True to its traditions of "protect ing" the Canadian consumer from the devastating consequences of cheaper manufactures the Winnipeg Telegram Alberta Legislature is a heartless lifts its hands in holy horror at the and headless monster, brutally strang- that should have a place in the libthought of a commmercial treaty with ling the goose that lays the golden rary of every business man and it is Germany. Though appalled at the gg. Says the Chronicle: prospect the Telegram to its own "doubt having 'swelled head' and notion precludes argument and disposes finally of the spectre by declaring that "Germany applies for closer trade relations simply because her "own market shows signs of being "glutted."

By the way, it is not so long since the Conservative press was equally appalled because Canada had not closer relations with Germany. When the British preferential tartif was in troduced Germany unceremoniously struck us from her list of friends and since then we have been as strangers. Though Canada has managed to struggle along under the commercial displeasure of the Kaiser's Empire the Opposition press was firmly con. vinced that we should never be abl to do so. That Empire we were reminded, was essentially a manufac turing country and must import from abroad immense squantities of the very farm products which Canada had to sel'. In granting a preference to Britain we were told we had closed an unlatched door in Ger many and our informants were fully convinced the market we lost in Ger. many was of more consequence than the increased market we were likely to find in Britain. It is somewhat strange, therefore, that one of these late advocates of German trad. should become suddenly alarmed at the thought that we might endeavor to secure a share of the German trade At least it would be strange if we did not understand that their forme yearning for the German market wa born of aversion to the British preference, and that the sudden aversion to German trade is born of undying affection for the bulging purse of the Canadian manufacturer.

If the German market were eve preferable to an increased Britisl market, surely the German trade plus the increased British trade would b better still. The preference has secur ed for us the increased market i Britain, and if we can secure also place in the German market it would surely be desirable to do so. Though Britain buys more than before, we have more to sell. And our power of pro duction is bound to increase more wapidly than Britain's demand do our products. If Canada has already become the "bread basket of the Em pire," that surely is the best proo possible that she is capable of pro ducing much more than the Empire requires.
