Dr. Andrew Wilson speaks of that huge extinct reptile, the diplodocus, whose bones Andrew Carnegie presented to the South Kensington museum in London as a "dragon." "If we could imagine it restored," says Dr. Wilson, "we should be tempted to imagine that the dragon legends of old had some foundation in fact. As a rule, these creatures—dinosaurs, as they are called—were huge, bulky animals. Mr. Carnegie's specimen has been estimated to have possessed a length in life of about seventy feet. The diplodocus, with regard to its personal characteristics, appears to have possessed a head of very moderate size indeed, considered relatively to the animal's bulk. Its jaws are weak, and its teeth are borne by the front of the jaws only. That it fed on soft vegetable matter would therefore appear to be an inference fairly warranted by the facts, yet, like the vegetarian elephant, it may have been capable of fierce onslaughts enough in its day. To feed on plants is not always commensurate with mildness of temper, as every vicious horse testifies. We may further believe that the diplodocus, if not a swimmer, at least had aquatic habits.

DID THEIR DUTY IN EVERY CASE

HOW DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS BANISH PAIN IN THE BACK.

Cured Mrs. Jas. Murphy and Everyone Else She Recommended Them To.

River Gagnon, Que., Sept. 4.—(Special.—No complaint is so common among women as Pain-in-the-Back. It is a safe estimate that fully half the women in Canada are afflicted with it. For that reason every evidence that there is a sure and complete cure in existence is thankfully received. And there is abundant evidence that Dodd's Kidney Pills is just such a cure. This district could furnish a dozen cures, but one is enough for an example. The one is that of Mrs. James Murphy. She says:

"I suffered for thirty-eight months with a pain in my back. I took just one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills and I have never been troubled with the pain since. I also recommended Dodd's Kidney Pills to other people, who complained as I did and in every case the Pills did their duty and brought relief."

Professor Blaikie used to form a very picturesque feature in the Edinburgh streets. He was a cheery old patriarch, with handsome features and hair falling in ringlets about his shoulders. No one who had seen him could possibly forget him. One day he was accosted by a very dirty little bootblack with his "Shine your boots, sir?" Blaikie was impressed by the filthiness of the boy's face. "I don't want a shine, my lad," said he. "But if you will go and wash your face I'll give you a sixpence." "A'richt, sir, was the lad's reply. Then he went over to a neighboring fountain and made his ablutions. Returning, he held out his hand for the money. "Well, my lad," said the professor, "you have earned your sixpence. Here it is." "I dinna want it, auld chap," returned the boy, with a lordly air. "Ye can keep it and get yer hair cut."

Moses Ezekiel, the Roman sculptor, said at a recent luncheon:—"Whenever I see a toothpick I think of a dinner that was given in Rome in honor of two Turkish noblemen. I sat beside the younger of the noblemen. He glittered with gold embroidery and great diamonds, but, nevertheless, I pitied him sincerely, for he was strange to our table manners, and some of his errors were both ludicrous and painful. Toward the dinner's end a servant extended to the young man a plate of toothpicks. He waved the plate away, saying in a low and bitter voice:—"No thank you. I have already eaten two of the accursed things, and I want no more.'"

PSYCHICAL RESEARCH.

British and French Scientists Discussing Wonderful Cases of Automatic Writing—Remarkable Phenomenon.

Automatic writing was the subject which Prof. Richet came all the way from Paris to discuss before the Society of Psychical Research, says The London Standard. Prof. Richet is the president of the society, but, as he was reading the paper, the chair was taken by Sir Oliver Lodge. The professor, addressing his audience in French, described in detail a remarkable phenomenon which came under his personal observation.

Mme. X., a friend of Prof. Richet, knows no Greek, yet on various occasions she has written, while in a trance, Greek sentences with a definite meaning. Once she sent him by mail three pieces of Greek which he was finally able to trace to an exceedingly rare dictionary of French and Greek, of which Mme. X had no knowledge whatsoever. On another occasion, when he went to call upon her towards evening, when the rays of the setting sun were deepening the shadows in the room, she wrote a sentence in Greek which meant, "At sunrise and sunset the shadows lengthen." She wrote in a current hand, but she made mistakes in placing the accents, and occasionally made such slips as could only be made by a person having no knowledge of the language. For example, she would write the Greek letter "s" by mistake for the letter "o," with an accent over it—a very natural mistake for a copyist, who is completely ignorant of the language he is writing, and is simply copying by eye, but one which, as it renders a word quite unpronounceable, could not be made, even through carelessness, by anyone knowing the language.

These, then, are the facts: Prof. Richet, in clearing the ground for discussion, took it as axiomatic that Mme. X acted throughout in good faith. He could not bring proofs of this, but he could vouch for her good faith as he could for his own. The lady certainly did not know Greek. "You cannot conceal from all your friends and relatives your knowledge of a language like Greek, and, in any case, we have her word for it that she did not know the language. Moreover, she had never seen the book from which she quoted three passages."

How could such a phenomenon be accounted for? It could not be an effort of memory, for Mme. X had never to her knowledge seen the book from which she quoted. Equally, it could hardly be unconscious memory of a book she had seen and forgotten, for that would be to explain a strange phenomenon by another phenomenon equally strange and inexplicable. Prof. Richet suggested a comparison with mathematical and musical prodigies, but found them unconvincing. A wonderful child can remember the whole of a musical score which is contained in a large book, but then he is dealing with a language he knows thoroughly. So it is with the lightning calculator; he is thoroughly versed in figures. Here, on the contrary, is a lady who writes pages of Greek, more or less correctly, without any knowledge whatsoever of Greek. Prof. Richet then suggested spiritualistic explanations, but found them unsatisfactory. In the end he had to admit that there was no explanation. In the discussion which followed, Sir Oliver Lodge summed up the position as set before the audience in the president's address, but he could not quite accept without reserve the question of the genuineness of Mme. X. The society had perfect faith in Prof. Richet and Prof. Richet had perfect faith in Mme. X; but the conclusion did not follow that the society must have perfect faith in Mme. X. Then the comparison of the infant prodigy could not be altogether rejected. There was the wonderful Spanish child at two years old, who had appeared before the King of Spain and before Prof. Richet himself. The mother of this child once played over an intricate piece of music, and, on going afterwards into the next room, she heard some one repeating the performance. Returning, she saw to her consternation her infant child playing the music quite correctly. Obviously, the child could have no previous knowledge at all. Here, then, was a sort of parallel.

Other speakers produced strange cases of automatic writing, but none were of quite such a definite and extraordinary nature as the case presented by Prof. Richet. Mrs. Verral, for example, told the society how her daughter and a friend of hers produced by table rapping a Greek story which the table erroneously attributed to Pausanias, but afterwards gave the correct chapter and verse in Heliodorus. The story was not quoted word for word, but the substance was correctly given. In this case, however, both the mediums were Greek, and probably had chapters of Heliodorus stored away in the subliminal consciousness. Then came Mr. Harris with a story told by Huxley 30 years ago, of a soldier wounded in a battle who wrote in unknown languages from dictation while in a state of trance; and lastly Prof. Barrett produced an authentic story of a lady who was hypnotised by a clergyman. On one occasion the clergyman asked her to write down the contents of a letter which had just arrived by post and was unopened. She wrote most of the contents correctly.

In the discussion it was generally taken for granted that Mme. X had exhibited only the powers of a copyist, for, as Prof. Richet explained, she had made mistakes in spelling which could only be made by a person completely ignorant of the language. And so Mrs. Verral believed that Mme. X must have been under some sort of hypnotic control, but was influenced through her eyes only and not through her intelligence. But there were other instances, overlooked in the discussion, where Mme. X had written sentences with a meaning applicable to the immediate circumstances; for example, when she wrote her sentence about the shadows. In such a case she must have been controlled through her intelligence. In fact, the discussion did not carry the matter any further than the president brought it in his address.

A lady writes Greek who does not know Greek, and quotes sentences from a Greek book which she has never seen. How can it be explained? As the famous master of Balliol once said, "There are questions which can never be answered, but are still worth the asking," and this appears to be one of them.

Kidney Disease, Bad Circulation.

A Licence Commissioner Who Suffered Dreadfully From These Ailments Entirely Cured by

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Bad circulation of the blood, the usual cause of the extremely painful and dangerous diseases, arises from defective action of the kidneys.

The blood cannot possibly be pure and in a fit condition to nourish the body when the kidneys are diseased and fail to filter from it the poisonous waste matter.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, by their direct and healthful action on the kidneys, not only overcome diseases of the kidneys, but by doing so ensure a purifying of the blood.

Mr. William B. Best, License Commissioner for the County of Haldimand, and who lives in Cayuga, Ont., writes:—"I have been troubled with cramps in my legs. I would awake from sleep in keen distress. The pain would seize me at the ankle and work up the leg almost to the body.

"Believing this trouble to arise from kidney derangements and bad circulation of the blood, I bought some of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills at W. J. Quinsey's drug store and began using them. They benefitted me from the very first and by continuing their use I have been completely cured. I would recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to any suffering as I did. I was so bad that I would have to jump out of bed two or three times during the night."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

"Do you think your country will ever succeed in getting rid of grafters?" "Yes," answered Senator Sorghum. "There will be a time when grafters are unheard of. But it will be due to the change that is constantly going on in our vocabulary. There will be a new word that means the same thing."

The Flagging Energies Revived.—Constant application to business is a tax upon the energies, and if there be no relaxation, lassitude and depression are sure to intervene. These come from stomachic troubles. The want of exercise brings on nervous irregularities, and the stomach ceases to assimilate food properly. In this condition Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will be found a recuperative of rare power, restoring the organs to a healthful action, dispelling depression, and reviving the flagging energies.

Mayme—Notice that couple we just passed? They're Mr. and Mrs. Pyrrh-Simmons. Their courtship was one of the most romantic affairs of the season. Maybelle—Why, she's as homely as a telegraph pole! Mayme—I know it, and he's as poor as a church mouse. That's what made it so romantic.

Nordy—Even Optimism may be made a nuisance. Butts—As to how? "Who wants to hear a woman singing, 'Let a Little Sunshine In,' with the thermometer standing at 97 in the shade?"

A stranger visiting Harvard Memorial Hall recently found that the only attendants from whom he could derive information were the colored waiters at the students' tables. One of the busts along the wall seemed to look like President Eliot. But as the visitor was not sure, he asked one of the most intelligent of the waiters if he could tell him whose bust that was. "Well, no, suh; I don't think I could, suh," was the answer. "Ah'm a stranger myself, suh. Only been here 'but three months. I'll ask." He beckoned to a fellow-waiter. "De gemmen wants to know who dat bust am." "Dat burst!" replied his comrade. "Why everybody knows who dat's a burst of. It's de college boss, suh; I don't recolleck his name dis minute, suh." As the visitor turned away he overheard one of them reply to some remark of the other: "Havahd man? No suh. Ain't iddicated enough for that. Catch a Havahd man saying 'bust.'"

Sleeplessness.—When the nerves are unstrung and the whole body given up to wretchedness, when the mind is filled with gloom and dismal forebodings, the result of derangement of the digestive organs, sleeplessness comes to add to the distress. If only the subject could sleep, there would be oblivion for a while and temporary relief. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will not only induce sleep, but will act so beneficial that the subject will wake refreshed and restored to happiness.

Mark Twain on his last visit to his birthplace—Hannibal, Mo.—told to the school children a true story about a schoolboy. "This boy," he said, "awoke one morning very ill. His groans alarmed the household. The doctor was sent for and came post haste. "Well,' said the doctor, as he entered the sick room, 'what is the trouble?' "'A pain in my side,' said the boy. "'Any pain in the head?' "'Yes, sir.' "'Is the right hand stiff?' "'A little.' 'How about the right foot?' "'That's stiff too.' The doctor winked at the boy's mother. "'Well,' he said, 'you're pretty sick. But you'll be able to go to school on Monday. Let me see, today is Saturday, and——' "'Is today Saturday?' said the boy in a vexed tone. 'I thought it was Friday.' "Half an hour later that boy declared himself healed and got up. Then they packed him off to school, for it was Friday, after all."

On the Hudson River day boat the other day a young girl caused amusement by her determined endeavors to acquire a coat of tan in one day. She sat on the hurricane deck, hatless, holding back her head and lifting her face to the sun's rays, much as a chicken lifts up its head when taking a drink. Every few minutes she would go below and wet her handkerchief. Then with this she would moisten her face and let the wind and sun dry it off. She worked harder in a day for that coat of tan than the average person does all summer, and she didn't care who knew it.

On Whitsunday the vicar of an English church in the north had been kept busy the whole of the morning owing to the large number of weddings. He was just leaving the church when another couple came. The vicar was very angry and told them that they were too late and would have to come another time. Both pleaded so hard to be married that he consented at last, saying, "I will marry you this time, but don't let it occur again."

A Kansas City young man had an unusual but excellent reason for complaining when he was impanelled for jury duty. He was waiting in the hall outside the court room and worrying over the problem of how he was to be excused. He looked so dejected that finally another juror asked him what was wrong. "Why, I'm summoned here on the jury," was the reply, "and I don't see how I can possibly serve." "Why can't you serve?" asked the other. "Because," said the worried young man, "I've got an engagement to take a young lady riding this afternoon, and if I don't keep it she'll never look at me again. Hang it!" But the young man was kept on the jury panel.

OGILVIE'S ROYAL HOUSEHOLD

Bran waste is one great difference between good and poor flours.

The food part of flour is "protein."

Protein makes bone, muscle and brain.—There is no protein in bran.

—bran is the outside part, the husk or "bark" of the wheat.

—bran is the part of the wheat which is absolutely without food-value to the human system.

—bran represents part of the difference between Royal Household Flour and whole-wheat flour or cheap, inferior flours that are poorly milled and not thoroughly purified.

No other flour in this country is so thoroughly and completely separated from the waste as is "Royal Household," because no other mills are so well equipped or exclusively devoted to the production of scientifically pure flour as Royal Household mills.

James McNeil Whistler, the artist, was appreciated among his friends as much for his trenchant wit and sarcastic sayings as for his genius. A young lady on one occasion, her first meeting with Whistler, was giving vent to her appreciation of the "artistic temperament," and was evidently of the opinion that she possessed that requisite herself. "It's wonderful," she said in conclusion, "what a difference there is between people." "Yes," replied Whistler, "there is a great deal of difference between matches, too, if you only look close enough, but they all make about the same blaze."

Daring Diamond Robbery.

Judge Cumberland on Tuesday sentenced Edwin Murphy, the diamond robber to the full penalty of 14 years hard labor. Murphy is a habitual criminal, only coming out from jail last spring after a seven years term. On August 8, while Brandon was practically deserted in honor of Citizens Day at the local fair, Murphy broke into Mallet & Matthews jewellry store and secured $5,000 worth of diamonds. The discovery of the loss was made almost immediately and the man was arrested within a few hours but the bulk of the spoil was missing and now the report has got around that Murphy buried the diamonds in flats Several search parties are at work, but so far nothing has been found.

Mr. Mallet is a brother of Mrs. A. M. Wright, of Medicine Hat.

OCTOBER WEDDINGS.

ROXBURGHE—GARLAND

The residence of Mrs. T. A. Garland, Portage la Prairie was the scene of an extremely pretty wedding on Wednesday morning, the contracting parties being Mr. and Mrs. Garland's third daughter, Elizabeth, and William N. Roxeburghe. The drawing room had been beautifully decorated for the occasion with palms, ferns and flowers, which formed a pretty back ground before which the bridal party stood. Sharp at the time appointed the groom and his best man, T. H. Cowan, took their places. Shortly after the bridesmaid Miss Mary Garland, entered, followed by the bride leaning on the arm of her brother, E. P. Garland. The bride wore an exquisite gown of ivory chiffon silk. The skirt was made with panel effect in front of tucked silk with medallions outlined with pearl edges, the whole finished with full flounces. The bodice had a chiffon yoke of English ivory embroidery while graceful folds of Limerick lace hung about her shoulders to the waist line, where they were caught to the girdle by soft cream ribbon. She carried a handsome bouquet of white roses and ferns tied with white silk ribbon. Her tulle veil was worn off the face and held in place by a wreath of orange blossoms. The bridesmaid looked exceedingly well in pale yellow silk voile over taffeta of the same shade with yoke of embroidered chiffon with yoke of embroidered chiffon with deep berthe of cream lace. She carried a boquet of pink roses and ferns tied with graceful streamers of white ribbon. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Thurlow Fraser. After the ceremony the happy couple received the good wishes of their many friends. In the dining room the pretty bride's table was artistically decorated with billows of soft tulle, flowers and ferns, the four-storey wedding cake occupying the centre. After cutting the cake the bride retired to don her travelling suit which was of ciel blue cloth. The long coat, handsomely braided, opened on a pretty blouse of military red silk. Her hat was of velvet chiffon. Mr. and Mrs. Roxburghe left on the two o'clock train for St. Paul. The wedding gifts included many handsome presents of silver, cut glass and furniture, among the finest being a handsome cabinet of silver presented to Mr. Roxburghe by his bachelor friends. Among the out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Gordon, Mr. and Mrs. G. V. Hastings, Harry Rennick, Mrs. Walker, Mrs. B. J. Hickie, C. H. Hickie, B. R. Hickie and the Misses Hickie, of Winnipeg; Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Hanna Nicholas Garland and Mrs. Dunbar, of Toronto; and Mrs. F. O. Sissons, of Medicine Hat.

J. A. Rainville, of Medicine Hat, was in town a couple days this week.—Cranbrooke Herald.

The Proposed Flax Mill.

Mr. W. R. Marshall has received a most interesting letter from Mr. Joseph Bradshaw, who has had a large experience in the manufacture of all kinds of cloth, quilts, towels etc., from flax, in England, Canada and the United States. He says Turkish towels alone would require 200 looms at least to serve the wants of the growing Canadian west and it would take thousands of acres to grow the flax for fibre. He wrote, having heard Mr. Marshall contemplated establishing a flax mill here, and he gives most interesting information as to the profits etc., of flax growing. Flax fibre, he says, is worth $350 per ton, and very ordinary soils will bring as much as $35 worth of fibre per acre. Where the seed is used as well as the fibre, flax yields on an average nearly $30 per acre more than wheat. Flax fibre and flax seed together are said to produce fully $61 per acre.

The yield of dressed flax on the continent and in England per acre the writer puts as follows, the figures being for fibre only:—

Low Russian, 430 lbs. at 5 cents per pound, $21.50 per acre.

Ordinary, 430 lbs. at 10½ cents per pound, $45.15 per acre.

English, 360 lbs. at 17 cents per lb., $61.20 per acre.

Bedford, 890 lbs. at 21½ cents per lb., $88.80 per acre.

Belgium, 860 lbs. at 82 cents per lb., $117.00 per acre.

Courtral (Flanders) 235 lbs. at 51 cents per lb., $163.20 per acre.

Medicine Hat soil and climate are admirably suited for flax culture and not only could the fibre be used but there would be a great profit in extracting oil from the seed. The oil laid down here costs about 60 cents per gallon and of this probably 40 cents represents cost of frieght so that not only would flax growing be profitable to the farmer but the mill should make a big profit for the shareholders.

Mr. Marshall has the proposition of forming a company to establish a mill here under consideration and next year may see some developments in the matter.

LESLIE GRANT.

Accident on the Crow Line.

TRAIN FALLS DOWN AN EMBANKMENT.

An accident occurred on the Crow's Nest Railway last Friday morning in which nearly the whole train fell over an embankment about fifteen feet deep and, strange to relate, crew and passengers escaped with only a few cuts and bruises.

The train left Medicine Hat on Thursday evening on time the crew consisting of Conductor E. L. Becker, Engineer Dan Murphy, fireman Tomlinson, Brakeman Saunders Baggageman C. Shepard, Mail Clerks A. Pringle and M. M. Downey, and express messenger W. Melone.

The train, which consisted of engine, six cars and Super't. Erickson's private car, was running at a 25 mile an hour clip and when about half a mile west of Jaffrey, about 9 o'clock on Friday morning the sleeper turned over and fell down the embankment carrying the cars in front along with it. Mr. Erickson's car never left the track, owing to the coupling between it and the sleeper breaking.

Engineer Murphy applied the emergency brakes at the first intimation that something was wrong and his prompt action no doubt prevented more serious damage. In fact some of the cars went over so slowly that the mail clerks who jumped from the car, were standing on the ground when their car actually toppled over. About six passengers suffered cuts and bruises and it is wonderful there is nothing more serious to record. The passengers were loud in their praise of Conductor Becker and engineer Murphy, who did everything possible for them under the circumstances.

The mishap was due to a spread rail or broken joint, which it is hard to say.

The Gatherer.

One of the inconsistencies of life is trying to break others of habits which we ourselves have helped to teach them. About nine-tenths of us when called upon to practice what we preach have to fall back on telling folks to do as we tell them, not as we do. It just so with a woman. She encourages her beau to stay out late at night until the wedding is over and then she kicks because he wants to keep up the performance.

We are all superstitious to a certain degree but some of us are more so. We don't believe in luck, but we do want to do the things wherein luck is accredited with being on the side on which we do things. I am somewhat superstitious myself, and I don't want to have folks walk between the man who I am walking with and myself. I can hear and see better when I am close to him. Still, I am inclined to think there is more in trusting to the man who tries to put his best foot forward than in the one who depends too much on the hind foot of a graveyard rabbit.

We should try to post ourselves as we go along the pathway of life, so that each day leaves behind some new fact that will help us in after life to become more proficient in whatever we may select. Still we may say that students of ancient history are not strictly speaking, up-to-date.

There is something in appearance, but what a man hopes to gain by wearing long hair to sellpatent medicines, excepting hair restorer, is a horse on me. It doesn't seem necessary to wear a long mane like a Clydesdale horse to be a piano player or a singer any more than to wear a fly net to protect ourselves in zero weather. A beautiful head of hair is a woman's glory, but a long haired ape of a man shows the need of a proper application of the sheep shears.

TIRED TIM.

Mr. Slater, of Niagara Falls, and Mr. Steele, of Dundas, Ont., spent last Friday in town. They are on a pleasure tour in the west and were much pleased with Medicine Hat.

Mr. A. Mitchell, of Macleod, Dominion Forestry Inspector, was in the district several days last week looking over new plantations of trees sent out by the Forestry Department during the last couple of years.

Let go or die. That's the alternative of the shipwrecked man with the money bags. A great many people have a like alternative before them. Business men come to a point where the doctor tells them that they must "let go or die." Probably he advised a sea voyage or mountain air. There's an obstinate cough that won't be shaken off. The lungs are weak and perhaps bleeding. There is emaciation and other symptoms of disease, which if unskilfully or improperly treated terminate in consumption.

Thousands of men and women in a like condition have found complete healing by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

"It gives me pleasure to send you this testimonial so that some other poor sufferer may be saved, as I was, by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery," writes Geo. A. Thompson, of Sheldon Ave., Chatham, Ont., Canada. "I had a cough for years, expectorated a great deal, and was slowly failing. Was losing flesh every day. Lost in weight from 150 pounds down to 125. My flesh got soft and I had no strength. Did not say anything to any one but made up my mind that the end was not far off. One day my wife was reading in the 'Common Sense Medical Adviser' about Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and I said that sounds more like common sense than anything else that I had heard. I at once bought a bottle of your famous remedy and before I had taken half of one bottle I felt better. Took thirteen bottles and it made a new man of me. I gained sixteen pounds and never have had a cough since. I feel splendid and give all the credit to your medicine."

Given away. The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. The book contains 1008 pages, over 700 illustrations and several colored plates. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the paper-bound book, or 50 stamps for the cloth bound. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure bad, foul stomach and constipation and so help to cure nearly every disease of mankind. They regulate, tone up and invigorate Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

MASON & RISCH

THE PIANO WITH A SOUL

Mason & Risch Pianos are famous for that peculiar carrying power known as the singing tone. Not all tones classed as musical are music unalloyed. There are certain qualities of tone that are strangely diffusive They carry far and retain their singing character where other tones become indistinct or even lost. A sheet of gold leaf, thinner than the thinnest tissue, will completely block the powerful rays of the strongest searchlight, while the X-rays, merely glowing with a faint light, will penetrate an inch of solid steel. So it is with music: some tones are diffusive and carry, others become more or less absorbed in space. The tone that "carries" the singing tone, is due to perfection of finish and perfect vibratory equilibruim of all the tone producing parts of a piano. It is always a tone of the utmost sweetness and purity. The Mason & Risch Piano is full of "sing" being especially fine in its blendings of the human voice, which it rounds out and sustains in a happy union of melody and harmony. Our literature explains the many points of superiority of the Mason & Risch piano—the piano with a soul. Send for it to-day.

COMING SOON.

The "Hottest Coon in Dixie" Co. will pay their annual visit to Medicine Hat one week earlier than was originally intended, due to a slight change in the company's route. Mr. Ernest Willis will bring his popular company of singers, dancers and fun makers and musicians on Friday Oct. 20th, and will present the latest edition of the most popular singing show on earth, "The Hottest Coon in Dixie," replete with new faces, new incidental music, new songs, new costumes, new light effects and new scenery, retaining all the old favorites of the company and bringing many new ones. The personel of the company is much larger and more versatile than on their previous visit, and come direct from the coast cities where the praise of both press and theatre goers was unstinted. Mr. Willis can without the question of a doubt, boast of having assembled the greatest colored singing show on earth. Prof. Ropes Military Band is a big feature of the attract,on and will parade the streets on show day.

BRAND RECORDER FOR ALBERTA

With the division of the North West Territories into Provinces the question of recording brands comes up for consideration. As it is too important a question to decide without careful study, arrangements have been made with the Government of Saskatchewan to continue recording at Regina all brands for the Province of Alberta. This arrangement will permit the work of recording to go on smoothly and give time to devise some scheme that will be suitable to each province. All applications for horse and cattle brands should therefore be made to J. R. C. Honeyman, Deputy Commissioner of Agriculture, Regina, Sask., who will administer the Brand Ordinance of the North West Territories until new arrangements are made for each Province.

THE SEED GRAIN SPECIAL.

The proposition of the C. P. R. assisted by the Dominion Government, to send a seed train over Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba promises excellent results. Twenty-five lectures will be delivered at as many different points in Alberta during January by some of the most practical lecturers the Government can procure. The value of such a plan can scarcely be estimated. That such an undertaking can be profitably handled in Canada is well established through the success of the seed grain trains in parts of the States.

The agriculturists of each districts will be invited to attend the meetings held in the train. There will be seed on exhibition to illustrate each lecture and farmers will be taught get the best results from a given quantity of seed. Practical demonstrations will provoke questions and answers to the advantage of the farming community of the west.—Calgary Herald.

Strained Back and Side.

"While working in a saw mill" writes C. E. Kenney, from Ottawa, "I strained my back and side so severely I had to go to bed. Every movement caused me torture. I tried diffferent oils and liniment, but wasn't helped till I used Nerviline. Even the first application gave considerable relief. In three days I was again at work. Other men in the mill use Nerviline with tremendous benefit also." An honest record of nearly fifty years has established the value of Edison's Nerviline.

ANOTHER VAIN ATTEMPT.

And still the vain attempt is being made to reconcile the autonomy legislation with law, with practical wisdom, and with professed liberal principles. The latest apologist is Mr. Calder, the new Minister of Education for Saskatchewan. Evidently his carefully prepared but superficial pronouncement has not met with very great favor, for he is now saying that the educational question does not amount to much anyway, that the people are more concerned with eating, sleeping and money making than with great questions of principle. For after all this is the gist of his latest utterance. And this is just where Mr. Calder will find he has made a mistake. He has yet to learn that there are some who have deep religious conviction, a strong sense of justice and a courageous love of independence.

The only weakness in Mr. Calder's treatment of the school question is this, that he has never got within talking distance of the real point at issue. Who cares whether the Tories are objecting for party ends or fighting for principle? That is a side issue. Who cares whether the school system in the Northwest is good, bad, satisfactory or unsatisfactory? That, too, is a side issue. Who cares what Lord Tomnoddy said in 1868 about the legislation of 1867? That is only a personal opinion bearing on another side issue. If Mr. Calder wishes to get at this question in earnest, let him declare himself on the following points:

(1). Which has the right by law of 1867 to initiate school legislation —the Province or the Dominion.

(2). Has the Federal power right to do more than disallow?

(3). Why did not the Dominion let the Provinces legislate and then, if their legislation was faulty, disallow it?

(4). Has history furnished a better illustration of impudence than this action of the western members in overriding the natural operation of the law?

(5). If a few Canadians in 1867 made a foolish compromise which practically affected Ontario and Quebec, why should Quebec now seek to break the bargain by virtually saying that Ontario meant not Ontario but all the rest of Canada?

(6). Why should a man with an ounce of ragged manliness in him endure that a few people in 1867 should make it impossible for him to act freely to-day?

(7). Will Mr. Calder frankly say whether his wretched attempt to reconcile the legislation with law is because he is a staunch party adherent or because he is lacking in good honest Scotch independence?

(8). Will he tell us why in a new western land, presumably settled by freemen, one religious sect should be specially selected for distinction?

(9). Why should any law bunch people into Catholics and Protestants? Does not Mr. Calder know that such law is an insult to every Baptist, not one of whom but will rightly claim a higher and more ancient lineage than that his Church has risen on the wrecks of Rome?

(10). Will not Mr. Calder acknowledge publicly, as he must do in his own soul, that this whole miserable thing was not born of justice or loyalty, but is the child of an intriguing institution which has cursed every European land, and which is a menace to progress and prosperity in our own land today?

(11). Or if we come down to his own level, will he explain how much of the present system is actually perpetuated by law and how much of it may be altered by the Governor-in-Council? Is it not plain that the only things perpetuated are minority schools; the only things not perpetuated are the beneficent regulations of the Department of Education? Isn't there a loop-hole for Separate Schools in their most offensive form.—The North West Baptist.

TO THE VOTERS

Medicine Hat Constituency.

As the nominee of the Conservatives to contest the forthcoming Provincial elections in the Medicine Hat constituency, I consider it my duty to state what measures I intend to support if elected to the Legislature:

1. The taking of all proper and lawful steps to ascertain in what respects, if any, the Dominion Parliament can restrict the Province of Alberta in its dealing with the Education question, in addition to any restrictions there may be contained in the British North America Act.

2. Regarding the lands I will advocate the continual application to and negotiation with the Dominion Parliament for the surrender of the public domain (within the boundaries of the Province) to the Province and for the withdrawal of the Canadian Pacific Railway tax exemptions.

3. I am in favor of the public ownership of public utilities.

4. I am in favor of the giving of land grants to all defenders of the empire (including members of the R. W. M. P.) who are residents in the Province.

5. Iam of opinion that each Local Improvement District should have improvements (in the way of roads and bridges) made therein equal in value to the total amount of taxes collected therefrom and where, by reason of sparcity of population, such taxes are not sufficient to make necessary improvements, I shall urge the government to make up the amount required from the Public funds.

6. I will urge generous but careful expenditure of the public monies towards the legitimate assistance of agriculture and ranching.

7. There is no more important point than Medicine Hat where a traffic bridge should be built. It will be my duty to urge the appropriation of sufficient monies to build such a bridge.

8. I deem it my duty to give my hearty support to all legitimate measures furthering the Labor interests.

9. I am in favor of a fair re-adjustment of the Income Tax.

10. I am in favor of some adjustment of the Mechanic's Lien on buildings.

Note & Comment.

[By OBSERVER.]

Loose papers have been much in evidence on the streets lately due to two things. 1st. to the high wind which prevailed on two or three days last week, which whisked them out of odd corners and pitched them into the street, and, 2nd, to the neglect of people who should have burned them instead of throwing them into the corners. If everyone would put their waste papers into a cask and burn them at frequent intervals there would be less of this nuisance.

Most people cried out against the proposition for an underground crossing at the railway, and I don't don't think anybody had a word to say in its favor. I didn't although I don't remember saying anything in opposition, but after all it is safer than the level crossing and many times would prove a time-saver. At Winnipeg, for instance, the underground crossing at Main Street is infinitely safer than the old level crossing.

When Medicine Hat installs a street railway it will be a great thing to have underground crossings for them (two of them), for then a belt line can be put in at once.

I noticed your contemporary has adopted my suggestion that we want stamp offices and letter boxes in the outlying parts of the town. We can shake hands on that proposition brother News.

Engineer Ewart, of Ottawa, was in town last week, getting information as to prices of material for building the new Post Office. I hear the site has been purchased at last so I hope it won't be long ere operations are commenced. The plans are being prepared. "Everything comes to the town that will wait long enough and Medicine Hat has waited long enough, goodness knows.

While here Mr. Ewart took a peep at the work on the new Municipal building and spoke very highly of the general plan of the building and spoke in high praise of the character of the cement work in the foundations

It is said that the Indians and half-breeds away up north are killing off the antelope in great numbers. I am sure that if this should catch the eye of the Mounted Police officers they will soon look into the matter and if the report be true a check will be put upon "poor Loo." The Indians and breeds are permitted to kill game for food, but the reports say they are slaughtering much beyond what they need for subsistence. One traveller says he counted 32 feet of antelope in one spot.

DR. SPARLING MAKES EARNEST APPEAL

HE TELLS ELECTORS TO VOTE AGAINST THEIR PARTY IF IT IS IN THE WRONG. NEED FOR PRAYER.

Rev. Dr. Sparling preached two very instructive and eloquent sermons in the Methodist Church on Sunday. The evening sermon is particularly deserving of note, as during its deliverance the preacher touched upon the duty of electors in general, and upon the critical situation which confronted the people of Saskatchewan in particular at this juncture.

Regarding fidelity to party he said: "If you believe your party to be in the right vote with it; if you don't, vote against it. You can do without it. The most sacred thing this side the pearly gates is the franchise. A man who sells his vote sells his soul." At another point he said, "Men of Saskatchewan and men of Alberta, as you are men laying the foundations of provinces, nay empires, if there ever was a time when you ought to get down on your knees before God to find out what to do it is now."

These sentences were uttered in a discourse on the words, "Give the Young Man Knowledge and Discretion." It was an educational sermon in fact both were. Dr. Sparling said an impression had gone abroad that there was a conflict between intelligence and piety. That he said was a false idea. The Bible was the friend of general intelligence. Only fools despised knowledge. Christianity aimed at the education and enlightenment of the people. That was the aim of the old Jewish system and it was also characteristic of the new Church. Proceeding the doctor emphasized the necessity of special training for the ministry, as well indeed for every young man, that he might rightly discharge the duties of manhood and citizenship.

The morning sermon was preached from the text: "I pray not that thou shouldst take them out of the world." The preacher said that Christ did not intend that Christians should withdraw into the solitudes. Man was born into society. The most effective preachers were those who lived upright lives. The great need of today was "clean honest, straight, reliable, trusty men, not more eloquent preachers." The good man must not expect to be exempt from trouble and affliction. His advantage over the unbeliever was that he had a help in suffering. Only on earth could man attain that development of which he was capable, the period of sowing could not be too long. Christians by being kept on earth were a signal advantage to others. They were the saving salt of the earth. "Vain," said the preacher "are battleships and munitions of war if men be corrupt.—Moose Jaw Signal.

RIG ACCIDENT.

Mr. John Kennedy met with a severe accident on Friday evening. He was returning from his ranch, accompanied by Mrs. Dimmick, Dick Dunn and Joe Chambers and when descending the hill by the Nova Soctia dairy on Seven Person's Creek, a piece of harness gave way and the tongue of the buggy dropped to the ground. The rig at once pressed upon the horses and they becoming frightened dashed away and the rig was overturned throwing the occupants out. Chambers and Dunn escaped unhurt, Mrs. Dimmick was slightly hurt, but Mr. Kennedy must have fallen on his head or been struck for he was picked up in an unconscious state. He was carried to Mr. Fleming's house and Dr. Symthe was sent for. The doctor found Mr. Kennedy suffering from concusion and several bad bruises. On Saturday morning Mr. Kennedy was so far recovered that he was moved into town and is progressing satisfactorily towards recovery. Mrs. Dimmick is also much better.

THE CAMPAIGN.

The election date for Alberta has been announced, the political battle has opened, the first shots have been fired, and Albertans are buckling on their armour. Here in Medicine Hat we shall have a stiff fight and we hope to see the contest waged in a friendly, even a generous spirit. We do not anticipate anything else for there is no sort of reason for it. Both sides will fight for what they believe to be the right; both candidates are men of good standing and integrity, in fact so much so that there is no reason to introduce the slightest personality of any kind. The contest therefore will be a fight for principles.

The Conservative party will fight for the great principles involved in the expression Provincial Rights. The party will contend that as a province we have the right to legislate for ourselves and one of the particular points at issue in this connection is the school clauses of the Autonomy Bill. The Conservative party object to the Dominion Government legislating upon this question and will record their votes on the 9th November in support of that contention. Mr. Sissons represents the views of the Conservative party and his election will mean that the electors of Medicine Hat claim a full measure of self-government for Alberta. In supporting Mr. Sissons The Times believes him well qualified to represent the views of men who are demanding full Provincial Rights

ABOUT OURSELVES.

Only once since the Times was established have we said anything about ourselves and then it was to record the marvellous strides which The Times made into public favor in the first year of its existence. Since then another year has passed and we have to record an even greater measure of progress. Our advertising patronage has increased to such an extent as to demand an extra two pages per week for several months past. This week speaks for itself. The demands in every department have increased so much that we found it necessary three months ago to instal a and we hope that as time goes by this (a monoline), will help us to give our readers a paper worthy of the town and district. In the matter of

we have had most gratifying results and we can reflect with pride upon the fact that our circulation has practically doubled during the past year or so. The regular circulation of The Times now per week, and this we guarantee to advertisers who are at liberty to come and verify the statement. This week The Times will issue several hundred additional copies.

Conservative Rally.

President Niblock presided last night over the most enthusiastic conservative gathering ever held at Medicine Hat. It took place in the committee rooms, Cousin's Block. Standing room was at a premium. Mr Sissons, the Conservative candidate, made a fine speech, and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed. A smoking concert followed. The meeting augured well for Mr Sissons' return to the Provincial Parliament.

FOOT RACE.

An interesting foot race came off yesterday when Leslie Grant defeated Regan of Maple Creek in a 100 yards race by about five feet.

Medicine Hat sports freely backed Grant who merited their confidence. Time—10 seconds.

Sicilian Grass.

In Sicily there is a wild grass which, when ripe at the end of summer, is gathered by the peasantry, tied in bundles and set on fire, not, however, to be consumed, but for a mere scorching. The flame flies rapidly through the light husks and beard of the plant and leaves the seeds slightly roasted, in which state they are eaten with considerable relish by numbers of the rural population.

The botanical name of this Sicilian grass is ægilops, or goateye, the Greeks having believed it to be a remedy for a disease that appears in one corner of the eye. There are three or four species growing all around the Mediterranean as well as in the islands, chiefly on the hot, dry, sandy plains near the sea. They flourish even on the scorched volcanic soils, in strange contrast to their arid and barren surroundings, showing that the vital principle in them is unusually energetic and proof against extremes of heat.

A Homely Axiom.

"Do not bite off a bigger piece than you can chew," is a homely axiom that it is safe to heed and which expresses in language more forcible perhaps than elegant a vital truth. But although we all know the misery of undertaking too much, of having more care upon us than we know how to manage, why is it that we, over and over again, place ourselves in this uncomfortable position? How easy it would be to gauge our powers and our purses at their right values and act accordingly if we only would—but it is forever the same old story.

We stupidly pile up burdens upon our shoulders that are absolutely senseless, but that after a time weigh as heavily as Sindbad the Sailor's Old Man of the Sea. In nine cases out of ten people live beyond their strength and beyond their income and what a waste of vital power that means, what depression and carking care!

Mosquitoes and Sounds.

A doctor, writing from Port of Spain, Trinidad, to a medical journal, tells of his experiments with mosquitoes. He says that one of his childish amusements when playing with his companions in the early evening was to strike a note that would attract the insects. As he remembers, the most alluring sound was a continuous "oo," sung in a medium key, which was quickly changed to "ah" in a lower tone and dwelt on in the same way. The effect on the mosquitoes was magical. Their singing would quickly increase in volume, and they would immediately attack the faces of the children, who, strange to say, enjoyed the sport. But the mosquitoes did not enjoy it long, for their love of music afforded an excellent opportunity of killing them.

He Knew Himself.

A friend once took a reformed gambler to a religious meeting. The preacher devoted a large part of his discourse to remarks reflecting upon the past life of the gambler. The man who had escorted the gambler to the meeting thought it incumbent on him to apologize for introducing him into a place where he would hear himself abused.

"I didn't know that was the way this preacher was going to talk," he said, "or I wouldn't have asked you to come."

"Oh, don't worry about that," was the reply. "There never was a sermon worth a cuss that didn't hit me somewhere."

Inseparable.

Affrighted, he turned on his pursuer. "You black thing, why do you follow me constantly? What are you?"

"I am your sunshine companion," mockingly replied his shadow.

Potatoes for Horses.

In some French experiments steamed potatoes with oat straw were used for horse feed. During the 24 days of the test, the horses that were hard worked lost almost 24 pounds. This was not considered a very favorable showing. In another experiment a much better showing was made, so that 11 pounds of hay was considered equivalent to 88 pounds of potatoes.

TUESDAY. OCTOBER. 24 1905.

In Indiana we wasted our gas and it played out. We allowed people to burn flambeaux and it played out.—A. C. Miner, Travelling passenger agent, Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railway Co.

In our last issue we published an editorial which in effect said that no town or city yet succeeded thoroughly until the citizens themselves were fully awake to the fact that the first step to be taken is to put the municipal house in order. In other words municipal beauty had to be first undertaken and carried pretty well to a finish. It was because we have held these views that we have so persistently urged upon our citizens the necessity of adopting every municipal improvement within the town's reach. A good deal has been done, but our town is only yet on the fringe of the work The two things which will do more than anything else to further the aims of the town are sewerage and permanent sidewalks. We will confess that we are disappointed that more progress was not made in both these during the past season but we hope that with the coming of the Town Engineer early in the new year, preparations will be made for a start in both departments as soon next spring as the weather will permit. One serious drawback in many towns is that there seems of necessity to come a period when many people think things are all right as they are; they have seen the growth of the town and only compare what it was a few years ago with what it is today and they are content. They lose sight of the real point which is what "might have been" done. Happily we believe Medicine Hat is emerging from that period of lethargy and has now entered upon a period of progressive municipal action. There is every chance of this resulting in those good works which are referred to as "municipal beauty," and when the town has put on the clothing which are the marks of a real live, progressive city, then we may expect to attract from outside much that will help to expand and build up the community.

Englishmen In Canada.

The overseas edition of the London (Eng.) Daily Mail has recently published a number of letters from Canada upon the question of the popularity or otherwise of the Englishman in Canada, and a good deal of nonsense was said on both sides of the question. Our opinion is that if the Englishman cannot get along in Canada it is in nearly every case, his own fault. Mr. Douglas Hayes, writing to the Times from New York on the subject, makes some very pertinent remarks. He says it is a habit among certain class of Englishmen to find fault with the country if tdey do not succeed and not with themselves, and points out that failure usually results from unwillingness to fall in with the new social conditions.

"The right kind of Briton, and the great majority are of this class, as soon as he is familiar with the surroundings and sees 'what's what' acts in the best way, and only those who are filled with a false pride and make themselves 'stand-offish' are, naturally, without friends and commence to write home and say that there is no chance for an Englishman in Canada, when the simple reason is that they are like Mr. Micawber, 'waiting for something to turn up,' instead of hustling round and taking the first job that presents itself until they are able to get a more desirable situation.

The Embargo Stays.

Replying to a copy of the Canadian Senate, resolution, sent by the Governor-General, regarding the cattle embargo, the British Government, through the Board of Agriculture, refuse to take steps towards removing it. In a long memorandum it states that the slaughter of cattle at the port of debarkation is no obstacle to the development and maintenance of a large and valuable trade. The existing regulations are not a slur upon Canadian cattle, as they are enforced against all British colonies, together with the United States. The memorandum emphasizes the disastrous effect the introduction of disease would have on the consumers and producers of Great Britian. Past experience with Argentina and the United States shows how quickl foot-and-mouth disease may makes its appearance, despite efficient sanitary organization.—Farmer's Advocate.

GROS VENTRE NOTES.

The Gros Ventre school is open at last, thanks to The Times; Mrs. Tothill, (late of Russell, Man.), is in charge. She is rounding up the youngsters and getting the school in shape in good style.

Miss Richards, of London, Ont., Miss Lena Lean, Lieut. W Reid and Mr. Mini Lean, of Medicine Hat, on a trip to the Cypress Hills, paid a visit to Pine Grove ranch, the guests of Miss V. Huston, last week.

Cattle dipping has been well attended to this season. Most of the cattle were through the second time by Oct. 10th. The Packing Co. ran through about 2,000 head besides their own.

Mr. Henry Hamilton, Proprietor and Manager of the Little Plume Coal mine, has discovered another seam of coal below the line he was working. This is a seam of extra fine coal. Henry is willing to put up money that there is good coal all the way down to the bottom.

John Paul, of Moosejaw, has been through here gathering a few cars of horses to ship to the eastern market He got supplied from the ranches of Wm. Carol, C. Putnam, and J. Huston.

Along about October and November the unbranded calves of this district take crazy fits. They will leave good mothers and well watered ranges, ramble miles away and jump into corrals belonging to other ranchers. Generally in with the other fellow's calves that he is weaning. I enquired of some of the cowboys what they thought caused the calves to take these tantrums. But they appeared to think it was none of my business, I was not a rancher and had no stake in the country. They admitted, however, that the calves were more liable to disappear off the range on days when the owner was away from home than when he was riding the range. To me that looks rather suspicious.

Unbranded colts take these turns on and any left till spring are sure to ramble dear knows where.

There is another thing about this business that I can't understand, and that is, when a rancher discovers that some of his unbranded stock has disappeared, he will saddle up and (as a rule) ride straight to were the truant stock is. The cowboys are sure smart fellows.

Now to save trouble Mr. Rancher had better take a day off and brand up. As I understand it a good plain brand will hold the strongest calf from climbing into the wrong corral. So far this fall, as far as I can find out, there has been no cases of unbranded stock rambling. It may may break out when the ranchers begin weaning. I will keep on the look out and report.

IMPROVING PASS LINE.

C.P.R. DOING MUCH WORK IN THE FRANK DISTRICT.

Frank, Oct. 14.—The work of changing the main track of the C.P.R. to straighten out the curve around the town, is under way and part of the track is laid. The C.P.R. is engaged in making important improvements to its line in this district, the extent of which gives some indication of the importance the Pass section of the line is assuming By the close of the season the amount of money the company will have expended in the district will total a good many thousand dollars and the road will be in better condition than ever before. The work is being done under the direction of Division Superintendent Erickson, who makes frequent trips from Cranbrook to inspect its progress. The most extensive piece of work just now under way is that of reducing the grade on the hill at Landbreck.

There is a crusade on in Minneapolis against minors who smoke tobacco.

Valuable Advice to Mothers.

If your child comes in from play coughing or showing evidence of Grippe sore throat or sickness of any kind get out your bottle of Nerviline. Rub the chest and neck with Nerviline and give internal doses of ten drops of sweetened water every two hours. This will prevent any serious trouble. No liniment or pain reliever equals Polson's Nerviline. Nerviline, which has been the great family remedy in Canada for the past fifty years. Try a 25c. bottle of Nerviline.

TO THE VOTERS
Medicine Hat Constituency.

As the nominee of the Conservatives to contest the forthcoming Provincial elections in the Medicine Hat constituency, I consider it my duty to state what measures I intend to support if elected to the Legislature:

1. The taking of all proper and lawful steps to ascertain in what respects, if any, the Dominion Parliament can restrict the Province of Alberta in its dealing with the Education question, in addition to any restrictions there may be contained in the British North America Act.

2. Regarding the lands I will advocate the continual application to and negotiation with the Dominion Parliament for the surrender of the public domain (within the boundaries of the Province) to the Province and for the withdrawal of the Canadian Pacific Railway tax exemptions.

3. I am in favor of the public ownership of public utilities.

4. I am in favor of the giving of land grants to all defenders of the empire (including members of the R. N. W. M. P.) who are residents in the Province.

5. Iam of opinion that each Local Improvement District should have improvements (in the way of roads and bridges) made therein equal in value to the total amount of taxes collected therefrom and where, by reason of sparcity of population, such taxes are not sufficient to make necessary improvements, I shall urge the government to make up the amount required from the Public funds.

6. I will urge generous but careful expenditure of the public monies towards the legitimate assistance of agriculture and ranching.

7. There is no more important point than Medicine Hat where a traffic bridge should be built. It will be my duty to urge the appropriation of sufficient monies to build such a bridge.

8. I deem it my duty to give my hearty support to all legitimate measures furthering the Labor interests.

9. I am in favor of a fair re-adjustment of the Income Tax.

10. I am in favor of some adjustment of the Mechanic's Lien on buildings.

THE TIMES
MEDICINE HAT, N.W.T.

AGONY AFTER EATING

"I suffered so much with indigestion that my life had become a burden," says Miss Nellie Archibald, of Sheet Harbor, N. S. "Every time I took even the slightest meal it caused me hours of agony. The trouble caused a choking sensation in the region of my heart, which seriously alarmed me. My inability to properly digest my food, left me so weak and run down that I could not perform even the lightest housework, and I would tire out going up a few steps slowly. I sought medical aid, and tried several medicines, but without getting the least benefit. My sister, who lived at a considerable distance, and who had been an invalid, wrote me about this time that she had been greatly benefited using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and this decided me to give them a fair trial, practically as a last resort. In the course of a few weeks there was a notable change in my condition, and I began to relish my meals. From that on I began to gain new strength, and by the time I had used seven boxes, all signs of the trouble had vanished and I was once more enjoying good health, and I have not since had any return of the trouble."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure indigestion, because they make the rich red blood that brings tone and strength to the stomach. Nearly all the common ailments are due to bad blood, and when the bad blood is turned into good blood by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the trouble disappears. That is why these pills cure anaemia, dizziness, heart palpitation, general debility, kidney trouble, rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, and nervous troubles, such as neuralgia, paralysis and St. Vitus dance. That is why they bring ease and comfort at all stages of womanhood and girlhood, and cure their secret ailments when the blood supply becomes weak, scanty or irregular. But you must get the genuine pills. Substitutes and imitations which some dealers offer never cure anything. When you buy the pills, see that the full name Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People is printed on the wrapper around each box. Sold by all dealers or sent by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by writing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Admiral Dickens during the sham bombardment of Fort Munroe, smiled one morning as a sailor staggered past him with a bale of hay on his back. "He makes me think," said the Admiral, "of another sailor, a British one, whom I saw one day at Gibraltar. He, too, had a load of hay, and was toiling with it up from the little fishing village that lies at the foot of the great rock. I talked with him a little while, and as we parted I said: 'Who are you, my man? What job do you hold here?' 'Well,' the sailor answered, as he took up the hay again, 'I used to consider myself a British bluejacket, but I'm dashed if I don't begin to think I'm a commissary mule.'"

The Drive Pimples Away.—A face covered with pimples is unsightly. It tells of internal irregularities which should long since have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood protests. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them and there will be another witness to their excellence.

"I don't believe Wind's tips on the races are any good." "Why not?" "Well, he said they were a sure thing, and then he wasn't willing to lend me the money to bet with."

Minard's Liniment for sale Everywhere.

Senator Penrose tells of a lady who objected to all familiarity by street car conductors, such as touching her or calling to her, or assuming that she needed help in getting on or off a car. One day when the motorman was putting on brakes and slowing up the lady arose, and the conductor shouted:—"Wait, leddy, until the car stops." "Don't address me, sir, as lady," she indignantly replied. "Beg your pardon, ma'am," replied the conductor; "but all of us is liable to make mistakes."

Cheapest of All Medicines.—Considering the curative qualities of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil it is the cheapest medicine now offered to the public. The dose required in any ailment is small and a bottle contains many doses. If it were valued at the benefit it confers it could not be purchased for many times the price asked for it, but increased consumption has simplified and cheapened its manufacture.

"Little boy," said a gentleman, "why do you carry that umbrella over your head? It's not raining." "No." "And the sun is not shining." "No.' "Then, why do you carry it?" "'Cause when it rains pa wants it and when the sun shines ma uses it, and it's only this kind of weather that I can get to use it at all."

THE VALUE OF A HEN'S EGG.

Here are some facts and figures relative to a hen's egg which may not be without interest to the student of poultry possibilities. Its average length is two and twentyseven hundredths inches, its average diameter at the broad end one and seventy-two hundredths inches, and it weighs about one-eighth of a pound. The nutrients are smaller than those of old hens. The shell consists about 11 per cent., the yolk 32 per cent. and the white 57 per cent. of the total egg. Chemically speaking, an egg consists of two nutrients—protein and fat—together with some water and a small quantity of mineral matter. Popular belief to the contrary, there is no difference in the relative qualities of eggs with dark shells and those with light. Their flavor is affected by the food of the fowl, for good or for evil. Exhaustive experiments by well-equipped investigators proves that the egg deserves its reputation as easily assimilated and highly nutritious food, if eaten soft or lightly cooked. Such experiments also show that eggs at twelve cents per dozen are a cheap source of nutrients; at sixteen cents somewhat expensive; and at twenty-five cents, dear, highly extravagant. The basis of comparison was the market price of standard flesh foods considered in relation to their nutritive elements. But there is a physiological constituent of eggs which is of great value, yet it defies the search of the scientist or the inquisition of the statistician, and that is there palatability. Unless a food, however rich in proteins, is relished it loses much of its value, while, per contra, a less chemically desirable food that is enjoyed becomes valuable by reason of that fact.

Minard's Liniment Relieves Neuralgia.

WE USUALLY FIND OUR LEVEL.

Do not hypnotize yourself with the idea that you are being kept down. Do not talk such nonsense. Nobody of any sense would believe it. People will only laugh at you. Only one thing is keeping you down, and that is yourself. There is probably some trouble somewhere with you. Of course, there are employers who are unjust to their help; there are instances in which employees are kept back when they should be advanced; but, as a rule, this is only temporary, and they usually find their level somewhere.—"Success Magazine."

Governor McLane of New Hampshire was talking about Henry James' criticism of American speech. "I suppose that Mr. James wants us to use the broad a," he said, "and to talk in every way like Oxford graduates. The broad a is all very well, and the Oxford graduate talks more musically, no doubt, than the native of Paint Rock. At the same time it was through the cultivation of this English way of speaking that my best friend nearly lost his wife—lost her, I mean through divorce, not through death. "She made, one day, some biscuits, and at dinner that night she said in her cultivated way: "'I made a big batch of these biscuits.' "'You did, indeed, dear,' said my friend, her husband. "'How do you know how big a batch I made?' she asked, surprised. "'I thought,' he murmured, 'that you said botch.'"

St. Joseph Lewis, July 14, 1903.
MESSRS. C. C. RICHARDS & CO.,
Gentlemen,—I was badly kicked by my horse last may and after using several preparations on my leg nothing would do. My leg was black as jet. I was laid up in bed for a fortnight and could not walk. After using three bottles of your MINARD'S LINIMENT I was perfectly cured, so that I could start on the road.
JOS. DUBES,
Commercial Traveler.

"You would be surprised if you had the experience we do from day to day," said the conductor of a 125th street crosstown car. "A woman, fashionably dressed, her fingers covered with diamonds, got on the car at Madison avenue, and when I came to collect her fare she began to fidget around, looking for her pocketbook. Finally she blurted out that she had lost it, but she did not seem anxious to go back after it. The car kept going all the time, and when she did not show any anxiety I knew that she was bent on beating her fare across town. I told her that if she did not pay her fare I would be compelled to put her off the car. She looked at me, smiled and replied: "You wouldn't put me off the car for the sake of five cents, would you?" "By this time we had arrived at Lenox avenue, and there she got off. Well, do you believe it, that woman had the nerve to smile in my face and as she was leaving the car say to me: 'You're the easiest I have met in a long time.'"

"It is said that if a girl is a bridesmaid three times she will never be a bride." "Oh, aunty," replied the little girl, "were you a bridesmaid three times?" "No, dear. I never was a bridesmaid in my life." "Poor aunty! Why don't you get to be a widow? They say a widow can nearly always get married if she wants to."

Count Wedel, grand equerry to the Kaiser, has just resigned his post on the plea of advancing years. He made his entry into public life at the age of ten in the city of Hanover, where his father was a member of the government. It was in 1848, the year of convulsion in Europe, and little Wedel found the mob one day smashing the windows of a public office. It was great sport, and he joined in it with enthusiasm. Then somebody cried: "Let us smash old Wedel's windows!" The crowd was delighted, but did not know where old Wedel lived. Then came little Wedel's great moment. He stepped to the front and said: "I know. Follow me." So they followed him, and he joined in the smashing of the paternal glass with peculiar joy. When he tells the story now he adds: "It was the jolliest day of my life!"

Baby Eczema and Skin Diseases

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

Especially during the teething period, children are subject to Eczema, scald head and various forms of skin disease, which cause the keenest suffering to themselves, as well as anxiety to their parents.

There is no treatment so successful as Dr. Chase's Ointment, and as eczema always tends to become chronic and last for years, prompt cure is of the utmost importance.

Mr. C. Wiley, who is employed as cooper by the Kennedy & Davis Milling Company, Lindsay, Ont., states: "I used Dr. Chase's Ointment for eczema on my little girl some few years ago, and soon brought about a thorough and permanent cure. She had suffered for considerable time, Dr. Chase's Ointment was the only preparation to prove effective. I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Chase's Ointment, as it certainly effected a prompt and permanent cure in this case."

Mrs. F. Clarke, Belmont, Man., writes:—"My baby had eczema on her ear. The sore was very bad and nothing seemed to do her much good. Hearing of the remarkable cure Dr. Chase's Ointment was making, we sent for some and after the third application the sore began to heal. I am glad to say that it is quite well now and we give the credit to Dr. Chase's Ointment. We cannot recommend this preparation too highly."

Any mother who once becomes acquainted with the merits of Dr. Chase's Ointment would not think of being without it in the house. Where there is a baby or small children it is of daily value as a means of curing skin irritations and eruptions, chafing and all sorts of burns and sores.

Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

PSYCHINE
(PRONOUNCED SI-KEEN)
COUGH AND LUNG TROUBLE

"PSYCHINE" differs radically from the old fogey medicines. It is compounded on new and advanced methods of curing disease, otherwise it would be just like scores of others, without any exceptional merits. But "PSYCHINE" possesses virtues of healing, that no other preparation in the world does.

There never has been in the history of medicine, such a truly remarkable remedy, for the prompt and complete cure of obstinate coughs and lung trouble. There is nothing else just like it, or nothing else one half so good. Thousands of men and women readily and enthusiastically give testimony to prove the statement.

ON THE BLEAK PRAIRIE EXPOSED TO COLD AND WET.

"I am a mail contractor and every winter and change of season I suffered severely from coughs and colds, being much exposed to cold and wet. Eventually my Lungs became affected and it is only through the prompt use of PHYCHINE that I am alive to-day.
Yours truly,
HUGH WYLIE, Glencairn, Man.

For Inflammation of the Eyes.—Among the many good qualities which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills possess, besides regulating the digestive organs, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the eyes. It has called forth many letters of recommendation from those who were afflicted with this complaint and found a cure in the pills. They affect the nerve centres and the blood in a surprisingly active way, and the result is almost immediately seen.

Lord Cornwallis had surrendered. "I decided it was the best thing to do," he explained to the reporters. "It's a great deal cheaper all around than it would be for the two countries to hold a peace conference. Think of the cable tolls!" Besides, as he reflected afterward, it didn't bind King George to the payment of an indemnity.

GETTING AWAY FROM THE COUNTER.

(Orison Swett Marden in "Success Magazine.")

The quickest way to get away from the counter is to work hard, be polite and obliging at the counter. The trouble with people who complain that they cannot get above the positions they are in is that they can not see that the step to the thing above them is in the thing they are doing, in their manner of doing it, that the opportunity for advancement is in the promptness, the thoroughness, the efficiency they show in the positions they now occupy.

Of two clerks, starting side by side in a store, who knows that they must part, one rather is not found to his pay envelope, but in the opportunity to learn the business, to extract from it the secrets which his employer may have paid a fortune for, besides putting his life into it. He is an eyes, all ears, all the time planning of better methods, improved ways of doing things, and he finally becomes a proprietor himself. The other sees nothing in his life but drudgery and a perpetual clerkship.

If you have a hundred acres of land and only four people to support, as one correspondent states that he has, if you have enough brain, ambition, determination, and grit, you can not only support the people depending on you, but you can also give yourself a good education,—for you can buy all the books you need,— and if you are a good manager, if you have system, you can have all the leisure you require for study.

If you are made of the stuff that wins anybody can keep you back for it you do not find your chance where you are, you will find it somewhere else. But remember that your achievement cannot rise higher than your resolution. So long as you think you are tied down so that you can not move, you will never get up or get on.

The man who acknowledges that he is a "perpetual clerk" will never become much more, unless he does something until he changes his conviction. His own lack of confidence and push, not circumstances, is the chain which binds him.

It is as natural that we should obtain the thing we long for with all our hearts, and persistently work to obtain, as that a stone should come to the earth when hurled into the air. The ambition, the desire, the longing, the hunger, the struggle toward the aim, these are the forces of gravitation which bring us the desired result.

GARDENING AS EXERCISE FOR WOMEN.

I'm sorry for the woman whose standards, social or physical, do not permit her to handle a hoe. It seems to me as graceful an instrument as a golf club. An hour's exercise along a tidy garden row will produce the finest kind of a glow, and, withal, you get so much more done with a hoe! It is but a poor spirited person who will "putter with flowers" but dare not work in the vegetable garden for fear that some one may think she has to do it. If the neighbors are scandalized because I turn the baby loose in the shade on the grass and push the wheel hoe instead of the perambulator it is their lookout. Perhaps, now, they are dying to dig and have not quite dared for fear of my scathing criticism! Let them know the worst. I purpose to dig, to rake, to sow, to weed, to hoe, and to harvest, for the sake of what I get out of it in mental growth, flowers, exercise, aesthetic uplift, and vegetables. I shall take my turn, too, with the bicycle, the tennis racket, and the golf clubs; but next to the go-cart the wheel hoe is my favorite vehicle!

MEN ARE IN THE MAJORITY IN THE UNITED STATES.

(From "Success Magazine.")

Taking it "by and large," the male sex is in the majority in our country by some 1,638,321, according to a recent census bulletin. In some of the states, however, the women exceed the men in number, notably in the district of Columbia, Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Usually men are in excess in sparsely settled communities and women in thickly populated regions; cities, for example, as a rule, have more females than males. In the later years of life, the women exceed the men, which seems to indicate that they are longer lived. In the period of sixteen to twenty-five years of age, also, the report shows them to be in excess.

"Don't you wish," he asked, looking soulfully into her eyes, "that the tunnel on this line was ten times as long?" "No," she answered. It struck him like a dash of cold water that she no longer loved him. "They always turn on the lights when coming to the long tunnels," she added, "and they don't for the short ones."

"'You may refuse me now," said the persistent suitor, "but I can wait. 'All things comes to him who waits.'" "Yes," replied the dear girl, "and I guess the first will be father; I hear him on the stairs."

"Our grass should be cut, John," hinted Mrs. Subbubs. "That's so; it does look very seedy," replied her husband languidly. "I'll ignore it with proper hauteur hereafter."

A new definition of "friend" was given by a Manchester schoolboy the other day in an essay. "A friend is a person who knows all about you and likes you just the same."

How Big Is Two Cents?

The average consumption of flour, per year, by each person in Canada, is about one barrel (196 lbs.).

Suppose you use an inferior flour at a saving of say 75 cents over the cost of a barrel of Royal Household Flour, that is just 6½ cents a month—less than two cents per week.

But an inferior flour can yield only a portion of the nutriment you get out of "Royal Household" because cheap flours are poorly milled, contain a greater proportion of bran and shorts—the granules are not uniform—the bread is heavy—the texture is coarse—the flavor is tasteless or poor—the nutriment is not in it.

ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR, being perfectly milled, is uniform in texture—makes bread that is light and waferlike—white as snow—finely flavored—highest in nutriment

"Royal Household" is electrically purified and sterilized—backed up and guaranteed by its makers' reputation.

Paul Bartlett, the sculptor is now in this country to superintend the casting of his equestrian statue of McClellan for Philadelphia. Having passed most of his life in Paris, Mr. Bartlett is bilingual. He relates that one day in the Luxembourg Gardens his attention was directed to a party of three American ladies who were engaged in an animated and mutually unintelligible altercation with a cabman. Addressing the eldest lady, evidently the chaperon and spokeswoman of the party, he said: "Madame, perhaps I can be of some service to you. I speak French." Gorgonizing him from head to foot with a stony stare, his countrywoman sternly replied: "So do I!" And the cabman perceiving that the intruder had been snubbed, closed the incident by proclaiming from the box: "Me spik Anglish."

We have no hesitation in saying that Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is without doubt the best medicine ever introduced for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera and all summer complaints, sea sickness, etc. It promptly gives relief and never fails to effect a positive cure. Mothers should never be without a bottle when their children are teething.

"What did you get for your mother-in-law joke?" "A dollar from the editor and a six weeks' visit from my mother-in-law."

"Why do you want a divorce?" the Judge asked. "Because I can't look at my wife without being tempted to commit suicide or murder." "What brought about this state of mind?" "She put moth balls in my cigar pocket." "Petition granted."

Colonel Lockwood, the most amusing man in the House of Commons, told the Stewards of the Royal Masonic Institute for Girls a good story at the festival recently. A prominent man called to condole with a lady on the death of her husband, and concluded by saying, "Did he leave you much?" "Nearly every night," was the reply.

THE TIMES
MEDICINE HAT, N. W. T.

AGONY AFTER EATING

"I suffered so much with indigestion that my life had become a burden," says Miss Nellie Archibald, of Sheet Harbor, N. S. "Every time I took even the slightest meal it caused me hours of agony. The trouble caused a choking sensation in the region of my heart, which seriously alarmed me. My inability to properly digest my food, left me so weak and run down that I could not perform even the lightest housework, and I would tire out going up a few steps slowly. I sought medical aid, and tried several medicines, but without getting the least benefit. My sister, who lived at a considerable distance, and who had been an invalid, wrote us about this time that she had been cured by using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and this decided me to give them a fair trial, practically as a last resort. In the course of a few weeks there was a notable change in my condition, and I began to relish my meals. From that on I began to gain new strength, and by the time I had used seven boxes, all signs of the trouble had vanished and I was once more enjoying good health, and I have not since had any return of the trouble."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure indigestion, because they make the rich red blood that brings tone and strength to the stomach. Nearly all the common ailments are due to bad blood, and when the bad blood is turned into good blood by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the trouble disappears. That is why these pills cure anaemia, dizziness, heart palpitation, general debility, kidney trouble, rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, and nervous troubles, such as neuralgia, paralysis and St. Vitus dance. That is why they bring ease and comfort at all stages of womanhood and girlhood, and cure their secret ailments when the blood supply becomes weak, scanty or irregular. But you must get the genuine pills. Substitutes and imitations which some dealers offer never cure anything. When you buy the pills, see that the full name Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People is printed on the wrapper around each box. Sold by all dealers or sent by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by writing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Admiral Dickens during the sham bombardment of Fort Munroe, smiled one morning as a sailor staggered past him with a bale of hay on his back. "He makes me think," said the Admiral, "of another sailor, a British one, whom I saw one day at Gibraltar. He, too, had a load of hay, and was toiling with it up from the little fishing village that lies at the foot of the great rock. I talked with him a little while, and as we parted I said: '"Who are you, my man? What job do you hold here?" "Well,' the sailor answered, as he took up the hay again, 'I used to consider myself a British bluejacket, but I'm dashed if I don't begin to think I'm a commissary mule.'"

The Drive Pimples Away.—A face covered with pimples is unsightly. It tells of internal irregularities which should long since have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood protests. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them and there will be another witness to their excellence.

Senator Penrose tells of a lady who objected to all familiarity by street car conductors, such as touching her or calling to her, or assuming that she needed help in getting on or off a car. One day when the motorman was putting on brakes and slowing up the lady arose, and the conductor shouted:—"Wait, leddy, until the car stops." "Don't address me, sir, as lady," she indignantly replied. "Beg your pardon, ma'am," replied the conductor; "but all of us is liable to make mistakes."

Cheapest of All Medicines.—Considering the curative qualities of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil it is the cheapest medicine now offered to the public. The dose required in any ailment is small and a bottle contains many doses. If it were valued at the benefit it confers it could not be purchased for many times the price asked for it, but increased consumption has simplified and cheapened its manufacture.

"Little boy," said a gentleman, "why do you carry that umbrella over your head? It's not raining." "No." "And the sun is not shining." "No.' "Then, why do you carry it?" THE VALUE OF A HEN'S EGG.

Here are some facts and figures relative to a hen's egg which may not be without interest to the student of poultry possibilities. Its average length is two and twentyseven hundredths inches, its average diameter at the broad end one and seventy-two hundredths inches, and it weighs about one-eighth of a pound. The nutlets are smaller than those of our hens. The shell constitute about 11 per cent., the yolk 32 per cent. and the white 57 per cent. of the total egg. Chemically speaking, an egg consists of two nutrients—protein and fat—together with some water and a small quantity of mineral matter. Popular belief to the contrary, there is no difference in the nutritive qualities of eggs with dark shells and those with light. Their flavor is affected by the food of the fowl, for good or for evil. Exhaustive experiments by well equipped investigators proves that the egg deserves its reputation as an easily assimilated and highly nutritious food, if eaten raw or lightly cooked. Such experiments also show that eggs at twelve cents per dozen are a cheap source of nutrients; at sixteen cents somewhat expensive, and at twenty-five cents hard ever, highly extravagant. The basis of comparison was the market price of standard flesh foods considered in relation to their nutritive elements. But there is a physiological constituent of eggs which is of great value, yet it defies the search of the scientist or the inquisition of the statistician, and that is there palatability. Unless a food, however rich in proteins, is relished it loses much of its value, while, per contra, a less chemically desirable food that is enjoyed becomes valuable by reason of that fact.

WE USUALLY FIND OUR LEVEL.

Do not hypnotize yourself with the idea that you are being kept down. Do not talk such nonsense. Nobody of any sense would believe it. People will only laugh at you. Only one thing is keeping you down, and that is yourself. There is probably some trouble somewhere with you. Of course, there are employers who are unjust to their help; there are instances in which employees are kept back when they should be advanced; but, as a rule, this is only temporary, and they usually find their level somewhere.—"Success Magazine."

Governor McLane of New Hampshire was talking about Henry James' criticism of American speech. "I suppose that Mr. James wants us to use the broad a," he said, "and to talk in every way like Oxford graduates. The broad a is all very well, and the Oxford graduate talks more musically, no doubt, than the native of Paint Rock. At the same time it was through the cultivation of this English way of speaking that my best friend nearly lost his wife—lost her, I mean through divorce, not through death. "She made, one day, some biscuits, and at dinner that night she said in her cultivated way: "'I made a big batch of these biscuits.' "'You did, indeed, dear,' said my friend, her husband. "'How do you know how big a batch I made?' she asked, surprised. "'I thought,' he murmured, 'that you said botch.'"

"You would be surprised if you had the experience we do from day to day," said the conductor of a 125th street crosstown car. "A woman, fashionably dressed, her fingers covered with diamonds, got on the car at Madison avenue, and when I came to collect her fare she began to fidget around, looking for her pocketbook. Finally she blurted out that she had lost it, but she did not seem anxious to go back after it. The car kept going all the time, and when she did not show any anxiety I knew that she was bent on beating her fare across town. I told her that if she did not pay her fare I would be compelled to put her off the car. She looked at me, smiled and replied: "You wouldn't put me off the car for the sake of five cents, would you?" "By this time we had arrived at Lenox avenue, and there she got off. Well, do you believe it, that woman had the nerve to smile in my face and as she was leaving the car say to me: 'You're the easiest I have met in a long time.'"

"It is said that if a girl is a bridesmaid three times she will never be a bride." "Oh, aunty," replied the little girl, "were you a bridesmaid three times?" "No, dear. Count Wedel, grand equerry to the Kaiser, has just resigned his post on the plea of advancing years. He made his entry into public life at the age of ten in the city of Hanover, where his father was a member of the government. It was in 1848, the year of convulsion in Europe, and little Wedel found the mob one day smashing the windows of a public office. It was great sport, and he joined in it with enthusiasm. Then somebody cried: "Let us smash old Wedel's windows!" The crowd was delighted, but did not know where old Wedel lived. Then came little Wedel's great moment. He stepped to the front and said: "I know. Follow me." So they followed him, and he joined in the smashing of the paternal glass with peculiar joy. When he tells the story now he adds: "It was the jolliest day of my life!"

Baby Eczema and Skin Diseases
DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

Especially during the teething period, children are subject to Eczema, scald head and various forms of skin disease, which cause the keenest suffering to themselves, as well as anxiety to their parents.

There is no treatment so successful as Dr. Chase's Ointment, and as eczema always tends to become chronic and last for years, prompt cure is of the utmost importance.

Mr. C. Wiley, who is employed as cooper by the Kennedy & Davis Milling Company, Lindsay, Ont., states: "I used Dr. Chase's Ointment for eczema on my little girl some few years ago, and soon brought about a thorough and permanent cure. She had suffered for considerable time, Dr. Chase's Ointment was the only preparation to prove effective. I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Chase's Ointment, as it certainly effected a prompt and permanent cure in this case."

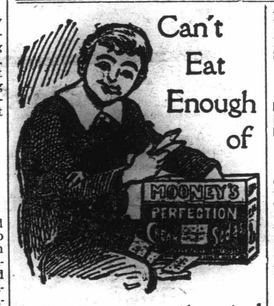
Mrs. F. Clarke, Belmont, Man., writes:—"My baby had eczema on her ear. The sore was very bad and nothing seemed to do her much good. Hearing of the remarkable cure Dr. Chase's Ointment was making, we sent for some and after the third application the sore began to heal. I am glad to say that it is quite well now and we give the credit to Dr. Chase's Ointment. We cannot recommend this preparation too highly."

Any mother who once becomes acquainted with the merits of Dr. Chase's Ointment would not think of being without it in the house. Where there is a baby or small children it is of daily value as a means of curing skin irritations and eruptions, chafing and all sorts of burns and sores.

Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signatnre of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

PSYCHINE
(PRONOUNCED SI-KEEN)
COUGH AND LUNG TROUBLE

"Psychine" differs radically from the old fogey medicines. It is compounded on new and advanced methods of curing disease, otherwise it would be just like scores of others, without any exceptional merits. But "Psychine" possesses virtues of healing, that no other preparation in the world does.



There never has been in the history of medicine, such a truly remarkable remedy, for the prompt and complete cure of obstinate coughs and lung trouble. There is nothing else just like it, or nothing else one half so good. Thousands of men and women readily and enthusiastically give testimony to prove the statement.

ON THE BLEAK PRAIRIE EXPOSED TO COLD AND WET.

For Inflammation of the Eyes.—Among the many good qualities which Parmelee's Vegetable Pills possess, besides regulating the digestive organs, is their efficacy in reducing inflammation of the eyes. It has called forth many letters of recommendation from those who were afflicted with this complaint and found a cure in the pills. They affect the nerve centres and the blood in a surprisingly active way, and the result is almost immediately seen.

SLIPPING AWAY FROM THE COUNTER.

(Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine.")

The quickest way to get away from the counter is to work hard, be polite and obliging at the counter. The trouble with people who complain that they cannot get above the position that are in is that they can not see that the step to the thing above them is in the thing they are doing, in their manner of doing it, that the opportunity for advancement is in the promptness, the thoroughness, the emiciency they show in the positions they now occupy.

Of two clerks working side by side in a store, one knows that the best part of his salary is not found in his pay envelop, but in the opportunity to learn the business, to extract from it the secrets which his employer may have paid a fortune for, besides putting his life into it. He is all eyes, all ears, all the time thinking of better methods, improved ways of doing things, and he finally becomes a proprietor himself. The other sees nothing in his life but drudgery and a perpetual clerkship.

If you have a hundred acres of land and only four people to support, as one correspondent states that he has, if you have enough brain, ambition, determination, and grit, you can not only support the people depending on you, but you can also give yourself a good education,—for you can buy all the books you need,— and if you are a good manager, if you have system, you can have all the leisure you require for study.

If you are made of the stuff that wins nobody can keep you back, for if you do not find your chance where you are, you will find it somewhere else. But remember that your achievement cannot rise higher than your resolution. So long as you think you are tied down so that you can not move, you will never get up or get on.

The man who acknowledges that he is a "perpetual clerk" will never become manager or proprietor of anything until he changes his conviction. His own lack of confidence and push, not circumstances, is the chain which binds him.

It is as natural that we should obtain the thing we long for with all our hearts, and persistently work to obtain, as that a stone should come to the earth when hurled into the air. The ambition, the desire, the longing, the hunger, the struggle toward the aim, these are the forces of gravitation which bring us the desired result.

GARDENING AS EXERCISE FOR WOMEN.

I'm sorry for the woman whose standards, social or physical, do not permit her to handle a hoe. It seems to me as graceful an instrument as a golf club. An hour's exercise along a tidy garden row will produce the finest kind of a glow, and, withal, you get so much more done with a hoe! It is but a poor spirited person who will "putter with flowers" but dare not work in the vegetable garden for fear that some one may think she has to do it. If the neighbors are scandalized because I turn the baby loose in the shade on the grass and push the wheel hoe instead of the perambulator it is their lookout. Perhaps, now, they are dying to dig and have not quite dared for fear of my scathing criticism! Let them know the worst. I purpose to dig, to rake, to sow, to weed, to hoe, and to harvest, for the sake of what I get out of it in mental growth, flowers, exercise, aesthetic uplift, and vegetables. I shall take my turn, too, with the bicycle, the tennis racket, and the golf clubs; but next to the go-cart the wheel hoe is my favorite vehicle!

Taking it "by and large," the male sex is in the majority in our country by some 1,638,321, according to a recent census bulletin. In some of the states, however, the women exceed the men in number, notably in the district of Columbia, Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Usually men are in excess in sparsely settled communities and women in thickly populated regions; cities, for example, as a rule, have more females than males. In the later years of life, the women exceed the men, which seems to indicate that they are longer lived. In the period of sixteen to twenty-five years of age, also, the report shows them to be in excess.

How Big Is Two Cents?

The average consumption of flour, per year, by each person in Canada, is about one barrel (196 lbs.).

Suppose you use an inferior flour at a saving of say 75 cents over the cost of a barrel of Royal Household Flour, that is just 6½ cents a month—less than two cents per week.

But an inferior flour can yield only a portion of the nutriment you get out of "Royal Household" because cheap flours are poorly milled, contain a greater proportion of bran and shorts—the granules are not uniform—the bread is heavy—the texture is coarse—the flavor is tasteless or poor—the nutriment is not in it.

ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR, being perfectly milled, is uniform in texture—makes bread that is light and waferlike—white as snow—finely flavored—highest in nutriment

"Royal Household" is electrically purified and sterilized—backed up and guaranteed by its makers' reputation.

Paul Bartlett, the sculptor is now in this country to superintend the casting of his equestrian statue of McClellan for Philadelphia. Having passed most of his life in Paris, Mr. Bartlett is bilingual. He relates that one day in the Luxembourg Gardens his attention was directed to a party of three American ladies who were engaged in an animated and mutually unintelligible altercation with a cabman. Addressing the eldest lady, evidently the chaperon and spokeswoman of the party, he said: "Madame, perhaps I can be of some service to you. I speak French." Gorgonizing him from head to foot with a stony stare, his countrywoman sternly replied: "So do I!" And the cabman perceiving that the intruder had been snubbed, closed the incident by proclaiming from the box: "Me spik Anglish."

We have no hesitation in saying that Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is without doubt the best medicine ever introduced for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera and all summer complaints, sea sickness, etc. It promptly gives relief and never fails to effect a positive cure. Mothers should never be without a bottle when their children are teething.

"What did you get for your mother-in-law joke?" "A dollar from the editor and a six weeks' visit from my mother-in-law."

"Why do you want a divorce?" the Judge asked. "Because I can't look at my wife without being tempted to commit suicide or murder." "What brought about this state of mind?" "She put moth balls in my cigar pocket." "Petition granted."

Colonel Lockwood, the most amusing man in the House of Commons, told the Stewards of the Royal Masonic Institute for Girls a good story at the festival recently. A prominent man called to condole with a lady on the death of her husband, and concluded by saying, "Did he leave you much?" "Nearly every night," was the reply.

St. Mary's Ferry, York County, N. B., Sept. 19.—(Special)—That Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure Diabetes, one of the most deadly forms of kidney disease, has been satisfactorily proved by Mr. Thos. Harrison, of this place. Speaking of his cure Mr. Harrison says:

IRRITANT HOUSE PLANTS.

Some Regarded as Harmless Accused of Causing Skin Diseases.

Every one knows enough to give poison ivy a wide berth, and the sufferer from hay fever understands only too well what particular plants have an irritant action on his mucous membrane. It is not so generally known, however, that plants usually regarded as harmless, even such as are commnly grown indoors for decoration, occasionally poison those who come in contact with them. Some instances of this kind are given by a writer in Cosmos (Paris), who states that house plants, or at any rate a considerable number of them, are dangerous, causing various skin diseases.

We already know, says the writer, the irritating properties of the nettle and those of the clematis of the hedge, called also "beggar's weed" because professional mendicants are in the habit of producing with the leaves superficial eruptions that gain for them the sympathy of compassionate hearts. A large number of plants have the power of producing effects of the same kind, and we see chronic eczemas brought on by house plants.

M. Dubreuilh, in a memoir published in the Bordeaux Medical Journal, recalls a number of cases of dermatitis caused by primroses. A gardener who had suffered from violent attacks of eczema in the right hand every spring for nine years was relieved when he excluded these plants from his house.

Not less curious is the case, published by Retzdorff, of a woman who had every year from 1894 to 1901 in the latter part of October, a violent eruption on the hands and face, which did not yield to treatment and would not disappear till spring. This lady always received as a birthday present on October 15, several pots of China primrose (Primula obconica), which she cared for herself until spring, when they were set out in the garden. The removal of the primrose caused the eruption to disappear.

Such is also the story of another woman, who, having received a plant of China primrose, cultivated it and suffered an acute eruption of the forearm and face, with inflammation of the eyes and eyelids. In this case, and in others that have been reported, the inflammation caused by the primroses was localized in the hands and face. Nevertheless, it is not always so. Pizza has observed an eruption on the chest of a lady who had carried on her person a bouquet of Chinese primroses. Kirke attended a lady who had a habit of biting off and eating primrose blossoms, and who had acute sores on her lips and in the mouth.

Primroses are not the only house plants capable of causing such eruptions. Quite recently, in an article in The Munich Medical Weekly, H. Hoffmann, assistant to Prof. Leaser, of Berlin, reported that a woman, after having spent six hours in cutting chrysanthemums, was taken with itching and burning on the face and arms. Another case of the same kind, observed by Hoffmann, was that of a waiter in a restaurant, who, after having crushed between his fingers a leaf of arbor vitæ, touched his face. Soon he was attacked by an eruption on the face and hands which it took ten days to cure.

In his article, M. Dubreuilh cites also several species of Rhus, which are used in America as house plants on account of their fine foliage. Some people can not even touch these without being attacked by eruptions. These cases are worth noting. They constitute, however, exceptions and are rare. A special predisposition is necessary. Those who are afflicted may, with some precautions, continue to keep flowers. They should touch them as little as possible, and when the eruption takes place, washing it with alcohol to dissolve the irritant matter and then with soap and water will soon stop the smarting and shorten the duration of the malady.

The Quickest Route.

The new Allan Line turbine steamship Virginian arrived at Rimouski at 4.15 p. m. on June 15, after making the fastest passage from land to land in the history of the St. Lawrence route. The mails, which she delivered at Rimouski at 4.15 o'clock that afternoon, arrived in Montreal at 4 o'clock next morning. The mail was delivered to the Virginian at Moville at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon, June 9, so that they were delivered in Montreal in seven hours short of seven days, or faster by hours than they would have come by the New York route. It was expected that the letters by the Virginian will be delivered at St. Paul, Minn., before the mail by the White Star steamer Celtic, which left a day before the Virginian.

The Virginian sailed from Moville on Friday, June 9, at 2 p. m., and arrived at Cape Race in four days, ten hours and thirty minutes, thus creating a new record from land to land over the long southern route. She arrived at Rimouski at 4.15 on the afternoon of June 15. Allowing four hours for the difference in time between Rimouski and Moville, she occupied just six days, six hours and fifteen minutes on the passage. The record made by the Allan Liner Bavarian in 1904 was seven days, five hours and twenty-two minutes, or twenty-three hours, seven minutes slower than the Virginian. The Virginian beat the Bavarian's record in May, when she made the run from Moville to Rimouski in six days, thirteen hours, and thirty minutes. The passage she has just completed is therefore faster than her previous record. It is expected that when late in the seasons the liners commence running by the shorter route, through the Straits of Belle Isle, the Virginian will be able to make the passage in a day less than her present time.

Hospital For Sick Horses.

The Toronto Humane Society has decided to purchase a vacation farm for poor men's horses. Overworked horses, whose owners are unable to pay for a recuperative outing, will be given a week's gambolling in pasture. A shed where aged and tired canines may loll at ease is also contemplated. The first money toward the purchase of the farm was $327 raised at a Horse Show booth.

A Poke at Her.

Miss Knox—I don't like her. She's forever talking about herself.

Miss Wise (pointedly)—Well, that's better than talking about some one else.

Spelled With a "V."

Frank Millet's baby was christened in London when Hutton and Lawrence Barrett were present. The child was to be named Lawrence, and Barrett spelled it out "Lawrence," as his name was spelled. Hutton immediately corrected him with "Laurence," as his own name is spelled. And they shouted this at each other, to the amazement of the parish clerk, till Mr. Millet stopped them, with the remark that the father ought to have something to say and, turning to the clerk, said, "Spell him with a 'v.'" And Lavrence Millet he was made by law.—Christian Register.

The Broken Down Nervous System

Often Found In Persons Who are Apparently in Good Health—Extraordinary Effects of

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

It is not always the pale and bloodless who suffer from nervous exhaustion, and when a person of apparent good health finds himself almost helpless he gets little sympathy from physician or friends and not frequently his ills are attributed to the imagination.

Nervous diseases are slow in coming on and patience is necessary in their treatment. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is absolutely certain to be of benefit to anyone suffering from exhausted nerves, for it supplies the very elements of nature which go to create new nerve cells and instil new vigor and energy into the nervous system.

Miss Lena Hiebert, Lowe Farm, Man., writes:—"I suffered for two years with dizzy spells, pains in the back, cold hands and feet, nervousness, jerking of the limbs, sore tongue, soreness of arms and shoulders, and general exhaustion. About seven months ago I became so nervous that I could not rest or sleep, and could not do the least bit of work without suffering dreadfully from pains in the back. I could hardly walk, could eat very little, and felt that people were always watching my body twitch.

"I tried several medicines with little effect, and was a mere skeleton of skin and bone about to give up in despair when I heard about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and began using it. I have used in all fourteen boxes of this preparation, and it has built me up until I am now strong and well again. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done me a world of good, and I feel that I cannot recommend it too highly to persons who suffer as I have."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

"Why does a woman always add a postscript to her letter?" "Well," answered the ungallant wretch, "she probably figures out in her own mind what her letter has made you say, and then tries to have the last word."

Be There a Will Wisdom Points the Way.—The sick man pines for relief, but he dislikes sending for the doctor, which means bottles of drugs never consumed. He has not the resolution to load his stomach with compounds which smell villainously and taste worse. But if he have the will to deal himself with his ailment, wisdom will direct his attention to Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, which, as a specific for indigestion and disorders of the digestive organs, have no equal.

"I—aw—would like," began the customer with the eyeglasses in the cheap restaurant, "some spring lamb; some, you know that has gambolled on the green." "Aw, stop joshin'," said the waitress. "We ain't got none of the kind that gambolled on the green. S'pose you'll be wantin' some that played golf next. We jes' got straight lamb."

"What do you make a week?" asked a Magistrate before whom an Italian organ-grinder appeared, charging a fellow musician with breaking his instrument. "Twenty-five dollaire," was the answer. "What?" exclaimed the Magistrate, "twenty-five dollars a week for grinding an organ?" "No, sare; not for grind; for shut up and go away."

"Misfortunes never come singly, you know, Miss Priscilla." "Alas!" said the poor maiden, shaking her head, "the single misfortune is the worst of all."

Assistant Attorney-General Charles H. Robb, who became famous for his work in running down the postal grafters a couple of years ago, began the practice of law in a small village in Vermont. He knew all the people of the town, as well as most of the farmers in the surrounding country. "One day," said Mr. Robb, "a tall, lank Yankee, a veritable David Harum, came into my office. It seems that he had got into trouble as a result of trading a cow. He had succeeded in palming off on an unsuspecting neighbor an uncertain looking animal which proved to be stone blind. In addition it was run down generally. On finding that the cow couldn't see, the farmer who had been imposed upon brought suit against my client. I questioned the man. "'Did you tell this farmer that the cow was blind?' "'Indeed I did,' protested my client, with a sheepish look, 'I told him that she didn't look well.'"

A Clear Healthy Skin.—Eruptions, of the skin and the blotches which blemish beauty are the result of impure blood caused by unhealthy action of the liver and kidneys. In correcting this unhealthy action and restoring the organs to their normal condition, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will at the same time cleanse the blood, and the blotches and eruptions will disappear without leaving any trace.

The late General Benjamin F. Butler, according to the Boston Herald, told the following on himself: "Several years after the war the General had occasion to visit Georgia, and from a town on the railroad took a two-seated ramshackle vehicle, driven by a typical southern darkey, for his place of destination. The General entered into conversation with the driver, and learned that he was one of eleven boys, and that he had a twin brother. He asked the driver his name. "Abraham Lincoln Backus," was the answer. "A fine noble name," said the General. The driver was quiet a moment, then suddenly said: "Wat yo' think dat twin brudder's name is?" "I have no idea," said the General. "His name is Benjamin F. Butler Backus." The General appreciated the compliment, and was thinking it over when the driver added: "Boss, I was always glad dat I was born first."

Trial Proves its Excellence.—The best testimonial one can have of the virtue of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil in the treatment of bodily pains, coughs, colds and affections of the respiratory organs, is a trial of it. If not found the sovereign remedy it is reputed to be, then it may be rejected as useless, and all that has been said in its praise denounced as untruthful.

Andrew Carnegie tells this as one of his experiences at Skibo. Soon after he had bought Skibo there was a circus exhibiting in the neighborhood of the castle, and one of the main attractions was an orang-outang. One night the orang-outang got out, fell over the cliff and was killed. In the morning two of the keepers looking over the grounds ran across the body of the dead orang-outang. One of them scratched his head and said:—"He's no Hielander, that's sure." The other said: "He's no Lowlander, they shavens got that much-hair on 'em." After awhile one of them proposed to the other as follows: "I'll go up to the kirk and see the minister, and you go up to Mr. Carnegie and see if any of his American gentry are missing."

"Run Down System"

The solid parts of our bodies are continually wasting away, and require to be repaired by medical substances, that restore the lost vitality. There are only two methods of building up the run down system. You can consult the physician, or commence treatment with Dr. Slocum's famous remedy, "PSYCHINE." In all probability "PSYCHINE" will be the best doctor, and the cheapest in the end. Scores of medical men advise its use in the worst cases of decline and weakness. It is an invaluable tonic; pleasant to the stomach, builds up the run down system, strengthens the nerves, sets the liver right, cures dizziness and headache, creates appetite, and is an all round family medicine, used by thousands of men, women and children in every part of the Dominion. What is meant by "Protein" in flour?

"Protein" in food is the food element that makes bone, muscle and brain.

Pure flour contains more protein, in most useful form, than any other food—but the flour must be pure.

Bran and shorts are waste—if your flour contains this waste, it is proportionately short in "protein."

Now, if you buy an inferior, poorly milled flour, you are paying for bran and shorts, not "protein," and to that extent you are wasting money.

ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR is milled to make it the purest in the world: therefore it contains most protein, is most nourishing, is most economical to use.

It pays the housewife to insist upon getting "Royal Household" guaranteed flour, instead of taking a poorer flour which the grocer may be interested in selling

Oliver Herford, while exploring a remote part of New York, became very hungry. Entering a restaurant of doubtful appearance, he ordered a mutton chop. After waiting for some time the waiter appeared with a plate, on which was a potatoe and an overdone chop, very small, indeed with a long, slender rib attached. Putting this down before the famished artist, the waiter hurried off to attend to another customer. "See here," called Hereford, "I ordered a chop." "Yes sir," answered the man. "There it is." "Oh, beg your pardon, that's true," returned the artist, looking more closely, "I thought it was a crack in the plate."

Cucumbers and melons are "forbidden fruit" to many persons so constituted that the least indulgence is followed by attacks of cholera, dysentery, griping, etc. These persons are not aware that they can indulge to their heart's content if they have on hand a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, a medicine that will give immediate relief, and is a sure cure for all summer complaints.

Senator Gallinger was talking about certain shipping reforms that he has in mind. These reforms," he said, "would be made easily, would be made at once, were not human nature the same in shipping circles as it is all the world over. "By that I mean that the people in the wrong always think the other side is in the wrong. They are like a Concord woman whose son enlisted for the Spanish-American war. "Her son, a raw recruit, was naturally awkward at first. He was, in fact, the most awkward youth in his squad. Nevertheless, his mother regarding him as he marched away, amid music and waving flags, could hardly admire enough his military grace and skill. "'Oh,' she said, 'look, look! They're all out of step but our Jim!'"

To the Editor of The Times,

Dear Sir.

Whoever they may be that are drawing public money around here, for doing jobs on roads and bridges should take a tumble to themselves and wake up. That bridge at Mr. Ross's and Mr. Shark's leading to the Plume is in a disgraceful state. A horse requires a running jump to get upon it, it stands nearly two feet higher than the road bed, and the approaches are sand that lets the wheels sink up to the axle, in fact the road does not fit the bridge and teamsters come to grief there daily. This public works outfit should be fired. I think. Alberta has not the worst of things in this dividing deal of provinces. They certainly want Colonel Wyndham and Crusading Knights after them. Drive out Mr. Editor and look at this public works department disgracing the name of bridge.

The sale of Stair ranch and its division into farms is another reason for a traffic bridge over the Saskatchewan river at Medicine Hat. Stair is only 8 miles away, but it is on the other side of the river and everyday the bridge is delayed will increase the chance of a competing town at Stair. It will be years, of course, before "the town of Stair" would be much of a competing point, but the Stair property being so close we as a town should do everything to provide for farmers settling there to have easy access to this town. Then just beyond Stair will be the end of the big irrigation ditch by which the C. P. R. will water about 3,000,000 acres of land. The town of Medicine Hat should draw much trade from that district, and therefore we should have a traffic bridge.

A Manitoba weekly paper (to wit, the Neepawa Press), has been doing some straight talking and there is probably a good deal of truth in what the Press says. Here it is:

We often hear the boast that Neepawa is favorably situated and is surrounded by a better district, inhabited by more progressive farmers than Portage la Prairie or Brandon. Why is it, then, that Neepawa is not as big as either of those places? It may be owing, in a measure, to some outside influences, but it is primarily due to neglect of opportunities from within. Pessimism, prejudice, and politics are three stalwart impediments to the towns progress."

The cap appears to have fitted very well down at Portage la Prairie for here is what the Portage News said about it:

What the Press says is undoubtedly ly true and it is only lately since Portage has been rid of those evils that she has commenced to go ahead by leaps and bounds. There is no room for knockers here.

It is just possible the cap would fit well on the heads of some other western tows, but it is hard to say. The cap won't fit unless the people of the town say it does. Then the fit will be perfect. With a little effort it might even fit Medicine Hat. But we have the consolation of knowing that we are going ahead even if we are a warm political centre.

Certain bank clerks in a town not 100 miles from Medicine Hat must think we live in perilous times. They were all busy at work one day lately when the door opened and in walked a man with a gun. The faces behind the grilled work visibly blanched as the man with the gun Slowly passed along to the end of the counter where he stopped and said: "I want some money." The young man addressed said, but not without a quiver in his voice: "At the other end near the door." The man "turned in his tracks," and once more perambulated the floor, and when he turned his eagle eye on the teller, he said again: "I want some money." The teller with his hand on the revolver in the drawer, and his eye fixed on the stranger, said the boss was out and Billy C— came out and now tells a good story of how he scared the bank.

Mind your own business and leave the other fellow's business alone is a very good rule and one which tends to keep people out of trouble. The proprietor, manager or employee of a business who makes statements or even throws out hints about the rival concern will be caught sooner or later in the meshes and will suffer for it. The law protects a man's business because it is his livelihood and must not be damaged with impunity. The storekeeper who speaks disparagingly of his rival's goods is liable to punishment and properly so The law protects every man and every business and it is fortunate that it is so. Newspapers have, perhaps, less protection than any other business, because, no doubt, the law considers the newspaper quite able to take care of itself, but there is a case on record of a newspaper employe who was mulucted in heavy damages for reflecting upon the rival paper's circulation. Comparisons are always odious and when made for the purpose of hurting another man's business, as for instance to the other man's customer, the law very properly is ready to protect the one and deal out adequate punishment to the other.

FRANKS ZINC SMELTER.

CANADIAN METAL CO. MAKING ARRANGEMENTS FOR EARLY OPERATION.

Rapid progress is being made these days with the construction work at the zink smelter of the Canadian Metal Company at Frank. Already a part of the plant is in operation and at the rate the work is going ahead the prospects are that the time is not so far distant when a start will be made at the business of making zinc. Work on the buildings proper is about completed. Last week the big steel stack was hauled to the top of the hill and is ready to be set up. Altogether most satisfactory progress is being made.

Manager Fernau has completed negotiations whereby the Metal Company has secured the Pilot Bay smelter. It is understood the smelter will be used as an enriching plant for the concentration of the ores which will be treated here. Assistant Manager L. Crawford left Frank last week for Pilot Bay and will have charge of the smelter.

It is stated that Mr. Fernau has secured the Blue Bell mine at Pilot Bay. This will further insure an ample supply of zinciferous ore.

"Who will buy," asked an auctioneer, as he offered for sale a child's high chair.

Many faces in the crowd wore a smile, but in the back stood a woman whose sad face told a different story, for she could see again a little smiling face which always looked with loving eyes for her, and did she not remember the first night her husband brought home that chair for his own little son Frankie, and placed the little boy in the chair? But, oh! the change now, for the same loving husband was now a victim of drinking strong liquor, and to think that all must be sold just to keep him from going to prison!

One pay night in coming home they met him an old friend who had others with him they were hale-fellows-well-met. "Oh, come and have a treat for old friends sake," and from taking one glass it kept up to ten glasses of grog, and they hardly knew which was the old from the new. When on going home at midnight his wife found occasion to ask him what he meant by such conduct. Frankie had pleaded to wait for daddy and when he saw his father in such a drunken state had cried. The father was sick from his overdose of whisky and in his anger struck the little boy such a blow that his poor back was broken in the fall. He would live, the doctor said, but will be a cripple all his life. No wonder the poor mother looked sad, but just think that is the true story of a man who met an old friend and was treated to whisky till he was drunk and the court judgment was $50 and costs of court.

LIBERAL MEETING.

HON FRANK OLIVER AND HON. W. T. FINLAY DELIVER SPEECHES.

A public meeting was held in the Opera House on Wednesday evening to hear addresses from Hon. Frank Oliver, Minister of the Interior and Hon. W. T. Finlay, Minister of Agriculture for Alberta. There was a small attendance.

Mr. D. G. White was chairman and very briefly introduced "Hon. W. T. Finlay, Commissioner of Agriculture Alberta and the Liberal nominee in the approaching election."

Mr. Finlay's remarks on the school question were merely a statement of the case as it has existed during the past few years, but he never once quoted the clause of the Autonomy Bill under which the province is now governed and of course carefully abstained from any reference to the point raised by the Conservatives, namely, that to force any system of Education whatever upon the province is an invasion of Provincial rights. The Conservatives claim that the right of legislation for school purposes belongs to the provinces and to the provinces alone. On both these lines Mr. Finlay and Mr. Oliver were of course silent.

Mr. Oliver's speech bore such a strong resemblance to the Editorial which appeared in the 19th that people are asking if Mr. Oliver inspired the article or an advance proof of the article inspired Mr. Oliver.

Mr. Oliver quoted Mr. Roblin, Manitoba's premier as complaining that Alberta was getting much better terms than Manitoba. Mr. Roblin had said that whereas Manitoba's subsidy was only $400,000 while Alberta's was $800,000. Well, it should be remembered that Manitoba is a small garden patch even now compared with Alberta, but when the grant was fixed it extended west only as far as range 13 or thereabouts (now it extends to range 29) and government lands were then worth about $1 an acre and now it is worth$6. Even now Manitoba looks like a postage stamp on the map as compared with Alberta. In fact it is so small that some American ladies are reported to have exclaimed when they saw it first: "Oh look, what a cate little garden."

A point put forward by the Minister of the Interior in reference to the ordinance as to separate schools was that Mr. Haultain, as premier and Chairman of the Board of Education could, "by a stroke of the pen" have altered it all before the 1st Sept. last. The same expression occurred in the Free Press article. Well, that looks very easy, but many people are now asking what were the other members of the Legislative body doing, for the majority of them were avowed "National School men".

Hon. W. T. Finlay explained that he did not intend to have a meeting that night, but as the Minister of the Interior was coming through it was thought to be a good opportunity of hearing him and a meeting was called at very short notice. He (the speaker) was going to carry out the programme of the Liberal party adopted at the Calgary convention. He thought it was gratifying to the town of Medicine Hat that the leader of the Alberta Government had seen fit to call upon one of their number (himself) to act as a member of the Government of the Province of Alberta. He had lived here for 20 years and had always been ready to further any object for the advancement of the town.

It was largely on those grounds that he appealed for support. He came out on the ticket of the Liberal party but he asked their support largely on those grounds, namely the honor done the town in having a member of the Government here, as well as on party grounds at the coming elections. (Hear, hear). There were some very important points to come before the electors. One was

THE SCHOOL QUESTION.

A question which had been largely discussed not only in Medicine Hat but in other parts of the Territories it was a question he would like to put before them in as clear a light as possible. In 1875 there was a school law put in force in the North West Territories by the Dominion Act.

That school law established separate schools pure and simple, in some schools religion was taught and in some French was taught. That went on until the year 1902 when the Legislative Assembly brought in a School Ordinance which superseded the law passed by the Dominion Government and made separate schools in the present form.

In the Province of Alberta today there were 338 public schools. Out of these there were six separate schools. It might be asked what was the difference between a separate school and a public school. It was this.

In a district where there is a public school there can be asked for a separate school. It may be Protestant or it may be Roman Catholic. When that separate school is organised it is governed by the same laws as a public school, with only one exception and that is there is a primary book called the Dominion reader which may be used in Catholic schools. No religion whatever is taught in the separate school during school hours, and not until 3.30 either in a Protestant or a Roman Catholic school can one word of religion be carried out.

That was the separate school pure and simple.

If anyone told them anything else it was wrong. The text books are the same, the teachers have to pass the same examination and there is the same inspectorate. The inspector makes his report the same according to what he sees, so that there is no difference except as he had stated. Then there was the other matter of

THE LAND QUESTION.

He argued that there was a lot of difference between Alberta and the older provinces, and he supported the action of the Laurier Government on the Land Question. In any matters that would come under his department he would see that the ranchers got fair play. He would not cut down the farmers. In this part they hardly knew what farming meant. If they wanted to see what farming meant they must go up north. After enlarging upon this he said he would hold another meeting and invite Mr. Sissons to attend. (Applause.)

The Minister of the Interior spoke for about 45 minutes and dealt with the school and land questions.

At the conclusion the chairman called for three cheers for Mr. Finlay to which there was rather a feeble response.

Someone in the body of the hall called for three cheers for Sissons and three rousing cheers were given.

Radiant Womanhood.

The glory and satisfaction of beautiful womanhood can be known only to those possessing the unlimited advantages of health. No weak woman can be happy or enjoy half the pleasures of life. Pallid cheeks, sunken eyes, exhausted nerves, all tell of a terrible struggle to keep up. What the weak woman needs is Ferrozone; it renews, restores and vitalizes instantly—it's a "woman's remedy,"—that's why.

Ferrozone makes women strong, plump and healthful because it contains lots of nutriment, the kind that forms muscle, sinew, bone and nerve. Vitalizing blood courses through the body making delightful color, happy spirits, true womanly strength. Fifty cents buys a box of Ferrozone in any drug store.

DAN PATCH.

Ever since Mr. Savage brought Dan Patch to Minneapolis the people of Minnesota and horse lovers throughout the world have marvelled at his phenomenal exhibitions. When he went his mile in 1.59¼ many people were willing to say that the limit had been reached, but the words were hardly out of their mouths before Dan had gone a second faster. Two years ago Minnesota people caught their first glimpse of the champion pacer when he went a mile in two minutes flatat the state fair, and this year they were given the treat of seeing this grand horse beat this by nearly three seconds on the same track, Dan taking the mile in 1.57¼.

At this time Harry Hersey, Dan's driver stated openly that the horse was in the best condition of hiscareer. Mr. Hersey also said that Dan would beat his own record before the season of 1905 had passed and said that the horse would do it in such a manner that the world would know his performance was no scratch Mr. Savage, too, was confident that Dan would do greater wonders than ever, and the hopes of owner and driver were realized on the 14th of this month.

Even telegraphic reports of the great mile cannot exaggerate the wonder of Dan's performance. On a fast track the great pacer took the word quickly and at once went into his famous stride, reaching the first quarter in :29½, while the crowd of ten thousand Lexington enthusiasts began to cheer. To the half in :57½ they went and even veteran horsemen were awed, for Dan was going at a 1:55 clip and this meant a full second from the existing record of 1:56.

Along they went for another quarter at almost the same speed, and as horse and driver turned to the stretch the stands went wild, while the crowd begged Dan to keep up his gait. Hersey did not urge his charge in the least, for Hersey knows better than anyone else what Dan can do, and they finished with Dan going along as steadily as when he started, breathing easily and without turning a hair.

The greatest thing about Dan's performance is that he does the marvelous and almost impossible so easily. He strikes his gait and goes along without a whip or word, seeming to feel the trust and confidence that is placed in him. He always gives the best that is in him,and is without question the greatest harness horse the world has ever seen or will see for years to come.

CHAPTER XI.

IN June the days are longest. The sun, unwilling to remove its warm gaze from the verdant earth, rich in leafy foliage and gay with bright blossoms, roses hanging full and red, distilling with the honeysuckle sweet odors on the soft air, withdraws its last rays lingeringly, reluctant to give place to gray and somber twilight, that ever stealthily and surely comes following in its wake, bringing the boon to all mankind of a restful hour after the heat and turmoil of a working day.

It was on such an evening that Simon Kempster, having taken the road to the village—the long and less frequented one that ran past the Taunston farmhouse—arrived late at the customary lounging place of the villagers, the Sign of the Red Heart, to find the seat he usually occupied in his favorite corner under the small open window taken by Josiah Taunston, who, pale faced and taciturn, sat there grimly holding his tankard of ale in his hand. To Simon's cheerful greeting he returned a solemn nod, and so occupied was he with his own thoughts that he appeared not to notice or hear the talk of those about him.

On the steps at the door, also in the hallway, groups of idlers stood about, idly discussing the affairs of the village and watching with curious interest the movements of the latest arrival, a French peddler, who, dressed in a tawdry suit of purple velveteen trimmed profusely with tarnished brass ornaments, huge rings suspended from his ears and high russet leather boots, broken and bursting at the soles, was eating supper greedily. Hardly finishing the last morsel, he sprang from his seat, eager to catch the attention of possible purchasers before the darkness set in and they would depart for their homes.

"I give thee greeting, good sirs," he cried as he pulled a heavy cotton bag from under the table and, falling on the floor in the center of the room, opened it to display his wares, eagerly calling on those present to buy.

"Look, kind sirs and pretty gentlemen," he cried in a shrill, wheedling voice, holding up for their gaze a box of plain gold rings. "Surely some one here about hath marriage on his mind, and where can he buy the wedding circlet cheaper? Solid gold and only 10 shillings! Buy, buy! Who will buy?"

His keen glance, searching about the room, fell on Josiah Taunston, who was regarding the peddler's endeavors coldly, a sneer on his face. The fellow quickly gave him his back, so as not to waste even another glance on such an unpromising customer, when he spied Simon Kempster, red faced and conscious, edging near to him.

"What wilt thou, m'sieur—a marriage circlet? By our lady, with thy yellow locks and sturdy limbs I wot thou'd make a bonny bridegroom!"

The idlers about tittered, nudging each other with sly winks, and Simon to cover his confusion fell on his knees on the floor, making a show of examining some trinkets that were in a chamois skin bag.

"'Twere fool's work, Simon, to buy the ring unless thou hast thy sweetheart's sure promise," young Hugh Haggott called from his place near the door.

The wary peddler thought to try another tack. Fumbling among his wares, he soon produced a handful of silver heart shapes strung on fine chains, and, selecting one, he dangled it enticingly before Simon's eyes.

"Happen thou and thy maid have quarreled," he observed, "an' thou would carry one of these to her for a peace gift. 'Twould bring thee luck in thy courting," he added persuasively as he saw a gleam of desire for the gewgaws in Kempster's eyes. "Oh, rare luck, m'sieur, I do promise thee, and only 4 shillings! Half the price I paid for them in the principal mart in Paris!"

Forcing the chain into Simon's hands as if it were a settled fact that he had purchased it, the vender turned his attention to the securing of other customers.

"Silver hearts!" he cried lustily. "Sure harbingers of good luck and a successful wooing! Cheap at 4 shillings! Contains a charm which will cause the most trifling or stubborn maid to o'ercome her scruples and name the wedding day."

In those early days, at that time of superstition and a firm belief in signs and magic, the word charm had a strong attraction. Men loitering about the door drew closer to the man displaying his wares and regarded the silver hearts with interest. Simon delved into his pocket and brought out the 4 shillings.

"I' truth, I ha' not much faith in what thou doth say of the charm," he said, rising awkwardly, with a hot flush on his face, "but as 'tis a pretty trinket I will take one of thee."

"Now who's next?" cried the peddler. "Is this the only gentleman who is to speed well on his wooing?"

He wheeled around suddenly, and, his glance falling again on Josiah Taunston, who was now looking on with much interest, he cried, with an appearance of sympathy: "Solemn visaged sir, mayhap thy sadness is due to the caprice of thy sweetheart. If 'tis so, carry her one of these, and thy troubles are ended. I warrant thee she is thine in less than a fortnight. Diable! These charms have never failed!"

Taunston put down his tankard and lounged over to the man, assuming an appearance of indifference as he handled the trinket.

"And hast had proof of the value of the charm these contain?" he asked in a low, stern tone.

"Aye, marry," cried the vender, "many more than I can tell. I am known from one end of the country to the other by all languishing lovers! Why, fair sir," with convincing honesty of tone and manner, "the nobles buy of me, and I have even been admitted at the court. My love charms are world famed! Step up, m'sieurs, only 4 shillings!" he called.

"By the mass! I had a sure proof of their value within the month," he continued, addressing Josiah, but speaking in a loud voice so that all might hear. "At Sterndorf, over the mountain, I was delayed by the storm and had a room in the tavern there next to a gallant gentleman, an English noble, holding high rank at the French court and in high favor with the king, who had missed his way and lay there ill of a pest. All through the hours of his fever and pain he moaned sorely for his ladylove, who, he lamented, was pining for his presence and whom he feared he would ne'er see again. I sold him one of these heart shapes, an', m'sieurs," the peddler announced triumphantly, holding them high aloft in his hand, "that day the storm abated, the next he began to mend, and ere many days he fared forth on his journey. And the first thing I saw as I approached your village, good sirs, was this same gallant riding by the side of a most beauteous lady, both merry an' the light of happy love shining in their eyes. Standing by the wayside, I pulled my hat off to the ground at their approach, an' Sir Godfrey La Fabienne"—he said the name proudly—"with kind civility doffed his hat in return an' gave me pleasant greeting.

"'With all respect and reverence, my lord,' quoth I, 'the love charm hath worked?'

"The lady blushed, and my lord threw me a gold piece.

"'Thou chargest not enough for thy valuable wares, good fellow,' he quoth, 'so I will further compensate thee.'

"An' they rode away close together, laughing gently, and so great was the love and happiness on their faces that I watched them with tears in mine eyes until they entered the forest."

Josiah Taunston, who during this recital had grown pale to the lips, with trembling hands clutched the heart shapes tighter.

"Who'll buy, m'sieurs! Love's magic! Whoe'er buys a heart perforce must soon buy a circlet!" the peddler cried, not seeing his companion's agitation.

"Hast any charm that contains evil?" Josiah said in a voice so low that he almost whispered.

The peddler regarded him curiously.

"Surely," he thought, "that sour visaged wight needs not evil charms. The devil is close enough to him already."

But he answered suavely: "It doth happen that I have small call for those. Most folks are afear of them. Once I had a box of crosses that were said to be possessed of the devil, but they brought me much sickness, sorrow and bad luck, so I soon got rid of them. Gentlemen, step up! Surely there's not only one among ye sweethearting! Who'll buy my wares?" he called out.

"Those crosses, man!" Josiah interposed impatiently. "Wert of gold? Where soldst thou them?"

"Aye, of pure gold. Only the nobility bought them," he replied proudly. "'Twas in Paris I sold them. Ah, good sir," to a timid young Puritan who had approached, "an thou wilt take a golden circlet thou canst have it for 8 shillings. Cheap, dirt cheap, but I am much in need of money."

But the man, shaking his head as if the price were too much, walked away.

"Master, wouldst thou like a silver cross? Diable! There is not much good luck in them!" the vender continued, turning toward Josiah again. But, to his surprise, the man's place was empty, for Taunston, unnoticed by the throng of bystanders that was interested in the peddler and his wares, with glistening triumphant eyes had passed through the doorway and gone out into the night.

CHAPTER XII.

AT about this time Hetty Taunston, having finished her evening task of washing the supper dishes and putting the kitchen in order, sat idly on a little bench beside the doorway of her home. Some pink roses hanging on a bush near at hand attracted her attention. Reaching over, she plucked a handful, then, after bending an ear in the direction her mother had taken to visit a neighbor to assure herself that she was not returning, arranged the blossom coquettishly in the prim little knot of hair wound tightly at the back of her head, saying softly: "When I hear her coming I'll throw them out. Happen she'll not stay long now darkness hath fallen."

Sounds of approaching footsteps crunching the earth heavily fell on her ears, causing the girl to put her hand to her head guiltily. Then as a merry whistle broke out on the evening air she sank back with an appearance of relief, leaving the roses untouched.

"Pah! 'Tis Simon!" she exclaimed. "I might ha' known the sound of his clumsy footfalls! Lord knows I ha' heard them often enough. The callant's forever a-passing!"

Presently Kempster reached the garden gate, paused and, peering through the gloom, saw the glimmer of a white kerchief.

"Hetty, is't thou?" he said as he came toward her.

"Yea, Simon, who else but dreary me, pining all alone?" she said, rising, with an affected sigh. "Wilt enter? The air is chill."

Stepping into the kitchen, she lighted a candle that stood in readiness on a small table and, setting two chairs near the doorway, motioned to her visitor, who stood hesitatingly at the threshold, to be seated and took the other one herself.

"Those pink roses become thee, Hetty," Simon ventured to remark, regarding the young woman affectionately, his eyes glistening with admiration of her fresh beauty.

Under the warmth of his glance Hetty flushed slightly. "Mother would be angered an she saw them," she said.

For a time a silence fell between them, both looking out of doors at the peaceful night.

Then Simon observed: "At home now when I sit before the door alone o' nights I look at my bushes hanging full of rose blossoms and think how a woman about the house could make good use o' them to beautify herself. As 'tis," with a sentimental sigh and a nervous wriggle, "they wither and die away, the petals blown hither and thither by the wind."

Under the glimmer of the candle his round face wore a pensive expression.

Hetty tossed her head as if she did not understand either look or meaning, exclaiming with disinterested friendliness: "There's Sarah Ann Dugaine, Simon. She maketh her boasts on her love for flowers. Happen thou could get her to wear thy blossoms."

Kempster shook his head.

"I' truth, my mind dwelt not on good Sarah," he said, sighing again. "Nay, Hetty, 'tis thoughts o' some one else that doth disturb my peace—a little black eyed maid as pretty and as graceful as—as"—

Hetty, who had been listening to his words with an alert, suspicious look on her face, grew quite fidgety as she saw him mentally casting about for a suitable comparison.

"Now, Simon, thou hadst best be careful!" she cried hastily in a voice of warning.

At her words the enthusiasm on Kempster's countenance faded away. "I was but thinking on my little young heifer, Hetty, so lost the run o' my words," he concluded lamely.

"There, I knew it!" she exclaimed angrily. "Thou wast going to compare me to thy heifer!"

She sprang from her seat and, hastily pulling in the window casement, said sharply, with no desire to conceal her pettishness: "If thou hast no better talk than that, forsooth, thou'd better be on thy way, Simon. A body 'd love to look like an old cow!" she wound up sarcastically.

To Simon, who saw beauty in everything connected with his snug little farm, Hetty's dislike to his gentle flat terles was always a mystery to him, so he scratched his forehead nervously, knowing that he had offended again unwittingly and wishing from his heart that he had not come, when the reason of his visit occurred to him. Approaching his companion, he thrust his hands awkwardly into his breeches pocket and, pulling out a little packet, handed it to her.

"'Tis a trinket for thee, Hetty." A hot flush was on his face. "There wast a peddler at the Sign of the Red Heart a-selling them, and when I saw the gewgaws I thought at once on thee. Thou'rt so fond of trinkets, Hetty."

Had he succeeded in pleasing her this time? Simon's heart beat rapidly, and he could scarcely breathe with suspense as she slowly undid the wrapping, picked up the chain and hung it on the end of her finger, a dazed expression in her eyes; then she laughed a low, trilling, happy laugh.

"Thou didst buy it for me, Simon?"

"For thee, sweet Hetty."

The honest fellow's voice trembled with feeling, and tears of delight sprang to his eyes at sight of her pleasure. "'Tis a good luck charm for lovers, they say."

"Ha' done, Simon!"

Hetty, dangling the chain and heart before the light of the candle, blushed furiously. "Must do foolish things like spending thy money for trinkets for a cross patch maid who e'er finds fault with thee wi'out adding on thy silly nonsense!"

"Wilt wear it, Hetty?" he whispered, coming nearer.

"Aye, gladly, Simon!" she cried, delighted with the gift, then, undoing the clasp and putting the chain about her white throat, said: "Could—couldst thou fasten it, Simon? My fingers are all thumbs, an' I'm all a-fluster with surprise."

He sprang to her assistance, taking the ends of the chain from her small hands.

"Ah, lackaday," she continued in a lower voice, "I must wear it 'neath my kerchief, I ween, as mother is so wrathful at a body's wearing a gewgaw. She says they are implements of the devil to make maids vain and worldly. Shame, Simon! Thou needst not pinch my neck with thy clumsy manners. Hist! 'Tis mother!"

They sprang apart. Hetty sank into a chair, hastily covering up the chain and pendant, and Simon, bending over an open Bible, turned over the pages slowly, as if intent on looking for a certain verse.

Mrs. Taunston entered, closing the door after her. "Good even, Simon Kempster. The night air groweth chill."

"A fair greeting, good mistress."

Simon pushed a chair toward her. "Yestermorn Josiah told me that some of thy lambs were ill, and I did but stop in to see if they were better of the malady."

The dame seated herself gloomily.

"Ah, woe is me!" she sighed. "All's adversity and trouble! Two more sheep lay down with the disease tonight. But, worse than that, Josiah, my good son, who hath ever had a hearty appetite, for the past fortnight almost refuseth food."

"What doth ail Josiah?" Simon asked with interest.

"No one can say," she answered, "but methinks 'tis the sight of so much wicked vanity and worldly display that our cousin hath seen fit to bring into this hitherto reverent village that hath upset Josiah. Ah, lackaday, such scenes as we perforce must witness! Why, just tonight in going to the village I took the short path through the Mayland farm, and there before the door sat this papist lover of Margaret in a suit of lavender satin trimmed with gilt needlework, stringing a lute, and she, standing by with her hand on his shoulder, was humming the air of some French song. Both were so intent upon their wicked music that they did not even see me, Margaret's aunt. Such a sight sickened me, and I lamented my slothfulness in taking the short way. To be a constant eyewitness of such foolishness, as perforce Josiah is, can ne'er help grieving him. Prithee, a pious, God fearing man, as he is well known to be, feels a responsibility for his cousin's soul and resents her cool and brazen determination to go her evil way."

"Nay, good dame," Simon ventured to reassure her, "thou must ha' no fears for the loss of Mistress Mayland's soul, for I warrant thee that the spirit that must dwell in such a beautiful body could ne'er find else but a place in heaven."

"There, that is the way wi' the men," cried the woman angrily—"ever seeing outward signs, which are devil's snares, and attributing them to the work of the good Lord!"

Her eyes, glaring around wrathfully, chanced to catch a glimpse of the roses dangling from Hetty's little knot of black hair, which that maid in her pleasure at Simon's gift had entirely forgotten to remove. Her mother was at her side in an instant, tore the flowers out, threw them on the floor and stamped on them.

"Couldst thou fasten it, Simon?"

"Thou vain, wicked, empty head!" she cried shrilly. "Thy only thought to lay snares for the senses o' men, forgetting thy father in heaven! Thou'd like to copy the wanton ways of thy cousin, wouldst thou, so that thy good brother could have more cause for grieving an' be kept longer at his prayers?"

Hetty, who was really terrified at her mother's anger, began to weep gently. Mistress Taunston strutted to the large cupboard at the other end of the room to hang up her bonnet, and Simon, troubled beyond expression at the sight of Hetty's tears, contrived to slip a crumpled piece of paper into her hand, whispering quickly: "Happen this will comfort thee, sweet. I writ it at the tallow chandler's on my way up here. 'Tis good verse, Hetty, and of marvelous rhyme. Fare thee well, sweet."

Then, taking up his hat, he strode to the door, calling his adieus loudly to the older woman, who answered in a muffled voice from the interior of the cupboard.

Once safely in her room, Hetty drew the wooden bolt across the door and, sitting down before the piece of glass that constituted her mirror, removed her kerchief and with sparkling eyes looked at her white throat encircled by the silver chain.

"If mother e'er sees it she will burn it," she whispered, looking toward the door to make sure she had secured it against intruders. "Now for Simon's missive. For all he loves his farm, methinks he is not entirely lacking in sentiment. Mayhap 'tis a love verse."

Undoing the crumpled piece of paper, Hetty deciphered the writing with great difficulty:

To swete Hetty I fane
Would bring a chane,
With a love charm of a hart
That will never—no, never—let us part.

Hetty walked to the window and lifted her flushed, pleased face to the calm star lit sky.

"Methought never to have liked that clumsy Simon so well," she whispered. "His comparisons were e'er so homely I much misliked him, but now that he can write such love verses I ween that he is not without good parts."

CHAPTER XIII.

THE next morning the sun rose red and hot above the hills. Not a breath of air stirred, and a close sultriness pervaded the atmosphere. Laborers going to their work mopped their brows and looked anxiously at the clear, deep blue arch of the heavens for a glimpse of a cloud that might perchance grow larger as the day advanced and spread itself before the burning sun, but above the horizon not a speck of white could the eye discover.

Josiah Taunston, his homespun shirt of linen thrown open at the neck and his broad brimmed hat pulled down over his eyes, came through the woods with quick strides, his feet crunching down the dry twigs with a crackling sound as he walked. A young robin, having injured its wing in falling out of the nest, fluttered and chirped in his path, and the mother bird, frantic, called sharp, shrill instructions from a tree near by. With an imprecation Josiah kicked the maimed bird out of his path, killing it, and strode on without even a backward look. Nor did he appear to see the mother bird, who in her pain and anguish swooped up and down wildly in all directions, or to hear her shrieks of agonizing sorrow.

Matters of importance having taken up his time, it was late in the day, almost at the hour of noon, when Taunston, homeward bound, reached the spring brook that ran by the door of old Adam Browdie, the goldsmith. Removing his hat and wiping the beads of perspiration from his heated face, he knelt upon the bank and, making a receptacle of the hollow of his hand, proceeded to quench his thirst. The goldsmith, having observed him from the window, hastened toward him with a pewter mug.

"Good morrow, Master Taunston. Happen thou'lt not get enough in thy hand," he said. "Hot days make dry throat—"

"Thank thee, Adam."

Taking the mug, Josiah filled it and raised it to his lips, draining the last drop.

"I had a tankard of ale at the tavern, but that papist of a Frenchman, who doth intrude himself here a-dangling after my cousin, Margaret Mayland, with an eye, I trow, to the possession of her estate, lounged about the rooms with such an air of insolent effrontery, walked past me once or twice so close he fairly trod upon my toes, acting, forsooth, as if he desired me to take open offense at his bad manners, clanked his sword and appeared so anxious for all to admire his suit of gaudy finery that I was a'most vomited with disgust, and man, I could scarce get breath until I had put a distance between us."

The goldsmith, evidently busy, had resumed his seat on his bench and was followed closely by Taunston, who now on the subject of his favorite grievance was not inclined to go on his way until he had unbosomed himself to his neighbor; so, taking a lounging position in the doorway, he prepared to go on with a recital of his wrongs when suddenly he made a sharp exclamation, his glance having fallen on a finely wrought chain of gold from which was suspended a small cross that was being forged together by the skillful hands of the goldsmith.

Adam raised his eyes to his visitor's face in surprise. "Hath pain, Josiah?"

"Nay," he answered sternly, "but anguish for thee, Adam, that thou in thine ignorance hath been induced to handle a charm of evil magic such as thou holdst in thy hands."

"This necklet evil?"

The goldsmith, having completed his task, held up the chain in bewilderment.

"This? Why, 'tis the property of thy beauteous cousin, Mistress Mayland," he answered, "who left it with me more than a fortnight since; but, mine arm being stiff with a sprain I received the day it came, I had ne'er a chance before to mend it."

"Ha, ha!" Taunston laughed discordantly. "I' truth, 'tis no wonder thou hast sprains," he said, with deep significance, "when thou doth keep such devil's implements about thee. Thou'lt have worse than sprains an thou takest not more care, good neighbor."

At the ominous words and manner of his visitor the goldsmith's face paled, and his jaw dropped as he stared at him, aghast. Almost unconsciously he laid the chain down.

"What meanst thou?"

Josiah shook his head sadly and let his long face grow longer as he said: "Oft and many a time have I reasoned with Margaret Mayland against the wearing of that idolatrous emblem, urging her that it would do her harm, but she, ever o'er headstrong, would not heed me, which fact I much deplore. My mother, a woman widely known for her wisdom, asserteth that from the day our cousin brought that cross among us we have been sorely beset with misfortunes. First the drought. We have ne'er had rain since the big storm. How can planted seed grow? And then the disease among the sheep. Our lambs most all ha' died. Ah, lackaday, 'tis a great loss to a hardworking, saving man!"

He sighed drearily.

"An', Adam, I repeat it, woe to us all the day that accurst cross was brought to this village!"

The goldsmith, possessing even more than the customary large amount of superstition held by his neighbors, glanced fearfully about him, moving farther along the bench from the cross and chain, and Josiah, seeing the impression he was making, continued with solemn emphasis:

"But, mind ye, we would not ha' given blame to our cousin's headstrong persistency so readily had I not held converse with a French peddler, a dealer in magic charms, who told me on his oath that crosses of gold were known among men o' his trade to be possessed of devils and to bring harm to all who touched them."

So great was the superstition of that period, so firm the belief in charms, black art and magic, that the goldsmith, almost overcome by the knowledge of his danger, fairly trembled with apprehension.

"Lord, ha' mercy! I'll—I'll send the wicked gewgaw home by Christopher," he said, "an he comes in from the weeding."

After an interchange of a few more words Josiah proceeded on his way, and old Adam was left alone in his room, that was half kitchen, half workshop. At first he walked about nervously, casting timid glances at the golden trinket on the bench, now glittering in the warm embrace of a sunbeam that had fallen on it; then, as if forcing himself to sudden and brave determination, he stood erect, found a piece of paper, laid it on the bench and procured a pair of tongs, with which he lifted the chain and cross, placing them upon it. His hands trembled. Adam's face was white and his breath came in gasps as, barely touching the edges of the wrapping, he hastily made it into a small parcel.

"I'll send the wicked gewgaw home by Christopher."

"Other pains I ha' had!" he muttered. "An' all the while I was thinking that my lumbago came from cold! Ah, woe, woe! Such evil days as we ha' fallen on! Good Lord, ha' mercy, I pray, an' keep us safe."

Some men appear to think that big words constitute an unanswerable argument.

Mothers who have suffered the misery of restless nights at teething time, and watched their babies in the unhelped agony of that period, will welcome the safe and certain relief, that Baby's Own Tablets bring. Mrs. W. G. Mundle, Yorkton, N.W.T., says: "When my little one was cutting her teeth she suffered a great deal. Her gums were swollen and inflamed, and she was cross and restless. I got a box of Baby's Own Tablets, and after starting their use she began to improve at once, and her teeth came through almost painlessly. The Tablets are truly baby's friend." This medicine is guaranteed to contain no poisonous opiate or harmful drug. It cures all the minor ailments of little ones and may safely be given to a new born child. Full directions with every box. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail at 25c a box by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Adventures of a Bank Note.

A lady passing down the Rue Richelieu had the misfortune to lose a pocketbook containing, among other valuables, a 1,000 franc note. The pocketbook was picked up by a chair mender named Renaud, who lives at Montreux. He placed it very carefully in his pocket and proceeded home. It is not often that a chair mender has occasion to change a note for that amount, and Renaud, recognizing the impossibility of turning it into gold without detection, agreed with a friend to do the business for the consideration of 100 francs. This friend, Lucien Mathern, also a chair mender, was in his turn filled with apprehension. The difficulty was solved with the aid of a horticulturist named Simonnet, who kindly consented to buy himself a horse for 300 francs and return the change. Renaud was thus richer by 600 francs. All might then have gone well if, two days later, it had not been discovered that the horse had been stolen from a dealer at Meaux. This led to the arrest of the trio, and later in the day the police put their hands on the horse thieves.—Paris Messenger.

A Dark Dungeon.

About the middle of February, 1862, while in winter quarters, General Naglee of Pennsylvania, who was a strict disciplinarian, was in command of the First brigade, of which the Second New Hampshire was a part. He thought the guardhouse of the Second regiment too comfortable quarters for prisoners and ordered Colonel Marston, who later won fame as a soldier, lawyer and statesman, to build a dungeon without so much as a crack or opening anywhere, so that it should be perfectly dark. The dungeon was built with four solid walls, and one day General Naglee came over to inspect it. He was accompanied by Colonel Marston. "Where is the entrance," said the general, "and how do you get anybody into it?" "Oh," said Colonel Marston, "that is not my lookout. I simply obeyed your orders."

Alarmists have been looking for the man on horseback for a long while, but perhaps when he comes it will be in an auto.

Hard to Part.

'Tis hard to part with some dear friend;
A pang the parting word will send.
'Tis hard to leave your happy home
In far and distant climes to roam.
'Tis hard to part with ready cash,
Though rated by the experts trash.
'Tis hard to leave a swell repast
Before the final course is passed.
But it is harder far, in truth,
To part with one well rooted tooth.

Ill Suited Her.

PROGRESSIVE JOY.

Wife away.
First day.
Gee,
But it's jolly to be free!
Goodby repose;
Everything goes.
We'll paint the town red
And not go to bed.
Say, but it's sport
Not to have to report!

Second day.
Hip hooray!
Quite
A head I had last night,
But the fun
Has just begun.
Feel just like a freckled kid;
Ought to see me raise the lid.
Am I wild?
Watch me, child.

Third day.
Oh, say,
Where
Are all the duds I want to wear?
I have hunted low and high
For that blasted measly tie.
Guess I'll stay at home tonight;
Have a letter I must write.
Getting kind o' lonely now
Without any little frau.

One week.
Yes, I'm meek
And long
Suffering. No, that's not too strong,
But, egad, I'd like to know
Why a woman has to go
Chasing all about the state
Leaving hubby to his fate.
Say, it don't look hardly fair,
But she doesn't seem to care!

"Not much. He is liable to try to touch me for $10 before I can get away."

More Appropriate.

"It should have been a calfskin."

All Her Way.

She was a girl of common sense;
Besides, her cooking was immense.
She was good looking, never cross;
Her pa was rich; she was his boss.
So you might guess it was no trick
For that dear girl to take her pick.

One Strong Point.

"Yes, he is still alive."

MASON & RISCH

THE PIANO WITH A SOUL

Mason & Risch Pianos are famous for that peculiar carrying power known as the singing tone. Not all tones classed as musical are music unalloyed. There are certain qualities of tone that are strangely diffusive. They carry far and retain their singing character where other tones become indistinct or even lost. A sheet of gold leaf, thinner than the thinnest tissue, will completely block the powerful rays of the strongest searchlight, while the X-rays, merely glowing with a faint light, will penetrate an inch of solid steel." So it is with music: some tones are diffusive and carry, others become more or less absorbed in space. The tone that "carries" the singing tone, is due to perfection of finish and perfect vibratory equilibrium of all the tone producing parts of a piano. It is always a tone of the utmost sweetness and purity. The Mason & Risch Piano is full of "sing" being especially fine in its blendings of the human voice, which it rounds out and sustains in a happy union of melody and harmony. Our literature explains the many points of superiority of the Mason & Risch piano—the piano with a soul. Send for it to-day.

THIEVES PETTY AND STUPID

Modern Invention Has Driven Out the Crafty Kind.

"The people who nowadays give the detectives most trouble are the members of that vast horde of petty thieves, both white and black, that infest every great city," said one of the most efficient detectives of the Washington department. "The days of mammoth burglaries, diamond robberies and brilliant thieving operations have passed, perhaps never to return, and instead of the really shrewd, calculating and bold thief of half a century ago we have today a mob of petty pilferers, who are far from possessing one-tenth part of the brains and wit of the old time thief, but manage nevertheless to give the police a vast deal of trouble.

"The progress of invention has put the shrewd thief and burglar out of business. Say, for example, a man steals several thousand dollars. Very well. The moment he does so he realizes that in order to retain his ill gotten gains he must leave the scene of the crime, realizing that he is in nowise prepared to cope with modern detective and police methods. Probably before he leaves the city telegrams and telephone messages have preceded him to the cities of the United States and Canada, and he is nabbed the moment he reaches his destination. But supposing that he escapes all these traps and reaches some foreign country—why, he is simply in as bad a plight there as he was before leaving home. Nowadays there is hardly a government or country with which the United States has not entered into an understanding whereby criminals are caught and returned, and what few and far distant states with which our government has failed to draw up any such arrangement can be very easily managed in case Uncle Sam wants to get any of his missing children back.

"The result is that no really bright or shrewd person would think of undertaking a job of burglary or stealing in this age. None but the desperately poor, the degenerates, morphine users, the submerged tenth, so to speak, nowadays practice stealing. They are too stupid to realize the danger of such a course and plunge headlong into a career that must sooner or later land them behind the bars."—Washington Post.

The Potato Planter.

The potato planter of today would make a farmer of a generation or so ago sit up and rub his eyes. It requires that the potatoes be supplied, but will do all the rest of its own initiative. It picks the potato up and looks it over, or seems to, cuts it into halves, quarters or any desired number of parts, separates the eyes and removes the seed ends. It plants whole potatoes or parts thereof as desired as near together or as far apart as the judgment of the farmer on the driving seat suggests. Having dropped the seed it covers it, fertilizes it, tucks it in like a child put to bed and paces off the next row with mathematical accuracy.

The Oldest Libraries.

The oldest libraries of which we have any certain knowledge are those brought to light by excavations among the ruins of the east. Among these are the Babylonish books inscribed on clay tablets, supposed to have been prepared for public instruction about 650 B. C. It is said by Aristotle that Strabo was the first known collector of books and manuscripts. This was about the year 330 B. C.

Our Common Woe.

"Beg pardon, sir," remarked the man who was hanging to strap No. 1, "but do you get off at the next corner?"

"I don't see that it is any of your business," replied his fussy neighbor.

"Well, no," admitted the mild gentleman, "but I was merely going to remark that I get off there and if you will be so kind as to lift I'd like to take that foot with me!".

The Artist.

An Odd Advertisement.

The sudden popularity some years ago of Mr. Shorthouse's book, "John Inglesant," is attributed to an odd incident. "Mr. Gladstone," says the London Express, "was sitting to a photographer and holding in his hand a copy of 'John Inglesant.' The gold lettering on the cover caught the light, and the title showed clearly in the photograph. The likeness of the great statesman proved a very popular one, and its circulation broadcast over the country led to a widespread demand for the book."

"How so?"

"Why, he was egotistical enough to think they were nodding approval at what he said."

Tame Trout.

An English gentleman had some trout in a piece of water close to his front door. On one occasion he held a worm near the surface of the water. A large trout jumped at the worm and, seizing hold of his fingers, cut them to the bone with its teeth by its own weight.

Josian's thin lips worked.

"Mine answer, Margaret Mayland," he interposed harshly, unable longer to endure the suspense; "cease thy woman's palaver and say me yea or nay."

"Thine answer!" She laughed a light laugh of contempt. "Here it is. I say it plainly so that thou'lt understand it and so forever cease thine importunities. Josiah Taunston, I will not marry thee. Rather would I throw my body over the crag of yonder precipice and let the carrion feed on it. Now let me go my way!"

CHAPTER IX.

A COLOR, ashen gray, spread over Taunston's face, white foam came on his lips, and, removing his hat, he mopped his forehead with his handkerchief. For the moment he was stunned with disappointment and anger, so much so that he did not appear to hear Margaret's second imperative command to give way to her, and stood looking at her dumbly. A woman to scorn him! Since Taunston's majority in all the counsels of the village his voice had ever been heard the loudest, carrying conviction with it. The people heeded him; he was a leader, and in his own family the women obeyed his sternest orders without question or even hesitation. In consequence as he had commanded all about him for so many years he knew no other way of attaining his desires, so he thought now to conquer this woman, the first to rise in his path to block it, by his usual harsh methods of procedure.

"Before I leave this place tonight thou'lt unsay those words or I shall force them from thee!" he said in a choked voice, endeavoring to suppress his passion.

"Stay!" he exclaimed.

Margaret laughed scornfully.

"Force!" she exclaimed, lifting her skirts preparatory to moving away in the opposite direction. "Thou'st established a poor rule to win a woman, good cousin."

She stood before him, maddening in her fearlessness, her contempt of him and her beauty. With his heart full of baffled hope and despair at seeing failure close at hand, to control his desire to swing upon her and by sheer physical strength compel her to promise to marry him he dug his nails into his clinched hands until he almost forced the blood.

Not understanding his strong and passionate nature or indifferent to his suffering, Margaret continued lightly: "Thou'st ever been so generous with thine advice to me, Josiah, that before I go I'll give thee, forsooth, some small counsel in return. Learn, then, that, while force may be successful in driving men and animals, fair words, a gallant bearing and loving attentions are shafts that soonest reach a woman's heart."

She moved away.

Josiah sprang toward her, laying a strong, detaining hand on her arm.

"Stay!" he exclaimed. "I would speak further. Dost think I heed thy foolish counsel? 'Tis time thou knew, cousin, that God made woman to serve man, to recognize his better judgment in thankfulness and to bow her head in submission to his will. As thou hadst thy way, Margaret, the world would be ruled by distaffs, an' all would come to ruin."

In the dull hopelessness that took possession of him at the sight of the detestation now openly expressed on her pale face his voice grew less harsh and his manner slightly entreating as he said, "Mayhap my ways are not so soft and squeamish as those of the wicked worldly men, at heart blackguards, that thou hath met abroad, but thou would find me true, Margaret, and just, and under my direction thou would soon see the value of my ways and follow the good example I would ever seek to set for thee."

"I want none of thee nor thine examples!" Margaret cried angrily. "And thou must cease thy persecutions! Know now for once and for all that I much mislike thee, that I loathe and hate thee, and that I hope our paths will never cross again!"

"An' thou hast no gratitude, woman, for my service on thine estate, for its present value on account of mine endeavors?"

"Thou hast had the yearly stipend that thou did agree was sufficient," she replied. "Now an' for the last time, let me pass."

Seeing the expression of strength and resolution on her face and her manner so disdainful of him, Josiah sickened as a realization of his absolute inability to control this woman came over him. Almost crazed with despair, he spoke furiously, hardly knowing what he said.

"Hear me once more, an' then thou canst go the downward path thou hast chosen unmolested. The honest purpose of an upright man is as a stench in thy nostrils because, wanton, thou lovest the wicked ways of thy French lover!"

Her blue eyes grew black, then fairly blazed. "Take care!" she said.

Josiah, unheeding, went on sneeringly, all the pent up hatred and jealousy in his heart coming out of his white lips in taunting phrases.

"Thy French lover, whose sweet enticing ways and gallant bearing thou doth so much admire—he that was to follow thee anon, to press his suit, wed thee an' live restfully on thine estate, spending thy gold for his pleasure until he died—why cometh he not? Whose arms intwine about him, keeping him away?"

"I warn thee to take care!" Margaret cried in deep anger.

"Where is thy truant lover? Soft hearted fool! Dost think he e'er fared forth from Lunnon up these hills to see thee once his eyes fell on the beauty o' the maids of that gay city? It angers me to see thee, my cousin, standing there a deceived woman, defending to an honest man the name of a poltroon, a blackguard and a libertine!"

With a quick motion she raised her hand and gave him a stinging slap across the face. He looked at her for an instant, not comprehending what had happened, with open mouth and staring eyes. Then as a realization of what she had done swept over him blood so angry flew to his head that it maddened him. Springing toward her, he caught her in his arms in a close embrace.

"Thou'lt kiss me where thou struck me," he cried with wild passion, "or else I'll kill thee!"

She rocked and swayed in his embrace.

"Josiah, I loathe thee! Let me go!"

"Then," he said, with gloating in his voice, "if e'er thy gallant courtier lover happen doth give thee thought enough to ride this way I'll make my boasts on thee! So kiss me, wanton, if not for love then for thy life!"

She felt his hot breath on her cheek, saw relentless determination in the steely eyes above her, and, desperately trying to free an arm, felt herself inclosed as in a vise of iron.

"Godfrey!" she called, now greatly frightened.

"Aye, call him! He'll come anon when he doth grow a-weary of the maids in Lunnon," he panted sneeringly.

Both young and strong, they struggled desperately, Margaret trying to reach his face with her clutching fingers, but he held down her hands and laughed at her tauntingly.

"Godfrey, Godfrey!"

Her voice rang out strong and clear through the forest.

"Doth some one call?"

Footsteps were heard running. Josiah loosed his hold slightly, listening.

"'Tis I, Margaret Mayland!"

A man burst through the thicket and, with a sharp exclamation, caught Taunston by the shoulders, swung him round with the strength of a giant and with a well directed blow felled him to the ground, where he lay apparently lifeless.

"Godfrey!"

Margaret, white faced and fainting, was clasped in the embrace of her lover, who, holding her to his heart, looked at the prostrate figure with fierce glances of anger.

"The scoundrel doth move!" La Fabienne drew his sword. "I'll kill him where he lays!"

"Nay, dear Godfrey, have not murder on thy soul," she said tremblingly, with soft compelling. "'Tis my cousin, Josiah Taunston, who was but angered that I would not consent to wed with him."

La Fabienne's brow grew dark.

"God's pity! 'Twere not murder to finish that white livered hound! Rather 'twould be a deed of kindness to the world," he answered sternly, sheathing his sword with reluctance. "But to please thee, sweet, an' because I would not add further to thine horrors, I shall not molest him further."

He kissed her face and wound his arm about her in a manner affectionate and protecting.

"Come with me, Margaret."

She advanced a step or two, then paused, looking back hesitatingly.

"Is he dead, Godfrey? I think but of his mother and poor Hetty."

La Fabienne laughed scornfully.

"Nay, my love, fear not, but come with me. His kind dieth not so easily."

As the last sound of their voices died on the breeze Josiah Taunston, his face livid, with blood dropping from his nostrils, staggered to his feet and, clinging to a tree for support, glanced with wild eyes of hatred in the direction the lovers had taken.

"So, ho, thou hast arrived!" he panted with quick drawn breath. "Fool, thou didst not die, but art here i' the flesh to use thy persuasions with my cousin against me an' my rightful claims! Insistence an' firmness, had ye not come, would have i' the long run won her, an' the farm lands would have been mine!"

He stood erect, endeavoring to stanch the flow of blood and muttering promises and threats to himself.

"But with that woman dangler's arms about her, Josiah Taunston, thou hast no hope of Margaret Mayland now! So, ho, thou must use thy brain with subtle skill to smooth this complication out!"

Turning to go, he paused, shaking his finger in the direction they had taken, a sinister, wicked expression spreading over his drawn features.

"Happen now if matters fall out not to thy liking, Mistress Mayland, thou'lt recall to mind foo late that I offered thee the best a man could offer kindly and in a good spirit until thou didst anger me beyond control. Thou didst flout me an' left me stunned an' bleeding—for all thy knowledge dead—to walk away with thy choice. Fair words, a gallant bearing an' loving attentions,' he sneered, then shook his finger menacingly. "Thou hast them now, an', forsooth, something more that thou wot not of—an enemy, a man whose word will be taken here on all accounts an' who can bring thee into much distavor; one who would have loved thee, but who now hates thee. Thou'lt live to regret this night, mistress, and I to remember it!"

Then he laughed a harsh, grating, mirthless laugh, and, turning suddenly, groped his way down the path that led to the village.

CHAPTER X.

JUST out of the forest on a flat rock that topped a rising eminence of land stood Margaret Mayland by the side of her lover, who, taller than she, bent his dark eyes softly upon her face, reflecting in them the happiness shining so brightly in her own. Twilight had now withdrawn its last gray shadows from the earth, and night, warm, black and clear, with soft breezes stirring and the air heavy with the sweet redolence of wild flowers, fell on the mountain gently. Gradually the stars came out, first one at a time, timidly; then, as if gathering courage from added numbers, they shone forth rapidly until the black arch of the heavens was a spectacle of dazzling brilliance.

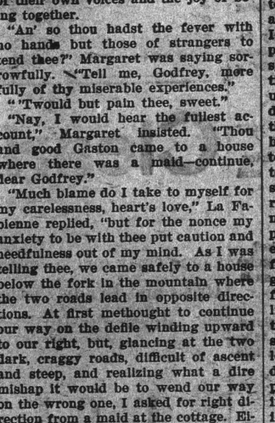
Margaret, with happy confidence, stood close to her lover, who, with one arm thrown about her, stroked her soft hair caressingly. The stars with added luster sparkled in cheerful radiance, the breeze grew fainter, then died away, and the hour was one of intense peacefulness. Suddenly from the direction of the village came the loud, unearthly sounds of the baying and howling of a dog—long, loud and, to the superstitious, ominous howls—but Margaret and La Fabienne, entirely engrossed in each other, talked on happily, unheeding aught but the sound of their own voices and the joy of being together.

"An' so thou hadst the fever with no hands but those of strangers to tend thee?" Margaret was saying sorrowfully. "Tell me, Godfrey, more fully of thy miserable experiences."

"'Twould but pain thee, sweet."

"Nay, I would hear the fullest account," Margaret insisted. "Thou and good Gaston came to a house where there was a maid—continue, dear Godfrey."

"Much blame do I take to myself for my carelessness, heart's love," La Fabienne replied, "but for the nonce my anxiety to be with thee put caution and heedfulness out of my mind. As I was telling thee, we came safely to a house below the fork in the mountain where the two roads lead in opposite directions. At first methought to continue our way on the defile winding upward to our right, but, glancing at the two dark, craggy roads, difficult of ascent and steep, and realizing what a dire mishap it would be to wend our way on the wrong one, I asked for right direction from a maid at the cottage. Either from ignorance or a desire for mischief she said that Cragenstone lay at the end of the road leading to the left. So, trusting absolutely to her knowledge of the country hereabout, we fared forth on our journey."



"An' did thou meet no person to tell thee of thine error?" Margaret inquired, with gentle sympathy.

"Marry! Not one soul except a poor lad of vacant mind who mouthed and chattered at us as we passed," he replied. "Soon the drizzling dampness changed to steady rain that fell harder and heavier as we progressed, until at last it came down in great sheets of water, blinding our vision, washing rocks and gravel down the rough and dangerous path and almost sweeping our horses off their feet. Such an awful mountain storm, such cloudbursts, we had ne'er seen in France. Brave Gaston was struck with terror, declared we would be lost and entreated me to turn our horses' heads, but I, disregarding him, pressed forward, knowing that thou wert expecting me, and myself seething with impatience to hold thee in mine arms."

He paused a moment, looking intently from his high place into the dark valley below him, Margaret's upturned face regarding his with anxious interest.

"What then, Godfrey?"

"Soon we came upon a stream that ran bubbling and foaming across our path. With many round oaths from Gaston and some sharp imprecations from myself, we contrived to get across it, but so nearly were our horses swept from under us by the swift current of the stream and so difficult was it for them to gain a footing on the steep embankment of slippery rocks on the other side, that, i' truth, I thought we would be lost. After much maneuvering and some desperate chances we found shallower water, a little sand, and triumphantly gained the other side.

"What then, Godfrey?"

"Then night came on, and over the unknown road for a distance that seemed interminable we almost felt our way." And he laughed lightly at the recollection. "Gaston's lamentations and curses of thy country, sweet, and water running off me in streams, dampened mine ardor so that it was with dejection and rather heartless pleasure that we beheld the first flicker of light from a window ahead of us on the road. Reaching the house, or, rather, cabin that it was, I knocked loudly for admittance. A querulous old voice bade me begone, cried feebly that there was a tavern for strangers a mile down the road, and that we had no manners to disturb a poor sick body at that time o' night. So we continued on our journey until we reached a house with signs of life about it that proved to be the tavern.

"A solemn visaged landlord received us, took our order for a good warm supper, called a boy to take the horses, and we entered.

"'How great a distance to the Mayland farm?' I inquired as he showed us to a room.

"'The Mayland farm?' he repeated in stupid bewilderment. 'I ha' ne'er heard on it.'

"'Fool! Churl!' I exclaimed, my patience exhausted by the long series of discomforts. 'Thou livest at Cragenstone and hath ne'er heard of the Mayland farm!'

"'But this is the village of Sterndorf,' he answered. 'Cragenstone lieth on t'other side of the mountain, across the forest. Prithee, sir, 'tis a long, tedious, roundabout journey from here to there.' Margaret, in my surprise and disappointment at his information I could have run him through, so desperate was I. The man's stolid, unsympathetic face and no better suggestion to offer than that we abide there until the ending of the storm maddened me, and, as though the fault of the mistake were his instead of mine, I bade the fellow begone in my surliest tones. 'Twould weary thee, heart's love, to tell thee all," he continued, with a sigh—"how the next day the storm raged, preventing our departure, and the next and next; how I took counsel repeatedly with the idlers about the tavern as to the expediency of our setting forth and how they all assured me gravely that it would be impossible to ford the Skolvent stream. Then I grew listless and, to my surprise, seemed not to care; had no appetite; mine eyes swelled and smarted in my head, followed by nausea and hot fever. Then, dire calamity, I was attacked with the pest called measles, a disease raging in every house in the village, and lay ill of it for near a fortnight, and, Margaret, when I was strong enough and safe of contagion to come to thee all traces of the storm had passed, the stream was passable, and we rode forth, with blithe farewells to the sober faced loungers about the tavern door, down the mountain to find the right road that brought us at last happily to Cragenstone. Sweet, art glad to see me?"

Margaret pressed the hand gently that held hers, saying, with a sigh of content: "Thou knowest well, dear Godfrey, how glad am I. Such nights of suspense, such burning fevers of impatience, such days of hourly heartsick expectation, no mortal e'er before experienced. Methought perchance that thou wert dead, Godfrey, that thou wast so long in coming."

"Nay, heaven's gift of joy, I lived for thee."

For a moment neither spoke; then La Fabienne said suddenly: "But tell me, Margaret, of thy cousin. Certes, he seemed an ill favored whelp enough. So he would wed with thee, my love?"

"What rare fortune, Godfrey, that thou didst come in time!" she exclaimed, with a shudder. "An thou had delayed another minute that vile wretch had put his lips to mine."

La Fabienne's face darkened, and he exclaimed angrily as he laid his hand upon his sword.

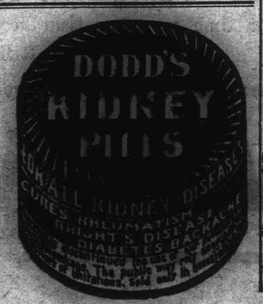
"See my bodice how 'tis torn? And my kerchief is in ribbons, so desperate was our encounter. In my fright I screamed quite wildly."

"And thou didst call my name," he said fondly. "I recall my surprise at hearing it. Had thou news of mine arrival, Margaret?"

"Nay, dear Godfrey," she answered, with a little laugh that was half sob as she buried her face in the velvet folds of the puffed sleeve of his doublet. "Thy name, that does ever dwell securely in my heart, in my necessity sprang from thence to my lips, and they gave voice to it. Then thou, as if sent specially by kind Providence to rescue me, burst through the thicket and now—thou art here."

"Aye, I am here," he said, with particular emphasis. "But, sweet, art not aweary from standing so long?"

She slipped her hand through his arm.



"Come, Godfrey, to the portal of my door, where I had hoped to meet thee. Thou did have but a rough and unpleasant welcome. And thy lady"—she made him a little, mocking courtesy, with a smile on her lips—"would give thee a greeting more befitting thy station and high rank."

He turned and kissed her where she stood.

"The rough forest path or this stone, sweet Margaret, an thou art on either, is the portal of welcome that best befits my station," he replied. "But I will go with thee gladly, oh, my love, an thou leadeth the way, even to the end of the world."

Just then the moon rose over the horizon, illuminating the mountain so that the lovers could discern the pathway without trouble, and soon they turned the corner of the road, passing out of sight.

ABOUT SHOES.

Earliest Reference Is Found in the Old Testament.

What is regarded as the earliest reference to shoes is found in the Old Testament, where Abraham refuses to take as much as a shoe latchet from the King of Sodom. Among the Jews the shoe played an important part in many social usages. When buying or selling land it was customary to deliver a shoe, and the act of throwing down a shoe on territory implied occupancy. The finding of sandals on Egyptian mummies proves that the wearing of shoes is almost as old as the race itself. In Venice in the seventeenth century every lady of any pretension to fashion or position wore what were called "choppines," high clogs or pattens, to elevate them from the ground. Thomas Coryat, a traveler who visited Venice in 1611, says of them: "They are so common in Venice that no woman goeth without either in her house or abroad. It is a thing made of wood and covered with leather in sundry colors, some white, some red, some yellow. Many of them are curiously painted; some, also, of them have I seen fairly gilt. There are many of these chapineys of a great height—even half a yard high and by how much the nobler a woman is, by so much the higher are her chapineys. All their gentlewomen, and most of their wives and widows that are of any wealth, are assisted or supported either by men or women when they walk abroad, to the end that they may not fall."

Fortunes have been lavished upon shoes. Men as widely apart in every circumstance of life as Sir Walter Raleigh and Caligula had their shoes enriched with precious stone to the value of thousands of dollars. When the tomb of Henry VI. of Sicily, who died in 1197, was opened in the Cathedral of Palermo, shoes made of cloth of gold and embroidered with pearls, were found on the dead monarch's feet, and also on those of his queen. In the time of Louis VI of France and the courtiers of Versailles were remarkable for their boots, the tops of which were enormously large and wide and were decorated with a profusion of costly lace.

Even horseshoes have been made to serve the purposes of extravagance and display. Sabina Poppaea, the beautiful and luxury-loving wife of the Roman Emperor Nero, is said to have had her mules shod with gold. All the world over horseshoes are supposed to possess some occult power of attracting luck and warding off evil.

Fine Cut Facts.

Digging is one of the best exercises for those who are engaged in an office all day, and have much head-work.

Early morning cold baths do not suit all people. In such cases a brisk rub with a rough towel will be found beneficial.

The best exercise for the biceps is to lie face downwards with the hands spread on either side of the head. Keep the body rigid, and force the body upwards with the arms until the arms are rigid.

Japanese women are seldom physically weak, a fact that is ascribed to the very general adoption by them of a scientific system of bodily training. Curiously enough, the average Japanese woman weighs about as much as the average Japanese man.

Situated in the middle south of Brazil, the capital, Sao Paulo, has a population of at least 250,000, and is much more modern than any city in South America, excepting Buenos Ayres.

In Fiji the coinage consists chiefly of whales' teeth, those of greater value being dyed red. The natives exchanged twenty white teeth for one red one, as we change copper for silver.

Feared the Feathers.

Lady Yarmouth, who was Miss Alice Thaw of Pittsburg, finds some amusing material among her husband's tenantry. One day, it is said, she was visiting a sick child, when the mother began to tell a pitiful tale of the difficulties she encountered in "getting on," and above all of the trouble she had with a lodger, who, she said, ate her out of house and home.

"The first morning the man was here," she complained, "he ate boiled eggs very greedily. Egg after egg he ate—three, four, five, six—and only the yolks of them; the white he didn't bother at all. When he dug his spoon into the seventh egg my temper got the better of me. 'Don't you ever eat the white of the egg, sir?' I asked.

"'Certainly not, my good woman,' he replied. 'The yolk is the bird and the white the feathers. Surely, you don't want me to make a bolster of myself.'"

Two Fathers.

Bishop Wilson of Calcutta, whose speeches are often quoted, had the happy faculty of saying the right thing at all times.

On one occasion two young people whose fathers were famous for their diverse and peculiar views on Biblical subjects came to see the bishop.

"Ah," said he as he greeted one, "your father wrote a great work on the Apocalypse. I congratulate you on being the daughter of such a man."

Then, turning to his other guest, he said, "And your father forbore to write about the Apocalypse—a wise forbearance. You are to be congratulated on having so wise a father."

Fruit Trees On Highways.

One of the ways for beautifying the country in the grand duchy of Baden without any ultimate expense to the taxpayer is the planting of fruit trees along the Government highways. These are cherry, apple, pear and in some places walnut trees. The trees are planted thirty-two feet apart along each side of the road, and when the fruit is ready for market it is sold at public auction on the trees, the purchaser being obliged to harvest it at his own expense.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS DOING GOOD WORK AROUND PORT ARTHUR.

Mr. Dick Souvey and Wife Both Had Kidney Troubles and the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy Cured Them.

Port Arthur, Ont., Sept. 11.—(Special.)—That Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the Kidney ills of men and women alike has been proved time and again in this neighborhood, but it is only occasionally they get a chance to do double work in the same house. This has happened in the case of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Souvey, a farmer and his wife, living about seven miles from here. In an interview Mr. Souvey said:

"My wife and myself have used Dodd's Kidney Pills and have found them a big benefit to our health. We had La Grippe two winters and were exposed to much frost and cold. Our sleep was broken on account of urinary troubles and pain in the kidneys. We each took six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and now enjoy good health."

IN THE BASQUE COUNTRY.

The Peculiar Language and Odd Customs of the People.

Of the strange scenes and customs of the Basque country a traveler writes: "I was struck by the way the women walked and carried themselves. A fat old woman with a huge tray on her head walked along at a swinging pace, shouting her wares meanwhile at the top of her voice. I saw a woman carrying on her head first of all a large tray of fruit (its size can be imagined when I tell you that it was afterward her stall). On the top of this were a basket of washing and a big umbrella to be used to cover the stall. Then in her left hand she carried a supplementary stall, and by the other she led a little child which could just reach the mother's hand by holding its own up as high as it could stretch.

"I was waiting once at a little wayside inn in the village of Ascain when I saw an old lady, followed by two great fat white pigs. They all three waddled over to the village pump, and then, procuring some water in a pail, the old lady proceeded to wash her charges. She cleaned them most assiduously—eyes, ears, tail, back, hind quarters and feet.

"There is a dignity of carriage about all the women in this country. I fancied it might be due to the fact that formerly, before the 'Code Napoleon' came into operation, the law obliged the firstborn, whether boy or girl, to inherit the patrimony and continue the head of the family, the husband taking the wife's name when the inheritor was a woman, thus giving the woman a perfect equality from her birth. The matrons are not less beautiful than the younger women.

"Quite unlike any other language is that of the Basques. Although when hearing the people talk a Spanish sound seems to be occasionally emitted, it is not really at all like Spanish. I was amused to find that 'no' is 'ess' in Basque, and when I asked what 'yes' was I thought at first the answer was 'na,' which would have been very curious, but it turned out to be 'ba,' with the 'b' softly pronounced."

A PERFUME THAT SMELLS.

The Awful Odor That Comes From Pure Attar of Roses.

The perfumer took from his desk a small flask of copper.

"In flasks like this attar of roses comes to us," he said. "Attar of roses is worth from $10 to $25 an ounce, according to the market. This flask is empty now, but in it a little odor still lingers."

The visitor smiled delightedly. He had never smelt pure attar of roses before. Now he unscrewed the stopper and, closing his eyes, with an ecstatic look he applied his nostrils to the flask.

But only for an instant. Then he threw back his head, twisting his features into a grimace of disgust, and he exclaimed:

"Garbage! Bone yards! Glue factories!"

The perfumer laughed.

"All essential oils smell like that," he said. "Yet no good perfume can be made without them."

He took from a shelf a cut glass jar filled with a thick, yellowish oil that looked like petroleum partly refined.

"In this jar," he said, "there are forty ounces or pure attar of roses worth over $500. You know how the attar smells alone. Now watch me make a rich perfume by adding things to it."

He put a few drops of the attar into a vial. He filled the vial with spirits of musk, another of orris, then one of neroli, one of rose, of violet, of orange, of vanilla, and, finally, the oil of cloves and bergamot.

"There," he said, "smell that. Isn't it exquisite?"

"Exquisite!" said the visitor.

"Well, without its foundation of the malodorous and costly attar of roses it wouldn't smell any better than a plate of soup."

As a Climber.

"I'm not so particular about speed, but I must have a gentle horse," repeated Mr. Green. "My wife wants to drive, you see. Will you warrant this horse to be safe?"

"Certainly," said the dealer reassuringly. "He's a regular lady's horse."

"You are sure he's not afraid of anything?" asked Mr. Green anxiously and for the tenth time.

The dealer assumed an air of reflection.

"Well, there is one thing that he has always appeared to be afraid of ever since I got him," he admitted conscientiously. "It seems as if he's scared to death for fear some one might say 'Whoa!' and he not hear it."

Ancient Bridge Superstition.

A primitive notion existed among the Romans and other races that a bridge was an offense and injury to the river god, as it saved people from being drowned while fording or swimming across and robbed the deity of a certain number of victims which were his due. For many centuries in Rome propitiatory offerings of human victims were made every year to the Tiber. Men and women were drowned by being bound and flung from the wooden Sublician bridge, which, till nearly the end of the republican period, was the one and only bridge across the Tiber in Rome.

THE LAND QUESTION.

The Conservatives of Alberta adopted at Red Deer a platform, and laid down the following resolutions about the lands and natural resources:

4. SQUARE DEAL IN LANDS.

This Convention declares that the people of Alberta, to the same extent and in the same manner as the people of the other provinces, are entitled to lands, mines, minerals, forests and other natural resources within its area and to enjoy the full benefits thereof as well as to administer the same for the advantage of its people and emphatically protests against our natural resources being unjustly witheld, to be exploited by any political party at Ottawa. This convention urges that constant and continued application to and negotiation with the Dominion Government be made for the surrender to the Province of the Public Domain within its boundaries, of which it is now so unfairly and unjustly deprived. This convention further declares that the province is entitled to compensation for lands within its area heretofore alienated for purely Federal purposes.

The Liberals of Alberta in convention adopted and issued a platform embodied on 15 resolutions, and as to the land question resolved:

Nothing!

Nothing!

Nothing!

Nothing!

ALBERTA ELECTIONS NOVEMBER 9. NOMINATIONS OCTOBER 31.

The Alberta election writs were issued on Thursday. November 9th is the date for the voting, and the nominations will be made on October 31.

The returning officer for Medicine Hat is D. G. White. The information did not convey any surprise, as it was commonly understood that the elections would be held between Nov. 5th and 9th. The fact that the Hon Frank Oliver hurried west last week was the signal generally accepted that the final struggle had been determined upon by the Ottawa managers of the new provinces.

President W. G. Niblock, of the Conservative association, expressed his satisfaction with the deal and declares that there is every reason to believe the coercion crowd will meet defeat. Mr. Sissons too, is very sanguine of victory.

EDUCATION CLAUSES IN AUTONOMY BILL.

The Toronto "News" correspondent at Edmonton has sent an item of news to his paper which is somewhat startling. He reports Hon. W. T. Finlay as saying on the public platform that as the Roman Catholics have been the pioneers of the West so have they a right to schools on the lines they desire. An attitude of one of our ministers of this kind seems to bear out the one object which Laurier has had in framing the school clauses of the two Provincial bills. If one studies the history of this question the more certainty is there that the Premier has been helping his own religious belief without regard to any one else. However we may admire a man for doing his best for his Church and however we may wish there were more such, yet when it comes to a representative of the whole people picking out his own Church and legislating for them without regard to the rest we claim a wrong is committed and one which no consideration should allow to pass without a hard fight. Our ground for saying that Laurier and Fitzpatrick have deliberately altered the British North America Act for the glorification of the Church are as follows:

The clause affecting schools in the British North America Act is No. 93 sub section (1) of which reads as follows. "Nothing in any such law "shall prejudicially affect any rights "or priviliges with respect to DE-"NOMINATIONAL Schools which "any class of persons have by law "in the province at the Union." By the North West Territories Act this word "denominational" was obliterated and we had for the first time importedthe terms "Roman Catholic and Protestant". This last term was continued by Haultain, by compulsion of the N. W. T. Act, and was embodied in clause 41 of th School Ordinance. It is in the wording of clause 17 of the Alberta Bill that we see the fine Italian hand. This section reads as follows: "Section 93 of the British North A-"merica Act, 1867 shall apply to the "said Province, with substitution of "paragraph (1) of the said section "93 of the following paragraph: (To make this perfectly clear we produce the clause in question together with the one for which it was substituted.)

NEW CLAUSE.

Nothing in any such law shall prejudicially affect any right or privilege with respect to SEPARATE schools which any class of persons have at the date of the passing of this act under the terms of chapter 29 and 30 of the Ordinance of the N. W. T. passed in the year 1901 or with respect to religious instruction in any public or separate school as provided for in the said ordinance.

OLD CLAUSE.

Nothing in any such law shall prejudicially affect any right or privileges with respect to DENOMINATIONAL schools which any class of persons have by law in the Province at the Union.

There can be but one object inthis new clause and that is the abolition of equal rights of all religious denominations and the substitution therefor of special rights of Roman Catholics to have there own schools with the implied assertion that all other Catholics and denominations with Jews, Mohammedans, Brahmins Mormons and Atheists are so far from free that any kind of school will do for them. To say that the school ordinance is put into force by the above clause is to assert a falsehood. There are but two clauses which become part of the Autonomy Bill. One is the clause which sets forth that the Roman Catholics are so much better than the rest of the people as to justify them taking the place of the sheep in the well known Biblical story and those who do not profess the belief of that body are the goats of the same story though in the clause itself they are termed Protestants. The other clause is the one enacting the right to half hours religious teaching. But the really important clauses of the bill are not a law which cannot be altered by the local government. So that we have no provision making it part of our Autonomy that all teachers, whether among the sheep or the goats shall be equally qualified and that all scholars shall be taught from the same text book. The only one of the two parties which gives any assurance of the nature of the schools they are prepared to have (should it be found that the new Provinces have rights equally with the older ones) is the Conservative and they have pledged themselves to National Schools. This attitude is so important the support of all voters who have the old British desire of equal rights for all. It is particularly important when we remember that in a small house of 25 members where the two parties will be nearly balanced, two or three Roman Catholic members could with perfect ease have the balance of power and exercise it in such a way as to force the hands of a government desiring power and not caring a jot for anybody but the Dominion masters.

WHEN DID WE COME INTO THE UNION.

Liberal papers are arguing that the Territories did not enter into the Union until 1st of Sept. 1905.

Here is what a prominent Liberal lawyer says.

The Liberal lawyer referred to is N. D. Mills, of Strathcona, Grand Master of the Western Division of the Grand Orange Lodge, in the course of an address to the Grand Lodge, delivered in Medicine Hat, on the 15th March last. Mr. Mills places the date when the Territories came into the Union as the year 1868. Here is what he says:—

In order to consummate federation it became necessary that certain legislative powers and rights at that time vesting in the Crown colonies should be handed over to the Federal Parliament so that the Federal Parliament might with freedom legislate on all matters of a common concern to the whole Confederation, the provinces retaining legislative power over all matters of a provincial or a domestic character. Among the matters that were specifically made the subject of provincial enactment was that of education. This was subject to certain restrictions. These restrictions were shortly as follows:

(1) Any right or privilege that any denomination had in respect to schools at the time of the union (1st of July, 1867) was not to be interfered with by provincial enactment.

(2) All powers, rights, etc., legally held by Roman Catholics in respect to separate schools in Upper Canada at the time of Federation were extended to the Protestants and Roman Catholics alike in Quebec.

(3) Where any province contained a separate or dissentiate schools system, which at the time of Union existed by law, and appeal should lie to the Governor-General in Council from any act or decision of the province concerning or affecting any right or privilege held by either Protestant or Roman Catholic.

(4) Remedial legislation by the Federal Parliament in the event of non-legislation ratifying the decision of the Governor General in Council, etc., etc. Now at the time of Confederation, in certain provinces the legally acquired rights, while in certain other provinces no such vested rights existed. It is obvious that these restrictions applied only to provinces were separate schools had been established by legislative enactment of such provinces prior to Confederation. All other provinces had exclusive jurisdiction in educational matters. The province of Ontario had separate schools prior to Confederation, and to meet Quebec on all points and bring about Confederation, Ontario was reluctantly obliged to retain separate schools and allow them all that they had previously acquired by legislation. Prince Edward Island, British Columbia, Manitoba, the Northwestern Territories and Rupert's Land were still out of the Union, but by section 146 of the British North America Act provision was made for the future entry of these into the Dominion. THE TERRITORY NOW KNOWN AS THE NORTHWEST TERRITORIES ENTERED THE UNION AND BECAME A PART OF THE DOMINION OF CANADA IN 1868, NOT AS A PROVINCE AND WITH A VERY LIMITED AMOUNT OF SELF-GOVERNMENT, but at the time she became a part of the Dominion or Union. She had no educational laws, much less any conferring the right to separate schools upon any denomination, and it remained for the Federal Government 1875 to pass clause 11 of the Act respecting the North-western Territory and Rupert's Land, whereby separate schools for the first time became possible by law in the Territories.

TERRITORIES HAD NO VOICE.

Then was passed a Federal statute with no elected representative from the North West Territory and Rupert's Land in the Dominion House, and with no voice as a contracting party these territories became subject to separate schools. It will be noticed that upon reading section 93 of the British North America Act, and the restrictions therein mentionthat the federal power stood in the position of an intermediary between any provincial law and the minority whose acquired legislative rights were prejudicially affected by such provincial legislation and that this affected only such provinces as had legally authorized separate schools prior to the Union. Beyond this the power of the Federal house would appear to cease regarding legislation affecting education.

A TELLING POINT.

The N. W. T. and Rupert's Land upon their entry into the Dominion or Union had no established Government of their own and they practically became wards of the Federal Government for "the peace, order and goodgover nment" of the new country. Now a guardian has a right to watch over the estate and person of his ward during the minority of that ward until he attains his majority, and it may become necessary to restrict the freedom of the ward during the period of the guardianship for the future good of the ward, but the guardian ought not to do anything that would trammel the freedom of the ward in either his person or estate after the trust had ceased. This, however, is what the Dominion proposes to do.

SHOULD HAVE ABSOLUTE FREEDOM.

Now that the ward has attained her majority, if she is not to be permitted absolute freedom in matters pertaining to education as in other matters of a purely provincial concern, her destiny as a country capable of sustaining millions of independent and free people will be marred.

I have tried to show that morally no one creed has a right to separate schools. I have tried to make plain to you that separate schools were forced upon this young country by a legislature possessing only an intermediary jurisdiction in educational matters, when this country was not and could not be a consenting party to such an arrangement. If this view be correct then no denomination in this country has any properly vested right to separate schools, I would therefore respectfully suggest that this right Worshipful Grand Lodge direct a prayer to the senate and House of Commons for absolute legislative freedom for the Provinces about to be erected out of these Territories in all matters pertaining to education.

WELL PUT.

The Northwest Baptist puts the case very clearly respecting the school clauses, as follows:—

It has been asked—"Even if the new provinces were given full control of educational matters might they not establish a separate school system?" Certainly they might. The issue which is to the front in western politics today is not the question as to whether the new provinces shall have separate schools or not. The question at issue is as to whether the provinces shall have the right to decide this matter for themselves or not. If the provinces establish their claim to full control of educational affairs, the question of the existence or non-existence of separate schools will become a matter for future provincial legislation. Each province will then be in a position to determine its own educational policy. However, the fact that the principle of provincial control was violated for the express purpose of fastening a separate school system upon these provinces whether they want it or not, may intimate Sir Wilfred Laurier's opinion as to the course they would take if left free. At all events he was not prepared to leave the alternative to them. In the words of a member of the Dominion Cabinet "there is no constitutional necessity for the educational clauses" but it was evident there was necessity growing out of influences whose centre is no guess.

The policy Sir Wilfred Laurier propounded in 1905 in reference to this question is as different from the policy upon which he obtained power as white is from black and it says but little for the independent intelligence of Western Canada, that any public man can venture to propound a policy so entirely at variance with that on which he obtained public support, without being at once driven from power.

It practically means that what was once the great Liberal party has become so reckless of a due regard to principle, as to adopt whatever means will enable them to obtain power and sustain a government who have recklessly abandoned all respect for the principles they previously pledged themselves to maintain.—Hon. Joseph Martin.

ANOTHER VAIN ATTEMPT.

And still the vain attempt is being made to reconcile the autonomy legislation with law, with practical wisdom, and with professed liberal principles. The latest apologist is Mr. Calder, the new Minister of Education for Saskatchewan. Evidently his carefully prepared but superficial pronouncement has not met with very great favor, for he is now saying that the educational question does not amount to much anyway, that the people are more concerned with eating, sleeping and money making than with great questions of principle. For after all this is the gist of his latest utterance. And this is just where Mr. Calder will find he has made a mistake. He has yet to learn that there are some who have deep religious conviction, a strong sense of justice and a courageous love of independence.

The only weakness in Mr. Calder's treatment of the school question is this, that he has never got within talking distance of the real point at issue. Who cares whether the Tories are objecting for party ends or fighting for principle? That is a side issue. Who cares whether the school system in the Northwest is good, bad, satisfactory or unsatisfactory? That, too, is a side issue. Who cares what Lord Tomnoddy said in 1866 about the legislation of 1867? That is only a personal opinion bearing on another side issue. If Mr. Calder wishes to get at this question in earnest, let him declare himself on the following points:

(1). Which has the right by law of 1867 to initiate school legislation—the Province or the Dominion.

(2). Has the Federal power right to do more than disallow?

(3). Why did not the Dominion let the Provinces legislate and then, if their legislation was faulty, disallow it?

(4). Has history furnished a better illustration of impudence than this action of the western members in overriding the natural operation of the law?

(5). If a few Canadians in 1867 made a foolish compromise which practically affected Ontario and Quebec, why should Quebec now seek to break the bargain by virtually saying that Ontario meant not Ontario but all the rest of Canada?

(6). Why should a man with an ounce of rugged manliness in him endure that a few people in 1867 should make it impossible for him to act freely to-day?

(7). Will Mr. Calder frankly say whether his wretched attempt to reconcile the legislation with law is because he is a staunch party adherent or because he is lacking in good honest Scotch independence?

(8). Will he tell us why in a new western land, presumably settled by freemen, one religious sect should be specially selected for distinction?

(9). Why should any law bunch people into Catholics and Protestants? Does not Mr. Calder know that such law is an insult to every Baptist, not one of whom but will rightly claim a higher and more ancient lineage than that his Church has risen on the wrecks of Rome?

(10). Will not Mr. Calder acknowledge publicly, as he must do in his own soul, that this whole miserable thing was not born of justice or loyalty, but is the child of an intriguing institution which has cursed every European land, and which is a menace to progress and prosperity in our own land today?

(11). Or if we come down to his own level, will he explain how much of the present system is actually perpetuated by law and how much of it may be altered by the Governor-in-Council? Is it not plain that the only things perpetuated are minority schools, the only things not perpetuated are the beneficient regulations of the Department of Education? Isn't there a loop-hole for Separate Schools in their most offensive form.—The North West Baptist.

THE GLOBE'S ANALYSIS.

@On the 15th Februrary last the Toronto Globe, the great Liberal organ of Canada, published an article which cannot well be retracted or distorted, and in the course of that article threw considerable light upon the school question in the west. The article does much to enable the reader to separate the wheat from the chaff of the debate now in progress and sheds a lurid light upon the points to be decided by the votes of the people in the Alberta election. Good old time liberals are recommended to read it.

Here are the exact words of the Globe:

The merits of Separate Schools is not the supreme and essential question at issue in the measure now before Parliament. Neither is the question one of the value of the religious element in education Neither is it a question of the claims of minorities, whether Protestant or Roman Catholic, to consideration in matters of education. All such questions might be settled without dispute. The utility of Separate Schools may be granted. That a system of education divorced from morality is education with its head cut off is a proposition that need not be controverted. The claims of minorities may all be conceded. And yet the central question at issue remains. That question is not one of educational policy, but of constitutional rights. Which body has the right to determine and direct the educational policy of the new Western Provinces, the Dominion Parliament or the Provincial Legislatures?

The Globe's answer to the central question is the answer of the Confederation act: "In and for each Province the Legislature may exclusively make laws in relation to education." That answer cannot be harmonized with the measure now before Parliament. That measure proposes to "make laws" for these two new provinces in relation to the character of their schools—that there shall be both Public schools and Separate schools—and also in relation to the financial administration of such schools—how public moneys shall be raised, apportioned and applied. Such regulations touching education are, in our judgment, as really within the constitutional rights of the Provinces as are the regulations pertaining to school hours, teachers' qualifications and text books. It is essentially a question of Provincial rights.

In coming to this judgment we have steadily in view the legislation of the Dominion Parliament in 1875 under which Separate schools were first established in the North West Territories. We have given due weight to the arguments from expediency—they were not arguments from constitutional rights or principles—presented by Mr. Edward Blake and others in support of that legislation. But we have also noted carefully Mr. George Brown's opposition and his warning to Parliament against the danger which now presents itself when those Territories are about to become Provinces, and ig come under the provisions of the Confederation Act, which gives them rights "exclusively to make laws in relation to education." And we have marked the significance of Hon Senator Campbell's reply, "We are not legislating for any particular Province, but merely for a Territory which is under our supervision," and for which "somebody must legislate" That legislatio was not asked for by the Territory, it was not contemplated by the Prime Minister, it was introduced as an amendment in committee. Whether wise or unwise, it was at that time deemed expedient, and it was at most only interim legislation intended for a Territory under Dominion Supervision. Neither the terms of that enactment nor the circumstances under which it was passed, do it seems to us, make it necessary for Parliament, thirty years afterwards, to usurp the functions of the Provincial Legislature and to bind upon these Provinces for all time, as a charge undertheir constitution, a system of education which may prove unsuited to their needs.

But we are asked, have not the people who now enjoy Separate school peivileges under the Territorial Government, rights and claims which should be recognized? They have. The people of the nine Roman Catholic schools and of the two Protestant schools, which are all the Separate schools at this moment in operation throughout the entire region to be comprised within the two new Provinces, have just claims. But those claims should be considered by the Provincial Legislatures in framing their Provincial education policies not by the Dominion Parliament in framing their Provincial constitutions. And we are further asked, is it not probable that the new legislatures would enact the present Separate school regulations? It is entirely probable, indeed, almost absolutely certain. Still, it is objected, is there not ground for the fear that in the future these separate school privileges might be withdrawn? Such privileges, once granted, could not be withdrawn without creating a grievance for which under the Confederation Act, the Dominion Parliament may pass remedial legislation.

So it is that on all these grounds theoretical and practical, constitutional and historical, The Globe feels itself constrained to withhold support from the autonomy measures now before Parliament in so far as they interfere with the rights of the Provinces in matters of education. The highest interests of all parties for the present, and for the future, will be best served by Parliament dealing only with Federal matters, and leaving to the legislatures of the Provinces all the duties and responsibilities which the Confederation Act intended to be Provincial. And that is the central question at issue.

FIRE AND EXPLOSION.

LIGHTBODY'S BARN GUTTED.

A HOUSE BLOWN TO PIECES. THREE PERSONS INJURED.

Fire broke out in the brick Livery barn of Earl Lightbody at ten minutes past one this morning and caused a good deal of damage and loss. The fire brigade were on the spot in a very short time and soon had the fire under control, but it was several hours ere the danger was over. The fire is supposed to have been caused by an escape of gas. It appears Mr. Lightbody was in the office when suddenly the whole place became filled with flames. He rushed to give the alarm and the north side syren soon woke the town. As soon, however, as Lightbody opened the doors there was an explosion and in a few seconds the whole building was in flames which shot 20 feet into the air. Assistance was at hand and all the horses and carriages were got out and the fire brigade arriving the firemen did splendid work. As usual there was plenty of water and a good force and with two streams playing upon the building all danger was soon over but a mass of burning hay in the loft kept the brigade busy until 5 o'clock.

Earl Lightbody was considerably burned and had to proceed to the hospital where Dr. Smith attended to him. Happily he is not seriously hurt.

About 2 o'clock a.m. Dr. Smith and the Editor of the Times strolled to the back of the Livery barn discussing the fire, when they heard a rumbling sound, apparently coming from the ground, where they stood and felt distinct vibrations and thumping under their feet. They called W. McF. Evans, Constable, McCorkendale, firemen Binns and Morte Fulton, who confirmed the doctor and editor's experience. The party circled around and found the indications of underground disturbances all confined to one spot. Supt. Porter had shortly before mentioned to the Editor that there was an old abandoned gas well near the spot, and it was at once conjectured that there was an accumulation of gas in the well and this having found the line of pipes, was travelling off and getting into houses. This conjecture would seem to be correct from what occurred at the Livery barn and what followed later in the day.

Supt. Porter got men at work to open up the ground, and at 7.30 the whole town was thrown into astate of alarm by a terrific explosion which occurred in Brakeman Harris's house a frame structure situated in the rear of the livery barn, only a few yards from where the rumblings and vibrations had been observed. The firemen were still at work on the barn when they saw the cottage literally

BLOWN TO PIECES.

The floor was blown up, the walls were flung out bodily, the roof went up in the air and landed several feet away, articles of furniture were thrown yards high.

Mrs. W. H. Harris and her sister, Miss Ellen Wilson were the only occupants of the house, Mr. Harris having gone out last night on his usual run. Both Mrs. Harris and her sister were badly burned, but how they could come through an explosion of that kind with their lives is simply miraculous. They were got out from the ruins of their home by members of the fire brigade, and at once conveyed to the hospital. As we go to press we hear neither of them are very seriously hurt and both are doing well.

The scene of the explosion is indescribable. The once pretty little home is an utter wreck. The explosion occurred when one of the occupants struck a match to light the gas stove.

The Livery barn is owned by the Purmal Brothers.

Note & Comment.

[By OBSERVER.]

It would be a good thing if the Council would do something in the way of cleaning up the roads and sidewalks before winter sets in. Many people complain of the rolling stones, which are everywhere. These loose stones are a danger to bipeds and quadrupeds alike so I hope the Council will have them cleared off. Why not send the grader over the roads to collect them into heaps and then have them carted off to the river or some other out-o'-the-way place.

Pedestrians are more interested in the sidewalks. If I may suggest I would say: Arm a dozen men with rakes, shovels and wheelbarrows and let them loose with orders to level and rake every gravel sidewalk in town and wheel away every every surface stone larger than a marble. Then people would be able to walk over them all winter without being led into blasphemy. It will be more than a year before permanent sidewalks can be laid and even by that time only a small portion of the town can be done, and I do not think the people should be punished for all that time by having to walk over the present "granulations."

I was glad to see the flags flying from the public buildings on the 21st. They served to remind us of that great sailor who did so much to make England the mistress of the sea entitling British ships to carry a brush at the mast head as a token that Britishers swept the seas. Here's to the immortal hero, Nelson.

As cleanliness is next to Godliness let everybody in town now set to work to clean up the backyards and lanes before winter.

People who began wondering if half Lawson's frenzied finance stories were true are now wondering if he told half the truth.

I have heard a good many complaints lately of holes being dug to get to water or gas pipes and left open all night without a lamp being placed at the spot as a danger signal. That the complaints are true I can vouch for from my own observations and if more care is not exercised the town will have some actions for damages on their hands.

The suggestion made recently that the town would do well to take up the question of using the gas to produce electric power is certainly a good one and it would be well if someone competent to do so would go into the matter and give the public some information. I fancy Dr. Smith could, if he would, do something along these lines. What do you say to the proposition Dr? I am sure the public would like to hear from you on the subject. I would for one.

Mr. H. A. Hunter arrived from Orangeville, Ont., on one of his periodical visits, to renew old acquaintances and look after his many interests in the town.

The Century Club have not spared expense in securing talent for the Harold Jarvis concert on Friday, Nov. 3rd. Gertrude White, the talented soprano, will appear in solos as well as with Harold Jarvis in several duetts. Miss Juanita L. Badgley will make her first appearance before a Medicine Hat audience. Miss Badgley is an honor graduate in Elocution from Albert College, Belleview, Ont. The Pleyel Sextette have been engaged and will give a number of selections. Miss Nesbitt will appear as accompanist. This combination should make the Century Club Concert one of the best of the season and that it is appreciated is evidenced by the rapid sale of tickets at Pingle's.

CHAPTER XIV.

UNDER a tree that spread its leafy branches over the grass that stretched out before the house the young mistress of the Mayland farm, wearing a dress of thinnest white linen, sat with her lover on a wooden bench. Both were silent, La Fabienne watching with interest the endeavors of a young robin that was struggling with a large ground worm and Margaret absorbed in her own thoughts, that seemed from the pensive and serious expression on her face to be far away and troublesome.

Although large clouds had spread themselves over the sky, obscuring the sun, the heat of the afternoon seemed to exceed that of the morning. Not a leaf stirred; the dogs lay motionless in the shade panting, and the air was close, surcharged with heat and heavy. Giles, passing with a wagon load of stones, touched his hat respectfully, calling to them that relief was in sight, as the clouds were forming for a thunderstorm.

"An' from the looks of yon black cloud methinks 'twill be a heavy one, good Giles," La Fabienne replied; then, turning to Margaret, who at the interruption of her meditation had drawn a quick breath, half a sigh, half an expression of unpleasant thought, inquired, "Hath lightning terrors for thee, sweet?"

"Nay, not now, when thou art here," she said gently, laying her hand on his sleeve with a caressing touch, "but last night, Godfrey, I had a dream of evil omen that, I confess, hath disturbed me. I dreamt that enemies by stratagem took thee from me; then came telling me that thou wert in this place and that to taunt me. Wild eyed, my hair hanging down my back and giving loud piercing shrieks of distress, I followed their directions only to find upon my arrival that thou wert not there. Oh, Godfrey, 'twas an awful night! An' the terror of it hangs o'er me today."

"Bon Dieu," he exclaimed, pressing the small hand affectionately, "how art thou changed from the gay, laughing Margaret who but lately dwelt in Paris! Away with such megrims, sweet! 'Tis this dull village, filled with scowling Puritans, that weareth on thy nerves, I do protest. I' truth, Margaret," he continued more thoughtfully, "a man whose lot hath been to be much at court as mine hath sees many sides of life, but beshrew me if I have ever before encountered such ignorance, intolerance and narrow minded bigotry as doth here exist. Ofttimes when lounging about the inn and perforce listening to the conversations and arguments of these sorry wights I fain must call for another bumper in an endeavor to raise my sinking spirits lest I do myself harm from sheer depression."

He laughed lightly at his jest, and Margaret smiled.

"Then the manner of my cousin Josiah Taunston and his mother doth grieve me," she continued softly. "They make their avoidance of me so plain, and Hetty, whom I love, is forbid my house. Each day I receive an added slight from them, one day this, another that. Only this morning one of the shepherds brought me word that two more lambs were stricken with the disorder that is spreading about among the sheep, causing much loss and damage. So when I was dressed I crossed over to mine aunt's house to ask of her the remedy she hath for the malady. To my civil greeting she returned a surly nod, did not invite me to enter and replied that she knew of no cure for the trouble among my sheep unless it was constant prayer. Then she advised me with sneers and grim insinuations to ask God on my knees to lift the evil out of my heart and to scatter the black and evil spirits that had to all appearances obtained control of me."

"Talked she so to thee, sweet?" Sir Godfrey cried angrily. "Thou goeth there then no more! She hates thee because thou wilt not love Josiah!"

"And when I was going down the path," Margaret continued, "I met Hetty coming from the brook with the ewers, and when she stopped to give me greeting her mother called to her quite wildly from the doorway to come on at once, as if she feared I would do Hetty harm," she concluded sadly.

For a time La Fabienne sat quietly, maintaining an angry silence; then he said:

"Margaret, methought once to go away for the nonce and then come back for thee. But now, when I go, I'll take thee with me, and we'll return no more."

Margaret slipped her hand into his with clinging fingers.

"Godfrey, oh, my love," she whispered, with tears standing in her eyes, "there is a terror, an apprehension undefined, hanging over me. The cold looks of these people weigh heavy on my heart. Take me with thee when thou goest."

"An thou say the word we go tomorrow," he exclaimed sternly, holding the small hand strongly in his own.

"Right willingly would I, Godfrey, for without my dear father naught pleasant here doth hold me. But cares of the estate, the selection of a permanent overseer, which I find difficult; new buildings for the tenants, now in construction, and many matters of importance to mine interests will keep me here a few weeks longer. Clothe thy soul in patience for that small time, dear Godfrey"—she lifted her head quickly, smiling through her tears—"an' when thou seest a solemn face that doth depress thee"—

"I'll think of thine, my winsome love," he interrupted happily, pleased at the change in her mood, "a face so beauteous to mine eyes that when a remembrance of it shall flash across my mental vision I swear that all black horrors will disappear, melted away, verily, by the radiance of it."

"Thou flatterer, Godfrey!" Margaret exclaimed softly, her lips curving into a smile. "Such high sounding praises come easily to a courtier. Nay"—she raised her finger warningly—"swear not by"—

One of the lads from the village coming around the corner of the house in their direction caused Margaret to pause, the unspoken words on her lips.

Much embarrassed at coming upon the person of Sir Godfrey La Fabienne so unexpectedly, the boy hesitated, pulled his forelock bashfully, then stood still, uncertain whether to advance or retreat. Margaret, seeing his confusion, beckoned him to approach.

"What is thine errand, good lad?"

"'Tis thy trinket, Mistress Mayland, that my gran'ther, Adam Browdie, the goldsmith, hath mended for thee, an', with your leave, mistress"—timidly giving her the parcel—"he did instruct me to say that he would ha' mended it before had it not been for the inconvenience of a sprain."

La Fabienne, who had unfastened the wrapping, was now examining the workmanship critically.

"'Tis finely wrought and jointed together skillfully, Margaret," he said. "Here, lad," throwing Christopher a gold piece; "here's a coin for thy grandfather's trouble."

The boy, much pleased, caught the gold piece, doffed his cap and walked away. Just then a flash of lightning streaked the sky that by now was thickly covered with black clouds, followed by a low, rumbling sound of thunder, causing the boy to pause and look about him doubtfully.

Margaret, who had risen, called to him to remain; to go back and wait in the kitchen with the maids until the storm was over, but Christopher shook his head and, muttering that the goldsmith would be angry if he delayed, ran down to the turnstile, sprang over it and, hurriedly deciding that the path through the forest would be the quickest way home, plunged into the thicket. Hardly was he under the shelter of the trees when a pattering sound was heard, and the rain beat down in great drops. Then the wind rose in a wild fury, the tall trees bent and swayed, tussling with its rough strength, and the grass and vines were swept down even with the earth.

Christopher, holding his jacket close about him, with his cap in his hand, walked on quickly, inwardly congratulating himself upon the fact that he had been wise enough to seek the sheltered path through the woods instead of the open roadway that was unprotected by high trees. Little, sharp flashes of lightning appeared almost constantly, and the thunder was constant, low, threatening, ominous. Innocent of his danger and not understanding the harsh, growling sounds of warning from the heavens, Christopher proceeded on his way. Now the clouds had grown so thick and black that the forest was almost as dark as night, and the rain fell in blinding torrents. Soon a sharp flash of lightning ran zigzag through the sky, then a clap of thunder louder than the report of a cannon resounded from end to end of the village.

Christopher gave a wild scream of terror and stood still, uncertain whether to advance or go back. Although the forest was familiar playground to him, he appeared to lose his way and staggered on blindly until, a long, vivid flash of lightning illuminating his path, he found his bearings, and, remembering the cave on the other side of the precipice now near at hand, he resolved to seek safety and shelter there. With the wind and rain beating him backward, he climbed the steep ascent, clinging with his hands and feet to the roots and bushes in his way until he reached the top, where was a precipice, with water rushing in wild turmoil fifty feet beneath. Now the lightning was so near it seemed to be playing through the forest in long flashes of brilliant light, and the dark clouds almost touched the tops of the trees. Suddenly, with greater intensity, the wind rushed shrilly over the mountain.

The boy, pale with terror, on the edge of the precipice, wound his arms about the trunk of a tall oak tree, clinging to it for support and protection. He dared not move another step, and all thought of reaching the cave was abandoned. Another blinding flash, followed by two more in quick succession! The poor young lad, alone on this height in the midst of the awful disturbance of the elements, frantic with terror, sent forth scream after scream that the wind and rain defied human ears to hear above their boisterous noise and din. Then the clouds opened, showing light like the blast from a furnace, and—oh, God!—a peal of thunder so loud that the village people with prayers on their lips fell on their knees, raising their white faces to heaven.

The tall oak tree was struck and rent asunder; flames shot up, were put out by the heavy rifts of rain, and clouds of steaming smoke filled the forest. The large tree staggered, then fell with a sharp noise of crackling branches that drowned the sickening sound of the dull thud of Christopher's body as it fell lifeless from the edge of the precipice into the swirling, tumbling rapids of the angry waters below. Nor was heard the clanking ring of the gold coin as it fell, striking against the rocks with a sharp, metallic sound, from his stiffening fingers.

CHAPTER XV.

SOON the storm was spent, and the sun, weary of hiding its hot face, burst forth through the drifting clouds that even now were dark and moved away with low, thunderous growls.

Margaret, who, with Sir Godfrey, had remained in the sitting room of her house during the awful outburst of the elements, now rose from her seat and, crossing to the window, threw open the lattice, saying with a little shiver: "Heaven be thanked! 'Tis over, with no harm done. That last peal of thunder had a murderous sound that filled my soul with apprehension. God keep all travelers and dumb animals safe!" she added seriously.

La Fabienne came to her side.

"If my bird is afraid of storms," he observed smilingly, "she should not have made her nest on the topmost peak of a mountain, so high that when the clouds grow angry and fall low she is perforce in the midst of the commotion."

"Godfrey"—Margaret turned her sweet, serious face to his—"thou knoweth that thy bird rests not lightly in her mountain nest. Although she is free to fly hither and thither as she listeth, there is an unpleasant constraint in all the air about her. Oh, bonny Paris," she exclaimed, throwing out her hand with a swift, dramatic gesture, "right willingly would I exchange the freedom of my village nest for captivity in a cage were it hung in thy bright streets!"

La Fabienne smiled tenderly at her earnestness as he encircled her with his arm.

"Soon, sweet love, by my faith, thou wilt exchange!" he said. "Already a cage, not of gilt bars, but a huge pile of stone and mortar, with doors and windows, is in readiness for thee. From it thou art ever free to come and go, the only bars that will ever seek to stay thee being these two arms that now intwine so lovingly about thee."

"And, prithee, happily will I stay close to their strong protection. Oh, my dear love," she cried, with soft eagerness, "dost know how much thou art to me? Who else in all this cold world have I? I love thee, Godfrey!"

For answer he clasped her closer to his heart.

Soon steps were heard and, looking from the window, they saw Hetty Taunston, a white sunbonnet in her hand, running up the path. With a cry of pleasure, Margaret advanced to meet her and, taking her hand, led her into the room.

"Hetty! Stranger! Welcome!" she cried gayly. "Methought thou hadst forsaken thy cousin."

Hetty made a shy courtesy to La Fabienne, who bowed in his most stately fashion, and said in a low, breathless voice, "Mother hast grown strangely stern of late, dear Margaret, and forbids me to visit thee, for what reason I know not."

The smile on Margaret's face faded.

"An' thou didst come now with her consent?" she asked.

"Nay, sweet cousin. In the cool of the morning mother rode down the mountain to Brother Haggott's, there to spend the night, so"—with a little toss of her head and a light laugh—"methought not to lose the chance to get a glimpse of thee unknownst to her."

"I' truth, sweet"—Margaret stroked her soft hair fondly—"an thy disobedience is discovered 'twill put thy people against thee sorely."

Hetty sighed.

"I wot not why my mother is so hard with me. Happen I put a small flower in my hair she is greatly angered. Dost think such ornament sinful, Margaret?" she asked wistfully.

Her cousin smiled, and La Fabienne broke into a hearty laugh of amusement.

"Poor little Mistress Hetty!" he exclaimed. "Didst never have other pleasure than singing psalms in the church?"

"Nay, unless 'tis walking home from prayers o' nights," she replied innocently.

Then, as he laughed again, this time more loudly, Hetty became conscious, blushed and hung her head. The sight of her pretty confusion touched Sir Godfrey.

"Here, Margaret, string thy lute," he cried, "and Mistress Hetty and I will tread a measure."

Margaret, smiling, touched the cords gently, and La Fabienne, bowing low, offered his hand to Hetty, who when she understood his meaning shrank back in alarm, with white face and parted lips.

"Nay, nay, sir," she stammered. "I must refuse thee. In our belief dancing is a sin that sends the soul to eternal punishment, for so our preacher hath ever taught us, and my brother Josiah would cast me out of the house an he heard I indulged in such practices."

"I must refuse thee."

Sir Godfrey, inclining his head courteously, walked away, and Margaret threw down her lute, interposing hastily to cover Hetty's embarrassment.

"What ails thee, man, that thou would ask a Puritan maid to dance? Thou must excuse him, Hetty, as he knows not the pious customs of our mountain people. Come, dear Godfrey, read to us from thy new volume of Will Shakespeare. 'Twill delight sweet merry, who hath great love for poetry, and as for me," she added, with a smile, "thou knowest the sound of thy voice is ever music in mine ears."

In reading and pleasant converse the afternoon passed so rapidly that it was after milking time when Hetty bethought herself of the lateness of the hour. Hurriedly saying her farewells, she ran down the roadway to the fence, sprang over the stile and went hastily in the direction of the pasture, where the cows, unaccustomed to such irregularity, had assembled at the gates, bellowing low plaintive calls for release.

Breathless and panting, Hetty let down the bars and, picking up a stick, proceeded to urge the cattle to a greater rate of speed than was usually necessary. If her mother had returned unexpectedly she was lost! Frightened at the thought, she gave the last cow in the line a sharp prod with the stick, who, not accustomed to such rough treatment, looked back at her reproachfully, then galloped awkwardly ahead of the others. The cows once in the barn, it was a matter of a few moments to collect the pails and stool for milking.

Other evenings Hetty sat down to this occupation cheerfully, usually singing lightly to the accompaniment of the soft sound of the milk streaming into the pail, but tonight the task was distasteful to her. She took her seat with a jerk and exclaimed irritably when the cow, in order to brush a fly from its back, whisked its tail across her face. "Keep still, thou old beldam cow! Dost think I want mine eyes scratched out o' my head?"

Although under the skillful manipulations of her hands the pails filled rapidly, Hetty's thoughts were not upon her occupation, but were over the meadows at the Mayland farmhouse, with La Fabienne and Margaret. The poetical and romantic vein that ran deep in this girl's nature had been touched by the afternoon's entertainment. The handsome dress of Sir Godfrey and his gallant bearing, combined with the exquisite beauty of Margaret in her soft flowing gown of white linen, caused Hetty's little heart to ache with sympathetic yearning.

"Was ever seen such a bonny pair o' lovers?" she thought. "Such trust, such evidence of love in every action! Ah, lackaday, woe is me!"

She sighed hopelessly.

"No lover more gallant than a Puritan farmer, and instead of a lute a milk bucket!"

At last, her task finished, she carried the heavy pails to the dairy.

"Methought Sir Godfrey regarded me with a pleasant gaze," she said to herself as she rested on a churn near the door.

Then as a sudden thought seemed to strike her she raised her face quickly, her eyes beaming with brightness.

"An I had had the roses in my hair and had worn my new lace tucker, mayhap he would ha' admired me more," she said. "As 'tis, perchance, he might speak o' me to a comrade high in favor at the French court who would fall in love with his description and come bravely here to woo me."

The thought was so pleasant to the imaginative, romantic soul of little Hetty that, forgetting to pour the milk into the pans and set them away for the cream to rise, she sat on the edge of the churn, her head resting against the wall, lost in her rosy hued day dreams. With her hand in her imaginary lover's, who wore a suit of light blue velvet trimmed with silver braiding, she was just making a low courtesy before the king of France when her illusions were roughly dispelled by the loud, hearty voice of Simon Kempster, who having seen his adored Hetty enter the dairy, followed in her wake to have a chat with her. From the excessive heat and the exercise of carrying a sack of potatoes a long distance Simon's face was red and perspiring; his rough suit of homespun, unbuttoned at the throat, soiled and shabby, hung loosely on his sturdy figure, and his broad farming hat made of reeds was torn and broken at the edges. He laid down the sack and entered.

Startled from her brilliant dreams by Simon's appearance, Hetty's thoughts fled from the court of the king of France and fastened themselves upon matters of the present, the most important of which were the full milk pails. Springing off the churn and returning Simon's pleased grin with an absent smile of greeting, she proceeded to fill the row of pewter pans with the white foaming milk.

Fanning himself with his broken hat, Simon watched her from his place at the door with admiring eyes. It occurred to him that Hetty had never before looked so pretty. The red color in her cheeks had heightened; her eyes were brighter; she held her little head higher, and in his estimation went about her homely task in the same manner as would have a queen. Looking at her white throat, he thought of the silver heart lying on her fair bosom that he had given her and that she had received with so much pleasure—a sweet secret safe between him and Hetty—and his honest heart gave a great throb.

Stepping to her side, he asked her for a mug of milk. Hetty's pleasant afternoon and her consequent happy day dreams had left her in sort of an uplifted state. She wished good fortune to all and gave Simon the refreshment he demanded, with a smile of happiness.

"Poor Simon," she thought as she carried the first full pan to the buttery. "What a kind friend he hath ever been to me. There's many a lonely hour I would ha' spent without him. When my lord doth come and I ride away I shall not forget Simon. Happen anon I may have influence to have him made lackey at the court."

Returning for another pan, with her heart and mind full of her good intentions, Hetty bestowed a more than ordinary sweet glance of esteem and kindly feeling upon her visitor, whose heart, always full of love for her, ached now to bursting with fancied encouragement. Only when wearing his new churchgoing black suit, he thought, had she ever given him kinder glances; so, regardless of his untidy appearance, he clasped the astonished Hetty in his arms, and thoughts that for months had been filling his mind now took the form of words and sprang from his lips in sentences expressing his passionate love for her.

"Art gone daft, Simon? Ha' done, I tell thee!" she cried in angry surprise, struggling to free herself from his strong embrace.

"Hetty, say the word," he entreated. "Promise to be my wife. Plight thy troth with me."

"Coward," she cried, "to hold a maid against her will! Dost think I want a cowboy for a husband?"

He loosed his hold and drew back as if stung, with staring eyes and a face from which all color had gone.

"Thou dost not love me, Hetty?" he asked solemnly. "An' all our sweet friendship is to go for naught?"

"Love thee?" Hetty gave her head a toss. "Whoe'er put thoughts of my loving thee into thine idle brain? Nay, silly. Look not so downcast," she cried, "an' take my best assurance that our friendship hath not been in vain, for so dear I hold thee in my heart that but e'en now before thou spokest thy foolish utterances I was making plans for thine advancement."

Unable to understand and much bewildered, Simon watched Hetty as she airily lifted her skirts and, holding her head very high, walked up and down the dairy in imitation of a grand lady.

"For thou knowest, Simon," she continued, with a patronizing nod, "methinks to marry a French courtier who will come anon on a white steed to woo me and take me back with him to Paris, there to set me up in a grand palace, with countless serving men and women to do my bidding."

"Hetty, what nonsense is this?" Simon cried in desperation. "What man is this thou lovest?"

"'Tis no man that I e'er seen as yet."

Hetty continued her pacing up and down.

"But know this, Simon Kempster, that I'll ha' none of thee. Dost think I would bother with thy little scraggly farm when I can be mistress of a grand estate? However," she concluded condescendingly, her foolish little mind slightly troubled by the broken hearted expression in her companion's eyes, "think not that I will forget thee, Simon. Why, who knoweth but I may make thee overseer of one of my farms in the provinces. Think on that—thy bright future—with joyful anticipation, good Simon."

He came and stood before her with white, drawn face, depicting desperate earnestness.

"Then thou hast meant nothing by any fair words thou might have spoken?"

"Fie, Simon," she giggled nervously, more affected than she knew by his seriousness, "out upon thy cross looks! Thy solemn countenance would give a body the megrims! Who said we could not be friends?"

Kempster turned his back upon her and walked away. At the door he paused.

"By all this talk then thou doth mean that thou canst not love me—that thou'lt never be my wife?"

"Thy wife! A common farmer's wife?" Hetty laughed a low, rippling laugh of amusement. "Nay, good Simon, thou must seek thy mate among thine own farm loving kind. As for me, I will wait the arrival of my gallant courtier."

"Hetty, hast forgotten the love verses?" His voice was entreating.

"The verses! Ha, ha!"

She laughed again, this time more merrily. "To speak o' your silly rhymes as verses, forsooth! Why, body o' me, good Simon, thou shouldst buy a book of good Will Shakespeare's verses, an' then thou'dst know what poetry is, an' ne'er more speak again, I warrant thee, o' thy nonsensical rhyming."

Something must have snapped in Simon's heart, it went down with such a bound. Blindly he turned and groped his way out of the house, not seeing the sack of potatoes resting on the ground, tripped and almost fell over the house dog lying asleep in the shade and strode on with head downcast over the wet roadway, into the dull shadows of the approaching twilight.

DEADLY ANAEMIA

Leads to Consumption Unless Promptly Cured.

Many a young life might be saved from consumption if simple anaemia were promptly treated. Anaemia is the doctors' name for weak, watery blood. When the blood is in this condition the lungs have no strength. The whole system begins to break down. Then the growing girl slips slowly into decline, until at last the cough starts and her doom is sealed. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can cure all weak, anaemic people without doubt or difficulty. They actually make new, rich, health-giving blood—they cure anaemia and prevent consumption. This has been proved in thousands of cases. Mrs. Edward Cochrane, Merriton, Ont., says:—"Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured my daughter Matilda, when I felt that her case was almost hopeless. For more than a year she was a sufferer from anaemia. She gradually grew weak, was subject to violent headache, and dark circles appeared under her eyes. She was melancholy, had no appetite and complained of being constantly tired. At different times she was treated by two doctors, but with no improvement. As her case progressed, she was attacked by violent palpitation of the heart, and a suffocating shortness of breath. She had a deathly pallor, took cold easily, and continued to decline in weight, until I felt that she was in a hopeless decline. At this time my attention was called to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I began giving them to her. She had not been taking the pills many weeks when her appetite was greatly improved, and this was the first sign that they were helping her. She continued the pills until she had taken eight or nine boxes, when she was again the picture of healthy girlhood. Every symptom of her trouble had disappeared, she has increased in weight, and is strong and robust. Her recovery is looked upon as marvellous, for the doctors thought her case hopeless."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will cure any case of bloodlessness just as surely as they cured this case. The pale, anaemic need only one thing—new blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do only one thing—they make new, rich life-giving blood. That is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure all common diseases like anaemia, headaches and backaches, indigestion, kidney trouble palpitation of the heart, neuralgia, nervous troubles, and those special ailments that make the lives of so many growing girls and women miserable. Be careful to get the genuine pills with the full name Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People on the wrapper around each box. If in doubt, send direct to The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and the pills will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50.

DO WE TALK TOO MUCH?

A Plea For Enough Silence to Enable Us to Think.

In the United States we are prone to talk too much. We do not sufficiently appreciate the value and beauty of silence.

During the after business hours, at the lunch and dinner table we talk on and on without ceasing, as though there was nothing worth thinking about. We invented the first talking machine, and no American is considered properly equipped unless he can talk at all times and upon all subjects.

Information must be imparted and ideas exchanged; it is essential to mental companionship and develops our faculties of expression. But there is no necessity for the endless and eternal talk in which so many of us indulge.

There is a great force and value in silence. It enables us to think. It forms and expresses character. The great men of the world were relatively silent men; they talked only when they had something to say, and the greatest of them said but very little.

We should study the beauty of silence and develop our thinking power rather than our talking power.

But doing work at home.

I must admit that it is true,
Though 'tis a sorry boast,
Whatever he is told to do
Is what he hates the most.

He'd play and eat awhile, and then
He'd eat awhile and play.

THE TIMES

MEDICINE HAT, N. W. T.

OLD AND NEW WHEAT FLOURS.

By Burr.

There is always a demand for old wheat flour a long time after the new comes in. This demand is not only from the city baker, who makes quality and conditions of flour a life study, but it extends even to the rural districts where the good farmer's wife has learned that she can get best results from old wheat flour.

This distinction between old and new wheat flours has existed only in later years, since farmers have adopted the practice of thrashing their wheat out of shock directly after cutting. When they made it a rule to put their wheat in stacks, ricks or barns, and allowed it to remain until all the elements that go to make up a perfect berry had passed from the straw into the grain, there was seldom any choice between the two flours. Then the grain was allowed to pass through the sweating period and become perfectly matured. It was not difficult then for the miller to make flour that would produce good bread the same day it was ground.

Now, as conditions have changed so materially, we must look for and practice the next best thing. It is contended that a good practice would be to grind and hold the flour for six months, when it would be suitable for breadmaking purposes.

If the new wheat is ground as it comes to the mill, it is liable to become infested with eggs that soon hatch into worms If it does not, consider how long one must be kept out of the use of the money he has invested in the wheat and and the cost of monufacturing it into flour. Besides this the flour will not be as good as if made from old wheat, for the simple reason that the wheat has not gone through the sweat and, to a certain extent, the sweating will take place in the flour greatly to its detriment. I am thoroughly convinced that flour made from old wheat will give bakers better satisfaction six weeks after being ground than will that made from new wheat thrashed out of stock in six months after being ground.

As suggested, to keep the flour six months after grinding from new wheat is one way to satisfy the trade. The next is to have sufficient storage to store enough old wheat to supply the trade with old wheat flour until the new is fit to grind. Do not imagine that consumers are cranks and don't know what they are talking about when they say they must have old wheat flour.—American Miller.

ORIGIN OF NAVAL TITLES.

Borrowed Military Terms From the Arabic and the Spanish.

In the early days the rank of admiral was unknown. The chief officer of a squadron was called a constable or justice. The term admiral as now used is derived from the Arabic "amir," or "emir," a commander (as in "amir-al-bahr," commander of the sea). The early English form was "amiral" and is still preserved as such by the French. The Spanish and Portuguese terms are "almirante," the Italian "ammiraglio." The title captain is not a naval but a military one. Under the older organization the real captain of a ship was a master, but a military officer was placed on board, though he knew nothing about nautical affairs. As the captain became bigger and bigger the master became smaller and smaller until at the present day he fills a subordinate position, which is gradually becoming obsolete, being replaced by an officer under the title of a navigating lieutenant.

Commodore comes from the Spanish "commendador." The title lieutenant, borrowed directly from the French, is more modern and is meant as a place holder or one who took the place of the captain when absent. Sublieutenant is still more modern and at the same time a misnomer, as he never was a sublieutenant, but merely a mate, or one who assisted. In former days we had no cadets, but volunteers. However, with the gradual advance of politness, the more seemly term of cadets was borrowed from the French and adopted as the title of the young gentlemen in our navy.

In place of paymasters the ships of old had pursers, who looked after the provisions. The naval purser did more. He had charge of the stores of the ship and the money chest. Surgeons and surgeons' mates fulfilled the duties of the doctors. Chaplains are of modern introduction. Naval instructors and schoolmasters ruled in their stead. The term mate was rather a universal one and applied to all branches.

Moroccan Slave Markets.

The sale of slaves in Morocco is a very remarkable ceremony. When the buyers have taken their seats in the market place the auctioneers advance in line to the center of the market and offer up a prayer. They appeal for divine favor on behalf of buyers and sellers and anathematize Satan and all his works. The buyers interpolate "amen" at the proper moments. When the last word of prayer has been said the slaves are brought forward, parcelled out among the auctioneers and led around the circle of buyers, who raise the prices of the men, women and children they desire to purchase.

Tongs were said to have been invented in China B. C. 1122, but representations of them have been found on the Egyptian monuments B. C. 2200. In India they are claimed as in use since B. London Sunday Closing Riots.

London had its troubles with Sunday closing laws when in 1855 there were riots caused by Lord Robert Grosvenor's bill to put down Sunday trading. A crowd hostile to the measure went to Hyde park "to see how the aristocrats kept the Sabbath," as a newspaper of that time put it. Carriages taking the afternoon drive were greeted with yells of "Go to church!" and with hooting that scared many horses into running away. A week later the police prohibited a meeting that was announced, but tens of thousands of people appeared, and there were vigorous struggles with the police. On the third Sunday pure rowdyism supervened, footmen were assaulted, and windows were smashed wholesale through the aristocratic districts. Then the trouble died out, and so did the bill.

The St. Bernard Pass.

The examinations made at the Great St. Bernard show that the pass was not only used by foot passengers, but by horsemen in Roman times. It seems that it was a safer route in the time of Vitellius than until the last few years. Excavations demonstrate that there were two buildings, much farther apart than is the present road. There was a temple there, and some fifty votive tablets have been found. It must always have been a place of refuge, though often subjected to attack. Signs of violence are demonstrated by the fact that votive tablets have been discovered broken and thrown into the swamp below. It was in the eleventh century that St. Bernard of Menthon founded the modern hospice.

With a view to ascertaining the extent of the mineral deposits and to enable the department to issue a complete geological and topographical map, the most extensive survey work in its history is now going on under the Geological Survey. There are 35 parties in the field, about two-thirds of whom are employed west of the Rocky Mountains. Some of the parties consist of eight or ten men, while one or two geologists, with assistants, are able to carry on the work in other districts. The last of these parties left at the middle of July, but most of them began the season's work in March. The homecoming will be about the middle of October.

St. Matthew's Flower.

No saint has a more interesting flower dedicated to him in the floral calendar than St. Matthew. This is the passion flower. It is thought to have emblems of the crucifixion, and to these it owes the name given to it by its Spanish discoverers in America. The imaginary resemblance of the corona to the crown of thorns is the basis of the fancy. In addition to that there are the five antlers for the five wounds and the three styles for the nails, while the hammer, the lancet and the scourge are also traceable.

The Broken Down Nervous System

Often Found in Persons Who are Apparently in Good Health—Extraordinary Effects of

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

It is not always the pale and bloodless who suffer from nervous exhaustion, and when a person of apparent good health finds himself almost helpless he gets little sympathy from physician or friends and not frequently his ills are attributed to the imagination.

Nervous diseases are slow in coming on and patience is necessary in their treatment. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is absolutely certain to be of benefit to anyone suffering from exhausted nerves, for it supplies the very elements of nature which go to create new nerve cells and instil new vigor and energy into the nervous system.

Miss Lena Hiebert, Lowe Farm, Man., writes:—"I suffered for two years with dizzy spells, pains in the back, cold hands and feet, nervousness, jerking of the limbs, sore tongue, soreness of arms and shoulders, and general exhaustion. About seven months ago I became so nervous that I could not rest or sleep, and could not do the least bit of work without suffering dreadfully from pains in the back. I could hardly walk, could eat very little, and felt that people were always watching my body twitch.

"I tried several medicines with little effect, and was a mere skeleton of skin and bone about to give up in despair when I heard about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and began using it. I have used in all fourteen boxes of this preparation, and it has built me up until I am now strong and well again. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done me a world of good, and I feel that I cannot recommend it too highly to persons who suffer as I have."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

WEALTH IN THE YUKON.

Our Fellow-Citizens There Are Contributing $10,000,000 Per Annum to Canada's Wealth.

While wealth in the form of wheat is being produced on the prairies to the tune of $100,000,000 in a year, our fellow-citizens in the Yukon are contributing $10,000,000 per annum in gold to the financial strength of the Dominion. This is a large output for so small a community. But the region has done better. When the rush was on the quantity of gold obtained was as high as $20,000,000 a year in value. The change is the result, not of any failure in the crop, but of the movement of population. It is estimated by a mining authority who has reported upon the territory that it will take 145 years to wash out the gold-yielding gravel now in sight.

The gold, as related by Dr. Thompson, M. P., in his recent speech in Parliament, is found along the creeks. The Yukon is a net work of small streams, running among the hills, and making for the larger bodies of water. These streams, in the course of centuries, have carried down from the hills vast quantities of gravel, along with which gold is mixed. The gravel has formed a bed or bench along the side of the creek, and here the miner operates. At the present time placer mining, or the washing of the gravel, is the chief industry. But it is clear that the gold thus secured must have come from some central source. It was in the rock before it was forced down the creek to its present resting place. Therefore, it is certain that there are quartz deposits in various parts of the district. These will be found some day, and then operations such as those in the Kootenays will be entered upon, with rich results.

The labor of the miner is not altogether what the far-away observer would expect it to be. Many of us suppose that, with the gold lying in the bed of the creek, all that the miner has to do is to run down to the shore in the morning and wash out a few hundred dollars' worth of nuggets before breakfast, the operation being repeated whenever our friend experiences a desire to be active. But this is a total misapprehension. The business is not so easy as that. Dr. Thompson, in his Parliamentary speech, has told us what really happens. When the miner has selected his claim he is confronted with the fact that there is upon it a bed of loam which has to be removed in order that the gravel, in which the gold is found, may be reached. For a considerable depth, then, the miner has to dig. If it is winter time, the earth has to be thawed, and this process is accomplished through the building of large wood fires. When the loam is out of the way the gravel appears. Here, again, heat has to be applied in order to move the material.

In some cases the miner uses the wood fires on the gravel. He will thaw as far as he can, and then haul the gravel thus loosened to the surface, and dump it while it awaits the next operation. Men who are in better circumstances employ steam. The steam is generated, and is conducted by pipe to the gravel, into which the end of the pipe is sunk, with the aid of a drill. The escaping steam soon drives out the frost, and the gravel is removable. Where an operator is particularly well off he will add a steam shovel to his plant, and thus haul out the material by wholesale. After the bed-rock has been reached—and the gravel is richer as it gets nearer the rock—the miner has to undertake engineering operations. He must follow the gravel under the unremoved earth, thus tunnelling as far as he can.

All the gravel is brought to the surface and dumped, ready for the next move. It takes the shape of huge conical mounds, of considerable height. Along a gold-yielding creek there will be a series of mounds awaiting treatment. The next process is the washing or sorting. For this business long flumes, a foot square, are provided. At the bottom of the flumes are nailed what are termed riffles, or cleats—pieces of wood or of iron—which catch the gold as it falls. Water is turned into the flumes, and as it courses down from end to end the gravel is thrown in. Seeing that the gold is heavier than the other material, it falls, and is caught in the cleats, while the gravel is carried away. When the water is turned off the miner learns what his luck has been. There may be a good deal of gold in the flume. On the other hand, the yield may be small. If gold has been exhumed it will be found to be in grains like flour, increasing in size to nuggets of the size of a pea.

It is clear that the Yukon miner has no sinecure. He works during the winter, except when the cold is exceptionally severe; and the summer, when the water is free, is naturally his busy time. There is a good deal of chance in his operations. He may make a big haul, and it is possible that his work may yield him little.

So far the Yukon has turned out $120,000,000 worth of gold. This year's output will bring the figure up to $130,000,000. To the people engaged in the industry the production means money. To Canada it means business. We do not furnish all the supplies for the Yukon, but we send a large proportion—probably half, and this trade is not to be regarded with indifference. In fact, it should be the task of the Government to enlarge it, and to give the people of the north every encouragement possible to prosecute, and, indeed, to increase their operations. The imposts upon the mining business should be reduced to the minimum, on the principle that the country does not need to make profit out of the territory, other than the advantage that comes from the enlargement of the trade and the industry of the people.

The Canadian Tortoise!

It is a trait of the Yankee to believe in his country, and brag about it—Perhaps not a bad trait at that, for it gives him confidence and stimulates him to "make good." But it is not well to overlook the fact that the Yankee has a neighbor to the north, a rather conservative, unassuming person, but with a tremendous amount of latent energy, dogged determination, and a magnificent domain with wonderful natural resources.

It is not to be denied that the Canadians are up and after us; with a Canadian gait, to be sure, but it is a gait that never flags and never takes the back track. Besides, you remember the fable of the tortoise and the hare.—Washington Star.

Hold Your Head High.

Nobility has difficulty to express itself in a sunken chest. If the knees are bent and seemingly too weak to support the body it is easier for them to shake with fear than if they are straight. Therefore, wives and business girls, stay-at-home misses and engaged lasses, keep your heads up. When the chin is raised, the chest high, courage and hope are indicated. The mind follows. It is true that a woman keeps her head up because she is hopeful; but even if hope is wanting, lift up the head, and it will come the nearer.

Ogilvies' Reputation goes into every barrel of Royal Household Flour

If Royal Household Flour were not as good as Ogilvies say it is, who would be the greatest loser?

You would try it once—if it were not good you would be a small loser, perhaps.

But Ogilvies would probably lose your custom.

They would also lose the custom of every other woman who tried it and of thousands who had never tried it but had been told that it was not as represented.

Therefore Ogilvies must make Royal Household Flour the best flour because they stake their reputation upon it, and if you and thousands of others found it was not the best, Ogilvies would ruin their business.

So Ogilvies make Royal Household Flour the best flour, in their own protection. Incidentally that is your strongest protection—it guarantees you the best flour because the brand carries with it Ogilvie's Reputation.

Ogilvies simply ask a trial—knowing that it will make a permanent friend for Royal Household Flour.

GROS VENTRE NOTES.

The fact that so many young men in the west are remaining bachelors, and so many young women in the east unmarried, is becoming a serious question, and one that interests the country at large.

A great many of the young men came out west with very little or no capital. The old home nest became crowded and they decided to make a move towards securing a home for themselves. The only way was to strike out west and try their luck. He takes up a homestead, works on it part of the summer, and on the railroad or in the lumber woods the rest of the year. Working this way a few years he gets a start. Then the steady work on the farm commences, and he begins for the first time to feel the need of a help-mate.

He finds himself up against a hard problem. It is not possible for him to leave his farm for any length of time. He has been roughing it for the last few years and has got rather out of touch with refined society. He is not sure how long it would take him to win the affection of one of the fair ones, in fact he feels rather afraid of the job and year after year passes away and nothing is done towards securing a life partner. These bachelors are real empire builders. They came out here when the country was new, helped to build our railroads manufacture our lumber, break up the prairie and make the west a country to be proud of. But they are not, as a rule, content. They are not filling the bill as first class citizens.

The lady teachers have been a blessing to the west and have brought joy and comfort to many a lonely shack. (The supply is limited I am sorry to say.) They come out here to teach at good salaries, but when they strike the west their teaching days are numbered. About one year is the limit. Then the trustees lose a teacher and some lucky bachelor wins a wife.

Some of the women who have married western men are helping in the good work by having their young lady friends of the east come out to visit them in their western home. Needless to say that the first few weeas of her visit she is kept rather busy dodging ropes and as the western boys are expert and persevering ropers, it is not long before some (Larry)et settles around her and she surrenders nicely. When she goes east again on a short visit to bid her friends good bye, she hoids a claim on a fine farm with no encumbrances but a young man who is supposed to act as manager.

If the land regulations could be made so that it would be profitable for the young people of both sexes to come west at the same time it would go a long way to solvethe problem. I mean both to have the privilege of taking homesteads with difference in favor of the women as to settlement duties. Then a man with a large family of girls wou:d have some encouragement to move west, brothers and sistees could come along and each take up claims; while the boys do the outside work the girls would do the house work, which is quite as useful and necessary. If the men that come west had their food properly cooked and their home kept in proper shape it would save some of them from early graves, and others from dispepti: torments the last of their days, and if all or nearly all the boys had sisters along it is not hard to guess how the business would be arranged in the near future.

Another advantage in connection with bringing the young women along, would be the moral effect on the young men. Any young man that had his sister along would be far more apt. to be a steady moral man than if he was turned loose without any restraint.

I claim that any law that has a tendency to draw the young men to a new country and not equally encourage the young women is not politic and will work disaster to the state in a few years. I notice some writers are warning women against marrying farmers, claiming that farmers wives have much more hard work and hardships than other women. We do not claim that farmers are all ideal husbands. But we do claim that there is as high a per centage of contented, happy women on farms as there is in any other calling. We would not advise any young lady to marry a farmer if she does not intend to take hold and do her share towards making a home. With the present arrangement for our young people and the foreign element increasing as it is, it is not hard to figure out where we will be at in a few years.

PROVINCIAL RIGHTS.

CONSERVATIVE VICTORY AT MOCK PARLIAMENT BY TWO-THIRD VOTE.

The Century Club opened their debating room on Thanksgiving evening last, in their rooms in the basement of the Methodist Church. A well filled hall of supporters of each party were present to listen to the speeches of the evening.

President Downey addressed the meeting and stated the objects of the Centuiy Club Debating Society and outlined the policy that would be followed during the coming winter Amongst other things he said that as Alberta had been formed into into a province it was proposed that two parties should be formed, one representing the Conservatives and Provincial Righters, the other the Liberals. Last winter the policy was on Dominion lines, but this winter it would be Provincial. Last winter the Liberals held office and the questions to be discussed this evening were Provincial Rights and three speakers would be chosen from each party who would speak on the questions affecting the province of Alberta, and after the debate the election would take place, and one of the parties placed in power. The President stated that it would be in order to elect a chairman and vacated the chair amidst cheers.

On motion of Fred S. Pingle, seconded by J. Benson the Rev. J. M. Harrison was elected Chairman of the debate.

Mr. Harrison made a splendid address, and mentioned great men who had made themselves great speakers by commencing as the young men of Medicine Hat were doing in the Century Club, and trusted that success would be the result of this winter's debates. He would now ask Messrs Downey, J. H. Binns and J. Benson, who were the representatives of the Liberal party, to take the seats to his right and Messrs H. Stephenson, Nelson Spencer and F. S. Pingle, the seats to his left. Each speaker would be given five minutes to place his case before the audience, after which the election would take place.

Mr. Downey, the first speaker, referred to the prosperous times enjoyed under the reign of Liberalism and briefly touched on the grants given to Alberta in lieu of their land and resources, and thought the school question was first class when Premier Haultain had placed it on the statutes in 1901.

Mr. Stephenson followed and went into labor questions and prohibition and stated the corrupt practices of the Liberal Government. He believed in an honest Government for the people. He believed in a principle and was sure that when the people were asked to mark their ballots they would do so on principle than for party.

J. H. Binns, (late Premier of Canada etc. etc.), next took the floor. Mr. Binns was very flowery and made flattering remarks concerning his Government and their generous treatment to the Province of Alberea when being formed into a Province. He said that the Liberal party at Ottawa had given a good and sufficient grant of money in lieu of lands for the good government of this province, that they had a policy for the keeping of their lands for the Dominion of Canada instead of the new Province, while the Conservatives had no policy, but only said they wanted the lands, and he was sure that the great men at Ottawa would administer these lands better than the ignorant people of the Territories or of this province could do Mr. Binns next took up the school question and styled the policy of the school question as correct, and said it was not a separate school but a common school. The speaker was waxing eloquent when the bell sounded for time, and he turned to the Chairman sharply and said "Thankyou." (Cheers.)

Mr. Nelson Spencer ably replied to Mr. Binns and showed that his arguments were wrong and put the leading question squarely and concisely before his listeners. He took up the land question and stated it was not a fair deal. He referred to the great wheat producing prairies and said it was not the Liberal Government the farmers had to thank for their present prosperity, but it was our high soverign, God and Providence who gave us all that we should be thankful for and no credit was due to Sir Wilfred's Government at Ottawa. The speaker most ably went into the school question in all its phases and conclusively proved beyond a doubt that one national school was what was required for a new country in order to make good Canadians. Mr. Spencer showed the audience beyond a doubt that we were entitled to legislate on the question of education and it was a shame and a disgrace that we should have separate schools fastened upon us for all time to come. His speech was characteristic in that good common sense was used in his arguments and his speech was powerful and many of his points against the shameful treatment accorded to the Province of Alberta by Ottawa Machinism went home to the hearts of his listeners. (Cheers.)

Mr. John Benson spoke for four minutes on Agriculture and roads. He referred to the lands and said there were only small portions of this vast Province that the lands were any good for Agricultural purposes and he thought that the price of $1.50 per acre for 25,000,000 acres was a large grant for a young province to handle, but he did not tell his audience that instead of that number of acres we had nearly 160,000,000 acres of lands. He said the lands had never belonged to the North-West Territories and it was only right that Ottawa should administer them as they had organized the Immigration Policy and were daily settling up this country with good emigrants and it was impossible for the Province to deal with such a question as control of lands. He thought the land policy of the Dominion Government a good one and it was his opinion that the land question would be more effectually dealt with at Ottawa than here on the spot. Mr. Benson touched very lightly on the school policy but was sure that his party would do what was right and if they had a policy of separate schools he would support the policy of his party. He did not think that the candidates seeking election should have the say or be responsible for either the school or land question as this was a purely federal matter and we had not the wherewith to say, but they were the people to deal with this legislation and the Dominion should be held responsible while we should acquiesce and carry out the duties given to us from Ottawa. The Speaker had not finished his agricultural address when time was called.

Mr. Pingle, the next speaker, corrected the mis-statements made by the previous speaker, but as the time was limited he did not propose to give them an Agricultural lecture, but would deal briefly with the Land and School Questions, the two questions upon which the campaign of the Province of Alberta is being fought. By a federal act passed at the last session of the Dominion Parliament, he said, we had been created a province without provincial rights, and the Conservatives and Provincial Righters were fighting for their freedom and right to legislate on the important question of education and the control of our public domain, while the Liberal Party were upholding the actions of the provisions of the short Autonomy Bill which took away our rights, to legislate on the subject of education and the control of our lands. In lieu of our lands the Act gives us a small grant of a few thousand dollars upon an estimate of 25,000,000 acres while we have, as Sir Wilfred on a former occasion stated, in the neighbourhood of 160,000,000 in Alberta, and valued at the low price of $1.50 per acre. Gentlemen this is square robbery and rank injustice. Continuing he pointed out that the lands have sold for $16 to $20 per acre. The Hudson Bay Co. are listing their lands at $6 to $10 while the C. P. R. Co. are selling for $5 to $16, and yet these lands are valued at only $1.50 per acre. The Government at Ottawa based their calculations upon 25,000,000 acres, but what about the other 160,000,000 acres? He condemned the grant to the G.T.P. and did not consider it a fair deal for the new Provinces to get such a small value for their rich lands. The School Legislation he considered was unconstitutional and saddled the provinces with separate schools for all time. He contended the North West Territories were taken into Confederation on the 15th July 1870. The Conservatives were fighting for a free hand in Educational matters and to cut away from the apron strings of the party at Ottawa.

Messrs Benson and Spencer were allowed another five minutes each after which

Mr. R. Dunn was appointed Returning Officer and the vote was taken, the result being the election of the Conservatives and Provincial Righters by a two-third majority.

Cheers were in order and they were well given.

The Conservatives are holding a caucas as we go to press and a leader will be appointed and a Session of the first Provincial Parliament will be held with the Conservatives in office in the course of the next three weeks.

CHAPTER XVI.

ADAM, the goldsmith, waited late that afternoon for Christopher's return. Impatient at his delay and angry at the sight of the unfinished chores, he paced up and down the room restlessly, pausing at frequent intervals to look out of the doorway with nervous anxiety toward the forest footpath.

"'Tis passing strange," he muttered. "The lad's ne'er done the like before. If he'd a thought of fear I'd say the storm delayed him, but such things as thunder showers 'ud ne'er bother Christopher. Nay," shaking his head, "the lad's willful and careth not that the chores are undone."

Just then a shadow fell across the threshold. Adam came forward expectantly.

"Ah, bless me, Mistress Taunston!" he exclaimed in surprise. "Methought 'twas Christopher. Happen didst see that good for naught as thou didst come through the forest?"

"I saw him not, good Adam," the dame replied, "but I walked rapidly, as I am in haste to reach the house of Sister Hemming, that my son brought me word an hour since had been visited by the Lord with an affliction of numbness, so I bethought me that my prayers and services might be of use at the bedside. Did thy lad stray away?"

"'Twas after the hour of noon that I sent him to the Mayland farm with a trinket that I mended for the young mistress," he replied. "I' truth I would not ha' been in such good haste to send it had not thy good son Josiah warned me of possible evil contained in the papist symbol of the golden cross."

The woman threw out her hand in a manner that suggested hopeless resignation at the rashness of the old man's act and, addressing him harshly with tragic earnestness, said: "Thou didst send thy lad with that emblem of the black art, Adam Browdie. Forsooth," with an ominous shake of her head, "'twas no wonder then that the storm rose betimes, turning peaceful elements into devil's turmoil to bring honest folk to their knees calling on God to save them! Ah, sorrowful day!" she sighed drearily, then, raising her voice in rebuke, said, "'Twas thy duty, man, to ha' burned the wicked trinket instead o' sending an innocent lad with it to bring destruction to him!"

Adam, pale with apprehension, cowered back against the door. The words of his visitor were so positive and her manner carried such conviction with it that the old man was already aghast at the possible consequences of his foolish act.

"I must be on my way, good neighbor." Mistress Taunston lifted her skirts preparatory to leaving. "But happen thy lad returneth not by nightfall I would counsel thee to rouse the village, call the men out for a search, and if aught of harm hath befallen Christopher as a result of touching that cross," she continued sternly, with a threatening emphasis, "I wot measures must be taken at once to force the wearer of it to destroy it."

"Aye, aye!" the trembling old man concurred eagerly. "Such evil gimcracks worn for the sake o' wicked vanity should be destroyed. Mayhap, alas, enough harm hath been done a'ready! Ah, woe is me! 'Tis bad time we ha' fallen on!"

"Truth hast thou spoken. God keep thee, Adam."

"And thee, good dame."

The woman passed on, grim and severe, and the shadow receded slowly from the threshold.

That night a party of men carrying torches searched the forest vainly for the missing lad, calling his name loudly, then listening with straining ears for a response. But none came to their strong and eager cries, the accustomed stillness of midnight on the mountain being broken only by sounds of hurrying feet, shrieks of birds, roused from their nests by the unusual disturbance and glare of lights, as they flew through the trees with noisy clapping of wings, and the peculiar wailing sound of the wildcat as with gleaming eyes and showing its teeth savagely it slunk among the underbrush.

But it was not until morn that they found him. At the peaceful hour of dawn, when the sun was sending its first warm rays of light across the horizon line, tinting the sky with rosy pink that presaged the coming of another glorious day of life and activity, Taunston shouted to the others that he had found him, and his companions, running to the edge of the precipice, saw the bruised and swollen body of poor Christopher, held securely by a protruding root of a gnarled oak tree that had caught under his jacket, tossing up and down on the rushing, tumbling waters of the stream below, his glazed eyes wide open and staring, looking vacantly into the shocked and sorrowing faces above him.

CHAPTER XVII.

THE next day Sir Godfrey La Fabienne, accompanying the mistress of the Mayland farm, was riding up the mountain toward the village, slowly and with slackened rein, talking earnestly in low tones.

"Nay, Godfrey, I am not ill. But since the shocking news of Christopher's death I cannot lift his trouble from my heart," she was saying in reply, evidently, to some remark he had just made. "I do reproach myself that in mine own security I allowed the lad to follow his inclination and go into danger. One commanding word from me, with assurances that I would take all blame of the goldsmith's anger, would have sent him to the kitchen. Ah, lackaday!"

"Thou'rt over sensitive, my love, an' must needs bear the suffering of all about thee," La Fabienne said. "Blame not thyself for what was not thy fault. By the Lord, thou asked the lad to remain and he would not. None other, Margaret, unless she had thy tender conscience, would so unjustly reproach herself. Come, cheer thee. Laugh, smile, sweet, or else, I swear, I'll get the blue megrims myself!"

"Jest not, dear Godfrey, for methinks that others hold my carelessness against me, for yesternight, when riding through the village, I noticed sullen looks, and instead of the usual formal greetings saw only frowning glances or averted faces."

"Again 'tis thine imagination that's at fault," her companion insisted, in gay good humor. "God's pity, but I cannot much blame thee, sweet, for of all lean shanked, sour faced folk I e'er have met these mountain folk take precedence. Thou should hear good Gaston's surly jests at their expense! Right merrily would thou laugh, my sweet."

Margaret not making reply, they pursued their way in silence until they reached a low log house, where just before the door a group of children were throwing corn to a hen and her young brood. An elder girl, barefooted and dirty faced, looked up curiously at the approach of the riders; then, throwing back her tangled hair, opened her eyes in wonder at the sight of such unusual splendor, for the bright sun fell on Margaret's hair and lighted the threadwork of gold on her dress, the soft wind caught her long white veil of gossamer wound about her riding hat, tossing it lightly in the air, and La Fabienne, in his usual splendid dress, rode after her, smiling, his hand in the leather purse of his belt, ready to throw some loose coin to the youngsters.

At that instant a woman in a torn cotton frock appeared at the doorway, her face drawn in terror and pointing a long finger toward Margaret.

"Tirzah! Clarinda! Luke!" she shrieked. "Come in behind the doors! 'Tis the lady with the evil cross! Hast forgot the bad Christopher's fate? Run! I command ye to run!"

The panic stricken children, with white faces and in great fear, rushed to their mother's side, clinging to her skirts tremblingly as she slammed the door and noisily drew the bolt.

"What said the shrewish wench?" asked La Fabienne as he took his place beside Margaret.

"I did not exactly get her meaning, but she called the children from me, warning them of poor Christopher's sad death," she replied. "As I told thee, Godfrey, all blame of the lad's misfortune is laid to mine indifference."

La Fabienne noting the cloud on his companion's face, his own grew dark, and he laid his hand upon his sword.

"By heaven, Margaret, an any man makes such insinuations in my hearing I'll run him through!"

"Nay, talk not of bloodshed, Godfrey," she answered, with a gentle sigh, "but think rather of the time when we will ride away together from these unjust people to a joyous and happy life in France."

"Naught but that hope and the sweet joy of thy presence doth keep me here, I do assure thee, Margaret," he replied seriously. "But, mark me, sweet, until we leave no man slights thee without settling the reckoning with me."

Margaret, whose kind heart was full of sorrow and trouble at the recent misadventure, also the consequent conduct of her neighbors, took heart at her lover's fond words.

"Thy protection and love giveth me great comfort, Godfrey," she replied. Then, with a little sigh, "But, I wot, this is a most depressing neighborhood."

La Fabienne laughed lightly, amused at her last observation.

"See, yonder," she continued, "is Adam's cottage, the goldsmith, where poor Christopher's body lieth awaiting burial. Methinks the wreath of roses I sent yesterday was not enough to express my sympathy. I would like to offer Adam some gold, Godfrey. Happen the old man is in need in his hour of trouble."

At the sound of horses' hoofs Adam Browdie appeared at the door, and when he saw who it was drew back, with blanched face, his tongue cleaving to the roof of his mouth.

"I give thee good day, Adam," Margaret said, riding closer, "and I have much sympathy with thee in thy sorrow. Wilt take this small handful of gold, good man, as at times like these folk have many extra needs?"

The sun, glittering over the house, fell on the cross lying on her bosom, illuminating it. In Adam's fear and terror it was all he saw, and to his excited imagination it appeared to blazen forth, covering the whole front of her dress.

"Go on thy wicked way!" he cried in quavering tones, "and stop not before the door where thou hast wrought such dire evil! Thy wreath of roses lieth in ashes in the road! We applied a torch ere thy servant left; and thy gold, take it with thee. I want it not!"

He closed the door and fastened it, drawing the bar across with noisy violence. Margaret's face was white as she picked up her rein, and La Fabienne rode at her side with dark looks and flashing eyes.

"Gads, in France we have a man whipped for less than that! Mon Dieu," he exclaimed angrily, "were not the man so old and did not death lie in his household I would have him out! No man could live after those rough words to thee!"

The look of sad wonder in Margaret's eyes did not leave them as she guided her horse to the narrow footpath that led through the forest.

"I feel for them naught but good will and they treat me with keen dislike," she said. "Fain would I understand them. Dost get their meaning, Godfrey?"

"Fair love, thy pure and generous soul could never grasp the meaning of their cruel and wicked ignorance," he answered, then, seeing that the shadow still rested on her face, cried in vexed tones:

"Margaret, cease sorrowing! Sweet, thou hath done naught but show them acts of kindness! Some enemy of thine hath been at his foul work most diligently. 'Tis a man I've had mine eyes on!"

"Thou meanst my cousin Josiah?"

The blood rushed to La Fabienne's face.

"Call him not thy cousin, Margaret," he cried hotly, "for I swear he hath no feeling of kinship for thee. Damme, but I detest the man! The mere mention of his name doth cause my gorge to rise."

Just then a large, hulking lad who was coming toward them with a bundle swung on a stick over his shoulder, humming a tune as he came, at the sound of their voices ceased his noise suddenly, hesitated to make sure, then pushed through the brushwood and slunk away under the trees in the opposite direction.

"Was not that Toby, the horse boy?" Margaret asked. "Strange that he should dodge and hide in that odd manner!"

Sir Godfrey shook his head and frowned, then, as if anxious to dispel the gloom that had fallen on them, called out gayly to Margaret, who was riding ahead: "See the sun setting behind the hills, sweet love. What redness it doth reflect against the sky! I wot tomorrow will be warmer still."

By now they had reached the open roadway, and the lands of the Mayland estate spread out before them.

"An' there is Elsbeth at the gate," Margaret said, with a happy laugh. "Fie on thee for a foolish old woman!" she called to her in passing, with affectionate gayety. "Hast naught to do but look out for our return?"

Urging on her horse, she galloped toward the house. Suddenly La Fabienne, who rode slowly to look at something by the wayside that attracted his attention, felt the pressure of a hand on his arm. Turning, he saw Elsbeth.

"Sudden misfortune hath befallen us," she said in an agitated whisper. "The servants, even old Giles, have left."

He returned her gaze steadily.

"So, ho, thou tellest me but what I did suspect a moment since," he answered. "What reasons gave the cowardly churls?"

"They said," she replied, with tears in her eyes, "that they would work no longer for a mistress who wore such an evil cross, that there were strange tales going about that our bonny Margaret was a witch, and that she kept her evil magic and black arts in the papist cross she wore upon her bosom."

La Fabienne's hand clutched tighter to the rein.

"Said they so? The low bred poltroons! What further mischief dost think that gray clad villain, Josiah Taunston, doth meditate, good Elsbeth? Parbleu, doth the fool think he is aiming blows at a defenseless woman? I' the past I have thought his petty spite and covetousness were too small to notice; but, bon Dieu, an he persists in his persecutions I'll have a settling with the fellow."

"Go on thy wicked way!"

Then he added in a lower voice: "'Twere better, methinks, not to distress thy mistress with this news. Prithee, too much already of unpleasant nature hath happened to grieve her."

His horse cantering up to the doorway where Margaret had pulled rein, letting her animal nibble some grass growing beside the path, he sprang down and assisted her to alight.

"I've called Giles," she said, "but no one answers. Whistle, Godfrey, so that they may know we have returned."

"Sweet, I'll be thy horse boy." La Fabienne caught her horse by the rein. "Elsbeth says thy servants rose against her authority, and she sent them packing. Look not so serious, Margaret," he urged. "We can replace them ere the dawn of another day."

"Elsbeth"—Margaret turned her white face to the old woman and spoke sternly—"speak truth to me, I command it. Did my hirelings leave my house because of any feeling of dislike or aversion to me?"

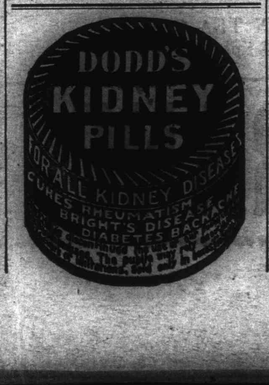
"Bonny babe, sweet Margaret," cried the old woman tremblingly, "they said—nay, naught against thee so much—but that the cross thou didst wear wast papist and wicked, containing evil that wrought harm to others! Happen thou'lt take it off, sweet," she added, with hope of encouraging Margaret, "I wot they'd all come back and be glad to serve thee."

The young mistress of the Mayland farm raised her head quickly, and the color that had forsaken her cheeks at the unexpected tidings of her servants' defection returned to them. Her eyes sparkled dangerously.

"Elsbeth, an thou say such words thou cannot understand me. I am willing and eager to help these people and to do all for them within my power, but they cannot dictate to me. For shame, Elsbeth! Thou weak and silly old woman, to talk with a coward's tongue!" she exclaimed. "Dost think a woman of the Mayland blood would forgive a faithless, ignorant, disloyal servant who hath spoken ill of her? Forsooth, how long is it since I have come to the pass when I must, at a hireling's command, remove that which I see fit to wear. This is my home"—she raised her head proudly—"built by mine own dear grandfather and mine by every right. I have done no person ill either by thought or deed, and my cousin need not think he can force me from what is mine own. Only this morning I promised myself a speedy departure from this ill fated village, but now methinks to remain a good time longer."

Her head held high, she turned to her lover with a flashing smile.

"Thou'lt be my horse boy, Godfrey, in thy satin doublet?"



"Right willingly will I, O proud and beauteous mistress!" La Fabienne, with answering smile, doffed his hat to the ground.

"Then I cannot be unhappy, for did not some wiseacre say 'a man is rich that hath one faithful friend?' Come, lead the horses, and I will follow to assist thee, Godfrey, for I trow thou wouldst a-weary soon with no horse boy about to cast thine imprecations at."

Both laughed merrily at this sally; then, with deep and tender protection, La Fabienne threw his disengaged arm about her.

"Aye, come with me," he said, "though thou'lt hinder more than thou will help, I warrant thee. But, gads, a man can work with a better heart in sunshine than in shadow, and where thou art not, sweet, 'tis always dark to me!"

A Canadian Rock Road.

"Speaking about rock roads," said Thomas Jobson of Macon, Mo., to a Kansas City Star reporter, "I remember an old Canadian road built by my father in 1858. He took the contract from the municipality of St. Catharines to build a three mile road through a town that would outlast anything hitherto constructed in that country. He began by grading an oval base about as they do now. Then he took cobblestones averaging six inches long and three or four inches wide and set them on end on the roadbed, very close together. Then a man would go over the stones with a hammer and knock off the sharp points that extended too high.

"The next course was what they called metal. This was fine pieces of stone which would go through a ring an inch and a half in diameter. An inspector went over the work with such a ring and threw out all pieces which would not pass through. This metal was evenly distributed over the cobblestones and rolled with a 700 pound roller. The final course was gravel. This was much finer than the metal and filled every crack. It was then well rolled. When so treated the surface of the road was as smooth and hard as could be. The road was something of a novelty up in Canada in those days. There was a great deal of heavy hauling through St. Catharines, and many previous attempts had been made to secure a permanent roadway through the town.

"I was up there twenty-five years after father's old road was built and found it in almost as good condition as it was when I first saw it. The people said they had made a number of attempts to construct similar roads, but had never succeeded in building one that would stand the test of time and heavy traffic so well."

The Ideal Beef Steer.

The Iowa State Agricultural College sets forth as the analysis of an ideal beef steer the following points: A short, wide head, short neck, smoothly blended into the shoulders; broad, compact and well covered shoulders, wide, arching ribs, broad loin, deep body and long, wide hind quarters, well filled out in rump, thighs and twist; a deep, even covering of flesh—lean meat muscle—with just enough fat to marble the flesh nicely and give it a smooth, bright external appearance; fine bone evidenced in refinement of head and limbs; pliable skin of medium thickness, with soft hair; a reasonable trimness of body, to give good dressing percentage. These points make up the profitable steer for feeder or butcher and should govern the breeder in the production of beef animals.

Cows Need Fiber In Food.

There is one point that some feeders lose sight of, and that is the value of fiber in feed of cows, or, in fact, of any animals adapted to the consumption of fresh and dried grasses. Fiber is coming to be recognized as a very important constituent of the feed of cows. Where it has been ignored, as in the great feeding yards connected with distilleries, the results have not been good. Just how much fiber the cow must have in her food to do her best is not now known, but the more it is investigated the more does it appear that the amount is quite large. We can easily overdo the matter of feeding concentrates.—Farm Progress.

Pigs on Pasture.

The spring pigs that are on red clover or alfalfa pasture are now making pork at the minimum cost. If on grass pasture, light supplemental feeding of ground grain or mill stuff or some kind is advised.—Farm, Stock and Home.

MacMahon's Epigrams.

When Marshal MacMahon in the Crimean campaign took the Malakoff by storm and wrote his celebrated dispatch, "J'y suis, j'y reste" ("Here I am; here I stay"), these words made him famous all over the world. Yet his friends said that the worthy soldier had written them in the most matter of fact manner, with no thought of phrase making. The most surprised person over the success of this epigram was MacMahon himself.

Ancient Jewelry.

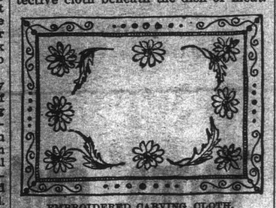
The jewelry found in an excavation near one of the pyramids of old Memphis, Egypt, exhibits about as much skill in working gold and precious stones as now exists, although the articles found were made 4,300 years ago. The figures cut on amethyst and carnelian are described as exquisite and anatomically correct. The gold is skillfully worked, and precious stones are let into it so as to give the effect of enameling.

THE GIRL LOAFER.

She Who Spends Her Time In Doing Absolutely Nothing.

A girl loafer—that does not sound very pretty, does it? And yet there are a good many girls whom the title fits. In other words, there are girls who spend their time doing absolutely nothing. Circumstances do not render it necessary for them to earn their living, and so they sit at home and fritter the precious moments away in useless pursuit or idleness. Don't a good many of them lie in bed in the morning and let their mothers get up and get breakfast? And don't you think they also dress up in their best clothes and spend the afternoon enjoying themselves while their mothers stay home and prepare the evening meal? And when they are home they spend their time reading trashy novels or trimming equally trashy hats.

When a girl goes to a party and is late in getting to bed, she looks on it as quite proper and natural that she should be in bed late the next morning, and all of the family accepts the fact as a matter of course. But if the mother is up half the night with an ailing baby, neither her lazy daughter nor any other member of the family seems to think it necessary that she should stay in bed and make up her broken sleep. Perhaps if some of these girls could appreciate the enormous value of time they would not waste it. Our lives are such tiny drops in the ocean of time, and we can never, never call back one precious lost minute.



Dear girls, don't allow yourselves to be called by that ugly word "loafer," and yet you will be if you deserve it. If your brothers lie around the house all day, half dressed and doing nothing, they would be called loafers, so why not you as well as they? Loafing is a habit that grows on one with fatal rapidity, and unless you want to be held irrevocably in its clutches you must break away from it at once.—Detroit News-Tribune.

THE CARVING CLOTH.

A Pretty One Adds a Dainty Touch to the Dinner Table.

A carving cloth is a necessity if one has any regard for the dainty spotlessness of the tablecloth, and it is as easy to have a pretty carving cloth—one that will add to the appearance of the table—as it is to have a plain one.

No really careful housekeeper allows her table to be laid without the protective cloth beneath the dish of meat.

EMBROIDERED CARVING CLOTH.

The one shown in the illustration is durable as well as ornamental and involves only a moderate amount of labor. The material is Belgian linen. The flowers are embroidered with white; shaded with palest gray, and the leaves with delicate greens. The edge is hemmed and hemstitched, and on the hem the scrolls and disks are embroidered with white.

Soft Castile Soap.

Many persons who cannot use castile soap for the face and hands will find it agrees perfectly with the body and in that case is better for the bath than any other soap. One of the most convenient things to have on every washstand is a jar of soft castile soap. This is made by scraping a cake of pure soap and adding about a pint and a half of water. Put them together into a saucepan and stand over a brisk heat, but not one that will boil the liquid. When the soap is dissolved pour into a wide mouthed jar. When the mixture cools it will be jelly. This is excellent to have by to rub on the hands when washing, diluted with more water to which a couple of pinches of soda are added. It is a harmless and cleansing shampoo to be rubbed into the head, which is then rinsed thoroughly.

Tact In Dress.

Tact in dress is necessary to every woman who hopes to become representative of that refinement which is the chief ornament of womanhood or girlhood. It is rare that one sees French people dressed out of keeping with their surroundings or position. In the latter half of the nineteenth century a noted woman of France, Mme. de Girardin, said: "Style ought inevitably to vary according to position and age. It should fit itself to the fortune, to the habits, to the form, to the circumstances and, indeed, to every detail in the life of those who wish to appear its leaders." This truism is as real today as at the time it was written, but unfortunately outside of la belle France this fitting of self to one's sphere is honored more in the breach than in the observance.

Pantry Shelves.

A fine idea for pantry shelves is to use two coats of white paint and then a finishing coat of white enamel. Wash the shelves with cold water as soon as the enamel dries, and then it will harden quickly. Over this place no oilcloth or papers, but leave the shelves bare, and notice the improvement. Since there are no covers under which crumbs can collect, there is no encouragement for mice, the enamel is easily wiped off with a damp cloth, and with such a finish it is never necessary to clean the entire pantry at once. It keeps clean all the time.

Pretty Eyes.

The woman who wants pretty eyes will not have them circled with dark lines, nor will she have great eye sacs under her eyes. The pretty girl's eyes are never heavy in the lids. They are never laden underneath with great bags. They are never red as to the lashes, and the brows are never unruly. On the contrary, the eyes of the pretty girl are of the shining variety, beautifully clear and of the kind which can open widely and look one right in the face. To get eyes like this, one must not abuse the eyes. The girl who sews late at night, the girl who rubs her eyes, the girl who lets her lids and lashes become neglected, this girl cannot hope to have pretty eyes. The eyebrows should not be neglected. The woman who wants nice eyebrows can beat a little almond oil and apply it nightly to the eyes with a small brush. In this manner the eyebrows can be influenced. Often they are inclined to grow straggly, but by pairing them with a brush regularly they can be trained into shape.

To Amuse Children.

All mothers have found that the best way to entertain small children is to let them play the games they are used to playing. It amuses them more than new ones. Blind man's buff is usually very successful. A heart hunt might meet with their approval. Cut out a dozen or more very large pasteboard hearts, painted red, with little ribbons and loops slipped through the top. Hide these away in one room and in the hall. The child who finds the most is given a prize, so is the child who finds the second, fourth and least number. Let the children keep the hearts they find, pinning them to the front of the frock. The prizes could be large candy boxes in the shape of hearts and red candy hearts, tied around with red ribbon.

O'Brien Potatoes.

What to Eat vouches for the excellence of "O'Brien potatoes," which ought to appeal to lovers of pepper dishes. Cut potatoes in slices and parboil. Butter a baking dish and arrange the potatoes in alternate layers with sliced Jamaica peppers or pimentoes. The canned pimentoes are usually indicated. Sprinkle each layer with a little flour, pepper, salt and bits of butter. Fill up the dish with the liquor from the can, add milk or cream, cover with breadcrumbs and bits of butter and bake.

A Pious Face Wash.

Here is an enchanting recipe copied from a book on the toilet published in 1834—in Boston, of course:

"A Wash to Give the Face a Younger Look.—Take sulphur, one and one-half ounces; G. oliban and myrrh, two ounces; amber, six drams; rose water, one and one-half pints. Distill the whole in balneum mariae, wash yourself with some at bedtime, and in the morning with barley water, and with the blessing of God it will not fail to give you a younger look."

Where will you find such mingled piety and shrewdness in modern beauty papers? Think how the ladies who advertise some wonder working cream or powder could spare their consciences at the last great day if they would only insert such clauses in the recipes they give. And do not the ingredients sound delightful? Amber, which suggests Cleopatra and her pearl (by the way, what a cosmetic that should make), and G. oliban, whatever it may be—it sounds like the name of a Christian.—Exchange.

For a Young Man With Money.

If I were a young man with a certain amount of capital and desirous to increase it at the expense of fools, I should become a dealer in pictures and in works of art. The prices paid at auctions for such articles by a few dealers bidding against each other are abused, although a vast number of very wealthy fools who purchase them from dealers are ready to pay still higher. The mere fact that some article has been sold in an auction room at a high price attracts them, and they buy it from the dealer at a higher one in order to be able to point to it in their houses and to tell their friends how much it cost them. The dealer consequently makes much money by acting as a middleman. Whether there is any arrangement to run up the price among dealers I do not know, but I have always wondered whether this is the case and whether the original owner always gets the selling price at the auction.—London Truth.

KEEP CHILDREN WELL

Your little one may be well and happy to-day, but would you know what to do if it awoke to-night with the croup, or went into convulsions to-morrow? The doctor may come too late. Have you a reliable remedy at hand? Baby's Own Tablets break up colds, prevent croup, reduce fever, check diarrhoea, cure constipation and stomach troubles, help the obstinate little teeth through painlessly, and give sound healthful sleep. And they contain not one particle of opiate or poisonous "soothing stuff"—this is guaranteed. They are equally good for the new-born infant or the well-grown child. Mrs. Susan E. Mackenzie, Burk's Corner's, Que., says:—"Before I began using Baby's Own Tablets, my little one was weak and delicate, since then she has had splendid health and is growing nicely. I find nothing so good as the Tablets when any of my children are ill." Sold by all druggists, or by mail at 25 cents a box by writing The Dr. William's Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Athletic Womanhood.

The new woman can take care of herself anywhere; she wants no kisses, nor does she resort to womanish screams in time of peril. She wastes no words, but proceeds to knock the man down. Could all women learn this art of self defense it would doubtless be a very good thing, for the revolvor is never where you want it, hatpins are treacherously apt to bend, and no real lady would carry a knife. But our fists we have always with us, and with a few lessons in boxing or jiu jitsu we can feel ourselves equal to all occasions.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

PSYCHINE

(PRONOUNCED SI-KEEN)

WEAKNESS There is nothing else in the whole world that will bring back the color to the cheek, restore the dormant energies, revive drooping spirits, or put new life into the tired, listless, weakened system, as "PSYCHINE" will do it. There is really only one great tonic, and that is "PSYCHINE." Combining all the properties that make rich, pure blood, bringing back the lost appetite, driving away melancholy, creating new strength.

WEAK AS A CHILD

"The Winter of 1894 I suffered with pains in the back, shoulders, and contracted cold. I coughed so severe that I could not rest. I was in the lumber camp at the time and kept at work until I could go around no longer. I was brought home and the doctor gave me some medicine, but he stated my lungs were affected and that he had come too late. I sent for another doctor at the cost of $25.00 per visit. He told me that no relief was possible and that death might come at any time. I was so weak that in walking ten feet I would be bathed in sweat and utterly exhausted. I saw PSYCHINE advertised and decided to try it. I had hemorrhage of the lungs. After using PSYCHINE for a few days hemorrhage ceased entirely, and after a fortnight I was working again in the woods. PSYCHINE is certainly a great medicine."

Here is an enchanting recipe copied om a book on the toilet published in 34—in Boston, of course:

"A Wash to Give the Face a Younger ook.—Take sulphur, one and one-half nces; G. oliban and myrrh, two nces; amber, six drams; rose ter, one and one-half pints. Distill whole in balneum mariæ, wash urself with some at bedtime, and in morning with barley water, and th the blessing of God it will not l to give you a younger look."

Where will you find such mingled ty and shrewdness in modern beau- papers? Think how the ladies who vertise some wonder working cream powder could spare their con- ences at the last great day if they ould only insert such clauses in the ipes they give. And do not the gredients sound delightful? Amber, hich suggests Cleopatra and her arl (by the way, what a cosmetic at should make), and G. oliban, hatever it may be—it sounds like me of a Christian.—Exchange.

If I were a young man with a certain nount of capital and desirous to in- ease it at the expense of fools, I ould become a dealer in pictures and works of art. The prices paid at ctions for such articles by a few alers bidding against each other are used, although a vast number of ry wealthy fools who purchase them om dealers are ready to pay still gher. The mere fact that some rticle has been sold in an auction om at a high price attracts them, d they buy it from the dealer at a gher one in order to be able to point it in their houses and to tell their iends how much it cost them. The aler consequently makes much oney by acting as a middleman. hether there is any arrangement to in up the price among dealers I do ot know, but I have always won- red whether this is the case and hether the original owner always ets the selling price at the auction.— ondon Truth.

BOSTON MAN AT BRANDON

Something about Mr. Vogt Who will visit the C. E. Convention.

Co-operation of Societies is requested To Make Meetings Splendid Success.

Those who have charge of the arrangements for the Christian Endeavor convention to be held in Brandon on October 17, 18, and 19, are looking forward with intense interest to the part to be taken by Mr. Von Ogden Vogt, the General Secretary of the World's Union, Boston. To Mr. Vogt was due in a large measure the success that attended the Baltimore convention in July of this year. With infinite care he arranged the details of the program and selected men from all over the Christian world to take the most important parts. Mr. Vogt, though only 26 years of age, is a man of remarkably matured and sincere ideas, and to this may be attributed the success that has placed him in a position of first importance in Christian Endeavor work. When it became necessary to select a successor to Mr. John Willis Baer as General Secretary, the Union executive the first consideration was to secure a young man. The further requisites were that the man should be a college graduate, a Presbyterian in faith, a Western man, and a layman. To find one embodying all these qualities was not easy. Mr. Vogt, who was born in Chicago, had taken a thorough course in the public schools there, and had graduated from Beloit College, Wisconsin. Some of Mr. Vogt's friends in Chicago recommended him for the position of Secretary. He was summoned to Boston to give an address on "Citizenship." It was his first public address, and he prepared it on the train, while on his way to the eastern city. It was a splendid success, and he was afterwards chosen for the position at a salary of $2,500 a year with occasional increases.

Much of Mr. Vogt's time is taken up in visiting conventions in all parts of America where the work is active or needs strengthening. His extensive knowledge of Endeavor work, combined with his rare natural abilities as an organizer, has provided him with a vast fund of information, and makes him a convention worker of unusual value. He is a clear and fluent speaker combining practical suggestions with pleasing eloquence. His mind and soul is thoroughly engrossed in his work, and his enthusiasm is well seasoned with sincerity. At the Brandon convention he will take a prominent part. On the second and third day of the convention he will conduct "Schools of Methods." These are features of the program which have never before been attempted at Manitoba conventions, and they are made possible only by the presence of Mr. Vogt.

After visiting Brandon and Winnipeg Mr. Vogt will proceed to Boston, where he will report on the respective merits of Kansas City, Los Angeles, and Minneapolis the four cities wanting the International Convention in 1907. Manitoba endeavorers are all anxious that the Convention be held in Minneapolis and it is proposed that a petition be drawn up and endorsed by the Brandon Convention requesting that the "Flour City" be chosen. The co-operation of the Saskatchewan and Alberta Conventions are earnestly requested in this matter. Any communications on the subject should be addressed to Mr. J. L. Bond, Winnipeg box 266.

The posters announcing the convention dates have been sent out to societies and to the railway agents. The society secretaries should see that they are prominently posted up in their meeting rooms.

Bleeding Piles and Erysipelas

Two Severe Cases Which Illustrate the Extraordinary Soothing, Healing Virtues of

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

Scores of people do not think of trying Dr. Chase's Ointment for bleeding piles because they have used so many other treatments in vain and do not believe their ailment curable. It is by curing when others fail that Dr. Chase's Ointment has won such a record for itself. It will not fail to promptly relieve and completely cure any form of piles, no matter how severe or of how long standing.

Mr. James Uriah Pye, Marie Joseph Guysborough Co., N.S., writes: I was bad with bleeding piles for about four years and could get no help. Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me in a very short time and I cannot praise it too highly for this cure. Mrs. Thomas Smith was troubled with erysipelas in the feet and legs and was all swollen up. I gave her some of the ointment, which took out the swelling and healed all the sores. She had tried many treatments before, but none seemed to do her any good. I am telling my friends about the wonderful cures which Dr. Chase's Ointment made for Mrs. Smith and myself, and would say that it is only a pleasure for me to recommend so excellent a preparation."

Wherever there is irritation, inflammation, ulceration or itching of the skin Dr. Chase's Ointment will bring quick relief and will ultimately heal and cure. On this account it is useful in scores of ways in every house for the cure of eczema, salt rheum, tetter, scald head, chafing, itching peculiar to women, pin worms, piles, and all sorts of skin diseases and eruptions.

ROPY AND BITTER MILK.

Both These Conditions Are Usually Caused by Bacteria.

A ropy milk is not always caused by bacteria, but it may come from the animal suffering from certain diseases, particularly garget. In the majority of cases the trouble is due to the development of bacteria subsequent to the milking, says Hoard's Dairyman. The cause of ropy milk can be traced to several species of bacteria, but the one that is the most troublesome in the United States can be traced to an organism that is an inhabitant of water. It has been found living and growing in the water used for washing the milk vessels or for submerging them to cool the milk. Through such a source of contamination the bacillus gets into the milk. The trouble can usually be removed by thoroughly scalding the milk utensils and water tanks in which the water stands for the cooling of milk.

Bitter milk is due to several causes. Cows produce bitter milk after eating certain foods, like ragweed and lupine. Perhaps these weeds have bacteria on their leaves and stems, which get on the cows' udders and fall into the milk at the time of milking, and the eating of the weeds does not cause the bitter taste in milk. Some cows produce bitter milk when well along in the period of lactation, and certain udder diseases render the milk bitter. As a rule, bitter milk is caused by the growth of bacteria which have resisted the heat of sterilization. It is no easy matter to destroy the bacteria that cause bitter flavored milk. Just before milking the cows' udders should be washed in a 2 per cent solution of soda and the milk duct with a 3 per cent solution of boracic acid.

Sometimes milk develops a bitter taste by keeping it too long at a very low temperature. In such cases the milk should not be cooled quite so low in temperature and consumed more quickly. While heat fails to destroy the spores of these bacteria, yet all the milking vessels should be thoroughly scalded whenever a dairy is infected with these germs.

Improving the Dairy Herd.

A dairyman may start with nothing but the most ordinary cows, and by simply breeding to dairy sires of excellent quality and pure breeding he will in a few years have a fine working herd, says Holstein-Friesian Register. There is no reason why a good herd of grades cannot be made to yield a profit, but too many of us do not appreciate the value of a pure bred sire.

Catarrh of the Udder.

Catarrh of the udder may be caused by the cow lying on damp ground night after night or by a germ which is introduced into the udder. Low ground pasture for dairy cows should have some high ground upon which they may lie after eating.

AROUND THE DAIRY

It should be considered that the poorest cows eat practically as much as the best. This will hold true generally. A poor cow will eat as much as a good cow. Also, while a good cow will return ten to twenty times as much profit as the poor cow, she can be bought for but very little more. Her price is out of all proportion to her profitableness. In short, the good cow is a highly profitable investment. The poorest cows are kept at a positive loss.

Real Value of a Good Cow.

The real value of a fine milk cow lies in her pedigree, her prepotent power of heredity, that power that a long line of good ancestors gives her to pass her good qualities along to her offspring, so that a great deal depends upon the man as to whether he is wise in the selection of the kind of animal for the work, and with the care and feed there is nothing to hinder the dairyman from being master of the situation and having conditions favorable to his ambitions.

At Calving Time.

Never allow a cow to calve in the pasture. The young thing in such cases partakes of the wild, and it is never overcome, says Farm Journal. If it is a heifer, it will never make a perfectly docile cow. If a bull, it will be wild and vicious.

Training the Heifer.

Take your time about teaching the heifer to milk. Lots of men are in too big a hurry, and they expect too much of the young cows anyway. It has taken most of us a good many years to learn what we know, and there are some things that we are not altogether posted on even now.

White Specks In Butter.

Carelessness in warming cream is responsible for the white specks which are sometimes found in the butter, writes a correspondent of National Stockman. If the cream becomes too warm, it separates or "wheys off" exactly the same as sour milk does in the process of making cottage cheese. The sour milk becomes curd; then, when the butter comes, this curd, in fine particles, is found incorporated with it—a very annoying state of affairs, and all owing to carelessness. When this is allowed to occur, the only thing to do is to strain the cream before churning.

Need of Cooling Milk.

Decomposition commences in milk, if allowed to retain its natural heat, soon after it is drawn from the cow.

Poor Cows Are Dear at Any Price.

It is no sacrifice to pay a big price for a cow if you are sure of getting big money back again. Where the loss comes in is in buying a poor cow just because she is cheap. The poorest thing a man can have on the farm is a poor cow.

PRESENTATION TO MR. A. B. IRVINE.

A number of friends of Irvine, accountant of Mr. A. B. Commerce at Medicine the Bank of ed in the billard e Hat, assembl- press Club on room of the Cy- and presented Wednesday evening travelling a him with a very nice Mr. W kit and an address. man C. Harris acted as chairman and most of those whose names appear below were present.

The chairman explained that they had met to take leave of Mr. Irvine who had been appointed manager of the branch of the Bank of Commerce at Claresholm thus following in the footsteps of his predecessor here, Mr. W. G. Lynch. It remained to be seen whether Mr. Irvine would follow Mr. Lynch in another life-long engagement which the latter gentleman made soon after he was appointed to Claresholm, but if the same thing happened to Mr. Irvine he could feel assured of the very best wishes of his friends here for his future happiness. The chairman expressed the feelings of all when he said that while they were sorry to see Mr. Irvine leave the town they rejoiced with him in his promotion and wished him every success. Mr. Irvine came to Medicine Hat a year and a half ago with an excellent record part of which consisted in the fact that he had fought for the Empire in South Africa (applause), and he had made an excellent record in Medicine Hat. (Applause.)

Mr. G. P. Sanderson, Accountant of the Union Bank then made the presentation and read the following address:—

To Mr. A. B. Irvine.

Dear Sir,

It was with genuine regret that we the undersigned heard of your intended departure from this town to a better position at Claresholm.

We congratulate you with all our hearts, but at the same time, we feel sorry that we are going to lose your bright personality from our midst.

You have made many friends and a few of them have gathered here tonight to bid you farewell and also to ask you to accept from us a slight token of our regard for you.

We wish you every success in your new field of labor.

Yours truly

FROM HEAD TO FOOT

You feel the good that's done by Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cleanses, regulates and invigorates Stomach, Liver and Bowels and so purifies the blood. And through the blood, it cleanses, repairs, and invigorates the whole system.

In recovering from "grippe," or in convalescence from pneumonia, fevers, or other exhausting diseases, nothing can equal it as an appetizing, restorative tonic to build up needed flesh and strength. It rouses every organ into natural action, promotes all the bodily functions, and restores health and vigor.

For every disease that comes from foul or Weak Stomach, a torpid Liver or impure Blood, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, and the most stubborn Skin, Scalp, or Scrofulous affections, the "Discovery" is a sovereign remedy. Don't be hypnotized, wheedled, or over persuaded into accepting a substitute only that some selfish medicine seller may make a greater profit on the inferior article. The "Discovery" has a great record of nearly forty years with thousands of cures behind it.

Dear Sir—Several years ago my blood became impoverished and I became run down in health. I had no appetite, could not sleep, and was practically unfitted for work. Suffered from innumerable boils and was in bad shape. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery relieved me of my wretched condition. The medicine built up my system and restored me to a normal condition of health. I can speak most highly also, of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, as it has been used in my family for years in cases of female trouble.

R. N. W. M. P. MAY LEAVE NEW PROVINCES.

Ottawa, Oct, 25.—After the elections in Alberta and Saskatchewan are over Comptroller White of the mounted police will leave for the west and confer with the Provincial Governments to find out whether they want the police to remain or not. This will be necessary because the administration of justice is in the hands of the provinces. If the provinces want the police to remain some arrangement can be reached between themselves and the Dominion It will benecessary for the Dominion to keep a sufficient number of the force to patrol the boundary line to look after smugglers and to attend to quarantine duties. The police will also be required to locate settlers. These are the only purposes for which the Dominion will have to maintain a force in the new provinces. Of course all the unorganized territory is under the comptroller and his men.

The Arch-Fiend of the Age.

Not war, more deadly than ever this modern butchery—but Catarrh which leads to consumption and annually kills more than famine and war combined. The doctors now successfully catarrh with a remedy that never fails—"Catarrhozone," it's death to every type of Catarrh. It destroys every root and branch of the disease so thoroughly that a relapse need never be feared. If troubled with colds, nasal or throat catarrh, or subject to Bronchitis or asthma use Catarrhozone and you'll be sure forever.

BIG REAL ESTATE DEALS.

Mr. R. J. Harlow, real estate agent, of this town, last week put through and closed two of the biggest real estate deals ever consumated in this part of the country. The prices paid aggregating $150,000. Great credit is due Mr. Harlow for his energy, enterprise and success in interesting capital in these propositions, for it will be of very material benefit to the town at large.

The Stair ranch, consisting of about 11,000 acres, the property of the Canadian Land & Ranch Company, was sold to an American capitalist, Mr. J. Frank Bending, President of the Tippecanoe Power Co., of Montecello, Ind., who propotes retailing it to and settling it with a splendid class of American farmers. The purchaser looked carefully over the land and is confident that successful farming operations can be carried on, and that it is only a matter of a comparatively short time till the old Stair ranch is transformed into a veritable garden.

The other property disposed of also belonged to the Canadian Land & Ranch Company, (who are endeavoring to concentrate their operations), and consisted of a tract of 12,000 acres, immediately south of the Railway at Swift Current. This proposition was purchased by local parties and is being placed on the market in small blocks and at prices that render it a gilt edged investment. Several sections of this large tract have already been disposed of by the new purchasers. Swift Current is advancing very rapidly, and as many settlers are coming in daily, the price of this land will very soon rise Great interest is being taken in this proposition locally and many are investing in considerable areas of it.

Full particulars and information as to these properties can be obtained at Mr. Harlow's office. He has been appointed selling agent and has established extensive business connections with large real estate firms both here and on the other side, so that the property can be readily disposedof and turned over again to good advantage.

Physically Exhausted.

Lacking in courage—out of joint with everything—scarcely on speaking terms with even fair health. Such low spirits are pitiable. Your brain is fagged, vitality so exhausted your constitution is well nigh ruined. What you need is Ferrozone that great vitalizer and nutritive tonic. It's by making flesh and blood by infusing iron and oxygen into the system that Ferrozone helps; it repairs weak spots, instills new life into worn out organs—makes you feel like new. Ferrozone lifts age from the old and imparts resilince and buoyancy to the dearessed. Be manly, ruddy-colored,—cast aside weakness and enter the happy life that comes from Ferrozone. ALBERTA ELECTIONS NOVEMBER 9. NOMINATIONS OCTOBER 31.

The School Question is:
Have we a satisfactory school system.

The School Question is:
Shall we demand our rights to legislate for ourselves.

TELL THE WHOLE TRUTH.

Apologists for the land clauses in the Autonomy Bill only tell half the truth. They dare not tell it all.

They tell us that the subsidies granted the Provinces are as follows:

British Columbia	$4.30
Manitoba	2.35
Prince Edward Island	2.14
New Brunswick	2.12
Nova Scotia	2.05
Ontario	170
Quebec	1.47
Alberta	6.50

They do not tell the people that Dominion paid off debts of the older provinces to the enormous sum of $109,897,175, and that $405,375 of the revenue of Alberta consists of a "debt allowance" to offset this.

In the comparisons made above the $405,375 given annually to Alberta is included, and the $109,697,175 is omitted altogether.

They do not tell us that Nova Scotia has only the small area of 20,000 square miles and therefore does not require the same expenditure per head as Alberta with roads to make over 254,000 square miles.

THE PROVINCIAL SUBSIDY.

The question of the financial terms granted the new provinces is not a party question, but one of great public importance and is made for all time. We should see to it, therefore, that we are getting our proper due.

The total yearly amount which each province is to receive from Ottawa is very clearly laid down and can never exceed the sum of $2,220,000.

It is true that for five years Ottawa will pay to each province $97,500 for the construction of "necessary public buildings." The total of that will be $488,750 for the five years, but how much of it will be left after new parliamentary buildings and an asylum and one or two other public buildings are built.

The provinces have not had a fair deal. The subsidy should be increased at least four times to compensate for the loss of our lands.

Consider the value of the agricultural land alone. According to the government estimate there are in Alberta 162,568,000 acres. In order to make every possible allowance, let us assume that after deducting forest land, and all areas which for any reason are not available, there were only 20,000,000 acres left. At the low estimate of $3 per acre this would be worth $60,000,000.

Consider also the values of the immense coal areas, and all other mines and minerals, the petroleum, natural gas, timber and water power throughout an area of 250,000 square miles, rich in such resources and practically untouched. Place the low estimate of $60,000,000 on all this.

We have thus, on an absurdly low estimate, a total of 120,000,000 as the value of the natural resources available for revenue purposes. What do we get in return?

The "compensating" allowance is:

(1) $375,000 per annum until we reach a population of 400,000.

(2) $562,500 per annum until we reach a population of 800,000.

(3) $750,000 per annum until we reach a population of 1,000,000.

(4) Thereafter $1,125,000 per annum.

It will be some years before we reach a population of 1,000,000, or five times what it is now. But even taking the maximum allowance we are then to be given, this is only the interest at 5 per cent. on $22,500,000.

Ottawa takes from us property worth at least $120,000,000. In "compensation" we are given the interest on $22,500,000 at 5 per cent. —the same rate as in the case of the debt allowance. And we are told that this is a "business proposition."

The Land Question is not:
Is the subsidy sufficient, or is it a generous allowance.

The Land Question is this:
Shall we permit the Dominion Government to withhold our lands and minerals. Shall we not rather demand our own.

COST OF PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT.

The great question is what amount is likely and fairly to be required each year to carry on the business and affairs of a province like Alberta The province is new, not thickly settled and increasing in population rapidly. There are no public buildings, and much will be required to be spent on roads, bridges, public business, and all sorts of items. Education alone will soon require a large amount every year.

In this connection a glance at what the other provinces spent last year will be of value for comparison, and we give these expenditures for last year as appearing in the official blue books:

Ontario	$5,267,453
Quebec	4,795,469
Nova Scotia	1,161,456
New Brunswick	885,457
Manitoba	1,371,333
British Columbia	2,862,794
Prince Edward Island	307,730

Last year the Dominion contributed $1,636,000 or an average of $818,000 for each province, and Sir Wilfred Laurier intimated that "the present requirements of the Territories are not sufficiently represented by these figures."

More liberal provision should therefore have been made.

Under the Autonomy Bills Alberta is to receive for some years a little over one million dollars, and the expenditure at the start will beover eight hundred thousand. The margin is less than two hundred thousand dollars.

These facts are conclusive that the financial terms are not sufficient.

But the real point is that Alberta should demand, not a subsidy, but her own.

FOR FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF CITIZENSHIP.

From Saskatchewan there has not yet been even a rumor as to the date fixed for the elections, but they may be expected any time from a week to three weeks after the elections in Alberta. A week might possibly suffice for the machine to get all its agents from Alberta to their allotted tasks in Saskatchewan, but it is probable that more time will be allowed so as to run no chances.

As a consequence of this arrangement for the disposition of the Laurier Government's forces, the Liberal leaders in the new provinces are entertaining high hopes of victory. According to the estimate of the Calgary Albertan not a single Conservative will be elected in that Province, while in only three or four constituencies will the votes counted for the Conservative candidate make the issue even interestingly close. It would be too bad to have a result of this kind. A Parliament without a single Opposition member would be a very uninteresting and unprofitable affair. So, if we might be allowed to make a recommendation, we would suggest that the Machine should issue a somewhat less wholesale order for the capture of constituencies. We make this recommendation chiefly in the interests of the Liberal party itself, for in the end it would certainly suffer from overdoing the matter.

But fortunately all is not settled by a paper calculation based on previous successes of the Machine where its forces have been concentrated. The people of the new Provinces are, we believe alive to the frightful danger they incur by allowing the Machine to fasten itself upon them. They have no desire to be forced into the long demoralizing struggle from which Ontario has just emerged in order to rid themselves of the influences that are now being marshalled against them. They appreciate that they must fight now, not only for fundamental provincial rights, but for the fundamental rights of free citizenship.—Telegram.

THE LAND QUESTION.

The Conservatives of Alberta adopted at Red Deer a platform, and laid down the following resolutions about the lands and natural resources:

4. SQUARE DEAL IN LANDS.

This Convention declares that the people of Alberta, to the same extent and in the same manner as the people of the other provinces, are entitled to lands, mines, minerals, forests and other natural resources within its area and to enjoy the full benefits thereof as well as to administer the same for the advantage of its people and emphatically protests against our natural resources being unjustly witheld, to be exploited by any political party at Ottawa. This convention urges that constant and continued application to and negotiation with the Dominion Government be made for the surrender to the Province of the Public Domain within its boundaries, of which it is now so unfairly and unjustly deprived. This convention further declares that the province is entitled to compensation for lands within its area heretofore alienated for purely Federal purposes.

The Liberals of Alberta in convention adopted and issued a platform embodied on 15 resolutions, and as to the land question resolved:

Nothing!

Nothing!

Nothing!

Nothing!

THE METHODISTS AND THE SCHOOL CLAUSES.

he Methodist convention passed the following explicit resolutions:—

(1) Our firm conviction that one system of national schools, wholly and entirely under the control of the state, is in the best interests of the country.

(2) That educational and other matters, as outlined, in the British North America Act, should be left entirely in the hands of the provinces.

(3) That this conference stands unalterably committed to the doctrine Provincial Rights. Th

WHY, INDEED?

Why is it, in the case of the success of this coercion bill, that one province of Canada rules the whole country? Simply because that province, whether the Conservative party is in power, or the Liberal party is in power, is there solid on the winning side. It has but one end in view, and that end it accomplishes. Why? Because th English speaking people are foolish enough to allow themselves to be divided into two flocks. The way is plain—why not unite? Are there not real principles upon which the majority of the English speaking people can unite? Why cannot they get down there and have Canada governed by a majority of its people?—Hon. Joseph Martin.

WHEN DID WE COME INTO THE UNION.

Liberal papers are arguing that the Territories did not enter into the Union until 1st of Sept. 1905.

Here is what a prominent Liberal lawyer says:

The Liberal lawyer referred to is N. D. Mills, of Strathcona, Grand Master of the Western Division of the Grand Orange Lodge. In the course of an address to the Grand Lodge, delivered in Medicine Hat, on the 15th March last. Mr. Mills places the date when the Territories came into the Union as the year 1868. Here is what he says:—

In order to consummate federation it became necessary that certain legislative powers and rights at that time vesting in the Crown colonies should be handed over to the Federal Parliament so that the Federal Parliament might with freedom legislate on all matters of a common concern to the whole Confederation, the provinces retaining legislative power over all matters of a provincial or a domestic character. Among the matters that were specifically made the subject of provincial enactment was that of education. This was subject to certain restrictions. These restrictions were shortly as follows:

THE TERRITORY NOW KNOWN AS THE NORTHWEST TERRITORIES NEVER ENTERED THE UNION AND BECAME A PART OF THE DOMINION OF CANADA IN 1868, NOT AS A PROVINCE AND WITH A VERY LIMITED AMOUNT OF SELF-GOVERNMENT, but at the time she became a part of the Dominion or Union. She had no educational laws, much less any conferring the right to separate schools upon any denomination, and it remained for the Federal Government 1875 to pass clause 11 of the Act respecting the North-western Territory and Rupert's Land, whereby separate schools for the first time became possible by law in the Territories

TERRITORIES HAD NO VOICE.

Then was passed a Federal statute with no elected representative from the North West Territory and Rupert's Land in the Dominion House, and with no voice as a contracting party these territories became subject to separate schools. It will be noticed that upon reading section 93 of the British North America Act, and the restrictions therein mention- that the federal power stood in the position of an intermediary between any provincial law and the minority whose acquired legislative rights were prejudicially affected by such provincial legislation and that this affected only such provinces as had legally authorized separate schools prior to the Union. Beyond this the power of the Federal house would appear to cease regarding legislation affecting education.

A TELLING POINT.

The N. W. T. and Rupert's Land upon their entry into the Dominion or Union had no established Government of their own and they practically became wards of the Federal Government for "the peace, order and goodgover nment" of the new country. Now a guardian has a right to watch over the estate and person of his ward during the minority of that ward until he attains his majority, and it may become necessary to restrict the freedom of the ward during the period of the guardianship for the future good of the ward, but the guardian ought not to do anything that would trammel the freedom of the ward in either his person or estate after the trust had ceased. This, however, is what the Dominion proposes to do.

SHOULD HAVE ABSOLUTE FREEDOM.

Now that the ward has attained her majority, if she is not to be permitted absolute freedom in matters pertaining to education as in other matters of a purely provincial concern, her destiny as a country capable of sustaining millions of independent and free people will be marred.

I have tried to show that morally no one creed has a right to separate schools. I have tried to make plain to you that separate schools were forced upon this young country by a legislature possessing only an intermediary jurisdiction in educational matters, when this country was not and could not be a consenting party to such an arrangement. If this view be correct then no denomination in this country has any properly vested right to separate schools. I would therefore respectfully suggest that this right Worshipful Grand Lodge direct a prayer to the senate and House of Commons for absolute legislative freedom for the Provinces about to be erected out of these Territories in all matters pertaining to education.

Use the BLUE Pencil.

Vote FOR Sissons.

HE GLOBE'S ANALYSIS.

The merits of Separate Schools is not the supreme and essential question at issue in the measure now before Parliament. Neither is the question one of the value of the religious element in education Neither is it a question of the claims of minorities, whether Protestant or Roman Catholic, to consideration in matters of education. All such questions might be settled without dispute. The utility of Separate schools may be granted. That a system of education divorced from morality is education with its head cut off is a proposition that need not be controverted. The claims of minorities may all be conceded. And yet the central question at issue remains. That question is not one of educational policy, but of constitutional rights. Which body has the right to determine and direct the educational policy of the new Western Provinces, the Dominion Parliament or the Provincial Legislatures?

The Globe's answer to the central question is the answer of the Confederation act: "In and for each Province the Legislature may exclusively make laws in relation to education." That answer cannot be harmonized with the measure now before Parliament. That measure proposes to "make laws" for these two new provinces in relation to the character of their schools—that there shall be both Public schools and Separate schools—and also in relation to the financial administration of such schools—how public moneys shall be raised, apportioned and applied. Such regulations touching education are, in our judgment, as really within the constitutional rights of the Provinces as are the regulations pertaining to school hours, teachers' qualifications and text books. It is essentially a question of Provincial rights.

In coming to this judgment we have steadily in view the legislation of the Dominion Parliament in 1875 under which Separate schools were first established in the North West Territories. We have given due weight to the arguments from expediency—they were not arguments from constitutional rights or principles—presented by Mr. Edward Blake and others in support of that legislation. But we have also noted carefully Mr. George Brown's opposition and his warning to Parliament against the danger which now presents itself when those Territories are about to become Provinces, and tg come under the provisions of the Confederation Act, which gives them rights "exclusively to make laws in relation to education." And we have marked the significance of Hon Senator Campbell's reply, "We are not legislating for any particular Province, but merely for a Territory which is under our supervision," and for which "somebody must legislate" That legislatio was not asked for by the Territory, It was not contemplated by the Prime Minister, it was introduced as an amendment in committee. Whether wise or unwise, it was at that time deemed expedient, and it was at most only interim legislation intended for a Territory under Dominion Supervision. Neither the terms of that enactment nor the circumstances under which it was passed, do it seems to us, make it necessary for Parliament, thirty years afterwards, to usurp the functions of the Provincial Legislature and to bind upon these Provinces for all time, as a charge under their constitution, a system of education which may prove unsuited to their needs.

But we are asked, have not the people who now enjoy Separate school privileges under the Territorial Government, rights and claims which should be recognized? They have. The people of the nine Roman Catholic schools and of the two Protestant schools, which are all the Separate schools at this moment in operation throughout the entire region to be comprised within the two new Provinces, have just claims. But those claims should be considered by the Provincial Legislatures in framing their Provincial education policies not by the Dominion Parliament in framing their Provincial constitutions. And we are further asked, is it not probable that the new legislatures would enact the present Separate school regulations? It is entirely probable, indeed, almost absolutely certain. Still, it is objected, is there not ground for the fear that in the future these separate school privileges might be withdrawn? Such privileges, once granted, could not be withdrawn without creating a grievance for which under the Confederation Act, the Dominion Parliament may pass remedial legislation.

So it is that on all these grounds theoretical and practical, constitutional and historical, The Globe feels itself constrained to withhold support from the autonomy measures now before Parliament in so far as they interfere with the rights of the Provinces in matters of education. The highest interests of all parties for the present, and for the future, will be best served by Parliament dealing only with Federal matters, and leaving to the legislatures of the Provinces all the duties and responsibilities which the Confederation Act intended to be Provincial. And that is the central question at issue.

Ex-Mayor Smith, of Regina, spent yesterday in town and took great interest in our natural gas. He visited the pumping station and remarked to the Times upon the clean, smart appearance of the place, which reflects much credit upon Engineer Eddy. Mr. Smith was shown round by Mr. Wm. McF. Evans and called at the Times Office and on several old Reginaites now residents here, and afterwards visited the Hospital and Nurses Home. He is president of the Regina Hospital.

During the last three months a large number of Bell Telephone employees have been engaged in town in extending the system here. Several car loads of poles and tons of wire have been used. The central exchange has been enlarged to accommodate 150 subscribers, 111 numbers are already taken. The improvements made have probably cost the company about $5,000, most of which was paid in salaries. Every subscriber now has a complete metallic circuit. During the work of the last three months nearly every wire in town had to be cut, one at a time, in order to put in the new poles and cable, of course this caused a certain amount of inconvience to the subscribers but was unavoidable. The town now has one of the most complete plants in the west, every phone in use being a long distant one.

The fact that Mr. J. D. McGregor has 26 stacks of grain on his ranch shows that our big ranchers are becoming alive to the possibilities of this district as a grain raising section.

The Medicine Hat Trading Company intend to enlarge their premises by the erection of a warehouse 20x60 feet, at the rear of their extensive premises on Toronto St. This extension has been rendered necessary by the increasing business of the firm, and will enable them to unload goods at the rear instead of the front. The contract has been let to Mr. J. L. Morris.

A New Industry for Medicine Hat.

The merry hum of machinery on Montreal Street opposite the public school drew The Times representative to a new building lately put up by R. A. Green & Co., contractors and builders, as a wood turning factory. Here Mr. Green is fixing up machinery, some of which was already in motion, driven by a gas engine, and he has commenced the manufacture of door and wood frames, storm doors, wood turnings, verandah brackets, balusters for stairs, etc., and will supply all kinds of bandsaw stock. The company intend doing a wholesale and retail business, and will at once commence an extension of the building on the north side.

Church of England Services for Sunday 12th November, in this mission. St. Alban's Church, Gros Ventre 11 a.m. Mr. Cleveland's house, Little Plume, 3.30 p.m.

OBITUARY.

It is with great regret that we chronicle the death of Mrs. John Bertin, of this town, which occurred last Thursday morning at the Maternity Hospital. Funeral services were held the same afternoon at the residence, Toronto St. The remains were afterwards shipped east for interment at her old home. The greatest possible sympathy is felt in town for Mr. Bertin in his very sudden bereavement.

The death is announced of Mr. Edward Stock, of Mimico, Ont., grandfather of Mr. James Woods, of the Roy. al Hotel, Medicine Hat. The old gentleman was 91 years of age and was hale and hearty up to a few weeks of his death.

HAROLD JARVIS CONCERT.

A very large and enthusiastic audience greeted Harold Jarvis when he appeared in the Opera House on Friday evening. Mr. Jarvis thoroughly pleased his audience, everyone present being immensely delighted with the great tenor. His selections were of varied nature and gave him ample opportunity to display the power of his fine tenor voice as well as its sympathetic temperament. The applause which greeted his every appearance and the vociferous encores he received showed the appreciation felt by the audience of his renderings.

Several contributions were made to the programme by local talent. Miss Gertrude White delighted her hearers with a fine reading of the "Gipsy Maiden" and appeared with Mr. Jarvis in that favorite duet, "Life's Dream is O'er."

Miss Juanita L. Badgley, graduate in elocution of St. Albert College contributed two readings. This was her first appearance in Medicine Hat and we are putting it mildly when we say Miss Badgley was a success in every sense of the word. Her dramatic tale of the track, "The La Rue Stakes" and the lighter pieces were cleverly given and a double recall testifies to the appreciation of the audience.

The Pleyel Sextette completed a combination of talent which provided an entertainment of rare merit. Miss Nesbitt made an acceptable accompanist.

The entertainment took place under the auspices of the Century Club who should be illeitated upon its success.

THE POLMATIER SISTERS.

The above talented performers will appear in Medicine Hat, on the 27th inst., under the auspices of the Hockey Club, and we bespeak a large support for them on account of their own merits and for the sake of the Hockey Club. They come well recommended.

The Joplin, Mo., Daily Times, of April 12th 1905, in speaking of the Polmatier Sisters Orchestra Company, says: "Should these talented and gifted musicians come to Joplin again it will be necessary to display the S. R. O. sign, as our largest public buildings are too small to entertain an audience that would turn out to hear them."

JUDGE NESBETT FOR LEADER.

The Detroit Free Press in its "Dominion News" columns publishes a long article announcing that Judge Nesbitt will shortly be asked to become the leader of the Conservative party in the Dominion.

The Women's Auxilliary of St. Barnabas Church held their annual bazaar and supper on Tuesday last. It proved a success in every way and $125.00 was realized.

Hon. W. T. Finlay has held meetings in different parts of the constituency. Mr. J. G. Waldock appeared at each and ably represented the Conservative party.

Mrs. R. D. Legh, was the hostess at a nice progressive whist party on Thursday afternoon last. The prizes were won by Mrs. Lawrence and Mrs. Becker; Mrs. Spencer and Mr. J. W. Turpin.

The nommation of the Candidates in the Provincial elections were made to Mr. D. G. White the Returning Officer last Tuesday. Mr. F. O. Sissons (C) and Hon. W. T. Finlay (L) were duly nominated each proposal being well signed.

Mrs. W. H. Harris has almost recovered from her injuries in the explosion last week, but her sister, Miss Wilson, is still confined to the hospital suffering from the effects of the burns, but she is doing very well.

Mrs. Thos. McFadden entertained about forty ladies to a most enjoyable Thimble Tea on Friday afternoon last. She was assisted by Mrs. J. B. Alcock, Miss Day and Miss Parker.

CONSERVATIVE MEETING

A public meeting was held in the Opera House, last night, called by the Conservatives to hear an address from Mr. M. S. McCarthy, M. P. for Calgary.

The spacious hall was filled to overflowing, the Conservatives and Provincial Rightsers being very much in the majority and a large number of ladies graced the meeting with their presence.

A request from the Liberal party made on Saturday that one of their speakers should be granted an opportunity of addressing the meeting, was readily acceded to and Mr. Duncan Marshall, of Edmonton, was in attendance to champion the Liberal cause.

On the walls were a number of mottos, including "Hands off Alberta."

"Vote for Sissons and National Autonomy."

"Vote for Sissons and the full rights of a British Citizen."

The platform party who were received with cheers, included W. G. Niblock President of the Conservative Association; M. S. McCarthy, M.P.; J. H. Ingram, M.P. for East Elgin; F. O. Sissons, Conservative Candidate; and Duncan Marshall representing the Liberals.

President Niblock did not keep the audience waiting but went straight to the business in hand. He was glad to see such a large attendance. The issues at this time were very important and any mistakes by the electors would do harm which would last for all time. He briefly contrasted the policy of the two parties and appealed to fair minded Liberals to range themselves on the side of Provincial Rights. He announced that the order of the meeting would be as follows: Mr. Sissons would open the meeting, Mr. Duncan Marshall would be allowed 45 minutes and Mr. McCarthy would close. He then introduced the candidate.

Mr. Sissons, who was received with cheers said the meeting showed the people of Medicine Hat were taking these matters into very serious consideration. He was before them to solicit their votes at the coming election. (A voice: And you'll get 'em too, and cheers.) There were three great questions before the people, the Education Question, the Land Question and the Gerrymandering of the constituencies in the new province. He would leave the first two questions to Mr. McCarthy and would apply his remarks to the last one He then entered at length into the question of the division of the provinces and showed that the south had been most unjustly treated. He quoted figures to show that the bulk of the population of Alberta was in the south and yet the North had been given the majority of seats in the legislature. It was not justice but gerrymandering. He pointed out the injustice done to Medicine Hat. While Moosejaw, Regina and other places had been given City members Medicine Hat had been passed by in that respect and even enlarged by 40 townships. That was rank injustice. (Cheers.)

Mr. Duncan Marshall then rose to address the meeting and was well received. He occupied the 45 minutes allotted him and made a rattling speech but there were more pyrotechnics than argument in it. He went into the school question and claimed that the Liberal party's policy was to perpetuate the present system. Dealing with the land question he argued that Alberta had not been robbed of any land for she had never owned any. He was talking very fluently about land values when a voice shouted

"It's worth more than a dollar an acre," a sentiment which drew shouts of applause.

Mr. Marshall applied himself to the labor question and was met with interruptions and groans.

The chairman appealed for order remarking: He has only another five minutes, and he wont do any harm. (Loud laughter.)

Mr. Marshall used his last five minutes in an appeal for votes for Mr. Finlay. He was greeted with uproar and finally appealed for "Peace on earth good will toward men."

Mr. McCarthy on coming forward was greeted with voiceferous cheering which swamped the small efforts of the other party. He pointed out how Mr. Marshall had carefully refrained from any reference to the gerrymander of the constituencies. He ridiculed Mr. Marshall's statement that the Dominion bought the whole of the western lands

SPLENDID ONIONS.

Some of the finest and best grown onions we have ever seen were on sale at the Trading Comsany's store last week and they were grown at Medicine Hat by Mr. W. H. Brown. Our attention was drawn to these by Manager Milne who placed beside them a very fine imported Spanish onion and it was hardly possible to tell the difference. For size, weight, texture and general quality a bag of the home grown onions beat a box of the imported Spanish onions, and they show what can be done in Medicine Hat soil and climate by one who knows how to manage a crop. It is impossible to over-praise these splendid onions, which were of the Danvers Yellow Globe variety, many of them being 9 to 11 inches in circumference, firm, sound and beautifully ripened.

Municipal Matters.

The Municipal platform we published last week did not meet with the approval of the News. This is sad, indeed, but as we wrote it for the benefit of the town we were unable to consider the tender susceptibilities of the News. If the Council, of which the News editor is Mayor, had been a little more expeditious and had completed some of the things instead of just nibbling at them, we should have been in a position to present some more "original" planks. We can only express our regrets.

If rumour is to be believed there will be no dearth of candidates for the vacancies on the Town Council. Well, this is as it should be, and is a distinct sign that this town is experiencing a Municipal awakening to which it has hitherto been a stranger. It is distinctly a good sign that the Trades and Labor organisations show signs of taking a hand in local Government It is for them, of course, to say whether they will put forward some of their own members at the coming election or select from candidates who may come forward men who will represent their views. Whichever they decide to do we welcome their active participation in the coming contest. We have but one object in everything we have said or done in municipal matters and that is to stir up the people to a full sense of their responsibility and the absolute necessity of their being fully alive to the importance of having an active administration at the Council Board.

We will confess that we are not so much impressed as many people are with the need for perfect unanimity in the Council. It is possible, and easily so, to have too much amiability and unanimity at the Council. We prefer to see varying interests at the Board and to see all the interests actively looked after. We prefer to see some differences of opinion because it is in active debate, rather than in silent acquiescence, that salient points are brought out and a correct judgement arrived at.

We therefore welcome the increased activity among the Trades and Labor Council in this respect. Whether the trades and labor interests agree with the various projects we have put forward from time to time for the advancement of the town we do not know, but we make no pretence to infallibility. We have vigorously advocated various movements which we believe to be calculated for the good of Medicine Hat and we shall welcome criticism, in fact we invite it, for, in the multitude of counsellors there is wisdom and we are as anxious as anyone can possibly be to see Medicine Hat affairs administered wisely and well. This will be best assured by every interest in town taking an active part in the selection of next year's Mayor and Council.

There is one point, however, on which we would like to advise the Labor Council and that is not to bring forward any candidates unless the candidates are in a position to attend the meetings of the Council regularly. A member who puts in an attendance about once in three or four times may manage to make a little fluster while there but he cannot properly serve the people he represents. To do good work at the Council a man should be in a position to attend three out of four meetings as well as look after various other details incident to the office. A man requires a good deal of nerve to aspire to the position of councillor knowing that he has little chance of attending even half time, and he has nothing less than pure cheek (gall is an expressive term for it), to continue to hold the position under such circumstances. Still such men are to be found. We, therefore, advise the labor council not to lose sight of the fact that if they have a direct representative or representatives on the Council and he or they can not attend regularly they will be worse off than if they had no such representative.

Then of course there is the question: Who is to be Mayor? Several names have been mentioned as likely candidates and as yet it is too early to point to the likely man. The town needs a good man. Many a town has been kept back by putting a mere figure head in the civic chair. Medicine Hat requires for its chief civic official a man of tact and good address, a man possessing some initiative powers and considerable executive ability. If such a one can be found let us all rally round him and put him in the chair regardless of politics or creed.

It is time the old bugbear of its being necessary for a man to have served on the Council first should be knocked on the head. In our experience we have seen some of the finest and most successful mayors drawn from the ranks of those who had never occupied a Councillor's or Alderman's chair.

Where there is a man on the Council or who has just served a term, who is capable and willing, by all means elect him, but don't ever consider it a disqualification because the man has never been on the Council. Small Councils in small towns who are anxious to work harmoniously with one another are too apt to fall into little ruts and wind up by choosing the Mayor for the people year after year. We want something bigger and broader than that in Medicine Hat. It is a fatal error for a town like Medicine Hat to elect a nonenity simply because he has served a term on the Council. Let the best man be selected whether on or off the Council and put him in the chair on the understanding that his abilities will be used for the good and welfare, and the true advancement of Medicine Hat.

There are two Councillors whose term of office expires this year who have proved themselves very capable public men quite capable of filling the civic chair with credit to themselves and the town, but whether either will consent to nomination is not known as yet, but probably they will arrive at a decision in a short time.

For A Public Reading Room.

The suggestion has been made that the Council be asked to grant the use of a room in the new Municipal building for a public reading room. There is one such in town at present, namely the Century Club room, which although held in the Methodist Church is quite unsectarian and intended as a public institution. It is held in its present quarters simply because it cannot afford to pay rent and the Church granted the use of their parlors for nothing. Probably the Council will be approached on the subject. It is certainly a worthy institution (the reading room, we mean) and deserving of encouragement.

How Pneumonia Starts.

You catch a little cold today, by tomorrow it has reached the throat, next day the lungs are affected and you wish you had used "Catarrhozone" which kills colds in five minutes. In the first place Catarrhozone soothes the irritated membranes and relieves congestion,—then it cuts out the uhlegm and destroys the germs. It enables the blood to retain a natural supply of oxygen, lung food and vitality. In any cough bronchitis or lung affection it's guaranteed to positively cure. Decline any substitte for "Catarrhozone."

TO THE VOTERS

Medicine Hat Constituency.

As the nominee of the Conservatives to contest the forthcoming Provincial elections in the Medicine Hat constituency, I consider it my duty to state what measures I intend to support if elected to the Legislature:

1. The taking of all proper and lawful steps to ascertain in what respects, if any, the Dominion Parliament can restrict the Province of Alberta in its dealing with the Eduction question, in addition to any restrictions there may be contained in the British North America Act.
2. Regarding the lands I will advocate the continual application to and negotiation with the Dominion Parliament for the surrender of the public domain (within the boundaries of the Province) to the Province and for the withdrawal of the Canadian Pacific Railway tax exemptions.
3. I am in favor of the public ownership of public utilities.
4. I am in favor of the giving of land grants to all defenders of the empire (including members of the R. N. W. M. P.) who are residents in the Province.
5. Iam of opinion that each Local Improvement District should have improvements (in the way of roads and bridges) made therein equal in value to the total amount of taxes collected therefrom and where, by reason of sparsity of population, such taxes are not sufficient to make necessary improvements, I shall urge the government to make up the amount required from the Public funds.
6. I will urge generous but careful expenditure of the public monies towards the legitmate assistance of agriculture and ranching.
7. There is no more important point than Medicine Hat where a traffic bridge should be built. It will be my duty to urge the appropriation of sufficient monies to build such a bridge.
8. I deem it my duty to give my hearty support to all legitimate measures furthering the Labor interests.
9. I am in favor of a fair re-adjustment of the Income Tax.
10. I am in favor of some adjustment of the Mechanic's Lien on buildings.

THE OTHER SIDE OF IT.

The Northwest Review, the only Roman Catholic paper published in English in Western Canada, recently published some articles which clearly show that they are hostile to Mr. Haultain. We have been repeatedly told that the Autonomy Bill grant, no new concessions to the Roman Catholics, but in the light of these articles one wonders whether there is not more in the new bill than at sight appears. The articles charge Mr. Haultain with being "embittered by his growing sectarian hate of the Catholic Church." The writer of the articles evidently hopes for Mr. Haultain's defeat.

I ask you so to act in your political, your municipal and your social relations in this regard that if there be a grievance on the part of minorities in other Provinces, you may speak as Canadian citizens, as friends and neighbours in kindly request, with that moral force, which, otherwise acting, you could not exert. The following resolution was passed at the provincial W.C.T.U. convention held at Red Deer this month:

Realizing that in the principles of total abstinence for the individual, and prohibition for the nation, lies the future safety of our homes, we view with alarm some of the proposed changes to the license law as outlined by the Alberta Licenced Victuallers Prodictive Association. Therefore resolved:

That as the Provincial Woman's Christian Temperance Union in convention assembled at Red Deer we declare our faith in the above mentioned principles and protest against the proposed change in section 8, chapter 33, (Amendment to section 81 License Law) to have the hour of closing on Saturday night changed from 7 p.m. Further resolved: That we protest against the change referring to selling liquor at race meets, football matches, or other sports, fairs, etc., which reads as follows: Upon application of any Incorporate Society, Turf Club, or Racing Association, the Attorney General in his discretion grant a permit to any to any, license under this ordinance to sell by retail for any period not exceeding six days, spiritious liquors in a covered booth or tent upon the grounds occupied by any such society, association or club for the time being for the purpose of holding meetings for the encouragement of manly sports and exercises, or for the purpose of holding racing or trotting matches, or during the time of holding upon such grounds any agricultural show or industrial exhibition, provided that the said meeting is held within a staked or fenced enclosure and does not include any licensed premises within the limit of such enclosure, and provided that an inspector of the district shall approve of the location of the tent or booth in which such liquor may be sold under such permit. The Line as to whom any such permit may be granted shall pay therefore a fee of $10 for each day covered by the permit.

A copy of the resolution to be sent to all the political candidates in the field asking them to do all their power to prevent this clause from becoming law, if elected to our new Provincial Parliament.

Yours on behalf of the convention,
Mrs. S. J. Craig, Olds,
President. Mrs. L. C. McKinley, Claresholm.

[By OBSERVER.]

Cap. Johnston has a good story about a ride he took in an automobile at Vancouver. The Cap. took a ride round the park to see how the thing felt. He was fitted up in goggles in regulation style, and, everybody else being at the New Westminster Fair, they had a clear course. When it was over, the Cap. was glad enough to be on shank's pony again, but he was'nt going to let the chauffeur know it, not by a good bit.

"How did you like it?" asked the chauffeur.

"Oh, that was all right," said Cap., "but, say, was that the fastest you could go?"

"Yes," answered the man, "that was the limit."

"Well," said Cap., "we have cayuses on the prairie at Medicine Hat that could beat that to a finish."

The town gas system is all right. The explosion last week was no doubt caused by a leakage from an old well. This leakage crept along the looser ground, found the line of pipes, and then travelled into the livery barn and into the house. Timid ones, however, might dig a hole in the garden and expose the gas pipe, and this would prevent anything of the kind happening again. Frost will not interfere with the gas.

I notice that the flambeaux still burns every night near Main street. I propose that the Council attach a meter to that pipe so that the public might know how much gas is being wasted there. I believe the total would be such a staggerer that the people would deman that it be stopped.

I can understand the gas being sold at a cheap rate for lime-burning or any other useful purpose, but to let it flow off in a hurricane, is a piece of extravagance which should be stopped. If this continues long we shall have to sing the same song as they do down in Indiana. "We wasted our gas and it played out."

However they say little things please little minds so the originators of the flare are no doubt very proud of their work. Really that must be the explanation, but I suggest the meter all the same, and the cost charged to the department that ordered it. That's business.

Last week was a "red letter" week in Russia. The Czar granted nearly all the reforms the people have been fighting for for generations. Strange to say, while the people were celebrating their freedom in many of the cities, the Cossack soldiers and police, set upon the people and killed and wounded numbers of them. This led to riot and pillage by a mob of the lower order. Verily, Russia is not free yet.

CHAPTER XVIII.

ANOTHER spell of scorching heat swept over the mountain so intense that men and women could scarce exert themselves to move, and found existence endurable only in the shelter of their homes, afraid to venture out in the scorching rays of the sun, and the sheep and cattle, stretched out on the ground under the trees, lay, with closed eyes, panting, not caring to eat. The people, sighing and praying for relief, told each other significantly that such scorching air was a curse put upon them. But one night, whether it was in answer to their prayers or the curse was lifted, the leaves began to rustle on the trees, and suddenly a breeze sprang up from the northwest, bringing in its wake a cool breath that fanned the awful heat away, and the mountain folk awoke in the morning refreshed and strengthened to set about with energy to accomplish tasks that had of necessity been neglected during the excessive heat.

La Fabienne and Margaret Mayland, having grown weary of the enforced inactivity, rode away gayly from the door shortly after the noon hour of that first cool day, with Gaston for a guide, to view some waterfalls in a small hamlet toward the west that the latter had discovered in his wanderings and which his master had expressed a desire to see. As they found much of interest and beauty in the mountain scenery to take their attention and occupy their time, the sun had set and the approach of twilight was at hand when they rode wearily up to the house, demanding supper from the pleased and expectant Elsbeth, who was waiting at the door.

The loiterers usually standing about the village hostelry, the Sign of the Red Heart, taking advantage of the absence of La Fabienne, also his man Gaston, now talked together loudly and with great earnestness of the lad Christopher's tragic death; also other evil happenings that had occurred in the village of late. One or two men, more excited than the rest, threw out their arms wildly, with angry and vindictive gesticulation, as they harangued the others, and above their heads, as if with a desire to be heard, the time worn, weather beaten old square of wood, with a red heart painted upon it, that from long years of exposure to the elements was now dull and faded, swung and creaked noisily on the iron bar over the door of the tavern from which it was suspended.

Josiah Taunston, riding toward them, drew rein as he reached the door and called loudly for a tankard of ale. The idlers grouped about him eagerly.

"Hast heard the news, master?" asked one.

"What news?"

"The latest report of the devil's handiwork in our affairs; that is all," another man interposed hastily. "Of a truth thou hast heard."

"Nay, I ha' not," he answered sharply. "But after Adam's gran'son's wicked murder naught of bad tidings could surprise me. What's amiss now?"

Several of the bystanders struggled to get nearer the horse in a position to tell the story, but the first speaker, taller and quicker of speech than the others, commenced the narrative.

"Thou hast heard, wi' all of us, that good Widow Dawson's babe, that for a week past on account of the heat lay ill of a fever which the leech said could be easily cured, of a sudden took a fit last night an' died. The poor dame is prostrate and sweareth that black arts were practiced on her child, as just before it was resting quietly, when"—the man's voice fell into a whisper—"suddenly the mother was aroused by weird noises an' fearsome rappings on the door. All of a tremble, she opened, but no one was there. Then, with a great noise, the lattice blew in, a white sheet was waved before her eyes, smoke an' the stench of sulphur burning filled the room, an' when all was cleared away she found her innocent babe in a fit a-dying on the bed."

The men fell back, pale faced and awe stricken, looking at each other with open mouths. Taunston took the tankard and quaffed off the ale, then from his high place on his horse addressed the crowd with great impressiveness.

"The time hath come, good neighbors, when we must act," he declared. "It is useless longer to deny that wicked happenings occur here daily; that Satan, dissatisfied with the righteous and pious conduct of this God fearing community, hath entered into compact with one who shall be nameless and hath chosen to exercise his malevolent influence through her agency. Enough of evil hath been wrought already," he cried fiercely.

Old Adam, the goldsmith, opening his door at the sound of the loud talking, peered forth and when he saw Josiah Taunston ran to the spot, pushed his way through the crowd and, falling on his knees beside the horse, threw his apron over his face, crying out: "Oh, Master Taunston; oh, good Josiah, give me comfort in my hour of trial or I must go mad wi' thinking on it! My gran'son Christopher! The little lad left me by my dying daughter Betsy, struck to his death and his soul carried away in peals of thunder by the devil! Oh, lackaday! Woe is me! God ha' mercy!"

The man continued to grovel on the ground, rocking to and fro, moaning forth his sorrow, and Josiah, pointing his long finger at him, addressed the now increasing assemblage.

"Look ye on this man," he cried, "his heart bleeding and broken, the mainstay of his old age cruelly taken from him, and all because we have too long dallied with the evil influences that have of late been so strongly brought to bear upon us. Look on this man, I say! Dost want the same to happen to ye all? Matthew Clines"—he singled out one man with his finger—"now knowest thou that thy turn may not come next? Wilt wait, refusing to believe until thou seest thy maid Dorothy riding away in a cloud of smoke on a witch's broomstick?"

"Nay, nay," groaned the man sullenly.

"I call on ye not to be deceived by a fair face, rich dress and a kindly manner! Such deep arts are ever employed by our worst enemy, Satan, when he hath his blackest crimes in meditation. Thou knowest, men, to whom I make inference? 'Tis the woman Margaret Mayland that I do publicly accuse!"

He paused for a moment to emphasize his words, then continued with a great seriousness, shaking his head in the manner of one who had abandoned all hope. "With prayer and protestations my good mother and I have urged this woman to change her ways, to destroy the evil cross that is but a witch mark invented by the devil for his purposes, one touch of which will bring a man to fell disaster. Men and brothers," he cried, "she would not hear us! She coldly turned us from her door and then in her wickedness set our sheep a-dying; but, being our kinswoman, we bore all patiently and said naught. Now, my judgment tells me that too much harm hath been done already. Here before ye all I repudiate this woman. I renounce kinship to her!"

The crowd, now having assumed much larger proportions, took up the cry of hate and bitterness.

"Good man! Good man Josiah! He doth renounce his cousin!" one cried.

"Down, down with the woman who weareth Satan's cross!" said another.

"We ha' borne too much a'ready!"

"Hanging is the only way to put an end on it," cried old Adam tearfully, wiping his eyes.

"Witchcraft is the very blackest crime against God, the saints and the people!" proclaimed Josiah Taunston dramatically. "Such wickedness cannot be choked out. Burning—burning at the stake—is the punishment our clergy and elders have ever meted out as of sufficient suffering to expiate this hideous crime."

Then, seeing his listeners were roused to an unusual height of fury, he cried in a louder voice: "My men, to the town house! Call the council for a meeting! We must act ere our own souls, caught in the talons of the devil's claws, are rendered incapable to invoke God's vengeance."

Turning his horse's head, he led the way, followed by an excited throng of angry men.

In the meantime Mistress Taunston, whose reputation for piety and her well known willingness to offer spiritual consolation to the afflicted brought her to many bedsides of both sick and dying, had been at the cabin of the Widow Dawson, and as the sun was slowly sinking down below the hilltops she came through the forest on her way home. Hearing the sounds of approaching footsteps, she raised her head and saw approaching Margaret's woman Elsbeth, who when she had advanced a few steps paused and, glancing about in all directions, called in shrill tones the little dog Biddy, that had evidently strayed away. If she saw Margaret's aunt coming toward her Elsbeth gave no sign of it. Without ever having had an interchange of hard words there was a deep feeling of hatred lying in the hearts of these two women for each other, and, although on occasions they had met with civil greetings, an underlying spirit of enmity between them was apparent and had grown lately into such proportions that at their last meeting the women had passed without recognition.

So today, with her head held high and a forbidding expression on her grim countenance, Mistress Taunston approached. The path at that point was rocky and narrow, so that in order to proceed one of them had to stand dangerously near the edge to let the other pass. Elsbeth, walking slowly, continued to look as if she saw no person in her way and called the lost dog's name with a great show of anxiety. Bristling with defiance and wearing her most scornful bearing, the Puritan woman came on until, reaching Elsbeth, who still refused to see her, she paused and, drawing her scant skirt of gray homespun very close about her, with an appearance of making a great effort not to let her clothing touch the other's, endeavored to pass.

Turning suddenly, Elsbeth confronted her so unexpectedly that the stern faced dame lost her balance and would have fallen had she not clutched the trunk of a tree for support. All the hatred in Elsbeth's heart for her companion blazed forth in her eyes as she looked at her.

"Fear not for thy clothing," she cried angrily, "or that contact with me shall harm thee! Lud! E'en I were pitch an' thou wert covered with me, it would not show on thee, thou art so black in wiles and wickedness."

"Beware, woman, how thou talkest to thy betters!" fairly shrieked the other in outraged tones.

"Forsooth, I'll ha' my say, now I have thee cornered"—Elsbeth's black eyes snapped dangerously—"an' for once thou'lt hear the truth. Fool that thou art to think our Margaret hath no protectors!" she exclaimed derisively. "Dost think, dullard, that Sir Godfrey La Fabienne suspects not thy son's vile schemes to get his cousin's estate, his deep laid plots to force her from the village as a polluted thing, so that he—her next of kin—may ride in and take possession?"

"'Tis false!" shrieked Mistress Taunston in wild anger. "Make way, woman, or it will be worse for thee!"

Elsbeth did not move.

"Methinks 'twere well to warn thee," she continued, "else in thy greed and ignorance thou'lt go too far. Sir Godfrey La Fabienne is a nobleman of much wealth, hath influence at the Spanish and English courts, and with both Puritans and papists his wishes have great weight."

"Ha, is't so?" The dame laughed scornfully. "Thy cavalier may have influence at the English court in all else but matters pertaining to the black art and witchcraft. His majesty hath spoken, and the fiat hath gone forth that all such shall be brought to trial and executed quickly. Oft and many times he hath so expressed himself, being a godly man and pious, so hope not for his interference. Now it is my turn to warn thee." She raised a finger and pointed it at Elsbeth solemnly. "Before yon sun just fading from our sight doth fall again tomorrow even, thou and thy fledgeling had better begone."

"Make way, woman!"

Her manner betrayed such conviction and evil portent that Elsbeth's heart sank within her, although her face retained its expression of indifference and defiance. She drew aside to let the other pass, saying coldly:

"Take heed how thou dost persecute Margaret Mayland further, and rely not too strongly on thy delusion of having the king's favor. That is all I have to say to thee."

Then she walked on calmly, calling in shrill tones to the straying dog.

CHAPTER XIX.

HETTY TAUNSTON, pale faced and wearing an air of great despondency, leaned over the gate idly. She was lonely, and an undefined feeling of fear was upon her. Some happening of more than usual interest had drawn the men from the farm earlier tonight, and, having laid a cold supper on the table for her mother and Josiah, she hung about the dooryard, eagerly awaiting the advent of the first comer to relieve the monotony of the lonely hour and bring her news of what was happening. Soon the sound of horses' hoofs was heard.

"Ah"—she breathed a sigh of relief—"Josiah home at last!"

The horse and rider approaching nearer, Hetty discovered the latter to be none other than her former friend and lover, Simon Kempster, who since their final understanding in the dairy had met her with cool indifference, doffing his cap and passing by in silence. At the unexpected sight of him Hetty's heart gave a bound, and the blood rushed to her face. Surely, she thought, this sad night when she was so lonely he would pause for the evening chat to which they had been accustomed for so many months. Oh, why had she not put the pink blossom in her hair that he admired so much! Hetty was frightened, apprehensive. She wished he would stop, if only for one short moment, and, although the young woman had other ideas for a husband, she had admitted to herself more than once of late that for a common everyday friend Simon did very well, that she missed him and that her heart was a little sore at his treatment of her since she refused to marry him. Kempster reached the gateway.

"A greeting, Simon."

The soft, fluttering voice fell on Kempster's ears strangely. He felt a tugging sensation in his breast, but, controlling himself by a strong effort, regarded the little smiling, enticing face coldly.

"A good even, mistress," he said, with quiet civility. Then he rode on, possibly a trifle faster, without even a backward glance.

For a moment she stood speechless with surprise; then as an understanding of his meaning came to her she drew a sharp breath and tossed her head angrily.

"Now I will marry my French courtier when he doth come!" she exclaimed hotly. "A common farming man need ne'er take such a high hand with me. He hung so much about me in the latter months and I was e'er so friendly with him that I thought 'twas only decent to offer him a greeting. But," with a shrug of her shoulders, "I'll ha' done with him now, and—mayhap—when I'm gone from him to France forever"—with a little tremble in her voice—"he'll regret his cold looks an' ugly manners."

Pouting her lips, she took a seat upon the bench at the door and soon grew so absorbed in her plans to wreak vengeance on poor Kempster that she did not hear the firm, quiet step of her mother nor was she conscious of her approach until the harsh voice fell sharply on her ears.

"Art pining again, foolish lass? Canst find naught to do but sit and think thy silly thoughts?" she asked sternly. "Where are the tallow dips, that they are not lighted? Am I, that am weary with a day of prayerful toil, to cross my threshold into a darkened house? Once thou wert of some use and handy at thy work, but of late, prithee, 'tis naught but dreams and sighs! And thy pale face and absent mind doth fairly madden me."

A Meerschaum Mine.

"Meerschaum is mined like coal," said a pipe dealer. "It is a soft, soapy like stone, and in Asia Minor its mining is an important industry. The crude meerschaum is called hamtash. It is yellowish white in color and a red clay coat or skin envelops it. The blocks cost from $25 to $200 a cart load. They are soft enough to cut with a knife. These blocks in summer are dried by exposure to the sun. In winter a heated room is necessary. Finally the meerschaum blocks are sorted into twelve grades, wrapped in cotton and packed in cases with the greatest care. The bulk of all this meerschaum goes to Vienna. There the best pipe makers in the world live."

HOME TRADE MAXIMS.

A Few Hints On Helping Yourself and Your Neighbors—Above All Don't Lose Hope.

Don't lose hope in the future of your town, but study conditions that need correction and set about to apply a remedy.

He who would set a good example before his neighbors will patronize every home industry that is worthy of support.

If your neighbor is a grumbler and cannot see any good in the town or its people and if he is not of the kind that can be reformed, let him seek a home elsewhere. A change of air will be good for him, for yourself and the town in general.

When there is any work to be done, don't wait for your neighbor, Tom Jones or Dick Brown, to commence. Get a move on yourself and go to them and pull hand in hand with them.

Don't think that enterprise consists of sending your money from your home town to help build up business enterprises and add to the wealth of capitalists in large cities. No, this is not enterprise; rather lack of public spiritedness.

Don't be afraid of criticism. Study well your duty as a citizen and go about it without fear or favor and you will find that those simpletons who may first call you a busybody will be willing to give you credit for your work.

There is little use in feeling sore because your neighbor has been successful. He may have worked intelligently and hard to succeed while you have been idling your time and doing a lot of grumbling instead of trying to build up trade and your town.

Sometimes the retired farmer who comes to town to live feels that it is not his place to take an active part in town affairs. A few encouraging words may change his attitude and make him one of the progressive factors in the town.

Your town will not lose out by impressing each and every farmer in the neighborhood with the fact that the place is for his benefit as much as for those who reside within its corporate limits.

Business men of a town should make the farmers feel that they are always welcome visitors and not merely factors in bringing money to the place. The farmers are the mainstays of agricultural towns, and are to a great extent the ones on whom the merchants are mainly dependent for support. They are quite as much interested in the prosperity of the town as are the residents of the place and should be made to feel that the town is as important to them as to the residents of it.

Astor's English Palace.

Amazing wonders are being wrought by William Waldorf Astor, the American millionaire and naturalized British subject, upon the historic Hever estate in Kent, which he recently purchased. The artistic owner is spending money with a lavish hand in beautifying the expanse of 2,000 acres that spread around the old moated castle. Though the cost of the undertaking is probably not definitely known to Mr. Astor himself, the popular estimate is that a million and a quarter pounds will be expended upon the improvements during the next two years.

There is no busier area in industrial England to-day. About a thousand men of all trades have taken up their residence in the neighborhood. The place nestles at the foot of a hill. The road which hitherto led close to the castle has been diverted, and now passes some hundred yards farther away. To make this new road is has been necessary to build two bridges over the River Eden, which winds through the estate.

Round the castle masons and carpenters are building a picturesque model village, toned to harmonize with the grey old walls of the castle.—London Mirror.

Curran's Wit.

Curran's ruling passion was his joke, and it was strong, if not in death, at least in his last illness. One morning his physician observed that he seemed to "cough with more difficulty."

"That is rather surprising," answered Curran, "for I have been practicing all night."

While thus lying ill Curran was visited by a friend, Father O'Leary, who also loved his joke.

"I wish, O'Leary," said Curran to him abruptly, "that you had the keys of heaven."

"Why, Curran?"

"Because you could let me in," said the facetious counselor.

"It would be much better for you, Curran," said the good humored priest, "that I had the keys of the other place, because I could then let you out."

Relaxations.

"Every mind frets for relaxations," says a writer. "Some men find it sufficient relief to take their pleasures on their own little tennis courts or croquet lawn. Others, like Richelieu, will call in the servants and have a leaping match in the hall; or, like Cardinal Mazarin, shut themselves in a room and fly over the chairs. Sir Isaac Holden used to get recreation out of compulsory walking. The more active the mind the greater the need for physical recreation. Gladstone cut down trees, rode and walked, and when none of these occupations was open to him threw himself head over heels down a grass bank. This feat was eclipsed by the staid and orderly member of the House of Commons who would solemnly throw a back somersault as he walked home through Hyde park."

Moody Jowett.

One evening while John Addington Symonds was at Oxford he dined with Prof. Jowett. After dinner the latter sat staring at the fire and would not speak, but yet did not seem to want Symonds to go. At last he spoke oracularly: "When I don't say anything, people fancy I am thinking about something. Generally I am thinking about nothing at all. Good night!" At another time he said: "Mr. Swinburne is a most curious young man. He used to bring me long and eloquent essays. He had a very remarkable power of language, but it was all language. I could never find that he was following any line of thought."

The Madding Crowd.

One thing that annoys and humiliates a western man in New York city is the way in which he is herded with the crowd. Out west a man is an individual. He feels that he is somebody, a responsible citizen, a factor in the community, a person more or less worth while, entitled to a certain amount of respect merely as a man and regardless of wealth or social position or political power. But in New York, unless one is somebody very important, he is nobody at all. He is a mere unit in the mob, of no more moment than one ant in a hill.

EFFIGIES AT FUNERALS.

A Curious Custom That Was Followed In the Olden Days.

At the funerals of great personages, the old chronicles tell us, "his lively effigy," dressed to imitate life, was carried in a chariot before the corpse to the grave, then there set up under a "hearse" or a temporary monument in the church. Such effigies were often left in a glass case standing over the vault where the interment had taken place. Some statues were of wood, with heads of plaster, but the more modern ones were of wax. In the olden days laudatory poems or epitaphs were affixed with pins or wax to these "hearses" and were even thrown into graves on the coffins in a similar manner to our modern custom of flowers at a burial. When Skelton, poet laureate to Henry VIII., "took sanctuary at Westminster to escape the displeasures of the then all powerful Cardinal Wolsey it is said that he subsisted on what he earned by writing epitaphs for use at funerals in the abbey. Ben Jonson's well known epitaph to the Countess of Pembroke—was evidently thus attached to her "hearse."—Gentleman's Magazine.

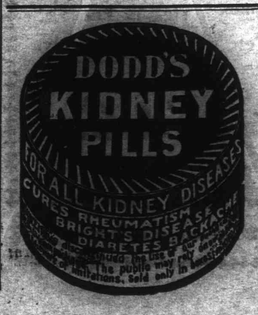
IT'S IN THE BLOOD.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Drive Out Rheumatic Poison.

Rheumatism is rooted in the blood—any doctor will tell you that. Nothing can cure it that does not reach the blood. It is a foolish waste of time and money to try to cure rheumatism with liniments, poultices or anything else that only goes skin deep. Rubbing lotions into the skin only helps the painful poison to circulate more freely. The one cure, and the only cure for rheumatism is to drive the uric acid out of your blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They actually make new blood, and the new blood sweeps out the poisonous acids, loosens the stiffened aching joints, cures the rheumatism and makes the sufferer feel better in many other ways. Mrs. Jos. Perron, Les Eboulements, Que., says:—"I suffered from rheumatism in a chronic form for nearly twenty-five years. I spent much money in liniments and medicines, but without avail, until I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sometimes I was so stiff I could hardly move. The trouble seemed to be growing worse, and finally seemed to affect my heart, as I used to have pains in the region of the heart, and sometimes a smothering sensation. I grew so weak and suffered so much that I began to consider my case hopeless, and then one day a little pamphlet, telling of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, fell into my hands, and I learned that they would cure rheumatism. I sent for a supply, and in about three weeks found they were helping me. The trouble which affected my heart soon disappeared, and gradually the pains left me and I could go about with more freedom than I had done for years. I still take the pills occasionally, as I now know it is wise to keep my blood in good condition."



It is because Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood that they cure such troubles as rheumatism, anaemia, indigestion, kidney troubles, backaches, headaches, and sideaches, neuralgia, erysipelas, and the special ailments that burden the lives of so many women and growing girls. But only the genuine pills can do this, and these always have the full name Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People on the wrapper around every box. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, by writing The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Whistler and the Amateur.

When James MacNeill Whistler went to Venice to make those fourteen famous etchings of his he became so intoxicated with its beauty that he made seventy pastels first, leaving his etchings till the last few days. These pastels made a tremendous sensation. All the art world of Venice was carried away with enthusiasm, excepting a Russian painter, who declared them tricks, betting a basket of champagne he could paint six not to be distinguished from them. Mr. Whistler amiably gave some of his paper and six pastels, which were finally mixed up with those by the Russian and submitted to a jury who had seen none of them. Mr. Whistler's pastels were unmistakable, and the Russian lost the wine. A few days later the two met on the Rialto, and Mr. Whistler laughed a little about the wine and the bet. The Russian was furious. "You forget, sir," he said, "that I'm a Russian, and if you scratch one you find a Tartar underneath." "Oh, no, you have it wrong," said Mr. Whistler, "you have it wrong. I scratched an artist and found an amateur."

The Scornful Caddie.

A very pompous, self sufficient and very bad golfer was once playing over an Irish course. He had as his caddie a battered old Irish peasant, with a very knowing twinkle in the corner of his eye. After each stroke—and each stroke was cruel hard on the green turf of Ould Oireland—the vainglorious one said to his caddie in the most lordly fashion, "Replace the turf, caddie!" Quietly and patiently the caddie went through the performance, thinking volumes and saying nothing at all until the eighteenth was reached. Then, as the last duffed shot stumbled its way to the putting green and "Replace the turf, caddie!" rang in his ears for the last time, he turned with a look of ineffable scorn upon his august employer and said: "Arrah, is it replacing the turf you'll be bidding me to do? By the holy fly, it'll be returning the place we'll be all doing when you're gone!"—London King.

Parliamentary Declamations That Went to the Bad—Footprints of the Unseen Hand—Oratorical Breaks.

When an honorable member, cross-questioning the Attorney-General for Ireland in the House of Commons the other day, announced his intention of putting another question "which distinctly arises, Mr. Speaker, out of the answer which the right hon. gentleman has not given," he was merely following in the oratorical footsteps of many a famous legislator who has "opened his mouth only to put his foot in it."

But the House of Commons is far from having a monopoly of these verbal eccentricities, and you will find "bulls" as fine and plentiful outside Parliament as Westminster can show.

A member of the Queensland Legislature once solemnly warned the House that "they would keep cutting the wool off the sheep that laid the golden egg until they pumped it dry"; but this performance was feeble compared with that of a rival West Australian lawmaker who thus delivered himself: "Spurious vulgar fossildom secretly urges members to oppose this non-party measure. History shows that the same kind of ruptured-brained vultures sit owl-like on the dying limb of the tree of reason, and by hooting and screeching attempt to impede the progress of every great representative of reform who climbs to the topmost peaks of the imperishable tree of indestructible democratic knowledge."

The Times, in its obituary notice of Baron Dowse, the Irish judge, said? "A great Irishman has passed away. God grant that many of the great men who wisely love their country may follow him"; and the Irish Times, not to be outdone, wrote thus on landslips some time ago: "To find the solid earth rock beneath his feet, to have his natural foothold on the globe's surface swept, so to speak, out of his grasp, is, to the stoutest heart of man, terrifying in the extreme."

The intention of a certain orator who, at a municipal banquet, paid his tribute to the late Mr. Gladstone was admirable; but this is what he actually said: "It was my privilege once to hear him speak, and I shall never forget the glorious oration. A shining whirlwind of words seemed to pour from his lips like a smooth-flowing stream, that, I tell you, actually flamed from his mouth in a fiery speech that seemed painted before our mental eyes by the fingers of a skilful magician."

It was at a meeting of the Solicitors' Apprentices' Debating Society in Dublin that Sir Thomas Myles, president of the Irish College of Surgeons, spoke of men who looked on the condition of things at the outbreak of the South African War "with folded arms and their hands in their pockets."

Even Dr. Johnson defined a garret as "a room on the highest floor in the house," and the "cockloft" as the room over the garret"; and in a recent translation of a Continental novel we find these amazing sentences:—"The Countess was about to reply when a door opened and closed her mouth"; "The colonel paced backward and forward with his hands behind his back, reading his newspaper"; and "At this sight the negro's face grew deadly pale."

"The princely eagle has got beyond his depth," wrote the editor of a London daily; the Spectator once assured its readers that "Sir William Harcourt's harpoons had missed fire"; and a famous English novelist, speaking in America, compared life with "a foul and stagnant river which is running in the bottom of a channel." It was an American cleric who prayed "if any spark of grace has been kindled, let that spark be watered."

"All along the untrodden paths of the past," declaimed a member of a north-country debating society, "we discern the footprints of an unseen hand"; while another member in the same debate spoke of recent bye-elections as "Haystacks of straws showing which way the wind blows." At a peace meeting in Birmingham town hall a speaker referred to the Czar's Rescript as "a dove bearing the olive branch of peace which burst like a thunderbolt on the world." But this flight of oratory cannot compare for a moment with a peroration of Mr. Want, Attorney-General for New South Wales. "Federation," he claimed "is a fashionable vermin which threatens to undermine the free constitution of the colony. Until lately it has been hanging up like Mahomet's coffin. Now it has come to earth with a sickening thud, and is seen in all its nakedness and nastiness, and people find that they have been mistaking a scoured tankard for a celestial being."—Tit-Bits.

Peebles Ham.

The Scotchman told the story.

There were two old Scotchwomen, Mrs. MacWhirter and Mrs. McBean, who met on the road one day, and Mrs. MacWhirter says:

"Losh me, woman, yer far frae hame the day."

"Aye," says Mrs. McBean. "I was just yont at Peebles. Sanders MacNabb o' Peebles keeps rale guid ham. Oor John, ye ken, likes a bit guid ham and is aye yammerin' aboot the ham bein' owerfat and owersaut."

"Oor Tom," says Mrs. MacWhirter, "is the same way. There's nae pleasin' him wi' his ham. Faith, I'll hae to gie MacNabb a trial."

So Mrs. MacWhirter journeys into Peebles, and she says to Sanders MacNabb, the grocer:

"Gie's a pund o' yer ham."

"What kind," says Sanders, "wad ye like?"

"Oh, just the kind that Mrs. McBean gets," says the lady.

MacNabb smiled faintly.

"A' richt," says he. "Whaur's yer bottle?"

Bunyan's Christian With a Knobkerry.

Translated into the Matabele language, a new edition of the "Pilgrim's Progress" has been produced for circulation in Rhodesia.

Instead of wearing the armor of a knight of the middle ages, says The Transvaal Review, Christian is represented by a Kaffir warrior with headdress, jacket and shirt; he is armed with a knobkerry and shield and an assegai. Christian set out from a native kraal which takes the place of the City of Destruction. The Slough of Despond becomes the muddle of the veldt. Evangelist is represented by an English missionary. Vanity Fair is a war dance festival. Demas is pictured as trying to tempt Christian and Hopeful to enter a gold mine.

Bees as Acrobats.

When wax is needed a certain number of self elected citizens gorge with honey and hang up in chains or curtains, each bee clinging by her front feet to the hind feet of the one above her, like Japanese acrobats, and there they remain, sometimes for two days, until the wax scales appear pushed out from every pocket. It is not hard to understand that, since much honey is needed for the manufacture of wax, a bee after filling with the raw material would produce much more wax by keeping quiet than by using any of the gorged honey for energy in moving about and working. But the necessity of "holding hands" while this work goes on must ever remain to us another occult evidence of the close relations in the bee commune.—Country Life In America.

A BABY CHANGED.

"One could hardly believe the change Baby's Own Tablets have wrought in my child," says Mrs. Angus Morrison, Port Caldwell, Ont. "He suffered terribly while teething, vomited his food and was weak and puny. One box of Baby's Own Tablets made him a changed child. They eased the pain of teething, strengthened his stomach, and he is now a big healthy child, growing finely and never sick a day." The experience of Mrs. Morrison is that of thousands of other mothers who have found health for their little ones and comfort for themselves in the use of Baby's Own Tablets. Mothers need not be afraid of this medicine, it is guaranteed not to contain an atom of opiate or strong drug. They could not harm a child of any age, and they are good for them at all ages. Ask your druggist for Baby's Own Tablets or send 25 cents to the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and get them by mail.

Lamb's Quaint Humor.

Charles Lamb once said that he hated a certain man.

"Do you know him?" Lamb was asked.

"No," he answered.

"Let me introduce you to him," said Lamb's friend.

"No," responded Lamb humorously, "for if I shall know him I am sure I shall stop hating him."

The famous Alpine climber who at the solicitation of the vicar had consented to give a short lecture in the Little Slushborough parish room was relating one of his most thrilling experiences, according to the Dundee Advertiser. "Suddenly," he said, "I felt my feet slip from under me, and next moment I was hanging over a yawning precipice. Had the rope which held me broken I should have found a grave midst the everlasting snows." He paused, and old Mrs. Wurzletop, who was as deaf as a gatepost, seized the opportunity to put a question to her husband, who could hear fairly well on one side of his head. "Wot weer 'ee a-sayin' of, John?" she queried. MEDICINE HAT, N. W. T.

A SUN BATH.

It Is a Potent Factor In the Cure of Any Disease.

There is no disinfectant made by man that can compare with the sun's rays in effectiveness.

A sun bath is a most potent factor in the cure of any disease. After one's skin becomes accustomed to the direct rays of the sun one may lie in the sunshine for hours at a time with great benefit, but at first the exposure should be of only a few minutes' duration at one time. These short periods, however, may be repeated several times a day. The best results are obtained by exposing the bare skin of the whole body (except the head) to the direct rays of the sun. Consequently a cot placed in the bow window of an upper chamber is an ideal place for a sun bath, provided that the air in the chamber is absolutely fresh and pure.

To sit on the porch in the sun is very beneficial, even if one must be so warmly wrapped up as to make it difficult for the sun's rays to penetrate to the skin.

To lie on the grass in the sun is better still—on the grass with only a blanket between the invalid and the healing powers of mother earth.

The patient's head should not be exposed to the direct rays of the sun in any case, and a sun bath should be followed by a cool sponge bath when possible.

Sober England.

In nothing have the habits of English gentlemen more changed than in the use of wine. Time was when each plate and table was enfiladed, almost surrounded, by an escort of wineglasses, ranging from sherry to champagne and tapering thence to madeira and brandy—port, claret, burgundy, the red alternating with the white—and he was no good man and true who did not go through the list and survive it. Today at the great houses you may have what you want, but rarely more than three glasses are visible, for white wine, for red wine and for champagne. Apollinaris is largely in evidence. The fine old English gentleman who made it a merit to get drunk on port and to sober up on claret has disappeared.

NATURE'S BEST TONIC.

—from Success Magazine.—

Laughter is undoubtedly one of nature's best tonics. It brings the disordered faculties and functions into harmony, it lubricates the mental bearings and prevents the friction which monotonous, exacting business engenders. It is a divine gift bestowed upon us as a life preserver, a health promoter, a joy generator, a success-maker.

Life, with the average American, is too serious at best. Never lose an opportunity for relaxation from the stress and strain of your business or profession. Every draught of laughter, like an air cushion, eases you over the jolts and the hard places on life's highway. Laughter is always healthy. It tends to bring every abnormal condition back to the normal. It is a panacea for heartaches for life's bruises. It is a life prolonger. People who laugh heartily keep themselves in physical and mental harmony, and are likely to live longer than those who take life too seriously.

A Small Pill, but Powerful.—They that judge of the powers of a pill by its size, would consider Parmelee's Vegetable Pills to be lacking. It is a little wonder among pills. What it lacks in size it makes up in potency. The remedies which it carries are put up in these small doses, because they are so powerful that only small doses are required. The full strength of the extracts is secured in this form and do their work thoroughly.

One of the most promising things about our civilization today is that, side by side with the greed for gold, is the ever-growing passion of humanity for good. The number of people who prefer to be useful to their fellowmen rather than to make money is constantly increasing. This passion for good is the salt of humanity; it is what makes us believe in the future of the race.

VACCINATION LAW IGNORED.

20,000 Warrants Are Out—Great State of Affairs at Derby, England.

An extraordinary position of affairs has arisen at Derby as the result of twenty years' official neglect to enforce the vaccination acts.

It is estimated that there are no fewer than 20,000 defaulters in the town against whom distress warrants have been issued, but not executed.

Representations have from time to time been made to the Home Office with a view to enforcing the law, and Mr. Akers-Douglas has now sent an ultimatum which has caused some consternation. He has informed the watch committee that unless the police take steps to execute the warrants he will withdraw the Government grant towards the aid of the police, which last year amounted to £6,000.

The Town Council, on receipt of this communication, instructed the chief constable to put the law into operation; but, apart from the formidable nature of the task, there is the additional difficulty of finding an auctioneer to conduct the sales.

All the local auctioneers who have been applied to have declined to take what they consider is a serious risk, and so far the watch committee have heard of only one man who is willing to undertake the work.

He is a London auctioneer, and has expressed his willingness to sell distrained goods for a fee of twenty guineas in addition to his hotel and traveling expenses. In many cases, however, the fine amounts to only one shilling, and as all the expenses attached to sales are recoverable from defaulters, the watch committee feel that it would be unfair to place further burdens on the shoulders of the anti-vaccinationists.

As soon as an auctioneer can be obtained at a reasonable fee an attempt will be made to execute all the 20,000 warrants. Lively scenes will then be expected.

In the House of Commons the subject was brought to the notice of the Home Secretary by Sir Thomas Roe.

Mr. Akers-Douglas said he had been in communication with the Derby watch committee, and he was glad to learn that some effort was now to be made to carry out the law. If the suggested number of defaulters—20,000—was even approximately accurate it pointed strongly to the evil which resulted from the failure to enforce the law.

The Home Secretary added that he knew of no other large towns where the police had so entirely failed to enforce the orders of the justices as they had at Derby.

KEEPING TOWNS CLEAN.

Valuable Advice Gleaned From a Recently Issued Appeal.

Especially for a town which seeks to attract tourists or investors it is a great advantage if everything about it has a well kept and prosperous appearance, says The Pathfinder. The mayor of Denver has brought about a notable change in that city by issuing an appeal to the citizens as follows. The example could be followed elsewhere:

If your stroe front, residence or fence is dull or dingy, order it painted.

If your awning is old, torn or faded, get a new one.

If your sidewalk, fence or gate needs repairing, fix it.

Destroy the young weeds that are starting on your property and on your neighbor's property.

If your advertising sign is old or faded, take it down or repaint it.

Resolve never to throw paper in the streets.

Burn all the rubbish possible. Allow no one to throw it on the streets, alleys or vacant lots.

Promise not to spit on the sidewalk.

Organize a block improvement society and allow no weeds to grow on sidewalks, area or vacant property in your block.

Ask your milkmen, grocerymen and expressmen to have their wagons painted.

Illuminate the front of your store in the business section.

Every effort put forth or dollar spent to improve our city's appearance will be returned twofold.

Insect That Sits on Eggs.

A remarkable case of an insect sitting on its eggs is recorded by F. P. Dodd in the "Transactions of the Entomological Society of London." This strange departure from the normal habits of the insect race is exhibited by a species of bug. The female sits in a brooding attitude over her eggs for a period of three weeks. When the young begin to break through she retires an inch or so from the eggs and remains there for some hours until the last egg is hatched. She then departs, leaving the young ones to take care of themselves. During the whole time of brooding and till all the young are hatched the mother eats nothing. It is thought that this brooding habit may be a means of protection against the attacks of ichneumon flies.—London Globe.

Nothing Is a Trifle!

The half inch United States standard screw thread has thirteen turns per inch. Mr. Welsh, the original superintendent of the Westinghouse Air Brake works, used for the half inch bolt twelve threads instead of thirteen. This decision has proved to be a mistake, and the company would be glad to change it, but the immense number of brake equipments which are out all over the world, the constant call for repairs and extensions make it impossible.

Worry Habit Kills the Nerves.

You can get well if you will stop worrying and use

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD.

Dr. A. T. Schofield, a great English authority on diseases of the nerves, attributes the usual cause of such ailments to "the worry habit," which he denounces as an "unmitigated evil."

Headache at top or back of head, noises in the ears, sudden starting or twitching, tenderness of the scalp or spine, sleeplessness, dyspepsia pains and cramps, timidity, irritability, melancholy are some of the symptoms of exhausted nerves.

Pure air, wholesome food, rest and the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to rebuild and revitalize the wasted nerve cells is the ideal treatment for diseases of the nerves.

Assert your will power and determine that you will not worry or let little things irritate you, and keep using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food regularly and persistently week in and week out, and it will not be long until you will feel the thrill of new life and energy coming back to your wasted and worn-out nerves.

There is no doubt about the ability of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to cure you, for its extraordinary restorative power has been established in hundreds and thousands of cases.

Mrs. W. R. Sutherland, St. Andrews, Man., writes: "In February, 1903, I was stricken with paralysis, fell helpless on the floor, and had to be carried to bed. The doctor pronounced it a bad case as I had no power in my tongue and left leg. I remained in that condition for six months without obtaining benefit from the doctors prescriptions or other medicines.

"My husband advised me to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by the use of this treatment all symptoms of the disease disappeared. I can now talk plainly, my leg is all right and I can now do my housework. How grateful I am to be cured by so wonderful a remedy."

A SCIENTIFIC PRINCE.

Japan Has One Like His Counterparts In Europe.

Japan, like Austria, Russia and Bavaria, has a Prince of the blood who devotes himself almost entirely to scientific pursuits; and the oriental counterpart of the learned Grand Duke Constantine of Russia, president of the Imperial Academy of Sciences at St. Petersburg, or Archduke Louis Salvator of Austria, whom I portrayed in these letters a few days ago under his incognito, "Prof. Neufeld," and of the eminent oculist, Duke Charles Theodore of Bavaria, is to be found in the imperial Prince Kikumaro Yamashina, who, at 33 years of age, is in the line of succession to the throne of the Mikado, says the Marquise de Fontenoy.

Whereas, most of the other members of the reigning house of the Land of the Rising Sun are identified with the army and with the navy, this particular scion thereof has devoted his time, his energies, and his considerable wealth to scientific pursuits and investigations, and has just established on the summit of Mount Tsukuba, on the eastern coast of Japan, fifty miles from Tokio, the most magnificently equipped meteorological station in the length and breadth of Asia. Indeed, it may be questioned whether it is not the finest in the world, being furnished with all the most recently invented instruments, not merely for the recording of meteorological changes but also of those seismic movements which are so frequent and so severe in Japan.

Indeed, Dai Nippon is the land of earthquakes par excellence. No better spot could have been found for the establishment of this station than Mount Tsukuba, which, according to Japanese legend and national tradition, was set up by the divinities, Izanaga and Izanami, the creator and the creatress of Japan, as a bulwark against the tremendous waves of the Pacific ocean. It is a curious fact, and in a line with Japanese traditions, that this bulwark, along with the entire eastern coast of Japan, has been rising gradually higher and higher from the sea for centuries past. Geologists have verified this.

Near the summit of the mountain, which commands a superb view not only of the Pacific ocean but also of the entire plain and city of Tokio towards Mount Fudiyama, there is an ancient and most picturesque temple dedicated to Izanagi, which is the bourn of many pilgrimages.

Doubled Initials For Plurals.

Under the rule that the initial letter of a word is sometimes doubled to signify the plural, bb would be a proper abbreviation for barrels. Probably some one, unfamiliar with the rule and thinking the abbreviation too concise, as it might be mistaken for an abbreviation for boxes, bundles, bags or butts, made it bbl. for one barrel, and then, still ignorant of the rule, added an s for the plural, making it bbls. for more than one.

BE AMBITIOUS TO BE USEFUL RATHER THAN RICH.

(Orison Sweet Marden in "Success Magazine.")

A young man of ability and great promise recently refused to enter a vocation which would yield him a large income, lest the temptation to become rich might eat up his desire to help his fellow-men. He feared that the frantic struggle for wealth and self-being waged by the majority of the men with whom his position would force him to associate would insensibly draw him into the same vortex of selfishness. He felt that his ideals would become tarnished, that his aspirations would be starved in such an atmosphere, and so he chose a vocation which would enable him to render the greatest service to humanity.

WHY, INDEED?

Why is it, in the case of the success of this coercion bill, that one province of Canada rules the whole country? Simply because that province, whether the Conservative party is in power, or the Liberal party is in power, is there solid on the winning side. It has but one end in view, and that end it accomplishes. Why? Because th English speaking people are foolish enough to allow themselves to be divided into two flocks. The way is plain—why not unite? Are there not real principles upon which the majority of the English speaking people can unite? Why cannot they get down there and have Canada governed by a majority of its people?—Hon. Joseph Martin.

Nothing could more forcibly illustrate the absurdity and injustice of the pension t, ex-cabinet ministers than the case of Sir William Mulock, who leaves the arduous duties of postmaster-general and an income of $7,000, to accept the less arduous duties of Chief Justice of the exchequer court division of the high court for Ontario at a salary of $10-000, securing at the same time the pension of $8,500—one-half his salary as postmaster-general. In other words he will receive from the public treasury nearly twice as much as he formerly did, and more than the premier of Canada receives. The business is absurd as well as unjustifiable.

SUGAR BEET GROWING.

MR. KNIGHT OF THE RAYMOND FACTORY VISITS MEDICINE HAT

Among the visitors in Medicine Hat last week was Mr. J. W. Knight of Knight's Beet Sugar factory, Raymond, who spent Wednesday in town. Mr. Knight, who is one of the sons of the gentleman who established the factory and hails from Utah, U.S.A., was keenly interested in the natural gas and the various methods of using it, especially its application in the production of power. The Sugar factory at Raymond requires 250 horse power to keep its machinery in motion and as may be guessed the consumption of coal and the cost of handling it runs into a very big figure for the season. The factory, in fact, consumes five carloads of coal per day, that is, about 100 tons of coal per day of 24 hours, for the machinery once started for the season's run never stops until the last load of beets is reduced. The coal bill, therefore runs to about 7000 tons for the season.

Mr. Knight being so much interested in the production of power, very gladly accepted an invitation from the editor of this paper to inspect the water pumping station and Mr. J. E. Bull, Western Manager of the Bell Telephone Company, residing at Calgary, accompanied them. Engineer Eddy was at home on the sick list, so Engineer Rutherford showed the visitors the manner in which the natural gas is exclusively used there in the production of steam Mr. Knight remarked upon the spotlessly clean appearance of everything and freely stated that he had no idea the natural gas could be used to such advantage in producing power. He looked into everything with the deepest interest and said Medicine Hat had a tremendous asset in the natural gas. His opinion was that every care should be taken to prevent its being wasted and when it became properly known it would be sure to attract manufactories. He inquired if it would be possible to pipe it or convey it in car tanks to Raymond and if this were feasible he would undoubtedly be a large buyer as he would be more delighted than he could say to have such a cheap, clean power producer at their factory

The party also paid a visit to the new Municipal Building where Mr. H. K. Oakes (of Oakes & Everard, the contractors who are erecting the new building), explained much o fthe mysteries of the manufacture of cement blocks which are being so largely used in the new structure.

Mr. Knight gave The Times some interesting particulars of the Raymond Sugar Factory. He said the factory will run about 70 days this season, and it is expected will turn out about five to six million pounds of sugar, about double last year's output.

Asked as to the profits of sugar beet raising Mr. Knight said the net profits to the farmer ran to about $25 an acre. Each grower cultivated about 10 to 20 acres. Most of the beets grown for their factory were irrigated. The practice was for the Sugar company to make contracts with the farmers to grow a given number of acres of beets. These contracts were made in the winter. The company import the best seed from Germany and not only supply it to the growers but they also seeded the ground for which they charged 50 cents per acre. When a farmer has his ground ready he notifies the factory and as soon as possible the seeders are on the farm and seed the ground. The price paid for beet is $5 per ton for what they term 16 per cent roots and an average crop would be about ten tons per acre. The crop is cultivated about twice during the growing season and must be hand thinned at the proper time. The thinning is done by white men, chinamen and Indians, the latter being employed last season for the first time.

Asked as to which proved the best thinners Mr. Knight said the Chinamen were the best. Last summer one Chinaman thinned three quarters of an acre in a day, evidently a record. Much of the thinning is done by contract. A rich chinaman living at Vancouver came over last year and made a contract at so much an acre and then sub-let to his countrymen who proved very expert at the work.

Asked as to whether Medicine Hat district would not be suitable for the sugar beet industry

Mr. Knight replied that he thought it would, conditions being much the same as at Raymond, but of course it would be necessary to induce the farmers to go into growing sugar beets. They must contract to grow them, as a sugar beet factory was a very expensive one to establish and, of course, unless the farmers would be sure to grow the beets the factory could not be worked. The Raymond factory cost about $500,000 and there were 4000 acres of land under beet this year.

He mentioned that the Governor-General visited the factory while on his western tour recently and expressed considerable surprise to find such an industry on such a large scale in Western Canada.

In reply to aquestion as to where the sugar was sold Mr. Knight stated that it was sold here in the west. Calgary took two thirds of it. He believed there would be several other factories in Western Canada before very long and no doubt there would be one in Calgary.

Mr. Knight left on the south bound train well pleased with his visit to the Hat.

THE ROSCIAN COMIC OPERA COMPANY.

The bare announcement of the engagement of the Roscian Comic Opera Company is sufficient to stimulate interest among their numerous friends in Medicine Hat who are keen to satiate themselves with each production of this clever company. Unhappy Women!

No woman can be happy when her health is undermined. No woman can have good health while she suffers from female weakness, inflammation, ulceration or any disease of the delicate womanly organs. Nervous, sleepless, fretful, suffering in body and mind, she does not live but only exists.

More than a half a million such women have found a perfect and permanent cure for their diseased condition in the use of Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Women cured by this remedy say it is a "wonderful medicine," so perfectly does it restore them to health and comeliness.

There is no alcohol in "Favorite Prescription," neither does it contain opium, cocaine, nor any other harmful drug. It is in the strictest sense, an honest, temperance medicine. Its ingredients are purely vegetable, and it will agree with the most delicate constitution.

Don't be hypnotized, or over persuaded, into accepting a substitute. This medicine has a record that's worth far more than any difference in price.

Sick and ailing women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, either personally or by letter, absolutely without charge or fee, thus avoiding the unpleasant questionings, offensive examinations and obnoxious local treatments considered necessary by many local practitioners. All correspondence treated as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Write without fear and without fee to Dr. R. V. Pierce, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

These tiny, sugar-coated anti-bilious granules regulate Stomach, Liver and Bowels, cure Constipation and Bad Stomach, attended by foul breath. One or two for laxative, three or four for cathartic.

This great family Doctor Book FREE on receipt of 21 one-cent postage stamps to cover cost of customs and mailing; or, in fine cloth binding 50 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N.Y.

ALBERTA ELECTIONS NOVEMBER 9.

Use the BLUE Pencil.

The School Question is:
Have we a satisfactory school system.

The School Question is:
Shall we demand our rights to legislate for ourselves.

TELL THE WHOLE TRUTH.

Apologists for the land clauses in the Autonomy Bill only tell half the truth. They dare not tell it all.

They tell us that the subsidies granted the Provinces are as follows:

British Columbia	$4.60
Manitoba	2.35
Prince Edward Island	2.14
New Brunswick	2.12
Nova Scotia	2.05
Ontario	170
Quebec	1.47
Alberta	6.50

They do not tell the people that Dominion paid off debts of the older provinces to the enormous sum of $109,697,175, and that $405,375 of the revenue of Alberta consists of a "debt allowance" to offset this.

In the comparisons made above the $405,375 given annually to Alberta is included, and the $109,697,175 is omitted altogether.

They do not tell us that Nova Scotia has only the small area of 20,000 square miles and therefore does not require the same expenditure per head as Alberta with roads to make over 254,000 square miles.

THE PROVINCIAL SUBSIDY.

The question of the financial terms granted the new provinces is not a party question, but one of great public importance and is made for all time. We should see to it, therefore, that we are getting our proper due.

The total yearly amount which each province is to receive from Ottawa is very clearly laid down and can never exceed the sum of $2,220,000.

It is true that for five years Ottawa will pay to each province $97,500 for the construction of "necessary public buildings." The total of that will be $483,750 for the five years, but how much of it will be left, after new parliamentary buildings and an asylum and one or two other public buildings are built.

The provinces have not had a fair deal. The subsidy should be increased at least four times to compensate for the loss of our lands.

Consider the value of the agricultural land alone. According to the government estimate there are in Alberta 162,560,000 acres. In order to make every possible allowance, let us assume that after deducting homestead land, and all areas which for any reason are not available, there were only 20,000,000 acres left. At the low estimate of $3 per acre this would be worth $60,000,000.

Consider also the values of the immense coal areas, and all other minesand minerals, the petroleum, natural gas, timber and water power throughout an area of 250,000 square miles, rich in such resources and practically untouched. Place the low estimate of $60,000,000 on all this.

We have thus, on an absurdly low estimate, a total of 120,000,000 as the value of the natural resources available for revenue purposes. What do we get in return?

The "compensating" allowance is:
(1) $375,000 per annum until we reach a population of 400,000.
(2) $562,500 per annum until we reach a population of 800,000.
(3) $750,000 per annum until we reach a population of 1,000,000.
(4) Thereafter $1,125,000 per annum.

It will be some years before we reach a population of 1,000,000, or five times what it is now. But even taking the maximum allowance we are then to be given, this is only the interest at 5 per cent. on $22,500,000 at 5 per cent. —the same rate as in the case of the debtallowance. And we are told that this is a "business proposition."

The Land Question is not:
Is the subsidy sufficient, or is it a generous allowance.

The Land Question is this:
Shall we permit the Dominion Government to withhold our lands and minerals. Shall we not rather demand our own.

COST OF PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT.

The great question is what amount is likely and fairly to be required each year to carry on the business and affairs of a province like Alberta The province is new, not thickly settled and increasing in population rapidly. There are no public buildings, and much will be required to be spent on roads, bridges, public business, and all sorts of items. Education alone will soon require a large amount every year.

In this connection a glance at what the other provinces spent last year will be of value for comparison, and we give these expenditures for last year as appearing in the official blue books:

Ontario	$5,267,453
Quebec	4,795,469
Nova Scotia	1,161,456
New Brunswick	885,457
Manitoba	1,271,283
British Columbia	2,862,794
Prince Edward Island	307,730

Last year the Dominion contributed $1,636,000 or an average o $818,000 for each province, and Sir Wilfred Laurier intimated that "the present requirements of the Territories are not sufficiently represented by these figures."

More liberal provision should therefore have been made.

Under the Autonomy Bills Alberta is to receive for some years a little over one million dollars, and the expenditure at the start will beover eight hundred thousand. The margin is less than two hundred thousand dollars.

These facts are conclusive that the financial terms are not sufficient.

But the real point is that Alberta should demand, not a subsidy, but her own.

FOR FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS OF CITIZENSHIP.

From Saskatchewan there has not yet been even a rumor as to the date fixed for the elections, but they may be expected any time from a week to three weeks after the elections in Alberta. A week might possibly suffice for the machine to get all its agents from Alberta to their allotted tasks in Saskatchewan, but it is probable that more time will be allowed so as to run no chances.

As a consequence of this arrangement for the disposition of the Laurier Government's forces, the Liberal leaders in the new provinces are entertaining high hopes of victory. According to the estimate of the Calgary Albertan not a single Conservative will be elected in that Province, while in only three or four constituencies will the votes counted for the Conservative candidate make the issue even interestingly close. It would be too bad to have a result of this kind. A Parliament without a single Opposition member would be a very uninteresting and unprofitable affair. So, if we might be allowed to make a recommendation, we would suggest that the Machine should issue a somewhat less wholesale order for the capture of constituencies. We make this recommendation chiefly in the interests of the Liberal party itself, for in the end it would certainly suffer from overdoing the matter.

But fortunately all is not settled by a paper calculation based on previous successes of the Machine where its forces have been concentrated. The people of the new Provinces are, we believe alive to the frightful danger they incur by allowing the Machine to fasten itself upon them. They have no desire to be forced into the long demoralizing struggle from which Ontario has just emerged in order to rid themselves of the influences that are now being marshalled against them. They appreciate that they must fight now, not only for fundamental provincial rights, but for the fundamental rights of free citizenship.—Telegram.

THE LAND QUESTION.

The Conservatives of Alberta adopted at Red Deer a platform, and laid down the following resolutions about the lands and natural resources:

4. SQUARE DEAL IN LANDS.

This Convention declares that the people of Alberta, to the same extent and in the same manner as the people of the other provinces, are entitled to lands, mines, minerals, forests and other natural resources within its area and to enjoy the full benefits thereof as well as to administer the same for the advantage of its people and emphatically protests against our natural resources being unjustly witheld, to be exploited by any political party at Ottawa. This convention urges that constant and continued application to and negotiation with the Dominion Government be made for the surrender to the Province of the Public Domain within its boundaries, of which it is now so unfairly and unjustly deprived. This convention further declares that the province is entitled to compensation for lands within its area heretofore alienated for purely Federal purposes.

The Liberals of Alberta in convention adopted and issued a platform embedied on 15 resolutions, and a to the land question resolved:

Nothing!

Nothing!

Nothing!

Nothing!

Vote FOR Sissons.

A Vote for Sissons is a Vote for Liberty.

Vote for Sissons and Provincial Rights

Do not be bamboozled by those who would tell you the Autonomy Bill is law now and, therefore, must be accepted without question.

The people of the Territories had no voice in framing the bill, their opinions were never asked as to the terms of settlement, and it is not reasonable to tell free men that they MUST accept the act of the Dominion Government.

No protest can be too strong against an attempt to coerce the west.

No protest can be stronger than a vote recorded against coercion.

Vote for Sissons.

Put the Conservatives in power, and demand the right to legislate for ourselves.

Put the Conservatives in power and demand our lands.

Put the Conservatives in power, and work out our own destiny in school legislation.

The Liberal policy is a two school system. The Conservative policy is a one school system.—H. B. Bennett's Calgary speech.

CONSERVATIVE MEETING.

from the Hudson's Bay Company for £300,000. The fact was the land reverted to the Crown and in 1871 the Imperial Parliament gave the Dominion power to make laws for this country and to create provinces when the proper time arrived. He said the issue was not so much whether they were going to vote for Mr. Finlay or Mr. Sissons, but whether they would consent to take an inferior position in Confederation. He contended the Autonomy Bill gave the western provinces an inferior position, not warranted by the Constitution and on the 9th the people would have to say whether they condoned or condemned. That was the issue and he believed the people did not realise the enormity of the injustice done them by the distribution of seats, or there would be an upheaval. He demonstrated this by means of a colored map. Six constituencies stick their noses into Edmonton and the candidates in eight constituencies were residents of Edmonton. Athabasca he pointed out was having two members of Parliament, yet there were only 241 white people in it, and one Post Office with a revenue of $30 a year. One post office, two members. (Cries of "shame").

Coming to the School Question he said Mr Marshall had tried to create the impression that there were to be no separate schools. He quoted clause 2 of the Autonomy Bill and said that was the law not the Liberal platform. He objected to the clause tying Alberta to Separate Schools for all time. The Liberals said separate schools were Haultain's creation, but he denied this and said they were created by the Dominion Government in 1875 when the N. W. T. had no member at Ottawa. The Autonomy Bill would fix separate schools upon the Province and lead to two poor schools in many districts where there should be only one good one. The Dominion Land Act said the school lands shall be for the public schools, but the Autonomy bill comes along to divide it for two classes of schools.

Dealing with the land question the speaker went at length into the subject, in the course of which he quoted the Liberal platform of 1902 on which Mr. Finlay was elected.

Plank No. 1 reads: Equal rights with the other provinces.

No. 2. Control of the land in the West, by the West for the West.

In 1903 Mr. Finlay supported a resolution in the Legislative Assembly calling for the control of the public domain by the province.

Mr. McCarthy next showed the injustice of the grant of $375,000 in lieu of the land.

He had a good many hits at the granting of close leases to Eastern politicians.

He urged the people to vote for Frank Sissons and the policy of equal rights and concluded amid loud cheers.

Cheers for the King and Frank Sissons concluded the meeting.

THE SUPERIORITY

Nordheimer

Piano

is due to the fact that every particle of material used in its construction is of the best grade and highest quality obtainable in the world.

The Pure Tone

obtained from this finished product is of that sweet character and charm which is so thoroughly enjoyed by people of superior musical taste and culture.

EVERY

Nordheimer

Piano

IS ITS OWN RECOMMENDATION.

None are so enthusiastic and pleased with the sweetness of the Nordheimer tone as those who have purchased these famous instruments.

From Cape Breton to Vancouver Island the many thousands of owners of Nordheimer Pianos are its most genuine champions.

Such record is decidedly better testimony to general excellence than a popularity obtained by fulsome advertising or by other indirect means.

An Odd Advertisement.

The sudden popularity some years ago of Mr. Shorthouse's book, "John Inglesant," is attributed to an odd incident. "Mr. Gladstone," says the London Express, "was sitting to a photographer and holding in his hand a copy of 'John Inglesant.' The gold lettering on the cover caught the light, and the title showed clearly in the photograph. The likeness of the great statesman proved a very popular one, and its circulation broadcast over the country led to a widespread demand for the book."

Church Nods.

"Didn't the minister feel it when so many in the congregation fell asleep during the sermon?"

"Oh, no. It encouraged him to keep on."

"How so?"

"Why, he was egotistical enough to think they were nodding approval at what he said."

Tame Trout.

An English gentleman had some trout in a piece of water close to his front door. On one occasion he held a worm near the surface of the water. A large trout jumped at the worm and, seizing hold of his fingers, cut them to the bone with its teeth by its own weight.

His Strenuous Way.

Spavin — Hello, Cantle! Exercising your horse this morning?

Cantle (mounted)—That was my intention when I started out, but it seems to me the horse has been exercising me.

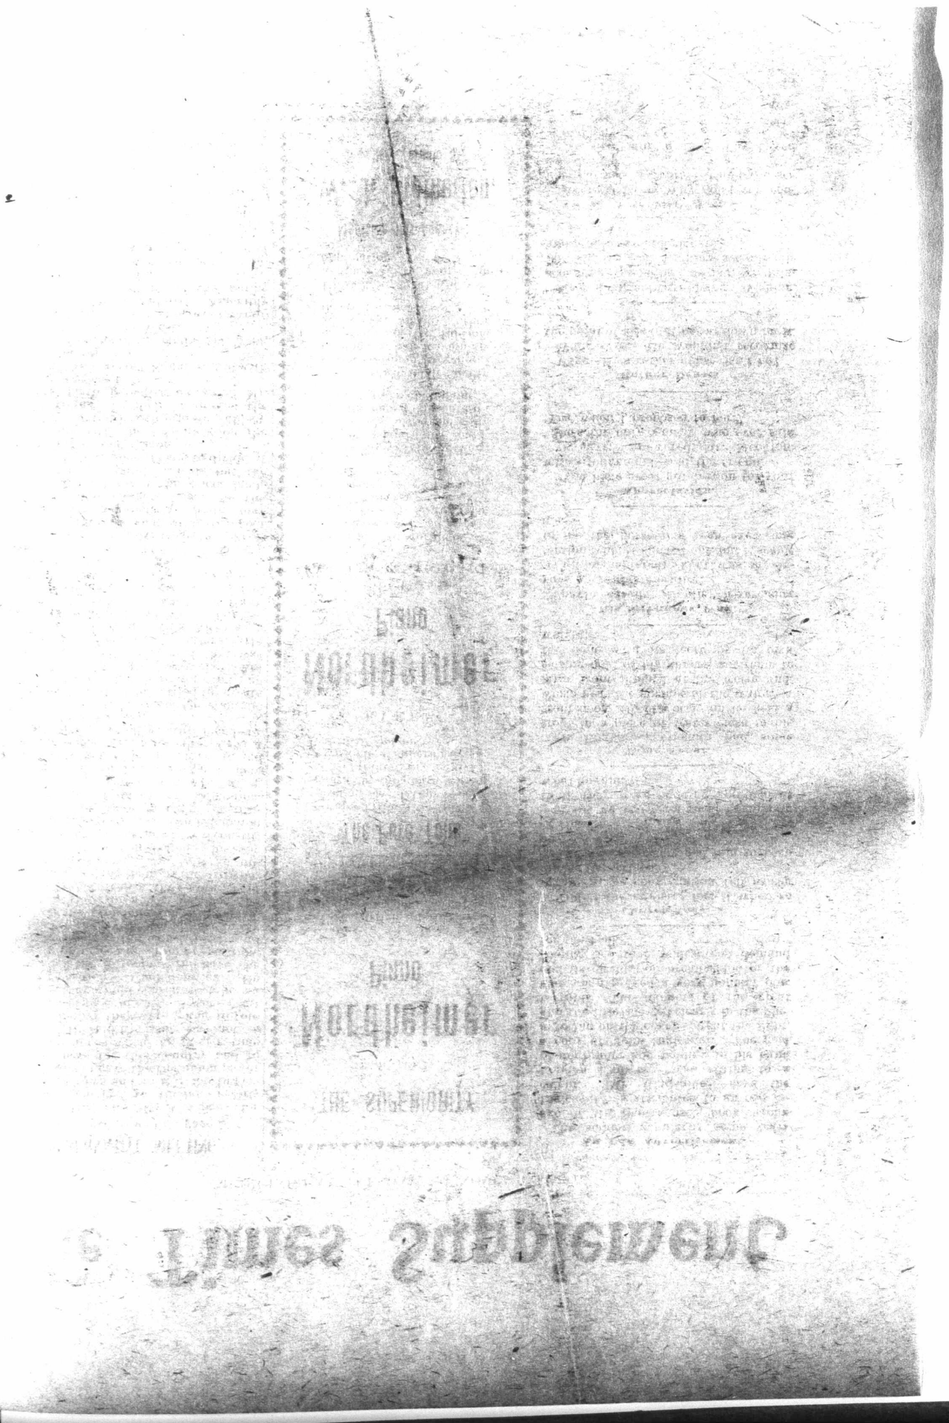
Appreciation.

"You have great admiration for your wife's judgment," said the friend.

"I have," answered Mr. Meekton. "She's the only woman who ever said 'Yes' when I proposed to her."

Rather Dense.

Wigg—He's rather dense, isn't he?



Wagg—Yes. He wouldn't recognize the point of a joke if he sat down on it.

Keep doing, always doing. Wishing, dreaming, intending, murmuring, talking, sighing and repining are all idle and profitless employments.

A Sobriety Test.

Orderly Officer—Why don't you confine that man, corporal? Can't you see he's drunk?

"No, sir; 'e ain't drunk. Why, I seed 'e 'and move."

TOWN COUNCIL.

A meeting of the Council was held last night. Present, Mayor Forster, Councillors Stewart, Penhale, DesBrisay, Drinnan and Smyth; W. N. Adsit, Town Clerk; W. E. Porter, Supt. of Works; G. H. Markwick, Chief of Police.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Mr. J. E. Miers attended and asked the Council to supply him with a write up of the town for inserting in a booklet of Medicine Hat which he is publishing.

The matter was considered later in the evening and referred to the New Enterprises Committee.

Letters were read from the Michigan firm supplying gas meters and fittings and the fire underwriters re gas permits.

The Labor-Council wrote stating that although they still held to the opinions they had expressed they felt no benefit could be arrived at by opening up a discussion on the subject with the Council as it was not likely to change the views of either party.

Penhale—I propose the letter be placed on file.

Coun. Drinnan—That is about all we can do with it.

Coun. Stewart—I second the motion.

Coun. Drinnan—I cannot see why they sent the original letter unless they were prepared to come and discuss it with us.

A letter was read from the Public Analyst at Regina giving a satisfactory report on samples of water sent him by Dr. Smyth.

C. Parmal wrote asking permission to move a building, which was granted.

A letter was read from Thos. Morrey saying he could not be impounding cattle and looking after the scales. It was referred to Committee for report.

An application from W. P. Morrison for the position of Engineer was handed over to the Finance Committee, to whom the others were referred.

MR. HEDDLE NOT COMING.

Mr. J. R. Heddle, of Hamilton, who had been appointed town Engineer, wrote stating he had decided to withdraw his application. He said he would have hesitated at any rate to come without a guarantee of three years and the purchase of instruments out of his own pocket would be a heavy item. The City of Hamilton had increased his salary and he had decided not to come west.

The letter was formally filed.

A letter was read from Mr. W. H. Harris in reference to the damage to his furnitute by the gas explosion asking the Council to grant him compensation. His household effects, of which he sent a list, were worth $677.35 and were all lost.

Councillors expressed sympathy with Mr. Harris in his loss and were disposed to help him, but thought the occurrence was not due to any neglect or act by which the town could be held liable, but they decided to consult their solicitor on the point.

THE DOG POUND.

A letter was read from Mr. R. M. Lethbridge complaining of a nuisance caused by the noises of the canine residents of the pound. The night was "made hideous" by their yelps and howls, so that people living in the vicinity could not rest at night. He asked when the Council were going to remove it.

Coun. Stewart—Is it the intention to move the pound to the new market site.

Coun. Penhale—You will be in no better position then.

The Mayor—There would be this about it that would concentrate the work for Mr. Morrey. His letter says he cannot fill both offices as they are at present.

Coun. Penhale—Well, if he is round the streets he cannot be looking after the scales.

Coun. Stewart—I do not see how you are to get over it, as if you have a weigh scales you musthave some one to look after it.

Coun. Penhale—He told me this morning that he might do a little mornings and evenings.

The Mayor thought that would fill the bill at present.

Coun. Stewart thought they might find some work for a man near the scales and he could then run it.

Mr. Porter, being asked on the point, said he knew of no small job that could be worked in with it.

TheMayor said the income from the scales was only about $80 or $90 a year now.

Coun. Stewart—It won't pay the wages of a man to look after it.

Coun. Drinnan—Could we not get someone in business near the spot to attend to the weighing.

Coun. Smyth thought that would be a good plan if someone near there would undertake it.

Coun. DesBrisay said that would be all right. The great thing was to have someone who understood how to weigh, so that the buyer and seller would have confidence in the result.

It was stated that since the gas was used so much the sale of coal in town had decreased and that the scales was not so much in use as formerly.

Coun. Smyth moved that the matter be referred to the license and police committee to report to next meeting as to the best way of running the scales and also to report as to moving of the pound.

The motion was agreed to.

REPORTS.

The poundkeeper reported having impounded 16 cattle during the past month.

Mr. Mitchell reported that the petition of W. H. Lowe and others read at last meeting was not in order and should be referred back to them. This was done.

AUDITOR.

Mr. W. Crosskill was appointed auditor.

Municipal Development.

To build up a town it is necessary to have a settled policy, and work that policy successfully to a finish. A complete programme should be drawn up, someone should have charge of it who would "stay right with it," see that each question received proper attention, and each project followed without a break. The weak part in town development here in Medicine Hat, as in many other towns, is that all our efforts are of a spasmodic nature. The council take up a subject and give it a start, but officials are immersed in routine work, and councillors have their own private businesses to attend to, and many a good project languishes for lack of proper attention. The Board of Trade start many a bright idea, but like the Council, each member and official has his own affairs to look after, which must, of course, take the first place, and they cannot "follow up" their own efforts The results are, therefore, somewhat disappointing. The question is—What are we as a town going to do in order to make the progress that we ought to make?

Medicine Hat has excellent chances of becoming an important centre, but it will depend largely upon the town itself as to how soon and to what extent it will extend and develop. We believe, as we have stated in previous issues, that in Western parlance, it is "up to us." Steady municipal development for a year or two is really necessary before the town can expect to attract outsiders. The storekeeper stocks up his store and dresses his windows, and then everybody knows he is ready for business, and perhaps good window dressing is the most important factor (next to his advertisement in the paper) in attracting customers. We think it is much the same with a town. A sewerage system, a plentiful and pure water supply, permanent sidewalks, and good roads, street lighting, tree planting, and an assurance of good government under a properly drawn municipal charter are an important part of a town's stock-in-trade. Then it requires certain natural advantages to attract manufacturers. In Medicine Hat, we have several of the above mentioned, and others are in sight, and we have a great supply of natural gas which should in time attract manufacturers. Judicious advertising will make these things known to the outside world. What is required is a policy carefully thought out and carried out with method and completeness.

Our Municipal Platform.

Our municipal platform of the week before last was incomplete, but with such an array of such important questions unsettled, we doubt if any good purport would be served by bringing up others which we have in mind. Such matters as a city charter, sewerage, and permanent sidewalks must now take precedence of all others. The great point to be considered in all these is just how far to go with each at the present. We hold that Medicine Hat will have a better chance of advancement under a city charter than under its present powers. With regard to sewerage and permanent sidewalks, the exact amount to be taken in hand in the first instance is what the town has to consider. The sewerage plans comprise the whole town, or what was the town when the plans were prepared (for there have been extensions during the past six months), and it is for the Council and the people to decide how much or how little to do. We do not believe that, rich as we are as a municipality with our splendid revenue from natural gas, the town can undertake to carry sewerage and permanent sidewalks to every house at present, and in making this statement we are reflecting the opinion of a very large number of townsmen. It is, therefore, desirable that three or four good councillors and citizens should get together and prepare a statement for the annual meeting of ratepayers. The statement should not be the production of one mind, unless it be an able and unbiassed one, but should be prepared by two or three heads, representing various opinions on this matter. While it may be regretted that more progress has not been made during the year drawing to a close, we believe the town will not go wrong by "making haste slowly" in the matter. Let the whole thing be thoroughly thrashed out, and let no one be in a hurry to snatch a vote one way or the other until every phase of the question has been fully considered.

SUGAR BEET.

(In continuation of our report of the interview with Mr. Knight, of the Raymond Sugar Factory, which appeared in our last issue.)

At one point in the conversation we asked Mr. Knight if it would pay to move his factory here. "Which" we asked, "would be the cheaper. To continue to pay your heavy coal bill at Raymond or move your factory here where you would have the cheap power and bring in the beets by rail? It would be a big thing no doubt to move the factory.

Mr. Knight said it would be a big thing to move the factory, but as a matter of fact, it was all in parts and could be moved. But, he observed, if you produce the beets another factory could be put here, because, as I have said there was room for several factories in Western Canada. An interesting point mentioned by Mr. Knight was the fact that the beet pulp, after extraction of the sugar is very valuable for feeding purposes. The factory feed a bunch of steers every winter on the beet pulp, so that nothing is wasted. Their steers were sold to Burns & Co, and fetched as high as $57 per head. One of the steers weighed 2005 pounds, just five pounds over a ton weight. Mr. Knight left on the southbound train on Wednesday evening and appeared very pleased with his visit to the Hat.

Listen For the Bronchial "Wheeze."

It means that disease will soon attack the lungs. Wheezing is distressing to the sufferer and annoying to his friends Nothing half so certain in bronchitis and throat trouble as "Catarrhozone"; it gives instant relief and cures even the worst cases. Bronchitis fairly flees under the magic influence of Catarrhozone which cures so thoroughly the disease never returns. Other remedies may relieve, but "Catarrhozone" cures bronchitis, catarrh and throat trouble for all time to come. Sold every where.

lar belief. Every locality in the west, however, is in fected more or less and active steps must be taken to nip the evil in the bud, and the proposed effort of the C.P.R. is an important step in the right direction

It is expected that the train will start out during the second week of January in the Province of Alberta, visiting Medicine Hat, Lethbridge, Raymond, Cardston, Macleod, Pincher Creek, Leavings, Claresholm, Nanton, High River, Okotoks, Calgary, Didsbury, Carstairs, Olds, Innisfail, Red Deer, Lacombe, Wetaskiwin, Ponoka, Edmonton, Gleichen, Langdon and Shepard. The train will then proceed to the Provinces of Saskatchewan and Manitoba, and visit all important points there, a schedule of which will be published later.

Prosperous agricultural conditions in the west must be maintained at any cost and one way to insure this desirable state of affairs is to give widest possible publicity to the forthcoming meetings. It is refreshing to see a great railroad corporation descending from its pedestal, and show a desire to help the farmer to help himself—and ultimately the railroad. For the prosperous farm makes the prosperous railroad.

Everyone should assist in this movement, the success of which depends entirely on the attendance of these meetings. The fact that all the powerful farmers will be the very best obtainable the country, the governments, the press, the railroads and the Boards of Trade push the have joined forces to scheme, is a guarantee that things will happen."

Canada on agricultural subjects. Angus Mackay, Superintendent of the Dominion Experimental farm at Indian Head, will also accompany the party. Mr. Mackay is always popular on the platform. His vast fund of agricultural information and common sense appeals forcibly to the western farmer. It is expected that David Horne, Chief Grain Inspector, will take part in the meetings. Mr. Horne is a new addition to western institute workers. His experience has however, been wide and valuable and he ought to have a considerable amount of information to impart. Mr. Clark, Dominion Seed Inspector, will also accompany the train. Mr. Clark will give expert advice on seed selection, and will demonstrate by sample the beneficial effect of this practice. It is quite certain that the farmers of the West have a treat in store for them and that the meetings will be well attended all along the line.

GROS VENTRE NOTES.

There is a large German settlement in one part of Dakota called by the name of Dreamers They are rather a peculiar people. According to reports if one of their number dreams that a neighbor should be burned out or any other damage done to him, they commence at once to arrange to carry out the dream. There is one good point: They generally give written notice of their intention to the party interested.

Now if any of these should come to Canada it is to be hoped they will leave that part of their goods and chattels behind them.

Workers not dreamers we want here Besides they would soon find themselves up against the red tunics of the R. N. W. M. Police.

A few days ago Mr. Hamilton, of the Little Plume coal mine, met with what came near being a fatal accident. He had just finished moving out a piece and was about to put in the timber when the roof commenced breaking down. The first chunks struck him on the shoulder and pinned him down while more kept piling on. His assistant was caught by the falling mass but managed to extricate himself and quickly relieved Mr. Hamilton who when he got out felt so badly used up that he was sure there would be one good liberal vote less to count on Nov. 9th. After a day or two's rest he decided that he was good for another squeeze yet and expects to be on duty shortly. There is one thing sure if Maggie can't fetch him round no one else need try.

The Witch of Cragenstone

By ANITA CLAY MUNOZ,

Hetty, who had risen at the first words, now hastily entered the house, followed by her mother, still scolding. She lighted the candles and hung the kettle on the hob, saying as she did so:

"Forgive me, mother. My thoughts were but of our cousin Margaret, whom I met an hour since walking on the highway. She stopped to have speech with me; but, remembering thy strict injunctions not to speak to her, I turned my face and passed by hurriedly. Once I paused to glance backward, and she was still standing where I had met her, looking after me with such a sad, surprised and grieved expression on her fair face that tears sprang to mine eyes, and I ran hastily toward home lest I might be tempted to disobey thee and go to my cousin."

"Thou passed her on the road an' she looked long at thee with her evil eyes?" cried the dame in great consternation. "No wonder I find thee with pale face and pining. Ah, woe is me! What trouble more will come upon this house?"

"What meanst thou, mother?" Hetty regarded her mother apprensively.

"I mean, Henrietta Taunston, that thy cousin is a witch, a woman in connivance with the devil to invoke harm to God loving people, and that she hath been proclaimed so to be by the people," the woman replied, with a sternness that did not quite cover up a certain gloating in her manner. "To thy knees, girl, and pray for God's good influence to overcome the evil to which thou hast been exposed today."

Unconvinced, trembling and wondering, the little Puritan sank down upon her knees before a wooden chair and covered up her face with her hands.

Later that night, as Josiah Taunston was putting up his horse in the barn, a light footfall was heard, and a small, gray clad figure came toward him hastily.

"Josiah, dear brother," Hetty exclaimed breathlessly, "dost bring good news? Surely the tales my mother hath been telling me of our Margaret's sore affliction of being possessed of the devil are not true. My heart is breaking, for I do love her, Josiah. Surely she is blamed without fault."

She clasped her little hands about his arm and clung to him entreatingly.

"One so pure, so beautiful and kind could never willingly consort with such vile sin and wickedness. Remember, Josiah, she is our kinswoman. Use thy great influence for her good and let no harm befall our cousin."

Josiah threw her from him roughly.

"Call not that devil's witch thy cousin!" he cried angrily. "Know now that I have renounced her before the village and that she is an outcast from us forever. All the long afternoon the elders and councilmen have been in consultation and but an hour since arrived at a decision. Messengers on swift horses ha' ridden toward Sterndorf with orders signed with the chief councilor's seal, who hath all control in this village. Fool, thy pure, kind Margaret Mayland"—he laughed a loud, scornful laugh of derision—"will be taken at the break o' day by the king's soldiers, now on their way from Sterndorf, where they ha' been stationed o' late awaiting orders, and brought to trial for a witch."

"Josiah! Brother!" Hetty gave out one piercing scream. "Thou'lt not hang our Margaret?"

"Nay, soothe thy fears. I'll not hang her," he replied sneeringly, "but happen the people, our good friends and neighbors, who have had enough of her damnable pranks, may decide to burn her!"

The blood left Hetty's heart. She groped about her blindly, then, with another wild shriek of horror, fell in a heap on the floor. Angrily and with rough jerks Josiah tried to lift her to her feet; then, seeing that she was really unconscious, he strode to the doorway, calling loudly:

"Ho, mother!"

She appeared at the window.

"Doth want me, Josiah?"

"Aye, come at once an' bring water, for Hetty, weak, soft headed wench that she is, hath fallen in a swoon!"

That night the full moon hung low and yellow over the mountain and sent its clear rays through the trees, whose branches, rustling with the soft summer breeze, cast weird, quivering shadows on the ground. Hardly a ripple stirred on the brook, and but for the occasional hoot of an owl or the call of the whippoorwill no sound disturbed the peaceful quiet of the hour.

Margaret Mayland, standing before her door, quite passed the beauty of the evening by, so intent was she upon looking down the roadway in the direction of the village. With her light hair combed high upon her head and caught with a jeweled ornament, that flashed and sparkled under the moon's rays, and her dress of white gauze, with fine threads of gold woven through its dainty meshes, clinging to her gracefully in soft folds, she resembled some goddess or queen of the night that the moonbeams had come to worship. After a time, her listening ear catching no sounds of approaching footsteps, she drew a sharp breath of impatience and, stepping down, paced restlessly back and forth before the door.

Elsbeth appeared at the window to draw in the lattice.

"Hath on no wrap, bonny?" she asked solicitously. "Thy frock is thin, and methinks there is much coolness in the air tonight."

With a little shiver Margaret turned and entered the house.

"I truth I am cold," she said; "but, more than that, a nervous and uncanny feeling hath possession of me. Fetch my cloak, Elsbeth," she added impatiently as the older woman was about to speak, "and waste not thy time inventing foolish reasons why Godfrey doth not come."

At that moment Sir Godfrey La Fabienne, followed by his man Gaston, to whom he was giving some final instructions, came out of the door of the Sign of the Red Heart. Wearing a doublet made of purple velvet ornamented with heavy silver trimmings, long silken hose of lavender and on his head a velvet hat with an ostrich feather sweeping over the brim, his gay appearance was in direct contrast to his dull surroundings and the plain dress of the onlookers. The usual number of loiterers stood about the steps, and to his brief salutation they returned sullen looks and ominous scowls so significant that La Fabienne's anger was aroused.

"Diable"—he turned upon them furiously, laying his hand upon his sword hilt, intense indignation on his face—"curs, whelps, that durst not speak, but stand about silent, conveying threatenings in thy glances! I have tried to ignore ye, but endurance now hath ceased. If any man or all of ye have aught against me let him step forward and accuse me, and"—drawing his sword—"that one will see that I am not loath to defend myself against his accusations."

The group of countrymen, alarmed at his vehemence and evident determination, drew back from him hastily.

"Cowards! If there is a man among ye, let him step out, and once for all we'll put an end to this stabbing in the dark, these innuendoes and insinuations in look and action. What, dastards!" as no one came forward. "None of ye trained to fight in the open? God's death, but thou art valiant mothers' sons! Where is thy brave leader, Master Taunston?" he scornfully cried. "An he's anywhere about, ask him to step out. I'd like to settle with him the first of all. Not come yet?" he repeated, turning to the innkeeper, who stood near and who had ventured to give the information. "I' truth, he hath not come, nor will he until from his skulking place in the forest he hath seen me, the man he hath cause to fear, well out of his way!"

Then he took off his glove and dashed it on the ground before the men.

"When thy leader—thy brave, upright leader—doth arrive, give him that glove; tell him that Sir Godfrey La Fabienne calleth him a woman striker and a coward! And if after that," he continued, with an angry laugh, "he careth not to fight, by heaven, when next we meet he'll take a well deserved horsewhipping." Then he sheathed his sword and, slowly followed by his servant, strode away in the direction of the Mayland farm.

A moment later Josiah Taunston, white faced and looking as if he had heard the loud and angry words just uttered, came around from the back of the inn. The men, excitedly pointing to the glove, told him what had been said. He listened quietly, with a sneer on his face, nor did he move it until one young fellow, stooping to pick up the challenge, was suddenly sent sprawling on the ground by a push from Josiah.

"Heedless caitiff!" he exclaimed in a low, terrible voice. "Wouldst thou touch aught belonging to an accomplice of a witch? Hath forgotten Christopher John," calling to the innkeeper, "throw a burning fagot on that devil's instrument that it may be consumed!"

"Wilt thou take the cavalier's words and make no answer, man?" whispered a neighbor, following Josiah into the drinking room of the tavern. "Why, he said he'd horsewhip thee for a coward!"

Taunston turned to him with a black look on his face, sinister and containing evil not unmixed with triumph.

"He'll get his answer. Yonder popinjay, now at his lady's feet, will get his answer ere the rising of another sun," he said significantly. "Mayhap I will not bring it to him in person, but the answer will be one that will satisfy his worst enemy, an' I wot the fool hath many of them. Ha, ha"—his laughter was cruel and triumphant—"again I do assert that he'll get his answer, neighbor! Forsooth, he'll get his answer!"

CHAPTER XX.

THE dogs tied in the yard at the Mayland farm jumped and barked at the sounds of a man's footsteps approaching as Margaret, opening the door again, stepped out into the moonlit night. Now her appearance was entirely changed, for thrown about her was a long cloak of quilted white silk reaching to the ground, and a hood of the same material covered her soft hair and cast a shadow over the radiant face that was aglow with happiness at the sight of the newcomer.

"Thou laggard!" she exclaimed, going to meet La Fabienne, with hands outstretched. "Didst take thee all of several hours to don thy best attire, foolish Godfrey?"

He regarded her with looks of admiration and content.

"Aye," he replied, "full well canst thou call me that name in earnest, bright eyes, where aught doth concern thee!"

At his words, as if from the return of some unpleasant remembrance, the smile on Margaret's face faded, and, pressing the hand more firmly that still held hers, she led La Fabienne to the middle of the roadway, where there was no shade of trees and where the bright moon, now higher in the sky, hovered over them, casting its radiance down with effulgent sympathy, illuminating them. Throwing back her hood, she raised her head with a sudden, swift motion, and there was an expression of intense seriousness on her face.

"Godfrey," she asked entreatingly, "is my look baleful? Have I wickedness in my glance? Are mine eyes evil?"

With a suppressed exclamation of anger La Fabienne encircled her with his arm.

"Thy glance wicked!" he exclaimed passionately. "Thine eyes evil! Nay, pure soul, rather are they like two stars of heaven, pure and holy, leading men to better thoughts and deeds. More are they like the sun, brightening and warming all that they do rest upon. Damme, but thy question doth cause my choler to rise! Hath any man dared to affront thee? Who spoke of thy looks?"

"'Twas an hour or two since," Margaret began softly. "I was standing

"Are mine eyes evil?"

yonder by the sundial, near the path that leads through the pasture from the Taunston farm, when one of the village women, walking through, came upon me. For a few seconds she stood still and stared at me, then, throwing up her arms, ran from me, crying wildly: 'God's protection, 'tis the witch! I ha' looked into her eyes! I will be stricken of the devil!' Godfrey, tell me what it all doth mean."

Her lover's face reflected the seriousness of her own.

"Sweet, this foolish nonsense hath gone to greater measures than I had ever thought it would," he said. "Thy cousin's influence is strong in this community and the superstitions of the people so great that it takes but little tattling to make great stories and to have them all believed. It is that foul fiend Josiah Taunston's scheme to set all against thee, so that thou wilt be forced to abandon thine estate. Then when thou art gone, as next of kin, he would ride in and take possession."

Sir Godfrey's face grew dark.

"The dastard keeps out of my way, or from the very bitterness I hold in my heart against him I would long since have run him through," he said. "But I will deal with him before I leave, for I have sworn that no man may speak evil of thee and live."

"Godfrey!" Margaret's eyes were filled with sudden terror, "promise me that thou'lt not anger him, for any tilting of words between ye, so hot is each against the other, that a conflict would ensue that might end in—death. Smile"—she swept her hand with affected gayety over his frowning countenance—"chase that angry look from off thy face, and now under this bright moon, with the breeze stirring so softly, think only that thou art with me and that tonight is ours."

He drew her closer to him, and they paced slowly up and down under the shadows of the trees.

"Margaret, methinks to journey forth to London in three days. Canst be ready to go with me, sweet?"

At the unexpected announcement a deep flush spread over Margaret's countenance, extending to the roots of her hair.

"Ready to go with thee, Godfrey?" she repeated questioningly.

"Aye, love, as my wife," he replied in a voice touched with emotion, "as my adored, deeply cherished wife—that is how I will take thee, sweet!"

For answer she raised her face to his, and they kissed each other.

"I will go with thee, Godfrey," she said simply.

The moon rose higher in the heavens and seemed to shed a brighter luster on the scene as, pacing slowly up and down, the mistress of the Mayland farm and her lover, talking in low voices, made their plans and arranged for their departure. As there were no servants about the place, Elsbeth taking care of the house and Gaston doing the work among the animals, there was no chance of their intended departure being known. It was La Fabienne's idea to rise before the sun and, with Elsbeth and Margaret, ride down the mountain, leaving the estate in charge of trusty Gaston. By fast riding they could reach London before the dawn of another day and would go at once to the house of La Fabienne's sister, the Lady Grenville, where they would be married and then proceed to Paris.

Margaret saying, with a little shiver, that she would never care to visit Cragenstone again, Sir Godfrey said that they would offer her estate, including house and animals, to a land dealer he knew in London at such a low figure that he would not refuse to buy it.

"For thy cousin can have naught that doth belong to thee," he announced, with decision.

Their final arrangements being made, their conversation drifted to other matters.

"How truly doth the Scripture speak, dear Godfrey," Margaret said gently, "where it saith that 'one day telleth not what another day bringeth forth.' When thou didst come I did not think to go back with thee. Methought thou would come again for me."

"Margaret, tell me truly, had the conditions been happier, had thy stay here been more pleasant, could thou have let me ride down the mountain without thee?"

"Ah, Godfrey," she replied, with a little fluttering sigh, "I am such a weak woman and so overfond of thee that hadst thou wrung a consent from me to let thee go I wot when I saw thy back turned toward me I would fain forget my promise and in my loneliness and despair run after thee, throw myself in the roadway at thy horse's heels and cry to thee to take me with thee to sunny France, to Paris, the city I love."

La Fabienne laughed a joyful, ringing laugh as he clasped her to his heart. "Sweet, when I set foot in this village and saw the set of churls about where thou hadst taken up thy dwelling I resolved when I would begone to take my sweet love with me. Didst think, Margaret," he cried, with sudden passion, "that I would leave thee, my tender flower, raised under the rays of the warm sun of France, to wither away and perish on this bleak mountain? Nay, love; too close I hold thee in my heart!"

The wind rose and blew colder through the trees. Drawing her cloak closer about her, Margaret clung to her lover's arm.

"'Tis a solemn night, Margaret," he said whimsically, "thou and I alone together on this high mountain top, miles away from those who love us and in reality among a band of evil wishers and enemies—we two, with our troth plighted and our wedding day so near at hand! Is't not enough to make a man stop to consider when he is on the brink of such a serious undertaking? Sweet Margaret," he continued seriously, pressing her hand, "knowing so well thy worth, seeing thy marvelous beauty and having a fine understanding of thy high character, I tremble lest, imperfect man that I am, I may not live up to thy standard; that I may fail to fill thy life so full of happiness as I hope now and pray God I may do."

Margaret laughed a sweet, low, happy laugh.

"Hath finished, foolish Godfrey? Then hear mine answer to thy drivelings! In all the world I love no one like thee. Of thy imperfections I know naught. Thou art part of me. Without thee I would die. When, dear Godfrey, thou art near me, 'tis then the sun doth shine, an' when thou'rt gone all is gray, dull and dark, an' naught is bright until thou dost come again. An', Godfrey, I trust thee entirely. I come to thee willingly to be thine own dear wife, to care for thee, to do thy bidding, to go with thee where'er thy fortunes take thee, hand in hand and heart to heart, and to love thee, Godfrey, until death us do part."

"Speak of naught that can part us, sweet Margaret!" he cried, with eager haste. "Let us talk only of bright hopes, long life, happiness, joy and love!"

"Happiness, joy and love!" she repeated softly.

Suddenly on their ears fell the sound of the steady tramping of many feet. Both drew apart and listened attentively. An officer's voice giving a sharp command was brought to them through the dense stillness of the night by the light wind, and soon they could see across the fields, the full moon illuminating the steel helmets that they wore, a small band of soldiers on their way to the village. Margaret looked at her lover in questioning amazement, and La Fabienne, his face expressing quick suspicion, uttered an exclamation and, running down to the stile, watched the soldiers until they turned the corner and disappeared.

"If 'tis as I think," he muttered, "the villian hath me! I had no thought he would dare aught against us. I have played the fool! Margaret," he cried, going to her with quick strides, "methinks at the sight of soldiery that there may be fighting hereabout, so I would take thee from here speedily. On the morrow be ready ere the sun riseth, thou and Elsbeth, and we will ride away without further delay. Farewell, dear love. God keep thee."

He threw his arms about her protectingly as he led her to the door. At the steps they both paused.

"Margaret," he said seriously, "thou saidst erstwhile thou trusted me. Didst mean it, sweet?"

"Godfrey, I trust thee."

"These are dark times, Margaret, darker mayhap than we know," he said, "but whatever cometh, if things go not our way, trust me. Know that thou art in my heart before all else. And now farewell again. I have business in the village and must give my parting instructions to Gaston."

Margaret's eyes were filled with tears at her lover's earnestness, and as he attempted to leave her she clung to him, sobbing bitterly.

"Godfrey, thy words are ominous," she cried. "Thou knowest something of evil portent. A feeling of fear hath fallen on my heart."

"Take courage, love. Parbleu, Margaret Mayland showing fear of these dull village wights! Didst not hear my promise, sweet, that on the morrow we'd begone before the village is astir?"

As her head still drooped on his shoulder and she did not reply, he repeated:

"Didst thou not hear me, Margaret?"

She raised her head, and, although there was an expression of strength and resolution in her eyes, her lips trembled.

"Aye, I heard thee, and at sunrise dressed for the journey thou wilt find me at the door. God be with thee, Godfrey."

"In a few short hours we will ride away," he said, with affected gayety. "Farewell again, and once again farewell," embracing her tenderly. "And now, so much I have to do, perforce I must be gone."

Putting her inside the door and closing it, he walked quickly down the path toward the forest, and when he reached it he had to grope his way to keep from stumbling, for the moon went under a cloud, and a dark shadow fell athwart the mountain.

Boys In Siam.

Cuba's Minerals.

The minerals most abundant in Cuba are asphalt, copper, iron and manganese.

He was in the presence of Judge Potter.

"There has been a mistake," he began grimly. "My Uncle John is not"—

The judge interrupted him blandly. It never occurred to him that there might be a mistake.

"Oh, tut, tut, boy! I see you have the paper. I hope you don't think a man of my position is influenced by a thing like that. Three o'clock, remember. And— Oh, yes, we are going to have a few friends in this evening and we wish you to join us. Mrs. Potter and Edith both desire it."

Jake murmured something and allowed the judge to bow him from the room. This was more stupendous than all the rest. He could grasp the magnitude of a few thousand dollars, but an invitation to the inner circle of social life, into the very heart of the social fortress, was incomprehensible.

But, in spite of his bewilderment, he found his way to Lawyer Blake's office and listened to another indignant protest against the aspersion of being influenced by a vulgar newspaper report. At last he retired, baffled, obliged to allow matters to take their course.

For many months the good people of the village looked for the coming of John Allsbrook and his millions in vain; but, long before they ceased looking, Jake Allsbrook had won the judge's daughter and was accounted one of the most prosperous men in all the north lake country.

BLOOD DISEASES

Can all be Cured by the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

More than half the disease in the world is caused by bad blood—weak blood, blood poisoned by impurities. Bad blood is the cause of all the headaches and backaches, the lumbago and rheumatism, the neuralgia and sciatica, the debility and biliousness and indigestion, the paleness and pimples and all the disfiguring skin diseases like eczema, that show how impure the blood actually is. It is no use trying a different medicine for each disease, because they all spring from the same cause—bad blood. To cure disease you must get right down to the root of the trouble in the blood. That is what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do. They make new, rich blood. Common medicines only touch the symptoms of disease. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills root out the cause. That is why these pills cure when doctors and common medicines fail. Here is positive proof:—"I suffered agony from indigestion," says Mr. Fred Fillis, of Grand Desert, N. B. "I had no appetite for my meals and no energy for my work; my stomach caused me constant distress and everything I ate lay like lead on my chest. At times I felt my life a burden. I was always doctoring, but it did me no good. Then a little book came into my hands, and I read Dr. Williams' Pink Pills would cure indigestion. I got them and began taking them, and I soon found they were helping me. My appetite began to improve and my food to digest better. I used the pills for a couple of months and I was well. Now I am always ready for my meals and I can eat anything, and all the credit is due to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I keep the pills in the house all the time, and I occasionally take a few as a precaution. I can honestly advise all dyspeptics to use this medicine, as I am sure it will cure them as it did me."

Give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial and they will cure you, simply because they make that rich, strong blood that disease cannot resist. See that you get the genuine pills, with the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," on the wrapper around every box. You can get them from your medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Antartic Penguins.

Some of the penguins in the antarctic regions weigh as much as eighty pounds and are about four feet high, with a splendid orange patch on the neck. The young take three years to develop fully, and even then the plumage is distinctly less brilliant than in the older birds. Both the movements and migration of the penguins are remarkable. When first followed the bird prefers to walk, but when in danger of being caught it drops on to its abdomen and with the help of the wings glissades at a pace too great to be overtaken by a man walking. They seem aware of the movements of the great ice fields and use them to help their migration to the pack ice in the north. They take trouble to collect stones, which they delight to steal from one another's piles, for nests.

Many of the ways of the penguins are suggestive of preserved instincts. Their attitude when sleeping is modeled on that of birds with fully developed wings. But the penguin has to be content with reaching the shelter of his wing with no more than the tip of his beak.

Seeing Double.

The two eyes really see two objects. If the two forefingers be held, one at the distance of a foot, the other two feet in front of the eyes, and the former looked at, two phantoms of the latter will be observed, one on each side. If the latter finger be regarded, two phantoms of the nearer finger will be observed mounting guard, one on either side.

ASK STATE TO PERMIT MOB PUNISHMENT.

Chicago.—A dispatch to the Tribune from Houston, Texas, says that a number of citizens, headed by G. W. Knight of San Marcos, has been presented to Governor Lanham, asking that the state permit mob punishment of negroes who assault women. The governor is asked to endorse a policy of absolute unprotection to negroes guilty of assault, insuring that they may be hanged instantly as soon as apprehended. Governor's Lanham's response principally is directed to the legal phrase of the proposition. It is set forth that it is impossible for him to countenance the policy, in view of the oath of office and the state legislation which he is bound to protect.

SMILING BABIES.

The well baby is never a cross baby When baby cries or is fretful, it is taking the only way it can to let mother know there is something wrong. That something is probably some derangement of the stomach or bowels, or perhaps the pain of teething. These troubles are easily removed and cured by Babies' Own Tablets, and baby smiles again—in fact there's a smile in every dose. Mrs. Mary E. Adams, Lake George, N.B, says:—"I have found Baby's Own Tablets so good for the ills of little ones that I would not like to be without them." Death of a Bride in a White Squall.

A St. John, N. B., special says:—A telephone message from Musquash, N. B., says Mrs. Lizzie McGuire, aged 20, who but a few weeks ago was married to Ronald McGuire, quarter-master of the Eastern Steamship company's steamer Calvin Austin, was discovered in Little Musquash harbor, near their home. They and Mr. McGuire's sister were crossing the harbor when a squall canted their sail-boat, and Mr. McGuire and his bride were thrown out, while his sister retained her place in the boat. Mr. McGuire swam to his wife and she put her arms around him. Both sank, hoever, twice, and he says he then seems to have lost consciousness for a brief time, for when he came up a second time she was not with him. How he was finally rescued was not told.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Real Elixir of Life.

Contentment is the real elixir of life. It is the real fountain from which flow the waters of perennial youth. Sometimes it costs an effort, a tremendous effort, to say it is all right, but the man or woman who can say it is much better off for thus looking at the sunny side of the world than the person who harbors a grievance against all mankind and walks through the world burdened with the somber thoughts of his disappointments. The discontented perhaps never stop to think how much worse off they could be; that, no matter how few their pleasures, there are those in the world who have fewer or none at all; that, given health and strength and the full possession of the senses, they are advantaged and blessed in the race of existence.

The Tempering of Copper.

The expression "the tempering of copper" arises from a thirteenth century misunderstanding of the Greek word baphe—a word used by the Greco-Egyptian alchemistic writers of the third century. Berthelot, the eminent authority on alchemy, has shown that this word may mean tempering, coloring (of cloth, glass and metals), the coloring materials or the coloring bath. Egyptian alchemy was busied originally in producing brilliant bronzes on copper and the copper alloys, and this expression "the tempering of copper" means, and always has meant, bronzing copper so that it may simulate silver or gold.—Arthur Jones Hopkins in New York Times.

If I went for a drive I had to lie down when I came back. If I went for a mile or two on my wheel I returned too weak to lift it through the gateway. The last time I came in from having a spin I dropped utterly helpless from fatigue. My father would give me no peace until I tried the Dr. Slocum Remedies. After taking two bottles of Psychine I must say the results were wonderful. People were constantly remarking my improvement. I also took Coltsfoote Expectorant, and—mark the change. THE TIMES

MEDICINE HAT, N. W. T.

FOREST TREE PLANTING.

The Forestry convention which has been summoned by the Premier of the Dominion to meet in Ottawa in January next calls attention to the efforts that have been made to plant forest trees on our western prairies. When settlement begins a supply of building material and of fuel is one of the first things thought of and this question obtrudes itself prominently on the sparsely timbered western prairies. The efforts successfully made to grow clumps and belts of trees have shown their value not only for the purposes mentioned but for shelter both to the houses and crops from cold winds of winter and the drying winds of the summer. What can be accomplished by the judicious planting of forest trees for shelter purposes is shown by the successful growth of apples by Mr. A. P. Stevenson of Nelson. It will be of interest to trace the efforts made by the government to assist the settlers in remedying the natural conditions.

In submitting the report of the Department of Interior in 1876, the then minister of that department, Hon. David Laird, stated that during his journey from Fort Garry to Qu'Appelle in the summer of 1874, nothing impressed itself upon his mind more than the treelessness of a vast portion of the country over which he passed. Day by day as he crossed the wide extent of prairie utterly destitute of trees the question presented itself: How is the settlement of these prairies possible if the settler is without wood for fencing, building or fuel? His attention having been called to the work done in tree planting in the Western States, he instructed the Surveyor General, Col. J. S Dennis, to obtain all available information on the subject.

Hon. L. B. Hodges, superintendent of tree planting on the St. Paul and Pacific line of railway was consulted one of the most competent authorities on the subject at that time and in making his report Col. Dennis appended some suggestions on tree-planting from an essay by Mr. Hodge and also quoted the assertions made by that gentleman which he thought his five years' experience justified. Some of these statements were that at a mere trifling expense the stockyard and buildings on the bleakest prairie homestead may be surrounded in five years with a belt of trees forming a windbreak and affording effectual protection; that a grove of trees can be grown as surely as a crop of corn and with far less expense in proportion to its value; that apparently worthless prairie lands can, by the planting and cultivation of the timber thereon, be sold for $100 per acre within twenty years; that the net profits of lands properly planted and cultivated with trees will within ten years realize at the rate of ten to one as compared with profits attending the raising of wheat. The Surveyor General added that other more forcible propositions were put forth by Mr. Hodge but he did not quote them. Sufficient has been quoted however to show how sanguine were the expectations of some of the early advocates of tree planting and how predictions were made on theoretical premises and with very light experience.

As a result of this investigation it was decided to amend the Dominion Lands Act so as to provide for "Forest Tree Culture Claims," similar to those provided for by Act of Congress, and in 1876 an amendment was passed authorizing the granting of a quarter-section of 160 acres after the expiry of six years from the date of entry on condition that eight acres of the land had been broken and prepared for planting within one year after entry, an equal area during the second year and sixteen additional acres within the third year after that date, and that a similar scale had been followed in tree planting commencing from the second year, the trees to be placed not less than twelve feet apart each way. Each applicant for entry would require to make an affidavit that the land applied for was open prairie and without timber.

Under this amendment 253 claims, covering an area of 40,480 acres were taken up during the years 1877 to 1879, but only six entrants completed the duties necessary to entitle them to patent, the last patent being issued so recently as the 31st August, 1895. Most of the claims taken up were in the district along the Red river, others were farther west near the international boundary and some as far west and north as the Minnedosa district. The claims for which grants were issued were in township 2, range 4, east of the 1st Meridian; township 2, ranges 5 and 6, west of the 1st Meridian, and township 2, ranges 12 and 14, west of the 1st Meridian.

The reason for the practical failure of this experiment was undoubtedly the lack of knowledge of the trees suitable for growth in the west and of the methods of caring for them. The provision that the trees must be planted not less than twelve feet apart shows at once that the knowledge of the supposed experts was very faulty. In connection with agriculture the fact has gradually forced itself upon the public mind that it cannot be carried successfully except by those who have special knowledge of and training in it, and it is largely the same with arboriculture. The grower must know what to plant, how to plant it, and how to care for it afterwards.

At that time every individual tree grower had to make his own experiments, but the work of the Experimental Farms in Manitoba and the Territories and of the Dominion Forestry branch have placed matters in a much more favorable position. The trees which have been found most satisfactory for planting for woodlots or shelter belts are the box elder or ashed leafed maple, the elm, the green ash and the poplars. The poplars grow fast but the wood is soft and not durable. The cottonwood is used most of these trees. The Russian poplar was considered likely to be useful but has been found subject to rot. Elm makes a good growth and succeeds well on low ground. Green ash makes a good wood but grows rather slowly. The ashed leaved or Manitoba maple is the most generally planted as it grows so quickly that in a short time a shelter belt will attain a serviceable height.

But even after selection of the proper species care in the setting out and management are required if success is to be attained. The land must be prepared for the reception of the trees and the strong grass and weeds that might choke the seedlings in the first few years must be kept down by cultivation. The Dominion Forestry branch provides for expert advice in these respects and the prospects are that the efforts now made will be successful in acomplishing what previous attempts failed to do up to the present time.

THE TIME WILL COME.

(Orison Swett Marden in "Success Magazine.")

When everybody will know that selfishness always defeats itself.

When the churches will not be closed as long as the saloons are open.

When to get rich by making others poorer will be considered a disgrace.

When the golden rule will be regarded as the soundest business philosophy.

When the same standard of morality will be demanded of men as of women.

When all true happiness will be found in doing the right, and only the good will be found to the real.

When the business man will find that his best interests will be the best interests of the man at the other end of the bargain.

When all hatred, revenge and jealousy will be regarded as bomerangs which inflict upon the thrower the injury intended for others.

When a man seeks amusement by causing pain or taking the life of innocent, dumb creatures will be considered a barbarian.

When every man will be his own physician, and will carry his own remedy with him,—when mind not medicine, will be the great panacea.

When men will realize that there can be no real pleasure in wrongdoing because the sting and pain that follow more than outweigh the apparent pleasure.

When the world will have everything to sell and nothing to give, and the price it demands will be the best service the purchaser can render the race.

When it will be found that repression and punishment are not reformative, and our prisons will be transformed into great educative and character building institutions.

When it will be found that physical and chemical forces were intended to release man from all physical drudgery, and to free his mind from the burden of living getting that he can make a life.

When no man will be allowed to say that the world owes him a living that he should not pay for it; when living only to cripples, invalids, and all others who can not, through some misfortune, help themselves.

When the "grafter" who fattens upon an unsuspecting public, wears purple and fine linen and lives in luxury, will be meted out the same measurement of justice as the vulgar footpad receives who knocks a man down and picks his pockets.

When the "best society" will consist of men and women of brains, culture and achievement, rather than those whose chief merit and distinction lie in the possession of unearned fortunes which they make it the business of their lives to squander.

SUNLIGHT SOAP

is better than other Soaps but is best when used in the Sunlight way. Follow directions.

SUNLIGHT WAY OF WASHING

FIRST.—Dip the article to be washed in a tub of lukewarm water, draw it out on a washboard and rub the soap lightly over it. Be particular not to miss soaping all over. THEN roll it in a tight roll, lay in the tub under the water, and go on the same way until all the pieces have the soap rubbed on, and are rolled up.

Then go away for thirty minutes, or, one hour and let the "Sunlight" Soap do its work.

NEXT.—After soaking the full time rub the clothes lightly out on a wash board, and the dirt will drop out; turn the garment inside out to get at the seams, but don't use any more soap; don't scald or boil a single piece, and don't wash through two suds. If the water gets too dirty, pour a little out and add fresh. If a streak is hard to wash, rub some more soap on it, and throw the piece back into the suds for a few minutes.

LASTLY COMES THE RINSING, which is to be done in lukewarm water, taking special care to get all the dirty suds away, then wring out and hang up to dry.

For Woolens and Flannels proceed as follows:—Shake the articles free from dust. Cut a tablet of SUNLIGHT SOAP into shavings, pour into a gallon of boiling water and whisk into a lather. When just lukewarm, work articles in the lather without rubbing. Squeeze out, dip in tepid water without twisting and rinse thoroughly in two relays of lukewarm water. Squeeze out, shake without twisting and hang in the open air.

The most delicate colors may be safely washed in the "Sunlight" way.

$5,000 REWARD will be paid to any person who proves that Sunlight Soap contains any injurious chemicals or any form of adulteration.

Your Money Refunded by the dealer from whom you buy Sunlight Soap if you find any cause for complaint.

Eczema Known by Intense Itching

If Not Cured It Spreads and Becomes Chronic—What to Expect From

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

The stages of eczema are marked by redness of the skin — heat and inflammation — swelling — watery discharge — formation of a crust or scale — and almost constant itching varying from that which is simply annoying to that which is positively beyond human endurance.

The beginning is often neglected chafing and skin irritation, or a small pimple or sore which has been poisoned by the clothing.

Too frequent washing is to be avoided, but the afflicted parts should be thoroughly cleansed with Packer's Tar Soap and tepid water. After careful drying (not rubbing) with a soft towel, apply Dr. Chase's Ointment plentifully.

The ointment may seem a little severe at first, but this is necessary to a thorough cleansing of the sores, for relief from the dreadful itching will come after the first few applications, and thorough cure will be the reward of persistent treatment.

One thing you can be certain of, and that is that you are not experimenting when you use Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for eczema, saltrheum, psoriasis, tetter, and similar skin diseases. It has acquired its world-wide reputation by the positive cure of these very diseases, and while using it you can see that gradually and certainly it is allaying the inflammation and healing up the annoying and distressing sores.

Mr. William Castle, Eagle Hill, Alta., writes,—"About Nov. 1st, 1903, I broke out with small red blotches on my arms and they afterwards spread all over my body. It was so itchy, that I could not sleep at nights for scratching. I suffered untold misery and was almost driven to desperation. I tried everything at hand and my friends recommended numerous remedies all to no avail.

"When I began the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment I had little hope of relief but the result has been wonderful. From the first this preparation gave relief from the dreadful itching and it has now brought about a cure."

RILEY'S RYE PATCH.

James Whitcomb Riley was looking over a fence on his farm at a field of rye, when a neighbor who was driving by stopped his horse and asked:

"Hullo, Mr. Riley, how's your rye doing?"

"Fine, fine," replied the poet.

"How much do you expect to clear to the acre?"

"Un, about four gallons," answered Mr. Riley, soberly.

Sad Shooting.

A Fort William, Ont., dispatch says:—The first shooting fatality of the season occurred, when Edward Smith, jr., the fifteen-year-old son of Edward Smith, proprietor of the Manitoba hotel at this place, was accidentally shot in the thigh, sustaining injuries frm which he expired a few hours later. Young Smith was hunting near Fort William with one of the boarders at his father's hostelry, when the man fell, discharging his gun. The boy was brought to the McKellar hospital, where he died a few hours after his arrival.

WHERE WEAKNESS IS, DISEASE WILL SETTLE. If one suffers from any organic weakness, inherited or contracted, there disease will settle when it attacks the body. Prevention is the wisest course.

MORMON OFFICERS UPHELD.

A Salt Lake City, Utah, dispatch says:—At the semiannual conference of the Mormon church, all the officers of the church were sustained without a dissenting vote. Because of the charge made during the senate investigation that Senator Smoot had sustained President Smith in polygamous practices, much interest was taken on his vote. The voting was done by the lifting of hands. Observers say that the apostle-senator did not raise his hand with the others of the quorum. He did not, however, give any sign in the negative.

A prominent member of the Franklin Inn Club, Philadelphia's foremost literary organization, at a gathering of book-writers recently, told a new anecdote of F. Marion Crawford, the novelist. A certain young lady, so the story runs, wrote to Mr. Crawford requesting that he send her a bit of sentiment and his autograph. WALLACE IRWIN'S EDUCATIONAL STRUGGLES.

Wallace Irwin, the writer of humorous poetry, is thirty years old. He was born in Oneida, New York. This is what happened to him in his early days according to his own story:

"My father, who was in the lumber business, removed to the booming mining camp of Leadville, Colorado, in 1880. The schools of Leadville, at that time, were struggling fitfully along, closing with every strike, smallpox epidemic, or squabble in the board of education, so my early training was by fits and starts—mostly fits. A little later on my father bought a cattle ranch in a small way, and I was put to herding cows, again to the detriment of my education. I was, however, an enthusiastic reader of 'grown folks' books,' and swallowed a great deal of stuff too heavy for my young digestion. Consequently, when in my fourteenth year, we removed to Denver and I was allowed to go to a civilized school, I found, to my surprise, that, although I was rather long on the English poets, I was exceedingly short on spelling, pronunciation and arithmetic. I was given a brief examination and humiliatingly relegated to the third grade among babies half my age. I remember that the first day we were given a singing lesson. The little shavers in the class were raising their childish voices in song when the teacher held up her ruler severely. 'There is some one singing base in this class,' she said. I plead guilty, and the next day was recommended for promotion.

A SUCCESSFUL MEDICINE. Everyone wishes to be successful in any undertaking in which he may engage. It is therefore, extremely gratifying to the proprietors of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills to know that their efforts to compound a medicine which would prove a blessing to mankind have been successful beyond their expectations. The endorsation of these pills by the public is a guarantee that a pill has been produced which will fulfil everything claimed for it.

Formign Canadian Starch Combine.

A Montreal special says:—A number of leading financiers are hard at work in an endeavor to form a starch combine in the Dominion. It is stated that the project is well underway, and that the four starch companies now doing business in Canada have consented to come in. They are the Edwardsburg Starch company, capital $500,000; Imperial, capital not stated; Brantford, $100,000, and St. Lawrence, Port Credit, $250,000.

Captain Win Out in Sensational Game.

A Vancouver dispatch says:—Last Saturday's Lacrosse match between New Westminister and the Capitals, of Ottawa, was very sensational. It was played before 15,000 people at Queens park, New Westminster. The Capitals won by 5 to 4. The Capitals had played two hard games in three days, after travelling 3,000 miles, and had had a good time between the games and came on the field stale. The Westminster people were in high glee, and making merry over the way the Westminster team were playing rag with the visitors. The Capitals played in the first half like a lot of juniors. They lacked ginger, and Westminster easily won four straight games, in 16, 5, 1 and 1 minutes. It was not until the latter part of the third quarter that Powers, Butterworth, Pringle and Allen and the other boys woke up, and got the kinks out of them, and went after Westminster, who were tired after the hard game. To the consternation of Westminster's assembled thousands the Caps whipped the home team by winning five straight games in 5, 4, 2 and 6, and another one in 1 minutes just before the gong sounded. In the three games played by Ottawa, fifty thousand people have watched their clever stick handling, clean checking and brilliant combination, and above all their knack of drawing Westminster away from their flags, a trik British Columbia teams have yet to learn. In summing up it is hard to say which is the better team, Vancouver, Capitals, or Westminster. In the series here, Westminster nly managed to win by one game from Vancouver.

DEPEND ON YOURSELF—NOT ON FATE.

(Orison Swett Marden in "Success Magazine.")

Many a man has tried to justify his failure on the ground that he was doomed by the cards which fate dealt him, that he must pick them up and play the game, and that no effort, however great, on his part could materially change the result. But, my young friend, the Fate that deals your cards is in the main your own resolution. The result of the game does not rest with fate or destiny, but with you. You will take the trick if and determinate requisite to take it, and determinate requisite to take it, to change the value of the cards which, you say, fate has dealt you. The game depends upon your training, upon the way you are disciplined to seize and use your opportunities, and upon your ability to put grit in the place of superior advantages.

Just because circumstances do sometimes give clients to lawyers and patients to physicians, put commonplace clergymen in uncommon pulpits, and place the sons of the rich at the head of great corporations even when they have only average ability and scarcely any experience, while poor youths with greater ability and more experience, often have to fight their way for years to obtain ordinary situations, are you justified in starting out without a chart or in leaving a place for luck in your programme? What would you think of the captain of a great liner who would start out to sea without any port in view, and trust to luck to land his precious cargo safely?

Did you ever know of a strong young man making out his life programme and depending upon chance to carry out any part of it? Men who depend upon "luck" do not think it worth while to make a thorough preparation for success.

Power gravitates to the man who knows how. "Luck is the tide, nothing more. The strong man rows with it if it rows toward his port; he rows against it if it flows the other way."

Eyes and nose ran Water. — C. G. Archer, of Brewer, Maine, says: "I have had Catarrh for several years. Water would run from my eyes and nose for days at a time. Saskatoon Busy.

A Saskatoon dispatch says:—Last week was a busy week in Saskatoon, wheat and grain of all kinds pouring in, taxing the powers of the Canadian Northern yards to find places for the cars. The farmers' hearts have been cheered by the splendid harvest weather. The rains have made the fall plowin good, and quite a lot has been accomplished.

Kaien Island to be Terminus.

An Ottawa special says:—The car service department f the Canadian Atlantc railway office has been closed. This is the first office outside that of the general manager to be closed under that of the Grand Trunk railway system. All the staff have been lookedafter. Most of the clerks will be transferred to Montreal. The report from Detrot that Vancouver is to be the terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific railway is, it is understood, made out of whole cloth. Kaien island, in the Skeena river, has been chosen, and the company will not swerve from its decision to make a great port at that point at the dictation of a few men who may desire to speculate in Vancouver city lots. The company holds that as regards trade with the far east, Kaien island has an advantage of several hundred miles over the more southerly route. The name of the new terminals for the city has not been determined, and the Canadian public will be invited to assist n selecting it. A prize of $250 will be paid by the directors to the individual who suggests the most appropriate name. It is not to exceed eight or nine letters, and must be some euphonious Indian name of the British Columbia tribes.

TRAGEDY IN MOUNTAIN WOODS.

A Middleton, N. Y., dispatch says:—Trippie murder was revealed here when the bodies of Willis and Fred Olney were found in the woods half a mile from their home, at which was found the murdered body of Alice Ingerick. Both brothers had been shot. The crime is expected to number one more victim, the mother of the girl Alice. The mother, who was found unconscious in the barn of the Olney brothers farm, has not regained consciousness, and was said by physicians to be dying from three fractures in her skull. As soon as daylight permitted a search to be made for Fred and Willis Olney, who were missing fro mtheir home, when Mrs. Ingerick was found unconscious and her daughter murdered, tracks leading across two fieds to a wood near the house were seen near the searchers. The tracks were fresh. Just beyond them in the woods were found the bodies of Fred and Willis, each lying in the same position on his back, with one arm across the breast. All the pockets in their clothing had been turned inside out. Marks in the underbush showed that the bodies had been dragged from a wagon to the place where they were found. The police the wagon whch evidently carried the murdered brothers to the woods to be the same vehicle which many persons noticed in the vicinity of the Olney farm. Two strangers were in the wagon and they drove into an old backwoods road about half a mile away from the Olney farmhouse. The wagon was seen driving up the old road, when it disappeared in the woods which borders the road. Several hours after the time when it was believed the murder was committed, this wagon was seen on the same road driving away from the vicinity of the Olney brothers' farm. The wagon went towards the Shawangunk mountains. The police have not secured witnesses to the wagon's course. The fact that an attempt was made to kill every person who is known to have been in the Olney house just before the murderous attack was made has caused the police and the entire neighborhood to declare that the crime had other motive than robbery, and that the rifling of the Olney brothers' pockets was only a ruse to mislead pursuit. No plausible motive for the murder has yet been advanced by the police. Willis Olney was a widower, whose wife died last August, and Fred was a bachelor. Mrs. Ingerick, who had separated from her husband, had been employed as a housekeeper at the Olney brothers' place only about a month. Her husband, Martin Ingerick, lived at Wurtsboro, N. Y.

News of Husband After Six Years.

A Tronto special says:—After an absence of six years, during three of which he has been definitely believed to be dead, by all his relatives and friends. J. J Daly, who during the boom days was a prominent real estate agent n Toronto, is now believed to be alive in Greenwich, Conn. His identification, and there seems to be little doubt that it is he, came through a message received in Toronto to the effect that a man believed to be J. J. Daly, husband of Mrs. May A. Daly, 22 Boswell avenue, Toronto, was locked up at Greenwich, Conn. Mrs. Daly was called upon at her home, and the news came as a great shock to her, who seemed overjoyed at the prospect, or even possibility of ascertaining definitely that her husband was still alive. Telegrams were dispatched and replies were received from the sheriff saying that J. J. Daly was being detained. Mrs. Daly left to investigate

Communications.

The Editor is not responsible fo the opinions of his correspondent nor does he always agree with them

To the Editor of The Times
Sir,

I noticed a descriptive paragraph in your last issue giving details of the improvements recently effected by the Bell Telephone Company in their town system. The remark is made that the instruments are all long distance phones. What is the use of having long distance instruments when there are no long distance lines with which to connect them? If the Bell Telephone Co. would help the country develop by installing these long distance systems a little ahead of actual requirement it would do more to put the company in a favorable light before the people than any other method of advertising. This is especially the case in a ranching country similar to the district surrounding Medicine Hat. People cannot be expected to settle in a country where there are no rapid means of communication with central points. The public would appreciate the Bell Company if they would do their part and help the country along; The people would then feel inclined to help the Company. If the Company is going to wait until the district is thickly settled, it is time for the town itself to do something to encourage trade and facilities which exist on the other side of the line in nearly all districts similar to ours. Telephone communication constitutes one of the main arteries of business; The question of long telephone systems should be a live issue in the forthcoming Municipal campaign. We must have systems built, either by the Bell Telephone Company, the Provincial Government, the town or by private enterprise. If necessary the town should help the Bell Company by paying or assisting to pay a moderate interest on the capital expended on such lines, after adding revenue and deducting cost of maintenance, until the lines become paying concerns. True, there is a Board of Trade, but they are without means, and occupy an advisory position in connection with the Municipal Council. It is the Municipality which has the money to carry to a successful conclusion work suggested and recommended by the Board of Trade, and it is the Municipality which is affected financially in a very serious degree for good or bad by the amount of trade carried on with the surrounding country. At present a proportion of the country trade is largely diverted to other points which are building up at our expense, owing to the short sighted policy and want of enterprise on the part of our leading citizens. This question of trade relationship with the ranching and farming community should not be lost sight of in choosing candidates for this year's council. There should be some, if not a majority, of trade experts to develop and expand business with outside districts. Prospective candidates should give us their views upon this and other important matters which will, this year, have to be considered and determined they can do so at the annual civic meeting or through the press, so that we may not be in the dark as to the man for whom we are asked to vote.

Municipal ventures for comfort, convenience, health and manufactures are highly desirable, but they are not everything. The town cannot like the United States live upon itself. How can it increase liabilities when it is almost deliberately decreasing receipts, by neglecting trade questions? There is no need because we live in a hollow, that our energies and ideas are to be confined by the valley in which the town is situated. Councillors should take a regular and frequent walks to the highest point of the upper land, look around the country and ask themselves, as they see in fact and imagination the numerous ranches and farms, how much of this trade they are getting or endeavoring to obtain. The town has two actual sources of support, ranching and railroading, with a prospective 3rd—manufacturing. The country trade is quite as important as manufacturing especially in th immediate future, supposing tha our manufacturing aspirations ar later realized. There is no wisdo in neglecting one real source of revenue because we are hoping for another.

The subject requires the serious consideration of all citizens who have the welfare of the town at heart.

Some of the causes affecting trade appear to be:

(1) The commercial and social dis position of the towns people, evidenced in the manner in which country people are treated when they come to market. They ought to be welcomed, made to feel themselves at home. Days of sport and amusement arranged to which they may be invited. Make them feel that they are wanted and appreciated. There is at present disatisfaction on the part of some of our country friends, which requires removing as soon as possible; for example at the high prices charged for goods and the spirit of grabbing every dollar available irrespective of the future dealing. This selfish position must be abandoned. It is a suicidal policy to earn a profit once of say 20 or 30 per cent. when as the result of so charging, no trade at all will afterwards be done with the customer. Better charge less and have the person buy constantly. There is another sore point. No merchant, I believe, will give cash for produce, you must take it out in trade. Well, this has resulted in many people going to Irvine or Walsh where they can take their choice of payment. Better cash for produce and some trade, than no trade at all. The merchant who will pay cash has a first class chance of realizing a fortune. The attitude of the merchants on these points must surely be owing to the existence of a railway cash business, which if the present course is pursued, will be all the trade left to the place, excepting of course, that of ranchers resident in town.

(2) Facilities should be provided in town to foster and encourage trade. There should be absolutely free trade with the country around unhampered by bylaw or other charges. People who come to sell will generally also buy. One step has been accomplished in providing a market site, now we want a market building with stalls. If livery charges are too high, let the Municipality provide stabling accommodation at cost or less. Encourage the trade with the people who have not mastered the language by having clerks who can speak German for example.

(3) Facilities in communication, long distance telephones should be built, by which people may send for a doctor, learn the price of stock, arrange for the purchase of stock, order goods, obtain police protection communicate with their friends and generally transact business. Railways calculate that every settler they bring into the country is worth so much by the freight and travelling incurred by him afterwards—therefore they build railways; So with the telephone, every person you encourage to settle here by this means will use your 'phone, order your goods, build up your town.

Branch railways are another necessity; we hope to see one built shortly North and South which should be helped in its undertaking. In districts where there is no railway there might be a system of rural delivery at certain depots by team, or gasoline automobile transport, which is cheaper and more effective. Good roads and bridges are required; signposts (with one arm, "This way to Medicine Hat") at divergencies of the roads especially when fences are appearing as numerous as ducks in the spring, would be welcome. The greater the physical difficulties experienced in coming to trade here, owing to distances etc., the greater should be the attractions and facilities provided to overcome them.

A tree will become stunted or perhaps die from want of care and cultivation, so with our country trade, from similar causes, unless we get a move on. A great majority of country people are not OBLIGED to trade here. They may send away, go elsewhere or persuade someone to start a store in their vicinity.

Yours truly,
BUSINESS.

FRUIT GROWING IN ALBERTA.

Dear Sir:

We have a copy of The Times containing an item on fruit growing in Alberta. We believe that Southern Alberta is destined to become quite a fruit country. It is very essential, however, that the people should start right in undertaking to grow fruit. Manitoba is only now recovering from the effects of the mistakes made by the early settlers in planting fruits. On account of these mistakes the impression was created that the fruits could not be grown here, and it took a long course of experimental work by experienced horticulturists to put matters right and to show the way to success in growing fruits.

The three chief requisites to successful fruit growing are:

(1) Plant the most northerly grown stock obtainable.

(2) Plant varieties that are known to be best adapted for our climate.

(3) Give cultivation suitable to this country.

The most important of these points is that in regard to the stock. One of the most experienced fruit growers in Manitoba has said that one home grown tree is worth 100 from Eastern Canada and 20 from Minnesota. The other points we have mentioned, however, are also very important. Mistakes made on the start will discourage the planters and injure the reputation of the country, and put back success for many years We are very sorry to notice that Pacific Coast stock is being brought into Alberta. We cannot see how there can be anything but failure in planting that class of stock. The varieties grown on the coast are entirely unsuited to Alberta. But even if the varieties were right, stock grown in the soft Pacific coast climate would not thrive in Alberta. It seems only folly to plant such stock. We think it is a duty to warn people to avoid these mistakes in planting fruits.

Yours truly,
BUCHANAN NURSERY CO.,
St. Charles,

EVERYBODY DELIGHTED.

Those who have received a copy of the beautiful picture, entitled "Queen Alexandra, Her Grandchildren and dogs," are simply amazed that such a beautiful picture can be included with such a paper as the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal and all for one dollar a year. The Family Herald publishers have certainly surpassed all former efforts. It is a perfect gem of a picture, far different to anything ever before issued with that great paper. To see it is to want it, and with the Family Herald and Weekly Star at only one dollar per year is beyond question the biggest value in the newspaper world today.—The Times Family Herald and picture for $1.80 per year.

THE C. P. R. "GOSPEL TRAIN."

Early in the year the Canadian Pacific Railway Company began to look up the excellent educational work that has been done south of the line in the matter of improved seed grain and good roads by means of special trains carrying expert lecturers, as well as object lessons, making stops along the line and addressing well advertised meetings on the particular object of the mission. The first "gospel train" sent out was one on the M. & St. L. Railway, in the state of Iowa in 1897. The Rock Island rapidly followed suit as did also the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy and the Illinois Central.

Since that time the movement has grown to large proportions and the C.P.R. has now announced its intention to introduce the innovation in the prairie provinces and will send out a train early in the new year devotedto the cause of "clean farms" and "improved seed grain." A meeting was arranged in Winnipeg recently between Vice-President Whyte, W. B. Lannigan and representatives of the Grain Growers Associations, and the various departments of Agriculture at which the proposal was fully discussed and at a meeting of the Calgary Board of Trade, where the scheme was submitted by Mr. J. S. Dennis in behalf of the railway, a resolution was passed unanimously endorsing the proposal and agreeing to assist the company in its publicity campaign.

It would be interesting to estimate the amount of loss sustained by the farmers of the west by reason of defective seed. It would figure into the millions in some seasons. It is perhaps safe to state that this great leak on the western farm is only equalled by that caused by the ever present weed. Almost the entire oat crop of Alberta has been damaged in wet seasons simply through bad seed and very little attention is paid on the ordinary farm to rational seection of seed so vitally necessary to preserve our present high average yields.

The fertile soil of western Canada is peculiarly favorable to the multiplication of weeds. Cases have occurred where otherwise valuable lands infested with the notorious stinkweed had been sold for taxes as the owners had given up all hope of successfully coping with this pest. That weedy farms are confined to old settled districts is a very popu-

It is expected Mr. J. W. Brown will leave Medicine Hat on Monday, to take up his duties as School Inspector for Southern Alberta.

The School Board received 20 applications for assistant principalship.

The Board resolved to pay Brown & Preston in full, and to pay Mr. Kerr's commission according to his instructions.

THE POLMATIER SISTERS.

The above talented performers will appear in Medicine Hat, on the 27th inst., under the auspices of the Lacrosse Club, and we bespeak a large support for them on account of their own merits and for the sake of the Lacrosse Club. They come well recommended.

The Ponca City, Oklahoma Daily Courier, of March 23rd, 1905, says: The splendid entertainment given at the Opera House last night was the musical event of the season. The house was crowded with one of the finest audiences ever assembled in the city, which gave evidence of its appreciation by numerous encores. The Polmatier Sisters as a musical organization deserves all the praise which a music loving public can extend, and as individual musicians are far in advance of the many so called stars of the profession. The Knights of Pythias' lodge of this city, deserves the thanks of all for securing this splendid entertainment, and we shall look forward to a return engagement at some near future date. Don't forget they will be here at the Opera House, Monday, November 27th.

The Song of the Candle.

Bye, bye! Hope rises high:
There's a sweet little cradle hung up in the sky;
A dear little life that is coming to bless;
Two soft chubby hands that will pat and caress;
A pure little soul winging down from above;
A darling to care for, a baby to love.

One of the [illegible] agencies which enlightened Science has discovered to relieve motherhood from excessive suffering is the "Favorite Prescription" devised by Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y.

This wonderful "Prescription" imbues the entire nervous system with natural healthy vitality; gives elastic vigor to the delicate organism specially concerned in motherhood, and makes the coming of baby entirely free from danger and almost free from pain.

"I wish to state that I have used Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription with very good results," writes Mrs. Katie M. Annis, of Hudson, New Hampshire. "Had been in poor health for over four years, and had been twice in the hospital. My husband bought some of your 'Favorite Prescription,' and it has carried me easily through my last two confinements. We are now blessed with two healthy children, and I am sure your medicine has done me more good than all the other treatment I have ever received."

BAD HEADACHES generally arise from bad stomachs. Foul breath, bitter taste, coated tongue, sour eructations or belching of gas, are common symptoms though not all present in every case. To cure, take small doses, only one or two each day, of old Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, the Original Little Liver Pills, first put up by him over 40 years ago. One or two a laxative, three or four cathartic.

We regret to hear that the C.P.R. contemplate removing their dining car department from Medicine Hat to Calgary next spring. We learn that Mr. Hilliam, of the Medicine Hat Dining Car Stores, will likely remove to Lagan next spring, and will be manager of the store department at that point.

ALBERTA ELECTIONS.

LIBERAL GOVERNMENT SUSTAINED.

The first election in the new provinces of Alberta took place in the several constituencies on Thursday last. The result was that the Liberal Government formed by Premier Rutherford at the call of Lieutenant-Governor Bulyea, was sustained by what must be called a sweeping majority. The Conservatives of Alberta were badly defeated. It is on a parellel with the defeat which the Hon. Thomas Greenway suffered at the last election in Manitoba when the Liberals were turned out of office and Mr. Greenway found himself supported by an opposition of only six members.

Medicine Hat Constituency.

HON. W. T. FINLAY ELECTED BY NARROW MAJORITY.

The contest in the Medicine Hat constituency was fought out very keenly and resulted in a very close run, so close in fact that the Conservative party regards it as a moral victory. They were opposing an old representative in the Legislative Assembly of the North West Territories who had been appointed to the position of a Cabinet Minister in the new province. The Liberal Party considered Mr. Finlay, with the position and prestige of a Cabinet Minister was invincible, but the hon. gentlemen came so nearly to suffering defeat that it will be a long time ere they will look upon this constituency as a safe seat for the government. In fact the Conservative party go so far as to say that given another week to work the country and F. O. Sissons would have won the constituency. When he began his candidature four weeks ago he was comparatively an unknown man, so that the fact of his having run Mr. Finlay so close is very gratifying to the party. The town vote was a bad blow to the Liberal party.

The town gave Mr. Sissons a splendid majority. He polled 351 votes to 294 cast for his opponent, a majority of 57. Hitherto the town vote has been so close that neither side could claim it. At the last Dominion election there was a difference of only two votes between the two parties, and on the previous occasion it was only four. A majority of 57, therefore, justifies the party in claiming Medicine Hat as a Conservative town. The Conservatives through the lack of organisation in the country, were finally defeated by the country vote, and an analysis of the figures shows that the Liberal majority was obtained in those districts where the foreign elemens predominates.

The polling proceeded very quietly and steadily all day, and both parties worked hard to poll every available vote and thefact of 645 votes being cast shows that they succeeded well.

The polls were open from 9 to 5. Shortly after the latter hour the Conservative Committee rooms were filled with an enthusiastic crowd. At 5.30 the returns began to come in. As the numbers cast in the town were read out they were greeted with deafening cheers, for Sissons had a majority in six out of seven. Then came Walsh and Sisson's led by 62 votes. After this the country returns gradually pulled it down, but it was nearly ten o'clock before the majority was reduced to a minority and it was not until 3 o'clock on Friday that the final returns came placing Mr. Finlay 41 ahead.

At 11 o'clock Mr. Sissons delivered a short address to his supporters and said he considered the large poll in his favor was very flattering to him and gratifying to the party. They had made a gallant fight against great odds, and if they had not won they had come very near it. The returns up to then showed he was nine votes behind and several place to hear from, but whatever the final result was Medicine Hat town had spoken out loudly for Provincial Rights. He thanked all who had worked so hard for his return and all who had cast their votes in his favor. (Loud cheeers). The party then dispersed

LIBERALS CELEBRATE.

Medicine Hat Liberals had a bad time for several hours after the poll closed. Sissons majority in the town had a terribly depressing effect and there was something very like panic in their ranks until the returns from outside points gradually worked down the Conservative town majority. The Liberal Committee rooms were open until about 4 a.m., Mr. Finlay's majority was said to be 37 and their spirits having revived the party began to think of the long delayed celebration. Tar barrels were massed on the waste ground between Finlay's & Co's lumber yard and the river and amid many signs of returning animation the party crowded round and, setting fire to the combustibles, gave vent to their feelings in wild cheers. Then some individual rang the fire bell at the fire hall, another set the north side fire syren going and the shriek of the latter waked up the sleeping town and brought out the fire brigade. It was some time ere matters quieted down. The citizens were indignant at this and many are calling for an inquiry so as to find the person or persons who were responsible for calling out the brigade.

The votes polled at each polling station in the constituency were as follows:

Medicine Hat Climate.

Astonishment of a North Dakota Farmer.

[By Observer.]

A farmer from Dakota arrived in town last week. He got off the train clothed in a fur cap, a long fur coat, and overshoes. When he got off here the thermometer stood at about 56 in the shade, and it was one of the many lovely fall days we are having. Well, he looked around in astonishment. He looked up at the clear blue sky and pinched himself to make sure he was awake. Then he peeled off his fur coat and wandered out into Main street. There he hailed a resident.

"Hey, what weather this you get here?" he asked.

"Oh, the usual kind," said the resident.

"Vel, you not get this every day?"

"Yes, every day at this time of year."

"Ah, ah, no!"

"Yes, yes, we do."

Then he began to kick the earth up in the gutter.

"Vy, you got no frost in the ground!"

"No, not yet."

"Vel, when you get it?"

"Oh, not anything to speak of till near Christmas."

"Ah no!"

"Yes, that's so."

"Vel, I could plow here yet?"

"Certainly, nothing to stop you. How do you like this weather?"

"Vhy, this is best I ever saw at this time."

"Well, we have plenty of it here. Where did you come from?"

"From Dakota."

"What is the weather like there?"

"Vhy, there is vinter there since 19th October. I stop plowing there 19th October, and I have rent my farm and I have come out here to look for land. And ven I get to Manitoba and Reshina, you bet I nearly turn back, it vas so cold! I said to my vrend, here we better go pack. The more we go north the colder she get. But we came on here, and 'tis best weather I ever did see, here in Medicine Hat. Ven can I plow in the spring here?"

"Well, one farmer was seeding wheat on the 22nd February last spring."

"No!"

"Yes!"

"Is he, the spring, always so early here?"

"No, not always; that was an exceptional year. About first week in March is about it."

Ah, and can I grow veet here?"

"Yes, come up to the Times office, and I will show you some wheat."

(They went.)

"Now," said the resident, "here is a sheaf of wheat grown in the Cypress Hills by Mr John Douglas."

Ah, and this is Red Fife?

Yes.

And (after rubbing some out in his hand) that is No. 1 hard too.

Yes, that's so.

Here is some grown by Mr Hugh Hazzard, and Mr Zahniser, and Mr. Cully.

Ah, that's good.

And here is some grown on W. R. Babington's farm.

Ah, I know Bill Babbington. He is a neighbour of mine down in Bottineau county.

Good, well, he has put in 400 acres of winter wheat, and Mr. Zahniser has put in a big lot too.

Vinter veet! vinter veet! no?

Yes.

Vel, the frost, won't it kill it?

I don't know. They don't think so, anyway.

Vell, I would be afraid of the frost.

Some people say the frost will kill it, but plenty of people believe this is a good winter wheat country.

Vell, vell, you have splendid vether here.

You had better take a look over the country, examine the land, and judge for yourself.

I vill. I am going to Calgarry to-night, and to, what you call Lethbridge, and I will come back here.

That's right, and call in here again.

I vill. I haf a little money (with a knowing look), and I make it all since 1897. Now I rent my farm in Dakota and come up here. What soil you got here.

A little light near town, but heavier as you go out.

How far?

12 to 25 miles, and out there there is a large German settlement.

They farming?

Yes.

How they do?

Pretty well, most of them.

Vel, ven I come back I vil see them.

That's right, and then you can judge for yourself. You know good land when you see it, and that will be the best way.

I vill sure to do that. Vinter veet! Vinter veet!

Do you know what that is?

Yes, that is alfalfa. Do you grow that here?

Yes, that was grown near town on Mr. Lait's farm. It was two feet high in July last from seed sown last spring.

Vel, vel, that is the best.

And here are some stalks of corn grown on Corbett and Fleming's farm five miles out of town.

Ah, feed corn; that's all right. And that's good oats and good rye (picking them up and examining them.) Vel, I will come again, sure.

That's right, and go out and look over the country and find out all about it.

You bet I vill.

The heaviest land is a little way out.

Clay subsoil?

Yes, most of it.

Vat rain you got here?

Not so much as in Manitoba.

Vel, I live in Manitoba once; then I vent to Dakota, now I vanc to see this country. Vel, I thank you. I am very much obliged to you.

Not at all. Call here when you come again.

I vil; good-day.

Good-day.

HAVE FUN AT HOME.

Don't be afraid of a little fun at home. Don't shut your house lest the sun should fade your carpets, and your hearts, lest a hearty laugh shake down some of the musty old cobwebs there! If you want to ruin your sons, let them think of all the mirth and social enjoyment must be left on the threshold without when they come home at night. When once a house is regarded only as a place to eat, drink and sleep in, the work is begun that ends in gambling houses and reckless degradation. Young people must have relaxation somewhere; if they do not find it at their own hearthstones it will be sought at other and less profitable places. Therefore, let the fire burn brightly at night and make the homestead delightful with all those little arts that parents so perfectly understand. Don't repress the buoyant spirits of your children; half an hour's merriment round the lamp and fireside of home blots out of the remembrance of many a care and annoyance during the day; and the best safe-guard they can take with them into the world is the influence of a bright little domestic sanctum.—Chicago Journal.

The Happiness of Home.

Very largely depends on the mother's disposition; if she is bright and animated, everyone is happy; but if she is nervous irritable and cross everything goes wrong. Bright, cheery women usually use Ferrozone, the greatest health-maker known. By acting through the blood Ferrozone is able to reach all the organs that need assistance; it establishes regular and healthy action of all functions, builds up the general health fortifies the system with a reserve of energy that defies disease. Don't put it off—Ferrozone costs only 50c. at any drug store; get it to-day.

TOWN COUNCIL.

A regular meeting of the Council was held last night. Present: Mayor [illegible] and Sissons. Ill. N. Adsit, Town Clerk; Chief Markwick, Supt. W. E. Porter.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

A letter was read from the Town Solicitor (Mr. C. E. Mitchell), stating that until the town obtained powers by special legislation to loan money it would be impossible to introduce a bylaw for the proposed loan to the Woollen Mills.

On motion of Coun. Sissons that letter was held until a later stage.

The City of Moose Jaw sent an invitation for the Council to attend a banquet to be held on the 21st, to celebrate the completion of the water works, sewerage and electric light.

It was resolved to reply and express the thanks of the Council.

A letter was read from Mr. L. B. Cochran, Immigration Agent, in reply to the Council's letter re the Symister family stating that the Dominion Government through their agents, look after Immigrants for the first 12 months. He had assisted the family during last winter, but as they had been here more than a year his duty in that respect had ceased.

It was ordered to be filed.

Mr. Porter said he had given the man work.

The Town Clerk said when Symister came for his pay on Saturday he said he felt much better for the exercise.

A letter was read from G. A. Cochran, Sec'y Fire Brigade saying the brigade wished the Council to deal with the complaint about a false alarm of fire on the 9th Nov.

The Council referred the matter to the Fire and Light Committee for report.

A letter was read from Mr. A. Bruce, Barrister, Toronto, on behalf of Aemilius Jarvis & Co., asking certain formal and usual questions re debentures sold by the Council recently, and there was also one from Aemilius Jarvis.

They were ordered to be filed.

A letter was read from Mr. L. C. Charlesworth addressed to Coun. Drinnan, Chairman of the Public Works Committee, in reference to the bench marks and grading of streets saying he did not have time to complete them before leaving for Edmonton. He gave tables of approximate elevations and bench marks.

The tables were adopted and the letter filed.

New accounts were presented as follows:—

H. Bently	$ 5.00
The Stewart Nelson Co.	6 1.00
James Rae	21.50
H. J. Kert	12.00
Peard & Worthy	8.25

Referred to Finance Committee.

It was resolved to purchase a small stove to be used at the fire hall to expedite the drying of the fire hose after use at a fire.

Supt. Porter reported that the cost of laying gas into Mrs. Everson's cottage would be $12.

The report was adopted and the work ordered to be done.

Coun. Sissons reported re scales that the Committee considered the receipts too small to enable them to engage a regular man to look after it which would cost at least $30 a month, and as it was in full sight of Coun. DesBrisay's store they recommended he be asked to take charge of it for $10 a month.

Coun. DesBrisay said he would undertake it until the Council could make some other satisfactory arrangement.

The report was adopted.

The accounts presented at the last meeting were brought up by the Finance Committee and they were passed for payment.

The question of moving the dog pound was discussed but no one could suggest a suitable site.

Coun. Sissons—I think we had better leave it alone.

Coun. Deubler—The dogs will soon be all killed anyway.

Coun. Stewart—Couldn't we get one under ground somewhere by the river?

The Mayor—The dogs will soon be all underground.

The matter dropped.

A bylaw (No. 97) ordering the Municipal Election was introduced and read a first and second time. The Council then went into committee of the whole, with Coun. Sissons as Chairman, and the bylaw was amended and was afterwards read a third time and passed in Council. The date of election was fixed for Monday Dec. 11th. P. U. Hatchford was named as Returning Officer and T. H. Rhodes and F. S. Pingle as deputy Returning Officers. The polls will be at the Court House and Fire Hall as usual.

Coun. Sissons said he thought the town should go in for a City Charter instead of going to the legislature for further powers every now and then.

The Mayor said the solicitor was inquiring into the matter and the Board of Trade had appointed a committee for the same purpose.

Permission was granted for the C. M. R. to use the buildings on the new market site as an armoury and storehouse.

This was all the business.

CHANGE OF BUSINESS.

MR. HAWTHORNE SELLS TO MR. NOBLE.

Mr. A. C. Hawthorne has disposed of his business, Gent's Furnishings, to Mr. A. S. Noble. The sale was effected last Saturday through Mr. Elvin, of "The Locator," Winnipeg, and the transfer of the business will take place next Friday. Mr. Hawthorne informs The Times that his plans for the future are not formed but he has no intention of leaving Medicine Hat for some time. Mr. Hawthorne has been in business in Medicine Hat for almost nine years and his is almost the oldest store business in town. His business relations with the people have always been of the best and he has always taken an active interest in town affairs. He has served on the Town Council, and he filled the office of Mayor in 1903. He has always taken a great interest in the board of Trade and is a member of the Council of that body. In addition he is a popular and highly respected citizen and should he decide to leave it will be a matter for very general regret.

His successor, Mr. A. S. Noble comes to us from Lachine, in Quebec, and the fact of his having brought Mrs. Noble and their children with him shows that he had no doubt whatever of being able to find a suitable location in this Great and Last West. We are glad to welcome them to our town and we feel sure Mr. Noble will prove a splendid addition to the ranks of the business men of Medicine Hat.

Mr. Geo. Mackie has sold out to Mr. Thomas Oliver, of Winnipeg, who took over the business on Monday morning. Mr. Mackie found he could not properly attend to his ranching interests and run the butcher's shop so when Mr. Oliver came along and made a good offer for it the bargain was soon made. Mr. Oliver takes over a nice business and as he is an able and experienced man he will, doubtless get a large share of public patronage.

STRANGE AFFAIR.

NEBRASKA FARMER DIES UNDER STRANGE CIRCUMSTANCES.

The case of William Behnke, of Alliance, Nebraska, is engaging the attention of the R. N. W. M. Police here. He was brought in on the Crow train on Saturday morning in an unconscious condition and died at the hospital the same afternoon without regaining consciousness. An inquest was opened on Sunday before Dr. Smyth, Coroner and the following jurymen: G. R. Deardale (foreman), L. B. Cochran, T. J. Fleager, H. J. Kerr, Robt. Nelson and James Fleming.

Conductor Niblock and Roderick McLeod gave evidence from which it appeared the deceased was put on the train at Pincher Creek by two men who said he was going to McLeod. He appeared to be under the influence of drink. When asked for his ticket, he could give no answer and his ticket when found showed he was going to North Portal. As he was still unconscious on arrival at Medicine Hat, Conductor Niblock sent for Dr. Smyth and the man was taken to the hospital where he died as stated.

The inquest was adjourned until tonight. A post mortem was held on Monday, the result of which has not been made known.

Before purchasing elsewhere, inspect the stock of stoves at Stewart & Tweed.

Mr. Geo. Mackie has sold out to Mr. Thomas Oliver, of Winnipeg, who took over the business on Monday morning. Mr. Mackie found he could not properly attend to his ranching interests and run the butcher's shop so when Mr. Oliver came along and made a good offer for it the bargain was soon made. Mr. Oliver takes over a nice business and as he is an able and experienced man he will doubtless get a large share of public patronage.

STRANGE AFFAIR.

NEBRASKA FARMER DIES UNDER STRANGE CIRCUMSTANCES.

The case of William Behnke, of Alliance, Nebraska, is engaging the attention of the R. N. W. M. Police here. He was brought in on the Crow train on Saturday morning in an unconscious condition and died at the hospital the same afternoon without regaining consciousness. An inquest was opened on Sunday before Dr. Smyth, Coroner and the following jurymen: G. R. Dargavelle (foreman), L. B. Cochran, T. J. Pleager, H. J. Kerr, Robt. Nelson and James Fleming.

Conductor Niblock and Roderick McLeod gave evidence from which it appeared the deceased was put on the train at Pincher Creek by two men who said he was going to McLeod. He appeared to be under the influence of drink. When asked for his ticket, he could give no answer and his ticket when found showed he was going to North Portal. As he was still unconscious on arrival at Medicine Hat, Conductor Niblock sent for Dr. Smyth and the man was taken to the hospital where he died as stated.

The inquest was adjourned until tonight. A post mortem was held on Monday, the result of which has not been made known.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1905.

A Big Proposition.

The proposition laid before the Town Council by Mr. Hutchings, of Winnipeg, last Wednesday evening is one of larger magnitude and fraught with perhaps more importance than anything which has come up for the consideration of our local legislators for some months at least. It would seem, however, to be almost the same as was under consideration by other parties last spring, and it then came before the Council in a different form. The object is certainly the same, namely to establish a big tile and sewer pipe works in or near this town. When the former proposals were before the Council local men were endeavoring to bring it off and their request to the town was for free gas or failing that a guaranteed supply for a certain definite time. While the Council generally were favorably disposed to the application certain obstacles were raised and the matter was blocked so long that some of the interested parties drew out. What the people will do in the present instance remains to be seen, and it is too early to give a pronounced opinion other than this that the town should do everything in reason to encourage the starting of this undertaking. Such a work would mean much to Medicine Hat, just as the proposition last spring meant much to the town. The town is now asked to guarantee the bonds of the company, and the sum named is a large figure, $100,000. Before agreeing to it the people should consider but at the same time it should not be lightly turned down. It is a matter for grave consideration and one which the people will require to give their attention to at an early date. Probably a bylaw will be submitted before the end of the year by which time more details of the scheme will be available.

One thing should be borne in mind by the people and that is that the town is not dealing with unknown or untried men. Mr. Hutchings and his colleagues are men of experience, men with a high reputation in the commercial world and men who have successfully handled similar propositions. While, therefore, we advise due consideration for every point we feel that the people may approach this question with a feeling of confidence in the parties interested. From present appearances there seems no valid reason for refusing to guarantee the interest on bonds to a reasonable amount, and with the proper safeguards. We recommend our readers to read and study the reports of the meetings upon the subject, given on another page of this issue.

Beautify the Farm and Ranch.

Our farmers and ranchers have it in their power to do a great deal to beautify the country. By beautifying their own homes they will beautify the whole country. It matters little at present what size house a man has on his land. The time will soon come when he will be in a position to build a home of which he may feel proud, and a house can be erected and painted in the course of a few months, but trees which are necessary to give a homelike appearance to the place and take off the bareness of the country require years to grow. Every farmer and rancher should, therefore, make a study of this point at the start and get trees in and growing. He should have a garden and the garden will not be fully satisfactory without trees. In fact the first essential for fruit trees, shrubs and flowers is shelter. With well prepared ground, good shelter by western grown trees there should be no difficulty in growing fruit trees and having a nice garden and when, in a few years time, the farmer builds a new modern house it will stand within a belt of trees and the whole will be homelike and will beautify the landscape. Those who understand the subject tell us that preparations for planting next spring may still be made. Plough a strip of land twenty feet wide around a square of say 200 feet or 300 feet on the outside, or whatever will give good room for a house, disc it, drag harrow it and plough it deep a second time this fall Let it lie all winter and harrow once or twice in spring but don't plough it in spring. Get a fine clean surface on it and then in April or May plant cottonwoods, Maples and Spruce about eight feet apart. The spruce do best when planted at the end of May, and be sure to have a good ball of earth with these. If they are obtained at the Cypress Hills select dwarf trees about two feet high from the open ground. During the summer, and every summer for two or three years, cultivate the ground around them five or six times so as to keep a nice loose surface which like a blanket will conserve the moisture. The planting of trees should be one of the first things the farmer and rancher should do when he starts on his homestead, and of course he may if he likes plant plots at different parts of his land. By doing this he will in five or six years have ahome to be proud of and he will have done an important part in beautifying and developing this great western country for trees are sadly needed and when they grow around a man's home, are "a beauty and a joy" for the rest of his natural life.

Municipal Matters.

We feel sure most of our readers read with interest the letter which appeared in last week's Times signed "Business" dealing with Municipal matters and it was certainly refreshing to have a few new ideas introduced. "Business" is probably a little ahead of the times but his ideas are eminently practical and we hope to see Medicine Hat fully up to the writer's standard in the near future. His suggestions as to the Market question should commend themselves to our merchants and Councillors. Let every attention be paid our country customers. They are the backbone of the country. Whether farmers or ranchers they are the producers and they are doing a great and lasting work in the development of this great country. Let the town then offer them every facility to come here to do their business of buying and selling and let us foster that broader spirit which will induce us to hold out the hand of friendship to every one of them.

That portion of the letter which dealt with long distance and rural telephones is something which should be kept before the public and our Town Council and Board of Trade would do well to take this matter up and keep it alive until we see sometangible results.

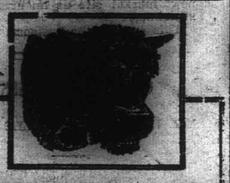
The question of Municipal ownership of the telephone in this town has been talked over in several quarters, and some months ago a prominent business man suggested that it would be a good subject for The Times to take up. We gave the matter a good deal of consideration but came to the conclusion to leave it alone. Medicine Hat has a great many big things ahead (and close ahead), and we do not see that the town is in a position to acquire its own telephone system. If we had no such system we would certainly advocate a Municipal system, but the Bell Telephone Co. are here, they are giving us a pretty good service and we think the town should devote its energies and finances to acquiring those things which we hav'nt got and greatly need and which will be of more direct advantage to the citizens in general.

The near approach of the Municipal Elections affords an opportunity for the publication of a slate or platform and we, therefore, submit the following as embracing most of the questions which should be taken up during the next year. Candidates for the Mayoralty and Council might well be asked how they stand on the following questions:

1. City Charter.
   Are you in favor of acquiring further powers for town development?
2. Sewerage.
   What portion of the sewerage scheme are you in favor of executing at the present time?
3. Water Filtration.
   Are you in favor of installing public filters?
4. Standpipe.
   Are you in favor of erecting a standpipe?
5. Permanent Sidewalks.
   In what portion of the town would you build granolithic sidewalks and if the whole is not so supplied how would you deal with the remainder.
6. Scavenging.
   Are you in favor of a system of scavenging to supplement the sewerage system?
7. Public Park.
   What is your idea of the best way of dealing with the ground purchased for a public park and athletic grounds?
8. Rural Telephones.
   Do you think a rural telephone system desirable and should the town undertake it.
9. Traffic Bridge.
   Are you in sympathy with the movement for a traffic bridge.

When Seven Men Die.

You know at least one of them had Consumption. At first it was only catarrh—but it was neglected. When "Catarrhozone" cures so quickly it's foolish to suffer—it's a shame to keep on sniffling and hawking. Catarrhozone goes direct to the cause of the disease—that's why it's so dead certain to cure. It stops the cough, prevents that disgusting discharge, clears phlegm out of the throat in five minutes. Very pleasant, and safe too; get Catarrhozone from your druggist to-day.



In Indiana we wasted our gas and it played out. We allowed people to burn flambeaux and it played out.—A. C. Miner, Travelling passenger agent, Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railway Co.

THE SEED GRAIN AND WEED SPECIAL.

One of the greatest educational campaigns ever undertaken in the West, is about to be inaugurated in the Seed Grain Specials, which are to run over both the Canadian Pacific and Canadian Northern Railways. All branches as well as main lines, of both roads will be included. In order to cover all the ground, the lectures will be delivered in the cars where the object lessons can be used most effectively. It will be necessary to hold three or four meetings every day, one meeting being in the forenoon, and the rest being in the afternoon. As evening meetings are not convenient, especially to those living at a distance from the station, none will be held. The speakers will be selected from the best available talent on the continent; this part of the work is directly under the charge of Messrs McKay and Bedford, Superintendents of the Indian Head and Brandon Experimental farms, respectively, and the fact that these men are taking hold of it, practically ensures the popularity and success of the campaign. We explained the matter fully last week and will keep our readers posted from time to time. It is expected that the C. P. R. train will start from Edmonton on its trip through Alberta early in January, and stop at all important grain centres in each province, finishing in Manitoba about the end of February. The full time table for both railroads will be published shortly, together with a list of the speakers and such information as will be of interest.

Note & Comment.

[By OBSERVER.]

The last rail, 25 feet 5 inches in length was laid, the last spike was driven in the Canadian Pacific Railway on the 7th November, 1885—just 20 years ago last Tuesday week.

Here is a word for the young ladies of Medicine Hat who are anxious to have nice, plump, white hands. And don't they all want nice hands (to give away some day.) Well, here is the recipe, and it is a good one. Soak them in dish water three times a day, while mother is resting.

You remember, no doubt, dear reader, how the Russian fleet fired upon and sunk some fishing trawlers in the North Sea? Well, here is how the North Sea fishermen repaid them, and truly it was the "heaping of coals of fire" on their heads. The following is from a newspaper clipping:

A daring rescue in the North Sea was effected a few days ago by a Grimsby trawler. During a heavy gale the fishermen sighted a sinking Russian schooner and went to her aid. The sea was so rough, however, that it was impossible to launch a boat. With fine courage the Grimsby skipper resolved upon a desperate expedient. Roaring instructions across the heaving waters, he drove his own vessel full speed at the schooner. His crew lined the bulwarks, ropes in hand, and as the two craft came together, the trawlers flung the lines to the Russian seamen, who grasping them firmly, were dragged from the schooner's deck into the boiling sea. They were heaved through the water and pulled aboard on the trawler's lee side, while the remaining three managed to scramble over the trawler's bows as she rammed the schooner. Learning that there was an injured man still on the ship, the Grimsby skipper stood by the wreck hoping that the weather would moderate sufficiently to allow him to launch a boat, but eventually the schooner threw up her stern and sank head first, carrying the crippled seaman to the bottom with her.

During this spell of splendid fall weather (which, by the way is by no means unusual in Medicine Hat), it is hard to turn our thoughts to ice, cold and winter sports, but winter will come, no doubt, as it usually does, about Christmas time, and everybody will be talking hocker and other sports on the ice. Now however, is the time to make arrangements.

Hockey was much in evidence last winter, and a league was formed in the town, five teams being organised. So far as I can learn, a similar league can be easily formed for the coming season, and it is time the boys got together to make arrangements. If they get to work right away, they will be able to get up their schedule, and will have time in which to interest the merchants in the season's play.

Medicine Hat people always respond well to any call to help sport along, and I doubt not the boys will find the people ready and willing to help and encourage their efforts for the coming season. So get to work boys, and everybody will lend a hand.

The Fire Brigade announce their annual ball for December 15th. Now if there is one institution more than another in Medicine Hat deserving of the general support of the people it is our fire brigade. Certainly no town ever possessed more willing or more able "fire-fighters" than we can boast of in the Hat. I don't want to make them to vain, but there is an old saying: "Honor where honor is due." Let all the people support the firemen's ball on the 15th December.

Insurance premiums is something I have not troubled much about, but it seems to me the premiums ought to be low in this town. But are they? Many people say no they are not. Well, they ought to be. With such an abundant water supply, all the force necessary to throw a good stream over the highest building, a fire bell, two powerful syrens and an efficient fire brigade, premiums should be cut in two.

WALLACE'S FARMER.

SAYS MEDICINE HAT IS FINE LOCATION FOR MANUFACTURERS.

A copy of Wallace's Farmer to hand contains the first part of an interesting account of the itinerary of the American Editors, who visited the Canadian West during August and September. The party, it will be remembered, were entertained at Medicine Hat, and taken for a drive over the country here on the 4th September. The account does not include the Medicine Hat visit, but it will come in a future issue.

(The above was in type but was crowded out last week.)

A copy of the same paper of Nov. 17th contained the following:

Turning toward home back over the main line of the Canadian Pacific an all night's run brought us to Medicine Hat, familiar to the people of the United States as the place "where the weather comes from." As a matter of fact, Medicind Hat has about the mildest winter climate in the whole northwest. It lies on the Saskatchewan river on a distinctively ranching country. It has a population of about 2,000 with hospital and other public buildings Its chief mark of distinction, however, is that it has natural gas in abundance and going to waste. The gas is owned by the Municipality, and in addition to the gas it has abundance of cheap coal. It is the aspiration of the town to become a great manufacturing city. It offers to manufacturers gas at five cents per 1,000 cubic feet, 2,600 feet of which are said to be equal in heating value to one ton of Pennsylvania anthracite coal. It would seem a fine location for milling industries and the manufacture of agricultural implements, lying centrally as it does between the agricultural regions to the east and west.

(We may point out that our population is fully double the figures given above. Ed.)

Messrs. J. J. Lait, H K. Oakes and Paul Borradaile made a successful hunting trip into the north country las week. They report good sport.

The Tonic of Health.

Must be more than a stimulant—must be a food as well. There is one medicine that is both a food and a tonic,—it aids digestion, promotes assimilation, converts food into nutriment that builds up nerves, blood brain and bone. That tonic is Ferrozone which contains exactly what a run down system needs. Ferrozone supplies oxygen to purify the blood, phosphorous to develop the brain iron to harden the muscles. No wonder it makes such vigorous men and women. You'll eat, sleep, think and feel better by using Ferrozone; try it now. Fifty cents buys a box of fifty chocolate coated tablets, at all dealers.

The Witch of Cragenstone

By ANITA CLAY MUNOZ,
Author of "In Love and Truth"

Copyright, 1903, by Anita Clay Munoz

AT the Sign of the Red Heart La Fabienne found a scene of unusual excitement and commomotion—soldiers just arrived and moving about jesting among themselves or calling roughly for bed and supper; the busy landlord cursing and giving angry, excited orders to a simpering housemaid, and horse boys, agape with admiration of the scarlet coats, glittering cuirassiers and helmets of the newcomers—for soldiery was an unusual sight in Cragenstone—were hurriedly piling hay in the corners of the large, low roofed kitchen for the men to sleep upon. Catching a glimpse of Sir Godfrey making his way through the throng to the foot of the narrow staircase, his host ran after him and, touching him on the shoulder, whispered anxiously, "My lord."

La Fabienne paused.

"I have been forced to put the young officer in charge of these men into thy room for the night," the innkeeper said. "He will not annoy thee, sir. We ha' spread a rough pallet in the farthest corner, an' thy man Gaston hath consented to lie in the stable for the night."

The excited man rubbed his hands together propitiatingly.

"Thou'rt ever generous, my lord, and readier with thy gold than most, so I would not offend thee, although there are some as say thy presence in my house doth bode me evil," he ventured to add.

Suppressing the inclination toward anger that he felt, La Fabienne said hastily.

"Say no more, good host. The man may lie in the corner for aught I care, and the worst I wish him is that he may rest easy on his pallet," he concluded indifferently as he walked away. "When thou canst get thy breath, send me a tankard of ale. I will drink in my room tonight."

The landlord, whose mind was greatly relieved, after profuse bows withdrew hastily, and Sir Godfrey, alone on the dark, crooked stairway, where there was no need of hiding the deep feeling that stirred him by forcing a calm exterior, paused, thinking deeply, great anxiety showing itself on his countenance.

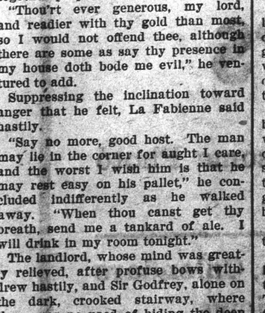
"'Tis well, good landlord, that thou didst give me the proper man, who happen hath a taste for home brew that taken in quantities enough may loosen his tongue," he said under his breath. "If my suspicions are correct, that these his breath, with a drunken laugh. "An the witch escapes any other way than up i' the air astride a broomstick I lose the king's favor."

"Thy business here concerneth a witch?" his companion questioned carelessly.

The captain was hiccoughing slightly, and he reeled and almost fell as he tugged at his boot.

"Beshrew me, yes. Such devil's work and devil's luck as hath been mine this day doth keep me cursing. Two long weeks we have been buried in Sterndorf, an' just as we were expecting instructions to go back to London we were ordered here to capture some old beldam who hath been doing serious pranks and stirring up devils in the community."

"An old woman!" La Fabienne looked up eagerly. "Hast thou her name, man?"



The captain fumbled among his papers and, drawing forth a sheet of parchment, spelled out with difficulty the name—"Margaret Mayland, accused by Josiah Taunston and Adam Browdie," he read slowly.

"And so thou takest the witch at daybreak?" La Fabienne observed lightly. "What reason for such haste, good fellow?"

"I know not the reason of such haste, good sir. Diable! A soldier asks not reasons, but obeys orders."

La Fabienne yawned.

"Thy tale, forsooth, hath a touch of interest in it, friend, with a promise of excitement for the morrow," he said. "Hast not a similar document, captain? Of what portent is that?"

His companion took the tankard.

"This other paper?" The man lowered his voice. "Prithee, 'tis a warrant for the arrest and custody of some Frenchman she hath bewitched, or is an accomplice to the old hag in her bedevilment, I wot not which. My information is but vague."

He stretched out his arms and rubbed his eyes sleepily.

"Methinks he doth live with her at the house. Our orders, however, are to take the woman first."

The soldier, having loosed his tongue by his many and frequent potations, continued with an air of mysterious secrecy. "I' truth, if they attempt to escape they will find that all the roads leading from the village are guarded."

"Ha! Is't so?"

La Fabienne's manner betrayed such ill concealed astonishment and agitation that had his companion's senses not been dulled the fact would not have escaped his notice.

"Aye, comrade, by Puritans heavily armed and with orders to take them dead or alive. So, I ween, the poor devils' case hath not much of hope in it."

By the uncertain light of the candle La Fabienne's face looked extremely white. Rising suddenly, he untied the lace bow at his throat.

"Come, let's to bed, good captain. I must rise with thee at the dawn!" he cried boisterously. "Methinks 'twere rare sport to see a witch taken. What punishment is meted out to such?"

"'Sdeath, hanging or burning," the other replied carelessly.

"Of a surety the king will interfere." La Fabienne's hand trembled as he unbuckled his sword.

"Nay!" the officer cried hastily. "Thou'rt wrong there, friend! The king bothers not his head with such small kind as dwell hereabout. Why, his majesty's as variable as a woman, going from one side to the other as often as the wind changeth. Just now he's all for the papists, an' if there is a thing he is more against than another it is witchcraft. Uds blood! At the last burning at Sterndorf the woman's brother appealed to him, and the king sent word back that they could all burn each other up an they so willed for aught he would interfere, and 'twould be a good riddance when 'twas over. He's changeable, but as a rule thou canst count on his not interfering at a witch burning."

"God's pity!" exclaimed La Fabienne under his breath. Then he continued hastily, seeing the man had grown more communicative. "The witch, methinks myself, 'twere well to capture, but the Frenchman of whom thou spokest, what want they of him?"

"It seemeth he hath great influence both at home and abroad," the captain whispered, looking furtively at the closed door. "If they can hold him safely in prison until the woman is tried and executed they will let him go, or mayhap prefer charges against him and bring him to trial also."

He threw himself down wearily on the pallet of straw in the corner.

"Poor devil!" observed La Fabienne lightly. "But 'tis ever the way of those that consort with evil. Marry! The wretch is fairly caught in the trap these God fearing Puritans have set for him."

His companion grunted a sleepy response.

"If 'tis as thou hath stated, that all the roads are stoutly defended but the footpath through the mountain forest"—La Fabienne eyed the man narrowly—"the witch's accomplice, happen he got wind of his intended arrest, hath small hope of escape."

The captain laughed a drunken laugh men have been sent here to get evidence against Margaret upon Josiah Taunston's representations and then to take her into custody, by my faith, tomorrow at sunrise is not one hour too early for us to ride away. Fool, fool that I have been to treat the deep laid schemes of that villian with such contempt! Diable! Almost—almost, I say, the net he threw did catch us in its meshes!"

A few steps brought him to his room, and, throwing open the door, he saw by the flickering light of the candle a man of about twenty-five years of age, a dandified looking fellow, with weak blue eyes and light hair, strutting proudly up and down the room in the riding suit that Sir Godfrey had thrown off before his visit to Margaret. The officer, being a man of lower stature than La Fabienne, the long leather boots reached fairly to his hips, and his sword, that he had just adjusted, clanked against them as he walked. At the sudden appearance of their owner he fell back against the wall, with pale face, hanging jaw and a look of great abashment on his countenance.

La Fabienne entered with easy familiarity, giving the discomfited captain, who at once began to tug at his boots in a desperate endeavor to get them off, a word of friendly greeting.

"Pardon, my lord. I long have wanted such a suit," the fellow explained in great confusion, "an' I but took the opportunity, without meaning offense, of seeing how the fashion would become me."

La Fabienne regarded him with an appearance of the utmost satisfaction and good humor.

"And so well it suits thee, good fellow, and becomes thy dashing style," he said, "that methinks 'twere a pity to deprive thee of it. Thou may keep it and welcome."

Walking to the small window, he threw open the lattice.

"By the mass, but it's warm in here! Such holes as they have cut out to let the air in one can hardly get his hand through!"

The soldier, who had accepted the suit with many expressions of pleasure and gratitude, now approached La Fabienne, but at that moment, a housemaid entering with the ale, he turned about suddenly, drew himself up to his highest stature and strutted before her conceitedly.

Smiling at his airs, his companion took the tankard, bade the girl bring up another, and, inviting his new acquaintance to drink with him, they sat down on the bench together.

"Art fond of ladies, good sir?" the captain inquired, with a roguish shake of his blond head. "I warrant that wench was not ill looking, barring the wart on her chin."

It being his turn, he lifted the tankard and after taking a long draft held it on high, exclaiming with dramatic emphasis, "Whate'er of faults John Bingall hath, a slow eye for a fair lass can ne'er be counted amongst them."

The housemaid returning with the second order, he waved his hand toward La Fabienne with a graceful motion and, still holding the ale above his head, cried gayly:

"Women, lovely women! Let us drink to the ladies, Sir Roommate."

Sir Godfrey echoed his companion's boisterous laughter with an appearance of great enjoyment as the maid blushing and simpering, left the room

By now the house below had fallen into complete quietness, the only sounds audible being the loud breathing of the soldiers, who lay about on the straw asleep.

"Thy men rest heavily and breathe as if greatly fatigued," La Fabienne observed after further conversation of a light nature regarding the captain's pet theme—women. "Didst march far today?"

"From Sterndorf," he answered, with darkening face.

"Beshrew my heart! But this country must ha' been intended for wild beasts with claws instead of human beings with only hands and pollards Our orders came to march at once across the footpath over the mountain, and such crawling, climbing, tearing and cutting our way none will ever know."

"'Twas well when so weary that thou found the Sign of the Red Heart to rest at ere thou pursued the rest of thy journey," his companion observed quietly.

The captain glanced up quickly.

"Oh, we have reached our destination," he said. "We have business in this village on the morrow."

"I' faith, a stranger just arrived, as I am, hath had little chance to hear of the happenings round about," La Fabienne observed carelessly. "But this sober peopled village looketh not like a warring center. Here, good fellow, finish thine ale," he cried as the officer, opening his mouth to speak, was about to ask him a question, "so that I can offer thee some red wine that I have in yonder flagon on the table. So thou'rt not on thy way to join comrades?"

The captain finished his ale as directed, and the empty pewter tankard came down on the bench with a ringing sound.

"My business in the village," he said, lowering his voice and looking toward the door apprehensively, "hath a deal of secrecy about it, as my first and most important instructions were to hold converse with no one but the members of the council."

Sir Godfrey rose and, bringing the jug of wine, commenced to ply the man with liquor, laughing and jesting merrily as he did so.

At last the captain, who was very weary from his long day's march and whose face was red from excess of drinking, cried that he had had enough and must keep his senses, as he and his men were under orders to rise at daybreak.

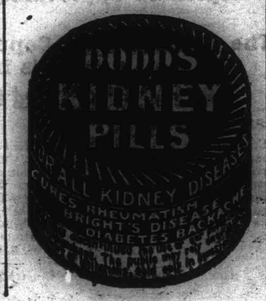
"Uds daggers!" he coutinued under of enjoyment! then, raising up in bed on his elbow, he said:

"My lord, 'tis truth thou speakest. The man is fairly caught. But if the wretch had knowledge of the hardships my men and I have endured today he would prefer the hanging that the people have in store for him to attempting escape through the forest. By blood 'n' nails, it was an awful ordeal, an' but for the fact that it was as difficult to retrace our steps as to proceed, my fellows would have refused to advance. A curse on this scraggy top notch of nowhere!" he cried. "Tomorrow, our work done, we march down yon mountain road to London, or I'm but half a man and know not mine own will!"

As his companion did not reply or seem inclined to hold further converse, the captain stretched himself out on the pallet at full length and, throwing an arm up over his head, was soon sleeping soundly.

La Fabienne waited, making sure that the prostrate man was unconscious of all else but his dreams, then threw himself hopelessly into a chair and let the pent up feelings in his heart break through the quiet mask he had worn on his face, and an expression baffled and desperate took its place, while under his breath he cursed himself roundly for his stupid lack of foresight and his contempt for Josiah Taunston's plotting. Springing to his feet, he paced lightly up and down the room like one bereft. Once he paused at the aperture and looked long in the direction of the Mayland farm, the tops of the tall trees in the forest being all that was visible, then strode fiercely across the room again as if unable to contain his emotions. Unlocking a chest that stood in the corner, he removed from it to his person a bag of gold and a brace of pistols, put on his hat and cape and noiselessly buckled on his sword.

"If I allowed her to attempt the forest she would die," he said under his breath, "and if I told her of my intention she would not let me go alone. Oh, God, 'tis hard!" He shook his head hopelessly.



The candle, now burned down to the edge of the socket, threw weird, smoky rays on La Fabienne's white face as he seated himself, in great perplexity and sore distress, upon the wooden bench.

"Margaret, oh, my love! God help me! There is no other way," he said after a few moments' consideration, and as his bent head fell forward on his hands the candle near him sputtered and went out as if in very sympathy for his sorrow and despair. Rising, he groped his way to the door, down the stairway and out of the house so silently that no one, not even the innkeeper, sleeping in his chair by the chimney place, heard him or knew that he had gone.

CHAPTER XXII.

THE next morning at the earliest hour of dawn, before even the birds had wakened, when the only light on the earth was that received from the rising sun's reflection on the sky, Margaret Mayland, dressed in her riding habit of crimson

HUMOR

AN EASY VICTIM.

How a Photographer Lost His Gold Watch and Chain Attached.

A man went into a photographer's gallery the other day. Men have done this before and survived, even though taken from life. This man was on the usual errand, a fact that he carefully imparted to the artist.

"Make the best presentment you can of me, gentle sir," he said in a courteous way, "and, while I need but one, a dozen will not come amiss. Let them be your premier cabinets, for I would not curtail the expense."

The photographer rubbed his hands together in a purring way.

"I will try to satisfy you, sir," he said. "Pray be seated."

The subject smiled as the artist posed him.

"I will admit," he said, "that I desire to look my very best. A heart's happiness as well as the disposal of a goodly sum of ducats may rest upon the impression this portrait makes."

"I fully comprehend," said the artist. The sitter glanced down at his vest.

"Seems rather dull and tame to me," he said. "Ought to be brightened up a little. Here, suppose you let me wear that watch and chain of yours just as a catchy outward decoration."

So the smiling photographer passed him the gold watch with its heavy chain, and the sitter donned them with perceptible pleasure.

"That'll go fine with the rest of the makeup," he said. And a moment or two later, after the photographer had stepped out to get a dry plate or something, he returned to find that the watch and chain had gone with the rest of the makeup to parts unknown. —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Puzzled.

"That man is a puzzle to me," said the physician thoughtfully. "I haven't the faintest idea what he is worth."

"What difference does that make?"

"Why, I don't know how much to charge him for my services. If he is inside of $100,000 I want to make a reasonable charge as a practicing physician, but if he is worth more than that the proper thing to do is to call myself a specialist and make the price to suit."—New York World.

Wage Earning Women.

"No other portion of the wage earning class," says Florence Kelley, "increases so rapidly from decade to decade as the young girls from fourteen to twenty years. Men increase, women increase, youth increases, boys increase in the ranks of the breadwinners, but no contingent so doubles from census period to census period (both by per cent and by count of heads) as does the contingent of girls between twelve and twenty years of age. They are in commerce, in offices, in manufactures."

A PRIMITIVE SPOT.

Virginia's Peculiar and Isolated Island of Tangier.

In Chesapeake bay, 125 miles south of Baltimore, with which city communication by boat three times a week may be depended upon during the summer season, is the strange island of Tangier, so completely isolated from the usual lines of travel that it hardly seems possible that it can be a part of the state of Virginia. * * * Imagine, if you can, an island about five miles long and three-fourths of a mile in width, with a population of nearly 1,500, where each house is connected with Chesapeake bay by a tiny canal; an island where the population has built homes along one narrow street but nine feet in width, without sidewalks, roadbed or gutter; an island where the women go about with bare feet and calico gowns during the week and where the men leave for their work at an early hour on Monday morning and remain away until Saturday afternoon; an island where intoxicating liquors are not sold, where billiard rooms and pool rooms are unknown; an island where one physician and the minister constitute the professional class; an island where profanity is punished by fine; an island without a jail or lockup and where religion is the rule and to be outside of the church is to be outside of the pale of the best society; an island where public cemeteries are unknown and where the dead of each home are buried in the front yard. If you can imagine all this, you may have some faint idea of the peculiar surroundings of the inhabitants of Tangier.

They Cleanse the System Thoroughly.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills clear the stomach and bowels of bilious matter, cause the excretory vessels to throw off impurities from the blood into the bowels and expel the deleterious mass from the body. They do this without pain or inconvenience to the patient, who speedily realizes their good offices as soon as they begin to take effect. They have strong recommendations from all kinds of people.

The Term "Greenhorn."

The term "greenhorn" originated in this way: The pioneers of the west were much given to hunting deer. It was a fact known to early settlers that when the horn of a fawn began to grow there was a ring of green hair around the spot. It was considered a disgraceful thing for a hunter to kill a fawn, a cruel act, and the killing time was regulated by the growth of the horn. There was a sort of unwritten law that no one should kill a male fawn before its horn could be seen. A person who was so unthoughtful as to kill a deer under the proper age was called a "greenhorn." He was so named because the young horn of the deer and the hair around it were still green. The use of the appellation gradually spread until it was applied to all raw or inexperienced youths or persons easily imposed upon.

MUSICIANS FROM THE SLUMS

The Youngest Bandsmen In New York's Memorial Day Parade.

A brass band recruited from among street waifs and using instruments belonging to the set that took the first prize at the Centennial exposition in 1876 was one of the most striking features of the Memorial day procession in New York. The band is a product of the New York Juvenile asylum, and it serves as a popular illustration of the manner in which that well known institution trains these "dear, pathetic nobodies," as Oliver Wendell Holmes once described them, to become useful citizens.

The asylum, of course, encourages the boys to follow their bent, and naturally those who have any musical aptitude are quick to seize the opportunity that is denied to so many boys in the outside world who are commonly supposed to be more fortunately situated. This organization of promising musicians came to New York on May 30 from Dobbs Ferry, where the asylum's new home is located on a 300 acre farm. There the once homeless or neglected boys receive not only the ordinary public school education, but a thorough training in the different trades. They have plenty of time for play, too, and, thanks to Evert Jansen Wendell and other well known philanthropists, they are fully supplied with paraphernalia for their games.

The same band that attracted so much favorable attention in New York also serves to brighten the life at Dobbs Ferry. In fact, there is no suggestion of unnecessary restraint at that delightful home—not even a fence around the spacious grounds. In the fifty years of its existence the asylum has led many a boy toward the goal of success, and who knows but that in the band clad in cadet gray there is in the bud some great leader or composer, and it is also within the bounds of likelihood that from the pleasant workshops at Dobbs Ferry may come some day another Bell or another Edison, for the start in life which the boys obtain there fits them for many callings and opens many avenues to future usefulness.

Extinguishing Burning Gas Well.

The careless striking of a match at a big gas well on the Johnstone lease near Bartlesville ignited the gas, which burned a week before it could be extinguished.

Four large boilers were grouped around the fiercely blazing torch, which deafened all noises by the reverberations of the escaping gas. One kept a stream of water playing on the ground where the casing entered the earth, and from the others three inch streams were directed at the top of the tubing with the end in view of breaking the flow, thus killing the blaze above.

This method failed, but another attempt with one end of the pipes turned directly up with the flow of gas succeeded, and the blaze was smothered. However, the victory was short lived, for within thirty minutes the gas had caught again from the overheated tubing and ground and was burning fiercely.

Then a dam was constructed about the well so as to hold water, and a heavy stream was turned into it. The steam again extinguished the flames, and this time the accumulated water kept them down.—Bartlesville Examiner.

A Pearl Diver's Outfit.

That £160,000 which has resulted from the Ceylon pearl fishing season just closed constitutes a record of which those engaged in the enterprise may well be proud. The money is, for the most part, profit; wages and cost of plant are inconsiderable. A little while ago a man on his travels round the world stopped for a day to see what was toward at the fishing ground, and the friend who entertained him suggested that as a memento of his visit he should take home with him a complete outfit of the typical pearl diver. "Good gracious, how could I tug such a weight about with me?" he said. "Why, that will not be prohibitive," said his companion. "Here is the whole bag of tricks," and he tossed a handful across the table. It consisted merely of a clip for the nostrils and "cots" for the tips of the thumbs and fingers. That is the pearl diver's whole armament.—St. James' Gazette.

Useless Studies.

Professor Oliver Lodge, an English educator, complains that the examples given in many school arithmetics are of no practical value. "Many sums in compound multiplication and division," he says, "are of this character—acres, roods and poles; drams, pennyweights and scruples. Such sums are surely unknown in any actual business. They may be called concrete examples, but many of them are artificial, stupid and depressing. A machine could be contrived to do them, but it would be useless. When things like them are wanted, as they may be, in some simpler form, by a housekeeper or shopkeeper perhaps, they are in practice done by tables. This sort of stuff is neither arithmetic nor mathematics nor common sense. It is an opportunity for wasting the precious learning time of a child and disgusting him with study."

BABY MANAGEMENT.

The Absolute Necessity For Regularity In Feeding.

Punctuality in feeding your baby is of all things the most essential, and habits of regularity in all of his functions cannot be begun too soon. Once let him get into bad habits of any kind, such as walking the floor with him, "hushing" him to sleep or feeding him at irregular intervals, and your peace in life is destroyed. The inexperienced mother and nurse are prone to fall into these errors, and bitterly do they have to pay the consequences imposed by the tiny tyrant. But the mother of four children has learned wisdom in baby management, and she knows that punctuality in feeding is not only as important as discipline, but requisite as a rule of health. It must be begun the first day or two after birth, and the two hours' interval rigidly observed during the daytime.

A healthy baby will sleep seven or eight hours at night without awakening, and you should not arouse him for feeding, but let him continue his baby dreams, because he will not sleep too much. As his growing continues and he begins to take more nourishment for his meals the intervals between the feedings must be increased.

As good as a clock in the house is a vigorous infant who has been taught regular habits from birth. He will take a nap after each bottle or nursing and wake up precisely at the end of two hours. If his bottle is not ready and waiting (and of course it should be) there will be protesting cries, and so it goes on.

THE TIMES

MEDICINE HAT, N. W. T.

Disraeli and His Father.

Lord Dufferin used to tell the following story about his mother and Disraeli:

My mother was among the first of Disraeli's acquaintances to recognize his great ability, and she saw a great deal of him when at Mrs. Norton's, when he was a young man about town. She did not see very much of him after he had once entered upon his political career. Here, however, is a little anecdote which is very characteristic and amusing. My mother had a great admiration for the "Curiosities of Literature" and was anxious to make the acquaintance of Disraeli's father, but there was a difficulty about this, as at the moment he was not on good terms with his father.

However, he appeared one day with his father in tow. As soon as they were both seated Disraeli turned around and, looking at his father as if he were a piece of ornamental china, said to my mother: "Madam, I have brought you my father. I have become reconciled to my father on two conditions. The first was that he should come to see you and the second that he should pay my debts."

Boxing Sardines.

When sardines in tens of thousands reach the factory they are cleaned by long rows of women with short knives and go for two hours into the salt vats. They next have a bath of sea water in coarse baskets under a pump and are put to dry in the open on wire racks till they begin to shrivel, when they are taken to the tanks of boiling oil. Into one of these each rack is plunged for a moment or two and then set aside to drip, after which the fish are selected and laid carefully in tin boxes, which are filled up with oil. The box now passes to the hands of the solderer to be sealed, and when this is completed a hole is punched in the lid to let out any imprisoned air and closed at once with solder. As a final stage the tins are placed in a huge iron crate and lowered into tanks of boiling water, when they will explode if any air is still shut in. Those that stand this test are packed in wooden cases for exportation.

Papyrus Books.

Early writers made use of linen or cotton fabrics, of skins and even of scales of fishes for writing. For a long period papyrus was used, the books being made in rolls, being about one and one-half feet wide and sometimes fifty feet long. Papyrus was a flag or bulrush, growing eight or ten feet high, found in the marshes of Egypt; from its inner pith the form of paper called papyrus was made. Papyrus sheets were neatly joined, attached to a stick and rolled upon it (whence we have our word "volume," from the Latin volvere, to roll). The titles were written on tags attached to the sticks or inscribed on the outside of the rolls. The rolls were kept in round wooden boxes resembling the old fashioned bandboxes and could easily be carried about.

Shoe Superstitions.

The Chinese value a pair of boots which have been worn by an upright magistrate, and the custom of wishing a friend a "happy foot" is still observed all through Europe. The putting of the left shoe on the right foot, putting it on uneven or crosswise, bursting the latch or tie, lacing it wrong or losing a button, are all bad signs. A Yorkshire man will spit in his right shoe before putting it on when going out on important business to bring luck, and many an English girl has been known to hang her boots out of the window on St. Valentine's night for love luck.

Atmosphere That Intoxicates.

Visitors to the great wine cellars of Spain, says the Journal of Inebriety, sometimes suffer from symptoms of alcoholic intoxication. In some of these places, it is said, as much as half an ounce of absolute alcohol is found in five or six cubic feet of air. In London and on the continent barkeepers who work in badly ventilated saloons are practically drunkards without swallowing any liquor. Prussian and French authorities force all establishments where spirits are sold to thoroughly ventilate the premises twice a day.

An Unfair Fling.

Mrs. Wickwire—If woman were given the credit she deserves, I don't think man would be quite so prominent in the world's history. Mr. Wickwire—I expect you are right. If she could get all the credit she wanted, he'd be in the poorhouse.

A Funny Will.

Comforting Friend—Has your husband made his will? Prospective Widow—Yes, the wretch. He's left everything to the doctor if he cures 'im, an' not a blessed farthin' to his widder an' orphans.

Painless Sometimes.

Sufferer—Do you extract teeth without pain? Dentist—Not always. I sprained my wrist on one a couple of days ago and it hurts yet.

The Camellia.

The flowering evergreen, camellia, was brought from Japan by a Spanish Jesuit named Kamel, hence the name.

Stockholm's Death Rate.

Stockholm has the largest death rate from the use of alcohol of any city in the world. The number of deaths from this cause is 90 to 1,000.

A WOMAN'S HEALTH

Depends Upon the Richness and Regularity of Her Blood

A woman needs a blood medicine regularly just because she is a woman. From maturity to middle life the health and happiness of every woman depends upon her blood, its richness and its regularity. If her blood is poor and watery, she is weak and languid, pale and nervous. If her blood is irregular she suffers untold torture from headaches, backaches and sideaches, and other unspeakable distress which only women know. Some women have grown to expect this suffering at regular intervals, and bear it in hopeless silence. But they would escape the greater part of it if they took a box or two of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills each time to help them over the critical period. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood. They help a woman just when nature makes the greatest demand upon her blood supply. They have done this for thousands of women throughout Canada—why shouldn't they do that much for you? Mrs. James Candy, 25 Edith avenue, Toronto, says: "I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a medicine that should be taken regularly by every woman in the land. I suffered greatly from those ailments that only a woman knows. I had backaches and headaches, and a weary bearing down pain. I was very irregular, and was often forced to go to bed for two or three days at a time. I tried many medicines, but got nothing to help me until I began Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and they have given me new health and relief from pain, and made me regular. I cannot say how thankful I am for what the medicine has done for me, and I would urge all women who suffer as I did to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the greatest cure in all the wide world for all the weakness and backaches of anaemia, all the heaviness and distress of indigestion, all the sharp stabbing pains of neuralgia, rheumatism, lumbago and sciatica, and all the other ills that come from poor, weak, watery blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new blood with every dose, and thus strikes right at the root of nearly every disease that afflicts humanity. But remember that the "just as good medicines" that some druggists offer never cured anyone or anything. Insist upon the genuine pills with the full name Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People on the wrapper around every box. If in doubt send to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and the pills will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50.

Small Coins.

The natives of the Malay peninsula have in use the very smallest current coin in the world. It is a sort of wafer made from the resinous juice of a tree and is worth about one ten-thousandth of a penny. The smallest metal coin in circulation at the present day is the Portuguese three reis piece, worth twelve one-hundredths of a penny. The smallest coin circulating officially in any part of the British empire is the five millesima piece of Gibraltar, worth about half a farthing.

THE ROLE OF HAMLET

MANY FAMOUS ACTRESSES ESSAYED IT AND FAILED.

Even the Gifted Sarah Siddons and the Brilliant Charlotte Cushman Were Not Equal to the Task—Anna Dickinson In the Part.

Although many of the cleverest actresses the world has known have essayed the part, they have, with few exceptions, failed in it.

Even Sarah Siddons, probably the greatest tragic actress of all time, was a failure as Hamlet, largely owing to the nondescript nature of her garments, which were neither masculine nor feminine and which made it almost impossible to forget that her Hamlet was a woman and not a man, says London Tit-Bits.

Charlotte Cushman was perhaps the most brilliant player of male parts of her or, indeed, of any other generation. She was equally brilliant and convincing as Romeo, Cardinal Wolsey or Claude Melnotte, but when she made the crucial experiment of playing the melancholy Dane even she proved unequal to the task. In fact, her Hamlet was so badly received in Dublin that she there and then made up her mind never to play it again.

And yet her Romeo was such a triumph of acting that James Sheridan Knowles, the great dramatist and critic, was completely carried away by it. Of her acting of the passage where Romeo flings himself upon the ground, "taking the measure of an unmade grave," he says: "It was a scene of topmost passion, not simulated passion; no such thing—real, palpably real. The genuine heart storm was on in its wildest fullness of fury, and I listened and gazed and held my breath, while my blood ran hot and cold. I am sure it must have been the case with every one in the house, but I was all absorbed in Romeo till a thunder of applause recalled me to myself."

And of her assumption of the difficult part of Claude Melnotte in "The Lady of Lyons" Justin McCarthy says: "I have seen Claude Melnotte played by many great actors, from Macready to Irving, but Miss Cushman eclipsed them all. She created for me the only human, the only possible and the only endurable Claude Melnotte I have ever seen."

Miss Julia Seaman, a once popular actress, was so severely criticised when she played Hamlet some years ago that she turned round on her critics and assailed them in a very vigorous manner. The late Miss Marriott, who had one of the most beautiful voices ever heard on any stage, was more fortunate, although it was one of her least successful assumptions, and in the fifties an American actress, Miss Percy Knowles, made such an unfortunate exhibition of herself as the melancholy one that a country manager actually issued a notice warning his patrons against going to see her.

Ellen Tree (Mrs. Charles Kean) was the first to put on Hamlet's doublet and hose; Mrs. Glover won Edmund Kean's approval by her playing of the part, and Mme. Sarah Bernhardt gave a picturesque and clever rendering of Hamlet, although it was not to be compared with many of her brilliant assumptions.

Charlotte Crampton was noted for her clever acting of masculine parts, which would have been even more convincing if she had not been such a tiny woman. "There is a woman," Macready once said, referring to her, "who would startle the world if she were but two inches taller." She was such a magnificent swordswoman that few men cared to try their skill against her on the stage, and she was undoubtedly a genius in her way, with a courage commensurate with her skill.

She was one of the finest personators of Richard III. ever seen on the stage, her Shylock was among the most brilliant pieces of acting in her day, and she was almost equally clever as Iago, Romeo and Don Caesar de Bazan, and yet when Charlotte Crampton challenged criticism with Hamlet she failed as signally as her rival, Charlotte Cushman, had done.

Probably the most successful of all lady Hamlets was Anna Dickinson, who made considerable reputation as Macbeth and Claude Melnotte. "A number of women have tried Hamlet," she said. "None, I believe, with any success. Yet, in my opinion, the character of Hamlet is eminently suited for a woman's capabilities. Hamlet was very young—a mere college boy, in fact. Besides, a fine actress is more likely to bring out the wonderful womanlike delicacy of Hamlet's character than a very young actor." And she supported her views by giving an attractive and clever rendering of the part.

The Prince and Princess of Wales started on their six months' tour of India to-day. King Edward, Queen Alexandra, the other members of the royal family and the Cabinet Ministers bade them farewell at the railroad station.

The Prince and Princess of Wales are going overland to Genoa, Italy, where they will embark on the British battleship Renown, which is due to arrive at Bombay Nov. 9th. They will stay in India until March, visiting the principal cities and native States and receiving the chiefs and Princes on behalf of King Edward. PRUDENT MOTHERS.

A prudent mother will never give her child a sleeping draught, soothing medicine or opiate of any kind except by order of a competent doctor who has seen the child. All soothing medicines and sleeping draughts contain deadly poison, an overdose will kill a child, and they never do good, as they only stupefy and do not cure. Sleeplessness in little ones usually come from teething troubles or derangements of the stomach or bowels, that can be speedily cured by Baby's Own Tablets. And the mother should remember that this is the only medicine for children that gives a solemn guarantee that there is not a particle of opiate or harmful drug in its composition. Mrs. A. Scott, Bradwardine, Man., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for diarrhoea, teething troubles and constipation, and find them just the thing to make little ones well and keep them well." Just the Thing That's Wanted.—A pill that acts upon the stomach and yet is so compounded that certain ingredients of it preserve their power to act upon the intestinal canals, so as to clear them of excreta the retention of which cannot but be hurtful, was long looked for by the medical profession. Don't put cost before cut. Corded silk won't cover a poor fit.

Table Linen.

Table linen, in order to bring out the bright gloss that makes it attractive, should be dampened considerably. Sprinkle the tablecloth well, being sure that the selvage ends or hemstitched borders are thoroughly damp. Roll up tightly. The napkins and doilies should be arranged alternately one upon the other, first a dry napkin, then one which has been wrung out of warm water, then a dry napkin and so on. Then roll tightly. All linen should be ironed very dry. The least bit of water starch in tablecloths will greatly improve them and they will not muss so easily.

Do Birds Sing?

A naturalist has written to prove that birds are not singers, but whistlers; that is to say, that the notes are produced through a tube—to be technical, through the slit known as the glottis—not by the help of vocal cords. But the whole distinction is beside the point. Any one who has seen a bird singing will have seen both the vibrations in his throat and the variations in the extent to which he opens and closes his beak or mandibles; and, given these accompaniments, together with the production of an inarticulate language, whistling and singing become identical terms suggesting a distinction. People are accustomed to the idea that only a few species of birds, such as the parrot and the jackdaw, can be taught, but in wild life almost all birds are mimics to some extent, and probably more of them than people realize could be taught to imitate human sounds.

Keep Your Grip on Health

When Physical Bankruptcy Threatens Build up with

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

Gloomy forebodings, fear of the future, apprehension of something dreadful to befall you, worry over little things, restlessness, insomnia, irritability—these are the indications of an exhausted nervous system.

They tell more plainly than words more plainly than pains and aches, that, gradually but certainly, the nerve force of the body is being consumed more rapidly than it is being created. They point to physical bankruptcy—to helplessness of mind and body—to prostration, paralysis or locomotor ataxia.

There are certain elements of nature which go to form new blood and new nerve cells—to create new nerve force, the foundation of life, energy and vitality. These elements are so combined in Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as to be easily assimalated by the most weakened human body.

Being composed of such ingedients Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cannot possibly fail to be of benefit to you, and its regular and persistent use will build up and revitalize the most exhausted and discouraged sufferer.

You cannot compare Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with any medicine you ever used, fr it cures by the building process, whereas most nerve treatments merely soothe and deaden the nerves. Test this treatment by noting your increase in weight.

Miss Lena Hiebert, Lowe Farm, Man., writes:—"I had suffered for two years with dizzy spells, pains in the back, cold hands and feet, nervousness, jerking of the limbs, sore tongue, soreness of arms and shoulders, and general exhaustion. About seven months ago I became so nervous that I could not rest or sleep, and could not do the least bit of work without suffering dreadfully from pains in the back. I could hardly walk, could eat very little, and felt that people were always watching my body twitch.

"I tried several medicines with little effect, and was a mere skeleton of skin and bone about to give up in despair when I heard about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and began using it. I have used in all fourteen boxes of this preparation, and it has built me up until I am now strong and well again. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done me a world of good, and I feel that I cannot recommend it too highly to persons who suffer as I have."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Portrait and signature of Dr. A.W.Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

BOARD OF TRADE.

FOR RAILROAD COMPETITION.

A special general meeting of the Board of Trade was held in Cousins' Hall on Friday evening. Present: O. W. Kealy (in the chair), C. R. Mitchell, H. E. Bennetts, C. S. Pingle, F. S. Pingle, R. J. Harlow, A. E. Whiffen, D. G. White, W. McF. Evans, T. Hutchinson, C. E. Smyth, A. DesBrisay, H. Stewart, F. G. Forster, D. Milne, M. Leonard and W. C. Harris (sec'y.).

The chairman explained the object of the meeting. The Municipal Election were approaching and as there were very important questions before the town the Board of Trade considered they, as representatives of very heavy interests, should meet and consider public affairs with a view to making suggestions for 1906.

Mr. Mitchell thought that the Board of Trade might fairly draw up a platform, but he did not think it advisable for the Board to nominate candidates.

The question of a city engineer was first discussed.

Mr. Milne was in favor of such an appointment and said he did not think it right that members of the Council should be expected to go out and superintend work. It was sufficient for them to legislate.

Mr. Hutchinson asked what was the definition of Engineer.

Coun. Smyth said his definition of an Engineer such as this town wants was one who would be a supervisor of works. Mr. Heddle of Hamilton, was a man of that description and that was his reason for preferring him to others, but as they knew he could not come. No member of the Council was properly qualified to initiate and carry out public works and if they did so and mistakes were made it was no use to complain. They did their best and that was all that could be expected of them. The kind of man they wanted here would more than save his salary on the public works every year.

Coun. Stewart said that was the feeling of the Council.

Mr. Hutchinson said he was opposed to getting an engineer as an engineer only, but was in favor of employing and engineer who would be a supervisor of works.

Mayor Forster said the Council wished to get a man who would take charge of all works and take his instructions from the Council.

Coun. Stewart said it was certainly the intention of the Council that the Engineer should be a supervisor of works.

Mr. Harlow believed in getting a first class engineer. He did not believe in getting a man here to do all classes of work. A good engineer would certainly make his money in this town in a year. Whether he would do all the other things as supervisor of works he could not say.

The question of a City Charter was next taken up.

Mr. Harlow pointed out that other towns had obtained a City Charter and had gone ahead better than Medicine Hat.

Mr. Milne was not very particular about the name but they wanted more powers. At present they had been going every now and then to the legislature for more powers. Soon they would have to go again in connection with the Woollen Mills. Then they wanted more powers in connection with the proposed frontage tax assessment for sewerage and sidewalks, so that they had better make one thing of it by getting a City Charter. Then there was the no-bonusing clause of the present charter. Six or eight men had put that in the charter a few years ago when the town was incorporated but the people of the present day should be free to say if they would bonus or not. The no-bonus clause sent the C. P. R. car shops from here to Calgary a few years ago.

Mr. Hutchinson asked what additional powers the town would possess under a city charter.

The Chairman said it would give them additional representation on the Council.

Coun. Smyth—And as a city the town would be divided into wards.

The Chairman thought that would be an advantage, as, at present, the six members might all be selected from one street.

Coun. Smyth spoke in favor of incorporation as a city and endorsed Mr. Milne's remarks. Referring to the Committee of the Great West Sewer Pipe and Tile Company then in town he mentioned what they had said as to the need for railway competition here and thought that under a City Charter they might have a better chance of getting the Great Northern or the Grand Trunk Pacific to come in here.

Mr. Milne said there was some correspondence with the G. T. P., which was held in abeyance at present for certain reasons.

The question of taking out the no-bonus clause of the present Municipal charter was discussed.

Mr. Mitchell thought such a radical change should not be made without taking a direct vote of the people upon it.

Mr. M. Leonard supported Mr. Mitchell's views upon this.

Coun. Smyth said that if the bonus clause were struck out the town would be in a position to deal at once with any industrial proposition that might come forward and it should be remembered that if they had no such clause the people would have to vote upon any proposal for a bonus and he thought they could trust to the intelligence of the people to deal with every one for the good of the town.

Mr. Milne was against bonusing but they should not lose sight of the fact that bonusing had sent other towns ahead. Bonusing had made Calgary what it is today.

The following resolutions were unanimously passed:—

1. That in the opinion of the Board of Trade the action of the Town Council in their decision to employ a town Engineer, who shall be supervisor of works, be endorsed.
2. That a committee be appointed from this Board to obtain copies of charters of newly incorporated cities in the west and consider the same and report to a special general meeting to be called for that purpose, said committee to consist of Messrs Harris, Milne and Forster.
3. That in the opinion of this Board of Trade the Council of 1906 should at once proceed to build permanent sidewalks on a frontage tax basis.
4. That in the opinion of this Board of Trade the Council of 1906 should take up the sewerage question at an early date.
5. That in the opinion of the Board of Trade the Council of 1906 should instal a system of filtration of the town water, combined with a standpipe.

The Rev. J. M. Harrison, pastor, in the course of his very practical address referred to the subject of natural gas and the Medicine Hat industries particularly the woollen mills which he believed was going to be a success. In Alberta did not require all the stuff they would send it all over the West. In speaking of the natural gas he said if he were one of the City Fathers he would see to it that all the old gas wells were kept tight. He would take care that the Medicine Hat natural gas was not wasted on the streets as it is at present. His father wrote him telling him natural gas has been discovered in his locality and they thought it would never play out. So they let it go pretty freely and it did play out.

HAROLD NELSON IN TRAGEDY.

Will appear soon in "Francesca da Rimini," the greatest tragedy of Italian history.

Probably no character in dramatic literature so thoroughly runs the gauntlet of human emotions as does Lanciotto the warrior hunchback who is the central figure of the powerful tragic drama "Francesca da Rimini."

This story, suggested by history to Dante, and elaborated by Boker, tells of the marriage of beautiful Francesca to the deformed Lanciotto and the secret love between her and her husband's handsome brother, Paolo. The hopeless passion of Francesca, the agonizing despair of Paolo and the awful retribution of Lanciotto gives scope for thrilling situations and tremendous climaxes. Mr. Nelson and his clever associates take every advantage of these opportunities, and a preformance of unusual strength and merit is anticipated when this clever company appear here on Thursday, November 30th.

Manager C. P. Walker has supplied a costume and scenic equipment that surpasses anything heretofore seen in Western Canada.

This will be Mr. Nelson's last appearance in Western Canada this season as his manager has arranged for an extensive tour through the Central States.

Miss Marion Cochran, who has been visiting her brother Mr. C. C. Cochran, at Victoria, returned having spent a very pleasant time at the B. C. capital.

A SUDDEN TWINGE

Of pain is generally the first warning of an attack of rheumatism. It feels as if the disease were in the bones or muscles, but the real cause of rheumatism is found in impure blood. In order to cure rheumatism the blood must be cleansed of the poisonous impurities which are the cause of the disease.

Dr. Pierre's Golden Medical Discovery has been very successful in the cure of rheumatism, because it entirely cleanses the blood from the poisonous uric acid which is the cause of the disease.

"Your Golden Medical Discovery cured me of rheumatism after I had tried a dozen remedies without relief and also gone West in search of health," writes Harry Kitter, of No. 865 6th Street, Denver Colo. "Only those who have suffered from this dread malady know the pain and misery I endured for over five years. Whenever the weather was damp or cold my troubles were increased and my joints would be so stiff and sore that I was hardly able to move about, and often unable to dress myself. I used a number of highly recommended medicines, but they had no effect whatever on me, and I came to Colorado hoping to regain my health, but failed to obtain the relief I had hoped for. A gentleman in the house where I lived advised me to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and in four months and a half after I began using it I was a well man, and have had no touch of it for the past seven months."

The sole motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make the little more profit paid by the sale of less meritorious medicines. He gains; you lose. Therefore accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets These tiny, sugar-coated anti-bilious granules regulate and invigorate Stoma Liver and Bowels. Do not be at the "pill habit," but cure constipation. One or two each day for a laxative and regulator, three or four for an active cathartic. Once tried always in favor. Put up in vials; always fresh and reliable.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Mr. Porter reported upon the work done in opening up the old gas well upon the Dalmal property and the sale of potatoes which had been grown on the parks as a preparation for tree planting next year. The potatoes had been sold by auction and fetched $40.12.

In reply to a question Mr. Porter said the digging cost $12.00.

On the motion of Coun. Smyth, seconded by Coun. Drinnan, the report was adopted.

THE FIRE APPLIANCES.

Coun. DesBrisay, chairman of the Fire and Light Committee, reported having made arrangements with Mr. D. Williamson to hold a team of horses in readiness night and day to draw the hose wagon to a fire for the sum of $30 a month. A team would be in readiness at all times with harness on. He also reported having got a new pole for the wagon as the one it had was not suitable. It was too long. The cost of the new one would be only $3 or $4 and it would be quicker to slip on the neck-yoke.

Coun. Drinnan—Can you get one for that money.

Coup. DesBrisay —That's what Dave said.

Coun. Penhale—I report for the water Committee that Mrs. Dunhams water has been completed at a cost of $67.

Coun. Stewart—I move that it be received.

Coun. Drinnan asked if Mrs. Dunham was to pay any part of it.

Coun. Penhale replied in the negative and said the Council limited the expenditure to $100 so it was done for less. Of course they had the pipes in hand.

THE HOSE WAGON AGAIN.

The Mayor, referring to Coun. DesBrisay's report asked what was meant by having the team in readiness. Was it like the single horse?

Coun. DesBrisay—They are to be always ready and a man to help.

The Mayor—They should have some hose on the old hose cart as well. I think they would get the old hose by hand to a fire anywhere in the centre of the town, quicker than the team could get the new wagon there.

In reply to Coun. Drinnan,

Coun. DesBrisay said the town paid $10 a month now for the single horse.

Coun. Penhale—That horse never gets out to a fire.

The Mayor—It will be the same with the others.

Coun. DesBrisay—Well, don't you want it.

The Mayor—We anticipated the fire hall would be completed by the time we had the fire wagon.

Coun. DesBrisay— This question was referred to the Fire and Light Committee. If there is any objection to it, why was it not raised then?

The Mayor—I am not objecting, but I want to see the small hose there too.

Coun. DesBrisay—That's all right, but I thought from the way you spoke you were opposing it.

The Mayor—No, but I think we want the hose reel.

On the motion of Messrs Stewart and Drinnan both reports were adopted.

THE "CELEBRATION."

Coun. Drinnan asked what action the Council would take as to the false alarm of fire on the night of the election.

Coun. DesBrisay said he had made inquiries and it was one of the fire brigade boys who rang the bell.

Coun. Drinnan said the people were indignant. The danger was this that if a fire had occurred before morning the brigade would not have turned out.

Coun. DesBrisay said he thought the brigade would deal with it.

Coun. Stewart—I suppose he did not ring it as a joke. He thought there was a fire.

Coun. Drinnan—Well leave it to the brigade.

This was agreed to.

Coun. Penhale this arrangement with Williamson to supersede the other arrangement of offering money to the first horse on the ground to draw the hose to a fire.

Coun. Stewart thought it should not and said no man could get a horse out of a stable and be at the fire hall so quickly as the man on the street with a horse could get there.

Coun. DesBrisay said that was so, but if we at night they wanted the hand[s] immediately because at that time[s] there might be no horses upon the street.

The Mayor—There is so much for day and so much for night.

The Council decided that the present arrangement should stand as to the first rig at a fire.

WILL SELL REGULATOR.

Coun. Drinnan said Mr. Yuill met him on the street and said he wanted to ask the Council to loan him a regulator. Mr. Yuill has one on the way but wants to put the gas on to the grist mill.

Mr. Porter, in reply to a question, said they had a small regulator they could spare. In fact it was too small for the town work and they ought to buy a larger one. It was on the system but it would not hurt to take it off. It was put on last winter on account of New Edinburgh having a small pipe, but it did not help much New Edinburgh was now getting the gas from the main right up.

Coun. Drinnan—What do you think Mr. Mayor?

The Mayor—I don't know I am sure. We seem to be using it.

Coun. Penhale—Will he buy it?

Mr. Porter—Yes, he said he would buy it.

Coun. Drinnan—He just spoke to me on the street and I said I would bring it up.

Coun. Penhale—If we find we need it he will return it at once.

Mr. Porter—It will pay the town to sell this one and buy a bigger one inreply to a question.

The Clerk said the regulators cost about $75 including the freight and duty.

The Mayor—What's the one we have just installed cost?

The Clerk—About $100. The bill is on the table.

Coun. Penhale—Do you think we had better sell it?

The Mayor—Yes I would not lend it if it can be sold.

Coun. Smyth—As the Superintendent thinks it is too small for our purpose I propose we sell it at actual cost.

Coun. Penhale—I second the motion.

Carried.

FINANCE.

The Finance Committee reported recommending payment of the bills presented at the previous meeting. The report was adopted and the bills ordered to be paid.

THE MARKET SITE.

The Mayor said the Council might now consider the question of making a part payment on the sum agreed upon for the Park and Market sites. The solicitor advised that they might do so now. The two months in which objections to the bylaw could be raised had passed.

It was agreed upon the motion of Couns. Stewart and Smyth that 50 per cent be paid on the Johnston property, and the Shields and Wellband properties.

ARREARS OF TAXES.

The Council considered the question of arrears of taxes, which amount to about $3,500, and it was ordered that notices be served on the delinquents.

THE WOOLLEN MILL.

The Mayor raised the question of submitting the bylaw with regard to the proposed loan to the Woollen Mill.

Coun. Stewart—Do they want some money?

The Mayor—No, but they want the matter put to the ratepayers. That was decided when the matter was before the Council.

Coun. Smyth—That was the decision at the time.

The Mayor—That was embodied in the motion I think. I think it would be well to refer to the solicitor to see how we stand.

Coun. Smyth—If everything is all right he can prepare a bylaw for next meeting.

The Mayor.—A motion to ask the Solicitor to give the Council an idea what is the position in the matter.

Coun. Smyth—I make that motion.

Coun. Stewart—I second.

Carried.

EIGHT BODIES FOUND.

Mr. Porter reported that in doing some excavations the remains of eight bodies were found. These were taken up, a lot of ground purchased in the cemetery and the remains were interred there. Notes had been made as to the position etc, of the remains and how disposed of and would be preserved.

THE SYMISTER FAMILY.

A conversation occurred in reference to the Symester family who were receiving assistance from the town and it was thought that as these people were English emigrants who came here last year they should be a charge upon the Dominion Government rather than on the town and it was resolved to write the Government, through Mr. Cochran to this effect.

The motion was made by Coun. Smyth, seconded by Coun. DesBrisay and carried.

Coun. Stewart moved that in the meantime Mr. Porter find work for the man so that he could earn some money.

Coun. DesBrisay seconded and it was agreed to.

Coun. Smyth said there was an application from Mrs. Everson, "Aunty," for free gas. She lived near the Woollen Mill.

Coun. Stewart said the town should do this for her for she had lived here for years.

Coun. Smyth—And she was born in this country.

Coun. Stewart—I propose Mr. Porter be instructed to find out how much it would cost and gas commissioners have power to put the gas into her house.

Carried.

The Council then rose.

PROPOSED TILE AND SEWER PIPE WORKS.

SPECIAL MEETING OF THE COUNCIL.

A special meeting of the Council was held on Wednesday afternoon. Present—Mayor Forster, Councillors Smyth, Stewart, Penhale and Sissons.

Mr. C. F. Hutchings, of Winnipeg, was also present.

The Mayor explained that he had called the meeting chiefly so that the members might meet Mr. Hutchings, who represented a number of Winnipeg capitalists who were inquiring into the clay deposits and other natural resources of Medicine Hat.

SPEECH BY MR. HUTCHINGS.

Mr. Hutchings addressed the meeting and said that he was one of a committee appointed to visit the City of Medicine Hat and report upon the locality as a location for a tile and sewer pipe manufactory. Mr. Stewart was to have been with him but had been detained in Winnipeg through a lawsuit but he might arrive that (Wednesday) evening. If not he (the speaker) would report to the syndicate interested. He had been around the country with the Mayor and had visited the red cliffs and other points and had asked the Mayor to invite the Council to meet and discuss the matter informally to see what inducements could be offered to get a large company in here. He went into the gas question pretty lully some time ago, and at that time he was afraid the gas might peter out, but it going into it again now he was fully satisfied the town had a very large and permanentsupply and a very large field. Well they had but also some very serious disadvantages to consider. One was they were not near any large labor market. Then there was the shipping. They were tied down to one road and manufacturers figure it up that where there is only one road they make fair living and the railway got the rest. If Medicine Hat had another road in here it would be better. If they had a better labor market it would be a great advantage. If they had a great producing country all round to consume the manufactured articles it would be an advantage. Everything they could produce here would have to be shipped out. These were serious disadvantages to manufacturers. He had been led to believe Medicine Hat would encourage manufacturers at the start. He would not say that they would do it continuously, but at the start and once they had a few manufactories here doing well others would be encouraged to come here. He believed Medicine Hat would be a

SOME GREAT ADVANTAGES

MANUFACTURING CITY IN TIME

but they had to break the ice. A man said to him recently that Winnipeg was a great city. Well, it was but it was not a city of industries. A manufactory did great good to a city. It had been estimated that in a city of 50,000 or 100,000, every dollar paid in wages would circulate ten times in that city and everyone who handled it had a chance of making 25 per cent. profit on it, so that every dollar was worth ten and a half dollars to the town. They might not be able to do this at Medicine Hat, as yet, but the great point to his mind in a place like MedicineHat was to get industries started, and to have them well started, well capitalised and well run. He was led to believe that Medicine Hat would encourage the first industries. There were difficulties with bonusing and other ways were often adopted. In this case if his company established works at the clay banks they would be outside the city so they could not give exemption from taxes, and they would not want a cheap water supply. But he was led to believe the city would guarantee the bonds of the company in case the company wished to raise money by bonds. He did not know if they had talked this over. He might say his company was pretty well on for organisation and was awaiting the report of the committee and the present seemed to him an opportune time for the town to take it up being just before the Municipal Elections. It was a matter for the Council's consideration and if they thought well of it they could submit a bylaw upon the subject. If they thought of doing this and guaranteeing bonds for dollars, it would encourage the company a great deal in coming in. He would have to report and they would have an expert go into the questions of the suitability of the clays and so on and this would also be submitted to the company before they would be in a position to do anything definite.

Asked as to the amount the company would capitalise at and the number of men they would employ Mr. Hutchings said they proposed first to form a syndicate of 100 persons who would subscribe $1000 each. That would be $100,000. When they had franchises they would capitalise at about half a million to a million dollars. They would dispose of perhaps half of that and reserve the rest in the treasury. As to the number of men they would employ they would start first and thoroughly test the different class of shales and the various mixtures in a mild way. They would not put in a great big plant at the start. They would put in say 25 per cent. of the whole, try that for three or four months until they were turning out the very best material and then as the country would absorb it they would increase the plant. They would start with 25 or 30 men with the intention of increasing to 500 men the country was able to absorb the output of that number. The country absorbed a great deal now, and millions of dollars worth of sewer pipe is used even now every year and there would be much more in the future. The best cities were already putting in tile floors. That was something which could be shipped some distance, being light. Pressed brick was heavier. The company would start in with hollow brick and sewer pipe.

Coun. Smyth—Is the company organised?

Mr. Hutchings—No, we are not incorporated yet. We do not mean to spend any money until one hundred members have subscribed. The bulk has been subscribed and ten per cent. paid up. We can call the balance as it is required.

The Mayor—I think Mr. Hutchings the Council will look very favorably upon any proposition that will tend to start an industry in Medicine Hat. We feel as you do that when one has started others will follow. I do not think the Council at this time could promise you any guarantee but the sentiment of the Council is to do anything in our powers.

Mr. Hutchings—Of course in guaranteeing bonds you may not be asked for it. We will spend all the money we get first. We may never ask for any money from the town but it will assist us when we go for outside money. The fact that you had guaranteed our bonds will strengthen our hands when we go after big money. The big money is out side and capitalists will say, well, here is a town of 4000 inhabitants guaranteed the bonds, it shows they have faith in the town and the district and country. This would strengthen our hands. We may never want it. Continuing, he said he was in England a short time ago and found English Capitalists invest in big things like railroads. A broker told him industries have not been successful in Canada and he took down a book and quoted facts and figures, showing 50 per cent. had not been a success. They went for railroads and other big investments and looked with disfavor upon industries.

Coun. Stewart—When would you propose to make a start?

Mr. Hutchings—In the spring. We have enough business to start with in sight now. We have money enough to start it now but we do not want to be limited for money. A few kilns may turn out wrong at the start and we would not want to have to lay down if that happened. I have had great experience in manufactures and it is always best to go by easy stages. Some goods will be made at first which may not be up to the mark. We want to be in such a position that we can go right on. We will pick out a lot of men in and around Winnipeg who will put money in, and it depends if the report of this committee is favorable. We shall get down to a scientific basis on every point.

Coun. Sisson—You have not made a test of the clay?

Mr. Hutchings—We have tested it this far. We have made bricks out of it. We have not made a practical test of the amount of silica, iron, magnesia etc.

Coun. Sissons—Were those bricks satisfactory?

Mr. Hutchings—Yes. They were not made of your material entirely, but it was a good brick. Your shale here is too rich and made without mixture the goods would crack. It wants reducing by the admixture of a lower class. I am taking some samples with me now. I imagine the shale you have here is coal up the river. Shale and coal are both vegetable matter. There is some difficulty in getting at the shale as it is covered by 40 to 100 feet of clay We would mine it like mining coal as it would be too costly to remove thecovering. We have to mix it to get the proper color and texture.

Coun. Sissons—Would you be able to overcome the alkali which is in most of these common clays?

Mr. Hutchings—Yes, for pressed brick, and for sewer pipe it would make no difference. I don't think this shale has much in it. There are several other shales and we should probably use a mixture.

Coun. Smyth—It now depends upon the report?

Mr. Hutchings—Yes, and we will get experts report and have tests made by different parties. We shall not be satisfied with only one.

The Mayor said it was too close to the Municipal elections now to get a bylaw submitted on the same day.

Mr. Hutchings—We would want to know by the middle of January or first of February as to what encouragement you can give us. I think if you take this matter up it will be the means of driving your city to the front for it. will be the best advertisement you could have. I have been chairman of the Western Manufacturers Committee for some years, and although I say it myself, I have been the means of getting a great deal of money into Winnipeg, but I am as much interested in the west as in Winnipeg. I can get other people to locate here as well as ourselves. I think you people here should go very strongly for another railroad here.

Coun. Smyth—The Great Northern have acquired the charter for a road from Montana in here and thence up north to Edmonton.

Mr. Hutchings—Well, they are starting cross lines now, and you should try and get them here. You should do it if only from the standpipe of advertising.

After a general conversation

Coun. Penhale asked what if the town guarantee the bonds and the company fail.

Mr. Hutchings replied that the town would hold a mortgage on the plant which before then would be worth $250,000. They could take possession and work or sell it. The company, he added, would not call up the bonds if they could help it because the bonds would mean a mortgage and that they would not want if it could be helped.

Coun. Smyth—The fact of the Municipality guaranteeing the bonds would be a help to you I presume.

Mr. Hutchings—Yes, people outside would say that if the town of Medicine Hat has guaranteed the bonds it showed they had confidence in their town and in the country and we would then be able to get all the stock subscribed without having to call upon the town.

The Mayor—How soon do you expect to have the results of the tests of these clays?

Mr. Hutchings—We ought to have everything ready by the middle of January. We will give you everything in that line so that the people can be satisfied that the undertaking is right. We are not going to start without plenty of money and that we feel sure we can get.

The Council adjourned.

ANOTHER SPECIAL MEETING.

Another special meeting of the Council was held on Friday afternoon to meet Mr. C. F. Hutchings, Mr. James Stuart and Mr. Faulkner, representing the Great West Sewer Pipe and Tile Company.

The Councillors present, in addition to the Mayor, were Messrs Smyth, Penhale, Stewart, DesBrisay and Sissons.

At the invitation of the Mayor Mr. Hutchings again addressed the Council, and said that—Mr. Stuart and Mr. Faulkner having arrived they had all taken drives over the country around and had investigated matters further and his colleagues on the committee would like to say a word or two.

Mr. James Stuart said this was a matter of great importance to Medicine Hat as well as to the company. He had been all over the ground and felt sure the material was here for the manufacture of good marketable goods. First class sewer pipe and pressed brick could be made, of that he felt sure, but samples had been taken and would be tested in every practical way, and if the reports were favorable the company would locate here. Of course there was an element of uncertainty in all these things and people with money to invest, had to be satisfied on every point and the support of the town would be of great assistance in the flotation of the company. If the town would give some sort of a guarantee it would help matters by showing to outside investors that they had confidence in their district and in the possibilities of this particular industry. The results would be very beneficial to the town, because one industry always brought others. Medicine Hat was a long way from the money market, very little was known about it and of course half a million dollars was a good deal of money to raise. Their own syndicate had as good as subscribed $100,000 to start with, but they would have to go outside for a good deal of money and in that connection the town's guarantee would mean the certain success of the undertaking. If the town would guarantee the interest on $100,000 he believed it would be self-sustaining almost from the start.

In the course of a desultory discussion the point was brought out that the company may never require the guarantee to be put into effect, because as soon as they called up the bonds they would have to mortgage everything to the town and they would not want to mortgage if it were possible to avoid it.

Mr. James Stuart emphasised his statement that he believed the undertaking would be self-sustaining from the beginning.

Coun. Sissons asked if the Company would guarantee to have a $250,000 works and plant on the ground before they called for a guarantee.

Mr. Hutchings replied that the guarantee was asked for to help to get outside capital and he thought if the company could show $100,000 to $150,000 in that way the town might well feel satisfied for everything the Company did here would be for the town's advantage.

Coun. Penhale did not think there would be a particle of difficulty in getting the town to give the guarantee if the tests came out all right.

Coun. Smyth was also of the same opinion, but thought they could not ask the town to vote upon it until the results of the tests were known and communicated to the town.

Mr. Faulkner said the guarantee was asked for to enable them to form a good company and to form it quickly.

The Mayor believed the town would give every reasonable assistance to the undertaking as the people were anxious to have industries started.

After a general discussion in which Mr. Hutchings further explained the project

It was moved by Coun. Smyth, seconded by Coun. Sissons and carried unanimously

That provided the test of clay and other reports of the Great West Sewer Pipe and Tile Company is satisfactory this Council puts itself on record as being favorable to encouraging the location of the company here by the guaranteeing of its bonds as requested.

HOCKEY IN MEDICINE HAT.

The recent cold snap has started the boys talking hockey and many are the schemes advanced for furthering the game in Medicine Hat. There is no doubt that some departure has to be made from last season's arrangement to make the game the success it should be. Last season there was a league formed and several teams entered. The result was that there was no really first class team. When a team was sent to Regina, it, was picked from all the clubs, and they could not do themselves justice as they did not know each others play.

For hockey there should be two teams of seniors. If it could be arranged so that there was only one team so much the better, but one team would not have enough games with outsiders to keep them in shape. With two teams which could be picked up even among players in town there would be good play to get crowds to attend the schedule games which could be arranged between them. It would create a healthy rivalry between the clubs which would induce the boys to get ont and work and endeavor to make good for a senior position. The fact that there were only two senior teams need not debar other local leagues from organizing and arranging a schedule to play under. The senior teams could have an intermediate and junior teams which could work out new players to qualify for the top notch if a man was disabled or left the city. We understand a meeting will be called shortly to discuss matters.

Communications.

The Editor is not responsible for the opinions of his correspondents nor does he always agree with them

To the Editor of The Times
Sir,

I notice in your issue of last week a letter on long distance telephones It may be of use to some of your readers to know that the authoritative work upon the telephone may be procured through Munn & Co., 861 Broadway, New York City, entitled Millers "American Telephone Practice" price $4. There are several companies in Chicago which furnish everything pertaining to a telephone line and stations, such as The International Telephone Mfg. Co. Harrison and Clinton Streets. The Automatic Electric Co., Van Buren and Morgan streets and the Western Electric Co., Chicago. Any one of these can doubtless furnish Engineers to install a system with standard apparatus and would gladly supply full information.

Yours Sincerely
CITIZEN.

To the Editor of The Times
Sir,

The following clipping from Collier's Weekly shows how outsiders viewed the great fight the Conservative party made for Provincial rights and may serve to encourage them in continuing the fight.

The Provincial Rights Party is the inevitable outgrowth of the infamous autonomy bills which the Laurier Government with such shortsighted cunning fastened upon the infant but mighty Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan. It is drawing to its recruiting ranks Liberals and Conservatives alike, and it promises to do more for true democracy in the Dominion than has been done by all the political parties of Canada for the last one hundred years. It is nothing short of amazing that so masterly and prudent a statesman as Sir Wilfrid Laurier should have countenanced, let alone promoted, a policy which so viciously antagonizes the real integrities of democracy that England found it necessary to discard it centuries ago, and France emphatically declares it can suffer its retrograding influence no more. Constitutional freedom is a privilege no people can afford to sacrifice. The bill which gave Provincial liberties to the growing West was cloaked with the denial of sacred rights. The new party is born to correct the laws which give truth to Madame Roland's lamanted cry: "Oh, Liberty, Liberty! How many crimes are committed in thy name!"

Yours etc.,
Conservative.

W.C.T.U.

(Contributed by a member.)

The regular monthly meeting of the W.C.T.U. was held in the parlour of the Methodist Church, on Monday afternoon Nov. 0th. The attendance was fair. The meeting opened with a singing of a hymn, and some members led in prayer. The minutes of last meeting were read and met with approval. Good reports were received from both flower and delicacy committees. The treasurer reported a fair balance on the right side. It is asked that all members try and come regularly as some reports from the convention will be discussed. And we must sow to reap.

"There is a man worth the name of a man for he is a credit to the place." This was spoken of an old man as he passed on the street two younger men. Was he always such a trustworthy man, or what is his lifes story? He was an only son, but was noted for his steady habits. But one holiday there was horse racing in town. He went with a few chums. All the boys were betting he only laughed at the bets. But one who hated him for his straight honesty sneered that the reason Kingstone would not bet because he was afraid and anyhow, he guessed that he had no money as his mammy must keep it for him. He lost his temper and not only bet but got drunk. His mother never recovered the shock of seeing her boy drunk. But it was the turning point in his life, which proves that all things work together for good to those who love good.

MEDICINE HAT INDUSTRIES

NEW INCORPORATION.

MEDICINE HAT WILL HAVE A TILE FACTORY NEXT YEAR.

(Winnipeg Telegram.)

According to the statement of F. H. Malcolm, secretary of a syndicate of Winnipeg business men which proposes to be incorporated as the Medicine Hat Sewer Pipe, Tile & Hollow Brick Company, Medicine Hat will have a manufacturing plant next spring that will supply all kinds of sewer piping, tile and hollow brick. The syndicate will be merged into an ultimate company capitalized at $1,000,000, half the stock of which, fully paid, will be equally divided among the 100 shares of this syndicate the balance being treasury stock for further working capital if required.

Such prominent men as James Stuart, M. F. Hutchings, George F. Carruthers, T. R. Ferguson, W. W. Richardson, John Haffner, William Meadows and W. A. Faulkner, of Winnipeg; A. W. Plomines, Mayor of Brandon; H. W. Laird, Mayor of Regina; and A. Kelly, of Brandon are stated to have already purchased considerable stock.

THE WOOLLEN MILLS.

ARRIVAL OF CONSIGNMENT OF CARDS, PICKERS ETC.

About two cars of goods arrived on Saturday for the Medicine Hat Woollen Mills. These formed the big consignment of cards, card clothing, mules, garnetts, pickers, extractors and self feeds, from Huddersfield, England. The cars are being unloaded today and as soon as all this paraphernalia is got into position the mill will be ready for business.

The "Happy Thought" Range is the standard by which all others are judged. Sole agent Stewart & Tweed.

MUNICIPAL MATTERS.

There has been little or no development in Municipal affairs since our last issue. No new names have been mentioned for Councillors.

A good deal of interest centres around the question of

WHO IS TO BE MAYOR.

Today there are four or five names before the public but nothing definite can be stated. A large number of people consider the position is due to Coun. Drinnan, but "J. K." is away on a hunting trip and it is not possible to get a definite answer from him until he returns. A largely signed petition will be presented to him on his return.

Then again the name of Coun. Stewart is freely mentioned, and there are good grounds for believing that if the public ask him in the usual way he will very likely accept, and he would make a good run against any one.

Next we may mention Mayor Forster who is ready and willing to run again. He will doubtless command a large support.

A fourth name is that of Mr. Wm. Cousins, who narrowly missed being Mayor last year. He would not lack support if he should decide to offer himself this year.

One more probable candidate is being mentioned and that is Mr. David Milne, of the Medicine Hat Trading Company. There is no doubt Mr. Milne would make a good Mayor especially at the present juncture.

We do not suggest that all the above will be candidates. There will hardly be more than two in any case. At present those of the public who interest themselves most in these matters seem, by general consent to wait Mr. Drinnan's decision. In case he does not accept there will be "an open field and no favor."

Since writing the above we have received from Mayor Forster a copy of a largely signed requisition presented to him, and his answer thereto, which appears in our advt. columns.

English and Canadian jams, jellies and marmalade received at Cochran's see samples in window.

Agricultural Society.

A meeting of the directors of the Agricultural Society was held in the Secretary's office on Saturday. Present: F. G. Forster (President), W. H. Hunt, W. Houghton, Thos. Littleford, Jas. Rae, W. C. Harris and J. H. G. Bray, Secretary.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and on the motion of Messrs Littleford and Houghton they were adopted as read.

A letter from Mr. McKillican, Seed Grain Representative, of the Dominion Government, Ottawa, on the subject of seed grain was then read to the meeting and, after due discussion, it was moved by Messrs Harris and Littleford, that the secretary be instructed to acknowledge the receipt of the letter and ascertain from Mr. McKillican what steps have been taken in the matter in other districts." Carried.

A letter on the subject of seed grain exhibitions was also read and discussed, when it was moved by Messrs Rae and Hunt that the secretary be instructed to write to the Seed Grain Representative and inform that gentleman that the Board of Directors of the Medicine Hat Agricultural Society are perfectly willing to co-operate in this particular with the seed branch of the Dominion Department of Agricultural, Ottawa, both as to the exhibitions in January and the Field crop competitions. Carried.

A communication re the Seed Grain special trains to be run over the C. P. Railway and branches was then read to the meeting and after due discussion on the motion of Messrs Rae and Harris, the secretary was instructed to replay and state that this Board of Directors places itself on record as being favorable to the enterprise and will do all in its power to further the intentions of the Government in this particular and will be glad to make use of any posters or advertising matter. Carried.

A letter from F. L. Crawford Esq. re the silver medal presented to the society by the Canadian Bank of Commerce was then read and it was moved by Messrs Harris and Littleford that the secretary write an acknowledgement of the same and convey to Mr. Crawford the thanks of this meeting for the munificence of the Canadian Bank of Commerce in presenting these medals. Carried.

The accounts of the Society for the year 1905 were then presented and after due discussion, on the motion of Messrs Rae and Hunt, were ordered to be paid. Carried.

Moved by Messrs Harris and Littleford that the annual meeting be held in the secretary's office at 2 p. m. on Friday, the 8th Day of December 1905. Carried.

MOOSEJAW DINES ON FINISHING WORK.

GRAND CELEBRATION ON THE COMPLETION OF THE WATER AND LIGHT SYSTEMS.

Moosejaw celebrated the completion of its $200,000 sewerage and water works and electric light plant last Friday night by a grand banquet at the City hotel, many prominent guests being present from other cities, including Mayor Laird, of Regina, Mr. Isbester of Saskatoon, Mr. Grant of Medicine Hat, and Willis Chipman, C. E., of Toronto. The menu was the best ever prepared in this city and included twenty-one courses. The toasts which were many kept the diners until an early hour this morning.

The invited guests were greatly surprised at Moosejaw's growth and were made. Mr. Laird made one of the best after dinner speeches that was ever heard in this place. The predictions are that with the steady increase of population Moosejaw will in ten years' time have 25,000 people.

Miss Badgley's Recital.

An appreciative audience assembled in the Opera House, on Thursday evening, the occasion being a Recital by Miss Badgley, Elocutionist. The programme was well sustained, and in addition to Miss Badgley's readings included vocal solos by Miss White and violin solos by Miss Allingham, with Mrs. C. F. Smith as accompanist. Everything passed off most successfully. Miss Badgley's interpretation of "Sister and I" and her dramatic representation of "Lead Kindly Light" were very impressively done.

ALBERTA WHEAT FOR VANCOUVER.

THIRTY CARLOADS FOR THE NEW DISTILLERY—OPENING UP A GOOD MARKET.

The Alberta Pacific Elevator Co., says the Calgary Herald, has received an order from Vancouver for thirty carloads of Alberta red wheat for the new distillery which is starting at the coast. This order, which was secured through the influence of the C. P. R., means that a good local market is about to be opened right at our doors for Alberta winter wheat.

An inaccurate timepiece may cause one a world of inconvenience. It may cause the loss of many dollars or even a loss of life. That's why many great corporations require their employees to carry perfect watches. I am an authorised inspector of watches for such a corporation.—the C.P.R.

Rural Telephones.

The rural telephone is something which townspeople and farmers and ranchers alike should take in hand. While it would help the trade of the town it would be a great thing for country people. The rancher could keep in close touch with the stock markets and when the buyer arrived he would find the owner of the cattle up to date in that respect and it would not be possible to fool him as to the latest prices at home and abroad. The same may be said of the farmer who has wheat or hogs or a few head of cattle for sale. If the seller knows the state of the market he is in a position to get the proper price of the man who comes to the ranch to buy or he knows when to hold them and when to sell.

Then there is another important point. A trunk line from a country point into the town would naturally have exchange stations or toll systems at different points along the route by which ranchers and farmers would be able to communicate with each other as well as with the town This latter convenience would be as great a benefit as the connection with the town. For instance help may be wanted for haying, for finding lost stock, calling meetings and arranging Church services, and the general interchange of those many neighbourly courtesies which are part of prairie life, and which, under present conditions, entail a ride or drive, often long delays and sometimes disappointments. In winter what a delight it would be to the lonely bachelor to be able to hold converse over the wire with some family in whom he might be interested.

Again consider the advantages in case of a sudden illness or accident. A telephone message to town would bring a doctor in half the time that a man could ride in and fetch him. The advantages of the rural telephone are many and Medicine Hat people would do well to bestir themselves with a view to installing one to the Cypress Hills.

The Servant Girl and Indoor Help.

Not only in Manitoba and the other western provinces, but also in the whole of North America, there appears to be an absolute dearth of the necessary indoor help, and many people are at their wits' end to know what to do. Even in the large cities the ladies are adopting all sorts of expedients both to induce girls to take service and to retain them in their houses. From a Milwaukee paper we learn that "some ladies are trying the experiment of having housemaid parties, that is, they give the maids the use of the house in which to entertain their friends for an evening. The rooms are decorated and refreshments served the same as if the mistress were entertaining," so that farmers on the prairies need no longer wonder why they cannot get any servants. The universal education of the children and the consequent advent of women into many of the positions formerly open only to men is, of course, largely the cause of some of the trouble, and is addition, the present general prosperity of the people enables many girls to live at home. That our farmers' wives are terribly handicapped and that many of them are overtaxing their strength in the almost hopeless task of raising a family as well as doing the household work, has long been a patent fact to all observers. It is causing many otherwise successful farmers to think seriously of giving up their occupation, as being the only solution of the indoor help problem.

City Versus Country Catering

Winter is the time when country housekeepers usually envy their city friends, imagining that nearness to metropolitan markets must greatly simplify the problem of securing a varied bill of fare. We doubt, however, if any city housewife who has experienced the abundance of country living will admit any of her supposed advantages. Many of the dwellers in cities live in steam-heated flats, in which space is at a premium. They have no cool place except a refrigerator (and that is usually a small one) in which to store food. Catering, therefore, if they be economical and conscientious, involves careful planning that as little as possible may be left from each meal.

On the farm, where supplies are secured in quantity and at the minimum cost, the table scraps which cannot be made over are never wasted, because there are always the dogs and cats, the chickens and pigs to be fed. In the city they must be burned or consigned to the garbage box, a waste which sorely afflicts the conscience of a housekeeper brought up with New England ideals of the value of food and the sin of wasting it.

The city housekeeper buys from hand to mouth or meal to meal. The country housekeeper with capacious cellars, has a winter's store of vegetables brought from the fields when the cold winds herald the approach of winter. She has apples by the barrel and groceries in fifty or hundred pound lots, and she cannot appreciate how much time and worry she is saved as compared with the city resident, who must forage every day. She also has the advantage of being able to use milk, cream, butter eggs and poultry more lavishly than her city rival can afford to do.

Looking at the question all round therefore, it would seem that most the advantages are on the side of the country caterer, and that, with equal skill in preparing the same foods in different ways, she should be able to provide a better and much more varied bill of fare than the city woman.

The Outlook for Improved Live Stock.

It would appear from the high prices realized at recent sales of pure bred live stock that the farmers and breeders throughout the country are fully alive to the importance of improving their herds of both the beef and the dairy breeds. The contention that there is always a demand for good animals at handsome prices is fully borne out. A good animal costs no more to feed than an inferior one and more and more is the farmer becoming convinced of the fact that although the initial cost of the introduction of a pure-bred sire into a herd may be large that the improvement resulting justifies the price paid in the corresponding increase in the herd value. Not only are breeders of established herds introducing new blood but foundations for new herds are being laid by men not hitherto considered breeders of pure-bred stock. At two recent sales of Shorthorns 100 head brought $35,128.00, an average of $351.23 each. At the Flatt sale at Hamilton 64 cattle were sold for $27,308.00 an average of $426.61. This lot included a dozen or more calves under six months old. The highest price paid for a sire was $2,100 and for a dam $1,600, amounts paid ranged from these down to $110. At the Attrill sale at London 36 head realized $7,780 an average price of $216. The highest price at this sale was $650. At the Hunter sale of Ayrshires at Maxville 47 animals realized $9,355 an average of about $200. One bull brought $700 and one cow $675. In this lot was included a number of calves under two months old. These prices are probably the highest ever received for animals of the Ayrshire breed. That the teachings of the Farmers' Institutes, the Live Stock Associations and the work of the Dominion and Provincial Departments of Agriculture is bearing results is apparent from the above facts.

Why The West Grows.

Last week we published on this page, a brief editorial on the pessimism of some eastern Canadians regarding the West, and it is a subject that can well be enlarged upon. We have frequently heard it stated that one's commercial ideas broaden the further west he moves. We do not imply that the west has abler business men than the East, but the Eastern man seems to be unnecessarily cautious about his ventures. A small merchant in the East, for instance, out of a capital of $10,000, would invest $5,000 and hold firmly to the rest in case his investment might prove a failure. The Western merchant would, on the other hand, start in to do great things at once. He would in all probability put all his capital in the business, and perhaps borrow some more. It is that spirit of enthusiasm in the opportunities offering here that results in the rapid growth of business establishments in Central and Western Canada. That is why nearly every wholesale warehouse in Winnipeg is capped with two or three new storeys in addition to what it had two or three years back. Pessimism is a great drawback to a business man. If a man puts his whole energy into a project, determined to succeed, he will accomplish more, even if he fails in his object, than the one who is always anticipating disaster. Some will say that investing in this country is like gambling; they may win or lose all. In reply to such weak statements we would simply ask if anything great was ever accomplished in the world without venturing or taking a risk. Napoleon marched on Moscow and lost an army of 500,000 men and caused his downfall; on the other hand, 300 warriors stood at the pass of Thermopylae and so surprised thousands of Persians that they saved Greece. What was the colonizing policy of Great Britain but a big risk? No doubt many thought that our forefathers were taking a streak of insanity when first set out from the Old Country to toil in the forests of the Atlantic coast. The pessimist has never done anything for the advancement of the world in any sphere, and the ideas entertained by some regarding the instability of Western Canada are simply ridiculous. In a few years of course, the west will settle down to a more steady and regular growth The rush will not be so great proportionately, and the chances for get rich-quick speculation will not be offering so freely. Things will become more calm, and real estate for instance, will have reached the top of the ladder in price. The slow Easterner will regret that he was not here in the boom days.—Commercial.

Alberta Sugar Factory.

Outsiders are so accustomed to hearing Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta spoken of as great wheat growing provinces and British Columbia as a rich mining country that they no doubt lose sight of the possibilities for other industries of which we have several profitable ones Foremost among these is destined to be, from all indications, the beet sugar industry of Alberta. The Knight Sugar Company's plant, situated at Raymond, Alberta, is a concern that is rapidly growing, and is assuming proportions that will at no distant date place it on a large shipping basis. Within the next few weeks the company will be shipping its product into Vancouver, B.C., where they are figuring at the present time on putting up a sugar refinery. Since sugar making at Raymond was started this fall, thousands of tons of beets have been delivered to the plant, principally from Raymond fields. Other parts of the West, however, are commencing to realize the importance of this industry in our midst, and beet growing will receive more attention than ever before. It is expected that 24,000 tons will be used in the run this season.

The Knight Sugar Company employ about 225 hands, and the output this year will be in the vivinity of 6,000,000 pounds. The present capacity of the mill is 100,000 pounds per day. The probabilities are that a very large quantity of beets will be raised in this country in future, as they are safer than the grain crop, and the returns are realized promptly.—Commercial.

In Praise of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

There is no other medicine manufactured that has received so much praise and so many expressions of gratitude as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is effective, and prompt relief follows its use. Grateful parents everywhere do not hesitate to testify to its merits for the benefit of others. It is a certain cure for croup and will prevent the attack if given at the first appearance of the disease. It is especially adapted to children as it is pleasant to take and contains nothing injurious. Mr.

Express Was Wrecked, Western Mail Destroyed.

A GAS TANK EXPLODES AND THROWS FLYING TRAIN FROM THE TRACK.

A message from Ottawa gave the intelligence that train No. 2, which passed through Medicine Hat on Saturday evening the 18th inst., arrived at the Capital five hours late on account of an accident at Wahnipitae early Monday morning, sixty eight miles west of North Bay. The engine, with the exception of the front driving wheels, and all the train except the rear sleeper, left the track near the switch siding at Wahnipitae station. At the time the train was running forty miles an hour. The gas tank exploded and went through the roof of the mail car.

H. M. Brown, the mail clerk, had a narrow escape. He managed to leap from the car with the bag containing the registered mail matter. All other mail matter was destroyed the car being burned to a crisp with all the mail collected from Calgary and eastward points. There was no mail on the car from west of Calgary.

No one was injured. There was an embankment twenty feet high where the accident occurred and half an hour before the construction train was standing on the siding with two hundred Italians asleep in it. This train was fortunately drawn to the other end of the siding, otherwise the result would have been terrible. The explosion shattered the windows of the station.

AN ARTISTIC TRIUMPH.

MR. HAROLD NELSON WARMLY PRAISED FOR HIS PERFORMANCE OF LANCIOTTO.

The Vancouver News-Advertiser of October 12th says: "Mr. Harold Nelson is to be most highly complimented on his delightful performance last night at the Opera House when, as the cripple "Lanciotto" in "Francesca da Rimini" he acted his part and spoke his lines with a power and finish that at once stamped him as a worthy exponent of legitimate drama Mr. Nelson is young, he has ambition, talent and the true artistic love of study; so much one may legitimately infer from his stage work, and should rank with the foremost performers of romantic and tragic drama upon the modern stage, for he has determination added to talent and a fine enunciation.

The fluent lines of Boker's version though not equalling in poetic beauty that of Gabriel d'Annunzio, gave Mr. Nelson ample opportunity for the use of every intonation and inflection of which the human voice is capable; for the part is a very long one, and runs the whole gamut of human emotion, love, hope, ecstasy, wrath, hate, vengeance and despair.

Clifford Lane Bruce played "Pepo" the jester, extremely well. The tableaux with which each act was concluded were excellent, and so was also the special scenery carried by the company. The costuming was also very elaborate and especially appropriate."

Mr. Nelson and his excellent company will present this great tragedy of Italian history here on Thursday November 30th.

ACROSS THE LINE.

Wall! We just lit in Canada
And I think its a shame
I didn't cum har years ago
To pick me out a claim.
But twernt my fault I didn't cum
For my wife begin to whine,
Lands sakes Sy! stay at home
That's nothing across the line.

Corse I didn't exactly know
But I'de hered so many say
That even for the cheapest work
They give a rite smart pay.
So my mind was sot on coming
I told Mandy she needn't talk
For Canada we war bound for
If the whole set had to walk.

So seein' I was meanin' it,
She said she guessed she'd go,
But knew there wasn't nuthin' thar
Only a heap of cold and snow,
But reckon she'll change her mind a bit
And see it aint our fate
For everything looks nicer here
Than they do down in the State.

Them renters livin' in the state
Have got to move about
And winter gets so awful cold
You kin hardly venture out
Then spring ell cum with an awful rain
And wash you right away,
I don't see for the life of me
Why the people want to stay.

Up har you get a homestead,
You can't do that down there.
You've got to work from morn to night
And always give a share.
I reckon before the year is gone
Mandy 'll see the time
She'll say, Sy I'm mighty glad
We cum across the line.

The earnings for September are stated, to exceed expenditures by $24,659. cloth, moved about the house, busily making her preparations for departure.

"'Tis strange, Elsbeth," she said as she finished fastening a large, square locker, "that Gaston is not here. Hath thou the saddlebags packed? Methinks by now the horses should be fed and in readiness for our journey."

Elsbeth drew her breath sharply.

"'Twill be a glad hour when thou an' I are far away from this domain," she said. "Since we came here, sweet, I ha' been defiant, ever scornful o' the sneers of the people and their sinister glances, but this morning I woke from my fitful sleeping with terror in my heart and a dreadful fear that these villagers, led by thy cousin, would seek to wreak their hatred and inveterate engeance on thee."

Margaret patted the older woman's shoulder reassuringly.

"Thou'rt overworked, Elsbeth, and hath the megrims as a consequence," she said. "Why talk of fear when we have a strong protector so close at hand? Hast thou yet to learn, foolish old woman, that Sir Godfrey is a man to put dependence on? Last night when he left me he said, 'Trust me, Margaret,' and he needed not mine assurance to know that I did so with all my heart."

Elsbeth walked to the window, looking out anxiously toward the village.

"The hour of dawn is full upon us," she said solemnly, "an' neither thy lover nor his servant is approaching. Happen he meant the morrow, sweet?"

Margaret frowned impatiently.

"Godfrey said this morning at daybreak, and he did not mean any other time," she said crossly. "Mark me, a La Fabienne would ne'er break his word to any one, much less to the woman he loves. See, Elsbeth," she cried a moment later, "the sun is only just above the mountain tops. 'Tis but now the break of day! They'll come anon!"

The women moved about, completing their arrangements with nervous haste, from time to time pausing in their labors to listen for sounds of approaching horses' feet. Suddenly Elsbeth clutched her companion's arm.

"Hist!" she whispered. "What strange sounds fall on mine ears! Dost not hear voices loud calling an' the tramp of many feet?"

Both hastened to an aperture in the hallway that commanded a better view of the road and gates. For a moment they looked on with beating hearts; then Margaret, uttering a groan, cowered against the wall, covering up her face with her hands.

"Oh, God's pity! If Godfrey hath met my cousin Josiah and in his just anger hath killed him!" she moaned.

The other stood looking out of the window hopelessly.

"Elsbeth, say that thou dath see my Godfrey riding this way unmolested!" [illegible]

"I see thy cousin Josiah, an' methinks 'tis the old elder who is the judge or superior in the council on horseback advancing toward this house," Elsbeth announced dully, "an' a party of soldiery surrounded by a throng of excited people do follow them. They are turning in this gateway, Margaret!" the woman fairly shrieked as she turned and threw her arms about her young mistress. "Hide, sweet; mayhap 'tis thee they want. Bolt the doors an' bar the windows! Refuse them admittance!"

Margaret's face was white and startled.

"Elsbeth, calm thyself. Cease thy maunderings," she answered sternly. "I hide! Margaret Mayland hide her face as though she had done wrong! Shame on thee, Elsbeth! Rather bid me throw open wide the door."

"Margaret, sweet babe Margaret," the old woman cried, almost beside herself with fear and apprehension, "then take off the cross thou wearest that doth anger them."

At these words Margaret raised her head haughtily and drew away from the woman, but Elsbeth clung to her wildly.

"Remember that I have loved thee so that thou hast ne'er missed thy mother!" she cried. "Thou hast told me so, sweet, many times when 'twas thy mood to be tender. Margaret, for the care I have given thee I demand a return. Take off the cross that doth anger them!"

The noises outside came nearer, growing louder. Margaret stooped and kissed the sobbing woman on the forehead.

"And have I not loved thee, too, Elsbeth?" she asked as she pushed her gently from her.

Heavy tramping on the steps was heard, then a loud rapping on the door. Margaret's eyes gleamed strangely.

"Go, Elsbeth, throw open wide the door," she said. "Bid our visitors enter."

"Nay, nay, Margaret, I cannot go!" Elsbeth crouched down in the corner on a chair, trembling as with a fit of ague.

"Open, in the king's name!" It was a man's voice shouting. Then he knocked again louder, this time with his sword hilt. Scarce had he ceased when the door was swung back on its hinges, and a young woman, more beautiful than he had ever seen before, with long skirts of red cloth trailing about her and the rose tinted rays of the early morning sun falling on her yellow hair and showing the dazzling whiteness of her skin, stood before him on the threshold and gazed at him, then over his shoulder at the soldiers and throng of curious, excited people with quiet severity.

"Who knocks so rudely at my door and doth bid me open?" she said.

The captain of the guard, who had his papers in his hand, looked about him uncertainly; then a gleam of ardent admiration came into his eyes, and he advanced toward Margaret, pulling his hat off to the ground, with profuse bows. The soldiers at attention awaited orders, and the crowd, whose crying and hooting had sunk to the startling sound of the officer's loud rapping fell on their ears, now at the sight of the mistress of Mayland farm began to gesticulate wildly, pointing in her direction and calling loudly: "'Tis she, the witch! The devil's beldame! Take her, good officer, an' thou'lt be doing God's work!"

As she saw the menacing actions and heard the angry accusations of the crowd the pallor on Margaret's face deepened, and she trembled slightly from shock and surprise.

Then, collecting herself with a mighty effort, she spoke again to the officer:

"What duty brings thee to my door, good captain?"

The captain, squaring his shoulders, strutted before her conceitedly, then said in pleasant tones, with an insinuating smile of admiration, "I am commanded, fair lady, by order of the king, to take into custody the person" —here he paused to look over the scroll of parchment he held in his hand—"of a woman, one Margaret Mayland, accused of the crime of witchcraft."

At that moment old Elsbeth appeared in the doorway behind Margaret, her befrilled cap awry and her eyes red with weeping. The captain, observing her, made another low bow to Margaret.

"With your permission I will enter and take her now," he said. "Men, forward!"

The soldiers, with swords clanking, came up the steps. Margaret did not move, for, having caught sight of her cousin, Josiah Taunston, grim, exultant, solemn, astride his high horse in the middle of the gathering, she was gazing at him with an expression of reproachful sternness.

"Gracious mistress"—the captain laid his hand upon her arm—"it will be necessary for me to take this woman. In the king's name I ask thee to allow me to enter."

She drew away from his touch with a quick gesture of offended dignity.

"Why shouldst thou enter, man, when she whom thou hast come to take stands at thy side?" she said.

"Thou, mistress!"

The captain fell back a step or two in his surprise.

"'Tis no wonder that thou doth stare at me incredulous, with open mouth," she said bitterly. "Yea, I am Margaret Mayland, and a woman most unjustly accused."

"Prithee, captain," cried Elder Williams, the chief councilor, who had been whispering aside with Taunston, "do thy duty with more speed. Happen thou stay longer thou'lt fall under the spell of the woman, and, instead of performing the king's work, thou'lt be doing pranks on the green! More haste, officer."

Thus sternly admonished, the captain replaced his helmet and, motioning to his men to come closer, said: "Margaret Mayland, in the king's name I do arrest thee for the black crimes of witchcraft and connivance with the devil. I am under orders to see thee safely in a cell in the town prison, there to await trial for these charges, and it is my duty to command thee to come with me now."

As the captain spoke Margaret listened immovable, with pale face and flashing eyes, and when he had finished, as if she could no longer restrain her indignation at the outrageous injustice, brushed him aside with a sweeping gesture of her hand and, walking through the soldiers to the top of the steps, stood looking defiantly at the concourse of people before her. The sun, now higher and brighter in the heavens, fell upon her warmly, and the gold cross on her bosom gleamed brightly in its rays.

"Ignorant churls! Ingrates! Poltroons!" she cried, with scornful anger. "Dost know 'tis Margaret Mayland that ye do attack? Cowards, to bring a band of soldiery to take one weak woman captive! But know now and think well before ye act that the woman whom ye do accuse is not defenseless, but hath a strong protector close at hand in the person of Sir Godfrey La Fabienne!"

Here she was interrupted by much derisive hooting and the loud shouts and laughter of the crowd. Disregarding the disturbance, she continued:

"Mark me well, then, and beware, for I warn ye that a punishment brought to bear by powerful influence at two courts will be dealt out to those who seek to injure me! Ignorant, deceived people that ye are, canst not see that ye are led by the greed and vengeance of Josiah Taunston?"

Here she threw out her arm and pointed her finger in his direction, continuing distinctly, "Mine own cousin, who doth seek to injure me because I would not wed with him and make him the master of the Mayland farm!"

"'Tis false!" thundered Taunston. "Shut the screeching wench's mouth!"

"Heed while there is yet time and disperse," Margaret cried, seeming not to notice his interruption, "for I do assure ye that for every insult put upon me a head will answer for it!"

Elsbeth, who had been sobbing in doorway, frantic with fear, now ran to Margaret and, throwing her arms about her, cried entreatingly: "Hush thy harsh words, sweet. 'Twill only anger them the more. These good folk have naught against thee; 'tis thy gold cross that they mislike. Take it off and burn it before them all, an' they will go their way, leaving thee unmolested, I'll warrant thee, babe."

The distressed old woman looked toward the throng of stern, unyielding faces entreatingly, but their only response to her appeal was the loud cry of "The cross, Satan's death dealing charm! The cross! The cross!"

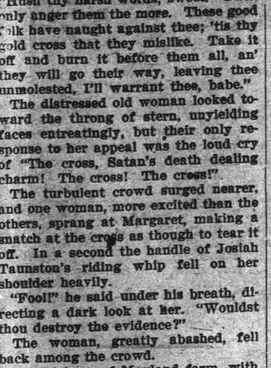
The turbulent crowd surged nearer, and one woman, more excited than the others, sprang at Margaret, making a snatch at the cross as though to tear it off. In a second the handle of Josiah Taunston's riding whip fell on her shoulder heavily.

"Fool!" he said under his breath, directing a dark look at her. "Wouldst thou destroy the evidence?"

The woman, greatly abashed, fell back among the crowd.

The mistress of Mayland farm, with flashing eyes, put her hand over the cross protectingly, and she pushed her old nurse from her with firm determination, saying: "Elsbeth, thy words do fill my heart with shame. A Mayland asked to do the bidding of these village churls! Margaret Mayland to be told what to wear and what not to wear by these ignorant, prejudiced people! I have done no wrong. My cross contains no evil!"

As a full sense of the wrongful injustice from which she was suffering swept over her Margaret turned upon the crowd of accusers again, this time more furiously.



"This cross I wear, no man can touch it while I live!" she cried. "And as ye have thought it seemly to brand me as a witch and bring soldiers here to arrest me, I do defy ye and do warn ye not to lay hands on me until ye have first notified my affianced husband, Sir Godfrey La Fabienne, of thine intention!"

Jeers, ejaculations of derision and contempt, also loud, scornful laughter, followed Margaret's words.

"Sir Godfrey La Fabienne!" shrieked one woman shrilly. "Ha, ha! She doth command us to notify her white livered lover! Ho, ho!"

With a proud, hopeless gesture of her head the accused woman turned from the crowd of sneering, sinister faces before her and, addressing the captain of the guard, who stood close at her side, said entreatingly, "Good captain, wilt thou not send notice of this outrage to my friend, Sir Godfrey La Fabienne, who for some good reason hath been detained at yonder tavern by the mill stream, the Sign of the Red Heart?"

"One moment, mistress."

The man stepped down and, going to Josiah Taunston, appeared to be consulting him, the concourse of people, now grown silent, watching with bated breath. Suddenly Taunston threw up his head and let forth a harsh, unmirthful shout of laughter.

"Canst send a message to her lover?" he cried in a loud voice of triumph. "Nay, man, thou cannot, for the dastard hath run away, and no man knoweth whither!"

With angry glances from her flashing eyes Margaret turned upon him.

"Josiah Taunston"—the words came slowly and distinctly from her pale lips—"the truth is not on thy lips, and I tell thee that thou lieth. And heed thee how loudly thou doth speak, for the man liveth not long who doth call Sir Godfrey La Fabienne dastard!"

Taunston rode a few paces closer to the steps and before the throng of riotous men and women, who were now capering on the green in wild enjoyment of their knowledge of her lover's departure and of Margaret's speedy discomfiture, the cousins, the accuser and accused, were face to face.

"Wanton! Witch! Thing of evil!" he said in a low, sneering voice. "Hear the truth from the lips of one who e'er speaks truth! Thy lover, thy beauteous, honorable, noble lover, who did talk so bravely to win thy favors, hath at the first sign of trouble run away i' the night."

"'Tis not true!" Maragret cried, with set face and gleaming eyes. "I call thee here before all listeners a speaker of untruths and do brand thee as a liar!"

"Ho, ho!" Taunston turned and addressed the chief councilor, who had come closer, with expressions of triumph in his voice and on his face. "The witch liketh not the news we bring her and refuseth to believe that her courtly lover disappeared i' the night deserted her in her hour of need."

"Mistress Mayland," Elder Williams said sternly, "what Josiah Taunston saith is true. La Fabienne went away last night; no man knoweth whither. Fourfold too much time hath been wasted in thy foolish parleying. Officer, do thy duty."

The captain had not time to open his mouth to give the order when Margaret, springing down the steps, grasped the bridle rein of the chief councilor's horse.

"One moment, good sir. I ask for a short reprieve while some one whom I can trust doth go to the Sign of the Red Heart for Sir Godfrey. Those who know him not, who understand not his fine sense of honor, may think that he hath taken alarm and deserted me, but"—here she raised her eyes, gazing passionately into his face—"I know better; I know that he doth remain close at hand to rescue me or to give me comfort."

She swayed slightly, and the captain, touched with a feeling of pity, caught hold of her arm to steady her.

"Is there no man here who can give news we bring?" he asked gruffly.

At that moment Margaret gave a piercing shriek of joy, for Gaston, with bowed head and walking slowly, was just entering the gateway. All eyes were turned in his direction, and there was no sound from the people as he approached and knelt humbly at Margaret's feet.

"Rise, Gaston," she cried in joyful tones, "and give the message that thou dost bring from thy master. Speak loudly, so that all his wicked tongued accusers may hear and know the wrong that they have done him."

The fellow did not lift his head.

"Speak, good Gaston."

"Fair mistress," he said in thick, muffled tones, "my lord left last night."

The glow of color that had swept over Margaret's face at Gaston's appearance faded away.

"Whither went he?"

"I know not, mistress."

"Rise, stupid," she commanded, with quick impatience, "and speak the message that Sir Godfrey left for me. What good reason for his going gave he, and what tender words of counsel left he for me?"

The fellow rose, but did not meet her glance. He stood with bowed head, shifting his feet nervously.

"Blockhead, wilt never speak?" Margaret shook his arm angrily.

"Good Mistress Mayland," the man stammered, "I—I have but one word for thee from my master"—

"And that is?" she interrupted almost wildly in her desperation.

"Farewell."

Margaret fell back as if she had received a blow in the face, and the listening crowd closed in around them, with gloating looks and taunting words, wild with triumphant excitement. The captain laid his hand on her arm determinedly, but she threw him off and, clinging to Gaston, besought him to tell her more.

"Kind mistress," he said, "last night at about an hour after midnight, when I was sleeping heavily on a pile of straw in the stable, I felt some one touching me gently and, springing up in surprise, found my master bending over me. As I attempted to speak he put his hand over my mouth and whispered these words:

"'Gaston, positive news hath reached me that at the rising of the sun I and Mistress Mayland are to be taken into custody by the soldiers who arrived here tonight and thrown into prison. As all the passes are strongly guarded we cannot escape by'—

"At that instant the man sleeping at my side wakened and raised on his elbow. My master, hardly daring to breathe, crouched lower in the shadow, so that he was unperceived.

"'Much more would I say,' he whispered, 'but I cannot take the risk. Tell Mistress Mayland farewell and'—

"Just then another fellow stirred, and, rousing his companion, the men exchanged words, listening. Breathless we waited until the soldiers were breathing regularly again. Then my lord, giving my hand a strong pressure, took the first safe chance and slipped noiselessly through the doorway."

"Swear what thou sayst is the truth!" Margaret cried, now standing erect before him, a deathlike pallor on her countenance.

"By the sacred memory of my mother's love I swear it!" Gaston said solemnly.

The proud head of the mistress of the Mayland farm, its covering of yellow hair gleaming in the sunlight, fell forward on her breast. The captain to hide his emotion gave a loud order, and the soldiers, with noise of clanking swords, closed in around her.

Margaret looked about her in a dazed manner.

"There is no need of force," she said dully. "I will go with thee."

The noise from the clamoring, shouting mass of people was almost deafening as the officer, leading Margaret, bareheaded and the long skirts of her riding habit trailing after her on the ground, started toward the roadway.

"To the jail! To the jail!" they cried frantically.

"The witch doth hang her head in shame of her evil deeds," said one woman, running along with a child in her arms.

"Nay," cried another. "'Tis with sorrow that her poltroon lover hath deserted her. Such kind know not shame!"

At the gateway the captain called a halt, as he wished to consult Josiah Taunston on some matter pertaining to his orders, and Elsbeth, who had been running after them in fearful agony, wringing her hands and screaming shrilly, fell at Margaret's feet and threw her arms about her in hopeless abandon.

"Oh, sweet babe, bonny Margaret," she moaned, "they are taking thee to prison, where I shall never see thee more! Can naught be done to save thee? Ah, lackaday, God's mercy on us all! They'll kill thee and no help comes."

"Grieve not, Elsbeth," Margaret answered gently, "grieve not for one who hath received her death wound. Can they kill that which is already dead? Nay, good Elsbeth, after the news brought by Gaston that Godfrey"—here a dry sob rose in her throat —"that Godfrey, whom I love, hath abandoned me to the insults of these people, no abuse they can heap upon me to cause me suffering will [illegible] by me. Mourn not for one stab so sharply through the heart that all the young, joyous life in her hath been killed by one deep thrust. Dry thy tears, dear mother."

The captain approaching at this juncture, the procession started through the gateway and down the road, where it soon disappeared, and the only sign of human life left on the Mayland estate was the form of old Elsbeth lying prostrate on the ground.

CHAPTER XXIII.

ALL the long night that preceded the arrest and imprisonment of her cousin Margaret, Hetty Taunston did not sleep, but tossed from side to side of her bed in nervous terror of the news she had just heard from Josiah of Margaret's sad fate. When, after much trouble, she was brought to her senses after losing consciousness in the barn, she had entreated her mother and brother to allow her to remain with them, as on this fearful night she was afraid to be alone, but they sent her from them with harsh words.

"Get the whining, white faced wench out of my sight!" Josiah commanded roughly. "Instead of acting as this time as a support to her brother, that she doth know seeketh ever to do his duty in the sight of God an' man, she doth go about as a reproach, with dull eyes and sickly pallor. Pah! The sight of her riles me!"

At her mother's sharp bidding Hetty went to her room, not daring to refuse, and lay with eyes wide open, listening to the monotonous murmuring of the voices of her mother and Josiah, who, seated before the kitchen fire, conversed in low tones until a late hour in the night. Once for a short time she lost consciousness, but at the first gray streak of light across the horizon line she crept softly out of bed and went down into the dooryard.

Early astir as she was, she found her brother there before her, coming around from the barn, leading his horse. Never in all Hetty's young life had she been so harassed and her mind so filled with terror. Such awful tales as she had heard constantly of the evil doings of the cousin she loved kept her heart heavy with a sense of trouble, and her little head fairly ached with bewilderment and wonder how to reconcile the fact of a woman so pure as Margaret being in connivance with so much wickedness.

When Josiah saw her he exclaimed in vexed tones:

"Out upon thee, sad face!"

Then possibly the sight of her suffering, showing so plainly in the pallor and lines of her face, touched some small spot in his heart that was good or stirred his conscience, for when she ran to him and clutched the bridle rein, imploring him to save their cousin Margaret, he did not push her away nor could he meet her glance, but moved uneasily in his saddle.

"Josiah, dear brother, an thou would let me speak with Elder Williams of the council, happen I would have influence wi' him."

"Ho, ho! Thine influence!" Josiah laughed scornfully. "Going in public against thy brother! A dutiful sister, prithee, to make my boasts on!"

Here his manner changed, growing stern and commanding.

"Thou'rt to stay here, faint heart, an' mind the house! I' faith, I'll have a care that with so much important work on hand we have no swooning scenes wi' silly wenches."

As he finished speaking a man, one of the horse boys at the Sign of the Red Heart, came swiftly up the pathway.

"Master Taunston," he said, panting slightly, "I—ha' come wi' news! The witch's lover hath fled!"

"Gone!" Josiah ejaculated in surprise.

"Aye, 'tis found that he stole away i' the night," the man replied.

TORTURING NEURALGIA

Suffered for Ten Years, Cured By Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Neuralgia is the king of torturers. A tingling of the tender skin, a sharp sudden stab from some angry nerve; then piercing paroxysms of pain—that's neuralgia. The cause of the trouble is disordered nerves due to thin watery blood. The cure is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which make new, rich red blood, and thus sooth and strengthen the disordered nerves and cure neuralgia. Among the thousands who have proven that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure neuralgia is Mrs. R. C. Johnson, of Simpson's Corner, N. S. Mrs. Johnson says: "For upwards of ten years I was a sufferer from the awful pains of neuralgia. Over-exertion or the least exposure to a cold wave would set me nearly wild with torture. I doctored with two physicians, but they did not cure me. I then tried several advertised medicines, but found no benefit. The trouble continued at intervals that made life miserable, until six or eight months ago when a relation of mine brought me a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and urged me to try them. I used this box and then got a half dozen more, and by the time I had used them all trace of the trouble had disappeared, and as I have not since had the slightest attack I feel safe in saying that the cure is permanent." Mrs. Johnson is one of the best known ladies in the section in which she resides, and is a prominent worker in the Congregational church. Naturally her family and friends are rejoicing over her cure, and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have made many warm friends in that section as a result of their good work.

It is because Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new, warm, blood they have such great power to cure disease. They ositively cure rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, partial paralysis, kidney and liver troubles, anaemia, and the ailments from which women alone suffer. The purchaser must be careful to see that the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," is printed on the wrapper around each box. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail at 50 centss box, or six boxes for $2.50, by writing the Dr Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Blazer.

The name "blazer" was originally applied to the bright red uniform of the Lady Margaret Boat club of St. John's college, Cambridge. The brilliant scarlet which was the invariable characteristic of the Johnian "blazer" doubtless suggested the name, and as an expressive slang epithet it proved a hit. In course of time the application of the term widened and is now extended to any bright or pale colored flannel jacket, striped or plain, whether for cricket, football, tennis, boating or seaside wear.—London Standard.

CLAIMANTS TO DIVINITY.

Attempts to Impose Upon the Fanatic and Credulous.

There have been many attempts made in the history of the world by claimants to divinity to impose upon the fanatic and credulous. Perhaps the movement of this kind which attracted the greatest attention was that initiated by Joanna Southcott at the latter end of the eighteenth century. This extraordinary woman was a domestic servant in the early part of her career; but, becoming probably the victim of religious mania, she announced herself as a prophetess, and very soon, by dint of her extraordinary claims and writings, she obtained no fewer than 100,000 followers.

Joanna announced in all seriousness that she was about to become the mother of the divine Shiloh and named Oct. 19, 1814, as the date upon which the event would take place. As showing the perfect faith her followers had in her claims, it may be mentioned that they subscribed for and bought a silver cradle which cost $1,000 and that $500 was spent in pap spoons. As the date approached she shut herself up in a house specially bought for the interesting event, and the fever of excitement which reigned may be better imagined than described, for Joanna was over sixty years of age. Instead, however, of the divine child appearing the venerable prophetess herself died on the 29th of October, or ten days after the date she had herself fixed for the birth of the Messiah.

But Joanna is by no means the only example of a human being arrogating divine powers to himself or herself.

When George III. was king one Richard Brothers, a master's mate in the royal navy, suddenly announced that he was "prince of Hebrews and ruler of the world," and that therefore King George should give up the crown in his favor. His claim met with scant courtesy. He was promptly imprisoned as a criminal lunatic—though he could not have been madder than the poor old king—and kept in captivity for eleven years.

The navy seems to have been a happy hunting ground for this class of imposter at this period, for the next to appear was "Zion" Ward, an ex-shoemaker, who had served in the navy. In 1828 he had the impudence to announce himself as the divine Shiloh, who had been expected by Joanna Southcott. People were credulous then, as they are now, and "Zion" got quite a respectable following and died a wealthy man some years after. —London Answers.

FAILURES IN CANADA.

Business Difficulties More Numerous, But Liabilities Smaller.

Insolvency returns in Canada for the first nine months of the current year as compiled by Dun & Co. show the smallest total liabilities of any recent years, with the single exception of 1903, although the number of failures is slightly larger than in either of the three years immediately preceding. Compared with last year there were 959 defaults for $7,105,495, against 916 failures for $8,988,140. Of these aggregates there were 208 manufacturing failures for $2,269,992, against 225 for $3,643,261; 739 trading failures with liabilities of $4,781,320, compared with 665 last year, when the amount involved reached $5,060,986; and 12 other commercial failures for $54,183, against 20 for $283,893. Four banking disasters occurred, with liabilities of $420,000, but last year was also satisfactory in this respect; two suspensions involving only $30,749. There is no evidence of unsound conditions in Canada, the various provinces reporting about the usual proportion of failures, and no more.

The Ideal Diet.

Do the real needs of the body demand such quantities of food each day as the ordinary dietary standards call for or a man from his acquired habits has become accustomed to? A slight excess of food beyond the true physiological requirement is no doubt desirable as tending to prevent any danger of undernutrition, but any great excess must of necessity be detrimental. The ideal diet is that which suffices to meet all the wants of the body—i. e., the maintenance of body weight, nitrogen equilibrium, health, strength, vigor and endurance—and in the period of adolescence to supply material for the growth and development of the tissues of the body. Anything beyond this quantity is just so much of an excess which must inevitably do harm if continued indefinitely and detract in some measure at least from that high degree of efficiency which every enlightened man desires to attain.

CAN WALK AROUND AND DO HIS WORK

Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured W. J. Dixon's Rheumatism.

He was so bad he had to use a Stick to walk and Could not Lace his Shoe.

Barwick, Ont., Nov. 6. —(Special). —These cold, wet fall days are full of Rheumatism and nothing can be more timely than news of an effectual cure of that curse of the Canadian climate. Such a cure William John Dixon of this place is certain he has discovered in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I had an attack of typhoid fever," says Mr. Dixon, "and after I got over it Rheumatism set in. I had pains in my back and in my right hip so bad I had to use a stick to walk and had no comfort in sleeping. I could no more than dress or undress myself for nearly two months, and for three weeks I could not lace my right shoe or put my right leg on my left knee.

"Acting on my brother's advice I began to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, and after taking three boxes I was able to walk around and do my work. Now I am well and I recommend anyone who has Rheumatism to try Dodd's Kidney Pills.

The lightest of European crowns is the State crown of Great Britain, which was made for Queen Victoria. Although it weighs only two pounds and seven ounces, its value is £300,000. One enormous sapphire came from the signet of Edward the Confessor. In the Pope's treasure house are two crowns which are valued at £400,000. One of them was the gift of Napoleon to Pius VII. and contains the largest emerald in the world. The other, the gift of Queen Isabella of Spain, to Pius 16, weighs three lbs., and is worth £300,000.

English Trade Morality.

A very grave indictment has been laid against modern business methods by the bishops in the upper house of convocation. They give several specific instances of men obliged to choose between fraud and dismissal, and call for a return to that probity and honor in commercial transactions which laid the foundation of England's greatness in the past. Few people would be found ready to deny that commercial morality in England has sadly deteriorated of late. A "dry rot" seems to have set in, and it will be well for England if the baneful tendency can be arrested before it is too late.—Church Eclectic.

TAXING BACHELORS.

Penalties Have Often Been Imposed In Various Countries.

Bachelors as candidates or probationers for marriage have formed the subject for legislation from the earliest times. Penalties have often been imposed on male celibates in various countries. In proportion as the interests of the state were regarded as above those of the individual the enforcement of marriage was the more severe. In ancient Sparta it was considered a punishable crime not to marry or to marry too late in life. In Athens, though not severely punished, celibacy was discouraged in early times.

At Rome marriage was fostered by positive penalties imposed on unmarried men and sometimes even on women as well as by discrimination in favor of heads of families. In the allotment of the Campanian lands by Julius Caesar portions were given only to the fathers of three or more children. Under Augustus a law was enacted prohibiting unmarried persons below the age of sixty in men and fifty in women from taking possession of a legacy, and this was applied even to widows, who, in order to secure their part of their deceased husband's estates, were forced to marry again within a period of two years.

BLIND INSECTS.

They Act Just as Though They Had Eyes and Could See.

So far as insects of the caves are concerned the loss of sight which they gradually undergo is sufficiently well understood. The first step is a decrease in the number of the facets which make up the compound eyes, with a corresponding diminishment of the lenses and retinae. After four or five generations the eyes become useless. It would be most interesting to breed these or other blind creatures of the caves in the light, so as to find out if they would get their sight back. In all animals, including man, it is found that nature tries to compensate for loss of vision by increasing the power of the sense of touch. Thus the attennae of cave insects grow remarkably long.

It is very curious to find that nothing in their behavior suggests the fact that they are blind. They walk, run, stop, explore the ground and try to escape from the grasp of the bug hunter just as if they really saw. The light of a candle startles them as much as if they perceived it visually. It is a remarkable fact, proving that the ancestors of these creatures could see, that in the embryo stage of their existence they have eyes well developed.

Minard's Liniment Cures Distemper.

Behavior.

You cannot rightly train one to an air and manner except by making him the kind of man of whom that air is the natural expression. Nature forever puts a premium on reality. What is done for effect is seen to be done for effect; what is done for love is felt to be done for love. A man inspires affection and honor because he was not lying in wait for these. The things of a man for which we visit him were done in the dark and the cold.—From Emerson's Essay on "Behavior."

Use the safe, pleasant and effectual worm killer, Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator; nothing equals it. Procure a bottle and take it home.

An Odd Blunder.

When the British admiralty built the splendid naval barracks at Chatham they fitted up one of the largest rooms in fine style for court martials and had "Court Martial" inscribed on a big brass plate on the door. When it was about to be used for the first time the discovery was made that the regulations require all naval court martials to be held on the water.

There is Only One Eclectric Oil.—When an article, be it medicine or anything else, becomes popular, imitations invariably spring up to derive advantages from the original, which they themselves could never win on their own merits. Imitations of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil have been numerous, but never successful. Those who know the genuine are not put off with a substitute, but demand the real thing.

HEROISM IN ANIMALS.

Illustrated by a Ram That Defended a Flock of Sheep.

A writer on natural history complains that men are prone to regard masculine courage in defense of others as a virtue purely human. In reality, self sacrificing for the female sex or for the young is part of the scheme of nature, and every male thing is strong and splendid in appearance because he is the descendant of those who have proudly held and guarded "the privilege of death." Another writer tells a story which illustrates this point. Two entomologists, hunting at night, clambered over a gate with their swinging lanterns and found themselves in a field filled with sheep. The result of their coming was panic and a furious stampede. The sheep charged helter skelter away from the lanterns and huddled together at the far end of the field. But there was a ram among them, and as the flock scurried away this creature stood firm, covering the retreat. Then, steadily and majestically, the huge ram advanced with lowered head toward the mysterious lights and pressed them back to the gate. This is only one graphic story of many that might be told of masculine courage throughout nature. Man has some virtues which animals, so far as we can judge, know nothing about, but heroism—the pride of affording protection to the weak and daring death for the security of the flock—is not a human attribute alone any more than is maternal affection.

Cholera and all summer complaints are so quick in their action that the cold hand of death is upon the victims before they are aware that danger is near. If attacked do not delay in getting the proper medicine. Try a dose of Dr. J. D. Kellog's Dysentery Cordial, and you will get immediate relief. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to effect a cure.

A Veteran's Story.—George Lewis, of Shamokin, Pa., writes: "I am eighty years of age. One box cured me completely." 50 cents.—25

In Nature's Storehouse there are Cures.—Medical experiments have shown conclusively that there are medicinal virtues in even ordinary plants growing up around us which give them a value that cannot be estimated. It is held by some that nature provides a cure for every disease which neglect and ignorance have visited upon man. However, this may be, it is well known that Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, distilled from roots and herbs are a sovereign remedy in curing all disorders of indigestion.

The Pepper Vine.

The most common and widely used of all spices is pepper. It is a native of the East Indies, but is now cultivated in various parts of the tropical belt of this hemisphere. The plant is a climber and has a smooth stem sometimes twelve feet long. The fruit is about the size of a pea and when ripe is of a bright red color. In cultivation the plant is supported by poles. In some localities small trees are used instead of poles, for the best pepper is grown in a certain degree of shade.

BABY'S AWAKENING.

It ought to be a pleasure to look forward to baby' awakening. He should awaken bright, smiling and full of fun, refreshed by sleep and ready for a good time. How many parents dread their child's voice, because they know when he awakes he will cry and fret and keep everyone on the move until he falls asleep again from sheer exhaustion. These crying fits make the life of the inexperienced mother a torment. And yet baby is not crying for the fun of the thing—there is something wrong though the mother may not see anything ails the child. Try Baby's Own Tablets in cases of this kind, and we venture to say baby will wake up happy and smiling—an altogether different child. Here is proof from Mrs. John S. Sutherland, Blissfield, N.S., who says:—"My baby was terribly cross, and often kept me awake half the night before I got Baby's Own Tablets for her. Since I began giving her the Tablets, she is perfectly well, sleeps soundly all night, and wakes up bright and fresh in the morning. Baby's Own Tablets are a safe medicine for children of all ages. They cannot do anything but good. You can get them from the druggist, or by mail at 25 cents a box by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont

Patrick Henry's Grave.

Inquiry is made now and then as to where Patrick Henry is buried. The orator lies in a quiet grave on the estate in Charlotte county, Va., where he formerly lived. Red Hill is the name of the estate, which is on the Staunton river, thirty-eight miles from Lynchburg. When Patrick Henry bought the place it comprised about 3,500 acres. One of the nearest neighbors was John Randolph of Roanoke, fifteen miles away. Red Hill is now owned by Henry's grandson, William Wirt Henry.

New York, Oct. 16.—Apparently suffering from hydrophobia—she was bitten by a dog thirteen years ago—Amanda Jones, aged 27, was taken from her home to a hospital, and she will probably be sent to Bellevue for further observation as one of the most extraordinary cases in the experience of the physicians.

According to her family, the patient when 14 years old was bitten on both hands by a dog, but the wounds were cauterized and no ill-effects appeared until last June, when she suddenly developed all the usual symptoms of hydrophobia, and became so violent that the combined strength of four men would hardly suffice to keep her in restraint.

She recovered from this attack and was in good health until a week ago when the spell recurred. Removed to a hospital she apparently recovered, but Sunday night the same symptoms appeared. Foaming at the mouth and barking like a dog, the young woman rushed about the apartments, wrecking furniture and attempting to injure anyone who approached her. She was only controlled by the use of opiates.

Bondsmen.

In his "History of Coal Mining" B. W. Galloway points out that what appear to be traces of a primitive state of servitude existed in Staffordshire, England, where the laborers employed in the haulage of coal continued to be known as "bondsmen," a name probably coming down from a remote period, a supposition which receives support from a peculiar service required of them known as "buildases." This consisted in working at times in the morning without receiving any payment beyond a drink of ale. This custom of exacting labor without pay is supposed to represent some ancient service required from their tenants by the monks of the abbey of Buildwas, in Shropshire, whence the name was derived.

Ancient Thomas Parr.

Thomas Parr lived 152 years and was buried in Westminster abbey. Born in Shropshire, England, in 1483, Parr led the life of an agricultural laborer in his native place till blindness and extreme old age kept him indoors. Early in 1635, his longevity having made him famous, Thomas, earl of Arundel, took him to London to be exhibited to Charles I. He was lodged in the Strand, but the change of air and diet told upon him, and in November of that same year he died. He was described as a good looking man of medium size, with a deep chest and a thick beard. He attributed his excellent health to moderation in eating and drinking.

The Spinning Mule.

Samuel Crompton, a boy of sixteen, copied the best features of the spinning machine invented by Hargreaves and Arkwright, added to them some of his own and, after three months of anxious and secret experimenting, produced the first spinning mule, so called because it was a kind of hybrid between Hargreaves' jenny and Arkwright's water frame. The raw apprentice lad was, however, no match in cunning for the cotton lords, who soon found out the secret of his new machine and shamelessly robbed him of the fruits of his ingenuity. Many years afterward, it is true, they used their influence to secure for him a parliament grant of £5,000, but he was then a broken hearted and disappointed man, to whom the money came too late to be of any real service.

A Woman's Tongue.

"Woman's tongue is her sword, which she never lets rust," wrote Mme. Necker. "The tongue is not steel, but it cuts," wrote Erasmus. "The tongue kills more than the sword," wrote Vesik, the Ottoman statesman. Solomon, the embodiment of wisdom, wrote, "It is better to dwell in the corner of the housetop than with a brawling woman and in a wide house." And St. James wrote, "The tongue is a little member and boasteth great things." However, the good King Arthur said, "Deny not to woman the proper use of her tongue."

Painful, Fatal Kidney Disease

Calls for Immediate and Active Treatment with

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Kidney disease—marked by backache, pains in the limbs, scanty, dark colored urine, puffiness about the eyes, dropsical swelling and gradual loss of flesh—is always to be dreaded both on account of the suffering it entails and because of its fatality.

The kidneys and liver share alike the responsibility of filtering poisons from the blood, and it is therefore necessary to regulate both these organs in order to effect a cure of kidney disease.

This fact accounts for the extraordinary success of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which is the only treatment obtainable having a direct and combined action on the liver and kidneys.

For years evidence has been piling up which goes to prove that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have positively cured obstinate and complicated cases of kidney disease which defied physicians and ordinary kidney medicines.

Nor is this to be wondered at when it is remembered that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are the result of the long and varied experience of the great American physician and author—Dr. A. W. Chase.

Captain Wm. Smith, a veteran of the Crimean War, living at Revelstoke, B. C., writes:—"I can testify to the benefit derived from Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. For years I was a sufferer from kidney disease, and could get no relief for it. The doctor examined me and analyzed my urine and told me that I had chronic disease of the kidneys. As his medicine and told me that I had chronic disease of the kidneys. As his medicine and told me that I had chronic disease of the kidneys. As his medic

What a lovely day for a sale and such a good invention is a boat, why men who choose the sea for a living have a better time I think than many who live on the earth. Why certainly every one must choose for themselves but there is great danger on board ship that you can get away from on the land. I know for a truth that once a fire starts on a ship and in mid-ocean with a storm on, only an Almighty God of mercy can save human life. Yes but don't you think men ought to prepare for just such disasters or trouble. Well I know a man who had a praying mother of the most loving kind. She was always trying to warn her boy from drinking strong liquor, and the men who have such unhealthy habits. She would point out the men who spoiled their own lives and ruined both home and soul. But his mother was too particular, she was always thinking some evil of men who sold liquor, and besides lots of others went there But five years after when he was in an asylum and trying to take Medicine to cure him of a craving for drink, he was often heard to say, oh if I had only heeded my mother's warning. So God is calling also to us to watch and keep praying lest we also enter into temptation.

LIVE STOCK QUOTATIONS.

Export Cattle Firmer and all Grass Fed Stock Has Been Marketed.

Information in regard to the live stock situation in Britain is of the most meagre character, but on the whole the tone of the market is firmer, due mainly to the smaller receipts, owning to the heavy decline in market prices. Shipments from the west have fallen off. Heavy export steers at point of shipment $3, butchers, weighed off cars at Winnipeg, $2.50. Montreal review: The cattle market is considerably stronger in England, there being a slight increase in the markets on the other side. Liverpool market on Canadians $9.50 to $10.50; ranchers being $3.25 to $9.25. Local live stock markets about steady. Offerings of cattle were about same as usual, quality being very poor.

C. P. R. IMPROVEMENTS.

$1,250,000 TO BE EXPENDED ON THE CROW'S NEST RAILWAY.

The C.P.R. spent $800,000 during the current year in making concrete waterways under the roadbed, and providing permanent concrete foundations for the bridges between Lethbridge and Kootenay Landing, says the Cranbrook Herald.

Besides the expenditure on culverts and bridge foundations the C.P.R. during the past summer spent $58,000 on ballasting the line; $30,000 on widening the embankments; $9,000 on taking down and removing loose rock from the sides of rock-cuttings and such places as there was a liability of those masses falling and obstructing the line and endangering life. A further sum of $19,000 was spent on clearing the right of way, making in those departments alone an outlay of $116,000.

$416,000 is a very pretty penny indeed, to be laid out on one section of one line, but it is only abagatelle compared with what is determined upon for next year. It is decided that the entire 211 miles of line from Lethbridge to Kootenay Landing Landing shall be relaid with new steel. Each mile will take about 125 tons of rails, or say 26,375 tons for the entire distance. Each ton of rails will cost (exclusive of freight) $83, or $869,-275. Labor will cost about $120,000 and the ballasting of the road for the new rails will mean an outlay of $211,000. Extra expenses of one kind or another will exhaust the appropriation of $1,250,-000.

The effect of the improvements will be to make the road from Lethbridge to Kootenay Landing identical in permanence and general equipment with the C.P.R. main arteries; while the object is to secure that the running conditions over the Crows Nest division shall be as good, safe and comfortable as those which exist between Spokane and St. Paul, Minn., via the C. P. R. and the Soo Line system.

From this it will be seen that the C. P. R. means to step into direct competition with the United States roads for the transport of passengers from the North West States to the eastern sea board. It may not be generally known, but it is the fact, that the actual distance from St. Paul via North Portal, Moosejaw, Medicine Hat and Cranbrook to Spokane is shorter than any route which can be followed entirely on the south side of the 49th parallel. An actual saving of time will also be effected by the adoption of this new route.

Another aspect of this most important matter is the coal business which will be created between the Hosmer coal mines of the C. P. R. and the city and neighborhood of Spokane when the Spokane International is completed. When the charter of the B. C. Southern railway was taken over by the C. P. R. that company was expressly debarred from opening or operating coal mines of its own until the year 1907. This condition binds them to a certain extent to the Crows Nest Pass Coal Co., but recently it got possession of the Hosmer fields and have developed them in readiness to start operations the moment the conditions of the charter permits them to do so. Some people state that the C. P. R. has contracts now practically closed to deliver 100 cars of coal a day to Spokane as soon as the Spokane-International is completed. This may or may not be the case; one familiar with the conditions said that with regard to the grades which will have to be encountered and dealt with between Hosmer and Spokane Junction, that it is merely a question of providing a few big engines to push his trains up hill this side of Wardner, and that they will have as much power as they may want for any and all emergencies.

The C. P. R. burns on the Crows Nest section alone, over $16,000 worth of coal per month. What a saving the operation of the Hosmer mines will mean for the company can be realized from this one fact It is likely that coke ovens will go in at Hosmer, and that from them the Trail smelter will be supplied in the future. If that comes to pass (it is merely a reasonable surmise on the part of the Herald) it will tend to decreasing the smelting charges all round.

There will also be a heavy expenditure in straightening the road between Medicine Hat and Macleod, so that in a short time the Crows Nest road will be equal in every respect to the Main line.

The near approach of the Municipal Elections affords an opportunity for the publication of a slate or platform and we, therefore, submit the following as embracing most of the questions which should be taken up during the next year. Candidates for the Mayoralty and Council might well be asked how they stand on the following questions :

1. City Charter.
   Are you in favor of acquiring further powers for town development?
2. Sewerage.
   What portion of the Sewerage scheme are you in favor of executing at the present time?
3. Water Filtration.
   Are you in favor of installing public filters?
4. Standpipe.
   Are you in favor of erecting a standpipe?
5. Permanent Sidewalks.
   In what portion of the town would you build granolithic sidewalks and if the whole is not so supplied how would you deal with the remainder.
6. Scavenging.

CHURCHES.

Church of England, Roman Catholic, Presbyterian, Baptist, Methodist, Salvation Army.

When life's autumn comes, women, worn out by the burdens of motherhood, yet shrink from that second "change of life" which will banish these burdens forever. They fear a change in form, in feature, in personal attractiveness. Such fears are largely warranted by the effects which this change produces in many women. But no woman need let these fears trifle her.

Those who have used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription do not suffer from the change of life either in face, form or feelings as do other women. This fact is due to the intimate connection of the general health with the health of the organs peculiarly feminine. By preserving the health of these organs, and relieving the system from the debilitating drains, ulcers and inflammations which sap its health, "Favorite Prescription" paves the way for this natural change to come in Nature's way, without the loss of capacity to please others or personal inability to enjoy life.

"Your 'Favorite Prescription' brought me safely through that difficult period, called change of life," writes Mrs. Mary Bramberger, of 34 E. Antony St., Portland, Oregon. "This change made a very unpleasant disturbance through my entire system. I had hot and cold flashes, sick headaches, became excited, flustrated, nervous and irritable. My appetite was fitful and for days I was unable to eat a fair meal. My aunt recommended me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it made a great change for the better. Within two weeks the unpleasant feelings had disappeared. I have a husband and eight children so have the care of a large family but was able to attend to my household duties without any difficulty and passed the period without any more trouble. I can recommend your 'Favorite Prescription' as a grand medicine for women."

You may be willing that somebody else shall say that their baby is "just as good" as yours, but you don't want that baby substituted for yours. Let dealers say what they like about other medicines being "just as good" but don't let them substitute anything for "Favorite Prescription." It is absolutely unequaled.

Unbranded stock is commencing to ramble. We hear of one fine colt having left its mother. Horses are good stock now. They should be branded up.

Gros Ventre school roll numbers sixteen scholars. Average attendance last week, twelve. That's better than having the kiddies running wild and the school property going to wreck.

The farmers are busy ploughing and fitting the land up for an early start next spring, when there will be a greatly increased acreage put under crop.

Rev. H. V. Lowle-Hooper has returned to his work on the Mission a full fledged deacon.

Andre Rathe met with a severe accident while working in the lumber camp on the Cypress Hills. He was engaged in felling trees when one of them lodged, swinging around and crushed him to the ground. It was thought for some time that he was fatally injured. He is now progressing favorably towards recovery.

A few years ago the ranchers spent a large amount of money in order to check the ravages of wolves Now they are up against another pest that is causing a great deal more loss to the country at large than the wolves ever did. That is the unstinted use of settlers dogs on stock, both day and night. The country is settling up fast and as each settler comes along he makes sure to have one or more dogs with him. He may not have one head of stock—that makes no difference—he must have the dogs anyway, and the poorer he is, the more dogs he appears to need. And they (the dogs), are a pest to the ranchers.

You take it in winter, after a chinook, when the ground is slippery Turn a few of those dogs loose after a bunch of cattle and it is not hard to figure what will happen to some of the best cows. Then at night a bunch of horses feed along close to a settler and, the first thing they know, they are stampeded by dogs. The next day you can follow their trail by broken wire fences, dead and maimed horses. Sometimes one of those dogs dies suddenly, and it is supposed some injured rancher has given him a pill.

Now if this is so it is not as it should be. If those dogs have law on their side then stock must go. If they have not, then something should be done at once to stop this destruction of stock. I have heard some of the ranchers say that it was bad enough to be crowded out but to be dogged out was more than they would stand. There is a difference of opinion about what is a legal fence. Some claim that three wires is the regular thing; others appear to think that one wire and two dogs are all right.

There is one thing sure, if this dog nuisance is not stopped by the proper authorities, and that soon, I am afraid there will be trouble.

FALL WORK IN THE GARDEN.

We generally think that garden work cannot be done to advantage in fall, but the fact is that a great deal can be done at this season that will anticipate the work of spring, and it is well worth while to do it. What we do now will not have to be done when the rush of other spring work comes upon us, and because it can be done leisurely, it is likely to be better done than when we work under pressure. Everything in the line of ordinary spring work that can be done now we may look upon as so much gained.

The first thing to do is to go over the ground and clear away all refuse Pull up the dead annuals and burn them. Cut away the stalks of the perennials. Remove racks and trellises to a place of shelter from the storms that would harm them more than several season's use. In short, make the garden as tidy a place, in every way as possible.

Then decide where you are going to have your beds next year, and cover that portion of the garden with the very best fertilizer at your disposal. Nothing is better than old well-rotted manure. When it is scattered evenly over the soil, spade or plough up your beds. Spade them to the depth of a least a foot, working the fertilizer in among the clods as you throw them up. But do not attempt to make the soil mellow now. If you do, it will settle, and become so compact during winter that when spring comes it will be necessary to spade it over again. Leave it just as thrown from the spade and let the elements work on it during the winter. Frost and spring rains will mellow it, and when the time comes to put in your seed, about all you will have to do, to put it in proper condition, will be to go over it with hoe and iron rake. Spring spading will not be necessary.

Before spading your beds, you should think out your next season's garden well. Decide on any changes you desire to make in location and size. Decide just what you will have and where you will have it. Make a diagram of it on paper. This will give you something to work to when the spring comes. You will know just where everything belongs, and this will greatly expedite matters. Unless you do this in advance of the season, you are quite likely to do things without system, and the result will be anything but satisfactory. Plan ahead, and, having made a plan, hold to it.

When the work of the fall is done, collect the tools with which you have done your work and store them away where they will be kept dry. But, before storing them, clean them well and then give each one of them a coat of oil. This will prevent rust ing and add much to the life of the tools. A great deal of money is wasted every year by leaving garden tools exposed to the weather. Tools properly cared for will last nearly as long again as neglected tools will.

SELF-RELIANCE IS A GOOD TEACHER

We often find that boys who have educated themselves in the country, almost without schooling or teachers make the most vigorous thinkers. They may not be quite as polished or cultivated in some ways, but they have something better than polish, and that is mental vigor, originality of method, and independence. They do not lean upon their schooling, or upon their diplomas; necessity has been their teacher, and they have been forced to act for themselves and be practical; they know little of theories, but they know what will work. They have gained power by solving their own problems. Such self-educated, self-made men carry weight in their communities because they are men of power and think vigorously and strongly; they have learned to concentrate the mind.

Self-help is the only help that will make strong vigorous lives. Self-reliance is a great educator and early poverty a good teacher. Necessity has ever been the priceless spur which has called man out of himself and spurred him on to his goal.

Grit is more than a match for almost any handicap. It overcomes obstacles and abolishes difficulties. It is the man who makes an opportunity, and does not wait for it—the man who helps himself and does not wait to be helped,—that makes the strong thinker and vigorous operator

It is he who dares to be himself and to work by his own programme, without imitating others, who wins. —Orison Swett Morden, in "Success"

MAJORITIES ARE CUT DOWN.

The Mail and Empire commenting on the Dominion by-election results says: "The opponents of machine rule have every reason to be encouraged by the results of yesterday's voting. In the east, Antigonish has reduced its ministerial majority from 309 to 247. Public opinion is moving there. Ontario has also done well. North York has cut down the Government majority from 962 to 500. In West Lambton, the majority of 447 has declined to 200, and in Wentworth, the county of Liberal antecedents, the Conservative candidate has been victorious. The results show that the people are thinking, and that great masses of them in every constituency are changing. There is a gradual falling away from the Government. In the course of a year or so the slide will take the proportions of an avalanche."

FARMING IN THE ARID BELT.

In Canada and the United States there has, during the past year, been considerable discussion on the subject of dry land farming. In both countries there are large and fertile areas of land that is non-irrigable, or can be irrigated only at considerable expense, and it is these districts that the methods of the dry-land farmer must make profitable and productive. Nor should this hope be in vain. Russia, which always looms up as a grain growing country, produces the best of her wheat in the provinces east of the Volga, where the annual precipitation is less than fifteen inches, and millions of bushels are annually grown on land where the rainfall amounts to from six to ten inches annually. In one district in the state of Orogon yields of from twenty bushels upwards are produced with an annual rainfall of slightly less than nine inches, while in the driest regions of Western Canada fifteen inches is considered very low and many districts which are spoken of as dry can boast an average for nine years of over eighteen inches. In almost every district are tobe found farmers who can be counted on to produce an average crop every year. These men are adopting such methods as experience has proved profitable, and success is crowning their efforts. What the ignorant peasants of Russia can do we can do and do better. We must combine our scientific knowledge with better methods of practice, and should in that way accomplish excellent results. There will be ample work here for our southern experimental farm. The breeding and importation of hardy drought-resisting varieties, the effects of wind-breaks and of soil cultivation on the conservation of moisture are questions that will engage the thoughtful attention of the man in charge of the work at the new farm. —Farmer's Advocate.

ADJOURNED INQUEST.

The adjourned inquiry into the death of William Behnke was held in the Court House on Tuesday evening, before Coroner Smyth and the jury Messrs. J. Borradaile, L. B. Cochran, T. J. Fleager, H. J. Kerr, R. Nelsen, Jas. Fleming.

The jury having answered to their names, Dr. Smith was sworn and said: he made a postmortem examination of the body of the man William Behnke. There were no external marks of violence upon the body. He examined the brain and found it slightly congested in the lower portion of the cerebrum. The lungs were congested, otherwise they were apparantly healthy. The heart was normal though there was a considerable quantity of fluid blood on the right side. The organs were mostly healthy. The stomach and liver had been sent away intact for analysis. There was nothing that would enable him to say what was the cause of death. The finding of the analist will be necessary to give the cause of death.

In reply to a question by a juror Congestion of the brain is a symptom of morphine poisoning, but would be present in an overdose of alcohol.

Coroner—I wired to Alliance, Nebraska, to Fred Behnke. I don't know whether he is father, brother, or a son of the deceased and I received this in reply.

Bury William Behnke in the place where he is sick.

He does not say whether he is coming here or not. If he does not come I will write to him.

The coroner than read a declaration which he had made as to the circumstances connected with the man's arrival here and he will embody this with the evidence. He stated that at his request Insp. Parker had obtained a report from the Police at Pincher Creek, from which it appeared, the deceased was driven in a bus by Chas. Collins from the town to the station a distance of two miles, to meet the four o'clock train. When Collins drove again to the station to meet the night train Behnke was still there and was either ill or intoxicated. There was a tall man with him, Collins and the tall man put Behnke on the train. When Conductor Niblock saw the man he said that the man was not fit to travel, but the tall man said that he would be alright as he was only going as far as Macleod. On hearing this Conductor Niblock allowed the man to travel.

Mr. Cochran said he thought they should try and find out what Behnke did and what happened to him between four and ten o'clock that night

The Coroner and the other jurors agreed with Mr. Cochran.

The Coroner said that as the station is two miles from the town, the station agent probably knows something about his movements during that time.

The jury then asked that Sergt. Quinn go down to Pincher Creek and make a full investigation.

Inspector Parker who was present informed the jury that he would carry out their wishes. Sergt. Quinn should leave for Pincher Creek on the first available train.

The Coroner informed the jury that in a wallet found on deceased's person there was an Alliance, Nebraska homestead entry, dated Aug. 18th 1904. There was also a draft in deceased's favor for $907.75, two promissory notes one for $110.00 and another for $73.00 from men in Nebraska and a railway ticket from North Portal to Pincher Creek issued Sept. 17th and expiring Nov. 17th. There was also $152.00 in cash.

Mr. Fleager said that he had heard the man was carrying a gunny sack

The coroner said he had no sack with him when he arrived in Medicine Hat.

Mr. Nelson said he heard that too and he thought it important that the tall man be found, as perhaps he could clear the matter up.

Mr. Cochran—Mr. Niblock said the man had no bag with him when he was put on the train.

The inquiry was then adjourned until Dec. 8th.

We understand that there are now very little grounds to suspect anything wrong. Behnke was about 71 years of age, came out here two years ago and brought some stock which he left with a friend named Bredtz to range for him while the deceased returned to the States. During his last visit he was several times ill and was subject to fits. The tall man referred to is a resident of Pincher and it was by request that he helped to put the man on the train. At present there appears every reason to believe the poor man died from natural causes.

Innisfail Was a Tie.

The count of ballots in the Innisfail contest resulted in a tie, 407 votes being cast for each candidate. The returning officer promptly broke the tie by voting for Mr. Simpson, the liberal candidate, and declaring him elected. To obtain the tie, it is stated that the returning officer counted in three objected ballots, which according to the elections ordinance should have been submitted to a court of revision.—Lethbridge News.

STANLEY CUP TEAM IS COMING.

OTTAWAS WILL BRING WEST ALL OF LAST SEASONS CRACK SEPTET.

The following from the Ottawa Journal regarding the visit of the Ottawa hockey team to Winnipeg next month will prove of interest to local enthusiasts:

"Every member of the Ottawa hockey team, who assisted in the defence of the Stanley Cup last winter will go to Winnipeg with the team on its barnstorming raid through the west. That means the band will have the following boys at least: Alf. Smith Harvey Pulford, Harry Westwick, Frank McGee, Arthur Moore, Billy Gilmour, Dave Finnie, Hamby Shore and Horace Gaul. Now it is just possible the management might open up a bit and include Nick Bawlf, Fred White and "Bones" Allan, White and "Bones" participated in at least three of the Federal League matches last winter, while Bawlf always had his skates on ready to jump in the game when called upon. The boys deserve the trip and should get the best that's coming.

"The team will of course be under the wings of the club executive, led by Messrs Shillington, Dickson and Murphy, and will go direct to Winnipeg where three games will be played with the Winnipeg Rowing Club. The itinerary will in all probability include Kenora where Tom Phillips and his Rat Poetage Thistles hang out.

MAY GO FURTHER WEST.

"It is just possible the team will penetrate the very deep west. Brandon is a great hockey town and will surely be visited. If inducements are justifiable, the team will push on to Regina and Moosejaw, and if the invasion reaches that far west it is probable a dash will be made through Calgary to Vancouver and Victoria Every city of any size along the coast will make an effort to book at least one game with the Stanley Cup holders. They will attract more than Ringling Bros.' circus, even without the bill posters. Last winter when the Ottawas were slated to play in Cornwall the little city of factories had every barn, stable, fence and telegraph pole placarded with huge posters heralding their appearance thus: "The Champions are coming." "See the Stanley Cup Holders. Champions of the World." And that little rink down Paradise alley was packed to the rafters.

"The players are all jubilant over the proposed trip and arrangements will be completed at once."

Medicine Hat Curling Club.

An enthusiastic meeting of curlers was held in Cousin's Hall, on Tuesday evening, Mr. J. H. Collier, (President), in the chair. The following officers, skips, etc. were elected:

Officers:—President, J. H. Collier; 1st Vice President, A. E. Whiffen; 2nd Vice President, T. Hutchinson; Hon. Secretary, O. W. Kealy.

Executive:—W. Cousins, D. G. White, F. O. Sissons, O. Beeton, F. Gilroy.

Club Skips:—W. Huckvale, C. S. Pingle, J. H. Binns, J. L. Brown, J. E. McCellan, F. S. Pingle, J. Benson, A. DesBrisay, J. Fleming.

Ice Committee:—W. S. Currie, R. F. Walton, C. S. Pingle.

Note & Comment.

[By OBSERVER.]

The dust last Friday made people inquire why the Council did not keep the street sprinklers going. It was fierce. Luckily we get few such days, but why the sprinklers were not in evidence was a question upon the lips of everybody whether they had to be out in it or not.

The surface of the streets have broken up since the water carts, like the gophers, went into winter quarters, that the wind had a great opportunity of whirling real estate around the heads of those unfortunate people who had to be out. It reminded me of those little lines I once paraphrased and printed in this column more than a year ago:

Oh, the dust, the beautiful? dust,
Filling the eyes and the ears of the just
Over the housetops, over the street
Over the heads of bad people we meet.
Dancing, flirting, swirling along
The sweet smelling dust, it can do nothing wrong.

It has been suggested more than once that this town should drill for oil and each time the statement has been made that the Ordinance will permit the town to drill for gas, but not for oil.

People have to be brought here to utilize our gas, but oil could be shipped to any part of the world. Then consider what oil would for us if we sprinkled the streets with it. In California crude oil is sprinkled on the streets and roads and in a short time all the dust harden's and crusts on the surface until it forms a pavement as good as asphalt.

When the figures of the millinery slaughterhouses are counted up, says the "Animals' Friend," they are rather appalling.

"Ten million birds a year, it was estimated, were required to supply the women of the United States with suitable hat trimming; forty thousand terns in a single season on Cape Cod, a million boboliuks near Philadelphia in a single month. England imports between twenty-five million and thirty million birds a year.

"Altogether it is estimated that between two hundred million and three hundred million birds perish each year to trim the hats of the women of the world."

According to experiments which have been conducted under the auspices of the Chicago University by Doctors Gutherie and Carrell, a time may soon come when worn-out hearts in human beings can be re-placed. In the course of experiments with dogs they learnt many important lessons on this point, and they begin their new experiments in October. "What we have learned said Dr. Carrell, "gives us hope that some day we may replace a wounded or worn-out heart in a human being with a healthy, youthful, strong one from a living monkey." Dr. Carrell was formerly a surgeon in the French army, and is at the University of Chicago only to conduct his experiments. "This work is only in its infancy," he said. "I expect it will be carried on by others until finally it will be a great and lasting benefit to mankind."

Mrs. J. C. Beveridge entertained a number of her friends to a most enjoyable progressive whist party on Friday afternoon.

The Polmatier Sisters appeared in the Opera House last night and were accorded very good patronage. They presented an excellent entertainment this company who fully sustained and the Lacrosse Club are to be congratulated upon their selection of their excellent reputation.

The Hospital Ball.

The annual ball given in connection with the General Hospital, took place in the Opera House, on Tuesday evening. A good number of citizens attended and as a number of tickets had been sold to persons who did not attend the result will be a very nice net amount towards the funds of the hospital. Messrs E. J. Fewings, O. W. Kealy, A. E. Whiffen and Dr. Smyth had charge of the arrangements and deserve much praise for the hard work they put into it and the satisfactory result. The ball room was very tastefully decorated by Mr. E. W. Moore and the Fire Brigade made a loan of a quantity of bunting for the purpose.

The music was supplied by the following ladies and gentlemen—Mrs. Timing, Miss Allingham and Messrs J. Leonard, C. S. Pingle and Dr. Smith, while Miss Wood and Miss Mullins contributed the music for the extra dances.

Croup Is Deadly.

The Hospital Ball.

The annual ball given in connection with the General Hospital, took place in the Opera House, on Tuesday evening. A good number of citizens attended and as a number of tickets had been sold to persons who did not attend the result will be a very nice net amount towards the funds of the hospital. Messrs E. J. Fewings, O. W. Kealy, A. E. Whiffen and Dr. Smyth had charge of the arrangements and deserve much praise for the hard work they put into it and the satisfactory result. The ball room was very tastefully decorated by Mr. E. W. Moore and the Fire Brigade made a loan of a quantity of bunting for the purpose.

The music was supplied by the following ladies and gentlemen—Mrs. Timming, Miss Attingham and Messrs J. Leonard, C. S. Pingle and Dr. Smith, while Miss Wood and Miss Mullins contributed the music for the extra dances.

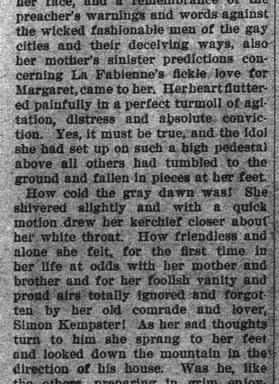
The Witch of Cragenstone

By ANITA CLAY MUNOZ,

Author of "In Love and Truth"

Copyright, 1903, by Anita Clay Munoz

"Here's a crown, Tobias, for us good news that thou hast brought," Taunston cried exultantly. "The white livered poltroon hath great influence at court, and his detention might have brought us trouble. Once down the mountain we will see that he doth not return again until the evil woman we seek to punish hath received her just deserts. Hetty, see that thou doth my bidding," he said roughly, pushing her from out of his way with the handle of his whip. "Spring up behind, Tobias; we'll ride to the inn. Dost not hear shouting? Methinks already the village is astir."



He gave spurs to his horse. Hetty's breath came in gasps as she stood with her hands clasped over her heart watching her brother and his companion speed away. She sank down upon the doorstep and tried to collect her thoughts. What news was this she had just heard? Her mind was dazed. Handsome, gallant Sir Godfrey La Fabienne only a fair day wooer? Did a man live with heart base enough to desert one so sweet and trusting as Margaret?

Heartsick, bewildered and bitterly disappointed, with all her romantic illusions dispelled, Hetty covered up her face, and a remembrance of the preacher's warnings and words against the wicked fashionable men of the gay cities and their deceiving ways, also her mother's sinister predictions concerning La Fabienne's fickle love for Margaret, came to her. Her heart fluttered painfully in a perfect turmoil of agitation, distress and absolute conviction. Yes, it must be true, and the idol she had set up on such a high pedestal above all others had tumbled to the ground and fallen in pieces at her feet.

How cold the gray dawn was! She shivered slightly and with a quick motion drew her kerchief closer about her white throat. How friendless and alone she felt, for the first time in her life at odds with her mother and brother and for her foolish vanity and proud airs totally ignored and forgotten by her old comrade and lover, Simon Kempster! As her sad thoughts turn to him she sprang to her feet and looked down the mountain in the direction of his house. Was he, like the others, preparing in grim enjoyment to go to the Mayland farm to see Margaret accused and taken? She shook her head in the negative. Surely one so good and stout of heart as Simon could not believe that sweet Margaret would sinfully connive with the devil to wreak harm on others! Wringing her hands distractedly, the girl walked to the little gate and—to the house. Was that a wreath of smoke curling out of the new fashioned stone chimney that Simon had so lately and with such pride built out on the side of his kitchen, or was it only the mist rising?

Hetty gazed wistfully in the direction of the white cloud for a few moments, then, throwing up her head with a great show of indifference, retraced her steps to the door and sank down upon the wooden bench. But a strong feeling of unrest was upon her, for soon she was at the gate again. Then, as an impulse seized her, she ran down the roadway toward Simon's house.

On, on she sped, so fast one would suppose she was afraid her pride might urge her to turn back again, holding up her light skirts as she went. The fresh morning breeze tossed her hair about and, with its rough caresses, brought the red color back to her pale face. Once or twice it grew so strong and pushed against her with such force that one might think it had no sympathy with her project and wished to push her backward, but she ran on unheeding until, breathless and panting she reached Kempster's door. From her place on the step she could see into the kitchen. Logs were burning in the chimney, and a hissing caldron of water was steaming above them.

Hetty put her hands together over her heart as she saw Simon sitting on the settle before it. His broad back was toward the window, but she could see that he was leaning over dejectedly, resting his head on his hand. Softly lifting the latch, she entered and stood just inside the door. Kempster was evidently deep in thought, for the faint sounds did not disturb him.

"Simon!"

He sprang to his feet and looked at her in the greatest astonishment.

"Am I wanted? Doth any one need me?" he asked, unable to attribute any other reason for her coming.

"Nay, thou'rt not wanted," Hetty replied falteringly, "and—and no one needs thee, Simon."

"Wilt take a chair, mistress?" His manner was civil, but his face was grave and stern. He resumed his seat on the settle. Hetty came forward and knelt before the fire, holding out one small hand to the blaze.

"I am cold," she said shiveringly.

"I' the morning at sunrise there is apt to be a chill i' the air," Simon said indifferently. "Didst wear no woolen about thee?"

He looked around the room. Hetty hastily put out her hand to prevent his rising.

"Nay, get me nothing." She sighed a gentle, fluttering sigh. "The bright fire on thy hearth, Simon, hath already warmed me."

Kempster regarded the small, graceful figure in its gray dress and white kerchief, kneeling there in the glare of the fire so close to him, with pain tugging at his heart and suspicion in his mind. Was this a new mood—just another of her tantalizing ways? Had she come back only to worry and torment him? Hetty, glancing up, met his quiet glance.

"When thou'rt ready to go," he remarked, with studied coldness, "happen I can find a woolen for thee."

At his words her heart sank within her. Of a certain he had ceased to love her, so she would speak of other matters

"Thank thee, Simon. When I go an' I am a trifle warmer I will take it."

Then, as he did not speak, she added mournfully, "Simon, didst know that the council hath ordered our Margaret to the prison?"

"Yea, the fearsome news hath reached me."

"Ah' that the man she loved better than her life hath deserted her in her hour of peril?"

Kempster sat erect with a sudden start.

"The courtier, Sir Godfrey La Fabienne?" he asked in surprise.

She choked back a sob.

"None other, as thou knowest. Ah, lackaday, bonny Margaret!"

"Thy news doth surprise me," he said quietly, "as the knight had ever an open countenance and a manly bearing. But I ween 'tis not uncommon for love to grow between a man and woman all on one side."

Hetty laid a supplicating hand on his arm.

Simon's breath came quickly, but his voice was stern as he said: "Hadst not better take a chair? Thou'lt find but poor comfort on the floor."

"Nay, Simon," she cried tearfully, "be not so churlish to thine old playtime friend! Hast forgotten Hetty, little Hetty Taunston, who when thou wert but a lad, long before thy mother died, did rise at break o' day to meet her at the bars and help her drive the cows to grass?"

Simon turned his eyes toward her and regarded searchingly the sweet upturned face. What new coquetry was this? He set his teeth and steeled his heart against her.

"Such pleasant friendship as hath ever been between us, Simon," she began in a low voice, hesitatingly, "should not be broken off forever for want of a word of explanation. Simon, I—I remember the words thou did speak to me that day i' the dairy, when I was so set up because a coward courtier—a man who covered his black heart with fine raiment and wore a gallant bearing to deceive folk—did remark about my beauty that I flouted thee and did scorn the offer of thy honest heart and faithful love."

Kempster regarded her seriously, anxiously; once he reached out his hand toward her, but drew it back hastily.

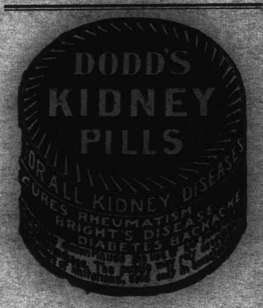
"So proud was I an' so full of idle dreams of a gay life in Paris that at the time I scarce did miss thee," she continued, "but anon I became lonely, dissatisfied, unhappy and did not really know what did all me until I met the quiet scorn of thy glance and knew myself for the foolish, worthless maid that I was. Simon," she cried softly, "it hurt me to learn that I had lost the regard of one good man; my heart ached, an' I was sore troubled."

"Hetty"—he spoke her name sharply—"say no more unless thou doth truly mean thy words!"

"I' truth, I mean so much more than I have said to thee," she went on sadly, "that I despair of ever making my lips frame the words my heart doth bid them speak."

A faint sound of the noisy clamoring of the crowd at the Mayland farm was swept in through the window by the breeze. Hetty shuddered and, edging nearer to Simon, laid her small hand on his.

"Forgive me. No longer shut thy kind heart against me, Simon. Be my friend again. 'Tis all I ask."



He threw up his head with a sharp, indrawn breath.

"Hetty, thou must speak out what thou dost mean!" he cried. "There can be but one thing between us, and that is—love! Before God, I will be thy friend, but I must be thy husband also."

A glow of color mantled her face and throat.

"If thou would deem me worthy," she faltered, with drooping head, "an' I were one-half good enough, I would ask thee to o'erlook the past, to forgive me, Simon, an' to take me for thy true and faithful wife. I would promise to love thee dearly."

TO BE CONTINUED.

There is nothing more necessary to equip people for the "strenuous life" of modern times than good food. Man physically should be like a well-regulated machine, and nothing contributes to this end more than food that is not only pleasing to the taste but that also strengthens and nourishes. It has been demonstrated that there is no other food made from flour so rich in nutriment and body-building elements as are soda biscuits. This is saying much for ordinary crackers, and much more for Mooney's Perfection Cream Sodas, which are widely recognized as the most perfect soda biscuits in all Canada. They are crisp and delicious, delightful to the taste and always wholesome. Being a perfect food, highly nourishing and easily digested, they are fitted to repair wasted strength, preserve health and prolong life. Mooney's Sodas are the result of years of study of the best methods of producing superior crackers. They are manufactured in the cleanest and best-equipped bakeries in all Canada. The workmen are the most skilled on the continent, and the materials used are of a very high order. The flour is a special blend, milled only for the Mooney factory, and the butter and cream are procured direct from the famous dairies of Western Ontario. Not an ounce of "inferior butter" finds its way into Mooney goods. The materials being balanced, the result is a toothsome and pure food, easily digested, and converted into brawn, bone and brain. No other soda cracker quite compares with them, and no other receives such a generous welcome at a table where they have once become known. The pre-eminence they have attained is due to genuine merit, as they tempt beyond resistance all who like good things to eat.

UNAVOIDABLE.

That the geographical area of America is not fully comprehended by the average foreigner is illustrated by an anecdote told by Jefferson De Angelis the comedian, who is starring in Fantana. An Englishman, accompanied by his valet, had been travelling due west from New York for four days. At the end of the fourth day, master and servant seated themselves in the smoker of the train, whence the man looked steadily out of the car window. At last his companion grew curious. "John," he said, "of what are you thinking?"

"I was thinking, sir, about the discovery of Hamerica," replied the valet. "Columbus didn't do such a wonderful thing when he found this country, did he, sir? Hafter all's said and done, 'ow could 'e 'elp it?"—Harper's Weekly.

The joyous spirit of Christmas strikes the keynote for stories, verse and several articles in "The Designer" for December, among the latter being "Deutsch Spielwaaren for Christmas," by Julia Darrow Cowles, who describes the interesting toys made for American youngsters by the little people of Germany; and "Holiday Sweetness," by Frances Peck, instructing how to make the most delightful dainties. "The Rise and Fall of the Christmas Tree" tells in pictures what the well-known fairy tale does in prose. "Bran'ma Vosburg's Christmas," by Myra Emmons, is an excellent holiday story excellently illustrated, and "The Admission Ticket," by Zella Walters, is another bit of fiction which will please the children, as will also "Dollies of an Unusual Kind," Eleanor Marchant, and "A Search for Santa Claus," by Bertha Bush, the latter giving them a chance to display their talents in the dramatic and musical line. David Belasco gives a most interesting "Talk with the Amateur Stage Manager," and Bertha Hasbrook, "In the Interest of Bread-Winning," supplies a remarkably well-illustrated and practical article on "The Teacher of Dancing." Bertha Gaus begins a series of pleasant talks with "Our American Daughter," and "Persian Housekeeping" is presented by Laura B. Starr.

Fancy Cookery for Christmas Gifts.

What would Christmas be without the traditional dinner with the good old-fashioned plum pudding and the numerous other seasonable dainties? But something new in this line is the practice coming into favor, of including various forms of cookery among one's Christmas gifts. In the December Delineator there is a suggestive chapter in "The Making of a Housewife," by Isabel Gordon Curtis, giving many useful hints to this purpose. "Suggestions for a Child's Christmas Party," Various Plum Puddings and Harmonious Sauces, and "Quaint Little Cakes for Holiday Occasions prove to be useful, as well as something new to add to one's menus, and "Home-Made Holiday Beverages" and "Table Decorations for Children's Christmas Parties" close this very valuable department of the magazine.

BRITISH and FOREIGN.

The Czar has granted all the demands of the Finns.

It is estimated that the casualties during the rioting at Odessa totalled 5,600, mostly among the Jews.

One hundred and twenty Newfoundland naval reservists embarked on three British cruisers which are detailed for a lengthy voyage.

As the result of a gas explosion which wrecked a bank building at Ishpeming, Mich., three children were killed and thirteen persons injured.

FEED THE BRUTE.

What a lot of good cooks there would be if all the young ladies really believed in the old adage, "The way to a man's heart is through his stomach." But good things to eat are not monopolized by mere man by any means. Our sweethearts, wives and sisters have quite as much discrimination in what they eat as in what they wear. The up-to-date girl of to-day is an adept in the use of the chafing dish. It is not difficult to use, and it is hard to find a more delightful way of entertaining.

To begin gracefully in the art of chafing dish cookery it is necessary to "know how." Armour Limited, Toronto, will send a little cook book free to anyone asking for it and mentioning this paper. This cook book tells how to use the chafing dish and a number of choice recipes that are quickly and easily made. It is really issued to show a few of the many ways of using Armour's Extract of Beef. While Extract of Beef is not absolutely necessary for successful chafing dish cookery, it improves and makes digestible every known chafing dish preparation. Try it the first time a few friends drop in for the evening.

One on the King.

Ralph Peters, the new president and general manager of the Long Island Railroad, has a new joke which he declares was cabled to him from Paris. It has to do with the recent attempt to assinate King Alfonso of Spain when he was riding through Paris in a carriage with President Loubet of France.

"Whom are they after?" Mr. Peters declares the King asked the President.

"After you, my dear Alfonso," replied the French Chief Executive without a smile.

DYING BY INCHES.

Bloodless Girls Saved by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Dying by inches—that is the only way to describe hundreds of bloodless girls who are slipping slowly but surely from simple anaemia into a decline. They drag themselves along with one foot in the grave through those years of youth that should be the happiest in their lives. And the whole trouble lies in the blood. Bad blood is the fountain-head of all the trouble that afflicts woman from maturity to middle life. Bad blood causes all the backaches and sideaches, all the paleness, breathlessness and despondency; all the heart palpitation, sickly dizzy turns and deathly fainting spells. From fainting spells to consumption is only a step. In nine cases out of ten, consumption starts from bloodlessness—and the only sure cure for bloodlessness is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They actually make new, rich, bood, that brings the rosy glow of health to sallow cheeks, and strength to every part of the body. This has been proved in thousands of cases. Miss Frances Peach, Welland, Ont., says:—"A couple of years ago my condition of health was very serious. Doctors said that I had no blood—that it turned to water I was unfit to do anything for months and was little more than a living skeleton. I had no appetite; the least exertion would leave me breathless, and I had frequent severe headaches. I was treated by several doctors, but they failed to help me, and I was completely discouraged. Then I was urged to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and in a few weeks found my health improving. I used eight boxes in all, and was by that time again well and strong. I gained twenty-two pounds in weight, and never felt better in my life."

What Dr. Williams' Pink Pink Pills did for Miss Peach they can do for every other weak and ailing girl. They make new blood, and new blood brings health, strength and happiness. But you must be sure you have the genuine pills with the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," printed on the wrapper around each box. All dealers sell these pills, or you can get them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, by writing The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Filling Up Western Canada.

Settlers are pouring into the country at the rate of several hundred thousand a year, says the New York Globe, many of them being American farmers who have pulled up stakes at home because of the better opportunities across the border. It is probable, therefore, that the region between Winnipeg and the Rocky Mountains will within a generation or two be inhabited by many millions of prosperous and energetic men and women mainly of Anglo-Saxon blood. What part will this great granary play in the history of the British Empire and of the world? asks the London Times. The answer to this question is of even more importance to the United States.

The Demon, Dyspepsia.—In olden times it was a popular belief that demons moved invisibly through the ambient air, seeking to enter into men and trouble them. At the present day the demon, dyspepsia, is at large in the same way, seeking habitation in those who by careless or unwise living invite him. At once he enters a man it is difficult to dislodge him. He that finds himself so possessed should know that a valient friend to do battle for him with the unseen foe is Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, which are ever ready for the trial.

Joan of Naples.

Joan of Naples became a widow by the simple but effective process of having her husband murdered. A woman of no moral worth, but of magnificent abilities, she governed her country well until overthrown by foreign armies sent to avenge her husband's murder. She was defeated, taken and smothered to death. Her generosity to men of learning is celebrated by both Petrarch and Boccaccio.

An Unfailing Rule.

"I can always tell if a watermelon is ripe or not," says Fadoogus. "I learned how when I was a boy."

"What's your plan?" asks Madoggus.

"You just thump the melon with your fingers, and if it goes plunk it is ripe, but if it goes plank it is green."

"That may be all right," comments Madoggus, "but I've got a surer test than that."

"You have?"

"Yep. When I go to buy one I notice that the green ones are always 15 cents cheaper than the ripe ones."

PEARL FISHERIES.

How the Gems Are Obtained and Disposed of in Ceylon.

Since Keats told how "the Ceylon diver held his breath and went, all naked, to the hungry shark" many poets have exhausted the resources of their imagination in trying to describe the wonderful pearl fisheries of Ceylon. A few facts about them may be of interest, if only as an antidote to so much poetry.

The pearl fisheries are the property of the government of Ceylon. The divers are paid no wages, but receive one-third of the oysters they bring up, the remaining two-thirds being taken by a government agent and sold at public auction to speculative buyers, who gather from all parts of the orient. The pearl fishery usually lasts from thirty to forty days, but does not take place every year. If it did the oyster banks would soon be ruined. Sometimes several years are allowed to pass by without a fishery.

The diving is done after a primitive fashion, and the stories told about the marvelous length of time the divers will remain under water are quite unfounded. The record is 1 minute 49 seconds.

The auction, which lasts for several days, is one of the most interesting sights to be seen in Asia. The oysters are sold in lots of 1,000, and of course the purchaser is buying "a pig in a poke." There may be no pearls in any of his oysters or the first one he opens may give him a fortune. This risk appeals to the gambling spirit of the orient, and pretty nearly all the races from the Persian gulf to Japan are represented at the sale.

The prices paid usually start low on the first day. Then if the buyers have found pearls in fair quantities bidding is keen, and the prices jump skyward. One year they varied from 15s. 4d. per 1,000 on the first day to £12 17s. 10d. on the second.

It is remarkable that the fisheries are still so profitable, for there are historical records that they were worked there 300 years before the birth of Christ, and it is impossible to say how many years before that date.

His Business.

Prejudices are spiritual rebels and raise seditions against the understanding.—Ben Jonson.

Have you tried Holloway's Corn Cure? It has no equal for removing these troublesome excrescences as many have testified who have tried it.

About 13,000,000 South American revolutions in full bloom could be dropped in Russia just now without attracting the slightest attention.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadain cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking, and green fruit, is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellog's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. If a few drops are taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

In Russia the factories are closed. The people have stopped making shoes and locomotives and have decided to make trouble.

Dr. Von Stan's Pineapple Tablets—Medical science by accident discovered the potency of the pineapple as a panacea for stomach troubles. The immense percentage of vegetable pepsin contained in the fruit makes it an almost an indispensable remedy in cases of dyspepsia and indigestion. One tablet after each meal will cure most chronic cases. 60 in a box. 35 cents.—32

KEEN OF EAR.

Hogs Have a Finer Sense of Hearing Than You Imagine.

"Hogs have a much keener sense of hearing than most people seem to think," said a man from the country. "They can see well and at a considerable distance, but the nose and eyes of the hog must give first place to the ears.

"This is so, no doubt, because hearing is probably the most useful of the senses in the hog life, particularly at that season of the year when the hog in the wild state must rely upon the fruitage of trees in the main for food. Even with this advantage it is frequently a fierce race to see which hog can get there first. It would be interesting to know just how far a hog can hear an acorn fall. It is remarkable how quickly they become cognizant of the fact that an acorn has been blown from its outer shell and tumbled toward the ground, and he seems to catch the sound quicker when he knows a competitor is near who will run him a race for the nut. I have withessed some fierce and interesting races between hogs with an acorn as the stake.

"Put a hog within twenty yards of an oak and in nine cases out of ten he will beat the acorn to the place. In nine cases out of ten the hog will be within a few feet of where the acorn strikes the ground, another fact which argues the superiority of the hog's hearing. He can apparently tell pretty well by the sound where the acorn will fall, and he will rarely miss it more than a few feet."

The German Empire.

The German empire is a confederacy consisting of four kingdoms, five grand duchies, five duchies, seven principalities and four free cities. Within its own limits each state is sovereign except as to its army and its power of coining money and imposing duties, in which matters the imperial government controls as well as in all international matters.

Where Freshness Counts.

Among the manifold advantages of newspaper advertising over other forms, there is one which the promoters of competing mediums of publicity can never hope to overcome. The newspaper establishes chain lightning communication between producers and distributers on the one hand and consumers on the other. It is "Johnny on the spot." It carries business news to the people within twenty-four hours after the copy is written. It does away with the necessity of cold storage preparation. And freshness counts for as much in business announcements as it does in the dissemination of the news of the day.

A Generous Offer.

When Miss Helen Keller was at the exposition in St. Louis in 1904 she visited the Japanese tea house and for a few minutes shook hands with some of the waitresses, little olive colored women who spoke almost no English, but expressed their interest and intelligence without words.

Many weeks after Miss Keller had returned to Boston she heard from an official of the exposition that one of the Japanese waitresses had gone to a St. Louis physician and asked to have one of her eyes taken out and given to Miss Keller. When she was told that such a gift was impossible she wept in bitter disappointment.

Mixed History.

Around the great striking figures of history the small boy weaves curious answers. "Moses' mother pitched his little cradle within and without with pitch and left him there in the pool of Siloam, but when the daughter of Solomon got the green leaf from the dove she hastened and brought food convenient for him, and the babe crowed thrice and grew up in her court."—Agnes Dean Cameron in Century.

How He Proposed.

It is told of Oliver Wendell Holmes that after many futile attempts to propose to the lady of his choice his courage failed. They were walking one pleasant afternoon on Boston Common and, coming to where the path separated, he asked, "Which path shall we take?" "This one," she replied, turning toward it. "For life?" he asked. And she said "Yes."

The Useful Shark.

The smiling shark may eat a man now and then—though scientists doubt it—but if he does man gets even. He makes tinned soup and jelly of the smiling shark's fins, extracts fine machinery oil from his liver, makes handsome leather of his skin, walking sticks from his backbone and many useful articles from his jawbones and teeth. Do you wonder that the shark takes a nip at a man's leg now and then?

Is an Open Air Life Healthy?

Compared to other forms health insurance is in its infancy, and yet during its eight years of existence its promoters have come to the conclusion that an "out of doors" life is not the most healthy. The health risk, according to its underwriters, varies with the accident risk. The man who leads an active open air life suffers more from illness than the man who stays quietly at home and takes care of himself. The fireman is as bad a health risk as he is an accident risk. The farmer, an excellent life risk, is a poor health risk. In the winter he loafs, in the summer he overworks, in the fall he breaks down and the insurance company sends its check.—Leslie's Magazine.

HAS NOT SLEPT IN A CHAIR SINCE

Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Mrs. James Kinsella.

She Sends a Message of Hope to Other Suffering Women in Canada.

St. Malachie, Que., Nov. 13.—(Special).—To those women who suffer in silence—and there are thousands in Canada—Mrs. James Kinsella of this place sends a message that tells of cure as silent as their suffering. As the result of her own experience, Mrs. Kinsella says, "Take Dodd's Kidney Pills."

"When I sent for Dodd's Kidney Pills," Mrs. Kinsella says in relating that experience, "I had a pain in my right hip and in the small of the back. I was swollen all down the right side of the abdomen and had to pass water every fifteen minutes in a burning, itching sort of way. I could not sleep at nights and was obliged to sit in a chair for two summers.

"After taking the first box of Dodd's Kidney Pills I felt much better so I got more. They have done me a world of good and I have never slept in a chair since."

There can be no Female Weakness where there are sound Kidneys. Dodd's Kidney Pills make sound Kidneys.

Licking the Pencil.

One of the foremost lawyers in New York city licks the point of his pencil whenever about to write with it. The other day it was indelible, and his tongue was a sight to behold. His friends were alarmed, thinking he had met with an accident. "My boy does it," he said. "I did it when I was a boy, and my father and grandfather did it. And nearly every man of any consequence of my acquaintance does it and did it. Licking the point of the pencil is one of the choicest of human weaknesses."

PSYCHINE

(PRONOUNCED SI-KEEN)

BRONCHITIS "Psychine" possesses peculiar properties that act promptly in gaining the mastery over this disease. One element at once checks the fever, another the chills. The tightness across the chest, the heavy breathing and hoarseness, is removed by another element. Its tonic properties renew the strength, and make rich blood, the cough disappears, the "mucous" is carried away, the wheezing ceases, and after a short treatment ninety per cent. of patients are cured for all time. The disease seldom returns after you have begun the "Psychine" treatment.

HERE IS PROOF.

Wm. Grist, Esq., Winnipeg, Man., writes:

"I have used PSYCHINE and it has simply worked wonders for me. Previous to taking it I suffered for years with Chronic Bronchitis. I could hardly walk upstairs through shortness of breath. I could not do anything, as the slightest exertion exhausted me. I spent hundreds of dollars in doctors, but to no avail. I am a painter by trade, and laid my trouble originally to the business I am engaged in. I cannot say enough in praise of PSYCHINE."

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1905.

Alberta Red Wheat has excited considerable attention in the East as well as on the west coast, and among those who have been impressed is Mr. William Jackson, President of the Chicago Board of Trade. Mr. Jackson was in Winnipeg recently and it appears he has been testing samples of western winter wheat. A statement by him appeared in a message from Winnipeg to the Calgary Herald, in which he remarked

"The samples of red and white winter wheat from Alberta have been to our large millers, to Chief Grain Inspector Smiley, to the expert buyers of our elevators and unofficially to the grain committee of our board. It was the judgement of all that the wheat was exceptionally fine and would grade number one in this market. Many here were aware that experiments in growing winter varieties of wheat had been made in the great Canadian Northwest but few were aware of the results. The samples excited a good deal of interest, and several parties expressed a desire to own land producing such a quality of grain."

While such good reports come from the east excellent reports also come from the west. Pacific coast millers want Alberta Red and there can be no doubt whatever that there is a splendid future before Alberta as a winter wheat country. In a very few years every foot of land which will grow winter wheat will be under that crop. There are great breadths of land in Sunny Alberta which will produce the finest winter wheat. Between this crop, sugar beet and so forth Alberta will become the richest and most thickly populated province in Canada.

The Canadian Pacific are getting their western lines into fine condition and there is no doubt they are making every effort to not only hold the trade they now have but to handle it better and get more. No one need be told that the western trade is increasing by leaps and bounds and railway development in this western province is necessary to keep pace with the growing requirements. The Great Northern is expected to push up through this country very soon and this with improved service by the C. P. R. will help considerably in the development of Southern Alberta. Calgary hopes to be the objective point of the Great Northern, but Medicine Hat is well in the running and is a better point for a railway that is desirous of tapping the northern part of the province. Medicine Hat should work to get this with a view to a line eventually reaching Hudson's Bay.

It is announced that the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, is sending out diplomas to 1,500 farmers of Canada whose produce helped to win trophies for the Canadian display of goods at the Louisiana Purchase exposition, held in St. Louis in 1904. Several came west. The display contained samples of honey, grain and maple sugar gathered in all the provinces. The samples were of an excellent character, as was shown by the award of the judges at the World's Fair. It was decided that some recognition should be made of the goods to the producers themselves, and so the department had 1,500 attractive diplomas engraved stating the nature of the awards and sent out. That these tokens are highly prized by the farmers is demonstrated in a pile of letters received from the winners throughout the country.

According to the English papers Canada has a lot to learn about the manufacture of heavy woollen goods, while Yorkshire claims to be able to compete with the world in this particular line of business. A cablegram from London, England last week said:—A correspondent of the Yorkshire Post from Windsor, Canada, cabled that complaints were made of the enormous importation of Yorkshire blankets at prices below cost. The wool correspondent of the Yorkshire Post at Dewsbury, says this question was freely discussed by manufacturers and other wool buyers in the heavy woollen districts. If there is such a difference in price it certainly is not because the makers either of Dewsbury, or other places have been desirous of getting rid of any of their stock. For some years the inference has been that Yorkshire manufacturers have been selling at less than cost, but the general opinion in this district is that Canadians have a good deal to learn as to the component parts necessary to make a really good blanket, at a moderately cheap rate, that is why they clamor for protection. Wool has been at such high rates that it is quite possible with the advantage of the skilled labour of Yorkshiremen and the improved machinery and material at their command to compete with any district in the world in the production of blankets.

It is stated that the Alberta legislature will not meet until March. This will give the new members ample time to prepare themselves for the work of the session. Referring to this the Macleod Advance says:—

We have no doubt that the successful candidates in the Alberta elections are now being pestered to death by aspirants to minor offices. If such be indeed the case, the members elected to that body will receive a shock to learn that the Provincial parliament will not meet till March next and that they will be compelled to listen for some time to come at least to the reasons given by the selfish and greedy office seeker why he should be given everything that is in sight. The new members have our deepest sympathy.

UNION OF MUNICIPALITIES OF ALBERTA.

ORGANIZATION COMPLETED AT A MEETING IN EDMONTON.

A representative meeting of the Municipal officials of a large number of the towns of Alberta met at the City Hall Edmonton at the invitation of the Vice-President of the Canadian Union of Municipalities, Mayor Emerson, of Calgery, last week.

The opportunity of so many representatives being present as guests of the C. N. R. and the City of Edmonton was taken advantage of to make an initiative step in the forming of a Union for Alberta Municipalities.

Moved by Mayor Michner, of Red Deer, seconded by Ald. Thomas of Calgary, that as Mayor Emerson had taken steps to call this meeting together he be asked to take the chair.

Moved by Mr. Gillis, of Calgary, seconded by Mr. Burris, of Lacombe, that Mayor Michner, of Red Deer, act as secretary.

Mayor Emerson, of Calgary, then explained the object of calling the meeting. In introducing the question of Municipal Union for Alberta he referred to the great advantages to be derived therefrom, citing the work done by the Canadian Union and the desireability for the united effort on the part of the Municipalities in discussing such questions as the uniformity of Assessment, the protecting of Municipalities from encroachment of their rights by Corporations or promotors, the promoting legislation generally on sound principles, the care of persons who become chargeable to Municipalities, etc. The desirability of organization was supported by the following gentlemen:—

Mayor Michner, of Red Deer, Mr. Puffer, M. P. P., of Lacombe, Mayor McLeod, of Lacombe, and Alderman Logan, of Olds, Thomas of Calgary, May, of Edmonton, and Commissioners Kinnaird and Hargraves of Edmonton.

A resolution moved by Mr. Skinner of Lacombe, seconded by Mr. Gillis of Calgary that in the opinion of this meeting a Union should be formed of the Towns and Municipalities within the Province of Alberta and that a committee be now formed to make the necessary arrangements for the effecting of such an organization.

Moved by Alderman May, seconded by Mr. Gillis that Mayor Emerson of Calgary, Mayor Michner of Red Deer and Alderman Thomas of Calgary be an executive Committee to arrange for a Convention of the Municipalities for the Province of Alberta.

Moved by Councillor Swnboda of Wetaskiwin, seconded by Councillor Brodie that we take this opportunity of expressing our thanks to the City of Edmonton for their courtesy during our stay at Edmonton. A motion was also carried to tender a vote of thanks to the Chairman and Secretary of the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Tweed in England.

Letters received from Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Tweed show that they are having a splendid time touring the British Isles. In the course of their travels they visited Edinburgh where they entered a large departmental store and a little incident occurred which shows how small the world is. They were accosted by one of the managers who wished to know what he could do for them.

Mr. Tweed replied that they were tourists from Canada and were just walking through the store.

What part of Canada did you come from? asked the gentleman.

From Medicine Hat, Mr. Tweed replied.

Oh, that's where Jack Rutherford lives?

Yes, do you know him?

Oh Yes, very well.

Then followed some handshaking and the gentleman enquired how his old friend is getting on and sent his regards.

At the Canadian offices in London they met the High Commissioners permanent secretary (Mr. W. L. Griffith), who on finding where they came from inquired after the Editor of the Medicine Hat Times and sent Xmas greetings.

HAULTAIN RESISTS CLERICAL INTERFERENCE IN SCHOOLS.

Mr. Haultain has issued an address to the electors of Saskatchewan, in reply to attacks made upon him in a pastoral letter recently issued by Mgr. Langevin, archbishop of St. Boniface. He comes out flat-footed in favor of national schools and definitely takes issue on the ground that clerical interference in educational affairs of the province must be resisted.

More Deadly Than Famine.

Neglected catarrh sooner or later causes consumption which destroys more human beings than famine and war combined. The way "Catarrhozone" cures catarrh is very simple; it first kills the germs that cause irritation; toen by soothing away the congestion and inflammation it cures the discharge, hawking and dropping in the throat. "I suffered so continually from nasal catarrh" writes Ernest R. Dakin of Rosemount, "that I scarcely knew what it was to be free from headache and pain over the eyes. Catarrhozone relieved me at once and made a thorough cure." No other remedy cures like Catarrhozone—try it for your next cold.

The Municipal Ordinance vs. The City Charter.

A special general meeting of the Board of Trade was held in Cousin's Hall on Friday evening. Present: W. Cousins, President), F. L. Crawford (Vice-President), and Messrs D. Milne, F. G. Forster, James Cook R. J. Harlow, M. Leonard, C. Krauss, H. L. Tweed, T. Hutchinson D. G. White, John Benson, J. H. Collier, O. W. Kealy, C. R. Mitchell and W. C. Harris.

The President explained that the meeting was called to receive the report of the special committee appointed at the last meeting and called upon the chairman of the committee to make report.

Mr. W. C. Harris made a few introductory remarks and read the following report.

TO THE MEDICINE HAT BOARD OF TRADE.

Gentlemen:

Your committee appointed to consider generally the Municipal Ordinance have obtained copies of charters possessed by Edmonton Prince Albert and Regina, and having gone carefully into the matter recommend that the town should work along the lines of the following suggestions:—

1. The town requires more powers in order to deal with sewerage and permanent sidewalks and other work of a like nature coming under a frontage tax system of assessment.
2. That in assessing property it is desirable for corner lots to be dealt with on some equitable plan which would not impose a burden upon corner lots abutting on streets on both frontage and side and where sidewalks are required on avenues same should be done by the town.
3. Lots abutting on streets on both sides should pay tax on the full frontage and half the side measurement. This the committee think would be an equitable arrangement.
4. That the Council should possess very specific powers to prevent waste of water or gas.
5. That a more equitable basis of assessment of the whole of town property should be adopted by the town.
6. That the Council should adopt a system of granting building permits before construction is commenced and of inspection after completion to apply over the whole town.
7. That the Building Inspector should also be the Town Assessor and be required to keep in touch with varying values, so that an equitable basis may be maintained and the town reap the benefit of increasing values.
8. That special legislation being required for the Woollen Mill it should be obtained together with other matters mentioned above in this report.

There are other matters which your Committee consider of importance but have not had time to go into them in detail, and therefore beg to submit the above for discussion.

We report progress as above.
W. C. Harris
D. Milne
F. G. Forster

Mr. Milne made a speech in explanation and support of the various clauses of the report and dealt very ably with the part dealing with assessments under the frontage tax system. He was strongly in favor of a new charter which would give fuller authority and greater permanence to the actions of the Town Council when a thing was put into the charter the Council for the time being could not alter. Only the legislature could alter, but the Council would still have full powers to make by-laws according to the general rules which would be laid down in the charter.

Mr. Forster followed and explained that the Committee wished to continue their labors as it was not possible in the time so far to deal very fully with the question.

The clauses of the report were then taken up seriatim, and it was understood that if adopted they would be submitted to the Town Council as recommendations.

No 1 was adopted without discussion.

A lengthy discussion occurred on No. 2 and finally on the motion of Messrs Hutchinson and Harlow this was adopted as far as the word "side" the remainder being dropped.

No 3 was discussed at some length and its adoption was moved by Messrs Benson and Leonard and carried.

After a general discussion it was Moved by O. W. Kealy seconded by T. Hutchinson, That in view of the report of the Committee this Board is of the opinion that the Council should obtain special legislation along the lines of the cities of Edmonton, Moosejaw, Prince Albert and Regina and that the people should have an opportunity of discussing such proposed charter before submission to the Legislature and that the Committee be requested to continue their labors for the guidance of the people.

Mr. Harris said that the work of the Committee so far had dealt only with details of one section of the subject and they had not gone far enough to arrive at a general conclusion as to what recommendations they would make. As this general motion had now been made he might say he had written a paper taking a wider scope of the whole matter than the committees' report, and was prepared to read it.

The meeting having expressed a desire to hear it, he read as follows:

THE MUNICIPAL ORDINANCE VERSUS THE CITY CHARTER.

Many persons, even men who have taken an active part in the public life of a Municipality have found themselves in a difficulty when asked to say what is the difference between the Municipal Ordinance and a City Charter. This is not surprising because although this is a country of rapid transitions and quick changes few of us have helped to make the change from the one to the other. We may have lived under both at different times and may know something of the difficulties of both, and the difficulties have probably obscured the benefits to a considerable extent.

All of us have had some experience in these matters in a general way but we may never before have assisted in making the step which some of us now believe to be the best for this town. We may have served on a Council under a Municipal Ordinance or lived in a city possessing a City Charter, but may never have troubled to ask what was the difference. In the one case the town may have been too small to harbor even the remotest ambition of possessing a City Charter while the other may have so long passed the mere town stage that it was all forgotten.

Since the Board of Trade saw fit ask me to serve on this committee to study the matter and make a report, I have given some attention to the subject but the committee are in no way responsible for these remarks in fact this was written before the committee sat.

In the first place:

What is the difference between a Municipal Ordinance and a City Charter?

Well I will not pretend to give anything like a legal definition because I am not a lawyer, but I will give you a homely illustration. It is this

The Municipal Ordinance is the "ready-to-wear" suit.

The City Charter is the made-to-order suit.

Now every man knows that he feels more comfortable in the suit the tailor measured him for than in the "semi-ready." I mean no reflection upon anybody's goods, but when a man acquires a little rotundity of form and figure, and still wants to look his best and feel the most comfortable, and can afford it, he goes and gets a suit made to fit him.

The Municipal Ordinance, therefore, being a "Ready-to-wear" and a fit-all-places sort of contrivance cannot possibly be so satisfactory as the City Charter carefully drawn to fit every part of the place it is intended for.

Again the Municipal Ordinance was intended, as I take it, mostly for rural districts, villages and small towns and is, in my opinion, a misfit for a town of the size and importance of Medicine Hat. In fact I take it to be the crudest kind of an arrangement and its framers surely did not contemplate that any community such as Medicine Hat would be satisfied to work long under its restricted provisions. The several amendments this town has already found it necessary to make are evidence on this point.

We, therefore, as a town have outgrown the Municipal Ordinance, just as every growing boy outgrows his clothes. Have you not often seen a long janky boy with a coat short in the back and sleeves and his trousers getting away from his boots? He is just a boy a promising one at that, but just a boy. The next month you see him in a new suit made to fit him after the fashion of a man and all at once our boy has become a man and claims our respect as such.

That is, I think, precisely what happens in the case of the village which grows into the town and the town which grows into the city.

Now we must not judge western cities by the standards set up by customs in Eastern Canada or in the Old Country. We must judge according to Western conditions and, let me say, those conditions should be good enough for us.

Never mind if someone says: Well, this is a small place to be styled a city! We are growing and the way to grow is to spread out on every hand and keep ahead of actual requirements.

1st. Borrowing Powers

Medicine Hat has sufficient borrowing powers and if we obtain a City Charter we need do no more than provide for a continuance of the present twenty per cent. rate. That is what the cities of Edmonton and Prince Albert did.

2nd. Powers in execution of Public Improvements.

The weak point in the Municipal Ordinance is that our Town Council find themselves unable to carry out the expressed wishes of the people in regard to the method of carrying out the sewerage and sidewalks system and of the taxation to be adopted in the matter. The people, as expressed by the ratepayers in public meeting assembled favored a scheme to be carried out by the frontage tax system and the Council found they had no powers to proceed. They could do nothing for any street without receiving a petition.

Now under the powers of a City Charter, such as that possessed by Edmonton the Council could proceed with such work EITHER UPON PETITION OR BY NOTICE.

The provisions as to the petition appear to be practically the same in Edmonton Charter as in the Ordinance. The provisions as to NOTICE are as follows:

(Sec. 4. Sub-sec. a). Any local improvement may also be undertaken and the assessment of the cost thereof may be made on either of the systems aforesaid unless the majority owners of the lands to be affected representing at least one half in value thereof as aforesaid petition the Council against the same within two weeks after the last publication of notice of the intention of the Council to undertake the local improvement, such notice to be inserted once in each week for two weeks in at least one newspaper published in the municipality.

(b) In the event of any sufficient, ly signed petition as aforesaid against the proposed local improvement being presented to the Council no second notice for the same shall be given by the Council within the then current calendar year.

When no such petition against the proposed work is presented then "it shall be lawful for the Council of the same or the next preceding year to undertake the proposed improvement."

3. Equitable Assessment.

Now I find in the Edmonton Charter the terms "Special frontage assessment" and "special local benefit assessment."

The former term is pretty well understood. I think. Let me explain the latter.

(Sec. 1. Sub-sec. 3.) The term "special local benefit assessment" means a special assessment of each parcel of land in the vicinity of a local improvement which is increased or likely to be increased in market value or is otherwise benefitted by reason of the local improvement. Such parcel of land may be assessed such a share of the cost as may bear a fair, just and equitable proportion having regard to all other parcels of land benefitted by the work.

4. Penalties for breach of By-laws

To my mind a by-law is of little use unless there are penalties provided for a breach of the same. I think the ordinance is indefinite. In a new Charter we could be definite.

5. The Council would be in a position to deal with an adjoining Municipality.

The Edmonton charter contains the following:—

Sec 28. The corporation may under a by-law of an adjoining municipality exercise the like powers within the adjoining municipality as it may under this Ordinance within its own Municipality upon such terms as may be agreed upon; and the corporation of the adjoining municipality may either require payment or may pay for the privilege.

Looking to the future we may have rural Municipalities erected round us, and the clause might then be a handy one.

6. The Council could under such a Charter as Edmonton contract to supply water or gas outside the town boundaries.

Sec. 16 of the Edmonton Charter gives the Corporation power and authority to supply with water upon special terms any person or corporation outside the Municipality and permits them to carry out an arrangement with corporations or persons within the suburbs as well as within the Municipality; they can supply a railway company or manufactory under an agreement.

Sec. 4, referring to enterprises outside the city provides that where the Council decides to undertake or assist any of the enterprises it may do so notwithstanding that the same may be wholly or partly without the limits of the city.

Such a clause in our Charter would give our Council a much desired liberty which I think we could trust to their discretion to use for the advantage of the town should the occasion arise. Of course if it entailed assistance in any way the people would have to be asked to vote upon it.

7. A City Charter might contain clauses which would put the Council in full control in many points where doubt now exists.

Sections 9 and 10 and several others in the Edmonton Charter and also clauses in the Prince Albert Charter explains the position of the Council in connection with sewerage, water services etc. and leaves nothing in doubt as far as I can see in regard to their powers. This is at any rate desirable, and it is well to have the point defined.

8. Quarterly Audit and Report.

The City Charters under review provide for a quarterly audit and report upon all books and accounts affecting the city or relating to any matter under its control.

I notice that sec. 116 of the Municipal Ordinance provides for the same thing, but I think I am correct in stating that it does not appear to be carried out in this town, although it says: "The Council SHALL provide" for an audit once in every three months.

One advantage of this would be that at the annual meeting of ratepayers the town would be put in possession of ACTUAL figures down to a date much nearer the meeting than now appears possible.

9. Bonusing.

I am aware that I am treading on thin ice when I approach the subject of bonusing. It cannot, however, be denied that every western town that granted bonuses during the past few years is now reaping a rich reward. The thing may be bad in principle, but when other, as I may term them, competing towns, are offering all sorts of inducements to manufacturers, we in Medicine Hat might well ask ourselves if the striking out of the bonus clause in our present charter was a wise act. If we obtain a City Charter and allow this clause to appear the town will be just as safe from bonus-hunters because before a bonus could be granted a by-law would have to be submitted to the people and if they did not like it they could vote it down. The omission of the clause ties our hands and gives the town the name of being afraid to trust itself to consider every case upon its merits. Edmonton, Calgary, and Prince Albert all allow themselves full liberty to deal with every case as it occurs. I am inclined to think there is some little misapprehension on the subject. It was not a case of inserting a clause declaring the town would not bonus. It was a case of omitting from the adopted ordinance a clause which the legislators inserted to give the people the opportunity of granting a bonus if they were so inclined. Personally I would re-instate the clause and give the people full freedom in the matter. Edmonton, Prince Alberta, Regina and Moosejaw have embodied this in their City Charter as our legislators intended.

10. Consolidation of By-Laws.

The day may soon come when we may wish to consolidate our by-laws that is pass a collective or accumulative by-law consolidating several small and broken amounts for local improvements. The City of Edmonton looking to the future have inserted a clause in their charter which clothes the Council with the necessary power to do this.

I have not found anything in the Municipal Ordinance in reference to this.

11. Mode of Assessment.

The Edmonton Charter deals in a clear and comprehensive manner with the mode of Assessment. I presume our Town Council have some method of assessing property by which our assessor values property. (If not they should have), but I observe there is a good deal of "The Council may" and so on in the Ordinance in this respect.

The Charter should set forth very clearly and distinctly the method to be adopted for the office of assessor is a sort of "hardy annual" in this town a state of things which should be no longer tolerated. The assessor should be a regular official. Two or three small offices could surely be united and one would be that of assessor.

As to the assessments. Edmonton assesses its land at its fair actual value having regard to its situation etc., and business according to whether wholesale or retail. The Commissioners fix a rate per square foot of floor space and the rate may not exceed $5.00 per square foot, except in the case of loan companies, or other financial institutions in which case the rate is not to exceed $10 per square foot.

12. Better Jurisdiction over Highways.

It seems to me that the Municipal Ordinance is somewhat vague in conferring jurisdiction over highways. Here is what the Edmonton Charter starts off with on this subject.

1. (page 73). The jurisdiction over every public road, street, lane, alley square or other public place in the City of Edmonton is hereby vested in the Corporation of the said city.

Under clause four the City acquires very full powers for closing, selling or leasing of any public highway, and following clauses are very definite as to the powers of the Council in this respect.

The Municipal Ordinance gives the Council jurisdiction but it is not definite enough.

13. Power to drill for Oil.

Another power some people think it would be well for the town to possess is the power to prospect for oil. The present Ordinance gives us power to drill for gas but is silent as to oil. Many people believe that where there is gas there is oil and valuable as the gas is to the town oil would be still more valuable. As a road-maker it would soon save the town the first cost of drilling.

14. Representation.

Under a City Charter the people could secure a more equitable representation. Under our present system all the members of the Council may be elected from one street or one block. Under a City Charter the city would be divided into three or four wards, each returning say two Aldermen, thus securing proper representation for each portion of the city. In this connection the Charter of the City of Edmonton gives the Council power as follows:—

The Council may by by-law from time to time re-arrange the limits of the wards and may add new wards.

I submit that Medicine Hat requires a larger membership in the Council. The Ordinance provides for six members for the smallest town we certainly require more representation than that for a population of about 4000 people. In the multitude of Counsellors there is wisdom.

As I understand it we can never have a ward system under the Municipal Ordinance. All our Councillors may be elected from the south side of the tracks or all from the north side. At the present time the south side is represented by five members and the north side by only two. I believe our representatives have so far conscientiously done their duty by the whole town but I believe in the Ward system which gives every part of a town fair and equal representation.

I think it will be admitted that a town of 4000 inhabitants is entitled to something better than a system designed for towns of 500 inhabitants. Therefore I submit that this is a very strong reason for a City Charter which would be designed to meet the developments and increase of population which we all hope to see in the very near future.

I would in conclusion merely emphasise the point that if the townspeople wish to have something which will be a strong, definite and comprehensive measure of self-government we should once for all drop all tinkering and mending. Let us have a brand new Charter like the other places I have named. With regard to the name, I attach some importance to it, but it is not an essential part. Still if we acquire all the powers and privileges of a City there can be no valid reason why we should hesitate to adopt the name. It will show an ambitious, progressive spirit.

15. Prestige.

It would give us greater prestige among the towns of this great and last west. He who aims at a star shoots higher than he who aims at a haystack. We have lofty ambitions. We have solid grounds for those ambitions. Let us then not shirk from assuming the full responsibilities which our position implies, and let us show to the commercial and manufacturing world that Medicine Hat as a town, aye as a City, is desirous of taking her place in the forefront of western progress.

The resolution moved by Messrs Kealy and Hutchinson was then put and carried.

Mr. Milne moved and Mr. Crawford seconded that the thanks of the meeting be tendered to Mr. Harris for his address and that he be asked to publish it in his newspaper for the benefit of the ratepayers.

The meeting then adjourned for two weeks.

Note & Comment.

[By OBSERVER.]

Now girls don't be too frivolous, but here is something to interest you. A clever young Kensington lady, a Miss Evans has devised a new kind of autograph album that is likely to be popular. It is so contrived as to enable a young lady not only to collect the autograph signatures of her relatives, schoolmates, and intimate friends, but to preserve also imprints of their kisses. The book is equipped with a little pad of a soluble carmine-tinted substance upon which the lips are first lightly pressed so as to take up a little of the pigment. Then a little kiss is imprinted upon the page in the space provided for the purpose, leaving a clear carmine of the pressure of the lips. By the side of the kiss print space is another for the autograph and date, and together the the kiss and the signature make a very precious and imtimate keepsake.

I picked up an English paper the other day in which I saw a paragraph describing a run-away horse's antics and there occurred the remark that people flocked out to see it as a run-away was such a novelty to them. Those people never lived in Medicine Hat.

A paragraph appeared in a Winnipeg daily last week describing "Wolves on the rampage in Alberta" The message was supposed to have been sent from Medicine Hat and the picture appeared to be somewhat like a startling message from the seat of war.

Some paragraphs in the Winnipeg Free Press last week calculated to give the readers the impression that Medicine Hat is terribly over-run with hoboes. There are a few around doubtless, but the publication of such sensational matter looks rather "panicky." The story included an account of a late caller at the Mayor's house, and the fellow turned out to be aharmless individual who was out "by mistake." If much more of this kind of stuff is sent out it will give Medicine Hat an unenviable reputation which the town does not deserve.

I can't help it I take a lot of interest in the weather. Why this should be so may be hard to explain except it be that the weather, like the poor, is always with us. Any weather comparisons at any time of the year are always favorable to Medicine Hat. Last week during the cold "snap," which reached from the Atlantic to the Pacific, Medicine Hat and Swift Current were the only places where the minimum temperature was reported above zero.

A theatre manager at Winnipeg has been complaining to the Telegram about people coming late to the theatre, and he pointed out how disturbing this was to the management, the actors and the audience. This sort of thing is not confined to theatres, however, or to Winnipeg. It is noticeable right through the west that people will not be punctual. It matters not what may be on the people don't attend until 30 to 45 minutes after the time fixed for commencing the proceedings. It is a bad state of things and shows a laxity for which it is hard to find a remedy.

MEDICINE HAT, N. W. T.

Bobby's Essay on Advertising.

(By William F. Kirk in Hearst's Chicago American.)

Advertising is whare you go to a newspaper or bill board or sumwhare & tell the wurld to come around & see you. it pays to advertise, beekaus thare has always been lots of it done, it began in the garden of Eden, the snaik dident start it either, Adam started it. he felt lonely so he went & put an ad sumwhare, I doant know the naim of the paper & the ad sed Middel Aiged Gentleman Wishes to Meet Refined Woman of Means, object Matrimony & Eve saw the ad & sed Well, here I am, I seen yure ad in the paper.

then the snaik caim along & put a sine on the tree of nollege, the sine sed Right this Way to the Information bureau, eet a apple & Git Wise, then Adam and Eve both ansered the ad & here we all are, advertising ourselves.

All live creechers advertise, beests & burds & everything. when a mule is good & kind all day long he is jest advertising for a sucker to cum neer his hind heels, when a peacock gits out in the sun and walks around it is advertising its fine feathers. even the fishes advertise, I once herd of a pickerel that put an ad in the paper for a room mate but the pickerel got caught befoar anybody ansered the ad.

the grate men of history were all advertisers. alexander the grate put a ad in the paper saying Wanted, moar wurlds to conquer; but only 2 men ansered the ad & they were both opium feends, they sed thay knew whare thare was a nise patch of wurlds but thay wudent tell. Napoleon beleeved in ads, he went to Russia in the middel of the winter & kept 6 press agents working day and nite sending stuff to the hoam papers about how the boys was standing the trip thay dident stand it vary well. thare was a feller naimed Mark Antony who had a fine stoar in Rome & he went to Egypt & while he was gone his wife got mad at the editor of the Rome paper & she took out the big ad that Mister Antony always had in about stoar & when Mark got back his bizness was at gone to the bad. Tthare are three kinds of ads

1 good ads.
2 poor ads.
3 press agents.

the best ads are in newspapers & street cars & magazines, the poor ads are on fences out in the country & are everywhere. when a press agent does pritty fine work & gets a raise from $2,000 to $5,000 a yeer, he is then a Publicity Promoater & has a offis boy that tells you to git out, you cant see the man till to-morrow.

the newspaper that has the biggest circulation gits the most ads & and the most munny for them, so all the papers have a circulation manager to tell the truth about how many copies of eech edition go to press. if you doant think they tell the truth go & count the papers yureself.

the street cars have lots of funny ads, thay are good reding when you are on yure way to Yonkers or sumwhare, I saw one the other day that sed the skin has 26,873,421 pores & when you washed with that kind of soap all the pores felt grateful, that shows how hard it is to rite ads. think of the poor feller that rote that ad stopping to count all the pores of his skin, it must have took him quite a while I guess. then sum of the ads in the cars are very nice poetry. the grate poets who come to New York start in riteing about the fleecy clouds that fill the ambient air & at last they work up to fine subjecks like dress shields and scrubbing soap. sum day I am going to rite a advertising verse myself & send it to a pickle maker but I suppose I will have to taik my pay in pickles.

thats all I know about advertising, it aint as much as I thought I knew when I begun this essay.

Salt Rheum, Tetter, Eczema.—These distressing skin diseases relieved by one application. Dr. Agnew's Ointment is a potent cure for all eruptions of the skin. Jas. Gaston, Wilkesbarre, says: "For nine years I was disfigured with Tetter on my hands. Dr. Agnew's Ointment cured it." 35 cents.—32

A load of sorrow doesn't wear one so much as a swarm of annoyance.

Do Not Delay.—Do not let a cold or cough fasten upon you as it will if neglected. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil will break up a cold and cure a cough and should be resorted to at once when the first symptoms appear. It can be disguised so that any unpleasant taste it may have will be imperceptible to the delicate. Try it and be convinced.

Stones and Street Cars.

In Canada a boy or other person who throws a stone into a street car may be imprisoned for life. Canadian soil is not a congenial one for the hoodlum.

CANADA'S TRADE.

Bradstreet's Report of Present Conditions Throughout the Dominion.

New York.—Bradstreet's today trade is over in Canada and wholesalers now await the effects of cold weather upon the retail trade. In the west this stimulation has already occurred and more reports come from the Northwest, British Columbia and portions of Ontario. The movement of grain in the west is heavy, limited in fact, only by the insufficiency of transportation facilities. At Montreal wholesale trade is active and retail business is still a little backward but sales for spring delivery are of good value. Toronto reports an active trade with holiday goods. Dairy products and hogs are lower. Winnipeg reports trade good, shipments large, holiday dry goods in demand and hardware active. In British Columbia lumber and mining are active and trade is good.

A Magic Pill.—Dyspepsia is a foe with which men are constantly grappling but cannot exterminate. Subdued, and to all appearances vanquished in one, it makes its appearance in another direction. In many the digestive apparatus is as delicate as the mechanism of a watch or scientific instrument in which even a breath of air will make a variation. With such persons disorders of the stomach ensue from the most trivial causes and cause much suffering. To these Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are recommended as mild and sure.

Olive Oil For the Eye.

A celebrated oculist recommends that when dirt, lime or sparks get into the eye pure olive oil be poured in the eye until everything of a hurtful nature is removed. The remedy is painless and never fails to remove all foreign substances.

Celery.

Celery is the cultivated variety of the English weed smallage. It was introduced into kitchen gardens in England about the time of the reformation by some Italians, who gave it the Preservative Peat.

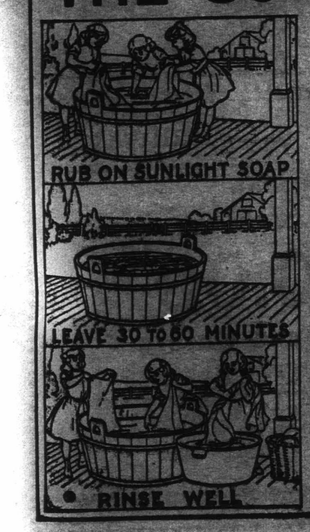
Peat possesses wonderful antiseptic and preservative qualities owing to the presence of tannin, iron and other substances in it. Here is an instance: At the time of the covenanters, in 1685, three men were shot at a place called Crossgelloch on the moors above Old Cumnock, in Scotland. In 1825, when a monument was being erected to their memory, the workmen came upon the corpses rolled in their plaids. The bodies were in exactly the same state as when they were buried. The moss had preserved them as if they had been embalmed.

HELP FOR LITTLE ONES.

It is a recognized fact that babies—and indeed all children—need a medicine of their own. Medical men know, too, that most baby medicines do more harm than good—that most of them contain poisonous opiates, that drug children into quietness without curing their little ills. Baby's Own Tablets is a modern medicine for babies and young children, and is sold under a guarantee to contain no opiate or harmful drug. It cures stomach, bowel and teething troubles, and by its natural, healthy action promotes sleep and repose. It makes little ones well and keeps them well. Mrs. W. E. Ansell, Ayer's Flat, Que., says: "I would advise every mother with sick or fretful children to use Baby's Own Tabets. They are the most satisfactory medicine I have ever tried, and almost magical in their effects." You can get the Tablets from any medicine dealer or by mail at 25 cents a box by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Dutch Guiana.

At the peace of Breda, in 1667, Surinam, or Dutch Guiana, on the coast of South America, was assured to the Dutch in exchange for New York.



Don't Walk Against the Wind.

In one of Oliver Wendell Holmes' books the doctor in the man comes to the front with a suggestion that we all might well profit from. It is in walking for pleasure or for the sake of exercise never to go against the wind. Walk with the prevailing current of air is his advice and then take a covered car back again.

Cast Ashore.

Cocoanuts and the nuts of the mahogany tree are often cast ashore on the coasts of England, Ireland, Scotland and Norway, seemingly unimpaired by their long voyage.

THE SUNLIGHT WAY

Sunlight Soap is better than other soaps, but is best when used in the Sunlight way (follow directions).

Hard rubbing and boiling are things of the past in homes where Sunlight Soap is used as directed.

Sunlight Soap will not injure even the daintiest fabric or the hands, and the clothes will be perfectly white, woolens soft and fluffy.

The reason for this is because Sunlight Soap is absolutely pure, contains no injurious chemicals—indeed, nothing but the active, cleansing, dirt-removing properties of soap that is nothing but soap.

Equally good with hard or soft water.

YOUR MONEY REFUNDED if the soap from your first bar (Sunlight Soap) proves unsatisfactory.

"What Are Piles?" You May Ask.

AND WHY ARE THEY ALWAYS RELIEVED AND CURED BY THE USE OF

Dr. Chase's Ointment

The itching, burning sensations of piles or hemorrhoids, the feelings of uneasiness and discomfort, and the loss of blood, are familiar to many who may not know the name or nature of their ailment.

Piles are small tumors, which form at the opening of the rectum, and are described as itching, bleeding or protruding, according to the symptom that is most prominent.

The cause of greatest suffering is the intense itching, which is an almost constant symptom, while the greatest danger arises from loss of blood. You can scarcely imagine one in greater misery than the victim of a severe case of piles.

By reason of its remarkably soothing effect Dr. Chase's Ointment brings almost instant relief from the dreadful itching. It heals the ulcers, stops the loss of blood, and makes a thorough cure of this obstinate and loathsome disease.

The old idea of a surgical operation with all the accompanying pain, expense and risk, as the only cure for piles, has given way before the extraordinary success of Dr. Chase's Ointment, which has demonstrated its power in thousands of cases where operations have failed.

Mr. F. Morin, St. Eustache, Man., writes:—"I suffered from piles for nineteen years and though I tried a great many remedies could not obtain a cure. The doctor told me it was necessary to undergo an operation.

"A friend advised me to try Dr. Chase's Ointment and though I had no confidence in it I bought three boxes and began to use it. One box of this ointment made a thorough cure. I gave what I had left to a friend of mine who was nearly as bad as I was and it made a perfect cure."

Do not make the mistake of dropping this treatment as soon as the itching stops. Make the cure lasting by persistent use. Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Singeing the Hair.

The practice of singeing the hair is based on three articles of belief—that when hair is cut the juices drain away; that by singeing the cut ends are blocked up; that by singeing splitting is prevented. The real utility of hair singeing is nonexistent.

How Tortoise Shell Is Worked.

The soldering of two pieces of tortoise shell together is effected by means of hot pinchers, which, while they compress, soften the opposed edge of each piece and amalgamate them into one. Even the raspings and powder produced by the file, mixed with small fragments, are put into molds and subjected to the action of boiling water and thus made into plates of the desired thickness or into various articles which appear to have been cut out of a solid block.

A Few Palindromes.

"It is a fascinating occupation," said a philologist, "to search the language for palindromes. A palindrome is a word that reads the same backward as forward. Rotator, for instance, is a palindrome. Several hundreds of these strange words are tabulated, and new ones are continually turning up in the English tongue. If you can find one send it to the Palindrome society of New York.

"I can rattle off extempore a dozen or two palindromes. Thus:

"Bab, refer, bib, Anna, tot, bob, peep, civic, toot, dad, madam, deed, pup, deified, sees, dewed, tat, did, shahs, eve, reviver, ewe, rotator, gog, pop, gig, gag, redder, level, noon, Otto, sexes."

The Extinct Mamo.

Perhaps the most notable native bird of the Sandwich Islands was the mamo, which has been extinct comparatively only a few years. It had two little tufts of yellow feathers on its wings, which were used exclusively in the manufacture of cloaks worn by the kings of those islands. The estimated value of one of the cloaks is $1,000,000, and it took an almost indefinite number of birds to furnish the feathers.

LOST IN THE BUSH.

Terrible Experience of a French-Canadian Miner — Wandered Around Trail Creek For 17 Days.

Lost in the bush for seventeen days, half demented most of the time, forced to subsist on grass and flower-tops, and yet all the while within sound of civilization, which he could not reach, was the terrible experience of Archibald Gagnon, who recently bought a mining claim near Rossland, British Columbia. He is a French-Canadian, and he tells a tale of suffering and privation that eclipse the experiences of many of the early voyageurs of Quebec Province, whose sufferings are recorded in history. Hailing from Montreal, he came to the coast and went up to the mines, where he bought a claim in the Trail Creek region on a stream near Castlegar.

Being a tenderfoot, and not knowing the dangers of the swiftly-running Columbia River, with its hidden rocks and suddenly-formed whirlpools, he built a rude raft, loaded it with his outfit and set out from Deer Park, near Trail, for his claim. The daring voyageur and his stock were doomed to disaster from the moment the man pushed off from the shore. The frail craft quickly went to pieces in the treacherous waters. After a vain attempt to save part of his outfit, Gagnon found he had all his work cut out to emerge alive from the swirling waters. After a frightful buffeting he managed to crawl ashore almost dead.

In his exhausted condition he started to make his way on his hands and knees to a farmhouse which he knew to be about two miles away, but he was forced to give up, and finally lost his bearings altogether. He next tried to walk to his claim, after 24 hours' rest, but his vitality had been so reduced that he had to abandon that task also. Thereafter he wandered about, on the verge of madness, satisfying his hunger by eating grass and flower-tops. On the tenth day he met a man and a boy carrying fish, but his English was not good enough to enable him to explain to them his dire condition, and they left him.

A week later he was discovered accidentally by the crew of a Canadian Pacific tie train, and was taken to Trail Hospital, where he now lies. During his wanderings he had heard every day the whistle of the train, but could not locate it. At the time he started on the trip he weighed 185 pounds, but he is now reduced to 100 pounds.

Cures Snake-Bite by Charm.

The report from the Township of Sandwich West, that an attempt had been made to counteract the effect of the poison in a boy's leg, produced by the bite of a rattlesnake, by a charm, caused some enquiries to be made, and it was ascertained that snake poison charmers have been known in Essex County for the past hundred years. Tradition says that this power was received from the Indians who roamed through the forests on both sides of the Detroit River years before the white man made his appearance.

Henry Meloche, who conducts a fish store in Windsor, and who is nearly 60 years old, said that, when he was a small boy, he witnessed the charm tried on his father, and claims that, without any medicine or medical aid, his parent recovered after the charm had been worked. He said;

"My father was bitten in the field at 8 o'clock in the morning and a messenger was at once despatched to Belle River for Jacques Latonier, who was famous as a snake poison charmer. He came to our home as fast as his horse would carry him, and when he arrived he found the limb greatly swollen and a string, which had been tied around the leg to prevent the poison from reaching the body, was buried in the flesh.

Latonier, after making an examination of the wound, said it was a snake bite, and he produced a piece of string made from a deer skin and proceeded to tie it around the leg. As he tied the first knot he muttered a single word, and before he finished the work he had placed seven knots in the string, and had uttered as many words. The word were in the Indian language, and, almost immediately after finishing his incantation, noticed that the swelling began to fall.

"In a few hours the leg was down to its natural size and the deep hide string fell about the ankle of its own accord, as it became too loose to remain on the leg."

"I never saw it attempted on any other persons," concluded Mr. Meloche, "but I have often heard of Latonier visiting different people who were bitten in the old days. Snakes were plentiful in Essex County fifty years ago, and it was not uncommon for a number of people to be bitten by rattlers every year."

Pacific Cable Deficit.

A detailed report of the work of the Pacific cable for the past year has been received by the Government at Ottawa. It shows that the number of messages and words transmitted during the year 1904-5 were approximately 177,868 and 2,056,953 respectively, of which 106,782 messages and 1,183,929 words were intercolonial. The audited traffic figures for 1903-4 amounted to 176,824 messages and 2,097,897 words, of which 108,211 messages and 1,232,928 words were intercolonial. The expenditure of the board on the service of the cable during the 12 months ended March 31, 1905, amounted to £50,751, against £54,824 in the previous year. The total receipts amounted to £57,446 10s 8d, "including a special item of £5,118 on account of repair services rendered by the Iris," against £80,118 last year.

The surplus on actual working was therefore £36,694. The board, however, set aside £35,000 for the renewal fund, and they had also to provide a sum of £77,544 for interest and sinking fund, which in fifty years will extinguish the whole capital expenditure.

"These figures mean that the contributing Governments must make good a deficiency of £75,849 against £87,751 in the preceding year.

OGILVIE'S ROYAL HOUSEHOLD

"Royal Household" is in a class by itself.

Flour that gives half nourishment and double work to digest is not good flour.

Cheap and inferior flour gives the digestive organs double work and half pay—inferior flours contain indigestible waste—

—this waste must first be overcome by nature,—that means extra digestive work.

Indigestibles destroy the nutriment of flour, therefore poor flour gives more work and less nutriment to the system.

Royal Household Flour is in a class by itself—it is the only really pure flour—and it is pure because it is purified and sterilized by electricity. —it is the most easily digested and most nourishing because it is absolutely pure.

The moment a woman puts her hands into "Royal Household" she knows it is a finer flour than she ever used before.

Cattle Exported From Alberta Doubled.

Cold weather has put a stop to cattle shipping. C. P. R. Live Stock Agent McMullen has made this report: "The range country that is from Cochrane and Cowley on the C. P. R. Main line and on the Crow's Nest on the west to Moosejaw on the east, has disposed of 70,000 head of cattle. 50,000 were export stock and the balance were slaughtered in Canada. Last year the export stock numbered 34,000. The fall of 1905 leaves very few animals which come under the class of exports still on the range. Those which have still to go out will probably not number over 2,500 head. The export cattle shipped during the season will number as follows:— April 87 head; May, 826; June, 2,648; July, 8,693; August, 10,157; September, 11,535; October, 11,642; November to date, about 5,000. Total, 50,588.

Strathmore has now become the principal shipping shipping point. Previously stations along the south line held the premier position, but the ranchers enemy, the fence, has spoiled them and the cattlemen look for more open ground when making their shipments. Shippers and ranchers have both had a fairly good season. The few cattle which are still remaining may still go forward if the weather permits. It is several years since the range has been as clear of marketable cattle as it is at present.

It is still rather early to make a forecast of what the next year may bring forth but indications point to high prices. Well known authorities bear out this contention by the fear that for the last couple of years the impottation os stocker cattle has been very slight and consequently the cattle imported in former years has nearly all been disposed of so the cattle marketed next year will be nearly all Alberta bred stock. What effect the recent heavy storm may have on the stock is hard to forecast.

In many sections the fires which raged this fall have practically destroyed all the range and some ranchers are completely cut off from their supply of range territory. On the other hand the creeks, sloughs, and springs have all frozen up and the snow if it does not lie too long, willfurnish the necessary moisture for the stock.

King of all Cough Medicines.

Mr. E. G. Case, a mail carrier of Canton Center, Conn., who has been in the U. S. service for about sixteen years says: "We have tried many cough medicines for croup, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is king of all and one to be relied upon every time. We also find it the best remedy for coughs and colds, giving certain results and leaving no bad after effects." For sale by all druggists.

E. A. Humphreys, a well known resident and clerk in the store of Mr. E. Lock, of Alice, Cape Colony, South Africa, says: 'I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to ward off croup and colds in my family. I found it to be very satisfactory and it gives me pleasure to recommend it." For sale by all drug gists.

Stealing Horses on the Montana Ranges.

Montana officials relate a harrowing tale of conditions on the ranges in the eastern part of that state and the western part of North Dakota, in connection with live stock rustling and a determined effort is being made to break up what are claimed to be organized bands of rustlers operating in both states. In connection with the requisition asked for William H. Denny, of Williston, N. D the Montana authorities claim that a thousand head of horses have been driven off and disposed of by rustlers in the past few years. The rustlers are claimed to operate in Valley County, Montana andWilliams county, N. D. The requisition for Denny was asked upon the grounds of conspiracy, in that he conspired with Thomas Ryan of Momara to drive off and dispose of horses. The application for Denney'e arrest was made by Stock Inspector George W. Hall, of Montana. Denney states that he was not in Montana at the time he is claimed to have entered into the conspiracy and his attorneys in the hearing of the case before the governor argued the affidavit was insufficient and did not make a prima facie case. Governor Smarles, in disposing of the case stated that he intended to co-operate with Governor Toole, of Montana for the purpose of breaking up the practice of stock rustling wherever it may exist in either or both states.

A writ of habeas corpus will probably be asked for in the Denny case as soon as the warrant under the requisition is served. Denny has many friends in North Dakota who claim that he cannot be guilty of the crime. The claim is also made that he is not a fugitive from the justice of Montana, in that he has not been in that state. The case will probably be bitterly fought on both sides.

STOMACHS ON STILTS.

The man who puts on stilts does not increase his actual stature. He only feels taller. Stimulants are the stilts of the stomach. They make a man feel better for the time being, but he feels a great deal worse for them afterward.

The need of the man whose stomach is "weak" is not stimulation but strength. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery perfectly answers that need. It contains no alcohol or whisky. It cures the weak, foul stomach with its attendant bad smelling breath, coated tongue, bad taste, poor appetite and kindred symptoms.

"In the year 1899 I had an attack of indigestion and got so bad that my home doctor said he could not do me any good," writes Mr. G. Trent, of Gordonville, Texas. "I wrote to you and you advised me to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, so I bought six bottles, and when I commenced using it I was so weak could hardly walk about the house. By the time I had used one bottle my stomach and bowels commenced to heal. There were strips of the lining of my stomach or bowels (I don't know which) as large as a man's two fingers passed and I had a good deal of misery in my stomach and bowels, and also in the rectum especially. I could not eat anything without having much distress afterward, but by the time I had taken eight bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' I was sound and well, and could eat anything I pleased without suffering in the least. Could also do as much work in a day as I ever could. I have not suffered from the trouble since, and it was four years ago that I was so sick."

The sole motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make a little more profit. He gains; you lose. Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

Constipation causes and aggravates many serious diseases. It is thoroughly cured by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

PUBLIC WORKS FOR ALBERTA.

WHAT ABOUT A BRIDGE FOR MEDICINE HAT.

Hon. W. H. Cushing, while in Winnipeg, last week, made the following statement to a Free Press reporter :

"We have already begun work in the administration of affairs in the department of public works in Alberta. The first important matter coming before us was the question of rebuilding the Bow Marsh bridge. This bridge was built in the first place by the Territorial Government, the City of Calgary and a private company. It is now falling to pieces, and has been for some time in a state of decay. The new structure will be of steel on concrete piers and will cost in the neighborhood of $50,000.

"We will also build a normal school for the province. The school it is expected, will be located at Calgary, and will cost $60,000 or $70,000. The premier favors the location of the building in the south, and there is little doubt it will be built there.

"A very extensive work will need to be done in the immediate future in the matter of the construction of government roads. The government will build the main highways bridges which are needed, and the balance of the work will be done by the local municipalities."

"Do you consider the question of the location of the capital as settled?"

"The matter of the location of the capital will be settled by the legislature. It will probably prove a difficult matter to change the location now. We in Calgary believe that we scarcely got a fair deal in the distribution of seats. There are 13 ridings north and 11 south of Red Deer, Red Deer itself being included on this count with the south. Even if we got one vote from the north it would not change the location and it is said that it might be difficult to get a unanimous vote from the eleven southern members in favor of a change.

NOTICE TO COMPANIES.

The attention of all companies, firms, brokers, agents and others, either representing or carrying on business on behalf of any unregistered Foreign Company in the Province is directed to the Provisions of the Foreign Companies Ordinance of 1903, by which there is a penalty of $50 per day for each day that such company has transacted business within the Province without first having been licensed to do so by the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies All such companies licensed by the Government of the North West Territories, are recognised by the Government of the Province of Alberta, but any company which was not registered in the Territories, must comply with the provisions of the Ordinance or bear the consequence of having the fine prescribed by the Ordinance imposed. Where any doubt exists in the mind of any agent as to whether the company represented by him is fully registered in accordance with the provisions of the Ordinance, such doubt can easily be removed by applying to the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies who has a complete record of all Foreign companies licensed to do business within the Province on file at his office at Edmonton. The address of the Registrar is : Harold W. Riley, Registrar of Joint Stock Companies Edmonton, Alberta.

The Witch of Cragenstone

By ANITA CLAY MUNOZ,

Author of "In Love and Truth"

Copyright, 1903, by Anita Clay Munoz

With a glad cry he stooped and gathered her into his arms.

"No more such words, Hetty. I ha' listened long enough! Not worthy of me, a rough, hardworking farmer—the maid I ha' ever held so high above all other women!"

He pressed her fondly to his strongly beating heart, saying tenderly, moved in his great joy to an unusual expression of sentiment, "Ah, Hetty, bright sunbeam of my life, that went away so coldly, praise God thou hast come back, bringing warmth to cheer the sad heart of a lonely man and light to set a glow of joy about his quiet home!"

CHAPTER XXIV.

IN a remote part of Cragenstone, far from the center of the village, built on a narrow defile that led from the main roadway and almost hidden by a wild growth of bushes and high trees, stood the prison where Margaret Mayland was confined.

It was a primitive affair built roughly of logs, the interior comprising a row of dark cells, a long narrow passageway and a room for the keeper; also a large assembly hall where the village tribunal or council held its sessions. Here it was that they heard disputants, punished offenders and otherwise sat in judgment. So quiet were the inhabitants of this obscure mountain village, so regular in their manner of living, peaceable and law abiding, that the jail for lack of serving any use of great importance had long since fallen into a state of neglect. The heavy wooden shutters hung loosely on broken hinges; the apertures that emitted air and light into the building were covered with a rusty, iron grating, and the plain, wooden furniture was dilapidated to an extraordinary degree. In fact, the only part of the old prison that gave evidence of strength or resistance was the huge front door of rough oak beams riveted together with iron bands that reached from floor to roof.

Before this door on the afternoon of the day following Margaret's arrest the old jailer, Matthew Allen, sat on a three legged stool sleepily watching the sun's gradual descent toward the horizon line. His good dog slept quietly at his side, and inside the prison the silence was intense.

Sounds of horse's hoofs pounding the roadway fell on the dull ears of the jailer, who raised his head expectantly, for watching alone before the jail in an isolated part of the village was a monotonous existence even for a pious old man whose thoughts were wont to be nearer heaven than earth, and so the hope of a chance visitor with whom to discuss the exciting events of the previous day caused an expression of unusual intentness to spread over Matthew's countenance as he looked toward the turn. Apparently the sight of the old man was failing, for the rider had appeared before his vision and approached quite a few yards in his direction before he recognized the tall, gray clad form of Josiah Taunston. With noisy clatter the horse and rider advanced, the latter pulling rein in a cloud of dust before the huge door of the jail.

"I give thee good day, Matthew," he said. "How doth fare thy prisoner, the devil's young accomplice? Is she still with thee?"

"Yea, master," the man responded seriously. "She is here."

"Thy news is good," Josiah observed. "Methought, perchance, to hear that she had disappeared. Gone up i' the air on a streak o' lightning or in a cloud of smoke, to join the revels of her evil companions."

At this sally he laughed a loud laugh of cruel enjoyment. The jailer looked about him fearfully, calling under his breath for the intercession of the saints.

"How doth thy prisoner conduct herself, Matthew Allen?" Taunston inquired, with curious gloating. "Doth she rave an' curse, tear down her hair an' call on that white livered coxcomb, that quondam lover of hers, to come to save her?"

"My son, her behavior is unusual," he answered, shaking his head from side to side in a way that implied his inability to understand. "The maid doth sit on the stool quietly, with head bowed an' hands pressed together o'er her heart, or else doth kneel on the floor and rest her head on the side of her hard pallet."

The jailer sighed.

"'Twere a sin, good sir, to feel a sympathy for such?" he asked in a trembling voice, uncertainly.

Josiah, who had been leaning over toward the old man familiarly, now sat erect with a sudden motion.

"Matthew Allen," he cried sternly, "keep in mind always that thou doth come under the spell of this woman, under the snare of her devilish wiles. Her tricks are many, I tell thee, an' deep is her art. She doth but play a part to lure thee on! Hast already had a feeling of pity for her? Then beware, Matthew! Keep distant from the charm of her spell, and pray—pray constantly for a speedy deliverance from the sore affliction that hath been visited upon this village."

The jailer paled visibly, and his jaw dropped as with eyes wide open in terror he looked into the dark and menacing countenance of his visitor, who now pompously drew a paper from his belt and with stern majesty proceeded to address the old man.

"Matthew Allen, keeper of Cragenstone jail, I have here an order from the chief councilor, herewith signed and sealed, commanding thee to bring the prisoner in thy charge—one Margaret Mayland, accused of witchcraft—before said councilor and council in the prison hall, where they will be assembled on the morrow at the hour of noon."

The jailer took the paper with trembling hands, stammering his surprise that so much haste had been deemed expedient.

"The council, as thou dost know, Matthew, is composed of wise men," he observed, "men who foresee danger and anticipate obstacles that might rise in their paths. Thy prisoner, jailer, hath a lover abroad known to have vast influence at court. As all the roads and passes are guarded by good Puritans heavily armed, his only way of escape was by the Sterndorf forest, where he must either die of starvation or become a prey to the hunger of the wolves."

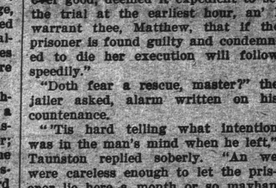
He snapped his fingers indifferently, as if he did not care which. "So our good councilmen, knowing the value of precaution and having fair knowledge that ofttimes evil doth triumph over good, deemed it expedient to set the trial at the earliest hour, an' I warrant thee, Matthew, that if the prisoner is found guilty and condemned to die her execution will follow speedily."

"Doth fear a rescue, master?" the jailer asked, alarm written on his countenance.

"'Tis hard telling what intention was in the man's mind when he left," Taunston replied soberly. "An we were careless enough to let the prisoner lie here a month or so mayhap the popinjay, safely surrounded by armed followers, would ride back to break down the door and bear the witch away. But," as he saw the pallor deepen on the old keeper's face, "rest easy, Matthew, an' have faith in the council."

Having finished his discourse, he turned his horse about.

"One moment stay thee," the jailer cried eagerly, laying a detaining hand on the horse's mane. "An' should this knight find means of escape through the forest and ride back to save his lady, this old prison would offer but poor resistance."



"With so much dispatch will the council seal the woman's fate," Josiah answered sternly, "that unless La Fabienne hath eagle's wings wherewith to speed him on his travels he will arrive too late. Fare thee well, Matthew."

He started to ride away, then, pulling rein, suddenly brought his animal to a standstill.

"I a'most forgot to tell thee," he called over his shoulder, "that the council hath under advisement the matter of sending some other to remain with thee until the day that thy prisoner hath been freed or her doom sealed. God be with thee, Matthew."

Putting spurs to his horse, he rode away, and the keeper, calling his dog, turned the great key in the lock and entered the jail.

The next morning, despite the fact that a heavy mist hung over the mountain and a drizzling rain was falling, the quiet village of Cragenstone presented a scene of unusual activity. From the various houses people were issuing on their way to the council hall, and at the Sign of the Red Heart stern faced Puritans from far distances were arriving constantly, for the story of Margaret's arrest had been passed from mouth to mouth over the mountain, and in those credulous, superstitious times such a sensational event as the trial of a witch was the signal for a general holiday. Shepherds left their flocks, housewives their spinning wheels, the husbandman laid down his plow, and, donning their best attire, they walked or rode to the scene of interest. So all the morning along the roadways and before the various shops in the village groups of newcomers advanced or stood listening with mouths agape to the startling and fearful tales told them by the townspeople of "the accurst woman's doings" and the suffering she had caused those that had come under her evil spell.

All eyes were turned toward the entrance.

Precisely at the hour of noon, as the rusty iron bell at the prison clanged out the tidings that the time of Margaret's trial had arrived, the chief councilor and council, accompanied by two judges from Sterndorf renowned on the mountain for their knowledge of the law, made their way through the great concourse of people gathered before the jail. Trembling with excitement, old Matthew threw open the door, and they entered, walking slowly to the council chamber, followed at a respectful distance by the assembled people, who took seats quietly on the rough, wooden benches prepared for them.

When all were seated and the clanging of the bell had ceased, the chief councilor rose and called loudly the name of Matthew Allen.

Immediately the jailer appeared at the door.

"Matthew Allen," he said in solemn tones, "I call on thee in the name of the king to produce the woman in thy charge, one Margaret Mayland, before this tribunal. Bring forth the prisoner!"

Amid a breathless silence he resumed his seat.

Presently the grating noise of the opening and shutting of an iron door was heard, then the sounds of footsteps coming along the corridor. All eyes were turned toward the entrance and there was a ripple of excitement and deep interest as the old keeper, leading the prisoner, appeared in the doorway. Eagerly the spectators fixed their curious glances on Margaret, who wore a plain dress of black cloth unrelieved by any color or ornament save the gold cross on her bosom, that shone brightly on its fine gold chain. Her glittering hair, brushed back smoothly, was coiled in a loose knot, and she walked with drooping head, her pale face wearing an expression of suffering and hopeless misery.

They advanced slowly, the jailer finding difficulty in making a way for them through the crowded aisle, until they came to an open space before the council, where Matthew, seating Margaret on a wooden stool placed there for the purpose, left her. So intense was the stillness in the room that the noise of the falling of a pin could have been heard as the assemblage gazed at the prisoner brought face to face with her judges and accusers and who now sat alone apart, her hands clasped together in her lap, her proud head bent and her blue eyes dull and heavy, their glance not lifted from the floor.

The chief councilor sat on a bench surrounded by the council, and back of them, seated on wooden stools, were the witnesses and accusers. Josiah Taunston, summoned to serve in both capacities, sat with his mother in a place of prominence and received a large share of comment and curious attention. Seated just before him in the council was one of the visiting judges from Sterndorf, who, after surveying Margaret's youth and beauty with astonishment, turned to Josiah, saying softly:

"By my faith, good sir, the maid is possessed of woudrous beauty and looks not like one that had sold her soul to the devil."

Josiah's grim face darkened.

"Hist, man! Look not her way, an' put thy thoughts on holy things. To appear winsome is of her evil art; 'tis one of the first tricks she doth use to put folk under her spell. 'Tis well I were here to warn thee, friend."

The man turned about with a frightened expression and, fixing his glance on the audience, kept it there.

Soon the chief councilor, in large curled wig and loose gown of black, rose to his feet.

"Margaret Mayland, rise."

The prisoner, without lifting her eyes, obeyed his command.

"Margaret Mayland," he continued, speaking with stern distinctness, "in the name of the king, thou hath been taken into custody and now brought to trial on the following charges: Connivance with Satan in rebellion against God, possessing a malevolent influence over human beings and supernatural powers to injure them, to read their thoughts, to fascinate and harm by a look, to control the elements and in other ways most wicked to practice the awful crimes of magic, black art and witchcraft. Thine accusers state," he continued, "that already thou hast wrought much suffering to thy neighbors in this village. Woman, hath aught to say in thy defense?"

For the first time Margaret lifted her eyes. "Good sir, of the charges thou dost name I am not guilty," she answered gently.

"Hast thou secured any one to argue in thy defense, to plead for thee?" he demanded.

"Nay, sir."

Her head fell forward, and she clasped her hands together tightly.

"I—I have no friends hereabout, save one old woman, who can do naught but cry for me."

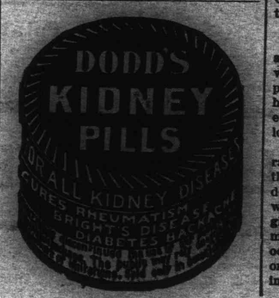
"Thou mayst be seated."

A murmur of deep interest ran through the assemblage as the old councilor said: "Councilmen, we will proceed with the trial. Let the first witness be called."

He resumed his seat with solemn dignity, while the court crier, bristling with importance, rose at once, calling dramatically, "Josiah Taunston to the witness bench!"

CHAPTER XXV.

AS his name was spoken thus loudly and suddenly Taunston turned deathly white, and great beads of perspiration stood out on his forehead. He attempted to rise, but, feeling his legs unsteady under him, resumed his seat; then, controlling himself by a strong effort, again rose and walked with his accustomed air of calm seriousness to the bench set apart for the witnesses. The chief councilor addressed him solemnly:



"Josiah Taunston, doth thou promise, knowing that a just and revengeful God heareth all thou wilt say, to speak truth?"

"I do so solemnly promise."

Then a young attorney, who had been appointed by the council to question witnesses, stepped forward, taking a place just before Margaret, who if she heeded what was going on gave no evidence of it, but sat motionless, with lowered head and eyes downcast.

"Josiah Taunston," he commenced rapidly, addressing the witness, "as the accused hath secured no person to defend her or to parley questions with witnesses it will be proper for thee to give thy evidence directly and with as much speed as possible. Witness, what occurrence between thee and the prisoner first caused thee to think she was in connivance with the devil?"

Wheat Shipments Very Heavy.

Ottawa.—An official return received by trade and commerce department from Fort William and Port Arthur elevators shows that during October there was received 11,541,937 bushels of wheat compared with 6,733935 bushels in October, 1904, the shipments out of the elevators being 10,427,166 compared with 3,821,239 in October the year previous.

A purely vegetable Pill.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are compounded from roots, herbs and solid extracts of known virtue in the treatment of liver and kidney complaints and in giving tone to the system whether enfeebled by overwork or deranged through excesses in living. They require no testimonial. Their excellent qualities are well known to all who have used them, and they commend themselves to dyspeptics and those subject to biliousness who are in quest of a beneficial medicine.

WHAT A CHINOOK IS.

Until yesterday I did not really know what a chinook meant. One blew our train westward from Cardston to Raymond. Then, turning northward, we had to take that mighty wind on the left side of the car. Its yells were audible when the train was running. When we stopped we could hear the pelting sand and gravel particles on car sides as well as windows. A whirlwind flew in every time a door was opened. The double window glass did not exclude strong draughts. But the wonder was not a gale on the prairie, but the mildness of that gale. The temperature was about 53 degrees. The quality of the blast was such that while it would of course have chilled a warm human body, it would have as certainly warmed a man who had been long in a cool cellar or refrigerator car. One could understand how speedily such a wind would clear snow away. Almost any time of the year New England has colder winds, and yesterday was the first day of November. The chinook is, Lethbridgers say, always as mild, or milder, winter and summer alike. At Cardston I saw a record for the winter of 1887, by Mr. Barker, the English "gentleman sheep rancher" and oldest inhabitant. One night in February the thermometer stood 26 degrees below zero at 10 p.m. At 12 p.m. the reading was 52 degrees above. A chinook had arrived meantime.—W. Thomson, in Manitoba Free Press.

Minard's Liniment Cures Diptheria.

BAD KIDNEYS

Can Only Be Cured Through the Blood.

Bad backs—aching backs—come from bad kidneys. Bad kidneys come from bad blood. Bad blood clogs the kidneys with poisonous impurities that breed deadly diseases. And the first sign of that fatal trouble is a dull, dragging pain in the back.

Neglect it and you will soon have the coated tongue, the pasty skin, the peevish temper, the swollen ankles, the dark-rimmed eyes, and all the other signs of deadly kidney disease. Plasters and liniments can never cure you. Kidney pills and backache pills only touch the symptoms—they do not cure. You must get right down to the root and cause of the trouble in the blood—and no medicine in the world can do this so surely as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, because they actually make new blood. This strong, rich new blood sweeps the kidneys clean, drives out the poisonous acids, and heals the deadly inflammation. That is the only way to rid yourself of your backache and have strong, sound kidneys. Mrs. Paul St. Onge, wife of a well known contractor at St. Alexis des Monts, Que., says:—"I suffered for upwards of six years from kidney trouble. I had dull, achhg pains across the loins, and at times could hardly go about. I lost flesh, had dark rims below my eyes, and grew more wretched every day. I was treated by different doctors, but with no apparent result. I dispaired of regaining my health, and was becoming a burden to my family. I was in a deplorable condition when one of my friends advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I began taking them, and after using three of four boxes, I began to feel better. I continued the treatment for nearly three months, when every symptom of the trouble had vanished and I was again a well woman. I feel justified in saying I believe Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved my life."

New blood—strong, pure, rich blood which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make, cures not only kidney trouble but a host of other ailments, such as anaemia, indigestion, rheumatism, erysipelas, St. Vitus dance, locomotor ataxia, paralysis, and the secret ailments women do not like to talk about, even to their doctor.

But only the genuine pills can bring health and strength, and these have the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People" printed on the wrapper around each box. If your dealer does not keep the genuine pills you can get them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Flying Fish.

Flying fish are very voracious. In their turn they are preyed upon by barracudas, sharks, dolphins, billfish, redfish and a hundred and one others. Nature has colored the flying fish protectively. The back is a deep blue, merging into the blue of the seas they frequent, so that they are invisible a few feet below the surface, while the underneath is a dazzling white, and to a fish that looks upward must merge into the light falling on the sea. In addition they possess the unique power of flight. Flying fish are about seven inches long, and the spread of wings is about equal to their length. The "wing" is of thin, gauzy substance, having stiffening sinews, like the fiber of a leaf, to strengthen it.

A COUNTRY HOTEL.

The country "stopping place" is a time honored custom, without which the traveling public could not travel! But it is time for the "stopping place" to become something better than it usually is. Throughout the prairie west you find the most excruciating humor (without mirth in the countryside. You can't laugh until after, but when you do laugh it is contagious.

At one place in the prairie west an enterprising Chinaman offers "refreshment for man and beast." He cooks and serves his own concoctions trotting amiably around his own tables and eagerly asking his guests will they take "lice soup"? The chink knows no "r," but substitutes an "l" to one's loss of appetite.

A more ambitious hostelry on the main line of the C. P. R., where a Chinaman presides over the place, presented a menu card to his patrons with "Cookanut Flitters"! Needless to add, the printer had not yet arrived.

A young lady (?) waitress in one of the very new town hotels, being asked by a guest of the house, "Are these beans canned, or are they grown here?" received the terse reply, "Search me!" It is quite an ordinary thing to find coatless vis-a-vis at some tables d'hote, but the latest style exists at L——r, on the C. N. R., where a shirt-sleeved waiter one day last week, taking his orders after leave the dining room, once more presented a tousled head through a crack in the door and yelled out: "Say, Jim, what in h—— was it you wanted; I forgit!" He was a new hand at hash-slingin', and a menu upset his mental equilibrium.

The country hotel is upheld by traditions which defy public opinion, so we may say nothing more, for it will never become quite extinct. It lives, thrives and flourishes on its imperfections.—Mary Markwell, in Free Press.

A LITTLE TYRANT.

There is no tyrant like the teething baby. The temper isn't due to original sin; the little one suffers worse than the rest of the family. He doesn't know what is the matter—they do. But baby need not suffer longer than it takes to make him well, if the mother will give him Baby's Own Tablets. They ease the tender gums and bring the teeth through painlessly and without tears. Mrs. C. Connolly, St. Laurent, Man., says: "Some months ago my little girl's health became so bad that we felt very anxious. She was teething and suffered so much that we did not know what to do for her. I was advised to try Baby's Own Tablets, and from almost the first dose she began to improve, and there was no further trouble. She is now in the best of health, thanks to the Tablets." The Tablets cure all the minor ailments of children, and are a blessing to both mother and child. They always do good—they cannot possibly do harm. Try them and you will use no other medicine for your little one. Sold by all druggists or sent by mail at 25 cents a box by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Animal Having the Most Teeth.

The animal having the most teeth is the great armadillo of south Central and northern South America. It is a fact well known to most people that the normal or average number of teeth in mammals is thirty-two—sixteen above and the same number below. The great armadillo, however, is an exception, having from 92 to 100. He has from twenty-four to twenty-six in each side of the upper jaw and from twenty-two to twenty-four in each side of the lower jaw. Another peculiarity lies in the fact that they are all molars or grinders. They increase in size from front to back, instead of from the root, and are wholly destitute of enamel.

Jury Subbing.

Mexico has an ingenious plan for facilitating verdicts in jury trials. Two supernumerary jurors are drawn to sit near the jury box and listen to the evidence and arguments. If any of the regular jury falls ill or is otherwise disqualified from going on, one of the "supes" takes his place. In this way they avoid what is often seen in American courts—a long trial rendered useless when it is nearly finished by the sudden illness or death of one juror.

There Was a Limit.

An Irishman one day went into the shop of a barber to get shaved. After being properly seated and the lather about half applied the barber was called to an adjoining room, where he was detained for some time. The barber had in the shop as a pet a monkey, which was continually imitating its master. As soon as the latter left the room the monkey grabbed the brush and proceeded to finish lathering the Irishman's face. After doing this he took a razor from its case and stropped it and then turned to the Irishman to shave him.

"Shtop that!" said Pat. "Ye can tuck the towel in me neck and put the soap on me face, but, begorrah, yer father's got to shave me!"

They Never Knew Failure.—Careful observation of the effects of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills has shown that they act immediately on the diseased organs of the system and stimulate them to healthy action. There may be cases in which the disease has been long seated and does not easily yield to medicine, but even in such cass these Pills have been known to bring relief when all other so-called remedies have failed. These assertions can be substantiated by many who have used the Pills, and medical men speak highly of their qualities.

Madrid's Night Watchmen.

Madrid still has the mediaeval night watchmen. They admit late comers to the apartment houses at night, but no longer sing out the hour or the condition of the weather. They still go by the name of "sereno," which they got from the fact that, as it seldom rains in Spain, their cries about the weather generally ended with that word ("las tres y sereno").

Two Repulsive Pictures.

In the atelier of Adolph William Bougereau, the great French painter, there hung two terrible pictures. One represented a man dying in the desert, with the frightful form of the angel of death descending upon him. The other depicted Dante and Virgil in hell watching one victim madly gnawing at the throat of another. The two pictures failed because of their horror. "If I had stuck to such subjects as those," the artist used to say, "I should have starved long ago." He found a market for the beautiful.

Wouldn't Work Nowadays.

The Egyptians had a very remarkable ordinance to prevent persons from borrowing imprudently. An Egyptian was not permitted to borrow without giving to his creditors in pledge the body of his father. It was deemed both an impiety and an infamy not to redeem so sacred a pledge. A person who died without discharging that duty was deprived of the customary honors paid to the dead.

To Die In the Last Ditch.

The phrase "to die in the last ditch" is stated by an English authority in such matters to be an Americanism, originating during the civil war. In fact, it was first used by William, prince of Orange, who during the war with France was asked what he would do in case the troops of Holland were defeated in the field and who replied, "I will die in the last ditch."

NO DOUBT ABOUT ROBT. BOND'S CASE

He was Cured of Bright's Disease by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Doctors Said There was No Hope for Him, but He is a Well Man Now.

Mount Brydges, Ont., Nov. 20. (Special).—That Dodd's Kidney Pills cure Bright's Disease completely and permanently has been clearly shown in the case of Mr. Robert Bond, a well-known resident of this place. Mr. Bond does not hesitate to say he owes his life to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"My attending physician," Mr. Bond states, "said I was in the last stages of Bright's Disease and that there was no hope for me. I then commenced to use Dodd's Kidney Pills and no other remedy. I used in all about twenty boxes, when my doctor pronounced me quite well. I have had no return of the trouble since."

Bright's Disease is Kidney Disease in its worst form. Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure it. They also easily cure milder forms of Kidney complaint.

Beach Sands.

A party of chauffeurs were walking along Cape May beach. One of them picked up a handful of sand and said: "Why is it that one beach is firm enough for motor cars, while another is so soft a child can hardly walk on it?" "The sand in your hand answers that question," the second chauffeur replied. "See how fine it is." The sand was, indeed, as fine as dust, as fine as talcum powder. "The finer a sand is the more closely it will pack and, by consequence, the firmer surface it will offer," went on the second chauffeur. "This fine sand here makes a roadbed many feet in depth—a roadbed you couldn't pack more closely if you rolled it a hundred years with a hundred ton roller. Study the sand at Long Branch or Asbury Park. It is prettier than this. It is made of separate grains that you can readily distinguish. Each is a perfect cube, white or black or red—a beautiful clear colored shape that it is a pleasure to look at. Each is about fifty times bigger than the Cape May grains; hence the sand of Asbury Park or Long Branch won't pack down, won't make a firm roadbed. There is only one place in the country where the sand is finer than at Cape May, and that place is Ormond."

The following are the new officers of the Fire Brigade elected at a meeting held last week. President, T. Hutchinson; Chief, Dave Williamson; Asst. Chief, W. B. Finlay; Secretary, Chas. Krauss; Capt. of the Hose Reel, Sam Taylor; Capt. Hook and Ladder, Jas. Nicolls; Capt. Chemical, Frank Worthy.

The Firemens' annual ball to be held on the 15th promises to be a great success. Tickets are selling well and the Fire boys expect to see a large crowd. Our brigade is justly popular. Everybody knows how they dash to a fire and how well they handle the work. They are a splendid lot of young fellows and deserve a general support.

Dr. Smythe has returned from a delightful holiday trip to the coast. While at Victoria he called upon Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Cochran who made inquires after their numerous friends here. Rural 'Phones.

As we find considerable interest is being taken in the subject of Municipal Telephones no apology is needed for a further reference this week. A statement in a Winnipeg daily clearly shows that the rural telephone even on a small scale can be made to pay. The following newspaper clippings will doubtless be interesting. The first is from the Free Press of Dec. 3 and appeared under the heading. Extending Moosejaw 'Phone System. It reads as follows:

The Saskatchewan Telephone Co. have completed their long distance line to Pasqua, Belle Plaine, Pense, Grand Coulee and Roleau. The lines will be extended to Regina in a few days. Since Superintendent Thomas assumed management of this company he has been very busy in order to have this long distance line to Regina, and the new plant installed at Moose Jaw, which gives this city an up-to-date telephone system. Several rural lines are being constructed through the farming districts.

The next is still more interesting as it shows how a small system can be made to pay high dividends.

SMALLEST TELEPHONE SYSTEM IN CANADA.

What is perhaps the smallest telephone system in Canada is "The Lumsden and Craven Telephone Co., Ltd." which held its annual meeting at Craven on Saturday evening last. The election of officers took place, and the financial statement for the past year was submitted. After paying all operating expenses a dividend of 40 per cent. was declared and distributed among the shareholders, who are less than a dozen in number. The telephone system consists of a line from Lumsden to Craven, a distance of eight miles, and there is an instrument for each mile of the line, the farmers along the route being the subscribers. This is also a toll line, the charge being the small sum of fifteen cents. The Bell Company is now constructing a competing line, but the local concern will still continue to do business. Dr. Anderson is president of the company for the ensuing year.

Hudson Bay Road.

There is a sharp discussion in Saskatchewan province just now upon the subject of the Hudson's Bay railroad, a proposition which has been talked of for a long time. Mr. Haultain made the question one of the planks in his platform and forthwith the Hon. Frank Oliver and Premier Scott have come forward axe in hand, to cut out the plank, or at any rate to lop the ends off so that Mr. Haultain and the plank might drop through to the nethermost depths. Well, whether Mr. Haultain be successful or not tomorrow, he will have done one good thing at any rate in drawing from the Minister of the Interior the intimation that the road is looked upon as a responsibility of the Dominion Government. But will Mr. Oliver carry that to its logical conclusion by getting the Federal Government to really build the road?

Roads North and South.

That railway development in the west is progressing at a rate which is simply enormous is beyond doubt and there are now signs of a change of direction. Hitherto all the railroads have run east and west, that is the transcontinental roads have. Soon there will be three such lines crossing Western Canada from east to west and now comes a movement for roads from South to North. Mr. Oliver said that the Government would give "in due time the additional facilities that the circumstances call for on lines running North and South whether those lines have their terminals on the Hudson's Bay, on the North or connect with the Hill system at the international boundary line to the south." Now does that imply that the Dominion Government are negotiating with the Great Northern railway?

Mr. Balfour's Resignation.

With the resignation of Mr. A. J. Balfour the strongest government Great Britain and Ireland has ever had came to an end. Sir Henry Campbell Bannerman, was at once sent for by the King and invited to form a cabinet. Sir Henry accepted and has formed a cabinet, but we will venture to assert that Sir Henry's government will prove to be the weakest of modern times and will scarcely stand long. Sir Henry recently declared in favor of Home Rule for Ireland and that is a policy which will not carry in England. It was the one thing which sent the great William Ewart Gladstone into retirement thus casting a shadow over the last days of a distinguished man. Sir Henry will have a brief spell of government but he cannot carry Home Rule in the present House. He may on appeal to the country, be returned upon Education questions, but if he again brings a measure of Home rule into the House of Commons his supporters are likely to fall away and become beautifully less. The members of the British House of Commons cannot be whipped into line on that question unless it happens to be something much less than Mr. Gladstone proposed. If it should be less than that the Irish members won't accept it and out will go the government again, and the next Parliament after that may have Mr. Joseph Chamberlain at its head. When that happens the Colonies will be interested.

When we speak of the Unionist Government having been the strongest that England ever had we refer more especially to that long period under Lord Salisbury. It gradually declined under Mr. Balfour until it has died a rather inglorious death.

A Contrast.

The News of the day is all in Canada's favor

RUSSIA—Civil war, anarchy, military dictatorship.

IRELAND—Home Rule cry raised more fiercely than ever and John Redmond saying the Irish question is more important than the welfare of the Colonies.

CANADA—Peace, progress, plenty, contentment, loyalty.

John Redmond still talks in the same old wild, impassioned way. He told the people of Ireland that the question of the welfare and good will of the colonies sank into insignificance. English statesmen, he pointed out, would be forced to conciliate the good will of the Irish people, who constituted one of the greatest fighting forces in the world, and whose sympathy was more valuable than any foreign alliance.

In conclusion he asked that the Nationalist convention, declare its confidence in himself and the Irish parliamentary party.

When the party led by Mr Redmond can show that they are worthy of the confidence of other people as well as of themselves, they may stand a chance of getting Home Rule, but not before. They should take a leaf out of Canada's book and they will find that granted they have loyalty to kith, kin and crown (we nearly spelt it with a k), all the other things will be added unto them.

HOSPITAL SATURDAY.

The Governors of the Medicine Hat Hospital intend inaugurating "Hospital Saturday," the first of which will take place on the 23rd of this month, and possibly continued on Monday the 25th. Collecting boxes will be placed in all the public places of the town and every contributor will be presented with a pretty little badge which is being prepared for the occasion. This idea was brought from Vancouver by Mr. A. E. Whiffin who witnessed how the Vancouver people made hundreds of dollars for their hospital by means of collectors on the streets. We hope to see the venture made a success.

Sprained Her Ankle.

"I slipped on an icy step and sprained my right ankle very badly," writes Miss Minnie Burgoyne of Glenwood. It swelled to a tremendous size and caused intense pain. I applied Polson's Nerviline and got prompt relief; the swelling was reduced, and before long I was able to use my foot." For sprains swe,lings and muscular pains Nerviline is the one remedy. Strong penetrating, swift to destroy pain—thats Polsons Nerviline. Fifty years in use.

Young men will sow wild oats though the reaping of the sowing makes the hair on the head turn white from the sorrow.

A young Englishman left home in a fit of anger because his father reprimanded him for strobg drinking. He went to the Yukon and joined a camp of miners. In the camp was an old man who owned a claim and worked alone; he took a fancy to Coulson who shacked with him.

A young lady travelling for her health when she saw how the miners drank and so spoiled their manliness, asked them to sign a temperance pledge. Among the first to sign was Coulson and so kept his pledge as to bring the spite of some of the miners to him. His old friend had found some gold on his claim and was sure of more gold so they worked on in hope and 3 years soon passed away without any good find. When one day the old man was missed and it was said Coulson had murdered him for the claim. It was talked how Coulson used to drink and no trace of the old man could be found. But only imprisonment could be the penalty as no proof how he had died was found. Six months after the old man's dead body was found and the doctors proved he had died in a fit. Coulson was honorably acquitted, but, like the Psalmist, he trusted God to save him, for although he found gold in the mine gold could not save. But Jesus has offered to save all who come to him.

RATEPAYERS MEETING.

The annual meeting of ratepayers was held in the Opera House last Tuesday evening. The attendance was only fair and the proceedings were neither interesting nor instructive.

Mr. John Benson was voted to the chair, Mr. W. R. Gilbert acted as secretary and on the platform were the Mayor (F. G. Forster), Councillors Stewart, Penhale, DesBrisay and Sissons, and the following members of the School Board: W. J. Brotherton (chairman), Rev. W. Nicolls, D. Milne and John Kennedy.

The Mayor made a lengthy statement as to the finances of the town giving total figures for each department which showed that the estimates had been exceeded in the case of Fire, Water and Light; New Enterprises; Waterworks and gas.

He gave the total indebtedness of the town at $168,000 and proceeded to give an estimate of the cost of sewerage and permanent sidewalks under frontage tax system.

Referring to the sewerage scheme he stated the estimate of Mr. John Galt was $65,000 for the centre and upper portion of the town.

Coun. Stewart read a financial statement giving details of expenditure and said that there was a deficit of $9,980.60 but against that might be set sums to be received in December amounting to $5,227 leaving the net deficit at $4,763.16.

Couns. DesBrisay gave the figures for the Fire, Water and Light Committee and paid a high tribute to the efficiency of the Fire Brigade which came under his department.

Councillor Sissons submitted report for the License and Police Committee and advocated the employment of two additional constables in the near future. His department showed a balance of $248.68.

Councillor Penhale submitted the report of the Water Committee and deprecated the loss of the C. P. R., water contract which he thought might be got back if the town went about it in the right way.

This concluded the Council business.

Mr. Brotherton then gave an interesting talk on School Board matters and outlined the work of the Board during the past year. He took occasion to observe that the lact that Messrs Niblock and Kennedy had been re.elected trustees by acclamation was a compliment to the Board and equal to a vote of confidence by the people. He pleaded for a favorable consideration of the proposal for a curfew bell as too many children were late on the streets.

It would not be a case of children falling into the hands of the police and taken to gaol. The children found out after Curfew had rung would be taken home and the parents proceeded against.

Mr. Kennedy then moved that the meeting be considered as the annual meeting of the Board and that the financial statement be published in the two local papers.

Mr. Milne seconded and it was carried nem. con.

Mr. Walter Huckvale, speaking from the audience, observed that the Mayor had touched very slightly upon the subject of the filtration of the water by mechanical process. As the question of filtration and a standpipe was a very important one to the town he would like to hear the result of Mr. Porter.s investigation into the working of the filters at Brandon and what was the estimated cost.

The Mayor stated that the cost would be about $10,000 and explained Mr. Porter's report.

Hon W. T. Finlay offered some remarks as to the proposed sidewalks and went on to say he considered the School Board report very satisfactory. He hoped the Board would soon go into tree planting in the playgrounds.

Mr. Brotherton replied that the Board could not take it up earlier in consequence of the alterations, but intended doing so now.

A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the proceedings.

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

LABOR VOTE CARRIED THE MAYOR BUT LOST TWO MEN FOR COUNCILLORS.

Tho Municipal Election this year evoked more interest than has perhaps ever been shown in similar contests in Medicine Hat. Two or three circumstances are certainly worthy of note. One is the part taken in the contest by the members of the Trades and Labor Council. They practically adopted Mr. F. G. Forster as their nominee for the Mayoralty and put forward three Candidates for Councillors. They succeeded in placing Mr. Forster away up and giving him a very large majority but they lost two of their candidates for Councillors.

Another point in the contest was that Mr. Walter Huckvale, who opposed Mr. Forster for the Mayoralty although an able and most estimable man entered the field almost at the last moment and, in addition to having had no previous experience of the Council, was little known to the great majority of the voters. One of the candidates for the Council (Mr. W. C. Harris) was a comparative stranger to the electors, excepting through The Times.

Taking the candidates as they stand on the list we may say the first two men on the poll, Mr. Henry Stewart and Mr. Thomas Penhale, are experienced men on the Council and secured a very general vote, Mr. Penhale being one of the nominees of the Trades and Labor Council, which gave him a distinct advantage. Mr. Hunt had the solid support of the "Cliff-dwellers." Mr. Harris had no party or organisation at his back but took a good position without making any canvass, polling within ten votes of Councillor Penhale. Baker and Wagstaffe were backed by the Trades and Labor Council and polled well on the north side of the town, but poorly on the south.

The voting was as ollows:

FOR MAYOR.

	Huckvale	Forster
South	74	102
North	36	91
	110	193

FOR COUNCILLORS.

	North	South	Total
Stewart	121	64	185
Penhale	72	77	149
Hunt	104	43	147
Harris	88	51	139
Baker	41	64	105
Wagstaffe	43	48	91

Mr. T. C. Blatchford was returning officer and his deputies were Messrs T. H. Rhodes and F. S. Pingle.

Thus ended the Municipal Election of 1905.

To The Electors.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Permit me to thank you most heartily for the splendid support you gave me at the polls yesterday. Considering that I was nominated at the last moment and made no canvass (not ten persons in the town can say I asked for their votes), I am well pleased to have taken such an honourable position on the poll, and I offer you my most sincere thanks for the spontaneous support you gave me.

Yours obediently
W. C. HARRIS.

One of those dear American papers got off another little joke at the expense of Medicine Hat last week. It was in the form of a picture of a big building with a tall smokestack all buried in snow and icicles and labelled "Medicine Hat blizzard factory." A copy was sent to Mr. A. C. Hawthorne by a friend of his in the States. Now does not this sort of thing give one the "tired feeling" Medicine Hat is a butt for every weather joker in the United States. FEES IN THE COURTS.

How Officials Who Arrange For the Assizes Are Paid.

The Toronto Star recently gave an account of the officials and their pay in York County and Assize Courts. As they are typical of those elsewhere throughout the Province of Ontario, the account, which is as follows, is interesting:

"Oyez! Oyez! Oyez!

"All persons having anything to do before the Court of the General Sessions of the Peace draw near and give your attendance.

"God save the King!"

The familiar proclamation rolled forth over the court and subsided in echoes, and the court was in session.

That formality costs the Province 30 cents every time Court Crier Taylor utters it in the courts at City Hall.

"Oyez! Oyez! Oyez!

"All persons having anything to do before the Court of General Sessions of the Peace depart hence and give your attendance to-morrow.

"God save the King!"

That, too, costs the Province 30 cents.

Handling the Book; giving the oath to witnesses, and announcing their names nets Mr. Taylor 10 cents per witness. He also gets $1 a day for his attendance at court and a small salary as factotum to Judge Winchester.

There are many fees paid at the courts at City Hall. The sheriffs are paid $5 a day for attendance at court and $2 for every prisoner arraigned. For summoning 30 petit jurors and 13 grand jurors the sheriffs get 13 cents a mile and 25 cents for each man served. This amounts to a tidy sum each year and it would total up fully a third more but for a little economy practiced. The one panel is utilized for both civil and criminal assizes. This usually works out without a hitch, but a couple of times the vagaries of court procedure have kept the sheriff on tenter hooks, lest the panel should be exhausted. On one day two years ago four juries were out at once from the two courts. Fortunately it was too late to open other cases, else the panel would most assuredly have petered out before the selection was made.

On another occasion three criminal Assize juries were out at once. The cases were short, but the evidence was contradictory. At 7.45 His Honor, the late Judge McDougall, directed that enquiries be made as to the probability of an early verdict. At every jury room the answer was "We cannot agree."

"Lock them up," said Judge McDougall.

At 8 o'clock, just before he departed for home, another inquiry was instituted.

"We have agreed," said the foreman of the first jury.

The jurymen were brought into court, but before they had been discharged the second jury sent out word that they had agreed. Hard upon the heels of this announcement came a similar announcement from the third jury room.

Every one of those three juries convicted their man and they all made up their minds in less than fifteen minutes.

There are a lot of fee paid officials in County Courts. County Crown Attorney Drayton gets $10 a case whether it lasts ten minutes or ten days. On the face of things this looks like a bonanza, for very few of the cases last beyond half a day, but there are cases which cause the Crown Attorney to work for sweat shop wages. This spring the Godson arson case ran through twelve days. In addition to these fees Mr. Drayton is entitled to two dollars for every indictment he draws.

Constables on duty at the doors and inside the courts are paid $1.50 a day each. They are agitating for more. In addition they are paid a fee for serving summonses and making arrests, and summoning witnesses.

The County Court Clerk's office farely bristles with fees. The clerks of other courts are paid a salary, but in the County Clerk's office there is a list of fees from 25 cents to $1 for filing judgments, issuing certificates, registering official documents of various kinds.

The Canadian Champion Oarsman.

Eph McGee, the new Canadian amateur champion oarsman, was born in Toronto in 1879, so he is now 24 years of age. He is a fine specimen of young manhood, splendidly built, 6 ft. 3 inches tall, and tips the scale at 190 pounds. In addition to his prowess with the oars he has carried renown as an amateur boxer, having won the Canadian middle and heavyweight championships. McGee commenced his athletic career as a member of the Toronto Rowing Club in 1899, when he stroked the junior fours to victory in the Dominion Day regatta at Toronto. Later he rowed in the fours at Brockville and was beaten. At the same regatta he rowed single. It was his first attempt and he was defeated by Fraser. He dropped rowing altogether and was away in the States for a couple of years, but he took to the water again on his return to Toronto, and last year jumped into prominence by winning the junior singles at the Canadian Henley. At this regatta he also won the intermediate doubles with McGrath, who rowed the course with him without opposition for the senior doubles on Saturday. In the Dominion Day regatta this year McGee rowed in the senior doubles with McGrath and won. Saturday's victory was only the third time McGee has contested a race in the singles, and he defeated Duffield, who won the championship at St. Louis, and Feussel, who has already defeated Titus and Veseley this year, and is looked upon as one of the fastest oarsmen in America.

Pidgin-English.

The following letter asking for an increase of salary was received by a firm in Shanghai from two Chinese clerks in its employment:

"Dear Sirs: Being respectfully to ask you the pardon for allow us to request you the favor however we understand that you are an intelligent and patronaged us this so long while. Therefore we venture dare not to solicit your assistance for increase a little of our salaries that we can enough to support this family. Recently at Shanghai the house rent and provisions, etc., are double dear between since for few years which compel us to ask you for the favor. Hoping you will kindly enough to grant us this requesting and keep attention for us of this affair."

A Little Mixed.

After a meeting of the parish council in a New England town the chairman rose to sum up.

"You keep us here," he said, "till 10 o'clock at night, and then you cast the town drains in our teeth. You keep us here plowing the sands, and then when all decent people are asleep you go into the public drains, causing unnecessary friction. It won't do—it's too barefaced to hold water."

The Broken Down Nervous System

Often Found in Persons who are Apparently in Good Health—Extraordinary Effects of

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

It is not always the pale and bloodless who suffer from nervous exhaustion, and when a person of apparent good health finds himself almost helpless he gets little sympathy from physician or friends and not infrequently his ills are attributed to the imagination.

Nervous diseases are slow in coming on and patience is necessary in their treatment. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is absolutely certain to be of benefit to anyone suffering from exhausted nerves, for it supplies the very elements of nature which go to create new nerve cells and instil new vigor and energy into the nervous system.

Miss Lena Hiebert, Lowe Farm, Man., writes:—"I had suffered for two years with dizzy spells, pains in the back, cold hands and feet, nervousness, jerking of the limbs, sore tongue, soreness of arms and shoulders, and general exhaustion. About seven months ago I became so nervous that I could not rest or sleep, and could not do the least bit of work without suffering dreadfully from pains in the back. I could hardly walk, could eat very little, and felt that people were always watching my body twitch.

"I tried several medicines with little effect, and was a mere skeleton of skin and bone, about to give up in despair, when I heard about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and began using it. I have used in all fourteen boxes of this preparation, and it has built me up until I am now strong and well again. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done me a world of good, and I feel that I cannot recommend it too highly to persons who suffer as I have."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

Fort William, Ont.—The grain inspector's report for the months of September and October shows that the Canadian Pacific and Canadian Northern railways have hauled from the west to their terminals at Fort William and Port Arthur almost 20,000,000 bushels of grain.

This fall the C. P. R. has handled here 13,485 cars or a total of nearly fourteen million bushels. For the same period last year 5,843 cars or over six million bushels increase over last year. The C. N. R. at Port Arthur have handled five thousand cars or over six million bushels this fall.

Manners.

Manners are of more importance than laws. In a great measure the laws depend on them. The law touches us but here and there and now and then. Manners are what vex or soothe, corrupt or purify, exalt or debase, barbarize or refine us, by a constant, steady, uniform, insensible operation, like that of the air we breathe. They give their whole color to our lives. According to their quality they aid morals, they supply them or they totally destroy them.

The Perfect Pun.

A perfect pun makes good sense both ways; the edges meet with a click like the blades of a sharp pair of shears. Sometimes the very thoughts fit tight together in antagonistic identity, as when the man said of the temperance exhorter that he would be a good fellow if he would only let drink alone, or when Disraeli (if it was he) wrote to the youth who had sent him a first novel: "I thank you very much. I shall lose no time in reading it," or as when a man, seeing a poor piece of carpentry, said, "That chicken coop looks as if some man had made it himself." Exquisite perverse literalness of thought! And the same absolute punning, the very self destruction of a proposition, was the old death thrust at a poor poet by the friend who said, "His poetry will be read when Shakespeare and Homer are forgotten." It was a fine double edged blade of speech until some crude fellow, Heine, I think, sharpened it to a wire edge by adding, "and not till then," a banality that dulled its perfection forever.—J. A.

PATRIARCH OF PEERAGE

SKETCH OF AGED LORD LEICESTER AND HIS FORBEARS.

An Interesting Old English Family Tree—Holkham, His Family Seat, Comprises Over 50,000 Acres, And Is the Nearest Spot in England to Denmark—Gallary Has Paintings by the Greatest Masters of Europe.

Lord Leicester, the patriarch of the English peerage, lays dying and probably will have breathed his last ere this letter appears in print, writes the Marquise de Fontenoy. For he was born considerably more than four score years ago of a father who was 70 years of age at the time, and who had been born as far back as in the reign of King George II., seventeen years before either the first Napoleon or the great Duke of Wellington came into the world. The youngest of old Lord Leicester's eighteen children was born eleven years ago, when his father was 71, and at the time of the little fellow's birth, no less than 141 years divided him from the birth of his paternal grandfather, Thomas William Coke, the first of the Helkham earls of Leicester of the present creation.

Lord Leicester's eldest son and heir, who now will succeed to the earldom and to the possession of the famous Holkham Hall estate, has been known until now as Viscount Coke, and as an officer of the Scots Guards has seen a good deal of active service in Egypt, in the Soudan, and in South Africa. He is married to a charming Irish woman, Alice White, daughter of Lord Annaly, and has three grown up sons and a couple of daughters. In spite of this, their mother is still a wonderfully young looking woman, with a tall graceful figure, typically Irish eyes, and ruddy brown hair. She is one of the most clever banjoists in English society and excels as a skater, having won all sorts of trophies on the ice.

Although the Leicester peerage is of modern creation, having been granted in the first year of the reign of Queen Victoria, yet the Coke family is an ancient one, for Sir Edward Coke having been Lord Chief Justice of England under Queen Elizabeth and King James I. This great-great-grandson of this Lord Chief Justice, Sir Thomas Coke, was Postmaster-General in the reign of King George II., and was created Viscount Coke of Holkham and Earl of Leicester. Dying without issue Holkham passed into the possession of his sister's son, Weirman Roberts, who assumed the surname and arms of his uncle. It was his eldest son, who for the greater part of his life was known from one end of England to the other as "Mr. Coke of Holkham," who at the age of 90 was created by Queen Victoria Earl of Leicester and Viscount Coke.

Holkham, which comprises over 50,000 acres, is one of the most beautiful places in Norfolkshire, situated in that part of the County which is the nearest spot on the English shores to Denmark, which has often led Lord Leicester to insist that King Christian was his next door neighbor. The hall is a massive building, built something over 200 years ago, and of stately proportions. The entrance hall, some seventy feet long by fifty feet wide, is of variegated alabaster, of tones at once cool and rich. The settees and chairs with which the hall is partly furnished light its cold splendor with resonant notes of scarlet and gold, and the floor is thickly strewn with relics of the chase in the shape of skins of bear, boar, and deer. A broad crimson carpeted stairs leads to a gallery which extends round three sides of the hall, from whose balustrade spring eighteen solid pillars of alabaster.

On to this gallery open the doors of the various apartments. The latter are rich with the masterpieces of the greatest painters of Europe. Holbein, Van Dyck, Titian, Raphael, Rubens, Reynolds, Ross, and Gainsborough are all represented on the walls, while among the treasures contained in the library is a first edition copy of the "Novum Organum," presented by its author, the great Sir Francis Bacon, to his rival, Chief Justice Coke; an illuminated manuscript of the "Divina Commedia" of the fourteenth century, which belonged to Dante himself; a Cicero of the ninth century from the abbey of Cluny, which was used by Abelard; the original manuscript of Leonardo da Vinci's book on hydraulics, written in a delicate hand, "alla mancina," that is backward, so that it can only be read by holding it to a mirror; and a manuscript Livy presented by Cosmo di Medici to Alfonso of Naples, the leaves of which are reported to be impregnated with a subtle and deadly poison. I may add that on the title page of Bacon's presentation copy of his "Novum Organum," Chief Justice Coke, the recipient, has written the following caustic comment:

Deserveth not to be read in schooles,
But to be freighted in the shippe of fooles.

There is also in the library a beautiful reliquary of beaten gold ornamented with precious stones and alleged by its old time monkish possessors to contain the bones of St. Thomas, St. James, St. Paul, St. Bridget and St. Oswald—a collection as heterogeneous as holy. But it is useless to attempt any detailed account of the artistic and historic treasures of Holkham Hall, and I will only add that in spite of their priceless character—they may be regarded as of national importance—they have never been insured, so firm is the belief of the Cokes in the fireproof character of Holkham Hall.

While the estate is famous throughout sporting Europe for its game preserves, a thousand head of partridges to eight guns being considered a good average bag for a day's shooting, yet the estate is likewise celebrated among ornithologists as the refuge of all sorts of rare wild birds, domestic and foreign, certain portions of the property and certain lakes being devoted to them, where they are absolutely safe from any kind of injury or disturbance. The bird world seems to know this, and the spectacle sometimes presented on the shores of these sheets of water is absolutely unique.

[By OBSERVER.]

The site for the new post office and customs building was cleared some time ago, but there seems to be no word yet as to tenders being asked for for the building. Won't somebody hurry the government up a bit on this? The work of our post office has increased so much that it is not fair to our excellent staff that they should have to work in such a cramped space. The present building has been altogether too small for a long time. The staff will have my sympathy over the Christmas rush—crush I mean.

The noble Saskatchewan yielded last week to the iron grip of Jack Frost and once more skaters were afforded an opportunity of indulging in our great winter pastime. I understand the ice was pretty thick by the 1st of this month and that on that day a light rig and team of horses crossed on the ice. It would be interesting to know how this compares with other years.

I notice that the nurserymen have started sending out their Spring catalogues of trees and shrubs. The winter is the time to lay plans for spring work and there is room for much planting of trees in Medicine Hat. If every owner of a town lot would plant ten trees next spring and take some trouble with them we should have the prettiest town in Western Canada in five years from now. I don't think the Council should be in any hurry to plant trees on the streets. It would be wiser to grow them on in the nursery for at least one more year. Unless tall strong trees are put out there is sure to be a large per centage of failures.

I would urge the Council not to give away the biggest and best trees every year. Comparatively small trees suit very well for people to plant inside their railings but strong trees must be put out on boulevards—when we have them.

I gather from the remarks of Chairman Brotherton that the School Board intend to put the school playgrounds in order soon and will plant trees next spring. Here again there is a necessity for good strong trees. The Board will have to fence a strip around the playground to protect the trees from the inside because when our boys get playing ball or any other game they can't be expected to bother much about the trees. They'll go straight and if there's a tree in the way so much the worse for the tree. The Board will have to make up their minds to provide complete protection and I feel sure if they come to the ratepayers and say they want $500 extra for the work the people will cheerfully give it. The boys and girls must be given every latitude in their playgrounds (which I am happy to say are pretty spacious), so the protecting fence round the trees must be of the right sort.

There now I have preached quite a sermon about trees without quite intending it when I started, but the importance of tree planting in our prairie towns and cities must be the excuse.

♠ ♠ ♠

When Poundkeeper Morrey first began to dose the dogs that hadn't paid their footing it hardly looked as if the business could last very long. I thought that ere now he would be like the great Othelo, his "occupation would be gone," but there seems no end to the tagless canines. About ten per month seems to be the run of it. Well, ownerless dogs are about the biggest nuisance any town could be cursed with so go ahead with the work Mr. Morrey but give em all decent burial.

I cannot understand though how anyone can keep a dog for a little while and then refuse to pay the tax and let the poor animal fall into the handsof the destroyer. A dog kindly and properly treated is man's most faithful friend. I remember visiting an ancient house once where the owner used to put up a little monument to every one of his hounds that died. At the entrance gate the visitor's attention would be arrested by an inscription plainly cut in a stone.

Stay stranger, stay,
And shed a tear,
For Gelert the hound
Lies buried here.

Further on through the grounds were several little mounds with plain slabs each of which marked the grave of a dead dog.

At another place the lady of the house had lost two dogs (by death), one named "Brandy" and the other "Soda", and brandy and soda were resting peacefully side by side while two small marble slabs recorded the death of "the drinks."

It is especially adapted to children as it is pleasant to take and contains nothing injurious. Mr.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of the Medicine Hat Agricultural Society was called for last Friday but owing to the Supreme Court not having concluded their sittings, the society decided to adjourn for a week. ALLEGED ATTEMPT BY SCOTT TO BRIBE McINNIS.

Regina Dec. 8.—The latest development in political circles here is the publication of an open letter by J. K. McInnis, owner of the Regina Standard, which definitely charges Premier Scott with attempting to purchase his support in October for $10,000.

The letter is addressed to Walter Scott, but is really intended for the electors of Saskatchewan. Charges between Scott and McInnis have been flying back and forth for several days and the last issue of the Leader the premier's personal organ, challenged McInnis to bring forward proof, and taunted him because he had not done so. McInnis replied quickly, charging that Walter Scott came to the Standard office by appointment in the middle of October, about 9 p.m., and tried to persuade him to abandon the cause of Provincial Rights.

Scott then promised that if he was confirmed in the premiership, that McInnis should be paid $12,000 for a certain property.

Mr. McInnis says he owns the property still; that he paid $1,000 for it and estimated its present value at $2,000.

Mr. McInnis ends his letter: "Perhaps this much will satisfy you today," indicating that further revelations are ready to spring. He furnishes no proof except a letter from Scott asking for an appointment. He makes his charge in the form of an affidavit.

The Standard makes no comment on the revelation.

Scott and McInnis were very close political associates for many years, and the latter was his chief supporter for member for West Assiniboia during the latter's campaign for the federal house.

They parted company on the autonomy issue and Mr. McInnis has since been one of Mr. Haultain's strongest supporters. The exposure will probably create great excitement in the province when it becomes generally known.

WARRANT FOR McINNIS.

Regina Dec. 9.—The election in Saskatchewan is being waged bitterly by both sides. Premier Scott today had a warrant issued for the arrest of Editor McInnis, of the Regina Standard, on a charge of perjury in connection with the statement issued by the latter gentleman yesterday to the effect that Scott endeavored to bribe him.

DOES SEED SELECTION PAY.

The Seed and Weed Special trains that are to be run over the Canadian Northern and Canadian Pacific Railways this winter will be furnished with illustrations of the value of seed selection by Mr. James Murray. Not only will seed selection be discussed in all its phases, but the necessity of treating seed to prevent smut will also be dealt with, as well as the eradication and control of wild oats, mustard and other noxious weeds. Every effort is being exerted to make this train of practical use to every farmer. Mr. S. A. Bedford is fitting up the cars at Brandon to illustrate seed selection, choice of varieties, and will show specimens of all noxious weeds. The eradication of these will be discussed by Dr. Fletcher, the weed man from Ottawa, who is well and favorably known throughout the west. The other subjects will be handled by the best talent that the Department of Agriculture can procure. Stops of an hour and a half will be made at each station, and, as the trains will run on time punctuality is all important.

Curfew Has No Benefits.

The City Council of Kingston, Ont. has abolished the Curfew Bell which for some years has been rung at 9 p. m. in summer and at 8 p. m. in winter. No benefits, they say, have been derived. This seems to be the experience wherever the curfew bell has been tried.

TIRED OUT.

There's many a wife sits in the growing shadows of an evening, knowing what it is to feel tired out; as if there was not another ounce of effort left in her. But if healthy she knows how sound her slumber will be and how refreshed the morning will find her. But it's another thing for the sick woman to feel tired out. Rest only seems to increase her suffering. She feels acutely the aching back and throbbing nerves. Sick women, hundreds of thousands of them, have been made well by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

"I am pleased to inform you of the benefit I received from using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery,'" writes Mrs. Elizabeth A. Oswold, of 45 Brant Street, Windsor, Essex Co., Ontario, Canada. "Was quite discouraged when I wrote asking your advice, as the physicians here told me I could get no relief except by an operation. Suffered for four years from irregular and profuse menstruation, had sick and nervous headaches most of the time, and at times could hardly walk across the floor from weakness. I thank God there is such a remedy as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for suffering women. Before I had taken the first bottle the headaches had left me and it was not long before regularity was established and still continues so. Have just finished house-cleaning which I never expected to be able to do again, and can truly say I never felt better than at present. I gladly recommend 'Favorite Prescription' to all who suffer from female weakness. It has cured me and made me stronger in every way. Neither my husband nor myself can say enough in its praise."

The selfish seller who urges some substitute is thinking of the larger profit he'll make and not of your best good.

EXPERIMENTS WITH FLAX STRAW.

BINDER TWINE AND PAPER FROM THE MANITOBA PRODUCT.

Under instructions received from the premier, the Hon. R. P. Roblin, minister of agriculture and immigration, J. F. Tennant, provincial immigration agent, shipped by express on Tuesday last from Gretna, a sample of flax straw, consisting of 25 pounds to George H. Campbell, of the Brittania Paper Company, Limited of Toronto.

The straw was sent for an experiment to see what could be done with it in the manufacture of paper. The flax straw was raised on the farm of Diedtrich Klassen, near Gretna. He is, also, under agreement with the Provincial Department of Agriculture and immigration to ship two tons of his flax straw to George H. Campbell at the Canada Research laboratories Toronto.

FOR BINDER TWINE.

This shipment is made by the premier, the Hon. R. P. Roblin, to experiment on the properties of Manitoba grown flax straw for the manufacture of binding twine, and the experiment will be watched with interest by the farming community in Manitoba and the northwest provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan If it proves a success, then the value of the products of the western farmer will be correspondingly increased, and the market value of binder twine, so absolutely necessary to the farmer, will be reduced. Credit is due to the premier and the department of agriculture and immigration of the province of Manitoba for the steps they have taken in trying to make of commercial value the flax straw raised by the Manitoba farmers, which heretofore was burnt as waste material after the grain had been threshed out of it.

King of all Cough Medicines.

Mr. E. G. Case, a mail carrier of Canton Center, Conn., who has been in the U. S. service for about sixteen years says: "We have tried many cough medicines for croup, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is king of all and one to be relied upon every time. We also find it the best remedy for coughs and colds, giving certain results and leaving no bad after effects." For sale by all druggists.

E. A. Humphreys, a well known resident and clerk in the store of Mr. E. Lock, of Alice, Cape Colony, South Africa, says: "I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to ward off croup and colds in my family. I found it to be very satisfactory and it gives me pleasure to recommend it." For sale by all druggists.

Curling Men of Alberta

They Will Hold Their Bonspiel Early in the Month of February.

The annual meeting of the Alberta branch of the Royal Caledonian Curling club was held at Calgary on Tuesday night. Vice-President H. McLeod, of the Alberta branch, presided, and J. H. Miquelon was secretary. Those present were L. H. Doll, Banff club; W. Turner, Priddis; C. S. Pingle and A. E. Whiffen, Medicine Hat; Col. Walker, J. Irwin, H. McLeod, Chief Smart, M. S. McCarthy, Calgary.

Wednesday, Feb. 7, was fixed as the date for the annual bonspiel. This is a little later than has been customary but was postponed owing to a request from Edmonton. The meeting decided to offer medals to be competed for by clubs within the jurisdiction of the Alberta branch. The competing districts are,

Cypress district, including Maple Creek and Medicine Hat; Chinook, including Macleod and Lethbridge; Calgary, including Priddis and Calgary; Red Deer, including Innisfail, Red Deer and Lacombe; Edmonton, including Wetaskiwin, Strathcona and Edmonton; National park, including Banff and Bankhead, and Golden district.

The winning clubs are to play for a new trophy, which is being offered. The following is a list of the official umpires: Cypress, W. Huckvale, Medicine Hat, Alta.; Chinook, W. G. McLean, Macleod, Alta.; Calgary, P. Turner Bone, Calgary, Alta.; National park, Dr. H. Brett, Banff, Alta.; Golden, H. Trimble, Lacombe; Edmonton, J. McDonald, Edmonton.

The meeting decided to contribute toward the Curling club memorial fund.

Christmas at the Stores.

Medicine Hat store windows look very attractive in their Christmas garb. Our storekeepers are fully alive to the fact that an attractive window is a great help to business and they are making extra efforts in that direction this year. An attempt to deal in detail with the store contents would only weary the reader, but we recommend everybody to carefully study the advertisements in the Times, and then go and see for themselves what is being offered. Practically every store is unusually well prepared for handling a large trade this year and those who are looking for seasonable presents will find a splendid variety to choose from. Some people may think they can select a present from the catalogue of a mail order house, but as a rule such presents rarely come up to the expectations formed of them from the picture in the catalogue. There is always the risk of great disappointments in shopping in this way. The way to buy a present is to go into the local store and select from the great variety on sale. The result will be far more satisfactory to the buyer and do far more good to the town. To buy "a pig in a poke" is not the action of sensible people, but when buying merely from a catalogue that is what people have to do all the time.

Medicine Hat stores are now replete with everything required for the Christmas holidays, whether to eat, drink or wear, to give away or to furnish or ornament the buyer's own home, and the way to set about it is to go around and see the first-class goods our merchants are offering.

Firemen's Ball.

The members of the Medicine Hat Fire Brigade gave their annual ball in the Opera House on Friday evening and by general consent scored the success of the season so far. There were about sixty couples present, and the management set a good example by starting the music at the appointed time. Notice of this had been given in last week's Times so that when Mon. Leonard "drew a bow at a venture," and Fred. Allingham began to "flute" and Mrs. Tinning gave a skillful touch to the piano, there was a goodly company ready to trip the light fantastic toe, and the dancing began with a spirit which never flagged the evening through.

The "fire boys" had decorated the spacious hall in most appropriate fashion with their own bunting, artistically arranged on and between the pillars, and many colored lights helped to lend a fairy-like aspect to the scene. The boys did not forget to fix up some "cosy corners," which were well patronized, in fact, there was a demand for more. Messrs. Marshall & Hunter, the proprietors of the Opera House, had added three large arc lights, and these suspended in different parts of the house shed a brilliant light upon the gay scene. The varied colors of the decorations and the ladies' dresses, together with colored lights, made up a gay ensemble worthy of the occasion, and left nothing to be desired.

The buffet was in its usual place, and was also gayly decorated, the long table being loaded with a variety of light and tempting refreshments, supplied by the ladies of the town, which the busy dancers fully enjoyed during the usual break in the programme.

By two o'clock a.m. the programme was completed, and the gay throng broke up and wended their way homewards, fully pleased and satisfied that our popular fire brigade had added another spray of laurel to their crown of success.

During the evening a flash-light photograph of the room was taken by Mr. J. E. Miers.

The Witch of Cragenstone

By ANITA CLAY MUNOZ,

Author of "In Love and Truth"

After mopping his brow with his handkerchief and wetting his pale lips with his tongue Josiah spoke:

"'Twas on a day soon after Margaret Mayland's return to her estate that I went one morning to fetch my sister, who had been detained by the storm a few days at the house. As I approached from the roadway mine astonished gaze fell upon my sister, usually a maiden of great decorum, running like a wild thing along the top of the pasture wall, whilst the prisoner, with her hair unbound an' streaming i' the wind, swung from tree to tree, laughing an' chattering gleefully as one bewitched. My sharp cry of rebuke brought them to their senses, and, greatly abashed and crestfallen, they advanced quietly to meet me. Hoping for some good influence with my cousin, I entered the house and stopped a short time to remonstrate with her for her unbecoming behavior.

"I also took occasion, as I felt it my duty, to rebuke her for wearing for ornament a papist cross that always, no matter how frequent the changes in her dress, hung about her neck on a gold chain. I urged upon her the fact that such a decoration was distasteful to all good Puritans and warned her that if she persisted in her headstrong foolishness she would bring upon herself much suspicion an' distrust. Suddenly, as I uttered the words, the chain parted an' fell to the floor, where, in my righteous anger, I grasped it and but for the woman's heartrending shrieks an' shrill screams of agony, that I confess disarmed me, I would have thrown it into the fire!"

Here his narrative was interrupted by loud murmurs of approval from the audience.

"For the nonce, under her spell, I returned the emblem to her with unwillingness, an' thereupon, greatly discouraged and disheartened in mine endeavors to lead the woman into better ways, I left the house."

He paused a moment for greater effect; then, throwing up his head suddenly, said, with slow emphasis, "At noon, councilmen, with the same hand that held that cross, being innocent of harm and having no thought of evil, I fed my sheep, and before sundown many of the animals were lying sick of an unknown disease!"

"Doth make a charge, witness?" asked the attorney.

"I charge that the woman is accurst; that the cross she weareth even now so brazenly on her bosom is a witch mark that containeth magic to wreak harm to living creatures," he answered harshly.

All glances were fixed on Margaret, who neither moved nor spoke.

"Continue, witness, an thou hast more to say," the chief councilor here interposed.

Josiah again moistened his lips and, with a nervous motion, adjusted the plain starched ruff at his throat.

"One evening somewhat later i' the month at the time of the setting of the sun I was walking through the forest on my way to my home from the village when I encountered this woman most boldly dressed in a gay colored frock cut in an unseemly fashion to expose her arms an' neck, made thus, I wot, to lure men to their destruction, and, pausing before her, with only thoughts for her good in my heart, I attempted to expostulate with her, when of a sudden methought sparks of fire flashed from her eyes! The name of 'Godfrey' came in a shrill shriek from her lips, an', throwing her arms about me in a fury, she held me as in a vise with the unnatural strength of ten men. For my very life I struggled with her, strange noises sounding about mine ears, confusing me; then there was a loud report as of a burst of thunder, an' I was surrounded by a cloud of smoke that cleared away to show standing before me the form of the woman's accomplice, Sir Godfrey La Fabienne!"

At the sound of that name the prisoner's body swayed as if with suffering, and she cowered slightly, and from the assemblage came cries, hisses and groans.

"At the instant he appeared before my vision," the witness continued in harsh, even tones, "I was felled to the ground by a fearful blow, an' when I was able to stagger to my feet both had disappeared. So strange and weird was the incident and so dazed my mind that I' truth I would ha' thought it was all a dream and I had been sleeping had it not been for the strong stench of sulphur an' powder that lay heavy on the air, blood streaming from my nostrils and the number o' birds dead and dying that were strewn all about me on the ground."

At the close of this speech the prisoner, amazement and grief depicted on her countenance, raised her eyes to the face of her accuser with a glance that contained the deepest reproach, and the audience gave vent to its repressed excitement by loud whispers and wild gesticulations.

"Josiah Taunston," here interposed the young attorney, "hast thou other evidence against the prisoner?"

"As thou can understand," the witness replied, with a significant shrug of his shoulders, "after that experience I gave both the woman an' her accomplice a good safe distance to play their havoc in. But I can repeat much evidence of trouble wrought amongst my neighbors," he added eagerly.

"That would be hearsay evidence and of no value. Thou canst be excused."

Josiah rose and, walking by Margaret with head well up, resumed his seat by his mother.

"Henrietta Taunston to the witness bench!"

A full minute passed, and, as no one moved or came forward in response to this call, all faces were turned in the direction of Hetty Taunston, who, pale faced and weeping, sat by the side of Simon Kempster on one of the benches placed nearest the door.

The court crier looked about him. "Is the witness present?"

"Yea, yea, sir!" came in cries from the audience.

"See thy mother an' Josiah with their eyes turned upon thee in anger, sweet. Thou'd best go," urged Simon, squeezing her small hand encouragingly. "'Twill do thee naught but harm to go against their bidding. See, thy brother's whispering to the questioner now, instructing him mayhap to be easy wi' thee. Go, Hetty. I wot 'twill be better for thee."

At the earnest solicitation of her lover Hetty rose and, making her way slowly through the crowded council room, reached the witness bench, where she stood, oblivious to all the curious glances cast in her direction, regarding Margaret's drooping figure with an expression in her dark eyes of mournful sympathy. Sharply rebuked for her inattention by the chief councilor, Hetty was instructed to be seated, and the young attorney took his place before her.

"Henrietta Taunston," he commenced, with great seriousness, "thou hast been herein summoned as a witness against this woman Margaret Mayland on the representations of thy family that thou didst on several occasions come under the baleful influence of her spell. Hast thou aught to say?"

"Oh, sir," Hetty faltered tearfully in trembling tones, "although the evidence is awful an' convincing, I cannot bring myself to think ill of Margaret, who was ever most kind to me. I can think of her only as my father's sister's child—now both dead—alone among her accusers, forsaken in her hour of trouble by the man she loved—ah, how nearly, only one close to her, as I ha' been, could give thee understanding of it."

She began to sob bitterly.

"Have pity on her. If she hath done aught of wrong 'tis of the cross she weareth, on account of a promise, good councilmen, given her by a dying papist, mayhap with a dying curse breathed on it. Entreat her to destroy it and let her go away," she cried piteously.

Her brother's face was black as night, and he sat well forward on his seat, glaring at Hetty savagely as if he could strike her words back into her throat. His mother, seeing his agitation, plucked the sleeve of the attorney who stood near her and whispered some instructions in his ear. When she finished he stepped forward sternly, with uplifted hand.

"Enough, Henrietta Taunston! 'Tis not thy place to plead for the prisoner, but to give what evidence thou hast."

"Good sir, as I have promised to tell the truth before God," Hetty sobbed, not daring to look toward her mother or brother, "I have never felt any influences of the evil spells attributed to her, but rather have I received much kindness from sweet Margaret."

"Didst thou not one evening meet this woman—the accused—on the road and pass her by with averted face in obedience to thy mother's command?"

"I did, sir."

"And did she not in her anger stand rigid, fixing her baleful glance upon thee so that thou didst run with all haste to thy home, falling in a fit on the floor at thy brother's feet, where thou didst lie like a creature possessed by the devil, foaming at the mouth and moving convulsively?"

In her excitement Hetty almost rose from her seat.

"Nay, sir, nay," she cried earnestly. "Thou hath a wrong impression obtained from evil tongues. 'Tis true that I met Margaret, but her glance was not baleful, but, oh, sirs," lifting her tearful, supplicating face toward the tribunal, "'twas so sad that my heart hath not stopped aching since with the memory of it! An' believe that 'twas not our meeting that caused my swooning, but the news brought"—

Here Josiah Taunston, unable to control himself any longer, rose from his seat, white faced and wrathful.

"I do proclaim the witness now to be under the spell of the prisoner," he cried in a loud voice hastily in his desire to stop her further utterances, "who was ever wont to influence my sister easily, and do affirm that she is not responsible for what testimony she giveth."

Immediately there was a great uproar and wild excitement in the council hall. Hetty, frightened at her brother's violence and bewildered by the confusion, rose from her seat, and, while the attorney consulted with the councilmen and Josiah Taunston on the advisability of questioning her further, the witness, regardless of consequences, made her way hastily to Simon Kempster and, sinking into her place by his side, laid her face against his coat sleeve, sobbing bitterly.

The gaping auditors eyed her curiously, entertaining themselves with coarse comments on her evident fondness for her lover and sneers for her sorrow at the prisoner's predicament. Suddenly there was a loud rapping for order. The council, having decided not to recall Hetty, made the fact known, and when all again was quiet the Widow Dawson, whose child had died of convulsions, was on the witness bench giving an account of that night's experiences.

Time and the constant repetition of this story to the credulous, awe struck people of the community had caused it to lose none of its interest, so that the tale the woman related in a low, distinct voice was supernatural in the extreme and grewsome in its horrible details. The superstitious listeners, eagerly drinking in every word the widow uttered, expressed their sympathy for her and their fear and detestation of the prisoner, who continued through it all to sit silently with bowed head and clasped hands, by giving vent to louder murmurings of anger and cries for vengeance.

Other accusers followed, each with a tale of some harm having befallen her after passing or coming in contact with the young mistress of Mayland farm, so that the afternoon was wearing to a close when the last and most important witness, old Adam Browdie, the goldsmith, was called to give his testimony. The old man, whose grief at the loss of Christopher was deep and sincere and who honestly attributed the lad's tragic death to the supernatural powers of Margaret Mayland, contained in the "accurst cross of gold," told his story minutely, giving every detail from the moment the cross was brought to his little cabin to the end, with streaming eyes and quavering voice, growing stern and tragical as he described the storm, weeping tears of agony as he told of the finding of the body; then, suddenly winding up his long and terrible tale, he fell on his knees and, raising his arms to heaven, called God's vengeance on the prisoner.

As he was led trembling and exhausted, to his seat loud talking was heard in the audience, those assembled glaring at the pale faced prisoner with hatred in their eyes. The chief councilor rapping for order, a silence fell upon the crowded room that lasted, with an occasional interruption, for a long half hour while the tribunal deliberated.

At last the chief councilor rose and, walking with solemn majesty to the railing that separated the council from the audience, addressed the prisoner:

"Margaret Mayland, rise."

With a little fluttering sigh Margaret rose and, raising her eyes, looked into his stern, hard face steadily.

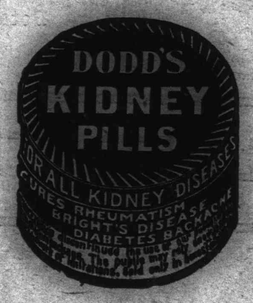
"Woman," he said, "although thou hast denied guilt of the wicked crimes attributed to thee, I do announce that, after a patient hearing of all the awful happenings that have occurred in this hitherto peaceful and God loving community since thine advent here and after having accorded thee a legal trial of much fairness, this tribunal doth find the charges true and doth pronounce thee guilty of the blackest crime on the calendar, allegiance to the devil and rebellion against God. Therefore, Margaret Mayland, even as our Lord hath commanded that the wicked spirits of sinners be burned perpetually, after death, so do I, by the king appointed to sit in judgment of evil doers, with humble prayers for guidance to order wisely, command that at such time as this council now assembled shall designate, thy body, containing this black and evil spirit, also the accurst cross that thou doth in thy perverse wickedness persist in wearing on thy bosom, be burned at a stake by the scourge of fire!"

"Margaret Mayland, rise."

There was a breathless silence in the room while the chief councilor was speaking, the assemblage sitting, white faced and trembling, looking at judge and prisoner.

"Prisoner, hath thou aught to say—any reasons to urge why this sentence should not be pronounced upon thee?"

The fair young mistress of the Mayland farm, who but a week before was so beloved and loving, winsome and happy, now stood alone, broken hearted, forsaken, a mourning figure in her gown of black, looking at the cold, unsympathetic faces of her accusers with sad, appealing eyes.



"Good sirs," she answered slowly, with gentle, impressive solemnity, "an thou would confer a favor on a friendless maid whose every living hour doth bring her naught but keenest suffering, thou would set her death day speedily."

CHAPTER XXVI.

THE mist of the morning had lifted somewhat, and the light drizzle had grown to a steady downpour of rain when, the trial over and the prisoner led back to her cell, the crowd of people in the assembly room began to file slowly out of the door, and so great was the interest and excitement that, despite the dampness of the weather, they stood about the prison in groups, discussing eagerly the scenes they had just witnessed.

"The councilor made short shrift of her, good gossip," one man said to another as they turned their faces toward home and trudged heavily along the muddy roadway. "Elder Williams was always one for swift justice, but methought he'd give the witch at least a fortnight to make her peace wi' God an' to renounce the devil that hath taken such strong possession of her soul. But on the sixth day, three hours after sunrise! 'Tis quick work, man, as I say, but happen the council hath wise reasons for setting an early time that such as we wot not of."

BLOODLESS GIRLS

Find New Health Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

When you see a young girl pale and ailing and wasting away, you know that budding womanhood is making new demands upon her blood supply which she cannot meet. Month after month her health, her strength, her very life, is being drained away. No food and no care can do her any good. Common medicine cannot save her from broken health and a hopeless decline. New blood is the one thing that can make her a healthy, cheerful, rosy-cheeked girl. And Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood with every dose. That is the whole secret of how they have saved thousands of pale, anaemic girls from an early grave. Miss Alice Chaput, aged 17 years, living at 475 St. Timothee street, Montreal, gives strong proof of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to cure. "A couple of years ago," says Miss Chaput, "I was an almost continuous sufferer, and became so weak I could hardly go about. I suffered from frequent and prolonged spells of dizziness. I had frightful headaches, and my stomach was completely out of order. The least exertion would leave me worn out and breathless, and I did not appear to have a drop of good blood in my body. I consulted a doctor who told me the trouble was general debility, but his treatment did not help me a particle. To add to the trouble my nerves gave way, and I often passed sleepless nights. At this stage a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I got a few boxes. The first benefit I noticed from the use of the pills was an improved appetite, and this seemed to bring much relief. I continued taking the pills until I had used six boxes, when I was fully restored to health, and I have not had a day's illness since. I cannot praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills enough for the great good they have done me."

A pale anaemic person needs only one thing—new blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do one thing only—they make new blood. That is all they do, but they do it well. They don't act on the bowels. They don't bother with mere symptoms. They won't cure any disease that isn't caused originally from bad blood. But when Dr. Williams' Pink Pills replace bad blood with good blood they strike straight at the root and cause of all common diseases like headaches, sideaches, backaches, kidney trouble, liver complaint, biliousness, indigestion, anaemia, neuralgia, sciatica, locomotor ataxia and the special secret troubles that every woman knows but that none of them like to talk about, even to their doctors. But you must have the genuine pills or you can't be cured, and the genuine always have the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," on the wrapper around the box. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent direct by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Mrs. Adams' Bright's Disease.

She Did Not Believe in Them, but To-Day She is Strong and Well.

Collingwood, Ont., Nov. 28. (Special)—Mrs. Thos. Adams, who moved here about two years ago from Burk's Falls, is one of the many Canadians who once had Bright's Disease and are now strong and well. Like all the others, she was cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I was eight months an invalid," says Mrs. Adams, "and no one can tell what I suffered. My doctor said I had Bright's Disease and Sciatica, but I got no relief from anything he gave me. At last a friend of my husband induced me to give Dodd's Kidney Pills a trial. I had no faith in them, for I thought I never would get better, but after taking three of them I was able to do my work. I have had good health ever since I used Dodd's Kidney Pills."

SOLDIERS TO BE NAVVIES.

Japan Will Utilize Troops in Building Railways.

Ottawa.—Mr. Alexander MacLean, Canadian commercial agent at Japan, reports to the department that the ending of the war has produced a resumption of railway building. It is proposed to get the necessary labor from the disbanded troops returning from the front. There is, he says, a combination between sugar refiners and private-owned railways. Indeed, combinations and high capitalization seems to be the order of the day.

Mr MacLean says that the insurance disclosures in New York have affected insurance business in Japan, and the Canadian companies have been hit among the others.

The Empress of Britain Launched in the Clyde.

Montreal.—The passenger traffic manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway, Mr. Robert Kerr, has just received from Glasgow details regarding the successful launching at the Fairfield shipbuilding works upon the Clyde of the first of the new passenger steamships which the company intend adding to the Atlantic fleet next season. The new liner is called the Empress of Britain, and will make her first trip form Liverpool to Montreal in May next. The Empress of Ireland, a sister ship, is now receiving finishing touches in the Fairfield yards, and will be launched in January. She will make her first trip from Liverpool to Montreal in June next.

The Empress of Britain is the largest vessel ever launched from the Fairfield yards, has a displacement of twenty thousand tons, and ranks as one of the largest steamers upon the North Atlantic.

Enough to Kill Io.

The Greek room is usually not a place for humor, nor is the professor of Greek at the College of the City of New York a very humorous person. Nevertheless the following joke was sprung on him. The class had just returned from the chemistry room, where they had bravely listened to a discourse on the elements. The Greek lesson was commenced with a history of Io and her endless wanderings. Finally Professor Tisdall asked, "What did Io die of?" A student who had been awakened by the question gasped out, "Iodide of potassium."

MISERABLE NIGHTS.

Nothing so demoralizes an infant and enslaves the parents as to take a cross or wakeful baby from the bed and walk him up and down the floor during the night. The baby cries because it is not well—generally because its stomach is sour, its little bowels congested and its skin hot and feverish. Relieve this and baby will sleep soundly all night, growing stronger and better every day. Just what mothers need to keep baby healthy and make him sleep soundly is Baby's Own Tablets, which cure all stomach, bowel and teething troubles and thus promote natural health-giving sleep. Mrs. Wm. Holmes, Dacre, Ont., says: "My baby was troubled with sour stomach and was constipated most of the time, and was always cross and restless. I gave him Baby's Own Tablets and found them a complete success and would not now be without them." You can get Baby's Own Tablets from any druggist, or by mail at 25 cents a box by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

They are easy to take, are not unpleasant to the taste, and their action is mild and soothing. A trial will prove this. They offer peace to the dyspeptic.

Cobweb Pills.

Andrew Wilson, the well known naturalist and writer, in commenting on Culpepper's "Complete Method," published in 1652, shows how this enabled a man to "cure himself, being sick, for threepence charge, with such things only as grow in England, they being most fit for English bodies." "John Wesley practiced music." Wilson continues. "His system was not strictly limited to vegetable simples. Wesley prescribed boiled carrots as an exclusive diet for a fortnight for the cure of asthma and recommended baldheaded people to wash their vacant spots with a decoction of boxwood. For bleeding from the lungs or stomach the juice of nettles is ordered and for an ague six pills of middling size of cobwebs."

The Taking Cold Habit

The old cold goes; a new one quickly comes. It's the story of a weak throat, weak lungs, a tendency to consumption. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral breaks up the taking-cold habit. It strengthens, soothes, heals. Ask your doctor about it.

"I had a terrible cold, and nothing relieved me. I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and it promptly broke up my cold, stopped my cough, and eased every part of my body. It did wonderful work for me."—MRS. J. F. LUTZ, Toledo, Ohio.

The Keeley Cure

Ask the lawyers, the physicians, the congressmen, the clergymen, the clerks, the book-keepers, the skilled mechanics who have patronized us and you will find that the Keeley treatment is all and more than is claimed for it, and that it is the "stitch" a drinking man needs to save property, reputation, family, sanity and even life itself.

A Regiment of Lovers.

Four hundred young Spanish gallants, each wearing a distinctive badge, recently assembled at a certain spot near Barcelona to meet one lady. The lady did not appear. An advertisement in a local paper had said that a young and wealthy American lady desired to meet a Spanish gentleman with a view to matrimony. The 400 applied, and each was notified that he had been selected.

The Stars.

The number of stars visible to the naked eye is fewer than 6,000. The number of stars visible through the largest telescope is probably not fewer than 100,000,000.

Amber.

Amber burns with a pale yellow flame with a good deal of black smoke, evolving an agreeable odor and leaving a black mass of carbon behind. It is about 79 per cent carbon and 10.5 per cent each of hydrogen and oxygen. Amber is a fossil gum, partly soluble in alcohol and ether. Since it frequently contains insects it must have been a viscid liquid when these were entrapped to their destruction.

Fat Stock Show for Alberta.

Breeders and feeders in Alberta will be pleased to learn that another fat stock stock will be held under the joint auspices of the Alberta Department of Agriculture, and the Live Stock Associations. The prize list has been revised somewhat and a fuller classification provided for fat animals of pure breeding, but in all other respects it is the same as that of last year. The prize money offered is quite large and should be an inducement to feeders to put up animals to fatten. Prizes are offered for purebred Shorthorns, Herefords, Polled Angus and Galloways of all ages, as well as a wide classification for all ages of grade steers, heifers, and cows. Liberal prizes are offered for both sheep and swine. The carcass competions, which were very interesting last year, are being continued with larger prizes for cattle, sheep, and swine. The show will be held at Calgary at the time of the annual bull sale in May, and the prize list will be issued shortly. Full particulars can be had from C. W. Peterson, Secretary Live Stock Associations, Calgary, or the Department of Agriculture, Edmonton.

Does It Cause Typhoid.

In another column we publish a letter from Dr. Galbraith, of Lethbridge, from which it appears that a movement is under way to have the Alberta legislature take up the subject of pollution of streams very early in the first session. Some physicians assert that much of the typhoid fever in different towns is due to the water and that even the big rivers are contaminated by filth from the different towns. The Calgary Herald has already published the letter and remarks. As all these streams are of glacial origin this theory may be strongly combatted. The filth of Chicago's great sewer system is emptied ultimately into the Mississippi river just above St. Louis and after extensive litigation and the evidence of many specialists, learned judges decided that filth is purified in a running stream after being exposed to the action of the elements for three miles.

However Dr. Galbraith thinks differently and "where doctor's disagree who shall decide"?

Ottawa and the Spoils.

It has been said by one of the newspaper eulogists of the Laurier Government that that Administration although pressed to adopt the spoils system, strictly resisted it, and thus prevented the introduction into Canada of the Yankee plan. This statement will not stand the test of exmanination. There is to be found among the sessional papers of 1897 a list of the officers dismissed between July 1, 1896, and March 9, 1897, and the publication resembles a city directory. The fact is the Ministers went around with an axe, and decapitated officials by hundreds. The public documents do not give the number of officers dropped after March 1897. It appears that the Government was afraid to bring down any more statistics.

A party organ states that care was taken by the Ottawa men to remove nobody except for cause and after full inquiry. The accuracy of this allegation can be judged from the following citation from the remarks of the Minister of Railways in Parliament:—"If any member of this House whose advice the Government would consider it safe to act upon, or any responsible candidate before the conntry who was defeated in the late election in the interest of the Liberal party, makes representato me that of his personal knowledge persons in the employ of the Government have taken part in the election. I would accept the statement thus made and allow the change to take place." The principle followed at Ottawa was to allow the politician to tell the Minister whom to dismiss. In the Railway Department, within six months of the change of Government, the following dismissals were effected in the interests of spoilsmen who wanted the place;

1 Chief engineer,
2 District superintendents.
1 Sleeping car superintendent.
2 Storekeepers.
2 Trackmasters.
2 Inspectors.
3 Mechanical shop superintendents.
2 Foreman carpenters.
31 Section foremen.
60 Trackmen,
6 Station agents.
3 Car inspectors.
6 Fuel men.
3 Tank men.
1 Foreman blacksmith.
13 Clerks.
9 Baggage masters.
76 Mechanics.

In the Printing Bureau at Ottawa 22 dismissals were made within a month of the election in 1896. In the Postoffice Department the dismissals numbered 1,200, and in other branches the effort to follow the advice of the machine organ to drive Toroism out of the departments was equally determined. The work was most thorough in the Sifton bureau. There the great majority of the officers, both at Ottawa and in the West, passed out.

The plan pursued was cruel and greedy. Persons who are now in a state of fury because a few license inspectors have been set aside demanded and supported this operation. These men are for the machine whatever happens. When the fortunes of war put the Conservatives out of power they demand in the language of the Toronto Globe that "the creatures of eighteen years of Toryism" be driven from the public offices, and that Liberals take their places. When the situation is reversed and the Conservatives are in office, they insist that the machine appointees, however unworthy, are scared, and must not be removed. The true policy of course, is the observance of the principle of permanency in the administrative branch of the civil service during good behavior. This is the Ontario system. No Government could live unless it had the right to dismiss inefficient or nreliable officials, whether appointed by itself or by its predecessors.—Mail and Empire.

PRESENTATION.

Mr. G. P. Sanderson, who for the past two years has been accountant in the Union Bank, Medicine Hat, has been transferred to the Edmonton branch and left on Wednesday evening to take up his duties at the capital. Before he left he was made the recipient of an address and a very handsome and useful present from his numerous friends here. The presentation took place at Cypress Club and Mr. Walter Huckvale presided over a very representative gathering. The address was read by Mr. A. J. Terrill and was signed by the following: Turpin Bros., F. L. Crawford, A. J. Maynard, W. Cousins, C. E. Neff, R. J. Binning, J. E. Miers, J. B. McIntyre, Earl Porter, F. N. Proby, H. E. Bennetts, J. HOSPITAL NOTES.

The monthly meeting of the Governors of the General Hospital was held on Monday afternoon (the 11th inst.). Present: Vice President Whiffen (in the chair) F. L. Crawford J. H. Cunliffe, J. K. Drinnan, W. C. Harris and Dr. Smyth (medical superintendent).

The above just made a quorum, the others being busily engaged in the Municipal Election.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

A number of accounts were duly passed for payment.

The report of the Lady Superintendent (Miss McKinley) was read showing there had been 1113 hospital days during November, number of patients admitted and discharged during the month, and was considered very satisfactory.

The report of the Medical Superintendent gave the usual particulars and showed the cost of maintenance had been 86 cents against 90 cents during the corresponding month last year.

A letter was read from R. R. Jamieson re charges for C. P. R. men in hospital and consideration was deferred until next meeting.

The Visiting Committee (Messrs Cunliffe and Harris) reported having gone over the General and Maternity Hospitals and the Nurses' Home that afternoon and found everything in a satisfactory state. They made one or two recommendations which were adopted.

An informal report of the Hospital Ball Committee showed the net profits to be about $115. Votes of thanks were passed to the Committee Messrs Moore & Moore for decorating the Hall and the fire brigade for use of bunting.

Pain Above the Hips.

It is a common complaint with women. The right treatment is Nerviline, which penetrates to the seat of the pain immediately. Nerviline warms and soothes the affected parts draws out the irritation and pain, allows the patient ease after one rubbing. No liniment so economical and safe. Nearly fifty years in use, and the demand immensely greater every day! Nerviline must be good.

HELLO.

Hello!
Hello.

Is that the Times office?
Yes.

Have you seen the News tonight?
Yes. but havn't read it.

Well, you are getting it.
That's all right. We're used to it.

And say, Forster gives us a lecture all round.

Well, what's the matter with that. Isn't he a City "Father"?

Sure, but the News is plum crazy about it.

That's not an unusual state with them.

Thats so, but this week it is "potent with suggestions."

Any insinuations?

Crammed full. And say!
What?

He says his active opposition is—
It is only right that he should acknowledge the activity of the opposition.

Don't interrupt. He feels he is "It."

Hello!
Hello.

Thought you had gone.
Oh, no this is too interesting.

He says Harris made a good run.
Very kind of him I'm sure, but he might tell us something we don't know.

He says he has a "mandate from the people."

All right tell him to hold on to it.

They say your sheet is scurrilous.
They don't know the meaning of the word or have deliberately misapplied it. Tell them to consult Webster.

I quite agree with you. They are often scurrilous but don't seem to know it.

You have hit it off exactly, but we are quite willing to leave it as a matter of opinion.

You don't seem to mind?
Not a little bit.

The Mayor's card of thanks is of the arrogant order isn't it?
I'll tell you after I read it.

Hello!
Hello.

You have the chance of your life.
Which way?

Cut them up next week.
We have done it often.

That's so and it takes them all their time to do the repairs.
That's well put.

Well, go for 'em next week.
What about the "mandate"?

Oh hang the mandate. Let 'em' have it.

We'll print this conversation for a change.

Ha, ha, ha, that will be alright.
Of course it will.

But you will get another goodly, goodly lecture next week.
That will be very sad.

And there might be some more "potent suggestions."

Well, we can survive suggestions potent or otherwise.

We shall have to be very good next year.
Sure!

And keep our "strenuousness" in check!
Well, they'll see about that.

Do you promise to be good?
We won't make any rash promises.

Well, will you promise to leave everybody alone.
Not a bit. We are always ready for Pharise.

And the Sadducees?
Sure!

And the sadducers?
Yes, and the traducers.

SASKATCHEWAN ELECTIONS

Splendid Fight by the Hon. F. G. W. Haultain.

Provincial Rights Forces Make a Splendid Showing.

News of the elections were eagerly looked for in Medicine Hat last Wednesday night, and for once the Liberals and Conservatives here acted in unison, that is to say, they hired Cousin's Hall and engaged a telegraph service jointly.

Both parties were well represented, and the utmost good humor prevailed. The results received during the evening placed the Scott and Haultain parties so even that neither side had much chance to do any "crowing," but as the Conservatives had been told to expect that the Provincial Rights party would be snowed under, the results gave them a chance to "rub it in" a little, and it was done and accepted good naturedly by the other side.

When the messages ceased for the night the parties stood almost equal, with of course many polls to hear from.

A message from Regina on Thursday morning said that at the time of writing "there are many complications, such as 238 protested votes in Moose Jaw, 167 in Prince Albert city and 161 in Regina, which may affect the result.

The remarkable feature of the result is the tremendous majority given Mr. Fred. Haultain, the able Provincial rights leader. He has defeated Moffatt in South Qu'Appelle by over 400 majority. This is the "sick man," whom the Free Press picked to defeat Mr. Haultain, and that organ of coercion boasted on Wednesday that the ex-premier was to be beaten by an invalid.

It is clear that while the methods by which the machine secured the doubtful seats in Alberta, such as by throwing out whole polls favorable the Conservatives in High River, the Ottawa forces may dominate the first legislature in Saskatchewan, it is certain that Mr. Haultain will go into the initial session of the assembly with sufficient backing to make him a most dangerous foe With his provincial rights forces he will unquestionably be able to take charge of Walter Scott's weak machine after slight sparring.

SUMMARY OF RESULTS.

Mr. James Cook's store is one of the most attractive in town just now. The decorations are lavish and most artistically arranged. Strings of evergreens, and various colored candy beads, by the yard, are only items in the general display, but they show how much trouble has been taken, and together with the numberless articles, as useful as they are ornamental, give a fairy-like effect to the store. The whole place is a bower, filled with the most tempting sweets and the fruits of many climes.

RICH STRIKE OF GOLD.

Blum the principal owner of the Laurentian mine, located 23 miles south of Wabigoon, states that the recent uncovering of gold there on Dec. 5 was probably the richest strike in the world, running up to three hundred thousand already laid bare. Immense quantities of the glittering mass will turn out $50,000 to the ton.

SULTAN PAYS.

The settlement of the dispute is largely due to the fact that the powers consented that all decisions of the financial commission must be confirmed by an imperial irade before being put into effect. Some formalities yet remain to be settled but this recognition of the sultan's sovereign rights virtually terminates the dispute.

MEDICINE HAT, N. W. T.

DECIDED BY LAW.

There Can Be No Fire Unless There Be Flame or Glow.

A novel and interesting case has just been decided by the United States circuit court of appeals at St. Paul, in which the court laid down the rule that while spontaneous combustion may become so rapid as to produce fire the combustion cannot be said to be fire until it has actually developed into a glow or flame. The opinion was in the case of the Western Woolen Mill company of Topeka, Kan., against the Northern of London, on appeal from the federal court in Kansas, where the decision was in favor of the insurance company.

The Northern issued two policies of insurance for $5,500 on a quantity of wool stored in the warehouse of the woolen company in Topeka. The building was submerged by the Topeka floods in May, 1903, and the wool was thoroughly wet. After being submerged for eight days the water subsided and the wool was spread around for the purpose of drying it. It soon became heated and pitchforks had to be used in handling it. While there was smoke and odor, no flame was to be seen and no glow. The lower court held that the evidence did not show that the wool was damaged by fire within the meaning of that term as used in the policy of insurance.

This ruling was upheld by the court of appeals. Judge Carland, rendering its decision, held that "fire is always caused by combustion, but combustion does not always cause fire. No definition of fire can be found that does not include the idea of visible heat or light, and this is also the popular meaning given to the word. The policies are contracts, and in their interpretation the words employed must be given their ordinary popular signification. The wool, as animal fiber, became heated, but the internal development of heat never at any time became so rapid as to produce a flame or glow, and hence, within the meaning of the word 'fire,' as used in the policies of insurance, there was no fire."—Insurance Press.

The bridegroom in Mexico finds marriage a very costly business. He is expected to buy the trousseau, and he is fortunate if he can satisfy the extravagance sanctioned by custom and prompted by ardent passion. Young men from the country are said to be often seen in the City of Mexico purchasing all sorts of finery for the ladies of their choice, and the spectacle they present as they consult the measurements, which they carry with them for all sorts of garments, is very amusing.

Odd Geographical Division.

The range of the Blue Ridge mountains in Pennsylvania is divided by a river every twenty-seven miles, as follows: From the Susquehanna to the Swatara, 27 miles; from the Swatara to the Schuylkill, 27 miles; from the Schuylkill to the Lehigh, 27 miles; from the Lehigh to the Delaware, 27 miles. At the next 27 miles is a hollow of New Jersey in which nestles a lake known as Culver's pond.

A DANISH BOARHOUND.

He Was a Jealous Brute and Carefully Guarded His Mistress.

During a visit to a friend in the country Sir Henry Hawkins had an adventure with a boarhound which he describes in his "Reminiscences:"

There was an enormous Danish boarhound which had, unperceived by us, followed Mrs. Harlstone from the library. He pushed by without ceremony and proceeded until he reached the lady, who was some distance in advance. He then carefully took the skirt of her dress with his mouth and carried it like an accomplished train bearer until she reached the bottom of the stairs and the garden, when he let go the dress and gazed as an interested spectator.

But before we parted from Mrs. Harlstone and while I was talking to her I felt my hand in the boarhound's mouth, and a pretty capacious mouth it was, for I seemed to touch nothing but his formidable fangs. So soft was the touch of his fangs that I was only just conscious my hand was in his mouth by now and then the gentlest reminder. I knew animals too well to attempt to withdraw it, and I preserved a calm more wonderful than I could have given myself credit for.

While I was wondering what the next proceeding might be Mrs. Harlstone begged me to be quite easy and on no account to show any opposition to the dog's proceedings, in which case she promised that he would lead me gently to the other side of the lawn and leave me without doing the least harm.

As I was being led away Mrs. Harlstone said: "Do exactly as he wishes. He is jealous of your talking to me, and any one who does so he leads away to the other side of the garden."

Having conducted me to the remotest spot he could find, he opened his huge jaws and released my hand, wagged his tail and trotted off, much pleased with his performance.

YOUR DAILY TASK.

Bring Your Whole Self to It With All Your Powers Intact.

It makes all the difference in the world in results whether you come to your work every day with all your powers intact, with all your faculties up to the standard; whether you come with the entire man, so that you can fling your whole life into your task, or with only a part of yourself; whether you do your work as a giant or as a pygmy. Most people bring only a small part of themselves to their tasks. They cripple much of their ability by irregular living, bad habits in eating and injurious food, lack of sleep, dissipation or some other folly. They do not come to their tasks every morning whole men. A part of themselves and often a large part is somewhere else. They left their energy where they were trying to have a good time, so that they bring weakness instead of power, indifference and dullness instead of enthusiasm and alertness, to the performance of the most important duties of their lives. The man who comes to his work in the morning unrefreshed, languid and listless cannot do a good, honest day's work, and if he drags rotten days into the year how can he expect a sound career or a successful achievement?

Good work is not entirely a question of will power. Often this is impaired by a low physical standard. The quality of the work cannot be up to high water mark when every faculty, every function and every bit of your ability is affected by your physical and mental condition. You may be sure that your weakness, whatever its cause, will appear in your day's work, whether it is making books or selling them, teaching school or studying, singing or painting, chiseling statues or digging trenches.—Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine.

Pensioning Judges In England.

It is considered an essential condition of the English court system that the judges shall be absolutely independent financially; that their salaries shall be so large and provision for their future shall upon their retirement be so ample they need at no time of their service have any monetary anxiety. There are now no fewer than eight ex-judges in receipt of total pensions amounting to $121,662.50 a year. A judge who continues on the bench after completing fifteen years' service really does his work for $7,290.75 a year, the difference between his salary and pension. The lord chancellor is entitled to a pension of $24,332.50 a year for life, however short his tenure of the chancellorship.

The King of Korea.

Only the king of Korea may raise goats or have round columns and square rafters to his house or wear a coat of brilliant red. Only the king may look upon the faces of the queen's hundreds of attendant ladies or have any building outside of which there are more than three steps. Four steps would be high treason and would cost their owner a traitor's death.

His Mistaken Idea.

"But, my dear," remonstrated Mr. Meekun, "there's a good deal to be said on both sides."

"No, there isn't," answered his spouse. "I've told you what I think about it, and that's all that is going to be said."

The Reason.

Ethel—What did you say to papa last night? Ferdy—N-othing. I was so scared that I didn't open my mouth. Ethel—Oh, that accounts for it! He said you impressed him very favorably!

A thousand times listen to the counsel of your friend, but seek it only once.—Hardy.

Distances at Sea.

That man was laughed at who on his first voyage said that the ocean did not look so large as he supposed it would, but he was not alone in experiencing disappointment. The horizon at sea gives no idea of the limitless water beyond. A sea captain declares that the average landsman cannot see more than ten miles from the ship in any direction, and it would have to be a mountain or some stationary object for him to be able to distinguish it. The masts of a ship are said to be visible to the naked eye not more than fifty miles.

Be Ready For Croup

And Insist on Having the Time-Tested Medicine

Dr. Chases' Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine

It is not a question of whether you will need a treatment for coughs, colds and croup in your home, but the question is, will you select the most effective medicine, or simply be satisfied to take whatever your druggist happens to hand out to you?

Time and experience have proven that you can depend on Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine at such times.

It is only necessary to remember this when the critical time comes, and to insist on getting what you ask for.

Should you have children who are subject to croup, you had better keep a bottle of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in the house, for when the choking spasm comes on there is little time to send for doctor or medicine.

Mr. Wm. McGee, 49 Wright Ave, Toronto, Ont., writes:

"There is no remedy in my opinion that can act more promptly than Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. It cured my son of croup, absolutely, in one night. We gave him a dose when he was black in the face with choking. It gave him instant relief and cure."

It seems scarcely necessary to dwell on the merits of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine as a cure for croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, etc. most of us have known it from childhood up. It is almost as familiar as Dr. Chase's Receipt Book.

Being pleasant to the taste, it is readily taken by children. Because it brings quick relief to the sufferer from asthma, bronchitis, whooping cough and all the most serious diseases of the throat and lungs, it is invaluable as a household medicine. 25 cents a bottle, at all dealers.

THE STARFISH.

This Peculiar Creature Can Neither See, Hear Nor Smell.

Unlike man, the starfish which loses one of its "arms," or properly its rays, grows a new one to take its place. Under certain conditions it grows two to take the place of one. A starfish may lose all its rays without losing its life, and very often a cripple with but a single ray left is found by fishermen and collectors. When completely broken in two the starfish becomes two distinct fish, and the growing process continues. The brittle starfish, it is believed, in many instances breaks off its own rays at the approach of danger. For this reason it is difficult to obtain a perfect specimen.

A starfish can neither see nor hear. Neither has it the sense of smell. In spite of these seeming impediments, nevertheless, it seeks and devours its prey as neatly as an ordinary fish. The starfish lies upon its prey and folds its "arms," or rays, completely about it. Then it pushes its stomach out through its mouth and will wrap even a large oyster and shell within the folds of the stomach. The mouth of the starfish is in the center of its rays.

Some great ships are today employed almost wholly in seeking for starfish specimens in deep seas, and there are hundreds of men who spend a portion of their time in collecting starfish in the interests of science. Many of the specimens collected by ships are taken from depths of one and even two miles.

"Stomach Catarrh"

—It is a fatal waste of time to trifle with snuffs, powders, inhalers, or other dangerous nostrums, with the idea of curing Catarrh of the Stomach. Once Catarrh has reached the stomach it can only be eradicated by creating pure, rich blood. Catarrh is a germ disease. The stomach and intestines become nests for myriads of these tiny germs. Local applications have no effect on them. They must be driven out—the stomach cleansed, the blood purified, the system toned up. "Psychine" will positively cure the worst form of Stomach Catarrh, by purifying the blood, cleansing the stomach, and destroying germ life. Thousands have been cured of the prevalent malady, through this remarkable discovery, "Psychine." Druggists recommend it.

INDIANS INDEPENDENT.

Farmed Successfully This Year, and Are Self-Supporting.

The Hon. David Laird, Indian commissioner, states that the condition of the government wards in the Canadian west is very satisfactory, and the indications are that the Indians will spend a comfortable winter, in fact one of the best for many years, provided no epidemic breaks out on the reserves. He has no official information as to whether Little Bear and his band of Crees, who fled to Montana after the Riel rebellion, but who were preparing to return to Canada, had crossed the border. Mr. Laird stated that he had heard some rumor to the effect that the Indians considered that they were not offered sufficient inducements and would therefore not return to the Canadian reserves, but that was their own affair, and they could please themselves. The government had once before fallen into the error of assisting members of Little Bear's band back to Canada, but the crowd had returned to the United States in the spring. They had this fall been offered permission to come back to Canada, and he tendered the same consideration as other reserve Indians, and that was as far as the government felt inclined to go. As the season was now far advanced, he did not believe that they would attempt the long trail from Havre, Mont, to Onion Lake this fall.

In speaking of the general condition of the Indian population, the commissioner said: "There is now little destitution among the Indians on the western reserves. The policy which has been pursued of encouraging them to leave the chase and take to agriculture is working out most satisfactorily, though its development has been slow. Their former instincts were all for the hasty process to kill and eat, and the waiting between the time of sowing and harvest for a crop was tedious business for them. Then in years past the Indians on the northern reserves either because of late seeding or bad management had crop failures for years in succession, and this had the effect of making them quite discouraged with agriculture. This year, however, the crops have been uniformly good, and it will be easier to interest them in the farming. Many of the Indians around Qu'Appelle and the Crooked Lake districts are very successful ranchers and dispose of considerable cattle in a year. This has been a great help, as besides providing cash for necessities during the winter, it also furnished meat for the cold spell.

"With the exception of some old people and a few who are sick, the department has not found it necessary to help any, and in the great majority of cases now the Indians are self-supporting. At some places this self-supporting. At some places this year the hay crop was a partial failure, owing to there being so much wet weather that it was difficult to harvest it. However, I think that there will be sufficient for the winter's needs."

LONDON IN A FOG.

A Weird Day of Dense Gloom in the English Metropolis.

He knew his London well. We went forth into a fog that was of the pea soup variety. It seemed useless to wait any longer for it to clear off. The days were all alike and were darker than twilight ever dared to be. I clung to Prentice Mulford's coat sleeve, for I knew if he were once to get beyond my reach I could never hope to find him again. We groped blindly among the streets, where the atmosphere was only less palpable than the houses that walled us in. At intervals we inquired where we were, for otherwise we could never have known at all. We had to feel our way carefully and take soundings at intervals. "Here," said Prentice as we paused in space; "here is Temple Bar." I thought I saw something that might have been the ghost of an arch hewn out of the solid fog. The top of it, though it was not lofty, was lost to view. Temple Bar, now gone forever from the place where its gates once swung in the wall of the old city—it was here her gracious majesty Queen Victoria of England was wont to receive the keys of the city from the hands of the lord mayors when she drove in state to St. Paul's cathedral. We threaded Fleet street, but could not see to the farther shore.

"Here is her majesty's tower," said Prentice, but nothing of it was visible, not one stone upon another. We crossed London bridge almost without knowing it. The waters of the Thames, which are but condensed fog, were invisible from the parapet, and the steam ferries were picking their way cautiously and looking very like marine monsters in a muddy aquarium. We crawled through the tunnel for foot traffic under the Thames, which was like a hole in the fog, and for hours carried the sky about on our shoulders. It was a woolly, greasy and ill smelling sky. Our nostrils were clogged with cinders, like chimney flues, and there were smudges all over our faces. Sometimes for a moment or two we saw a spot overhead that was like a pale red wafer, and we knew it for the sun, now lost to us. The lamps that burned all day were like glowworms for dimness, and so we explored the wonders of the town and saw as much of it as a blind man sees, but no more.—Charles Warren Stoddard in National Magazine.

Printers' Errors.

A reader forwards me a pleasant addition to my collection of printers' errors, says T. P.'s London Weekly. It was told him by the late C. Farquharson Findlay, for some years editor of the Dover Chronicle, as having happened to him personally. He had occasion to write of the "blind guides who strain at a gnat and swallow a camel," which appeared in print as "who strain at a quart and swallow a canal."

Did any of my readers notice, I wonder, a delightful error of this kind in one of the reviews, in which Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman was described as "brandishing a mailed fish?" It rather reminds one of the famous Spoonerism about "feeling a half warmed fish in your bosom."

To make the best Bread you must have the best Flour.

When the dough is flat, sour, heavy, will not rise,—when the bread is soggy, tasteless, indigestible—then you have cheap and inferior flour.

You may use pure fresh yeast, faithfully adhere to the old-time successful bread making traditions, the methods usually successful—but the baking turns out badly—simply because you have not used the right kind of flour.

Royal Household Flour is purified and sterilized by electricity, it is therefore uniformly pure and wholesome.

And because it is thoroughly purified it will yield a sweet, wholesome, light sponge that will bake into flaky, deliciously flavored, nourishing bread or pastry.

THE BEHNKE CASE.

The Behnke case became sensational when the analysis of the stomach contents was made by Dr. Charlton, the government analyst at Regina, who found traces of chloral hydrate therein. This would give the impression that the deceased had been "dosed" by someone, or that he had taken something by mistake or design.

Chloral hydrate is a drug which physicians sometimes prescribe, but it is also used as a "knock out" by persons who mean robbery.

The above facts were communicated to the adjourned inquiry last week and a further adjournment took place. The jury sat again last Friday and arrived at the only possible conclusion.

The verdict of the jury was that William Behnke came to his death from a dose of chloral poisoning, administered by himself or some person or persons unknown.

This amounts to an open verdict, but as far as the coroner's jury is concerned the case is closed.

The police are continuing their investigations, as it is important to find out everything that happened to the poor fellow during the time he was waiting for the train at Pincher Creek, the details of which and the story of his arrival here, was told in the Times a month ago. If someone dosed him, it is difficult to find a motive, as Behnke had about $150 in cash, and bank drafts for about $1,200 in his pockets when taken from the train here in the state of unconsciousness from which he never recovered.

SPORT.

Walter Renwick Wilson, of Maple Creek, and his manager, W. D. Graham, were in town on Friday, and it was expected that local sports would have seen a race between the former and Grant, of Macleod. A race had been arranged for $50 a side, but Grant gave up forfeit and there was no race.

Rumor says that Wilson's manager offered Grant five yards in 100, but the offer was not accepted.

♠ ♠ ♠

The sports were disappointed. We understand if the race had come off both men would have been well backed

A CHALLENGE.

Walter Renwick Wilson is open to run anyone in the Territories in a straight run or an all-round contest for $500, Pulley, the runner, preferred. Replies to be addressed to the Editor of the Times, Medicine Hat.

In Praise of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

There is no other medicine manufactured that has received so much praise and so many expressions of gratitude as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is effective, and prompt relief follows its use. Grateful parents everywhere do not hesitate to testify to its merits for the benefit of others. It is a certain cure for croup and will prevent the attack if given at the first appearance of the disease. It is especially adapted to children as it is pleasant to take and contains nothing injurious. Mr.

Communications.

The Editor is not responsible for the opinions of his correspondents nor does he always agree with them

To the Editor of The Times

Dear Sir,

I desire to present to your readers a few suggestions concerning the prevention of disease in the province, which it seems to me the new Provincial Government could very wisely take up at their first session.

The particular disease to the prevention of which I desire to call attention is Typhoid Fever and the particular method of its prevention is the keeping pure of our streams. The investigation of many Sanitary Commissions and Boards of Health present conclusively the fact that Typhoid bacilli are almost always waterborne, even those found in milk being conveyed to the dairies in the water supply, and further, that only the most elaborate and costly plants are able to entirely eradicate them.

At the present time Mr. Editor there are four or five of our big towns draining their sewage into the rivers upon which they are situated without any attempt to prevent the full effect of the filth being passed on to those who live further down the stream and it will take only a few years of this sort of thing to make our waterways modified sewers. These towns in some instances take their water supply from the same stream, only higher up, and they are themselves subject to the same contamination that they inflict upon others.

A current fallacy that has been impressed upon the public in this connection is the supposition that within a few miles a running stream has the power of purifying itself, and this is perhaps the sand in which ostrich-like we have been hiding our heads, but there is no evidence to show beyond the escape of odors and the deposit of the heavier parts, that even a long rapid has anything but the slightest effect upon germ life and to continue to trust to such a fallacy for our health would be nothing but the veriest folly.

In view of these things is it not a reasonable thing to ask that Municipalities and others be forbidden to empty sewage into running streams until they have used all reasonable means of rendering it harmless to those below them.

It would of course be necessary to go to some expense to produce this result but the expenditure would be very trifling in comparison to the result attained and the terrible cost in men and money its neglect entails.

The methods of purification that could be applied with comparitive ease in this part of the world are the Septic tank and the Sewage Farm either together or separately. It is not claimed that either of these systems produces absolutely pure water, but taken together it is not too much to say that they destroy practically everything of a bacterial character that is presented to them, and the inexpensive and easily worked Septic Tank does so to a very large extent.

It is only necessary in conclusion that I should refer to the very much increased per centage of cases of Typhoid Fever in Alberta during the past few years to justify this appeal for speedy and urgent action before it becomes endemic with us.

I am Sir,
Yours truly
W. S. Galbraith, M.D., C.M.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The annual general meeting of the Medicine Hat Agricultural Society was held on Friday last. There was a fair attendence of members. President Forster called the meeting to order.

MINUTES AND REPORTS.

Secretary Bray read the minutes of the last annual meeting and on motion of Messrs. Cousins and Harris the same were adopted.

The Secretary next read his annual statement in the course of which he gave the shipments for the year as follows:

Cattle..... 13,046
Horses..... 2,720

He also read a statement of the receipts and expenditure of the year, and on motion of Messrs. Finlay and Hunt it was adopted.

Following this the Secretary read the auditors report which, on motion of Messrs. Harris and Porter were adopted.

Correspondence re seed grain exhibits was read. This had been before the Board of Directors and the action of the Directors (as already published in the Times), was reported to the meeting. On motion of Messrs. Cousins and Finlay the general meeting endorsed the steps taken by the Directors.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The following officers and directors were elected:

President—Thomas Littleford.
1st Vice President—W. C. Harris.
2nd Vice President—Wm. Houghton.
Secy.-Treas.—J. H. G. Bray.
Directors—James Rae, David Cargill, W. R. Babington, F. G. Forster, John Shields, John Ellis, Wm. Cousins, W. H. Hunt, J. K. Drinnan, D. Fenton, Hon. W. T. Finlay John Hawke, W. E. Porter, D. Black, F. O. Sissons, James Hargrave.

Auditors—H. W. Ireland and F. S. Pingle.

The new President then took the chair amid applause and thanked the members for the honor conferred upon him.

Mr. Rae drew attention to the importance of issuing the prize list early in the season, and moved that next year the list be issued in April. This was seconded by Mr. Hunt and carried.

The question of a committee of this Society meeting a committee from the Turf Association with reference to obtaining suitable show grounds and track grounds was raised and the President and Secretary were appointed to meet the President and Secretary of the Turf Association.

The Secretary reported that through a judges mistake in a figure the prize for brood mare shown by Mr. Fenton had been paid to Mr. John Ross.

On motion of Messrs. Harris and Rae the President and Secretary were authorised to adjust the matter.

EXPERIMENTAL FARM.

Mr. Babington raised the subject of an experimental farm for Medicine Hat and suggested the Town Council would take the matter in hand and get a piece of ground near town and start it. He noticed Mrs. Basset had a small peice which would do, and a whole section just out of town belenged to Lord Strathcona and he might be induced to give them a piece of that. The speaker offered to do a dollars worth of work preparing the land for every dollar in money put up by the town or the Agricultural Society.

Mr. Forster informed the meeting as to what had been done by the Town Council and Board of Trade in trying to get an experimental farm here.

Hon. W. T. Finlay, Minister of Agriculture for Alberta, being asked to speak on this question, gave a very interesting address and mentioned that among the matters his department would take up was the subject of travelling dairies. As to the experimental farm he had some time ago approached the Ottawa authorities, at the request of this Society, and had received an acknowledgement but no more. He believed three or four small experimental stations would be established in Alberta, and whatever he could do to get one here would be done. Such a farm at Edmonton would of course be no use to the people here, because the conditions there are so different from the conditions here. He would do anything in his power for this district. (Applause.)

Mr. Harris was glad to hear the Minister of Agriculture announce that his department intended doing something for the dairying as it would be a good thing for this district, and he gave a little of his experience of the travelling dairy schools in the Old Country where, although every farmer's wife was a good butter maker yet much good had been done even there among the farmers daughters in affording them instruction in up-to-date methods.

Mr. Shields also spoke in favor of the travelling dairies.

Mr. Rae moved for a committee to consider the question of the experimental farm, but said he did not think the Town Council or the Society could do anything much in the matter on their own account as unless it was done thoroughly well under very competent management it would be a failure. Referring to the proposed travelling dairies he thought it would be a good thing to bring one into this district. If the German farmers of Josephsburg learned the art of making good butter there would not be necessity there now is of sending to Brandon and other Manitoba creameries for butter, which has to be sold here at 35 cents per lb.

The discussion was continued by Mr. Babington, Mr. Cousins, Mr. Forster, and others and Mr. Rae's motion was carried.

THE PRIZE LIST.

Mr. E. A. Bell, Woolchester, made some suggestions for the improvement of the classes for heavy draught, general purpose and agricultural horses, pointing out the need for a class for the latter description of animals, and this was referred to the Directors, for consideration.

The meeting then broke up.

King of all Cough Medicines.

Mr. E. G. Case, a mail carrier of Canton Center, Conn., who has been in the U. S. service for about sixteen years says: "We have tried many cough medicines for croup, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is king of all and one to be relied upon every time. We also find it the best remedy for coughs and colds, giving certain results and leaving no bad after effects." For sale by all druggists.

E. A. Humphreys, a well known resident and clerk in the store of Mr. E. Lock, of Alice, Cape Colony, South Africa, says: "I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to ward off croup and colds in my family. I found it to be very satisfactory and it gives me pleasure to recommend it." For sale by all druggists.

CATTLE TRADE BRISK.

There is a brisk trade at the cattle market in all lines and a better trade in exporters. There was an active demand for choice butchers. Choice exporters, $4.50 to $4.80; medium, $4.40; Xmas, $4 to $5.25.

"Favorite Prescription" cures female weakness, irregularities, exhausting drains, painful periods and kindred ailments peculiar to women. Accept no substitute for these medicines, each of which has a record of marvelous cures. Substitution means selfishness on the part of the dealer who is looking for the greater profit on an inferior article.

"One daughter who was attending college became very nervous and we were advised to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Mrs. M. C. Fox, of 37 E. Leonard St., Grand Rapids, Mich. "We did so and then you advised us to get the 'Golden Medical Discovery' also. She took four bottles of the 'Prescription' and three of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and you never saw such a change in a person. She said she did not feel like the same person. She was about seventeen years old at the time. I will gladly recommend Dr. Pierce's medicines to every one. I advise parents who have young daughters who suffer from nervous troubles to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription at once. I am sure it will help them."

Note & Comment.

[By OBSERVER.]

The influence which the C. P :R. irrigation ditch will have on the colonisation and development of Central Alberta cannot be over-estimated. With its good soil, magnificient natural grazing, and mild climate, that portion of our great West only needs irrigation during the dry years to which it is sometimes subjected to develop and expand in a manner which will surprise even those who are the most enthusiastic regarding the future of our western heritage.

Between Medicine Hat and Calgary the main line of the C. P. R. runs through an open country of good soil, very little broken by hills or waste land, and affording excellent grazing for horses, cattle or sheep. The district, however, is very sparsely settled, and until the Canadian Pacific irrigation scheme brought it into prominence, had been passed by and overlooked by the tide of homeseekers which has been flowing into Northern Alberta. Within the district named the C. P. R. have been alloted by the Government a block of three million acres extending to within about 25 miles of Medicine Hat and extending from theBow River on the South to the Red Deer river on the North. This is the vast area which the company are going to transform from grazing or ranch land into a thickly settled district with prosperous homes and industries.

This naturally brings us to the traffic bridge question again. The matter has been brought to the notice of the Provincial Government at Edmonton and the Hon. W. T. Finlay has promised the people to use his influence with the government in favor of the work, so all are anxiously looking for something to be done This town should keep that matter to the front for there will be devel. opments all through the country northwest and west of the town in the very near future and the river should be bridged if Medicine Hat is to reap a good benefit therefrom.

While Medicine Hat is a very order ly town on the whole more police protection will soon be required and most people will agree with Councillor Sissons' remarks that it will soon be time to put on a couple more men, one for night and another for day duty. Another man at night will be wanted pretty soon I fancy as people living north of the track are already asking for something more in this way. They would like to know that a constable would go the rounds there during the "night watches."

The North side residents are often heard to remark that the time has come for them to have something in the nature of a stamp office and a letter box and some folks living at the extreme south end of town are of the opinion that they would appreciate something of this sort too. Perhaps Postmaster Fatt will help them out a little on this by bringthe matter to the notice of the Postmaster General.

Kipling Advertises Medicine Hat.

Rudyard Kipling has written an article dealing with night mails in the year 2147. This is looking ahead a little and the writer describes the carrying of mails in airships. He, of course, takes a trip in one of these wonderful ships and at one point of the journey he observes the mail clerks sorting mail bags for "Winnipeg, Medicine Hat and Calgary."

FINAL WINNIPEG RETURNS.

The final returns in the civic elections show that Sharpe was elected by 1,109 majority.

CURIOUS BLUNDERS.

The Anachronisms That Crowded a Once Famous Poem.

The mediæval romances are full of blunders, making contemporaries of men who were separated sometimes by hundreds, sometimes by thousands, of years, but as historical criticism had not then a being and the general information of the age was not superior in any particular to that of the novelists, their plans do not amount to much from a literary point of view. Such an instance is the case of Ariosto, who might be supposed to know something at least of the truth of history, but whose once famous poem, "Orlando Furioso," is a tissue of historical absurdities from beginning to end.

In this poem Charlemagne and his peers are joined by Edward I. of England, Richard, earl of Warwick, Clarence, and the Dukes of York and Gloucester. Cannon are employed hundreds of years before the time of Monk Schwartz, and the Moors are represented as established in Spain, in spite of the historic fact that 300 years elapsed after the death of Charlemagne before they crossed from Africa. In one place Prester John, who lived 400 years after Charlemagne, and Constantine the Great, who died five centuries before him, are introduced and hold familiar converse with the great Charles, while in another Saladin and Edward the Confessor are joined by the Black Prince.

Wet Weather and Camels.

Camels are very sensitive to moisture. In the region of tropical rains they are usually absent, and if they come into such with caravans the results of the rainy season are greatly feared. The great humidity of the air explains the absence of the camel from the northern slopes of the Atlas and from well wooded Abyssinia. This sensitiveness expresses itself in the character of different races.

The finest, most noble looking camels, with short, silklike hair, are found in the interior of deserts, as in the Tuarek region, in north Africa, and they cannot be used for journeys to moist regions. Even in Fezzan, south of Tripoli, the animals are shorter and fatter, with long, coarse hair, and in Nile lands and on coasts it is the same. These animals, too, are less serviceable as regards speed and endurance.

Birds Plant Trees.

An old time Arizona woodchopper says the bluejays have planted thousands of the trees now growing all over Arizona. He says these birds have a habit of burying small seeds in the ground with their beaks and that they frequent places where old burn large numbers of the small pine nuts in the ground, many of which sprout and grow. He was walking through the pines with an eastern gentleman a short time ago when one of these birds flew from a tree to the ground, stuck his bill into the earth and quickly flew away. When told what had happened, the eastern man was skeptical, but the two went to the spot and with a knife blade dug out a sound pine nut from a depth of about an inch and a half. Thus it will be seen that nature has her own plan for forest perpetuation.

How He Lost $1,000,000.

Colonel Ochiltree used to tell a story of how he once lost $1,000,000.

"It was at a banquet," he would say, "and Senator Hearst of California sat beside me. Hearst told how years before he and his party had once been helped across the Platte by a brave red haired boy. The boy to do this deed had risked his life. Senator Hearst as he talked on got enthusiastic in his gratitude to the lad.

"'Why,' he said, 'if I could only find that boy tonight, I'd make him a present of $1,000,000.'

"I could restrain myself no longer at this point. I burst into tears. 'Senator,' I said, 'I am that red haired boy. Behold the boy in me!'

"But Hearst said, 'Ochiltree, you lie!'

"And thus I lost a million."

The Pale Yellow Kind.

There is a double joke in this story which the New York Mail and Express relates. A little girl, riding with her mother in a street car, was much attracted by an amber necklace worn by a lady who sat opposite.

"Mamma," she exclaimed, "are those beans that the lady has on a string around her neck?"

"No, no, my dear," said her mother in confusion. "They are very pretty beads."

"But, mamma," persisted the child, "they look just like those beans papa wouldn't eat last night!"

Superfluous Implement.

"Here, madam," said the peddler at the back door, "I have a most useful little household instrument. It is a combined screwdriver, buttonhook, can opener, latchkey, lamp cleaner, letter opener, paper cutter, pipe fixer and penknife. Can I sell you one?"

"Sell me one?" repeated the housekeeper. "What do I want with one? Can't you see that I wear hairpins?"

Placid Neighbor—Isn't your yard insured?

E. N.—No, it isn't.

P. N.—That's all right. I'm an insurance agent. Here's my card.

Before and After.

The Adorer—It's wonderful, old man, what love will enable a fellow to see in a girl that he never saw before.

The Onlooker—No doubt, but it's equally wonderful what it won't let him see that he'll see later.

The Witch of Cragenstone

By ANITA CLAY MUNOZ,

Author of "In Love and Truth"

Copyright, 1905, by Anita Clay Munoz

"Prithee, she hath repented!" his companion cried eagerly. "Didst thou not hear the wench say that every living hour was bitter anguish to her?"

He shook his head gloomily.

"I doubt not but poor Christopher's body, bruised an' bleeding on the rocks, is before her vision constantly, not to mention the Widow Dawson's infant, distorted in dying convulsions. Marry, methinks the councilor did his duty fairly. The prisoner asked for an early day, an' he, knowing of no good use she could be to any living person, did but grant her request."

The other giving an affirmative grunt, they walked a few paces in silence.

"Didst ever hear such screams and shrieks as the old beldame who hath had care of the witch let forth as the councilor did announce the time of the burning? Methought the prisoner winced an' grew even paler as the noisy clamor reached her."

"Yea, friend, I heard them," replied the first speaker, with rough seriousness. "Such eerie sounds could not but go through the stoutest heart. Who was't that led the faithful old dame from the chamber an' put her on her horse?"

"A man by name of Gaston, gossip, the servant of the prisoner's lover, La Fabienne, who hath remained at the Mayland farm as helper. Some say 'tis kindness, but as the fellow's master left him naught of gold to pay for lodging at the inn an' no one without the countersign can go down the mountain past the guards stationed at the rocky ledge on the roadway a ha' mile below the village I doubt not"—with a hoarse laugh—"that he doth make a virtue of necessity."

Still discussing the situation, they passed on, followed by a long stream of stern faced, gray clad men and women, some talking excitedly as they picked their way from stone to stone over the muddy road and others walking in grim silence, with sealed lips, but an expression of triumphant satisfaction at the verdict of the court shining forth on their stern countenances. Others, reluctant to leave and regardless of the steady fall of rain, stood about the prison door, watching with curious interest the mounting and riding away of the chief councilor and the members of the council.

In obedience to a command from her mother Hetty Taunston, frightened and disheartened at the result of the trial, stood waiting a little distance apart, with Simon Kempster at her side.

"I give thee good day, Hetty," called her friend, Cynthia Cazneth approaching, greatly excited. "Happen I do not see thee before, we'll make sure to stand together at the burning. Although, I ween, 'twill be fearsome an' an awful sight, I would not miss it for a bright new gold piece. 'Twill be something to talk of o' nights for years to come."

"I will not go to see my cousin burned," Hetty answered soberly. "By the law I was forced to come today, but unless they drag me there with ropes and chains I will not see sweet Margaret burned."

"Oh, fie on thee for a faint heart!" cried the other gayly. "Thou'd best change thy decision," she added as she turned away, "as 'twill be a great day, I do warrant thee."

Soon Mistress Taunston came toward them, talking volubly to the Widow Dawson.

"Such sleepless nights as I ha' spent," she said dolorously, "expecting every moment that lightning would strike the house or some of us be carried off or struck dumb, I could ne'er describe to thee. Hetty, go now and see that thou dost wear a brighter face."

"Aye," agreed the widow, "none know better than I the pain o' sleepless nights. God be praised, we've only five more now. The councilor showed rare wisdom an' care of us in appointing an early day."

"Mayhap the knowledge that La Fabienne is at large," the other said, "caused him to feel that for the ends of justice the prisoner's evil spirit could not be destroyed too speedily."

"Fear not that he will e'er return," the widow exclaimed, with an ugly sneer, tossing her head contemptuously. "Forsooth, an he doth get through the forest with a whole skin, which I much doubt, he will shake the dust of this mountain from off his feet forever. 'Tis ever the way of those gallants. I wot all he wanted was her estate. Prithee, good dame," she continued after a moment's silence, "at the prisoner's death do her lands go to the old woman, Elsbeth? Will the witch be allowed to make disposition of her property?"

The countenance of Mistress Taunston clouded darkly as she replied in shrill tones: "Is a witch possessed of devils able to dispose of her property? Hast thou not heard, woman, that in her father's will it is stated and legally witnessed that my son Josiah, in case Margaret dieth without issue, is the next heir to the estate? Fare thee well, Widow Dawson, I must ha' speech with Hetty, who, I see, doth lag behind."

And the dame, to avoid further conversation, abruptly left her companion to continue her way alone.

In those early days, when the belief in witchcraft was universal and people had strong superstitions, an event such as the arrest of Margaret Mayland, followed by her trial and conviction, gave food for much interesting conversation. In the long twilight and after the candles were lighted these simple folk sat about their hearthstones speaking the condemned woman's name in whispers, and if a blind rattled or the wind rose they sat erect, listening nervously, the more timid cowering down in their seats and covering up their faces with their hands.

Every movement of the prisoner during the trial, her words, also those of the councilor, were repeatedly discussed, and they spoke of her suffering at the stake, that was to be the expiation of her sins, with grewsome exultation in their voices and gestures. The men killed lambs and fowl and the women rose at an earlier hour to get the churning out of the way and to do extra baking in anticipation of visitors, for it was known that many Puritans from other settlements would ride to Cragenstone that day.

Old Elsbeth, who had been allowed to see Margaret just once, when she took her a change of clothing, spent her time weeping, wringing her hands and praying to God to save her young mistress from the horrible fate that awaited her.

"Sir Godfrey had gold," Gaston would say to her comfortingly, although his own face was downcast and troubled, "an' much can be done with gold. Cheer thee, good mother, and keep in readiness, for who knows but the master 'll return at the head of a great army and carry us all away in triumph from this accurst mountain."

"Ah, lackaday, mine ears are strained wi' listening for the sounds of horses' hoofs," she responded disconsolately, "that never come—oh, woe is me, that never come!"

The host of the inn of the Sign of the Red Heart at this time was the busiest man in the village. Men eager to discuss the sensational and tragic events filled his drinking rooms, and a greater number of idlers than usual loitered in the hallway or hung about the doorstep. Newcomers who had ridden far to the trial and were resolved to remain over to witness the last agonies of the condemned woman filled his house to overflowing, some of them paying four times the value in gold for the privilege of sleeping on straw in the barn, and strangers were coming and going constantly.

One man, tall, with extremely dark, swarthy skin, wearing a broad flapping hat of black felt, a long cloak of rough homespun that reached down to the tops of his hobnailed shoes, with a high collar turned up about his bearded chin, and who walked as if one knee were stiff, leaning heavily on a short cudgel, attracted unusual attention upon his arrival by the bitter animosity he entertained toward the crime of witchcraft. For an hour after he arrived he sat sipping his ale, listening to the conversation of those about him, with low angry mutterings, nodding his head in strong approval and saying under his breath occasionally in gruff, hoarse whispers: "Down with witches, say I. Burn 'em! Burn 'em! They are accurst of God!"

Later, as the innkeeper was standing at the doorway of the barn giving loud orders to the horse boys who were arranging the straw beds for the night, Josiah Taunston approached and, addressing the man with the air of one who had important information, said, "Dost know, good host, whom thou hath at thy board?"

"Mean thou the tall man with bent head an' lame leg? Who is he, master?" the man asked curiously.

"'Tis a certain Ezekial Mason, who hath come to us from loyal Puritans at Honeyoke, ten miles below Sterndorf, having the proper password and bearing letters of introduction from them to us. The man, it seemeth, hath invented a famous lock that none but he can understand. Once on a door 'twill baffle all human skill to get the thing asunder. He hath shown it to the council, who did so approve of it that they did purchase it at once for our jail door, putting the newcomer in charge of the jail over Matthew Allen, who for such events of importance as are happening at present, prithee, is too old."

As the innkeeper's face expressed interest, Josiah continued with his narrative:

"The letters state that this Ezekial Mason is proficient in the art of building scaffolds for hanging an' hath skill in planting a stake and arranging dry fagots around it to secure a quick burning. They also make mention of the fact that in the several executions yonder below on the south side the mountain, from whence he comes, all were under his direction, and assert that each affair was conducted with order an' dispatch."

"By my faith, methought the stranger had a menacing look an' a cruel, relentless manner," answered the innkeeper, with a shrug. "At the first when he appeared, dust covered an' mud stained, the village lads loitering i' the hallway sprang away and ran out of doors in fear of him. But happen he'll serve the councilmen for their purposes right suitably," he added.

Taunston strode toward him angrily.

"Call not this Ezekial Mason a cruel man," he cried, "or a fearsome one, but rather with low voice an' reverent manner assert that he is a holy man, chosen by the Lord to do his work. I give thee good day, John."

Taunston walked off with rapid strides, then halted abruptly.

"Thou hadst best come an' settle his reckoning, for I am here to take this good man to the prison."

The innkeeper, laying down a large bundle of straw that he held in his arms, shouted an order to a passing horse boy, then hurriedly followed Taunston into the house.

CHAPTER XXVII.

THE next day and the next were eventful ones in the history of the quiet little village of Cragenstone. People stopped in the midst of their busy preparations for the witnessing of the awful event now drawing so near to walk to the prison to see the great new lock hanging from an iron band across the door and to gaze with wonder and curiosity at the tall, lame man who strode up and down before the building that confined Margaret Mayland, muttering savagely and uttering curses under his breath. Small boys and idlers hung about him, following him whither he went, and on the last day watched with pale, awe stricken faces the planting of the stake, the piling of the fagots at the foot and all the grewsome preparations for the consuming by fire of the condemned woman.

At last all was in readiness, and the darkness of the night that came before the day set for the execution settled black and dense over the mountain. The village folk, with the idea of rising promptly at the first appearance of the sun, so that they and their children might be dressed and on the scene at the first possible moment, had gone to rest early, so that at 9 o'clock not a light gleamed from the windows of a single house or cabin, not a wayfarer seemed to be on the roadways, and there was an intense stillness on the mountain.

At the jail old Matthew Allen lay stretched on a wooden bench just inside the huge door, sleeping heavily, although supposed to be awake, alert, on guard, and his prisoner, alone in her narrow cell, her dress of black clinging in somber folds about her slender figure, knelt on the hard floor beside her pallet, her head bowed in her hands. The glimmer from a candle on a stand near at hand fell on her bright hair and bowed head, showing her attitude to be one of hopeless resignation as she knelt there immovable, to all appearances unconscious.

Soon the sharp noise of the opening and shutting of the great door rang through the quiet prison and the heavy, halting footsteps of Ezekial Mason were heard as he came down the corridor, making his last round to see that all was safe. Reaching Margaret's cell, he paused, and as the rasping sound of a key being turned in the rusty lock of the iron door of her cell fell on her ears the prisoner instinctively bowed her head lower. Then the door was thrown back on its hinges, and for a few seconds there was no sound.

"Margaret Mayland."

She did not raise her head.

"Is it the time?" she asked dully. "Hast mine hour come?"

"Margaret."

She moved, appeared to listen, then lifted her face and looked about her wildly, but saw only the stern jailer, Ezekial Mason.

"Who mocks me?" she cried pitiously. "Who imitates his voice?"

The man stepped over the threshold and with a quick motion removed his slouched hat, turned down his broad coat collar and, supporting the trembling woman to her feet, said with deep emotion:

"Margaret, oh, my love!"

"Godfrey!"

She wound her arms about his neck, clinging to him wildly.

"And is it thou? In my dazed state methought 'twas the cruel jailer!

Hopeless resignation.

Thank God, I see thee once more before I die! Oh, God be praised that thou still doth love me! Godfrey, kiss me and then go, for they will surely take thee!"

Tears were shining in his eyes.

"Kiss thee! Aye, I will kiss thee," he replied. "But not so fast, sweet love, in bidding me begone, for when I go thou goeth with me."

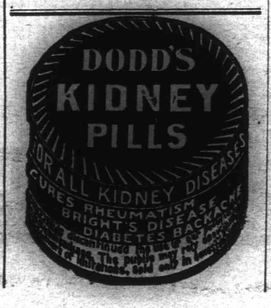
She raised bewildered, frightened eyes to his.

"Already Elsbeth and our trusty Gaston, disguised as Puritans, mounted and holding two horses under cover of the trees, are waiting for us at the crossroads. As Ezekial Mason I have the password that will let us through the guard, and as Godfrey La Fabienne," he said triumphantly, "I will carry my sweet Margaret safely through the enemy's lines!"

He laughed a low, jubilant laugh, delightedly pressing her to his heart.

"But the old jailer, Matthew Allen? Surely he will hear thee!"

"Nay, sweet," he hastened to reassure her, "Give old Matthew not a care, for a potion slipped into his wine at supper tonight doth cause him to sleep heavily. As I passed just now I kicked him with my foot, and so unconscious of it was he that he did not even turn."



He lifted the candle so that its gleam fell on her face.

"Thou hast sorrowed, mine own. Thy pale, drawn face doth tell its own tale of suffering."

"Godfrey"—tears filled her eyes and her lips trembled—"methought thou didst desert me and put me from thy heart."

At the recollection of her suffering uncontrollable sobs broke from her in great gasps, and she wept bitterly. With an exclamation, La Fabienne drew her closer to him.

There is a remedy over sixty years old—Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Of course you have heard of it, probably have used it. Once in the family, it stays; the one household remedy for coughs and hard colds on the chest. Ask your doctor about it.

The Railway Commission propose next year to send an inspector over the railways of Ontario to look into the condition of bridges, switches, roadbeds, station yards, and such like, as a preventive to mishaps. The commission will need an additional officer after January 1 next to inspect rolling stock. A new law goes into force then, requiring air-brakes and other special equipment for cars. The law, it is pointed out, will be ineffective unless there is an inspector to enforce it.

THE UGLY OCTOPUS.

It Is One of the Most Repulsive and Hideous of Creatures.

A greedy, voracious, relentless creature is the octopus, and a most formidable enemy even to man, for it is easier to cut or tear off one of those terrible long arms with its two rows of suckers than to induce the creature to relinquish any prey it has laid hold of.

These suckers also enable it to drag its body into very narrow crevices, from which scarcely any force will avail to remove it.

Like its beautiful brother the argonaut, it defies its enemies by ejecting ink, but the octopus is so subtle and clever that he can vary the color of his ink according to the color of the ground he is passing over, and, as he is very active and darts about at lightning speed, he constantly escapes being caught.

He is an unsociable creature, apparently quite satisfied with his own society, as he roams about alone, seeking what he may devour on rocky shores, where he may be met with of all sizes, varying in length from an inch to two or more feet.

The octopus has one very curious habit—when resting he coils up some of his arms into a semblance of the shell of the argonaut.

A MARKET PRIMER.

It Tells About the Butcher and the Way He Sells His Meat.

What is the man doing behind the counter?

He is selling meat. Let us watch him.

What is the lady going up to the counter for?

To buy meat from the greasy man with the white apron.

What does she ask for?

A five pound roast of porterhouse.

What does he give her?

A seven pound roast.

Then does he charge her only for what she asked for?"

No, indeed. He charges her for what he chose to give her.

Didn't the lady know what she wanted?

Evidently the man didn't think so.

Can't he tell the weight of a piece of meat when he picks it up?

Certainly he can. Otherwise he would never be able to know that he is always selling you a piece of meat several pounds bigger than you wanted.

Why does the man do this?

It is impossible to associate constantly with greasy things and not become pretty smooth yourself. Now run and play.

FISHING LINES.

The Very Finest Are Those Formed From Silkworm Gut.

Silkworm gut forms the best line for fishing purposes, partly on account of its great tenacity and partly because it is so transparent. Every year a sufficient number of Spanish silkworm grubs are selected for this purpose. After they have eaten enough mulberry leaves and before they begin to spin they are thrown into vinegar for several hours. Each insect is killed, and the substance which the grub in the natural course would have spun into a cocoon is forcibly drawn from the dead worm into a much thicker and shorter silken thread.

The threads are then placed in pure water for about four hours and afterward dipped for ten minutes in a solution of soft soap. The fine outer skin is thus loosened so that the workman can remove it with his hands. The threads must be dried in a shady place and are often bleached with sulphur vapor until they acquire the bright appearance of spun glass.—London Telegraph.

The Waiters.

Usefulness of any man or woman lies principally in the willingness back of the hands to do as well as they possibly can whatever comes their way. As a rule, it will be found that the most useless persons in the world are those who are "waiting" for something to turn up. And by the same sign it is a fact that the most useful beings are those who have taken up the first thing that came to hand and done the best they could with it. These people usually find something to their liking in the long run, too, and if this be denied them they have the good sense to learn to like what comes.

Long Flight by Night.

Nearly all small birds make their long flights by night, spending the daytime quietly feeding and resting, so that if on any day in May the treetops are full of flitting little warblers it is no sign that the following day will find them still there. Some kinds, like phoebes, song sparrows, meadow larks and bluebirds, come very early—as soon as the snow is all gone and the south sloping hillsides begin to feel warm and "smell of spring."—St. Nicholas.

Nothing of the Kind.

"Now, sir," said the advocate, cross examining a witness, "your answers are not satisfactory. I am afraid you are slightly ambiguous."

Witness (with great indignation)—I am naething o' the kind, sir. I'm a strict teetotaler.—London Tit-Bits.

Suspicious.

Junior Partner—The bookkeeper has been married nearly six months now. Senior Partner—Well? Junior Partner—Well, he hasn't asked for a raise in salary. Senior Partner—Heavens! We'll have to have his accounts examined.

Be brave in trouble; meet distress with dauntless courage; but when the gale for prosperity blows be wise, no less, and shorten sail.—Horace.

The Giant's Staircase.

One of the most widely known geological curiosities in the vicinity of Cork is a series of knobs or knots projecting from the face of a cliff. There are sixteen of these huge projections all together, all regularly set in the face of the cliff, one above the other, forming a series of such uniformity as to give it the general appearance of a stairway. Since time out of memory this queer ascent and its projecting "steps" have been known as the Giant's Staircase.

It is warmly padded, fitted with the most elaborate shades of satin and ornamented with fine tails of Blue Fox also. Such a handsome Fur has never before been given away, and you can get it free. Itch, mange, prairie scratches, Cuban itch, on human or animals, cured in 30 minutes by Wolford's Sanitary Lotion. It never fails. At all druggists

Arrangements have been made by Russian officials, who came from Vladivostok by the cruiser Bogatyr, to send the 73,000 Russian prisoners from Japan to Vladivostok in German steamers. The intention was to send the prisoners to Odessa by steamer, but the uprising in Russia has caused an alteration of plans.

Minard's Liniment Cures Distemper.

In Ireland there are 3,310,200 Catholics, 579380 Episcopalians, 504,749 Presbyterians and Methodists, and 62,384 belonging to other denomination.

Itching, Burning, Skin Diseases Cured for Thirty-five Cents.—Dr. Agnew's Ointment relieves in one day, and cures Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Eczema, Barber's Itch, Ulcers, Blotches, and all eruptions of the skin. It is soothing and quieting, and acts like magic in the cure of all baby humors. 35c.

Foreign Secretary Lansdowne has on behalf of Great Britain, has accepted President Roosevelt's invitation to participate in the naval and military displays on the occasion of the Jamestown, Pa., Exposition, in 1907.

Threatened With Flood.

Crookston, Minn.—The Red River valley is threatened with a repetition of the 1896 flood. The drainage convention meets here in January and will have an object lesson of the country's needs. Three hundred miles of the flat country is banked with snow that, when thawing, will swell the numerous streams and inundate large sections. The farmers and business men are greatly concerned.

They Are Not Violent in Action.—Some persons when they wish to cleanse the stomach resort to Epsom and other purgative salts. These are speedy in their action, but serve no permanent good. Their use produces incipient chills, and if persisted in they injure the stomach. Nor do they act upon the intestines in a beneficial way. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills answer all purposes in this respect, and have no superior.

It is expected that the new winter time card of the Canadian Pacific Railway will be put in force on January 1 next.

Minard's Liniment Cures Diphtheria.

The Canadian Bank of Commerce has added three branches in the west, making a total of 130 branches, of which 126 are in Canada.

A number of the Canadian Pacific hotels in the west will be largely increased in size in the immediate future, according to present expectations. The season of 1905 was exceedingly satisfactory to the company, the hostelries of the corporation receiving a very liberal patronage. The chalet at Lake Louise, which has been visited by so large a number of distinguished people during the past few years, will be largely increased in size. The Banff hotel will also require enlargement, and plans to that end are now under consideration. A army of men are at work on the hotel building of the company, and it is expected that the entire structure will be ready for use in the early summer.

Great Medicine.—Tonti, one of the pioneers of French Canada, lost a hand and wore an iron hook as a substitute. He was in the habit of boxing the ears of refractory Indians with this iron hand, and they have remarked that it was "great medicine." Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil is great medicine; it takes hold of pain with an iron hand and knocks it out of the system.

Next spring the Presbyterian church will make an addition of $50 to the salaries of ministers in augmented charges, of which there are 170. In these there are 503 mission fields, containing 1,332 preaching stations.

The Times
To Readers
and
Advertisers and Everybody
A Happy
and Prosperous
New Year.

A Christmastide Thought.

If you would increase your happiness and prolong life, forget your neighbors faults, advises an exchange. Forget the slander you have heard. Forget the temptations Forget the fault-finding, and give little thought to the cause which provoked it. Forget the peculiarities of your friends, and only remember the good points which make you fond of them. Forget all personal quarrel or histories you may have heard by accident, and which, if repeated, would seem a thousand times worse than they are. Blot out of memory, as far as possible, all the disagreeable occurrences of life; they will come, but they will grow larger when you remember them, and the constant thought of the acts of meaness or, worse still, malice, will only tend to make you more familiar with them. Obliterate everything disagreeable from yesterday; start out with a clean sheet for to-day, and write upon it, for sweet memory's sake, only these things which are lovely and lovable.

A Rare Avis.

There are fifty three Sundays in this year of grace 1905 and the people who study these things tell us such a thing as 53 Sundays in the same year will not occur again for about 119 years. That being so we will leave it to some other pen to record the fact when it does occur.

Free Press Souvenir.

The Winnipeg Free Press has sent out a novel Christmas souvenir one of which we acknowledge with much pleasure. It consists of a booklet, entitled "a flint of steel" accompanied by a flint and piece of steel, a reminder that Eddy matches were not always found in every house and tent as they are now. The booklet which, is tastefully got up, contains the Cree legend of the origin of fire "set forth in print for the first time from a manuscript journal of an officer in the service of the Hudson's Bay Company dated in the year 1817." The souvenir is a very decided novelty.

What the Newspaper does for a Town.

Every newspaper does a large amount of free service for the community, sometimes without request, but always without thanks. Nevertheless the newspaper is as much a private enterprise as any other manufacturing business It is built up by such hard labor, intense application, severe nervous strain and strenuous life as is unknown to any other calling; and no business in the world requires so much or so constant an investment of new material to keep up-to date. At the same time no other industry is solicited so often to contribute of its very life—its advertising space—for public and private benefit, as the newspaper. So says a paper down east and it speaks the truth.

JOSEPHSBURG.

Church of England services, in the Josephburg Mission for Sunday, 31st December 1905. St. Alban's Church, Gros Ventre, 11 a.m. St. Anne's Church, Josephsburg, 3.30 p.m.

The Thin Man's Danger.

He can't resist disease germs—that's why he's such a mark for consumption. In this land of plenty thinness is wickedness, especially when it's so easily overcome with Ferrozone. This remarkable tissue builder makes you fat quickly; it does so by forming blood that's rich, nourishing, and healthgiving Ferrozone supplies the nutriment needed by wornout nerves, rapidly constructs muscle and fatty tissue. The form fills out, the cheeks redden, proving that weight is being added. To be well and stay well, use Ferrozone. Fifty chocolate coated tablets in a box for fifty cents or six for $2.50 at all dealers.

"One Story is Good Until another is told."

So it is in our business. When looking around no doubt you see some fine goods, but when one store is visited, then others are a different story. We say with pardonable pride that our selection of Watches, Rings, Silverware, Sterling Silver Novelties, Sonvenir Goods and Cut Glass, is of the best and should meet with approval both of yourself and cheque book.

THE JOKE AS A POWER.

It Is Rapidly Becoming Mightier Than the Pen.

Men who fear nothing else shrink from a joke upon themselves. Soldiers who do not flinch before opposing guns dread to be made ridiculous. Woe to the national hero who makes one trifling mistake which may subject him to clever caricature! His meritorious career is henceforth shadowed by one colored illustration. A comic paper will tip the scales of justice, snatch the victor's prize from his extended palm and rob the orator of choicest laurels. A brilliant satire will mar the fortunes of the greatest statesman, a laugh will turn the tide of a political convention.

Indeed the joke is fast becoming mightier than the pen. The orator has learned its value, and even the clergyman resorts to it when he desires to stir the flagging interest of his flock. It furnishes sufficient excuse for the impertinence of children, and in its name the daily papers deride the highest national dignitaries.

What is the meaning of its steady growth in power and what results may we predict from its humorous tyranny?

Is there a chance that our keen relish for fun may finally produce a kind of humorous dyspepsia resulting from overindulgence, unless with epicurean discrimination we demand quality, not quantity, and stubbornly refuse to swallow other than that which should appease a wholesome, nay cultivated appetite in jokes?—Caroline Ticknor in Atlantic.

Trifles as Irritants.

We are so constituted that what is occurring at the moment interests us often out of all proportion to its importance. For example, we are thrown off our balance by the merest trifles perhaps which occur today, but which in a week's time may have no significance whatever. Obstacles which seem like mountains when we meet them dwindle away to molehills when we get away from them.

Even what seems tragedy at the moment in the future may be the most innocent comedy.

Most of us are so constituted that we will make almost any sacrifice for present peace. It would seem easier to have an arm or a leg amputated two years hence than to lose a finger today! It is human nature to shrink from pain, and we purchase release at almost any cost. If we could only train the mind to look at today's trouble and annoyance from the standpoint of the future, it would be much easier to bear.—Success.

Locked In With a Maniac.

The writer was once closeted with a patient whom he had no suspicion of being mad until the latter got out of bed, turned the key of the door and preferred a mild request to the writer to have his throat cut, handing him at the same time an open pocketknife, which he produced from underneath his pillow. I objected to the knife as being too small for the purpose and begged to be allowed to go for my case of amputating knives, with which, I explained, the operation could be performed with greater neatness and dispatch. He unlocked the door at once, binding me over to secrecy and urging me to lose no time in returning. I drove home, reported the case to the authorities and came back with assistance. He was secured with great difficulty and sent to the asylum.—London Tit-Bits.

Harmony In the Leaves of a Tree.

One of the remarkable characteristics of a tree is the process of leafage, and if we examine the bough upon which the leaves grow the admiration of the scientific agriculturist will become thoroughly aroused over the perfect consistency and artistic skill manifested in the arrangement of each spray and the exact number of leaves arranged with the most exquisite art and regularity. Every group of leaves forms merely long lines—some short and each one different—no two alike, no two in the same position, yet all so perfect and harmoniously blended that there can be no antagonism, no sameness and all those thousands and thousands of strange and delicate forms grouped together, neither confused nor ill arranged.

A Famous Portrait Painter's Opinion.

The famous artist Von Lenbach had one great dominant principle—that out of nature one should grasp and hold fast but one thing in portraiture, the head; that this exponent of the soul must stand out in undisturbed unity; that accessories of whatever kind, whether dress or form, must distract and weaken the impression that the head should produce; that a portrait to attain its highest aim and significance must look out from a background of nothingness and must be shorn of every detail that interferes with this unity of purpose.—Cosmopolitan.

Literary Hand Me Out.

"An' how did you fare at the house on the hill?" inquired Wandering Willie of Meandering Mike.

"Fine," replied the meanderer. "The lady gave me a little of most everything you could mention."

"Not hash?"

"No. A pocket dictionary."

Sadie's Guess.

Teacher—Can any little girl tell me who was Columbus?

Sadie (frantically snapping her fingers)—I know.

Teacher—Well, Sadie?

Sadie—Columbus, the gem of the ocean.

Both Defective.

She—You make love like a novice.

He—Then we're both defective. I ought to make love like an expert, and you ought not to know the difference.—Life.

Water Cure For Constipation.

Half a pint of hot water taken half an hour before breakfast will usually keep the bowels regular. Harsh cathartics should be avoided. When a purgative is needed, take Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They are mild and gentle in their action. For sale by all druggists.

JOSEPHSBURG FARMERS GRIEVANCE.

Mr. H. Hassard has handed us full copies of a series of resolutions passed at the indignation meeting of the Josephsburg farmers re the recent dipping transactions accompanied by the following letter:—

Medicine Hat, Dec. 20, 1905.

Editor Medicine Hat Times.

Dear Sir,—Some time ago I handed for publication to some other papers a copy of the accompanying resolutions and letters, but for some reason best known to themselves they have failed to publish them.

As there are various theories afloat as to the true nature and interest taken by the people in this matter, I feel that an injustice would be done in withholding it from the public.

As chairman of the people's committee and author of some of the matter, I have the honor of submitting same for publication in your valuable paper.

Yours respectfully,
H. HASSARD.

We cannot possibly publish all the resolutions, but the following is a summary of each.

No. 1 calls for a clean and impartial discharge of duties by public servants.

No. 2. As farmers were lead to believe about election time that they were a factor in the growth and development of the country, they claimed to have their interests consulted.

No. 3. That they have little in common with the ranchers; that they have but few cattle, which are under constant care and observation, and free from contagious disease; that their condition was not taken into consideration in the dipping orders.

No 4 calls for abrogation of the dipping order except in cases of lice, mange, or other infectious and contagious disease verified by competent authority.

No. 5 charges the dipping inspector with exceeding his duty when he arrested the cattle of Chris Kanig and John Foster, senior, 64 head in all, including, as alleged, several milch cows, on their way home from Peter Houck's dipping vat where they had been dipped, Kanig's for the second time at a cost of $10, and took them to James Robinson's dipping vat where they were again dipped, Kanig's for the third time and Foster's for the second time, and left them in custody for 13 days and again dipped Kanig's for the fourth time and Foster's for the third time, at a cost of $120, together with the loss of milk and butter for the time they were detained on a too closely-cropped pasture.

No. 6 names a person alleged to be the prime mover in what is described as an outrage committed in the name of the law.

No. 7 calls upon the Government to appoint a commission to take evidence under oath, make a full inquiry into the circumstances, mete out punishment, refund monies paid, and allow damages to the parties aggrieved.

No. 8 pledges the farmers who were present (about 70 we believe) to work and vote against the government candidate in the next election in Western Assiniboia.

No. 9 strongly denounces the person they believe to have been the prime mover in the matter.

No 10. provides for sending copies of the resolutions to the papers for publication.

No 11 appointed H. Hassard, C Zaiser, and J. Bohnet, junior, to be a committee, with power to add to their number, to lay the matter before the Government, and with power to call a meeting at any time and report progress and recommend the course they think fit.

The Fire Brigade had a run to the section house on Friday, but the incipient fire had been put out by the C.P.R. staff before the brigade could get there.

The Seed Selection Special.

We are in receipt of the printed itinerary of the seed selection special train which starts from Brandon on January 8th, and regret to find that Medicine Hat is not included. So all the correspondence with the agricultural society might have been saved. We may well ask, however, why Medicine Hat should be passed by in this matter.

A Marvellous Cake.

Quon Koy has in his restaurant window the most wonderful cake ever seen. There are, in fact, two cakes surmounted by a model house or temple made entirely of candy, a most elegant looking structure, bearing in letters of gold the words "A Merry Christmas, 1905." The production is a work of art. "Conkey" says it took him four days to make it, and we believe him.

WALES BEAT NEW ZEALAND.

The world renowned "All Blacks" went down before gallant little Wales. After beating English, Irish and Scotch teams the New Zealanders were beaten by the Welsh team at Cardoff. In beating the New Zealanders, Wales showed superior excellence in every department of the game, special features being the rushes of the forwards and the kicking of the full back. The New Zealanders never seemed able to set their wonderful passing backs in motion.

The Worst of a Cold.

Is how suddenly it comes. No time to hurry to a drug store, croup develops, the lungs are effected with pneumonia or tubercu...sis and it's too late. Keep Catarrhozone on hand,—it kills colds instantly. Something magical about the way it cures Catarrh and Bronchitis. Catarrhozone is the best remedy because it cures in nature's way: it heals, soothes and restores permanently. Carry a Catarrhozone inhaler in your pocket, use it occasionally and you'll never catch—that worst remembering.

HOCKEY.

On Friday the Montreal Street School (The White Socks) defeated the Toronto Street School (The Ball-Headed Seven) in a game of hockey. When time was up there was no score. Then the captains agreed to play five minuets each way. The first five minuets The Ball-Headed Seven did some brilliant playing, and kept the White Socks defence busy. The second five minutes The Ball-Headed Seven made a nice rush, but were stopped by Ellis, who passed to Legh and then on to Cunliffe, who scored. Two minutes after time was called leaving the score 1-0.

GROS VENTRE NOTES.

We have had quite a lively time in Josephsburg over the cattle dipping. It appears some ranchers understood the Government regulations allowed small bunches to be hand dipped. This looked quite reasonable, considering there was next to no mange to be seen. But the decree had gone forth—all cattle must be dipped. Then those who had hand dipped had not done the dipping according to what the inspector would accept under the dipping regulations, and now found themselves in a corner—stormy weather on hand, their cattle being gathered and dipped by government officials, which is rather expensive. Most of our ranchers are law abiding, and dipped their cattle according to regulations. At the same time a great many count that the dipping this season was a hardship considering the trifling amount of mange, compared with the amount of abuse the cattle receive in being pounded through the shutes in the dipping. I have heard ranchers with small bunches say they would gladly pay 25c. per head for privilege of hand dipping, so as to save their cattle the abuse in connection with the regular dipping.

Others claim it would pay to dip cattle supposing there was no mange, as they do so much better after being dipped.

If those ranchers of that opinion keep on dipping after compulsory dipping is a thing of the past, we will believe they are sincere.

On a certain blockhouse line in South Africa it was necessary to place a sentry on a hill a little distance from the blockhouse, which was in a hollow. One night an Irishman was on the said post. The officer, on visiting Pat, seemed to doubt his knowledge as to his duties in case of an attack, so he (the officer) asked Pat—if the enemy did actually come what steps he would take. "Long and quick ones," said Pat.

WANDERING WILLIE.

PRESTON—ROWLAND.

A very pretty wedding took place at the Century Methodist Church on the 18th inst., when Mr J. E. Preston and Miss Luella Rowland were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by the Rev. J. M. Harrison, pastor of the church. The marriage, of which a brief notice appeared in our last issue took place at 5 o'clock, and was witnessed by a number of friends of the contracting parties. The bride was accompanied to the altar by her sister, Miss Jean Rowlands, to the strains of the Wedding March, and wore white silk with a berthe of real lace. She wore a wreath of lilies of the valley, and carried in her hand a bible in place of the usual shower bouquet. After the ceremony a very dainty luncheon was served at the home of the bride's sister, the table being prettily decorated with lilies of the valley.

The happy pair left for the east the same evening, and are spending their honeymoon among friends in Eastern Canada. Christmas was spent at the home of the groom's father at Tottenham

A large number of friends was at the depot to see them off, and they left amid showers of rice and the congratulations of a very large circle of friends. The happy couple were the recipients of numerous presents.

The Christmas tree was a great attraction for the youngsters, who were delighted with the beautiful presents it yielded, and the parents were no less pleased than the children. SCHOOL MATTERS.

As both of our town schools are completed, and both comfortable and up-to-date in every particular, an attempt has been made to divide the pupils attending these schools into two parts making their place of residence North or South of the railroad track the basis of division as far as possible. The grading of the pupils and the lack of accommodation in some of the rooms has prevented a perfect division but we trust some advantages have been gained. Mr. Stafford's class is to be moved to the Toronto Street school and four pupils promoted from the Jr IV class into his room viz., Alice Adsit, Lydia Cooper, Gertie Calkins and Myrtle Dimmick. Miss Edith Morrison is also to be moved and her pupils will all be from the south side of the track, viz. (1) All of her old class who live on the south side. (2) All of the pupils from Miss Raes old class who live on the South side. Promoted from Miss Janet Morrison's class to Miss Rae's class: Erna Draudson, Alma Eddy, Ethel Terry, Mary McKinnon, Ethel Lalonde, Myrtle Penhale, Willie Anderson, Gertrude Evans, Annie Schmelzer, Wendell Page, Dorothy Niblock, Arthur Anderson, Oliver Barreau, Austin Sirr.

Promoted from Miss Davidson's class to Miss Janet Morrison's class: Minne Perry, Ruth Degon, Flo Curry, Jay Watson, Ivie Towhey, Adeline Legh, Stephen Bailie, Baxter Franklin, Lucy Schmelzer.

No. 96 was in charge of Conductor White and the engineer T. Penhale. The trains were to cross at Irvine. No. 1 stopped outside the switch and while this was being opened No. 96 ran down and the air-brakes refusing to work the engine bounced into the mail and baggage cars of No. 1 putting both out of business. Luckily no one was hurt. A wreck crew went out and the delayed No. 1 arrived here about 17.30.

MEDICINE HAT, N. W. T.

RHEUMATIC SUFFERERS

Will Find a Certain Cure in the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Rheumatism is a disease of the blood. Every doctor now admits this to be the fact. Doctors used to think that rheumatism was brought on by colds in the joints and muscles. Now they know that cold never started the disease—cold only sets the pains going. Rheumatism can only be cured by curing the bad blood which causes it. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills always cures rheumatism, because they actually make new rich red blood, which drives out the poisonous acids, loosens the stiffened, aching joints and muscles, and restores the rheumatic sufferer to health and happiness. Dr. William's Pink Pills have cured thousands and thousands of rheumatic sufferers, some of them when they were almost hopeless cripples. Mr. T. H. Smith, Caledonia, Ont., says:—"For a number of years I was badly troubled with rheumatism, and was so crippled I could scarcely do any work. I tried quite a number of medicines, but they did not help me. Then I saw Dr. Williams' Pink Pills advertised as a cure for this trouble, and got a supply. After I had taken a few boxes I saw they were helping me, and I continued taking the pills throughout the winter, and am now completely cured. I have since worked out of doors in cold weather without a coat, and did not feel even a twinge of the trouble."

If you are suffering from any disease due to bad blood or disordered nerves, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will cure you, because they make new rich blood, which goes right to the root of the disease and drives it from the system. That is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure such troubles as anaemia, indigestion, palpitation of the heart, neuralgia, headaches and backaches, kidney and liver troubles, St. Vitus Dance, paralysis, and the special secret ailments of girlhood and womanhood. But only the genuine pills can do this, and these always have the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," on the wrapper around each box. Sold by Medicine dealers everywhere, or sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Shetland the Perfect Pet.

The cry of the children is for a perfect pet. What the rattle and the doll are to the earliest years of us, that the Shetland pony is fated to become for older childhood, says Country Life in America. This animal is the only pet that won't at some time or other make reprisals on the hand that nags. The dog—every dag—will bite when the child becomes too familiar. There are elements in a cat's nature that puzzle and repulse the child, a something that makes it walk "by its wild lone." The goat is inadequate. We could analyze a Noah's Ark of animals in this way only to find that the one satisfying safe living pet is the Shetland pony. If more than eight children ride on his back, he will shake himself like a wet Newfoundland and then stand motionless, while they pick themselves up and out from his four hoofs. A large and more highly nerved grade of horse would trample the children that were tripping him.

TEETHING TROUBLE.

Teething is generally accompanied by nervousness, irritability and stomach disorders, which may lead to serious consequences if not promptly treated. Baby's Own Tablets is the best medicine in the world for teething children. They allay the inflammation in the tender swollen gums, correct the disordered stomach, and help the teeth through painlessly. Mrs. T. Nutt, Raymond, Ont., says: "My baby suffered terribly while teething, but as soon as I began giving him Baby's Own Tablets he improved in every way and is now a bright, healthy child." The Tablets also cure colic, constipation, diarrhoea, indigestion, simple fevers and destroy worms. They are guaranteed to contain not one particle of opiate or harmful drugs, and may be given with equally good results to the new-born baby or the well-grown child. Sold by all druggists or sent by mail at 25 cents a box by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Dolly Vardon's Sister Dead.

Toronto.—One of the largest women in Canada, Fanny Jefferson, died last week of heart failure. Deceased, who was 75 years of age, was colored and deaf and dumb. She weighed over 500 pounds and it took six men to put the body in the coffin, which had to be made specially for her. She was born in Canada, and had lived in Toronto for over fifty years. Mrs. Letitia Campbell, better known as Dolly Varden, who travelled for many years with Barnum's circus, on account of her immense size, is a sister. She lives in St. Patrick's square, and weighs 612 pounds.

Faith

You cannot be expected to have faith in Shiloh's Consumption Cure, the Lung Tonic, as a cure for Colds, Coughs and all diseases of the air passages, if you have not tried it. We have faith in it, and we guarantee it. If it doesn't cure you it costs you nothing. If it does it costs you 25c. That's fair. Try it to-day. Shiloh has cured many thousands of the most obstinate cases, and we do not hesitate to say that it will cure any Cold, Cough, Throat or Lung trouble. If we did not believe this we would not guarantee it. Shiloh has had an unbroken record of success for thirty years. It has stood every possible test without failure. Further is found in the many testimonials of those who have tried Shiloh and been cured. Mrs. Archie Taylor, Asaph, Pa., writes:—"I bought a bottle of Shiloh's Consumption Cure and found it very beneficial. I severe cold and then had a terrible cough. I gave them everything I could think of, but they got no better. One morning my husband brought a bottle of Shiloh. We gave it to the children when they went to bed, and they slept all night. It cured them completely. I shall always keep it in the house." 25c

EARLY FLYING MACHINE.

Remarkable Invention by a Portuguese Which Failed to Work.

In The London Evening Post, dated Dec. 20 and 22, 1709, is an interesting description of a flying ship then lately invented by a Portuguese priest. Unfortunately for the glory of Portugal it did not fly, as was expected, 200 miles in twenty-four hours or at all. In order that the deeply scientific among our readers may understand the cause of its failure we quote a few extracts from its specifications. The ship was fitted, in the first place, with "sails wherewith the air is to be divided." It had also two pairs of bellows, "which must be blown when there is no wind." At opposite ends of the hull were "the globes of heaven and earth, containing in them the attractive virtues." These served as covers to "two loadstones placed in them upon pedestals to draw the ship after them."

We have not yet exhausted the list of motive powers carried by this remarkable invention. Over the whole was "a cover made of iron wire in form of a net, on which are fastened a good number of large amber beads, which by a secret operation will help to keep the ship afloat, and by the sun's heat (certain mats) that line the ship will be drawn toward the amber beads." It is strange that a flying ship fitted with so many alternative appliances should have failed to fly at all. Possibly the amber beads tried to fly one way, the globes another, the wind and the bellows worked in yet other directions, and thus stable equilibrium resulted.—London News.

Irving's Generosity.

The late Sir Henry Irving retained faithful old members of his company long after their services might have been dispensed with if only business considerations prevailed. One of the most touching cases of this character was that of Daddy Howe, who died in Cincinnati some years ago while the company was touring here. At one of the most memorable dinners given to Irving by the members of the profession Daddy Howe arose and, with tears streaming down his face, told how his proposal to retire had been received. At this time he was eighty years old. When Howe learned that the company was to come to America he realized that the expense would be very great and that the minor roles he played could be easily filled over here at a much less cost. As a result of these gloomy reflections he wrote Mr. Irving that he appreciated the situation and would either retire or accept a reduced salary. Not receiving an answer, he brought the matter up at a personal interview.

"Dear me! Ah, yes! Well, I'll let you know presently," was Mr. Irving's evasive reply.

Daddy Howe thought from this that he was undoubtedly doomed to retirement. With trembling fingers he opened a note that came from Mr. Irving the next day and read:

"Of course I expect you to go, and I hope that the increase in your salary will indicate my appreciation and good wishes."

Danton and the Clock.

The clock in the anteroom of the ministry of justice having stopped, a watchmaker took it to pieces and was surprised to find engraved on one of the wheels this inscription: "J. Jean Blanchet, this 22nd Aug., 1792, saw the Sieur Danton profane the emblem of divine kingship by breaking a fleur-de-lis, which so rightly adorned the hand of this clock." The inscription had been hitherto undiscovered. Danton at the time mentioned was minister of justice, and it is known that the clock stood for more than a century in the minister's private room. Presumably he was irritated by watching the fleur-de-lis, which finished off the minute hand, as in many clocks of the eighteenth century, slowly mark fleeting time as he sat at his desk and on the day in question suddenly started up in a temper and broke the emblem off. The hand still shows a mark where it was mended and the fleur-de-lis readjusted. The Jean Blanchet who in his respect for dethroned royalty recorded his indignation at Danton's act is unknown, but he may be supposed to have been the watchmaker who mended the broken hand.—London Telegraph.

The Grate Fire.

An English writer makes an interesting suggestion regarding grate fires. After discussing "gas logs," he says: "I plump for the old fashioned coal fire, but in a new fashioned grate. I am sure that, with all its difficulties as to keeping it in and with all the stoking it demands, it is still the best. But I learned one thing from the asbestus gas fire and have since adopted it. I have some gas jets under my grates and light my fire by and through them. The up draft at first gives you the idea that the fire is not burning up, but directly you turn out your jets up flames your fire, full of healthy incandescence. And in this way wood a little damp matters not, and a fire that goes low is still and soon revivable."

The Reason Why.

A bookseller purchased a lot of books out in one of the new towns of Oklahoma Territory. Finding several lots of Charles Dickens' works in his stock, he decided to make a special price on them, so he put all of them in the large show window, with the following sign in very large letters:

"Charles Dickens Works All Week for Two Dollars."

A Kansas farmer who had drifted down that way walked up to this window. Reading the sign he said:

"Now, that's what's the matter with this country. The idea of a man working all week for two dollars."

Ghosts Frighten Tramps.

The casual ward at Clones Workhouse, Ireland, is at present absolutely avoided by tramps owing to the reappearance of a ghost which terrorized it two years ago. Formerly the workhouse was overrun by tramps, but the appearance of ghost caused it to be avoided for months. Having recently recovered from their fright tramps were again over-crowding the workhouse, but the ghost has just returned and the tramps are making off elsewhere. The neighboring unions, it is said, are anxious to borrow the ghost.

When Women Smoked.

In a copy of the Old Farmer's Almanac, printed about 1800, we find the following article on "the prevention and extinction of fires:" "Never read in bed by candlelight, especially if your bed be surrounded by curtains. Strictly forbid the use of cigars in your family at all times, but especially after night. There is good reason to suppose a house was lately set on fire by a half consumed cigar, which a woman suddenly threw away to prevent being detected in the unhealthy and offensive practice of smoking."

To Enliven the Liver

Kidneys and Bowels--To Prevent Disease by Cleansing the System--You Must Use

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

There is a need in every home of a medicine that will promptly cure biliousness, kidney derangement, and constipation.

A medicine that by cleansing the filtering and excretory organs will remove all poisonous waste matter, and by so doing prevent fevers, colds and such deadly diseases as dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease.

No medicine satisfies the need so well as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

This is no idle boast, but an absolute fact that is backed up by the testimony of a hundred thousand homes.

The reputation of Dr. A. W. Chase as author and physician is the guarantee which first made this great medicine popular.

Now it stands on its record of cures—a record which has seldom, if ever, been paralleled in the history of medicine.

Miss Julie Langlois, Manor, Sask., writes:

"For a long time I suffered from liver complaint and biliousness, and could find nothing to help me until I used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I have recommended these Pills to many of my friends and they have all been well satisfied with the results. You can use this letter for the benefit of women who are suffering as I did."

As a treatment for backaches, headaches, indigestion, aching limbs, liver derangements, kidney disorders and constipation, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are prompt, thorough and effective.

Once their merit is tested they are kept in the house and relied on in cases of emergency. By keeping the liver active and the bowels regular they positively prevent serious disease.

One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Dr. Chase's Backache Plaster promptly eradicates pain and may be used on any part of the body.

Prince Arthur of Connaught will be the next Royal visitor to Canada. So says the Canadian Gazette. The return will probably be made in April next.

C. P. R. Engineer's Experience with Dodd's Kidney Pills.

They Brought Back His Strength When He Could Neither Rest Nor Sleep.

Winnipeg, Man., Dec. 4.—(Special).—Mr. Ben Rafferty, the well-known C. P. R. engineer, whose home is at 175 Maple Street, is one Winnipeg man who swears by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"Long hours on the engine and the mental strain broke down my constitution," Mr. Rafferty says. "My back gave out entirely. Terrible, sharp, cutting pains followed one another, till I felt I was being sliced away piecemeal. I would come in tired to death from a run. My sole desire would be to get rest and sleep, and they were the very things I could not get. Finally I had to lay off work.

"Then I started to take Dodd's Kidney Pills, and the first night after using them I slept soundly. In three days I threw away the belt I have worn for years. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me."

Sixty homestead entries were made in the Winnipeg district last month.

An End to Bilious Headache.—Biliousness, which is caused by excessive bile in the stomach, has a marked effect upon the nerves, and often manifests itself by severe headache. This is the most distressing headache one can have. There are headaches from cold, from fever, and from other causes, but the most excruciating of all is the bilious headache. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will cure it—cure it almost immediately. It will disappear as soon as the pills operate There is nothing surer in the treatment of bilious headache.

"Cleaning Up" After War.

In consequence of the floating mines in the waters traversed by steamers bound for New Chwang, freight and insurance rates have been raised and vessels have been delayed by anchoring at night. With every precaution several steamers have been blown up or damaged, says Consular Reports, New Chwang.

Many have been destroyed since steamers have been provided by the Chinese Government with Hotchkiss one-pounder guns for that purpose.

On a recent voyage of the steamer Kwang Se, a floating mine was sighted near North Head. The Chinese gunner shot five times before hitting the mine, only 150 yards distant. On hitting it a deafening explosion followed. A great mass of water, streaked with flames, mostly blue in color, was thrown 150 feet into the air. Pieces of the mine came down upon the deck of the Kwang Se, severely injuring a Chinaman. A piece of the steel frame of the mine, still hot, fell beside one of the women passengers.

Steering Ship from the Shore.

Berlin.—The navy department has followed with intense interest the experiments in driving and steering ships by electric power from the shore which have recently been made at Bilboa, and negotiations have been opened with the inventor, a Spanish engineer, to sell his invention to the German government for an enormous sum.

The experiments at Bilboa, which were conducted under the auspices of the Spanish navy department and the inventor, Senor Torres Quevedo, proved that from a transmitting station on the shore he was able to steer a torpedo boat with the same accuracy as if he were standing at the helm, andalarge amount has been placed at his disposal by the Spanish government to enable him to develop his invention.

Over $1,000,000 was realized by the land department of the Canadian Pacific Railway for the sale of western holdings during the month of November. The number of acres disposed of amounted to 202,667, the price received being $1,075,166, an average of $5.31 per acre. During the same period the Canada Northwest Land Co. sold 16,000 acres for $106,300, an average of $6.64 per acre.

Alcoholic beverages, masquerading as patent medicines, are now placed under the ban of taxation in the United States. Every manufacturer of "remedies" containing a large percentage of alcohol must pay a special tax as rectifiers, and every person who sells such remedies must pay a liquor dealer's tax. The new order, which is based upon a ruling of John W. Yerkes, commissioner of internal revenue, will be carried out with strictness, and the trade has been fully warned.

THE RESOURCEFUL MOLE.

He Gets Away With Ease When You Think You Have Him.

"Speaking of quick and resourceful animals, the mole leads easily so far as my experience goes," said a man from the country, "and I dare say there are many men who have made observations that will confirm my contention. As you probably know, the mole plows in the surface of the earth, generally making a small ridge anywhere from two to three inches high. He moves with remarkable rapidity even when the ground in which he is burrowing is hard. When operating in soft ground he moves along at a surprising gait. But this is not the point I wanted to make. I was thinking of the remarkably good hearing of the mole and the ease with which he can get away just at the moment when you think you have him cornered. Of course now and then you can drive a spike through the mole before he is aware of it. If you do you will have to walk as light as a cat and will have to act as quickly as the same animal when the time comes to act. In nine cases out of ten the mole will hear the first footfall. At once he will quit plowing. He is gone. Search as you may, you cannot find him. I have seen men dig for fifty yards, following the ridge and its offshoots, without finding any other trace of the mole than the ridge. The mole's hearing is peculiarly keen, and I suppose this is so because he cannot see. But even more wonderful from my standpoint is the ease and quickness with which he gets away. How does he manage it? Where does he go? You know, the element of superstition in my makeup is slim, and I don't believe in ghosts, but somehow I have always inclined just a bit to the ghost theory when thinking of the mysterious antics of these blind burrowers. The mole is more like a ghost in his conduct than anything I have ever known, though, of course, the mole is a real and not an imaginary and mythical thing."

A MEMORY OF LEE.

He Had Much Dignity of Bearing and Beauty of Face.

Soon after the Confederates began to enter the town (Elizabethtown) I met a friend of mine, the son of Dr. Doyle, who told me that his father had just been sent for to see Lee and that I might go, too, if I ran as fast as my small legs could carry me, and we found the doctor just starting. Dr. Doyle was a man who had been in communication with the enemy from the beginning of the war, but had so far managed to escape the fate of many innocent men. Two of his sons had been arrested a short time before and were lying in jail when their friends arrived and set them free.

The doctor was in his old gig and, being an immense man, left no room for any one else in it, so we two boys sat on the springs behind. It was on the Williamsport pike, about half a mile from the town, that we met General Lee. He had dismounted and was standing by his horse, a small sorrel mare, which, I was told, it was his custom to ride on the march. His staff was brilliant in gold lace, but he was very simply dressed. No one could have seen that man without being greatly impressed with the dignity of his bearing and the beauty of his face. His hair at this time was almost entirely white, and those who had seen him the year before said he had aged greatly in the short space of time which had elapsed since the battle of Antietam. I could not help thinking of Washington as I looked at that calm, sad face. It has been said since by those who were near him that he had no expectation of conquering the north and that at the most he only hoped to win a great battle on northern soil in order to affect public opinion in Europe and lead to the recognition of the Southern Confederacy. However that may be, there was nothing about his bearing which looked like a great hope. —Rev. Dr. Leighton Park in Century.

"There'll Be No Pie."

An energetic pastor who was making preparations to build a new church received all kinds of advice from parishioners, and the greatest amount came from those who had contributed the least toward the erection of the church. So at the regular services on the following Sunday he said:

"I have been receiving lots of advice during the last few weeks. I have been told by certain members of the congregation that it will not do to have too many fingers in the pie. I can assure you that I will attend to that part of it. There will be no pie."

The Way of It.

"Who is that sprightly girl over there?"

"That's Miss Jones, who took part in the amateur theatricals last night."

"And who are those nineteen tired looking women near her?"

"Those are her mother, sisters, aunts and cousins who helped her to get ready!"

Impatient.

The Single Aunt—You should be most assiduous to keep yourself unspotted from the world, Cornelia. You are solicitous, are you not, to enter heaven after you cross the river? The Bud—Yes. But, auntie, I'm not averse to a little heaven on this side.—Puck.

Holman Hunt's Paintings.

Mr. Holman Hunt spent seven years on his great painting "The Triumph of the Innocents," and then was not at all satisfied with it, while "The Shadow of Death" took him three years.

A Backhander.

Mrs. Younghusband—I suppose you wish I didn't look under the bed every night, Younghusband—I don't care. I only wish you'd look there once in awhile in the daytime when you're sweeping.

What Flour Granulation Means in Bread-Making

Flour is composed of myriads of tiny granules.

To make good bread these granules must be uniform in size.

In poorly milled flour some granules are large, some small.

The small ones absorb yeast, "rise" and "ripen" before the large ones—the result is bread of coarse, poor texture.

The large granules are not developed into "sponge," they bake into heavy hard particles, spoil the texture of the bread and make it harder to digest.

ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR is perfectly milled—all the flour granules are uniform in size—the sponge rises uniformly—the bread is even in texture — perfect in flavor — good-looking, appetising bread — easily digested.

A Word In Season.

The playwright turned pale with excitement and a sudden rush of pride as he heard from his position in the wings the sound of stamping feet and roaring voices.

"They are calling for the author!" he cried feverishly. "What shall I do? Must I make a speech?"

The manager, who had not only heard but seen the audience, took him by the elbow.

"The best thing you can do," he whispered, "is to slip out of the stage door and escape while there's time."

The Eucalyptus Tree.

When the world's supply of coal is exhausted, which is not a matter for immediate worry, the eucalyptus tree may be grown as a substitute. This eucalyptus stores up more of the sun's energy than any other tree (1 per cent of that reflected on the unit of area), and in South Africa it has been found cheaper to raise it than to import coal. An acre of eucalyptus plantation will produce each year the equivalent of thirty tons of coal.

$1000 REWARD

Is offered as a guarantee that neither

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

NOR

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

contains alcohol, opium, or any harmful drug. Any one publishing false statements concerning their ingredients will be prosecuted. Doctor Pierce's Family Remedies are compounds of medicinal principles, scientifically extracted from native roots that cure the diseases for which they are recommended. They are medicines which have enjoyed the public confidence for over a third of a century. They are medicines not beverages, made to satisfy a craving for "booze."

"Golden Medical Discovery" regulates and invigorates stomach, liver and bowels, and cures dyspepsia, purifies the blood and tones up the system generally.

"Favorite Prescription" cures female weakness, irregularities, exhausting drains, painful periods and kindred ailments peculiar to women. Accept no substitute for these medicines, each of which has a record of marvelous cures. Substitution means selfishness on the part of the dealer who is looking for the greater profit on an inferior article.

"Our daughter who was attending college became very nervous and we were advised to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Mrs. M. C. Fox, of 57 E. Leonard St., Grand Rapids, Mich. "We did so and then you advised us to get the 'Golden Medical Discovery' also. She took four bottles of the 'Prescription' and three of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and you never saw such a change in a person. She said she did not feel like the same person. She was about seventeen years old at the time. I will gladly recommend Dr. Pierce's medicines to every one. I advise parents who have young daughters who suffer from nervous troubles to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription at once. I am sure it will help them."

Worked a Living Chain.

Dr. P. L. Hurt's pointer dog was the cause of a good deal of amusement and excitement in Boonville one day. The doctor stopped at a trough to water his horse. A sewer pipe about a hundred feet long passes under a crossing at this place, and the dog, being warm from running, crawled into the pipe to get cool. When the time came to leave he could not turn around, and as the pipe was crooked he could not see the opposite end of it, so there he stuck. After various suggestions had been made for getting him out a small negro boy was sent in after him. The boy got him by the leg, but then found that he himself could not back out. Here was a pretty howdy do. Finally a second negro boy was sent in. His legs remained within reach from the outside, and when he had caught the first boy by the legs and the first boy had got a secure hold on the dog's legs some strong men took the second boy by his legs, and thus [illegible] were all pulled out.—Exchange.

THE FISHER MARTEN.

Conceited, Cunning and Intelligent and Without Fear.

The fisher marten deserves to be much better known than he generally is, if only on account of his own good opinion of himself, his wonderful cunning and shrewd intelligence.

One of the largest and handsomest of the martens, he has also agility, strength and endurance for any two of his kind put together. Measuring about three feet in length, with a slim, vigorous body, the fisher will travel enormous distances in a single night, bounding lightly up into the air, with his nose turned up in order to catch every whiff of scent, outwitting other animals and the cleverest trappers and making himself at home wherever he happens to find himself.

He generally chooses as his hunting grounds the thickly covered hills and ridges where the hemlock and spruce grow in abundance, but he is as much at home on the tree tops as on the ground and can sleep as soundly in a low hollow of a tree as on a branch of a fir tree, where he will lie stretched out in the sunshine like any old cat.

As for fear, he does not know what it is. He will not only face but actually kill a Canadian porcupine and does not even appear to mind the quills which penetrate his body. He is not particularly fond of meeting an old bear with cubs, but is generally clever enough to steal her cubs while she goes off on some little expedition of her own, while instances have been related of the fishers in the Rocky mountains even killing young grizzlies.

As for man, he appears to laugh at him and his designs for trapping wild animals. He will pull a marten trap open and take out the bait, whether alive or dead; he will tear a pine marten or mink to pieces in no time and carry it off or drag the trap over some rough projection in order to spring it and make off more often than not without having received as much as a scratch.

But perhaps his cleverest trick, when he finds a trapper is following his trail, is to get behind the trapper and follow his, so that while the unconscious trapper is walking after the fisher the fisher is keeping completely out of danger by following the trapper. Many a useless mile has the trapper walked in this manner, and many good baits has he lost by the very same shrewd, cunning animal he is trying to trace and catch.

A Lucky Game of Chess.

A story is told of the Moorish prince Abul Hejex, who was thrown into prison for sedition by his brother Mohammed, king of Granada. There he remained for several years until the king, fearing he might escape, placed himself at the head of a fresh revolt and seized the crown, ordering one of his pashas to see to his immediate execution. Abul Hejex was playing at chess when the pasha came and bade him prepare for death. The prince asked for two hours' respite, which was refused. After earnest entreaty he obtained permission to finish his game. He was in no hurry about the moves, we are told, and well for him he was not, for before an hour had elapsed a messenger brought the news that Mohammed had been struck dead by apoplexy, and Abul was forthwith proclaimed king of Granada. It was indeed a small favor for the pasha to grant, but it altered the whole current of the king's career.

Work and Leisure Should Be Mated.

Work is good. No one seriously doubts this truth. Adam may have doubted it when he first took spade in hand and Eve when she scoured her first pots and kettles, but in the course of a few thousand years we have learned to know and value this honest, troublesome, faithful and extremely exacting friend. But work is not the only good thing in the world. It is not a fetich to be adorned, neither is it to be judged, like a sum in addition, by its outward and immediate results. The god of labor does not abide exclusively in the rolling mill, the law courts or the cornfield. He has a twin sister whose name is leisure, and in her society he lingers now and then to the lasting gain of both.—Scribner's.

The Bishop and the Widow.

According to a contemporary, a bishop who is widely known for his sympathetic and kindly nature having occasion recently to call upon a widow on some church matter, and finding her deeply distressed at her loneliness, ventured, as he was quite entitled to do, to offer a few words of fatherly consolation. "You must not," he said, "be cast down by your sorrow and lonely position. Remember the maxim, 'Man proposes, but'"— "Ah, my lord," interrupted the lady, "if man only would." It is not mentioned whether the bishop was a bachelor or not.—London Standard.

Etymological.

"Well, there's one consolation," observed Mr. Suburbs philosophically, as he shooed his neighbor's hens over the fence for the some hundredth time. "At last I have discovered why chickens have crops in their anatomy."

"Why?" asked his wife curiously.

"Why not, with all the seeds they plant in themselves?" queried Mr. Suburbs.

Precisely That.

Braggsby—I tell you I'm overworking. I am turning out an awful lot of work just now.

Nocker—That's just exactly the word your employer used in describing your present work.

People seldom improve when they have no other model but themselves to pattern after.—Goldsmith.

The Wonders of the Body.

Its mechanism, like delicate machinery, by even a slight cause is so disarranged as to be practically useless. A headache is no trifling matter because the stomach, kidneys and liver are sure to be affected. To cure the cause of headaches and prevent new attacks, use Ferrozone: it aids the stomach by supplying nourishing blood, vitalizes the nerves and brain instantly. Ferrozone braces—gives tone—elevates your 'spirits.' No such health bringer known. Fifty cents per box of fifty chocolate coated tablets at all dealers.

THE BAND CONCERT.

The Citizen's Band concert came off in the Opera House last Tuesday evening and was most successful in every sense of the word. The citizens showed their appreciation by filling the spacious hall and the programme was excellent and varied. Miss Allingham gave a charming rendering of "La Extasia" on the violin; Miss Mullins gave a fine rendering of "Lischerizky's Mazurkee" on the piano; Mrs. D. T. Flavin sang "Hearts" with brilliant effect, and Miss Gertrude White was heard to advantage in Toste's "Good Bye" and "The Gift." Mr. Joe Leonard, the versatile bandmaster gave solos on the cornet and on the violin of both of which he is master, and Mr. W. E. Crompton was good as he always is in his humerous songs. Mr. Dumsford made his first bow to a Medicine Hat audience and proved to be a baritone of merit. His rendering of "Down in the Vale" made a favorable impression. The accompanists were Miss Nesbitt and Miss Mullins.

In Praise of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

It is especially adapted to children as it is pleasant to take and contains nothing injurious. Mr.

S. service for about sixteen years says: "We have tried many cough medicines for croup, but Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is king of all and one to be relied upon every time.
