MEMORANDUM.

The hands of ordinary striking clocks should not be moved backwards; the change of time should be made by putting forward the hands eleven hours, and allowing the clock to strike fully at each hour, half hour, and quarter hour, as the case may be. The hands should not be moved while the clock is striking. An alternative method, in the case of pendulum clocks, is to stop the pendulum for an hour.

CHAPTER X.

Perhaps he ought to warn her that the path to the stage is a flinty one, and that the stage itself, when you get there, is not exactly a paradise. On the other hand—well, there was something about the girl that made him hesitate.

"It's a tremendously hard life," he said—"a good many blanks and precious few prizes. Don't know much about it myself, but I've heard that, unless you're at the top of the tree, it's not all beer and skittles."

"I'm not afraid of hard work. I know all you've said; I've read about the struggles, and the hardships, and the rest of it. But—oh, I'd be ready to go through anything, for I know that I should succeed."

"Jack tilted his hat on one side and scratched his head; there was something in the girl's voice which lent assurance to her bold assertion.

"Well, I'm not so sure that you wouldn't," he said, reluctantly. She flashed a grateful glance at him from the violet eyes, and Jack made haste to add, "But my opinion's worth nothing—nothing at all. Anyhow, I can see it's no use my trying to set you against the idea; you have evidently got the stage-fever badly, and you'll have to get through it or—or go on with it. Look here! I don't know whether I'm doing right or making a silly ass of myself. But if you've set your heart on the thing, and your mother consents—"

"I'll tell her presently," said the girl in a low voice. "I won't yet, until I've studied a little more. I want to learn some more parts, and to be sure—quite sure—that I'm not making a mistake."

"I see," said Jack. "Well, I'll send you some books; books of plays, I mean. Now, you're not going to refuse?"

She had hesitated and the colour had risen to her face again, but suddenly she looked up and replied, in a low voice:

"No, I accept; it's—it's different from taking money. Thank you very much. When—when will you send them?"

"Directly I get back to town," said Jack, amused and yet touched by her eagerness. "I'll run into French's and choose a few for you."

At this moment, as the girl, with a mute gesture of gratitude, was turning away, the Chertson victoria, with Mrs. Feltham and Nora in it, came along the road. Jack raised his hat; Maud hurried on, but suddenly she stopped and, running back to him, said, with a little gasp:

"Mr. Chalfonte, you will not tell Miss Norton—anybody—especially Miss Norton? I don't want her—any one—to know. Will you promise me?"

"There's nothing to make a fuss about in my lending you a few plays," remarked Jack, with a smile.

"Promise me," she said, pleadingly, her hand upon his arm.

"I promise," he said. "Don't you worry yourself; no one shall know."

He went on his way, and the girl returned to the cottage. With her hand upon the gate she paused and looked back at the retreating figure; her eyes were shining, her lips were apart. There was something more than gratitude in the expression of her vivid face, and it was as well that Jack was not there to see it.

And if he had seen it, it is quite possible that Jack, who was a modest man, and no lady-killer, would not have appreciated or understood it; and certainly, if he had, he would not have guessed that this little friendly, benevolent action of his was to serve as the introduction into his life of a girl who was fated to turn his current into tortuous and perilous channels.

CHAPTER XI.

AT the moment the victoria had approached Jack and Maud Delman, and Nora had recognized him, she was conscious of some slight surprise; for it had been at the most eager of Maud's pleadings, and there was something that indicated a kind of familiarity in the attitude of the two figures—and the expression on her face; but Nora's surprise was swallowed up in her admiration of the girl's beauty.

"What an extremely pretty girl!" she said, under her breath, and Mrs. Feltham, putting up her lorgnette, assented almost as warmly; for both these women were generous and ready to admire beauty in their own sex.

"Yes, she is very pretty," she said; "that hair would have driven Titian mad; just look at it where the sun catches it."

"Who is she?" asked Nora, with frank interest. "Mr. Chalfonte seems to know her very well—I mean, she is without a hat and they are talking as if they were old friends."

"Oh, that's Jack's way," said Mrs. Feltham, with a laugh. "He always talks to every one, especially to a woman, as if he had known them all their lives. That's one of the things that makes Jack so dangerous. I mean," she went on quickly, "that persons who meet him for the first time are apt to jump to the conclusion that Jack has taken a great fancy to them, whereas it's only 'pretty Fanny's' way; he is very popular with men, but women and children and dogs go down before him at the first shot."

"You don't mean that Mr. Chalfonte is insane?" said Nora, her brows drawing together. "He does not strike me—"

"Jack! Insane!" laughed Mrs. Feltham. "My dear Nora, he is the most genuine thing on earth, and I don't know any man who would tell you the truth to your face with such absolute naïveté as Jack will; no, it's asked Nora.

"That is Bentham Abbey, the Ferraldes' place," said Mrs. Feltham.

"Ferraldes? Yes, I think I have heard Mr. Horton mention the name," said Nora. "Oh, yes; it was about a piece of land, a little wood, that Lord Ferraldes wanted to sell, and Mr. Horton thought I ought to buy. I meant to speak to Mr. Chalfonte this morning about it, but forgot." As she spoke, she was smitten by the strangeness of the fact that "she, Nora Norton, should be able to buy land.

"Ah, yes, I dare say," said Mrs. Feltham. "Poor Lord Ferraldes would Just because he can't help being pleasant and—

"I see," said Nora, still thoughtfully. "Do you know who the girl is?"

"Yes; her name's Delman—Mary, or Martha—no, Maud. She lives with her mother in one of those pretty but disgraceful old cottages—"

"I believe Mr. Chalfonte is going to pull them down," put in Nora.

"You mean you are, my dear," corrected Mrs. Feltham, with a smile.

"Same thing," answered Nora, absently.

"The Delmans are not natives; they came from London; the mother is a faded, rather reserved and reticent woman, who has come down in the world. I imagine she is the widow of a well-to-do tradesman of the smaller kind. The girl is of a higher type than the mother. You are wondering how I come to know all this, seeing that I've been here so short a time; but I've been down to the village several times, and I went into the cottages in search of a needlewoman.

Jack has no doubt been in to look at the condition of the cottages. Of course, he knows every man, woman, and dog in the place, and has made friends with them. Strangely enough, though that young man is anything but clever, people are apt to rely on him, we women especially."

"Yes," said Nora, as if the subject had ceased to interest her. She looked about her with eager curiosity as they drove through the village into the open country; it was difficult to realize that the luxurious carriage in which she was reclining, the pair of splendid bays, were hers, the aristocratic men in livery on the box were her servants; still more difficult to realize that the land which they were passing in such stately fashion belonged to her. She was silent, and Mrs. Feltham, with her quick sympathy, did not interrupt the girl's reverie. Presently they had left the Chalfonte lands, and came upon a lodge and a magnificent pair of wrought-iron entrance gates. Both the lodge and the gates were old, and much out of repair; the broad drive was ill-kept and grass-grown, and the avenue looked neglected.

"Do you know what place that is?" asked Nora.

"That is Bentham Abbey, the Ferraldes' place," said Mrs. Feltham.

"Ferraldes? Yes, I think I have heard Mr. Horton mention the name," said Nora. "Oh, yes; it was about a piece of land, a little wood, that Lord Ferraldes wanted to sell, and Mr. Horton thought I ought to buy. I meant to speak to Mr. Chalfonte this morning about it, but forgot." As she spoke, she was smitten by the strangeness of the fact that "she, Nora Norton, should be able to buy land.

"Ah, yes, I dare say," said Mrs. Feltham. "Poor Lord Ferraldes would be glad to sell all the land, if he could. I suppose this particular place is un-entailed. The Ferraldes are as poor as church mice, and there is very little left to them besides the Abbey there. It is a very beautiful place; I remember going there when I was quite a small child, in the old Earl's time."

"Lord Ferraldes is an earl?" said Nora. "I thought earls were always rich."

"Not necessarily, my dear," explained Mrs. Feltham; "some of them are terribly impecunious. Did you notice the condition of the lodge and the drive as we passed? I should think that the place required at least half-a-dozen gardeners, and I suppose that there is only one. And the Abbey itself, a big, dream of a place, is run by three or four servants."

"Is there a Lady Ferraldes?" asked Nora.

"No, Lord Ferraldes is not married; he lives there with his sister, Lady Blanche. She is an invalid, owing to an injury to her spine—a very beautiful girl. The brother and sister are devoted to each other, and the devotion is very strong on Blanche's side; she worships her brother. The peerage is an exceedingly old one, and Lord Ferraldes looks every inch an earl. I met him in London two or three years ago; he is exceedingly handsome, with dark hair and eyes, a Volsaque kind of face; a very silent and reserved man with a stately and somewhat melancholy manner."

"Did Mr. Chalfonte know them?" asked Nora, innocently.

Mrs. Feltham paused for just a second at this. She could scarcely inform Nora that a vast social gulf stretched between the Earl of Ferraldes and Mr. Chalfonte, the financier.

"I should think not," she replied. "They may have met. But the Ferraldes go out very little; and they certainly do not entertain in the ordinary acceptance of the word; for I do not think they could afford to do so."

"Why do they not let their beautiful place and live in a cottage, if they're so poor?" asked Nora, simply.

"It would be the sensible thing to do," said Mrs. Feltham; "but it's the kind of thing people of their position can't do; and indeed, I don't think they could do it for another reason. I know that they are both very proud of the Abbey and deeply attached to it; and I imagine that they would rather live there in—well, something like real poverty, than let it go into a small and strange place."

"I think that's rather fine," said Nora, musingly.

"Fine! Yes, but rather foolish," observed Mrs. Feltham.

"Why, that's a deer!" exclaimed Nora, with sudden eagerness, as a fallow deer ran across the road and sprang into the wood on their left.

"Yes, there are deer at the Abbey—always have been," said Mrs. Feltham. "It would be more sensible of the Ferraldes to keep cows, of course. But deer have been there ever since Henry VII's time, and I take it that Lord Ferraldes would as soon think of getting rid of them as of cutting down the trees."

"I think I understand," said Nora. "Poor man! I'm sorry for him. I think I will ask Mr. Chalfonte to buy that land."

Mrs. Feltham laughed sympathetically.

"You've a soft heart, my dear," she said simply. "It's to be hoped that Jack's head is of harder material, or you would soon be getting into trouble."

The carriage rolled on for another half-mile, when a small accident happened; the near horse stumbled, the coachman administered an admonitory touch, and the horse, starting forward, suddenly broke a trace. The footman jumped down, and was fumbling at it when a pony-carriage came round the bend of the road. The carriage was a simple affair, a kind of basket-chaise, very old, and drawn by a Shetland pony.

Germans Retire From the Coal Region—Albania in Full Retreat --- Enemy Everywhere in France Enter Roulers, 60 and 100 Guns Last

WAR REVIEW.

Lens, the heart of the great coal region in Northern France, and Arras, the second largest manufacturing centre, have been evacuated by the Germans. The German fortified positions between Cambrai and St. Quentin have been definitely smashed, and the Austro-Hungarians in Albania, forsaken by their former allies, the Bulgarians, are in full retreat northward toward their border from the North Sea to the Lake Ochrida. Of the reconquering of invaded Belgium and the progress of the French and Franco-American forces respectively north of Rheims and eastward in Champagne to the vicinity of Verdun, the tale remains the same—the Germans slowly but surely are being forced everywhere to give ground, and their vital defense daily continues to be eaten into, notwithstanding the strong resistance that the enemy is imposing to make null the efforts of the Allies to close in on all sides of the great battle area from the North Sea to the Swiss border, and compel the German army's high command to reconstruct its fighting line in Belgium and Flanders. The Belgian, French and British troops are keeping up their eastward progress in their endeavour to compel the Germans to give up Ostend and Zeebrugge, their naval bases on the North Sea. Roulers, the important railway junction with its lines of steel radiating to the North Sea and eastward to Ghent, has been entered by the Belgians and at Hoogledge to the north King Albert's men are virtually upon the Roulers-Ostend railway. To the south Menin and Courtrai are seriously menaced. Across the border in France, the capture of Arras by the English and Lille, capital of the department of the Nord, within striking distance, and the evacuation of Lens, places Douai, the fortress northeast of Arras and all the territory between Arras and Menin virtually in the hands of the British. To the south from Cambrai to St. Quentin the German resistance is still strong, but nevertheless the British, Americans and French on all sectors which are essential to the carrying forward of the Allied programme, have valiantly attacked and withstood counter attacks, smashed the old Hindenburg positions and materially advanced their lines. Sequahart, north of St. Quentin, which the Germans in a violent counter attack recaptured from the British Wednesday, again has been taken by Field Marshal Haig's men who now are out on the rolling country to the eastward as likewise are all Allied troops from St. Quentin northward. Northwest of Rheims the Germans are offering more resistance to the French along the Aisne, and in the sectors which are protecting the eastern end of the Germans Retire From the Heart of the Coal Region—Austrians in Albania in Full Retreat Northward --- Enemy Give Ground Everywhere in France—Belgians Enter Roulers, 60,000 Prisoners and 100 Guns Last Week.

WAR REVIEW.

Lens, the heart of the great coal region in Northern France, and Armentieres, almost equally as important as a manufacturing centre, have been evacuated by the Germans. The German fortified positions between Cambrai and St. Quentin have been definitely smashed, and the Austro-Hungarians in Albania, forsaken by their former allies, the Bulgarians, are in full retreat northward toward their border on the Adriatic Sea to the Lake Ochrida. Of the reconquering of invaded Belgium and the progress of the French and Franco-American forces respectively north of Rheims and eastward in Champagne to the vicinity of Verdun, the tale remains the same—the Germans slowly but surely are being forced everywhere to give ground, and their vital defense daily continues to be eaten into, notwithstanding the strong resistance that the enemy is imposing to make null the efforts of the Allies to close in on all sides of the great battle area from the North Sea to the Swiss border, and compel the German army's high command to reconstruct its fighting line in Belgium and Flanders. The Belgian, French and British troops are keeping up their eastward progress in their endeavour to compel the Germans to give up Ostend and Zebrugge, their naval bases on the North Sea. Roulers, the important railway junction with its lines of steel radiating to the North Sea and eastward to Ghent, has been entered by the Belgians and at Hoogledge to the north King Albert's men are virtually upon the Roulers-Ostend railway. To the south Menin and Courtrai are seriously threatened. Across the border in France the capture of Armentieres by the English, and Lille, capital of the department of the Nord, within striking distance, and the evacuation of Lens, places Douai, the fortress northeast of Arras and all the territory between Arras and Menin virtually in the hands of the British. To the south from Cambrai to St. Quentin the German resistance is still strong, but nevertheless the British, Americans and French on all sectors which are essential to the carrying forward of the Allied programme have valiantly attacked and withstood counter attacks, smashed the old Hindenburg positions and materially advanced their lines. Sequehart, north of St. Quentin, which the Germans in a violent counter attack recaptured from the British Wednesday, again has been taken by Field Marshal Haig's men who now are out on the rolling country to the eastward as likewise are all Allied troops from St. Quentin northward. Northwest of Rheims the Germans are offering more resistance to the French along the Aisne, and in the sectors which are protecting the eastern end of the Chemin des Dames, the western end of which already is dominated by the French guns, but General Berthelot's forces nevertheless captured Comicy and reached the Aisne Canal, between Conceveux and La Feuillie, a front of more than fifteen miles. In Champagne the French have enlarged their gains from the region north of the Somme to the western fringes of the Argonne forest, taking prisoners and inflicting heavy casualties on the enemy. The railroad junction point of Challange, a short distance south of Vouster, has been captured, and here the French have completed their domination of the Aire valley running north of the Argonne forest, and are only awaiting the arrival of the Americans to the eastern end of the valley to nip the big wooded bastion out of the fighting line. The Americans are slowly approaching the rendezvous. In their retreat from Albania, the Austro-Hungarians everywhere are in flight before the Italians, burning towns and depots behind them. Large numbers of prisoners and quantities of war material have been captured.

A WEEK'S CAPTURES.

LONDON, Oct. 2. In the week ending to-day the Allies have captured 60,000 men and 1,000 guns on the Western front.

CRITICAL PHASE APPROACHING.

PARIS, Oct. 3. The second line of railroads from Bruges to Courtrai is under shell fire. While this German army—the Fourth—is thrust back on its communications, the forces on its right are in a risky position near the sea at Mureport. These elements on the left of the Fourth Army are thrown back at some places south of the Lys River and will have difficulty in defending Lille. Latest news from the centre of the line shows that the enemy resistance there is giving evidence of falling. Le Catelet has been taken in this sector. On the right, General Berthelot is still driving the Germans away from the Rheims region, and General Gouraud is making slow headway in the Champagne. Everywhere the signs of battle indicate the approach of the critical phase. In addition to the general satisfaction over the situation in France, Paris is rejoicing over the news of the fall of Damascus.

RETREATING IN LABASSE.

LONDON, Oct. 3. Field Marshal Haig announced tonight that a German retreat has been begun in the LaBassee sector, and is commented upon as a development of far-reaching importance. It is asserted and unofficially stated that the town of LaBassee has been evacuated.

It is also believed that the enemy withdrawal involves Lens, and there is a report too that the Germans have ordered that Lille be abandoned. To the successful operations of the Belgian army and General Plumer's forces to the north is attributed the enemy's movement to the rear. The Anglo-Belgian drive has brought these forces near to Menin.

GERMANS FALL BACK.

LONDON, Oct. 3. The Germans have fallen back three miles in their retreat along the Lens-Armentieres line, it is reported this afternoon.

GERMANY BROUGHT IN WAR ZONE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3. British airmen during the past three months, have wrought heavy damage to military objects in Western Germany, and enforced the withdrawal of several enemy air squadrons from the battlefield in a vain effort to protect the railroad territory, the British Bureau of Information announced here tonight. In view of the activity of the British Independent Air Force, a 250 mile belt of the Rhine Valley, in which are located the principal German war industries and railway systems vital to maintain, the Teutons in France has been brought definitely into the war zone. The statement says that fliers of the Independent Air Force have raided enemy territory 248 times, and dropped 247 tons of bombs on strategic points, aside from destroying or damaging ammunition and poison gas factories, railway stations and trains.

GERMANY SHAKING UNDER ASSAULTS.

PARIS, Oct. 3. A wide retreat of the German forces on the west front is foreseen by the Berlin Department of Propaganda, in a statement published by the Bureau. Germany is said to be actually shaking under the assaults of the reassembled Entente forces. It is necessary for Germany, the statement adds, that the portion of the German defensive position be maintained in Belgium as in France, so that the Fatherland will be kept safe from the battles now being decided. The German Propaganda Department admits that the British and Belgian attack in Flanders has obtained initial important success to-night.

CHOLERA IN BERLIN.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 2. On the first day of the outbreak of cholera in Berlin, according to reports received, there were 17 cases. Several of these proved fatal.

IMPORTANT RAILWAY JUNCTION CAPTURED.

PARIS, Oct. 3. Heavy fighting continues in the region north of Rheims and the French have continued their advance, capturing Watch your children's skins. As soon as you see the slightest trace of a rash or sore, apply Zam-Buk. This antiseptic balm will protect the sore place from infection, prevent it from spreading and healing soon follows. Careful mothers always keep Zam-Buk on hand for their children's injuries—it cures so quickly and prevents any possibility of festering. Best for cuts, burns, scalds, bruises, ringworms, scaly sores, eczema and teething rash. All dealers 50c box.

ing Loire, says the war office statement to-day. The railway junction of Challange, in Champagne, has been captured by Gen. Gouraud.

CARRYING OUT TERMS.

PARIS, Oct. 3. High praises are given the French cavalry forces which have been operating in the Macedonian campaign in co-operation with the Serbs, in the Serbian statement issued at the war office to-night. Terms provided for in the armistice between the Bulgarians and the Allies are in the course of being carried out, the statement says.

DRIVEN BACK WITH LOSSES.

PARIS, Oct. 3. (Official)—West of Challange the Germans made determined efforts to drive the French from the wood southeast of Orefuil but were driven back with heavy losses. The French attack in Champagne was continued to-day.

FEARING ATTACK ON ALSACE.

GENEVA, Oct. 3. German military authorities have begun to remove the inhabitants of Alsace, according to the Democratic expectation of a Franco-German attack on the frontier.

ITALIAN PREMIER VISITS THE FRONT.

ROME, Oct. 3. Premier Orlando left for the Italian front coincident with the Bulgarian armistice, according to the Idea Nazionale. This armistice, it adds, has so changed conditions on all fronts that it creates possibilities for activities by the Allied forces along new lines not heretofore foreseen.

ADMITS GERMAN FRONT CRUMBLING.

PARIS, Oct. 3. The German situation on the western front is grave, the Frankfurter Zeitung admits, adding that the German front is gradually crumbling. The evacuation of Belgium is being discussed openly in Berlin, according to advices reaching here. Concerning Alsace-Lorraine the German high command makes the suggestion that it be neutralized and joined to Luxemburg, thus making a buffer state between France and Germany.

BULGAR ARMY WAS MUTINIOUS.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 2. After representing the Bulgarian Army as in a state of mutiny and confusion, a Vienna telegram to the Rotterdam Nieuw Courant concludes: "This state of affairs has forced the Central Powers to leave in the capital (Sofia) sufficient forces to preserve order, and especially to guard the Legations and the stores of food and war material."

REMOVING INHABITANTS.

GENEVA, Oct. 2. The inhabitants of twenty villages of Alsace including Fortlet, Goutevion and Winkel, already have been sent to Bavaria. Some of the villagers have escaped across the Swiss frontier. Fear of disorder is rampant throughout Alsace-Lorraine, not only among the civilians, but also among the military forces. Food is scarce and little is available. The German authorities in Alsace-Lorraine, the Democrat adds, are afraid of a general uprising in those provinces when the Allies cross the frontier.

WOULD NOT OBEY.

GENEVA, Oct. 3. King Ferdinand and Crown Prince Boris of Bulgaria were at Velea a week ago to exhort the Bulgarian troops to fight, according to Saloniki advices received here. Their efforts were of no avail, the Bulgarian soldiers throwing away their arms and retiring.

A PRETEXT FOR BARBARITY.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 3. War Minister Trotsky according to advices from Petrograd has issued an order that all the women of Kasan be delivered into the hands of the Red Guards. Kasan an important junction point on the river Volga was held for several months by the Czechoslovaks. This is probably the pretext for the reported order of Trotsky.

PEACE VERY SHORTLY.

SOPIA, Sept. 30. (Via Amsterdam, Oct. 3.)—The Bulgarian government in announcing officially to-day that an armistice had been signed and orders given to suspend military operations declared that it will be only a short time until peace is made.

BRITISH TONNAGE COMPLETED.

LONDON, Oct. 2. (British Wireless Service).—The British admiralty announced that the tonnage of merchant vessels completed in the United Kingdom shipyards during Sept. amounted to 144, 773, which is twenty thousand tons in excess of the figures for August and has only twice been surpassed in any month of this year.

SUCCESSFUL ATTACK.

LONDON, Oct. 3. The attack by British infantry and tanks along an eight mile front from Souchart to the canal north of Bony, in the St. Quentin sector, was completely successful, according to Field Marshal Haig's report from British Headquarters to-night.

FRESHING CAPTURES.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2. General Pershing's communication to-day says that a partial count of the material captured during the past week by the American troops fighting between the Meuse and Argonne rivers, shows 120 guns of all calibres, 750 trench mortars, 300 machine guns, 100 heavy tank guns, thousands of artillery shells and hundreds of thousands of rounds of ammunition.

IMPROVED POSITIONS.

LONDON, Oct. 3. Belgian forces on Wednesday improved their positions at various points according to the official statement issued from Belgian headquarters last night. General Plumer's army has captured Leloure near Menin and Lebesart just north of Armentieres.

MENIN AND ROULERS BURNING.

PARIS, Oct. 3. General Plumer's army on the Belgian front is reported to be two miles from Turoing. Despatches from the front state that Menin and Roulers are burning and that the Anglo-Belgian thrust continues in the direction of Courtrai where the great road to Ghent opens.

ATTACK RESUMED.

LONDON, Oct. 2. British troops this morning resumed their attacks north of St. Quentin. Field Marshal Haig reported in his official statement the Germans are continuing their rearguard movement on the front from Lens to Armentieres. They are evacuating highly organized positions in that area along a ten mile line.

ENORMOUS CAPTURES.

PARIS, Oct. 2. During the period from Sept. 10 to Sept. 30, the Allied armies in France and Belgium have captured 2,844 officers, 130,192 men, 1,600 cannon and more than 6,000 machine guns according to an official statement issued last night. Since July 15th until Sept. 30 the Allies have captured 5,518 officers, 248,494 men, 3,669 cannon, more than 29,000 machine guns and hundreds of mine throwers the statement says.

COMMUNICATIONS CUT.

PARIS, Oct. 3. Occupation of Bulgaria by Allied troops is progressing normally according to Marcel Hutin of the Echo de Mother! the Child is Costive, Bilious.

Don't hesitate! A laxative is necessary if tongue is coated, breath bad or stomach sour.

Give "California Syrup of Figs" at once — a teaspoonful to-day often saves a sick child to-morrow. If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs" and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "Fruit Laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle. Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs"; then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't be fooled!

NOON.
FOCH'S STRATEGY.
 LONDON, Oct. 4.—(Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency)—The Germans, it is reported yesterday, are making a serious effort to break through in every one. He says the most dangerous point is between the Scarpe and St. Quentin, and even here the situation might be satisfactory, but for the sudden Anglo-Belgian attack on the coastal front. Ardenne compares Marshal Foch's present operations to the breaking of the German armies into three divisions between Cambrai and the Sambre, a portion of which front is held by the Canadians, who in addition had their special armoured detachments and machine guns at every ten yards. Every attack was met by a German counter attack. The breaking of the German front between Cambrai and St. Quentin, seems to render a retreat from that line inevitable. It is described by experts as the most serious feat in the war. Praise is lavished on Field Marshal Haig's achievements, not merely in capturing a colossal number of prisoners, but in triumphing over the series of strong defences, and contributing the largest of any of the Allied armies, to make Marshal Foch's strategy a success.

Something to Take to Town.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

One of my neighbors who usually comes home from town looking (as my mother phrases it) "as if she had been dragged through a knot hole" dropped in the other afternoon after a townward trip, smiling, fresh and rosy.
 "You can't have been to town," I said.
 "I have."
 "How did you manage to come home as fresh as a daisy?"
 She laughed. "I took something along with me that I never took before. My husband made me. We had a long talk about my getting so tired. He was really quite peevish, and he said I wasn't to go at all unless I did what he said."
 "What on earth did you take?"
 "Nothing but an Extra Hour."

She laughed again. "Don't get excited. Nothing but an extra hour." "Usually," she went on, "I have every minute planned for, and if everything doesn't go just so, I get nervous and fretted and I cut down my lunch hour and I rush, and I come home like a rag. You know. Well, my husband said it wasn't the things I did, but the way I rushed that tired me. He made me show him my list last night and cut out several things that weren't essential so that I should have at least an extra hour for contingencies besides a good lunch hour. And I promised I would stick to it."
 "Did you?"
 "Yes, and my dear, you wouldn't know what a difference it made in the way I felt all day. Usually I have that harassed, hurried feeling. If I can't get a salesman to wait on me right off, I'm nervous. When I'm in a hurry and an elevator doesn't come, I'm fit to be tied. And then I always rush for the train. My husband says those things are what take it out of me and I shouldn't wonder if it were so. I had to wait quite a while for a salesman at T's to-day, and instead of being all tense and strained, I relaxed and looked at the people around me and went over my shopping list and really rather enjoyed the rest. "At lunch, instead of going to the nearest restaurant and ordering anything I could get quickly, I went to my favorite restaurant and had a pleasant, leisurely meal.

 "She'll Get Twice as Much Done To-morrow."
 "And then I allowed myself ten minutes more than the time I needed to walk to the train."
 "Did I get much less done? Well perhaps a little, but I know one thing. I'll get twice as much done around the house to-morrow as I usually do the day after I get back from town."
 "Well, I must be going," she ended, picking up her bag and then as she reached the gate she flung back over her shoulder, "I know someone who ought to try that. Do you?"
 And I admitted I did.

Tommy's Religion.

We hear much about the religion of the soldier these days. Rev. Dr. Symonds, of Montreal, in preaching on this subject said that his conclusions were reached as the result of a careful analysis of the writings of the Chaplains of all denominations, and college men, on the religion of the "Tommy".
 The soldier's religion, the Doctor said, was exceedingly inarticulate. Doctrinal religion was extraordinarily vague, with very little of what might be called creed. The soldier was not at all interested in denominational Christianity. In fact, he stated, when the different ministers were taken out of their clerical and put in khaki, they hardly recognized what they were themselves.
 "The soldier believes in God, but has not the truly Christian conception of Him," said Dr. Symonds.
 He believed in prayer, but it was a crude prayer. The speaker then dwelt on the unselfishness, self sacrifice and the willingness of Tommy to share his lot and possessions with others, without connecting it with Christianity.

Dealing with the second part of his address, the Doctor said he did not intend to surrender anything to the spirit of the times, but wanted a maximum Christianity which was to be found in the teachings of Christ. Christianity had been presented as a series of doctrines, but must be taught as a way of life. In this respect the church was entering a new age. "We must give doctrines a secondary place, and interpret the mind of Christ," he added.—The Wesleyan.

Just Folks
 COG WHEELS.

A cog wheel turns, from day to day, Always in just the self-same way; Its time is set, its movements fixed, With other cog wheels it is mixed, It never knows and never asks The part it plays in its tasks. Monotonously on, it grinds, To do the work of thinking minds, The self-same course each day it takes Until at last it snaps and breaks.

And there are human cog wheels, here, Content to turn from year to year. They never know and never ask The part they play in every task. They do their bit of turning well, But why it's done they can't tell. Their hours are set, their work is planned, They labor only with the hand; When problems rise they stand out And let some thinker work them out.

Boy, let your brain control your hand; Know well your work and understand The reason for the task that's given. Know why a certain bolt is rivet. Think clearly as you fingers move. Avoid monotony's dull groove. God gave to you a ready brain To spare your drudgery and pain. Whatever your trade, whatever your art, Refuse to play a cog wheel's part.

GRACEFUL LINES OF THE NECK. If you wish the lines of your neck to be graceful never wear a tight collar. This advice may seem to be unnecessary in this day of open necked blouses but there are some women who still cling to the torturous boned collars. There is no beauty in such neckwear, and besides it is absolutely fatal to the appearance of the throat when replaced with the softer lines of an open blouse or evening gown.

So lay aside your high collars if you want a pretty neck. Keep the skin clean by a twice weekly application of lemon juice. This is an old fashioned remedy but it is a good one. It may take longer to clear the skin than with a prepared lotion, but it is harmless which is the greatest recommendation that can be offered for any beautifying measure.
 Cut a sound lemon in half, trim away the rind from the edge, remove the seeds and rub the fruit over the entire neck and shoulders. Of course there should be a warm bath with warm water and a mild white soap, before this is done. Let the juice dry on the skin. The best time to use this treatment is just before retiring at night.

If the texture of the skin is coarse it may be greatly improved with the use of a complexion brush. Get the best one you can buy. Vigorously scrub the neck and shoulders with warm water and a mild soap once or twice a week. This treatment should be used before retiring, and after the skin has been rinsed with clear tepid water there should be a very light application of some good cold cream or pure olive oil.

To make the flesh firm there is nothing better than a cocoa butter massage once a week. Bathe the skin as suggested in the lemon treatment. Carefully rinse with clear water and the nwrap the neck and shoulders with a large Turkish towel wrung out of hot water until it is dry. Have the water as hot as can be borne and increase the temperature as the flesh gets accustomed to the heat. Continue the steaming for ten minutes, then quickly dry the skin and begin to massage.
 The cake of cocoa butter should be warmed slightly to soften the surface. Then rub it on the skin until a thin layer has been deposited and then massage vigorously with the tips of the fingers.

A Love Feast.

When the Presbyterian deputation carried greetings to the General Synod of the Church of England in Canada, held in Toronto, the members of it met with a very cordial reception. Indeed, they seem to have had a veritable love feast. Unity of effort between the Christian Churches of Canada, more especially between the Presbyterian and Anglican Communions, was strongly urged.
 Hamilton Cassels, representing the laymen of the Presbyterian Church, appealed for the unity of the two churches under one head, and, in replying, the Bishop of Kootenay hoped that a way would be found to unite the best features of Episcopacy and Presbyterianism. The two churches, he said, should let bygones be bygones, and, as Christian Brethren, see what could be done "to bring about the dawn of that blessed day when Christian people can be of one accord in one place." He was followed by Archbishop Paterson Smythe, who hoped that the relations existing between the two denominations would extend beyond mere friendly courtesies.—The Wesleyan.

Died on Portia.

A very pathetic scene occurred on board the S. S. Portia, on Thursday, Sept. 19th, when Mary Frances, aged 10 months, darling child of Bernard and Babe Moriarty, of St. Vincent, was removed from this world by death. Loving hands prepared the little corpse for burial and everyone of the ship's company from Capt. Parsons down, did everything possible to alleviate the grief of the relatives. The ship was held up at Ferneuse while the mortal remains of the infant were being made ready for interment, and much sympathy was expressed by the passengers to whom, as well as to the officers and crew of the Portia, particularly Mrs. Kennedy, Stewardess, the grateful thanks of the bereaved parents are given.

BRITAIN STRIPPED TO THE WAIST.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—Hughes, of Australia, speaking at a farewell dinner to-night given at the Australian House to Australian editors on their return home, after a tour of the British Isles, and a visit to the Straits Front, said that the tide of battle had turned in favor of the Allies and was now at the flood. The editor had been permitted to cast a glimpse of the tremendous organization which had saved civilization from disaster, including that sure blowback and sharp sword of the Empire, the Navy. Premier Hughes eloquently pictured Britain stripped to the waist and organized for war, and contrasted the picture with the devastation that had been seen in France. Illustrating how Germany made war, he said the editors would return more resolute than ever in the demand for peace terms that should compensate the wronged and penalize the criminals. Dealing with the League of Nations, Premier Hughes declared that it would be impossible to admit Germany, until full reparation had been made by her for the wrongs committed. Admiral Wemyss said that at the conclusion of the war, the veil would be lifted from the story of the navy, revealing such mixture of tragedy, drama, comedy and heroism, as would thrill the world. He hoped another Captain Marryat might arise who would be capable of doing justice to the wonderful story.

ITALIANS CAPTURE MATERIAL.

VIENNA, Via Basel, Switzerland, Oct. 3.—Discussion of the Government's declaration and the question of peace was begun yesterday in the Austrian Chamber of Deputies, the Socialist Deputies demanded peace on the following basis: The creation of a League of Nations; no economic warfare; no annexations; the restoration of Serbia, Montenegro and Belgium; revision of the treaties of Bucharest and Brest-Litovsk; a settlement of the Eastern question on the basis of nationalities; the regulation of the Polish question by the Polish constituents; the establishment of autonomy for each nation in Austria-Hungary. Mally Stanek, the Czech deputy, caused an uproar in the Chamber by violently attacking Germany. He reaffirmed the solidarity of the Hugo-Slav, Polish and Czechs, and declared that the only

FOCH'S STRATEGY.
LONDON, To-day.
(Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—Writing in the Berliner Tageblatt, the well known German military critic, General Ardennes, admits the seriousness of the situation. He describes the strategy of General Foch as demoralizing, and as aiming, not merely at the encircling of the German armies in all sectors, but to break through every one. He says the most dangerous point is between the Scarpe and St. Quentin, and even here the situation might be satisfactory, but for the sudden Anglo-Beigian attack on the coastal front. Ardennes compares Marshal Foch's present operations to boring holes at five points preparatory to blasting with dynamite. Allied correspondents describe the fighting, especially in Cambrai sector, as the most severe and the most critical of the whole war. The Allied victory is undoubted, the critics concede, but has been gained at great sacrifice. The Germans, it is reported yesterday, flung nine divisions between Cambrai and the Senese, a portion of which front is held by the Canadians, who in addition had their special marksmen detachments and machine guns at every ten yards. Every attack was met by a German counter attack. The breaching of the rear-most positions of the Hindenburg line, between Cambrai and St. Quentin, seems to render a retreat from that line inevitable. It is described by experts as one of the greatest feats in the war. Prisoners captured on Field Marshal Haig's achievements, not merely in capturing a colossal number of prisoners, but in triumphing over the series of strong defenses, and conquering the largest set of any of the Allied armies, to take Marshal Foch's strategy a success.

Portia, on Thursday, Sept. 19th, when Mary Frances, aged 10 months, darling child of Bernard and Babe Moriarty, of St. Vincent, was removed from this world, by death. Loving hands prepared the little corpse for burial and everyone of the ship's company from Capt. Parsons down, did everything possible to alleviate the grief of the relatives. The ship was held up at Fernesue while the mortal remains of the infant were being made ready for interment, and much sympathy was expressed by the passengers to whom, as well as to the officers and crew of the Portia, Mrs. M. Moriarty, Mrs. Kennedy, Stowaway, and the grateful thanks of the bereaved parents are given.

GALLANTRY OF 46TH DIVISION.
WITH THE BRITISH ARMY ON THE ST. QUENTIN SECTOR, Oct. 3. (By the A.P.)—Among the English divisions which have made deep gains in this sector in the recent fighting is the 46th, commanded by a Major General who was a private in the South African War. It was this division which first crossed the Hindenburg of Bellegie, last Sunday. The entire division attacked from a point two thousand yards west of the Canal, holding the first Hindenburg Line there, then being unable to see twenty feet because of the dense fog, their officers followed the examples of their barrage to the Canal banks, where under the leadership of a Brigadier General, already decorated with the Victoria Cross, they plunged into the water. The opposite bank was lined with German machine guns. Some of the British were life belts, removed for the occasion from the "leave" boats plying between England and France, while others plunged boldly in and swam across through a perfect hail of bullets, some went hand over hand across life lines and only one man was drowned in the whole operation. Once on the other bank the men of this North Midland Division immediately plunged into the fight, fought their way up the slippery Canal banks, went over the enemy parapets and finished off the Germans in every section with bayonets, rifles and pistols fired at point blank. The terrified Germans just a little bit further back saw the performance and ran for their lives. During the operation of a single day this division, by its dash and quick fighting, took 4,200 prisoners, 70 cannon and more than a thousand machine guns and great quantities of war material. The total casualty list of this division was only 800. This is regarded by the British Army as the greatest feat ever performed by a British division. As the Germans retreat in the Armentieres sector they are applying the torch wherever they have the time, and their retreat is marked by great explosions as ammunition stores are destroyed. It is known that the Germans are becoming more and more demoralized and that many of the higher officers are all alarmed, but the retreat and the destruction of dumps has been absolutely necessitated.

KAZAN CAPTURED BY SLOVAKS.
STOCKHOLM, Oct. 3.
(By A. P.)—Petrograd despatches of September 30th, printed in today's Demokrat, announce that the Czech-Slovak captured Kazan, a night ago that they had taken, and show that the Russian troops fighting for the Bolshevik are abandoning the Red cause.

GREAT NAVAL FEAT.
ROME, Oct. 3.
British American and Italian warships have destroyed the Austrian naval base at Durazzo, and the warships anchored there, according to an announcement made by Premier Orlando. The attack occurred at noon on Wednesday when Italian and British cruisers proceeded by Italian and allied squadrons, and American submarines, succeeded in making their way through mine fields, and avoiding attacks by submarines, got into Durazzo Harbour. An intense bombardment followed until the base and the Austrian ships anchored there were completely destroyed. Italian shells, in the teeth of a hot enemy fire torpedoed an Austrian destroyer and a steamer. Another vessel which was recognized as a hospital ship was allowed to withdraw. British and Italian airplanes co-operated in the work and other Italian and Allied warships were drawn up in order of battle outside of the harbor, to deal with any enemy warship coming up to the assistance of the port. No losses or damage were suffered by the Allied squadrons, and a slight injury to a British cruiser by a torpedo from an enemy submarine.

E. MacGregor.

TRIBUTE FROM HIS COLLEAGUES.

The passing of Edwin J. MacGregor leaves a vacancy in the General Post Office that it will be difficult to fill. His work will be continued, but none will ever devote to it greater zeal or more efficient service. His was a position of trust, which called for fidelity as well as ability. That he was an able man none will question, and his fidelity is proven by his honourable record. In all his long years of service not even one mistake was reported against him. As an official he won the gratitude and approval of all with whom or for whom he worked, his colleagues and the public alike. But it is in another form that his greatest influence came. Edwin MacGregor was one of those rare men who inspired affection as well as esteem. He was a gentle man, quiet, modest and unassuming in manner. Line at the St. Quentin Canal, north of Bellegie, last Sunday. The entire division attacked from a point two thousand yards west of the Canal, holding the first Hindenburg Line there, then being unable to see twenty feet because of the dense fog, their officers followed the examples of their barrage to the Canal banks, where under the leadership of a Brigadier General, already decorated with the Victoria Cross, they plunged into the water. Obituary.
On Monday last the relatives and friends of Frank Dawson, of Bay Roberts and elsewhere received a shock to learn that he in the bloom of his youth had been claimed by the dread major death. Frank, who was the picture of health, had been in Sydney six months, but was called home to see his father, George Dawson, an old and respected merchant, who was ill, and who died just a week before his son. Frank was a popular young fellow, of an honorable and loving disposition, and his early death the regret of all who knew him. Prior to his demise he was about to join the Nfld. Regiment. He was followed to the grave by a large concourse of people of whom the boys of the regiment at Bay Roberts made a body. He leaves five sisters, Mrs. F. Moore, Mrs. P. O'Neill, Mrs. Connelly and Miss Agie in Bay Roberts, and one sister in Klondyke; two brothers, James and Geoffrey, to whom, and his relatives we extend our sympathy in their double bereavement. The loss of a father and brother, whose places can never be filled. May they now be enjoying the eternal reward which their honourable and exemplary lives, while here, merited.—Com.

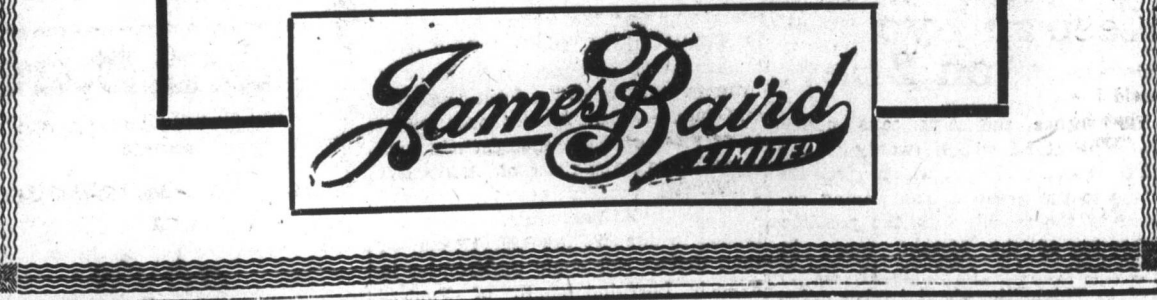

GOING WEST.—A large number of passengers left this morning's train for Placentia where they will connect with the S. S. Fogota for points along the south west coast.

At the City Hall.

The Municipal Council held its regular session last evening. Councilor Morris presided, and there were present Councilors Tait, Brownrigg, Mullaly, Ayre and Vianicomb. After reading of minutes, etc., the following matters were disposed of: James Harris, Secretary of Public Works Department, wrote that the building erected on Council's property near Fever Hospital, was to provide for extra accommodation for the soldiers of the Royal Nfld. Regiment and to cope with a threatened epidemic of fever. As the matter was considered by the Minister of Public Works to be a most urgent one, he was ordered to build it at once and instantly. There was no intention of treating the Council with the slightest discourtesy by not submitting plans of the structure. It was ordered the Mayor, together with the Secretary and the Solicitor of the Council would take up the matter of the appropriation of the building to the City Engineer. Minister of Militia Hon. J. R. Bennett asked Council's permission to have repairs made to the building formerly occupied by the Empire Wood Working Co. It is intended to use this premises as a winter quarters for the men of the Royal Nfld. Regiment. As the repairs intended will be of a temporary nature only, permission was granted.

In connection with the application of Baine, Johnston & Co. for a water service to their Southside premises, it was ordered the matter be left over for report by the City Engineer. James Murdoch asked for street line on behalf of Messrs. Gunn & Cowan, Topsail Road. It is the intention of his clients to build a concrete driveway in front of their property. It was ordered the City Engineer prepare a plan showing the exact street line in this locality. Mr. Murdoch will be asked if it is his clients' intention to build on this property.

Mrs. Mary Purcell was given permission to make repairs to roof of house, 7 Patrick Street.
Mrs. Elizabeth Anthony was given until next spring to have sewerage system installed in her house, Brazil Square.
Wm. Cummins submitted plan of house which he proposed to erect on west side of Leavelle Street. As this house is now under construction and no permission was given to start operations, Mr. Cummins will be asked for an explanation.
The Solicitor reported that in the matter of the petition of residents of Rennie's Mill Road protesting against a proposed laundry in that neighborhood, he was of opinion the Council had no jurisdiction in the premises, and that if the laundry could be held to be a nuisance, the remedy was a private one and could only be enforced by the parties in the neighborhood affected thereby.

The Solicitor also reported that in the matter of the communication from the Board of Trade respecting certain individuals doing business in the city for short periods, he was of opinion these people were hawkers, and as such were liable to the tax not exceeding $50. The Council will take steps to collect the amount of the tax. The City Engineer's report for the week was read and showed work at the storm sewer, Barter's Hill, commenced; repairs to side drain on Duckworth Street were made; grading was being done at King's Road, and the old pipes at Windsor Lake will be taken up during the week.
He also submitted plan of areas proposed to be taken on Leslie Street for street improvement. He is to prepare the cost of making the street in this locality.
Repairs to Barnes' Road were ordered, and the Engineer submitted a list of sidewalks in the city which needed improvement. Consideration stood over.
Some repairs were ordered to be

Lt. Reeves Welcomed.
The St. John Ambulance Division welcomed back Lt. Reeves, who returned from the other side recently. At the regular meeting last evening Mr. K. M. Keep an Eye on Briey.

At Fresnes the Americans under Pershing stand within twenty miles of the town of Briey, which gives its name to the greatest iron mining region in the world, with the possible exception of the Mesaba range in Minnesota. An advance to Briey, and to Thionville, about twelve miles to the northeast, would bring the war to a speedy end by depriving Germany of most of the raw material from which her weapons and her war munitions are made. The French military leaders know the situation, and are persuaded that a continuation of General Pershing's advance in the general direction of Briey and Thionville will force the Germans to stand and fight the greatest battle of the war on the plains of Lorraine in the region between Verdun and Metz. The Parisian mapmakers who issued maps of the Rhine front a few weeks ago knew what was coming.

The prize in this decisive struggle, which may be begun at any moment, is a relatively small strip of territory, the Basin of Briey, which Senator Henri Beranger once called the tactical economic key to the war. It overlaps into Belgium and Luxembourg, and covers the Franco-German frontier for thirty-five miles almost up to Pont-a-Mousson. According to Herr Schrodtler of the Verein Deutscher Eisenhüttenleute and other Dusseldorf iron masters, it provides the German armaments with 80 per cent. of their steel. Without the Basin of Briey, Germany could not conduct the war for another three months. By the Treaty of Frankfurt, in 1871, Germany ran the frontier line so as to divide the iron area into two parts. Up to the time when Germany occupied it all it gave her annually $1,000,000 tons out of her total production of $8,000,000. It gave France 15,000,000. Since the autumn of 1914 Germany has been adding this 15,000,000 tons of ore to her 28,000,000, and thus obtains 43,000,000 tons, to which are added also 6,000,000 tons extracted from the Luxemburg mines, making an annual total of 49,000,000 tons, of which all but 7,000,000 come from the Basin of Briey.

General Malletierre of the French army, who fought in the Woerwe region in 1914 as Commander of the troops that unsuccessfully tried to keep the Germans out of Briey, says of the American advance: "It is with profound joy that we French, who have always had eyes turned toward the sacred frontier roads to the Rhine, at last see the great attack so long desired, and so necessary set out toward essential objectives."

In authorizing the advance of the Americans and the wiping out of the St. Mihiel salient, Marshal Foch took a momentous decision. It must have involved the removal from Picardy and the Oise-Aisne front of vast masses of French reserves, and their concentration behind the lines in the Argonne and Verdun sectors, whence will shortly be launched attacks intended to support the Americans in their drive. Nor could the frontier in French Lorraine south of Pont-a-Mousson be neglected in the preparations for what General Malletierre regards as "a great attack" upon the Basin of Briey. The right flank of Pershing's thrusting force must be protected by the assemblage of masses of American and French troops all along the front in southern Lorraine and Alsace as far as the Swiss border. We know that over a million Americans stand in the lines or in reserve here, but there has been nothing yet to indicate the strength of the French armies associated with them in the Verdun sector, but which have not yet been set in motion.

While the endeavour to wrest the Laon Plateau from the enemy seems for the moment the chief concern of the leader of the Allied armies, it need not occasion surprise if the great stroke of the autumn offensive should be delivered on the banks of the Moselle. Keep an eye on Briey.—Toronto Globe.

Experimental Work in Fish Curing.

Arrangements have been made for co-operative experimental work by the Bureau of Fisheries and the Bureau of Chemistry on problems of preparation and preservation of fishery products for food. The bacteriology of the redning of salt codfish and methods of preventing it and the autolysis of fish meat are being studied by Dr. W. W. Browne, of the College of the City of New York. Dr. G. G. Scott, of the same institution, is working on methods of drying fish in hot air driers without salt, and Dr. F. C. Weber, of the Bureau of Chemistry, is working in the canning of frozen fish and on problems connected with the canning of grayfish and general fish drying. The work is being done at the Perkins Laboratory, Gloucester, Mass., with the co-operation of the Gorton-Pew Fisheries Co.

Nfld. Scotch Cured Herring.

Importers of Newfoundland Scotch cured herring continue to adhere to the policy of waiting for further developments in the market in view of the relatively inconsequential demand which has manifested itself during the past fortnight. At the same time there has been no evidence of a weakening in the market because of the inactivity of the past week. On the contrary, operators appear to be holding their supplies against a future and better market, when prices will be firmer and perhaps higher. As there is not a great supply of Nfld. Scotch cured herring available in New York at this time, it may be expected that there will be an early exhaustion of stocks when the fall demand comes. According to advices from St. John's there is relatively nothing to offer from there, and it is understood that packers are now practically cleaned up on stocks of either winter or spring herring. In view of these circumstances it would seem that there is no reason to believe that the market for this commodity will be any less firm, and there appears to be every reason to believe that higher prices will prevail before the colder weather sets in.—N.Y. Fishing Gazette, Sept. 21.

Armageddon and Nazareth.

Britain has both victory and defeat in Asia, and the victory far overshadows the defeat. The adventurous expedition to Bakru, on the Caspian, has been driven back to northern Persia. It was quite in advance of what may be called the British line in Asia, being in the nature of the long experimental raids or forays which were characteristic of our Civil War. In a way it was a gamble on Armenian and Bolshevik support in Transcaucasia, and that support failing, the expedition "skedaddled." It is to be hoped that it suffered no great loss.

The victory which the British arms have won is of much more consequence than this Turkish success at Bakru. General Allenby has simply crushed the Turks in Palestine, effecting an advance which is only of less consequence than the occupation of Jerusalem was, and progressing much further toward the destruction of the enemy's army than he did in the Jerusalem campaign. General Allenby's victorious British and colonial and Indian troops have struck across the plain of Armageddon, where Deborah and Barak hurled Sisera and his nine hundred chariots of iron into the river Kishon and the stars in their courses fought against Sisera; they have delivered Nazareth, the birthplace of the Saviour, from the Turk; and they have virtually in their power Nablus, the ancient Shechem, the original holy city of the Hebrews. Strategically more important than the capture of these places is the evident fact that the enemy now has to give up the Carmel range, which, once in the possession of the British and fortified, will safely assure their position in Palestine.

This brilliant victory of General Allenby's which recalls the best traditions of the British arms in Asia, in reality opens the road to Damascus and Aleppo, and secures the position of the British Army in Mesopotamia, which might possibly have been regarded as imperilled by the Turkish advance in Transcaucasia. Joined also with the victories of the Allies in Macedonia, which seems to give the lie to the assumed impassability of the Balkan barrier, this fine success in Palestine will tend to hasten the collapse of the German power in the east.

How happy our British allies must be not only thus to deliver the Holy Land from the double barbarism of Turkish rule and German control, but to strike a crumbling blow against the Bulgarian-Austrian-German conspiracy against the new liberties of the Christian peoples of southeastern Europe! And how unfortunate are we Americans to be dissociated not only in action from this noble crusade, but to be still in the position of seeing our "friends" struck at in the victories that Britain, France, Serbia and Greece are winning! We are at peace with these now shattered Turkish butchers, at peace with the Bulgarian ravagers and ravishers of Serbia! Our part in the victories of civilization in the east is the part of shame only. The unspeakable Turk, the treacherous Bulgarian, are our friends. Whatever aid we have rendered in that contest has been on the wrong side. It was a cause to appeal to the chivalrous instincts of every American—a piece of noble knight errantry which, as we might have flattered ourselves after the Barbary War, after Cuba, was in the national character. But for some mysterious reason we seem to be on the side of the butcher, the ravisher, the spoiler in this case. Well, in spite of what our Government does or fails to do, we may rejoice that those who in the west are our allies are gloriously carrying forward the banners of civilization in the East.—Boston Transcript.

Don't Worry!

Worry is an insidious disease. The haggard eye, the wild gleam, the drawn, seamed, savage, ashen face are but the outward symbols of a tanc struggle going on within. Under the pressure of that struggle, unless checked by over-mastering will power, the reed that has stood thousand gales without flinching bends and breaks.

"Blue Puttee's" Turned Down.

The deputation of "Blue Puttee" boys, accompanied by Minister of Militia Bennett, and Hon. R. A.
Squires, interviewed the Governor yesterday, presenting their petition, Hon. R. A. Squires attended, as a representative of the Opposition, to give it his support. After reading the petition, His Excellency said that he had been in conference with the An-ting Prime Minister, Hon. M. P. Cash-in, and that he and his Ministers were of the opinion that the prayer of the petition should not be granted. His Excellency then asked Mr. Bennett if he had any opinion to express. Mr.
Bennett replied that as leave of absence had been secured for the men by him after considerable trouble, he was in sympathy with the petition;
however, he was not prepared to advise the Governor to ask for any further leave of absence. The Governor then asked Mr. Squires if he had any arguments to express, or any arguments to bring forward. Mr. Squires replied that as His Excellency had already come to a decision, it would be useless for him to say anything. The Governor's formal answer to the petition is given below:

FORMAL REPLY OF HIS EXCEL- LENCY.

Government House,
St. John's, Nfld.,
Oct. 3, 1918.
Sir,—I am desirous by His Excellency the Governor to confirm briefly the reply which he gave to the petition from certain residents of the Domi-on of Newfoundland which you presented on behalf of certain members of the Newfoundland Regiment, being part of the first five hundred who responded to the call for service in Oct.
1914.
His Excellency greatly regrets that he cannot accede to the prayer of a petition which, as he realized by personal perusal of each sheet of signatures, expresses a general desire of a large part of the community. He however, considers it absolutely imposed to the interest of Newfoundland and the Royal Newfoundland Regiment, that he should on this occasion make an appeal to the Army Council for further leave to those members of the Regiment who enlisted during the first two years of the war. Any such appeal would be a breach of the faith on which the Army Council sent back a considerable number of men for a period of rest to their own country. It would inevitably react, not only upon the Regiment itself, but upon other regiments raised in the British Empire which have also borne the greatest burden and greatest heat of the day.
His Excellency's Ministers are quite in accord with this view.
The Governor has, however, arranged with the Minister of Militia to examine any special cases of absolute necessity with a view to telegraphing about it to the Home Government.
It is further recognized that this petition raised the question, which demands consideration in regard to every unit, of replacing as soon as possible those men who after a prolonged period of active service are retired or worn out that they are not equal to the strain which they took at first. The Governor will address a despatch to the Secretary of State on this subject by the outgoing mail, but meanwhile it is the duty of those men whose leave is expired to return to the United Kingdom as soon as required.
I have the honor to be, Sir, your obedient servant,
H. KNOX-NIVEN, Lieut.-Col.,
Private Secretary,
Pte. Bernard Murphy,
266 Water Street, St. John's.

Removal Notice.

MR. M. O'REGAN, Meat Dealer, LeMarchant Road, wishes to inform his man-agers and the public generally that he is about to transfer his business to that store on Duckworth Street recently vacated by the late M. Connolly. On Wednesday, October the 2nd, he will be open at the new stand and prepared to cater to customers.

In soliciting a continuation of public patronage, Mr. O'Regan would emphasize that the same faithful service which for so many years characterized the LeMarchant Store will be carried on in his new premises. Together with taking care of the requirements of citizens he will specialize in the supplying of ships.

The new quarters are the most up-to-date in the city, having been built with a view towards the utmost cleanliness, fitted with modern refrigerators and other useful appliances.

With sincerest appreciation of the patronage of the past a hearty invitation to the new stand is extended to all.

Public Notice!

The following extracts from "Orders in Council" respecting the payment of Pensions and other Allowances to the dependants of Seamen and crews of Mercantile vessels engaged in the export of Newfoundland produce to market, are published for general information:—

1.—The master of all sailing vessels carrying cargoes of Newfoundland produce to market, shall, before sailing, forward to the Colonial Secretary, a statement giving (a) the full name; (b) Age; (c) Place of Birth; (d) Residence; (e) A complete statement of dependants, and (f) the Address of each of such dependants, of himself and each of the members of his crew.

2.—The benefit to accrue to such dependants are similar to those payable to the dependants of members of the Royal Naval Reserve and of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment, under "The War Pensions Act, 1917."

Claimants desiring further information or application forms may obtain same from the Secretary of the Board of Pension Commissioners for Newfoundland, at Room 10, Militia Building, Water Street, St. John's, East. All claims will be heard and adjusted by the Board of Pension Commissioners for Newfoundland.
