The Magna Charta Was Rescued From a Tailor's Shears.

Hidden away in national museums and libraries, and zealously guarded, are a number of priceless manuscripts and looks which, but for a fortunate chance, might have been lost to the world. The chief treasure of a museum at St Peterburg is the oldesthadown Creek manuscript of the New Testament which was about to be burnt by the monks of a Syrian monastery, when by a lucky chance, one of the pricets, struck with the antiquity of the manuscript, interfered in time to save what had been thought to be value-less.

save what had been thought to be value-less.

The incident reminds one that the Magna Charta which is carefully guarded in a glass case in the British Museum, was saved from destruction by Bir Robert Cotton, who, so the story goes, one day had entered his tailor's shop precisely at the moment when the huight of the sciseors was about to cut up for patterns the ancient looking document with its many imposing seals attached. Although Sir Robert did not at first recognise the value of the document, he judged it was something of historic interest, and purchased it from the tailor for a few shillings. After passing through the hands of various generations of his family it at last found a resting place in the British Museum.

An interesting story, too, is attached various generations of his family it states from a resting place in the British Museum.

An interesting story, too, is attached to a valuable Greek manuscript which came to the Bishop of Uganto in a startling way. It was wrapped round a fish and brought in to the Bishop's presence. By the mercet chance he tramined it, and found it to be part of treatment at the found it to be part of the stall of the selesman in the market where the fish had been bought just in time to save the remaining pages of this literary treasure.

One of the most highly-prized manuscripts of recent times, that of "In Memoriam," was resened just in time from a cupboard in a house where Tonnyson had lived for some time as a bashelor. As matter of fact it was to the poet himself that the recovery was due, for he remembered that the book wherein he had transcribed the original draft had been hastily thrown into the cupboard where he had been accustomed to keep pickles and jams. When the friends sent by the poet to recover the manuscript arrived on the scene the contents of the cupboard had been removed by the landlady, who was just then engaged in her task of house cleaning, and who tarky advised her visitors that they had some none too soon, in so much as she would that day have burnt all the "trash she had found.

day have burnt all the "trash she had found.

Among other veloable menuscripts discovered by chance might be mentioned the famous journal of his Italian travels written by Montaigne, now looked upon as one of the greatest of French literary treasures; while Milton's Commonplace Book wherein were entered the rough notes and plans of his poems, which for over two hundred years was lost, finally turned up in the garret of a neglected house in London.

Humors of Insurance Act.

Humors of Insurance Act.

The volume recently issued as the first report on the administration of the National Insurance Act contains some interesting reading. Among the incidents mentioned is that of a father who was so graceful for the maternity benefits that he asked the inspector's permission to call the baby by that official's name.

An amusing story is told of a certain employer who dismissed all his domestic servants. He told them, however, that if they would consent to remain in his house as his guests he would be glad if they would do so, but that they were not his servants and were not bound to obey his orders. It was admitted that from time to time he made them presents, and that they kindly consented to assist in the household work; but, as proof that he had no power of control, evidence was given that upon oscasiom this quantum employer had to rise early and light the fire in his own kitchen range in the morning. Such persons as "paying guests" were already a well-recognised element in the community, but it remained for the Insurance Act to call into existence "paid guests." The magistrates, however, held him responsible for the insurance of his "guests." On appeal to Quarter Sessions their decision was confirmed.

Indian Massacre Plot.

The Barital conspiracy case, received a hearing in the Calcutta courts, a few days ago. A sative lawyer, Mr. Gupta, in opening the case for the Grown, in which charges of plotting to seduce native troops and bring about a wholesale massacre were brought against the 44 detendinate, asked for 4 free pardon for the two approvers who were giving direct evidence regarding the working of the Barital and Dacea sections of the conspiracy. Gupta gave a long list of murders and outrages which the police have connected with the society. He produced documents showing how the conspirators divided the country into districts in which organised sedition was reached, chiefly by means of religious services, attdents and unmarried youths being their special concern.

Villagers in Battle.

A village fight took place near Cairo, Egypt, recently. Some peasants of the village of Charmonda allowed their estitle to stray into the cultivated fields of a peasant in the neighboring village of Eankalon. The latter vigorously protested, and a quarrel arose, which soon involved the inhabitants of both villagers. Arming themselves with sticks and all sorts of misdles the villagers arrayed themselves for battle and attacked each other. A strong force of police despatched from Eagang suppressed the fighting and arrested the ringlesders. Forty-five injured persons were taken to a hospital at Eagang.

HEN the steamer had gone Napoleon Doret went to look for Necia and found her playing with the younger Gales, who reveled in the gifts he had brought. Never had there been such gorgeous presents for little folks.

The elder girl laughed giadly as Poleon entered, though her eyes were wet with the pity of it.

she pondered long and hesitated modestly when she saw its low cut, which exposed her neck and shoulders in a totally unaccustomed manner, for it struck her as amazingty indecent until she scurried through her magazines again and saw that its construction as conversed with others were in it? she breathed as she undid the last, and then, opening the wrappings slowly, she gasped in astonishment. She shook it out gently, reverently, a clinging black lace gown of Paris make. Next she opened a box and took from it a picture hat with long jet plumes, which she stroked and pressed fondly against her face. There were other garments also—a silken petticoat, silk stockings and a pair of high heeled shoes to match, with certain other delicate and dainty things. tain other delicate and dainty things which she modestly forbore to inspect before the Frenchman, who said no word, but only gazed at her, and for whom she had no eyes as yet. Finally she laid her presents aside and, turn-ing to him, said in a hushed, awe stricken voice: "It's all there, everything completed Oh, Poleon—you dear, dear Poleon!" She took his two big hands by the thumbs, as had been her custom ever-since she was a child, and looked up at him, her eyes wet with emotion. But she could not keep away from the dress for long and returned to feast her every upon it er eyes upon it. "You lak it, eh?" pressed Poleon, hun-

Of course it was Poleon, who had come back to see her. So she rose hastlly, gave one quick glance at the mirror above her washstand, choosing the side that dis-torted her image the least, and, hear-

She writhed at the utter absurdity of her appearance and knew the lieutenant must be laughing at her. But flight would only make it worse. Burrell, however, was not laughing.
"I was looking for your father," he said, wondering if this glorious thing could be the quaint half breed girl of yesterday. There was nothing of the native about her now, for her lithe young figure was drawn up to its height, and her head, upon which the long black braids were coiled, was tipped back in a haughty poise. She had flung her hands out to grasp the table edge behind her, forgetful of her shawl, which drooped traitorously and showed such rounded lines as her or-dinary dress scarce hinted at. This was no Indian maid, the soldier vowed. No blood but the purest could pulse in such veins; no spirit save the highest could flash in such eyes as these. A jealous rancor irked him at the thought of this beauty intended for the Frenchman's eyes. "Can't you show yourself to me as well as to Poleon?" he said. (To be Continued)

At that time, there was a tremendous war debt to be faced and it seemed necessary to reach out in every direction t obtain a greatly increased revenue with the result that a "war tariff," was imposed purely as a temporary expediency and understood as such by the stion at the time. As usual of course vested interests soon made their appearance in the field, and vast monopolies sprang into existence at the expense of the people and fortified themselves so effectively behind the new tariff walls that for about a half century, the Republie became the happy hunting groun for the High Protectionist, and all assaults on the system were easily repelled. At length, however, the nasses have had their eyes opened to the fact that the entire resources of the land are practically controlled or exploited by the few and that the cost of living for God's Common People" has been rising and rising until it has reached a point which threatens the starvation of the poor man and just about exhausts the resources of the better off. It was a tremendous stride in the direc-tion of Free Trade. The people as a whole seem satisfied, the majority delighted, but the enecial interests at once commenced to fight the bill in every conceivable way. Threats were made to close up great industries, and some factories acually were closed, so it has been reported. Owing to the high wind the aviator did not make their eroplane ascension yester-THE HORSE RACES. It was trotters' day at the race meeting, with three classes on the program ne, and perhaps the best day's racing of the Exhibition. Following the very heavy rains of the previous night, with the showers dur ing the day, the track was naturally heavy, but it was fairly good outside the pole. There was some question, under such conditions, as to whether the races would conditions, as to whether the races would take place, but the management were determined that the programme should be carried out if possible, and there are few places where such would prevail under such conditions. But Halifax always does its best, particularly to please visitors and the public generally, and with a half hour's delay and a re-arrangement of the programme, everything was carried out as though the conditions were perfect.

Two of the three races were surprises, and they were among the best of the meeting.

It was a length behind, with Rexall Girl within a length.

Addie B. won the second heat, holding cher lead from start to finish, but not without a spiendid race between her, Narroway W., and Rexall Girl, with Oakley H. and R. T. right behind them. The big Fredericton mare did not find the footing suited to her; ahe had a lot of speed and she got alongside the bay mare, but could not get by her, and finally went to a break. They were rading hard at the half in the middle of the track, while McKinnon kept Rexall Girl at the pole just on the inside of Narroway W. The latter gained on Addie, passing the three quarters, but again left her feet. Addie B. maintained her position in the drive up the stretch, with Rexall Girl beating out the others, Oakley H. coming fast on the stretch and leading Narroway W. The latter was second to the quarter, where she made a bad break, and fell back. Rexall Girl left her feet around the turn, but stradied quickly and she went right back at them. Addie he looked like a winner in the turn into

This was a gift to Dr. Sharper. He simply had to jog around when the word was given, and won every heat. George Crescus also easily maintained bis second position throughout, as Steele kept him going steadily, knowing that he could not beat Sharper. Bariag's Comet landed third money, and his last mile, particularly, was a splendid performance for a three-year-old in the mud. The rest of the story is told in the summary.

DARTMOUTH NEWS. Pretty nuptial event this morning. African Baptist Convention closed last night. Other items.

A. Elliot, town clerk, left this morning or Boston, to spend his vacation. Miss Vivian Glawson, of Pleasant Har-bor, is visiting friends in Dartmouth. Mrs. George N. Roome, Mrs. H. P. Burton and Mrs. C. F. Lydiard have gone to Charlottetown to attend the convention of the Presbyterian Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Society, being held

The death occurred at the residence of John V. Bissett, Cole Harbor, yesterday morning, of Miss Frances Bissett, aged 73 years. She was born and lived all her life at Cole Harbor, and was the last surviving member of her family, her brothers and sisters having predeceased her. The funeral will take place to morrow. Thurst day, at 2.30 p. m.

To-morrow afternoon, at 4 o'clock, the flowers to be exhibited in connection with the flower show by the school children, will be on exhibition in Christ Church Parish Hall. In the evening at 8 o'clock the prizes will be presented, as will also the prizes won in the different grades during last year. All interested will be cordially welcomed, and all citizens should show their interest by attending.

The relay race to be held under to auspices of the D. B. C. A., postponed from Monday last, will take place next Mond The Grace Methodist Church was the scene of a pretty nuptial event this moreing at 70 colock, when Miss Jessie Adelaide, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Wiseman, Portland St., was united in matrimony to Ralph W. Ross, clerk with Teasdale Bros., son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Ross, Portland St. Rev. William Phillips, pastor of the Methodist Church, officiated. The church was very prettily decorated for the occasion by the girl friends of the bride. The full choir was present and sweetly rendered the beautiful bridal hymn, "The Voice that Breathed O'er-Eden." The bride wore a becoming costume of cream serge, with black picture bat and carried a beautiful bouquet of bridal roses and carraitons. H. Murray addressed the convention, telling of the working of the Hampden Institute in Virginia, which is going very good work along industrial lines, and suggested an institution of that kind for Nova Scotia. A committee was formed to wait on the Local Government for that purpose.

The finance committee reported the finances to be on a sound footing, and the membership has been increased during the past year.

A number of churches throughout the province are being repaired and new ones built which was a gratifying feature of the reports.

The meetings closed last night with an evangelistic sermon by Rev. Dr. Jesse Harrell, of Cambridge, Mass. The convention next year will meet in Beechville.

COST OF LIVING IN CANADA Increases under Tory Govern-

OTTAWA, Sept. 9.—The cost of living index number took another jump upwards last month from 135.9, the figures for July, to 136.2. In August, 1912, the figures for July were 132.2.

In August, 1912, the figures were 133.3, so that was nearly a three point increase in August of this year compared with the same month a year ago. "And," say the officials at the Labor Department who compile the average cost of prices every mooth, "the prospects for any pronounced drop in the average cost of commodities of life are not very bright." mooth, "the prospects for any pronounced drop in the average cost of commodities of life are not very bright."

The cause for the advance in the average cost of last month was principally due to the increase in price of potatoes, egge, canned lobsters, anthracite coal, grains and fodder. Such things as beef, lamb, butter, lake trout, whitefish canned peas, honey and coffee dropped a few points. Meats are a little higher in price than they were a year ago, but grains and fodder are lower.

SHRINER FOUNDER DEAD ...

New York, Sept. 10.—Dr. Walter M. Fleming, one of the founders of the order of the Nobles of the Mystle. Shrine in America, died last night at Mount Vermon, after a brief illness. He was 75 years old. In 1872 the first temple of the organization was established in New York.

Eastern Canada's Greatest Clothing House

Our Boys' Clothing has taken possession of its new home. We all had to work pretty lustily to get in before the Exhibition, so as to meet our out-of-the-City customers in the new department.

The floor space devoted to Boys' Clothing has been more than doubled.

Instead of having Boys' Sults, Reefers and Coats piled upon each other, we now have them hung up separately upon racks—just like the nea's. This is a great convenience to all—to buyer and to seller. Now a customer can look through the entire stock and see just what each fabric looks like and also get a good idea of the appearance of the garments. The staff can take down what is required without lifting a pile of garments.

Then again, the light has been increased—something most important to those who take pleasure in shopping. There is a regular flood of sunlight.

And now there's plenty of room—more of it, and still more of it.

But best of all, the racks are loaded with the finest display of Boys' Clothing to be found anywhere in Eastern Canada. Drop in and see the new department. We want every parent to see just what a comfortable home our Boys' Clothing Department is occupying.

FOR LADIES.

Pinero and Jones Represent the Old School of Britain Now.

If the theatre of Pinero and Jones did not "represent life," and if Mr. Bernard Shaw was too prone to "argue about it," the path that St. John Hankin opened up has been followed by other writers very clearly. Mr. Granville Barker, in "The Madras House," especially, has pushed further along it than Hankin oven saw; while Mr. Gaisworthy has kept very australy to the path of life as he sees it lived in the big world outside the theatre. The work of these two men is so well known, however, that we may turn at once to the younger workers. Since Miss Ellisabeth Baker has failed up to the present to follow up her admirable and sympathetic play of clerk life. "Chains," Miss Githa Sowerby and Mr. Stanley Houghton must be regarded as the two most promising of recent recruits to the theatre. Miss Sowerby also has only one play to her name that need be seriously considered, but there is plenty of a middle class household and of its dominance by the father, given with something of hear's spareness and economy. At. Houghton is a typical product of the English repertory theatres. His apprentice work for Miss Horniman's theatre at Manchester—which inclined the smuring comody for parents, "The Younges Generation." — prepared one for his admirable achievement in "Hindle Wakes." Here is a play that it at once cruiting, as a good play should be, and almost perfectly hithing in its alhermone to real life. One may think that the mill girl who retrues her employer's son in marriage is not, in her consisting outbreak, and the master bett of his story and of the best way to tell it in the theatre; there can be no two opinions about that. I would group with Mr. Houghton, Mr. Charles MaEvoy, Mr. Harold Brighouse, and Mr. G. J. Hamlen, each of whom has come to the London theatre after a period of service with the repertory theatres in the country—F. P. Howe, in the North American Beview. Satiety Possible. From Byron's friend and fellow-bard, Percy Bysshe Shalley, such a resolution would have been impossible; yet, although in every sense of a retiring disposition, he could when needful resent an insult in true British style. Keats need to relate how he once astonished a drunken and housew waterman by pitching into him in such unexpectedly vigorous style with his fast that the fellow soon bawled for mercy.

Keats himself, although constitutionally delicate, was broad-shouldered, and possessed no small amount of physical strength. He was, indeed, well able to take his own part, as he conclusively proved when assaulted by a hectoring butcher, who mistock for cowardice the poet's naturally retiring manner. Quickly did he find out his error as he rose, amid the jeering laughter of his companions, from the mud into which he had been sent by a straightly-delivered blow.

hlow. Charles Kingsley, besides being a novelist, was a poet of no mean order. He was, too, what may be termed a handy man with his fast. "There was another professor whose lectures we at tended together," wrote the Rev. Piteairn Campbell, who was a fellow undergraduate with Kingsley at Cambridge, "one who taught the gentle art of self-defensee—a negoo of pure blood —who appeared to have more joints in his back than are usually allotted to humanity. According to a French newspaper, the Cri de Paris, Maurice Masterlinck, the Belgian poet and dramatist, some time ago agreed to spar a number of rounds with Charpenties, the celebrated heavy-weight champion of Burope. The poet and the puglist appeared on behalf of a deserving Paris charity.

The author of "Pelleas and Meliande" is thus following in the steps of another celebrated poet, Lord Byron, who prided himself on being a skilled boxer. He frequently at Bribb's and elsewhere, and in the diary he writes "I have been marches with Jackson this morning land shads to continue and renew my acquaistance with my muffers. My wind is to agod plight, and is an not in feeth. I used to be a hard hitter."

who appeared to have more joints in his back than are usually allotted to humanity.

Robert Burns, besides being an adept at such athletic exercises as putting the stone, well knew how to take care of himself in a "turn-up"; while another Scottish bard, James Hogg, the Ettrick Shepherd, was in his youth a doughty opponent for anyone who fancied himself as a boxer. On one occasion, it is related, he contested for upwards of an hour with a strapping guardsman, a man his superior in weight and inches, and one, moreover, who had fought more than one desperate battle for a money stake. Despite his qualifications the soldier was at longth obliged to own himself besten.

In his youth the ability of Richard Hengist Horne, the author of "Orion" and other poems, as a boxer stood him on more than one occasion in good stead. During the time he was serving in the Mexican Navy he was one night, when on shore, attacked by two desperadoes, who, armed with knives, thought to have an easy prey. Woefully, however, were they mistaken, for Horne, sooing what they were up to, dedged their onslaught, and, with a couple of well-directed blows, laid them sprawling at his feet. By a special act of grace the late Queen Victoria, shortly after she ascended the throne, presented the Atholl Highlanders with regimental colors, and thus they were duly constituted an "army." The Duke himself is colonel of the "regiment," while his eldest son, the Marquess of Tullibardine, and his two brothers, Lord James and Lord George Stewart-Murray, are officers. Whiskers.

Whiskers.

"Whiskers" was a word formerly used to designate the hair on the upper lip. Scott more than once speaks of "whiskers on the upper lip," and so does Defoe in "Robinson Crusoe."

Johnson defined a "whisker" as "the hair growing on the upper lip or cheek unshaven, a mustachio." It seems to have taken its name from a fancied resomblance to a small brush, to "whisk" properly meaning to sweep, and a "whisker" having been a particular kind of feather brush; also, in the slang of a former time, a switch or rod. In the seventeenth century a "whisker" signified, among other things, a brazen lie, a "whopper." Beverages for Enter taining Purposes Rival to Panama. NO PLACE FOR WOMEN.

With Suspicion. Collectively the British House of Commons does not approve of woman, and she is only allowed within the precincts on sufferance. Even the wives and daughters of Cabinet Ministers walk along the corridors in a furtive manner, and no woman on any pretext may move from one part of the building to another unescorted by the building to another unescorted by a min.

Should a woman wish to speak with a member she must present herself at the dobby entrance and humbly give his name to the policeman on duty. After scrutinising her bag and parcels the policeman will pass her on till she finally arrives at the outer lobby, where she can inscribe her name and that of the member she wishes to see upon a card. It may be sent in at ones or the gold-ahained official may decide that he will have a map first. The woman waits patiently, or impatiently, appending to temperament, seated upon a narrow green leather beach between cold and supercitious statues of politicians bits bygone day. If the member wishes to see his visitor he may appear in half an hour or It the member wishes to see his visitor he may appear in half an hour or apread panic among politicitàs.

Only the other day Mrs. Asquith and and. Winston churchill, were chatting with a party of members when the division bell rang as a signal that a vote was to be taken. The ladies were hastly deposited on the nearest bench, and told not to move the vote each man abought the other had returned and escorted their guest to a place of safety. Only at damer time, some hours later, was the absence of the girl noticed. She had remained obedieatly on the spot where she had been left, under the impression that dire consequence would follow any attempt on her part to find her way outside alone.

The ladies' gallery is ridiculously inadequate as regards size and the nadequate as regards size and the possibility of seeing and hearing. It holds only forty, and of these net more than a dozen can see and hear. Outside in the corridor there is a long uncomfortable bench on which women who have pecured supplementary tickets (that is, a ticket to samit tary tickets (that is a ticket to samit if there is an empty place) sit some-times for hours. The Speaker's gal-lery is rather smaller, and is entirely at the disposal of Mr. Lowther. If a Cabinet Minister or other member is going to makers special speech, his wife will write to Mrs. Lowther beg-ging as a favor to be permitted to occupy a seat in this gallery.

Dunce was originally a term appli-Dunce was originally a term applied to a very wise man.

Some 600 years ago there lived a philosopher whose name was Duns. He was the leader of a certain number of thinkers and scholars who ber of thinkers and scholars who were known as schoolmen, and those who followed him were known as Dunsmen, or Dunses. People in those days were not so careful of their spelling as we of a later date, and so they fell into the way of spelling the word with a "c" instead of an "s," so that Dunses soon was spelled Dunces. A dunce, therefore, signified a learned man and was a title much prized. After a certain time these dunces became very unpopular because of their scoffing at the teachings of others, especially those who were progressive in their doctrines. They had a most conceited idea that they were the only really wise men, and it was not very long before the word dunce became a term of reproach and dunce became a term of reproach and signified a lack of good sense in the erson to whom it was applied, and thus the word became reversed in Helping the Chancellor. The difficulty Mr. Lloyd George had n deciding what to tax and what to eave untaxed in this year's budget recalls the story of an earlier Chan-

Came To See Her.

Sir Herbert Tree tells a number of good stories. One of his favorites is about an old lady who, had invited some friends down to pass the weekend at her little country cottage.

Her guests arrived in a tremendous downpour of rails.

"Dear, dear!" exclaimed the hostess as she welcomed them in; "what a day! I'm glad you're come, but do hope the weather will clear up, or you won't enjoy yourselves much."

"Oh, but, my dear Mrs. Jones," replied one of her guests politely, "we didn't come to enjoy curselves, we came to see you!"

Scotch Whales Dying Out. Scotch Whales Dying Out.

The ancient and famous whaling industry of Scotland is rapidly dying out; such is the unmistarable meaning of the returns just published in the annual report of the Fishery-Board of Scotland. It appeared that the total catch of whales in Scottish waters during 1912 was only 440, as compared with 503 in 1911. This represents a decline of 13 per cent. Curiously, however, an altogether enceptional number of sperm whales were captured—18, as compared with nine of the previous year. the previous year.
