Sudden Death of Walter F. White

Falls From Load of Hay, Stricken With Heart Failure, While Driving From Centrelea to Bridgetown.

A very sudden death occurred here on Wednesday afternoon last, when Walter F. White died suddenly from heart failure while driving upon a load of hay on his way home from Centrelea. He was accompanied by Mr. Charles Hicks, but Mr. Hicks was sitting upon the back of the wagon and did not observe Mr. White, who was driving, until the latter fell from his seat to the ground. The horses, starting up suddenly at the same moment and being on a down grade, were unable to stop until the horses reached the foot of the hill and slackened their pace. He then went back to where Mr. White was still lying as he fell, motionless and unconscious. Summoning assistance, Mr. Hicks carried him into the nearest house, which was Mr. James Curran's, and hastily summoned Dr. Armstrong. When the physician arrived he found life was extinct, and it is believed that Mr. White died just before or immediately after his fall. There was a slight cut under the chin where it had come in contact with some obstruction, but not with sufficient force, it was thought, to cause death. The body was brought to Reed's undertaking rooms while to Rev. Mr. Underwood was entrusted the sad task of breaking the news to the sudden bereaved wife. Happening to meet Mrs. White as he started on his mission, he took her to his own home and there gently made her loss known to her. Of the interview, Mr. Underwood says: "Should such a commission ever again fall to my lot, I trust it may please God to prepare my path step by step as he did that day, and also that he or she to whom such news has to be broken may show the same Christian fortitude, the same supreme faith and sublime trust as that I met there." The widow and two little ones, daughter and son, too young to realize in full the loss they have sustained. They have no relatives in Canada, but two sisters of the deceased are living in England, and the lonely position of the bereaved wife and children accentuates the sadness of the calamity that has befallen them. Seldom has the community been so deeply stirred with sympathy, of which they hastened to give practical evidence in all ways possible.

Mr. White was a native of Yalding Kent, England. He was educated at Kurstipierpoint and entered the Kentish Bank at Maidstone, a position which he held for upwards of twenty years. His health being somewhat impaired, he left the bank to take up an out-of-door occupation, and, being interested in fruit farming, came to this country with his wife and two infants about six years ago, hoping here to get the information and experience he desired. Lack of capital threw him upon his own efforts to earn a livelihood but he applied himself with all the energy his health and strength permitted, and was for the past three years the capable assistant of Mr. William Calder, who deeply feels the loss in his sudden passing away, not only of a helper but a friend. After the body had been prepared for burial at the undertaking rooms, it was taken at Mr. Calder's request to his home rather than to Mr. White's cottage, and from thence was taken on Saturday afternoon to St. James' Church where the funeral service was held.

On Sunday evening, Rev. E. Underwood, the rector of St. James, preached a very impressive sermon from the text, "He giveth His beloved sleep," and at its close made the following appreciative reference to Mr. White:—

"And thus I am led to make brief mention of the sad event which four days ago called forth the deep sympathy of this entire community for one who, in a few brief moments of time, became a widow, and for two

Our Apples in England.

The Liverpool Fruit Exchange is the most celebrated of its kind in the world. It is a union of six old and time-honored firms that occupy a building in Commercial Street, where they have their offices and a large saleroom. The building is a well-known structure, centrally situated, unpretentious in appearance, but commodious, with extensive vaults, for storing samples. The saleroom is in the form of an amphitheatre, having a seating capacity of about 250. The seats rise in semi-circular tiers, and a gallery overhangs. Along one side extends a narrow elevated platform from which the auctioneer dominates the scene. On the platform with the auctioneer and the officials of the Exchange usually appear a number of visitors, Spaniards mostly, interested in the sale of oranges, or some of the many commodities offered; occasionally also a Canadian, interested in the sale of apples. The body of the room contains, throughout the day of sale, a concourse of buyers from all over the northern and central counties of England. The focus of interest is the circular space on the floor in front of and below the auctioneer. As each lot is called the samples, usually two in number, rise from the cellarage in full view of the buyers. One of the barrels or boxes is at once seized by two alert attendants, and its contents are emptied into a large wicker basket. Sometimes an outburst of laughter greets a ludicrous revelation. "Ornament," she says, "is in a word, the seeming truth which cunning times put on to entrap the wisest." But the wise jobber is not entrapped nowadays by the outward show of a barrel of apples. Nowhere is the value of a good reputation more apparent than in the saleroom of the Liverpool Fruit Exchange. When the cable report reads: Spies, 15s. 6d. to 15s., one may safely ascribe to 6d. of the top figure to the good reputation of some well-known brand.

Sales begin promptly at 10 o'clock, and each firm occupies 40 minutes, varying regularly the order of precedence, the first one day being the second the next, and so on. After the first round, smaller sized lots are taken up in the same order. The auctioneer is usually one of the leading members of the firm. The buyers have always a good knowledge of the quality and condition of each lot, for the day before, they were at the dock and had abundant opportunities of examining the fruit. The auction system of buying and selling is developed in England as it is nowhere else, and the skill of the auctioneer and the promptness of the buyers soon reach the point where any advance meets with its final response. The vast amount of business transacted and the accuracy and thoroughness that characterizes every transaction cannot fail to impress a visitor with genuine admiration; and the recognized integrity of the firms that comprise the Exchange, and the numbers and varied interests of the buyers, give shippers of apples every assurance of an absolutely square deal.

Scarcely less interesting is the scene at the dock when a Canadian apple boat is unloading its cargo. The long, wide street is filled with busy activity. The barrels are being deposited by the steamer's derrick in sling-loads, or else are rolling slowly down a slide in continuous procession. Hand-trucks are rattling in all directions along the concrete floor carrying barrels to the scales allotted each consignment. There busy attendants receive the barrels, classify and arrange them according to brand variety, grade and condition. Prospective buyers are passing from group to group, like bees among ample blossoms, opening barrels, examining the contents and carefully replacing the covers. The Dominion inspector, a most useful functionary, is unobtrusively taking notes for his report to the Department at Ottawa. Policemen, customs officers, watchmen, are not wanting, and over all may be heard the directing voice of the shed superintendent.

Life has many shadows, but the sunshine makes them all.

Battled Forty Hours With Hunger Mad- dened Dogs

Dr. Grenville, the Labrador Physician has Thrilling Experience on an Ice Pack

St. Johns, Nfld., June 3.—Battling for forty hours against a pack of hunger-maddened dogs on an ice pack off the coast of Labrador, with the temperature ten degrees below zero and only a knife to defend himself, is the thrilling experience that Dr. Grenville, the celebrated missionary physician, recently had. The story is told by Sapt. W. Bartlett, of the steamer Strathcona, which has arrived here from the North.

Dr. Grenville had left Battle Harbor, Labrador, to attend patients at another settlement ten miles distant, and was driven off the coast by a moving ice field, and into an area covered only with broken ice drift. Before he could stop the dogs, they carried him into the water. The dogs attempted to climb on Dr. Grenville's back and he was obliged to fight them before he was able to climb on to a solid piece of drift ice. The dogs also succeeded in saving themselves.

With the wind blowing a gale, the temperature below, and night at hand, the doctor thought he might be frozen to death, as his clothing was saturated. He cut his skin boots in halves and placed the pieces over his back and chest to shield those parts of his body from the blast. As the wind and cold increased when night came on, he determined to kill and skin three of the dogs to afford him more warmth and to supply the other animals with food, fearing that becoming hungry they would tear him to pieces. As it was, they attacked him savagely, biting him about the hands and legs.

The doctor spent a trying night. Wrapped in the skins of the dead dogs, he still found it so cold that repeatedly he had to run about to keep up the circulation of the blood. However, the next day he would be in sight of land, though the ice was fast receding from the shore, the doctor took the legs of the dead dogs, and, binding them together, made a pole, to the top of which he attached part of his shirt, to serve as a signal, and this eventually proved to be his salvation, as the flag was seen by George Reid and others of Lock's Cove, Mare Bar, and they effected a rescue.

Dr. Grenville was made a companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George two years ago by King Edward. His work is supported largely by Americans.

Recalls By-gone Days.

The Monitor received a call yesterday from Mr. George A. Knodell, of St. John, who with his daughter, Miss Knodell, is making his annual trip to the Valley. Mr. Knodell is delighted with his trip, and says he never found fruit crop prospects better. In course of conversation, referring to his early connection with the press of Bridgetown, he gave us the date of the first paper published in Bridgetown. Under the title of the Western News, it was issued the second Thursday in January, 1856. The office of publication was the Oakes building, now the business property of Mr. Karl Freeman. Later the office was removed to the building across the street, the property of Mrs. Georgiana Sanction, where the Jacobson and Son's now have their store.

The late William Calnek was the editor of the Western News and Mr. Knodell came from St. John to act as foreman, and Mr. Noah Thomas, from Newfoundland, was engaged as compositor. Mr. Knodell returned to St. John two years later, and for many years has been the proprietor of a prosperous job printing establishment in that city. His wife was a Miss Hoyt, daughter of William Hoyt, of Bridgetown, and on his occasional visits here he finds many old friends ready to extend him a welcome.

JOHN FISHER WELCH, SECOND OFFICER OF THE BERMIUDIAN WILL BE IN COMMAND OF THE RACER.

(New York Herald.) James Craig has entered his power boat, the Ailsa Craig, in the power boat race to Bermuda, which starts from New York on Saturday, June 6. The Craig was the winner last year of the race over the same course, and her owner hopes for similar good luck in the coming contest.

The Craig is at the Electric Launch Company's Works, Bayonne, N. J., receiving her finishing touches for the long ocean trip. The only additions that will be made are raised skylight casings and a ventilating funnel for the engine room, the necessity of which was felt in last year's race.

The Craig in the coming race will be in charge of John Fisher Welch, the second officer of the Bermudian, a position which he has long held, and he takes command of the Craig by the courtesy of Captain Fraser and the Quebec Steamship Company. The seafaring world will remember Mr. Welch, as he had charge of the Bermudian's boat that rescued Captain Andrew Adams and nine men from the sinking four masted schooner Mary L. Newhall during tempestuous weather on February 4, and they were brought to this port.

The young officer here mentioned—now barely twenty years of age—is the son of the late Captain G. Leslie Welch, of Yarmouth, N. S. He was born at Bridgetown, at the residence of his grandfather, the late John W. Fisher, who is favorably remembered by many of our readers.

RICHARDSON-IRVIN.

The marriage of Miss Genevieve Marguerite Besse Irvin, daughter of John Irvin, barrister and crown attorney, to Reginald B. Richardson, Manager of the Royal Bank of Canada, St. James' Church on Wednesday morning last at 10.30. Rev. E. Underwood officiating.

The church was crowded to the doors with friends and spectators. The groom, supported by his friend, Mr. Erman, of P. E. Island, awaited the bride at the altar. Entering upon the arm of her father, handsomely gowned in ivory satin with trimmings of Lunenburg lace, wearing a bridal veil and carrying bride roses, the bride made a lovely appearance. Miss Brenda Troop, her bridesmaid, wore a dainty and becoming gown of white satin, trimmed with pink and carrying pink carnations. The little maid of honor, Miss Doris Caldwell, daughter of the Boston branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, was charming in a white gown of accordin plaited silk and lace with hat to match and carrying carnations.

A full church service was rendered, Miss Grace Hoyt presiding at the organ.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at "The Cottage," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Irvin, where a number of guests were entertained until the afternoon express left for Halifax, when Mr. and Mrs. Richardson took their departure. After a tour of the interesting places on the South shore, they will go to their future home in Prince Edward Island.

The Monitor-Sentinel extends congratulations and best wishes.

Elections in Ontario and Quebec

Government Sustained in Each Province, Prominent Liberals Lose in Quebec. Eighty-seven Seats for Conservatives in Ontario.

Two hard fought electoral battles took place on Monday in Ontario and Quebec. In each province the government was sustained. In Ontario, Whitney, Conservative leader the result was eighty-seven seats for the government, eighteen for liberals one independent. In Quebec Premier Gouin was returned with fifty-seven seats out of a House of seventy-four.

According to press reports both parties are rejoicing over the results. Here are the statements of the Herald and Chronicle:

(Halifax Herald.)

Ottawa, June 8.—There is a sad looking government party here this evening. The almost utter annihilation of the liberal representation in the Ontario assembly and the increase of opposition strength in Quebec from seven to sixteen, is a hard blow to the party prestige. Add to this the fact that the minister of railways has failed to carry his seat of Brookville, Hon. Mr. Patterson has seen South Brant lost to his party, Aylesworth finds his York riding in danger, while in Laurier's riding of Quebec, East, the ministerial candidate has been beaten by an independent liberal. In Broder's riding the majority has been cut down. The provincial premier has been beaten in his riding of St. James, Montreal, and Bourassa has been elected for two seats.

As the Ontario majorities are much larger than those of Quebec, it is considered that a Dominion election, run on the same lines, would give the conservatives a majority of ten to twenty in the two provinces taken together.

This is the lesson that the Dominion government will take to heart, and there is reason to expect that the ministers will forget their Manitoba designs and their coercion propositions and settle down to the serious business of the session. Ministers have been waiting to see whether the elections would give them a chance to alarm the opposition with threats of dissolution. The returns do not serve that purpose.

The astonishing success of Bourassa in the two elections, the return of his associate Lavergne in Montmagny and of his followers in Ottawa county is a great shock to Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his Quebec associates.

(Halifax Chronicle.)

Although the expected happened in Ontario, the Ottawa obstructionists are far from jubilant over the results of today's voting. The victory of the Whitney Government is more than offset by the great triumph of the Quebec Liberals over the combined forces and now amalgamated of Bourassa and the Bordentans. The Ottawa Tories have been building great hopes on the strength of the Bourassa Nationalist movement in Quebec and many of them expected that the Gouin Government would be overthrown.

The signal victory which the Liberal party has won against this combination is a bitter disappointment to the Borden party. It sounds the death knell of all their hopes for the Federal election with Quebec as strongly Liberal as ever and with the Gouin Government triumphantly sustained in spite of a most insidious and inflammatory campaign against it. The Tories recognize that the outlook for them at the Dominion elections is hopeless.

A JUNE WEDDING STORY.

The merry month of June and its weddings are usually productive of a good crop of stories—not to say of a crop of good stories. This year one of these comes from St. Stephen, where the incident is said to have taken place at a happy event on Wednesday last. It chanced that the bride was a native of Yarmouth, which is also the home of Rev. Dr. W. H. Hertz, president of the Methodist conference of Nova Scotia. That well known divine is a friend of the groom, and being unable to be present at the ceremony, he forwarded the following telegram: "Heartiest congratulations and best wishes from the Hertz family." When the receiving telegrapher got this message, however, he could not exactly make sense out of it, not being very familiar with the surname, which is of German origin, and he produced the following masterpiece: "Heartiest Monthly October 12th, 1908, to Miss Eleanor F. Lewys, who was at that time editor of the Overland Monthly, and who is herself a young writer of both prose and poetry."

When we are at home we are always blaming the weather or the government, but when we have travelled about we realize that both are perfect.

A man can be happy, knowing that within himself he has done well.

A NOVA SCOTIAN PRINTER-POET

"The Writer," a magazine published at Boston for literary workers, has the following in a recent issue: Charles S. Ross, author of the poem "Old Mothers," in the Century for December, published in this issue, was born in Nova Scotia thirty-nine years ago, and learned the trade of printer in the town of Yarmouth. When he was twenty-two years old he went to Boston, where he worked as a printer until 1905, when he crossed the continent, working in one or two states by the way, and arriving in San Francisco eight days before the earthquake. His first poem of any note was a sonnet, "Night-Before Dawn," published in the Youth's Companion for February 15, 1900. He has since had poems in the Youth's Companion, the Boston Transcript, the Boston Journal, Town Topics, and the Overland Monthly. Mr. Ross was married October 12th, 1906, to Miss Eleanor F. Lewys, who was at that time editor of the Overland Monthly, and who is herself a young writer of both prose and poetry.

A Man is Only a Man

By Winnifred Black.

A man I know is in trouble—had trouble.

"I got a decent salary," he said, "but I got behind a year or so ago through sickness and various things and I've never caught up."

"I'm in debt and I don't believe I'll ever get out of it. I dread the day of every month just as a condemned man dreads execution day. Tap, tap, knock, knock, br-r-r-r! they're at the door all day—the collector. At first I could stand them off with a promise of a dollar or two, but now they bound me like a pack of the bloodhounds we used to read about in 'Uncle Tom's Cabin.' I'm afraid I'll have to leave town and go somewhere else and start again."

"Why don't you pay up?" I said to the man I know. He stared at me with astonished eyes. "Pay up?" he said. "Why? I'd give ten years of my life if I could pay up."

"Ten years of your life," said I; "that's a good price. How about your cigars and your whiskey and soda and your little suppers after the theatre—couldn't you give them up for say six months?"

"I should think that would be better than to give ten years of your life or even than running away like a coward."

"There's a little woman in a newspaper office who works at the telephone exchange; she gets $10 a week; she's supporting a mother and six brothers on that $10. She showed me the deeds for two lots she's buying out where her brother's tent is. If she can do that, why can't I? I should think you could pay a few honest debts on $60."

"The man gasped, then he shrugged his shoulders, and then he smiled. "Oh, well, old man," he said, "a woman can do that sort of thing; a man can't."

"Why not?" I queried mildly.

"Oh, well, a man can't," that's all.

"You mean a man won't," said I, and then we both laughed and changed the subject.

If I really cared anything for the man I know I would have been honest enough to keep right on with the same subject and I would have said: "Now, I don't want to lecture you and I'm not going to," but please don't think you really like your troubles again until you've made your mind to face them like a man. Don't try to run away from them like a deserter; it's all a question of what you really like in the world and what you pretend to like.

"The trouble with you is you like your own comfort better than you like being a man. If you had a question about the first of every month as a criminal dreads execution day, yet you don't dread it as much as you do the idea of giving up some fool little luxury that you would just as well do without.

"I'm not blaming you for your likes and dislikes; you didn't make yourself.

"Of course, you could do something toward making yourself over a bit if you really wanted to, but that isn't the question we're discussing."

"What I dislike about you is that you won't tell yourself the truth about yourself and take the consequences. You really prefer living on other people's money and getting fat on other people's worry to denying yourself any of the fool little luxuries you make yourself believe are necessities. Now, why don't you admit it? Why don't you call yourself a footpad or a holdup man and be done with it? But you see I didn't really care, so I was dishonest enough to let the man I know so about his business, feeling he is a martyr. Instead of waking him up to the fact that he is nothing but a selfish thief, I wonder if I did right."

Not a Miracle But Medical Science

Dr. T. A. Steinetz, Limited, Toronto, Ont.

"Some time ago I began to lose flesh and failed every day until I had to quit work. My physicians and all my friends said I had consumed something. I failed from 105 pounds down to 119. I was advised to go to the Rockies or to the coast. I went to both places under heavy expense. I continued to fail, and was advised by that doctors to come home as nothing more could be done for me. Hops seemed to have left me."

"I tried Psychology and since starting its use I have gained from 119 to 141 pounds. I have had 21000 worth of the medicine. I am a well man and I cannot say too much in praise of Psychology. The strongest recommendation would be weak in view of the fact that I believe it has saved my life. It has run down conditions and weak lungs. I sincerely hope and trust that Psychology will continue your good work of saving run down people and consumptive patients. Writing you and Psychology continued success. I remain, as of Psychology's best friend,

The World to Come

It is one of the best signs of the increasing collective wisdom of the peoples that they are now bestirring themselves for the preservation of their national resources. It is dangerous for the people of many countries that the natural resources of the earth are being used up at a rate so tremendous that in a measurable period of time the great staple products, such as coal and iron, will be exhausted, at least in countries like Great Britain and the United States where the production is greatest.

Having the prophesy of what this continent is coming to, as a result of present methods of production and consumption of natural supplies, Dr. Charles P. Steinetz, of Union College, Schenectady, predicts that young men now living will see the exhaustion of anthracite. The natural course, then, will be to rely upon bituminous coal for protection against freezing. But the government has been obliged to prohibit this, or the air will become impregnated with poisonous gases. Then the only hope he can see in the future is electricity. But what a queer world he pictures this will be when that time comes. All rivers and water courses will be turned into successions of lakes by dams and electric power. Provision will also have to be made for the utilization of the sun's rays in the heating of houses.

In the city of the future will be the collection of office buildings, factories and bachelor apartments. This change, he says, has already begun. Families are moving farther and farther into the fields, and business is concentrating in city centres. The cost of electricity will have to be reduced. That depends on the distribution of the 'loads.' When these things are worked out over the twenty-four hours in a systematic way the end will have come for oil and gas illumination. But in Dr. Steinetz's opinion a vaster problem will face the nations in the next generation. It will arise from the exhaustion of the soil. The cities are dumping into the rivers and the sea the fertilizers which should be returned to the land from which they came, but are now lost forever. Billions on billions of dollars' worth are thus wasted, and the people of the future must pay the penalty. This dismal prospect may find at least such measure of credence as will aid the movement for the preservation of natural resources. So far all the needs of man have been more and more abundantly supplied, and we are inclined to think that in some way or other it will continue to be so, but that will probably be by the use of human hands and the transformation of intelligent civilization.

HOT SHOT FOR A JURY.

A jury in Woodstock, N. B., gave a verdict "not guilty" in the case of Richard Gray, charged with incest.

Judge McLeod thus handled the jury, without gloves, after their finding.

"I cannot compliment you on your finding. This is the most extraordinary verdict I ever heard. Jurymen taking the oath as you have done, should pay some attention to the evidence. This is a plain case, and it is your duty to find against the man if you are again permitted to have a place as Jurymen in this County. It is actions such as you have done today that have brought disgrace on the name of Carleton County."

"Prisoner, turn out Gray, I am obliged to discharge you because the jury says you are not guilty, which is not in accordance with the evidence."

Whales Forcing Mackerel Inshore

(Halifax Chronicle)

The prospects for the fishermen of the Western Shore, securing good hauls of mackerel are excellent, as large whales are forcing the fish inshore and the American seiners cannot reach them. The mackerel are very wild, and the Americans thus far have not been able to successfully shoot their seines. At least six large whales were sighted off Sambro yesterday and it is thought that they are following the schools of fish.

The cruiser Canada, Capt. Knowlton, arrived in port last night. The Canada is keeping a sharp watch on the Americans, and is engaged daily cruising off Sambro, where there is a fleet of twenty-five American mackerel seiners. The presence of whales on this coast is something unusual, but they have followed the mackerel here. The Canada will go out again this morning.

At Clark's Harbor mackerel are reported schooling. Two hundred fish were taken there in one trap yesterday. At Lockeport, thirty barrels were secured, over 150 were taken by one boat at Isaac's Harbor, and off Liverpool seven American seiners are reported to have secured fish.

If one feels dull and spiritless, in the spring or early summer, they call it "Spring Fever." But there is no fever—usually. It is the after effect of our winter habits. The nerves are mostly at fault. Tired, worn-out nerves leave us languid, lifeless, and without spirit or ambition. A few doses of Dr. Shoop's Restorative will absolutely and quickly change all of the depressing symptoms. The Restorative of course won't bring you back to full health in a day or two, but it will do enough in 48 hours to satisfy you that the remedy is reaching everywhere and advising us as to a splendid and prompt general tonic. It sharpens the falling appetite, aids digestion, frees sluggish livers and kidneys, and brings new life, strength and vigor. Test it a few days and be convinced.

PROFIT IN WASTE PLACES ON THE FARM.

Many poor soils, now waste spots on the farm, would become profitable if planted with the right kind of forest trees and cared for in the right way. Trees will often grow where grain and grass will not. They are, of course, not to be abandoned. There is money in most of them if they are set to work producing wood and forest products. The various forest products, such as poplar, oak, chestnut or some other kind. But the soil must be studied, and the species selected to suit it. Failure might follow the planting of walnut or soil suited to white pine, or vice versa.

Studies of various regions and trees that suit them have been made by the various forest services. The aim of these studies has been to point out how the farm's waste and neglected corners may be turned into good lots where the farmer may grow his own posts, poles, fences and sawlogs. The owner pays taxes on all his land, and is out of pocket for whatever is not carrying him something.

Further, by growing a tree crop on land which is too poor to plough, the quality of the land itself is improved. Wood growing on worn-out land thus becomes doubly profitable.

HARD TIMES FOR DRUNKARDS.

In the meantime, while the world is discussing his case, the lot of the drunkard, the all-time drunkard, grows worse. He is no greater misanthrope than he was a hundred years ago, but he is not as tenderly and tolerantly regarded as he was then. Courts and the general public do not care as formerly for the plea of sobriety. The unfeeling answer is returned that his spells of sobriety should come nearer together and his intervals of drunkenness further apart. His offense is not condoned by society as it was in the days when drunkenness, once a religious, drunkenness is a bar to employment now. The drunkard is blacklisted and boycotted without any formalities.

Gluten is really the nutriment in wheat. It is a heavy, tough substance much resembling raw dough. The trouble with Manitoba flour is, that it contains too much gluten. Bread made with it is apt to be gray and heavy, and pastry is sure to be.

Ontario wheat does not contain quite enough gluten, but it is rich in carbohydrates—which give to flour the qualities of lightness and whiteness.

Beaver Flour

is both a Manitoba and an Ontario wheat flour.

Just as much Ontario and Manitoba flour are used in blending Beaver Flour, so that each will supply what the other lacks.

That is why Beaver Flour makes whiter, lighter, more wholesome bread and biscuits than Manitoba flour—and makes lighter, tastier cakes, pies and pastry than any "pastry" flour.

No matter what other flour you are using now, try Beaver Flour. The first sack will prove its superiority. At your grocer's.

STOMACH TROUBLES.

Many remarkable cures of stomach troubles have been effected by Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. One man who had spent over two thousand dollars for medicine and treatment was cured by a few boxes of these tablets. Price, 25 cents. Samples free at W. A. WARREN'S, BRIDGETOWN, W. W. WADE'S AND BEAR RIVER DRUG STORE.

SIMPLE CURE FOR SMOKING.

There have been now and again several suggestions put forwards for the cure of excessive cigarette smoking by boys. One of the most original and simple, yet good in results, has just been told me. It is nothing less than feeding your boy peppermint candy. Tobacco will not blend kindly with the taste of sweet peppermint. Socially the cure may seem worse than the disease, but from a medical viewpoint the sucking of peppermints is far less harmful. A common peppermint drop will prevent smoking for about an hour, so the amount of candy used need not be great.

THE PRICE OF ONE DRINK.

At a children's party, a beautiful little girl, with a sweet but sad face, sat in a small rocking chair watching the other children play, but taking no part. She wore a dainty white cape. More than one child wondered why she did not play, but soon they all found out. A little guest came to the little stranger and said, "Put out your hands, and I'll fill 'em full to the brim." But the gentle request was not obeyed. "Put out your hands, I say," said the leader. "don't you want to play?" Her face paled and her lips quivered, but she did not put out her hands nor speak. The little hostess seeing that her guests were watching the little visitor, who was spending a few days at her home asked, "What is the matter?" "She won't play," was the answer. "She can't play," said the hostess sorrowfully. The little stranger had no arms. She was the child of wealthy parents, who did all they could for her comfort and pleasure, but they could not bring back her arms. It was a sad story. One day as she sat on the front steps of her beautiful home, a happy, laughing child, singing a lullaby to her doll, her brother came home. He had a gun in his hand and was staggering. She thought he was staggering for fun, and laughed with childish glee. "I'm going to shoot you," he said angrily. Then she was afraid. As he raised the gun, she bent her head and threw up her hands. The boy fired. The dear little hands of the child were almost shot off. To save her life, her arms had to be cut off. The boy was heart-broken. He loved his little sister, but "just one drink" made him wild. He never took a drop of strong drink after that. He wants to forget that black day, but cannot. No matter how tired he is, he never rests his weary head upon the pillow, this thought haunting him. "Janie's dear little arms! The price of just one drink."—Exchange.

The Stray Men of the Schooner Fame

Provincetown, May 28.—Dan McEachern and Joe Welch, who went astray in the fog from the Boston fishing schooner Fame, 72 miles east of Thatcher's Island, the day before that ill-fated craft, with 16 of her men, went into the depths beneath the cutting prow of the steamer Boston, are safe at the Race Point life-saving station. They are much exhausted with the hardships of their long straying and further labors at the oars today on the second bitter stage of the landward struggle.

However, they are in no wise cast down, except by the news of their shipmates' deaths, and stoutly stated to-night that they should make no long stay on shore, but would at once endeavor to get a berth on another vessel. The Herald reporter conversed with them at the life-saving station late to-night. They had only just arrived there after a fatiguing three-mile walk through clinging sands from Race Point light-house beach, where they landed about 6 o'clock, after a 35 mile sail and row today. When they were off the light at that hour to-night Surfman Mayo, western patrolman from the station, established them rowing east on the way round for Provincetown harbor and signalled them to land, thereby saving them a further row of a dozen miles. Said Dan McEachern (and his eyes were tear-filled) "oh, the poor lads of the Fame, we didn't know anything had happened to them or the schooner until we made landing here. We felt that we were in a desperate fix when we were buried in thick fog and tugging for life the first night astray but we realize now that had we remained our vessel last Monday we should now be resting with the rest of our fellows at the bottom of the sea."

"How did we get astray?"

"Well, I'll tell ye. "The dories launched from the Fame about 8 o'clock Monday morning. My partner and I had the windward berth, that is, our trawl set over night, was the farthest of all to windward of the vessel. The weather wasn't bad, and the air was clear. When we got to our trawls we went to work hauling, not anticipating any trouble."

"But along about 11 o'clock that forenoon the fog came down so thick that it hedged us about like a wall and we couldn't see the length of a forecay sail boom in either direction. Even then we didn't fear. We finished hauling and put about for the schooner. How we missed her I don't know. Her fog horn must have been going at intervals, and we couldn't hear it. We were very close together, but we did not sight nor hear from her."

"We rowed and rowed that day trying to find the schooner. Not using the trawl, we went to the point where the blanket of wet mist and when it came on night we gave up like a wall, knowing it was folly to go on forever rowing aimlessly when in such a condition of want. We hadn't a morsel of grub aboard, only a little jug of water when we started and that was about exhausted, we having made a very bad start, but we were pulling about."

"We had a little mutton leg salt and mast. We stuck that up and burned how low at the point where we supposed the land must be. But we hadn't any compass, so had no real knowledge as to whether we were going landward or out to sea. It was all right during the day, but that succeeding night was bad enough in all reason. It came on to blow hard and the cold was something awful, drenched as we were and exposed to the fog and spray in an open dory. But the dory was a good one, just the common 15-foot trawler dory, which no better small seaboat exists for use in a sea way. It rowed rough, but we legged her on, lugging sail, striving to get as far as possible, hoping to make Seguin Island when clearing weather and daylight should give us a view of our surroundings."

"Next morning found the fog as dense as ever, and while we were plugging on, balling as we had been doing all night to keep the dory from swamping, we ran right across the hawser of the three-master Grace Davis, Captain Quinn, from Bangor for New York with lumber."

"We hoisted right ahead of her. She was right upon us before we got a glimpse of her and yelled. Five minutes later we were on her, getting a royal reception from the captain and his good ladies."

"Then tilters treated us white. They were as good to us as our brothers would have been, and they kept us well fed and warm during all of our stay aboard ship. God bless 'em!"

"This morning, when we were 25 miles southeast of Highland light, fog still thick and wind east, we saw a vessel approaching off our lee bow. Believing it was a fisherman bound

EAT ORANGES

IF YOU WANT TO KEEP WELL

Careful tests have proved beyond question that orange juice has clearly defined medicinal virtues. Those who suffer with indigestion—are compelled "to die"—and that after eating oranges regularly for breakfast there is no distress, no palpitation.

Where there was a tendency towards constipation, the eating of oranges regulated the bowels.

In skin troubles, those who began the morning meal with an orange were noticeably improved.

There is, however, a quicker way to get better results. This is to take one or two "Fruit-a-lives" tablets at bedtime in addition to the juice of an orange before breakfast the next morning. "Fruit-a-lives" are the juices of oranges, apples, figs and prunes in which the medicinal action is many times intensified by the special way of combining them. Valuable tonics are then added.

"Take the juice of an orange before breakfast—take 'Fruit-a-lives' at night—and you will quickly be rid of indigestion, Stomach Troubles, constipation and Biliousness. "Fruit-a-lives" are sold by all dealers at 10c a box—6 for $2.50. Sent on receipt of price by "Fruit-a-lives," Limited, Ottawa.

A STARTLING REQUEST.

There is a church out in the West which had a faithful sexton named Robertson, who for many years looked after the dusting of the pews and the ventilating of the sanctuary. But Robertson departed this life and the congregation mourned. About a week after his demise, the prayer-meeting was being held, when the pastor, a notoriously absent-minded man, finding the room unpleasantly warm, turned to a prominent member and said with gentle distinctness: "Brother Blank, will you kindly go below and ask Robertson to turn off the hot air?"

SUBMERGED.

At the close of one of the recent Church Alexander revival services in Philadelphia the minister of a certain church went down the aisle, according to his custom, to greet the strangers in the congregation. "I don't think you are a member of our Church?" said he to one as he warmly shook his hands. "No, sir," replied the stranger. "Well, you will not think me unduly curious if I ask to what denomination you belong?" asked the minister. "I suppose," responded the other, "I'm really what you might call a submerged Presbyterian." "A submerged Presbyterian?" exclaimed the minister. "I should be glad if you would explain." "Well, I was brought up a Presbyterian, my wife is a Methodist, my eldest daughter is a Baptist, my son is an organist at a Unitarian Church, my second daughter goes to a Congregational Sunday School." "But," said the minister, earnestly, "you contribute, doubtless, to some church?" "Yes, I contribute to all of them." Was the answer; "that's what submerges me."

THE NEW BABY.

A young woman of a religious turn of mind wished to announce to a friend the birth of her first-born child. She sent the following telegram: "Isaiah ix. 6," which being interpreted reads, "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given."

The friend, more literal and less familiar with the prophets, reads the message and said to her husband: "Margaret has a boy, but why on earth did she name him Isaiah? He must be a healthy chap, though, for he weighs nine pounds and six ounces."

While a penurious grocer was telling his new boy how careful he must be a fly settled on a bag of sugar. The grocer caught it and threw it away. The boy then said: "If you want me to be careful you are setting me a bad example."

"Because," said the boy, "you have thrown the fly away without brushing the sugar off his feet."

"That woman next door is really dreadful, John," said a young married woman to her husband. "She does nothing but talk the whole day long. She cannot get any work done I'm sure."

"Oh!" remarked the husband, "I thought she was a chatterbox. And to whom does she talk?"

"Why, my dear, to me, of course, was the reply. "She talks to me over the fence."

A VOTER FOR BUNG.

Publican—"And how do you like being married, John?"

John—"Don't like it at all."

Publican—"Why, what's the matter with you, John?"

John—"Well, first thing in the morning it's money; when I go to 'ome to my dinner it's money again; and at supper it's the same. Nothing but money, money, money!"

Publican—"Well, I never! What do she do with all that money?"

John—"I dunno. I ain't given her any yet."

M. K. PIPER, PROPRIETOR AND PUBLISHER.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 10, 1908.

Now is the time to see the Valley at its most beautiful season. The fresh, vivid green of the foliage, the profusion of bloom in the orchards and their fragrance, the sense of buoyancy and life-giving promise that fill the atmosphere of our early summer days cannot be surpassed in any climate, and give all of us who can enjoy the delights of Nature a foretaste of the Paradise we all hope for.

But while Nature is doing her best to scatter beauty in waste places, man is strangely indifferent to her bounties, and while the soil untrodden by human-kind shows neither blot nor blemish, wherever mankind congregates the results of sloth and carelessness mar the beauty of the landscape.

Fortunately, however, a realization of this is beginning to take effect. A few signs of any pretense to progressiveness, but here a civic improvement League or some other system for the encouragement of order and cleanliness.

Bridgetown has not yet fallen in line with these other towns, though it is hoped she may not linger long in the rear of the progressive movement. In the meantime, many of our citizens are bestowing much care and attention to making their private places beautiful, or, at least, attractive by their neatness, and the town owes a debt of gratitude to these. Some more general and organized method is needed, however, to keep our streets from being the unattractive examples of civic indifference and neglect that they now are.

AN INDUSTRIAL DIFFICULTY. (Sackville Tribune.)

One of the difficulties met with by many industrial companies today is that of securing apprentices. Rather, perhaps, the difficulty is not so much in securing apprentices as in retaining their services for a sufficient length of time to enable them to become of real service to their employers. It is quite true that many young people are seeking employment today but it is also unfortunately true that in many cases they are unwilling to take with the employment the measure of hard work and the small wages which are a certainty in the case of almost every beginner. They lose sight, apparently of the fact that for weeks, perhaps for months, they will be of comparatively little value to their employers. Despite this fact they expect good wages and rapid advancement, forgetting that these come only with experience and the display of interest in the work as opposed to mere interest in the amount in the wage envelope. Not long ago the head of one of New Brunswick's largest mercantile establishments spoke in strong terms to the Tribune of the unwillingness of the boy of today to master his work before expecting increase of pay or promotion in position. Here in Sackville manufacturing concerns have found it a matter of difficulty to retain sufficient hands simply because the young people hired were unwilling to work for what they were worth in point of service rendered but wished at the outset of their employment wages which they could not earn until they had mastered some of the rudiments of the work in which they were engaged. Fair wages are rightly demanded but a fair wage is one fair to employer and employed alike. That is not a fair wage which is paid to one who does not earn it. There is reason for reflection in the attitude of many young people toward this matter of wages and advancement.

An Advertising Fallacy

Many advertisers have a somewhat mistaken idea of the functions of advertising. They consider that the mere purchase of space in an advertising medium and the insertion of an advertisement should forthwith bring them in a great deal of business—in fact enough to justify them in saying that advertising pays. When their attempt does not have this immediate result, they at once come to the conclusion that advertising does not pay.

A business man, who runs a trial advertisement in a medium for a single insertion, hopes thereby to get returns from every reader of the paper. When only one or two answer instead of being gratified, he is disappointed. He forgets the dozen or so more, who noted his advertisement, but who, by reason of the indolence of human nature, neglected to reply at once, and gradually forgot about it.

Again, an advertiser who asserts that advertising does not pay, often times has only himself to blame. There is a way to advertise well and there is a way to advertise ill. It is for the advertiser himself to make his publicity tell. Do not be inclined to blame the medium and blame advertising in general. Rather ask if you are obtaining the best possible effects in the composition of your advertisement, both literary and typographical.

SUPPRESSION OF PROFANITY.

(From the Calgary Herald.)

Within recent months a virulent campaign has been started, with Halifax as its headquarters, for the suppression of profane language. It must be regretfully acknowledged that such a campaign is much needed in Canada, as the habit of loose language has grown rapidly here during recent years. Canadians and Americans swear very readily. Englishmen and Scotchmen, except certain classes and under stress of anger or excitement, are milder in language than our own people. Our trouble is that we use profane words merely for the sake of emphasis. An Englishman says "Gracious!" where a Canadian says "Damn!" An Englishman remarks: "My word, that's a cracking good shot!" where the tendency of an American is to swear in the name of his Creator that it is a "damn good shot." Both are equally innocent of profane intent, but one has been educated to a better appreciation of the uses of language than the other. The use of profanity among school children is one of the most painful evils of the present day. Pass any public school during recess and you are apt to hear language used by the boys at play which shocks your ears and makes you wonder where they could have learned it. The answer is—they learned it from their elders, from the men and boys who pass them in the streets or who lounge on corners commenting with freedom and coarseness on the passing show. Canadians are not naturally immoral. They have, indeed, a natural reverence for sacred things. Their present tendency to loose language is merely the result of environment and of the western freedom that permeates their social structure. They should be responsive to a campaign of reform which must, however, be based on ethical as well as religious grounds in order to be fully effective.

Some men consider that the mere fact of having lived three score years or so makes their judgment and wisdom infallible.

The only chance you get of triumphing over life is winning the things that you want by working hard for them.

RETURNING TO NOVA SCOTIA.

The Boston Post of Friday says:—For the past three months hundreds of families have left Boston and vicinity for the provinces. Many of them are going to stay, they say. It is a question of going home, for they practically all came from that section originally. The bad business conditions, stringency of the money market, and the fact that many have not been able to obtain work are among the reasons given. "Since the first of March we have carried an unusually large number of passengers to the provinces," said J. F. Munter, superintendent for New England of the Dominion Atlantic Railway Steamship line. "We have been running two trips a week from Boston to Yarmouth. On every trip we have carried from twelve to fifteen families who were returning to different points in the provinces. There has also been carried more than half a ship full of household goods on each trip. I expect that this sort of thing will continue until the middle of July. A large number of people who were burned out in the Chelsea fire have gone to the provinces. A great many Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick people lived in Chelsea, and the fire deprived them of the means of making a living."

An Ideal House

The ideal twentieth century home has just been completed at Carrollton, Ill., says the Cement Age. The house is constructed of concrete and there is not a sign of a chimney, although the building is supplied with an abundance of artificial light and heat. Neither is there any fire in the house, nor coal, nor ashes, nor dangerous gases. While this wonderful residence is the first of its kind in the world, it is beyond a doubt a good example of what the average American home will be in a few years from now when both wood and coal have become too expensive for common use. This model home is two stories high, with attic, and basement, and has eight rooms on the main floor.

In building this dwelling, Edison's idea of a concrete house to be poured in one big mold was not carried out, yet the foundation and walls are on concrete blocks. The concrete residue on the site, and molded into the building blocks as required. There was no waste of building material. The floors are of wood and the interior is finished in plaster and oak. The style of architecture is of the plain, substantial mission type. This idea is carried out in the interior decorations as well. The building is fronted by a large porch 8 by 32 feet, and cost less than $2500. Perhaps the most novel feature about this wonderful residence is the fact that it is heated by steam from a central station. There is no noisy dusty furnace in the basement, as is usual with underground pipes. This steam-pipe enters the house in the basement and is carried to the rooms just the same as the steam from an ordinary furnace. The rooms are heated with steam radiators, and to be supplied to furnish hot water for the bath-room, near the boiler.

The bath-room, located a water tank which is kept constantly hot by a number of small pipes through which a continual flow of hot steam is circulated. This tank supplies hot water for the bath and to wash-bowls located in two of the upstairs bedrooms. Of course the house is also wired for electric light in case anything should happen to the steam-heating system.

TO OPPOSE THE WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE MOVEMENT.

London, June 6.—Prominent opponents of woman suffrage have formed the "National Woman's Anti-Suffrage Association" to combat the Suffragettes' campaign. A circular will be issued to-morrow setting forth the principles and objects of the association. It will have numerous signatories, including the Marchioness of Tweedale, the Countess of Jersey, Mrs. Humphrey Ward, Lord Dunsany, and Lord Rothschild. The promoters say they wish to combat the spirit of sex antagonism which the woman suffrage proposition is arousing, and they want the fact recognized that men and women are not antagonistic, but complementary. They believe that woman's sphere is the home, and while granting that woman's work in municipal and local bodies has been valuable and should be continued, they protest against bestowing the parliamentary franchise upon them.

The content of the effectiveness of woman's legislative power could not exceed the limits of the moral force exercised by their influence on men. This influence is immense without a vote, and it would naturally be lessened proportionately as women attempted to become the competitors and rulers of men.

BASEBALL.

Over five hundred people witnessed the game of baseball, played on the College Campus, Wolfville, on Wednesday afternoon, between the "Spaldings" of Truro, and "Acadia." The game was fast and exciting, and had for its distinguishing feature the good work done by the batteries. Faulkner and Rice for Acadia and Burke and Moore for Truro. Bates, of Acadia, also played a good game. Both teams worked hard for the victory, but Acadia won the honors of the day with a score of 3 to 1. Claude Balcom, of Margarettville, refereed satisfactorily. The new covered grand stand, recently erected on the Campus, adds much to the enjoyment and comfort of spectators.—Kentville Advertiser.

KEEP MINARD'S LINIMENT I THE HOUSE.

In The Fog

BY Richard Harding Davis.

Copyright, 1901, by Robert Howard Russell.

Navy Increase Bill," he added gloomily. "It is a Government measure, and Sir Andrew speaks for it. And so great is his influence and so large his following that if he does"—the gentleman laughed ruefully—"if he does, it will go through. Now, had I the spirit of our ancestors," he exclaimed, "I would bring chloroform from the nearest chemist's and drug him in that chair. I would tumble his unconscious form into a hansom cab, and hold him prisoner until daylight. If I did, I would save the British taxpayer the cost of five more battleships, many millions of pounds."

The gentlemen again turned, and surveyed the baronet with freshened interest. The honorary member of the Grill, whose accent already had betrayed him as an American, laughed softly.

"To look at him now," he said, "one would not guess he was deeply concerned with the affairs of state."

The others nodded silently.

"He has not lifted his eyes from that book since we first entered," added the youngest member. "He surely cannot mean to speak to-night."

"Oh, yes, he will speak," muttered the one with the black pearl moodily. "During these last hours of the session the House sits late, but when the Navy bill comes up on its third reading he will be in his place—and he will pass it."

The fourth member, a stout and florid gentleman of a somewhat sporting appearance, in a short smoking-jacket and black tie, sighed enviously.

"Fancy one of us being as cool as that, if he knew he had to stand up within an hour and rattle off a speech in Parliament. I'd be in a devil of a funk myself. And yet he is as keen over that book he's reading as though he had nothing before him until bedtime."

"Yes, see how eager he is," whispered the youngest member. "He does not lift his eyes even now when he cuts the pages. It is probably an Admiralty Report, or some other weighty work of statistics which bears upon his speech."

The gentlemen with the black pearl laughed morosely.

"The weighty work in which the eminent statesman is so deeply engrossed," he said, "is called 'The Great Rand Robbery.' It is a detective novel, for sale at all bookstalls."

The American raised his eyebrows in disbelief.

"The Great Rand Robbery?" he repeated incredulously. "What an odd taste!"

"It is not a taste, it is his vice," returned the gentleman with the pearl stud. "It is his one dissipation. He is noted for it. You, as a stranger, could hardly be expected to know of this idiosyncrasy. Mr. Gladstone sought relaxation in the Greek poets, Sir Andrew finds his in Gaborian. Since I have been a member of Parliament I have never seen him in the library without a shilling shocker in his hands. He brings them even into the sacred precincts of the House, and from the Government benches reads them concealed inside his hat. Once started on a tale of murder, robbery, and sudden death, nothing can tear him from it, not even the call of the division bell, nor of hunger, nor the prayers of the party Whip. He gave up his country house because when he journeyed to it in the train he would become so absorbed in his detective stories that he was invariably carried past his station." The member of Parliament twisted his pearl stud nervously, and bit at the edge of his mustache. "If it only were the first pages of 'The Rand Robbery' that he were reading," he murmured bitterly, "instead of the last! With such another book as that, I swear I could hold him here until morning. There would be no need of chloroform to keep him from the House."

"I would have him bound and gagged and thrown into a sedan chair."

The eyes of all were fastened upon Sir Andrew, and each saw with fascination that with his forefinger he was now separating the last two pages of the book. The member of Parliament struck the table softly with his open palm.

For New Homes in Canada

George Jackson, manager of the Middlemore Home, Birmingham, England, an old acquaintance, was a passenger on the Carthainian which arrived yesterday from Liverpool. Mr. Jackson is in charge of 154 children picked from the streets of big English cities, who come to Canada, where new homes await them. Of the party, 102 are boys and the balance, 52 girls, whose ages range from 1 year 8 months to 22 years. This is the first contingent this year, and will also be the last, as they make but one transfer yearly. The little ones will be distributed among respectable families of Nova Scotia. The home at Birmingham was founded by the late Dr. Middlemore for waifs, and is conducted along the same lines as the Barnado homes. Birmingham is the only centre, and the home has accommodations for one hundred and fifty children. The children as seen on the Carthainian are a happy lot. Many have never known a father or mother's love, and to them the word parent has very little significance. Almost from the time of their birth they have experienced nothing but pain, hunger and misery until snatched from the mill and placed in the home. Cleanliness, good food, kind words, and ventilation have their effect, and the sickly child so develops into one possessing health and strength. Mr. Jackson remains about a month in Canada, and will visit as many as possible of those boys and girls who have been living there for some time. The directors never lift their heads from those who pass through their hands. The majority are mechanics and artisans; many have married comfortably and settled down.

In all this is the truest philosophy—we overcome the lower by finding that we do not need it. We conquer by replacing; we are weaned from dependence upon the kingdom of the natural man by finding far more satisfying meat and drink than what we knew of before.

NO NEED OF SUFFERING FROM RHEUMATISM.
It is a mistake to allow rheumatism to become chronic, as the pain can always be relieved, and in most cases a cure effected by applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm. The relief from pain which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. It makes sleep and rest possible. Even in cases of long standing this liniment should be used as frequently as possible, when it affords 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by W. A. WARREN, BRIDGETOWN, W. WADE AND REAR RIVER DRUG STORE, REAR RIVER.

THE IMMORTALITY OF THE SOUL.
Of our recent scientists who are specially desirous of reconciling science with religion, the name of Sir Oliver Lodge leads the way, and readers of The Hibberd Journal, which is published by Messrs. Williams & Norgate, of London, will probably turn first to his article on "Immortality," which is printed in the April number of the Journal. In the course of his article Sir Oliver says:
The analogy pointed to is that whereas we living men and women, while associated with this mortal organism, are ignorant of what our experience our larger selves may have gone through in the past—yet when we wake out of this present materialized condition, and enter the region of larger consciousness, we may gradually realize in what a curious though legitimate condition of ignorance we now are, and may become aware of our fuller possession, with all that has happened here and now fully remembered and incorporated as an additional experience into the wide range of knowledge which that larger entity must have accumulated since its intelligence and memory began. The transition called death may thus be an awaking rather than a sleeping; it may be that we, still involved in matter, coil, are in the more dream-like and unreal condition.
The Gold Sovereign on each label of Sovereign Lime Juice is an insurance policy of purity and strength.
The Toronto News says:—There is a rumor, quite current at London, that our former citizen, R. G. Leckie Esq., and his colleagues, have sold their copper properties and interests at Sudbury, for $200,000. We all hope it is true. We know of no one more worthy of such good luck than Mr. Leckie, and we know his big generous heart would find channels through which he would do much good with his wealth."

A leaky valve caused a locomotive standing in a round house at Owen Sound, to start and collide with a fast running express. One man was killed, nine others injured.

"Life in Every Dose"

"I cannot speak too highly of Pynchon for it is the greatest medicine I ever used. I was just about 'all in' when I began the treatment, and in 3 months I was as well as ever. It is a great tonic for weak and run-down people. There is new life in every dose!"
JAS. STOLIKER.
Bridgetown, Ont., Dec. 19, 1906.
It is a sin not to tell your sick friends about this wonderful prescription. Throat, lung and stomach troubles, and all run-down conditions quickly cured by its use. At all drugists, 50c and $1.00, or Dr. T. A. Sisson, Ltd., Toronto.

The Deadly Buttercup

Philadelphia, May 23.—Dr. W. W. Chaffant, whose declaration that many cases of measles are due to a poison contained in the common field buttercups attracted considerable attention, is out with another statement in arraignment of the flower.
He now accuses it of being the cause of cancer. "The active poisons in the buttercup," says Dr. Chaffant, "are substances which produce inflammation at contact, and when taken internally may cause inflammation of the stomach and convulsions, and frequently death. The poison is transferred also in milk and meat."

The familiar and to many persons disagreeable smell of mutton is, he asserts, a distinctly cancerous smell. He states that he has produced conditions similar to those of cancer by rubbing healthy flesh with buttercup, and declares that in all probability the disease has its origin in the meat or milk of animals which eat the flowers. He urges the destruction of the bloom.
BORN IN IOWA.
Our family were all born and raised in Iowa, and have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy (made at Des Moines) for years. We know how good it is from long experience in the use of it. In fact, when in El Paso, Texas, the writer's life was saved by the prompt use of this remedy. We are now engaged in the mercantile business at Narrowsville, Fla., and have introduced the remedy here. It has proven very successful, and is constantly growing in favor.—EMERUS BROS.

A Veteran Bear Hunter

(Kentville Observer.)
Mr. David Costly, of New Ross, has placed on our table a large photograph, showing a picture of the one hundred and fourth bear which he had recently captured. The bear is alive, but fast in the trap and sitting alongside on a rock is Mr. Costly with his trusty rifle in his hand.
This bear was caught on May 15th and Mr. Costly immediately sent to Kentville and had Mr. A. L. Hardy go out to the place where the bear was and there the live bear and the veteran trapper were properly posed and neatly caught in the photograph.
Mr. Hardy finished up his work by shooting the bear with the gun, as well as with the camera. It was a magnificent large black specimen.
Mr. Costly began to hunt bears early in life. His father, when he moved to New Ross Road, had no neighbors nearer than nine miles each side of him. Then bears were around everywhere doing depredate. When eleven years of age, Mr. David Costly was chased by a bear and when he escaped he declared he would hunt bears thereafter for a pastime. His first bear he shot when fourteen years of age, and has been hunting these animals ever since, collecting a bounty on same, of from $2 to $8 each. Mr. Costly is now seventy years of age, but says he will catch more Bruins yet.

AN AMERICAN TALE OF AN UMBRELLA.

The cause of a dispute which occurred in a small American town was an umbrella, which was claimed by two men. To settle the matter, they appealed to a local judge. The evidence on both sides was very strong, so the latter withheld judgment, the umbrella meanwhile being placed in his private room for safety. Later, as he left the court to go home, the judge found that the weather was rainy. He returned to his room, took the umbrella that was in litigation, and proceeded on his way. Half-way home, he entered a shop to make a purchase for his wife. When he was ready to leave the place, he found that the disputed umbrella had been taken away by an unknown person. As a way out of this difficulty, the judge bought another umbrella which, in due course, he took to the court-room with him the next day. When the case came up, the litigants were confronted with it, and neither was able to identify it as his own. Whereupon the Court fined them both for invoking the law on a frivolous pretext, and they departed poorer, if not wiser.

THE HOME

Loving But Ignorant Mothers

A physician's wife on her way home from the shopping centre a few mornings ago met a young mother going in that direction and wheeling her baby.

"You do seem to be fond of him," said the elder woman, with an admiring look at the pretty, affectionate mother and her healthy child.

"But if you really are," she counseled, "keep him away from the shopping centre. My husband often speaks of the noise children that he meets in his practice. He thinks that much of it is inherited in this nervous period, or due to pre-natal causes.

"You baby does it get? And when it is such a case of nervousness. We both spoke of it. The little things were plainly excited and tired, and were jerked about by cross mothers, also excited by the shopping, and perhaps annoyed when talking with acquaintances by the whining of the tired child.

"I can laugh at the downfalls and waxo and loaded the air with fumes. I can smile in the trial and pain. I feel that in spite of the errors. The struggle has not been in vain.

CONTRIDRMS FOR THE SEXES. For the Girls—Could you love a man who wore false hair on his head when he had none of his own?

For the Boys—Could you love a girl who defied her mother with words and loaded the air with fumes of cigarettes and cigars; who stared home several times a week the worse for liquor; who bet high at cards and horse races, and swagers around the streets with questionable companions?

OLD MOTHERS. I love old mothers—mothers with white hair, and kindly eyes, and lips grown softly sweet.

How to Manicure.

Taking care of the fingers is like taking care of any other part of one's self; it means that a few minutes should be spent upon them every day in order to keep them in good condition.

To take proper care of the nails one must have the proper instruments, but these are neither numerous nor expensive.

After one has become practiced in the use of the left hand, self-manicuring can be done very successfully by anyone and the professional manicure's services will not be needed.

The next step in the manicuring is to loosen the cuticle or the skin which fits to form over the base of the nail.

Never use the scissors or other sharp instrument to clean the nails. They scratch the skin, and the dirt is caught.

BEATRICE CAREY. Blouses of colored cotton, linen or muslin which have become faded are quite useless for afternoon wear.

Coltsfoot Expecto-rant is the greatest cough and throat cure in the world. It is the prescription of a renowned specialist.
