All last night the heavy super-heated atmosphere hung over the Montreal Churches city like a smothering woolly blanket, causing intense suffering to the citisens and driving thousands out into the public parks and open streets for relief. German Land Hunger May Be Satisfied In West Central Africa

Coming late into the field for colonial expansion, Germany not only found the most desirable territories and those best adapted for European settlement already under other flags, but also that her efforts to obtain footbold at once became the object of suspicion. Britain, more especially with a world-wide empire and ocean trade routes everywhere, has, perhaps, been too unsympathetic towards German aspirations. Germany has undoubtedly some reason for the complaint that the Bagdad Railway, in whose construction Britain at first refused to participate, has been prevented from finding a terminus on the Persian Gulf, and that in other parts of the world more or less tacit obstruction has been offered to the extension of her territorial and commercial interests.

British public opinion is apparently now convinced that a dog-in-themanger policy is unwise and must be abandoned if more friendly relations are to be secured. That informal communications have taken place between the two governments, looking to a possible satisfaction of German land hunger in Central Africa, is pretty generally conceded, and various indications point to a deal with Portugal for the transfer of Portuguese West Africa the German flag. Angola is a rich and extensive country; it has nearly a thousand miles of coast line on the Atlantic, and has an area of about half a million square miles. Hot and unhealthy on the coast, the high interior table lands are reported to be well fitted for white settlement, and the vast mineral and agricultural resources have scarcely been touched, much Revolt Against "Rotten Boroughs" of Black Belt Naming the Candidate-Issue in Next Campaign Will Be Cheaper Food for the People-Bryan's Prestige Not Diminish e 1 by Failure of House to Investigate the Money Trust.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—(Special)—The possible elimination of Senator Robert M. La Follette as a candidate may narrow the contest for the Republican nomination to a duel between President Tait and ex-President Roosevelt, altho Cummins and other candidates are still in the field.

La Follette is a sincere man of great ability and commands a large personal following thruout the country, but undoubtedly his candidacy. while it lasted, was made use of by many who secretly sought to promote Mr. Roosevelt's nomination. Scarcely had the news of the senator's neryous breakdown been telegraphed over the country than many of his ostensible supporters hastened to tender to their real chief their open

The New York Sun, commenting upon this, scoffingly says:

The haste with which most of the insurgent leaders are seeking to clamp the did down on Senator La Follette's candidacy must excite the compassion of those who believe that there should be at least some moderate standard of honor among politicians. His former supporters are so anxious to bury Mr. La Follette that they have hardly time to praise him. He is being hustled ruthlessly inside the hearse altho he etill insists that he is strong enough to occupy a seat alongside the driver. The mercury sank rapidly after sundown yesterday afternoon and in no place in the city did it stop higher than 14 despress below the zero mark, and in some places close to the city it went as low at 21 degrees below.

Considerable difficulty was encountered by citizens in keeping their residences comfortably heated, and those who depend on natural gas suffered more or less discomfort by reason of the gas supply being diminished by the low temperature. Hundreds of people rode shiveringly to work this morning in the street cars of the city, which the company found it practically impossible to keep heated, and in many of the stores and factories the employes were forced to wear their outdoor clothing to keep farm.

Buy Furniture in February

If you want to feel a delightful satisfaction every time you look at your home things during the coming months and years—buy when a great and powerful organization has used all its vast energies in securing low prices for youtake advantage of a condition in retail prices that is extraordinary in its economies.

You would be unhappy for months if you knew you had paid in some store forty dollars for a piece of furniture that you could have bought in another for twenty-five. It would be a long time before you could forget such a loss. Yet it is wasteful in exactly the same way to pay in April or May forty dollars for an article you could buy in February for twenty-five. It's worth thinking over for folks who have no money to waste.

"A Charge Account" in the Adams' Store will enable you to buy any of the special February Sale features without additional cost for the privilege of Credit.

Popular Fallacy of the Idle Rich Dispelled-Younger Generation Making Good.

It has long been the cheerful custom of apostles of the simple life to preach the demoralizing effect of inherited wealth; poverty they pronounce the only natural training school and the self-made man is their idol. Extravagance and incompetence are popularly supposed to be inherent defects of the second and third generations in finance and industry and a "new deal" is demanded on the ground that the future cannot be entrusted to the sons of the men who have achieved the results of the past and present. It is even proposed to place upon great fortunes a confiscatory inheritance tax to save the country from the profligate scions the country from the profligate scions of plutocracy.

Music Has Been Put on an Equal Footing with Literature by the PIANOLA Piano

Have you ever stopped to think what books would mean to you, if you couldn't read yourself-if you depended entirely upon other persons reading to you occasionally out of a book of their own and not your own selection?

It is not overstating it to say that this is the exact situation with most people in regard to music. They now and then hear someone play the piano. What they hear, however, represents someone else's choice, and rarely their own.

The PLANOLO PIANO makes music as free to everyone as litIn the enormous repertoire of the PIANOLA PIANO-a repertoire that practically exhausts piano music-there are hundreds of pieces that would give you the greatest pleasure to hear. Unless you buy a PIANOLA PIANO you will probably never hear these pieces. Certainly you will never experience the immensely greater fascination of playing them your-

Music is capable of affording you as much pleasure, if not actually more, than literature. The PI-ANOLA PIANO is the most practical—the easiest and in every way the most satisfactory means of getting at music.

The Genuine PIANOLA PIANOS, the Steinway, Weber, Wheelock and Stuyvesant, are on sale in Toronto, only at our store.

NOTE-A limited number of exchanged PIANOLA PIANOS (fully guaranteed) at greatly reduced price.

MARRIAGE IN ENGLAND

The approaching marriage of the Marquis of Stafford and Lady Eileen Butler is of special interest to Canmany friends in the Dominion, and the prospective bride and bridegroom will, it is anticipated, spend a good deal of time on this side of the Atlantic. As the eldest son of the Duke of Sutherland land, and prospective heir to the title, the Marquis of Stafford became known land, and prospective heir to the title, the Marquis of Stafford became known during his father's recent prolonged tour as a fine young Britisher, with mone of the objectionable folly that has made some representatives of the old country's "best families" the butt of satire, and a class generally referred to in terms of derision. In the ordinary course of events the Marquis and his bride will some day become owners of the family seat of the Sutherlands at Brooks, Alberta, which now appears in "Debrett," in formal position. The young marquis did good work with men from the sister nations, in Loyat's Scouts during the South African campaign, and made as many friends there as he did during his home service with the 2nd Dragoons. The charming young lady whom he is to marry belongs to the Batlers of County Fermanagh, being the elder of the daughters of the Earl of Lanesborough. She is only revently out of her teens, was one of the most admired of Queen Mary's trainbearers at the coronation, and is said to be "one of the sweetest later colleens" in the court circle." The Earl of Lanesborough is, of course, well known in Canada, owing to his appointment to," Shall we, etc.

The Earl of Lanesborough is, of course, well known in Canada, owing to his appointment to and service in the position of military secretary to Earl Grey while governor-general. Lady Eileen Gladys Butler takes her second name from her mother, who was a daughter of the late Major-General Sir Henry Tombs, one of the holders of the coveted Victoria Cross, conferred on him for conspicuous gallantry in the service of his country during the Indian mutiny. He was one of the very few men culogized by Lord Roberts in his "Forty Years in India."

Dunlop should be stamped on this tire, which is as far ahead of its competitors as the other basic Dunlop ideas were ahead of the competitors of their time.

ADVANTAGE No. 1

In the first place, the carcass of the Dunlop Traction Tread is moulded in one piece; in other words, the Anti-Skid effect is not stuck on the tire, but built into it. Not only does this mean a tire ensuring maximum safety, but it also means a tire capable of showing maximum resistance to wear and tear.

ADVANTAGE No. 2

In the second place, the Anti-Skid-surface of Traction Tread is made twice as deep as the common run of so-called Anti-Skids. When the pave-ment is greasy or the roads are muddy, ment is greasy or the roads are muddy, the value of this greater depth is readily apparent. The car responds to the most delicate touch of steering gear or brakes. The grip on the road is always secure, always certain.

Overfatness Condemned

Fat, or even fattish women readers who want to be in the mode this year must understand that the demand is for lines, not curves, and govern themselves according.y.

That means OFF with the fat. It has become a duty. Many are trying exercise or dieting; but it is certain they will find these methods too slow, and undesirable. The cheapest and sarest way to get in form for the Directoire mode is by means of Marmola Prescription Tablets. Any druggist (or the Marmola Go, 83.7 Farmer Bidg., Detroit, Mich.) will give you a large sized case of these elegant little fat reducers, containing a good, generous supply, for sevenity-five cents, and even this quantity should be enough to make a decided impression on your excess fat. Many have lost as much as a pound a day.

These Marmola Prescription Tablets may be used with impunity and likewisc perfect confidence, for being made strictly in accordance with the famous Yarmola Prescription, they are of ourse, quite harmless. articles that appeared in your paper, I take pleasure in forwarding you copy of a letter I have received from one of Toronto's Protestant clergymen. The letter is self-explanatory, and I hope it will have the desired effect.

"Dear Sir.—Your favor of Jan. "3 came to me in due time, but pressure of dutles has prevented a reply. Let me say that I very much regret that the Rev. C. Q. Johnston, or any minister of the gospel, should have assumed such a position in relation to the Catholic Church.

"Some 16 to 16 years ago a wave of anti-Catholic sentiment passed over the United States and Canada, when this oath and some other infamous documents were widely circulated. Dr. Washington Gladden, a Congregational minister of Columbus, Ohio, made a careful investigation, and pronounced all the documents wicked forgeries. For this the visis of wrath of thousands of overzealous Protestants were poured out upon him, but he was well regaid by the thanks of tens of thousands of sane Protestants who were ashamed of the whole business. I am sorry that Mr. Johnston has been misled by these forgeries, but hope that the unenvisible position in which he has placed himself may be a warning to all who are tempted to seek notorleft by such unchristlar methods.

"Permit me to say for myself that I am far away from the Catholic church ecclesiastically, but near to it spiritually, for Faber and Newman are favorite authors, and I draw spiritual sustenance from a score of other Catholic writers. I therefore deeply regret that such a spirit of antagonism should exist, and I believe that a majority of the Protestant clergymen of the city agree with me in this.

Sincerly yours,
(Signed) John Schofield,
Pastor of Broadview Ave, Congregational Church."

ORIENTAL RUG SALE.

ORIENTAL RUG SALE.

Entire Stock of Courien, Babayan Company Will Be Offered at Auction.

What experts say is the most magnificent and complete collection of Oriental art goods on the continent, and what to the unexpert eye is a bewilderingly beautiful array of eastern workmaship, is about to be sold, and at public auction.

After is years of partnership, during which time they have amassed a selection of rugs and brassware, fine carved furniture and other ornamental products of the east that is unexpected.

tal products of the east that is un-rivaled even by private collections Courian and Babayan, of 40 and 44 East King-street, have decided to disslolve. To realize on their stock, they will sell everything at public competition. The sale, which starts at 2.30 p.m., Tuesday, Feb. 20, will continue every afternoon until net an article or rug is left. C. M. Henderson, the well-known auctioneer, has been secured and he will preside at the sale.

secured and he will preside at the sale.

Rugs form the chief item of the stock, and five thousand of them, covering a wide range of sizes, as well as price, will be offered. Many of them are high-grade Persian rugs, of which Courian and Babayan have made a special study in their many years as direct importers. Shimmering Royal Tabriz rugs, fine Kirmansha, sliky and highly prized, the popular Boukhara rugs, the sheen of which makes them more valuable each year, and many other varieties are on sale.

The hammered braseware, including lamps and jardinieres, the Egyptian carved and inlaid furniture, and the novelties gathered from every nook and corner of the Orient, compose an effering which many people from all parts of Canada have signified intention to take advantage of. Toronto people are given an unusually good chance to pick up eastern art goods.

LARGER POWER UNION

Mayor Geary Asks Municipalities In terested to Conference.

the municipalities interested in the hydro-electric scheme will be asked by Mayor Geary to send representatives to a convention in the city hall on Feb. 22 for the purpose of considering the formation of a larger muni-cipal power union, to take the place of the smaller one which has been in existence for some years and which comprises about 50 municipalities. Among the questions which the convention will discuss are the cost of installation of plant and maintenance, besides the questions of bookkeeping and sale of power.

PORT McNICOLL'S PROGRESS

Notwithstanding the fact that idvertisements have been published in the Toronto papers for about two or three months past, there are few of the great majorify who really understand the enormity of the work being enrried on at Port McNicoll by the C. P. R. Ten millions of dollars have been expended in accomplishing engineering feats never before attempted in Canada, and Port McNicoll will surely be one of the greatest inland ports in Real estate is active in Port McNicoll, some valuable proper ties being offered at prices as low as $400 and $500. It follows also, as a matter of course, that cheaper properties in outlying distriets are being sold, which may eventually be required.

J, C. Hayes Co., Limited, the local real estate brokers, were fortunate in securing the choicest close-in properties, which they have developed and offered mostly in Central Outario; but the repouse has been so large that in another ten days everything will have been sold, and the purchasers will receive a good profit. Two Would-be Burglars Get "Cool" Reception at Big Sherbrookestreet Residence.

MONTREAL, Feb. 10.—Montreal is receiving the attention of a number of thugs and armed burglars these days. After many succe ses a nervy pair met with a cool turn-down yesterday. They called at the residence of Hamilton Gault of Gault Bros., drygoods merchants, on Sherbrooke-street, and asked if Mr. Gault was at home. When told by the butler that he was not, one of the robbers produced a revolver and instructed the servant to show them where the silver was kept.

Promoter E.T. Hooley Gets Imprisonment

'Splendid Bankrupt" Owner of Yachts, Race Horses and Country Seats Gets One Year for Fraud.

LONDON, Feb. 10 .- Ernest Terah LONDON, Feb. 10.—Ernest Terah Hooley, one of the leading men in the financial world of London a few years ago, was sentenced to-day at the Old Bailey to a year's imprisonment on a change of obtaining money by fraudulently representing some property he had sold to the prosecutor as free of encumbrance. He was arrested July 25 last year.

Hooley was one of the most prominent financiers in England from 1890 to 1898, when he was declared bankrupt. He had been regarded as one of the most wealthy men in the country, acquiring his riches by the promotion of numerous companies. In 1896 he launched a tire company and is supposed to have made a profit of $12,500,000. He owned a large number of race horses and yachts, including the racing cutter Britannia, which was formerly the property of King Edward, and he also possessed a number of historic country seats. After his bankruptcy he was known as the "Splendid Bankrupt," as he continued to live in princely style on money which had been placed in his wife's name.

Astronomers did not cease to work upon the problem, the during the eighteenth century and the first part of the nineteenth they reached no reliable result. At length a discovery was made that proved to be an entering wedge. Several stars were found to be moving forward in a straight line at a rapid pace, and it was inferred that these stars must be nearest to the earth.

A star of the sixth magnitude in the Swan, 61 Cygni, was found to have a proper motion of six seconds in a year. Bessel, therefore, selected it as a sub-Ressel, therefore, selected it as a subject for investigation, and in 1838 succeeded in measuring its parallax, which is about a half-second of arc. This, translated into figures, means that 61 Cygni is 400,000 times as far away as the earth is from the sun. Figures fail to give an idea of a distance, so immense, and, therefore, Figures fail to give an idea of a distance so immense, and, therefore, years are used. ADVISES WATER METERS experts Suggests Introduction

Isham Randolph, one of the members of the Board of Water Experts, stated yesterday that he would strongly advise the introduction of water meters as a means of preventing the waste of water in the city. In both Cleveland and Chicago, he said, at least one-third of the whole water supply was conserved by this means.

The method there, he said, was to charge a flat rate for water consumption up to a certain point, and by this means the poorer classes can use sufficient water for cleanliness and for all sanitary precautions. all sanitary precautions.

Mr. Randolph states that the experts

Don't Be Stampeded-On Porcupine Situation

> Bad financing and mis-management in some pro-perties is responsible for the disturbance in the Porcupine market, which has caused the shares of good properties, controlled by substantial in-terests, to sell off with the rest of the list.

Porcupine is now at the stage where a judicious selection of the stock of a well-managed and well-financed mine has a more certain promise of early profit than at any time in the history of the camp.

We are closely in touch with conditions and will be pleased to give our advice to any in-terested correspondent. Write us.

Saturday Evening, Feb. 9.
The opinion expressed in these columns for several weeks past was that the trend of the New York stock market was upward, and barring some unforeseen accident, conditions still favored the bull side. All that is now going on from day to day on the exchange consists of floor trading deals among brokers who are betting among themselves as to changes of eighths in the various prices. There is practically no public to fleece, and the trading fraternity are playing the game of damond cut diamond. If there were any weak long accounts outstanding forces would be joined and the spoils divided. It is only because there are no speculative accounts that can be discharged that prices are sustained as they are.

The market is in no position at present to absorb even moderate amounts of real offerings, and the large holders are perfectly aware of this fact. To permit of this a market has to be made.

Brickson Perkins & Co. had the following: Traders offered down stocks this morning, because of fears that something might turn up over the holiday in connection with the Mexican situation, and because of rumors that the report of unfilled orders of the Stee! Corporation would show less increuse than expected. The steel report came out a few minutes before the close and the stock did not go any lower than previously. The bottom was 59, or 3-8 point above the bottom of ten days ago. The report showed the subor 3-8 point above the bottom of ten days ago. The report showed the substantial increase of 295,000 tons in unfilled orders during January. There had been predictions of 400,000. On the whole, this is giving a very good account and it is said that during the first week of February there had been an increase in enquiries, also in specifications and contracts. There is nothing in this to be pessimistic about. The Mexican situation, apparently, is LIVERPOOL, Feb. 10.—James Rogers & Co. cabled to-day that trade was slow in the Birkenhead market, and, altho the quality of the cattle for sale was better, there was no improvement on prices last quoted: Both States and Canadian steers were making from 18½c to 14c per pound. Western factories are busy and there is every indication of their continuing so for many months. The coming year is expected to see great activity in building. It is announced that during the year the different railroads will spend $60,000,000 in the west on construction, the benefit of which will be felt by all parts of the country.

WINSTON WINS

A Patriotic Speech, Says London News - All the Newspapers Link Glasgow Utterance of First Lord of Admiralty With Haldane's Visit to Berlin, LONDON, Feb. 10.—The press this morning is practically unanimous in praise of Hon. Winston Churchill's declarations yesterday at Glasgow.

Even the newspapers which most vigorously opposed his home rule attitude at Belfast support the first lord of the admiralty in his declaration that England must and will retain her navel supremacy.

The Standard calls Churchill's speech the inspired and important indication of England's intentions."

The Daily Mail says: "Almost in the terms of the great Athenian orator, Pericles, he (Churchill) recapitulated our resources and showed they would be equal to the strain, and that wheever succumbed, Britain would not go down in the competition."

Praise From Other Side. The Express heads its news report: Our navy must be supreme; a patri-otic speech by Churchill," and says editorially: "Mr. Churchill's speech on the navy at Glasgow yesterday was admirable in its spirit and its letter."

This is from a paper that seldom

This is from a paper that seldom misses a chance to attack the government. All the newspapers link Church-ill's speech with Lord Haldane's sudden and mysterious visit to Polys Theorem den and mysterious visit to Berlin. The fact that while one cabinet minister is funching with the kaiser, another is, with fervid rhetoric, comparing our fleet with Germany's and uttering words that cannot be construed otherwise than as a defiance of the kaiser's power, is too obvious to escape notice. As a matter of fact, in most newspapers one introduction is made to cover the news of both "stories."

Taken in conjunction with the conviction and sentence of Capt. Heinrich Grosse on the charge of being a German spy, there is no lack of warlike headlines in to-day's papers. As might naturally be expected, the opportunity is not missed of calling attention to the difference in English and German methods of procedure in such cases, Grosse, on whose person incriminating letters and cipher despatches were found, was tried in open court so that divergence might know the evidence against him, and he was sentenced to the stewart on the state of the sentence of the conviction has aroused such indignation in England, was tried in secret and nobody except the German officials who tried him, know to this day the evidence against him.

Tactical Blunder.

Winston Churchill's Glasgow speech is regarded in certain quarters as a tactical blunder, and it is expected that the German press will put the worst possible interpretation on it. The critics think the first admiralty lord's utterances will impair the success of Lord Haldane's mission.

The British Government's view, on the other hand, is that the first lord of the admiralty's declaration is merely a frank exposition of what England believes to be assential to her welfore and definite overstanding the success.

lieves to be essentiol to her welfore and definite expression that in the matter of naval supremacy the British mind is made up and is not to be shaken. "It is playing the cards on the table," saiys one authority on the subject.

While no official light has been thrown on the specific nature of the advances made by Lord Haldane, the authority above referred to sums up the situation as follows:

"While the secretary of war has no authority to make any offer to Germany, such as a part of the Berlin press has been suggesting would be tangible evidence of the British goodwill which the imperial chancellor asked for in his reichstag speech, he independ the standard the sta undoubtedly has the full approval of the cabinet in his task of disabusing the German mind of the idea of British Several French papers express apprehension that the result of Lord Haldane's mission will be prejudicial to the entente cordiale. Such fears are officially described as baseless, and The Daily Mail says that Lord Haldane's mission appears to be a sequel to the statement made by Mr. Lloyd-George on Saturday last: 'I believe that in the interests of France, Germany, Russia and ourselves, that there should be a better understanding between these rations, and I believe that with candor and boldness it is attainable." Entente Cordiale.

When are H. bernians and Heart of Midlethan going to get separated? For three weeks new there has been the greatest excitement in Edinburgh over the tile between the two, and it is to be continued. They had another try at Easter Road on Saturday, but when time was called they were still on equal terms. They must play away until one or the other is knocked out, and by rule they must play auring mid-week and on neutral ground. It is very hard to say which will prove the ultimate winner. Dundee, who meet the victors must of necessity stand by until a separation is effected.

Derby County were fairly surprised to-day by Glossop, the lowest club of the second division, and the defeat must be all the more bitter shecause it causes them to give up top place to Chelsea. By their violory at Nottingham, Burnley step into second place, and the race for the championship is notter than ever. In the Southern League Swindon got beaten, and as Queen's Park Rangers won, the strife between the two for the flag is made all the more interesting. It will be observed that Plymouth Argyle are making headway, and that victory over Northampton to-day tells its own tale. In the Scotlish League only two games were played. Partick Thistle gathered points from Queen's Park, but Dundee could do no better than spare the honors with Raith Rovers.

England brought off a double even to-day, besting Ireland, both at Associ ation and Rugby.

There is deadly enunty between Clyde and Rangers, and it was intensified recently when the former won a league same at ibrox, and Hogg was ordered off the field. All this served to make today's cup tie between the two the "piece de resistance" of the program. An immense crowd turned out to see it, and such was the feeling shown, more particularly among the speciators, that it was early evident that a "scene" was likely Such fears were realized when the crowd fumped the barricades, invaded the field of play, stopped the game, and, setting out of all control, caused the ite to be abandoned. At the time of stoppage Clyde led by 3 to 1. The Shawfield Clipb will probably claim the the and the association will have either to grant same or order a replay.

Grand Trunk, who were runners up in the first series, and who are tied up with Toronto Sireet Ra'lway in last place, are too good to remain there long, and will no doubt make a desperate try to come thru the hunch before the second series is very much older. Parliament Buildings and Dominion Express are also teams cavorting around the isecond division at present that will bear watching when the championship of the second series is about to be decided.

In the Toronto Bowling Club FivePin League, Senators, who had been in the lead, are now tied up with Stanleys, due to the latter making a crean-up with their opponents, while Senators dropped one of their three games, and with Millionaires and Tea Peas closely following, the inaugural race in this. SUSPICIOUS AUSTRALIAN'S

An English Trainer Protests Against-Running Horses Out.

Hunning Horses Out.

J. E. Brewer, an Australian, on returning home after spending some time in England, was interviewed regarding the merits of racing in the Old Country and the New. He was emphatic in his condemnation of the general attitude of the Australian racing public, and denounced more particularly the habit of calling for each horse to be flogged home after a race has been won. "Horses are not butchered in dogged home after a race has been won. "Horses are not butchered in England as they are out here," he considered. "When the race has been won the unplaced horses are eased up, and not flogged along unmercifully. The habit of unnecessarily forcing to a hard finish spoils both horse and rider, and has no good result. In England horses will not stand such treatment, nor is it demanded. There a man is more likely to be called to account for using the whip rather than for not doing so. On the courses of the Old Country one never hears such cries as 'Pulled his head off,' or 'He was running crook.'

"The Australian generally is too suspicious, that the other fellow is not giving him a fair run. He is ever ready to believe that things are not all on the square, and that sort of thing kills racing. I have been at the game now for a long while, and have found that there is very little underhand work done. The stewards are largely to blame for framing rules which demand this thrashing business. A true rather man would never ask for such a thing." Brewer was enthusiastic in his praise of English fairness. his praise of English fairplay, and thought the sporting press especially most impartial. Complaints with regard to foul riding were rare, and therefore no drastic rules had to be framed to deal with them. "Boring and bumping, of course, occasionally take place, but that very often is unintentional."

The Case for Simplified Spelling

Among the reform movements of the century none is more necessary and urgent or has evoked more ridicule than that having for its object simplification of the spelling of the English language. Every man or woman of ordinary intelligence must perforce admit that as now contrived the spelling of English is conspicuous for its unreason. It forms a formidable difficulty to children and foreigners and the greatest obstacle to its extension. The most eminent educationalists agree that its acquisition occupies a vast emount of time, the major part of which might be far more profitably employed and could easily be spared were the spelling of English reduced to a system whereby the signs of the alphabet would each represent one sound and always that one sound. Whenever the child or the foreigner mastered the signs and their appropriate sounds spelling would no longer need to be learned. The spoken word could be written down with full assurance and without the labor of learning the many eccentricities that characterize the English language as it has been stereotyped by pedantic lexiographers, inaccurate etymologists and the prejudiced creatures of habit. Surely there can be no more reasonable proposition than that which asks for the removal of all redundant and silent letters, the consistent representation of each consonantal and vowel sound by its own definite and unalterable symbol.

In December last the Simplified Spelling Society of Great Britain publisht a handbook entitled "Simplified Spelling: An Appeal to Common Sense." The scheme it presented had been considered at a conference held in the previous September between delegates of the society and delegates of the American Simplified Spelling Board for the purpose of making the common ground of practice in English-speaking countries as large as the common ground of principle. The conference resulted in the British society modifying its original scheme so as to bring it in some points nearer to the plan manifested or implied in the recommendations of the American board and its advisory council. It is of course a matter of the highest importance that an agreement as to the nature and character of the changes to be made should be reached by the responsible authorities in the two great branches of the English-speaking peoples and it is therefore satisfactory during the formative stages of the movement to find that the society up to little Teddy to e mit a peep or two. and the board are prepared to give friendly and candid consideration to each other's suggestions. The problems offered by the long vowels and diphthongs are of particular difficulty and have not as yet been entered upon by the American board. But the British society, beginning under more favorable conditions, has deemed it desirable and feasible to attack them. So that the handbook so recently issued presents a complete if tentative scheme of English spelling reform.

It opens by pointing out the defects of the present spelling. Take, for example, a child who is taught that the sound bed is represented by the letters be-d. The child hears the sound of the word dead, and naturally assumes the spelling is ded, but is informed that the word contains a silent a. "On the other hand, when the child sees the word bead, we have to tell him that here the a is not silent; the two signs ea here have the same value as ee in feed. The child is told that the word toe is spelt with oe. But when he meets the word toad he is told not to spell toed and when he comes to poet we warn him against the pronunciation pote. The child learns that road has oa like toad, but when he proceeds to write 'The man road in a carriage and the boy road a boat,' we have to explain that altho the sounds are the same in these three words he must learn a different spelling for each-road, rode, and rowed." Similar inconsistences are found in the representations of the letters i and u and not even the consonants are represented in a consistent way. Indeed every possible obstacle that verbal ingenuity can compass is laid in the way of the mastery of English spelling. "There are," says the handbook, "a few words like sit, bed, lot in which the spelling is satisfactory from this point of view; but the great majority of common words are not spelt according to any easily understood system, or, indeed, according to any system whatever."

The simplification of English spelling undoubtedly means some temporary discomfort to those who have, by dint of constant practice, been enabled to reproduce the conventional spelling. The chief gain will not be theirs, but those who have yet to learn. Appeal is made on behalf of the children "not only now, but thru all the centuries to come, and on its bearings on British subjects and foreigners who have to learn our language." Educationalists, such as the superintendent of the New York city schools, have convinced themselves that a vast amount of time and energy is spent by teachers and learners alike in memorizing the spelling of words. This occupies about two years of the child's school life and at that the result is often unsatisfactory. "Now suppose," in the words of the handbook, "that, instead of learning the spelling of individual words, the child had only to learn how to distinguish the sounds of are allowed to go thru toll free, while the Amerithe language and to produce them correctly; that we then gave him the sign or signs corresponding to each sound, and bade him spell as he pronounced. The scheme here presented can be learnt by a grown-up person in less than half an hour; let us say that a child would take three months. Does not that represent a notable saving? The school life of these children is deplorably short; are we justified in continuing to waste their time as we do at present?" To these questions only one answer is possible. If for no other cause than the saving of time for general educative purposes the simplification of English spelling is eminently desirable.

But there is another and equally great gain for children.. Complaint is frequently made that English is not generally spoken as it might be and as it ought to be nor is its pronunciation correct and uniform. At present, the child "is rarely taught to distinguish," ed by the government without giving credit for the sounds; but if we teach a spelling that depends upon the sounds, e cannot neglect them. What does this mean? It means that teachers and learners will become more observant of the spoken language, that they will pay more attention to clear speech and all that this implies-namely good breathing, careful articulation and expressive intonation. When we listen to a man or woman who speaks clearly we are pleased; we cannot help feeling that it is too uncommon an accomplishment. Let the spelling be closely connected with the sounds and the cultivation of the speaking voice is bound to follow." This is a highly important argument for spelling reform among English-speaking peoples. Add to it the advantage of facilitating the learning of the English language by the native peoples under imperial rule and by foreigners. English is an easy language and its grammar is simple. Its only great weakness is in its spelling. A reform such as that indicated would however also aid the English speaker in learning a foreign language. Those who have been working to find out how an English-speaking child can best be taught the pronunciation of a foreign language have come to the conclusion that the child must first know the sounds of English and practical experience has confirmed the view. English spelling should be made as reasonable and straightforward as is that of Spanish or even German. Until that is done the language will be handicapped and will not spread so rapidly thruout the world as it might and would do were that handicap removed.

A Young Hero

The people of a continent will uncover to the memory of Burrell Hecock, the Cleveland boy who went to his death in the disaster at Niagara Falls. His companions, Mr. and Mrs. Stanton were not his friends or even acquaintances: their only appeal to him was the appeal of a common humanity, an appeal which never fails to reach a noble heart when it comes from the helpless in peril or distress.

Eldridge Stanton proved himself a true man and a hero when he refused to desert his wife to young Hecock reaches even a higher level. In the hour of peril, in the face of death, only character counts. Those who held Burrell Hecock dear will treasure his memory with more pride, and justly so, than tho he had lived to enjoy the greatest possible career, but by the passing throng he will be soon forgotten unless some suitable monument recalls his memory.

It would be a graceful act for the people of the two countries to unite in commemorating the high endeavor and noble sacrifice of this young Galahead, who, if he lost his life, should regain it in the hearts of those who rejoice in knightly courage and noble deeds.

Free Tolls on Canals

The New York World argues that the United States will perform a world's service of greater profit to herself than can be computed in money by adopting free tolls thru the Panama Canal, and that Canada has a right to protest against preferential tolls for American ships.

It says that Canada has expended more than $100,000,000 on her canals, and American vessels can tonnage thru the Welland Canal, for instance, is larger than the Canadian.

This generous policy on the part of Canada should be emulated by the United States, which will certainly gain ultimately and greatly by the adoption of a generous and progressive policy in canal operation.

Getting on the Band Wagon.

The Globe refuses to give full credit to the Ontario Government for the development of the hydro-electric policy. It says that this "is claimthe free and continuous support of the Liberal press and Liberal members."

The fact is, however, that the Liberals had many years in which to promulgate such a policy and it was not until the advent of the present administration in 1905 that cheap light and power

The Liberal Oposition along with many of the Liberal newspapers, for political reasons, have sought to obstruct the work of Adam Beck and his associates by unfair criticism and other small devices of a political party.

That the government was strong enough backed by an overwhelming majority, to be able to put thru this great boon, is not particularly to the credit of the "small, but valiant band," to the left of the speaker. However, now that cheap light and power are assured, it will not affect matters materially if we allow The Globe and other critics of the progressive administration to climb on the band wagon and receive some

The Decline of Manners.

That the modern street car, not only of Toronto, but of the whole American system, is responsible to a large degree for the decline of manners is undoubted. Manners do not, as some men ners is undoubted. Manners do not, as some men appear to think, consist of taking off your hat in an elevator if a woman happens to be in the car. That is nothing but an ostentatious display of a narrow idea of the real thing. Manners consist of always being polite, no matter what the conditions of life and no matter what the sex.

Women and girls, if they deserve it, will naturally have superior consideration, for the one reason that they are preseminently the authors of life in its new form.

Manners really consist in the first instance of a studious regard for the methods of life and for regards for other people's feelings. The recognition of the ethics of existence have nothing in common with manners. That is simply a battle for success, in which every man and every woman is entitled to engage. T SECRETS OF FERLINY on a theme of importance to all women, and it may be truthfully added, to all men. We often hear the complaint "I am losing my figure." The slenderness of youth is lost in the enveloping blanket of flesh that years bring to some, or the roundness of youthful contours disappears before the guantness of age. How to avoid both these evils s included in to-day's valuable advice on "How to Improve Your Figure."

You can buy strong, reliable ones at stitched bands of muslin to which cross pieces are attached. Fasten these to your corsets by safety pins. Perhaps that apparent stoop is due not to actual bending of the shoulders but to a roll of superfluous fat that accumulates just below the neck on women who have attained thirty years, or even before. Remove this unsightly blemish by several methods. First, throw away your pillow and lie with head and feet on a level. Form the habit of standing very erect. They should be neither too large nor too small, but in perfect accord with the rest of the figure. If the rest of the figure is thin and the hips plump the effect is ludicrous. If the body is ample and the hips flat the hips are incongruous. Fashion may dictate broad hips one season and narrow hips the next, but their ideal size remains the same. They

By rendering the proper support to the user, the manufacturer secures the hearty endorsement of the user, which may become a strong adjunct to the right kind of newspaper advertising, and will in a measure, solve the second-hand car problem. In fact, a rightly conducted service department can well be maintained in connection with the sales department if the distributors sales department if the distributors and agents are brought to the proper kind of co-operation, and may easily become the most effective part of the selling organization.

Good Service Pays. "There should be great satisfaction the honest manufacturer in renderng honest service to the user of his car. We all know that in years gone by, the automobile owner has simply taken his chances, knowing that for every little breakage he was sure to be held up, and that it cost him not only line, which is often very valuable, but lot of money for replacements, some f which represent such little intrinsic alue that it has been hard for the wner of the car to stay on good terms with the manufacturer or dealer after paying such extravagant prices for

That's the reason that biliousness and its kindred complaints make us ill "all over." It is also the reason that if this waste is permitted to remain a little too long the destructive germs, which are always present in the blood, gain the upper hand and we become not only nefficient, but really ill—sarrously sometimes if there is a weak spot.

This accumulated waste is the direct, immediate, specific cause of appendictis, for instance.

Now the first help that we have been calling to our aid when this waste becomes unbearable, makes us really till, a Drugs. These have some effect, but here are a few vital reasons why they

The Tragedy of Tosca.

The libretto of Puccini's "La Tosca," which is to be given on Monday night, was written by Luigi Illeca, and based on Sardon's famous drains of the same name. The story by acts is as follows:

Act I.—The political intriguer, Angelotti, having escaped from jail, is hiding in the Church of Saint Angelotti, They shower him with compli-

Act III. The scene shows a little house and garden at the top of the Butte Montmartre, overlooking Paris. It is the home of Louise and Julien. It is the home of Louise and Julien.
The lovers are enjoying ideal bliss. As a surprise, their friends have come to crown Louise the Muse of Montmartre, decorating the house and garden with lanterns and flowers. Louise joyfully and Rosina sign the marriage contract. The outwitted Bartolo is reconciled by accepts a black and silver shawl, her badge, as queen of the day. Song and

He arouses/her jealousy by displaying a fan of her lover's model he has found in the church. He loves her. She departs. But Scarpia orders spies to follow her. Act II.—Scarpia, in his apartment awaits Tosca. Spoletta, agent of the police, enters with Cavaradossi arrested in a lonely villa whither Tosca had goine with him. The peanter gives no clew of Angelotti. He is sent to the torture chamber. Tosca arrives. She hears the groans of her lover; in the extremity she divulges the hiding place of Angelotti. The painter, now brought in from the torture chamber chides her for this revelation. Sciarrone appears to say that Napoleon was victorious after ali: whereupon the painter extraction in the defeat of Scarpia's men. Scarpia orders him executed. Tosca pleads—but the villainous Scarpla tells her the only way to save her lover's life is to give herself to him, Scarpia. Angelotti has been executed; Cavaradossi is prepared to meet his doom.

Tosca, driven, agrees to yield her virtue to Scarpia fhe will then arrange for her and her lover to depart in safety. He orders a mock execution. He cries: "Now, Tosca, mine at lest." She IT of the cries of the comment of the day. Song and dance prevail.

But a sombre note is struck. An old given on Saturday night, is founded woman is seen; and the crowd disperses on an immortal classic of French lit. For an immediate return of Louise to his side is the one hope. He cries for her con. The fath to the order in the torture chamber dides her for this revelation. Like all the other big shows with which Mr. Fields' name has been identified such as "The Midnight Sons," "The Girl Behind the Counter," and "The Jolly Bachelors," "The Never Homes' is a hodge-podge of vaudeville, musical comedy and travesty staged with exceptional splendor, costumed with great lavishness and interpreted by a company large enough to make use of the word "spectacle" quite fitting. Its story concerns the conditions which exist in the little City of Lilydale following the capture of the municipal offices by the women suffragets who immediately proceed to run the town according to their own advanced ideas. Much playful and entirely harmless satire of the women suffrage movement is indulged in. The settings include views of a feminized fire engine house and of the interior of This provokes the father. At the Royal Alexanda. A rose by any other name would smell as sweet, an operetta, renamed, translated as to the libretto, should equally, in translation, lose nothing of its original sweetness. It is not at all likely that the translation of the libretto from German to English can have damaged this dramatic vehicle to B. Harris will present Rose Stahl at may be taken that "Night Birds" is fairly representative of "Die Fleder-maus" (the better translation, I think in which all her admirers will desire maus" (the better translation, I think would have been "The Bats"), but, if we are to accept this as being fact, then it is difficult to understand how the musically critical Germans could have passed such puerile music as being even up to the level of the lightest of Offenbach, of Farnie or of any of the bouffe music men who professed to write only for the moment, and whose music still lives. In "Night Birds" there is hardly a distinguished melody, and there is never an approach to such orchestration as proclaims the melody, and there is never an approach to such orchestration as proclaims the master-musician. The father of the composer of this light musical work, who, so unassailably earned the title "waltz king," was so established as the master of rhythmic, easy-running melody, that one is compelled to a mild wonder why it is that his son, following, musically, his father does not show some signs of the heritance one suspects he should have come in to. In the "Night Birds," a story largely dealing with those light love affairs which one associates, nat rally, with the lilt of six-eight time, he employs, mostly uninteresting tempos to which are set arias, generally without any of the distinction one might naturally expect from his pen, and without, to be frank, any outstanding or easily memorized melodies. Miss Fritzi Schiff is too heavily handicapped by her vehicle to score as she deserves, as an artiste, te do, and the rest of her Company suffer, even to the chorus, under the blight of work which it is a compliment to call mediocre.

Archaic management and the absence of the young man who had inherited the business were rapidly demoralizing the concern. The young man returns, and while on an inspection of the place incognition encounters Maggie Pepper. Thinking him a new and "fresh" floor, walker the assistant buyer unburdens her soul and expresses her opinion. He is impressed with what she says and decides to take radical action.

Thru the discernment of the young man Maggie Pepper is promoted to a responsible position in the place. The commercial world wonders at the young man's sudden genius for businesses as the real cause of the new movement keeps in the background. He beseeches her to let him tell who provides the ideas which have re-established at the processes as the real cause of the new movement keeps in the background. It is sad to have to continue in pessimistic mood, but one did not even have to exercise the faculty of captiment to call mediocre. have to exercise the faculty of captiousness to perceive the emptiness of "Alma, Where Do You Live?" It would need considerable ability in any dramatist to overcome the initial handicap of such a puerile title, and certainly the author has not caught the method. "The Stampede" a Big Production

It Will Be the Offering at the Grand Opera House All Next Week.

A. G. Delamater, the well-known theatrical producing manager, is this season presenting "The Stampede," a stirring comedy-drama affording opportunities for huge scenic effects equal to its predecesser, "The Round-Up," altho er section of the Western wilderness. In "The Stampede" the political eleof the Stampede' the political element is more prominent and the comedy is more agreeably polite, the first act transpiring in Washington, D. C., at an evening reception where the serious plot is developed amid an atmosphere of music and laughter. For the remaining acts the settings are in Arlzona Desert and the Which Creek Indian Beservation permitting a penalty. dian Reservation, permitting a pano-ramic effect of vast distances positively startling in its vividness and sublim-

ty. In no Belasco production has closer study been given to the smaller details which combine to form an elaborate and truthful picture; special mechanical contrivances have been constructed for the big stampede effect. expensive electrical devices are employed, lighting and incidental music-is carefully calculated to quicken the pulse during the tense moments of the pulse during the tense moments of the play. In another respect, does "The Stampede" differ from "The Round-Up"—in the new play, instead of a tremendous fusillade of bullets, only once is a shot fired. "The Stampele" will be the offering at the Grand next week.

Recent introduction of "Madame Sherry" companies in London, Paris, Berlin, Vienna and Australia gives it the credit of being the most popular and widely whistled, hummed, sung and dancing rage of the present period. The musical theme, "Every Little Movement Has A Meaning All Its Own," has been whistled and sung thruout the world. The novel features of the production—the "Danger Dance," the "Trezzati Buffo," the "Talking Chorus," the "Birth of the Butterfly." Yvonne Sherry—"Madame Sherry," the little maid from the convent with a convent girl's ways, who finds herself little maid from the convent with a convent girl's ways, who finds herself suddenly thrust into the quick of life, amid comic situations that fairly tumble over and pile up one upon another until finally in the very thick of the galety suddenly falls headlong in love, has already taken a place in the gallery of the world's feminine idols of musical imagination.

all right in their way-but they don't know how to dress or wear clothes. That is the reason that every new fashion is designed or ginally for the demimonde of Paris. The fashionable dressmakers design a startling new costime, then dress a "dummy," as the Paris models are called, and send the "dummy" on her merry way to the Riveria, to Aux-le-Bains, to Monte Carlo, everywhere. If the costume "catches on" then it may be slightly modified for some particular wearers. That being the case, how can one possibly gauge a woman's morals by what the wears? She may be just blindly

Most of the "Free Offers" that appear in advertisements do not pan out very well. There is usually some string atached or some conditions to be comilled with that amount to a good price for all you get. A notable exception, however, is the offer made by Mrs. F. E. Currab, of Windsor, Ont., as stated on page 3. Magazine Section, in her ad entitled. "Proving by Actual Experiment." She sends, absolutely free, a oox of Orange Lily, an expensive, con centrated remedy, put up in pure gela-ine capsules which is supplifient for 10 days' treatment, and which is worth 5 cents. Mrs. Currah finds it pays to o this, for the reason that being a trictly scientific preparation, its good effects are noticeable from the start, and almost all who give it a trial coninue its use until completely cured.

LOUISE DUNBAR ON CHARACTER PORTRAYAL.

Inquiry is often made as to the effect, if any, of the continued display of emotions upon the individuality of an actress. Is her view of life warped by the constant playing of stage roles foreign to her nature? Does she eventually reflect any part of such characters? Few women of to-day have appeared in such a varied list of roles as Louise Dunbar, who presents the character of "Princess Artemia" in the big spectacular religious drama, "The Light Eternal," and few are better able to pass opinion on the influence of various characterizations. Miss Dunbar seems to be of the opinion that an actress must inevitably absorb some part of the good or bad qualities of her role if she continues its interpretation long enough.

"To me all characters are living, breathing human things," says Miss Dunbar. "I think of them and treat them as I would a similar type in real life. Some of them are really beautiful and a pleasure to know, while others are repulsive in their coarseness and vulgarity. Men and women of the stage glory in their ability to portray a type, not in the type itself. They lend their individuality to the role, but contend they are not influenced by the constant twist and distortion of their real selves. There is no truer natural law than that a nactress must step completely out of herself in the depiction of a stage character, that she must actually live and be the individual she is portraying—but she will contend the step back from the character to herself is equally complete. This I am afraid is not always true, especially if one continues in a questionable role for an unusual length of time. I do not wish to pose as a paragon of perfection simply because I am appearing in a religious drama, but this I do know—I have played many roles, portrayed both good and bad women, and I have always found a certain peace and satisfaction in clean, wholesome parts that could never exist in characters of the opposite extreme. Of course all sorts of parts fall to a woman's lot in a comparatively short time, and I believe the average woman can run thru the entire list without any illeffect—but for my part I would never consider the most flattering offer for an extended engagement in a questionable role." appeared in such a varied list of roles as Louise Dunbar, who presents the

Some Will Be Small, Anyway. One hears a great deal about the favor extended to small shapes and of the likelihood of their taking the lead in next season's models. Now, undoubtedly, the number of hats with narrow brims that are seen is considerable, probably exceeding the number of broad brimmed hats by a large majority, but for all this the latter have not lost favor. It is rather soon to speculate with respect to next season's models, but the probabilities are that at least for the first month or two the output of narrow brimmed hats will at least equal that of broad brims, althofashion may show itself equally fayorfashion may show itself equally favoramle to both.

He felt the decadence of sculpture was at hand if it was not reinforced with something of the austerity of primitive times. Bourdelle married a young Greek girl, one of his students. Just now he is undertaking the biggest work of his career, the reliefs and facade of the Champs-Blysees Theatre, now being built by Gabriel Astruc, which is designed to be the most elaborate theatre in the world. Many Americans, among them J. Pierpont Morgan and William K. Vanderbilt, Sr., are backing it. The building is to be all of white marble, Grecian in line, surrounded by numerous statues and reliefs. The figures on the facade, which is sixty feet high, are to represent different forms of music and the dance Bourdelle expects to devote himself wholly to this work for a year.

· Bourdelle is now the one sculptor in Europe who is dividing honors with Rodin. Bourdelle was a pupil of Rodin. Yet neither in style, conception nor execution is there anything that suggests imitation. Bourdelle's work is original. It is more than original. It is revolutionary. After having acquired a mastery of the technique of his art, a power to reproduce faithfully the human form in every attitude and to carry this precision in execution to the slightest detail, he has suppressed all detail. He has gone back past the Renaissance, past the Gothic period, past the Roman, past the Greek era, past the Egyptian-back to the archaic.

The ideas of Bourdelle are expressed by him thus: "Sculpture! Art precise and admirable! It is an architecture of human forms, an architecture of the faun of Flora, an architecture of the clouds of Heaven, and with all these we make an architecture of all the passions of the heart, of all the aspirations of the soul! Ah! Sculpture! Art at once terrible and ineffaceable! materialization of all the movements of all the eternal sentiments of men and things! . When the sculptor is great, when he attains the summit of his art, he is a philosopher of form."

Early Romance In Life Story of J. P. Morgan

Entertaining Biography of Multi-Millionaire by Carl Hovey—His Capacity for Silence Exceeds Even Von Moltke's.

One of the most entertaining biographies that have been issued for many a day is "The Life Story of J. Pierpont Morgan," by Carl Hovey, and just published.

Mr. Morgan's grandfather was an hotelkeeper, but his father was a banker, and from him, apparently, he inherited the genius for finance that has made him such a power in the world where they think in millions. He was only twenty-one when he married a lady who was dying of consumption. She refused persistently to agree, but he persisted even more. "I will stake you all over the world to find health." he said. "I will give up business and devote myself to you." So he did, but only for a few months. His hopes-were disappointed. Health could not be lured back. She passed away, and he went back to work with a scar on his heart that took many years to heal.

By this time he had already made a position for himself in New York. He made money rapidly, yet never in such a way as to stir up feeling against himself. Gradually he emerged from the crowd in Wall Street and revealed the proportion of his genius for finance. For many years now he has been in such a position in London that "when he sends out, a brief request for a few millions of pounds he can depend upon receiving the money, without delay."

Mr.Morgan does not talk much. His capacity for silence exceeds even that of Von Moltke, Even the German Emperer finds him difficult to talk to, Once when they were dining together His Imperial Majesty began to talk about Socialism. He was surprised to find that his guest was not in the least interested.

Discursive Observations

SQUARING ALL OUR CURVES.

The need of a rational almanac has stirred up a writer on the Pacific Coast to put forth a pamphlet outlining a new system for measuring our months and years. The author is worried by the complex interest and discount problems and wage reckonings occasioned by our present system. He would cut off all the curves and excrescences and remedy matters thus:

"(1) By having 28 days in each month.
"(2) By having every month begin on Sunday and end on Saturday.

"(3) By inserting an additional month between June and July (this provides for 364 days of the common year).

"(4) By having Christmas Day follow Sunday, December 22nd, calling it neither Monday nor 'December 23rd,' but simply Christmas Day,' This would provide for the remaining one of the 365 days and would locate Christmas exactly where it now is, that is, seven days before January 1st.

would locate Christmas exactly where it not fore January 1st.

"(5) By inserting Leap Day," in leap year, after June 28th without giving it any week-day name, or any number as a day of the month."

In this way he would, his supporters claim, eliminate almost all the inconveniences of our present "crazy calendar." absurdities and inconveniences of our present "crazy calendar." I wonder if he realizes how much of the pleasure of life is due to the uncertainties that are caused by just such things as months that haven't equal numbers of days, days that haven't equal numbers of hours of dayslight, and changes and irregularities of all kinds that keep us from getting the management of the such as the such ting our whole lives chopped up into rutty squares, and ourselves from becoming mere human automatons. have we suffered seriously because of our "crazy calendar" or have its complexities added the spice of variety to our existence? If our eminent geographer wishes to simplify matters as much as possible, why shouldn't he cut the months altogether and let us take our year holus-bolus, making our calendar read thus: Year 1912, day one; day two; day three and so on down to day three hundred and sixty-six. That would square off all the curves at one fell swoop.

It all seems to get back to the idea of individuality. Did you ever consider the individuality of February with her 28 days, and then her occa-sional extra curve of a day for the benefit of the ladies? Can you imagine January shortened to 28 days and being January any longer (no pun intended)? In fine, how would you like to see everybody in the world just the same as everybody else? Tut! Leave the calendar alone, and leave each of us our curves (even twists and cranks) and our own personalities.

STONES IN THE RAISIN PIE.

Crunch! But the stones have been plentiful in my literary raisin pie lately, which is another way of saying that awkward and incorrect English has seriously interfered with the gustatory appreciation of a varied bill of literary fare—novels, history, economics and even now current magazine matter. How does it happen that so many persons who have things to write about do not seem to know how to express themselves in pure, simple and forcible English? And by way of antithesis, how is it that many who have the facility of correct expression have very few ideas to express?

Previous to the establishment of this loan library system, it was a common thing to find in the forecastle of every vessel a number of works of detaining influence; now, these have entirely disappeared. Given good books. An old man going down the last hill of life, almost helpless, bereft of his friends and surrounded by undestrable companions, gave thanks as The boon of good books! And do not forget that it requires the habit of reading to take advantage of this boon—cultivate the habit.

The value of good to state a number of the value of good to the subject of the student of Scottish history some slight idea of the great part which has been played by that illustrious stock during the last three hundred years in the founding, peopling and upbuilding of Britain's western empire."

Dr. Wilfred Campbell starts out with a slashing attack on present-day ideals which are largely, he claims, those of the Scot in Canada to-day. Unless we decide that ultra-conful.

Going back to the old-time custom of when the country schoolhouse was the meeting place for the singing school, the debating society, the time tons, the chairman of the Berlin school board, elaborates upon the idea and suggests that the schools be kept open from 8 o'clock in the morning till at the evening, and that each school be provided with light symmasium apparatus, games, reading rooms, and the like.

Altho I do not believe in harping on the "good old days," I am sure that there was much more real friendship in the rural sections in the days when the school was a common social centre than there is now with halls and churches and libraries, and it is quite possible that the suggestion of the Berlin chairman of the school board, might have some difficulty in adjusting the teachings of the introductory chapter to any sort of accordance with what follows after. The Scotsman in Eastern Canada

Story of the Various Scottish Settlements in Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Quebec and Ontario, Told By Wilfred Campbell.

Scotland has suffered, we are told, from shallow and superficial treatment. from shallow and superficial treatment. Rurns and Scott are names exploited in superficial efforts to obtain a literary reputation, while the true Burns and the true Scott remain utterly unknown and unappreciated. "Men may rave of the heather, the hills, the pibrock, and the Brig of Ayr, and all the time the real Scotland and the true Scottish people are a mystery to themselves and to others as they, to a great in munity." Really, I can scarcely follow that. The community cannot develop without the individual, and the record of the history of the ages, shows that the development of the community as such has come almost invariably thru the efforts of some dominant and agressive individual.

It may do no harm to sound a warning, as Dr. Campbell does, against the scottish people are a mystery to them-selves and to others as they, to a great extent, remain to this day." Our caus-tic critte need not have stopped here. He might have said that every man is about as great a mystery to every other man as he ever was, and he would other man as he ever was, and he would not be very far wrong not be very far wrong . But worse than all, according to our national biographer, the Scot has suffered at the hands of those fiction writers who have made him talk. Naturally the Scot does not reveal himself. As Dr. Campbell puts it. "The true characteristic of the latter is his secretivenot feel that Ian Maclaren, J. M. Barrie, or any of their successful followers in that school of fiction have given the Scot up to buffoonery.

Discussing this point, Dr. Campbell remarks, "It may be difficult to realize this, but to the student who knows his Scott and his Burns, and is in close touch with the real Scotland and the Scotsman of the past, it is very apparent." From which it would appear that, in these latter days, the Scotsman has greatly degenerated, and yet Dr. Campbell proceeds to show us the influence of the Scot in religion, edu-

the Scotsmen with their old Scottish ideals were willing to allow the resting place of their dead to grow wild with grass and brambles, the younger generation are taking pains to have the place kept in good condition. These two instances contradict for me the pessimistic view of our Scottish-Canadian poet.

Another serious mistake, he sees us making, is that we have carried the democratic idea to the extreme. "The community to him (the modern Scot) means nothing any more." "We suffer from the over-development of the individual at the expense of the community." Really, I can scarcely follow that. The community cannot develop without the individual to a possible to the community of the individual that the expense of the community."

It may do no harm to sound a warning, as Dr. Campbell does, against the progress of materialism, but there does not seem to be justification for the gloomy picture here presented. Listen to the lugubrious questioning of his closing paragraph. "In the face of all this—in the face of the fact that in the church and the university the only man wanted or encouraged is he who can wanted or encouraged is he who can touch men's pockets, not their hearts, minds, or imaginations; that the universities no more contain the national prophets and thinkers: that in the legislative halls the conditions are similar and real freedom shackled and crushed can you ask if it is well with the can you ask if it is well with the Scotsman here and in the old land?"
Oh, shades of Scott! Wilfred, is it as bad as all that, or are you suffering from Carlyle's dyspepsia? (The introduction to this book has required so much attention that I must ask you to wait until next week for the review of the book itself.—Ed.)

The enthusiasm awakened by the announcements of the concert. and by the work Dr. Norman Anderson is getting out of the chorus of 110 voices, is the greatest in the history of the Glee Club. The program is exceedingly varied and embraces compositions for male voices by the best composers. The Toronto String Quartet will assist, and provide a specially entertaining program. The whole concert promises to be the finest given by The Toronto University Glee Club since its organization. terest not only our musicians, but even the students and public generally, for Kubelik is generally regarded as absolutely the best violinist before the American public to-day, and one of the finest virtuosi in the world. The items that he is booked to play on the Wednesday performance will occupy considerable of the program, being made up of the four movements of Mendelssohn's Concerto in E Minor with orchestral accompaniment, and four numbers by Sarasate with plano.

For the orchestral number, Mr. Welsman is deviating a little from the beaten path, and will not play a symphony for this concert. Instead, he will contribute two numbers new to our orchestral repertoire—the Holberg "Olden Style" suite by Greig, and the Tschool of the orchestral repertoire—the Holberg "Olden Style" suite by Greig, and the Tschool of the orchestral numbers.

Altho the management of the orof all visitors from a distance who attended the Mendelssohn Choir concerts there was none more enthusiastic than Mr. Frank Wrigley, one of the leading organists of the west who came all the way from Calgary to attend three concerts, having to leave immediately after the Wednesday avenue performance in order to be at

Mrs. Flora McIvor Craig has just returned from a most successful concert trip in the United States. On Jan. 22 she sang in Saginaw, on the 25th in Orchestra Hall, Chicago for the Associated Scotch Societies of Illinois, and on Jan. 26 for the Caledonian Club, Joliet. The Saginaw Daily News makes the following comment on her appearance in that city. "A pleasing feature of the evening was the singing of Flora McIvor Craig of Toronto, who possesses a rich, clear soprano voice and her numbers were most enthusiastically received. one of the interesting announcements made this season is that the London Symphony Orchestra of 100 musicians, will give a concert in Toronto on April 25. The orchestra will spend only twenty-one days in America, April 8 to 28, and the tour is made under the special patronage of two of our local singers at the Burns' anniversary in that city and a special letter from Buckingham Palsec, dated Nov. 9, 1911. As at present arranged the cities visited will be New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Providence, Chicago and Toronto. Further importance is added to the announcement by the fact that Arthur Nikisch, the celebrated orchestral leader, will conduct.

POINCARE AND DELCASSE---PRESENT AND PROBABLE FRENCH PREMIERS IN CONTRAST

By Henri Ferrer.

PARIS, Feb. 10.—The present French ministry is not expected to hold together, and speculation is rife as to the probable make-up of the next cabinet. The Franco-German situation alone is responsible for the holding together of the cabinet as it is now composed. And, as it is to-day, it is conceded to be the most able ministry gathered since the days of Gambetta.

Delcasse accepted it. Delcasse worked alone, and, as we shall see, it was better are those who scout the wisdom of placing French diplomacy in the hands of a man whose presence in a former cabinet very nearly provoked awar.

My Dear Franklin: No doubt you are wondering why I do not answer your very welcome letter of Dec. 15, but when I tell you that I read said letter for the first time this morning, you will perhaps pardon my seeming lack of courtesy. The fact is, old man, I have been indulging in some of the winter pleasures of this big metropolis, or rather have attempted to indulge in one particular pleasure of this big, unfeeling city and as a result my mind has, for the past two weeks, been more or less a blank.

When the bald-headed clerk of my hotel and his friend, the mineral-water agent, asked me how I would like to do do it. I find myself straining my why the clerk and the drummer got me to do it. I find myself straining my brain to find a motif for their murder-due more of the myself.

All the forebodings which had troubled me earlier in the day have been dispelled by the same voices of my sections. I smile as they strap the Georgia pine scantlings to my feet and ural to them as fleas are to a dog, both of these gentlemen being, as I have since ascertained, Americans. I now attribute their cock-sureness more to their bringing-up than to their dwarfed criminal intellects. In the United States I understand lack of knowledge of anything, big or little, animate or inaminate, is not considered much of a group of mourners at my back come forward and shake my head. If their forms the find none in the party, unless it be myself.

Was there ever such mockery, such abominable hypocrisy, such an exhibition of pure and unadulterated cant, and by a whole city full? Toronto will be the laughing stock of the whole continent. We may and we may not. The original idea of the slides was regulation and the minimizing of danger. But eighteen men, including John Dunn, say regulation on the Sabbath is wrong and must be denied. A Cheerful Sunday.

A Cheerful Sunday.

Dr. Johnson—probably the most genuinely pious Englishman of the 18th century—may be claimed as a supporter of the cheerful Sunday. To a gentleman who objected to bird catching in Streatham on a Sunday, he said: "While half the Christian world is permitted to dance and sing and celebrate Sunday as a day of festivity, how comes your Puritanical spirit so offended with frivolous and empty deviations from exactness?" Johnson, held however, that Sunday should be a distinctive day. "People may walk, but not throw stones at birds. There may be relaxation, but there should be no levity." Probably the dear old man would have been in favor of tobogganing, providing there favor of tobogganing, providing there Consular service is bound by official was no merriment! It is rather to be regulations to keep it supplied with feared that dear old Samuel, whose items of commercial interest. manners none of the gentlest, was a bit of a hypocrite.

So far everything has been achieved practically without direct municipal aid. The time has now arrived when the advisability of granting such aid might well be considered. In the summer there are band concerts, but in the winter, the time when music should enter our souls, there is virtually nothing for the people—that is, nothing to which they are freely welcome. There are high-priced entertainments galore, but the unwell-to-do are left at the mercy of the freaks of the picture show and burlesque houses.

Boots for the Real Rich.

Talk about the high cost of living, but a story is told of a bootmaker who has started business in the Place Vendome, which with the Rue de la Paix forms probably the most expensive shopping district in the world, and has determined to appeal only to the wealthy. The following is his announcement:

British investments in Canada
In reviewing the investments made by the British public during 1911, the "Statist" draws attention to the uncasempled favor with which Canadian undertakings are now regarded. For undertakings are now regarded. For the first time the largest amount of British capital has been placed in Canada, the sum of no less than one hundred and eighty million dollars having been so invested. This is altogether exclusive of the large amount of money that has been placed in holy water basins; they sang nucleous and indecent parodies to the tunes of church hymns; they violated whatever vestments belonging to the abbey they could lay their hands upon; and played every freak which the whim of the moment could suggest to their wild caprice."

An Australian Crew for England.

Australia up to the present has, unlike Canada, not been represented at Henley, but there is a prospect that this year one or two crews will make the long journey. The Old Country and the Young Commonwealth have competed with each other in friendly rivalry in almost every branch of athletics except rowing (professional sculfing, of course, apart). In this is the most English of all the Oversea Dominions of the empire. a horse can win. There is no one in the world who can give the Briton at home so keen a run for his laurels in every branch of sport as the Australian. The Australian has followed him into every field and challenged him, and the cups the championships, the ashes, the King's prizes—the supreme honors of their kind—that are up every year to be wrested from either one by the other are so numerous that few people keep count of them. Golf, polo, bowls, are all fasbionable games under the Scuthern Cross. At lacrosse, further—and here the Australian is distinctly ahead—the Commonwealth players in some games ago that a little 120-lb. man playfully. ago that a little 120-lb. man playfully sparring with a hundred and eighty pounder gave him a poke under the fifth rib that made the big fellow drop Australia's Big Regattas.

Only in rowing have Englishmen and Australians never met. It seems strange, when one considers the popularity of the sport at both ends of the hemisphere, that there should never have been an eight-oared championship rowed between these keen and versatile rivals. There are big annual public school contests and regattas in Australia, particularly in Melbourne on the Yarra, every whit as exciting as those at home; and the interest spreads in just the same way thru the whole community. "Henley-on-Yarra" is the next most popular sporting event of the year in Melbourne after the Melbourne Cup. The races on the Parramatta River at Sydney are equally famous. And each year there is a great inter-state eight-oared race, for which a picked crew from each of the six states enters. It is rowed in turn at Sydney, Melbourne, Brisbane, Adelaide, Hobart, and Perth. The course is three-and-a-half miles, or practically the same distance as from Putney to Mortlake.

appreciate. There are difficulties of place of flotous proceedings owing to the bitter appears of the proceedings owing to the bitter feeling existing in the rival camps. In Australia, and in no sport is that difference more lealously observed. There is also the finencial question, for the cost of arrapging a twenty minutes' contest between two crews of, eight men means a sum running well into four figures for the visitors: and the spectacle is one which the public in the main may watch without paying a penny. Now, however, it seems more than likely that a New South Wales crew will appear on the English side of the world during the coming season. If a match can be arranged with a home eight, neither crew will, it seems, be quite the best possible, but still it will be an interesting inauguration.

puted possession of their point of view, while I set down some impressions which may at least interest those who hold that alcohol in some form or another has a legitimate place in the life of humanity.

The reason for my inquiry, writes a correspondent, is to be found in the announcement that "the Home Counties Public House Trust, Ltd., which manages twenty-seven licensed houses in various parts of the Home Counties, requires further share capital for the expenses in an area of four square miles, and this area has now been distinguished for some time by its entire freedom from drunkenness. In trust houses men or women known to be drunkards are invariably black-listed, the manager, as already explained, having no interest in the scale of intoxicants. I heard of two cases in which black-listing for twelve months had effected a complete reformation.

An Ancient Coaching House.

From the Cowper Arms to the Roe-ages twenty-seven licensed houses in various parts of the Home Countles, requires further share capital for the extension of its operations, and the acquisition of additional houses." The trust, it should be noted here, was created by Earl Grey in a rather less ambitious form some nine years ago, and its guiding principles may be indicated under two heads, as follows:

1. Disinterested capital. The capital of the trust bears a maximum interest of 5 per cent., the balance of profits, (if any), going in the first place to form a reserve fund, and, when that fund is adequate, to purposes of public utility, such as the maintenance of hospitals or the provision of open spaces.

2. Disinterested management of each hcuse. Managers receive a commission on the sale of food and non-excisable liquors, but none upon that of alcohol, which they are otherwise discouraged from pushing.

Now, the plain question is this: After nine years of experimental working, can the system be shown to have raised the tone of the public house, to have made any contribution to a general solution of the liquor problem? Or has it shown fiself to be merely a fad? These points are worth considering.

Even in beautiful Hertfordnire—and worth considering.

Even in beautiful Hertford hire—and "Herts," for its beauty, is one of the worst known counties in Ingland—the conditions when my car left, the Red Lion at Radlett a few mornings ago were dismal enough to provoke a gloomy view of very nuch merrier subjects than the liquor question. And it is never ceased to rain till the car drew up at Watford Station, seven hours later, after a trip of something over eighty miles. The fact was doubly unlucky, for it meant that the hostelries were doing little business; yet—have you ever stood by a roaring inn fire on a wet January afternoon? Have you ever thanked heaven for bar parlors as you toasted chilly feet and sipped something hot?

But, I shall be asked, what has that to do with the subject of reformed public houses? Very much, I reply. The aim of the Public House Trust is to cater for all classes, from the tourist or man of business "grow the road" to the card table, and when the book bounded into tremendous sales J. W. Arrow-smith tore up his contract with Fargus and drew up another and very generous one. He also saw the possibilities of "Three Men in a Boat," and for years, when the presses had a few hours to spare, he would always print more copies of J. K. Jerome's book at a profit. But tho the printer-publisher of Bristol has had a happy time, and has been celebrating his jublies at Bristol as a publisher—is the maintainer of the Bristol as a publisher.

cigarette. "It's too funny for anything," she cried." "Guess who I came down with last night?" I shook my head.

You might try," she said, somewhat aggrieved at my continued lack of interest. "The curate's brother-in law!" She looked at me with sparkling eyes.

"Yes?" I said, blowing a smoke ring and watching it gradually fade in the air. "Our curate's brother-in-law," plained. "That nice man with the pretty whom everybody snubs so."

"Was his wife with him?" I inquired. "Non't be silly-and-and-horrid. It's the curate who's got the wife. The Rev.

"Only it was tactless of him to have a name like Smith-here." "Yes, isn't it a shame. We are a snobby gang, aren't we. Because he's really a gentleman, isn't he; I don't mean one of the nature sort."

"Never having heard bim mention the I remarked. "I daresay he is." "His brother-in-law is a dear."

moral of a story depends a good deal onthe point of view. "Say that's the attraction of it," I sug-

"Well, it will be rather interesting; don't you think?" She smiled happily. I lit another cigarette.

"Look here," I said, as I blew out the match, "I don't ask to know what happened in the train, but I bet you what You like you blush when he comes in."

"If politeness were a virtue," she delared, surveying herself in the mirror, "you wouldn't be fit for a young girl to speak to. Still, I will 5. You've not been very interesting, have you?" "It's my respectability," I pleaded in excuse. "However, I found your adventure intensely interesting."
"After that," said Elinor, "I'm going."

In the doorway she paused, to call back warningly over her shoulder: You're not to kick me under the table at lunch. Mind that!"

When Elinor said the inhabitants of Apstead were a snobby gang, she was regrettably slangy, but she scored a bull in . the way of truth. Only they did not regard themselves as snobbish; they prided themselves on being select. There is little but the point of view between the two qualities The Rev. Jenkin-Smith's offense had been twofold. The least that one can expect of one's curate is that she shall marry in his own parish. The fact that he came into our district already supplied with a wife dashed the not unreasonable hopes of our daughters to the ground.

That Mrs. Smith was decidedly pretty and wore furs considerably beyond her husband's income did little to assuage this disappointment were polite to the Jenkin-Smiths; to have been less would have been against our principles; to have been more would have been against our instincts.

As Mrs. Wendover said, if he had only spelt it with a "y" or an "e," how different everything would have been! That they should have been invited to my aunt's annual dance was no more than their due; their position demanded that

Where it was felt was my aunt had nade her mistake was in giving permission to Mrs. Smith to bring her brother. She had made the request-my aunt admitted with as much assurance as if she had been Mrs. Wendover herself. everybody knew that Mrs. Wendover's brother was in the Guards. In the younger circles there was considerable discussion not to be taken enfirely seriously, because even they real zed there were limits as to how would be dressed. Miss Wendover, in an appalling flight of imagination, even pic tured him in a frock coat! However, these speculations had their serious side. my own knowledge three bets were booked as to whether he would wear a ready made tie!

It was of course an unfortunate accident that the Jenkin-Smiths and their visitor arrived somewhat late, and entered

I nodded. At any rate it had been a distinct flush. Jenkin-Smith did not dance, and Mrs. Smith was a jolly little woman to whom the few entsiders—some dancing men from town and so on—were only too pleased to be introduced, I do not think that either of them realized there was dead set being made against them. I saw nothing of the brother-in-law, and ould only conclude that, my hands being full with Mrs. Jenkin-Smith, Elinor had taken him under her wing. I was inclined to envy him. Because, of Elinor, the truth is more than a physiological one, that the more one is under the wing the nearer one is to the heart. My aunt,, seated amongst the matrons, and others who in years, if in no other respect, were qualified for matronage beckoned me to her side. "Bring Elinor to me at once," she whispered, sharply; "people are looking; they'll be talking presently." If I had not won my box of cigarettes before, I should have then.

"Is that you. Dick," she cried.
"Yes," I replied. "I'm to take you to your mater. And Altington, it's about time you were introduced to your hostess, isn't it?" "Oh," cried Elinor. "Do you know Mr .-

"Hello, auntie," I cried, "let me intro-duce Lord Altington to you." Of the three I think that Mrs. Wendover was the most surprised.
Indeed if the expression on her face was any indication of her feelings, I am inclined to pity her. The discovery that Mrs. Jenkin-Smith, whom she had invariably snubbed, was the sister of the famous Lord Altington and a "Lady" in her own right, must, to a person of her instincts, have been the bitterest humiliation: However, the wedding present was in the very best taste.
