of the crown are concerned about the effective use of collected money. I am being constantly surprised by the great concern of a great many ordinary citizens about matters of this kind. One of the key points worrying a lot of people is the very wasteful and inefficient method of carrying on this particular aspect of government service at the present time. I am hopeful that, while it may require some extra revenues, a more efficient arrangement would largely offset the revenues expended if the moneys paid by the users of the facility were put to some useful service. If the stated policy of his predecessor is the correct one, and if this is the policy base on which the present minister is planning to go forward—and he has given no indication of any alteration of this basic approach from that which was announced by his predecessor, particularly when the transportation bill was before us—then I suggest that not all of what is involved will require an additional vote of money, but rather a more effective use of revenues which may accrue from the operations themselves.

Mr. Hellyer: Mr. Chairman, I found this suggestion of my hon. friend sufficiently attractive to have passed it along for consideration. I think it is worth looking at.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I notice that the Minister of Transport (Mr. Hellyer) has replied to several questions that were put to him. Perhaps he could tell me whether he intends to reveal the policy of his department with regard to winter navigation?

[English]

Mr. Hellyer: Mr. Chairman, I answered that question a moment ago. I pointed out to my hon. friend that if he would go back to Hansard he would find that I said it was the policy of the department to keep the channel open from the very beginning of the freeze up.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I should like to ask the hon. Minister of Transport, since his department's policy is to keep the channel open during the winter months, whether he also intends to make the ice-breakers available to shipping, namely whether the ice-breakers will be there to help the ships that need them. Will the ice-breakers be on the spot to make sure that there is always an open channel? Will they also be given the responsibility of helping navigation?

[English]

Mr. Hellyer: As I have explained to my hon. friend on numerous occasions, when the channel is kept open it is made available for ships to use which have the proper reinforcement and which are strong enough to operate under ice conditions. Of course they still run some risk because under extreme conditions, such as those we sometimes encountered last winter, it is just impossible to keep the channel open by any means whatever.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I should like to direct another question to the hon. minister.

Could he also tell us whether the buoys and other signaling devices in the channel will be maintained? If the channel is to be kept open to shipping, at least up to Montreal, will the hon. minister maintain the buoys system all along the channel up to Montreal?

Before the hon. minister rises to give me an answer, I should like to ask him whether his department sent this year and intends to send next year a notice to all ships venturing into the harbour entrance to the effect that they are proceeding at their own risk and that the ice-breakers will not be there to help them or, on the contrary, whether the department and the icebreakers will do their best in order to facilitate navigation? We know that, in past years, notice was given to the effect that the channel was closed and that those who ventured there did so at their own risk. The notice also mentioned that ice-breakers were not there to help navigation.

Will the situation change in the years to come, now that the channel will be open and since it is the policy of the department beginning this year?

[English]

Mr. Hellyer: Mr. Chairman, I will take this question as notice and perhaps reply to it when my main estimates are being considered. I think there is a certain amount of risk involved in winter navigation on the river, and there always will be, regardless of the fact that icebreakers are available to the channel, which make it possible for ships to operate when conditions permit. It must be taken into account that this river is subject to extreme conditions from time to time, when there is no guarantee that, even with the best use of existing icebreaking facilities, they would be adequate to meet the needs of shipping at all times. There are some limitations imposed under extreme conditions such as those we had this year.

• (9:20 p.m.)

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I do not intend to delay the debate, because, I realize that the minister has set his heart on it; I merely want to obtain additional information on my previous question.

The minister tells me that when he will take the matter under consideration, he will study the possibility of the altering the old notice given in remote posts on the St. Lawrence, to the boats venturing in the St. Lawrence and stating that they were doing so at their own risk. I admit that there was a certain risk, because it was colder than in the summer.

But the notice appearing in the light-houses and wireless beacons at the entrance of the St. Lawrence mentioned that the icebreakers were not there to help ships, but only to prevent floods and that ships could not rely on the assistance of ice-breakers.

Does that part of the notice which, according to the maritime insurance companies, was responsible for increasing drastically the cost of maritime insurances, will be changed to say that ice-breakers will help ships which enter the St. Lawrence, that is to say that they still will venture at their own risks, but at least they will get help from ice-breakers.

The difference between what I am asking the minister and the previous situation is clear. Would the minister give me an answer in this respect?

[English]

The Chairman: Shall vote 5c carry?

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I would have another question about a different subject—

Mr. Alkenbrack: Poor Canada!

Mr. Grégoire: —I know that it is during consideration of the estimates of the Department of Transport, that one must deal with those problems.

As regards pleasure craft, Mr. Chairman, I may have a few things to point out to the minister, for I am especially interested in that problem.

Here is the first. I once had the opportunity of travelling by water from Ottawa to Chicoutimi. It is a very nice trip; the St. Lawrence is magnificent and, the Saguenay tremendous: it is one of the most beautiful rivers in the world, and I strongly recommend the trip to those who have never sailed up the Saguenay. It is a most tremendous place! The Ottawa river, from Ottawa to Montreal, is also tremendous—except for the St. Lawrence seaway locks, about which I would like to say a few words later on.

But from Montreal to Quebec city, it is all very smooth sailing. It is true that when the wind drives billows on Lake St. Pierre, it is a bit rough, but just the same, a good pilot will take you through.

However, when you get beyond the island of Orleans, sometimes up to Tadoussac, the river is quite agitated and things are a little hard for pleasure craft. At any rate, those who take the risk consider themselves pretty good sailors and feel they have a rather good craft. Indeed, I took the risk myself, Mr. Chairman.

However, there are some things which could be improved. For example, boats leaving Quebec for Chicoutimi, before entering the Saguenay, have to make a detour towards what is known as the "spinning top". I see the hon. member for Saguenay (Mr. Blouin) knows what I am talking about. It is a lighthouse five miles off-shore, at Tadoussac, warning boats to keep away from the coast because of rocks and sandbanks over a distance of about 3 or 4 miles, which force them to make a detour some 5 miles off the coast.

From Quebec and even from Montreal up to around La Malbaie and even further, up to Cap-à-l'Aigle, there are signposts, luminous buoys and lighthouses which show the way very clearly. But approximately ten miles before reaching the mouth of the Saguenay river, ten miles before reaching the "top", there are no longer any buoys, beacons or signals. Now, if it is the least bit foggy and it is necessary to bear off from the shore, then I know of many captains of small pleasure-boats who, like myself, had to look for a long time—if the visibility is not more than three or four miles—for that famous "top", even though it stands out very high over the water. It can become dangerous, and the boat can be driven off its course, precisely because one has to steer clear of the shore.

Could the minister take this matter under consideration and have the required study conducted in order to add two or three light buoys perhaps which would show us the way to that large beacon located at the entrance of the Saguenay river? I can tell him that many skippers or owners of pleasure craft find it difficult in foggy or rainy weather or in a storm to find that famous light house which is linked to the bottom of the sea, strongly anchored and in fact, which stays there permanently.

The minister might consider that request to add two or three light buoys to help the pleasure craft which want to reach the Saguenay.

Still about pleasure craft, I know that sailing them has become one of the most popular sports or hobbies, and is attracting more and more people. We have become aware lately—I spoke earlier of the journey between Ottawa and Montreal or Quebec city—that there is something which is lagging and which renders the pleasure navigation very unpleasant. When we leave the Ottawa river come into Lake St. Louis to enter the St. Lawrence, we have to cross two locks in the St. Lawrence seaway.

I did that journey many times. The lock staff is very nice and give assistance to pleasure boats. Of course, when there are 75, 80 or 100 pleasure boats in a lock, and 15 million gallons of water are turned out of the lock to enable the boats to get at a lower or higher level, the water eddies heavily. But, the personnel at the lock-gate is very kind and co-operate fully with those pleasure-boats. It happens however that the pleasure-boats are not the only ones to use the seaway. There are also—and it was mainly for them that it was built—ships from the Great Lakes, from Toronto going to Montreal, to Quebec, to the open sea or still further. It is obvious that those ships, without having priority, will go through before a simple pleasure-boat, as the personnel at the lock-gates will wait until there are many pleasure-boats to let them go through. That means that going through those two lock-gates may take sometimes six or eight hours. On the other hand when a whole party of pleasure-boats comes in at the same time, then they have precedence if their coming was made known beforehand, and the crossing will be a matter of a couple of hours.

But, there would be a way to cope with that. Before the building of the St. Lawrence seaway, there was the Lachine canal that enabled boats to go from Lake St. Louis to the St. Lawrence river. The Lachine canal is still there. It may not be able to absorb the shipping from the great lakes, but it could be used for the pleasure boats. It would be an attraction for the city of Montreal to see all those small pleasure boats use the Lachine canal to pass from the Ottawa river to the St. Lawrence river.

I wonder if the minister could not take this problem into consideration. I am not asking him to give me an answer tonight because he probably does not have all the data at hand, but he could have an investigation made which might prove advisable to keep the Lachine canal in use for the pleasure boats which will become increasingly numerous. It is a holiday activity which will develop as rapidly as all the others. Might it not be timely to make the necessary survey before the Lachine canal is completely blocked and we then have to get it back in working order for the owners of pleasure boats who might want to use it?

I therefore hope that the hon. minister will be willing to take this into consideration, because it might prove useful to a large part of the population. Some come from Ontario, from the great lakes, there are some from Quebec that go to Ontario and it would encourage the movement of small boats.

I therefore ask the hon. minister to take the matter into consideration, to have a study made of it and perhaps, when his next estimates come up, he can give me an answer on the problem I have just brought up.

[English]

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, we are engaged on a study of the supplementary estimates of the Department of Transport. I do not expect to be here tomorrow and I am not sure whether we will reach vote 75c tonight. Therefore I should like to ask some questions on that vote, which deals with a payment to the National Harbours Board to be applied in payment of the deficit expected to be incurred in the calendar year 1967 in the operation of the Jacques Cartier bridge, Montreal harbour. Tomorrow night I am speaking in Toronto on the subject of civic financing, when I shall be comparing the civic financing of Toronto and the civic financing of Montreal.

I have in my hand the report of the Auditor General to the House of Commons for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1967. At page 178 you will find this paragraph—

The Chairman: Order. Is the hon. member now referring to vote 75c?

Mr. Cowan: Yes. Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: In order for the hon. member to proceed with a discussion of that vote it would be necessary to stand vote 5c by unanimous consent and then get unanimous consent of the committee to proceed to vote 75c.

Mr. Hellyer: Mr. Chairman, I think we might carry the other items. This would put us in the position which would seem to meet the pleasure of the house.

Mr. Schreyer: Mr. Chairman, I agree to passing 5c but I want to make some comments on 15c.

Item agreed to.

[Mr. Grégoire.]

Railways and Steamships—

15c. Payments to the Canadian National Railway Company (hereinafter called the Company) upon applications approved by the Minister of Transport made by the Company to the Minister of Finance, to be applied by the Company in payment of the deficits, certified by the auditors of the Company, arising in the operations in the calendar year 1967 in respect of the following:

(i) Canadian National Railway system (subject to recovery therefrom of accountable advances made to the Company from the Consolidated Revenue Fund)

(ii) Ferry Services:

Newfoundland Ferry and Terminals;

Prince Edward Island Ferry and Terminals and Yarmouth, N.S.-Bar Harbour, Maine, U.S.A., $21,245,100.

Mr. Schreyer: Mr. Chairman, on this item—

Mr. Nowlan: Mr. Chairman, no one on this side has spoken this evening.

The Chairman: I understand the comment made by the hon. member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings, but I point out to him that the hon. member for Springfield had already given notice that he wished to refer to this item. I will see the hon. member later.

Mr. Schreyer: Mr. Chairman, this vote provides for the allocation of $21 million to the Canadian National Railway Company. I think this is the appropriate stage to ask the Minister of Transport whether he has yet come to any decision on the requests that have been relayed to him by myself, by some Senators, by the hon. member for Kenora-Rainy River and others asking him to study the allegations of a number of contractors involved in the construction of the Great Slave Lake railway. These contracting firms allege that the C.N.R. enforced the terms of the contract in a most unfair and onerous way.

It is over a year now since a request for an investigation into these allegations was made of the minister's predecessor. I note that on February 16 last an hon. senator was in communication with the present Minister of Transport, as was the hon. member for Kenora-Rainy River, asking that he refer the subject matter of the allegations of unfair treatment by the C.N.R. either to a Commons committee or to co-operate in having them reviewed and investigated by a Senate committee. Before I say any more, Mr. Chairman, I should like to ask the minister whether he will indicate if he has made a decision about these requests.

Mr. Hellyer: Mr. Chairman, I have not yet come to a conclusion on this matter. I hope to do so soon, but it may not be possible during the next two weeks.

Mr. Nowlan: Mr. Chairman, I thought there was some interest on the part of hon. members to pass these estimates tonight.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Nowlan: I thank my hon. friends across the way for giving me a send-off. Perhaps I will have to delay the estimates, because they were too loud. I did make an impulsive comment, Mr. Chairman, but no real reflection was intended on the Chair. I merely wanted to be recognized. I did want the committee to know that since eight o'clock tonight no member of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition had spoken on the estimates.

I do not intend to speak on any policy matter involved in the estimates; I merely want to ask one question about a specific project, the Digby-Saint John ferry. In order to expedite this matter would the minister undertake to make a statement about the present progress of the negotiations between the C.P.R. and the government? I realize the minister may not be able to do so tonight, but perhaps he would by the end of the week. We may not be here all week, but I would ask him to make his statement before he moves on to other pastures; and wherever he goes I wish him well.

I realize this matter may not interest members from the west, but certainly we in the east do not want to have to go through another mutation process, or a change of ministry, to find out how far the negotiations between the railway and the government have progressed. I am not going to blackmail the minister about this; we have had enough blackmail in this house during the past three or four days.

This project has been kicking around for some 20 years. I have before me some 23 extracts from Hansard on the matter, starting with the leader of the opposition in Nova Scotia, Mr. Regan—a former member for Halifax in this house. The minister's predecessor did admit that this ferry was an integral part of the transportation system of Canada.

It seems that every time we reach a certain point of agreement between the government and the C.P.R. an election occurs or there is a change in ministry, and this means a delay while the new minister acquaints himself with the background. However, would the minister make a clear and concise statement explaining where the negotiations have got to and what the present objections are. If he cannot make such a statement I will have to put some blunt questions to him.

I appreciate that negotiations are sometimes sensitive and delicate. However, it is time that the minister took the people of eastern Canada into his confidence. I understand from the clippings I have read of his speeches that the minister is espousing the new politics of the land by being frank and realistic. What I should like to know is how the negotiations are affected, if the company is taking one position and the government another. If the minister can answer that question I will say nothing more. In any event, I should like to ask a couple of questions later.

Mr. Hellyer: Mr. Chairman, my hon. friend has asked if I would undertake to make a statement within the next few days. My reply to that is that I should like to, but I am not in a position to guarantee that I shall be able to.

Negotiations have been going on for some time. They have reached the stage where only two points remain to be worked out. One of them, I am confident, can be worked out without much difficulty, but the second one is a little more difficult.

For obvious reasons I should be delighted if I could make a positive statement and have this question settled immediately. There would be some obvious advantages if that could be done, and I do not think my hon. friend needs to use too much imagination to know what the advantages would be for the people of New Brunswick as well as those of Digby-Annapolis-Kings, and others who are interested. But there is a course of responsibility to be followed, and that is to try to bring the project to a successful conclusion. Whether I can make the statement will depend on my assessment of whether that would be in the interests of a successful conclusion.

One thing I shall undertake for my hon. friend. In so far as the continuity of this question is concerned, I shall take a direct personal interest in it, so far as I am able to in the weeks ahead, to make sure that it comes to a successful conclusion. I am as anxious as he is to see that after all these years something happens and that we just do not continue debating the question. On the other hand I hope the hon. member will be generous and co-operative enough to realize that it might prejudice the situation if I undertook to do something which I did not feel later was in the best interest of those involved.

Mr. Nowlan: I appreciate the minister's partial statement. Regardless of his future capacity, and I know he will be busy in the next few weeks, I appreciate his personal interest in the matter. That certainly will help. I would appreciate it if he would consider this matter as a burr on his backside and be prompted to stand up and say in the committee tonight whether the two objections in question, or the two points in question, still have to be clarified. Incidentally, were those points raised by the Canadian Pacific Railway or by the government? The minister knows I know what the points in question are. Perhaps he could say a word about them.

Mr. Hellyer: They are raised by the railway, and the railway is asking for certain concessions in exchange for building a new ship and carrying on a service. I think they want greater concessions than have previously been indicated. The question, of course, is fair and reasonable in the light of all circumstances. That is the question to which the government is addressing itself at the present time.

Mr. Nowlan: I have another question to ask. Considering the minister's answer, is the Canadian Pacific Railway asking for any concession that has not been given to the Canadian National Railways, or will terms be negotiated that will affect the Canadian Pacific Railway and not affect the ferries run by the Canadian National Railways. Or is the government trying to resolve it by having the same rules apply to both bodies?

Mr. Hellyer: If my hon. friend were not a member of this house I might engage him to try to get for me the answer to that question. Unfortunately, because he is a member of parliament, he is barred from giving that kind of service to a government department. That of course is one of the things that is being examined and I cannot answer that question at the moment. Perhaps I shall be able to before the matter is resolved.

The Chairman: Shall vote 15c carry?

Mr. Schreyer: Mr. Chairman, a few minutes ago I asked the Minister of Transport whether he had decided to refer the subject matter of the Great Slave lake railway construction to an appropriate committee. He replied that unfortunately he could not do so yet, because the briefs involved were luminous and he had not had time to study them in sufficient detail. I do not want to be unfair, but I suggest that is not good enough. It is not good enough for the minister to say that he hopes to make a decision in about two weeks. That will take us to April 6, and who knows what the fate of the Minister of Transport will be? He might have a different portfolio.

An hon. Member: Or be the Prime Minister.

Mr. Schreyer: He might perhaps be that. The point is that it is more than a year since the complaint was directed to the Minister of Transport. I admit that originally it was directed to the minister's predecessor, Hon. J. W. Pickersgill. But the officers of the department have had ample opportunity to consider in depth the allegations and complaints made by the construction firms that were engaged in the construction of this railway.

Though the circumstances are complex I might summarize them for the minister. The majority of the 13 or 14 construction firms involved in the project lost heavily, half of them being forced into bankruptcy. If that had happened to only one or two one might say, "Well, it was a case of poor management, or of poor bidding." But when half the firms—seven firms involved—go into bankruptcy, it is safe to assume that there was something rotten in the state of Denmark and that the contract conditions must have been onerously enforced. Or perhaps the C.N.R. specifications were sloppy in the extreme and grossly inaccurate. Many elements could enter into the matter.

It is not as though our group, the hon. member for Kenora-Rainy River, or I, were asking for an adjudication of the claim; we are only asking the minister to submit this matter to an appropriate committee for investigation or to agree to co-operate with a Senate committee investigating the matter. Or, failing that, perhaps the minister might submit the matter to an inquiry. It could be a one-man inquiry commission, or something like that, and it could look into the alleged injustices that we are told prevailed during the time in question.

The minister, I understand, has been a minister of the crown since 1956 or 1957, and he must be familiar with the construction of the northern Ontario pipe line. In that matter we have a precedent for investigating claims by contractors which have worked for the crown or crown agencies. I have been informed that in seven instances with respect to the construction of that pipe line, contractors made additional claims, either because specifications as given in tendering were inaccurate or for other reasons. I might place on the record some of the firms which claimed, to show the minister that there is a precedent for the sort of investigation we ask for.

With respect to the construction of the northern Ontario pipe line, Mannix Company Limited submitted a claim for about $16,000 as additional compensation and eventually received, in settlement, about $6,600. Mattagami Construction Company Limited submitted an additional claim of about $27,900 and eventually received a settlement of about $17,900. Mannix Construction Company claimed for $972,000 and received $420,000 in settlement; Canadian Comstock claimed $96,969 and settlement was eventually obtained for $65,243; Dutton-Williams Brothers submitted a claim for $2,776,731 and a settlement with the crown was eventually reached at $692,496.

So there are precedents. I do not want to take up the time of the committee any longer just now in this connection. I do not wish to be unfair by suggesting that the minister has been derelict in his duties. On the other hand, I do not think the hon. gentleman is being quite fair when 14 months after a request has officially been made to his department he comes back to say he still needs more time. Who knows whether two weeks from now he will be in a position to reach any conclusion in connection with this request? I do wish he would be a little more fair.

Mr. Bower: Had the minister been more specific in answering the questions raised by the hon. member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings I might not have spoken on this item. However, either because he was unable to do so or because he thought it propitious not to do so, the minister did not make a very saisfactory response. I feel therefore I should bring up some points in connection with his department and the vote before us which are of interest to western Nova Scotia.

The hon. member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings and I represent the entire western end of the province of Nova Scotia, an area inhabited by some 175,000 people who have been grossly neglected as far as assistance in developing the economy is concerned. Such indices as I have been able to develop indicate that the average income in Nova Scotia as a whole is between 20 and 30 per cent below the national norm. In western Nova Scotia the average is 30 per cent below the provincial norm. So if there is any truth in all I have heard since I have been here in parliament, and in all I have read from the Economic Council of Canada and similar sources, we have a case which needs attention.

While I recognize that the government, having go itself into a most awful mess, must and should economize, I insist that these economies should be applied selectively. Take the case of an adult with an infant child. If for some reason or another the food for the pair had to be reduced by one pound a day, nothing could be more absurd than to take half a pound from the diet of the adult and half a pound from the diet of the infant. The child would die, even though the adult might survive. This, however, is the system which has been adopted in the estimates—a blanket cut—and it is absurd.

I am the first to recognize that the economy of western Nova Scotia will not be metamorphosed overnight. But I insist that things must be done in order that we do not fall further behind than we already are. The press of the area takes a similar views. A paper which favours the government carries the headline "Billions for others, little for us".

One of the biggest supports for our provincial economy, particularly in the western end, is tourism, and at present transport facilities are lacking. The hon. member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings mentioned the ferry across the bay of Fundy to Annapolis. I have a lively interest in this service, but there is another ferry service which runs from New England to Yarmouth. Last summer thousands of cars were turned back because they could not be accommodated; the tourists probably never did see Nova Scotia.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: It being ten o'clock, shall I rise and report certain resolutions and request leave to sit again at the next sitting of the house?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Pennell: I wonder whether there is any disposition on the part of the committee to conclude the estimates of the Department of Transport.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: It will be necessary for the Chair to report first.

Resolutions adopted in committee of supply this day reported and concurred in.

Supply—Transport

• (10:00 p.m.)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: When shall the committee have leave to sit again? Later this day or the next sitting of the house?

Mr. Pennell: Mr. Speaker, I again pose my question and ask is there a disposition on the part of the house to conclude the estimates of the Department of Transport tonight?

Mr. Douglas: Mr. Speaker, if there is unanimous consent I think it would be advisable to try to finish this minister's department and let him get away, but I think it should be understood it would be only this department.

Mr. Dinsdale: Mr. Speaker, I can assure the acting government house leader that we are quite willing to proceed on this basis.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I would be willing to sit for one hour.

Personally, I have two points to bring up. I shall attempt to do so very rapidly, if I get a good answer. If the house agrees to sit until eleven o'clock, I would be willing to agree to it. Still, if we do not get any replies it could last a long time. I am willing to put my ideas forward without all the arguments. A while ago, I put questions concerning winter navigation and I did not get any answer.

I would therefore suggest that we sit until eleven o'clock and, if the Solicitor General (Mr. Pennell) wants to set a one-hour limit, I should be willing to accept it.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. Do I understand that now there is general agreement that the house will sit until eleven o'clock but if the estimates of the Department of Transport are finished before that time no other estimates will be considered? Is this unanimously agreed?

Mr. Martin (Timmins): Mr. Speaker, there is one point that I would like to make. I have waited patiently tonight to raise a matter under these estimates, but so far I have been unable to catch the eye of the Chair. If I am unable to succeed by eleven o'clock I will still want to raise this matter. So long as it is understood that it is eleven o'clock or the finish of the estimates, whichever comes first, then there is no objection on my part.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: If we are not through by eleven o'clock, we will continue tomorrow.

[The Assistant Deputy Chairman.]

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is this agreed?

Mr. Pennell: Mr. Speaker, I just want to be clear so that there is no misunderstanding. The house will continue to eleven o'clock if the estimates of the Department of Transport are not passed, but it will rise if they are passed prior to eleven o'clock. At any rate, I wish to inform the house that it is proposed to call the estimates of the Department of National Health and Welfare first tomorrow.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Knowles: Perhaps there should be one other understanding, that since we are sitting late, the late show can be put off to another night.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it agreed that if the house sits until eleven the questions on the adjournment motion will be considered tomorrow?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

SUPPLY

The house in committee of supply, Mr. Tardif in the chair.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. House again in committee of supply, supplementary estimates of the Department of Transport. Shall item 15c carry?

DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORT

Railways and Steamships—

15c. Payments to the Canadian National Railway Company (hereinafter called the Company) upon applications approved by the Minister of Transport made by the Company to the Minister of Finance, to be applied by the Company in payment of the deficits, certified by the auditors of the Company, arising in the operations in the calendar year 1967 in respect of the following:

(i) Canadian National Railway system (subject to recovery therefrom of accountable advances made to the Company from the Consolidated Revenue Fund)

(ii) Ferry Services:

Newfoundland Ferry and Terminals;

Prince Edward Island Ferry and Terminals and Yarmouth, N.S.-Bar Harbor, Maine, U.S.A., $21,245,100.

Mr. Bower: Mr. Chairman, before the proceedings of the committee were interrupted a moment ago I had endeavoured to outline the serious situation that exists in the western part of Nova Scotia and the need for correcting it. As the case in point I was dealing with the ferry service to maximize the tourist industry of the area, and indeed of the whole of the province of Nova Scotia, of Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland, because Yarmouth is the point of entry from the United States to the maritime province so far as the ferries are concerned.

The ferry is inadequate at the present time. A year ago I raised with the minister of transport the matter of supplementary summer ferry service. Nothing whatever has been done about it. As I have mentioned, during the past summer potential tourists were turned away because of inadequate service across from New England—Bar Harbor specifically—to Yarmouth. Last summer was a relatively poor summer for Nova Scotia. Our normal increase in tourism did not occur. On the contrary, according to many accounts, it slipped backward due, some say, to the attractions at Expo and the fact that the overflow which we were going to get never occurred, apparently because by the time the people got through at La Ronde they did not have enough money to go to Nova Scotia. I do not know about that, but in any event we had a poor tourist season.

It is hoped—and it is very much needed—that there will be a large increase in tourism. I understand there is a possibility, which perhaps did not exist last summer, of obtaining a supplementary ship to run between Bar Harbor and Yarmouth. I brought this matter up with the minister.

We are due shortly to have a recess. It is necessary to have time in which to make preparations and arrangements for something of this nature. So before I go back to western Nova Scotia, to the complaints of disappointment and despair, I should like to know whether something is going to be done about this.

Speaking of the longer term situation, I should like to refer to the matter of the second New England ferry, so called, that would go from some point "X" in the United States to some point "Y" in Nova Scotia. That seems to have gone into a sort of suspended animation, although everybody in Nova Scotia, particularly western Nova Scotia, would like to know what if anything is being done in that regard. That is my sea issue. I have another, the air issue.

Yarmouth is an airport of entry from the United States. Some five years ago one of the runways at this airport was improved so that it would be able to handle up to date planes. However, the cross runway was not improved and therefore there was no effectual improvement, in so far as modernizing the facilities for the type of equipment that could come in there is concerned. I have learned now that there is a proposal to rebuild or improve the air terminal building. That indeed is putting the cart before the horse. I think perhaps we could make do somehow or other with the terminal building, but airplanes cannot be landed on a terminal building; there must be a cross runway.

I think it would have been far more sensible to have planned the fundamental thing, the two airstrips, rather than the lace on the drawers, the terminal building. These are matters of fundamental importance. The way tourism is being fomented in that area it is becoming possible for people from New York, Philadelphia, Wilmington and Boston to come down for week ends and leave their families there during the summer. This could provide a tremendous source of revenue. These people could buy old abandoned farms and build modern summer homes, provided the heads of the families could fly back and forth from their work on week ends. Their families could stay for the summer. That is the significance of the development of proper air services into Yarmouth.

I recognize that there is a big investment at the present Yarmouth airport location, and I do not suggest for one moment that it be changed. However, there should be a supplementary emergency airport. Time and again there is thick, heavy and low-lying overcast at the Yarmouth airport. Sometimes only 15 miles inland there is good landing weather. I am not referring to a large fancy airport, but rather just a place where planes could land. Customs facilities could easily be set up at such a location.

There is a site about 15 or 20 miles inland which would be ideal for this purpose. These are the kinds of things which should be done in an area of fragile economy. People down in Nova Scotia read about the huge deficits and the amounts being spent on national arts centres and other things. They are not against this, but they feel their economic situation should be considered in the scheme of things. Some modest investment of the type I have suggested would make all the difference to western Nova Scotia. Perhaps it could then be something other than an abandoned corner of that province.

Mr. Martin (Timmins): Mr. Chairman, I am a little bit disappointed that the minister had to leave the chamber before I raised this point.

Mr. Byrne: He will be returning in a moment.

Mr. Martin (Timmins): Perhaps he will get back when I have finished. The problem I have in mind relates partly to vote 15c and partly to vote 30c. They are so closely intertwined that perhaps I might be allowed to raise the problem under this item, so that I will not have to shuffle from one item to the other. This is not a new problem. I can recall raising it when Hon. Leon Balcer was minister of transport. That is how long it has existed, and that is how long this unfair situation has continued.

When I was first elected to this house the C.N.R. provided a pretty fair service from Timmins down toward Ottawa and Montreal. During the first couple of years I was a member of parliament, I could get a berth on a sleeper car at Timmins and come down on the O.N.R., which was hooked up by the C.N.R. and brought to Ottawa. After a few years this service was curtailed and I had to go down to Swastika, the next division point, where the O.N.R. swings north up to Moosonee. Then the years went by and you had to go down as far as Englehart before you could get sleeping accommodation on the C.N.R. A year or two later you had to go down to North Bay. At that time your sleeping car would be sitting on the siding and you could climb aboard and go to sleep. The western train coming through would pick you up and take you on through to Ottawa.

Finally, for some years now, there has been no accommodation whatsoever on this train. This is true of the rail service in the area that I represent, as well as in other constituencies such as that of the hon. member for Cochrane, part of the constituency represented by the Prime Minister and two or three other constituencies the focal point of which is the Timmins region, which is serviced by this railway.

Steadily over the years the railway service in this area has deteriorated. If you want to travel by train from the Timmins area to Ottawa or Montreal you are faced with one of two options. As I said before, you can go to North Bay and land there in the wee hours of the morning, about one o'clock or 1.30 a.m., and wait in a very unfriendly and cold station until the western train comes through at two, three or four o'clock in the morning, depending on how late it is, and then board a sort of semi freight train—there is a coach on it but it has neither a diner nor a sleeper. This is not very good accommodation, as I am sure all hon. members and the minister would agree. The other option is to drive over a very crooked and hilly road some 70 miles southwest of Timmins to the main line at Foleyet.

There is no way in which one can find out whether the train is on time or whether it is late. In fact, the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands will recall the time when I drove him at breakneck pace, but when we arrived at the station on time we found that the train had left early. My colleague had to cancel appointments and make other travel arrangements the next day. When one tries to find out whether the train is on time, he is told to call Winnipeg; but it is one heck of a long distance from Winnipeg to Foleyet and even though the train may be on time in Winnipeg it could be either late or early in Foleyet. This is the kind of service that is provided in this area.

Of course we have air service. As I said, this problem not only relates to this vote but also relates to vote 30c. We have a very good air service, depending on one's destination. There is an excellent service from Timmins to Toronto providing three flights a day, one of them direct. The fare is very reasonable, at $54 for a return trip between Timmins and Toronto. If the minister wished to check the statistics regarding the number of passengers carried on this route he would find it is a well patronized route and compares favourably with any service across the country.

However, there is one interesting point which I have raised with various ministers of finance dating back to Hon. Leon Balcer. I have carried on a war with the president of Air Canada, and if the minister would like to see my file I would be glad to supply it to him. The distance in road miles from Timmins to Ottawa is 12 miles longer than from Timmins to Toronto. So far as air miles are concerned, there is very little difference.

However, the difference in fares is another matter. As I mentioned before, the fare from Timmins to Toronto costs $54, but from Timmins to Ottawa it costs $92. The reason for this is that Air Canada, in its wisdom, instead of flying its passengers Timmins-North Bay-Ottawa, flies them via Toronto. That is their business, as I have told the president of Air Canada. However when they start charging us for the extra route, that is our business, the business of the people in the north country. This matter has been neglected year after year and by minister after minister. I think it is time something was done about it.

I recall when I first raised this matter with Air Canada the excuse was that in the early days when the Timmins airport was first opened they tried this route, but it was not a paying proposition. When I pointed out that air travel of 10 or 12 years ago and air travel today are two different things altogether, they had another excuse. A number of people are air conscious today, and a number of them have speeded up their schedules so that they need air service. The congestion on the highways is such that it is not safe to undertake a long trip because you don't know whether you are going to get there or get back. These are factors which should be considered now.

When we beat them down with that argument, they raised another one. Air Canada said they had kept a record of the number of passengers using this route over a six month period, and that the number did not warrant the flight. My reply was: Of course, not; when you are charging them double, why do you expect they will fly? I am still getting answers to these questions.

I am sure hon. members recall that not long ago I received a lot of publicity through the Thomson newspapers across the country, through the courtesy of their parliamentary correspondent Mr. Patrick Nicholson, who pointed out that the hon. member for Timmins was as expensive to the taxpayers as the hon. member for Victoria who lives some 3,000 miles away. This journalist totalled up the air fares charged in my name for a year and compared them with those charged various other hon. members. I did not mind this sort of criticism at all, Mr. Chairman, because he did prove two things. First, he proved that I am in Ottawa during the week and at home on the week end looking after my constituents. I do not believe that is anything of which an hon. member needs to be ashamed.

He pointed out another thing, Mr. Chairman, the very point I have been raising. The charge that was opposite my name was some $3,500 for air fares going back and forth to my constituency. If I had been charged, and if the people of Timmins who did use this service had been charged the proper fare, the amount would have been $2,000, not $3,500. I am glad Mr. Nicholson raised this point because it clearly illustrates the injustice that is being perpetrated against the people in the Timmins region.

There is another point that is very important. We are very appreciative of the air service we have between Timmins and Toronto. It is interesting to note that the train service between those two points is excellent, with an overnight service both ways. The train leaves Timmins at six o'clock at night and it leaves Toronto at 6.30, both trains arriving at their destinations about 8.30. I have tried to get an answer to this question for years and years. Why is it that where the train service is good, the air service is good, and where the train service is poor, the air service is poor? What kind of competition are we trying to have with ourselves? Both companies are operated by the government. Surely we should be trying to provide service to the Canadian people and not compete where the service is good, then pay no attention to places where the service is bad. Surely we can reach some agreement among ourselves as to how we can get some sort of sensible transportation policy in these two fields.

There is another very important point, Mr. Chairman. My constituency is comprised of about 15 per cent French speaking Canadians. The surrounding areas served by the Timmins airport contain about 75 to 80 per cent French speaking Canadians. Their natural link is with the province of Quebec, with Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec city. This is where their relatives and friends are, and this is where they would like to go—not to Toronto. There is therefore an added injustice to these people because, as I mentioned earlier, the train service is very poor and getting worse all the time. It is not as good as it was five years ago, and much worse than it was ten years ago.

At the same time, Mr. Chairman, no compensation is being offered by the air service. Although the air service does operate there, it charges such a terrific rate that you cannot afford to pay the fare. The result is that you either have to take this very poor train service or you have to drive a long distance by car, a journey that involves the daily dangers presented by highway travel with its consequent loss of life and limb.

As I say, Mr. Chairman, this situation is an injustice. The problem is not new; I raised it when Hon. Leon Balcer was minister, when the present hon. member for Northumberland was minister, and with all the other successors down through the years.

However I raise it once more with this minister. We have had some examples of the minister's despatch and efficiency. Surely if he can join the three services together he can put some common sense and fair play into the transportation service from Timmins to the Ottawa and Montreal region.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I do not intend to speak at length on that, but I shall merely sum up two paragraphs, from the newspaper La Presse of Wednesday February 14 afterwards, I will simply ask the hon. Minister of Transport what one must think about it and what are his conclusions.

Therefore, I quote this article from La Presse under the following heading:

"No money for Montreal, $9 million for Toronto."

And sub-heading, we find this:

"After tripping up Dorval, Ottawa gives a staggering blow."

It is rather harsh as a heading. Here are the first two paragraphs of that article written by Mr. André Chénier, from La Presse:

The federal Minister of Transport, Mr. Paul Hellyer, has just announced that estimates amounting to $9 million will be used for the expansion of Toronto's airport, which will be provided, among other things, with a new air terminal and a parking lot that will accommodate 1,500,000 more passengers per year.

For Montreal, it is not merely the tripping up of two months ago, through the elimination of estimates intended for a new runway at the Dorval International Airport: It is now a staggering blow on the most widely patronized airport in Canada.

Mr. Chairman, I have no objection to money being spent to enlarge the Toronto airport. The more Toronto expands, the happier I will be. But if money is taken away from Montreal to give it somewhere else, especially if those credits had been earmarked for two years for the Montreal airport, that is another story altogether. If what has been earmarked for expanding and improving Montreal's Dorval airport is left alone and other credits are given to Toronto, I do not object to that.

I am asking the Minister of Transport what is earmarked for Montreal. Can he give us an idea of what must be done to develop the Montreal airport to keep it up to date and in step with the increase in air traffic, in the number of passengers, in the size of airplanes, etc.? I would like the minister to give me an answer and then, if I have some comments to make, I will.

[English]

Mr. Hellyer: Mr. Chairman, as I have indicated publicly since this newspaper report appeared, the expenditures for the two airports at Toronto and Montreal for the next 20 years will be almost identical. In addition, this year there is provision in the estimates for those supplementary facilities that are required at Montreal to enable the airport to handle the jumbo jets which will be coming into service in 1970.

• (10:30 p.m.)

The reason we have not yet been able to announce exact, immediate plans for the Montreal expansion is that the engineers who are studying the situation have not yet decided whether we can expand Dorval to meet the 20-year requirement, whether we shall have to build a new airport to replace Dorval or whether we shall have to build a new airport and operate it as well as Dorval. We do not yet have a recommendation on options from the consultants who have been looking at the question, but I hope to have their report within a few weeks. Once I do, of course we shall know exactly what they recommend.

In the meantime it has been recommended to us that we should not proceed with the runway, even if funds were available—which is not the case, at the moment. As I say, once we have received the engineer's report we shall know what is the best thing to do for the long range requirements of the metropolitan Montreal region. I assure my hon. friend that this is being given every possible consideration. I can also assure him, if he will look back over the expenditures of the last few years, that Montreal by a considerable amount has received higher expenditures than Toronto, and has not done too badly.

Some hon. Members: Shame.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I should like to put a supplementary question to the minister. When he says that in 1970, there will be strips to accommodate giant aircraft, does he mean to say that new strips will be built for the giant aircraft and supersonic planes such as the Concorde, for instance, which will start operating in 1971? Is anything planned in Montreal for supersonic planes? The Concorde, as we know, is expected by 1971 or thereabouts. At that time, will there be landing strips to accommodate those aircraft?

[English]

Mr. Hellyer: The supersonic aircraft will not be available that soon; they will come into service several years later. The jumbo jets will be available in 1970 and we shall be in a position to handle them at that time.

Mr. Lewis: I want to raise for a minute or two a matter that has been drawn to my attention. I do not know how much time the minister has devoted to it, considering his other activities. I have been visited by some air traffic controllers who have been very critical because they allege that the second volume of Judge Robinson's report has been sitting on somebody's shelf. That is the information they gave me.

Hon. members will recall that a couple of years go, or longer ago than that, the threat of an air traffic controllers strike was obviated by the appointment of Judge Robinson as special commissioner to inquire into complaints. The judge produced the first report which dealt with salaries, and a satisfactory conclusion was arrived at between the Department of Transport and the air traffic controllers.

Some months ago a second volume came down; I have not read it thoroughly but I have read through it. It makes a number of suggestions to improve the working conditions of air traffic controllers, and other related matters. My latest information, which is not very old, from the air traffic controllers association is that the department has done little to implement Judge Robinson's recommendations. I should like to hear whether the minister has readily at his figertips information about what has been done and what is proposed to be done to meet the apparently perfectly reasonable request of the air traffic controllers, that the second volume of Judge Robinson's report be implemented, or fully discussed with them.

They have another complaint. There are about 125 air traffic controller assistants who have always worked with the air traffic controllers. In the reclassification which has been taking place over the last couple of years in preparation for collective bargaining, someone decided that these assistants should be classified as clerks. They are in the clerical group for the purposes of collective bargaining, and no longer in the air traffic control group, despite the fact that they work with the air traffic controllers in the same area and provide the controllers with assistance in terms of information and the processing of information.

These people feel they are now completely at a dead end, instead of having opportunities for promotion and for getting into the air traffic control business as their experience grows. I feel the item before us should not go through without these two legitimate complaints being drawn to the attention of the minister. The collective bargaining legislation which parliament passed for the public service itself sets the collective bargaining units for the initial bargaining exercise; it is only at the end of the first agreement that changes in the units can take place.

What will undoubtedly happen is this: Two or three years from now when the agreement relating to this group terminates, somebody will come before the staff relations board and ask for a change in this bargaining unit. In the meantime, certain habits will have been interrupted in one direction and will have jelled in another direction. This seems to me an example of stupid labour relations. The application of some criteria which I do not understand—it may be my fault—has resulted in a most illogical situation as far as these assistants are concerned.

I am totally at a loss to understand why the minister and the department have done so little to implement Judge Robinson's recommendations concerning labour conditions and related matters. If the minister has any information on this subject I invite him to pass it on to us.

Mr. Hellyer: I cannot recall exactly what the situation is, but I do know that a large number of the recommendations in that report have been implemented or are in the process of implementation. Others which require more substantial expenditure will be worked into the program as this becomes possible. Our budget is tight and this prevents our doing some of the things we want to do. In the meantime we are living under a restriction and, while we appreciate the necessity for that restriction, at the same time we know there is a responsibility not to delay any longer than is absolutely required some of the recommendations we would like to see implemented.

• (10:40 p.m.)

Mr. Lewis: What about the assistants?

Mr. Hellyer: I do not know the answer on that, but I would be glad to look into it.

Mr. Alkenbrack: Mr. Chairman, from time to time the minister has been talking about economy, and we have heard a lot about the amount of the stipend being paid to the new chairman of the Canadian Transport Commission. What is the salary of the minister's immediate predecessor who is now the chairman of the Canadian Transport Commission?

Mr. Hellyer: It think it was stated at the time, and reported in the press, to be $40,000.

Mr. Alkenbrack: Does the minister not deem this new position, conveniently created by the former Liberal member for Bonavista-Twillingate, an act of gross extravagance in view of the poor financial position of the government and of the country in general? I believe this salary is only $5,000 less than that of the Prime Minister, and it is far more than that of the Minister of Transport. Is the chairman of the transport commission more productive, more important or more vital to Canada and its economy than the Prime Minister or the Minister of Transport? Is he more important or productive to Canadian transport than the Minister of Transport? His salary is much larger. At a time when we should practise economy, I think this is a most extravagant appointment.

Mr. Hellyer: Mr. Chairman, I think the Prime Minister pointed out at the time that the president of the Canadian Transport Commission is very well qualified for that job. He, more than any other man, was familiar with the act that had been passed, and understands the transportation field. Therefore I believe it was a good appointment. On the question of relative salaries, my hon. friend will of course appreciate that there are many people who work for the government of Canada directly or indirectly who receive more remuneration than the minister and the Prime Minister. This is not a new state of affairs.

Item agreed to.

[Mr. Hellyer.]

40c. Grants, contributions, subsidies and other payments as detailed in the Estimates, $1.

Item agreed to.

E—National Harbours Board—

75c. Payment to the National Harbours Board to be applied in payment of the deficit (exclusive of interest on advances authorized by Parliament and depreciation on capital structures) expected to be incurred in the calendar year 1967 in the operation of the Jacques Cartier Bridge, Montreal Harbour, $53,000.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I should like to say a word about item 75c. It concerns the National Harbours Board, therefore, the harbour of Montreal and, perhaps to a lesser degree, that of Quebec.

Oviously something is wrong in that harhour. Something is radically wrong there. Conflicts remain unsettled between dockers and shippers. There is talk of inordinate theft, pilfering, in the area of the Montreal harbour. There is talk of violence, of blackmailing, of usurious rates in the port of Montreal. Several commissions were appointed to look into the whole matter, on labour relations. Several investigations were carried out and there are increasing complaints to the effect that the port of Montreal is in utter confusion.

The Minister of Transport is aware of the problem. The Montreal harbour board, headed by the president of the executive committee of the city of Montreal, Mr. Saulnier, came to meet him. There is a serious uneasiness which may jeopardize irremediably the port of Montreal, its future and those who depend on it. When one appreciates that the port of Montreal is a great asset to the economy of the area, one cannot refrain from saying something.

As I know, the minister wants to conclude consideration of his estimates tonight and is anxious to go campaigning; so, I would not want to take any time to outline the problem to him. I know he must be aware of it as well as I am; consequently I will merely put the following question to him: Has his department taken a decision with regard to placing the port of Montreal under a single authority?

At the present time, the National Harbours Board, which has the responsibility of several ports in Canada, has control over many harbours. No decisions are made; everything is higgledy-piggledy. It seems more and more obvious that the only solution would be a single authority for Montreal's harbour. So, I would like the minister to tell me, without going into details, what are his intentions and what are the decisions made by his department in that field.

[English]

Mr. Hellyer: Mr. Chairman, the question of control of harbours is one which is very complicated and which at the present moment is being studied. To the best of my knowledge there has been no fundamental look at this question for about 25 years. Three studies are being done which will be co-ordinated by our department. As my hon. friend knows, the present situation is one in which there are National Harbours Board ports, ports under the administration of the local commissions, and those operated by the department itself. Whether it is best to have three different solutions like this, or whether one would be better, or whether some different solution would be more appropriate, remains to be seen. In any event there is the feeling that one consideration might be a greater local participation in the management of harbours.

I have indicated to the Montreal port council—I believe that is the title—that we have commenced this study and that I hope it will not take more than three or four months to have a report available. I have indicated to them that as soon as it is available I would then be in a position to discuss with them further the question of local participation. In the meantime I do not want to take any steps which would prejudice the outcome of the study, because it is a fundamental one which could have repercussions or which could have application in other parts of the country as well. In the meantime I hope we can keep the port operating, improve its efficiency, and then as soon as the report is ready we will be prepared to discuss with the Montreal authorities any change in the organization which might be warranted.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, may I ask the minister whether it is groups or special commissions which are presently carrying out investigations concerning the harbour of Montreal? He said three groups were making investigations. What are those groups?

[English]

Mr. Hellyer: Yes; the National Harbours Board itself is doing one, the Canadian Transport Commission is doing one and the department is doing one. The three will be co-ordinated by my deputy minister so that we can get the input from all three.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, numerous investigations have been conducted in the past eight or nine years.

About ten years ago, the Montreal harbour commission investigated thefts at the Jacques Cartier bridge. A little later, from 1961 to 1963, Justice Norris presided over an investigation of fraudulent practices and violence in the harbours of the great lakes, the St. Lawrence and Montreal.

In 1966, at the time of the strike in the St. Lawrence ports, Justice Lippé had recommended that such abuse be investigated. Not so very long ago, a Montreal lawyer, Mr. Deschênes, prepared, at the request of the Montreal port authorities, a report on possible thefts, pilfering and fraud in Montreal harbour.

All those commissions submitted reports. Reports have been prepared for the past eight years. It has been a well known fact for the past eight years.

Presently three other organizations: the National Harbours Board, the Board of Transport Commissioners and the Department of Transport are studying the matter, in order to come up with a report. The minister tells us: "Let us hope that in the meantime the harbour will keep on developing." But it is not developing. The situation has been worsening and is getting quite serious. Shipowners, unions members of the Montreal harbour council, owners of shipping companies are complaining. Moanings and groanings are heard from right, left and centre.

The situation is not improving in the Montreal harbour. There have been too many inquiries, too many studies. There were not enough results, even when reports were brought in. The Smith inquiry is still under way. It is not included in the three inquiries or commissions mentioned by the hon. Minister of Transport. Judge Smith is carrying on an investigation. But in the meantime, the port of Montreal is on the road to ruin; the situation is getting worse.

All are complaining about the same thing: the lack of authority in the port of Montreal. There is no authority to take decisions, to settle problems and find solutions.

The four inquiries made during the past eight years have all revealed—and that of Mr. Deschênes more clearly than the others—that a single authority is needed in the port of Montreal in place of the National Harbours Board.

Now, it is all very well for the minister to tell me that three commissions are investigating the conditions, but the fact is that four have already submitted reports. Yet, it does not satisfy me, because in the meantime, the situation is increasingly deteriorating in the port of Montreal.

I can give him examples and quote a large number of reports and speeches made by authoritative persons.

I know that the minister wants his estimates passed tonight. I shall therefore spare him all those examples, but I can mention numerous comments to the effect that the port of Montreal is racing to its downfall, among others, those of the chairman of the Montreal harbour board, Mr. Bacs, who feels, according to page 3 of La Presse of Wednesday, February 28, 1968, that it is most urgent that an operational economic study be made of the port of Montreal, in order that its harbour facilities can take advantage of the opportunities, of the 20th century, and who recommends the application of the Picard and Deschênes reports. The Deschênes report is mentioned there, but we are merely told that the department is making other studies, even though some have been made already.

I wonder therefore whether the minister could tell us when the three commissions now conducting studies expect to present their reports. A year from now? In an editorial printed on page 4 of the February 13, 1968 issue of Le Devoir, Paul Sauriol said:

> A year or two may elapse before we have a report on all those studies, and the problem requires an immediate solution.

Therefore I would ask the minister whether he has any idea when we may have the results of the studies now being made. When does he expect to be able to make concrete decisions. In other words, when will he learn the results of all those studies and when will he make a decision?

[English]

Mr. Hellyer: Mr. Chairman, we are talking about different things although they all relate to the port. The studies to which my hon. friend referred relate to working conditions, pilferage and so on. In the case of the latter, the National Harbours Board has already taken very forceful action to cope with the alleged theft, pilferage, blackmail and other things in the port vicinity. Some very excellent policemen have been hired and I believe the situation will be brought very much under control at once.

The reports to which I refer relate to the management of the port and the responsibility for it. It is this subject which has not been studied at all to my knowledge during the last 25 years. I hope to have information available within three months. It should be possible then to make a decision as quickly as the government is capable of making it, once the report has been received.

Mr. Douglas: Mr. Chairman, at this late hour I want to condense what I have to say into one or two simple questions. One has to do with the production of papers regarding correspondence between the federal government and the government of British Columbia in connection with the Roberts Bank proposed port. I wonder if the minister can tell us whether it is likely to be tabled reasonably soon. In spite of what the minister said the other day on orders of the day, there are a good many conflicting reports with regard to what the government has actually offered. I will not ask the minister to go over that and to put it on the record, but if we had this correspondence I think it would set forth the minister's position very clearly and it would be helpful to the province of British Columbia, where his position has not been fully understood in some quarters.

The second question I wanted to ask is whether the minister could make available to hon. members, or at least to members from British Columbia, the program which he proposes to follow in Burrard inlet during the coming year. It would be useful to have this information. I do not expect the minister to outline it now, but if we could get that information from his department it would save time.

Mr. Hellyer: So far as the first question is concerned, there is no reason for delay, but I would have to inquire into it.

Mr. Douglas: It may need clearing with the government of British Columbia.

Mr. Hellyer: This may be the case concerning the government of British Columbia.

So far as the second question is concerned, I received a technical report today at which I have not had a chance to look, so I cannot advise my hon. friend. But I hope it will not be too long before I can give some information about Burrard inlet.

Item agreed to.

77c. Payment to the National Harbours Board to be applied in payment of the deficit (exclusive of interest on advances authorized by Parliament and depreciation on capital structures) expected to be incurred in the calendar year 1967 in the operation of the Saint John Harbour, New Brunswick, $240,000.

Item agreed to.

Atlantic Development Board—

92c. Grant to the Government of Nova Scotia to assist in defraying the expenses of operating the former Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation Limited Steel Plant at Sydney, Nova Scotia, $2,000,000.

Item agreed to.

Canadian Transport Commission—

65c. Steamship Subventions for Coastal Services as detailed in the Estimates, $1,768,690.

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Chairman, I have a few remarks to make on vote 65c. They have to do with the policy followed in the establishment of the rates of subvention paid for various services. These items which are now before us are the result of criteria which I assume are universally applied to all applications to the water transport committee of the Canadian Transport Commission. It has been suggested to me that in some ways the policy which has been followed in the past is not adequate to deal with the problem of ensuring that services provided under the subvention arrangements are undertaken by boats capable of providing the services required. It has been further suggested that in the various criteria which are used for establishing rates, proper consideration is not given to the question of depreciation and depletion, so that firms are in a position to maintain and replace vessels as required.

By way of illustrating my point I should like to make particular reference to the item which appears with regard to the service on the west coast of Vancouver island, of which I have some personal knowledge. Not too long ago the federal Department of Public Works established a new wharf at an expenditure of some $180,000. So far as I could determine, there was adequate consultation with the company operating into that wharf. After this new wharf was built and the new freight shed opened, this service paid one or two visits to the port and then the master of the vessel said he could no longer get his vessel in or out of that harbour. I made some inquiries, and then the maritime commission had one of its inspecting masters take a trip on the vessel. He confirmed the decision of the master that this vessel could not safely operate into or out of this port. To all intents and purposes, this $180,000 turned out to be a poor investment of federal funds.

There has been a change of ownership of this particular company since the decision was made to build that wharf, so I am not blaming the present manager for the situation. I did make some inquiries and looked at the registry of shipping. This vessel is one to which a person might refer, without being too disrespectful, as a really old tub with rather inadequate power or other modern facilities for guiding a vessel in close waters.

I raised the question informally as to why the company did not trade this vessel for a new, modern one which would be able to navigate in some of the tight situations prevailing on the western coast. I was informed that this was something the company would very much like to do, but the economics of the situation were such they could not see their way clear to do it. This is one example from which one might argue that the additional subventions proposed here are either too great or too little.

I wonder if the minister could tell us the proposition on which the policy for these subventions has been founded. If he is not able to do that tonight, perhaps he could give an undertaking to the committee that he will have this matter thoroughly reviewed. I could cite one or two other examples to illustrate that this same problem is being faced by other operators. They tell me they are living off their capital, and at the rate subventions are being paid, sooner or later they will have to give up the service because the boats they are operating will no longer be seaworthy and they will not have been able to set aside anything for replacement. Can the minister give any clarification of this situation as it exists?

Mr. Hellyer: Not at the moment, Mr. Chairman, but I would be glad to take note of my hon. friend's question.

Item agreed to.

The following items were agreed to:

110c. Notwithstanding any limitation that may be contained in section 265 of the Railway Act, to authorize payment of an amount not exceeding $30,447.70 from the Railway Grade Crossing Fund to be applied to the cost of a bridge reconstruction project authorized by Board Order No. 115089 of the Board of Transport Commissioners for Canada, $1.

115c. Payments to the railway companies subject to paragraph No. 2 of Order No. 103860 dated February 23, 1961 of the Board of Transport Commissioners for Canada, which paragraph authorized the railways to increase freight rates on export bulk grain moving from certain ports located on Georgian Bay, the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence River to Montreal and ports east thereof on the St. Lawrence River and on the Canadian Atlantic Coast and which paragraph has been suspended by Order in Council, requiring the railways to continue in effect the rates which prevailed and were published on November 30, 1960, such payments to be the difference between those rates which were in effect on November 30, 1960 and compensatory rates as approved by the Board of Transport Commissioners for Canada, $104,500.

120c. To provide payments to companies subject to order Number 96300, dated November 17, 1958 of the Board of Transport Commissioners for Canada in respect of the period April 1, 1966 to December 31, 1966, for the purpose of reimbursing the said companies for such diminution in their aggregate gross revenues during the said period as in the opinion of the said Board is attributable to such companies maintaining the rate level for freight traffic at an 8% increase instead of 17% as authorized by the said Order, $96,800.

General—

L114c. Acquisition of Twin-Otter Aircraft for leasing to Leeward Islands Air Transport Services Limited, in accordance with an agreement entered into with the approval of the Governor in Council, at a rent that will reimburse the Crown for the cost of acquisition, and that will include an option to purchase the said aircraft, notwithstanding anything contained in the Surplus Crown Assets Act, $1,000.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, instead of speaking on the four or five previous items, I will sum up with the last one. I will restrict myself to two minutes.

It is often said that the dissatisfaction in the province of Quebec is justified. At the present time, the minister is making a tour of this country and of Quebec. Now, one of the fields where there is more reason for dissatisfaction is transportation. In many cases, it comes under the federal jurisdiction: airports, Montreal harbour, Trois-Rivières harbour, Quebec harbour, the Canadian National Railways, Air Canada, the St. Lawrence river. It is a field that comes under the Department of Transport and it is probably the one where there are more grounds for complaint.

Whether the minister remains Minister of Transport or becomes Prime Minister, I ask him to study in depth all the problems which exist in the field of transportation. Let him make no mistake about it: if he wants to please Quebec, he should talk about transportation, because it is in that field that there is most dissatisfaction. There is no improvement, no expansion, no winter navigation on the St. Lawrence. There are many other complaints. Anyone who takes the 11 o'clock train from Montreal to Ottawa never meets an employee who can speak French. There is no bilingualism between Ottawa and Montreal. I do not object to anyone who does not speak French, but he should not be put to work on a line where so many French Canadians travel. The minister should make an investigation about the C.N.R. line between Montreal and Ottawa, especially about the 11 o'clock train at night; he will see that there is not a single employee who speaks French. That is not very pleasant.

The situation has greatly improved as far as Air Canada is concerned, and I want to commend its directors. The European service, for instance, is much better. I used it recently to go to France, and I noticed that. I commend Air Canada in that regard.

But nothing is done by the Canadian National Railways. The minister should remember that this is probably one of the most important fields and one which causes the greatest dissatisfaction at the present time. It is up to him to find solutions.

COAL

TABLING OF AGREEMENT RESPECTING MINTO BASIN

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to table a copy of an agreement entered into this morning between the government of Canada and the government of New Brunswick concerning the Minto coal basin.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Has the minister leave to table these documents?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

VETERANS AFFAIRS

TABLING OF REPORT ON PENSION COMMISSION

Hon. Roger Teillet (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to table two copies, in English and in French, of the report of the committee to survey the work and organization of the Canadian Pension Commission.

Mr. Speaker: Does the minister have leave to table those documents?

NATIONAL SECURITY

INQUIRY AS TO REPORT OF ROYAL COMMISSION

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Michael Starr (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask the Prime Minister a question. Can the right hon. gentleman say when he expects a report from the royal commission on security procedures in government? Since this commission has been meeting for many months, I wonder whether the Prime Minister has any inkling as to when the report will be made to him.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I was talking to members of the commission I think about a fortnight ago, and they hope to have the report completed early this summer.

Mr. Starr: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Is the commission, to the right hon. gentleman's knowledge, going to hold any open hearings, or is it going to hear witnesses only, so to speak, under wraps?

Mr. Pearson: Mr. Speaker, in view of the nature of the subject they have been dealing with they have held their hearings, I believe up to the present, in camera. I will find out whether they have any plans to hold open hearings.

HEALTH AND WELFARE

INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICES—REQUEST FOR CORRESPONDENCE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct two questions to the Prime Minister. First of all, may I ask the right hon. gentleman whether he will find it possible today to table a copy of the letter I referred to yesterday, his letter to the premier of Alberta in reply to that gentleman's correspondence concerning medical services for Indians.

Second, I should like to ask the Prime Minister, in view of the fact that the government has apparently determinedly set its face not to bring down Bill No. C-190 before the recess, whether he can give the house an assurance on behalf of his colleagues—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I suggest to the hon. member that he cannot ask two questions. There is a convention in this house that we allow the official opposition one question and then allow other parties one question. I suggest to the hon. gentleman that it would be more in order to ask the first question or the second one, the choice being that of the hon. member.

Mr. Douglas: Mr. Speaker, may I leave the first question and ask the second?

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): So far as the first question is concerned—

Mr. Starr: Order.

Mr. Pearson: So far as the question of the hon. gentleman is concerned, Mr. Speaker, dealing with the correspondence between myself and the premier of Alberta, the correspondence in question which he referred to yesterday deals with medicare legislation and not particularly with medical services for Indians. I am very glad indeed to table that correspondence. In the same tabling I might include a communication with the premier of Manitoba, to which reference was made last week.

I think my hon. friend was referring to a telegram I received from the premier of Alberta dealing with health services for Indians, to which I gave an interim reply by telegram on the day it was received saying I should be communicating with him soon, and there would be a statement in the house on this matter shortly.

Mr. Douglas: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Can the Prime Minister tell the house what his reply was to the telegram he received from the premier of Alberta with respect to medical care for Indians?

Mr. Pearson: I do not have it before me, but I have no objection to asking the premier whether we can table the exchange. It was a telegram saying that I hoped to reply to him in substance shortly, but in the meantime a statement would be made here which I believed would help to remove misunderstandings that have been created, or words to that effect. I think I indicated, because I think my hon. friend has some suspicions about this, that we were having some difficulty in reaching the estimates of the Department of National Health and Welfare.

Mr. Douglas: A further supplementary question. May I ask the Prime Minister if he informed the premier of Alberta that the item in the supplementary estimates dealing with national health and welfare could be called by the government at any time, since those estimates were before the house?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Hon. W. G. Dinsdale (Brandon-Souris): A supplementary question to the Prime Minister, Mr. Speaker. Did the Prime Minister reply to the telegram he received from the premier of Manitoba? If so, would it be possible to have that tabled?

Mr. Pearson: It was a letter, Mr. Speaker, dealing with medicare, and I shall be glad to table that along with the reply to the premier of Alberta. I could table it now, with your permission.

Mr. Speaker: Is that agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I wish to ask the Minister of National Health and Welfare whether, having regard to the misunderstanding referred to by the Prime Minister, he was able to clear up the misunderstanding in the minds of the Indian delegation which he met in Calgary in this connection.

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Yes. I found them more reasonable than the hon. gentleman.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

AGRICULTURE

REQUEST FOR ANNOUNCEMENT OF DAIRY POLICY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Chapleau): Mr. Speaker, I hesitate to interrupt the election campaign of the hon. Minister of Agriculture, but I should like to ask him whether he intends to announce soon the new dairy policy for 1968-69.

Mr. Speaker: I would remind the hon. member that this question was asked a few days ago, and I think the hon. minister gave an answer.

Mr. Laprise: Mr. Speaker, I will rephrase my question or make it a supplementary question.

Does the hon. minister intend to announce the new dairy policy before the house adjourns?

Hon. J. J. Greene (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, the dairy policy will be announced before April 1. I am not yet certain of the exact date.

FINANCE

CANADIAN REPRESENTATION AT MEETING OF MONETARY FUND

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Howard Johnston (Okanagan-Revelstoke): My question is for the Prime Minister. I realize that he may not yet be in a position to indicate the membership of the Canadian delegation to the finance ministers' meeting to be held shortly in Stockholm. Could we expect an announcement of the agenda of that meeting and of the Canadian position on some of those problems to which our internal troubles are frequently attributed?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): So far as the delegation is concerned—this question was asked yesterday—it has been agreed by the government that the delegates to this conference should include Mr. Rasminsky, the governor of the Bank of Canada, Mr. Alan Hockin, assistant deputy minister of finance and Canada's representative on the board of the monetary fund for several years, and Mr. W. C. Hood, an adviser in the Bank of Canada.

As far as the substantive part of the question is concerned, the Stockholm meeting, which consists of representatives of ten countries from the International Monetary Fund, will be continuing the discussions begun last September, I think it was, in Brazil having to do with the establishment of drawing rights on the fund to supplement gold as a basis for exchange.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

VIET NAM—COMMUNIST ACTIVITIES IN ADJOINING COUNTRIES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): Is the Prime Minister now in a position, as he indicated yesterday he might be, to make a statement on the expansion of the war in Viet Nam?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): The government has been aware—and the hon. member may have noticed this from the press—that for some time there have been a substantial number of North Vietnamese troops operating in Laos. This has been a matter of increasing concern to the Royal Laotian government and to the international commission, which has certain responsibilities in that country. Unfortunately the commission has not been able to operate in all parts of Laos because some areas are under communist control. Nevertheless it is doing its best to extend its supervisory activities and has recently paid a visit to the city of Saravane in southern Laos, which had been threatened by attack by communist forces. It is hoping to extend visits to other parts of the south which have been threatened.

As far as the situation in Cambodia is concerned, the hon. member knows we have been attempting to strengthen the authority of the commission and increase the facilities available to it so it can supervise the frontier, and for this purpose helicopters would be essential. It has not yet been possible to bring the discussions concerning such extension of authority and facilities to a satisfactory conclusion, but we are continuing negotiations to this end.

As far as Thailand is concerned, there have been some sporadic movements in one area which have been causing a good deal of anxiety.

GRAIN

WHEAT—INQUIRY AS TO FINAL PAYMENT FOR 1966-67 CROP

On the orders of the day:

Mr. W. H. Jorgenson (Provencher): I should like to direct my question to the Prime Minister or to the Acting Minister of Trade and Commerce. Last week the Minister of Trade and Commerce said he would be making an announcement today with regard to the final payment on the 1966-67 wheat crop. Can the Prime Minister tell the house whether this announcement is being made in Winnipeg today by the Canadian Wheat Board?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): The minister expects to be in the house later today, this evening I would think, and hopes to obtain permission from the house at that time to revert to motions so he can make this statement today.

Inquiries of the Ministry

INDUSTRY

ASSISTANCE FOR CONSTRUCTION OF OIL REFINERY IN ATLANTIC AREA

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): My question is to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. Is the minister in a position to bring the house up to date regarding the negotiations going on with the British American Oil Company concerning the company's request for a loan to build a refinery in the strait of Canso?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Yes, Mr. Speaker, discussions in this regard have been going on for several months. The British American Oil Company had made requests to the federal government which concern several departments, the Department of Industry and the Department of Public Works, as well as the Atlantic Development Board, for instance. The company has also addressed requests to the Nova Scotia government. It has also made a request concerning Devco. Therefore, we could not put all that together before knowing what requests had been made to Nova Scotia.

As we expected, the requests addressed to Nova Scotia were, in part, transferred to the federal government, and they are now being studied.

I met the president of British American Oil yesterday.

I shall report to my colleagues of the cabinet on the results of that meeting, and I trust we should soon be in a position to announce the federal government participation in this project.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

REQUEST FOR ASSURANCE RESPECTING BILL C-190

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the right hon. Prime Minister. Since it is apparent that the government is determined not to proceed with the drug bill, No. C-190, before the recess, could the Prime Minister give the house an assurance that it is the government's intention to proceed with this legislation when parliament reassembles on April 23?

[Mr. Pearson.]

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I rather hesitate to indicate our attitude on this matter because my hon. friend from Winnipeg North Centre said the other day that any such assurance would not be worth, I think he said, the paper it was written on.

Mr. Starr: He will take anything now.

Mr. Knowles: I think I said "would not be worth the time it would take to give it".

Mr. Pearson: But I have already indicated, Mr. Speaker, that we consider this as priority legislation, and it certainly is not that we are determined not to proceed with it. We are determined to proceed with it, but we have indicated that we feel this should be after the recess. We will not be proroguing; we will be adjourning. On our return—and I have discussed this matter with my colleagues in the cabinet, all of them, some more individually perhaps than others—there will be two items of legislation which really have top priority. One is this bill; the other is the Kennedy round negotiations which are matters of very great urgency in the trade field. I think we should proceed with those two items immediately on our return, and my colleagues in the cabinet agree with me on that score.

Mr. J. E. Walker (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a supplementary question to the Prime Minister. Did he also discuss this with Rev. Lloyd Henderson?

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

QUEBEC—REPORTED TAPPING OF TELEPHONES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Gilles Grégoire (Lapointe): Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a question to the Solicitor General, as minister responsible for the R.C.M.P.

Since members, ministers and even the premier in the Quebec legislature are seriously considering the possibility of their telephones being tapped, could the minister tell us whether he is aware of this problem and whether the R.C.M.P. is in any way responsible in this matter?

[English]

Hon. L. T. Pennell (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, the R.C.M.P. have no knowledge of the allegations in the newspaper report. In any event it would be a matter for the appropriate authorities in the province of Quebec.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

HAL BANKS—REFUSAL OF EXTRADITION BY U.S. GOVERNMENT

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Michael Starr (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the right hon. Prime Minister whether the government has yet received a reply from the state department in Washington to the note of protest that Canada sent on the refusal by the United States of the extradition of Mr. Hal Banks.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Yes, Mr. Speaker, a reply was received this morning; I saw it just before coming into the house. The note from the United States secretary of state is to the effect that he does not feel he can reconsider the decision he made in regard to the extradition of Banks to Canada, and he does not believe there is any basis for arbitration of the point of law involved.

Mr. Starr: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Prime Minister would agree to have the Canadian note and the reply from the state department printed as an appendix to today's Hansard.

Mr. Pearson: Yes, I think they should be tabled, Mr. Speaker. I am not sure, but I think the reply has already been made public in Washington. If it has not we will ask for permission to table the correspondence.

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, with regard to Hal Banks I should like to ask the Prime Minister whether the government intends to further pursue this matter and place strongly before the United States the serious implications to international relations of the unique and anomalous stand that has been taken by the Department of State. Second, if it does not intend to do this, will it join in the bringing about of an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States to ascertain whether this so-called exercise of discretion, which seems to bear a strange relationship to threatened difficulties on the great lakes, should be appealed to that court?

Mr. Pearson: Mr. Speaker, as I indicated I received the text of the note just before coming into the house. I should like to have an opportunity to discuss it with my colleagues to see whether we should initiate steps, and what they should be.

Mr. Heward Grafftey (Brome-Missisquoi): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask whether the officials of the United States government suggested that Canada's plea might fall on more favourable ears after the forthcoming election in the United States.

Mr. Ed. Schreyer (Springfield): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Prime Minister whether he regards the most recent reply from the United States state department as precluding Canada from seeking international arbitration.

Mr. Pearson: No, Mr. Speaker; I do not think it precludes us if we consider that the right course is to take the matter to the international court. I believe, however, the United States has a reservation in the form of an option clause which reserves matters which are essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of the United States, and they might invoke that reservation.

SERVICE OF SUBPOENAS ON JUSTICE MINISTER AND PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister which he might like to take as notice. Can the right hon. gentleman state whether in fact subpoenas have been issued or served on the Minister of Justice and the parliamentary secretary to the Secretary of State for External Affairs in the trial of Pierre Vallieres? If so, what is the government's reaction to the summoning of these people?

Mr. Speaker: Order. I doubt if the question is in order. I am sure the hon. member would be of the same view as I am, that the question should not be asked at this time.

HIGHWAY SAFETY

COMPLIANCE OF CARS IN CANADA WITH U.S. SAFETY STANDARDS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Heward Grafftey (Brome-Missisquoi): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Transport. Are officials of his department currently verifying whether motor vehicles made in North America and sold in Canada comply with safety standards ordered by Washington for 1968 vehicles?

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of Transport): I will have to take that question as notice, Mr. Speaker. As my hon. friend knows, we do not have any machinery for verification of this kind, but we did have informal discussions with the automobile companies which indicated that they would follow the same standards. I would be glad to find out and confirm this for my hon. friend.

Mr. Ed. Schreyer (Springfield): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Transport. Would the minister undertake to submit to the highly vaunted prices review board, which the government intends to establish, the matter of price increases in respect of automobiles if these relate to the extra cost of safety devices?

Mr. Hellyer: Mr. Speaker, I believe that is a question which would require study. If there were any indication that this should be looked at by this board then, of course, there would be no hesitation in doing so.

FINANCE

INQUIRY AS TO AMENDMENT OF FARM IMPROVEMENT LOANS ACT

On the orders of the day:

Mr. George Muir (Lisgar): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance but in his absence perhaps the Prime Minister could give us an answer. Because of the urgent need for cash to finance equipment and supplies for spring seeding, which will soon be in operation, are any amendments to the Farm Improvement Loans Act contemplated by the government to make the act operative at the earliest possible date?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): I would be glad to look into that. Perhaps I could give a reply on April 23.

Mr. Muir (Lisgar): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. When the Prime Minister is looking into the matter would he, because of the urgency, ask the Minister of Finance to tell the house when these amendments might be expected?

Mr. Pearson: I will look into it right away.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

QUEBEC—LAY-OFFS AT LAUZON SHIPBUILDING PLANTS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. David Lewis (York South): Mr. Speaker, I have a question I should like to address to the Minister of Industry. Is the minister aware that there have been very large scale lay-offs from Davie Shipbuilding Limited and the George T. Davie Company of Lauzon, Quebec, as a result of the lack of orders? I should also like to ask the minister whether there are any plans to assist the large number of unemployed in this small town in Quebec.

Hon. C. M. Drury (Minister of Industry): There have been substantial lay-offs at the Davie Shipbuilding Company. I am glad to say the situation has been improving somewhat in the past few weeks. The transfer or sale of the George T. Davie Company, the adjacent shipyard to Davie Shipbuilding Limited, has resulted in difficulties in respect of the transfer of the labour force by reason of seniority rules arising out of union agreements.

I understand an attempt is now being made to reconcile these seniority rules with continuity of employment. In the meantime the Davie Shipbuilding Company is actively seeking commercial contracts, and there is some possibility of government work in the not too distant future.

Mr. Lewis: Do I understand from the minister's answer that the question of security is now being ignored, and has a large number—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member's supplementary question is argumentative.

Mr. Drury: Mr. Speaker, the seniority question is one entirely for discussion by the union.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, perhaps I may bow to your ruling and rephrase my question. I should like to ask the minister whether there has been a transfer of employees from Lauzon to Montreal, and whether in that transfer the seniority of employees is being observed or otherwise.

Mr. Drury: Mr. Speaker, the question of seniority rights, their applicability and enforcement falls under the jurisdiction of the union, not the company. I understand there are discussions going on between the union, its locals and the company in this regard.

[Translation]

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

Will the minister inform the house whether he consulted yesterday with the hon. member for Lévis?

Mr. Drury: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

REQUEST FOR STATEMENT ON EFFORTS TO CONTROL DRUG TRAFFIC

On the orders of the day:

Mr. P. B. Rynard (Simcoe East): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Solicitor General whether he will indicate what action is being taken under the direction of his department to deal with the increasing traffic in narcotics, particularly marijuana, and the enlisting of young people and students in the distribution of these drugs.

Hon. L. T. Pennell (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, I should advise the hon. gentleman that I attempted to give a lengthy answer to a similar question posed by the hon. member for Red Deer, but finally bowed to the direction of Mr. Speaker that it exceeded the bounds of propriety. I would be glad to forward to the hon. gentleman a copy of the answer I gave on that occasion.

Mr. Rynard: Mr. Speaker, has the government considered setting up a commission to inquire, on an urgent basis, into the effects and properties of marijuana, the social consequences of its use and its physical and psychological effects on young users, particularly in view of the need for more adequate information about this drug at this time?

Mr. Pennell: Mr. Speaker, I agree with the hon. member that this is a very important matter. However, I respectfully suggest that the question would be more properly directed to my colleague the Minister of National Health and Welfare.

Mr. Rynard: Mr. Speaker, I will follow the advice of the Solicitor General and ask the Minister of National Health and Welfare whether the government—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I suggest it is not necessary to repeat the question.

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I have listened to the question and I shall be glad to give it careful consideration.

INQUIRIES OF THE MINISTRY

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Michael Starr (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the right hon. Prime Minister what steps he is taking to rectify, and I quote the words, "the failure of resolve and the absence of courage" used in St. John's, Newfoundland yesterday by the Minister of Justice when describing one of the difficulties in making confederation function properly?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, he must have been referring to the opposition.

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax): Mr. Speaker, will the right hon. Prime Minister, on behalf of all Canadians, submit to the C.B.C. the hope that any Stanley Cup hockey game on Saturday, April 6, be videotaped and presented later that evening should it conflict with another sporting event on that date?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, we are doing our best to see that these two great national events do not conflict with each other.

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton South): Mr. Speaker, is the Prime Minister not aware that the C.B.C. has already announced its intention to carry the game regardless?

Mr. J. N. Ormiston (Melville): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. In view of the statement made by the Sioux Indians of the Griswold reserve, Manitoba, that they may have to seek foreign aid if government policy does not change, could I ask the minister whether he is aware of the source they are going to tap.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

NIGERIA—CANADIAN EFFORTS TO END CIVIL WAR

On the orders of the day:

Mr. David MacDonald (Prince): Mr. Speaker, yesterday I directed a question to the Prime Minister in respect of the government of Biafra, as to whether senior officials of the Department of External Affairs had been instructed not to meet with representatives of that country. Does the Prime Minister have the answer to that question today, as he indicated yesterday he might?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Yes, Mr. Speaker. I am informed there is no instruction under which officials of the Department of External Affairs are not to meet senior representatives of the so called secessionist region of Biafra. It is, however, customary in normal circumstances to hold official discussions with representatives of the government that is recognized. In the Nigerian situation the only government recognized by Canada is the government at Lagos. This does not apply to informal or unofficial talks between Nigerians from Biafra and members of the Department of External Affairs.

There have been two efforts to arrange these talks. If they were not successful this was not because of instructions issued to that effect, but because the officials concerned were not able to meet the representatives at the time requested.

Mr. MacDonald (Prince): Mr. Speaker, on Friday I inquired whether our government had made representations at the United Nations to have the human rights commission travel to Nigeria to investigate the validity of either government, and the terrible situation in respect of the thousands of deaths which have occurred there in recent months. Has the Prime Minister ascertained whether we have been pressing for such action?

Mr. Pearson: I have made inquiries in this regard but I have not received that information as yet. If I should receive it after the house has recessed I will send it to my hon. friend.

INQUIRY AS TO DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS WITH THE VATICAN

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Heath Macquarrie (Queens): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the right hon. Prime Minister, and I promise him it will be my last question this week regardless of what may happen. Without presuming to suggest any further contributions he might make to international comity before a certain event in April, may I ask the Prime Minister whether active consideration is being given to the establishment of full diplomatic relations with the Vatican state?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think it was about four and a half years ago when I said this matter was under consideration.

FISHERIES

SEALING—REQUEST FOR COMPREHENSIVE STATEMENT

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Barry Mather (New Westminster): Mr. Speaker, I intended to direct a question to the Minister of Fisheries. In his absence perhaps another government member will take it as notice. Having in mind the reports and pictures appearing in the British press this morning which amount to a rebuke in respect of alleged barbarous sealing methods in Canada, will the minister or the government consider making an early comprehensive statement on the actual situation?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have already noticed these reports, as I am sure other hon. members have, and I have made inquiries.

HARBOURS

BRITISH COLUMBIA—DEVELOPMENT OF PORT AT ROBERTS BANK

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Thomas M. Bell (Saint John-Albert): Mr. Speaker, in view of the great urgency and implication to all ports in Canada, will the Minister of Transport indicate when he will be making an announcement about the Roberts Bank development?

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I have already made an announcement. The work is proceeding in order, and we will be able to call tenders soon so this great new deepwater port will be available by the end of March, 1970 when the contract with the Japanese comes into effect.

Mr. D. V. Pugh (Okanagan Boundary): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the minister whether full and continuous consultation has been had with the government of the province of British Columbia.

Mr. Hellyer: We are consulting fully and frequently with that government, Mr. Speaker.

AGRICULTURE

TURKEYS—REQUEST FOR PROTECTION FOR CANADIAN PRODUCERS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. J. N. Ormiston (Melville): Mr. Speaker, since the Minister of Agriculture has an urgent appointment in Regina I should like to direct my question to his parliamentary secretary, who might take it as notice. Will the minister make a statement regarding his department's policy to protect Canadian turkey producers against outside influences detrimental to the local industry?

COMMONWEALTH RELATIONS

SUGGESTED MEETING OF COMMONWEALTH FOREIGN MINISTERS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Andrew Brewin (Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Prime Minister whether the government will give consideration to the constructive suggestion put forward by Principal Escott Reid that following the Commonwealth prime minister's conference Canada should invite the foreign ministers of the Commonwealth to meet to discuss foreign aid, Viet Nam and a number of other serious international issues?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have already been in communication with Mr. Reid about this subject. Following his statement I said I thought this was a constructive suggestion, as my hon. friend has said. I hope someone will be able to follow it up.

HOUSING

POSSIBLE WITHDRAWAL OF INSURANCE COMPANIES FROM HOME MORTGAGE FIELD

On the orders of the day:

Mr. David Lewis (York South): Mr. Speaker, I have a question that I wished to direct to the Minister of Finance, but in his understandable absence I should like to ask it of the right hon. Prime Minister. The question arises from a statement by a spokesman for the life insurance companies that they were considering getting out of the mortgage field for single dwellings, for homes, and leaving that to the banks. I ask the right hon. gentleman whether the government have taken note of this statement, the implementation of which would result in a further lessening of funds available for housing, and what they contemplate doing about it.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I shall have to make inquiries. I have not seen that statement.

INQUIRY AS TO INTEREST RATE FOR 1968 SECOND QUARTER

On the orders of the day:

Hon. R. A. Bell (Carleton): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the parliamentary secretary to the President of the Treasury Board whether he is in a position to answer my question of yesterday regarding N.H.A. interest rates.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Mr. J. E. Walker (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, the maximum interest rate that may be charged on N.H.A. loans in the second quarter of 1968 will be established on April 1 by the application of a formula which works automatically. This rate is the average long term government bond rate for the last four Wednesdays in March, plus 2¼ per cent. Section 4 of the National Housing Act provides the basis for this formula.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

CONGRATULATIONS TO THREE MEMBERS WHO HAVE SERVED 28 YEARS

On the orders of the day:

Hon. J. A. MacLean (Queens): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address a question to the Prime Minister and ask whether he has been reminded that the hon member for Algoma West (Mr. Nixon), the Minister of Public Works (Mr. McIlraith) and the right hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker) were first elected to this chamber 28 years ago today.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): I wish I had been reminded of it, Mr. Speaker, because then I might have been able to do justice to the importance of the occasion and the service rendered to this house over those years by these three distinguished members of the House of Commons.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

DRUGS

REQUEST FOR INVESTIGATION INTO PROPOSED PRICE INCREASE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. William Dean Howe (Hamilton South): Mr. Speaker, I have a question I should like to direct to the Minister of National Health and Welfare and—or the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. It has to do with today's report that consumers are facing a drug price increase in April, in line with new price lists from manufacturers. Will the ministers look into the situation, which underlines the need for new drug price legislation?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Inquiries of the Ministry

AGRICULTURE

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND—REQUEST FOR ACREAGE ASSISTANCE PAYMENTS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. David MacDonald (Prince): Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether the parliamentary secretary to the Minister of Agriculture is in a position to answer my question of yesterday and a question asked on Thursday relating to assistance to Prince Edward Island potato growers.

Mr. Bruce S. Beer (Parliamentary Secretary to Ministe rof Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of any representations having been made. I will ascertain whether this has been done and inform the hon. member.

SUGGESTED INCREASED COMPENSATION FOR SLAUGHTERED CATTLE

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Théogène Ricard (Saint-Hyacinthe-Bagot): Mr. Speaker, I would also like to direct a question to the parliamentary secretary to the Minister of Agriculture.

Is he in a position to answer the question I asked him yesterday?

[English]

Mr. Bruce S. Beer (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I am not in a position to answer that question.

TELEVISION

INQUIRY AS TO UHF REQUIREMENT IN NEW SETS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert Stanbury (York-Scarborough): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Transport. Could the minister inform the house whether regulations have now been issued under the recent amendments to the Radio Act, or whether they will be issued promptly, to require an ultra high frequency capability in all new television receiving sets sold in Canada?

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of Transport): Not yet, Mr. Speaker, but I am making a proposal to the government within a few days. It will be my recommendation that this be the case, but it will have to be considered by the government and an announcement will be made in due course.

COMMUNICATIONS

INQUIRY AS TO SATELLITE TRANSMISSION PROGRAM

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Thomas M. Bell (Saint John-Albert): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In a similar connection could I ask the minister how the cabinet study on space satellites is coming along, and when we may expect a report on that matter.

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of Transport): It is coming along very well, and on behalf of the minister in charge, the Minister of Industry, I would say there will be a statement forthcoming in a day or two.

Mr. Bell (Saint John-Albert): Wouldn't the minister like to make a statement on one thing during his tenure as Minister of Transport?

Mr. Hellyer: My hon. friend has not been listening carefully.

FINANCE

REPORTED OUTFLOW OF CANADIAN INVESTMENT FUNDS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Ed. Schreyer (Springfield): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Minister of Finance or, if there be no such person, to the right hon. Prime Minister. I should like to ask whether the minister's attention has been drawn to the statement by the president of the Montreal Stock Exchange that Canadian investment funds are draining out of the country at critical rates. I should like to ask whether the government accepts this as an accurate statement.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The question is out of order.

Mr. Schreyer: Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether I might have your permission to rephrase my question and ask the Prime Minister whether the government is considering any special course of action to deal with the problem of the critical outflow of Canadian investment funds.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I would not like to have it assumed, in answering that question, that I accept as a fact that there is any such critical outflow. I will be glad to look into the matter.

SUPPLY

The house in committee of supply, Mr. Tardif in the chair.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. House again in committee of supply on supplementary estimates (C) for 1967-68. Department of National Health and Welfare, vote 20c.

DEPARTMENT OF NATIONAL HEALTH AND WELFARE

20c. Administration, Operation and Maintenance, $2,450,000.

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Chairman, is this the point at which the Minister of National Health and Welfare is going to make a statement regarding health service for Eskimos and Indians?

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Chairman, I have a very brief statement to make in this connection. As the hon. member for Peace River mentioned, I had the occasion over the week end when out west to meet a number of groups of Indians, and my words had a very calming effect on the groups I met there. I hope they will have the same effect this afternoon on this committee of supply.

I wish to make a very brief statement. Hon. members and others have raised the question of services in the divisions of Indian and northern health, and I promised hon. members that I would review the situation and make a statement. I would like to do so at this moment.

The government has had an opportunity to review the matter of Indian and northern health services raised by hon. members and others. As has been mentioned before, the funds made available for these services in the estimates for the fiscal year 1968-69 are greater than those of the current fiscal year. I can also assure hon. members that services now being provided will be continued in the coming fiscal year and will not be permitted to deteriorate.

If in the coming year it becomes apparent that the level of medical services currently being provided cannot be at least maintained, taking into account population growth and rising costs, the government gives the assurance that funds will be provided for this purpose. My officials have been asked to review all directives to ensure that it is quite clear that in the next fiscal year individual Indians and Eskimos will receive the same consideration and treatment by the department with regard to health services as they have received this year.

The Indian and northern health services directorate is checking with its regional directors to ensure that any directives which may have emanated from them and which do not pursue this policy will be amended so that any misunderstanding about this matter will be quickly cleared up.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Chairman, the minister referred to any directives that did so emanate?

Mr. MacEachen: Yes.

Mr. Dinsdale: Mr. Chairman, we were interested to hear the statement of the minister on this important subject. I think the first question asked about this matter was on March 7 last. At that time I suggested to the minister that if it was his intention to curtail health services to our native Canadians, as had been indicated from many sources, he was placing the wrong stress on priorities. We also urged that the minister should make a statement immediately so the confusion that had been referred to by the hon. member for Northwest Territories and the confusion that was reflected across the country might have been dissipated immediately. Unhappily the minister has chosen to wait until the eve of the implementation of the cut-backs before making a statement that will help to clarify the issue.

• (3:20 p.m.)

My question arose because of a debate that had taken place in the council of the Northwest Territories during the latter part of February, when members of council as well as the director of northern health services, Dr. Butler, indicated that substantial cut-backs in health services were contemplated. This course was being pursued in the face of the drastic health problems confronting our Eskimo and Indian population and was bound to bring serious protests such as those we have witnessed during the past few weeks.

The minister's statement today was brief. I only hope it has removed some of the specific that were outlined in the directives that were sent from the Department of National Health and Welfare across the country. I want to read excerpts from some of these directives, and I want to get the minister's assurance that the policy has been changed; because I think if we are going to deal with the protests that have been aroused, not only in this house but amongst the Indians and groups of citizens in every walk of life, we have to have assurance that the recommendations that went out from the offices of the health and welfare department have been rescinded.

I should like to refer to a directive that went from the Department of National Health and Welfare Edmonton office on March 4, which reads in part:

> The basic policy of our department is that there is no statutory federal responsibilty for our department to provide funds for personal health care service for Indian people.

Is this still the attitude of the minister? As the right hon. member for Prince Albert pointed out yesterday, while there might not be a statutory provision there is certainly provision in the treaties, particularly treaty No. 6, the so-called medicine chest provision, which has operated until this directive was issued a few weeks ago.

Then the memorandum went further and stated:

> This year our resources to assist Indian people toward payment of medical care costs, hospitalization, transportation to and from medical centres, pharmacist accounts is being reduced and our department will assist only in those instances where the Indian people can demonstrate that they do not have private resources, cannot obtain assistance from their band or from a provincial welfare or health agency.

I trust that the statement the minister made today has reversed that decision, which is quite contrary to the principles of justice and morality in so far as the treatment of our first citizens is concerned. In this memorandum there was even a note with regard to tuberculosis, one of the great killers of our native population. I read this from page 2:

> With respect to control of tuberculosis, our instructions read as follows:
> From April 1, 1968, it will be necessary to share increasingly with provinces the control of tuberculosis.

The memorandum even applied to mental illness, and reads:

> It will be necessary from April 1, 1968, to cease active case finding among Indians.

Then on page 3 of the memorandum I read this:

> Budgetary controls will be imposed on physicians providing services to Indians. It is to be hoped Indian people resident on reserves would not continue to be excluded from the Alberta health plan, as I understand they are at the present time.

The implication there, of course, was that the burden is to be thrown to the provincial governments. In addition I received a directive that went out to each of the chiefs of the band councils across the country. These directives contained the same specific instructions that health services were to be curtailed. The one that went out from the district national health and welfare office in Manitoba on March 6 reads as follows:

> Due to the financial crises faced by the government of Canada, it has been necessary for parliament to curtail the funds allowed to the Department of National Health and Welfare.

I hope that impression has been corrected as well, because it was not parliament but the government of Canada that was curtailing the funds. As the hon. member for St. Hyacinthe-Bagot reminds me, it was the Liberal government. These are the specific instructions that were received by the Indian chiefs and councillors across the country which resulted in the unhappy protests we have heard all across the nation during the last few days.

The latest meeting took place in Winnipeg last night. I had intended to be present at that meeting, where an overflow crowd of more than 200 citizens met to protest the government's action. As I say, I had intended to be there but unfortunately the N.D.P. filibuster in Ottawa kept me away from that meeting. We were not able to get first hand information of what took place, but radio reports indicated the people were protesting as strongly as the various Indian groups across the country over the inequity and injustice of this change in health program.

What happened, of course, resulted from the typical lack of communication between the various departments of this government, as well as the complete failure to consult with the provincial authorities upon whom the minister and the Department of National Health and Welfare were trying to unload the burden of health care for Indians. This is one of the great areas of neglect in dealing with our native Canadians at the present time, the lack of communication and the lack of consultation.

I asked the minister of Indian affairs if he had been aware of the directives, but he knew nothing about them. He is the minister responsible for protecting the interests of our Indian and Eskimo population. It is little wonder, Mr. Chairman, that the Indians persist in their view that a credibility gap exists and that the white man speaks with a forked tongue. I hope we might open consultations and negotiations with the provinces so that if there is a desire on the part of Ottawa to shed this traditional obligation, it will not be done in an arbitrary way but will be the result of what the Prime Minister used to call co-operative federalism. Consultation has been repeatedly requested by the premiers of Alberta and Manitoba. I hope that to avoid further fiascos of this kind, meetings between Ottawa and the provincial governments on Indian affairs will proceed at the earliest possible opportunity.

I urge too that the committee on Indian affairs be reconstituted so that it can come to grips with some of the problems that have been brought into the limelight as a result of this piece of government foolishness during recent weeks. The parliamentary committee on Indian affairs has not met for over a year. It was supposed to be reconstituted, and the promise was made that it would be reconstituted at an early date in the session now under way. I have a Canadian Press dispatch before me dated March 18, 1967 which reads as follows:

> The Commons Indian affairs committee agreed Friday to call officials of the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority before it to answer Indian complaints that the seaway did not live up to agreements under which it acquired reserve land nearly 10 years ago.
> Chairman Milton Klein (Lib.) Montreal-Cartier, said that if complaints the committee heard last month were true, and he thought they were, "this situation is scandalous."

The article went on:

> Most of Friday's session was spent discussing the need for visits to Indian reserves across the country.

As I say, Mr. Chairman, this article was written over a year ago. Yet we wonder why the Indian population is disenchanted.

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Chairman, would the hon. member permit a question in connection with the remarks he has just been making? Does he not recall that the committee actually had laid on a schedule of visits to reserves in British Columbia which for some unknown reason was suddenly cancelled?

Mr. Dinsdale: Yes, Mr. Chairman. This is the point I am making. If the Indians resort to whining and complaining, as the minister of Indian affairs accuses, then they have every reason to do so because their fundamental problems are not being dealt with by the present government.

Although there were no specifics we were pleased to hear the minister's announcement. I only hope the action that follows will not result in further accusations of "double talk" on the part of the government, which has led to the spirit of disillusionment and which, as I have already intimated, causes our Indian friends to say: "White man speaks with forked tongue".

Mr. Rynard: Mr. Chairman, I should like to address a few questions to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. First of all, in view of the fact that national medicare is coming into operation on July 1 I should like to know what is going to happen in regard to medical care for Indians in those provinces that are financially unable to go along with the federal medicare policy. For example, is the government of Ontario going to have to pick up the tab for all care for Indians after July 1? Under the present OMSIP regulations all Indians in the province in receipt of social security would qualify for medical care which is paid for by the provincial government. Those on low incomes—and the Indian is not a high income earner—would also have to receive subsidized medical care or the province would have to pay for the care in full. This is going to throw an additional burden on all provinces that do not adopt medicare if the minister does not pay to the province the medical care insurance premium in that province.

In addition, what is going to become of all the Indians in the province of Ontario, or in any other province for that matter, cared for by doctors who are under contract with the federal government? Incidentally, may I compliment the minister on the cheap rate he has obtained for most of these medical services. I recall one doctor telling me that he received the princely salary of $250 a month. This covers all services except those that are highly specialized. In this particular case the reserve was 17 miles from the town where he lived and he had to cross two miles of water to get there. He answers calls seven days a week, emergency calls, office calls and so on. There are almost 500 Indians on the reserve so it really constitutes a village. If in some way or other the minister discontinues these contracts, what will become of the Indians?

Second, does the minister not feel that in a great many cases these doctors should have some relief? For example, they have no holidays, they cannot accrue time and they are not on pension. In the province of Ontario OMSIP costs about $10 a month. If you divide 500 Indians into a salary of $250 a month in the case I have cited, I think you will agree,

Mr. Chairman, that they are getting their services fairly reasonably. Figured out, it probably amounts to less than half the cost of medical insurance. I think the minister should consider this matter and discuss it with the provincial ministers of health in those provinces that are not implementing medicare.

On the whole, Mr. Chairman, hiring these doctors not on a fee for service basis but on a monthly salary has proven quite efficient. It has guaranteed the Indians services that they would probably have difficulty obtaining in view of the scarcity of medical doctors in Canada today. However, when the day comes for these doctors to retire or they are retired by the government, how is the minister going to guarantee medical services to Indians who are living a long way from any town? Even people living in cities today emphasize over and over again the difficulty of getting a doctor on a Saturday, Sunday or holiday. Most of them have to go to the hospital itself for treatment. This is certainly a backward step in the provision of service to the Indian people.

I should also like to ask whether the minister has had any communications with or met the presidents of medical associations, the universities, the medical schools and the provincial ministers of health about what can be done to keep medical shools in operation during the summer holidays. Canada is short about 2,000 medical practitioners, and this is a crisis indeed. There is simply no good reason why the Canadian people should put up with the medical services that exist today. As I say, over and over again we hear of people having to go to hospital emergency departments in order to get care at all.

I say this is not good enough. The Canadian people are financing our universities and medical schools, and I suggest they should receive the services to which they are entitled. If we took advantage of closed circuit television in our teaching schools we could produce one and a half times the number of doctors graduating today by operating our medical schools all summer. You just cannot blame the overworked doctor for the service people are getting today.

I am bringing this to the minister's attention because we have a medical crisis, and when one sees what has been done during the last three or four years one realizes that nothing much has been done to solve it. I also wish to ask, what is to happen to our Indians? Who is to pay their OMSIP premiums?

[Mr. Rynard.]

Mr. Douglas: Mr. Chairman, it is a tribute to the social conscience of the Canadian people that I am able to point out that not for a long time have we seen such a public outcry from all sections of the Canadian population resulting from the announcement that there are to the serious curtailments of medical services to Indians. I have received telegrams from the heads of the churches, from doctors, and from those who are interested in Indian and Eskimo problems. It is quite apparent that Canadians have been disturbed by the reprehensible action taken by the Department of National Health and Welfare in contracting or reducing the health services which are available to the native people of Canada.

I do not know of any question on which the government has waffled and dissembled more. Last Friday, in the legislature of Alberta, the premier of the province read a communication he had received from the Prime Minister in answer to a wire which Mr. Manning had sent to the Prime Minister complaining about the curtailment of medical services to the Indians. I have not been able to get the Prime Minister's reply, although I asked for it to be tabled. On orders of the day the Prime Minister intimated what was in the telegram. According to press reports the telegram intimated to Mr. Manning that everything would be cleared up to Mr. Manning's satisfaction, and to the satisfaction of everybody who was protesting the curtailment, once the Minister of National Health and Welfare had made his statement, and that the minister had not made his statement because he was being held up by members of the New Democratic party who were preventing the minister from making his statement.

Every member of the house, including the Prime Minister, knows perfectly well that when supplementary estimates are before this committee the government at its discretion can call any department it wants to. At any time last week the government could have called the Department of National Health and Welfare and the minister could have made his statement. The fact is that the minister has delayed making his statement, hoping that the storm would die down and that he could allow the department to pursue its original, intended policy of curtailing these services substantially.

The minister has never come clean with the house on this matter. Having been asked questions by the hon. member for Brandon-Souris and Northwest Territories and by myself on Thursday, March 14, the minister said, as recorded on page 7608 of Hansard in the upper left hand corner:

I should like to say that the funds available for health services in the north for the forthcoming year will be as great as in the preceding year if not slightly greater.

Of course, to some extent that statement is misleading because the minister failed to take account of three factors: first, that in that period of time the cost of providing health services had increased substantially; second, that the native population had also increased considerably and, third, that the department, as I am told, overspent its expenditures for this purpose by about $400,000. For the minister, therefore, to assure the house that nothing unusual was happening because, to use his words, "funds available for health services in the north for the forthcoming year will be as great as in the preceding year if not slightly greater", does not answer the question whether the government is planning to curtail health services to our native people. If the minister had made the kind of statement then that he has made now he would have saved the native people of this country a good deal of heartache, the members of the house a good deal of time, and many in Canada much concern.

The minister's statement needs clarifying. Let there be no doubt about what the Department of National Health and Welfare intended to do. The minister was asked to table the directives that were sent out and he said he would consider that. I do not think he has tabled them yet. If he has, I have not seen them. The directives are interesting. I have in my hand a directive dated March 6, 1968, from the Department of National Health and Welfare, medical services branch, Manitoba zone. It is signed by Dr. K. Bridge, Dr. J. P. Harvey, Dr. E. Otke and Dr. A. Y. Eng. It begins by saying:

The federal government, as you know, has been forced to reduce many of its programs and the resources available for health services for Indian people has also been greatly reduced.

It goes on to say:

—we must ask all those Indian people and bands who have a source of income to pay for their own health services, namely:—doctors, druggists, hospitals, and to pay for their own transportation. If an Indian person cannot pay for such services, he should first of all request his band for assistance; if such assistance is not available from the band or provincial welfare agencies, the Indian person must obtain a statement from the welfare agency to the effect that he actually requires assistance to pay for personal health services and present this statement to a doctor, druggist, hospital before receiving service, otherwise the Indian person will be billed for such services.

Farther down the directive goes on to say:

Indian bands that have funds must make their own arrangements for the purchase of treatment services either by paying local physicians directly or by arranging to take part in medical insurance programs.

Another paragraph says:

The bands should establish health committees whose duty it would be "to determine what Indians of the band are medically indigent". These committees should meet at regular intervals in order to keep their records of indigents up to date.

The last paragraph but one says:

Medical services branch staff will continue to assist Indian people in improving their health as much as we are able within the limits of the reduced resources allocated to us. We would be remiss if we did not point out the problems facing us today and in the future.

Another letter sent out by the Manitoba zone of the medical services branch, Department of National Health and Welfare, also under date of March 6, 1968, says:

Due to the financial crises faced by the government of Canada, it has been necessary for Parliament to curtail the funds allowed to the Department of National Health and Welfare.

This is an interesting observation to come from that department because, so far as I know, parliament has not curtailed the funds. On March 6 parliament had not even discussed the matter of funds for this purpose. So the responsibility for any curtailment of funds must be borne by the government.

I have in my hand a memorandum sent out last November 23, 1967, signed by the director of Indian health services in the Department of National Health and Welfare. It is addressed to the chief, and says:

• (3:50 p.m.)

Dear Chief:

There has been some misunderstanding as to what Indians in our zone are entitled to medical services. I would like to make it quite clear that our Indian health services are for indigent Indians only.

Farther on the letter says:

Any indigent treaty Indian who has left the reserve for a year no longer comes under our jurisdiction. He becomes the responsibility of the provincial welfare department.

The curtailment of services has not been confined to cases where no indigency is involved. It has been applied to personnel and also to the facilities which provide health services for the population. Dr. Gordon Butler, who appeared before the council of the Northwest Territories as a witness, is quoted as saying the following on February 20:

> Severe cuts are necessary to make up $250,000 of wages for medical personnel. Federal grants fall into two categories—operations and salaries. A shortage of funds for salaries means money will have to be trimmed from existing operations. Every frill will have to be cut out from the program. Under the present budget I have to treat 175 T.B. patients with the same money I would need for 115. Trimming will take place through closure of a ward in Inuvik; reduction of the medical staff at Inuvik and Frobisher; withdrawal of a dental officer at Inuvik; closure of the Fort Laird nursing station; elimination of 75 per cent of visiting specialists.

I think the minister owes the committee a much more definitive statement than the one he has made this afternoon. Are these cuts referred to by Dr. Gordon Butler to be reinstated? Does the government still intend to close a ward in Inuvik? Is there to be a reduction of the medical staff at Inuvik and Frobisher? Does the government intend to dispense with the dental officer at Inuvik? Is the Fort Liard nursing station to be closed? Has the government decided to reduce visiting specialists by 75 per cent?

I can understand why the council of the Northwest Territories was thrown into consternation when these statements were made by Dr. Butler. I think the council, the members of this committee and the public generally will want some assurance from the minister this afternoon that the curtailment of services will now be reversed and that there will be no contraction of medical and other health services to the native population.

I was glad to hear the minister say that the same standard of services will continue. I want to be clear about what the minister means by this. Is he saying that the same level of services will be maintained in the coming fiscal year as in the past? This is what we need to know. The hon. gentleman told us that as much money will be spent or even slightly more. That does not answer the question. Estimates for a health service cannot be considered on the same basis as estimates for running an office; they cannot be estimated accurately to the dollar. What the department has to do is to determine the level and extent of the health services it will provide and attempt to estimate the cost of providing such a service. But if an epidemic occurs, or there is a greater amount of illness in that year than in another, the estimate must be revised.

[Mr. Douglas.]

Those who provide health service for Indians and Eskimos in the northern part of Canada cannot say to applicants: We are sorry, we have used up all the money the government has allocated; you must help yourselves.

I notice that in the Winnipeg Free Press of March 11 Mr. Shaun Herron, in one of the articles he wrote on this matter, said:

> The word is out to officers of the service that anyone responsible for exceeding budget figures will be in serious trouble. It should be understood what this means in human terms.

I agree with Mr. Herron. If it is true that the word has gone out from the department to the government's health services in the north that people will be in trouble if they exceed the amount of money allocated, then the government will find itself in serious difficulty having jeopardized the lives of many of the people who are committed to its care. The government may allocate certain funds to this service and it is true they may be as large as they were in the previous year. But if a child is sick, if a community needs increased medical services, if a greater amount of hospitalization is required, then the medical officers of the department cannot say to the Indian and Eskimo people: We are sorry but we have used up our allotment for the year; you will have to get along as best you can.

Allocations for health and medical services must be flexible. They must approximate what the department thinks is needed, but I wish to get an assurance that apart from any sums of money the minister may be asking parliament to approve today there will be no diminution in the level of service, no reduction in the standard of service, no discontinuation of any of the health services which have been in operation in the past.

The directive I read a few moments ago raises a much more fundamental question, one which we have no time to discuss fully today. It is: what is the responsibility of the federal government with respect to medical care for Indians? The right hon. member for Prince Albert raised the matter yesterday on the orders of the day when he spoke of treaty No. 6 under which the Indian people consider they were given a commitment. This commitment was that a medicine chest would be kept at the house of each Indian agent in case of sickness among the Indians. They have taken this as a commitment that all treaty Indians are entitled to the health services which they require.

I know there has been a great deal of dispute as to the legal obligation which rests upon the federal government with respect to medical care for Indians, but I submit, that there is also a great deal of legal dispute with reference to land claims, and these have not been settled. I reject the federal government's right to settle either of these legal questions unilaterally. Until the matter of land claims has been settled and the people of this country are satisfied that the Indians have been treated fairly and equitably with reference to their land claims, the government has no right to change the rules with respect to health services for the Indian people.

We all hope the day will come in Canada when the Indian people will have received sufficient education and will have been absorbed into the mainstream of Canadian life, will have jobs and incomes and will have health services like other people by being able to make their contributions to a provincial or national medicare plan. Until that is true, until the Indians are able to earn wages comparable with those received by their fellow Canadians, until they are able to finance their way, I maintain that the federal government has a very definite responsibility with respect to health services for the Indian people.

If the government is hard pressed for money it seems to me the last place that there ought to be any curtailment or any cheeseparing is in carrying out our obligation to provide health services for the Indian and Eskimo people. The government, of course is trying to curtail expenditures, and that is understandable. Last night the Minister of Transport said that those who voted against the tax bill automatically voted to cut expenditures. I do not want to get into a debate on that but I remind the government that the members of this party put proposals before it which could have raised more money than it is raising at the present time without increasing taxes on the income tax payer. We said that by implementing some of the recommendations of the Carter report the government could actually have cut income taxes by making some of the freeloaders pay the taxes from which they are now exempt.

If the government has to curtail expenditures there are other places it might look than at this rather meagre sum which we are spending on our native people. The other day the government indicated that we are going to overhaul and re-equip four destroyers at a cost of some $50 million apiece. This is an item that might be re-examined in the interests of economy. Further, one strongly suspects that some of the military planes we are purchasing from the United States will be obsolete when we get them. The government might re-examine these purchases. Some $215 million is going into that expenditure.

The point I want to make is that if the government must reduce expenditures, in the name of decency and in the name of justice the last place we ought to reduce them is in our expenditures for the most defenceless and helpless group in our society, the Indians and the Eskimos whom we have treated shabbily enough in days gone by. Let us not make them the first victims of any economy measure the government must carry out.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, when the minister is replying I ask that he give us the assurance his statement this afternoon means that there will be no reduction in the level of services or the standard of services and that there will be no closing or discontinuance of any of the health services and health centres that are now in operation. If we can get that kind of assurance then I think all the furore that has been kicked up over this problem will have been worth while. I think that the people in all parts of Canada who have protested against this proposed curtailment in health services for our native people will feel their protests have not been in vain.

[Translation]

Mr. Latulippe: Mr. Chairman, I will be brief.

Indian affairs have been discussed as well as improvements to be made in our economy to meet more and more the needs of the Indians. We are not against the Indians but we would like to help everybody.

I feel, Mr. Chairman, that during this session and since the Liberals took office, not much thought has been given to the family which is the basis of our society. No protection has been given to the family but it has been taxed in all kinds of ways: sales tax on building materials and goods, direct and indirect taxes. The family is faced with one of the most serious problems in our history: the lack of money.

Mr. Chairman, the rate of family allowances, established at $6, $7 and $8 per month in 1944, has remained at approximately the same level, while the cost of living has multiplied by four, eight, twelve and even fourteen.

Mr. Chairman, it is illogical that in a country like Canada which produces in abundance, a reasonable purchasing power cannot be distributed to the families, which would enable them to live, to flourish, to get what they need as far as housing, food and clothes are concerned. Families are deprived because they do not have the necessary purchasing power, and instead of being provided with more, it is deprived even more.

The goods are there, but the families who go into the stores to buy cannot use up all that is produced. In fact, stores restock themselves faster than families can empty them.

Mr. Chairman, it is illogical, in a country such as ours, to do nothing for the families, the mothers and especially society's future generations.

If there were no families, Mr. Chairman, we would have no federal, provincial or municipal governments, nor any institutions. All those institutions are in existence because there are families. Do you think that society, the government and institutions would continue to exist without the family? We should lead the way and enable the family to live decently, with the help of all the technological progress accomplished in past years.

Mr. Chairman, twenty years ago, in 1948, the Canadian government could carry on its administration with a $2,195 million budget, while paying a $6 monthly family allowance for children six years old. Today, in 1968, even with a budget of approximately $10 billion, a child of six is still entitled to a $6 monthly allowance. Since our budget has increased fivefold, family allowances should be raised accordingly to $30 monthly. I am adamant on this point, it is only logical. It is also one of the prime requirements of social justice and the recognition of human rights, as recommended by the Universal Declaration of Human Rights adopted by the United Nations on December 12, 1948, that is, twenty years ago.

Mr. Chairman, 23 years ago, that is in 1945, Canadian national production amounted to $12 billion. Today, in 1968, it is worth $68 billion, that is more than five times that of 1945. In 1945, we paid $6 a month in family allowances for a child six years of age in his normal home. Today, in 1968, we are still paying $6 a month for a six-year old child, in his normal home, $60 or $80 a month in a foster home; and over $120 a month in an orphanage or in a reformatory.

In 1944, the year the government adopted the Family Allowances Act, the members' indemnity was $4,000 a year, including expenses. Today, that indemnity has reached $12,000 a year, plus an additional $6,000 for expenses, while six-year old children still get the same rate in family allowances, that is $6 a month. We deemed it advisable to increase our indemnity and our allowances with the increase in national production, but we have neglected to do the same thing for family allowances.

Mr. Chairman, in 1944, our old people in need could receive $20 a month from our governments. Today, that amount can now reach $105 a month, that is five times more.

• (4:10 p.m.)

[English]

The Chairman: Order. I feel I have allowed the hon. gentleman to go as far afield as I can permit him to go. I think the remarks he is making now could not be considered appropriate under vote 20c. Vote 20c has to do with medical services. Perhaps the hon. member for Compton-Frontenac would confine his remarks to that particular topic.

[Translation]

Mr. Latulippe: Mr. Chairman, I thought we were considering the estimates of the welfare branch. If we are dealing with medical care, that is something else again.

I shall therefore sit down, reserving the right to rise and speak on families in due time.

[English]

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Chairman, I do not know whether the minister is standing behind the curtain or has left on urgent business. I should like to tell him, however, that while we do not intend to prolong the debate unnecessarily the two-minute statement he made in which he assured hon. members that everything was of the best in all possible worlds is just not good enough. The directives which have been placed on the record by the leader of our party and by other members must have come from some place. Since top officials in charge of health services have said to Indian patients, to officials and to people involved in health services that the funds are to be cut and that past practices are not to be followed, before this item is passed the minister must explain in detail precisely why these statements have been made. If, as the minister says, there has been no cut-back in the amount available for health services and indeed there is more money available than there was last year, why have the specialists who work for the department and the Indian patients unanimously come to the conclusion that in fact there is to be a sharp reduction in health services? I wish to advise the minister that despite the fact he is busy with other matters we will not let this item pass until we have specific answers.

I do not want to repeat everything that has been said but I do think we should take a look at the situation. At the present time government expenditures are going up very sharply and a former minister of justice, Mr. Chevrier, is on a special mission on behalf of the Secretary of State for External Affairs to the French speaking nations in Africa where he is promising very sharp increases in the amount of aid which Canada will give to those countries. I am not objecting to these increases in aid. I believe that Canada, one of the wealthiest countries in the world, ought to do more than it has done and is doing. However, at the same time that this policy is being followed we hear from the most important officials of the minister's department that the policy of the government, I presume on instructions from the minister, is that these health services are to be cut.

Let us keep in mind that we are talking about people whose health standards are not similar to those of the Canadian people as a whole. The health standards of these people are as poor or worse than those of the people who live under the worst conditions in Asia or Africa. Let us keep in mind also, as Dr. Butler, the regional director of northern health services in Edmonton, said in November, 1967, that we are dealing with a group of people where the death rate among children under one year of age is 63.8 in 1,000 persons while the death rate among these children for all of Canada is just 23.6. In other words, the death rate is three times as high in respect of these people than in respect of the people of Canada as a whole. I should like to quote what Dr. Butler said in an interview as reported in the Edmonton Journal of November 17, 1967. Despite what the minister told us, he said:

> Health services in the Northwest Territories will have to be curtailed despite rising rates of disease and death.

> He said a lack of federal funds "makes nonsense of any constructive planning" and that it appears health services "will be faced with this continuing problem for years ahead."

> The doctor stated a rate of 108 Eskimo infant deaths per 1,000 births bothers him and, although it has reduced appreciably over the past four years, it is still three times higher than the Canadian average. The territorial and federal governments share the cost of northern health services upon ratification of the federal territorial finance committee.
> He said that shortages of federal funds occurred each year of the 1962-67 plan and that his office tried to avoid a repetition of the problem. A paragraph in the existing plan insuring federal funds had been deleted by the financial committee.

• (4:20 p.m.)

I think the minister should explain how Dr. Butler is wrong if he is. After all, Dr. Butler is the senior health officer of the department in the Northwest Territories. Although this has already been referred to, I should like to quote one line from a directive issued by the Manitoba zone of the Department of National Health and Welfare, medical services branch, on March 6, 1968. When we look at these directives we are not surprised that the minister constantly refuses to put them on the record. They make a mockery of everything he has said today and are an indictment of this so-called left wing Liberal who wants to give progressive leadership to the country as a whole. They show that there is no difference between a left wing Liberal such as the minister and a right wing Liberal minister. They are all the same when the chips are down and they cut what they are told to cut.

This is what that directive says in part:

> Due to the financial crises faced by the government of Canada it has been necessary for parliament to curtail the funds allowed to the Department of National Health and Welfare.

The minister says this is not true. Where did this directive originate and who authorized it? Let me read one sentence of a letter dated November 23, 1967, from Dr. S. Mallick, the zone director of Indian health services of the Department of National Health and Welfare, to the Sioux Lookout Indian Hospital. He said:

> I would like to make it quite clear that our Indian health services are for indigent Indians only. It means those people who cannot provide for themselves, who have no jobs.

That has not been the policy of the department up to now. Up to now the department has provided medical services for many Indians who were not completely indigent. The minister says there is no change in policy. How did Dr. Mallick come to write this letter?

I have here a letter from the Manitoba zone of the medical services branch of the Department of National Health and Welfare dated March 6, 1968, addressed to all chiefs and councillors of Manitoba Indian bands. In part it says:

> The federal government, as you know, has been forced to reduce many of its programs and the resources available for health services for Indian people has also been greatly reduced.

In light of these statements how can the minister say that this has not happened? Let me put on record some information I received from a source which I am satisfied is reliable. I have not been able to get the original but I am assured that this statement is not exaggerated. I am informed that the director general of the medical services branch, Dr. Procter, wrote a long brief directed to hospitals and sanitaria which look after Indians who have tuberculosis, of whom there are a large number. In this brief Dr. Procter issued the following instruction and if it is true, and I have every reason to believe that it is, I cannot think of a more heartless or damaging statement. He said that if patients in the hospital are just spitting a little blood it is all right to send them home. Just give them some medicine to tide them over. That is a fine way in the year 1968 for the Canadian government to treat the original inhabitants of this country. These people have been sent to hospital for treatment for tuberculosis.

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Chairman, I should like to ask the hon. member whether he will accept responsibility for the accuracy of that statement as a member of this house.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Chairman, we have been asking the minister in the house—

Mr. MacEachen: Will he answer the question?

Mr. Orlikow: I will answer the question. We listened to the minister and the minister can listen to me for a moment.

Mr. MacEachen: Answer the question. You haven't the guts.

Mr. Douglas: Any man who has been running away from this question for the last three weeks should not talk about guts.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Chairman, the question we are discussing today was raised several weeks ago, I think first by the hon. member for Brandon-Souris. It has been raised virtually every day since then and it is now more than two weeks since the matter became a topic of discussion inside and outside the house. We have asked almost every day that the minister table these directives and every day we have been told that at an appropriate time the minister would make a statement explaining everything.

Today the minister made a two-minute statement. Did he table the directives from which the leader of this party quoted and from which I have quoted today? We have quoted from these directives which the minister knows he cannot table because they are too damaging to himself and to his government. The minister asks whether I will take the responsibility for the accuracy of the report to which I referred. Let me refer the minister to the fact that I obtained this information from the same people who gave us the directives from which we have quoted. I told the minister I could not quote directly from the report because the person who gave me the information said he did not have a copy of it.

Mr. MacEachen: Will the hon. member answer the simple question whether he will accept responsibility for the accuracy of the statement he attributed to Dr. Procter?

Mr. Orlikow: I will stand on my statement until the minister has the guts to table the report to which I referred. If he does not I can only assume, along with the people of Canada, that he will not table the report because he knows, or will know before we are finished, that what I have said is true. If the minister tables the report and the statement is not accurate I will be the first to rise and apologize for giving the house wrong information.

The minister has been in politics long enough to know that one gets information very often from people who cannot allow their names to be divulged because they work for the government or its agencies or on government contract. The minister knows very well I cannot tell him where I got that information. I have been an elected representative for well over 20 years and I can say I am as satisfied as I have ever been about anything since I have been in public office that the statement to which I referred is reliable. If I ask the minister to table the report he will say he cannot because it is an internal communication. I ask him to read it. He does not have to show it to me. I ask him to come here then and tell us on his honour that the statement is not in the report. If he does so I will apologize immediately. I know he will not be here to do so tomorrow because what I have said is virtually correct and he cannot refute it.

Why does the minister of Indian affairs not allow the committee on Indian affairs to meet and call these people before it for questioning? If the minister was agreeable to that suggestion we could conclude this debate right now. Let us hear from Dr. Butler, the head of the health services in the Northwest Territories, and from Dr. Procter who wrote this report. Let us get them before the committee and find out how it is they came to the conclusion simultaneously without any instruction from the minister or the deputy minister that their job was to cut services. Let us hear what they have to say.

• (4:30 p.m.)

The minister does not like anything we on this side of the house say. Members on that side suggest that what we say is obviously political and partisan. The minister does not expect us to be fair to the government because we cannot find anything good to say about it. Perhaps he thinks that is natural because it is politics. I should like the minister, if he has not already done so, to look at reports which have appeared in the Winnipeg Free Press. If there is a newspaper in Canada more committed to the Liberal party than the Winnipeg Free Press I am not aware of it. I want the minister to look at an article which appeared in the Winnipeg Free Press of March 11, written by Mr. Shaun Herron who I think is a Liberal. I am not going into the details but Mr. Herron makes the statement that the staff of the minister's department have been told that the practice of last year, which resulted in an overexpenditure of $400,000, will not be permitted this year. Apparently the staff of the department have been told that individual members who authorize expenditures over and above what is in the budget will be held responsible.

What does this mean? It means that if a nurse or doctor who is treating an Indian child very sick with pneumonia or meningitis thinks it is important to get the child to hospital right away and to do so hires a taxi if there is a road or even adopts the more costly procedure frequently followed of chartering an aeroplane, they will be held responsible for that expenditure. If they are to be held responsible for making expenditures which are not authorized, if they are to be criticized, if they are, I suppose, to be denied promotion because they have followed procedures which the department has indicated are not proper, naturally they will not take these steps and incur such expenditures. Therefore the death rate amongst these native people will increase.

The minister ought not to be so touchy on this matter. He ought not to be saying to us: Prove your points. I think the proof is all here. I tell the minister that we are not going to finish this item for some considerable time, despite the fact that he may have commitments to speak at meetings all across the country, until we get from him a better explanation than we have had up till now about the directives which have come from the officials of his department indicating to Indian bands, to doctors who work for the department, to nurses and doctors on contract to the department and to specialists, that their services are being cut back and there will not be the money in the coming year with which to provide the services that have been provided up till now. I suggest to the minister that he owes it, not to the members of this house but to the Indian and Eskimo people who are upset about this matter, to give an assurance that this will not be the case.

The minister should know, and if he does not I am sure the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development does, that on March 15 a group of 150 treaty Indians marched on the Indian Affairs branch at Le Pas to protest this very matter. I am sure the minister knows that last evening a meeting was held in Winnipeg, under the auspices of some of the most respected organizations in that city, to protest and discuss this very question. I am sure the minister knows about that meeting because I am told he received an invitation to attend.

The minister owes the Indian and Eskimo people an explanation as to just what the situation is and how these misconceptions arose, if they are misconceptions, and one can only assume from the minister's short statement that they are. The minister should explain why the people in his department made the statements and wrote the letters which we have put on the record. They were not put on the record by the minister. I think he needs to give these native people much better assurances than he did in his very short statement that what they fear and suspect is, in fact, not true.

Mr. Bigg: Mr. Chairman, it has always been my wish that some day, and the sooner the better, we would have native representation in this house. I say this because there are some 250,000 of our first citizens and it is very difficult, if not impossible, for any white man to speak for them with the same assurance and sense of responsibility as one of their own number.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Bigg: Therefore, without any apology I shall try to do for them today what they are unable to do for themselves, for the very cogent reason I have mentioned. There are in Athabasca some 21 Indian reservations. As I said before, these Indians have no representation in this house except through me. I can speak with some authority for them because they have come to me and asked me to do so. Therefore I must do so. I beg the indulgence of the house and ask hon. members to exercise their patience when I try to outline the point of view of the Indians.

Since 1876 the Indians who signed Treaty No. 6, representing a large proportion of the Swampy Cress of northern Saskatchewan and northern Alberta, have lived up to their side of the treaty with great patience and restraint. I hear when I go amongst them, and I am amongst them often, no talk of red power. They are not looking to any sort of violence whatsoever to bring their problems forward.

I hasten to say that I believe we have a Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development who is doing his best to make sure that the needs of the Indian people are looked after. He has a very capable staff. However, it seems to me that the reason the particular difficulty has arisen at this time is that nobody seems to know exactly what is our responsibility to the native peoples. Nobody seems to know whether it is the responsibility of the Minister of National Health and Welfare to look after their health or whether the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development has full responsibility in this field.

I think there is a joint responsibility in this regard. I believe that one of the reasons both these departments are somewhat hamstrung in their activities is that we have not really considered the basic problem. That problem is, what exactly are we to do with these people? What does the treaty mean, if it means anything? We must ask ourselves: Should the treaty be brought up to date? If it can be brought up to date, we should be asking ourselves how we can bring it up to date. It seems to me we can bring it up to date only if we sit down at the negotiating table with people representing the Indian community and deal with them on an equal basis. We must forget our paternal attitude from the first word of such consultation to the last.

These people must be treated as complete equals. It is very difficult to treat them as equals. We cannot do it in the House of Commons because they are not here to speak for themselves, but some of us in this house—I hope this applies to all of us—are prepared to take a few hours of our time and deal with this question seriously. I do not think we can do it today, and I have no intention of spending a great deal of time dealing with this matter now. I certainly do not wish to hold up these estimates. But I make this very firm commitment, and I speak for many members of the house, that I intend to see that something is done to solve this problem. We want the government to reassure the Indian people that there are still people in this country who have their welfare at heart. The Indian people know this in fact but they are worried about the timetable. They are looking forward to the establishment of an Indian affairs commission to look into their problems.

About ten years ago my party discussed this matter. Just before we were defeated we had on the drafting board a policy in respect of an Indian affairs commission. Unfortunately the fortunes of political warfare decided that we would not be able to implement that policy. The present administration made an abortive attempt some time ago to bring forward an Indian claims commission, and I am assured that such a commission is still on the drafting board. I am speaking for the Indian people when I say they are not satisfied with what is on drafting boards. They want action and they want it now. Should this commission sit, I am reasonably assured that the Indian people could not expect any particular action for six, seven, or eight years, depending upon the terms of reference and the power of the commission to look into and settle Indian problems. The Indian people, quite rightly, are not willing to wait eight years. They want action now. I honestly believe that if we set up this commission properly with the right people on it and they started to work now they could achieve results in a matter of months. We have to establish some priorities in connection with these debts. Do we owe these people enough money to enable them to pay for some of their own medical services? If we do, let us look at these treaties to ascertain whether we are responsible for giving the Indians medical services across the board, without limit. When we talked about the medicine box back in 1876, what was involved?

Let us ask the Indians themselves to be fair. Let us ask them if back in 1876 they envisaged medical care in modern hospitals with all the white man's medicines. I should like to tell those people who do not know it, and remind those who do, that the medicine man of the Indian tribes in western Canada was not without considerable merit. If records had been kept they would show that when a squaw was about to make a contribution to the Indian family she did not die of gangrene and all these other diseases. She had a natural, normal birth and the death rate was not as high as some people like to think. The Indians gave up this treatment and accepted the white man's medicine.

I should like to know, once and for all, what did the reference to the medicine box mean? Did we promise these people that, regardless of the cost, they would receive medical care in perpetuity? I do not believe the Indian people are sure about this. Let us get them to the council table and ask them what they expected, what they meant when they signed these treaties. Let us see if we can roll back 100 years and ask these Indian people what price they are willing to accept for the wonderfully rich north half of this continent. If we cannot get a consensus of the Indian people, and I do not think we can because we cannot get a consensus of the provinces, then let us take them region by region and try to negotiate to undo some of the damage we have done to these people. I am only thinking now of what the white man has done. It may be that the Indian has contributed to his own downfall. It may be that some Indians took sandhills that were good for nothing in return for some of the wonderfully rich agricultural land we have and thought they were making a good deal because the white man gave them a barrel of flour or gave the chief a suit of clothes. I do not believe that is good enough today. I do not believe the taxpayers of Canada think the Indian has ever had the deal which he should have had.

We are told that the government has overspent a little and can no longer pay the bill for Indian health services. I do not believe that the first place we should cut back is on health care for Indian children or Indian people. There can be no argument about that. I do not believe there is any disagreement amongst hon. members because I think we all want to get to the root of this matter. We cannot do this by promising an Indian commission in the dim future. We have to establish one now and handle things in order of priority. If the minister takes this kind of action he will get no obstruction from this side of the house. We are only asking for those things which we are honour-bound, as good Canadian citizens, to give to our full-blooded brethen. Let there no longer be talk about these delightful Indian children. There is no such thing. They are people who want to take their rightful place in this country. My experience with the Indians leads me to believe that if they have an opportunity for education they are willing to take advantage of that opportunity because they want to bring themselves forward into the twentieth century.

It is quite true that some of them have no band funds to spend on medicine. Some of them do not even have a treaty with the people of Canada whereby they would have some chance of getting justice. I do not believe it is fair for us to say: Show us your legal document which entitles you to these rights. Every person born in Canada is entitled to have a place in the sun, good food and shelter provided he is willing to do his share. I believe in the Indian people. I believe they are willing to do their share. They do not want a paternalistic government. They want an opportunity to educate themselves and to educate their children and to keep themselves healthy.

Sometimes we ask the Indians to develop their reserves. Some of these reserves are not fit for human habitation. Some of the Indians do not even have reserves on which to live. It is ten years since I started some of these projects. One of them is to move the Indians from Fort Chipewyan down to Wood Buffalo park. The answer I have received has been that the sanctity of the park must be preserved. I still put the welfare of these people ahead of the sanctity of Wood Buffalo park or the whooping crane. I am not saying this to be critical of any group of people. I am looking to the future.

When we do open negotiations with the provincial governments involved, with the Northwest Territories and with the Indian people we should take a positive attitude. As I have said, I do not believe we can get a consensus. I do not suppose we can even agree on the type of commission to establish. Let us do this to the best of our ability. Let us put five men on the commission. I would hope that one would be of Indian origin because during the last ten years these people have not been encouraged to believe they are being treated fairly. They want a full part in making the final judgment, a full part in the advocacy of their cause, a full part in applying their own resources, sometimes in money and sometimes in enthusiasm. The magnificent loyalty which these people have given to us in the last 100 years, not only in peace but in war, has been such that we should lean over backwards in order to keep faith. If we do that, these people are going to meet us more than half way.

Mr. Schreyer: Mr. Chairman, the Minister of National Health and Welfare was in Edmonton two or three days ago and at that time he issued a press statement to the effect that the reduction in federal health services would not hurt the Indians in any way. I should like to quote from that news release:

> In some ways Indian health services have been cut, but in another way they haven't. For instance, we used to take a pregnant Indian woman to hospital a few weeks before she gave birth and keep her there for a few weeks afterwards. Now, we plan to have her in hospital immediately prior to the birth and for a short while afterwards. In a way, that is a reduction of service, but it's a sensible one.

The minister may contend that the course of action taken is sensible, but I think he will also want to agree that the information he gave at that press conference was inadequate. Since the conference was brief, it was bound to be. The statement we were promised, which was referred to by the Prime Minister yesterday, we were led to believe would be substantial. Instead, we were given a statement of perhaps a minute and a half. The minister did not elaborate in any respect on what is involved, namely, the alleged reduction in northern health services expenditures.

I should also like to tell the minister that the form of the estimates of his department leaves a great deal to be desired. It is very difficult to be able to detect from the estimates just what allocations are being made for particular kinds of services. Even if we could tell from the book of estimates how much was expended in 1966-67 or is estimated to be spent on northern health services and on health care for Indians during the next fiscal year, the estimates would still not tell the whole story.

It is interesting to note that the directives referred to so many times which were sent to the field officers of the department instructing them to bring about reductions in expenditures were issued, I believe, in the first week of this month. There is a direct connection between that and the fact that the Minister of Finance gave an undertaking that our national expenditures would be reduced by $50 million to $75 million. It is obvious that this is one area of expenditure that has been chosen for the axe.

I think there is an onus on the minister to give the committee in clear terms the actual amount expended on northern health services and on health services for Indians and Eskimos not only during the past fiscal year but also in the present and the coming fiscal year. In addition he should reconcile those figures with the decision of the cabinet to reduce over-all expenditure by some $75 million. Only then will we have a clear and precise idea of the movement of expenditure in this regard.

In the past week or two some spokesmen have alleged that there has been an outright reduction in expenditure on northern health services. The minister countered this by saying that there has been no reduction in absolute terms but that there had been a reduction in the rate of increase of expenditure devoted to this area. It seems to me that this reduction should be put alongside the rate of increase in population of our native people. This will give us some understanding of what is involved in terms of per capita expenditure, which I think is in the end the most accurate form of measurement. In this way we can get some idea of the priority that the government is assigning to the health care of our native population.

I wonder whether the minister would want to insist that in the coming fiscal year we will spend as much per capita on health care and health services as last year. Is the minister prepared to make this assertion? I very much doubt that he is. Certainly I do not believe it to be the fact. If we want to be charitable and accept the minister's word for it, I suppose we could admit that there will be some increase in expenditure on northern health services but that the amount will not keep pace with the increase in population; therefore per capita expenditure will be going down. However, can we in parliament look at that prospect with equanimity? I do not see that we can in view of the fact that standards of health care, its availability, and the infant mortality rate among Indians and Eskimos are such as to leave great cause for concern.

On previous occasions I have asked the Minister of National Health and Welfare to reconcile the infant mortality rate among Indians and Eskimos in Canada with his move to reduce per capita expenditure on northern health services, or rather to reduce the rate of increase of such expenditure. I do not feel that any kind of reduction can be justified at this time in light of the availability of health care in the northern parts of the country to our Indians and Eskimos. Neither can it be justified in light of the prevailing mortality rate.

At this point I should like to indicate just what that mortality rate is. I sent to the library for statistical data showing mortality rates in different nations of the world, and I found that in very few countries is the infant mortality rate higher than that prevailing among our infant Eskimos and Indians. It is my understanding that the infant mortality rate among Canadian Eskimo infants is 108 per 1,000. An hon. member put a question on the order paper asking for this information. It was suggested by a spokesman or official of the Department of National Health and Welfare, inasmuch as the mortality rate had been brought down from 200 per 1,000 to 100, that this was an acceptable level. I repeat that it was felt this was an acceptable level.

It is difficult to understand what is meant by "acceptable" in such a context. The fact is that on the whole of the African continent, according to the information I have, there are only two countries with an infant mortality rate higher than that among our native people. These countries are Burundi and Guinea, formerly French Equatorial Africa. I am using United Nations figures for 1965. I should add that among the coloured population of South Africa, which is kept apart by apartheid, there is an infant mortality rate of 136 per 1,000. In all of Latin America only one country, Guatemala, has an infant mortality rate approaching ours, namely, 94 per 1,000. In South America only Chile and Ecuador have a rate higher than our composite rate for Indians and Eskimos. So there is one country in Central America and two in South America. In all of Europe only Albania has an infant mortality rate higher than that to be found among our infant Eskimos and Indians.

These figures must prove something. There has been great improvement in the provision of medical care for Indians and Eskimos and this improvement shows up in the infant mortality rate. Although the rate has come down a good deal it is still, as my colleague from Winnipeg North has pointed out, three to four times the national average. This being the case there can be no acceptance of this rate. If I sound as though I am indignant, Mr. Chairman, I am. When it is said that a mortality rate four times the national average is acceptable, I find myself feeling a strong sense of outrage.

I am not alone in my opinion. Many interested Canadians, editorial writers, voluntary members of welfare agencies and others, have taken a deep interest in the government's actions with respect to health services for Eskimos and Indians. The minister can say that they have misinterpreted or misunderstood the government's intentions. All they had to go by were the directives issued by the department on the minister's order. The minister's action flowed from a cabinet decision that $75 million would be chopped off expenditures. He had to look for some place to do the chopping.

The minister may be interested to know that in the Manitoba legislature there has been an impassioned debate on this issue. To paraphrase, the Manitoba minister of welfare said that by reducing money for Indian and Eskimo health services or by reducing the rate of increase of expenditure for such services, we were reneging on treaties that our forefathers had entered into with our native peoples. The right hon. member for Prince Albert spoke of treaty No. 6. Other treaties contain clauses guaranteeing to Indians hunting rights in perpetuity. Even those rights have been limited to a certain extent in the last few decades. The treaties also extend the right of health care in perpetuity. Reference is made to a medicine chest being made available for Indian people as long as the rivers flow and the sun shines. Words like that are subject to the broadest interpretation, I know. Yet it is unfortunate that we should give our Indian and Eskimo peoples the slightest cause for thinking we are reneging on the solemn undertakings of our forefathers.

Delivering a speech last week end at the University of British Columbia, the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development said in part:

Many Indians today have a sense of grievance.

Mr. Dinsdale: Hear, hear.

Mr. Schreyer:

Some of their difficulties stem from this. These problems will not be resolved until that sense of grievance is banished, either through redress or sublimation.

They have a sense of grievance, and with the government issuing directives such as those issued recently our Indians have reason to feel a sense of grievance. The Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development is thinking wishfully if he thinks that sense of grievance will disappear through sublimation.

There is no point in speaking too long on this issue. The minister ought to indicate to us in concrete figures the expenditures that were allocated for this purpose during the previous two or three years, what was estimated originally for the coming fiscal year, how much that amount was cut back in the last mini-budget, and how much of the cut has been restored. I expect that efforts are being made to restore some of the subtracted moneys. Our questions from this side of the house would have been unnecessary if the minister had been more concrete and taken more time with the statement he made earlier this afternoon.

The minister denies that health service expenditures will be reduced. He gave us to understand that expenditures would increase, although he does not say whether the increase will be sufficient to keep pace with the population increase, and there is the rub. It is crucial for us to know the facts. I hope the minister will not just sit in his seat and hope that all this will pass off. I hope that in the next few minutes he will give us a substantial indication of intent.

Mr. Germa: Mr. Chairman, it is surprising at our present stage of history, when the public has accepted the idea that the government ought to be responsible for health services, to find the government cutting back on health services to our native people. That is swimming upstream against public opinion. Having been sold the idea that the government has the responsibility to make universal health services available to Canadians, the public of Canada ought not to be asked to consider a curtailment of such services for part of the population.

We all look forward impatiently to July 1 when the medicare legislation passed by the house will become effective, not across the country it is true but in some provinces. That is a step in the right direction. It disturbs me to see that health services for certain people are being curtailed. Statistics show that our native people have been neglected more than certain segments of the white population, and our white population has not been satisfied with the medical services it has received thus far.

Although medicare legislation is now on the statute books and although our national health services are to be improved, the infant mortality rate among our native peoples is almost the highest in the world compared with the rate in underdeveloped countries. The incidence of tuberculosis and other diseases among our native peoples is as high as it is in backward nations. That this is so is shameful. The minister ought to be responsible for improving the level of all public medical and health services in Canada.

The medicare legislation does not set up the mechanics by which the service is to be provided. I believe statistics will show that most of our people, when they seek medical services, will go to a general practitioner. I fear that in the foreseeable future the general practitioner will become as scarce as the dodo. That is because the government has not seen fit to spend money on medical schools to guarantee that this important person, the general practitioner, will not become extinct in our society.

Medical students are increasingly entering specialized services. It is estimated that 90 per cent of those studying the profession are preparing to enter into employment with industry or the government in specialized capacities. Few of them see fit to take up general practice. The old family doctor is becoming a figure of the past. This tendency has to be reduced if we are ever to accomplish what is envisaged in our legislation. It has been suggested that our medical schools should stay open during the summer, thereby increasing the supply of qualified doctors by 50 per cent. However, if 90 per cent of these students intend to become specialists I do not think this suggestion would do much to relieve the shortage of general practitioners. It has been said by an hon. member that there is a shortage of 2,000 doctors in this country at present. This situation will have to be corrected if we are ever to reach the level of medical care which we believe to be desirable.

To correct the situation I have described it seems to me that our medical services should be administered by people outside the medical profession. I am not saying the administration of medicine should be removed from doctors. But the people of Canada should be given some voice in connection with the type of persons upon whom they wish their money to be spent, and a large percentage of public funds is spent on the education of members of the medical profession. If the people are convinced they need more general practitioners, then it is up to their representatives to make their views known in parliament and to say: This is where we want the money directed. We should not leave the direction or administration of the medical services to the high priests who happen to hold office in the profession and in the departments of government. They come from the specialist field themselves and they favour this type of work. There is great class distinction within the medical profession. People with specialized training seem to look down their noses at general practitioners who do not enjoy the same income levels and working conditions as themselves. There is no doubt in my mind that the control and administration of medical schools should fall increasingly under public direction so that the goals I have indicated as desirable could be reached.

I should like to bring to the minister's attention an article which relates closely to the area of northern Ontario from which I come, an area in which it is sometimes difficult to find medical services. According to an article in today's Globe and Mail Dr. George Vachon, aged 68, of Noelville, which happens to be 50 miles south of the city of Sudbury in my constituency, is reported as having said:

> I've thought about retiring but I know very well that when I leave nobody else will come to take my place.

Dr. Vachon, a general practitioner, has been the only doctor to serve the people of Noelville for 30 years. Here is a man with a sense of duty and dedication such as I have often found among members of the medical profession. Even though he has earned a well deserved rest he is reluctant to retire because he knows no other G.P. will come to replace him. He can no longer go out visiting patients as he used to. He receives patients in his office. This limited service is all that the people within a 50-mile radius of Noelville have.

I should also like to bring to the attention of the committee the situation at St. Charles, a village of 1,026 people 37 miles from Sudbury. This village has been without a doctor for three decades. There is no medical service other than that available at Sudbury. I should like the minister to give greater consideration to the needs of isolated communities in the mid-north or even near Sudbury, which is only 350 miles from Ottawa, where people in outlying areas have not enjoyed a proper medical service for many years. Let me quote some comments in the newspaper article to which I have referred with reference to the St. Charles situation.

> "It's very inconvenient", said Mrs. Isabel Duhaime, clerk of a three-township council.
> "But we don't have any other choice," said Ronald Lapointe, a member of the council and president of the chamber of commerce.
> "If you were a doctor wouldn't you rather go to Sudbury where you could make more money than here?", Mr. Lapointe asked. He said the chamber of commerce sought unsuccessfully a few years ago to entice a doctor to the village.

In another town, Hagar, which is 50 miles from Sudbury, the situation is no better. The community is without the services of a doctor although it has been established for more than 40 years. According to one resident it sometimes takes a month to see a doctor unless an emergency has arisen, in which case it is necessary to travel to Sudbury.

In Hanmer—and here is an outstanding case—a community of 8,100 persons 15 miles north of Sudbury, the township council appointed a citizens' delegation which went to Queen's Park last month to seek aid in building an emergency clinic. This was one venture made in an effort to get doctors to go to these smaller communities. Doctors are, understandably, reluctant to set themselves up in a little office without adequate facilities for looking after their patients. They like to work in a more populous area where they can combine with others in the profession to form clinics and render a better service. Nevertheless I believe some help should be given these smaller communities so that they can establish and maintain community clinics thereby encouraging doctors to work there, performing invaluable services for the residents.

The Hanmer township council set aside $30,000 in its budget for the construction of a clinic only to learn it did not have authority to do so. It was told it did not have the authority to spend taxpayers' money on setting up a clinic. Yet we know that in the province of Saskatchewan, where a medical plan has been in operation for five or six years, one of the best ways to administer health services is through a clinic. The minister should look at this type of operation and try to encourage it.

Supply—Health and Welfare

• (5:20 p.m.)

The town of Hanmer is served by a doctor who comes six miles from the town of Capreol two days a week. He sees an average of 50 to 69 patients a day and has seen as many as 85 in one day. This is a terrible case load for any doctor to carry. If you take an eight-hour day and break it down you find that he has not spent many minutes with each patient.

There are large gaps in the medical services of our country. I ask the minister to take a look at some of the avenues I have opened up for him. If there is a lack of services in the part of northern Ontario from which I come, I am sure there is a lack of services in the northern parts of all the provinces a little beyond the fringe of the densely populated areas.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall vote 20c carry?

Mr. Douglas: I rise simply for the purpose of asking whether the minister is going to make a statement in reply to some of the questions that were asked. I believe the minister has an appointment tonight and I am trying to facilitate matters by asking if he will give us this information. Can he give us some idea of what the expenditures will be in the coming fiscal year, what they were in the regular and supplementary estimates for the present fiscal year, and can he give us some assurance with reference to the level of services?

I do not want to repeat it again but I am thinking of the statement made by Dr. Butler that services would have to be curtailed and the nursing home would have to be closed in Fort Laird. Is this being completely reversed? I think the minister will admit that the statement he made at the beginning of discussion on these estimates was quite brief and did not give any detailed information as to what the expenditures will be or the level of services. What did he mean by saying the directives will be corrected?

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Chairman, I hope to make a statement when all hon. members have completed their comments. I thank the hon. member for his indulgence but my deadline is past and so there is no point in rushing to suit me. I have to deal in one way or another with the comments made by the hon. member for Winnipeg North which I regard as being of the greatest gravity so far as the Department of National Health and Welfare is concerned.

Mr. Dinsdale: If the minister wants to make his statement now I think it might curtail further discussion because most of the discussion has arisen as a result of the inadequacy of his initial statement and the lack of details.

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Chairman, the main question that has been asked, and it is a perfectly reasonable one, is whether the level of services will be maintained in the forthcoming year as it has been in the preceding year and my answer, of course, is yes. I can assure hon. members that services now being provided will be continued in the coming fiscal year and they will not be permitted to deteriorate.

The level of expenditures for Indian health services has increased over the preceding year. The estimates for 1967-68 were $23.9 million and for the fiscal year 1968-69 the estimates are $24.3 million, an increase of about $400,000. We have not reduced—

Mr. Douglas: May I ask the minister if that $23.9 million included any supplementaries or overexpenditures or was it only the regular estimates?

Mr. MacEachen: I cannot answer that definitely but I regard it as the total expenditure. I will be glad to check on it.

Mr. Barnett: Would the minister relate the figures he has just given to the items in the estimates so we can find them?

Mr. MacEachen: Strictly speaking, Mr. Chairman, the debate we have had is quite out of order in terms of these estimates, although possibly it is not fully out of order because I suppose one could have this debate under general administration, but these amounts that are proposed are not covered in the supplementary estimates before the committee at the present time. I am talking about total expenditures for Indian health services in 1967-68 and 1968-69.

The situation is quite clear. Even though we were able to increase the estimated expenditures for 1968-69 for Indian health services we were not able to increase them, because of the financial situation, as rapidly as we had done in the preceding year, particularly to take account of the increases in population and rising costs. That was a decision taken by the government that was implemented by the Indian health services branch, and with a given budget, although increased, they were obligated to make the best possible use of it.

If hon. members who spoke today had spoken prior to my statement I think their complaint would have been justified. I undertook to review the situation, which I have done very carefully, and I have come to the conclusion, and I have been supported by the government, that there ought not to be any curtailment in the services now being provided. For that reason I have stated that these services will be continued in the coming fiscal year and will not be permitted to deteriorate.

Mr. Douglas: At this point may I ask the minister whether that means he will make up the difference? I take it that in the regular estimates he is budgeting for $24.3 million for 1968-69. Does that mean he will make up the difference by supplementary estimates?

Mr. MacEachen: I will be obligated to review my own departmental expenditures and to find out whether there are deductions I can make in order to finance this aspect of the program, or whether I will have to seek reductions in other expenditures in other departments. If that fails I will have to come back to the house for additional funds.

Mr. Douglas: Does the minister have an estimate of how much money is involved in the difference?

Mr. MacEachen: I would not like to make a firm statement on that point.

Mr. Schreyer: Does the net effect of the minister's remarks on his revised course of action mean the cancellation of those directives issued earlier under file No. 100-1(M1)?

Mr. MacEachen: The only directive or memorandum that has been communicated to the Indian bands and chiefs in council is the memorandum which has been quoted from by the hon. member for Burnaby-Coquitlam, and where necessary this memorandum, and any others within the department, will be reviewed and amended to carry forward the statement of policy I have made.

Mr. Dinsdale: I also quoted from that memorandum and I think this is where the greatest damage was done because it was addressed to all the chiefs and to all the Indian councils without exception. It was the memorandum that created the feeling of uncertainty and insecurity which has aroused all the protests across the country. A lot of ground has been lost in good understanding between the government and the Indian population because of it. I think it would be most important that a countermanding directive be issued and an apology sent to these chiefs.

Mr. MacEachen: I think the request for an apology is going a bit too far. It seems to me that the memorandum to the Indian chiefs is a statement of policy that has been followed. I would question, however, the accuracy of the first sentence which states that the resources for Indian health services—I think this is the wording—have been drastically or sharply reduced. That certainly is not the case. If you equate dollars to resources then, on the basis of the estimates, that is not the case. This is an inaccuracy in the memorandum which I regret, but the rest of it is, I believe, a statement of policy which is not fundamentally new. I think it is reasonably sound to propose that Indians who can provide for themselves should be expected to do so. It is not our purpose to encourage dependency on the part of any group in the population. Where Indians through their own efforts or through the band are able to provide for themselves then certainly we ought to welcome that trend.

In the memorandum to the Indian chiefs we have stated that when this is not possible and where health service is not available from the provincial governments we would assist. I do not wish to pursue the point, but I believe it ought to be borne in mind that the Indians are residents of the provinces. One of the objectives for progress of the Indian population is certainly to integrate them within the general population of a province. If they are to be regarded as separate citizens to be treated on a different basis in respect of education, health and welfare then the process of integration within the total community will be impeded and they will never become equal citizens as we all want them to be.

I had expected that the provinces would be prepared to take responsibility in this situation. The reaction, certainly from the provinces of Alberta and Manitoba, was less than enthusiastic. In the circumstances, pending a willingness on the part of the provinces the federal government is prepared to assume some responsibility in continuing the present level of services, but I am not for a moment withdrawing from the validity of that position which I think is a sound one not only for the population but for the country as a whole.

Mr. Dinsdale: Mr. Chairman, this is precisely the reason the government and the minister have become involved in difficulty in respect of this problem. I am referring to the dogmatism and the arbitrary attitude of the minister whether he likes it or not. The point we have been trying to make is that this was done without consultation. Certainly the provinces are willing to accept their obligation and this is gradually being done, but for the past several months the provinces have been asking the federal government for a meeting between their responsible ministers and the responsible ministers of the government of Canada so that they could discuss ways and means to implement the program that the minister has just outlined.

The provinces complain because a directive was superimposed without prior consultation just as was the case in respect of medicare. The government is going ahead with medicare which will inflate the federal health budget and at the other end of the scale it is cutting off health services to a group that cannot afford to lose them. This is inconsistency and confusion. The hon. member for the Northwest Territories referred to it as confusing. As it is we have set back progress by years because of this foolish manœuvring.

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Chairman, the minister by his recent action has accomplished one thing. I am quite prepared to give him full credit for it even though I believe he accomplished it accidentally and without understanding what was happening. He has brought home to the general Canadian public in a way which otherwise might have taken a long time to do the whole mumbo-jumbo of the situation that has existed for a long period with regard to the provision of health services to Indians.

Despite what the hon. member for Brandon-Souris has just said about the program being set back for many years—normally I would agree with him—I think the result of this situation may be that it will create not only in the minds of the Indian people but in the minds of the Canadian people generally a climate of opinion which will bring to an end the sort of stupid régime we have had for a long time in this field. It is all very well for the Minister of National Health and Welfare to talk about the desirability of the Indian people becoming self-supporting, self-respecting, integrated citizens and residents of the provinces of Canada, but as long as these stupid paternalistic directives go out to the Indian bands and chiefs without rhyme or reason the very ends he said we should be seeking are being defeated.

If the minister has given the Canadian people an understanding of this situation then I suppose we in this house should sing loud hosannas and thank him for what he has done. However, the statement the minister made that he intends to review the estimates and look into nooks and crannies of his department in an effort to find where he can squeeze a little cream out of what is already skim milk in other corners of his department so that he can reverse these paternalistic directives, to my mind is not the answer to the situation in which we are involved. While I may agree that in his statement he has reversed his course, there certainly is nothing in what he has said so far which will provide a solution.

I believe we should understand just what the situation is in respect of this matter. Other members who have participated in this debate have made passing reference to what the constitutional situation is with regard to the provision of health care for Indians. Reference has been made to the medicine chest clause in certain treaties. That clause may provide some philosophical background, shall I say, for our responsibility, but in practical terms of today's society I think most Indian people would agree that it does not mean too much. It is one of these fetishes that has been there which really never had any practical application.

I have been interested in this situation because I have had inquiries from Indian residents of my constituency concerning whether they will receive the health care services to which they are entitled from time to time. I must say that the only statutory authority I have been able to find anywhere—and I have made inquiries beyond my own knowledge—is contained in section 72 of the Indian Act where it says that the governor in council may make regulations to provide medical treatment and health services for Indians. This places the legislative responsibility, as far as I can see, four-square on the superintendent general of Indian affairs.

However, I have made inquiries and, unless I have been incorrectly informed, at no time has the governor in council ever enacted any such regulation as is authorized by section 72 of the Indian Act. Therefore the plain fact of the matter is that there does not appear to be any legislative authority anywhere for the provision of health services to the Indian people except so far as parliament by an annual vote decides that money shall be made available for medical services through the Department of National Health and Welfare.

I am not in any way criticizing the effort that has been made by responsible people in the administration of national health and welfare to provide these services with such funds as have been made available to them. What I am suggesting is that over the years they have had to compress their activities within the corners of this old hand-out policy. If a person is going to die in the absence of a little help we may give him a little help. While we may have built hospitals and paid doctors, the very directives the minister has referred to and the statement he has made today indicate that this is as far as the federal government seems prepared to go with the hand-out principle of health care for the Indian and Eskimo people.

This is the real issue that has been highlighted by the inept bungling which has taken place in the last two or three weeks. I hope that not only the ministers but members of parliament generally will recognize the full truth of the situation which now stands clearly revealed before us. There is an old saying that if you sow the wind you will reap a whirlwind. I think the Minister of National Health and Welfare has been indirectly caught up in a whirlwind created in part by the actions of the minister of Indian affairs.

Mr. Laing: He has reaped the wind today.

Mr. Barnett: He may have thought at some time that it might have been a whirlwind. The point I was going to make is that in another item of the supplementary estimates under the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development there is a vote providing additional funds for an activity of the Indian affairs branch which I think is more to be commended than any other. I refer to the vote for additional funds for the education of Indian people. As the minister of Indian affairs has said on more than one occasion in the house, we have been increasing the amount of these funds at a considerable rate over the last few years. That program has had general commendation in the house.

Mr. Laing: Would my hon. friend answer a question?

Mr. Barnett: I will try, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Laing: Would he be in favour of the continuation of a guarantee for all time that the taxpayers of Canada should support the medical accounts of all Indians, several hundred of whom are employees of the government of Canada at this time?

Mr. Barnett: My answer to the question as the minister puts it is, certainly not. In a way I think the question answered itself, and this is exactly the point I was leading up to. Perhaps the minister will bear with me for another two or three minutes.

I was saying that in the supplementary estimates under his department there is an item for additional funds for the education of Indian people. We have been providing funds for this purpose, and this really brings me back to the point where I began. The fact that there are more educated people among the Indians today means that they are no longer going to be content with the kind of paternalistic directives issued by the Minister of National Health and Welfare. They are not going to accept that sort of thing any longer. They are going to stand up more and more—and we have seen indications of this—for their full rights in this field as citizens of Canada along with the rest of us. This means in my books that it is not sufficient for us to stop where the Minister of National Health and Welfare has left us by saying that we are going to restore the level of the services that were proposed to be reduced. We have to move more positively and directly into the field, which will make unnecessary any considerations of the kind raised in the question asked by the minister.

It is not my intention at this moment to pursue this question at length. If I did I would go into the whole question of things which in my view properly belong within the area of responsibility of the minister of indian affairs. However, I want to point out that this is the reason I decided to raise this question now. So far as the statutes of Canada are concerned the matter we have been discussing is primarily within the administrative responsibility of the minister of Indian affairs.

I am not suggesting that I expect the Minister of National Health and Welfare entirely on his own responsibility to go beyond the point where he left us when he was speaking a few minutes ago by saying, whether he admits it or not, we are sorry for what we did and will try to do a little better. If we are not going to go beyond the kind of situation which brought about this public concern, in which these services are dependent on the whims and fancies of the government of the day or on the amount of money parliament votes in any given year, if there is a general policy in the department to start chopping off these services we are certainly not going to hear the end of the kind of debate we have been having this afternoon.

I have deliberately attempted to tie this question to the responsibility of the minister of indian affairs, not because I think we can deal with all the matters which come within the jurisdiction of his department today or before the house recesses but rather because I feel in my mind that this is a more positive note on which to consider this whole question and that we should not simply leave it with the restoration of certain cuts or minor amendments of certain paternalistic directives issued under the authority of the Minister of National Health and Welfare.

Item agreed to.

Welfare Services—

40c. Administration, Operation and Maintenance including grants as detailed in the Estimates, $1.

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Chairman, this item relates to the side of the minister's department which deals with the administration of welfare services and the various income maintenance programs. I have a few words I wish to say in this regard. The minister knows I am particularly interested in these programs, and if I were to say all that is on my mind I might be accused of taking part in a filibuster.

Mr. Baldwin: We wouldn't dream of that.

Mr. Knowles: I am glad to have that confirmation from the hon. member for Peace River.

An hon. Member: He had a big grin when he said it.

Mr. Knowles: There is a particular point I wish to come to presently but in leading up to it may I remind the minister of what he knows, namely, that I feel the social security programs which we have in effect, while good, could be substantially improved. As the minister knows, I feel that the income test, as he calls it, which is attached to the guaranteed income security, should be done away with and that in its place we should be paying an old age security pension to all those who qualify by age and residence without any means, needs or income test of any kind. Indeed, I think the time has come for the amount of that pension to be reviewed. There are a number of responsible bodies in the country which are now suggesting that the figure should be of the order of $125 a month, and this is my view.

I say to the Minister of National Health and Welfare that I read just about everything he writes on the question of a guaranteed annual income. I find his thoughts interesting, even though I do not always agree with him. In fact, I am not yet convinced that the guaranteed income supplement which he brought into this house is a true expression of the principle and philosophy of a guaranteed annual income.

In this connection, the latest article that I have read on the subject is a very interesting one by Reuben C. Baetz, executive director of the Canadian Welfare Council, in the March-April issue of that council's publication known as "Canadian Welfare". It may be said that many of the points which Dr. Baetz has put together are points that are in the literature on this subject but it is, nevertheless, an interesting and very worth-while article. There is one particular point in it to which I shall come in just a moment.

The point of my taking time on these estimates to address myself to the minister is that I want to impress upon him the fact that if he is going to see sustained the value of the income maintenance programs which he administers, he will have to concern himself with some of our income tax provisions. He will have to make stronger representations to the Minister of Finance than I think he has yet made. I took up with him a while ago the case of people on the guaranteed income supplement who find that they meet a test on one hand so they can have their income brought up to a certain minimum level, only to find that the Minister of Finance then dips into that amount and reduces them to a lower level.

The Minister of Finance and the Minister of National Health and Welfare both had a pat answer to that problem. Their answer was that income tax has to be administered generally and that one cannot play favourites as between those people whose income is earned directly and those who get it as a result of a welfare program. Neither of the ministers faced up to the real answer to the problem, which is the need to raise the level at which income tax applies. The significance of what I am now saying is that a minister of national health and welfare who brings in these income maintenance programs has to be concerned about this other aspect of the matter.

Let me give a precise example which has been drawn to my attention. It is the case of an actual person and it demonstrates very clearly my concern in this area. It is the case of a person whom we shall call Joe Doe. He does not like to be called John Doe, so we will call him Joe. He is a retired civil servant. His pension as a retired civil servant is $170 a month, or $2,040 a year. Joe Doe is also a veteran and has therefore been able to qualify for the war veterans allowance. Since there is a ceiling of $245 a month on the permissible income for a war veterans allowance recipient who is married, the total war veterans allowance he was able to get has been $75 a month. So his two pensions, the retired civil servant's pension and the war veterans allowance, gave him a total of $245 a month or $2,940 a year. Up until the end of last year, 1967, that was his position—an income from these two sources of $2,940 a year. I point out to the Minister of National Health and Welfare that because the war veterans allowance is non-taxable, this Mr. Doe did not have to pay any income tax. His taxable income was only $2,040 a year, $60 less than the $2,100 level. We do not have to worry about the extra $500 that was available to him, because he was under the $2,100 level.

But Joe Doe turned 67 late last year, so starting in January this year he qualified for the old age security pension of $75 a month. We will not bother about the $1.50 additional for the moment. He qualified for $75 a month or $900 a year. Immediately Mr. Doe starts receiving this $75 a month old age security, he loses his war veterans allowance because his old age security of $75 and his retired civil service pension of $170 bring him to the ceiling of $245 a month. So in terms of gross income he is right where he was—$245 a month or $2,940 a year.

But here is the jolt. Old age security income is taxable, whereas war veterans allowance income is not taxable. So Joe Doe finds himself with $2,940 a year income in 1968, the same as he had last year, but $840 of that is taxable to the tune of something over $100. The result is that this married man, this married veteran, this married retired civil servant, by having part of his income changed from war veterans allowance to old age security has a net income position more than $100 less than it was.

I have tried to make the point several times, and I make it again so that no one comes back at me with respect to it, that I think it is proper that old age security income be taxable income. I think if we are going to have a means test—and I believe there should be no means test at all—it has to be taxable income. But on the face of them situations like this do seem grossly unfair. Let me repeat it. Here is a veteran who by making this transfer, which he has to make, has the same gross income but has $100 less real income.

Situations like this demonstrate the point I was making a moment ago, that the Minister of National Health and Welfare must be more concerned than I think he has yet been about our income taxation policy. But what happens, if I may put it in personal terms, is that he gives money with one of the government's hands, and the Minister of Finance takes it back with another. The minister may tell me the reason this problem has arisen is that we have raised the levels to which we guarantee people's income. That is fine. But surely, the answer to this is the necessity of raising the income tax exemption levels, certainly to not less than $3,000 for a married person.

I am not asking for anything special for Joe Doe that is not available to people whose income is entirely their own or who have no connection with the war veterans allowance; but this case highlights the problem and I think stresses the need for coupling with increasing old age pension programs, increasing social welfare programs, a look at our whole income tax problem.

I said I would make a passing reference to the article by Reuben Baetz in the current issue of "Canadian Welfare". I invite the minister to read it if he has not already done so. There are four points that he makes as to the way in which we can get at the problem of a guaranteed annual income. He indicates the various difficulties that there are and says it may take time to achieve the goal of a guaranteed annual income. Therefore, he urges that in the meantime we take steps in the taxation field along the lines recommended by the Carter commission on taxation and that we cease taxing incomes below a recognized poverty line.

Well, I suggest to the Minister of National Health and Welfare that he must agree that at today's living costs, at today's wage standards, at today's standard of living, that is something higher than $3,000. The poverty line has perhaps come closer to $4,000. It is not good enough for the Minister of National Health and Welfare to sponsor programs to bring people up to this level and then have other taxation programs that take them down. I invite the minister to study carefully the case of Joe Doe which I put on the record, and I invite him to face the fact that no matter how much he may believe he has done wonders in the social security field there is still a great deal to be done to provide adequate security for our elderly people and to make sure that, having provided it to them, it is not taken away.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall vote 40c carry?

Mr. Peters: Six o'clock.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Carried.

Item agreed to.

At six o'clock the committee took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The committee resumed at 8 p.m.

The Chairman: Order. The questions to be raised at the time of adjournment tonight are as follows: the hon. member for Brandon-Souris—Indian affairs, request for reconstitution of parliamentary committee; the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway—consumer and corporate affairs, investigation into increase in price of milk.

House in committee of supply, estimates of the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development, supplementary estimates C, vote 5c.

DEPARTMENT OF INDIAN AFFAIRS AND NORTHERN DEVELOPMENT

5c. Administration, Operation and Maintenance, $2,000,000.

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, I should just like to ask the minister a couple of questions in connection with one particular reservation in which I am interested as a result of redistribution. The reservation at Gogama is one that I have had the opportunity to visit. I was surprised to find there a number of young Indians who were not sufficiently trained to find permanent employment, and who therefore worked on a seasonal basis only. In discussing the potential of these young people I was impressed by the fact that some of them had had a fairly good basic education, one having gone to grade 12. However, none of them had received any kind of vocational training. One went to a retraining school to upgrade his education, but he was not even sure whether he had passed the course.

On this occasion, Mr. Chairman, I was accompanied by two provincial M.L.A.'s from that area as well as by the hon. member for Nickel Belt, and we were given to understand that very little attention had been paid to these people by the Indian affairs officer. In fact, shortly afterward I visited the Chapleau headquarters of this district and found that some of the responsibility had been transferred to the Sudbury office, and also I think to Sault Ste. Marie.

As I say, Mr. Chairman, very little assistance or encouragement had been given to these young Indians to retrain themselves for permanent employment. I learned from talking to some of them that one of the reasons they wanted to leave the reservation, which obviously was not going to provide them with any future, was that they regarded the reservation as a lot of people during the latter days of the depression regarded the family farm, namely as a place to go home to when the outside world became too cruel. Although this did not solve their problems, the reservation was a place they could return to.

In discussing their potential for retraining they pointed out to me that there was no desire on their part to undertake retraining unless it would provide them with the opportunity of becoming permanently employed in a full-time occupation. They wanted a trade which would allow them to leave the reservation for good and establish themselves in an occupation where they would not always be the ones who were first to be laid off and the last to be hired. This was the history of the usual type of employment they engaged in—the extra gang on the railroad, the seeding gang for the department of lands and forests.

In this case, Mr. Chairman, it seemed to me that if the Indian agent had done his job he would have appealed to the manpower department or some government branch to assist in retraining these Indians. Incidentally, they said that they had not seen the nurse for three months or the Indian agent for from six to eight months. He travels across from Sultan, which is probably not more than two hours drive from the reservation, and surely he does not have so much work in the area that he is too busy to visit them.

Since this item deals with education of Indians I think the minister should indicate what sort of retraining is offered by the Indian affairs branch and whether they are aware that the Indians require the sort of training that would give them equal opportunity with the other people in the community, if they did leave the reservation.

It appears to me, Mr. Chairman, that some counselling in this regard is required. I was particularly shocked when one young fellow told me he had upgraded his education under a federal program to grade 10, but was sent home at the end of the course without being informed whether he had passed. There did seem to be a lack of initiative not only on his part but on the part of the agent, and also on the part of the school which had spent money in improving his education. He should at least have been told whether he had passed the course.

I was also disturbed to find in my discussions with 15 or 20 young Indians that they did not appear to have any goal to work toward. I think that in training these Indians for some vocation the Indian affairs branch should pursue some sort of goal. I think all hon. members will agree that the Indians have to overcome many difficulties not encountered by others. Their main problem is being uprooted from a protective reservation, or farm as they call it, and placed in a community where they have no friends and where because of their heritage other people continually look down their noses at them.

I asked a young girl of 12 or 13 years, whether, after she finished high school, she wanted to be a nurse or a teacher. She replied that she did not know. I said, "Have you ever thought about it?" She said no, that she had not. Then one of the boys piped up and said, "She doesn't need to worry; when she is 16 she will get married to a white man, so why worry?" That shows the state of apathy some of our people have fallen into. They feel they have no future, and that is where problems arise. I also note that though some Indians are entitled to veterans preference, they are not getting it. The only job some of the men can get is on a section gang, planting trees.

One of the other members of our party was in charge of either the public school or secondary school educational system in the Sudbury area. I may be wrong; he may have been the principal of one of the area's separate schools. In any event, our party was concerned about the lack of facilities to take students to school and bring them back home. Of course I have heard differences of opinion about whether it is best to educate Indian children in their own environment or amalgamate them into the school system of a nearby municipality.

Perhaps the minister could look into this aspect. The people on this reservation have been moved at least once in the last 15 or 20 years. A number of four room houses eight or ten miles from town could be used as schools. It seems to me that instead of spending $50,000 to $70,000 putting in new roads, it would be better if we moved these houses to the edge of the town, bought some land and established an Indian settlement there. The advantages to Indian education are obvious. The houses are sitting on cement abutments and therefore could be easily moved.

Before redistribution I had not had much experience with Indian reservations, though I shall gain some experience in the future. It seems to me, speaking particularly of the Indians on the Mattagami reserve, that the minister ought to have received better advice than he has from his executive officers or Indian agents. There are no vehicles on the reserve, except for a snow cruiser. To cash the cheque that the department sends them costs the Indians about $5 for the trip in each direction. Instead of keeping them on the reservation the government ought to be providing training opportunities for young Indians who want to be trained. The results might be surprising. Judging from my conversations on the reservations, young Indians want to be assured that they will be trained to do a job which will enable them to be employed permanently, so that they will not be the last to be hired and the first to be fired, as is the case today.

The Chairman: Shall the item carry?

Mr. Laing: Perhaps I might take this opportunity to give the committee some idea of the extent to which we are pressing Indian education today. Of our total budget in the forthcoming year of $140 million, $56 million is for education alone. Our aim is the integration of Indian children with white students in the province, and we are rapidly succeeding in our objective. At present over 50 per cent of Indian children of school age are attending schools operated by the provinces. In my province of British Columbia that figure has reached 62 per cent, and that is fine.

The hon. member for Timiskaming has hit us in one of the more difficult areas, the northern areas of the provinces where the reservations are remote and where, because Indian people want to stay as a family, the individual is hesitant to leave. Yet it seems to me we are doing a great deal of good there.

Today we have some 240 Indian children resident in Ottawa taking classes. We pay for them a monthly housing allowance—I think it is $70—give them a little spending money, and so on. Our problem today is not serious in areas within 100 miles north of the United States boundary; it exists in the area the hon. member spoke of and even farther north in the territories where, according to indications, the reservations contain few resources. Often there is no work on them, except a little seasonal bush work in pulp, and so on. Any young man who wants a full time job must migrate out of there, and we are very conscious of this and working as rapidly as possible to try to solve problems. We are moving families out on an experimental basis. We have put a group, under a pilot plan, into Elliot Lake. Originally there were 20 families, but 11 went back before the course was over. Probably we may learn as much from those who went back as from those who stayed. We also have a housing program for those who have jobs and can convince us they can carry the cost of a house. We have set up a second mortgage arrangement over ten years, after which the mortgage is discharged. The amount is $6,000. In addition we are giving them $1,000 outright for furnishings. As I say, that indicates the direction of our efforts.

The educational system today is better than it was five years ago, and we are getting a very good response. I am aware that there is difficulty in the particular area mentioned by the hon. member but I think he will agree with me that if we brought down 40 or 50 young men to Toronto or a place like that, and put them into a school, we would quickly lose some of them. A great many of them would return, and that is the difficulty. I think Indians require a certain maturity before being brought down from the reservation. In other words, I think an Indian can leave the reservation too soon as well as too late. We should bear all these things in mind. However, I appreciate the hon. member's comments.

Mr. Orlikow: I wish to direct a question to the minister. Before the reorganization of the manpower training programs, for which the federal government has assumed total responsibility, I am given to understand that under program No. 5, as it was called, approximately 2,000 Indians had qualified and were taking training courses for which the government paid. The government also gave a training allowance. It was not as generous as the allowances now being paid. Nevertheless, training allowances were paid.

I understand that the courses which the majority of Indians were taking were not really courses to fit them for paying jobs in urban centres; Indians, particularly those on remote reserves, do not have the education to qualify them for courses designed to turn out bricklayers or steel workers, for example. But they were taking courses fitting them to fit a better life on the reserves—instruction in methods of building houses, and so on. I understand that the training courses now under the jurisdiction of the department of manpower are oriented almost completely toward training to provide paying jobs on the urban labour market. I am told that last year well over 2,000 Indians were being trained in Manitoba, and that the number has now dropped to only a few hundred. Is it the intention of the department of Indian affairs to develop programs which will at least provide the Indians with the type of training they received before the reorganization, which took place under the department of manpower?

Mr. Laing: The type of assistance formerly given by the department of manpower has been referred to by the hon. member for Timiskaming. It went only so far. It was the department's view that it was not justified in making the type of investment it was making in this field, because the results were not good enough; they wanted faster results from their policy of helping people to change from one job to another. The Indian people, as pointed out by the hon. member for Timiskaming, have to begin at another level. All this has imposed an added burden on my department.

We are extending our range and introducing programs which involve the movement of considerable numbers of people, recognizing that Indian families like to stay together. In co-operation with the department of manpower we moved about 350 people into the Okanagan for seasonal employment—employment was available on a fairly steady basis from the middle of March until October. The results were excellent; it would seem that the Indians are happier to take jobs which provide a change of scenery, a move from one place to another.

We have nothing but the highest praise from the fruit growers of that area and we are expecting to step up this program during the current year. To a lesser degree the same plan has been followed in southern Ontario, bringing in Indians from the northern reaches of the province. Here we can hope for a useful secondary result, because the younger people, as they become familiar with the industrial climate in the southern part of the province, may acquire a confidence and a capacity to make more extensive contacts there. This consideration does not of course relate to Indians living on reserves in the southern part of Ontario, but to those in the upper reaches of the province and in the far north. I believe we are making great progress under our educational system in the southern areas where Indian children are integrated in the schools with white children. The results are most gratifying.

Mr. Orlikow: My understanding is that before the change in arrangements between the federal and provincial governments more than 2,000 Indians were taking courses of one kind or another. Can the minister tell us how many Indians in Manitoba are taking courses today?

Is the hon. gentleman's department filling the gap by doing the work which was formerly done by the joint federal-provincial program? That is the first question I should like to put to the minister; I do not expect him to have the figures before him, but perhaps he can let us have this information on another occasion.

My second question is: what is the department doing in co-operation with the Department of Labour to ensure that the large-scale development in mining, in lumber and, hopefully, in the pulp and paper industry in northern Manitoba, is leading to the increased recruitment of Indians as employees. Each of the industries I have mentioned requires large numbers of workers. For example the International Nickel Company at Thompson has announced—I am speaking from memory —that in the next ten years it will be doubling its labour force. At present the company is carrying on an intensive campaign to encourage immigrants to come to Canada. Problems are arising because some of the recruiters have been making the most extravagant claims to workers in Germany, for example.

How much is the government doing to encourage such companies as this to hire local labour rather than go to Europe and other places for their workers? It seems to me that a major effort should be made by the department in co-operation with the department of manpower to persuade these companies to hire Indians. How many Indians are on the labour force at Thompson, for example where four or five thousand people are working for International Nickel? It seems to me that an approach along these lines would be the best way of helping Indians to get profitable work, enabling them to look after themselves and their families.

Mr. Laing: I do not have the exact figures here, but I can get them for the hon. member. I am told there are some 70 pupils in Manitoba receiving vocational training—which is not many. We operated about 20 adult classes in the province last year.

The hon. member asked what the department is doing to improve employment opportunities for Indians. The best example I can give him is the contract we made with the Anvil Mining Company in the Yukon. This company has undertaken that initially 5 per cent of its work force will consist of native people, the proportion to rise to 25 per cent within five years.

This is a result of the influence we were able to use because we contributed in part to the construction of roads and the provision of power in connection with this enterprise.

Mr. Orlikow: Yes, but at Thompson the provincial government played exactly the role which the minister says the federal government played in the case he mentioned. It seems to me the federal government should be working with the provincial government to encourage International Nickel, and other companies that go into the area, to employ as many of the local Indian people as possible. They are doing what they have traditionally done, setting up elaborate recruiting programs in Great Britain, Germany and every other country in western Europe.

• (8:30 p.m.)

Mr. Schreyer: On this item for $2 million I wish to point out that the department's policy is to encourage more integration of Indian children in non-federal provincial schools. In my area of Manitoba this policy has been operational for a brief period and so far seems to have met with success. But we still have a long way to go in respect to reserves in the more northern areas, far beyond the settled regions.

On at least two reserves in the area I represent, children do not show up for school for many weeks of the year, during springtime, trapline time as it is called. This is a long standing problem, and I am just curious to know if the department has come up with new ideas with respect to the education of Indian children on these more remote reserves. It is a basic, elementary problem, and that is all the more reason that there should be more soul searching on the part of the department.

The minister will recall that several months ago when the Department of Manpower and Immigration decided not to continue providing Indian people with the basic literacy skills upgrading program, considerable dissatisfaction was expressed by some band councillors and chiefs. On the late show I raised this question on one occasion and I recall the minister saying that if this remained the policy of the manpower department the responsibility would be all the heavier on his department to increase its activities and expenditures with respect to adult education. Is his department's effort in this direction significantly on the increase, or has it reached its practical limit?

Mr. Laing: Mr. Chairman, we increased the amount of education we provide in this area to take up the slack when the manpower department decided it was not economic for it to continue their program. This gives me an opportunity to explain why we are asking for this $2 million. Principally it is because the school boards have raised their costs to us. We pay 100 per cent of the cost of education in the provincial system. The estimate of $18 million was based on experience of the previous year, but in most instances the cost of education increased over the past year and so we have to pay a higher rate than previously. In addition we are undertaking this adult education work. I could give the hon. member the details of the extent to which we have occupied the position vacated by the manpower department, and I will be glad to write him in this respect.

Mr. Schreyer: If a reserve is large, so large that it might justify the construction of a federal school, is it still the department's policy to encourage the integration of Indian children in non-federal schools? I am thinking of a large reserve adjacent to a town that has a good conventional provincial school.

Mr. Laing: Yes, sir, we are doing that in many places. I would much prefer to carry the cost of bussing the children to an integrated school, so long as it is not too distant, than to incur the cost of building a federal school on a reserve.

Mr. Fawcett: It is not my intention to make a speech or ask a question, but merely to make a representation to the minister. When the hon. member for Timiskaming was speaking, possibly his story rang a bell in the mind of the minister because this is a question I have taken up with him. It concerns a reserve in my riding which will be located in a new riding after redistribution, and one of my complaints is with respect to the location of the reserve. My hon. friend from Timiskaming, with whom I visited the reserve, mentioned that it was eight or ten miles from the local town. Actually the distance is 18 or 20 miles.

On occasion there are opportunities for Indian men to be employed as guides during the summer, but because of the location of this reserve the men on it miss out on these opportunities. There are two tourist operators in the area who sometimes require the services of guides, but because the Indian reserve is such a distance from town they do not have time to go out and collect the guides for this work. My only point in speaking now is to make a further representation to the minister to move this reserve closer to the town.

I strongly urge the minister to look into the situation on the Mattagami reserve and see if something can be done to move it closer to the main centre of population. In passing, and dealing with education, may I say that when we visited a reserve and we entered a home it was always evident whether the children had received some education.

Discrimination is practised in the employment of Indians. When the Bell Telephone Company constructed a new pole line in the area it did not hire Indians, even though they requested employment on the work gangs. True, not many workmen were involved, but the Indians felt badly when they were refused work, particularly since their income from trapping is now so low.

Mr. Peters: May I ask one question, Mr. Chairman. In respect of this particular situation on the reservation, I am wondering whether the Indian agents are provided with any type of assistance that would allow them to provide counselling service in this field of retraining or training people so that permanent employment might be provided for those who have the necessary education to take advantage of it. Because of the distance to the centres where the training would be available it would seem to me that this counselling service should be provided. It seems that in this case the agent did not have the opportunity or perhaps the facilities that would enable him to provide this type of counselling. I am wondering whether there are any counsellors available who could be sent around once in a while to help in this field of job retraining.

Mr. Laing: Mr. Chairman, I do not have the information which would enable me to answer the hon. gentleman's question. I will endeavour to obtain it and give him an answer.

Northern Program—

20c. Administration, Operation and Maintenance including grants as detailed in the Estimates, $1,860,778.

21c. Reimbursement of Northern Administration Revolving Fund for the value of stores which have become obsolete, unserviceable, lost or destroyed, $24,514.

30c. Northern Mineral Development Assistance Grants—To extend the purposes of Indian Affairs and Northern Development Vote 30 of the Main Estimates for 1967-68 to authorize the expenditure in the current and subsequent fiscal years of amounts not exceeding in the aggregate the sum of $6,500,000 for Northern Mineral Development Assistance Grants and to reduce the total commitment authorization granted pursuant to the provisions of Northern Affairs and National Resources Vote 7A of Appropriation Act No. 9, 1966 and Indian Affairs and Northern Development Vote 30b of Appropriation Act No. 7, 1967 to an amount not exceeding in the aggregate the sum of $18,000,000, $3,500,000.

34c. Payment to the Government of the Yukon Territory in accordance with an agreement to be entered into by the Minister of Finance, with the approval of the Governor in Council, on behalf of the Government of Canada, and the Commissioner of the Yukon Territory, on behalf of the Government of the Yukon Territory, such agreement to provide (on such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon) that the Government of the Yukon Territory will not impose, levy or collect individual income taxes, corporation income taxes, corporation taxes or succession duties, as defined in the agreement; the payment to the Government of the Yukon Territory under the agreement to be calculated on the following bases:

(a) A subsidy of eighty cents per head in respect of the population of the Yukon Territory as determined by the 1961 census;

(b) A grant in aid of the Government and Council of the Yukon Territory of $30,000; and

(c) An operating grant in the amount of $3,054,000 as a contribution towards the estimated operating deficit of the Government of the Yukon Territory in the current fiscal year; together with payments in respect of amortization payments on outstanding loans for capital expenditures in the Yukon Territory, as provided in the agreement; (the amount payable in respect of the current fiscal year to be reduced by the aggregate of all interim payments made pursuant to Indian Affairs and Northern Development Vote 32 of the Main Estimates for 1967-68), $1.

36c. Reimbursement of the national and historic parks revolving fund for the value of stores which have become obsolete, unserviceable, lost or destroyed, $59,267.

Mr. Schreyer: Mr. Chairman, vote 36c is quite small but it has to do with national parks and allied matters. I should like to ask the minister whether his department has had any success in recent months in making a determination concerning the site of the proposed second national park in Manitoba. As the minister knows, this has been a subject of continuing study and investigation over the past 18 months and perhaps more. Has the province of Manitoba been more easy to deal with and has a decision been taken in this regard?

Mr. Laing: Mr. Chairman, I think in a reply some time ago in the house I indicated a survey of two areas had been taken. One I believe was close to the Ontario border. There has been some discussion but there has been no indication of haste on the part of the provincial government at this time.

As my hon. friend knows, our act requires that the provincial government obtain these properties and turn them over to us free of encumbrances. In most instances this involves an expenditure of funds and there has been a tendency of recent origin for them to postpone such expenditures. I do not wish to charge them alone with having this tendency, because that might be our posture at the present time too. However, in those areas where capital expenditure is not required I think we should move forward.

Mr. Peters: Have any overtures been made to the department concerning the development of a national park in northeastern Ontario?

Mr. Laing: My reply to that is that there are several areas which have been under rather intensive survey for the last year and a half. This is continuing at the present time.

The Chairman: This completes the supplementary estimates of the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development.

The committee will now proceed to consideration of the supplementary estimates of the Department of Labour.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOUR

(The following items were agreed to:)

5c. Administration including the promotion of Labour-Management Consultation, $30,000.

Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation—

L71c. To increase by $375,000,000 the aggregate amount that may be advanced by the Minister out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund under subsection (1) of Section 22 of the National Housing Act, 1954, for the purposes set out in that subsection, $1.

The Chairman: This completes the supplementary estimates of the Department of Labour.

The committee will now proceed to the consideration of the supplementary estimates for the Department of Justice.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

1c. Administration, including grants and contributions as detailed in the Estimates, $1.

Mr. Gilbert: Mr. Chairman, I wonder whether the Solicitor General, who is handling the estimates for the Minister of Justice, could tell us what this item is which refers to a contribution to Queen's University in defraying the costs of a Canadian conference on computers and the law to be held in June.

[Mr. Laing.]

Mr. Pennell: Mr. Chairman, the supplementary estimate 1c of the Department of Justice is a $1 item. This is to authorize a grant to Queen's University to assist in defraying the cost of a Canadian conference on computers and the law. The item is included only to obtain the necessary authority to make the grant.

The conference is scheduled to take place at Kingston, Ontario, early in June, 1968 and is being hosted by the faculty of law at Queen's University. Emphasis will be placed on legal information retrieval techniques, legislation consultation and editing programs, central registry and data banks and on property rights, privacy and related legal questions.

It is hoped to bring together at this conference delegates from Canadian and American universities, from the federal and several provincial governments, from law publishing firms, from computer manufacturers and from law firms already employing such methods for commercial purposes. Mr. J. W. Ryan will be a representative from the Department of Justice and has been asked to act as a commentator on several papers which are to be given on legislation editing, revision and consultation.

Mr. Gilbert: Would the Solicitor General or the Minister of Justice consider sending a representative from the standing committee on justice and legal affairs to this conference?

Mr. Pennell: Mr. Chairman, since this is only a $1 item, at the moment I am not in a position to grant the suggestion of the hon. member. However, if it is possible to obtain reports of this conference I will certainly see that they are made available to the hon. member and any other interested hon. members.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Chairman, I should like to direct several questions to the minister. I realize he is only the acting minister, and that he may not be in a position to answer today. However, these are questions to which I would hope the government is giving some consideration.

First of all, I wish to raise a matter which has been raised several times with the Minister of Justice. This has been highlighted today by reports which appeared in a Toronto newspaper concerning a high school student who had never been in trouble with the law before, who had an unblemished record up until now, who had planned to go to university and who appeared in court yesterday on a charge of being in posession of marijuana.

This person was given a sentence of six months.

Mr. Chairman, I do not profess to have the answer to the marijuana problem, but I do know that all the experts, if there are any—and I do not believe the police are experts—are agreed that marijuana is being used, if only once or twice, by a very large number of young people and is readily available in every university in Canada. I am sure the minister knows more about this subject than I, but I believe the experts do not agree among themselves concerning the danger of marijuana. There certainly is a good deal of argument against the suggestion which has been made by certain police authorities and others that from marijuana one frequently graduates to the traditional narcotics. The experts certainly are not in agreement that the way to deal with the marijuana problem is to sentence everyone to a prison term. Yet, according to the answers to some questions asked recently, that is the policy the department apparently is following.

I hold no brief for this young man who was convicted yesterday. It may be that he had a relatively large amount of marijuana in his possession, and it may be that he was not a user but was actually selling it. However, from the two newspaper accounts which I have read there does not seem to have been any investigation in depth carried out or any evidence that he was in fact selling or pushing the marijuana. It seems to me the department ought not to fall as easily as it seems to have fallen into the policy whereby crown prosecutors are virtually instructed to advise the courts to impose jail sentences on first offenders.

It seems to me that if the police are very active it will follow that we will have thousands of young people in jail. I do not think the minister would like that to happen. However, from what I have been able to discover there are thousands of young people who on occasion try marijuana, perhaps for the first time. It is conceivable that the police in Montreal, Toronto, Ottawa or Winnipeg may find 15 young people smoking marijuana, 12 of whom are trying it for the first time. Under present circumstances they would all get a jail sentence. I hope the department will have a very hard and careful look at this whole question in consultation with medical authorities.

In addition, I should like the minister to advise us what the department intends to do about bail problems. Today's Toronto Globe and Mail reports that two youths spent six weeks in Don jail because they were unable to raise $500 bail. Apparently they were awaiting trial after pleading not guilty to charges of possession of marijuana. It seems to me there is something wrong with our system which permits individuals to get out on bail if they have money or friends who have access to money, while at the same time it keeps two young men, such as I have mentioned, sitting in a jail in Toronto for six weeks.

I commend to the minister's attention, or to the attention of the Minister of Justice, the words of Dean Maxwell Cohen of the law school at McGill who said at a human rights conference, as reported in the Montreal Star on March 25:

> —this country's bail system is at best semi-satisfactory and corrupt. Many socialists . . . feel that most of those placed before the courts could and should be released on their own recognizance.

I am wondering whether the department is giving any thought to changing the law in respect of bail, which I think is completely unfair.

Will the minister make some comment about government intention to deal with wiretapping? Let me remind him, in the event that he has forgotten that before he became a minister he had a bill on the order paper dealing with this matter. I am disturbed by the reports on the news last night and in the papers today to the effect that Quebec provincial cabinet ministers feel they have strong evidence that their telephones are being tapped. It is a sad day in this country when ministers of the crown, let alone ordinary citizens, have to worry about what they say on the telephone when talking perhaps to deputy ministers because their telephones may be tapped. Is the government giving any consideration to legislation which would make wiretapping and electronic eavesdropping a crime punishable by something which would at least discourage this widespread practice? I am sure the minister will agree that this is taking place.

Mr. Pennell: Mr. Chairman, having regard to the question raised by the hon. member in respect of wiretapping, perhaps I may be permitted to quote myself. In this way I could acknowledge the author and also indicate the consistency of my views regarding electronic devices and wiretapping. I stated publicly in Calgary last August:

> I feel that the interception of private communications either by wiretapping or by the use of electronic listening devices should be made a criminal offence, except for the purpose of collecting evidence in criminal prosecutions by law enforcement officers, where they are acting upon specific authority given in individual cases by a competent court.

I wish to say to the hon. member that I am prepared to urge that view upon my colleagues. Indeed it is my intention to do so. I am awaiting the report of the royal commission on security because this is an element which may be considered in that report.

Upon the question of bail, again if I may be so presumptuous, I should like to quote from a speech that is being delivered this evening, almost at this very moment on my behalf, by the parliamentary secretary to the Prime Minister which contains the following:

> I have now received an interim report of the Canadian committee on corrections dealing with matters of bail. The report recommends—I heartily concur in it—that the criminal code should be amended to provide for a more liberal use of summons—with warrants for arrest being restricted to use on charges of a serious nature. I also believe that courts should have better information upon which to base a decision relating to the amount of bail. Unless the presiding judge or magistrate is given full information about the accused—his background, family, employment and finances, the court may not be able to properly assess bail conditions. To condition bail primarily on the ability of the accused to raise bail funds, rather than his character and background, may tend to discriminate against the accused who is financially disabled.
> For the most part the courts have concentrated primarily on the type of offence committed as the criterion for setting bail. I would respectfully suggest that when the alleged offender appears to be a good risk for bail his income and assets should be taken into account so that there will not be discrimination against the financially poor accused. After all, bail is primarily a deterrent to prevent default of appearance for trial.

I do not hesitate to say that I propose to put this as a recommendation before my cabinet colleagues.

In conclusion let me say that the question in respect of marijuana is very serious because of increasing use. I have made a number of statements to the public on this subject. I feel it is a subject about which we do not as yet have sufficient medical knowledge. I sympathize with the suggestion made by the hon. member for Simcoe East earlier today during the question period. It is not a policy of the Department of Justice to suggest the penalty to be imposed on first offenders. Quite to the contrary, as I understand the policy, the department makes no representation as to sentence unless the court asks for the view of the prosecuting counsel. The case is then dealt with according to the facts.

If I am to judge by the number of prosecutions over the last 11 months, the use of marijuana is increasing. During the last 11 month period there were 1,915 prosecutions launched for offences involving the use of drugs, as compared to 946 prosecutions during the previous 12 months. I suggest that these figures demonstrate the scope and nature of the problem we are facing on the law enforcement side. However I look forward to having consultations with my colleague the Minister of National Health and Welfare, with a view to perhaps setting up a new approach and taking further measures to reform the law regarding the use of marijuana.

Mr. Rynard: I should like to ask the Solicitor General whether he will consider setting up a commission to deal with this problem, which involves both the Department of Justice and the Department of National Health and Welfare. This is one of the most serious problems that confronts the nation today.

There are in connection with marijuana several problems that remain unsolved and questions still unanswered. Who is pushing it? Who is manufacturing it? From which sources are our young people getting it? I believe these sources have to be uncovered. Perhaps the minister knows the answers to these questions. This drug is getting into all our organizations, high schools and institutions.

The sad part about it is that I am not so sure we really understand the physiological and psychiatric reactions to the drug, nor do I believe we know whether its use leaves any damage to the human system. We do not know the effects of the partial or prolonged use of the drug on the human system.

This is a serious problem and it is growing. The only way to solve the problem is for the Solicitor General to get busy, bring these people together and set up a commission that will study the problem not only from the standpoint of justice but from the medical standpoint, reactions to the drug and what its use does to the human system.

I also believe we must be more vigorous in finding out the sources of supply of marijuana. Is it a Mafia operation? Who is pushing it? I ask these questions because the supply of marijuana is becoming greater all the time. I believe that speed is of the essence in dealing with this problem. All that can be done at the present time is to stop the supplies of this drug which are going into our high schools and universities, because once it gets into these institutions you find pushers right there and students can very easily supply their fellow students.

This is a very important matter and I know the Solicitor General realizes its importance. So many times we become frustrated in this house. We talk about things, but in the long run we do not attack the problem with speed, as we should. I know the Solicitor General sympathizes with what I am saying. I should like to see him really do something about this problem, and do it right away.

Mr. Pugh: Mr. Chairman, when the Solicitor General was speaking just now I gathered from his remarks that he felt we should go further in handling this problem, namely into the field of national health and welfare. I gathered from his remarks that perhaps talks are about to commence in this regard, because he referred to an increasing number of prosecutions, and so on.

I wonder if the Solicitor General would tell us whether he is paying more than lip service to the problem and that he has already approached the Minister of National Health and Welfare in order to arrive at some way of combating the pushing of drugs. Perhaps the minister is going so far as adopting the suggestion made by the last speaker, that a commission should be established so that there would be carried out an inquiry in depth as to the drug pushing and the use of drugs in Canada, including the effects of their use on the human system.

I am sure the people of Canada would be most happy to hear the Solicitor General's words on the subject, if he can give us some idea that more than lip service is being paid to the matter and the government is not just considering the problem but is actually doing something about it.

The doctor who has just resumed his seat, the hon. member for Simcoe East, suggested in the House of Commons earlier today that a commission should be set up. This has been the theme of many, many speeches that he has made not only in the house but in committee. He has said that the establishment of such a commission is an absolute necessity for Canada if we are to combat the pushing and use of drugs. It is not good enough to give responsibility to just one department such as Justice or the Department of the Solicitor General. Our national health and welfare is involved in this question and it is an absolute necessity that this department be extremely active in combating the problem. Therefore, if the Solicitor General has anything to say on this problem, I would ask him to do so now.

Mr. Pennell: Mr. Chairman, I wish to state explicitly that I share the concern that has been voiced by hon. members opposite with regard to the law enforcement aspect of the problem. I would again advise the committee that the deputy commissioner of the R.C.M.P. made a special visit to Washington less than a month ago to confer with the officials of the narcotics bureau in that city. Within the last seven or eight weeks the commissioner also convened a special meeting of the assistant deputy commissioners heading the several divisions across the country and they discussed, among other things, the drug problem.

The R.C.M.P. is in continual touch with all other law enforcement agencies concerned with trafficking in drugs on the North American continent. I say sincerely that I share the view expressed by the hon. member for Simcoe East, who said that we do not yet know enough about the dangers involved in the use of marijuana. I agree that we ought to carry out more research and bring together the experts who have the necessary medical knowledge. I say sincerely that I will take up this matter with my colleague the Minister of National Health and Welfare. I am not of course in a position to say what form the inquiry will take, if my efforts are successful.

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, this is a very interesting subject and one that has received a great deal of attention. I should like to hear the Solicitor General say that his department is not advising the imposition of the six months sentences that I hear the courts are imposing at the present time. Even the use of the word "drug" is rather a travesty of the technical term. I have read the articles which established marijuana as a drug and have discovered that there is a great deal of difficulty selling to the rest of the world the idea that marijuana should be included in the list of drugs.

It seems to me that if this kind of prison sentence is imposed we will not eliminate or cure the problem at all. I believe that the Solicitor General should be recommending that no prison sentence be imposed, under any circumstances, on the users of marijuana. As the hon. member for Simcoe East pointed out, the difference between a user and a pusher is where the difficulty has arisen. The use of marijuana now takes place not only in our universities and colleges but has become a very serious problem in that its use has extended into our high schools, and indeed down to the public school level and involves children of the age of 10 or 12. It is a very cheap product. It is very easily obtained. It seems to me that if we are to put in jail all those people who are experimenting with marijuana, it will really be a travesty of justice.

I can see no point at all in giving a person a prison sentence for using marijuana if it is not detrimental to his health or to society in general. The police have been awfully stupid in some areas in regard to this problem. A great effort should be made, as the hon. member for Simcoe East said, to study the problem and find out why and how marijuana is being pushed.

I believe we have made very serious mistakes in the past in regard to drugs and the manner in which they are dealt with under our law. Surely we are not going to take marijuana and put it in the category of whisky during prohibition. The situation we now face in respect of drugs is parallel to that which existed at the time of prohibition. Many people then drank whisky only because it was hard to get, and its sale was illegal. We now find kids saying to each other: I tried marijuana; I'll bet you are scared to try it. This is almost the same situation that everybody faced when smoking his first cigarette. To make the use of marijuana a criminal offence is not, I think, receiving from the Department of Justice the consideration that the problem warrants. I certainly feel that the community is not being helped by putting a 15 or 16 year old in jail for having used marijuana when everyone knows that marijuana has been available to almost everyone in the school.

I understand there is a more serious problem about which the police should start worrying, and that is the extent to which heroin is being added to marijuana and circulated in the schools. It is going through the mails from Toronto and Montreal to be distributed in various areas. This is the sort of thing about which the police should be worried. The criminal part of the operation, as the hon. member for Simcoe East mentioned, is the pushing of marijuana. Why is it being pushed, and what money is involved? I think the Department of Justice should be interested in ascertaining how marijuana is available in such large quantities and at such low prices. How is it being distributed in such a formidable way in high schools and colleges without the police being able to make a haul of this marijuana?

I can remember one occasion, Mr. Chairman, when the R.C.M.P. went into an Indian reserve and cut 20 tons of marijuana. I do not know how many cigarettes 20 tons would make, but that would be like cutting 20 tons of hay. The amount of marijuana being circulated is in the tons, not pounds. If the police are going to do anything, let them concentrate on that end of the problem. This country is not going to solve a social problem by putting teenagers in jail because they have experimented with marijuana. They are not committed or continual users of hashish. This is a problem the police have not tackled. I believe the minister should be interested in how this stuff can be transported around the country without any indication of its importation. If we do not import it from other countries, then we must grow it. The material still has to be transported in very large trucks because it is a weed that has to be handled in a manner similar to the handling of sweet hay. I suggest that some consideration should be given as to how this circulation takes place. We should not send young offenders to jail just to satisfy the do-gooders.

Let me suggest to the minister that he is going to have to act on this problem very quickly. If he does not, then no one is going to give a dam about the law. They will not care what happens to L.S.D. because there is nobody who has really considered this matter who believes that marijuana is in the same category as other drugs. The reason the covenant was signed with marijuana in it is that after a great deal of study it was believed this problem had got out of hand, not in a narcotic sense but in an international trade sense. We have not faced this problem in the 40 years since that time. I think it is time we looked at it, or we will not be able to solve the more serious problem of L.S.D. If the younger people are convinced that the law is an ass in this case, and they are the citizens who are going to be making the laws tomorrow, then you are going to find that their respect for the law will be nil. I believe the minister is sufficiently aware of the social changes that may take place to realize that something should be done very quickly or there will be a whole generation of children growing up who have no use for the law because it does not appear to be reasonable or fair.

Mr. Gilbert: Before the minister speaks on this problem of marijuana, I should like to set forth the suggestion that has been made in legal periodicals. It is that when young persons are charged with the possession of marijuana the magistrate or judge should have the power to not proceed with that charge for a period of 12 or 18 months. If the person has not been charged with a similar offence during that period, then the charge should be dropped. The hon. member for Timiskaming pointed out the danger of convicting young people for the possession of marijuana, people who may be trying it for kicks, as they say. I believe the minister should give serious consideration to this approach. It is an approach that some European countries are taking, not only to marijuana but to other offences when young people are charged because the consequences of conviction bear heavily on employment, bonding and travel. Young people could be tagged with a criminal conviction at an early stage in life as a result of the consequences of some dare or experiment they may have taken up.

There are two other points to which I should like the minister to speak. The first is the problem of expunging criminal records. The standing committee on justice and legal affairs made a report on the expungement of such criminal records. I should like to ask the minister if the government intends to act on that report. Many people across Canada are concerned and we should really become active with regard to this problem.

The second problem relates to fingerprints. When a person is charged under the Criminal Code he is photographed and fingerprinted. Then the trial takes place, and if that person is acquitted I should like to know just what happens to those fingerprints. Surely Canadians have the right to have those fingerprints destroyed. We had a dramatic example in Toronto last week when a person was found dead. There was difficulty in identifying the person, but they did identify him through fingerprints that had been obtained when he was charged with a rather minor offence of assault. I feel Canadians are entitled to have fingerprints destroyed if they are acquitted of charges. I should like the minister to comment on that problem.

Mr. Pennell: If I may be permitted a word or two, Mr. Chairman, I am sure the hon. member for Broadview will be pleased to learn that yesterday I affixed my signature to a memorandum to my cabinet colleagues on the matter of vacating criminal records. I hope to join with that proposal one relating to bail bonds. If the memorandum receives approval of my colleagues I hope to translate it into a bill. If it comes to pass that I am in a position of ministerial responsibility, I would hope to introduce the bill and send it to the appropriate committee of the house for examination.

Mr. Gilbert: I wonder if the minister would express his views with regard to the problem of fingerprints? Just what is the policy of the government? Does it destroy these fingerprints if a person is found not guilty of a criminal offence, and why should they not be destroyed if the person is not convicted?

Mr. Pennell: Mr. Chairman, I speak subject to correction on this point. It is my understanding that for the most part where a person has been acquitted the fingerprints are destroyed. I must concede that there have been instances, to my own knowledge, in which the fingerprints have been retained. However, in my memorandum to my colleagues relating to the vacating of records I also dealt with the question of fingerprints.

The Senate—

5c. General Administration, $153,000.

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Chairman, I should like to ask one question on this item, and I am looking at the Solicitor General. Perhaps he will either answer my question or tell me who will answer it. Is anyone in a position to make a statement?

Mr. Pennell: Mr. Chairman, I should like to ask that this department be stood temporarily. The Minister of Industry is dealing with this item and he has been called out of the house. If I can have the approval of the committee I should like to move to another department.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Is it the desire of the committee that the legislation estimate be stood until the minister appears?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Item stands.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The committee will now consider the supplementary estimates of the Department of Agriculture.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

Research—

5c. Administration, Operation and Maintenance—to extend the purposes of Vote 5 of the Main Estimates for 1967-68 to include a contribution of $10,000 to the Town of Kapuskasing towards the construction of a road, $1.

[The Assistant Deputy Chairman.]

Mr. McKinley: Mr. Chairman, before these estimates pass I should like to make reference to a letter I received yesterday from the Ontario Cream Producers Association. That association is not very happy with the new dairy policy of the government, and I thought this would be a good opportunity to place their views before the minister, before he makes a final announcement of next year's dairy policy.

I should like to refer to some of the recommendations that they have to make. They have three main recommendations as cream producers about which they are deeply concerned. The first recommendation is for a quota cut-off level at which they would be eligible for subsidy payment. Second, they recommend a special subsidy of 5 cents per pound butterfat for farm-separated cream production. Canada imported butter last year, and hon. members know that our cream producers' cream goes entirely into the production of butter. Some butter is made from surplus powdered milk, but not all. Their third recommendation is for compensation for small producers who are not eligible for subsidy payments if cut-off quotas are applied by the Canadian Dairy Commission.

I should also like to refer to a press release dated Ottawa, March 6, 1968 which sets out the stand taken by the executive directors of the Dairy Farmers of Canada and the Federation of Agriculture, and reads as follows:

Mr. Glen Cole, president of Dairy Farmers of Canada, said today he particularly wished to emphasize that under no circumstances can Dairy Farmers of Canada support or countenance the imposition of subsidy cut-offs to small volume milk producers unless adequate compensation policies are at the same time implemented for them.

Highlights of the dairy policy demands discussed today by the executive of the Dairy Farmers of Canada and the Canadian Federation of Agriculture representatives with the Minister of Agriculture and the Canadian Dairy Commission were:

An increase in the level of federal support of the price of industrial milk to $5 per cwt., f.o.b. factory, (now $4.65) as a minimum requirement for meeting costs of production and income needs of dairy producers.

A special payment to shippers of farm separated cream of 5 cents per pound of butterfat, in addition to regular subsidy payments, as a minimum measure to correct the inequity under the program to cream shippers which the present policy established.

Return to inclusion in the subsidy program of fluid milk shippers who are dependent on industrial milk sales for a significant portion of their income, to eliminate the unfair discrimination existing here under the present program.

Cash compensation for small producers in cases where the Canadian Dairy Commission decides to cut them off from future federal support on the basis of their low production levels.

As I was saying, Mr. Chairman, these recommendations came to me from the Ontario Cream Producers Association through the Huron County Cream Producers, and I wished to draw them to the minister's attention before he announced the dairy policy for the year commencing on April 1.

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, a few brief words on this item. When the Liberal party in its 1965 election propaganda stated that it intended to put all small farmers out of business and leave only economic farm units in operation as a solution to agricultural problems, I felt at the time that this was doubtful of accomplishment and certainly of very questionable intent. However, it appears that the dairy policy that the government has been pursuing has accomplished just about that: it has put out of business a very large percentage of farmers. If it had not been for the intervention of a number of influential people last year 50 per cent of the farmers would have suffered a dislocation of their operations.

Mr. Clancy: Oh, come on; get on with it.

Mr. Peters: The member who made that interjection might be interested to read a report on the Canadian dairy industry, which was an ARDA project. This report went into the value of maintaining the family farm and also into some of the advantages of disposing of family farms.

This project was sponsored, Mr. Chairman, by the rural development branch of the Department of Forestry and Rural Development, and I should like to read part of a paragraph that is to be found at page 20 of the report:

> The farms producing less than 50,000 lbs. of milk per farm should be actively discouraged from shipping milk or cream by a two pronged policy. One aspect would be aimed at non-commercial farms and would be part of a general development plan in areas of concentration of subsistence farms.

I presume that would be the ARDA plan.

> The other would act through the price mechanism. By paying no subsidy whatever to farms shipping cream or milk in volumes less than 50,000, and by a program to consolidate small processing plants making it difficult to ship small amounts of cream particularly, it could be expected that the majority of farms with one or two cows and operating a substantial farm business in other directions, would no longer find it profitable to ship milk or cream.

This may be all well and good but for one fact, Mr. Chairman, and that is that we have not been able to compensate farmers whose operations have been dislocated. We may be well advised to discontinue the two to five cow farm operation, but we must offer an alternative to this. No one with any experience in mixed farming will say that the small farm with five or six cows cannot be economically operated. On that kind of farm there is no labour cost. The wife or kids milk the cows, and the cows are fed on a pasture that will grow very little, anyway. The milk from the cow is separated and the cream delivered to the local creamery, or butter is churned on the farm and the buttermilk used to feed the pigs or chickens. On that sort of farm the farmer probably gets a value of $1.09 in the utilization of his skim milk, and no other operation probably is as efficient in obtaining that sort of value from skim milk.

Cream producers and dairy producers want to know how the new program to begin on April 1 will compare with the program of other years. The minister intimated that before a farmer could receive a subsidy he must produce a minimum of 50,000 pounds of milk or its equivalent of 12,000 pounds of butterfat. Because of representations from many sources, that plan last year was not implemented. Instead, a farmer's minimum production in order to qualify for a subsidy continued on at 12,000 pounds of milk and 400 pounds of butterfat.

An hon. Member: Oh, get off the pot.

Mr. Peters: And if any milk is left over perhaps we could give it to our colleague.

I wonder whether the new program will allow farmers who have four or five cows either to get out of a dairy operation, if one can call it that where a man has four or five cows, or allow him to expand so that he can produce the minimum of 50,000 pounds of milk.

I now want to talk about some way to induce young people to take up farming. We shall reap many advantages if we devise some new way of valuing farm land. It should be valued on a different basis from that applied, say, to industrial or residential lands. Some way ought to be found of assisting people, possibly under some sort of lease, to take up farming and to make it pay. Every assistance ought to be given to young persons who want to enter farming, for the simple reason that many of them will never have enough money to buy a farm outright.

In northern Ontario new industries have been established. Timiskaming ranks among the top ten cheese producers in Ontario, simply because we now have a second cheese factory. Yet we have not arrived at a system of equalization of transportation grants and we are having difficulty in getting the money for an amalgamated milk plant that will handle fluid milk, secondary milk and cheese efficiently. It must be remembered that in Canada we face increasing competition from dairy producers from other countries.

Butter from New Zealand was selling in Vancouver at under 37 cents a pound. I am sure that no member of the house will deny that if farmers in this country could get only 37 cents a pound for their butter, they would stop making it. Clearly, butter and dairy products are traded on the international market, and since we intend to produce a great deal of butter we shall have to sell it elsewhere. Certainly our butter production can outstrip our consumption. I hope that when the minister announces his new program he will take into consideration the need to help those farmers who will be displaced because of the program.

That program can be of advantage. I hope the minister will announce what will happen to the 30 per cent of our farming population which engages in mixed farming. These people sell for cash one or two cans of cream a week. Their cows produce only enough milk in the winter for immediate family consumption. If these people are eliminated from the farming picture, who will replace them? They will be taken off the farms in a relatively short period because of relatively harsh measures.

Mr. Jorgenson: I wish to deal for a few moments with the estimates before us. On March 5, when the minister spoke, he made a few statements I want to deal with. It has been a habit of the minister's, in our experience, to find some late hour in the evening to put a few remarks on the record that bear little relation to facts, and then to persuade the house leader not to bring that particular item back for several weeks, hoping that the members of this party will have forgotten some of the comments which have been made. I assure the minister, and I regret that he is not here, that I should now deal with some of his remarks of March 5.

Among other things he said that he had made as many speeches supporting agriculture as anyone in the house. I will not deny that. The fact remains that he has done as little for agriculture as any minister who has ever held that portfolio. The imagination he has used in developing agricultural policy is about as barren as the imagination that goes into an Air Canada breakfast.

[Mr. Peters.]

An hon. Member: Nothing could be that bad.

Mr. Jorgenson: For a couple of years now we have been waiting for him to introduce policies that would benefit the industry. I am sure most members of this house who represent rural areas cannot but be impressed by the apprehension one finds among farmers. They do not know what the prospects for the coming year are. There is uncertainty about prices; there is even more uncertainty about markets. Added to this there has been a tremendous increase in agricultural costs since the present government took office. According to the figures put out by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics the increase in the index of farmers' costs has continued to take place at an alarming rate. I should like to put on record some figures relating to this increase.

• (9:40 p.m.)

In the year 1960, four years before the change of government, the index stood at 272.7. By 1963 it had risen slightly to 298.6. But from that point on, when the present government took office, a dramatic increase began. From 298.6 it has risen to 367.5, an increase of 69 points in four years—and about 40 of these points have accumulated in the last two years.

There is apprehension because this government has shown no initiative in the marketing of Canadian grain and because it had permitted prices to drop to levels which pose a serious problem to farmers in western Canada. The minister is found of quoting income figures. I note that he quoted either gross income figures or net income figures. These do not give a true picture of real farm income, which is related more closely to net realized income. The net income figures which the minister quoted and which seemed to show a remarkable increase in farm incomes take into consideration an accumulation of inventory. A farmer may not have been able to sell a bushel of wheat, as is the case this year, yet net income figures will show a substantial net income. In 1961, for example when the peak of the drought had been experienced, the carry-over on western farms amounted to something like 607 million bushels. It had dropped to about 391 million bushels by 1962. The net income shown for that year was $362 million, yet the real net income because of the change of inventory was $670 million, a considerable increase over the net income figures the minister likes to quote. If the minister puts figures on record purporting to show the real income position of farmers he should use realized net income rather than net income figures alone.

The minister went on to accuse us on this side of opposing an increase in the minimum and maximum levels of wheat prices because we had criticized the government for its part in the lapse of the international wheat agreement. What nonsense. We have suggested on this side that those prices could have been increased under the old agreement. I am not saying the new agreement is not just as good as the old international wheat agreement, but there was no need to allow the agreement to lapse so that there was no protection for farmers during that period. Immediately after the announcement was made that the old agreement was to expire, prices began to fall. If there was ever any doubt in the minds of anyone in this country as to the value of an international commodity agreement, it must surely have been dissipated as a result of the experiences of the past year.

To suggest that we were somehow or other opposed to an increase in the price of wheat is an indication of the type of tactics the minister follows in this house when dealing with legitimate questions raised by members of the opposition. The minister went on to say as reported on page 7316 of Hansard for March 5:

> I think this is very unfair criticism of the Canadian officials who carried on the negotiations—

He was speaking of the Kennedy round negotiations.

> The ministers attended at the conclusion of the Kennedy round and claimed very little credit for the great success the Canadian negotiators achieved.

The minister's tactic was to slough off his responsibilities on the negotiators, on the officials of the department who represented Canada during the Kennedy round, trying to convince the house that in some magic way he and his colleagues were absolved of their responsibilities and that the officials were the ones to blame, if indeed there was to be any blame. This was the attitude of the government when it took over, as far as the Canadian Wheat Board was concerned.

The present Minister of Finance fell over himself in his attempts to deprecate a former minister of agriculture, my hon. friend from Qu'Appelle, for having taken some responsibility for the selling of wheat during the period he was minister. The hon. gentleman said the present government intended to let the wheat board take the credit for such things. Well, they let the wheat board take the credit, but they have also let it shoulder all the blame—blame which rightly belongs to them for failing to maintain price levels. No amount of sneaking and snivelling on the part of the minister can change this fact.

With regard to dairy policy I am as convinced as the hon. member for Timiskaming that it is a deliberate and calculated policy on the part of the government to eliminate as many farmers as possible. Somehow or other members of the government have listened to economists who preach the doctrine of bigness, and they believe that by reducing the number of farmers the same amount of income will be divided among fewer people and therefore the whole problem will be resolved. But it does not work out this way. In spite of the fact that there are fewer farmers, their net income is being reduced.

How far does one go? At what point do you reach a farm of sufficient size to be economic enough to produce an income capable of maintaining a farmer on the land? What has been the experience on some of the bigger farms in both Canada and the United States? In fact some of the millionaires who own farms in the United States and Canada have shown losses. If they cannot show a profit I do not know who can, because they have the wherewithall to equip themselves with the type of machinery and to pay for the inputs that are necessary for proper, maximum production.

The doctrine that bigness is the answer to the farm problem must be destroyed before it destroys every farmer in the country. Recently the firm of Hedland and Menzies, which has been conducting a number of agricultural surveys throughout the country, undertook one for the county of Vulcan in Alberta. The purpose of the study was to determine whether or not increased acreage would result in increased income and productivity. The result showed that this was not the fact, that once you reached a certain point the net income levelled off and no matter how much bigger the farm grew beyond that point there was no appreciable increase in the net income. The conclusion was that an increase in productivity rather than an increase in farm size would be the better way of increasing a farmer's net return.

In my view there is no point in considering transfer of capital into agriculture in order to increase gross income unless measures are taken to ensure that farm costs are not going to rise to the point where there is no net income left for the farmer. Since the present government took office farm costs have been rising at a much faster rate than farm income. The government has set up commissions to study the question of farm machinery prices and farm costs. Undoubtedly those studies are necessary because obviously members of the government do not have any ideas of their own. They have also set up a task for us to determine agricultural policy. I suppose that is necessary for the same reason, but time is running out on them.

On the prairies we are again in the midst of a drought cycle. Last year there was a serious drought, and a very serious depletion of subsoil moisture. If there is a recurrence of the very minimal rainfall that fell last year there will be almost total failure in various areas of the prairies. At present farmers are very reluctant to buy fertilizer because of the great risk involved this year due to the lack of moisture.

Farmers are very reluctant to undertake the inputs that they normally undertake in order to achieve maximum production, because of the risks that are involved. They are also reluctant to take a chance that the government will be able to sell their product once they have produced it. As I said when I began my remarks, Mr. Chairman, I have never known more apprehension on the part of farmers than I have found this year. Unless something is done, and done very soon, it is going to be reflected in a very substantial decrease in the number of farmers in this country, and in a greater problem in finding something whereby farmers can earn a living. The government has shown no initiative and no responsibility in dealing with this problem.

Mr. Ormiston: Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Peters: Ten o'clock.

Mr. Ormiston: I do not wish to call it ten o'clock, Mr. Chairman. I have only a few minutes in which to make my remarks and I hope you will bear with me because I certainly agree with my hon. friend from Provencher when he says there is a great deal of apprehension in the agricultural industry today. There is no greater apprehension than among the turkey producers of this country.

Earlier today we asked a question of the minister on this subject, but he did not happen to be in the house. However this is a question which we have asked for months, urging that the government make some policy statement regarding the industry, which will give some satisfaction to those people who are engaged in that industry which means so much to the Canadian public. On several occasions the minister made statements, but they all seem to have fallen short of the need to give assurance to the Canadian turkey producers.

At this time, in the spring of the year, when we expect the industry to be flourishing, its production is falling far short of what is necessary. Orders for turkey poults this year are 26 per cent less than last year, showing the trend of dissatisfaction on the part of those engaged in the industry, and their reluctance to invest further in the business of producing turkeys. Certainly those people who have invested a great deal of money in the industry deserve some statement from the minister to assure them that they will be kept in business at a profitable level so that they can continue to render the service that they have given over the years to this country.

Mr. Grills: Mr. Chairman, I know the hour is late and I know that everyone wants to get along with the work and get out of here. However, there is a problem which I am alarmed about, and I am sorry the minister is not in the chamber tonight—although, having listened to many of his speeches I have found that listening to an Arnprior lawyer does not give much direction to the farmers of the country. I do not mean to be critical, but I must be.

I wish to quote from a letter which I received today from a constituent, which reads:

> I am writing you today concerning the subsidy on milk.
> Last year about this time I purchased this farm and on August 6th sent my first milk to—

And he mentions a cheese factory in Hastings county.

> At that time I applied for the subsidy on my milk, only to learn that I had to send milk on or before July 1st to qualify for the subsidy in that dairy year.
> I was wondering if there was any exemptions made to a person just starting to farm and sending milk for the first time. I have been buying cows at auction sales all winter and now have 26 and hope to have 30 by grass time. As I have been buying cows at auction sales I have no quota, that I might ordinarily have if I had bought a herd at one place.

When I applied for the subsidy they sent me back a card for my wallet with certificate of registration No. ..... if this is of any help.

He goes on to explain his grievance. I happen to know this young farmer, whose father was a farmer before him. He is a good farmer and an aggressive young man, who married and began farming last year. Because he began shipping milk on August 6 instead of on July 1 he received $1.21 per hundredweight, or whatever the amount of the subsidy is, less than his neighbour. I am wondering how the minister thinks he can explain a situation of this kind. The Canadian Dairy Commission has been set up and apparently the minister thinks he can hide behind that and use it as a smokescreen. He is pretty good at throwing up smokescreens. This type of situation must be ended or there will be more trouble. This is only one case. I have information concerning many others.

I do not understand how one can discriminate and say that because one man started milking his cows five weeks later than another he will receive no subsidy, even though he is producing the same quality of milk for the same purpose, and so on. It seems to me that the Canadian Dairy Commission would like to do a good job. The members of this commission are trying to do a good job, but they are given responsibility with very little authority. In addition they are given very little money with which to pay the subsidy. I believe it is high time this situation was explained. I have attempted to get an answer from the dairy commission. They just say that the situation is most unfortunate.

The minister has said that the Canadian farmer never had it so good. He has borrowed a great deal of money, is head over heels in debt, and yet the minister says he is prosperous. The minister expects the farmer to accept this type of legislation. This young man to whom I referred, up until the first of March had produced and shipped 70,000 pounds of milk. At $1 a hundred pounds he would have lost $700 that others received. I hope the minister will give some consideration to this because it is a continuing problem. Before the dairy policy for 1968-69 is announced I hope he will clean up some of last year's business.

The minister has eliminated the subsidy on premium cheese. This is discouraging. It takes away the incentive to produce good cheese in this country. Cheese is the balancing product of the dairy industry. It is difficult to have supply and demand in perfect balance; but cheese is the one product, because it can be kept for some time, which enables the dairy industry to have a certain amount of balance. The minister in his wisdom concerning agriculture, which I question, has eliminated the subsidy on premium cheese. In so doing he has destroyed the incentive. Within a year there will be a good deal of second grade cheese in the country which we will not know what to do with. I say that this is false economy.

There is a similar situation in respect of hogs. Everyone likes lean bacon. The housewife and others complain that the bacon is too fat. Yet the minister is reducing the subsidy on the type of hog that produces lean bacon. What type of common sense is this?

It appears that this is about as much as we can expect from a lawyer Minister of Agriculture. Let me say to his friend over there, who is sitting and listening, that I hope the department will give some consideration to reinstating these two policies, because the reductions involved do not amount to peanuts in the overall budget. He knows this, and I suggest that this government and this minister will not be very popular with a lot of people in our farm communities if something is not done to correct this situation.

Mr. Starr: Mr. Chairman, I hope there is some disposition on the part of the committee to accept the suggestion I wish to make. If it meets with the approval of the committee perhaps we can sit until twelve o'clock, on the understanding that we will pass all the supplementary estimates this evening. In view of the fact that we have now discussed the supplementary estimates for a number of days, and in view of the fact that these items are similar to items on interim supply, perhaps we could agree to also pass interim supply before twelve o'clock.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Does the committee agree with the suggestion made by the hon. member, that we sit until twelve o'clock?

Mr. Peters: No, Mr. Chairman, there is no agreement in that regard.

Mr. Knowles: Perhaps the hon. member for Ontario was taking a bargaining position. We also are prepared to bargain. We suggest that we sit until eleven o'clock, or until the supplementary estimates of the Department of Agriculture have been passed. It is my belief that the supplementary estimates of the Post Office Department will not likely be debated, so they might be thrown in as well. We suggest that eleven o'clock is late enough for this debate.

Mr. Starr: Mr. Chairman, I do not think anything can be accomplished by that. Nothing was accomplished last night by sitting until eleven o'clock. We only completed one department. My suggestion is that we sit until twelve in order to complete the supplementary estimates and interim supply; otherwise there is no agreement.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Does the committee agree to the suggestion made by the house leader?

Mr. Lewis: Which house leader are you referring to, Mr. Chairman?

An hon. Member: There is only one good one.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. I was referring to the hon. member for Ontario.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Chairman, I urge the committee to consider the suggestion of the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre. Obviously we will have to be here tomorrow, as we cannot finish everything tonight. I understand the other place has adjourned until tomorrow. I see no purpose whatever being served by trying to sit until twelve o'clock. There is no reason we cannot get all the business done tomorrow, and since we have to be back in any event I see no purpose in sitting till midnight. There is sense in sitting long enough to complete the department we are now discussing, and any other department, such as the Post Office Department and the Privy Council. We will not agree to sit until midnight.

Mr. Starr: Mr. Chairman, my suggestion makes a great deal of sense. The suggestion made by the house leader of the N.D.P. will not achieve the purpose he tries to make us believe it will achieve. There are quite a number of departments left to be considered. We will not be meeting tomorrow until 2.30 p.m., and by the time orders of the day and other matters are disposed of we will only have a short period of time to consider the remaining departments. We may or may not finish them by six o'clock, so there will be no opportunity for the other place to consider these estimates. If we completed these estimates and interim supply tonight the other place would have the whole afternoon to deal with them, and we could have royal assent at six o'clock. Surely that makes good sense.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Chairman, I think it would make much better sense—and I am going to make the suggestion on my own—that we agree to finish the departments mentioned by us, and agree that tomorrow we will finish the remaining departments by a certain hour. I do not think it makes any sense to sit until midnight when the business is not going to be completed.

Mr. Starr: That is the basis upon which I suggested that we sit until midnight.

Mr. Lewis: If the hon. member for Ontario suggested that tomorrow we try to finish the estimates, say by five o'clock, so that the Senate will have an hour to complete them, that would make sense. But it does not make sense to sit till midnight tonight.

Mr. Starr: An hour for the Senate to complete their consideration of these estimates? It took us about 12 days. You don't make sense at all.

Mr. Lewis: I certainly do.

Mr. Pennell: Mr. Chairman, it has been a long day and I hope we have passed through the centre of the little storm here. May I make a special appeal to the house leader for the official opposition to accede to the suggestion that we pass the estimates that have been suggested.

Mr. Starr: They said just agriculture.

Mr. Knowles: Post Office and Privy Council.

Mr. Starr: No, Mr. Chairman. Unless my suggestion is considered, we will not agree.

Mr. Pennell: Mr. Chairman, would the patient and co-operative opposition house leader bear with me for just a moment? I ask that we follow through with the suggestion of the hon. member for York South and deal tonight with the three items suggested by him. Then perhaps we could agree to deal with the rest of the supplementary estimates by four o'clock tomorrow and deal with interim supply between, say, four o'clock and five o'clock.

Mr. Starr: That makes no sense at all.

Mr. Lewis: That kind of suggestion makes sense to me, Mr. Chairman, because I do not like the idea of sitting on for just anything.

An hon. Member: You agreed to sit on last night.

Mr. Lewis: We sat until after eleven o'clock last night to complete something. We are ready to sit on tonight in order to finish the estimates of the departments we have suggested. We have always supported the idea of allocating time, and we support it now.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Lewis: Stop oh, oh-ing. We always have supported the idea of allocating time, and you know it, despite these silly catcalls. It makes sense to me to allot time. We will agree to that, but not to sit to midnight tonight.

Mr. Pennell: Mr. Chairman, the hon. member for Ontario has gone a long way with us on this side of the house, and I ask him to take one more step and agree to follow through with the suggestion of the hon. member for York South.

Mr. Starr: No, Mr. Chairman, I do not think that suggestion makes any sense at all. I am suggesting that we sit an hour and 45 minutes tonight. We sat until after eleven o'clock yesterday to complete the estimates of one department. I am suggesting that we sit an hour and 45 minutes tonight and complete interim supply for all departments.

We talk about reforming the Senate, and in the same breath say that one hour is enough time for them to consider supplementary estimates and interim supply for two months, when we have spent 10 or 11 days here considering the supplementary estimates. I do not think that is fair to the Senate. No wonder people look at the Senate and say it should be reformed. Let us give them an opportunity to discuss these matters all afternoon. We should give them an opportunity for fair discussion. Then we could have royal assent at six o'clock, or whatever the time is.

Mr. Peters: Ten o'clock, Mr. Chairman.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. The Chair appreciates all the advice given from both sides of the house, and remains as confused as it was originally.

Mr. Peters: Ten o'clock, Mr. Chairman.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Is it the desire of the committee that the Chair not see the clock for the time being?

Mr. Pennell: May we at least finish agriculture?

Mr. Starr: We will carry agriculture.

Mr. Peters: Ten o'clock, Mr. Chairman.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. The hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre.

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Chairman, now that the storm has subsided a bit, could we make one more try to finish agriculture tonight?

Mr. Starr: We will carry it now.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall vote 5c carry?

Some hon. Members: Carried.

[Translation]

Mr. Latulippe: Mr. Chairman, I shall be very brief, because I do not wish to delay the passage of the estimates of that department.

I should like to join with all other members who stated that agriculture was in a state of stagnation. It is undeniably so, like many other sectors of our economy. Small industries, especially, are in a bad way, as well as small farms and almost every sector of our economy. Therefore, that means that our economy is unbalanced. Small farms are on their way out. As a matter of fact, 70 per cent of the farmers of my riding have left their farm, and every day, others are doing the same.

I feel that premiums on cheese and milk at least should be maintained and that grants to agriculture should be increased, if possible.

Mr. Chairman, agriculture is the foundation of society; it permits the citizens to live because it provides food which is used to feed them. Without agriculture, Mr. Chairman, we would not be here tonight. Agriculture is an essential factor, indeed the number one factor of society. Agriculture is absolutely necessary to the life of human beings. Therefore, we must at least have the courage to protect it and to give it everything it needs. We might be justified in sacrificing certain sectors of the economy to give a greater share to agriculture, so that the farms still in existence could further develop and spare us the sight of an agriculture heading for disaster. In fact, our whole economy is heading for disaster.

It is our responsibility to do everything in our power to assist our agriculture because it is the most essential field for the human being. Without it, the human being, the family could not live. Let us continue at least to do something to assist our agriculture instead of letting it die.

I could go on talking about agriculture but I do not want to delay the passing of these estimates. Mr. Chairman, I shall limit myself to those few remarks.

I should like to ask once again all the hon. members, and especially the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Greene) to take under advisement the problems of agriculture, with a view to solving at least a few of them.

It is not by lending money at an increasingly high rate of interest, as was pointed out this afternoon, that farmers will be helped, because they are no longer able to pay such rates. They are sick and tired of being asked to pay rates of interest they can no longer afford. They are asked to make debts at a rate of 15 per cent, but they can no longer take it. They are already too deep in debt, as several members have pointed out. The farmers' debts are incommensurate compared to their means to pay them.

With regard to farm loans, several farmers prefer to borrow from the federal government because they can obtain higher loans. Indeed, more can be had in Ottawa, but the rate of interest is higher than on provincial loans. A reasonable rate of interest should be maintained, since agriculture is the very basis which enables society to live. And so, every attempt should be made to relieve the farmers, by offering them a decent interest rate.

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Chairman, an hour or so ago I started to ask a question but was cut off in the middle of it. Is the minister who is responsible for this item in a position to say anything with regard to collective bargaining on parliament hill? As the minister knows, the joint committee on the public service of Canada recommended in its report about a year ago that something be done on parliament hill comparable to the arrangements made for the public service generally. Has any progress been made in this connection?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Does the committee wish to proceed with the supplementary estimates of Treasury Board?

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Chairman, I believe the acting house leader agreed that this department and one other at least be held over until tomorrow.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Does the committee wish to consider the supplementary estimates of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs?

Mr. Knowles: That was the other department to be left over until tomorrow.

Mr. Starr: Mr. Chairman, the hon. member says that these departments are to be left over till tomorrow by agreement, but I was not asked to give my agreement to that. I have made the proposition that we carry on and complete all of the supplementary estimates. I agree to that, not to standing over particular estimates.

Mr. Pennell: May I ask the chairman whether public service carried or not?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Yes.

Mr. Pennell: Then I am happy.

Mr. Drury: Mr. Chairman, the hon. member for Ontario has suggested that since we have only two departments left we deal with them tonight. I wonder whether the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre would feel up to the mark if we dealt with Treasury Board this evening.

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Chairman, we have completed several more departments than we proposed. We have done pretty well and only three are left for tomorrow, two departments plus fisheries, which I think we will deal with when Mr. Speaker is in the chair, by way of a message from the deputy to this Excellency.

Mr. Pennell: I hope that we will find it possible to follow the suggestion of the hon. member for York South. That suggestion, if I understood him correctly, is that we complete supplementary estimates by four o'clock and then devote the time between four and five to the motion for interim supply.

Mr. Lewis: That is agreeable.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall I rise, report certain resolutions and request leave to sit again at the next sitting of the house?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Resolutions adopted in committee of supply this day reported and concurred in.

SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATE (C), 1967-68 (REVISED)

A message from the Deputy to His Excellency the Governor General transmitting a supplementary estimate for the financial year ending March 31, 1968, was presented by Hon. L. T. Pennell (for the Minister of Finance), read by Mr. Deputy Speaker to the House, and referred to the committee of supply.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

A motion to adjourn the house under provisional standing order 39A deemed to have been moved.

Proceedings on Adjournment Motion

INDIAN AFFAIRS—REQUEST FOR RECONSTITUTION OF PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE

Hon. W. G. Dinsdale (Brandon-Souris): Mr. Speaker, I have been waiting to discuss this matter since last Thursday, otherwise I should not trespass on the time of the house at this late hour. In view of what has just happened it appears that we are very close to adjournment, and I wish to bring this matter to the attention of the government to obtain some assurance that the committee on Indian affairs will be reconstituted shortly after the resumption of the current session.

When I asked the leader of the house last Thursday whether this would be possible, he referred me to the minister of Indian affairs as the minister responsible. It was on July 13, 1966, that the house agreed to the following motion:

> That the standing committee on Indian affairs, human rights and citizenship and immigration be empowered to adjourn from place to place within Canada for the purpose of obtaining further information relating to matters affecting Indians and Indian communities; and that for this purpose, the said committee be authorized to sit while the house is sitting or during adjournments of the house; and
> That the clerk of the said committee and necessary supporting staff do accompany the said committee.

That was almost two years ago, and since then there has been no further action. Earlier today I pointed out that the chairman of the committee, the hon. member for Cartier (Mr. Klein) had made a statement to the press urging that the committee proceed to adjourn from place to place, and so on, as recommended in the motion. So I know we have his enthusiastic support.

Last week two important speeches were made on Indian affairs, one by the minister at the University of British Columbia on March 23 and the other by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) in Calgary on March 21. The minister underlined the importance of consultation and practical knowledge of the subject in three quotations that I want to extract from his speech. He said:

> The Indian has a sense of grievance.

Later, he said:

> Without doubt, Canada's most serious social problem is the Indian problem.

Finally, the minister declared that the building of self-esteem among the Indian community was of the utmost importance.

[Mr. Deputy Speaker.]

The Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) speaking in Calgary struck the same note. In the light of this high level support I do not think I need stress the case for this being the desire of all of us here. There are outstanding problems which I feel can only be dealt with if members of parliament have the opportunity to come personally into contact with the subject. We have been playing around with the establishment of an Indian complaints commission. I for one would like to consult directly with the Canadian Indian population on this matter. We have been told for a number of years that the Indian Act requires amendment. Last week the minister issued a statement that officials of the department would be consulting with Indian bands and leaders across the country with respect to proposed amendments to the act. I trust he will agree that members of parliament should have the same opportunity for consultation with the Indians as to what should be included in the proposed amendments.

This afternoon we had a fairly long discussion on the health problem among the first Canadians, and in view of the confusion which has been created by the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. MacEachen) I think it is high time that members of the committee had a chance to discuss this matter with representatives of the Indian communities across the country.

In the past few years the community development program has unfortunately been bogging down in bureaucracy. Here is another subject with which hon. members should be vitally concerned. Problems arising in connection with the maintenance of law and order were outlined in an excellent study carried on under the auspices of the Canadian Welfare Council. This too should be considered. In his speech in Calgary, the Leader of the Opposition pointed out the extreme difficulties which had arisen in this area, exemplified by the fact that visitors to our penal institutions, particularly provincial jails, find that most of the inmates, both men and women, are Indians.

In some instances 100 per cent of the prison population is made up of our first Canadians. I continue to receive protests and petitions from the bands in my constituency, in the southwestern part of the constituency. One resolution from a meeting held at the Friendship Centre in Brandon last Friday, when some 60 representatives of about a dozen Indian communities were present, protested the failure of the government and of the department to provide recreational facilities. This applied particularly to the reserve at Griswold, which has been endeavouring to build a rink for the past six years.

This problem is not an overwhelmingly difficult one. Our total Indian population is 250,000. At least 47 per cent of that population is 15 years of age and under. Surely we as a parliament, and the government, can come to grips with the problem. I think if we are going to do so the standing committee on Indian affairs must be given the necessary authority to act in the manner I have recommended.

Hon. Arthur Laing (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, I want to assure the hon. member that it is not my responsibility to convene the committee or set it up. I am quite certain that is not my responsibility. The idea of visiting Indian reserves originated, it seems to me, in the mind of the hon. member for Skeena (Mr. Howard), and I think he accompanied the committee on the visit to three or four reserves that did take place. There was the thought in mind that the committee would visit some western reserves as well. However, the season became late and the weather got bad, and I do not think many members of the committee wanted to undertake a second tour of Indian reserves.

The hon. member in drawing this matter to the attention of the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. MacEachen) used these words:

> In view of growing problems affecting our native Canadians and the long delay in dealing with them—

I am going to deal with the hon. member himself. I want to tell him that the budget on Indian affairs today, in education alone, is $8 million more than the total Indian affairs budget when he was a minister of the government, and the general physical qualities of the reserves today, as well as the entire attitude of management of Indian affairs, are totally unrecognizable from what they were five years ago.

This last year we have built 770 houses on Indian reserves, and we are going to build 2,000 this coming year. We put electricity into 2,200 houses that never had it before. We have put in sewage and water on 48 reserves and have built 450 miles of roads. These changes have been made as the result of parliament giving my department the money to undertake them, and I appreciate the attitude of members of parliament, but I deplore this constant going round and saying, "Lo, the poor Indian".

I want to tell the hon. member that among Indians today there is a tremendous ferment going on, and many young Indians are rapidly coming to take leadership in Indian communities.

Mr. Dinsdale: There is no other better leadership.

Mr. Laing: And so it should be. I think it is time this was encouraged instead of saying, as the hon. member said, that we should put in a skating rink—

Mr. Dinsdale: It is the Indians who want to put it in.

Mr. Laing: No, the Indians don't want to put it in—

Mr. Dinsdale: They have got $25,000.

Mr. Laing: They want us to put it in. We have put $20,000, $40,000 and $80,000 into such projects in the past. We have now come to the point where we have got to say that those Indians in this country who are capable of carrying themselves, and who are able to manage, should have the right to do this instead of getting it from us. But instead we are going around and saying to the individual Indian, "You should be independent," and at the same time we are going around and saying, "You should have more money from us". We cannot have it both ways.

Among Canadian Indians today there is a tremendous improvement taking place. There are many young Indian leaders coming along, and the situation is not at all as represented by the hon. member. If the standing committee wants to see other reserves I would be very happy to see it set up and visit them. We are making worth-while developments and progress in our program, and if the committee wishes to inspect and participate in that program so much the better.

• (10:40 p.m.)

CONSUMER AFFAIRS—MILK—PROPOSED PRICE INCREASE IN ONTARIO

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, almost a week ago I raised a question which I wish to discuss for a few moments tonight. I drew to the attention of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs the fact that two dairies in Toronto stated they were raising the price of milk by two cents a quart. Two cents a quart may not seem like a great deal of money, but it is only one more item in the steadily rising cost of living which is bearing very heavily on the people of low income in this country, and which again is making it more difficult for the people of low and moderate means to provide the kind of diet they should provide for their families.

Milk is a vital component in a good diet. Price increases of this nature are contagious. The fact that two dairies in Toronto have already raised their price now by two cents a quart has established a pattern for other dairies across the country. This means that there is a fresh layer of price increases in a very vital area which affects the diet of the Canadian people. This is also a very serious situation from the point of view of the farmers. I learned from the Department of Agriculture that a comparison of two recent periods, 1955-57 and 1962-64, shows that the decline per person in Canada in the consumption of fluid milk is in the order of 65 pounds. That represents roughly 38 quarts of milk. In other words, during the period 1962-64, the average Canadian drank roughly 38 quarts of milk less than in the period 1955-57.

This of course reflects from the fact that the price of milk had increased and people were using instead substitutes like powdered milk at that time. Now there are other milk substitutes on the market. The farmers' markets are falling off. As milk substitutes come in this tendency accelerates. I am sorry the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs is not here this evening, because I would like him to hear this. I believe it is up to his department to provide some form of protection for the consumers against this type of price increase.

When speaking the other evening I noted that the minister said the Liberal party must set up a hotline in order to keep in touch with the public. I feel that in his department the minister has found, not a hotline but a hot potato, and understandably he is anxious to drop it in favour of the prime ministership. Should he succeed I would not be surprised if he should find that he has jumped from the frying pan into the fire.

If the minister really wishes to be prime minister surely the best recommendation he could have would be success in his position as minister of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. If he cannot prove himself in dealing with the matter of the rise in the price of milk—if he cannot prove that he can do something to protect the consumer—then I believe he has a very dubious claim to becoming prime minister. I believe he has two opportunities to prove his capacity before the leadership convention. One would be to bring forward Bill No. C-190 before we adjourn, and thus take action in some measure to bring down the price of drugs. The other is that he could take some measures to protect the consumers from these price increases in the cost of milk. He could begin by establishing a prices review board to investigate the price of milk.

I am well aware that the jurisdiction over prices is divided between the provincial and federal authorities. I am also aware that up until this time the government has adopted the attitute that it can do nothing about prices until or unless a dire emergency such as war arises. I suggest that peace has its dire emergencies and that one of these is the level to which prices have now risen, because people in the very low income groups are becoming more and more desperate and this desperation is beginning to become apparent higher up the income scale.

This matter of the price of milk is in itself a relatively small thing to most Canadians. It may have only a nuisance value. However, to hundreds of Canadians on low income this is a very serious thing. It is also very serious to the farmers of this country because the net result of this price rise does not do them any good. They do not receive the bulk of the increase.

I asked a supplementary question of the minister as to whether he would investigate to find out how much the farmer would get out of this price increase. Again there was no response to that question. In the long run, the farmer's market is decreasing across Canada simply because the people cannot afford to pay this price for milk. They cannot afford this price because of the cost of this wasteful and extravagant distribution system which accounts for the bulk of the increased cost. The minister of the department of consumer affairs should take this first step by establishing a board to look into these increases in cost, in order that the people will know who received the benefit of such increases.

[Translation]

Mr. Ovide Laflamme (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I shall reply briefly to the remarks of the hon. member. I know that on March 21 last, the hon. member put a question to the hon. Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Turner) to which a reply was given, as shown on page 7883 of Hansard, but, obviously, the reply did not satisfy the hon. member.

I should like to point out to the hon. member that one would certainly err in believing that it is the duty of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs to make a full inquiry each time the price of consumer goods goes up. If that is what she thinks, then she is mistaken as to the prime objectives of that department.

When she speaks of a dairy problem—milk is obviously essential to health, as everyone knows—she must recognize that the present government, in the last two years, has spent over $120 million in public funds, on the one hand, to encourage the dairy industry and help the farmers and, on the other hand, to lighten the burden of consumers generally by favouring a greater consumption of that essential health product.

On the other hand, when the hon. member claims that the minister does not seem to worry about fluctuations in prices, I must remind her of the speech she made on second reading of Bill No. C-190 when she stated that it was one of the most important pieces of legislation ever introduced in the house. As announced this afternoon by the Prime Minister (Mr. Pearson), that bill will be studied again when the house reconvenes next April 23.

As far as price controls are concerned, I feel—and that was clearly established—that even if the federal government wanted to set up a price control board, that legislation would be challenged in court and would surely be found null and void.

I commend the hon. member for her interest in the matter of prices, but I wish to emphasize to her that she should take into account the causes which led to an increase in consumer prices: salary increases, federal and provincial tax increases, overall increases of services. Obviously, that situation does not rest with the federal government. I do not think the minister should intervene and set up an inquiry under the Restrictive Trade Practices Act, for such a low increase as 2 cents per quart of milk in the metropolitan Toronto area.

GRAIN

WHEAT—FINAL PAYMENT FOR 1966-67 CROP

Hon. Robert Winters (Minister of Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, I wish to make a statement regarding the final payment on wheat for the crop year ending July 31, 1967.

Producers delivered a record total of 626,533,860 bushels of wheat to the Canadian Wheat Board in the 1966-67 crop year, including 23,599,710 bushels of Durum wheat. The pool account for wheat was closed on February 29.

The amount of the final payment to be distributed to producers is an unprecedented $314,958,251, including $14,943,967 to be distributed to producers who delivered Durum wheat. Thus the previous record payment of $272 million, which was made on the 1963-64 pool account, has been surpassed by $43 million.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Winters: The average final payment for wheat other than Durum is a record 49.759 cents per bushel. The average final payment for Durum wheat is 63.323 cents per bushel. The over-all average of 50.270 cents per bushel is the largest average final payment in the history of the Canadian Wheat Board. The wheat board will begin mailing the final payment cheques tomorrow.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Fane: You have all the breaks, Bob.

Mr. Winters: One has to make his own breaks.

Mr. Douglas: It's a tough league.

Mr. Winters: I wish to inform the house of the total prices realized by producers prior to the deduction of the 1 per cent Prairie Farm Assistance Act levy, on their deliveries of some of the more important grades of wheat. The farmers will receive a total per bushel, basis in store at the lakehead or Vancouver, as follows:

$1.98709 for No. 1 northern,
1.96117 for No. 2 northern,
1.91666 for No. 3 northern,
1.87758 for No. 4 northern, and
1.82677 for No. 5 wheat.

The prices realized on Durum grades total as follows:

$2.13402 for No. 1 C.W. Amber Durum,
2.10509 for No. 2, and
2.04954 for No. 3.

Congratulations are due to all concerned in the growing, handling, grading, transporting and selling of wheat for their contribution to a most successful marketing year. I would like to pay particular tribute to the Canadian Wheat Board, which so fully justified the faith placed in it by parliament last year when the powers of the board were made permanent.

Mr. W. H. Jorgenson (Provencher): Mr. Speaker, the farmers of western Canada will be pleased to receive at last the final payments for the crop which was delivered to the board during the 1966-67 crop year. I think, however, they will be somewhat disappointed because that price has not kept pace with the increased cost of production.

Final Payment for Grain Crop

Last spring, when the international grains agreement was announced, headlines in this country indicated that our farmers could expect a price increase of about 20 cents per bushel. That increase has not materialized. If one looks at the Canadian Wheat Board report, which was released yesterday, one notes that the drop in prices came during the last month of the crop year. One can readily see that if a drop in one month can be so reflected in these prices, next year's prices will be very disapppointing indeed. The dropping of the international wheat agreement and the gap that was created in the period between the dropping of that agreement and the beginning of the international grains agreement indicate that some form of price protection is necessary.

I think farmers will hold the government responsible for the dropping of that agreement and for failing to ensure protection for them during that period. I mentioned the rise in the cost of production. I put some figures on the record last night to indicate how rapidly it had risen since this government has been in office. Today the cost of production bears no relationship whatsoever to the price of grain.

I think it is safe to say that in the coming years prairie agriculture will be experiencing a drought cycle; it began last year and if it continues, as we have every reason to believe it will, Canada will be hard pressed to meet its commitments not only in satisfying regular markets but in supplying the needs of famine-stricken nations such as India. I believe it is safe to say that long range prospects for grain markets are as good as they have ever been. In these circumstances it is ridiculous that there should have been such a drop in prices as prairie farmers have been obliged to accept in the past year.

To show how dramatically the picture has changed, let me remind hon. members that in 1960 there was a world market for roughly a billion bushels of wheat and the surplus at the time was about two billion bushels. Now the world market takes about two billion bushels leaving a surplus of roughly one billion bushels, and the wheat council has predicted that in a very few years world market demands will equal production. Again I say how foolish it was to have permitted such a drop in prices when market prospects are so good. The promise of the government to place a minimum price of $1.95½ under wheat is a small thing in view of the legitimate expectation of improved world demand, and the farmers of this country will hold the government responsible for negligence when it comes to selling their wheat.

[Mr. Jorgenson.]

Mr. Ed. Schreyer (Springfield): The statement just made by the Minister of Trade and Commerce will be welcomed. It is obvious there is much to be happy about, inasmuch as the final payment this year constitutes a record high in the history of the Canadian Wheat Board.

It is obvious that next year and in succeeding years the amount of the final payment will be smaller; first, because we have increased the amount of the initial payment; and second, because it is obvious, having passed more than half way through the current crop year, that the price the wheat board has been able to obtain on world markets is less than the price obtained in previous crop years.

The hon. member for Provencher (Mr. Jorgenson) referred to market and price prospects in the grain trade, and I certainly agree with what he said. I have referred in this house on previous occasions to the cost-price relationship as it exists today and as it has existed over the years, and I do not intend to take the time of the house to repeat my references to this subject. But in closing I would like to say that when the premier of Saskatchewan said yesterday that the Liberal candidates who wish to gather support in the western provinces will have to give a clear undertaking as to where they stand on the issue of wheat prices and costs of production, he was expressing an attitude which is prevalent across all the Canadian west. Over the past four years inflation has devalued the Canadian dollar and has caused an upward surge in the costs of agricultural production. This requires countervailing action by the government to increase the amount received by farmers for their production, in this case grain.

It is incumbent upon the minister and his colleagues to think seriously about the necessity for bringing in a policy, a two price system, whatever you wish to call it, that will bring the price more in line with what has transpired in terms of production cost increases over the past three or four years. Four years ago there was talk about having a $2 price for wheat. The equivalent today would be about $2.20, or very close to that.

The $1.98 which has been realized this year, including the final payment, is quite welcome, but on the other hand it falls far short of that level of price which government spokesmen only a few years ago said was necessary and justified.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I would like to table correspondence between the Canadian and United States governments regarding the extradition of Harold Chamberlain Banks.

Mr. Speaker: Has the right hon. Prime Minister leave to table the correspondence to which he has referred?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

QUESTIONS

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

INSTRUCTIONS TO UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE COMMISSION EMPLOYEES

Question No. 1,073—Mr. Bell (Carleton):

1. Has a memorandum been circulated in the office of the Unemployment Insurance Commission instructing certain employees to terminate membership in employee organizations?

2. If so, what in detail (a) is the nature of such instruction (b) the reason for such instruction?

3. How many employees are affected by this instruction?

4. What is the classification of each such employee so affected by this instruction?

Hon. J. R. Nicholson (Minister of Labour): The Unemployment Insurance Commission advises: 1. A letter, transmitting the government statement of policy with respect to the obligations of public servants employed in a managerial or confidential capacity, was circulated to certain persons in the Unemployment Insurance Commission. This letter, in explaining the contents of the policy statement, inadvertently went beyond the policy statement in some respects. Subsequently, the persons so advised were asked to disregard the letter and to govern themselves by the formal policy statement.

NATIONAL PARKS IN NORTHERN TERRITORIES

Question No. 1,111—Mr. Nielsen:

1. Is it the intention to establish National Parks in the Yukon and Northwest Territories and, if so, what are the boundaries of the locations in each Territory, and where it is proposed that such Parks will be established?

2. In each case, has the Legislative Council of the respective Territories been consulted and, if so, what was the decision of the Council in each case and, if not consulted, why not?

3. Is it the intention to establish Territorial Parks in either of the Territories and, if so, what are the proposed boundaries of each location?

4. Will there be any financial assistance to the governments of each of the Territories with respect thereto and, if so, how much in each case?

5. With respect to the establishment of any Park in each Territory, when is it proposed that work will commence and what is the anticipated total cost in each case?

Hon. Arthur Laing (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): 1. It is the department's objective to establish national parks that are representative of Canada's best scenery and which will afford the preservation of geographical and geological features of national interest and outstanding examples of flora and fauna for the people of Canada. In accordance with this objective it is considered desirable on the part of the department to establish national parks in both the Yukon and Northwest Territories. Studies initiated in 1957 indicate that areas worthy of designation as national parks exist in the Artillery Lake and the Nahanni regions of the Northwest Territories and in the Kluane area of the Yukon. No boundaries have been defined as these would be dependent on studies being carried out to determine park core areas which would outline suitable park areas and at the same time minimize potential resource use conflict.

2. The possibilities of establishing national parks in the Yukon and Northwest Territories have been discussed with the legislative council; however, the council has been of divided opinion on the value of national park establishment in view of possible loss of potential natural resource development.

3. The establishment of territorial parks in either the Yukon or Northwest Territories is now under active consideration. The services of a consultant, Mr. W. M. Baker—a well-known park and recreational planner and consultant, have been engaged to study the question and to prepare a report on which decisions regarding the establishment of such parks could be based. Mr. Baker has also been engaged by the Northwest Territorial government to study recreational programming for that region and no doubt his report would comment on the desirability or otherwise of establishing territorial or northern parks. Since no territorial park sites have been selected, the proposed boundaries are not known at this time.

4. Recognizing the need to expand recreational facilities in the territories, loans totalling $75,000 have been included in the current two year (1967-69) federal-territorial financial agreement with the Yukon which can be drawn upon as required. Also, an operating grant of about $20,000 a year is provided. It was expected that these funds would be utilized for the establishment of small recreational parks at carefully selected locations rather than the establishment of a large park providing for wilderness areas, interpretive centres, scenic preservation and wildlife conservation. No financial provision for recreational facilities has yet been made for the Northwest Territories.

5. No requests have been received from either territorial government for a loan or a grant for park purposes and no information is available at this time with respect to either the timing or the anticipated total costs of such recreational parks.

VETERANS AFFAIRS

IMPLEMENTATION OF REPORT ON PENSION COMMISSION

On the orders of the day:

Hon. J. A. MacLean (Queens): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Veterans Affairs I should like to ask the Prime Minister whether the government is prepared to take early action to implement those recommendations of the Woods report, such as the recommendations in respect of increasing veterans pensions and the remodelling of the procedures of appeal, which would receive widespread approval.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, we are studying the report. I read it over last week end. I agree that some of the recommendations should be implemented quickly, and I hope steps will be taken to that end.

Mr. MacLean (Queens): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Prime Minister whether the government would be prepared to refer the report to the committee on veterans affairs, so the remaining parts could be dealt with expeditiously and action taken.

Mr. Pearson: I believe this is a very reasonable suggestion and I will mention it to the minister.

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

TERMS OF REFERENCE OF PROPOSED PRICES REVIEW BOARD

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the right hon. Prime Minister, who has just tabled the correspondence with the provincial premiers with regard to the proposed prices review board. In the light of this exchange of correspondence and the visits by officials of the federal government to the various provinces last week, I should like to ask whether the Prime Minister is now in a position to tell us anything about the terms of reference. Have they been drafted, and will they be made available to members of the house?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, we have received four or five replies from the provinces. There are not more than five. The officials who have been visiting the provinces have now visited all the provinces; I believe they visited the last one yesterday. We received an interim report from them last week and will be receiving the final report over the week end. I believe it should be possible to make progress with good speed and report to the house when it reconvenes on April 23.

Mr. Douglas: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Prime Minister whether any contacts are being established with organizations other than the provinces. Are any discussions going on with management, labour, farm organizations or consumers organizations regarding these terms of reference?

Mr. Pearson: Mr. Speaker, we thought we should obtain the reaction from the provincial governments first, but steps are now being taken to invite to Ottawa representatives of the various organizations, including the trade union organizations, which would be particularly concerned with this matter. It is hoped that it will be possible to have meetings with them beginning next week.

INQUIRIES OF THE MINISTRY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Roland Godin (Portneuf): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Prime Minister.

Could he tell us if the municipal authorities in Hull have informed the government of their financial difficulties and, if so, can the city hope for loans similar to those granted to Jamaica at an interest rate of ¾ of 1 per cent?

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member for Okanagan-Revelstoke.

[Translation]

Mr. Godin: Mr. Speaker, may I ask a supplementary question?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member might want to ask another question because the first one was out of order.

[English]

Mr. Ed. Schreyer (Springfield): Mr. Speaker, I see that the Postmaster General is in the house. I should like to direct my question to him. Has he asked for a ruling from his officials to determine whether third class mail, or junk mail as it is popularly called, covers or includes the books and other paraphernalia being mailed out by Liberal leadership candidates?

Inquiries of the Ministry

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton South): I hesitate to put my question to the Prime Minister in view of the way he has been fielding questions today, but now that the Minister of Trade and Commerce has made all possible mileage out of the wheat announcement may I ask whether it is the Prime Minister's intention to give him his release.

PUBLIC SERVICE

SUPERANNUATED FEDERAL EMPLOYEES—REQUEST FOR INCREASED PENSIONS

On the orders of the day:

Hon. R. A. Bell (Carleton): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Prime Minister whether he could be persuaded today to grasp what probably will be his last opportunity to fulfil the hope he expressed last December 15, that before his retirement it would be possible to provide an increase in pensions for other retired public servants?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I really should not even take notice of that question because I will have an interest in that matter after I retire.

FINANCE

CANADIAN POSITION AT MEETING OF MONETARY FUND

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Howard Johnston (Okanagan-Revelstoke): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the right hon. Prime Minister. Yesterday I asked a question regarding the Stockholm conference of the International Monetary Fund. The Prime Minister was kind enough to indicate the Canadian representation and some of the agenda. In the light of reports that Canada might play a part as peacemaker in the confrontation expected at this conference, and subsequent to the visit to Ottawa yesterday of the French parliamentary committee on finance, could we have a statement regarding Canada's position at this conference? If a confrontation should develop I think many Canadians would want to know which side we are on.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I am sure the hon. member will recognize that he is asking for the type of statement which should be made on motions.

[Mr. Schreyer.]

REPORTED STATEMENT AS TO POSSIBLE DEVALUATION OF DOLLAR

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct my question to the Prime Minister in the absence of the Minister of Finance. Will the Prime Minister tell us whether the former president of the privy council was expressing a conclusion of the government when he said the Canadian dollar would have had to be devalued if the United States had not relaxed its restrictions last month?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I should remind the hon. member for Edmonton West that he has referred to the former president of the privy council. The rule is that hon. members can ask questions about statements made outside the house by members of the cabinet.

Mr. Lambert: With the greatest of respect, Mr. Speaker, the decision was reportedly taken when that hon. gentleman was a member of the cabinet.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, former ministers rarely express the views of the government.

CANADA LABOUR CODE

INQUIRY AS TO IMPLEMENTATION OF REPORT ON TRANSPORT INDUSTRIES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. J. N. Ormiston (Melville): Mr. Speaker, several weeks ago the Minister of Labour promised the house that an analysis would be made of the Murchison report and that a statement would be made about possible government action. Is the minister now in a position to make the statement to which he earlier made reference?

Hon. J. R. Nicholson (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to be able to inform the hon. member and other interested members that the Murchison report, together with recommendations based therein, which were made by my department after discussions with the teamsters' council, the trucking companies and other interested bodies and persons, have been laid before the government. A decision has been reached and an order in council implementing same is in the course of preparation. I hope to issue a press release on the subject before the end of the week.

IMMIGRATION

WORK PERMITS TO U.S. CITIZENS OPERATING MEAT STORES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. A. D. Hales (Wellington South): Mr. Speaker, I intended to direct my question to the Minister of Manpower and Immigration. Perhaps either the Minister of Agriculture or the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs could answer it, but in their absence I will direct it to the Minister of Trade and Commerce. His officials were taking part in the grading of the product in respect of which my question is related. Could the minister advise the house or find out why United States citizens were granted permission to enter Canada, and on what basis they were granted work permits to operate such fraudulent and defrauding discount meat outlets in Ontario as are referred to in the Globe and Mail this morning?

Hon. Robert Winters (Minister of Trade and Commerce): This is something we are looking into, Mr. Speaker, and I had discussions on this subject with my officials this morning. This matter has been referred to the proper law authorities of the crown, and I shall be glad to reply more fully to my hon. friend later on. If parliament is not sitting at the time I will be glad to write him.

Hon. D. S. Harkness (Calgary North): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Solicitor General or the parliamentary assistant to the Minister of Agriculture whether the meat concerned in this case had been properly inspected and marked, or whether it was being sold illegally from that point of view.

Hon. L. T. Pennell (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, I respectfully suggest that no comment ought to be made at this time. Charges have been laid, but everyone is presumed innocent until proven guilty. Until the charges have been disposed of I suggest we should let the matter stand.

Mr. Harkness: Mr. Speaker, my question really was whether charges had been laid in respect of the sale of uninspected meat.

Mr. Hales: Mr. Speaker, when the Minister of Trade and Commerce is endeavouring to obtain this information would he also ascertain whether these United States citizens will be deported to their own country after they have served any term that may be imposed?

Mr. Winters: Mr. Speaker, I think the parliamentary secretary to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs could perhaps amplify on what has been said.

[Translation]

Mr. Ovide Laflamme (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, in answer to the various questions which have been put in connection with the report which appeared in today's newspapers, the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs had been informed, last January, especially by the hon. member for Wellington South (Mr. Hales), about that meat business. The department referred the matter to the meat inspection division of the Department of Agriculture, the Department of National Health and Welfare and also the standards branch of the Department of Trade and Commerce. All that led, of course, to arrests in which the Department of Immigration took an active part.

DOMINION-PROVINCIAL RELATIONS

REPORTED B.C. REFUSAL TO ACCEPT COURT RULING ON OFF-SHORE RIGHTS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Barry Mather (New Westminster): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources could I direct a question to the right hon. Prime Minister and ask whether he is aware of the defiance uttered by the government of British Columbia in respect of the ruling of the Supreme Court in regard to off-shore mineral rights, and the statement by ministers of the government of British Columbia that they will collect royalties regardless of the Supreme Court ruling.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, my hon. friend was good enough to send me a copy of his question. I have no knowledge of this report, which if accurate would indeed be astonishing.

Mr. Lambert: We are not surprised at anything that comes out of British Columbia.

PROPOSED STUDY OF UNION OF ATLANTIC PROVINCES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Thomas M. Bell (Saint John-Albert): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. In view of the announcement yesterday by the Atlantic premiers that a serious study under Dr. Deutsch will be conducted on Atlantic union, would the Prime Minister be prepared to indicate the federal interest in such a union and say whether formal representations will be made by the federal government to such a study?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am sure any federal government would be most interested in this study initiated by the provinces concerned. If the federal government were asked for its views on a matter of such importance, I am sure it would be very glad indeed to give them.

Mr. Bell (Saint John-Albert): A supplementary question. Would the Prime Minister be prepared to offer all the co-operation possible in so far as any constitutional roadblocks which might present themselves? For example, we in the maritimes would not want our senatorial floor reduced because of union. Matters such as this would be important.

Mr. Pearson: Of course, Mr. Speaker, a senatorial floor is not a roadblock.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

GRAIN

WHEAT—REQUEST FOR PROMPT PAYMENT TO WESTERN FARMERS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Trade and Commerce arising out of the statement he made earlier. Would the minister use his influence and best offices with the wheat board to see that cheques are sent out to those farmers in difficult circumstances in western Canada who need funds. I include in this request, of course, those farmers who might want to come to Ottawa for a certain event next week and who otherwise might not have the funds to get here.

INQUIRY AS TO PROSPECTS FOR COMING YEAR

On the orders of the day:

Mr. S. J. Enns (Portage-Neepawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is to the Minister of Trade and Commerce. In view of the confidence reflected in the announcement regarding the record wheat payment, I would ask the minister whether he has sufficient confidence in future markets for Canadian produced grain to encourage farmers to grow even more wheat than last year.

[Mr. Bell (Saint John-Albert).]

Hon. Robert Winters (Minister of Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, I have always found the judgment of the Canadian farmers to be pretty good in this field, and I am sure they are quite willing to adapt to the circumstances in the market place.

FISHERIES

SEALING—REQUEST FOR COMPREHENSIVE STATEMENT

On the orders of the day:

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, with the approach of the end of this portion of the session I wonder whether the Prime Minister would consider giving an answer to the very frightening descriptions of the seal slaughter which have appeared in the British press, with widespread allegations to the effect that cruelty and brutality were practised and that while there has been some improvement in the slaughter, that in no way removes a dark cloud over Canada.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I agree that the report in the newspaper in question, the Daily Mirror, does involve a dark cloud over Canada, however unwarranted that report may be; and I believe it is unwarranted. Steps are being taken to investigate the situation, and to reply to the charges.

DRUGS

REPORTED LARGE SCALE COUNTERFEITING OF PRODUCTS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Halifax): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of National Health and Welfare I direct my question to the Prime Minister. On March 21 the hon. member for Saskatoon made inquiries of the minister about an increase in the incidence of counterfeit drugs in Canada. I wonder if the Prime Minister could advise the house whether the government has taken any investigative action.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I know the minister commenced an investigation. I do not know whether the investigation is yet completed, but I will look into it and see whether I can get some information to my hon. friend before the house rises.

EXTERNAL AID

INQUIRY AS TO TERMS OF GRANT TO WEST INDIES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Roland Godin (Portneuf): Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a question to the Prime Minister.

In view of the fact that in July 1966, Canada advised the West Indies that during the five next years a minimum of $75 million would be put at their disposal, would the Prime Mnister tell us whether the credit restrictions which we are now experiencing will have some effect on that promise and on the low rate of interest granted at that time?

[English]

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, this assistance was given to the West Indies under external aid, and I do not think it should be confused with the arrangements that are made in our own country.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

INQUIRY AS TO DIPLOMATIC RECOGNITION OF MAINLAND CHINA

On the orders of the day:

Mr. David MacDonald (Prince): Mr. Speaker, my question is to the Prime Minister. In view of the large number of prominent and respected Canadians who have written to the Prime Minister recently, and public letters to this effect, and in view of the Prime Minister's own interest in this great question, I wonder if he could tell us whether there has been any substantial progress along the road to establishing regular and diplomatic relations with mainland China.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): No recent progress that I know of, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. MacDonald (Prince): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the Prime Minister's fairly imminent retirement, is it to be hoped that he will be able to make an important statement in this regard before that occurs?

Mr. Pearson: Mr. Speaker, I might even be the first Canadian representative in Peking.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Lambert: That is known as preaching for a call.

TRADE

WHEAT—PROVISION FOR RESTRICTED MARKETING UNDER INTERNATIONAL AGREEMENT

On the orders of the day:

Mr. George Muir (Lisgar): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Trade and Commerce. Is it the minister's understanding of the new international grains agreement that all major exporting countries have the capability to limit marketings to support world wheat prices, and has Canada expressed its intention to do so if necessary?

Hon. Robert Winters (Minister of Trade and Commerce): Yes, Mr. Speaker, there is a formal provision in the proposed international wheat agreement to which Canada conforms, and we will certainly play our part in an endeavour to maintain the price structure.

Mr. Muir (Lisgar): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Does the minister concur in the official United States view that these countries, including Canada, have the will to limit marketings and that the United States is willing to test countries like Canada if the United States feels it should do so?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I had very serious doubts about the first question. I have even more serious doubts about the supplementary.

AIR CANADA

INQUIRY AS TO CONTINUED USE OF JP-4 FUEL

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Transport. In view of the report of the British air safety group calling for the banning of JP-4, a fuel for jet aircraft which is cheaper than kerosene but highly inflammable, and in view of the fact that Air Canada is using it although its use has been abandoned by most large air lines, is the minister having any investigation made on the advisability of continuing to use this form of fuel in Air Canada jets?

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of Transport): Not at the moment, Mr. Speaker. This question has been thoroughly investigated on previous occasions. The conclusion was that each fuel has some advantages and some disadvantages. I read the reports myself at one time and feel that the conclusions were probably right, that although one has some advantages the other has some advantages too. There was no clear cut indication that one was markedly superior to the other. As far as I know there has been no evidence recently to change that conclusion. But I did find very interesting the evidence that was presented, and it does raise some questions in one's mind as to the difference under certain operating conditions as compared to certain other operating conditions. With regard to its danger, it depends entirely where and under what operating conditions the fuel is being used.

Mr. Douglas: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I would like to ask the minister whether in his assessment of the situation the risk factor was found to be greater in JP-4 than in other fuels which are available.

Mr. Hellyer: As I indicated, Mr. Speaker, only under certain conditions.

Mr. Lewis: Remember you are Paul Hellyer, not Paul Martin.

RURAL DEVELOPMENT

QUEBEC—AGREEMENT RESPECTING ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

On the orders of the day:

Mr. J. R. Keays (Gaspé): I intended to direct my question to the Minister of Forestry and Rural Development, but in his absence I will put it to the Prime Minister. Owing to the anxiety evident in Quebec over the delay in signing the federal-provincial agreement under the FRED program, would the Prime Minister tell us approximately on what date that agreement may be signed?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): I cannot do so, Mr. Speaker, but I will make inquiries.

AGRICULTURE

POTATOES—ANNOUNCEMENT OF FEDERAL ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

On the orders of the day:

Mr. David MacDonald (Prince): My question is for the parliamentary secretary to the Minister of Agriculture. I wonder whether the minister has made a decision yet with regard to acreage assistance for Prince Edward Island potato growers.

Mr. Bruce S. Beer (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Agriculture announced this morning there would be a federal assistance program for commercial potato growers. In brief, it is $25 per acre to a maximum of $400 per farmer, based on the 1967 crop.

Mr. Ed. Schreyer (Springfield): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I should like to ask the parliamentary secretary whether this program applies to any specific region.

Mr. Beer: It is a national program, Mr. Speaker.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

INQUIRY AS TO PURCHASE OF TRANSPORT AIRCRAFT

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): My question is for the Minister of National Defence. Could he tell the house what progress is being made in obtaining a heavy transport aircraft in lieu of the C-141, so the C-5 plane can be used?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): The C-5 will be used whether we obtain the C-141 or an alternate plane. We have different options so far as this big transport plane is concerned and we are studying them now.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

INQUIRY AS TO FUTURE PLANS OF PRIME MINISTER

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a matter of privilege. I wonder if I may ask the Prime Minister whether he does not think he should let the house know if this is the last day he will be in his place as Prime Minister. If so, we might like to say a few appropriate words.

An hon. Member: Can you?

Mr. Knowles: I do recall that on one occasion with respect to the right hon. member for Prince Albert the Prime Minister said that the place would never be the same without him. If this is to be the Prime Minister's last day, perhaps he could tell us, so we could—

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): No, Mr. Speaker. I expect to be taking a comfortable seat on the back benches, and perhaps the words would be more appropriate for me then.

• (3:20 p.m.)

SUPPLY

The house in committee of supply, Mr. Batten in the chair.

The Chairman: Order. House again in committee of supply on supplementary estimates (C), 1967-68. We will now consider the estimates of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. These estimates were last considered on March 19.

DEPARTMENT OF CONSUMER AND CORPORATE AFFAIRS

1c. Departmental administration, $399,53.

Mr. Douglas: Mr. Chairman, I want to say just a few words on the estimates of this department, particularly with respect to Bill C-190 which was the result of some two years of investigation by a committee of this house which looked into the price of drugs and found that drug prices in Canada were higher than in almost any other country in the western world. As a result of that committee's work a number of recommendations were made to the government, two of which have been acted upon.

The first recommendation had to do with the removal of the sales tax on prescription drugs, and the government implemented that recommendation. The result was that there was some reduction in the price of prescription drugs across Canada. Since that time, however, the drug companies have announced very substantial increases which have more than wiped out the reduction occasioned by the government's removal of the sales tax. Therefore the position of the consumer today is actually worse, and not better, since the drug bill came before the house.

I received from a businessman in the province of Ontario a copy of a bill which he received for $51.60 for 60 capsules. This man was required by his doctor to take 4 capsules a day, which means that he has to pay $3.44 a day for the drug. Since he will probably be required to take it for a considerable length of time, one can see what a heavy burden this is for him.

When the businessman complained to his druggist, who was a friend of his, about this very exorbitant price, the druggist said, "I know it is very high but the"—particular drug company, which he named—"has a monopoly by virtue of its patent, and there is nothing we can do about it". Apparently this drug is cheaper in the United States, in Great Britain and elsewhere and, according to the druggist, this is the price which he must charge. One could duplicate this example again and again. The fact is that in spite of the government's action to remove the sales tax on prescription drugs, the Canadian public is still paying exorbitant prices for products which are not luxuries, which are not optional, but which they must have if they are seriously ill.

The second recommendation upon which the government acted was to make certain changes in the Patent Act and Trade Marks Act. These changes were brought before the house in the form of Bill C-190. We had an excellent debate in the house on this matter. The bill was given second reading, which as hon. members know means approval in principle, and we in this party were very anxious that the house should not recess until that bill had passed, been sent to the other place, and then been placed on the statute books. We have not been able to persuade the government to proceed with the legislation, and various explanations were given to us. Sometimes we were told that the reason the bill could not be proceeded with was that the official opposition, the members of the Conservative party, were going to put on a protracted debate.

Mr. Pugh: That is ridiculous.

Mr. Douglas: I think the government could have called the bill and found out whether or not that was true. On the other hand I find that members of the official opposition have been told that there were important amendments which had not been drafted, and therefore the bill could not be proceeded with. But I draw the attention of the committee to the statement made by the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs on March 19 at page 7815 of Hansard, where he said:

> In light of the suggestions that were made by the official opposition we reviewed the bill. We have come forth with what we think are additional clarifications that in our opinion re-ensure the safety measures of the bill. I am prepared, of course, to stand by the bill in terms of its economic significance and in terms of the safety of the Canadian people, and I am prepared to have it debated at any time.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that the minister who is in charge of the bill and who ought to know whether or not these amendments are ready for consideration by committee of the whole has made it abundantly clear that as far as he is concerned he has discharged his responsibility, that he has the amendments ready, and that it is not his fault that this bill has not been proceeded with.

There has been criticism of the fact that we in this party have been both insistent and persistent on the question of proceeding with Bill No. C-190. I want to point out that the correspondence I have received indicates that this criticism of our actions has not been widespread. I think that the great majority of the public were supporting the members of the New Democratic party in their urging the government to proceed with the bill which, in our opinion, would be of considerable help in reducing the price of prescription drugs.

I was interested to note when I was in Edmonton last Friday an editorial in the Edmonton Journal, which is a well known supporter of the Liberal party. The heading of the article read: "Drug prices bill: The N.D.P. is right". The article went on as follows:

> Mr. Allan MacEachen said in the Commons that the N.D.P. charge of "political considerations" in the government's refusal to bring about a vote on a bill designed to reduce prescription drug prices almost made him gag.
> The minister of health appears to be highly selective in his choice of things to make himself gag. A great deal has happened in the Commons in recent years to make even a person with a strong stomach gag. But the N.D.P. efforts to have this important bill dealt with now is not one of them.
> The urgency of the matter is pointed up by the announcement of price increases, up to 30 per cent, by a major drug company. Perhaps its theory is that the best defence is to attack. But Canadian drug prices already are the highest in the world!
> The bill on which the N.D.P. wanted a vote is not an N.D.P. bill. It is a government bill to amend the Patents and Trade Marks Acts in such a way as to force down retail prices. It was introduced by the government with a great flourish in a manner designed to extract the maximum political mileage from it. It has been given second reading—approval in principle. But a terrific lobby has been raised against it by the pharmaceutical industry.
> Quite rightly, the N.D.P. did not want to see it die on the order paper.
> But not only did the government set its face against third reading before the recess. It also refused to give any undertaking that the bill would be the first order of business when the house reassembles April 23.
> It is sad to see the urgent business of the nation neglected in this way. But it is not out of harmony with the bumbling and fumbling the nation has come to expect from the Liberal government.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I submit that the attempt of this party to persuade the government to bring down this legislation before we recess has not met with widespread criticism but, on the whole, has been supported by a great many of the people of Canada and by a goodly part of the press of this country.

[Mr. Douglas.]

Our concern, Mr. Chairman, has not been just with having this measure passed before the recess. What we had been primarily concerned about is the danger that this legislation would be dropped. The fact that there has been a very powerful lobby by the drug manufacturing companies is well known. To our minds there seemed to be every indication that the government was beginning to change its mind, that it was beginning to lose its determination to see that the bill did become law. That is why we have repeatedly asked the government for some assurance that the bill would be passed.

If the bill is not to be passed before the recess, Mr. Chairman, then at least we need a commitment that the legislation will be dealt with immediately after parliament reassembles on April 23. This is why I asked the Prime Minister yesterday the question I did, and I want to put once more on the record the reply of the Prime Minister, which is reported at page 8058 of Hansard. His reply was:

> But I have already indicated, Mr. Speaker, that we consider this as priority legislation, and it certainly is not that we are determined not to proceed with it. We are determined to proceed with it, but we have indicated that we feel this should be after the recess. We will not be proroguing; we will be adjourning. On our return—and I have discussed this matter with my colleagues in the cabinet, all of them, some more individually perhaps than others—there will be two items of legislation which really have top priority. One is this bill; the other is the Kennedy round negotiations which are matters of very great urgency in the trade field. I think we should proceed with those two items immediately on our return, and my colleagues in the cabinet agree with me on that score.

I should like on behalf of the members of this party, Mr. Chairman, to say that we are very happy to have that categorical assurance from the Prime Minister. We take this as a commitment not only from the Prime Minister himself, who unfortunately is not likely to be leading the government when we reassemble on April 23, but also as a firm commitment from all members of the cabinet.

In all probability the next prime minister will be one who is a member of the present cabinet. We feel that this commitment is binding upon whichever of the candidates is selected as leader of the Liberal party, and consequently prime minister of Canada. We shall be pressing the government very hard, and urging the new prime minister to carry out the commitment made yesterday by the Prime Minister.

• (3:30 p.m.)

On that understanding we are satisfied for the present that this bill is not to be killed, and when parliament reassembles we shall be urging that it be one of the first items called so that this parliament can take a step toward reducing the price of prescription drugs to the consumers of Canada. We do not suggest for a moment that these amendments to the Patent Act and the Trade Marks Act are going to solve all the problems in the drug industry, but we do feel that the work of the committee following two years of investigation does count for something. We also feel that the investigation conducted by the combines investigation branch and by the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs counts for something. This valuable work ought not to be allowed to go down the drain. If this legislation offers any hope at all that we can do something about the price of drugs, that we can do anything at all to make it easier for those people who must buy drugs in fairly large quantities, then parliament ought not to shirk its responsibility in this regard. We therefore accept the Prime Minister's commitment and when we reassemble we shall expect the government to carry out that commitment.

Mr. Rynard: I listened with interest to the hon. member for Burnaby-Coquitlam and I am sure we all agree that we need the cheapest drugs possible for those who are sick. But those drugs must be safe. It is no use getting cheap drugs which might poison someone, and that matter requires looking into.

I also wish to clear up another misunderstanding. In today's Globe and Mail Mr. Michael Gillan, writing about the government's move to win a house recess, said that the government was opposed to proceeding with the drug bill because Conservatives have indicated they would conduct a lengthy debate on estimates to block the way to consideration of the drug bill. I want to say that that is completely false and erroneous.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. McCleave: The Globe and Mail, please note.

Mr. Rynard: At no time did the Conservative party consider blocking this bill by conducting a lengthy debate on estimates.

An hon. Member: That was N.D.P. nonsense.

Mr. Rynard: When the government proceeds with the bill we shall be prepared to deal with it clause by clause, and I want that on the record.

I now wish to deal with another matter. We often talk about protecting the consuming public, but we do not often say anything about protecting one government from another. In the federal house, here in Ottawa, we often say that we shall share programs. When we share those programs we most often share them with provinces, and the provinces are called on to share in the costs of programs. Sometimes they pay more than their share. Sometimes the share we ask them to pay is beyond their financial ability. In my opinion when we apply such pressures we are doing something that, in my judgment, constitutes political blackmail.

When provinces are asked to share in a program everybody forgets that provincial governments must pay for the administration of those programs in the provinces. This is true of the medicare program. The federal government is to share the cost of the program with the provinces, but the provinces will pay for the administration. As I say, we must remember sometimes that one level of government needs to be protected from another. Ontario, my province, is budgeting for under $300 million deficit, and the federal deficit at Ottawa will be about $800 million. If this situation exists right across the country it shows that our financial condition is not good. We must have priorities and we must stop blackmailing the provinces and the public into accepting and paying for programs they do not necessarily need, and which may be wrong in principle.

I also want to ask what the government will do in order to provide doctors to operate the medicare scheme? If we do not provide doctors for the public, are we not cheating the public? If we are not cheating now, then I have never seen cheating anywhere. Our people will have to pay their medicare premiums but there will not be the doctors to take care of them in Canada. My hon. friend from Sudbury brought this point to the attention of the house the other day, when he spoke about the scarcity of general practitioners. I ask what the government will do to alleviate the shortage. Being 2,000 doctors short of our requirements, we are in the throes of a major medical crisis. Some areas of Canada have no doctors at all, yet we are talking about universal medicare. Anyone going to a strange locality and taken sick at night will very likely wind up in the emergency department of the local hospital. It is hard to get a doctor out to see a patient at night because doctors are scarce. In any event our doctors and hospitals are overburdened.

I appeal to this government, which I know is in a difficult position, to take steps to alleviate the shortage. Our present crisis is as bad as our 1942 crisis, which was met by having the medical schools operating all year round. Our output of doctors then was increased by 50 per cent.

Mr. Douglas: Hear, hear.

Mr. Rynard: It is wasteful and inefficient to have our expensive capital items, the medical school buildings, left idle for part of the year. I appeal to the government and to the minister concerned to meet with provincial health ministers, the heads of universities and teaching representatives and to see if medical schools could be operated throughout the year. Teaching in medical schools should not be confined to eight months of the year, with the schools being left empty for the remainder of the year. That is the only way we shall get enough doctors, and that is the only way we shall avoid cheating our public, which is paying for services it will not get.

Some will ask: But what about the doctor teacher shortage? My answer is that we can use television and the new audiovisual teaching methods which have come into prominence recently. Any student sitting in any classroom in Canada, because of television or audiovisual methods can see the greatest teachers in this country and hear them lecture. All that is needed is a proctor to note a student's questions after the lecture. It is as easy as that. Some say: But you cannot do things that way. Let me say that in the United States and Canada credits are given to those who go to conventions and teaching seminars, where teaching is carried on by this method.

These doctors are costing us a lot of money. It costs approximately $50,000 to put a doctor through medical school. As the hon. member for Sudbury has pointed out, we have a great stake in their careers. The difficulty caused by a shortage of practitioners is increasing today and we must see that a much worse crisis is avoided. We were able to cope in 1942 with the crisis but today we apparently cannot. I say to the minister of consumer affairs or to whoever is taking his place, that a consumer who is paying for something he is not getting is being cheated as badly as someone who picks an article off a counter which is priced too high. I hope that when the Liberals hold their convention this matter will be brought up. They intend to bring in medicare as of July 1. The first thing they should do is insure that doctors are available to carry out this project. Let us quit cheating the public.

Mrs. MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): It is significant we should be ending this part of the session by talking about consumer problems. We had a discussion on aspects of the drug bill and today we have been talking about increasing the supply of doctors.

I want to refer again, today, to the way in which those who are hard of hearing are mercilessly exploited. Since I raised this subject the other day I have been amazed by the flood of letters and communications forthcoming from people all across the country who are hard of hearing and who feel they are being exploited. I wish to bring fresh evidence before the committee because the removal of these grievances should, I feel, be one of the immediate tasks of the department of consumer affairs. I am glad to see the minister in charge nodding his head. A real effort must be made to get to the bottom of this.

I mentioned that an inquiry by the minister of trade in British Columbia had discovered that in Vancouver and Victoria the mark-up on hearing aids as between wholesale and retail prices was as high as 306 per cent. One of the members of the legislature drew attention to the fact that hearing aids which cost $35 to manufacture in Japan were being sold in Vancouver for upwards of $400; that others which cost $77 to manufacture were being sold for $700. Since I raised this matter a great deal of evidence has come in from other parts of Canada. It should be remembered that most of these people have absolutely no means of deciding how much should be paid for a hearing aid, or which of the various models, widely differing in price, are best suited to their needs. One man who lives in this city inquired about hearing aids and was given information about four makes, all of them of the kind with a cord, the kind he needed. One was priced at $400, another at $280, a third at $329 and yet a fourth at $245. How was this man to decide which of the hearing aids he should buy? No information has gone out from the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs to help him decide where the best value lies. In the case I refer to the man is hard up and has no means of knowing.

From Winnipeg I have had evidence in connection with the price of batteries, a constant source of expense to users of these aids. Recently the price of these tiny button-like batteries rose to 60 cents per battery. Last night it was suggested by one of the hon. gentlemen opposite on the treasury benches, in connection with an increase in the price of milk, that two cents was not very significant. But it is a matter of two cents here, two cents there; it all adds up. And an extra 10 cents every time a battery is needed is a definite extra burden. One lady tells me that the battery she uses was supposed to last for seven days—but it wore out at the end of three days. This complaint was from a local woman.

Now I want to give the committee some evidence about prices charged to repair these hearing aids. A man living here in Ottawa writes:

> I have solved the price problem myself by buying hearing aids in England. They cost about half as much as here and the batteries cost about 60 per cent as much. A few years ago my spectacle hearing aid failed and I asked one of the better dealers here about repairs. He said that it would have to be sent to Toronto or Montreal and as a foreign product there might be some delay in doing the work. The cost might be between $30 and $40. Having a spare aid, I air-mailed my usual aid to London and had it back in about ten days. The charge was $3.20.

Surely the Canadian users of hearing aids have a right to expect some protection from this new department. I hope our hands will be strengthened by a whole flood of letters on this subject.

I wish now to say something about the selling practices used to persuade people to buy these hearing aids. Again, I have evidence from a small Ontario town—

An hon. Member: Ottawa?

Mrs. MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): No, I would not call Ottawa a small town. I believe it is fifth on the list of Canadian cities, by population. Here is a letter, addressed to me, which says:

> I was offered a position selling hearing aids by one of the distributors. I found that the commission offered for selling added tremendously to the price. I found that hearing aids were being sold to people who really did not require aids. I found the sales pitch positively repulsive. I refused the job.

• (3:50 p.m.)

In corroboration of these statements, I would refer members of the committee to an article which appeared in the Toronto Star of May 13, 1967, written by a journalist called Tori Salter. Before writing her article she took the precaution of visiting a reputable ear specialist who assured her that her hearing was perfect and that she needed no treatment. Then she went out to buy a hearing aid, and to report her experiences in doing so. At the first place she went to—and I quote from the article—> —the strong-featured woman studied the impressive-looking form in her hands, her heavily-pencilled eyelids narrowing in concentration.

> "You have a real problem," she told me. "Your audiometric test shows that while there is considerable hearing loss in both ears, the deterioration is much greater in the right ear. Fortunately we can still help you, but two hearing aids will be required. It will be expensive."
> "Expensive?"
> "About $800," she assessed.

And so on, and so on. This was a woman who, just two hours previously, had been to a hearing specialist and had been assured that her hearing was normal and that her ear drums were intact.

Then the writer of this article went on to find out that a survey of the Toronto market revealed prices ranging from $85 for a box type hearing aid with a cord, to $1,000 for miniaturized models. I quote from her article further:

> A manufacturer defended spiralling costs on the basis of a limited market, which he said made the economies of mass production impossible.
> On the other hand, Professor Norman F. Moody, Director of Biomedical Electronics, University of Toronto, commented: "In my opinion, it should be possible to sell a hearing aid which consists basically of a small microphone, some transistors, a receiver, an amplifier and an ear piece, for $100—and still allow for a reasonable profit after carrying out the necessary tests and fitting."
> "Price has little to do with the effectiveness, or lasting quality of a hearing aid," said one dealer. "A poorly designed instrument selling for $350 may be inferior to a better-engineered product selling for half the price."

What I would like to know is when can we expect some protection for people who have to buy hearing aids and who, at the present time, have absolutely no guidance, and no protection from this merciless exploitation?

I quote from another letter which I have received on this subject, again from a small town not very far from Ottawa. In part it reads:

> We are old age pensioners and my husband has tried to get a hearing aid but we just can't afford it. He is very despondent as he can't hear and misses so much. We went to one party and they wanted over $200. Is there no way he could get one? We live on a pension, and it takes it all.

The points I want to make briefly, Mr. Chairman, are that we do not know anything about the rules or regulations in connection with hearing aids. We do not know how much a hearing aid should cost. We do know there is a tremendous spread between the manufacturing cost and the selling price, and we know that the price of batteries is continually rising. Further, there is a terrific disparity between the cost of repairs in this country and the cost of repairs in Great Britain, and between the price of hearing aids in this country and their price in other countries.

We also know that under the national health plan in Great Britain hearing aids are included in the medicare program. Further, we know that according to the estimates for the year ending March 31, 1969, the cost of the consumer affairs branch of the department is going to be $394,400. That is a lot of money. It is a great amount to be taken off little people and others who pay income tax. Those people who can ill afford to pay this taxation are going to demand that they get some kind of worth-while consumer protection. I think they have a right to get it, and this business in connection with hearing aids is one particular area in which they have the right to get protection.

The terms of the legislation establishing the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs set out that the minister shall:

(a) initiate, recommend or undertake programs designed to promote the interests of the Canadian consumer;

(b) co-ordinate programs of the government of Canada that are designed to promote the interests of the Canadian consumer;

(c) promote and encourage the institution of practices or conduct tending to the better protection of the Canadian consumer and co-operate with provincial governments or agencies thereof, or any bodies, organizations or persons, in any programs having similar objects; and

(d) undertake, recommend or assist in programs to assist the Canadian consumer to be more fully informed about goods and services offered to the consumer.

Instead of spreading myself all over the map about a hundred things in which the consumer needs protection I have chosen to document the vital need for consumer protection with respect to hearing aids.

Item agreed to.

(The following items were agreed to):

5c. Bankruptcy Act—Administration, $109,000.

25c. Consumer Affairs Branch, $175,000.

The Chairman: This completes the supplementary estimates of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. The committee will now consider the estimates of the Treasury Board.

TREASURY BOARD

7c. To authorize the Treasury Board to delete from the accounts certain debts due, and claims by, Her Majesty, each of which is in excess of $1,000, amounting in the aggregate to $19,067,138.26, of which $44,570 represents an item that has been carried as an asset in the Statement of Assets and Liabilities, $44,571.

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Chairman, I have a few words that I want to say on this item but in view of the understanding that we conclude the supplementary estimates at four o'clock I think I can make my remarks when we are on the resolution preceding the interim supply bill.

Item agreed to.

L117c. To authorize in the current and subsequent fiscal years, notwithstanding the Financial Administration Act, where sums are due to federal government departments and agencies from the working capital advance established by Vote L99e, Appropriation Act No. 4, 1966, for the provision of data processing and related services, the payment from those sums of amounts payable by the said departments or agencies to the said working capital advance, $1.

Item agreed to.

The Chairman: This completes the estimates of Treasury Board. The committee will now consider the supplementary estimates of the Department of Fisheries.

DEPARTMENT OF FISHERIES

Fisheries Management and Development—

15c. Grants, contributions and subsidies in the amount and subject to the terms specified in the sub-vote titles listed in the details of estimates, $1,065,000.

Item agreed to.

17c. Estimated amount required to recoup the Fishing Vessel Indemnity Account, the Lobster Trap Indemnity Account and the Fixed Fishing Gear and Shore Installations Indemnity Account established under Vote 540 of the Appropriation Act No. 5, 1955 and Vote 527 of the Appropriation Act No. 6, 1956, to cover the net operating losses in the said Accounts as at March 31, 1968, $157,700.

Item agreed to.

The Chairman: This completes the supplementary estimates.

Perhaps I should point out to the committee that vote 15c is the revised estimate of the Department of Fisheries. The initial estimate was not proceeded with.

Mr. Bell (Carleton): The one that was carried is in the amended form in accordance with the message that was delivered last night. Is that right?

The Chairman: Yes.

Resolutions adopted in committee of supply this day reported and concurred in.

WAYS AND MEANS

Hon. L. T. Pennell (for the President of the Treasury Board) moved that the house go into committee of ways and means.

Motion agreed to and the house went into committee, Mr. Batten in the chair.

Mr. Pennell moved:

Resolved, that towards making good the Supply granted to Her Majesty on account of certain expenses of the public service for the fiscal year ending the 31st March, 1968, the sum of $287,980,264 be granted out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada.

Motion agreed to.

Resolution reported and concurred in.

Mr. Pennell (for Mr. Benson) thereupon moved for leave to introduce Bill No. C-211 for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service for the financial year ending the 31st March, 1968.

Motion agreed to and bill read the first time.

• (4:00 p.m.)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: When shall the bill be read a second time?

Some hon. Members: By leave now.

Mr. Pennell moved the second reading of the bill.

Motion agreed to, bill read the second time and the house went into committee thereon, Mr. Batten in the Chair.

On clause 2—$287,980,264 granted for 1967-68

Mr. Bell (Carleton): Mr. Chairman, may we have from the Solicitor General the assurance that this bill is in the standard form and contains nothing that is not usual in such an appropriation bill?

Mr. Pennell: Mr. Chairman, the form of this bill is the same as that passed in previous years. I have one brief comment in respect of clause 7.

Clause agreed to.

Clauses 3 to 6 inclusive agreed to.

Ways and Means

On clause 7—Power to raise loan of $2,000,000,000 for public works and general purposes

Mr. Bell (Carleton): Mr. Chairman, I observe that clause 7 seeks the authority to raise a loan of $2 billion. Would the Solicitor General indicate the necessity for this particular requirement and what this means by way of authorized loan total in appropriation bills which are outstanding.

Mr. Pennell: Mr. Chairman, as the committee is aware it is customary at the beginning of a new fiscal year to request $1 billion in net new borrowing authority. This bill before you requests $2 billion. The additional amount of $1 billion is being sought at this time to enable the government, if circumstances require it, to borrow substantial sums in terms of foreign currencies. The full amount of this authority may not be required. It is important, however, for the government to have flexibility in its debt management planning and operation.

To assist the committee I would point out that the total borrowing authority authorized annually by parliament in the last few years have been as follows: 1960-61, $1,500 million; 1961-62, $2,000 million; 1962-63, $2,500 million; 1963-64, $2,000 million; 1964-65, $1,750 million; 1965-66, $1,750 million; 1966-67; $1,750 million.

I respectfully suggest that this bill follows the usual form of the last few years.

Mr. Bell (Carleton): Mr. Chairman, I merely wish to say that in passing this bill at this time and under these hasty conditions we are not to be taken as concurring in this extended borrowing power.

Clause agreed to.

Clause 8 agreed to.

Clause 1 agreed to.

Preamble agreed to.

Title agreed to.

Bill reported, read the third time and passed.

The house in committee of supply, Mr. Batten in the chair.

—be granted to Her Majesty on account of the fiscal year ending the 31st of March, 1969.

The Chairman: Shall the resolution carry?

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Chairman, before this resolution carries I should like once again to say a few words concerning what some of us regard as a very important issue, namely the question of increasing the pensions of retired civil servants. A few minutes ago when the item for the Treasury Board was called I indicated I had something to say but that I would defer my remarks until this point.

• (4:10 p.m.)

Mr. Chairman, it has been something of a temptation to me today to speak to this matter with cynicism and a sense of utter despair. In fact, I am almost tempted to copy the style of the hon. member for Carleton in respect of some of the things he has said on this issue. I realize, however, that while I could express my outrage and get something off my chest, perhaps that is not the way to get something out of the government opposite. Therefore I shall refrain from that kind of approach and once again make the strongest appeal I can possibly make to the government to deal with this matter before the present session ends.

We already have the assurance that when we rise this evening we will be adjourned, not prorogued, and that when we come back on April 23 we will deal with high priority matters. I recognize that no commitment has yet been made by the government to deal with this matter among others having high priority, but I urge this is of very high priority and that it ought to be dealt with before this session is prorogued, I presume sometime toward the end of April.

I am sure you, Mr. Chairman, representing a constituency in this area, as well as your colleague who sits to your right, the hon. member for Ottawa East, and your friend to your left, the hon. member for Carleton, as well as others, are aware of the importance of this problem. Indeed, we are terribly aware of how bitterly disappointed some 50,000 or 60,000 federal superannuates, counting retired civil servants, retired R.C.M.P. personnel and retired members of the armed forces, feel because this matter has not been dealt with before now.

I will not take the time to recount the efforts that some of us have made with regard to this matter over 20 years or more, but I do draw attention once again to the fact that the hon. member for Ottawa East tabled on May 8, 1967, a report of a joint committee of both houses on which were representatives of all parties, in which it was unanimously recommended that there be an immediate increase in the pensions of retired civil servants, including civil servants as we know them by that name, retired members of the armed forces and retired R.C.M.P. personnel.

I know it is awfully difficult to document by reference to Hansard the kind of promises that were made to us, but the promises were implicit in the things that were said on the floor of the house, and the promises given to us outside this house were very explicit. This matter was going to be dealt with last summer. Indeed, I was told on several occasions it was going to be dealt with before the end of June. Hon. members know that on July 7 when some of us tried to get the house to stay here to deal with this we lost the vote and we were sent home with the assurance by Liberal members that it was just a matter of waiting until the fall. We came back in September, and I suppose there has not been a week since that some of us have not raised this question, but in vain.

Shortly after the Prime Minister announced his intended resignation I began to urge him to put this matter on his personal priority list as a matter that should be dealt with before he became a retired civil servant himself. Reference was made to this today, and he suggested this gave him a vested interest. I think that hardly applies. The fact of the matter is that on Friday, December 15, 1967, as recorded in Hansard at page 5474 the Prime Minister told me that he hoped to be able to reconsider sympathetically this very difficult problem, and he used these words:

I hope the situation will so improve during the remainder of my period on this side as Prime Minister that this may be possible.

Likewise on January 31, 1968, as recorded at page 6207, the Prime Minister assured me that the matter was one of great importance and was continuing to receive consideration. On Friday, February 9, 1968, I again asked the Prime Minister whether there was hope that this matter would be dealt with before he relinquished his office as Prime Minister. His reply to me was, as recorded at page 6558 of Hansard on that day, was "I certainly hope that the situation will improve." Again on Wednesday, March 13, 1968, I asked a similar question, and on page 7586 of Hansard the Prime Minister replied as follows: "Mr. Speaker, the hon. member must never give up hope."

That is a pretty hard admonition to follow in this case, because here we are very close to the end of this session and very close to the end of the present Prime Minister's régime, and nothing has yet been done. Maybe I should accept the fact that there is no hope that anything will be done while the present Prime Minister still occupies that office, but I refuse to do so. I refuse to give up hope.

On Wednesday, March 20, 1968, I asked a similar question. This is the last sentence of the Prime Minister's reply to my question as to whether something would be done before we resume in April, as recorded at page 7863 of Hansard:

> We will certainly give the matter consideration and do what we think is right in the circumstances.

That is a pretty ambiguous reply. Doing what is right in the view of the Prime Minister might be doing nothing, but I cannot imagine that the Prime Minister would play with words in that way. Surely when he said "we will" do something he meant something, rather than nothing. I call upon the Prime Minister, as did the hon. member for Carleton today, and as several of us have done during the past few weeks, to crown his career as Prime Minister of this country by dealing with this very important matter.

I recognize that it was not possible for the Prime Minister to remain in the house this afternoon, but I am told that the Minister of Industry is here representing the President of the Treasury Board on this matter. I notice other members of the cabinet in attendance as well, and I hope that in spite of their preoccupation during the next couple of weeks with other matters they will in their cabinet discussions face the fact that in all honesty, decency and fairness they must deal with this issue.

It is not my intention to take the time to go over all the arguments which have been placed on the record time and time again in favour of increasing the pensions of retired civil servants. The figures have been placed in Hansard repeatedly regarding the number of people involved: 30,000 retired civil servants, 15,000 widows of retired civil servants and several thousand in the other two categories. There are also figures on the record showing the huge amounts of money credited to the public service superannuation fund, as well as to the other two funds.

In the case of all three funds, for retired civil servants, for retired R.C.M.P. personnel and for retired armed forces personnel, the interest that is being paid each year on the amount in the funds is by itself greater than the amount that is being paid out in pensions to retired people. It seems to me that there is no argument against the capacity of the government to pay these increased pensions, and I insist that action should be taken now. There are those who resist doing something for these people on the ground that we should not do something for one group of people that we do not do for all. In reply to that I say again that the government has a special responsibility to its own employees, the responsibility of being a good employer. I also say that this business of escalating pensions is an issue facing us in the pension field in respect of which we will have to do something substantial in the next few years, or our whole pension structure will collapse.

I suggest there is no better place for the government to begin the escalation of pensions that have been put in pay than in respect of its own employees. The government has already accepted the principle in part by putting an escalation clause in the Old Age Security Act and in the Canada Pension Plan. I suggest this ought to be done here as well.

• (4:20 p.m.)

The time is limited and I see two or three others who may wish to get to their feet and support this plea. I hope they will. I hope the hon. member for Carleton will have a few appropriate words to say. I hope the hon. member for Ottawa East will also rise and say something about this matter, because I know how strongly he feels about it. I know he feels as disappointed as I do that the report which we tabled on May 8, 1967, was put on the shelf, only to be covered with dust. I hope that hon. member will use his influence, as a member on the government side, to press the government to act on this issue.

I said last July, when we were speaking on this matter, that to delay it till the fall was unfair; that many people would not live to receive any benefit that might come later. Many hundreds have died in the meantime, as you will see if you check the figures from one year to the next. These people have not enjoyed the benefit of the proposed increases. This will continue to be the situation unless action is taken.

There is no excuse whatsoever for this delay. I say again that if ever there was an opinion expressed that ought to be recognized, it is the opinion of the special joint committee on the public service of Canada, which represented both houses of parliament and all parties. This committee met for many months—I think it was about a year—dealing with four or five different pieces of legislation. It was thoroughly seized of the problems of the federal public service, and I think the recommendation it made was a well thought out and responsible one.

As I say, I want to leave for others the opportunity to comment on this question if they wish to do so. I hope the Minister of Industry has been taking this in, as the acting President of the Treasury Board today. I am glad to see that the Solicitor General is also present, and the Minister of Labour. We are favoured at this particular time by having in the chamber ministers who are not involved in the leadership race that is taking place. They can attend to good, solid business. I see that the parliamentary secretary to the President of the Treasury Board is here as well. I call on all of them to face up to the seriousness of this issue. Let us not disappoint these people any longer. The government should not any longer have the reputation of being the kind of employer that does not come through with what is deserved, and what these people have a right to expect.

As I have already pointed out, the Prime Minister said to me in reply to one of my questions: The hon. member must never give up hope. Well, Mr. Chairman, I am not giving up hope. I trust that action will be taken before the present Prime Minister leaves office in April. I urge that this be done without fail.

Mr. Richard: Mr. Chairman, it is perhaps a little late in the day, but I should say a few words on the subject raised by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre. As hon. members know, for the past 20 years I have been one of those pleading the cause of the retired civil servants. So this problem is not new, and it should have been settled a long time ago.

About two years ago I accepted the chairmanship of the joint committee of the Senate and House of Commons which inquired into the public service situation, and more particularly dealt with legislation which was presented to this house. We had a very good and very able committee. There was agreement on all sides. When those bills had been disposed of we were requested to deal with the question of retired civil servants. I agreed to continue as chairman of the committee, not with the hope but with conviction that I was doing a job. I was fully convinced we would prepare a plan that would be accepted in due time by the house.

Hon. members will recall that we made haste in the committee and on the last day, just before the closing of the session, on May 8, 1967, I presented a unanimous report of the committee. I agree that something has to be done in this regard. I hope it can be done before this session is ended. There is absolutely no financial reason why this matter should not be dealt with. It is a small matter in the budget of this country. Figures were presented to our committee which have not been challenged or denied, because they were presented by officials of Treasury Board. The people affected by this delay have been suffering because of the inequitable treatment being afforded them. I am sure I speak for many members of the house when I say that I cannot see how we can delay action any longer.

More and more representations from organizations are being made to me. But what can an ordinary member do at this time, except tell these people that consideration is still being given to the report, which is clear and is not out of line with regard to the possible cost? The implementation of the report would be doing only what this committee decided should be done, at the request of the government.

I am sure there are many cabinet members in agreement with the findings of our committee. The dissidents, or those who have been in the way of progress in regard to this legislation, should rise in their places and tell us all why the legislation should not be put through.

Mr. McCleave: Mr. Chairman, I should like to make one point and draw to the attention of the Minister of Industry the result of a recent study in the Atlantic provinces. I shall be very brief in so doing. I refer to a study conducted by the Atlantic Provinces Economic Council, entitled "Recent Population Trends, Atlantic Provinces". The study was prepared by Arthur C. Parks, the chief economist for APEC. In the foreword of this report we find the following paragraph:

> One general conclusion of the examination is that the population of the Atlantic region, relative to other parts of Canada, continues to be rural, rural population accounting for about 46 per cent of the total in 1966. Another general conclusion is that, with a few exceptions, the population of the larger regional communities is growing much less rapidly than is that of larger communities in the rest of the country. Thus the trend to population concentration is not as pronounced as it is elsewhere. A third conclusion is that much of the population movement which might be expected to result in a greater concentration in larger regional communities is a movement out of the region.

I should also like to quote from page 6 of the report as follows:

> —in all of Canada urban population rose from 69.6 per cent of total population in 1961 to 73.6 per cent in 1966, and rural population declined from 30.4 per cent to 26.4 per cent. Thus while almost three quarters of Canadian population resided in urban areas in 1966, only a little more than half of the population of the Atlantic provinces was located in urban areas.

So far I have not told the committee the purpose of my putting these two quotations on the record, but I think anybody who has followed the request of Atlantic provinces members will realize that it is rather compelling evidence that the area development and industrial incentive program should be extended to all parts of Atlantic Canada, rather than leaving out the metropolitan areas of Saint John and Fredericton and the metropolitan area of Halifax-Dartmouth which I serve.

• (4:30 p.m.)

I want to put it on record because the Minister of Industry has turned down requests from Atlantic Canada that the cities be placed within the program, and the APEC study shows quite conclusively that if any real approach is to be made to Atlantic Canadian problems and any desire shown by the government to help build up that area, we must start with the natural growth centres and give them the benefits of the incentive program. As it is now, we frequently find that important industries are leaving Halifax or Saint John and moving out into areas where this program is in existence. I hope that the points I have presented this afternoon will commend themselves to the present or the future Minister of Industry—who may perhaps be one and the same gentleman—and to the next Prime Minister of Canada.

I should like to note in conclusion that under the present act the minister has the power to cure the situation with a stroke of the pen.

Mr. McLean (Charlotte): Mr. Chairman, I have been sitting here two days and two nights trying to get a word in edgeways. I wanted to speak on the fisheries estimates, but due to the agreement to close the debate at four o'clock I could not speak until now.

I want to bring to the attention of the Minister of Fisheries or his parliamentary secretary the fact that the herring reduction industry is now being transferred from the west coast to the east coast and that no conservation measures were introduced on the west coast. Now restrictions have been imposed on the west coast. Herring on the east coast are being fished in great abundance and are being reduced to fish meal and oil and not being used for human consumption. The female herring produces 80,000 eggs each year of which only about 25,000 survive. Spawn herring are being fished in millions and they would produce billions and billions of small fish.

In the bay of Fundy we have an industry which has been there for upwards of 100 years and which has greatly increased its production in the last 25 or 30 years. Its raw material is small herring, and it does business all over the world. No one knows, not even the Department of Fisheries where these small herring originate. All we know is that they originate from the spawn herring. When they come to the bay of Fundy, they come in different sizes each year, so they are not all spawned in the same areas. I think the minister should have sufficient foresight to realize the necessity of protecting the spawning banks and protecting the spawn herring from being fished before they spawn. Otherwise an old established industry may be put out of business.

This industry employs upward of 2,000 people in the summertime, but the reduction plant employs only five or six people because the process is almost wholly automatic. The reduction industry is established in a designated area and it receives subsidies from the government, so that after five years they make a sufficient profit to be able to get out of business. But the established industry must stay on the job. As I said, no one knows where these herring are spawned, but we do know that if the spawning banks are interfered with we will not be able to get the small fish.

We had an example of this when years ago the spawning bank was protected on the island of Grand Manan, sometimes by British warships. Finally, some people became somewhat greedy and invaded the spawning banks. In a few years time, the herring fishery was exhausted. So we know from experience that if spawning banks and spawn herring are not protected, the industry disappears.

The small herring not only supply the canneries but also supply other fish with food. When you reduce the herring supply, you also reduce food for other ground fish. So naturally the herring fishery affects all fishery. Therefore it is an absolute necessity that the herring fishery be protected. We do not want the industry on the east coast to suffer as did the industry on the west coast as a result of the failure to impose restrictions in time. A number of reduction plants on the east coast are now superfluous. Some of them were subsidized by the federal government. I think the Department of Fisheries should investigate any reduction plant before it is established in the Atlantic provinces to see whether or not it is economical.

Of course the provinces are anxious to get any money that is going, and if the federal government is ready to come forth with aid, the provinces will naturally try to profit from it. However, this matter should be reviewed, and the Department of Fisheries should have some say as to the grants made by the Department of Industry to establish reduction plants. It is very important that the herring industry be protected.

A few years ago I spoke about the clam industry and I outlined what I thought should be done to protect it. However, nothing was done and the department continued in the same old way. Last year the last clam factory in my constituency was torn down. This came about as a result of the lack of attention given to the views of the local people. We do not want this to happen to the herring industry, particularly to the small herring industry which employs a great many people. We will not get the small fish if all the spawn herring are taken away and the spawning banks are left unprotected.

[Mr. McLean (Charlotte).]

• (4:40 p.m.)

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, like the former speaker I wanted to say something on supplementary estimates but owing to the agreement found it impossible to do so. However, I should like to raise the question of gasoline prices and the problem posed by gas and oil distribution across the country.

Mr. Forrestall: How many more speeches are you going to make?

Mr. Peters: There will be one more in a few moments, if I hear such comments.

Mr. Forrestall: How many times were you on your feet during the last two weeks?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order.

Mr. Peters: If the junior member for Halifax wants to make a speech he should stand up and make it. If not, let him go and have a smoke or otherwise sit quietly in his seat, in which case he will be appreciated more than he is vocally.

The Minister of Industry, who was previously responsible for the National Energy Board and for energy in general, will recall a number of charges and countercharges having been made about the pricing of gasoline, especially imported gasoline. I have been particularly interested in an inquiry made about two years ago by the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission into gas and oil pricing in northern Ontario. This matter has been raised not only in this house on several occasions but also in the Ontario legislature. There seems to be general agreement that the matter is one mainly for the federal government, I presume for the new consumer affairs department; and incidentally it fits into the same category of problem that was raised by the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway in relation to milk and other commodities.

The problem can be fairly simply stated, Mr. Chairman. It involves what I consider the unfair price of gasoline in northern Ontario. The question affects not only northern Ontario but every other area outside metropolitan areas where the mark-up on gasoline appears to be agreed upon by retailers. These retailers cannot take advantage of bulk buying as do their competitors in other parts.

The Restrictive Trade Practices Commission investigated the cause of a gasoline price war in Toronto in connection with the Texaco Canada Limited service stations of Mr. Edmunds and Wilky's Sales and Service Ltd. The company was supporting the price of the gasoline up to as high as 7½ cents. The commission was aware of the arrangement that was made but was unable to do anything about it. It does seem to me that the new consumer affairs department should be able to do something to correct this sort of situation.

I was in Toronto last week and saw cut-rate gasoline advertised at 40.9 cents a gallon. In my particular area, Mr. Chairman, No. 2 gasoline sells for as high as 56 cents a gallon. I checked with my colleague from northern Quebec and he told me that the price in his area was about two cents less, so I presume the difference is the result of the two cent tax recently imposed in Ontario.

It appears from my inquiries, Mr. Chairman, that a tank wagon price is charged from the refineries at Sarnia. In addition there is about one cent a gallon transportation cost to Toronto. The journey to northern Ontario adds about one-third of a cent. This gasoline can be transported by rail for less than one cent a gallon to all parts of northern Ontario and northern Quebec. The charge for shorter journeys would be lower.

I am at a loss to understand why there is as much as a 16 cents spread between these two areas, Mr. Chairman. Although the matter has been investigated no report has been made. I think it is only fair to the service stations to make a report shortly because they are being blamed for a situation over which they have no control. The price to the consumer is governed by the price the service station owner has to pay, not to the company that supplies his gas but to the distributor from whom he is required to purchase it.

This problem has also come before the United States federal trade commission, Mr. Chairman. I have a report before me that was made by what some might call a disreputable magazine, Male, but no doubt the facts are correct. This particular copy is not dated but the report indicates that service stations have been established by the oil companies and made economic serfs. Many citizens do not realize this. I should like to put on the record several paragraphs of this article.

> By leasing instead of selling their stations, the oil companies hold the operator in a tight bind. If he refuses to handle unsafe "cheapie" tires or overpriced worthless additives the company is pushing, they can cancel his lease and wipe out his entire private investment in stock and equipment.
> Their latest gimmick is to stick the station operator for a large part of the cost of the current give-away games. Standard of California made its dealers buy a specified high quantity of tickets handed out in its cash-on-the-line game—at $12 per 1,000. And Sun Oil soaked its 9,000 Sunoco dealers two cents for every sunny dollar coupon he handed out. All the various games cost individual station operators hundreds of dollars they can ill afford.
> The part-owner of a chain of stations in Detroit recently told a reporter bitterly, "These games are crammed down our throats. We have to participate or spend all our time explaining why we don't. If we don't play along with the company, up goes our station rent".

A number of the points made by the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission are reported in this magazine. One of them is that the companies build service stations without consultation with the authorities. I think municipalities have some responsibility in this field. They seem to allow service stations to be built almost one next to another. A woman in Kirkland Lake wrote to me that her husband when travelling to work observed in a one mile stretch nine service stations. I can assure you, Mr. Chairman, that the quantity of gasoline sold in service stations in Kirkland Lake is nowhere near the volume of stations in the United States or in metropolitan Toronto. I think it would be difficult to find any service stations in northern Ontario that sold 300,000 gallons a year, let alone compare those stations with those in Toronto which sell the same quantity in one month.

The investigations that have been conducted have not, in my opinion, been conclusive. However, they have established that gimmicks, give-away programs and stamps add to the cost of the gasoline. In northern Ontario the people are victims of a set of circumstances over which they have no control but which, in my opinion, constitute a very grave abuse of the concessions granted the major oil companies.

As the article in Male points out, the major oil companies are given all kinds of concessions in the United States. However, this magazine should investigate the concessions they receive in Canada. In spite of this, Mr. Chairman, they still fleece the general public by means of unfair practices. As I say, this is one field to which the new consumer affairs department should turn its attention.

• (4:50 p.m.)

When considering the matter of gasoline prices in northern Ontario and elsewhere we must remember that under the present system gasoline stations are tied to their supplying companies. In northern Canada station operators have to supply their own pits, and their operations are costly in winter; every time the door opens the heat goes on, and their overhead goes up.

In my home town I saw one of the greatest swindles in the gasoline business that was ever perpetrated. The distributing company owned by a man called Flemming, I think, over a period of years bought up in the general area each outlet that the Shell Oil Company had been selling to. The distributing company was able to buy the leases, borrow money for mortgages and so on, and when B.P. came along the company sold to B.P. the whole shooting match, making a profit of a million dollars.

Three new service stations were built in New Liskeard, even though the town could not carry two stations originally. Needless to say the three new stations did badly. In fact, one of them now is being used as an office building by the Ontario government. It never could be rented as a service station. The municipality must take some share of the blame for what happened. It wanted business taxes from three new businesses; never mind if other businesses went broke. That was very unfair to those who were already operating gas stations in the town. Owning a gas station there is a risky business.

Since there is a price spread on gasoline of up to 16 cents per gallon between our northern communities and Toronto, it is pretty obvious that the gasoline companies are carrying out restrictive trade practices. That contention is reinforced when one realizes that commercial trucking firms pay about 18 cents a gallon less for their gasoline than orthodox service stations pay their distributors for it. That shows that the entire industry ought to be investigated; the investigation should not be confined to any particular service stations.

It is unfair for service stations to charge motorists in northern Ontario as much as 63 cents a gallon for low grade gasoline. I think the entire matter ought to be looked into by the consumer affairs part of the department. They should develop legislation to protect our motorists from the unfair practices of oil companies, unfair practices which work especially to the detriment of motorists in northern areas.

Mr. Orlikow: I wish to ask two questions; I hope the Solicitor General can answer one and I think that the Minister of National Defence, who is not here, can at some time answer the other. Both questions are important. My first question was raised on previous occasions by my colleague from Skeena and by the right hon. member for Prince Albert. I also raised this question. The Prime Minister said that a member of the government would make a statement of policy arising out of a case the Supreme Court dealt with, that of Mr. Terence Whitfield. Mr. Whitfield, who worked in northern Canada, was dismissed by the Canadian Marconi Company because, contrary to a clause in his employment contract, he was seeing socially an Eskimo girl. It seems to me, as it seemed to the right hon. member for Prince Albert, that the inclusion of such a clause in an employment contract is contrary to the basic tenets of human and civil rights which the United Nations has endorsed and which this country, I hope, will support.

Such a clause is contrary to the spirit of legislation which the federal and provincial governments have enacted in the field of fair employment and fair accommodation practices. It is against the spirit of the Bill of Rights the former government introduced. Perhaps the minister will make a statement on the matter today.

I hope the Minister of National Defence, who is not here, will take note of the next question I am about to ask and make a statement at the earliest possible opportunity. I have been informed that the Minister of National Defence has written to some, or perhaps all, provincial premiers, informing them that beginning April 1 of this year aircraft of United States strategic air command will begin, as part of their manoeuvres, overflights over Canada and that these will continue for six months. I raise this question because I think we all remember the United States aircraft which crashed off Greenland while carrying hydrogen bombs. The people of Canada have a right to know whether the United States aircraft flying over Canada will be carrying nuclear bombs. If so, has the Canadian government given its approval to such flights?

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall the resolution carry?

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Pennell: Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to delay proceedings in view of last evening's agreement, but there was a commitment I believe to make a statement on the Whitfield matter on behalf of the Minister of Justice.

I wish to deal first with a question asked by the hon. member for Skeena in this house on March 11, as to whether the government intends to introduce legislation to make illegal in the future contracts such as the one made between Canadian Marconi and Mr. Terence Whitfield.

It should be borne in mind, Mr. Chairman, that in the Whitfield case the Supreme Court was dealing with a particular clause in a particular contract; and while the court held that the clause in question was valid and not contrary to public policy its judgment does not purport to deal generally with the matter of discrimination in employment contracts.

The position of the government on the question of human rights, including the question of discrimination, is well known. We feel that such matters should be dealt with in a constitutional Bill of Rights that would have equal effect whether the matter arose within federal or provincial jurisdiction. In the Whitfield case, the contract was made in Montreal on November 3, 1960, and was to be performed within the province of Quebec.

I hope I shall not be taken as suggesting that parliament is not competent or is powerless to legislate in such a way as to prevent discrimination against a special group or segment of our population in respect of which it has special jurisdiction, in this case Indians and Eskimos, by virtue of head 24 of section 91 of the British North America Act. However, it is important in the view of the government that this problem of discrimination be dealt with on a general, rather than a limited, basis and this can be accomplished only if the problem is dealt with by the respective provincial legislatures in the context of the general law. In our view, the only adequate answer is a constitutional bill of rights, and hon. members will recall that this was the position taken by the government at the recent federal-provincial conference.

With reference to the question posed by the right hon. member for Prince Albert, I would regretfully point out there is really no precedent for the suggestion that the government might ask the Supreme Court of Canada to re-hear the appeal of Whitfield v. Canadian Marconi before the full court. The only legal course open to the government would be to refer the matter to the Supreme Court by way of a reference under section 55 of the Supreme Court Act. This of course could be done, but it would appear pointless because the Supreme Court, as well as the courts below, has finally determined the legal status of this contract between Whitfield and Canadian Marconi. It could not be assumed—indeed it would be imprudent to assume—that the Supreme Court would decide, on a reference, that the judgment which it had previously rendered was incorrect.

I understand there is no basis for the suggestion that the government can ask a court, including the Supreme Court, to rehear a case between private litigants. One of the private litigants might make this request but in our view the government would not be justified in intervening in private litigation of this kind.

As to the problem of a contract made in one province but to be performed in another, it may be well to point out that parliament does not automatically have jurisdiction with regard to such contracts. For example, a contract made in Ontario to be performed in Quebec, cannot require a party to it to do something which is in conflict with, or illegal under, Quebec law. This problem is very much broader than the problem of discrimination but it does not give rise to any new or peculiar head of federal jurisdiction. In any event, this is not relevant to the Whitfield case in which the contract complained of was made in the province in which it was to be performed.

WAYS AND MEANS

INTERIM SUPPLY

Hon. L. T. Pennell (for the President of the Treasury Board) moved that the house go into committee of ways and means.

Motion agreed to and the house went into committee, Mr. Tardif in the chair.

Mr. Pennell moved:

Resolved, that towards making good the supply granted to Her Majesty for the public service for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1969, the sum of $1,118,202,797.17 be granted out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada.

Motion agreed to.

Resolution reported and concurred in.

[English]

Mr. Pennell thereupon moved for leave to introduce Bill No. C-212 for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service for the financial year ending 31st March, 1969.

Mr. Knowles: Since the Solicitor General did not do so at the resolution stage, would he mind giving us now the usual undertaking that the passing of this bill will not interfere with our right to discuss any of the items parts of which are in the bill?

Mr. Pennell: I am prepared to give that undertaking, Mr. Speaker.

Motion agreed to and bill read the first time.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: When shall this bill be read a second time?

Some hon. Members: By consent, now.

Mr. Pennell (For Mr. Benson) moved the second reading of the bill.

Motion agreed to, bill read the second time and the house went into committee thereon, Mr. Tardif in the chair.

On clause 2—$1,118,202,797.17 granted for 1968-1969

Mr. Lambert: I should like to address a question to the Solicitor General and ask him whether there is any particular significance in requesting a third month of interim supply for the Chief Electoral Officer and in respect of the two legislative items covering this house and the other place.

Mr. Pennell: The vote for the office of the Chief Electoral Officer provides for the payments of salaries and administrative expenses. The additional proportion is requested to finance the purchase of shelving required, due to the moving of the office of the Chief Electoral Officer. This shelving is to be installed in early April. I cannot recall the other two items the hon. member mentioned.

Mr. Lambert: Items 5 and 20 in connection with this house and the other place.

Mr. Pennell: As to item 5, the additional proportion is required because the expenditures are in excess of the proportion per month while the Senate is in session. The sessional year is usually of eight months duration, thus the customary additional proportion is required. To deal with the item relating to the Commons, the additional proportion is requested to cover expenses of the house while sitting. Expenditures of the house exceed the one twelfth per month while it is in session, as the amount of the vote is based on a sessional year of approximately nine months.

• (5:10 p.m.)

Mr. Knowles: May I ask the Minister of Industry just one question. Will he take the representations made today, concerning the pensions of retired civil servants, to the cabinet at its next meeting?

[Mr. Knowles.]

Mr. Drury: I will be glad to, Mr. Chairman.

Clause agreed to.

Clauses 3 to 5 inclusive agreed to.

Schedules A, B and C agreed to.

Clause 1 agreed to.

Preamble agreed to.

Title agreed to.

Bill reported, read the third time and passed.

Hon. L. T. Pennell (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, I move that we rise now, suspend the sitting and resume at the call of the Chair.

Mr. Schreyer: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, might I ask the acting house leader what happened to the government undertaking or intention to bring forward legislation to amend the Farm Improvement Loans Act? I understand the house leaders consulted and it was agreed that it be brought forward today.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I doubt whether this is a point of order, but perhaps the minister might be allowed to answer the question.

Mr. Pennell: Mr. Speaker, the government was anxious to proceed with this measure. However, in view of the agreement last evening we felt we ought not to make any suggestions without unanimous consent. I understand there were negotiations but they were not fruitful, and I think that explains the situation.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Perhaps I might be allowed to invite hon. members to a non-partisan leadership seminar in room 16 before the house will resume its sitting at the call of the bells. I do now leave the chair.

Motion agreed to.

SITTING SUSPENDED

At 5.15 p.m. the sitting of the house was suspended.

SITTING RESUMED

The house resumed at 6.30 p.m.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the house that a message has been received from the Senate informing this house that the Senate have passed the following bills:

Bill No. C-211, An Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service for the financial year ending the 31st March, 1968.

Bill No. C-212, An Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service for the financial year ending the 31st March, 1969.

THE ROYAL ASSENT

A message was delivered by Major C. R. Lamoureux, Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, as follows:

Mr. Speaker, the Honourable the Deputy Governor General desires the immediate attendance of this honourable house in the chamber of the honourable the Senate.

Accordingly, Mr. Speaker, with the house went up to the Senate chamber.

• (6:50 p.m.)

And being returned:

Mr. Speaker informed the house that the Deputy Governor General had been pleased to give, in Her Majesty's name, the royal assent to the following bills:

An Act to amend the National Housing Act, 1954.

An Act to amend the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation Act.

An Act to amend the Income Tax Act.

An Act to amend the Immigration Act.

An Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service for the financial year ending 31st March, 1968.

An Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the public service for the financial year ending 31st March, 1969.

Mr. Speaker: I understand that the Solicitor General wishes to be recognized.

Hon. L. T. Pennell (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, before the house is formally adjourned perhaps I might be permitted a final word. I wish to express to all hon. members my appreciation for their assistance and co-operation during my brief tenure as acting house leader. May I express to you, Mr. Speaker, in this atmosphere of cordiality and good will, my wish that you have a pleasant and rewarding recess.

Royal Assent

Hon. J. A. MacLean (Queens): Mr. Speaker, any position I might hold, during the making of my few brief remarks, is even more ephemeral than that of the hon. member on the government side, but I wish to take this opportunity to wish you a pleasant recess, a refreshing rest and a happy Easter. Much may come about before you come back again to preside over this difficult chamber.

I wish also to take this opportunity of hoping that my friends to the left have a pleasant recess and a happy Easter. I hope their recess is of a very high quality; it will have to be, to make up for its unnecessary brevity.

It is rather difficult to ask members on the government side to be happy. It appears that the stars foretell that in events lying ahead eight out of nine members will be deeply disappointed. Regardless of their feelings of disappointment I hope that hon. members on the government side will have the strength to bear their disappointments. Happy Easter.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): We are very happy to join sincerely in the felicitations which have been extended to Your Honour and to all members of the house. All I can say to my good friend for Queens is, "Vous êtes très gentil."

Mr. Bert Leboe (Cariboo): All I can say is, "We, too."

Mr. Speaker: I thank hon. members for their kind expressions of good will. The only way I can reciprocate is by saying we shall return on April 23.

It being after 6 p.m., pursuant to special order of Wednesday, March 20, the house adjourned until Tuesday, April 23, at 2.30 o'clock in the afternoon.

[The following items were passed in Committee of Supply this day:]

DEPARTMENT OF CONSUMER AND CORPORATE AFFAIRS

1c, 5c, 25c.

TREASURY BOARD

7c, L117c.

DEPARTMENT OF FISHERIES

15c, 17c.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Tuesday, April 23, 1968

The house met at 2.30 p.m.

VACANCIES

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the house that during the adjournment of the house I received communications informing me that the following vacancies have occurred in the representation, namely:

Of Hon. Lawrence T. Pennell, member for the electoral district of Brant-Haldimand, by resignation;

Of Hon. Paul Martin, member for the electoral district of Essex East, by resignation.

I have accordingly issued my warrants to the Chief Electoral Officer to make out new writs of election for the said electoral districts.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

APPOINTMENT OF J. GORDON DUBROY AS CLERK ASSISTANT

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps hon. members will allow me to mention that during the recess there has been a promotion to a very senior post in the House of Commons, that of Clerk Assistant, and to this post has been appointed a very faithful and deserving officer of this house, Mr. J. Gordon Dubroy.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

PRIVILEGE

MR. TRUDEAU—ACKNOWLEDGEMENT OF CONGRATULATORY MESSAGES

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege.

Speaking for the first time from this seat, I would ask the hon. members to allow me to express my thanks for the messages of congratulations and encouragement I have received from all parts of the house.

In a democracy, the people's representatives have the privilege to disagree on the best way of governing the country. However, we are all prompted by the same desire to make Canada a greater and a stronger country.

The best answer I can give to that generous tribute is by undertaking to serve the house and the country to the best of my ability.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

ANNOUNCEMENT OF DISSOLUTION AND ELECTION ON JUNE 25

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): In view of the announcement I am about to make, Mr. Speaker, I feel any further comment by me on any other subjects would be improper.

This afternoon I called on the Governor General to request him to dissolve parliament and to have writs issued for a general election on June 25.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, by proclamation under the Great Seal of Canada, dated April 23, 1968, the present parliament is dissolved and members and senators are discharged from attendance. I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Speaker: In the circumstances I propose to leave the chair, but perhaps I may be allowed to say one word to thank hon. members for the co-operation which at all times during the last years they have extended to me.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Speaker: If hon. members are still here by four o'clock they are invited to call on the Speaker in Room 16.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.
