MAGIC BAKING POWDER

WHEN LOVE Came Too Late.

CHAPTER XXXIV.
The Summing Up.

Faradeane was led to the cell in which he was to wait during the adjournment. Five minutes afterward the warden announced Mr. Edgar.

Mr. Edgar waited until the door closed, and then held out his hand.

Faradeane took it with the faintest gesture of surprise.

"I suppose you don't remember me, my lord!" said Mr. Edgar. "I was a guest at a river party you gave some years ago."

Faradeane passed his hand across his brow.

"I beg your pardon," he said. "I had forgotten. I am sorry that we should meet again under such circumstances."

"Yes, my lord," said Mr. Edgar, "and yet I cannot help feeling glad that the judge should have trusted your case to me. We have so short a time in which to confer, that I am sure you will forgive me if I proceed at once to discuss the matter. I need not say, my lord, that I myself, speaking as a counsel, am quite convinced of your innocence. It is not for me to ask you why you have seen fit to plead guilty to a crime for which I, for one, am perfectly sure you were utterly incapable. But I wish most earnestly, in fact, it is my duty, to point out to you that unless some evidence can be produced to rebut that which the prosecution have already produced, and that which I believe they have still in hand, you stand in the most terrible peril. I will ask you only one question bearing directly on the death of this unfortunate woman. Will you tell me, my lord, as man to man—as prisoner to his counsel—did she commit suicide?"

Faradeane turned his head away, and was silent for a moment; then he said, "No."

An expression of surprise crossed Mr. Edgar's face, and he looked down and bit his lip as if puzzled.

"She did not commit suicide?" he said. "Then how am I to account for the presence of the revolver bearing your name? If she committed suicide, I could have accounted for the revolver being in her possession, as part of the property which may have fallen into her hands as your wife. How am I to account for this?"

"Mr. Edgar," said Faradeane, gravely, "I can understand your desire to do your duty, and to assist me; and, believe me, it costs me a great deal not to be able to tell all that I should like to tell you; but I have reasons for remaining silent. That these reasons are all-powerful with me you may well believe, when I am content to plead guilty to a crime the penalty for which is the scaffold. I can render you no assistance. It was not by my wish that you were appointed my counsel. I cannot close your lips. I cannot, in the face of the court, decline the aid which it has appointed; but I can say nothing to help you in this matter."

Mr. Edgar took one or two paces up and down the narrow cell.

"Every word you have said, my lord," he said, "goes further and further to convince me that you are not guilty. Oh! I do beg of you—with all the earnestness of which I am capable—consider the position in which you stand. Such a name as that which you bear, surely you owe something to that. If you have no thought for your own life, think of that name which has been handed down to you honored and stainless—"

Faradeane put up his hand.

"Stainless no longer," he said. "The story of my shame, and my wife's, is by this time all over England. In a word, Mr. Edgar, I am utterly weary of the life which you would endeavor to save. I repeat, I can tell you nothing; my lips are closed, let the end be what it may."

The young counsel's face paled, and he bit his lips.

"So be it, my lord," he said; "but give me leave to tell you that though you will render me no assistance, will give me no information, I shall still do my duty. Forgive me if I tell you that there are no reasons grave enough to warrant a man sacrificing his life, and I shall still do my very utmost to protect the plea of guilt which you set up this morning is an utterly false one."

Faradeane inclined his head.

"I am sure you will do that, Mr. Edgar," he said, "and I am sorry I cannot wish you success."

Mr. Edgar bowed, and was leaving the cell, when Faradeane put out his hand with a gesture to arrest him.

"One moment," he said. "You can do something for me."

Mr. Edgar stopped, and looked at him with a sudden hope.

"There's a lady in court," said Faradeane, in a very low voice, "Mr. Vanley's daughter—Mrs. Bradstone. Will you do me a favor?"

"I will do as you wish, my lord," he said, and he left the cell.

If that were possible, the excitement had increased during the luncheon hour, and the crush in and about the court was greater than it had been when the trial commenced.

Olivia, the squire, and Bessie had not left their seats.

Mr. Edgar, when he entered the court, made his way toward them.

Faradeane passed his hand across his brow.

Rheumatism A Sneaking Disease Has At Last Met Its Conqueror

Throbbing Muscles and Swollen Joints Made Well.

RUB ON NERVILINE.

Old age knows no foe more subtle, more unrelenting than rheumatism. At first only a grumbling pain is felt. But, alas, it settles in the joints and muscles, and finally tortures its victims.

To-day the disease may be in the muscles of the back, thigh, shoulder or neck—to-morrow in the joints of the hand, toes, arms or legs. It may work with redoubled fury.

Whether the pain is constant or occasional makes no difference to "Nerviline."

Because other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged. Nerviline has cured the worst of cases. It has brought health to those in the deepest despair, has ended years of awful suffering for those who never hoped to be well again.

There is a marvellous healing power in Nerviline which it derives from the extracts and juices of certain rare herbs and roots. It allays almost magically the awful pain that only rheumatism can describe.

Congestion is drawn out of the muscles, stiffened joints are eased and limbered up, the old time feeling of depression is cast off, and once again Nerviline brings the sufferer to buoyant vigorous lasting good health.

Every home needs good old Nerviline, needs it for earache, toothache, headache, neuralgia, lumbago, sciatica, stiff neck, chest colds and sore throat. Wherever there is pain, congestion or inflammation, Nerviline will cure it.

"Stainless no longer," he said. "The story of my shame, and my wife's, is by this time all over England. In a word, Mr. Edgar, I am utterly weary of the life which you would endeavor to save. I repeat, I can tell you nothing; my lips are closed, let the end be what it may."

The young counsel's face paled, and he bit his lips.

"So be it, my lord," he said; "but give me leave to tell you that though you will render me no assistance, will give me no information, I shall still do my duty. Forgive me if I tell you that there are no reasons grave enough to warrant a man sacrificing his life, and I shall still do my very utmost to protect the plea of guilt which you set up this morning is an utterly false one."

Faradeane inclined his head.

"I am sure you will do that, Mr. Edgar," he said, "and I am sorry I cannot wish you success."

Mr. Edgar bowed, and was leaving the cell, when Faradeane put out his hand with a gesture to arrest him.

"One moment," he said. "You can do something for me."

Mr. Edgar stopped, and looked at him with a sudden hope.

"There's a lady in court," said Faradeane, in a very low voice, "Mr. Vanley's daughter—Mrs. Bradstone. Will you do me a favor?"

"I will do as you wish, my lord," he said, and he left the cell.

If that were possible, the excitement had increased during the luncheon hour, and the crush in and about the court was greater than it had been when the trial commenced.

Olivia, the squire, and Bessie had not left their seats.

Mr. Edgar, when he entered the court, made his way toward them.

Anæmia

Our blood is composed of red and white corpuscles—the red to nourish the body, the white to fight disease. In Anæmia—or bloodlessness—the red corpuscles are more or less deficient. Thus the blood cannot provide sufficient nourishment for the body. Therefore the face becomes white and "pasty"—the eyes become dull and "heavy"—and a feeling of intense weariness pervades the whole system. To overcome Anæmia, the blood supply needs recharging with red corpuscles. And it is here that possesses such wonderful power. Because, being a blood-maker, "Wingarnis" creates a wealth of new, rich, red blood, which brings the roses back to the cheeks—gives a sparkle to the eyes—and surcharges the whole body with new vitality and new life.

"Mr. Vanley, I believe" he said. The squire nodded.

"I ask your permission to speak a few words to Mrs. Bradstone," he said.

Olivia rose, inwardly trembling, but outwardly calm.

"I have just seen Lord Clydesdale, madam," he said, "and he has asked me to be the bearer of a message to you."

Olivia's lips moved.

"He has asked me to beg you to leave the court and avoid this, which must be a most painful scene."

You Couldn't Blame the Girl. By Dorgan.

"He asked you that?" said Olivia. "He wishes me to go?"

"Yes, madam; he does most earnestly."

"Will you tell him," said Olivia, "that I will do anything but that? I cannot go."

Mr. Edgar bowed respectfully and went toward his place, an expression of keen, earnest thought on his face.

There was a buzz of the most profound interest and curiosity when, pale and haggard, but still calm, and with a kind of weary indifference, the prisoner was led into the dock.

As the judge took his seat upon the bench, Mr. Edgar rose.

"My lord," he said, "I have had an interview with the prisoner, and upon the result of that interview I have to ask your lordship to adjourn the trial until next sessions."

A murmur of astonishment ran through the court.

The judge looked grave.

"This is a very unusual application, Mr. Edgar, at such a period. I do not know that I should be warranted in adjourning the trial, unless you can assure me that you have evidence directly bearing upon the alleged murder, evidence which has only just come into your possession."

An older man might have made the assertion with brazen confidence, but Mr. Edgar labored under the disadvantage of being a young and honest man.

"As to evidence, my lord," he began, with a slight hesitation.

But Mr. Sewell rose.

"My lord," he said, "it is my duty to oppose the application of my learned friend. If, as your lordship said, he had come into possession of material evidence, I, as representing the Crown, should certainly not oppose his application. But I would point out to your lordship that, as we think, our chain of evidence for the prosecution is complete and unbroken, and I submit that the adjournment would be both unusual and uncalled for."

"I am afraid I must agree with Mr. Sewell," said the judge, gravely. "The trial must proceed; we must go on."

The spectators drew a long breath. It would have been a terrible disappointment to have been robbed of so exciting a drama at the conclusion of only the first act.

Mr. Sewell proceeded to call his witnesses.

The first was Browne, who had found the body, and Faradeane standing beside it. The revolver was produced and handed to the jury.

Mr. Edgar asked: "Do you identify this?"

There was a moment's pause.

"It bears the prisoner's initials," said Mr. Sewell.

Mr. Edgar examined the revolver closely.

Then he said: "Has any one a magnifying glass?"

A buzz went round, and a gentleman—a doctor—handed his pocket glass to him.

He took it and examined the initials closely, long and closely, while every eye was fixed on him.

When Wall is Breached Germans Will Be Buffed Under Avalanche—A Symposium of News by Foremost Military Critics and Observers.

Paris, Sept. 30.—French jubilation over the continuous successes of the allied armies is reflected in the following symposium of views expressed by foremost military critics and observers:—

By General Berthauti—The fall of Combes and Leval on the same day destroys the validity of the German claim of invincibility. The German defensive is crumbling, and the Allies are methodically hammering away. Still more decisive successes are ahead.

By General Chéris—The Prince Rupprecht is not yet at the end of his troubles. The Germans so far have felt only a part of the weight of pressure we are preparing to bring to bear to force their retreat.

By Lieutenant-Colonel Rousselet—Yesterday's gains have a very appreciable tactical value, which has changed the situation considerably in our favor. I do not believe I shall be mistaken in predicting that the consequences will soon appear.

By Gustave Herve—The German armies will be completely wasted before they reach the Meuse. The moment will arrive when the wall will be breached and our victorious armies will bury the Germans under an avalanche. Let the God of armies give us six weeks of the weather and we shall see what the Germans will get.

You Can't Find Any Dandruff, and Hair Stops Coming Out

Save your hair! Make it thick, wavy, glossy and beautiful at once.

Try as you will, after an application of Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most, will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes, but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy. Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking only one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing. Your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment. A 25-cent bottle will double the beauty of your hair.

The Conception Bay British Society's contribution to Patriotic purposes, will be donated to the fund for wounded soldiers and sailors. This decision was arrived at by the Executive of the Society on Monday night last. The amount is $250 and the members feel that by contributing to this fund they are placing it in one of the best channels for good. The body

Precious Postage Stamps

Issues That Bring Joy to the Heart of The Philatelist.

One of the questions asked us most frequently is, which is the rarest of all the stamps? There are not a few claimants for this honour, all of which are exceedingly rare, stamps of which but a single copy is known to exist. Indeed, there is evidence which leads us to believe that some stamps were printed and used, of which no copies at all are known to be in existence.

Of those stamps of which only one copy is known, the first is a postmaster's provisional issued at Boscawen, N.H. Another is a stamp from British Guiana. Only one copy of this is known and is in a celebrated collection in Paris, probably the largest collection in the world.

In 1893 the Niger Coast Protectorate issued a series of surcharged stamps, all of which are scarce, and some of them are in the ranks of the world's greatest rarities. This refers especially to the twenty shilling values. Of the 20 shillings, surcharged in violet, only five copies were ever printed; of the vermilion surcharge, only two copies, and of the surcharge, only one copy.

As there is and can be only one copy of this last stamp, it is justly entitled to be considered the rarest of all stamps. It probably would not sell so high as the better known and more popular "postoffice" stamps of Mauritius. Yet of these there are known fourteen copies of the penny and twelve of the twopenny.—St. Nicholas.

Huns Can Only Put End Off

And Only by Metallurgical Spurt Can They Do That—Their Last Chance, Says Mr. Garvin—Big Autumn Storm Will Probably Break in the East.

(Special Star Cable by J. L. Garvin.)

London, Sept. 30.—October ought to be a month of giant fighting. I shall say nothing of the Western front except that it will be worth watching. All the signs suggest that events are going to break like an autumn storm in the Eastern theatre of war, and it would surprise no good judge of the conditions, if the Germans and their confederates made a more tremendous rally than public opinion in the Allied countries expects.

Those who argue too exclusively in terms of relative man power in the field hardly convey a correct estimate of the present phase and the next. Germany has not only got to fight for her life, unmistakably and at once—the same proposition applying even more grimly to Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey—but she has to fight above all with the full pressure of her immense metallurgical industries.

That is her only chance, and it is nonsense to suppose that she will make a very formidable use of her obvious means. Otherwise, her leadership would be weak indeed, and necessity would have ceased to be the mother of invention.

Germany's Last Chance. If Germany in the crowning attempt fails for any reason, direct or indirect, her fate and that of her partners will be evidently sealed by Christmas, even in the sight of her own peoples.

If the Allies are checked or thwarted for a few months, German spirit may be revived, though in vain. The Allies would resume again with larger technical means, but the war would be prolonged. No wise man ought yet to exclude the latter possibility. It is never wise to underestimate your enemy.

The iron game as a game is now at quite its most interesting point. The possibilities of strength and counter strokes were never yet quite so various and complicated. Every student of military history will have a right to be disappointed if the autumn struggle is not one of the finest dramas ever seen since war was.

The last struggle of France after Sedan and Metz of Napoleon after Leipzig, of Frederick the Great in the final phase when he was outnumbered by three to one, of Louis XIV, after years of misfortune—each of these was a surprise. Frederick's case was, of course, unique, since he was saved not by military means, but by the death of his implacable foe, the Czarina Elizabeth. Modern Germany ought to be able without any hope of changing the ultimate issue, to imitate so many obstinate examples.

Must Forge Iron Club.

And we have to remember something more important and concrete than historical analogy. As I have said, it is now a metallurgical war. We must think chiefly in terms of metal and forget frontal man power for the moment, if we are to understand clearly what is to be expected. Germany must turn out heavy batteries with superhuman energy. That is what she will do. Behind Hindenburg are the canons. Krupp must forge an iron club for Hercules.

Hindenburg, in other words, will depend not on his strategical ideas, but on his guns for all his hopes of ending the present fighting, in spite of all, with a pale winter sunshine of German glory.

That this is no vague or doubtful line of speculation a moment's reflection will show. Even if the old Marshal were a Napoleon he could not solve his problem by strategical ideas. The possible ideas which he might execute on his own initiative are limited, and they are as obvious to the Allies as to the German General Staff.

Above all things, the Central Powers for every sort of military and economic reason, would like to crush Rumania and seize her territory. That is plain enough. But that cannot be done by attack from any unexpected direction or by any brilliancy of combined manoeuvres. It can only be attempted by trying to accumulate an overwhelming weight of metal at some selected point or points on the Russo-Rumanian line, whether on the Danubian bank or on the Carpathian side, or simultaneously on both. If Germany cannot do this, Hindenburg's game will be up.

Of Entrancing Interest.

What lies immediately before us, therefore, is a very great situation, and one of entrancing interest. Whether the next Teutonic move should be a real climax of determination, backed by a staggering concentration of artillery, or should be a mere anticlimax of disappointment in the sight of the Germans themselves.

Let us, meanwhile, state the case coldly from the enemy's point of view. There is nothing that he can do in the west except wage a stubborn defensive contest with backward steps. The only thing to do at Verdun when Hindenburg was called in at last was to cut the loss and wind up a bankrupt speculation.

Every risk must be taken in the west, consistently with a German presumption that the divisions and batteries left there will be just enough to hold the lines unbroken, though deeply dented, through the winter. The enemy may be mistaken in that calculation, but it is one that he is bound to make.

His only offensive chances lie in the east. There for the moment is the deadly menace to Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria, Turkey. There the Central Empires cannot compete with Russia in numbers of troops. No railway manipulation on the old Tannenberg model could give Hindenburg any sufficient local superiority in numbers.

Base Hope on Guns.

The Germans still hope to do the thing by a concentration of heavy metal. They argue that the Central armies have not yet got big artillery proportionate to Russian strength in every other respect. Might it not be possible, therefore, to out-gun the Russians in the remaining months of the present autumn campaign and to blast them back by an autumn storm of explosive. Is not this the last conceivable chance?

Next year would be too late. Russia by then will be too formidable supplied with heavy batteries. The Rumanian menace must be countered in the next few weeks, if its results are not to be mortal. Germany's inferior lines no longer possess the old value for the transfer and retransfer of troops, but they may still mean a great relative advantage in the transport of troops, pending the fatal time when the Central Empires will be dominated all around in artillery as well as in all other arms.

To Try to Crush Rumania.

The Allies are, therefore, bound in prudence to expect that Hindenburg will remove from the western front as many guns as he can and as much aircraft, in addition to all the new metal with which the night and day efforts of the factories can supply him, in view of a supreme attempt to drive back Brusiloff and crush Rumania.

This is a towering ambition, but it is quite of a kind natural to Hindenburg. Germany's situation demands nothing less than some enterprise of this audacity and magnitude. If nothing of that sort were ventured we would have to conclude that the enemy was already weaker, both in temper and resources, than we are yet disposed to think.

That the Allies can have no faintest intention of leaving all the initiative or resource to Germany's man of emergency, I need not point out. Contrary to all the enemy's fond suppositions, in August, the British and British offensive on the Somme is by no means over. It has by no means reached its climax. The significance of that factor needs no analysis.

Brusiloff Resolute.

If Brusiloff were directly attacked on the Dnieper, that most brilliant and resolute soldier, even if he were taken at some temporary disadvantage, would assuredly not make a worse fight of it than the defenders of Verdun, even on the sector where he might be most heavily assailed, while his counter-offensive would be felt elsewhere.

By now Rumania, the Russian army on the Danube and General Sarraill, must have 1,000,000 men between them, and the number can be increased. Falkenhayn in the long run had no better fortune than Malke minor. Whether Hindenburg will fare better even for a few months or weeks in the east than his predecessor fared at Verdun has now to be seen.

J. L. GARVIN.

War News.

Messages Received Previous to 9 A.M.

NEVOLIEN OCCUPIED WITHOUT LOSS.

LONDON, Oct. 6. On the Struma front yesterday and the preceding night the enemy showed no activity. Our troops have now consolidated all the ground gained. The total number of prisoners captured in recent operations now amounts to three officers and 339 men. This morning our artillery commenced the bombardment of Nevollen, but after a short time the enemy was seen evacuating the town, and it was occupied by us without loss.

ITALIAN SUCCESS.

ROME, Oct. 6. The capture by Italian troops of a strong Austrian position on the slopes of Cima di Costabella, in Dolomite Alps, was announced by the war office today. An official also reports the consolidation of new Italian positions in the region of Colbricon.

REGARDING PEACE PROPOSALS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6. A News Agency despatch from Rome published here to-day, says that the Entente Allies have informed the Dutch Government that any move toward peace proposals would be considered a pro-German act, it was learned here to-day. Exactly when this information was sent to The Hague is not known here. The fact that such action has been taken is disclosed in the discussion of Lloyd George's interview warning neutrals not to intervene at this time. Well informed circles here say the Allies considered the probability of war will last three years more.

RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE SUCCESSFUL.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 6. The Russian offensive in the Turkish Armenia district west and southwest of Trebizond, is being successfully pushed. The statement was announced to-day. The Turks are being pushed back in the direction of Karahut River, which runs through Ardesa, about forty miles southwest of Trebizond, and empties into the Black Sea near Trevoit 50 miles from Trebizond.

BRITISH ADVANCE THEIR POSITION.

LONDON, Oct. 6. The British last night pushed forward their line northeast of Eaucourt Labbaye on the Somme front, it was officially announced to-day. During the night there was considerable artillery activity on the front south of the Ancre. The statement says: "We advanced our positions northeast of Eaucourt Labbaye. Gas was discharged by us west of Loos and west of Arras. The raiding parties successfully entered the enemy trenches in the Loos area, and two south of Arras."

BULGARS RETREATING.

PARIS, Oct. 6. Bulgarians on the Struma in Greek Macedonia, are retreating before the British, the war office announced to-day. Paris war office reports great activity on the part of the artillery on the Verdun front. Germans are shelling Poivre Hill, east of the Meuse and north of Verdun. On the Somme front, the artillery was active during the night.

SAILINGS SUSPENDED.

LONDON, Oct. 6. Owing to the risks of North Sea traffic, the Batavier Line has suspended the regular sailings from London to Rotterdam. The Batavier Line operated a fleet of eleven steamers.

CAUGHT AND HANGED.

WOODLAND, Cal., Oct. 6. Charles Call, a member of the Ambulance Corps of the National Guard of California, while on border patrol recently strayed across the international line and was caught and hanged by Mexicans, according to a letter received here last night. Great indignation prevails along the border.

MORE STEAMERS SUNK.

LONDON, Oct. 6. Premier steamships sunk, one British and two flying neutral flags, according to an announcement made here to-day. They were the British ship Ile Hastings, 1,876 tons; Greek steamer Samos, 1,846 tons; Norwegian steamer Cedric, 1,128 tons.

Your Boys and Girls.

So much has been written regarding entertainment for the little ones on rainy and stormy days that it would seem that all had been told but here is something that will be of great delight to them. Take an old magazine, on its pages carefully paste cuttings, some news illustrations which make the pages look quite attractive. Save the fairy and other stories which are published in the Sunday papers, ask a friend or two to do the same; supply the children with blunt pointed scissors and a jar of paste. The result will be many happy hours and an amusing as well as an instructive book. Of course a blank book or scrap book is more substantial, but for economy and pastime an old magazine will answer. Pictures from old calendars are good, as they usually picture some noted spot about which mother can readily weave some story starting with the time-honored "once upon a time."

INS AND OUTS.

The times are hard and the fates are mean; my children clamor for gasolene. So dire their want, and so deep their woes, they can't all go to the movie shows. When such things be we can realize a change of government is most wise; we'll all be covered with cheerful grins, when the Ins are Outs and the Outs are Ins. The times are hard and the years are lean, my wife is minus a limousine; the breath of autumn now keenly stirs, and none of my girls is wearing furs. There's something wrong when we can't buy life's necessities, you won't deny; there's something wrong with the ship of state; the present skipper must pull his freight; we'll hang the crew to the main-top mast, and then our worries will all be past. The time of roses and wine begins, when the Ins are Outs and the Outs are Ins.

THE ROUMANIAN REVERSES.

All observers are agreed that the war is working up in a gradual crescendo to a climax that must come sooner or later; it has now reached an intermediate position which is of almost fascinating interest. One thing stands out strongly—the obvious will of Germany to punish Roumania, having behind it a degree of anger which bids fair to run away with prudence and better judgment. Certainly Falkenhayn has given proof of his ability in the two decisive defeats that he has inflicted on the Roumanians, first at Hermannstadt and now on the Alt River. But as to these there are conflicting reflections. We must first remember that whatever may happen to Roumania, there is the selfish compensation that it can only be done at the cost of great efforts by the enemy, so that her entry will have been of value in that way, if in no other. Secondly, the usual "hate" that she has invoked has drawn upon her also a very complimentary concentration of forces, which must inevitably have left the German lines thinned elsewhere; and the German cannot now permit their lines to be thinned anywhere. Last, we may feel reassured that Roumania is in no great danger. Her reverses are natural enough as the consequence of her rather too venturesome passage of difficult passes. Her assets that are well supplied with lines of communication and lend themselves to a rapid concentration of troops. This is what happened to her at Hermannstadt, where Falkenhayn was enabled rapidly to gather his forces from many directions and threaten to surround the smaller Roumanian army.

As has so often been pointed out, the great value of Roumania to the Allies consists not so much in the victories she can win as in those she makes necessary to the enemy or invites from him. For victories need men, and men have been hurried to that region in great numbers. Bruti-Off is exerting terrible pressure in Galicia; things are going badly for the Bulgarians in Macedonia. West nothing less than the whole German line is menaced; yet there is a very great, almost disproportionate, massing of men by the Central Powers over against Roumania. The consequences seem obvious. If Britain and France can strike home the great blow in the West that it seems to be within their power to give, there will inevitably be a great hurrying back of men to that front, with the usual sequel in the regions from which they are hurried. Roumania is getting some hard knocks, but Germany is risking a lot for the satisfaction of giving them. Whether the game is worth the candle will soon appear.

Ireland and Conscriptio.

There seems to be a rather hollow ring about Redmond's words. Ireland can vie with Greece as a political puzzle, but mazes of wheels within wheels and perhaps for that reason, to vary the metaphor, less confused by the trees

In seeing the wood, her position seems fairly plain. Britain, when she adopted conscription, excluded Ireland from its operation. The Colonies are one by one adopting it. New Zealand has it, Australia also in effect, and Canada promises a system of registration which is a practical equivalent. Redmond has pointed out that Ireland, not being self-governing, cannot fairly be compared with them, thereby admitting that universal service should in this war be an obligation accompanying the benefits of self-government. Yet he claims Home Rule for Ireland and asserts that she will surely win it after the war (which we sincerely hope), while at the same time he protests that it would be a scandal to compel her to assume the obligation that goes with it. Perhaps it would, and England is not likely to make the attempt, but it would be a greater scandal if Ireland should make it necessary even to consider it.

The truth is, this is a question that far transcends the domestic issue of Home Rule; why then should they neglect with it. England has treated Ireland badly in the past, but she has not always treated her Colonies too well. They answered the call, but not at her command or even her request. They did it for two reasons: first, because they clearly saw that it was in their own defence that they must fight, and secondly, for shame. England should be left to do it for them. The same applies with the same force to Ireland. It is a little hard to contend, as so many do, that those who advocate conscription there are actuated by political motives. The only political motive they can have must be in their opposition to Home Rule; why then should they agitate for the enactment of a measure which they are so opposed to? Ireland's voluntary response to this Imperial call will undoubtedly be with the majority of Britons everywhere the measure of her claim to self-government. She has had a golden opportunity, and it is still held out to her.

AT THE CRESCENT.

"Love and Lather" is the comedy picture at the Crescent Picture Palace to-day. Burns and Stull as Pokes and Jabs create a game of fun in this lively Vim Comedy. Viola Smith and Joseph Huelson are presented in "What Happened to Peggy," a great two reel Biograph feature. "A Safe Risk" is a Selig Comedy drama. Dorothy West and Wilfred Lucas feature in "His Mother's Secret," a strong western drama. Mr. Sam Rose sings a new novelty song. Professor McCarthy plays a new program of music. On Monday Mary Anderson in a three-act Vitagraph Broadway Star feature, "La Paloma."

SPLENDID PICTURES AT NICKEL THEATRE.

The week-end performance at the Nickel Theatre yesterday attracted very large audiences. Great interest was centred in the pictures, particularly the feature films which afforded the greatest pleasure to all. Popular artists were in the leading characters while the photography in the case was splendid. The programme will be repeated this evening and no doubt there will be large audiences again as all will be anxious to see these brilliant subjects. On Monday the great Vitagraph drama, "Playing Dead" will be shown.

Warning Endorsed by Press

British Papers Support Lloyd George's Declaration on War—Peace Talk is Quite Futile Now—Declaration of British Resolve Voted by War Minister.

London, Sept. 29.—The Right Hon. David Lloyd George's declaration that the war must go on to a "knock-out" and his warning to neutrals to make no peace overtures at present, contained in an interview given the United Press, won the unanimous support of the English press to-day.

Mr. Lloyd George's statement, described by the Express as a "historic manifesto," was printed in every morning newspaper in Great Britain and telegraphed by all the great news agencies throughout neutral and allied countries. The newspapers printed lengthy editorial comment.

"This really historic manifesto," said the Express, "puts in direct and unequivocal words what every man and woman in the British Empire feels. Germany's growing conviction that if the war continues she must be broken and beaten inevitably leads to neutral agitation for peace.

"American politicians, eager for the hyphenated vote, undoubtedly would suggest mediation, asking the belligerents to kiss and forget their quarrels. To all would-be peace-makers, whether in America, Rome, Spain or other neutral countries, the War Secretary bluntly says: 'Keep out of the ring.'"

Will Not Heed Whines.

"It is at once a declaration of British resolve, and a warning to those who would thwart it that Great Britain simply won't listen at this juncture to whines and overtures from Germany through any source," said The Mail.

"Many signs indicate that Germany is planning peace overtures via the United States. Hence, Lloyd George wisely took an American journalist into his confidence, using straight-from-the-shoulder language, which Americans appreciate.

"These words ought to go a long way toward enlightening neutrals. The British people recognize in his words the proof and echo both of their spirit and their policy. The British army itself will be strengthened by the knowledge that its valor and sacrifices are not thrown away by the weakness of politicians.

"Interviewing," said the Times, "is an American institution, which the Old World borrowed and it is only appropriate that in choosing this method of expressing his views, the Secretary of State for War should favor with his confidence the head of one of the great American news organizations.

"It is a forcible downright answer to German and pro-German intrigues peace talk, opposite in form, excellent in substance, most opportune in season.

"There is a reason giving point to a message addressed directly to the people of a great neutral State. Washington reports state that German emissaries are again preparing the old peace-kite. It is well known that efforts to fly similar kites have been made within England. The recent visit to England, via Berlin, of Marquis de Villalobar (Spanish Minister to Brussels) has become common knowledge.

Neutrals Have Been Duped.

"Neutrals undoubtedly have been duped into supporting these movements, but the men working them in the newspapers, lobbies and courts, are the tools of astute Wilhelmstrasse personages. Nothing is likely to prevent a repetition of these manoeuvres, which are more necessary as the enemy discerns the drawing of its fate.

"The statement uttering the immutable will and purpose of the entire British Empire, with the Allies. It makes the futility of these manoeuvres and their possible danger plain to all practical politicians and level headed observers."

Service to the Nation.

The Daily News had this comment: "Mr. Lloyd George well says that peace, failing to destroy German militarism and leaving Europe still cringing under the shadow of the mailed fist, would be a cruel peace."

"Mr. Lloyd George has rendered a new service to the country by the straight talk given an authorized representative of the American press, which will be endorsed by the whole nation," said the Daily Graphic.

"We recognize the good service he (Lloyd George) is doing by such impressive, clear-sighted statements," said the Morning Post.

The Mirror carried this caption over the interview:

"Fight must be to knockout."

The Daily News captioned in this manner: "Britain tolerates no intervention."

"The Sketch says: 'No peacemakers need apply.'"

The Mail says: "Hands Off the War," and the Express, "Keep Out of the Ring."

LONDON REVIEW.
LONDON, To-day.
Turning against the Rumanians who had been advancing steadily in Eastern Transylvania, the Austro-Hungarian-German troops defeated the invaders decisively along a fifty-mile front north of Fogaris at the juncture of the Hommerod and Alt Rivers near Reps. The Rumanians are in retreat pursued by the Teutonic troops. The successful repulse of the invaders on the southern end of the line was in the hands of General Von Falkenhayn, former Chief of the German General Staff, who only last week routed the Rumanians around Hermandstadt and drove them back to their own frontier. North of Reps the Austro-Hungarian re-captured the position and took more than two hundred prisoners. Bucharest admits that the Rumanian troops in Eastern Transylvania have been withdrawn before attacks by superior forces in the region of Fogaris. In Dobruja the heavy fighting continues along the line south of Constanta-Bucharest railway with Bucharest recording progress for the Russians and Rumanians in the centre and on their left wing. While General Brusseloff's attacks have ceased at least for the moment his attacks on the Austro-German lines in Volhynia west of Lutsk, he continues southward his assaults with great intensity against the positions of the Teutonic Allies guarding the approaches to Lemberg, the capital of Galicia. Although the Russian attacks were held up northeast of Lemberg those to the southeast of the capital, according to Petrograd resulted in the taking of positions south of Brezeny and the capture of 600 prisoners. Berlin, however, declares that all Russian attacks in Galicia have been repulsed and that the Austro-Germans have taken 1,200 prisoners from the Russians. In Macedonia the armies of the Entente Allies continue their advance. The British troops which crossed the Struma northeast of Salonika have taken the town of Kevolven, which was evacuated by its defenders. South of Monastir in Serbia, violent fighting in the region of the Cerna River is reported by Paris. Artillery continues active on the Somme front in France, according to reports from the war offices of all the belligerents.

ANOTHER PEACE STORY.
NEW YORK, To-day.
The New York Evening Post to-day publishes a story saying it has learned from a trustworthy source that Ambassador James W. Gerard is now on his way back from Germany and will lay before President Wilson a request to the President to use his good offices in suing for peace with the Allies. Germany has definitely decided to apply to President Wilson. The article reads, "his good offices in suing for peace with the Allies." This was learned to-day from sources in a position to have absolutely trustworthy information on these matters. It is understood that Ambassador Gerard, who is on his way over here, will lay the Kaiser's request before President Wilson within a week. It is fact, however positively it may have been denied officially, that the possibility of President Wilson's acting as mediator has been discussed by German officials with Ambassador Gerard. It is, therefore, by no means surprising that the reports now take definite shape in connection with Gerard's trip to this country. Ambassador Gerard is on board the steamer Frederick 8th, due in New York about Tuesday next.

BERLIN ADMITS BRITISH SUCCESS.
BERLIN, To-day.
A War Office report to-day concedes that successes had been achieved by the British forces which crossed the Struma River. The statement says the Bulgarians evacuated remote villages on the east bank of the river.

THE STRATHAY SUNK.
PARIS, To-day.
According to the commanding officer of a French torpedo boat, the British steamer Strathay was sunk on September 2nd while on her way from Newport News to Glasgow, and was destroyed by a submarine. American citizens are said to have been aboard the Strathay. The evidence given by all the men aboard the Strathay and evidence given by all the men of the torpedo boat, is to the effect that a submarine fired eight shells at the Strathay in ten minutes and then sank her with a torpedo, after giving the crew fifteen minutes to abandon the vessel. It is said the torpedo boat put the submarine to flight and rescued the crew.

NO CONSCRIPTION BUT REGISTRATION.
OTTAWA, To-day.
There will be no conscription in Canada, but a system of registration to distinguish slackers from workers will be adopted by the Government, according to the Hon. Robert Rodgers, Acting Prime Minister, in a reply to the Executive Council of the Dominion Trades Labor Congress, which waited upon him to-day and presented resolutions passed by the recent Congress at Toronto.

ROUMANIANS DEFEATED.
BERLIN, To-day.
Rumanian forces in Transylvania have been defeated by the troops of General Von Falkenhayn and driven back over the Alt River, the War Office announced to-day. At other points along the Transylvania front the Rumanians have been forced to retire. The statement says that Austrian and German troops pressed back the Rumanians over the Hommerod River and drove them from positions southwest of Libanfalva, the Rumanians retreating through the Gelter Forest and being pursued. The statement says General Von Falkenhayn captured 29 field guns and 137 machine guns. Of the Rumanian forces which crossed the Danube south of Bucharest to invade Bulgaria only a portion succeeded. The statement says the remaining troops fled to the eastward and were defeated.

IRELAND AND CONSCRIPTION.
WATERFORD, Ireland, To-day.
In a notable address to his constituents here this afternoon John Redmond, Irish Nationalist leader in Parliament, declared that despite the recent rebellion with all its inevitable aftermath of brutalities, stupidities and inflamed passions, Home Rule for Ireland is safe if Ireland remains sane. Redmond also declared that conscription could never be forced upon Ireland, adding, "I cannot bring myself to believe that though malign influences are at work the Government will be insane enough to challenge a conflict with Ireland on this subject. Conscription for Ireland, so far from helping the army and the war would be the most fatal thing that could happen. It would be resisted in every village in Ireland. Its attempted enforcement would be a scandal which would ring around the world. It would produce no additional men."

ROUMANIAN OFFICIAL.
BUCHAREST, To-day.
Rumanian troops have withdrawn from their positions in the region of Fogaris in Transylvania before attacks by superior forces, says an official statement issued by the War Office to-day. Violent engagements continue in other sections of Transylvania. On the northern front there have been violent engagements in the Upper Lirneva and Tima Valleys. The enemy having attacked with superior forces in the region of Fogaris, says Viradin, our troops have been withdrawn somewhat in the Cassel delfie and in the Jial Valley the engagements continue.

cent statement by Premier Hammar-skjold of Sweden concerning Britain's arbitrary limiting of imports into Sweden. Lord Robert said that Britain has always been and is now ready to enter into fresh engagements for a trade agreement with Sweden, in which case allowances will be made for all Sweden's requirements which he admitted are greater now than before, owing to the development of her industries. The Minister of War declared incidentally that the British blacklist violates no rule or law of equality.

HEAVY ARTILLERY IN THE WEST.
LONDON, To-day.
An official this p.m. says there was heavy shelling to-day on most parts of our front. South of the more enemy working parties were successfully dealt with by our artillery. Elsewhere there is nothing reported.

DENY REPORT OF PEACE OVER-TURES.
WASHINGTON, To-day.
If Ambassador Gerard is returning to the States on any mission other than to spend a belated vacation, the officials of the State Department disclaim any knowledge of it. The statement has been authorized that no preparations for the discussion of peace through diplomatic channels has been made, and that the information spread here seems to indicate that such a move would be inadvisable as well as futile. There have been various reports of plans of President Wilson to deal with the matter directly instead of through the State Department. The officials of the German Embassy received the story with the emphatic statement that they know beyond doubt that it was not true.

Mr Asquith's Son.
(From the Westminster Gazette).
The whole country will feel for the Prime Minister in the blow which has fallen on him as on so many other parents in this war. Mr. Raymond Asquith was a man of high intellectual distinction, and he stood on the threshold of what his friends were confident would be a brilliant political career. He was thirty-eight years of age, a married man, and in a position in which he might, without criticism, have obtained exemption from military service or done service of a kind which did not expose him to serious risk. Without a moment's hesitation he chose the more honorable and the more dangerous part, and after some months in the firing line deliberately returned to it, in preference to the Staff appointment which was at his disposal. This is a fine example, of which his father may well be proud. Mr. Raymond Asquith's name goes to the long roll of greatly gifted young men who have proved to us that high intellectual attainments may be combined with manly virtue and steadfastness unto death in the cause of their country. We are the poorer for their loss, the richer for their example.

His Song was Silenced.
(From the Canadian Gazette).
The following little story of the front reaches is contained in a letter from a British soldier serving in France:
"The Saxons used to have a chap with them named Paul, who had a lovely voice, and used to sing all the latest songs. He was easily heard in our front trenches, and his songs were enjoyed by our fellows as well as the Germans. One day when things were quiet there was no singing, and one of our men called out to the Germans, 'Tell Paul to sing.' Back came the answer preceded by a string of vulgar German curses: 'You chuted Paul yesterday.'"

Too Much of A Good Thing.
(From the Navy League Journal).
The navy's newest recruit was hauled before the commandant of the ship on a charge of insubordination. The petty officer explained that the man had resisted when they took him to the swimming baths for the first lesson in the art of nautical navigation.
"What have you got to say for yourself?" asked the commandant.
"Well, sir, it's like this 'ere. I've only bin in the navy three days. The first day the doctor drewed six o' me teeth out, the second day I was 'coulted' and this mornin' the petty officer comes along to me an' he says: 'Come on, you pup, we're a-goin' ter drown yer.'"

Keeping up with the crowd in a small town is just as difficult as it is in a larger one, for in each case the crowd is split up into minute crows, ranging from champagne suppers to the peanut sandwich spread. The trouble is that few people are satisfied with the crowd nature and their income designed them for, but are eternally trying to move up a step or two and get into the wire-wheeled limousine class. Many a wife has tried to climb into this class and drag her husband with her, but before they were half way up their progress was impeded by the muffled accents of a foreclosure sale.
On the other hand, thousands of people who were born with nothing but a set of plain features and a few

KEEPING UP WITH THE CROWD.
Keeping up with the crowd is an attempt to stretch a $2,000 income over a $5,000 expense account.
One of the best tests of pluck and endurance a young married couple can have is to mingle in a crowd of plutocratic companions without wanting to pawn all the wedding presents in order to keep up. The greatest treasure on earth is a wife who has social ambitions, but who does not find it necessary to dress like a style show model in order to get invited out. High society recognizes money, who do not buy until they can see where the money for an extra tire on the rim was coming from.
One of the first things a young married man encounters is a stern refusal on the part of his weekly salary to lap around the monthly bills and have anything left for gasoline. This is because anybody who has muscular strength enough to sign a relay of pink promissory notes can own an automobile and throw dust in the eyes of neighbors layers of horse sense are living in a state of unbroken peace without a solitary top hat or evening gown. As a rule, it will be found that these people can borrow money at the bank without having their collateral pawed over by the board of directors. When a man is unhappy because he is not leading the procession in a twin-six which will not be paid for until Mexico is pacified, it shows that the inside of his head needs upholstering with some different material.

It is all right to keep up with the crowd when you don't have to borrow short money in order to get by.

That Sunday Feeling.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

We were sitting on the verandah in the twilight one Sunday evening not long ago. Inside the house some one was softly touching the keys of the piano.

The music paused for a moment and one of the group, a young woman who had recently been married, said thoughtfully, "Now, I know I am really happily married."

"Why?" we asked.

"Because I can sit here in the twilight listening to music and not feel sad, and on Sunday, too. Why, there used to be a time when just that Sunday feeling itself made me depressed and unhappy."

"That Sunday feeling!" Doesn't the phrase arouse an echo of understanding in your heart?

Those Long, Tedious Afternoons of Childhood.

It brings back to me long, tedious Sunday afternoons in my childhood, when toys were put away, and too much time and too little to do made a deadly and wearisome combination.

It brings me pictures of streets with people in their Sunday best parading up and down them, and myself obsessed by a strange distaste for my kind.

There is a saying that we Americans keep Sunday, while the Continentals spend it. There is some meat in that just.

I Would Not For Worlds Advocate Laziness.

I know the good people who think our observance of Sunday is altogether er too lax already will lift up their hands in horror at this.

One moment: I would not think that these things are incompatible with happiness and normal living.

My ideal Sunday is this—attendance in any church where you can best get the feeling of peace and worship; after that outdoors and sunshine (especially if you are shut up in an office on week-days), and communion with congenial friends and music.

Music Gives Us the Want-To-Be-Good Feeling.

Beautiful music is the essence of the true Sunday spirit.

One Sunday afternoon stands out from all the rest in my childhood. I spent it with a family who had advanced ideas. For the first few hours, children and grown-ups joined in a wonderful game of hide and seek all over the big yard and in the barn. Then, the whole family gathered in the big living room and we had an hour of music. We listened to classical music, sang hymns and some of the best of the old folk songs.

I went home, tired, sleepy and happy, and full of that longing for something better and more beautiful in my life that music always gives.

Was that a well-spent Sunday, or not?

What Are You Doing for that Eczema?

"Nothing; I've about given up trying to cure it."

"That is not wise. Do as I did and you will probably be cured in a short time. I used Zylex and Zylex Soap with it and my Eczema began to improve at once. A couple of boxes cured. You can get Zylex at your druggists."

Roumania--The Hun's Last S

Showing How the Hun's Last S

Ally Will Cut Six Months Duration of the War.

(By a Military Expert)

In the fortnight that has been at war we have seen a possible proof of the Hun's plan and their dupes, who have taken the cordon round the beleaguered fortress, and the iron ring of enemy guns.

The British Fleet has been from the North Sea and the Black Sea, and the legation between these seas is being gained by the French, British and Russian Armies, extending from the Sea to the Swiss mountains; the Russian Army, deployed in the frontier to within a few miles of Trieste, and again in the Balkans; the French, British, Serbian and Russian Armies at the north of Bulgaria, and the Roumania Army at the north of Hungary. From the Baltic the siege is being made by the Russian Army.

Before Roumania was in had the great advantage of her eastern flank, and the Russian Army, thus requiring a Roumania--The Huns' Last Straw.

Showing How the Help of Our Latest Ally Will Cut Six Months Off the Duration of the War.

(By a Military Expert.)

In the fortnight that Roumania has been at war we have been given tangible proof of the completeness of the cordon round the Central Empires and their dupes, who, like a beleaguered fortress, are enclosed in an iron ring of enemy lines.

The British Fleet closes the outlet from the North Sea; the Allied Fleets from the Black Sea and the Adriatic. Between these seas the siege is maintained by the French, British and Belgian Armies, extended from the North Sea to the Swiss mountains; the Italian Army, deployed from the Swiss frontier to within fourteen miles of Trieste, and again at Valona, in Albania; the French, British, Serb, Italian and Russian Army at Salonica; and the Roumania Army stretched to the north of Bulgaria and the east of Hungary. From Roumania to the Baltic the siege is completed by the Russian Army.

Before Roumania came in, Austria had the great advantage of resting her eastern flank on a neutral frontier, thus requiring only a thin protective screen of troops; this flank has now been left in the air, and has had to be defended with the same strength as any part of the Austrian front.

We see at once the enormous gain that, in the event of Roumania's coming to the Allies if we remember that one of the main purposes of the strategy of the Entente Powers is to compel the enemy, with his dwindling manhood resources, ever to fight in lengthening lines.

Every advance of the Russians means so many more miles of front for the Austro-Germans to defend. The entry of Roumania into the war means that, hard pressed as the enemy already is on the eastern and Salonica fronts, she must still find troops to line the western and southern frontiers of the Latin kingdom, for which there are available in opposition at least twenty divisions, with almost as many more reserves.

A Menace to Hungary.

With Roumania acting with the hostile combination against the Central Empires they are called upon to use up still more of their reserves, which otherwise would go to strengthen parts of their front against which the Allied pressure is the greatest.

Hungary, the stronger element in the Empire of Franz Joseph, is directly threatened by the linking up of the Russian and Roumanian forces; and Hungary, besides providing the toughest troops on the side of the Dual Kingdom, is the great granary of Germany's ally. Let any considerable portion of Hungary be overrun and, quite apart from the purely military consequences, the effects must be most disastrous. With no grain coming from Roumania, and the Hungarian supply partly destroyed, it is hard to see how the Austrian Empire can avoid starvation, particularly as supplies from Bulgaria and Turkey are likely to be cut off.

The intervention of Roumania has brought the downfall of Austria-Hungary, in the military as well as in the economic sense, six months nearer; it has assured the chastisement of Bulgaria, and ultimately the isolation of European Turkey from Asiatic Turkey.

The importance of having Roumania on the side of the Allies lies not so much in the addition of the 750,000 troops that she brings to the Entente forces as in her geographical situation. Through Roumania lies the surest road into the heart of Hungary; Roumania is a pistol levelled at the very vitals of Magyar resistance. From Roumania it is eighty miles to Sofia, which is on the railway connecting the Central Empires with Constantinople.

The fortnight that has elapsed since the Austrian and the Roumanian advanced guards exchanged shots on the Transylvania frontier has made it clear that the Roumanian factor appreciably lessens the duration of the war. Her Army, positioned as it is, implies a gain of six months towards the victory of the Allies. It without her help we could imagine the war lasting eighteen months, then with her help we can confidently reckon on the war not lasting more than a year. From whatever estimate we had formed of the duration of the war before Roumania came in, we have a right to deduct six months.

How Will It End?

Six weeks ago, apparently, well-informed people when discussing the chances of intervention on the part of Roumania made bold enough to say that from the day she came in the war would not last longer than eight months, their assumption being that Roumania would not risk a longer war. This may be an unreasonably optimistic view to take, but this much is true—that so cautious a statesman as M. Bratiano, the Roumanian Prime Minister, would hardly have advised action on the part of his country a fortnight ago, had he not believed in a reasonably short period victory would crown the Allied arms.

The intervention of Roumania has been a sign not only that in the opinion of the shrewder statesmen in the Balkans the hope of victory had definitely passed to the side of the Entente Powers, but that this hope of victory promised to be realised in the period that a country like Roumania could afford to sustain hostilities.

Very rightly the neutral world, which has come slowly to the conclusion that it is impossible for the Central Empires to stave off defeat, has argued that Roumania's intervention points to the hour of defeat for the apostles of "frightfulness," being nearer at hand than was imagined, although no one denies that a tremendous task will face the Allies.

In a war like the present conflict, that is so full of surprises, prophecy is always dangerous; but if one cared to speculate, one would say the entry of Roumania on the side of the Allies envisages the war ending in the following fashion: First, the breaking of the link between the Central Empires and Bulgaria and Turkey; then the downfall or paralysis of the two subordinate allies, followed by the overthrowing of Hungary and the complete defeat of the Austrian Empire; and, finally, the isolation and invasion—and final humiliation—of Germany.

Germany's Heavy Losses

Westminster Gazette: From the latest German casualty list it looks as if the powers that be in that country had determined to give the people a rather large measure of the truth. The figures which are given for August are not those of that month. The lists in Germany are generally six weeks to two months late. These totals, then, represent the closing period of the big German efforts at Verdun, and the opening of the Somme offensive. They give a total of 240,957 for a month, of whom over 42,000 are dead and 42,000 are missing. The Kaiser, in one of his utterances before the war, contemplated such a war as might involve Germany in the loss of a million men. The total of killed alone approaches close to that figure, even by German admission, for those figures, it must be remembered, are not ours, but those given to the German people.

THE THOUGHTS OF THEOBALD.

THE DAWN.
The public servant has waited long and patiently for a proper recognition, and in the appointment, though only an acting one, of Mr. LeMessurier to the head of the Postal-Telegraph Service, the faint glimmerings of the day of emancipation are seen, and in the address presented to him by the Postal officials, the hope is there that the appointment may be a permanent one.

So often has political pull been allowed to triumph over merit and long service in all departments of the Government, that the address seemed to me to be a thankful outburst that at last experience and faithful service have come into their own. The Postal Service has always provided a place for political friends who have come in and been put over the long-service men, and who have had to learn the routine of the work from their inferiors. Against this the Postmaster-General has been powerless. The matter of suitable appointments, which should have been his affair, was always arranged from the Executive Chamber, and it was almost useless for him to protest. The service undoubtedly suffers from this, and it is proven from the recommendation made by the Canadian expert in Postal matters who inspected the Department a few years ago, that the service would be more efficient if several employees were provided with jobs elsewhere. The Government were not brave enough to do this and risk the anger of political friends, and so it remains. And while absolute strangers to the work are given positions over those whose experience entitles them to these positions, efficiency cannot be the watchword of the Postal-Telegraph Service. In no other department of the Public Service does there need to be such regularity, such clock-work accuracy, and anything that disturbs this regularity should never be allowed. Just take a simple instance. If I post a letter in the morning, I expect that that letter will be delivered to the address in the afternoon. But it is not always so. If the addressee has, or is connected with a concern that has a letter-box, the letter may be put in that box and remain there undelivered till the next time the box is cleared. Town deliveries should be distinct from foreign mails, especially when the latter arrive with such irregularity.

Sir Robert Bond's manifesto promised, I think, that the office of Postmaster-General should be made a Departmental one, carrying with it a seat in the Executive. This certainly would improve matters, as the Head of the Department would surely fight against political expediency impairing the efficiency of the Postal Service. If this were done, Mr. LeMessurier would become the permanent deputy-head, and first official of the service. This is not likely to happen under the present Government if we are to believe the rumours of the hopes of at least two prominent members of that body.

AN INSTANCE.

I know of one instance, the record of one official, the recital of whose adventures in the Postal Service would make entertaining reading were it not for the injustice which stalks ever through the story. The smallness of the Government's reasoning is astonishing, as for instance, the reply of the then Colonial Secretary that it could not be better for the official while one of his relatives had so much to say about politics! As if any one was responsible for the actions of his relatives!
Another instance of irregularity, if not slackness, is seen in the recent case in which a girl took a mail bag at one of the stations on the line. I understand that the bag was thrown off the train with some others opposite the post office building, the mailman coming back when the train had stopped to put the bags in the post office. Whether the bags were counted then or not, the fact remains that not till the mail matter was found missing, was the bag found to be gone. The girl had evidently found the bag and taken it. Now surely we want our mails to be taken care of better than that. We should be able to have the fullest confidence in the proper carriage of our mails.

WHO DID IT?

Some weeks before the recent Ward referendum I pointed out that the cost of the election lay at the door of the Civic Commission, as it certainly does. The importance of the subject is manifest by Mayor Gosling's desire for a separate election, and is surely the warrant of the Citizens'

Committee in bringing the question up. However, the truth of the matter is this, that the apparent indifference shown in the small vote was really a premeditated indifference, but it serves no good purpose at present to go into the matter. He who runs may read.

MISSING.

How weary it must be to wake each morning hoping for news, and to go to bed still unsatisfied, hoping for something on the morrow. The problem of our missing lads is the greatest and saddest burden the mothers and fathers have to bear now. Hope has been deferred so long that the heart has almost become sick, but "no news is good news" and there is still room for hope that many of our "missing" will yet be found, and alive.

To the number of "missing" is now added the crew of the motor boat "H. V. Morris" who, pursuing a peaceful voyage to St. John's from Trinity two weeks ago to-day, have unaccountably disappeared. Mr. Orlando Morris, son of the venerable Joseph Morris, and prominent in church and commercial life in Trinity, was the skipper. He is married and has two children. The boat is named after his three-year-old son, Harry Victor. His brother, Stephen Morris, was killed "Somewhere in France" just two months ago, which makes the anxiety greater to his father and mother. On board also were Robert Guy whose family consists of his wife and four children; Ephraim Hiscock, whose wife and five little children anxiously await tidings; Adam Lucas, who was married but last winter and was on his first visit to St. John's; James Locke, a young lad who shipped as cook; and Edmund Charles Hiscock, a boy of 14 who was coming to St. John's to see his maternal grandmother, Mrs. Moore. Mrs. Moore has already passed through the fire of sorrow as she lost her husband and two sons in the Trinity Bay disaster of 1892. How can we love the sea and the wind when they can be so cruel!

The gloom of anxiety has rested over Trinity for two weeks, but still there are hopeful ones who believe that "there is always Hope from the ocean," and indeed on several occasions have vessels and crews returned after many days and many months. The storm of two weeks ago might have taken the vessel out to sea and in the track of some sailing vessel or steamer. May it be so, and may we hear shortly that all are safe and well.

Luck in a Mistake.

When the Famous Singer Albani First Went to London.

The curious story of Mme. Albani's first London engagement is as follows: Colonel Mapleson heard of her singing at a theatre at Malta, and, thinking that she would be successful, he made her an offer through an agent of a contract to sing in Her Majesty's Theatre. She agreed to it and went to London, but on arriving there she told the cabman to drive her to the Italian opera house.

He, instead of going to Her Majesty's, took her to Covent Garden, which was also devoted to Italian opera. She was shown to the manager's office, and stated that she had come to sign the contract which Mr. Mapleson had offered her.

Mr. Gye, thinking to play a joke on his rival, Mapleson, made out a contract, and Albani signed it. Mr. Gye then told her that he was not Colonel Mapleson, but that he could do much better for her. He offered to tear up the contract if she liked, but told her that Nilsson was singing at Her Majesty's and would brook no rival.

Albani decided to let the contract stand and thus became one of the stars of Covent Garden, eventually marrying the son of Mr. Gye's Westminister Gazette.

NORWEGIAN STEAMERS.—We are informed that the Norwegian steamers Jacobsen and Njord will not prosecute the seal-fishery next spring, as had been stated previously.

THUNDER AND LIGHTNING.—This morning early heavy rain showers, accompanied by thunder and lightning, raged in the city, but only lasted a short while.

The War Week by Week.

By OBSERVER.

A week strangely devoid of any of the large developments to which we have become accustomed allows us leisure to examine the merits of the position of each of the fronts, instead of chronicling achievements. For it is likely that the coming weeks will see events on every side each one of which would deserve elaborate treatment. Since our last review there has been little to report from any theatre except Macedonia, which, as it is also the most interesting for the present, has a double claim to be considered first.

There can now be no doubt that General Sarrail at last means business. He has a fine army at his command and the assistance indirectly of Russia and Roumania, but the task that lies before him is arduous and may prove tedious. The Bulgarians oppose him in great force and they have had ample time to reinforce with all the aids of modern engineering skill and strong natural defiles that the mountainous terrain affords them. Nevertheless, they are being driven back and their hold is loosened. The chief honours to date rest with the Serbians and British, before Monastir and on the Struma respectively.

The Allied front is not continuous. The Italians in Albania are isolated from the rest, and are for the present a sort of flying left wing. The wing proper is where the Serbians are fighting stubbornly and with success for Monastir. They have reentered their own country and the capture of Kenali is a big and important step towards that of Monastir, which is the pivot of the Bulgarian right, and in a sense of their whole line. If it falls to the Serbians they ought to be able to turn the enemy's flanks in such fashion that an advance by the French on the Dobran front, eastward of this era, would be practicable. At present they are making no attempt at this, evidently because the Bulgarians, knowing the importance of the Vardar valley, have guarded it too strongly. The British, however, still further to the East, have crossed the Struma and appear to be driving the Bulgarians before them. Nevolin, which they have taken, is near Serec and south of Demirhisar. With the exception of the Serbian offensive, the operations in Macedonia have hitherto been merely in the nature of tentative advances to feel out the enemy's strength, but the serious work seems now to have begun. The British will probably turn north along the valley of the Struma, and we may expect the French shortly to strike up along that of the Vardar in concert. In fact, the whole front may soon be in movement, necessitating a concentration by the Bulgarians that is greater than they can afford. A big victory anywhere on this front for the Allies will have great effect, for the Bulgarians must undoubtedly be relying upon the great strength of their first line, which taken, they would be unable to stem the avalanche that would pour through the breach.

There is a certain amount of mystery about the situation of Roumania. Her accession to the Allies' cause, bringing nearly a million fresh troops and at least two new battlefronts, has not yet shown anything like the effect it might have been expected to have, for the reason that the Germans have thrown great reinforcements into this area. More than that, they sent an expedition in great force into Dobruja, led by the redoubtable Von Mackensen, which at one time seemed to hold out a serious threat to Bucharest. But the Roumanians have the situation well in hand. Falling back to the first practicable line of defence and reinforced by the Russians, they held the invaders and seem now to be holding them in a temporary deadlock. Undoubtedly a great Russian army is scheduled to advance upon Bulgaria from this very region, and when it does we shall see Mackensen's army retire precipitately. Meanwhile, the Roumanians have gone back and forth, what they evidently consider the major operations, in Transylvania. Here and there we hear of their being forced back, but they have established a line that the Austrians are compelled to hold with full force. An instance of the Roumanian fighting powers was seen upon Lemberg, though Berlin counter-claims their repulse in the direction of Brody. The truth of the whole situation appears to be that Hindenburg has effected a considerable transference of men from West to East, and the Russians are making much greater resistance than formerly. But we shall see this in a short time react upon the West front, to which, if the Allies continue their advance much further, Hindenburg will be compelled to recall very many troops. This is the working out of the Allies' grand strategy, in the light of which they can afford to ignore a few local setbacks.

For the moment, then, the West front is, strangely enough, the most mobile and the key to the whole situation. The French are obviously preparing for the reduction of Peronne and the British aim at Bapaume. At either place success would have a great and instantaneous effect which would be certain to spread to all the Eastern fronts through the redistribution of men made necessary to the Central Empires. It is to be noted, incidentally, that there has been a good deal of activity of late near Arras. If the Somme drive progresses much more, an advance from Arras, the northern end of the great salient, might be quite practicable.

Finally, the resumption of the Russian offensive in Armenia is important. It may well mark the initiation of the great twofold drive upon Constantinople, and apart from that will have its effect in keeping an increasing number of Turks busy. As events succeed one another, the grand plan of the Allies unfolds itself, but the world is yet a good deal in the dark as to its exact nature and scope.

SUCCESS BACK.—The schr. Success, 43 days from Bahia, reached port this morning in ballast to J. R. Baird, Ltd.

BOWRING'S SHIPS.—The S.S. Portia left Grand Bank at 7.40 a.m. to-day, due to-morrow night. The S.S. Prospero left King's Cove early this morning, going north.

COMING NUPTIALS.—The marriage of Mr. Joseph Courtenay, barber, and Miss Hilda, daughter of Sergt. N. Neary, of the Central Fire-Hill, takes place on Monday afternoon at the Chapel of Our Lady of Good Counsel.

ASSAULT CASES.—The attention of the Magistrate's Court was occupied all this forenoon in the hearing of a series of assault cases. One of them was preferred against a young man who took certain liberties with a young woman whom he never saw before. His Honor, Judge Morris, held that whilst a formal introduction was not absolutely necessary, the conduct of the defendant did not tend to stimulate the moral uplifting of the city and a fine of $5 or 14 days was imposed.

Highest Flour Price Since Civil War.

Chicago, Sept. 29.—The price of flour was advanced twenty cents a barrel to-day, to the highest level since the civil war. Standard Minnesota patents sold for $9.10 a barrel, an increase of $3 from a year ago. The cheaper grades of flour sold to the bakers' trade also was advanced 10 and 15 cents a barrel. Grades which yesterday sold for $3.50 brought $3.80 and $3.65 to-day.

Newfoundland's Gift to Ayr.

Fine Caribou Head Presented to the Burgh as a Memento.
6th October, 1916.

Dear Sir,
I beg to enclose herewith a copy of correspondence which has taken place between His Excellency the Governor and the Provost of Ayr, Scotland. As the matter referred to is one of interest to the general public, I shall be glad if you will publish the correspondence in the columns of your paper.

Yours faithfully,
J. R. BENNETT,
Colonial Secretary.
The Editor
Evening Telegraph.

Government House,
St. John's, Nfld.,
17 August, 1916.

Dear Mr. Provost,
My Ministers, acting on behalf of the Government and the Citizens of the Colony of Newfoundland, desire me to convey through the good offices of Lieut.-Colonel Whitaker Commanding the 2nd Battalion (Reserve) of the First Newfoundland Regiment, to the Provost and Council of the Royal Burgh of Ayr the expression of the gratitude of the Colony for the many courtesies rendered to the Officers, Non-commissioned Officers and Men of the First Newfoundland Regiment, during the time when these troops have been quartered at Ayr.

As a memento of the good relations which have subsisted between the Burghesses and the Regiment, the Minister of Agriculture and Mines (the Hon. S. D. Blandford), acting on behalf of the Government, has secured and mounted a Caribou Head, the most typical trophy of Sport in Newfoundland.

This Head, judged by the spread and weight of the antlers and the number of points on the tines, is an exceptionally fine specimen of the Caribou, trophies of such proportions being extremely rare.

My Ministers express the hope that you, Mr. Provost, may be able to find space for this Gift from the Loyal and Ancient Colony in the Burgh Hall, as a souvenir of the gratitude of all Newfoundlanders for the kindness rendered to their fighting men by the Royal Burgh of Ayr.

I have the honour to be,
Dear Mr. Provost,
Your most obedient servant,
(Sgd.) W. E. DAVIDSON,
Governor.

His Worship
The Provost
of the Royal Burgh of Ayr, Scotland.

Town Clerk's Office, Ayr,
12 September, 1916.

Dear Sir Walter,
Provost Mitchell of this Burgh duly received your letter of the 17th ultimo and it was read at the monthly meeting of the Town Council on 11th inst.

On the motion of the Provost, seconded by Belle Murray, the meeting unanimously agreed to accept the gift of the Caribou's head, and I was instructed to write you expressing the thanks of the Corporation for the gift, not only for its intrinsic value, but as a symbol of the kindly feeling existing between the people of Newfoundland and the people of Ayr who have been brought into close personal touch with each other through the many sons which Newfoundland has sent to fight for the British Empire in the present war, and who have lived in the Ayr, the headquarters of the Newfoundland Regiment in the British Isles.

The Caribou's head is meantime being exhibited to the public in a prominent window in the Town Building near the centre of the town, and the Council will thereafter, in accordance with the desire expressed in your letter, find a permanent place for it within the Town Council buildings.

I have, &c.,
(Sgd.) F. A. THOMSON,
Town Clerk.

His Excellency,
Sir W. E. Davidson, K.C.M.G.,
Governor of Newfoundland.

BOW GRACEFULLY TO GRAY HAIRS.

When the first gray hairs appear it is a shock to most women. They feel that youth has suddenly been left behind, and that they have passed into another world. The world of old age, and ugliness.

They determine to hide these gray hairs, either by a dye or possibly they will invest in artificial hair to cover all the offending gray locks.

This works all very well for a time but the aftermath is bound to come. It doesn't take a very close observer to notice that the edges of the ears are soiled by the dye from the hair, or that even the whiteness of the neck is streaked.

Many women resort to a bleach and so on the hair near the roots is several shades darker than the balance of the hair. This means constant touching up at the roots, which soon results in brittle, dry, broken hair. Soon the hair looks dull and lifeless and the owner would gladly give half she is worth if her hair could be at once transformed to its original color and condition.

Better by far to bow gracefully to the inevitable than resort to methods which deceive no one by their artificial mockery.

Disgraceful Scene Last Night.

HARSH CONDUCT OF POLICE WHO WERE ATTACKED BY MOB.

Editor Evening Telegraph.
Dear Sir,—"Man's inhumanity to man, etc.," was strikingly demonstrated on Deerporth Street last night, when one of the more disgraceful scenes witnessed in the East End for some time was enacted, caused by three policemen who were arresting an inebriate. With your permission, Mr. Editor, I shall refer briefly to what actually happened.

About eight o'clock the proprietor of a hop beer shop called on two policemen to eject an unfortunate young man who became hysterical from drinking the beer. He resisted being placed under arrest and was handcuffed behind, no attempt being made to handcuff him in front. The prisoner was being marched off to the lockup and had gone about twenty-five yards when he resented going further and lay down. Lying on the ground helpless, as he had both hands pinned behind his neck, the unfortunate prisoner, who was possessed of big physique and a tower of strength, was badly served by his escorts. Hundreds of citizens gathered around. Some wanted to mob the two worthies who were kept back by friends. A cab and another policeman then reached the scene, which, to say the least of it, became riotous. The four constables were unable to get the handcuffed inebriate into the cab and matters were getting worse when suddenly there was an outburst of anger amongst the crowd. The police were attempting to choke the prisoner as they pressed their fingers firmly on his throat and in this way got him into the cab. Even then the "frightfulness" didn't cease, for as the helpless prisoner continued to resist he received several blows, one of which, I can substantiate, was not the work of human flesh. The mob became obstreperous, shouted "cowards, Germans," etc., and unlawfully started to attack the police. The cab with its occupants was nearly capsized, when the policeman, who kicked the prisoner, did similarly to one of the crowd. This system of "frightfulness" so characteristic of the Huns, should not be tolerated in this, Britain's oldest Colony. Incidentally I may mention that the three policemen in question enlisted in the police force since the outbreak of the war, whilst the man they arrested offered his services to fight the Germans but was rejected, and he has a brother who is a Gallipoli veteran and is still at the front in France.

Thanking you for space, Mr. Editor, I remain,
Yours respectfully,
OBSERVER.

[We publish "Observer's" letter, as he appears to have been an eyewitness. But we might point out that from his own account, the prisoner was resisting arrest, in which case the police were justified in using force. If the onlookers did not approve the force used, it was their duty to assist the police, so that violence should not be necessary. To have obstructed them instead was an offence, for which the offenders should be arrested.—Ed.]

Don't Neglect Your Cough.

A little cold may not seem a dangerous thing—you may feel inclined to let it go on hoping that to-morrow it will be better—but be sure to take chances? Just as the little insignificant acorn grows if left alone, to the mighty giant oak, that cough if not stopped at once grows to a very serious illness. When a Cough starts there's no telling where it will end. You know no doubt of cases right among people you have known, where serious complications and fatal illness have had their start from a neglected cough or cold. "Don't neglect your cough." Stafford's Phorone Cough and Cold Cure is what you should take. For sale at Stafford's Drug Store, Theatre Hill, and Stafford's Pharmacy, Duckworth Street. Price 25c., postage 5c. extra. No trouble to take this cough remedy.

EVER-LAS-TIC—because it lasts; there's no rubber in it. Rubber rots, you know that.
READY—because each roll contains enough nails and cement to finish the job.
ROOFING—because it's made to withstand sun, rain and wind.

PARTICULARS:
Each roll contains 108 square feet; one roll will cover 10 square yards. Multiply the length of your roof by its width, divide by 100 and the answer will be the number of rolls required to cover your roof.
