Italians Maintain Pressure Against Enemy and Record Decisive Gains

By Courier Leased Wire.
Rome, Sept. 7.—Italian pressure against the Austrians in the region northwest of Gorizia is becoming decisive, the war office announced today. The enemy has suffered extremely heavy losses for several days, is making desperate resistance lines on the Canal.

"Northwest of Gorizia the enemy, having suffered heavy losses for several days, is making desperate resistance against our pressure, which is continuing decisively."
"Yesterday three officers and 21 men were made prisoners."
"On the Canal the bitter fighting of the past few days has been followed by local actions for rectifying the line, and by intense bombardment."
"Our airplanes repeatedly destroyed or threw into confusion enemy batteries in the Panovizza wood and the Ternova forest and communication lines on the Canal."

London, Sept. 7.—"Hostile raids were successfully repulsed in the vicinity of Armentieres and near Lens, says to-day's official statement."
"North of Fresenberg the enemy delivered two strong counter-attacks in the course of the evening against positions we gained in local attacks yesterday, and compelled our detachments to withdraw to their own line."
"During the night a party of our troops rushed a hostile post west of Quant and captured a machine gun. The hostile artillery was active in the night near Lens and in the neighborhood of the Ypres-Menin road."

Paris, Sept. 7.—"Violent artillery occurred last night on the Champagne and Verdun fronts, says to-day's official announcement."

G. W. V. A.
The furnishings for the G.W.V.A. headquarters and clubhouse, the old Grand Valley Hotel, are being supplied by various organizations and private individuals in the city. Already eight of the rooms to be furnished have been spoken for and are now being outfitted. Capt. J. H. Cornelius is chairman of the committee in charge of this phase of the work and he is assisting in every way possible to have the building commodiously and comfortably outfitted. There are many persons who would like to assist in this work but who do not desire to assume the responsibility of undertaking a whole room. Capt. Cornelius is in a position to know just what is required and will be only too willing to advise such volunteers as to what objects could be supplied. Pictures, a dinner set, invalids' chairs and many other such gifts are required as well as furniture and house furnishings.

DRAW FOR QUILT
The ticket sellers for the raffle of the quilt for the G.W.V.A. have been disheartened in making their returns at headquarters, and the raffle has thus been unavoidably delayed. Arrangements are now being made, however, to hold the draw on Saturday night, and the winner will be announced in Monday's Courier.

LOTTERY CHARGE
By Courier Leased Wire.
Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 7.—William Harding, manager of the Canada Shoe Company, was fined $1,500 today on a charge of conducting a lottery. The company sold a book of coupons to a purchaser who sold four coupons to another set of purchasers, the original holder of the book received an $8 pair of shoes, providing that each of the four new purchasers bought a book of coupons. More than 2,000 books of coupons were sold while only 350 shoes have been claimed. The case will be appealed.

WEATHER BULLETIN
Toronto, Sept. 7.—An area of high pressure now covers Great Lakes, while a low is advancing towards Lake Michigan from the south-west. The weather is fine throughout Canada. Frost occurred in northern Ontario this morning.

Moderate east-ly winds, fair and cool. Saturday—Southerly winds, showery.

WARFARE IN SKY TODAY PREVAILS

Days of Trench Fighting As Dominant Factor Are Numbered

GREAT AIR ACTIVITY
Wider Play To Allied Initiative Afforded In New Phase

By Courier Leased Wire.
New York, Sept. 7.—A special cable to The Sun from London, under yesterday's date says:
"The most intense aerial activity that has been seen since the war began has been in progress. While trench warfare continues in some areas, both the British and French staffs say its days as a dominating factor in the situation are numbered."

PROBLEM SOLVED.
Two years ago the leaders of both armies were speculating how to get the armies safely in the trenches. Apparently the problem has been solved by the slow development of events instead of by the supreme genius of any Napoleon's command-er."

Under the present system there is no longer any sharp line of demarcation between the opposing forces. Instead they are scattered apparently in a promiscuous way over a wide belt of country. Shell holes, fortified concealed posts and concrete "pill boxes" are taking the place of trenches.
Letters from soldiers at the front declare the new warfare is much more horrible than when trenches were used. The minor positions, however, have been long familiar with the

Austrian Resistance Weakening and Shattered; Occupation of Monte San Gabriele by Cadorna is Now Only a Matter of Hours

By Courier Leased Wire.

Although the Austrians apparently still retain a precarious hold upon upon Monte San Gabriele, their last remaining strong hold northeast of Gorizia, the end is in sight for them in this region, according to belief.

General Cadorna's report to-day shows that the Austrians are still resisting desperately, but staggering under the heavy losses which the insistent Italian pressure of the last few days has inflicted upon them. This pressure is being maintained and is becoming decisive, the commander of the attacking forces announces.

The Italian reports are invariably conservative and it has been noted that General Cadorna has a habit of withholding an announcement until he is sure of his ground. The confident tone of to-day's communication from Rome therefore is considered significant.

According to the strategical experts General Cadorna has only to obtain a secure hold upon Monte San Gabriele to give him complete dominance of the Bainsizza plateau and the country far to the south, making it possible for him to push his way into the Chapiano Valley and drive a wedge between the two Austrian armies, virtually isolating the southern army which directly bars his way to Trieste. Several times the San Gabriele peak has been in Italian hands, but the Austrians have battled desperately for this vital position and each time surged back again. There has been no let up in the Italian pressure, however, and it now seems as if the decisive phase of the battle has been reached.

The continued retreat of the Russians has not yet caused the Russian authorities to fear seriously for Petrograd, according to current advices, but it has for one thing apparently had the effect of awakening most of the radical elements in the capital to the necessity of strengthening Russia's powers of resistance. Their newspapers are now urging the dropping of internal political quarrels, enforcing discipline and presenting a united front to the enemy.

SUPREMACY AT SEA ALL-IMPORTANT

Upon It Depend Entire Allied Cause and Freedom Of World

SAYS LLOYD-GEORGE
German Sub Will Never Beat Down British Empire, Says Premier

By Courier Leased Wire.

Birkenhead, Eng., Sept. 7.—Premier Lloyd George in a speech here to-day on receiving the freedom of the city declared the whole allied cause and the freedom of the world depended on supremacy at sea and that he was certain it would be maintained. German statesmen, he said, had been at great pains to prove that the submarine figures given out by him in the House of Commons recently were inaccurate. He declared these figures absolutely correct, and that they put an end to all hopes of the enemy to win.
The Premier asserted he was absolutely convinced that the German submarine never would be able to beat down the strength of British Empire or beat down the hopes of the alliance by means of all the efforts the Germans could make with the submarine.
The premier said that the news from Russia in the last few days had not been good. He thought when the revolution came it would have the effect of postponing victory, but he had expected an earlier recovery.
"However, through all we must keep our patience," he added.
Mr. Lloyd George said that the

Submarines Only German Vessels in Riga Gulf--Petrograd Grows Uneasy

By Courier Leased Wire

Petrograd, Sept. 7.—No enemy vessels other than submarines, have been observed in the Gulf of Riga, the war office announces. The Russian naval forces are ready to engage the Germans.

There was no material change yesterday in the Riga region, the statement says. Encounters occurred between Russian rearguards and the advance cavalry of the Germans.
Petrograd, Sept. 7.—Petrograd, though in the opinion of various military authorities, is not immediately in danger on account of the fall of Riga, developments nevertheless are being prepared against the possibility of an unexpected descent by the Germans. The temporary government has appointed a special civil commission with authority to preserve order, suppress seditious meetings, suspend the publication of newspapers and other desirable clear the city of undesirable elements.

FAREWELL TO MR. AND MRS. T. L. WOOD

Y. M. C. A. Officials and Others Bade Adieu To Departing Citizens

PRESENTATION MADE

Couple Active in Church and Y.M.C.A. Work Honored

An informal farewell was extended last evening in the Y. M. C. A. to Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Wood who for the past number of years have resided in Brantford and who left today to take up their residence in St. Mary's.

The members of the board of directors of the Y. M. C. A. and their wives, the clergymen of the city and their wives and the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. and their wives gathered in the men's club rooms, which were beautifully decorated by the Ladies' Auxiliary to bid farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Wood who during their residence in the city have been active in all good works in connection with the church and the Y. M. C. A.

The chair was taken by Mr. T. E. Ryerson, chairman of the board, and a pleasant musical programme was given including solos by Miss Gladys Garvin, Mr. Neil McKinley and an instrumental selection by Mr. G. G. White.

A handsome gold headed umbrella was presented to Mr. Wood and a gold headed parasol to Mrs. Wood. The presentation was made by G. Cook, treasurer of the board, and an appropriate address was read by J. M. Young vice-president. The address read as follows:

To Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Wood.
Dear Friends:

It is with sincere feelings of regret that we have learned of your intention of removing from our midst.

For nearly thirty years you have been associated with the life of this city, during which time you have gained the respect and esteem of all classes.

Especially as friends of the Y. M. C. A. we are glad to meet in this social gathering this evening to take the opportunity of expressing in a more formal way, our deep appreciation of your work on behalf of, and your great devotion to the welfare of this association.

Mr. Wood had a large share not only in the Campaign for this beautiful building, but also in the planning, erection and dedication of the same.

During your term in the office of President, you exercised rare good judgment in the management, and the courageous manner in which you faced the difficulties was always a help to all of us. Your liberality in supporting the different funds together with your untiring efforts in the interest of Young Men has put the Association under a debt of gratitude to you which cannot be repaid.

It has been said that only "Spiritual values endure the ravages of time" this being so, we trust you will derive great satisfaction in the knowledge that the work and effort (Continued on Page Three)

BRANTFORD TO GIVE SOON TO THE ITALIAN RED CROSS

Two Days Campaign Will be Launched in the City Within Two Weeks' Time; Objective of $100,000 Aimed at From Province

A two-day campaign for the Italian Red Cross Society and fund for orphans of fallen Italian soldiers will be conducted in Brantford within the next two weeks. Such was the decision reached at yesterday's special meeting in the Board of Trade Chambers at 4.30 o'clock attended by representatives of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, Canadian Red Cross and Board of Trade and leading business men.

Official endorsement of the campaign here was given by the Board of Trade through President Logan M. Waterous. Co-operation of the Canadian Red Cross and Canadian Patriotic Fund committees was pledged. Many of the city's leading business men will take an active part in the campaign, as will women of the Canadian Red Cross, Women's Patriotic League and Daughters of the Empire, the support of which organizations was pledged at a meeting held last week.

"The first appeal has come from Canada for funds for the work of the Italian Red Cross Society," said President Waterous. "The needs are actual and pressing, and the Italian Red Cross committee anticipates a liberal response." In response to his letter calling yesterday's meeting, President Waterous announced the receipt of several letters promising support of men unable to be present, one enclosing a liberal cheque, and many telephoned pledges of active participation.

A definite goal for Brantford in its Italian Red Cross campaign was not voted upon at yesterday's meeting, but a figure representing the giving of between twenty-five and forty cents per capita to the war relief fund of Canada's valiant ally was talked of. A citizens' committee with representatives of the various co-operating organizations, among both women and men, will be organized and announced within a few days. Another meeting of citizens will be held early next week.

PREMIER AND CABINET QUIT

Ribot Ministry Tenders Its Resignation; Situation Grave

By Courier Leased Wire.

Paris, Sept. 7.—The resignation of the Ribot ministry was decided upon unanimously after a cabinet meeting this morning. President Poincare has asked the premier and his ministers to withhold their resignations until the presidents of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies have returned to Paris to discuss the situation. The presidents of both chambers have been summoned to Paris by telegraph.

Ribot Speaks.
Paris, Sept. 6.—(Delayed)—In his speech to-day at the celebration of the anniversary of the Battle of the Marne, Premier Ribot after referring to the determination of France to recover Alsace and Lorraine, said:

"France unites with the civilized world in the claim for a guarantee of peace, that it will not be merely a temporary truce, but a durable accord, founded on justice. Where shall we find that guarantee? It is for the German people to understand that it depends upon them to give it by shaking off the noxious military despotism which is a heavy burden for them as well as a danger for the rest of the world."

"If the German people refuse to become a pacific democracy they will risk being affected in their economic interests by a league for the common defence of peoples forced to organize against them. Whoever seeks to make the constant menace of aggression weigh upon the world must not complain because the world seeks to protect itself with all the means at its disposal."

REPAIR BRIDGE

Complaints are being made by automobilists and tourists of the approach to the overhead bridge on the Grand Trunk for the Paris toll road. The road is said to be in a very poor condition and badly in need of repair.

"SAMMIES" INSPECTED BY FRENCH PRESIDENT AT FRONT

U.S. Troops Training in France Passed in Review Before Poincare on Lafayette's Birthday--The Marne Anniversary

By Courier Leased Wire.

American Training Camp in France, Sept. 6.—(Delayed)—(By the Associated Press)—Wearing their British trench helmets and looking very grim and warlike the American troops passed in review before President Poincare of the French republic to-day. The President was accompanied by Paul Painleve, minister of war and marine, General Petain, and several other French generals.

To-day was the anniversary of the birth of Lafayette as well as the beginning of the Battle of the Marne, and President Poincare said that he had specially selected the date to pay his first visit to the American troops. He inspected several of their barracks and billeting quarters in French villages, and then left to visit some historic spots on the Marne battlefield.

The French President's reception, patriotism and loyalty for the principles for which we shall fight, and will instill into us a still higher spirit for the accomplishment of the task which is before us. It will make us, the advance guard of America's forces, feel still more keenly the responsibility that has been placed upon us."

General Pershing then presented President Poincare, "to be able to bring to-day the congratulations of the French republic to this very fine army commanded by General Pershing, and which I have just seen marching before me in such a magnificent manner. It filled me with emotion at seeing so many gallant officers and so many brave soldiers, who faced the dangers of the sea to come to the soil of France to defend the common cause of the allies and to consecrate their lives, if need be, to the common cause of liberty."

As President Wilson said the other day, we are all fighting for the same ends and the interests of the free United States are at stake everywhere the allied armies are at grips with the enemy, whether it be in Flanders, before Verdun or on the Isonzo.

Simcoe, Sept. 7.—(From our own correspondent).—It has long been recognized in Norfolk, that water-melons and the annual harvest of the chestnut tree, like umbrellas, are common property. But when a few days ago an east side resident undertook to trim the shrubbery on an adjacent front lawn, in order to get a better view from her verandah, her act was resented, and we understand a lawyer's letter has followed, complaining of the rather serious trespassing.

Press Photographs Mrs. C. H. Jones and two children, Miss Annie and Master Howard, of 15 Spring street Brantford, who for the past month have been visiting in Simcoe, the guests of Mrs. J. Norman and family, of 320 Queen street, are returning to Brantford the early part of next week after a pleasant holiday. While at Simcoe Mrs. Jones and children, along with Mrs. Norman and family, visited friends at Beaton and also spent a day at Port Dover.

and was not unexpected. The funeral at Ancaster is being held to-day, from the residence of her son, Wm. Olmstead. The remains were shipped from Simcoe yesterday morning. Other children than those named here are: Jacob Olmstead and Mrs. Westley Marshall, Ancaster; Mrs. Chas. Hillard, Stoney Creek; Mrs. Wm. Jeffrey, Caledonia; Mrs. Chas. Horning, Trinity Mrs. Wm. Quance, Beaufort.

The late Mrs. J. B. Smith, of Stoney Creek, was a sister. Corn Tall and Cost High. Anent the high cost of living, a noteworthy example of the cause of the high cost of living came to our notice to-day. "How is the corn?" said a grocer to a grower from whom he was accustomed to purchase all required for his trade.

"Any ready?" "No; all sold to one man at 12 cents a dozen." "To whom?" "Mr. ... " "Oh, I'll see him and get what I want." The merchant saw him and paid 20 cents a dozen and the growers are paying 25 cents a dozen. And Norfolk the home of good corn, has a fairly good crop too. Mrs. W. B. Tompkinson lost a fine collie dog—stung to death by bees during extracting operations. Too bad we have not more apriarists in the world. Gordon Tomlinson, who went overseas with the 135th and was later transferred to the 143th, has been again transferred to the staff of the 5th division and is a staff signaller.

Sammies Inspected

Continued from page one America is being celebrated the anniversary of the birth of Lafayette. To-day also I will visit the tombs of the heroes of the Battle of the Marne and men fallen in that advance guard of the armies, which are now fighting for right and civilization. Thus our two countries are celebrating the two common anniversaries which must draw them still more closely together and inspire them in the struggle in which they are engaged.

President Poincare was warmly applauded and then the officers gave three cheers and a tiger. The cheering was taken up by the troops in the distance and continued while the President and his party were moving off the reviewing field. One non-commissioned officer, who stood near the party during the speech, which was delivered in French, was greeted by some of his men when he rejoined his command, with the question: "What did he say?" "I don't know exactly," was the reply, "but I think he said to give 'em 'That's the stuff,' yelled a number of privates in chorus and the word ran all up and down the long khaki lines amid another outburst of cheering.

BRANTFORD TO GIVE

Continued from page one lies are continually suffering from frost bite and cold, braving the dangers of peak and crevice, causing as frequent hospital confinement and amputations as do actual shot and shell wounds.

"It costs far more to care for a single wounded Italian in the midst of the roadless Alps mountains where transportation is lacking, than to care for the fallen on other fronts. It requires many more Red Cross men, doctors and nurses under such handicaps of nature. Motor ambulances cannot dash up practically to the front line trenches. Instead sufferers must be transported on snow sledges, by furtow back or by sledge runners. Sometimes it is necessary to lower the wounded in slings by rope, or in overhead cable box-like cars down the mountain sides.

FOR 20 LONG YEARS SHE HAD SUFFERED

"It Certainly Was a Lucky Day For Me When I Got Tanlac," She Says

"I had tried in vain so long to find relief from my suffering that I had almost lost hope of ever getting anything to help me," said Mrs. Christiana Hunter in an interview with a Tanlac representative a few days ago. Mrs. Hunter is the wife of William Hunter caretaker of the Stanley Apartments, Bloor and Sherbourne Streets, Toronto. She also has a great many friends in Hamilton Ont., where she resided for a number of years before coming to Toronto.

She had one of the worst cases of stomach trouble, it seems to me, a person could have," she continued, "and there was hardly a day in twenty years but what I suffered from indigestion. My appetite just seemed to leave me entirely and I never knew what it was to sit down to a table and enjoy a good meal. I was really afraid to eat because I know how I would suffer afterwards and I hardly ate enough to seem to me to keep a baby alive. What little I did eat disagreed with me and I had an awful burning, heavy feeling in my chest. My stomach and during the past five years I have had several attacks of acute indigestion and would almost die. I was laid up in bed two or three weeks at a time with each attack before I could get strength enough to get up. I had fallen, off until I was scarcely more than a frame and was so weak I couldn't walk a block without getting so exhausted that out of breath I could hardly stand up. My nerves were just completely shattered and I would have such dreadful nervous spells at times I thought I couldn't live."

"My husband had taken Tanlac with fine results and advised me to try it. I had very little idea it would help me but to please him I sent down to Tamblay's and got a bottle and it certainly was a lucky day for me. I am now on my second bottle and it certainly has done me a world of good. My stomach is now in better shape than it has been in twenty years, my appetite is fine, too. And I can eat just anything I want without a bit of trouble afterwards. Honestly I can't remember the time when I enjoyed eating like I do since I began taking Tanlac. My nervousness is gone entirely and I feel stronger and better in every way. Before I took Tanlac I was so tired and worn-out all the time I never felt like going any place and now Mr. Hunter, and I go out most every night. I feel sure from my experience with Tanlac that there's nothing as good for troubles like I had and I think it is really wonderful how it has helped me."

Tanlac is sold in Brantford by Milton Robertson & Co. Ltd.; in Orillia by M. H. Cooke & Co.; in Elmvale by W. J. McGuire; in Leffroy by G. R. Ardill; in Stayner by N. B. West; in Coldwater by G. G. FAREWELL TO

Continued from page one you have undertaken, while not always seen on the surface, is of a character which will outlast all time. Mrs. Wood, who through her work in the Women's Auxiliary has made such a valuable and lasting contribution to the Young Men, we desire to convey in the most hearty manner our ever anxious thanks. And now since we cannot persuade you to stay with us, we beg to join in sincere wishes for your future happiness, praying that for you both, as well as your family, good fortune may smile upon you, and may your pathway be like that of the just, which shineth more and more unto the Perfect Day.

The address bore the signature of those present at the gathering.

STREET PAVING.

Repairs on the Chatham and George streets pavements are progressing favorably and considerable work in this connection has already been accomplished, stated Streets Superintendent Unger this morning. The rapidity with which the balance of the work is done will depend on the weather conditions and the labor supply which is at present limited.

KEEP CHILDREN WELL DURING HOT WEATHER

Every mother knows how fatal the hot summer months are to small children. Cholera infantum, diarrhoea dysentery and stomach troubles are rife at this time and often a precious little life is lost after only a few hours illness. The mother who keeps Baby's Own Tablets in the house feels safe. The occasional use of the Tablets prevents stomach and bowel troubles, or if trouble comes suddenly—as it generally does—the Tablets will bring the baby safely through it. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SOLDIERS RETURNING Number of Paris Officers And Men Are Expected Home Soon

(From our Own Correspondent) Paris, Sept. 7.—To-night the first meeting of the executive of the Young Women's Christian Association will be held in the reading room of the Y. M. C. A. Among other business the position of matron and secretary will be considered. The Customs receipts for August were $15,250.80, as against $11,161.04 for the same period last year, an increase of $4,189.85.

Pte. Chas. Maguire, who left here with the 125th battalion, is expected home in a few days. The death occurred at Burford Td. of Mrs. Andrew Mellor, deceased was well known to many here.

The Maple Leaf Patriotic Club acknowledge the gift of $10 from the Ladies' Aid of the Congregational church.

The subject of the following pathetic sketch was named after a Paris Young lady, who died.

"A correspondent who vouched for the accuracy of the story, informs the London Times of a touching incident which occurred during a recent raid on England by enemy aeroplanes.

"One of their bombs fell on the playground of a girls' school and mortally injured Doris Spencer Wall ton, aged fifteen, the daughter of a missionary.

"She was picked up with a terrible wound in her side and taken to a hospital in a cab by a special constable and two Canadian soldiers.

"In spite of the intense pain she must have suffered, the girl talked quietly with the soldiers on the way.

"Noticing that each of the soldiers had on his sleeve the gold stripe which is worn by those who have been wounded, she said: 'I must kiss you both because you have suffered.'

"The kisses were given. At midnight, the girl died. The two soldiers, adds the Times' correspondent, will value that act of a brave dying child as much as they would the Victoria Cross."

Doris Walton was the granddaughter of Cyles Spencer, formerly Hudson Bay factor at Fort George.

Her father, Rev. G. Walton, is at present a missionary of the Anglican Church at Fort George, Doris was named after the late Doris Seton-Adamson, who lost her life last year in the Grand River, being born just one year before Doris Walton. Her father, the Rev. W. G. Walton, has preached at different times for the Rev. Seton-Adamson, the present rector of St. James' Church, Paris.

THE SITUATION.
 The fighting on the Italian front is still of the most severe nature. With reinforcements the Austrians are putting up a stiffer argument, but Cadorna's men still continue to advance. The physical difficulties of this fighting ground are enormous and the nature of the area is such that it is even impossible to use ambulances—the wounded quite generally have to be lowered from the various heights in slings.
 The position of affairs with regard to Russia does not show any improvement. One despatch asserts that a German fleet has appeared in the Gulf of Riga, with the object of attacking the ports of Roval and Kronstadt. Just how the Muscovite fleet would act in such an event is only a matter of conjecture, but many believe that there is just as much disaffection among the men of that branch as in the army. In connection with the land forces it continues to be the same discouraging story of a steady retreat. They are becoming more and more an utterly disorganized mob.
 The Canadians have chronicled another advance in the neighborhood of Lens, British Columbia troops carrying out a successful surprise attack.
 The story comes from Brussels that when Emperor William visited there last week on his way to the Flanders front the populace refused to comply with a request of the authorities to display flags. Instead, they remained indoors and drew the window blinds, on which they inscribed:
 "Closed for national mourning."
 The streets were deserted, except for the soldiers and police.
 The appeal issued yesterday by Gen. Currie for more men will again serve to bring forcibly home the actual need in this respect which exists on the Canadian front.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.
 The Mayor of Chicago, pro-German, is now said to be in hiding in order to avoid a richly deserved hiding.
 The Germans, for ammunition purposes, are going to melt their bronze statues. As for statues they have burned them in every land they have devastated.
 The gentlemen who wanted a wartime election are now not quite so sure about it.
 Burfordites recently watched the smoke from the burned fair buildings. As usual, however, at the time of the annual event it will again be a case of watching the smoke of the satisfied directors.

WARFARE IN THE SKY
 ground, to be certain whether a given shell hole is occupied by friends or enemies. A mistake is usually fatal, for when the enemy's machine guns open fire, the destruction of the blundering party follows quickly.
 While the shell holes have been converted into permanent ponds of bottomless mud, the ground between them has dried and become fine dust, almost as difficult as mud when an attempt is made to move artillery. The allies are confronted by this condition, and striving desperately on both sides for the mastery of the air, each desiring to monopolize the privilege of observing the enemy.
 The Germans have demonstrated that they have many more airplanes than was supposed, permitting them to conduct constant raids on England and simultaneously to continue contents along the whole battle line. The British and French staffs are pleased with the development of the new warfare, although it has temporarily checked the allies' advance. They are confident that they will be able to stop the air raids in time. An immense American contribution of airplanes is expected and an early increase in the British production.
 The new type of warfare is regarded as especially favorable to the allies, because it gives wider play to the individuality and initiative of the soldiers and minor officers, in which the British, French and Americans are much superior to the Germans. The allies are confident also that they will have soon an overwhelming superiority in the production and use of gas, which is now an important method of fighting. The British especially have developed most efficient methods of using new gases with unparalleled deadliness.

WIN THE WAR' NOMINEE IN WEST KENT
 Mr. A. B. McCoig, the Liberal member for West Kent, performed the straddle the fence act in connection with the Conscription Act.
 He first of all voted for the referendum, as proposed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Then he supported the Liberal caucus in Toronto, at which he whooped it up for a Laurier victory in the coming contest.
 His attitude has naturally been most displeasing to those of his constituents who desire a "win the war" program regardless of anything else, and at a convention of Liberals and Conservatives, Mr. Kerr, Mayor of Chatham, and himself a Liberal, accepted a nomination to contest the Riding. In doing so he said in part:
 "Sir Wilfrid is not and never will be for conscription. After a win-the-war meeting in Montreal, I called on Sir Wilfrid in Ottawa, and in conversation, he told me union government or not, he would not support conscription, for Quebec would be thrown to the extremists. Quebec is more to Sir Wilfrid than is the nation, and he cannot swing Quebec into line. The Nationalists in Quebec are pledged for repeal of the conscription bill. A Liberal government in Ottawa now would be a great catastrophe, and would mean riots for returned soldiers would not stand for no conscription. Quebec would throttle the commerce of the nation which passes along the St. Lawrence. Quebec cannot dictate to us what we shall do. Any man who says he is not for conscription is placing an axe at the foundation of Confederation, and it is a lie for him to say he is a loyal citizen."
 "I jumped into the recruiting same, and I soon saw that it was wrong. I will never make another recruiting speech, if I have to die the next minute. It is the rottenest business I ever was in. It was not a system, it was a mess. I have the most quarrel with Liberals at Ottawa, because they are throwing obstruction in the way of Sir Robert Borden. He is a gentleman all the way, and the offer he made to Sir Wilfrid for a union cabinet should have been accepted. It is befuddling the issue to say anything about how and when that offer was made. The real question is whether there was need to do something for the boys at the front, and Sir Wilfrid has failed to respond to this."
 Without doubt many other Liberal representatives, who have not taken clear ground on this issue, will find themselves in the same box as Mr. McCoig. His majority, by the bye, in the last contest was 66.

THE NEW FRANCHISE ACT
 The franchise is usually a very delicate thing to tamper with, but war conditions have called for a wartime act, and there will be very few loyal citizens indeed who will be prepared to quarrel with the proposed conditions.
 In the forcible speech with which he introduced the measure, Hon. Mr. Meighen very trenchantly placed the onus for a contest during this period of crisis, where it properly belongs. It is to Sir Wilfrid Laurier and in the main, his Quebec associates, that we owe the deplorable fact of a wartime election, and the further circumstance that many of the brave men overseas will not be able to vote, while all of them will be debarred of their personal influence in the struggle which is about to take place.

 As an offset, it is very properly proposed to curtail the vote of Aliens who by birth and purpose, are heart and soul with the aggressive power which has steeped our country after country in blood in an effort to secure world domination.
 As far as the women are concerned, the plan is to extend the right of the ballot only to the wives, widows, mothers, sisters and daughters of those who have served in the Canadian Expeditionary and their allied forces.
 There can be little question that with the alien vote added to that of Quebec, the outcome of the coming struggle on behalf of the Empire and human liberty, would be greatly jeopardized, and the threatened danger undoubtedly calls for heroic treatment.

WAR TIME FRANCHISE BILL INTRODUCED DOMINION HOUSE

Aliens and Conscientious Objectors to be Disqualified-- Women Having Next of Kin Overseas to Have the Ballot-- Forcible Speech by Hon. Mr. Meighen

SALIENT FEATURES OF ACT
Ottawa, Sept. 7.—The following are the salient features of the War-Time Elections Act, introduced in the Commons and given first reading yesterday afternoon:
1.—Disfranchisement of citizens of enemy alien birth, naturalized since March 31, 1902; disfranchisement not to apply to those with sons, grandsons or brothers on active service, or to Armenians or Syrians.
2.—Disfranchisement of Doukhobors, Mennonites and all others exempted from combatant military service for conscientious reasons; exercise of franchise by any individual a bar to any later claim for exemption on conscientious grounds.
3.—Enfranchisement of mothers, wives, widows, daughters or sisters of soldiers who have gone overseas from Canada since the beginning of the war.
4.—Adoption of provincial franchise, subject to above qualifications.
5.—Preparation of new lists in Manitoba, Alberta, Saskatchewan, British Columbia and P. E. I., by enumeration according to method now followed in Saskatchewan and Alberta.
6.—Existing lists in Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia to be accepted, with addition of women's votes to be made by system of enumeration adopted for the Western Provinces. Lists to be prepared by enumeration in unorganized districts.
7.—Parts one and two of voters' list in cities and towns of over 9,000 population in Ontario to be adopted with enumeration to provide for the addition of women and manhood suffrage voters.
8.—In the absence of Sir Robert Borden, who will not be able, owing to illness, to take his seat in the House for some days, Hon. Arthur Meighen, secretary of the House, introduced the war-time Elections Act. There was a full attendance of members on both sides of the House, and they all followed the explanation of the details of the bill with the closest possible interest.
"The bill which I now present," said Mr. Meighen, "affects only an election in time of war or during mobilization, and goes out of existence entirely when such period is over."
"The essence of a war-time election act arises solely from the fact that there is a war-time election, and the purpose of the bill now introduced is solely to meet the extraordinary conditions encountered in the necessity of deciding at such a time by an electoral contest a vital issue as now confronts the Canadian people."
"Regrettable necessity
"We find ourselves compelled to submit what is really the destiny of our country to the arbitrament of the ballot at a time when the best part of our manhood is struggling in the throes of a death combat overseas. Upwards of 300,000 of the sons of Canada are absent from our shores, and of those 300,000 it is a moral certainty that a large percentage will not be physically able to use the franchise. The nearer we approach the reality that a general election is inevitable, the more regrettable the necessity for such an election appears."
"We have passed a military voters' bill, which to the best of our power places the franchise within the reach of our fighting men, but neither has been in effect exempt and impossible and enable all, or nearly all, of these fighting men to vote. It may, indeed, transpire that a relatively large proportion are in effect, though not by statute, disfranchised. An election, therefore, is an injustice, and a great injustice to the overseas soldiers of Canada, and of those to whom a country should never be unjust, first is that country's defenders.

"But this is not all. The entire personal force and influence of these 300,000 men is stripped from them for the purpose of this contest. They are the foremost of our sons, the very bone, sinew and virility of Canada. Those at home who should be at home, and those at home who should be overseas are in the full enjoyment not only of their ballot but of the exertion of all their faculties they desire to exert in this contest, but a penalty falls on those who have been true enough and brave enough to fight our battles, and those who are deprived in part of the ballot and wholly of their electoral influence.
"Many Voices Stilled
"Nor can we forget that some 30,000 have already fallen in the struggle. Their voices are still, while the voices of those who remained behind can be heard, and will be heard. Some thousands more are prisoners of war, and are suffering hardships unparelleled for the sake of those at home. These men can have no voice, but for those whom they suffer are in the full enjoyment of every privilege of citizenship.
"The considerations to which I have referred will, I think, make it plain to the minds of all, that if a contest at the polls must come, Parliament must address itself to the task of bringing about such electoral conditions as will repair as fully as possible the damage done to the franchise that would under an ordinary franchise fall upon our soldiers overseas. To do this is the primary purpose of the bill which I now introduced. The task has not been an easy one."

Added Strength
"It is proposed that by a measure of women enfranchisement added strength be given to the voice of the nearest kin at home, and that the nearest kin at home must come, Parliament to be most likely to echo the sentiments of their sons, husbands and brothers overseas and by this means to give the nearest female relatives of our expeditionary forces, and of those who have left the shores of Canada, are given the right to vote. The mother or widow, the mothers, the daughters and the sisters of overseas soldiers are by this bill enfranchised.
"A Fitting Measure
"It will be remembered that earlier in the session, the prime minister intimated to Parliament that, in his judgment, it would be proper to extend the franchise to the women of Canada, subject to such conditions and limitations as Parliament might provide, and that whatever extension of the franchise was made to one province should be made to all. Under the abnormal circumstances created by the present war, the measure of women suffrage, which I have just outlined, is deemed fitting and does indeed constitute, in my judgment, a reasonable general extension of the franchise to women. It will be obvious to all that, having regard to the fact that as female immigrants to this country, from Europe or from elsewhere have been naturalized by marriage or by the naturalization of a parent, and without entailing any special obligation, an unlimited admission of women to the franchise at this time would be unfair and unreasonable. A limit of limitation must therefore be found.
"War Service the Basis
"The principal reason for adopting the line laid down by this bill is that it is the only means of extending to the soldiers, living, dead or in chains an adequate voice in the decision of a great electoral contest fraught with consequences peculiarly vital to themselves.
"War service should be the basis of the franchise. It has been our purpose to make this as far as possible the central principle of the bill now introduced. It is true that war service does not consist wholly of the sacrifice of the husband or the brother for the purposes of the battlefield, but such sacrifice is the greatest of all, and I believe the voice of Canada generally will consider it not unfair that such sacrifice should have special recognition. When the war is over, a wider franchise may well be given the women of Canada, and it is my earnest hope and belief that the step now taken may lead to such result.
"The Exemptions
"So far as legislation can attain the end, the obligation to war service and the right to the franchise should go hand in hand. On this principle, which underlies this act, it is proposed that those who for reasons special to themselves are unavailable for the highest of war service, should not, while exempted from such war service, being the position to exercise a measure of control over those who bear the burden. We have in Canada, broadly speaking, two classes so exempt. The one class is now exempt by law and the other by the provisions of the War-Time Elections Act. The first class referred to consists of those entitled, under the Military Service Act, to be relieved on conscientious grounds, from combatant service, and the second class is constituted by that portion of our foreign population who have recently come to Canada and are of alien enemy birth or near extraction.

"As to the conscientious objectors, it is not considered right that those who refuse on conscientious grounds to bear arms should be enabled in the midst of a war effort to compel others to fight for them or to deny to those who do battle the right to fight for them. It is their belief that a nation should not defend itself by arms, and if on the belief they refuse to fight for their country, then they should not be in a position to exercise control over their country while it is in arms and while it has the right to live. This, I believe, will be the view shared in the main by themselves. We find no fault with them for their beliefs. This is a free country and they have been welcomed to our shores, but I am sure they do not desire to be doubly the sacrifice of the war, should constitute the democracy which controls the destiny of the country in the time of war."
"As to the second class, those born in enemy countries and who in recent years have been naturalized in Canada and those, who, though born in European countries, have geographically within the 'enemy's domain, are nevertheless German, Austrian, or Italian, it has from the commencement of hostilities been found undesirable to enlist them as combatants. I am free to admit that the basis of this measure, having regard to the main, having regard to the peace of our population has all things considered, conducted itself satisfactorily. Many of them, however, sons or brothers their very nearest kin, fighting against us on the soil of Europe, were it desirable to compel these men to do battle against their kin and against the country which they have sworn to ally wholly as yet be divorced in sympathy. Great Britain has recognized the war and with sympathy has declined to admit to her arms men of alien enemy birth or near extraction.
"An Exception.
"The Commonwealth of Australia in legislating for a general election in some months ago, refused to admit to her franchise those citizens of alien enemy birth, no matter how long they had been in Australia. This bill only such as have been naturalized since March 31, 1902, are affected. All others are left untouched. In Australia an extension of the franchise to the women of Canada, subject to such conditions and limitations as Parliament might provide, and that whatever extension of the franchise was made to one province should be made to all. Under the abnormal circumstances created by the present war, the measure of women suffrage, which I have just outlined, is deemed fitting and does indeed constitute, in my judgment, a reasonable general extension of the franchise to women. When the war is over, a wider franchise may well be given the women of Canada, and it is my earnest hope and belief that the step now taken may lead to such result.
"The Exemptions
"So far as legislation can attain the end, the obligation to war service and the right to the franchise should go hand in hand. On this principle, which underlies this act, it is proposed that those who for reasons special to themselves are unavailable for the highest of war service, should not, while exempted from such war service, being the position to exercise a measure of control over those who bear the burden. We have in Canada, broadly speaking, two classes so exempt. The one class is now exempt by law and the other by the provisions of the War-Time Elections Act. The first class referred to consists of those entitled, under the Military Service Act, to be relieved on conscientious grounds, from combatant service, and the second class is constituted by that portion of our foreign population who have recently come to Canada and are of alien enemy birth or near extraction.

"As to the conscientious objectors, it is not considered right that those who refuse on conscientious grounds to bear arms should be enabled in the midst of a war effort to compel others to fight for them or to deny to those who do battle the right to fight for them. It is their belief that a nation should not defend itself by arms, and if on the belief they refuse to fight for their country, then they should not be in a position to exercise control over their country while it is in arms and while it has the right to live. This, I believe, will be the view shared in the main by themselves. We find no fault with them for their beliefs. This is a free country and they have been welcomed to our shores, but I am sure they do not desire to be doubly the sacrifice of the war, should constitute the democracy which controls the destiny of the country in the time of war."
"As to the second class, those born in enemy countries and who in recent years have been naturalized in Canada and those, who, though born in European countries, have geographically within the 'enemy's domain, are nevertheless German, Austrian, or Italian, it has from the commencement of hostilities been found undesirable to enlist them as combatants. I am free to admit that the basis of this measure, having regard to the main, having regard to the peace of our population has all things considered, conducted itself satisfactorily. Many of them, however, sons or brothers their very nearest kin, fighting against us on the soil of Europe, were it desirable to compel these men to do battle against their kin and against the country which they have sworn to ally wholly as yet be divorced in sympathy. Great Britain has recognized the war and with sympathy has declined to admit to her arms men of alien enemy birth or near extraction.
"An Exception.
"The Commonwealth of Australia in legislating for a general election in some months ago, refused to admit to her franchise those citizens of alien enemy birth, no matter how long they had been in Australia. This bill only such as have been naturalized since March 31, 1902, are affected. All others are left untouched. In Australia an extension of the franchise to the women of Canada, subject to such conditions and limitations as Parliament might provide, and that whatever extension of the franchise was made to one province should be made to all. Under the abnormal circumstances created by the present war, the measure of women suffrage, which I have just outlined, is deemed fitting and does indeed constitute, in my judgment, a reasonable general extension of the franchise to women. It will be obvious to all that, having regard to the fact that as female immigrants to this country, from Europe or from elsewhere have been naturalized by marriage or by the naturalization of a parent, and without entailing any special obligation, an unlimited admission of women to the franchise at this time would be unfair and unreasonable. A limit of limitation must therefore be found.
"War Service the Basis
"The principal reason for adopting the line laid down by this bill is that it is the only means of extending to the soldiers, living, dead or in chains an adequate voice in the decision of a great electoral contest fraught with consequences peculiarly vital to themselves.
"War service should be the basis of the franchise. It has been our purpose to make this as far as possible the central principle of the bill now introduced. It is true that war service does not consist wholly of the sacrifice of the husband or the brother for the purposes of the battlefield, but such sacrifice is the greatest of all, and I believe the voice of Canada generally will consider it not unfair that such sacrifice should have special recognition. When the war is over, a wider franchise may well be given the women of Canada, and it is my earnest hope and belief that the step now taken may lead to such result.

SHALLOW GRAVES MARKED RETREAT FROM WARSAW WHEN TEUTONS PUSHED RUSS BACK

Long Night Flights For Hungry, Cholera-Stricken Civilians--Detroit Woman's Story of Awful Three Weeks--Her Own Wild Adventures Leave Her Nervous Week, But She is Safe and Happy Now

"Ten thousand dead in the drive on Warsaw," doesn't seem to mean very much in the minds of those who read. The figures are too great and only those who have seen a corpse strewn field can realize what it means. But the story told by Mrs. Tillie Litke, wife of Patrolman Edward Litke, of 14 Johnson street, Detroit, is a very different matter, and while blood flows but little in her recital there is a human nearness to it that brings sharply home what war is and what its tragic gifts may be.

Mrs. Litke arrived in Detroit Saturday from Russia and this is the story she tells of the drive from Warsaw when the German army pushed back the Russians for day after day, and the Russians in turn pushed on the citizens of the towns and hamlets that lie on the road from Rovno to Pinsk.

Warsaw is fired. Wild rumors had risen and died on every minute's birth all during the long day of July 19 in the little city of Rovno. There was a faint muttering sound as of summer night thunder when a storm is afar off. Bands of fast riding Cossacks had swept through the village from time to time, and once on a road to the west a long gray line of infantry moved on like a catapillar crawling on a dust white belly. As night drew on the thunder increased steadily and at last it became a mad series of frightful crashes that caused the ground to rock beneath their feet and the pictures to fall from the wall, while glass tinkled in a broken shower that continued for many minutes. Red flashes of flame that seemed like narrow streaks of blood-red fire leaped into being against the darkening sky, and then came the steady glow as flames curled about the house on the outskirts of ancient Warsaw.

Mrs. Litke, with her aged parents-in-law and her sister, had left their home and joined the crowd in the streets. The crowds were silent because the hummer was so continuous they could not hear the loudest of shouts. The crashing suddenly seemed to halt and on the heels of the silence came a new thunder, the rush of mounted men. They swept into Rovno like mad men. Cossacks, fur capped and high saddled. Many were armed with whips and they gathered up the citizens as cowboys round up dumb driven cattle. The whips cracked against the bent backs of those who "hesitated" and their screams were lost in the wild yells of the cavalry. It seemed but a minute before the crowd, men, women and child on, had stumbled out of town into the darkness of the country.

Long Night Flight. All that night they were pressed on, afoot, mounted on weary horses or overburdened mules, riding on rough wagons, the air made hideous with the screams of hysterical women and frightened children and the wild oaths of the soldier herdsmen. The road became a mud path, sticky, slimy, pooled with stagnant water and a fetid odor hung in the air, the smell of burnt flesh where flames had scorched to death the cattle and horses left in Rovno, now a raging furnace of flames and blistering smoke.

Morning came, dull, drab, gray and festooned with clouds, and a wind swept the steeps. On they were pressed, no time for food, no time for water. Ahead of them soldiers had nailed tight the wells. A whisper ran through the mob of frightened people. Cholera was near. Far to the west a woman suddenly screamed and clutched at her breast a child whose tiny limbs were tossed in agonized convulsions, his face was drawn until it seemed like a little old wrinkled man. A doctor came and shook his head. An hour passed and the child was a ghastly blue, his mouth opened, gasping for air, a faint convulsion shook it. It was dead and the cholera had come.

Bury Child Victim. The march halted a tiny moment while a spade dug a grave, a shallow, narrow grave that was covered with a skin of green water almost before the boy was laid in his rest. The mother went on looking back and those who rode near her drew away at her touch. A woman who walked beside a horse suddenly swayed and fell. They let her lie in her tracks. Cholera had come. A man and a boy fell screaming. The plague was counting. Its new toys with swift, ghastly flares. Shallow graves marked the march on the left and on the right, shallow graves with a wooden cross of string-tied fagots left behind in the gray column passed into the first time the German troops swept on behind. Noon came and the people were fainting with weariness, but the Cossacks drove them on. Villages came to view, were passed through and blossomed behind into the red flower of flame and before the weary column passed into distance the villages were flat and smoking like the swamp lands from which rose the mist.

There was Little Food. Further and further they pressed on into the land of swamps. Here and there a gnarled, gray tree rose, but mostly the land was flat and gray and dully glimmering with pools of swamp water in which snakes and cold slim things lived alone. The people were dazed with the mud where they had fallen or where some mad riding soldier had splashed them. Night came again and they rested for the first time. Rested in trenches that became banks of sluggish yellow streams that soaked the sleepers through. Ammunition wagons halted and five cartridges were dealt out to each Russian soldier. When those were gone—that was up to the soldier. Food was a mockery. A bit of bread made of wheat split once in half, sometimes a handful of flour. Whole days passed without a drop of water to drink and the sun shone hot and brazen until the tongues swelled in the mouths of the women and children and hung from their parched lips. They could not sleep. Shoes were worn and bits of blood marked the trail. Some became quite mad from exhaustion and left the column to wander out into the silent swamps, falling face down in some loathsome pool.

Survivors Reach Pinsk. For three weeks this drive continued and the people died like flies beneath the chill of a frost. Behind there was always a dull roar as the armies fought. To this they paid no heed, a halt meaning a general falling to the ground and sleep, the blessed sleep that dulled their pain and misery for a few brief hours before the notes of bugle and crack of whips once more moved them on. And on the morning of the 21st day they reached Pinsk, where the drive was halted.

Mrs. Litke had carried a part of those weary miles her son, a little chap of 5. She was exhausted, but she lived. For three weeks she had slept beneath the open sky with her boy pressed close to her heart. When she awoke from her fitful slumber she gazed up into the star biased heavens and a leperous moon. On every side of her was a dull moaning, a restless tramping of horses, a wild song of some drunken soldier who in the face of orders had obtained vodka, the sobbing of a mother who had left behind her dead child, food for the great grey vultures that followed the weary miles, shadows of death to come.

Husband Escaped Service. Some night fires gleamed here and there and a black shadow at the rim of the light told of hundreds creeping close for warmth. She had gone with others to obtain a cup of water that the boy might live and she had crushed the half wheat bread between her teeth that the child might eat. Scarcely was evident and the hands and feet of many were cracked and bleeding. She had been arrested once as a spy because her son smokes a German word and often she was hungry. But she managed to reach Moscow and then Petrograd and at last Sweden.

She is still nervous wreck and her sleep is often disturbed by visions of that three weeks' drive before the Russian army, but she is happy—she is home. Her husband went with her to Europe, but escaped a year ago when he was threatened with conscription, little dreaming his wife would know the horrors of war. He sent her money to come home, but it was months in reaching her.

WOMAN INVOLVED IN MONTREAL CASE

Italian Killed By Com- patriot In Quarrel Over Girl

By Courier Leased Wire. Montreal, Sep. 6.—When Ida Sawyer this morning visited Joseph Rosano, under arrest on the charge of murdering Francisco Fraietta and burying his body in the back yard of St. Urban street house, she was detained by the police as a material witness and a sordid story of passion and jealousy was uncovered. Fraietta asked if Sawyer the sweetheart of Rosano to go to Ottawa with him. It was learned that she refused and Fraietta left her threatening to return later and "cut her to pieces," the Sawyer woman told Rosano of Fraietta's threats and Rosano waited in a dark alley near his home for his convicts' return. When he came Rosano shot him dead. Rosano was himself badly wounded by a bullet fired by a friend of Fraietta later.

Music and Drama

THE BRANT.

Wallace Reid and Anita King, super stars in the firmament of filmdom, appear together at the Brant the last half of this week in "The Squaw Man's Son," a powerful dramatic production of western life, and a sequel to "The Squaw Man," one of the greatest successes ever produced upon the spoken stage. "The Squaw Man's Son" is equally eminent in the departments of performers and productions. Ford Sterling, Hughie Fay and a cast of other Keystone formers conjoin to give here next week at the Brant Theatre a classic of unusual mirth-provoking abilities. The eighth episode of "The Neglected Wife," starring Ruth Roland and others, is replete with brilliant moments, and sustains interest at a high pitch throughout. Wright's Hawaiians, in novelty singing and dancing, have an unusually strong vaudeville number, enhanced by especially beautiful scenic settings.

HAROLD JARVIS

Brantford, like many other places, has a great number of admirers of Mr. Harold Jarvis, the eminent concert tenor who has appeared here a number of times in church recitals, and a tremendous welcome is assured him at his appearance here next week at the Brant Theatre as a special added attraction, when the stupendous Vitagraph super feature "Womanhood," is being presented.

Mr. Jarvis for the past eighteen years has been soloist in one of Detroit's leading churches, which position he still retains. At present he is filling a limited number of engagements in the leading theatres and he comes to Brantford through his personal acquaintance with Mr. Moulton. As the sale of seats is already large, the management advises early bookings to those who wish to be sure of obtaining admission. An advance in prices is being made on this big all feature bill. "Womanhood" has been shown in leading American theatres at greatly advanced admissions.

PARAMOUNT PICKINGS

They are shifting up the remains of the motor car which Marguerite Clark used in altering the scenery of Greenwich, and preparing to use it again. In other words, the Paramount star is about to begin the starring of the second "sub-Deb" story by Mary Roberts Rinehart, under the direction of J. Searle Dawley. If you visit the Famous Players studio and find both Pauline Frederick and Robert G. Vignola deep in the perusal of a novel, it does not mean that they are merely killing time by entertaining themselves. An examination of the books will reveal them to be David Graham Phillips' well-known novel "The Hunny Heart," which they are preparing to stage for Paramount as star and director respectively.

Ever since it became apparent that America would be forced into the great war by Germany's ruthless conduct, there have been wild rumors current of bodies of Germans in this country drilling clandestinely and of the purchase of many rifles and much ammunition by secret Teuton organizations for the apparent purpose of starting local insurrections at such a time as might be considered strategic. Minute investigations of these reports have been made and every effort made to trace down the culprits.

No wonder, then, that there was considerable excitement when the news leaked out that several hundred German uniforms had been ordered by a man named Kaufman. The wheels of justice were freshly oiled and set in motion—and the report was confirmed. Then the task of tracing down the man Kaufman was begun and the trail led to 156 W. 56th street. Here the investigators found their quarry—Albert Kaufman, manager of the Famous Players studio, who was preparing for the staging of an adaptation of "Arms and the Girl," which is to be a forthcoming Paramount picture, starring Billie Burke.

If somebody does not watch him, Julius Elling is apt to buy the Los Angeles Country Club for a home. The famous feminine impersonator who is now at work upon his first Paramount picture in Hollywood, staged several scenes at the club in the opening part of the production and was so enamored of the place that he demanded more scenes there every day. When he can find the legitimate excuse for an excursion to the club, Elling brazenly proceeds to play golf or tennis there on the plea that he must preserve his figure in order to enable his dresses to contain him.

"WAR OVER BY NEW YEARS"—Heidebrand

German Conservative Leader Comes Out With An- other Prediction

By Courier Leased Wire. Copenhagen, Sep. 6.—Harr von Heidebrand, the Conservative leader, whose ill fortune with an earlier prophecy that the submarines would crash within two months and end the war fresh in hand, has again ventured a forecast. This time he predicts that the war will not last the winter and probably will be ended by the new year. Herr Heidebrand is opposed to any extension of the war, to present neutrals saying that Germany now has enemies enough and dare not let other states submit pressure as enemies.

Pay Your Debt To Your Defenders

Turn Your Luxuries Into Comforts For Those Who Have Sacrificed Most.

"Self-sacrifice, self-denial, and service lie at the basis of the highest personal and national development."
—Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance.

Is it nothing to you that men from all round you have sacrificed home and salary, safety and life, to defend your home as well as the own?

Is it nothing to you that their wives and families tremblingly scan each casualty list, and pale at the step of the postman or telegraph messenger?

Can you see others giving their dearest, without feeling that you must do something yourself? Do you wonder what to do?

You can at least save—and lend your savings to the nation. Canada needs every dollar her loyal sons and daughters can spare, to meet the growing expenses of the struggle.

Every dollar you invest in Canadian War Savings Certificates helps the nation to deal generously with those who are defending you.

Certificates in denominations of $25, $50 and $100, repayable in three years, may be purchased at any Bank or Money Order Post Office at $21.50, $43 and $86 respectively. This means over 5% interest—making them a profitable as well as a patriotic investment.

ENGLAND'S GREAT SCHEME OF MAN MAKING TO PREPARE NEW FORCES TO UPHOLD EMPIRE

"Forcing" Development of Material—No Better Method Ever Devised—Education Goes Forward With Physical Training and Military Preparations—No Show, Just Serious, Careful Effort to Keep up Flow of Manly Soldiers

It takes twenty years of growth, of work, of school, of play, of experience to make a man. It takes half a century to make a soldier. Inasmuch as three years of war have killed men at a fearful rate, the destruction of the man-power of each of the belligerents is falling low.

The inexorable demands from the trenches must be met somehow. How they are to be met, how man power is continually to be provided to meet the waste of war is indicated by the progressive organization of the country's youth for training in anticipation of the time when they shall arrive at military age.

Boys of 18 Breaking In
 All over the country battalions of boys, none of them beyond the age of 18 years and 8 months, are being systematically trained for the army. School boys, college boys, apprentices—youth of all classes—as soon as they are physically capable of undertaking the work of training, are put into the organizations for preparation.

Great wisdom is being shown in breaking in these boys gradually, that they shall not be over-trained, and either physically or mentally injured by the strain. Officers in charge of these organizations of boys have been provided with special instructions as to the service that may be safely demanded of these boys. Discretion in this regard is left to commanding officers and drill masters.

The youngest recruits get light exercises and drill, with much play, and the work among these boys gets special attention to the end that they shall be built up. Youngsters of poor physique or weak health are specially classified, and are given a number of weeks of special light training with the purpose of building them up before they shall undertake the serious work of being turned into soldiers. In this regard alone the benefits accruing to many thousands of young men have been incalculable.

Along at first they get it easy. They divide the training up into two week periods. There are 12 fortnightly periods to the training course for youth of this class. In the first period of two weeks 64 hours of work are required, of which 12 hours are given to games and educational work. After the first period 14 hours are set aside in each fortnightly period for these purposes.

No Championship Teams
 Such games as cricket, football and boxing are particularly prized.

Interesting Letter Tells Of Doings of Brant Men In England

The following letter gives an interesting account of the adventures of the 215th men overseas:

Miss Annie Eastman, Brantford.
 Well Annie here's to that promised letter; no doubt you will think me rather slow in writing but I have a very good excuse as I have been laid up in three different hospitals practically ever since I arrived in England, so as you may know I haven't felt much like writing.

I won't try to tell you much about my trip on the train from Brantford to Halifax as I was feeling pretty tough on account of a lame back, but my day we passed through some very interesting and picturesque localities. After leaving Montreal a few miles we could look out the coach window and see the snow capped mountains off in the distance and on a little farther I had a good view of the famous Quebec bridge; no doubt you remember seeing pictures of it in the papers when the centre span went down in the river when it was being erected. Monday morn early I went on deck to have a look around and see the snow water, water, and then more water, not a glimpse of land to be seen on the horizon anywhere and for the next four days we never even saw a boat of any kind. The second day out of port nearly all the boys on board got very sick. Oh nothing serious, you know, just a case of everything going out and nothing coming in and a sort of hollow feeling round about the region of a fellow's stomach. On the morning of the second day on the water it became very foggy and stayed that way for nearly three days and during this period of our journey the sea was quite rough, but the morn of fourth day the boys all began looking for the dining room in earnest, and all hungry as wolves too.

We'll look shelter in a large bay on the north of Ireland and spent 24 hours lying at anchor with the ship about 100 miles off on one side and perhaps three quarters of a mile off on the other side, and I must say it was a most picturesque and beautiful piece of scenery indeed. The trees were all out in blossom and the houses and stables are all white-washed and so quaint and old fashioned looking. In all cases there are hedges in place of rail or wire fences and they are all kept well trimmed.

Will now to proceed. After lying in the harbor for 24 hours we started off again with five battle cruisers for protection as the submarines were laying for us and arrived all safe and well at Liverpool about midnight on the 6th. We left the boat at 8 a.m. and right on to the train, and had a most interesting ride to our camp. The country round about our camp at East Sandling is a very interesting country, with hedges on all farms in place of fences but up here at Buxton the country is much higher and rougher than my camp at East Sandling, nothing but hills up here, and all stone fences on farms and stone houses so that shows you the difference in different parts of the country here.

This city of Buxton is noted as the biggest Health Resort in the British Isles. Five or six hotels here have over 300 bedrooms and bathroom with each.

There are wealthy people here from all over England, taking mineral baths and other treatment for rheumatism. I have had quite a number of these baths and also three other treatments for my back and legs and might add that it has done me the world of good and am very glad to say I'll be fit and well and back in the ranks of the 215th in the near future.

Well now I think I have written a pretty long letter and hope it may prove an interesting one to you and now
 I remain, Your Old Friend,
 JACK.

mony enters into the soldier's routine nowadays than to observe the daily duties of these campaigns. The fine martial effects that were once much prized get scant consideration now indeed.

Quite the reverse of the old ceremonial, an amazing democratization is going on in the British army. The officers are no longer drawn from any sacred caste of society. Officers in these boy battalions are directed to take note of the special aptitude of their recruits for particular kinds of service with the purpose of giving them training for non-commissioned officers and ultimately for commissions.

And this, after all, is what the whole war is about—just giving every mother's son of us an equal chance with everybody else in the world, with favors to no man's son because his father happens to be a ruler. After the war all governing will be done by men chosen from the ranks.

AMERICANS BARE THEIR LIVES TO DRAFT EXEMPTION BOARDS

Endless Panorama of Human Emotions Drift Through Session—Pathos and Humor Mingle as Young Men are Weeded Out

Detroit, Sept. 7.—The exemption board has a big room in the new municipal court building, and the sunshine of August afternoons pours in from over the gray top of the county jail, lighting the faces of the pen-scratching clerks, the nervous fingers of the stenographers, the rather stern faces of the board itself and the eager, wistful, wondering faces of the young men who wait—wait and shift from foot to foot, and twist in their fingers the notifications they hold until the paper is furrowed and its whiteness made gray.

There has been little change in the character of the crowds that pass through since the day the exemption board opened and by its ruling twisted the lives of many to the road of distant France and crimson adventure or let the footfalls seek again the dust of the plodded rut of everyday and to-morrow to come. It has become as machine-like as the rattle of the police court wheels, the harsh grind of the divorce mill, the tragic functioning of the hospital from time to time there is an atom of laughter, the echo of a jest, or a grief more keen than the ordinary. On Friday, for instance, there came the man of the check cap and the flaming shirt of amazing pattern.

"I want exemption for this fellow," he said.

The board did not smile. If they were aware of the slip they paid no heed.

"Why?" demanded one of its members.

The man in the cap began to flush from the lower jaw upward, a dull red that climbed until it mottled his perspiration-wet forehead. He smiled as agonized contortion of lips and touched them with his tongue to moisten their dryness. His throat worked convulsively. It was apparent a confession was about to be given the world. He leaned forward and in a whisper spoke.

"I been married just a year," he said. "My wife, my wife—" He halted. "Last night, she—" He halted. "Yes, yes," said a board member. "With a final gasp it came out. 'She had a baby.'"

"I want exemption for this fellow," said a man in overalls, jerking his thumb toward a man who sat on a chair and stared with listless eyes at the jerky movements of a typewriter carriage that a thin girl was sending on its shuttled journey tirelessly.

"What for?"

"He's sick."

The man got up and crossed to the table. His face was pale with the to kinder see if I could get off," he said.

"There are women and women," said the policeman thoughtfully.

He was a plump little man and he was smoking a very large cigar and with his unoccupied hand he caressed a faint blonde moustache at odd moments. He seemed to be thinking of other things than the matter in hand. He explained he was working in a factory that made ammunition and was, therefore, more important at home than abroad. The board seemed to take that view of it and was about to say so, when one member looked up and saw the applicant gazing out the window with a look of awed delight that was wonderful to behold. The board member followed his gaze, but saw nothing more interesting than a fat sparrow swinging on a telephone wire. He looked back. The applicant was fast going into an ecstatic trance.

"What is the name of your immediate superior?" asked the board member softly.

"Alice," said the applicant.

And when five minutes later, when a brick red as to face, he stood in the hall waiting the elevator and a chance acquaintance dared the inquiry:

"Who is Alice," he grinned. "We are going to be married next week."

And, still blushing, but also still smiling, he departed.

"Gimme a left-off," said he in a strange tone that interwove assurance and shame.

"The reason," snapped the board member, resenting the tone.

"I'm sick," he said. "I've got—"

Involuntarily the board looked up at the man. He flushed but looked defiant. In his eyes was the fear of death, dulled by months of association.

"My wife says she can get along if I have to go, but I thought I ought

LET US CONSERVE.

"Conservation" is a word that has been much in style for the last few years.

And, contrary to the nature of styles, it is going to be a greater favorite than ever.

For conservation is the word that goes everywhere hand in hand with preparedness in these times that try men's souls.

And rightly.

We must prepare, we must sacrifice, we must conserve.

Everyone is anxious to know just how to prepare. On every side you hear the words "What can I do to prepare? What is my share?" Also abroad in the land—thank God.

Not So Dramatic As Sacrifice.

But conservation is rather less popular, probably because it is less dramatic and picturesque than the other two.

And yet it is quite as vital.

And fortunately this is something that you or I can help at as we go about our daily work, and wish with all our hearts that we could throw it aside and do something bigger and finer and more heroic.

"They also serve who only stand and wait."

I do not mean necessarily that we will deprive ourselves of what we need.

I only mean that we will use

SMALL SOLDIERS.

Small boys have quit their playing, who would be pitchers, and make their sliding on the hill, and now they are displaying great military skill. All round me I behold them in marches and parades; small generals enrolled them in legions and brigades. They wield, with valor Roman their rifles made of boards, and bravely charge the foe with with little wooden swords. No kids plead for exemption, all long to brandish Forest, and none has asked redemption from war and its alarms. The old-time hobby horses, the roller skates are gone; imaginary corpses are piled upon the lawn. The boys

"That's all for now, and Mrs. Standish's compliments, and will you be so kind as to stop and see her, when you're dressed, before going down to lunch. It's the last door on the left, just this side the stairs. Will I turn on your bath now?"

"Please don't trouble, I—"

"No trouble at all, mean. Indeed, and I'm sure you'll find us all very happy to do anything we can for you. It'll be a nice thing to be waiting on a pleasant spoken person like yourself after that"—with a sniff—"Miss Matring."

"Oh!" Genuine disappointment was responsible for the exclamation. But a moment's thought persuaded Sally she had been unreasonable to hope her secret might be kept from the servants. Even if Mrs. Standish had not betrayed it to this maid, there had been that flunky, Thomas, in the reception hall close at hand during the establishment of Sally's status, with his pose of inhuman detachment of interest—quite too perfect to be true.

"Beg pardon, ma'am?"

"Oh, nothing!" Sally swallowed her chagrin bravely. "I mean, thank you very much, but I'm accustomed to waiting on myself—except when it comes to hooks up the back—and you must have enough to keep you busy with so many people in the house."

"Not a great many just now, ma'am—not more than a dozen, counting in Mrs. Standish and her brother and you. This has been an off week, so to speak, but they'll be arriving in plenty to-morrow and Saturday, I'm told."

That gossip was the woman's failing was a fact as obvious as that her desire was only to be friendly; brief reflection persuaded Sally that it was to her own interest neither to snub nor to neglect this gratuitous source of information. With some guilty conceit, befitting one indulging in almost Machiavellian subtlety, she let fall an extravagantly abashed "Yes?" and was rewarded with the quite proper, with a garrulous history of her predecessor's career, from which she disengaged only two profitable impressions: that the staff of servants was devoted to their mistress, and that it would little advantage a secretary to quarrel with the one in the hope of ingratiating herself with the other.

So she contrived, as soon as might be without giving offense, to interrupt and dismiss the maid; then stole her heart against the temptation to try on everything at once, and profited by long practice in the nice art of bathing, dressing, breakfasting, and trudging two miles in minimum time—between that is, the explosion of a maternal alarm and the last moment when one might, without incurring a fine, register arrival on the clock at Huckster's entrance for employees. She hadn't the slightest notion what Mrs. Standish might want of her, but she was very sure that she didn't mean to invite displeasure by seeming careless of the lady's pleasure.

Consequently it was surprisingly soon that she stood, refreshed and comfortable in white linen, tapping at the door the Emmy, the maid, had designated.

Another maid, less prepossessing, admitted her to the dressing-room of the woman of fashion; and this last greeted Sally with a fretful, preoccupied frown, visible in the mirror, which reflected as well the excellent results obtainable from discreet employment of a high-keyed palette.

"Oh, it's you!" said Mrs. Standish shortly. "I was hoping you wouldn't be forever. Though you do look well in those duds. I've something quite important to say. You may go now, Ellen; I shan't want you again until evening."

With a scowl Ellen made off, an effort of masterly self-restraint alone enabling her to refrain from slamming the door.

"A most ridiculous thing has happened," Mrs. Standish pursued, delicately lining in her devastating eyebrows—"most annoying!" She jerked an impatient thumb at a telegram that lay open on the dressing-table.

"Read that. It was waiting our arrival."

(In quantity sufficient for six persons.)

One-half pint rice, 1-2 pint strained canned tomato, 1 pint water, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoonful salt, 1 teaspoonful onion juice, 1-4 teaspoonful pepper, 2 to 3 slices of beef. Wash the rice thoroughly, dissolve the extract of meat in the water and add the other ingredients to the hot mixture and stir the rice in a stew pan set on the stove. When it begins to boil, set the sauce pan back where the heat is not great enough to keep the mixture bubbling. Cover closely and let cook for one hour. Turn the hot rice into a warm dish and serve at once. Do not stir the rice while it is cooking.

SPINACH ON TOAST

Pick the leaves over carefully, rejecting the stems, wash and put into sauce pan with a cup of water to a half peck of leaves. Cover and cook for 20 minutes, drain and chop as fine as possible. Put back over the fire, beat 1 tablespoonful of butter, a teaspoonful of sugar, salt, pepper, a dash of nutmeg and the juice of half a lemon. Whip smooth and press hard into the bowl or custard cups to mould it. Have ready crustless rounds of toast, buttered well, on a heated platter. Turn out a mould of spinach on each and put a slice of hard-boiled egg on the top of the mould.

POTATOES BAKED IN MILK

Peel and slice thin 8 or 10 medium potatoes (raw) put into a shallow well buttered dish. Add 1 level teaspoonful of salt, 1-4 teaspoonful of pepper, 1 teaspoonful of flour, 1 tablespoonful of butter cut into small pieces, 1 tablespoonful of minced parsley. Cover with milk; bake until tender and brown about one hour.

Good Night Stories

Pennies Have Wings.

I wouldn't mind giving you pennies if you'd only put some of them in your bank. Until you do you'll never have any, for there's no use talking, pennies have wings," said Dicky's daddy, as he handed Dicky five brand new pennies.

"How can pennies have wings?" asked Dicky, laughing.

"Indeed they have and they fly away so quickly you can't see where they go. Watch them some time and see for yourself," replied Daddy, and kissing his little boy he went to work.

Mamma suggested that Dicky put the pennies in his pocket. "Before long you'll have enough to buy your automobile," she said, as she cuddled him.

But Dicky shook his head and stuck the pennies in his pocket and went out to play. When he thought of the pennies again he pulled them out and counted them, then he ran crying into the house—only a penny was missing.

"It must have taken wings and flown away!" Dicky sobbed.

Mamma turned his pockets inside out, but only four pennies could be found.

"You must have lost it," said Mamma.

Dicky crawled on the couch and spread the four pennies on the pillow beside him.

"Bet none of them will get away unless I see them," said Dicky to himself, and he put his head on the pillow to keep watch over them.

"Ha! Ha! Ha! laughed a squeaky voice near Dicky's ear.

Dicky opened one eye and peeped at his pennies. Each wore a pair of tiny wings.

"Well show him whether we fly or not," said the first penny. "I've decided to find the candy shop and trade myself for some chocolate candy."

"I'm going for a stick of gum," cried the second.

"Let me see—Dicky wants a top, Guess I'll trade myself for that," whispered the third penny.

"You can all do as you please. I'm going to stay right where Dicky put me, wings or no wings," exclaimed the fourth penny.

"Stay there then," cried the others, and they flew away.

Dicky opened his eyes. "If you'd put us in your bank as your mamma says, then we'd never have a chance to grow wings and fly away. If you would we'd pile up and before long you would have enough to buy your auto. But after we once sprout wings then we have to fly away," and the fourth penny spread his wings to fly.

Dicky jumped up and grabbed it, crying out: "My pennies! My pennies! They've sailed out the window."

Mamma came running into see what was the trouble. She turned over the pillow and there lay the other three pennies.

Dicky laughed. "I guess I was dreaming. I remember I put them there before I went to sleep."

"I suppose you left this one out so you could watch him sprout his wings. You see dear, Daddy didn't mean the pennies would really fly away on wings. What he meant was that if you didn't put them in your bank they would be spent before night, dear," said mamma, when Dicky told her his dream. She brought his bank and Dicky gave a

A Practical Thrift Suggestion

This year, as never before, every quart of Canada's fruit crop should be used to the very best advantage. Though it all ripens within four months, it can be made to supply every table, every day in the year, at moderate cost.

Canning and preserving, done at home at the time when each fruit is cheapest, provide in delicious and economical form the daily fruit so necessary in a wholesome diet. Fruit put up at home is much cheaper than that which you buy, and the slight increase in its cost, due to the higher price of sugar, is small compared with the mounting cost of other foods.

Successful preserving and canning are by no means difficult, either if you are careful to boil everything, and use

MISS' DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

To be in the mode one must have a shirtwaist dress this summer, either of silk or gingham, for it is considered the smartest thing for morning wear. It is made quite simply, sometimes with waist and skirt separate, sometimes joined under a narrow belt. No. 8421 is made in shirtwaist style, with fronts gathered at the shoulders. There is a broad box plait at centre front, trimmed with large pearl buttons. A youthful sailor collar of white finishes the neck. The shirtwaist sleeves are gathered into flare cuffs, but the shorter sleeves are without cuffs. The skirt is straight and gathered slightly all around. It may be made in one or two sections.

The dress pattern, No. 8421, is cut in sizes 16, 18 and 20 years. The 16-year size requires 4 3/4 yards of 30-inch material, with 1/2 yard of 30-inch contrasting goods.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents to the office of this publication.

At Gosnell House that day, in an airy dining-room from which the light was jealously excluded by Venetian blinds at every long, wide window, creating an oasis of cool twilight in the heart of day, ten persons sat at luncheon—four men, few and simple courses, but admirably ordered and served upon a clothless expanse of dark mahogany, relieved at each place by little squares of lace and fine linen, and in the center by a great, brazen bowl of vivid roses.

In this strange atmosphere the outsider maintained a covertly watchful silence (which, if rarely interrupted, was altogether of her own election) and was happily guiltless of any positive fault; long proscription to the social hinterland of dingy boarding-houses, smoky quick-tennis rooms, and casual studio feeding had not affected her nice feeling for the sensible thing at table. She possessed, furthermore, in full measure that amazing adaptability which seems to be innate with most American women of any walk in life; whatever she might lack in her detriment of embarrassment she was quick to mark, learn, and make as well as much her own as if she had never been without it.

And then—for in spite of reassurances persistently iterated by Mrs. Standish, the news from New York troubled her profoundly—preoccupation largely counteracted self-consciousness through those first few dreaded moments of Sally's modest social debut.

The men on either side of her she found severally, if quite amiably, agreeable to indulge her reticence. Savage, for one, was secretly, she guessed, quite as much disconcerted by the reported contempts in town, but he dissembled well, with a show of whimsical exasperation because of this emergency that tore him so soon away from both Gosnell House and his other neighbor at table, a Mrs. Artemas—a spritely, mercurial creature, not over-handsome of face, but wonderfully smart in dress and gesture, superbly stayed and well aware of it—a dark, fine woman who recognized the rivalry latent in Sally's dark looks without dismay—as Sally conceded she might well.

On her other hand sat a handsome, well-bred boy of eighteen or so, one of the tennis four, answering to the name of Bob—evidently a cheerful soul, but at ease in the persuasion that comparative children should be seen and no forth. His partner of the cranks sat next him—name, Babe—a frank-eyed, wholesome girl, perhaps a year his senior. Their surnames did not transpire, but they impressed Sally, and were related save in community of unselfish interests. The other players were not present.

Aside from these, the faces strange to her were those of Miss Pride and Messrs. Lyttleton and Tregg.

FIGHTING ON CARSO

Austrian Offensive on large Scale Gains No New Territory

(By W. K. McClure)

Italian Headquarters Sept. 6.—There is no truce in the bitter struggle which now has been going on for 17 days. At first the whole front went on fire from Tolmino to the sea. Then slowly the actions on the wings burned out. In a moment the centre Italian advance leaped across the Bainsizza plateau to Cardova valley like a prairie fire. Then the rushing flames slowly flickered, but new fires sprang elsewhere, especially to the north-east of Gorizia, where the enemy positions have been hammered until bits of them have broken off and fallen into our hands. Here and there is no slackening of the flames rising higher in the north.

Yesterday the whole of the South ern Carso went ablaze. This time the enemy lit the fire. No doubt they thought the magnificent drive of the second army under Capello had been achieved at the expense of the Third army on the Carso. Mindful of the partial success of his counter-attack on the Carso in June the enemy chose the same part of the front for the blow he had been expecting. He has fresh troops, of course. The situation on the eastern front allowed him to dispose of forces where he had no use for them. This has once again enabled him not only to take punishment, but to hit back. Yesterday he was hammering the Italian line at the longhorn, all the way from Kostanjica to the sea. So far he is not scoring any points. In two separate sectors yesterday he was not well, but neither was he able to hold the advantage. South of Kostanjica down to Korite there was give-and-take fighting for a long time, but in the end the Austrian onset was where it began. South of Korite down to the Selo sector he could make no headway.

In the foothills of Hermuda the Austrians gained an initial success on the morning of yesterday, but the line was established in the afternoon. Mention of certain positions in the communique allows me to say that during the first week's fighting in it is often that they practically reached that line of the Hermuda slopes which they gained last May, but could not hold against the Austrian counter-attack in June. It is not a very satisfactory line of defence, but yesterday's fighting seemed to show it is serving fairly well. The Italian artillery and British batteries rejoice at the Austrian counter-attacks.

I do not yet speak in detail of the north-east of Gorizia, but the number of prisoners shown in the communique as coming from that sector plainly shows that things are going well. It is a tremendous struggle. The Austrians realize the full importance of the positions here and are putting up a magnificent fight. On one hill alone it is said they are clinging with desperate courage they have had 15 battalions. The Italian counter-attacks have been wiped out. The Italian artillery fire has been appalling and the infantry has shown all the qualities which it has taught us to expect.

HEROINE OF BRITISH RAID

Doris Spencer Walton aged 15, daughter of missionary, when taken to the hospital mortally wounded, by two Canadian soldiers said, "must kiss you both because you have suffered."

KING'S DOUBLE HAS EXCITING TIMES

Captain Binks Is a Sensation in the United States

Captain Bertie B. Binks of the Umbalud Untidaha who arrived in New York to purchase a hundred hoghead of tobacco sauce for the Indian army, has had the last five years of his life saddened by remembrance to King George V. of England.

He bears such a striking likeness to the king that persons stare at him in the streets and in public places until the captain becomes embarrassed and seeks refuge in the dark caverns where food is dispensed with shaded lights.

Captain Binks descended the gang-plank in khaki uniform with an Indian top on his head, and wearing a bored look like one who was sated of the world's poms and vanities. The navy trimmed beard and serious gaze of King George were marvelously duplicated in the features of the captain of the Umbalud Untidaha who are known on the streets of London as the "panther eaters." Expert on royalty, including a Canadian, who once met the king at Calgary when he was Prince of Wales, said that Captain Binks was a trifle thinner and his whiskers slightly fairer, but the ordinary observer would not be able to tell the difference between them.

Sh-sh! the Czar in Disguise.

Some excitement was caused on the pier while the baggage was being examined by one of the longhorns. Arzof Goudnik, a Finn, who asserted in loud tones that Captain Binks was the Czar Nicholas in disguise and that he had been smuggled out of Petrograd. Two Armenians among the passengers persuaded the Finn that Captain Binks was really an Englishman. They said that a very personal thing to the captain in Russian to prove that he could not understand the language.

To reporters on the pier, Captain Binks said:

"At first I was rather flattered when my brother officers of Umbalud before the way used to say, 'Binks is getting more like the king every day.' Very soon the news spread over all India and reached Calcutta, where the victory heard of it and invited me to the government house. Some of the silly asses among my regiment sent a private message along the line to say that the king was travelling incog over the road, and I had to get up at every station through the night and how to the crowds of natives with the bands waiting on the platforms for the train to arrive. It was impossible until I left the room. I saw my face every man did the double salar.

"Our chaps wrote to their cronies in London and passed the word along to them to help the good game along, and they did. If I went into a club all the members rose up and stood respectfully until I left the room. Even the policeman held up traffic on my approach.

No Whiskers, No Inheritance.

"Several times," the captain continued plaintively, "I have been the verge of taking off my beard to put an end to my daily misery and have only been restrained from the act by my great aunt Lavinia, at Bath, who is very rich, and the direct descendant of Binks, the famous Bath bun maker, as she threatened to disinherit me if I did. 'Dear old thing,' she, too takes a delight in telling her friends and acquaintances how her grandnephew Bertie B. B., as she calls me, is frequently taking off for his majesty, King George. My friends would not let me leave England in peace, and carried on to pay for the drink she bit it carefully and then said: 'The last man looking like the king who passed through here handed me a counter-fet crown, and I am not taking any more chances.'

Captain Binks added darkly that if the persecution continued in this country he would shave off his beard and moustache and enlist in the United States Army and forget his great aunt Lavinia and Bink's Bath buns forever.
