

The Weekly Monitor.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 19th, 1886.

United States papers are every day giving a view of the fisheries question. A number of journals that before Congress refused to renew the Washington treaty, favored the reciprocity have altered their tone, and many are becoming positively warm in support. The advocates of protection to the fishermen, contended that the latter were entirely independent of any fishing privileges they had hitherto enjoyed from the Dominion. The fallacy of this was pointed out to every one who had any intimate acquaintance with the matter. The repeated violations already made of the section of the present law, which only allows vessels to enter our harbors for fire wood and fish, show to what an extent United States fishermen are dependent upon us for many privileges. If United States fishermen went fishing from us, why do they continually harry our coast? One schooner goes too far, transgresses the law, is captured, and the whole United States commences empty torrents of wrath and threats upon our government. They deliberately refused these very privileges, when they were offered in the most conciliatory spirit ever used by our government to another, it being even carried so far as to continue them in all hitherto enjoyed privileges, for months without any return, and which they meanly accepted without even acknowledging the courtesy and not to mention the fact, that our simple rights, there in the very dickens to pay. The fact is, the Americans are only pursuing their characteristic policy of trying by a lot of bluster, to blind the eyes of the home government and thus induce that body to concede to them everything, and give nothing in return. We do not feel sure that they will succeed yet. It appears as if England did not fully realize the importance of the matter to us, and may yet re-adjust the treaty in a manner that will for ever shut us from the chance of a fair trade in this direction. England has been overreached often enough by the United States. It is to be regretted, therefore, for the honor of her colonies, that she will firmly sustain us in our position now.

The case of the David J. Adams, which is the immediate cause of the present high tone now being assumed by the portion of the republic's press referred to, will come up for trial in the Admiralty Court, and it is to be hoped that the very best lawyers in the United States, will undertake the defense, as this should be a test case, and tried purely on its merits.

While so many of the United States papers regard the existing state of affairs between the two countries, in such an unfair light, there are still not a few who do not shut their eyes to the justice of our position. One of the latter, the Philadelphia Record, makes the following common sense statement:-

The question at issue is a very simple one. If the Canadians are permitted to send fish to this country on equal terms they are perfectly willing to let New England fishermen have equal rights in their waters. But this is not the case. The fish fishermen do not want. They insist upon going into Canada for salt and fish, and they demand that the fish which they catch in Canada when sent to this country shall be subjected to a quarantine in order to prevent the spread of disease. Free trade in supplies of food fish will remove at once every pretext for a quarrel with Canada. It ought not to be hard for the consumers of this country to comprehend on which side their interests lie. In contrast to the above temperate statement of the question, the N. Y. Herald says:-

Great Britain needs to be looking after her fisheries colonies. Several of the articles in their seven-headed crew were lately inadmissible on our coast, even the widest construction of the disabilities under which it can be claimed that we labor by the treaty of 1818. We negotiated that treaty with her, not with Canada. She is the principal with whom the United States will deal, not the Dominion government, which is playing the part of a little bully who relies on his big mother to come to rescue when he does something to merit a spanking. There is no colony under Great Britain's protection which needs his anxious care so much at this moment as the Dominion of Canada about this fishery business.

The second reading of Mr. Gladstone's Home Rule bill took place in the Imperial House of Commons on the 18th inst. The premier made another eloquent speech upon making the motion for the second reading. In the opening part of his speech he said: As regards the autonomy of Ireland, he said that the principle of the empire, he reminded the house that the same argument was employed against Canadian independence where it was determined to concede home rule to Ireland. He said that the first was an objection to the extension of the Irish franchise from the Imperial Parliament, a breach of the cardinal principle that there ought not to be taxation without representation. Though adding in the principle that Irish members should not sit in the Imperial Parliament, the government was willing to meet the difficulty by providing that when it was proposed to alter the taxation of Ireland relating to customs and excise duties, Irish members would be enabled to attend in person in the House in the debate. The government was also willing to appoint a joint commission from the English and Irish parliaments, which would meet from time to time to consider some questions of Imperial administration. And in conclusion he called upon the opponents of the bill to propose some better measure than that before the house, and said the members of the house have before them a great opportunity to close the strife of 70 years, and of leaving by kindlier and higher in character than heretofore the hearts and affections of the Irish people, and of cementing the noble fabric of the British nation.

He was followed by Lord Hartington; the lecturer by C. E. DeWolf Esq., of Windsor, on "The History of the Angles" in Victoria Hall, on Thursday evening last, was much appreciated by those who had the pleasure of attending. The chair was taken at 8 o'clock by Rev. I. M. Wilkie, who briefly introduced the lecturer to his audience. Although Mr. DeWolf is a very rapid speaker he, nevertheless, took two hours to get through his subject, and, consequently, it will be quite impossible, in the limited space at our command, to do anything like justice to this very able effort. In considering the nature of Anglo Saxon influence on the destiny of man, the lecturer divided his subject into two parts. 1st. The spiritual authority for believing in their influence, and reasons for believing in their existence the present day. His handling of the biblical authority for the existence and influence of the angels, and their frequent connection with the affairs of men, taken both from the Old and New Testaments, was simply exhaustive and could not fail to impress every thoughtful mind with the remarkable prominence given to the Ministry of Angels in the Holy Scriptures. On this branch of his subject, all who believe in the inspiration of the Bible, will be thoroughly in accord with the lecturer. On the second branch of the subject, viz. reasons for believing in their immediate influence on the affairs of men at the present day, some will be inclined to take issue, and although Mr. DeWolf is an enthusiastic and able subject, and therefore, perhaps a little inclined to take an extreme view, yet none could fail to be impressed with the almost numberless instances be brought forward, many of them vouched for by men of the highest standing and ability, and honored by all who know them for their probity and truthfulness. One of the speakers, a gentleman from the chairman in which he expressed the conviction that such a subject as this, based on solid fact, would have a beneficial effect in counteracting the evidently materialistic tendency of the age, in view of the thanks was moved by the Rev. Mr. Warren, and seconded by the Rev. Mr. Jost, both of whom in eloquent terms, expressed their admiration and approval of the lecturer.
