Peace Question.

MADRID, July 27.—It is rumored here that Manila has surrendered to the Americans. The situation at Manila is causing the deepest anxiety. The government believes that the town has been besieged by the American warships and that it was concurrently attacked on the land side by 12,000 Americans and 20,000 rebels.

Capt. General Agustine has about 10,000 European soldiers, sailors and marines. He is sorely embarrassed by the non-combatants, but he is, nevertheless, expected to make a prolonged resistance, unless lack of provisions and water compel him to consider the sufferings of the inhabitants, then he may surrender.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—It can be stated on the authority of the State Department and the foreign embassies here that there was no overture in behalf of Spain for peace or a cessation of hostilities until the French ambassador late Tuesday afternoon presented his note to the president. This statement is not the knowledge of European denials and must be accepted as that of the government of the United States. Therefore, all of the talk about bad faith shown by the United States government in pressing the Porto Rican campaign during the last few days is absolutely without foundation and can subject it to criticism on this score.

The alleged charges of bad faith against the United States attributed to Premier Sagasta as discredited as inventions designed to prejudice the successful progress of the peace movement. It could not be contemplated for a moment that any personal exchange of views between persons in Europe can be construed as an overture for peace, and although others may have been some of this "back door gossip," as it is denominated in the State Department, it can be again affirmed that the United States government has not been a party to it.

Moreover, so far as Ambassador Cambon is concerned, it can be stated positively that he made no overtures, direct or indirect, official or unofficial, relating to peace or any phase of peace prior to three o'clock last Tuesday afternoon. In general, the international law writers agree that military operations stop only when a truce or armistice is actually concluded and that this truce or armistice must be in writing. Until then the mere preliminary overture toward a suspension of hostilities is not regarded as any warrant for stopping the war.

New York, July 28.—A despatch to the World from Madrid says: Spain's minister of foreign affairs, the Duke of Almodovar, was asked to-day what the prospect is for peace. The duke answered: "It is for the United States to propose peace and it depends on what proposals, whether negotiations will ensue. As yet no definite proposals have been advanced by President McKinley. Under uniform circumstances obliging the present cabinet to resign, it will remain in office until the events of the war enable it to make overtures for peace direct to the president McKinley through the French and Austrian envoys at Washington. If we fail to secure acceptable conditions we shall retire. Then the Queen will probably form a military cabinet and seek the support of the powers at any cost. When asked if negotiations were not already afoot in Washington, the foreign minister said: "The French ambassador is fully authorized to make overtures and has already done so." The duke declined to say what terms the Sagasta minister would accept.

Spain is fast getting hard pushed for ways and means. The financial papers say that if the war lasts until the end of August a forced paper currency will have to be decreed.

The government has exhausted all the supplies available under the authorization voted by the cortes and will have to issue treasury bonds at the higher rate of interest, suspend interest and amortize the debt. Foreign or domestic loans are out of the question. The expenses continue at the rate of $23,000,000 a month.

SANTIAGO DE CUBA, July 28.—Lieutenant Colonel Ingel K. Sell, who, after taking command of the instructions to surrender from General Toral to General Pareja, military governor of Guantanamo, returned here to-day, said to an Associated Press correspondent that the first intimation that Guantanamo had of the surrender of Santiago, and the terms thereof, was on July 23, when Rear Admiral Sampson sent a letter to General Pareja asking what number of rations should be sent to the garrison and they had been surrendered on the 17th. General Pareja being ignorant of the surrender refused to credit the message and accept the rations, answering Admiral Sampson to that effect. Admiral Sampson then sent a copy of the terms of surrender, whereupon General Pareja decided to inquire of General Toral of Santiago whether the news was true, and Lieutenant Colonel Rosell was appointed to come here. He returned with his information and the surrender of Guantanamo took place yesterday.

Col. Rosell says the condition of Guantanamo is awful and that the troops are literally starving. For the last eight days they have had no food. On mounting guard the soldiers were obliged to sit, being too weak to stand, and it was impossible to make them build trenches, as they fell from exhaustion. There are 2,900 sick in Guantanamo, suffering from diseases increased by hunger.

The French cruiser Rigault de Genouilly was refused permission by Admiral Sampson to land grain and provisions for the relief of the French colony Guantanamo. All hope was abandoned and the sufferers were awaiting death from starvation. The conditions at Guantanamo, Col. Rosell says, are worse than they anticipated. The Spanish troops will remain in Guantanamo until transported.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The reply of the United States government to Spain's overtures for peace was given to M. Cambon Saturday for transmission to Spain. The terms are: Cuba to be free, Porto Rico to be ceded to the United States one of the Ladrone (probably Guam) to be ceded to the United States as a coaling station, all Spanish force to be withdrawn from the West Indies and the appointment of a commission to settle the details of the government of the Philippines.

Mouth of Jemseg.

August 2.—On Saturday last as Mr. William Bates was hauling hay he fell from the load and was seriously injured. The Rev. Mr. McLaughlin of Gagetown occupied the pulpit of the Methodist church Sunday night. The st. Martello brought a number from the Shiretown to attend the church on that occasion.

Misses Merritt of Ontario, nieces of Mrs. Leonard Slipp, have been in the village visiting relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Day are stopping at Lake Side cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis of St. John are spending a few weeks at Hotel Corner View.

Mrs. Bamford of Houlton, Maine is visiting her friends in the village. Miss Louise Dykeman, of St. John, is visiting her sister, Miss Sophia Dykeman. Mrs. John Irving of St. John and Mrs. Geo. Evans are stopping at Maple Grove.

Mr. Thos. Black of St. John arrived here at 5 p. m. on Sunday by Star. Victoria en route for the Cedars (Upper Jemseg) to which he was conveyed by F. C. Noyes where he was cordially received by Mr. and Mrs. A. Purdy, also by Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Brunson who were in the village over Sunday.

Mrs. R. J. Mason is receiving congratulations on the arrival of a young son.

A number of Doctors intend visiting the La Tour Mineral Springs.

Hibernia. The farmers of this place are very busy haying. The hay crop is a little above the average this year. Other crops are looking fine.

Mr. Woods of Welsford, is hauling blueberries from here to ship to United States markets.

Mr. Rice of this place has commenced making cheese, having come to the conclusion that there is more profit in making cheese than butter.

Miss Almada Burchill has gone to the United States for the benefit of her health.

Those who drive fast horses need to be a little careful how they approach James Down as he has provoked a Northwester from Mr. Yaffe of Jerusalem and Mr. Brown is not afraid to let her go.

Those who doubt the worth of Alberts Thomas' Phosphata Powder, when driving through Hibernia just notice a field of buckwheat on the doctor's new farm and it need convince, don't buy.

Wm. J. Nickerson has purchased a fine mare from B. S. Palmer, of Central Hampstead.

N. B. CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.—The second (New Brunswick) Provincial Convention of Christian Endeavor is to be held at Chatham Aug. 9, 11, 1898, and for the host of Endeavorers who gather, a good program has been prepared.

Among the good things promised is a sail on the Miramichi River if the weather is favorable. Entertainment will be provided for two delegates from each of the local societies of Y. P. S. C. E., E. L. of C. E., B. Y. P. W. of C. E. and A. C. F. of C. E., and also for pastors of churches. A souvenir program has been prepared, which in booklet form gives a description of points of interest in and around Chatham, notes of interest for Endeavorers, and the program proper with portraits of speakers and workers.

The booklets do credit to their designers, and should stimulate every recipient of one to see that delegates go from his or her local society. Among the items which meet the eye on turning over the first leaf of one of these booklets is the request from the committee of management for names of delegates to be sent to S. McLean, Chatham, at least one week before the convention and also the advice for all who go to Chatham for the convention to start so as to arrive by day trains.

Arrangements with Railway and Steamship companies are progressing favorably. Several of the companies agree to return free, those who purchase first class tickets for one way, and present their signed certificates for the return journey. Other of the companies offer like terms, on condition that a stated number attend the convention or use their facilities for travel. A hearty "come" is thus sounded forth by the Railway and Steamship companies offering their facilities and special privileges, the Chatham friends welcoming their homes and hearts for the welcome of Endeavorers and the convention speakers giving their services for Christ and the church.

A SUNBURY COUNTY REQUISITION.—A requisition has been presented to J. D. Hagan and Parker Gleaser, signed by over two hundred residents of Sunbury county, inviting them to run for that county in the next local election in the conservative interest.—Gleaser.

SIR WILKIE DEAD.—Mr. N. A. LaForest met with a heavy loss last night in the death of his well-known stallion Sir Wilkie. The horse was sick only 24 hours. He was known to all horsemen in this vicinity and many fine colts about here are of his getting.—Gleaser.

Aunt Mary's Timely Visit.

The other evening Aunt Mary took the electric cars and rode eastward to the house of her niece who a few weeks previously had just commenced housekeeping. Without ceremony the old lady entered the house and found her niece trying to dye an old cream opera shawl a cardinal red with some poor, cheap dye. The result was certainly enough to test the patience and goodness of an angel. A miserable mixed color, half red and brown was the result of labor. Aunt Mary deeply sympathized with her horror-stricken niece, and advised her in future to use nothing but the Diamond Dye that had given her such satisfaction and profit for over twenty years. The unightly, variegated shawl was then washed in several waters in order to get rid of the horrid colors, and then put in a bath of Diamond Dye Fast. Cardinal Red for Wool. It is not a thing of joy and beauty.

Moral: To achieve success in home dyeing be sure you use the Diamond Dye.

Chipman. The preliminary examination of Samuel O'Donnell for violent assault on Patrick Collins of Newcastle was held last week before James Powers, J. P. of Northfield Sunbury county.

Lawyer Duffy of Fredericton, who is Clerk of the Peace for Sunbury County, where the assault was committed, acted for the Crown. The defendant, who had no counsel, called no witnesses to testify on his behalf.

After half a dozen witnesses were examined for the prosecution the court decided to send the case up for trial at the October sitting of the County Court.

Mr. Duffy stated that the presiding magistrate had no power to grant bail in this case; but the defendant might procure bail by making application to any judge of the Supreme Court. Sheriff Hodger took O'Donnell back to Oromocto jail.

A number of boatmen and others complain that the dredge New Dominion now working at Grimross canal is doing immense harm in dumping the mud taken from useless canal at the entrance to Hart's Lake, thereby filling up the channel and preventing parties in future from shipping overwood to market. As the engineer would give no information to the appropriate authorities as to who authorized the expense, perhaps the government will finally furnish the details of the operation.

A number of white flags are placed along Salmon River to mark the place of shoal water where the river requires dredging and as no vessel drawing up wards of seven and a half feet of water can ascend the river in summer it is plain evidence that the dredge is needed badly at Salmon River which is fast filling up with sediment.

Rev. L. N. Parker of Grand Lake advertises an excursion from Chipman to Fredericton on the 9th inst. This affords a good opportunity to visit the capital at small expense and doubtless many who can spare a day at this busy season will avail themselves of this excellent privilege.

The saw mill at Briggs' Corner is keeping the men wiping the perspiration from their brows this hot weather as last week it sawed upwards of 180,000 feet of lumber.

Mr. George J. Baird paid a visit to the mill last week and reports the samples of lumber shipped to St. John found to be satisfactory.

Mr. Chas. Callihan and his two daughters are on from Boston visiting at Simeon Sleep.

Mrs. Bessie Foster of St. John, and her sister Mrs. H. White of Grand Lake, spent Sunday at Mrs. McLean's, Briggs' Corner.

Miss Agnes Moore of Boston, is visiting friends at Chipman.

Mrs. McLean arrived home Saturday evening from a week's visit down the Grand Lake.

Dull haying weather this.

Public Schools in France. A Boston correspondent writes:—The writer was talking with an American lady some few days ago about public schools. She emphatically denied there were any public schools in France and the poor were very much more ignorant than those in the United States. I would beg to state to anyone who has the same idea that France is not behind the age, in fact I think in advance, for every public school in Paris has a canteen on the premises where the children are provided with warm meals, free to those who are too poor to pay. The cost of the food which is thus furnished is about 1d. a head.

The Prince of Wales condition is really serious, and his recovery at best, will be prolonged and tedious, and he will be lame for life. He will be lucky if he does not have to go on crutches the rest of his days. An operation may yet have to be performed with a view of suturing the broken patella.

The English people are just now concentrating their thoughts on their kneecaps. Hope they will not get the loyal jump.

E. G. SOOVL, Agent Pelee Wine Co.

Dear Sir—My wife has been afflicted with nervous prostration for several years, using every kind of medicine recommended, but obtaining no relief until I procured some of your Pelee Wine, which I am delighted to say, has had the desired effect. It is the greatest tonic of the age. I think too much cannot be said in its praise and no house should be without it. We have recommended it to several suffering from the grippe debility, with like good results.

I am, yours gratefully,

My stock this season is large and personally selected with a view to your requirements which my dealings with you for the past three years enable me to do and will be sold at prices lower than former years—while the quality has been kept up to the regular standard—goods being made from pure wool; also new and attractive patterns added. I would ask you to see our goods and prices before purchasing and in so doing I feel assured that you will continue to favor me with your esteemed patronage which you have so generously done in the past.

Curing Timothy Hay.

This valuable fodder crop is much more easily cured than clover. Less time is required in the curing process, and also less labor. But in the case in which it can be cured lies one of the greatest dangers, viz., that of over-curing it. This mistake is committed to a grievous extent in all parts of the country, but nowhere is it so often made as in the prairie sections of the West and Northwest. When allowed to lie in sun before being housed or stacked until it is so dry that it breaks off easily on being twisted, its feeding value is but little better than that of straw. Timothy should be cut before the bloom has left it. Authorities are not quite agreed as to the best time for cutting it. Some argue in favor of the season of early bloom, others favor cutting when in full bloom, and a third class claim that it should be cut when in the "second bloom." When the blossoms come out on the timothy head they do not know themselves so quickly at the top of the head as on the other portions of the same. Soon they fall to the ground, but since they appear last on the upper end of the spike they also remain there for a short time after the blossoms have fallen from the other portions of the same. The period is usually referred to as the period of the "second bloom." Storer would seem to favor cutting at a still later stage, when the greatest weight and nutriment are to be obtained. But weight and nutriment in a fodder will not avail when it has lost its palatability, and timothy is certainly less palatable after it has passed the period of second bloom. The only objection of weight brought against cutting timothy in full bloom is found in what is termed "dust" arising from the dried blossoms, which shower out when the hay is being fed. But timothy should not be allowed to stand long after the period of second bloom. When the timothy and clover grow together the time to cut must be decided by the dominance of one crop or the other. The first season clover will dominate the crop, and the time for cutting should be fixed to save the clover when at its best. The second year the timothy will be more abundant, and the period for cutting should be fixed to save the clover when at its best. And when very large areas are to be harvested the cutting of the crop should commence when it is underripe, otherwise much of it will be overripe before it has been cut. The loss from cutting underripe hay is always less than that from cutting over-ripe, the weather being equally favorable to the curing in both instances. When cut under the timothy is very palatable, hence there will be no waste when feeding it, and the residue of energy still left in the plant produces a good growth of aftermath.—Exchange.

Poultry for Profit.

Raising poultry is a peculiar art and at the same time a fascinating pursuit. The person who enters into it must, above all, have a good fondness for it. It is not a time becomes mechanical or commonplace. The foreman of a canning factory would not therefore succeed in raising chickens if he ran them on the same principle he had been running his canning room on. As each season comes around there is something new, something different to learn about chickens. As a rule, it is all in the line of improvement, and with an aim to be more successful each year. When disaster and bad luck overtake the breeder, it is his great fondness for the pursuit which carries him through. He must also have a sufficient quantity of common sense and knowledge of his business to be able to make up losses and finally come out with a prosperous season. The secret of the failure of well-equipped poultry plants where capital is plentiful lies in the fact that the owner thinks to make a profit by hiring some man—of course, a poultryman preferred—to run the establishment and make it succeed for them. This is not an impossible thing to do, but one of the first requisites is the poultryman, or, in other words, the ability. First-class poultrymen out of employment are as scarce as hen with teeth. Again, a first-class poultryman hired by a man who knows nothing about raising poultry soon becomes a second-class man at everything. There may be exceptions to the rule, but they are scarce. Of course, there are many instances in other business enterprises where one man invests capital and another man tries by ability to make a profit for the concern, but in such a case the capitalist must have confidence in the ability of his partner to make a success or he would not invest money to him. So it should be in the poultry business. If a capitalist hires a poultryman to provide the ability—which means, or should mean successful experience—the former ought to get a fair return for the wages at least. But the truth of the matter is that there are no first-class poultrymen to be hired. They are either all working for some one else or are in business for themselves. The second quality necessary for a successful poultry plant is capital. Without this all the ability in the world cannot succeed. The capital may be great or small, but capital it must be, and available at the start. There is really more chance for success for a man with capital who is willing to learn by experience than for a man with ability and no capital. At the beginning of one's career in poultry raising there are houses and yards to make, stock and eggs to be bought and a living to be paid for before any returns can be counted on. Investment of capital should be by easy stages, never putting in more money than you can control. One man may succeed with a hundred hens who invests a few hundred dollars for their housing and keep, another may fail who invests largely and goes into the venture on an extended scale. One should learn to creep before he walks, in this as in any other business. Master the numerous details step by step, and eventually master the business. They may not be any large fortunes to be made in poultry-raising, but there is a handsome living for any one who has the love for the pursuit, the ability to raise and care for stock, and a small capital to start with. These things may go hand in hand; separately they do not bring success.

Dairy and Creamery.

Dairy bulls and cows have thin frames. Besides the ordinary wire strainer, milk should also be strained through a cloth, if you have no separator. Rinse milk vessels in cold water, then wash them in warm soda water, then scald them. Just before using rinse them in cold water again. Cows can be trained to drink buttermilk as well as sweet milk. We have read of a boy, 14 years old, who raised a Jersey heifer all largely on buttermilk. It thrived handsomely, and when it became a cow the enterprising lad refused $55 for it and the first calf it produced. Butter exports from the United States amounted in 1898 to 31,000,000 pounds, a large increase.

What Food Makes Butter Hard?

The New Hampshire Experimental station has been conducting some experiments as to the effects of different foods upon the hardness of butter, and though the work in this direction is not as yet extensive enough to justify the drawing of conclusions, their experiments thus far indicate: That glutton meal tends to produce a much softer quality of butter than corn meal or cottonseed meal, and other things being equal tends to less the churnability of the butter fat.

That with the same cows the hardness depends much more upon the character of the food than upon the nutritive ratio.

That cottage cheese is a much softer butter than does good hay, but it is also favorable to the flavor and texture of the butter produced.

That skim milk has a very favorable effect upon its churnability and quality of the butter fat, and in a single trial apparently reversed the general rule that the lactic, fatty acids decrease as the period of lactation advances.

That cottonseed meal tends to produce an unusually hard quality of butter, and that cottonseed meal and gluten meal might be used together with excellent result.

That, contrary to general belief, the melting point of butter fat is not a good indication of the commercial hardness of butter.

That while in general a soft butter melts at a lower temperature than hard butter, there is no definite relation between the melting point and actual hardness.

That no relation can be traced between foods and volatile fatty acids, except in the case of skim milk. That usually hardness and volatile acids vary inversely, hardness generally increasing and volatile acids decreasing as the period of lactation advances.

The Circus in an Odd Corner of Italy.

The admission fee to any part of the tent was only 8 cents, reserved seats excepted, and this did not at first seem an exorbitant sum, but it was quite sufficient when one considers the hardship of sitting upon rough planks, hewn by unskilful hands from the trunks of trees, and the odors from the closely packed crowd.

One easily forgot these trifling discomforts in witnessing the genuine delight of the spectators and the boundless enthusiasm with which they applauded the young lady who did the backback act and the other who walked the tight rope and the sallies of Agost. When each artist had a benefit, and it was the turn of one or another of them every performing night, the villagers and children, who were not, any of them, overblessed with coin contributed generously.

The illuminations consisted of six kerosene lamps, two of them fastened to the central tent pole, and the performance had to be interrupted, often at its most thrilling point, while the lamps were being trimmed. No one showed the least impatience, and the reserved seats were regularly filled by the aristocracy from the hotel, including the retiring beauty, who never missed an evening.—"Vallaro and the Val Susia," by Edwin Lord Weeks, in Harper's Magazine.

"Why, Johnnie," exclaimed the mother, "what are you doing with your shoes and stockings off?"

"Studying my lesson," was the reply. "This book wants to know how many four times five is, and I haven't got enough fingers, so I've got to count my toes, too."

An Ottawa despatch announces that the plebiscite vote will be taken on September 29th. This gives the temperance people a period of two months in which to organize and prepare for the vote. It is time they were up and doing as two months will slip away very quickly. A great work can be done if the people will only employ a little effort. There is a large number of lake-warm people in the county who only need a little stirring up to place them on the temperance side. The Temperance people should lose no time and have a perfect organization so that when the ballots are counted a great majority will be voted in favor of the question.

ST. JOHN LETTER.

Leigh Hunt has said "Think" of the enormous multitude of dishes—of the endless varieties of food which nature has provided for man. Because man is the most intelligent of living beings his resources are larger than those of other creatures, but it is by no means evident that everything that he uses for food was produced for his benefit.

The herring fishes on innumerable small fry, and then he furnishes a dinner for the codfish, which in turn is devoured by the shark who varies his diet with provisions of all sorts which come to him from the stores of wrecked ships and occasionally his diet is diversified by a morsel of human flesh, which possible he considers the most dainty morsel that ever finds its way into his lazer. There are few if any animate things that do not prey upon other animate things and so the survival of the strongest and most intelligent is inevitable. But even the latter must die, and passing through the laboratory of nature they again are imbued with life. "The oak shall send his roots abroad and pierce thy mould;" the grass shall grow over thee—some time, may be, the wheat and corn. Physically we are of the earth, and physically, in one form or another, we shall be among its inhabitants, animate or inanimate, as long as it exists.

Rise up ye Women that are at Ease

EMINENT AUTHORITIES DECLARE THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC THE WORLD'S GREATEST SCOURGE.

New York Tribune: "The liquor traffic is the greatest clog on the civilization of the nineteenth century. It lies at the centre of all political and social mischief; it paralyzes educational agencies, it silences the voice of religion, it baffles penal reform, it obstructs political reform."

Gladstone, in a speech in the House of Commons in May, 1851: "This traffic has wrought more harm than the three great historic scourges, war, famine, and pestilence, combined."

The London Times: "We must somehow end this evil or it will end us."

Dr. Willard Parker, one of the greatest physicians New York has known, in his introduction to Richardson's "Ten Lectures on Alcohol": "Alcohol is responsible for 35 per cent of all lunacy, 45 per cent of idiosyncy, 75 to 90 per cent of pauperism, and 10 per cent of deaths."

The total number of deaths in the United States, on the basis of 18 to 1,000, and the population 75,000,000 is 1,350,000 per year, and 10 per cent of these deaths is 135,000. During the four years of the great Civil War, the number of Northern soldiers killed in battle was 58,000; and an equal number for the Southern soldiers killed, and we have the total of 116,000 killed in battle, in the four years of one of the most terrible wars the world has known; that is 10,000 fewer than are killed every year by the liquor traffic according to the judgment of Dr. Willard Parker.

Chief Justice Noah Davis, in the Homiletic Review, January, 1885: "Eighty per cent of all crime is due to intoxicants;" and the late Lord Chief Justice Coleridge, of England: "If we could make England sober we would shut up nine tenths of her prisons."

Dean (late Canon) Farrar: "Important as great questions in English politics may be, such as the franchise and the land laws, they are matters absolutely infinitesimal compared with the urgency of the necessity of controlling and limiting with a strong hand this drink question. This is no truer of England than of America."

Those who fought every day and out are chief among America's great men and women of the last generation—Garrison, Phillips, Mrs. Stowe, Sumner, Beecher, Sewall, Greeley, Lincoln.

Where are the young men and women of this generation who have in them the necessary courage, self reliance, independence, sufficient to the heroic element to fight down and out the monster evil of all ages—the liquor traffic?

None know the evil of drunkenness better than the drunkard-maker. By the measure of his great profits he knows the amount of poverty he produces. In every glass he sells, he drowns the reason of his customer. The house he builds for himself is founded on the ruin of many homes. Every joke in his bar-room costs many groats at home.

Every ounce of liquor he dispenses, costs the poor man's family a loaf of bread. The fire he builds in the poor man's brain and stomach extinguishes the fire upon the poor man's hearth. The whiteness of his glossy shirt-bosom reflects the paleness of the drunkard's wife. The diamond on his breast glitters with the tears of the widow and orphan. The trembling hand of the inebriate responds to the trembling of the drunkard's child.

Each deadly drop from the distillery sprinkles some drunkard's path from the bar to the station-house, the court, the jail, the almshouse.

Rumeller! You who alone think these iniquities do pay, tell the pale, wasted wife and mother, that, out of the ruins of the husband and father, you have become rich. Whisper to the drunkard in his dreams, that for his withered or bloated body's death and his soul's perdition, you have been paid in so much money.

Go, to the poor-house, and, as the idiotic, insane, squallid and deformed pass by, tell them, with a laugh, that you made that home for them and a fine man for yourself. Stop the orphans in the streets and tell them that you robbed them of parents, home, friends, bread and education, to live in lazy ease yourself.

Stand by the graves of the last twelve months and shout to the souls who annually die and sleep there, that they are indebted to you for that desolate couch, and that you sacrificed them for gold!

Rumeller! Follow your murdered victim to the bar of God and when He, who called the first fratricide to account, shall ask you "Where are thy brethren?" What will your answer be? There will be no procreation there. You must speak the truth, and say, before the stern majesty of Eternal Justice, "I slew them."

NEARLY DISCOURAGED.

The Experience of Mr. Ralph Giberson, Who Suffered Greatly From General Debility.

From the Advertiser, Hartland, N. B.

Ralph Giberson, postmaster at Monquart, Carleton Co., N. B., is also known as a prosperous agriculturist and an enthusiast in his line. Now stalwart and rugged, weighing 250 pounds, he scarce would be recognized as the man who six months ago was the picture of one suffering the terrible symptoms of general debility. He was run down in health, suffered much from dizziness, almost total general dullness and depression of spirits. He had a poor appetite and such food as he ate gave him great distress. He was incapacitated for the work that fell upon him and was well nigh utterly discouraged. The symptoms bordered on those by which hypochondria is manifested. Through reading the Advertiser he learned of the particular benefit that several of his friends in this vicinity had received by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and by the hope held out by their testimonials he secured a supply and took them according to directions. The result was almost magical; immediately his symptoms began to become less disagreeable, and he steadily gained until now he is perfectly free from his old troubles. He gladly and freely gives this testimonial, that all who may read it may know the remedy if ever they are troubled with general debility.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure by going to the root of the disease. They renew and build up the blood, and strengthen the nerves, thus driving disease from the system. The genuine can only be had in boxes, the wrapper around which bears the full trade mark, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People."

TO EDITOR QUEENS COUNTY GAZETTE.

Dear Editor: As there are a number of girls from New Brunswick here in this city, I thought perhaps some of your readers might like to see their names in your valuable paper.

The weather has been very warm here during the past two weeks and most everything is suffering from the heat.

We are glad to report that George Spear who has been laid up for a few weeks from an attack of rheumatism has recovered and gone to his work again.

Fred Fowler of Salmon Creek, has been on the sick list for a couple of weeks from a slight attack of inflammation of the kidneys caused by a strain while pitching hay off a wagon into a high mow. But through the skillful treatment of Dr. Hunkins of this city, he is reported much better.

Miss Ella Kennedy and the Misses Maggie and Hannah White, of Northfield left for their home on Thursday last to spend their vacation with their parents and many friends.

Misses Ella White, Annie Campbell and Christie Potts are expected to sail about the middle of August for their homes. We all join in wishing them a happy visit and a welcome return.

Miss Addie and Gussie Williams have been spending a week with their aunt in Peabody, Mass. They are expected to return next Saturday evening and no doubt but some of our boys will be pleased to see them once more and it is expected that one Carr will meet the other car at the station to take Gussie to her working place at Bowery Beach.

Misses Annie Hunter and Maud Hanspecker attended the first Baptist church on Tuesday evening.

Mr. George Akerley can be seen most every evening having a good time on his wheel; but of course, sometimes, it is not needed as it is not built for two.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for space in your valuable paper, and wishing your readers all a happy summer, I remain, Yours, etc.

MARRIED IN MASSACHUSETTS.—A Mauderville correspondent writes to the Sun:—The relatives and friends of Miss Lillian M. DeVeber were a bit surprised when they received the announcement of her marriage to Louis A. Clapp of Ithica, N. Y., as previously made in the Sun. Miss DeVeber left her home here two years ago this summer, to enter a hospital in Newburyport, Mass., where the work proved ungenial. She removed to Wakefield, Mass., where she met her fate. Her very many friends are delighted to her of her felicitous match, and happily extend their best wishes for her future happiness.

ATTENDED CHURCH AT JENSEM.—Last Sunday evening, through the kindness of Mr. John F. Bridges a large number of the people of Gagetown were enabled to attend service at Lower Jensem. At half-past 6 o'clock Mr. Bridges' Sun. Martello left the wharf and reached Jensem in good time for the passengers to attend church. But unfortunately the rain came down in torrents and prevented a large part of the company getting to the place of worship and who remained on board the steamer. The braver spirits, however, faced the rain and helped to swell to the congregation that had gathered despite the rain. The church was well filled and all enjoyed the service. The pulpit was occupied by Rev. Neil McLaughlin who was supplying for Rev. Mr. Parker.

About 400 took advantage of the excursion and paid our shiretown a visit. All were well pleased with the town and speak in the highest terms of the beautiful country surrounding Gagetown.

MOOSE AND CARIBOU.—Mr. Frank H. Reston, of Fredericton, writing to "The Forest and Stream," New York, makes the following reference to Canaan River, Queens County:—This locality is perhaps the most noted moose region in the province. It lies close to the Settlements, has been much hunted, but is still well supplied with both moose and caribou. The best way for the American sportsman to reach it is to proceed to St. John and thence up the Intercolonial to Apohaig or Sussex, or else by the Washademoak boat, which tri-weekly runs from St. John to Cole's Island. A good man to write to for guide is S. E. MacDonald, Cherry Vale, Brunswick, Queens county. Two excellent guides, whom I can personally recommend, are Richard Cole, of Sussex, and Cyrus Kierstead, Fork Stream, Canaan, Queens county.

DIED AT LYNN, MASS.—Cyrus M. Scott died at his residence, 14 Lowell street, Tuesday afternoon, at 4:30 o'clock, at the age of 49 years, 1 month and 12 days. He was born in Newport, N. He was a member of the firm of Skinner & Scott, wheel manufacturers, for 22 years, and went out of the firm and gave up business about four years ago on account of ill health. He was an attendant of the First Congregational Church and Sunday School and a man of sterling character, noted for his honesty and his generous disposition, and was respected by a large circle of friends and business acquaintances. He was twice married and his second wife survives him, and two sons and one daughter. He also leaves one brother and three sisters. GOOD FOR GRAND FALLS.—Senator Proctor of Vermont, passed through Woodstock on Thursday last on his way to Boston. He had been up the Tobique on a fishing trip and stopped at Grand Falls, where he is deeply interested in the development of the extensive power that it is intended to derive from the Grand Falls. It is probable that pulp mills and other industries will be started shortly.—Fredericton Herald.

IN A TUNNEL.

"Miss Alice! Miss Alice! will ye be a-thur comin' upstairs? An' sure she's dead entirely this time!" cried the frightened servant girl, rushing out on the piazza, where Alice Austin stood looking anxiously down the road.

Alice hurried upstairs and found her sister-in-law lying still and white on the floor.

"Bring me some water and salts from the bureau, Betty; she has only fainted," said Alice, kneeling beside the prostrate form.

In a few minutes Mrs. Austin opened her eyes and said feebly:

"Has Edward come home yet? I feel so strangely sick."

"We will send for the doctor presently, Margaret, when we get you to bed. Ned will be home soon I hope," and with Betty's assistance Alice lifted the slight form on the bed.

Three weeks before Eddie Austin, the two-year-old idol of the household, had disappeared, and all search for him had proved fruitless. As the days passed on hope gave way to despair, and the heart-broken mother, weighed down by anxiety and the cruel torture caused by false reports of the discovery of her boy, sank into a state of apathy bordering on insanity. Daily was the cry heard through the streets of the little village of Fairfield: "Child lost! Child lost! Large rewards offered!" till all hearts sickened at the sound.

Mothers kept their little ones within doors, dreading far less the entrance of the Dark Angel than that fiend in human form should steal their household treasure to gratify a merciless passion of avarice.

"Betty, you will have to take one of the girls and go for the doctor," whispered Alice, in alarm, as she noticed a gray pallor creeping over the wan face on the pillow.

"An' shure, miss, none of 'em be home but meself. And oh, Miss Alice, I niver can walk alone to Fairfield this dark, dark night."

The girl looked so frightened at the bare prospect of going that Alice said, after a pause:

"Well, Betty, then I shall have to go and you must stay with Mrs. Austin. If Mr. Austin returns before I do, tell him I have gone by way of the tunnel," she added, putting on her hat and walking jacket.

"The saints deliver us! For Hivin's sake, don't ye be goin' be the tunnel, Miss Alice!" exclaimed Betty, imploringly.

"Don't be frightened," replied Alice, smiling. "No train will pass for an hour and it shortens my walk nearly a mile. It is just six o'clock now, and I shall be home a little after seven," and giving the girl some parting injunctions about her sister, Alice ran downstairs. Opening her brother's escritoire in the library, she took from a private drawer a small pocket revolver and, opening the front door, stepped out into the darkness.

It was a damp, cold night in November. The wind moaned drearily through the leafless trees and heavy clouds chased each other across the heavens, obscuring the moon. Crossing the road, Alice walked a short distance and, clambering over a stone wall, found herself in a narrow strip of wood which bordered the railroad cut. Following the narrow beaten path through the trees, she soon reached the edge of the ravine, 15 or 20 feet above the track. The path continued its windings down the side of the cut, but the way was stony and in many places dangerous. The darkness, too, prevented anything like rapid progress. She finally reached the bottom of the ravine and had crossed to the right hand track, when a low sound among the bushes above her caused the cold drops to spring out on her forehead and almost stopped her heart's beating. Quickly crouching under an overhanging rock she listened. Nothing was heard save the sighing of the wind and the fast rattle of a tiny rill running down among the bushes near her. Suddenly the bushes overhead were stirred, and a stone fell directly in front of her. She scarcely dared to breathe, but crouched under the rock, with her hand clasped tightly on her breast. The tunnel was but a few rods beyond her, but she dared not move.

"I'd like to know how much longer yer goin' to keep up this confounded tramp, Pete Johnston. 'It's been nuthin' but marchin' and counter marchin' this whole cursed day," said a low coarse voice among the bushes.

"Why did yer enter into the bargain if yer goin' ter back out so soon?"

"Well, I'd be satisfied with half the thousand, for I'm nigh done up with these three weeks' work," said the first one.

"An' I tell ye I'll never give him up till I git the whole twinty thousand dollars or the mother will never see her swate darlin' agin."

A brutal laugh grated upon the girl's ears; then the first speaker whispered:

"I'll reckon she'll niver know her boy in this little bag of bones, though me arms is nigh worn out wid carryin' him the last three hours."

Alice could scarcely believe what her ears had heard. Her brain reeled, and she nearly fell from the rocky ledge on which she sat, as the truth dawned upon her. Her brother's child, her golden-haired little pet, was just within her grasp, but two brutal men kept watch over him. As she began to realize the danger of her position, her mind became clearer, and she resolved, at all hazards to rescue him. She heard the men step back some distance from the bushes and then all was still. She waited a few minutes, and then with the pistol grasped tightly in her hand, she crept stealthily out of her hiding place and struck a narrow path which led to the top of the bluff. She knew the way and the darkness favored her ascent. Reaching the summit she looked cautiously around. The clouds had parted, and the faint shimmer of moonlight through the trees enabled her to observe her surroundings distinctly. A few feet beyond were the two men stretched on the ground, their figures partially concealed by the trunks of two large trees and a clump of bushes. Between them Alice saw a little baby form with its golden head pillowed on the coal, damp grass.

Creeping along behind the bushes she reached one of the trees, and standing behind it, she waited for some minutes, hesitating what to do. The stentorian breathing of the men convinced her that fatigue had steeped their senses and that they would not readily awaken. If she should be successful in seizing the child, she could not return by the way she came. With Eddie in her arms she could never scale the precipitous side of the cut, followed, as she probably would be, by two relentless pursuers.

Again, if she should seek the shelter of the tunnel, the down express train would soon pass through, and an up train would follow but 10 or 15 minutes later. She resolved, nevertheless, to take the latter course, and, with this decision made she prepared to carry out her plans. Passing swiftly round the bushes she stood before the sleeping group. The moon at that instant shone out brightly and fell upon the white pinched face of the child. Not a moment to be lost. Grasping the pistol more firmly, she glided between the men and seized Eddie, she sprang past them, but in so doing struck the foot of one of the ruffians. Daring up, he saw the slight figure running swiftly down the path. He sprang forward, awakening his companion, and, with muttered curses they followed in hot pursuit. With the child clasped closely to her heart, Alice sped down the rocky pathway. She heard the men close behind her; stones were hurled at her and one struck her shoulder. Terror lent wings to her feet, and she soon reached the track, along which she flew and entered the tunnel. On—on she sped, but her breath came quick and short, for her strength was failing. She heard the heavy pantings of one close behind her. She almost felt his warm breath. Hugging the little form more closely to her breast and with a despairing cry for help, she ran on. A rude hand clutched her shoulder, and, with a shriek that ran through the tunnel she turned and faced her pursuer like a wounded animal at bay, raised her pistol and fired. With a yell of rage and pain, the man leaped into the air, and then fell with a heavy thud on the track beside her. Alice breathed more freely and ran on, though with feebler steps, through the darkness. Suddenly a low, rumbling sound smote upon her ear, and toward the opening of the tunnel she saw a faint light glimmer in the distance. Nearer and nearer it came, and then the horrible truth flashed upon her. It was the headlight of a locomotive, and she knew that the seven o'clock express train was thundering down the track.

Faint and bewildered the horror-stricken girl had lost her reckoning. She knew not on which track she was and stood staring with terror-strained eyes as the thundering mass came tearing down the rail. Its great red light lit up the black walls of the tunnel with a fearful glare. Still the girl moved not; fright had chained her to the spot. The monster was close upon her, she heard its horrible breathings. Was she on the right track? The roar of a Niagara deafened her and, with a shriek of despair, she fell senseless to the ground.

Mrs. Austin fell asleep soon after Alice's departure. Seven o'clock came and Betty began to be alarmed. At that instant the bell rang. Rushing down stairs she opened the door and Mr. Austin stepped into the hall accompanied by a stranger.

"How is Mrs. Austin?" asked the former, anxiously.

"An' shure, she's asleep, sir. But, oh, Miss Alice—hiv ye seen Miss Alice?"

"No; where is she?"

"An' oh! she went a-thur the doctur, sir, an' she went be the tunnel; an' I'm shure she's kilt, for the train's just a-thur goin' by!" cried Betty, excitedly.

"Good heavens! the tunnel!" exclaimed Austin, turning white.

"Yes, sir; she said it was shorter that way," sobbed the girl.

"Hush! Get my lantern, Betty, while I run upstairs. I'll be down directly, Dana," turning to the fine looking young man he had brought with him.

He hurried to his wife's room, pressed a kiss upon her white brow, and returning to the hall took the lantern from Betty, saying:

"Don't leave Mrs. Austin an instant. We may be absent some time, but you need not be alarmed."

The two gentlemen did not utter a word as they left the house, but following the path through the woods, clambered down the cut and entered the tunnel, swinging the lantern right and left as they walked along. Suddenly Dana stopped. Directly in his path lay a dark heap. Throwing the light of the lantern upon it, the gentlemen stooped and then started back with an exclamation of horror, for before them lay a bleeding, mangled mass of human flesh and bones.

"Some poor fellow has gone to his doom," muttered Dana, striding away from the sickening spectacle.

They had walked some distance further when a deep groan broke the ghastly stillness of the tunnel. Flashing the lantern on the other side of the track, Dana discerned another man's form close to the dripping wall. As he was about to raise him, Austin uttered a hoarse cry, and, springing forward, the two men stood over the prostrate form of a woman between the tracks. A pistol lay on the ground beside her, which Austin instantly recognized as his own. He trembled so violently that Dana pushed him aside and raised the slight form. As he did so his companion bounded past him, and in a voice in which joy, pain and incredulity were blended, cried out:

"Oh, my boy!—my precious boy! She has found my Eddie!" and he caught the little form to his heart and fairly sobbed aloud.

"Oh, heaven, he is dead! Gerald, look at him!" and the father's eyes burned with anguish as he looked at the white, baby face pillowed upon his broad breast.

Dana laid Alice on the ground and looked earnestly at the child.

"Cheer up, Ned, the little fellow has been drugged. Listen! His heart beats!" and putting his ear down he heard the faint fluttering which told of the spark of life still remaining in the wasted little form.

"And Alice, is she—"

"She is in a swoon, and the sooner we get her to the doctor's the better. It is quite evident that she was pursued by those scoundrels while rescuing your child, and that fellow yonder has somewhere in his body a ball from this pistol," picking it up as he spoke.

Lifting the insensible girl in his strong arms, Dana strode down the track, followed closely by Austin, who held his boy wrapped warmly under his coat. After some minutes walk they were out of the tunnel and reached the depot, where they drove directly to a doctor's.

For an hour Alice lay insensible in the doctor's office, and when she opened her eyes Austin whispered in alarm:

"Why does she talk so strangely, doctor?"

There has been such a terrible strain on her nervous system that I fear she may have an attack of brain fever unless a reaction takes place," he replied with some anxiety. "A good hearty cry would do her more good than any of my remedies."

"Let her see the child. That baby's face ought to be enough to melt a heart of adamant," said Dana, compassionately.

Austin laid Eddie beside her. She looked at the little white emaciated face with a troubled, sorrowful expression for an instant, and then, clasping her arms tightly around the child, burst into a passionate, uncontrollable flood of tears.

By this time the news of the child's rescue had spread like wildfire through the town.

Bells were rung, bonfires lighted, and men, women and children rushed to the doctor's house, crowding the street and sidewalks. The entire village had turned out, and yards doorways and stoops were alive with an excited populace.

The crowd was clamoring to see the hero of the hour, and cries of "Eddie Austin!" filled the air.

"Ned, you will have to take him on the stoop to satisfy them," said Dana, as the shouts and cries were redoubled.

Austin took the child out on the steps, and as the bright light of the torches fell upon them, cheer after cheer rent the air.

When the father raised the little inanimate form so that all could see it, the excitement and enthusiasm knew no bounds. Women cried aloud for joy, boys shrieked and hurraed, and many a tear coursed down the hard, weather beaten cheeks of stalwart men in the crowd. Alice stood beside her brother, leaning on Dana's arm, but overcome with agitation, was led back fainting to the sofa.

Roused to indignation by the sight, someone shouted out: "Death to the child-stealer!"

In an instant the cry was caught up by the excited crowd, who rushed in frantic haste toward the railroad. Dragging the wounded man from the tunnel, they would have lynched him on the spot had not Dana, with the sheriff and one or two others, arrived to prevent them.

The wretch was groveling on the ground in an agony of pain and terror. With haggard face and bloodshot eyes he looked up and cried aloud for mercy; but he saw no pity in the white, inexorable faces around him.

A rope was placed around his neck, he was dragged to a tree, when Dana hurried to the spot.

"Untie that rope!" he demanded sternly.

"We'll string him up to high heaven first!" answered an angry voice near him.

"However deserving the fellow may be of death, it is not for you to take the law into your own hands," replied Dana, sternly.

"The deuce take the law and you, too! What right have you to interfere between that man and justice?" said the fellow, clinching his fist threateningly. The excitement had now reached a fever heat. The crowd had quickly gathered around Dana, who stood beside the wounded man; threats and curses were freely hurled against both, and the state of affairs began to look alarming.

"If the man is guilty he has a right to be tried, and I'll shoot the first one of you who dares to touch him!" said Dana, coolly.

His quiet, commanding tone—and, still more, the menacing gleam of the pistol he made no effort to conceal, quelled the tumult, and the miserable man was carried to the village jail, followed by an angry, hooping crowd, clamorous for his death.

An hour later Eddie Austin was in his mother's arms. For days death hovered over the darkened home, threatening to carry off first one and then another. But when over the little village of Fairfield the sun shone brightly, it smiled, too, upon the happiest home in all the land. For a golden-haired boy, with rosy cheeks, was playing near his mother's chair, and Margaret looked up with a proud, happy smile to her husband's face as the little fellow played in baby glee and rolled and tumbled over the good-natured hound who lay stretched on the rug before the blazing wood fire.

The Old Soldier Muses.

"I heard only the other day," said the old soldier, "that at every mealtime all the time I was away in the army in the civil war a plate and a knife and fork were set for me at the table at home. Many a time if I had only known it, while I was falling into line at the cook's fire at the end of the company street, with my tin plate and tin cup in my hand to get the pork and hard bread and coffee or whatever we might have to eat, better or worse, they were setting a plate for me on the table at home. They entertained me there in spirit if they could not in flesh, and how glad they would have been to see me sit down at the table!"

"Where we were, in camp or on the march, and whether we had much or little my plate was always laid for me at home just the same. I wonder if it would have helped me if I had known it, if I could have eaten in spirit, as they entertained me? And I can hear them now after all these years, when they had something that I particularly liked, saying:

"How David would like this if he was here."

"Dear, dear! How glad I am I got back!"—New York Sun.

Why the Train Slows in Leaving.

He was an observing man and was not in the habit of allowing the slightest details of anything or any event to escape his eye. He stood on the depot platform and watched the heavy overland trains pulling out for the west. Each one of them seemed to come nearly to a stop just after pulling out of the depot.

"Stopping to let some one off?" he asked of a railroad man standing near him.

"No. Looks as if they were doamin' it!" Well, that fools lots of people," said the railroad man. "Some people think they stop to let off some one who stayed on too long, and some think they stop to put off a tramp. Neither of these reasons is right. All engines bring their trains to a stop or nearly so after pulling out of a terminal station in order to test the airbrakes and see that they are in working order. Most engineers try the air just after pulling out of a station, but on most roads the rule is that they try the brakes within two miles of the station."—Tupeka State Journal.

Making Music Primitively.

I once read in an account of the early history of New Zealand the story of Bishop Selwyn's first pastoral visit to Otago, then peopled mainly by whalers and sealers.

The grateful sailors made unusual efforts to receive their august visitor as he deserved. A room was hung with flags, a chair disguised as a pulpit, and the bishop was told that music had been provided. He was requested to give out "Old Hundredth" as the only hymn they knew.

This he did with much misgiving, and the next moment a musical box which had been concealed near his elbow struck up a lively waltz, followed by "Nix, My Dolly." Though electrified, the bishop was sustained and reassured by the perfect gravity of his audience, who waited until the solemn "Old Hundredth" came round when they joined in full chorus.

A Nice Question.

Colonel Butler, session judge at Bassein, has puzzled the jail authorities. In a recent case in which a woman was stabbed in an abduction affair the sessions judge sentenced the criminal to undergo four years' rigorous imprisonment for abduction and to be hanged on the capital charge. The criminal has appealed, and among the grounds of appeal raised it is seriously pointed out that the learned sessions judge omitted to specify which punishment should be carried out first the hanging or the imprisonment.

TEMPERANCE COLUMN.

Contributed by the I. O. G. T.

All lodges, and others interested in temperance work, are earnestly solicited to contribute to this column. Correspondence to be sent to Secretary, Cambridge Union Lodge; McDonalds Corner.

"Let all who love our Order and desire its progress—who love our Order and desire its maintenance—who would extend a knowledge of our beautiful organization, and perpetuate its principles, which aim to promote fraternity, to unite men and women in acts of benevolence and invite them to a generous emulation for the good of all mankind, that our Charity may be co-extensive with the universe, winning by gentle influence and example the erring and unfortunate victims of the tyrant alcohol to a place in our inner sanctuary, where sweet Peace sits enthroned, and Purity has an abiding place, and Love is the guiding star, unite in a determination to sustain and support this Temperance column.

OUR NEEDS.

We need more earnest workers in the temperance cause.

We have more than enough of loud and earnest talkers.

There is no difficulty in getting up a large and enthusiastic temperance meeting at almost any time, in almost any place, and there is not the least trouble in getting such meetings to pass resolutions couched in the strongest language man can frame.

But heretofore these resolutions have not been carried out, and all that has been done has been the work of a few, while the many have put on and laid aside their temperance cloak as suited their convenience.

For a time, strong resolutions seemed to have some effect, and men paid some little attention to them, and pretended to regard their requirements, but that time has long since passed.

The drinker is at first satisfied with the lighter and weaker drinks, beer and wine, but soon that stage is passed, and his appetite demands stronger drinks; so now, the weaker measures, which formerly answered a temporary purpose, now avail nothing, and the crisis demands stronger and more effective measures if we would accomplish our objects.

The friends of rum and their allies, the politicians, ridicule our meetings, our speeches and our resolutions, and we cannot be surprised at this; we have resolved and re-resolved, but have done scarcely anything else in accordance with our professions.

Until we make our temperance principles, to some extent, the guide and gauge of our every day life and business transactions, we cannot expect to attain to any great degree of success in our objects.

Until we can bring ourselves up to the point of working and praying for the success of temperance principle we need not expect success.

We are firm believers in the power and efficacy of prayer, but we believe that prayer not seconded by effort is blasphemy, and those who would have divine assistance in the accomplishment of their ends, must use all the means within their power to the best advantage. In a cause like this, money and personal sacrifice are required, and the sooner the people come to realize the fact that for every step in the great reform, they must pay in time, labor and money, the better it will be for both them and the cause.

Reformers must not wear gloves or hesitate at personal sacrifice. We must make temperance a personal matter, realizing that each has duties to perform, and that we are individually responsible for the manner in which those duties are performed.

Let every person who calls himself a temperance man, ask himself this question: "What have I done for the temperance cause?" And when he finds that he has failed to do all within his power, he may rest assured he has failed to do his duty, and that reform is needed in his own actions.

No intelligent observer can doubt the fact, that success, sure and lasting, is within our grasp.

The temperance people are to-day numerous enough to accomplish prohibition, if they would but act, and act unitedly and intelligently.

The enemies of temperance carry their principles—or lack of principles—into their business, and their every day transactions. Why should we not follow their example?

Let us take the laboring oar, remembering ever—

"'Tis ours to wage a truceless war,

"Gainst Bacchus, till his reign shall cease.

To hail the rising Temperance Star,

Purson of the Prince of Peace."

—Templars Magazine.

He Died With His Gold.

Yousouf, the Terrible Turk, who was lost on board La Bourgeoise, is receiving as many columns of notices since the accident as he did while on earth and giving exhibitions under Billy Brady's management. One of the best articles on the Turk appeared in the New York Telegraph, and is as follows:

"Invincible, world beater and favorite of Mahomet Achmet, greatest of Sultans, Ismail Yousouf, has at last met a greater adversary.

"Full fathoms five, under the waves of the Atlantic that beat about the fated Sable Island, the great wrestler lies locked in the embrace of iron.

"In the ample folds of his Turkish trousers there are sewed up no less than $8,500 in good American gold.

"In his gold-embroidered blouse there is a heap of cablegrams from his beloved patron and king, the Imperial Sultan of Turkey.

"In his last great bout, wherein he staked his fortune and his life against an unknown foe, the giant of Scutaria fought and lost. It is the end of a unique career.

"As in all Oriental fighters, the brute forces dominated the intellect. Yousouf was not an educated man. His colossal strength was his sole boast. Of the science of wrestling as it is known to trained athletes of the Madoon and Roebert school he was blissfully ignorant.

"And yet, the Turk was never beaten. True, the Frenchman, Lemsire, and the jay, Madochi, as well as the Wisconsin Golath, Lewis, got decisions over him. But all were on technicalities.

"Yousouf was a magnificent animal of the Eastern type, but he lacked the reserve and generalship of a true athlete. When things did not go his way he lost all control of himself and became a wild beast. He then lost his games repeatedly on fouls.

"The Turk was a native of Scutari, a gritty and fanatical town opposite Constantinople, and commanding a magnificent view of the city of Sultans.

"He began wrestling at an early age, and having won victories over men famed in the science throughout his native districts, Yousouf was honored with a 'command' to appear before his king.

"Under imperial patronage he made little tours into neighboring provinces, then farther into Egypt, Algeria, Greece, and the Ionian Islands, always retarding with the green bay of the victor.

"Yousouf then undertook to become master of Europe and Asia, which he did, throwing representatives from countries all the way from Japan to Germany.

"After that, America. Here he found difficulties. He found that wrestling was circumscribed by rules, and that if the wrestlers ignored them so much the worse for them. He met Roebert at Madison square garden, and Roebert fell off the platform.

Later at the Metropolitan Opera House the Turk lost his temper because he could not stir Roebert from all fours and was disciplined. Then he met the spectacular Spartan, Heraklides, and struggled him into insensibility. Then to the West he went and lost to Lewis on a foul.

"In fact, the mammoth Turk was a semi-savage, and there was no use trying to make a straight wrestler of him. W. A. Brady, his manager, lost on Yousouf's fouling where he stood to win if the Turk kept himself within bounds. With the $8,000 and more which lie under the waves, haggard miserably to the last, Yousouf might have started a cafe in his beloved city of Scutari and filled it with cross-legged countrymen smoking narghelas, whom he could have entertained with his wonderful exploits in foreign parts. That goodly sum would have been a fortune there.

"Here, however, the little hoard would soon have disappeared to satisfy the Turk's appetite, which was colossal. It kept himself and his friends eternally poor. He ate 20 meals a day, and each was a royal barbeque. He drank coffee out of a soup tureen, grounds and all, Turkish style. He ate with his fingers and worried because he had not hands enough to keep pace with the gnawings of hunger. He sailed second class. It was characteristic of the man, who was a miser for the benefit of his rapacious appetite.

Queer Callings.

In a great city like Paris there is a large number of persons who gain their living honorably enough, but in exercising professions the most extraordinary. One seeing them at work would not think they could do well and wonders why they do it. A little attention will explain the mystery.

There is the searcher for gold or jewels; he lives by sewers. You will see him waiting near their openings, a net in hand, snapping up and selecting from all that comes out of them.

Sometimes he finds objects of gold or silver, which after many turns of fortune, come to be lost or rather found there.

Then there is the crow chaser. This is a little girl or boy who sids his parents by earning 3 or 4 cents a day. They set off early in the morning and give their services to the kitchen gardeners in the suburbs.

Sometimes they go several miles before arriving at their employer's place. Their work is to stand among the vegetable beds and chase away the sparrows, crows and other pilfering birds by waving a black cloth. It is a fatiguing task, and we have said above how they are paid.

But the children perform their work with zeal and at nightfall return on foot to their homes. Sometimes their employers give them the scraps from their tables.—London Echo.

Speaking of sweet words, nothing sounds nicer than "I took your advice and found it right."—Atholion Globe.

ST. JOHN, N. B.

To EDITOR QUEENS COUNTY GAZETTE.

Dear Sir: Kindly allow me space in your valuable paper for a few lines concerning the statements given you by McLaughlin against Mrs. Shepherd. Now, while I cannot contradict them and do not wish to interfere in the affairs of one who is a stranger, I feel it my duty having heard her lecture on three different occasions and also read her book giving the description of her life, to say that she does not in any way try to conceal her past sins but displays all her temptations and wrong doings in true light, and having done so she now (as a Christian woman delivered from the evil of her ways) is seeking with all her strength to open the eyes of all and to protect them as far as possible from being led in ignorance as she was.

I was present at the meeting when she was told of the reports that were in the Globe and she said she had come to the day that when she did not hear such things she wondered greatly what was the matter. She did not deny having done wrong but she furthermore said she had been her persecutors and the ones who had caused her so much trouble.

She was left an orphan at the age of 15 in India where her parents had gone her father being a priest having married in secret. After her parents death she was sent to Ireland to some relatives and it was while there she fell in love with a priest and he induced her to marry him in secret himself placing the ring on her finger and procuring themselves legally joined. They went to parts where they were unknown, (I forget just what place) and after two years of happy life they were discovered by another of the same profession and in a few weeks were separated he sent to a monastery and she with her baby girl into the street. After money was spent and honorably refusing help from her oppressors she was reduced to extreme want and it was then she stole something to relieve the suffering of her dying child in her arms. She was arrested, placed in jail and her baby of two years taken from her. The child died through the night and when told next morning she faint in the dock and had to be carried away.

She was taken care of by several religious institutions but her heart had become so hardened through trouble and neglect that they could make no impression upon her. Probably it was during these times that those remarks referred to by McLaughlin were made. She was then induced to enter a nunnery or convent St. Arnos Court, Bristol, England, by the priest who had been the means of the separation. She lived there some three years I think and having gained possession of a Protestant Testament and losing so much faith in those who pretended to be her friends, she fought her way out and with the curse of both nuns and priests she was rudely pushed into the street. She has gone from one institution to another until I believe she is a woman redeemed from sin, and I see no reason why she should be treated as down now when trying to do right and if her advice and counsel were taken one would do very well. Our Saviour came to save the lost and in his own words we will say. Let him that is without sin cast the first stone. Moreover, I cannot see how one could commit so much degradation as she is said to have done and escape penitentiary for life.

Now, dear friends do not judge Mrs. Shepherd until you have read her life and heard her lecture and you will then be more able to form an opinion. Also read Father Chiquiquy's life as a priest and you will find they do not differ. Had I space I would like to give some of the statements made during Mrs. Shepherd's lectures which I think would open the eyes of all and would cause those who are fortunate to know such rules exist, to wonder how do others know. Therein lies the reason why Mr. King and others are called untruthful.

As regards the challenge made by McLaughlin to Mr. King, would say that Mr. King's time is too valuable to be taken up with one so inexperienced as the former. Speaking of the challenge reminds me very much of those made by Mrs. Shepherd while in St. John, when she set apart a portion of the platform for those she invited to oppose her, (not giving names).

Thanking you very much Mr. Editor for your patience with me I will close.

A LISTENER.

OPINIONS OF PUBLIC PRESS.

From Boston Baptist Watchman.

Mrs. Shepherd speaks concerning that which she has both known and seen and hence her fervent words have added weight. Besides she is tender as well as earnest in her Christian spirit. It is not strange that her lectures command a wide hearing.

From Clinton (Mass.) Courant.

Last Tuesday evening Mrs. S. again lectured in Bigelow Hall which was crowded to utmost capacity. Every seat was filled and the audience consisting of both Protestants and Catholics. She spoke in a clear voice that was heard in the remotest part of the hall and elicited the closest attention of the large audience.

Northampton (Mass.) Herald.

There was only standing in City Hall last eve so great was the crowd desirous of hearing Mrs. S. She is a pleasing speaker and is not actuated by any notice save the desire to tell the truth as she believes it.

From Rev. Leroy Vernon, Pastor First M. E. Church, Synacuse.

In this city during two weeks Mrs. Margaret Shepherd has labored extensively and to great advantage. Her lectures have aroused the people and awakened in many much enthusiasm. She has spoken with great vigor, eloquence and boldness. Her work far from being sensational has been serious and sustained, performed manifestly with the sincere intent to secure permanent, beneficent and Christian results. The severity and sweep of her labors have been beyond what one could have believed possible from so slender and delicate a lady as she. Mrs. Shepherd has honored herself in patriotic purpose and service. Many bid her God-speed and applaud her laudable endeavors and deserved success.

Mrs. Shepherd also gave many lectures, in Tremont Temple, Boston, and in her private lectures to ladies she addressed over 2000 women.

Letter from N. W. Territory.

EDMONTON, Alberta, July 29th.

Dear Editor—In my last letter I spoke of the drought, since then we have had an abundance of rain in this district; but in many sections the crops have been permanently injured, owing to the long continued dry weather. This is particularly so on the Battle River, and south of Calgary. In other places where the rain was abundant, and the weather warm, there is danger of the grain being lodged before ripening, the growth has been so rank. Of grains, wheat and barley give the most promise, one example will suffice: On Philip Umbach's farm at Stony Plain, he had Ladogo wheat measuring 56 inches, Red Fife 52 inches, and six rowed barley 48 inches in length.

Inspector Snyder, who has just returned from a trip over the new trail from Edmonton to Lesser Slave Lake, reports meeting the "Dupont Railway Survey" party between Pembina and Athabasca, and the "Dibblee Party" at the Pembina. The former party having left a few days before the latter.

We had the pleasure of meeting Mr. and Mrs. Kerr, Messrs. Hetherington, Davies, and Crandall, and giving them a New Brunswick welcome to the far North West. Mrs. Kerr will remain in Edmonton until the return of the party.

Reports from the oil boring operations at Pelican Rapids, are encouraging. The flow of gas from the well bored last year is still strong and undiminished. It is odorless, can be breathed without injury, is without doubt the finest natural gas yet discovered, and superior to that manufactured. Heavy oil or tar is found in quantities in the well, and Mr. Fraser, who is in charge, expects to strike light oil when the limestone formation is reached, within the next 200 feet.

The first of July was duly observed and celebrated by the loyal inhabitants of Edmonton and surrounding country.

The twelfth was the occasion of a grand rally of the Orangemen of the various districts in South Edmonton. Speeches, sports, and a procession in which King William was loyally honored filled up a very enjoyable day.

F. Pugsley, an evangelist, is holding a series of meetings in the Baptist Church, in which an increasing interest is manifested.

July 23.—Blueberries are now being picked in large quantities.

Early potatoes are very plentiful. Many had them a fortnight ago.

Joseph Myles, contractor, has been away on business relating to a heavy building job in Sarnaby. He will doubtless hire several hands.

RANDOLPH, Mass. July 25.

To EDITOR QUEENS COUNTY GAZETTE.

It is with much pleasure that I avail myself of the opportunity of writing a few lines to your valuable paper, which arrives here every Friday much to the delight of three Queens County boys who are spending their first summer in the land of Uncle Sam, and who eagerly glance over the various columns in search of some news from Petersville or Summer Hill, but of lately have been disappointed in not hearing from Petersville. Perhaps the correspondent is very busy in the hay-field and will pay up for it in your next issue.

It was with much pleasure I read in your last issue an account of the annual session of the High Court of the Independent Order of Foresters at St. John on the 13th inst. and of the enjoyable time spent by the brethren on that occasion and being a member of that order myself, I feel it my duty to extend a word of congratulation to the representatives of the various subordinate courts, who had the honor of meeting our Supreme Chief on that occasion, and I trust that the financial development of the Independent Order of Foresters during the past year is ample proof that it is one of the best orders in the world to-day.

Thanking you for the space in your paper, and wishing you every success, I will close for the present.

Yours truly,
A. W. ALLINGHAM.

Johnson.

July 28.—And yet another! He styles himself "Well Wisher," etc. He imagines himself much better qualified, Mr. Editor, to conduct a paper than yourself. In fact he esteems himself a walking encyclopedia of newspaper ability. Perhaps he is bound in brass. He struts and juffs and patronizes and advertises himself as the "greatest thing that ever happened."

I suppose that my letter outlining the enterprise of this section of the county was "a slanderous attack," etc. When I reported a concert, as any ordinary correspondent would, forsooth, I was indulging in vile language. I have had no controversy with any of the regular correspondents of the GAZETTE but when special correspondents have attempted to establish a reputation as writers of unusual brilliancy by attacking my correspondence in a would-be humorous manner, I have paid them back in their own coin and I guess I paid one hundred cents on a dollar. Ignorance is always to be pitied so I refrain from any criticism on his use of the word "slanderous," but would meekly suggest that he should try to become as well educated as a third grade scholar of the common school before appearing as a newspaper censor. Of course "Well Wisher" isn't attacking any one. The dear little Toxistic Woodie only imagines himself a gas-meter with a Partridge Island Fog Horn attachment, but he is mistaken, he is only a brass whist of small calibre and weak note and can't even furnish the steam to make his own music.
