Your Vote and Influence

IS RESPECTFULLY SOLICITED FOR

FRED. G. FORSTER
for Mayor for 1905.

TO THE ELECTORS:

Having been requested, through a representatively-signed requisition, to allow my name to be placed in nomination for Mayor of Medicine Hat for 1905, I have decided to do so, and will be a candidate for the Mayoralty, and I respectfully solicit your vote and influence. If I am honored with election, I will give the Town's affairs the attention which they demand, and will do my best to promote the growth and prosperity of the Town of Medicine Hat along sound and progressive lines. Fifteen years residence here, a term on the School Board, and four years on the Town Council, gives me a good insight into the Town's business affairs and requirements.

Yours respectfully,
FRED. G. FORSTER.

HOSPITAL NOTES.

Dr. Leask, of Moosejaw, is now convalescent.

Mr. Cresswell is also doing well.

The typhoid patients generally are all getting better.

The Hospital is very full of patients

The Board of Directors have learned with very great regret that the lady superintendent, Miss Wilson, is leaving. Miss Wilson is going to Winnipeg to take the position of lady superintendent of the General Hospital there.

MUNICIPAL MATTERS.

Mr F. G. Forster is in the field for the Mayoralty and his address will be found on this page.

A requisition is being largely signed to-day inviting the following to come out for municipal honors:

For Mayor—Mr. Wm. Cousins.

For Councillors — Messrs. A. DesBrisay, F. O. Sissons, and Dr. Smyth.

The Ordinance calls for the following qualification:

The candidates must be "the owner at the time of election of freehold, leasehold, or partly freehold or partly leasehold real estate, rated in their own names, on the last revised assessment roll of the municipality, to at least the value following, over and above all charges, liens, and encumbrances affecting the same—Freehold, $500; leasehold, $1,000.

It is felt that the town needs a strong progressive man in the chair and a good live, business-like Council who will work heartily together for the good of the town. The present is a turning point in the history of Medicine Hat—it is the "parting of the ways." We might almost say "the hour of destiny" has struck and the townspeople must be moving to take advantage of the opportunities offered. At such a juncture the man who is to be head of town must be selected with care, and the requirements are, a man with plenty of backbone, and one possessing both initiative and executive ability. If the people elect any one to be Mayor or any one to be a councillor who will devote his best energies to saving a few mills on the dollar in taxation, they will make a fatal mistake. The town is now in a position to go forward and if the going forward cost us as taxpayers a little we should not hesitate. With a revenue from the gas wells yielding at present about $700 to $800 per month, with the prospect of a constant increase, the town can well afford to take up the questions which have to be grappled with, and which have to be brought to an issue in the immediate future if we wish to take our proper place as one of the leading towns of the West.

A "platform" has been drawn up by the combined wisdom of several prominent ratepayers, and candidates for the Mayoralty and Council are asked to initiate and support as follows:—

1. Extending sidewalks.
2. Improving of roadways and street sprinkling.
3. Building of suitable Town Hall.
4. Engagement of qualified engineer as Public Works Commissioner.
5. Placing the waterworks on a paying basis and computing the cost of fuel on basis of coal.
6. Proper systems of book-keeping for Town accounts and the adequate payment of Town Clerk so that he may give the whole of his time to Town business.
7. Sewerage system.
8. Granolithic sidewalks.

At the Opera House.

Tom Marks and his excellent company of players opened in Medicine Hat to a crowded house. This is the company's first appearance in the city and to say they made a hit is putting it mildly. This is the best company that has yet played a weeks engagement in our opera house. The play last night was "The Irish Boarder" an Irish comedy drama with a story that pleased the large crowd present. The company remain the balance of the week. On Saturday afternoon "The Little Minister" will be given. To night "Jerry the Tramp"; Thursday night, the beautiful Irish drama "The Rose of Kerry" will be produced, when no doubt the house will be crowded.

IMPORTANT MOVE BY THE BOARD OF TRADE.

It appears that at the time we were printing the criticism of the Board of Trade which appeared in our last issue the Board were actively engaged in getting up a meeting. The meeting was held on Monday but, through no press notices having been sent out, there were no reporters present. In another column, however, we present an epitome of what was done at the gathering, and we heartily congratulate the Board upon the activity and business-like ability which characterised the meeting. The matters taken up are of paramount interest to this locality. The importance of the railway question cannot be overestimated and for a town of 3000 inhabitants doing the business Medicine Hat is doing we should certainly have much better public buildings than we have. It is in a measure disgraceful that councillors, and others who have business with them, should be compelled to sit for hours in the stuffy little hole which bears the title of Council Chamber, and a new post-office and traffic bridge are urgent necessities. The Board of Trade are taking all these matters up vigorously and we shall certainly be only too pleased togive them all the support we possibly can.

FAT STOCK SHOWS.

In another column will be found an article announcing that the Territorial department of Agriculture is arranging to hold a number of live stock judging schools in the Territories through the coming winter. The announcement is made the more interesting on account of the statement that a small fat stock show will be held in conjunction with each. This is a step in the right direction and we fully agree with the Commissioner of Agriculture that the time has arrived to start Fat Stock shows in the West.

OUR LADY OF THE SNOWS.

There seems to be a chance for Kipling to change the locale of his poem "Our Lady of the Snows". The term would appear to be more applicable to the British Isles than to Canada, at present, for while we in the west have seen no sign of winter snows, news comes from London, England, of great snowstorms. Many places and villages are said to be isolated and everywhere in the north railway communication is delayed. There are instances of funerals being snowbound between the house and the cemetery and children haying to be dug out of drifts between their houses and the schools.

It has not snowed much even in Eastern Canada up to this date, the 25th. Nov., while here in the Northwest Territories we have had one long unbroken run of splendid fall weather.

ANOTHER STOCKYARD STRIKE PROBABLE.

The stock yard strike is unfortunately about to be repeated. At the time of writing news is published that the cattle butchers employed in the large houses at the Chicago stock yards decided on Tuesday last to strike when called upon to do so by the officials o the Union.

HORSE BREEDING IN CANADA.

Lord Strathcona presided last week at a meeting of the Colonial Institute at which Mr. W. S. Sparks, the well known horse judge, read a paper on the wealth of Canada as an agricultural country and said he was convinced that when Canada got rid of the Percheron blood and paid less attention to trotting, by which he doubtless meant the American trotting horse style, Canada will become one of the foremost horse-breeding countries of the world. He expressed surprise that the British Government have no remount depot in Canada, but had no doubt but that it would soon consider the matter.

DROP EMBARGO AND TALK REMOUNTS.

One thing which we Western Canadians should do is to stop talking about getting the cattle embargo removed and talk remounts instead. We are not at all likely to get the British government to remove the embargo and we need not feel sore about it. The embargo is a blessing in disguise for Canada, so let it alone, But let us urge the British government to establish an army remount depot here.

MUNICIPAL.

The nominations for the offices of Mayor and Town Councillors will take place next Monday and on the following evening a ratepayers meeting will be held when, we presume, the Mayor and retiring members will give an account of their stewardship, and an opportunity will be afforded new candidates to express their views upon the questions before the town.

THE "DEADLY PARALLEL."

In their last issue the News trotted out their article of Nov. 10th. and placed alongside it some of the "planks" of our municipal platform with the object of shewing certain similarities. At the same time they conveniently suppressed some very important "planks" which they called "minor" matters.

It is a matter of common knowledge in the town that the subject of public improvements has been everlastingly discussed in the Times for months past (and we haven't nearly exhausted the subject), and it is puerile for the News to make the statement they made last week. The News has done little to further public improvements for a long time past, if ever, but now on the eve lof a municipal election, they come out in a burst of local patriotism of the long drawn-out order.

There is one thing the News find it hard to realise and that is that they are no longer the "only pebble on the beach," It is a hard pill to swallow, no doubt. but medicine has to be taken even if the patient makes a wry face over it.

The News must hold a poor opinion of the intelligence of the people of this town to ask them to believe that the following is a "minor" matter.

Plank 11. The adoption of a system of book-keeping by which the accounts of each department of public works will be kept separately.

This is a matter which the News has never, to our knowledge, touched upon. We leave it to a discriminating public to say if that is a "minor" matter.

Plank 12 dealt with the necessity for a modern post office building and a traffic bridge over the river. Again we leave it to the public to say if those are "minor" matters.

The News talks of "abuse and excuse". It is easy, when the argument gets too strong, to shout "abuse." The News was the aggressor and when they got their desserts they whimpered like a whipped schoolboy.

As to "excuse" there was none, and none was necessary.

PEOPLE IN GLASS HOUSES, ETC

We don't wish to weary our readers but we want to point this out. On the 1st. Aug. Mr. Alexander representing the Western Immigration Association met the Mayor and Council here. Both local papers were represented. The Times report of that meeting was published on the 2nd. August. The News copied that report, word for word, in their issue of the 4th. of August.

We had no particular objection to this, and made no reference to it, but under present circumstances we think we are justified in calling attention to it.

We cannot spare the space to re-print the reports in "deadly parallel," but we shall be pleased to show both papers to anyone interested.

We made no comment upon it, but the circumstance proves the old adage: "People in glass houses shouldn't throw stones."

Note and Comment

By OBSERVER

The Hospital Board have asked the Council to provide an isolation hospital for the town. The request is not an unreasonable one, as it is generally held to be the duty of municipalities to provide for the proper preservation of the public health. An isolation hospital is a necessity and there isn't much doubt but what the Town Council will do the right thing in the matter.

* * * *

The Hospital is doing a great work and, so far, they have dealt with cases of an infectious nature, but now find they cannot continue to do so with the means at their command. The only thing to be done, therefore, is for the Council to step in and relieve the Board of Directors of what would be an unfair burden upon the hospital. The Council and Board will doubtless reach a satisfactory arrangement and safeguard the public interest both from a monetary and a health point of view.

* * * *

Some people are asking when the prizes won at the last agricultural show are to be paid.

* * * *

Is the number "two" Mr. Walter Scott's lucky number or what? In a ballot taken at a certain school here Mr. Scott won by two. At the Dominion Election Mr. Scotts majority here was two. At the election held last Thursday for a Mock Parliament the liberals won by 2. They were "two too" many for the tories each time.

* * * *

A philospher once remarked: Once I was young but now I am old, and I have never seen a girl who went back on her mother that ever came to be worth a one-eyed button to her husband. It is the law of God. It is not exactly in the Bible, but it is written largely and lawfully on the lives of many misfit homes. If any one of you chaps ever run across a girl with her face full of roses, who says to you when you come to the door, "I cannot go for thirty minutes for the dishes are not washed," you just wait for that girl. Sit right down on the door step and wait for her, for fear some other fellow will come along and carry her off, and then you lose an angel. Wait for her and stick to her like a burr to a mule's tail.

"OLIVETTE."

Farewell Visit of the Beggar Prince Opera Company.

On Wednesday evening, November 30, Audran's masterpiece "Olivette" is to be presented. This is the opera that made Lillian Russell famous in the role of "Olivette," and it gives dainty Irene Palmer excellent scope for her talents. In fact, each of the all-star cast of the company will shine. The music is light and catchy, and it is brim full of comedy.

BOARD OF TRADE.

A general meeting of the Board of Trade was held on Monday evening in the Assiniboia Hotel. Present: D. Milne, President; W. T. Finlay, M.L.A., L. B. Cochran, Dr. Smyth, O. W. Kealy, C. S. Pingle, F. L. Crawford, W. Cousins, T. Tweed, J. H. Collier, E. J. Fewings, C. R. Mitchell, secretary.

On the motion of Dr. Smyth, seconded by Mr. Kealy, it was resolved that the President, Mr. Finlay and Mr. Tweed be appointed a committee to draft a resolution in reference to getting the Grand Trunk Pacific to come into Medicine Hat, and forward the same to Mr. Walter Scott, M.P., and ask him to bring it to the notice of the G.T.P.

Messrs. W. Cousins, E. J. Fewings, and O. W. Kealy were appointed a committee to meet a committee which the Town Council will be asked to appoint, to meet Mr. Walter Scott, and to consult as to the best means of urging the Dominion Government to build a traffic bridge over the Saskatchewan river at Medicine Hat.

On the motion of Mr. Findlay, seconded by Dr. Smyth, the secretary was asked to write Commissioner Perry, R.N.W.M.P., urging that additional police be stationed at Medicine Hat, particularly to control the north country

A motion by Mr. Wm. Cousins, seconded by Mr. Fewings, was carried that the Secretary write the woolen mills company asking what prospect there was of the woolen mill being started, and stating that the Board of Trade are willing to recommend to the Council that the mill be furnished with gas free of cost.

OBITUARY.

It is our painful duty to record the death of Mrs. Gordon, wife of Mr. Andrew Gordon, the well-known rancher of this town, which occurred on the night of the 20th inst. Mrs. Gordon had been in failing health for some time, but her death on the date named came as a painful shock to her many friends here. The funeral took place on Wednesday afternoon, and was attended by most of the leading residents of the town, and many country friends of the family. The Rev. J. M. Harrison officiated both in the Methodist Church, which was filled to the doors, and at the Public Cemetery, where the interment took place. Messrs. Moore & Moore had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Everyone With Sore Throat

Should know how quickly Nerviline cures. "I can recommend Nerviline very highly for sore throat," writes Mr. R. McKenzie of St. George. "I once had a very sore throat and my chest was full of cold and soreness. Every cough hurt me. I cured myself quickly by rubbing my chest and throat vigorously with Nerviline and using it also as a gargle. I believe Nerviline to be the best general remedy for emergent sickness that one can get. We have used it for twenty years in our house." Price 25c.

MOCK PARLIAMENT.

The Century Club are to be congratulated upon the happy thought which suggested the getting up of a "Mock Parliament," which culminated in a big gathering last Thursday evening in the basement of the Methodist Church. The occasion was the opening of the club and reading room, and it may be here mentioned that the club have arranged exceedingly comfortable quarters. They will have the use of a couple of the classrooms every day (with the exception of one hour per night for two nights), the rooms are well heated and lighted, and supplied with most of the leading newspapers and magazines. The young men connected with it are noted for hard work and enthusiam in any good cause in which they believe, and their belief in this is evidenced by their enthusiastic labors to make the club a success.

As already stated the opening took place last Thursday evening, and an election, "Liberals v. Conservatives," was held.

Mrs. Souch opened the proceedings with a pianoforte selection.

Mr. Nelson Spencer, President of the Club, took the platform, and explained the object of the Club, and emphasised the fact that it was undenominational. It was held in the Methodist Church, because that was the most convenient place, but it was by no means a methodist movement. It was open to all.

The Rev. J. M. Harrison was then elected chairman for the evening, and was accompanied to the platform by the six speakers who represented well known politicians on both sides of the Dominion House.

After some introductory remarks, the the Chairman announced the list of speakers, and stated that five minutes would be allowed each. The speakers were as follows, and addressed the meeting in the order named:

Hon. R. L. Borden (Mr. R. Dunn.)
Hon. Mr. Fielding (Mr. G. P. Sanderson.)
Mr. E. B. Osler (Mr. B. F. Souch.)
Hon. Clifford Sifton (Mr. E. W. Moore.)
Hon. Geo. Foster (Mr. Nelson Spencer.)
Sir Wilfred Laurier (Mr. J. H. Binns.)

All the speakers did remarkably well, upholding the honour of their party with spirit and effect, displaying forensic ability of no mean order. The Demosthenes of the party was perhaps the Hon. Clifford Sifton, but he was closely run by the Hon. G. W. Foster, whose persistence, as well as his declamatory powers are worthy of special mention.

The audience, which was a large one, had a splendid evening's entertainment, and applauded the speakers with much impartiality.

A ballot was then taken, Mr. Strathy being the Returning Officer, with the result that the Liberals were returned by a majority of two. The numbers were—

Liberals -	54
Conservatives -	52
Majority -	2

Spoiled ballots 5.

Premier Laurier then announced that he could promise the country another five years of prosperity.

The members of the Club put up a nice lunch, and after the singing of "God save the King," everybody went away well pleased.

Catarrh Is Certainly Curable.

In fact it is the most curable disease if fragrant healing Catarrhozone is used. No matter how long you suffered with catarrh you can be perfectly cured by inhaling the antiseptic vapor of Catarrhozone, which strikes at the foundation of the trouble and establishes such a healthy condition in the system that catarrhal germs can't exist. "I suffered from catarrh of the nose and throat for years," writes S. H. Downie of Plattville. "My nostrils were always stuffed up and I had a most disagreeable hacking cough. Catarrhozone cured me completely." Catarrhozone never fails. Two months treatment $1.00; trial size 25c.

CUSTER SCOUT'S SUDDEN END.

A message from Touchwood, N.W.T., dated Nov. 22, says:—John Colton, a rancher residing near Kutawa, was accidently killed last night. He had been out shooting, and on his return laid his gun on the table. His eldest daughter, not knowing it was loaded, picked it up, when it slipped from her hands, and striking a chair was discharged, the contents entering her father's back, killing him instantly. Mr. Colton, who was formerly one of General Custer's scouts, came to Kutawa two years ago from near Sioux City, Wyoming. He leaves a widow and four children.

An Old Story Re-told.

A few days ago we came across a volume containing the story of the Springhill Colliery explosion, a disaster which sent a terrible thrill throughout the continent. The Springhill mines are situated in Nova Scotia, and the explosion occurred on the 21st February, 1891. The story of the calamity was written by R. A. H. Morrow, and was published at St. John's N.B.

"No event in the history of Canada startled the nation and touched the hearts of all classes more than the terrible calamity at Springhill Collieries. By this dreadful catastrophe 125 brave miners lost their lives, leaving destitute 235 orphans, widows and widowed mothers to mourn their bereavement." (Author's preface.)

The book is of thrilling interest and contains many narratives of personal bravery on the part of survivors and rescuers, and from these we take the story of the heroic conduct of Dan Robertson, now a resident of Medicine Hat, and well known to hundreds of our readers. The story, which is accompanied by a portrait of "Dannie," is as follows:—

"Little Dannie Robertson, who is justly called the boy hero of the disaster was driving a rake of empty boxes into the level on the west side. He was sitting on front of the foremost box, when, in a moment, without the slighest warning, he was struck by the terrific blast of fierce flame, and knocked backwards into the box. His light was put out, and his horse "Jennie," which he drove, was killed instantly. After lying in the box for a few minutes in a state of bewilderment, he was brought to a true sense of his perilous situation by crashing of timbers and the roof-falls around him. On springing from the box he discovered that his clothes were on fire, his horse dead, and he alone in the awful darkness, and the roof of the mine falling round him.

Under such circumstances, with heroic effort he threw off his burning coat and vest, and, with hands and arms painfully burned, he started to find his way out of the pit. But he had only gone a short distance when he heard the piteous cries of little Farris, the trapper, whose life was saved by dodging under his seat, coming from a distance, and rushing to the place, and groping around in the dark, found the victim almost frightened to death. By this time Robertson's hands were so painful with the burns that he was almost delirious and could not take hold of the boy to assist him out, but with unfailing courage he sat down, telling the lad to get on his back, which he did, and supporting him in position as best he could ran with his precious burden until he gained the bottom of the slope, and leaving the lad at this place of safety, he inquired after the safety of his brother John, and was about to return into the level to search for him, when some of the rescue parties caught him, placed him in a box with other wounded, and and had him taken to the pit head without delay, where his brother was awaiting him. On their way home, little Dannie requested the man who took him home on a sled that he be allowed to walk into the house alone, so that his mother might not be alarmed. As the heroism of this brave boy is, perhaps, unparalled in history, an effort should be made at once to reward his bravery in some suitable way."

The subject of the above now resides with his parents, and the rest of the family, in Medicine Hat, and is a conductor on the C.P.R.

FAT STOCK SHOWS FOR THE TERRITORIES.

The Territorial Department of Agriculture is arranging to hold a number of live stock judging schools throughout the Territories during the coming winter, concluding the series with two or more large meetings at central points—one in the West and one in the East—probably at Calgary and Regina. In order to make these two large meetings more complete, and to provide a wide range of animals for use in demonstration lessons, it has been decided to hold a fat stock show in connection with each of them. The idea is to start them in a small way and allow them to expand from year to year as circumstances permit. It is not the Department's intention at these winter shows to duplicate the prizes offered at summer fairs, on the contrary the prizes will be limited to fat stock, the object being to encourage winter fattening. The full classification and exact amount of prize money to be offered has not been finally decided upon as yet, but for the imformation of those who have put up stock to fatten, or may yet do so, it may be stated that there will be classes for the following:—

Fat Steer, three years old and over.
Fat Steer, two years old and under three.
Fat Steer, one year old and under two
Fat Heifer, three years and over.
Fat Heifer, two years old and under three.
Fat Heifer, one year old and under two.
Fat Cow.

In all these classes a first prize of at least $25 will be offered, with suitable succeeding ones receiving out to fourth and fifth places.

In swine equally substantial prizes will be offered for:

Best pen of three Farrows, suitable for bacon purposes, and to weigh between 180 and 220 lbs.

Best pen of three Sows, suitable for bacon purposes, and to weigh between 180 and 220 lbs.

In order to put all feeders on an equal footing it is the intention to have all animals collected at a nominal rate, on much the same plan as bulls are taken to the annual bull sale at Calgary. Thus it would not cost the man who is at the farthest point from the place where the show is held any more to ship his animal or animals than one close by.

The fundamental idea underlying this work is educational, and in order that every opportunity may be offered those who attend to learn, ample opportunity will be provided, the seats will be arranged in amphitheatre form so that all can see the judging and the animals while illustrated lectures are being given.

Definite dates for the shows have not been fixed, but the show for Eastern Assiniboia will likely be held the third or fourth week of March, while that for Alberta may be a little later.

If the date is not too late a show of live poultry could be combined with it, also a fair for seed grain.

The Commissioner of Agriculture invites the loyal co-operation of all interested in Territorial agriculture to make this show a great success. The meetings to be held at the same time will be addressed by leading experts in various lines, and they should be the very best of the year. Fuller particulars will be issued at a later date.

The Happy Home.

Happiness must be founded on health. Where there is ill-health there will surely be unhappiness. The happiness of many a home has received its downfall at the table, spread with rich and dainty foods. The first symptoms of disease of the stomach are ignored as being disagreeable but not dangerous. Presently dyspepsia or some other form of disease fastens on the stomach.

At any stage Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. But the cure is quicker if the "Discovery" is used in the earlier stages of disease. If you have any symptoms of diseased stomach use "Golden Medical Discovery" and be cured.

"I feel that I would be doing an injustice to you if I did not send you a statement of my case," writes Mrs. David W. Geice, of Hamburg, Franklin Co., Miss. "I had liver complaint and indigestion. Everything that I ate disagreed with me. I suffered all the time with swimming in my head; heart beat too fast; my feet and hands were cold all the time. Did not sleep well at all. Was able to get about but very little. I commenced to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets' in May, 1897, and by December I could begin to get about very well. Have been doing my work ever since. Feel better than I have for several years."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Mrs. W. Cousins, Sunnyholme was hostess at a charming tea last Wednesday in honor of her daughter. A dainty tea table was presided over by Mesdames Crawford and Fewings assisted by Misses Krauss, Garland, McLean and Nesbitt.

Mr. J. G. Waldock was hitching up his horse to start plowing his garden one day last week, when the high wind that was blowing blew a large sheet of paper close to the horse's head. The animal made a dash, carrying away a whole lot of the fence, and ran down the lane, where he got rid of the plow, and finally getting entangled in the whiffletrees, fell on Fourth Avenue, where he was secured. He got some nasty cuts.

Blizzard at Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 28.—After the most beautiful fall of years, a change came last night. A fierce blizzard is raging in the city and province.

W.C.T.U. CORNER.

[CONDUCTED BY A MEMBER.]

It will surely be a help to all temperance thinking people to know that the Empress of Germany is very much interested in total abstinence.

The Sunday School Times has a most interesting piece printed about the temperance conference at Bermen. One of Emperor Williams favorite officers is trying the effects of total abstinence on his men. The soldier who abstains is altogether the best man he can, accomplish more can march better and is a better soldier, for it is noted that strong drink tires and only increases thirst. The minister of education thinks all pupils should have a part in the overcoming this pernicious evil of drunkeness. The Imperial health officer at Berlin is sending out literature showing the sad consequence of spending your money for drink which ruins your life.

There is also a most noted effort on all railroads to have every man strictly temperance if people would only acknowledge they aught to sincerely thank the officals for such strict rules. For men who have their minds clear and bodies in good health are capable of the very best work and it is certainly a good effort on the mens part for it takes pluck and courage to keep temperate with all the temptation the men meet on every hand.

November 1904 authorized service of the said summons and garnishee summons on you by the insertion of this notice in one issue of "The Times" a newspaper published weekly in the town of Medicine Hat, N.W.T.

AND FURTHER TAKE NOTICE that you are required to appear to the said summons and garnishee summons within 20 days after the insertion of the said notice in manner aforesaid (inclusive of the day of such insertion) and that in default of your so doing the plaintiff may proceed therein and Judgment may be given in your absence.

FIRE BRIGADE BALL.

The Ball given on Friday last in the Opera House, under the auspices of the Fire Brigade, was a huge success in every sense of the word. The attendance was good, testifying to the esteem in which our excellent brigade is held by the town. The "boys" had decorated the hall very prettily indeed. Bunting was freely used on the walls and festooned between the pillars, while Japanese lantern and other artistic accessories were used with good effect. The platform bore very distinct marks of the decorator's skill, being beautifully draped and hung with garlands, Japanese lanterns, and minature flags galore. The whole presented a fairylike appearance, and when the dances were in full swing the scene, viewed from the platform was one to delight the scenses and made more than one onlooker feel like rushing home to don the regulation "swallow-tail," and join the festive throng "tripping the light fantastic toe." There are people who see harm in dancing and others who want to know "what's in it anyway." Well, we hold that more harmful things than dancing are countenanced by many who condemn the "mystic, mazy waltz," and as to "what's in it," why, apart from the physical exercise, it is the most delightful sensation mortal can enjoy. It gives suppleness to the figure, grace to the movement, and exhilerates as harmlessly as the proverbial cup "that cheers" but never inebriates.

In the words of the dictionary it is "an amusement in which the movements of the persons are regulated by art having figures, and in accordance with music." The older writers sometimes used the word dance ironically. For instance:

Of remedies of love she knew perchance,
For of that art she couth the olde dance.
Chaucer.

But we are digressing, and must "to our story." As we have said, it was a delightful dance, and everybody enjoyed themselves. The music was good; it was the "Leonard brand," which we all know to be the best on the market. The programme was carried through with zest, the only break being at the "witching hour," when a dainty luncheon was provided by the young men amid abundant signs that dancing gives an edge to the appetite.

There appeared to be a pretty even balance between the sexes in point of numbers, and this is always a desideratum, as no dance can be quite a success if "wallflowers" are numerous. The ladies dresses were alarming and—bewildering. To attempt to describe them in detail would be too much and we could not do so without making comparisons, which are always invidious. Suffice it, therefore, that they were very tasty and very becoming.

The Fire Brigade ball of 1904 has gone into history, and it was a mighty big success.

FLOCKING INTO CANADA.

Major Allinson Edwards, United States Consul-General, who returned last week from a visit to his home at Fargo, North Dakota, said in an interview:—"The proper way to describe the manner in which the people of North Dakota are coming over into western Canada is to say they are coming over in droves. Among the people there did not seem to be any thought of there being a boundary line at all. It is simply a question," added the major, "of there not being any more land in North Dakota and the surrounding States and the people are flocking to Canada to get good farms. Naturally the number that will come over will increase all the time, and I may say the people you are getting are the best people in the west. They are well supplied with money and are well acquainted with the conditions under which they will have to work."

HAULTAIN FOR NATIONAL LEADER.

The Toronto Saturday Night has aroused much interest in Territorial matters by the following allusion to Premier Haultain:

"The Conservatives of our Canadian West are talking of having a convention and oddly enough it is said that a lower tariff will be favored by Manitoba, while autonomy will be the chief demand, of the Northwest Territories—both planks being timber temporarily abandoned by dominant Liberalism. It is to be hoped that this convention will be held and that its deliberations may include the putting forward of Premier Haultain of the Territories as leader of the Conservative party of Canada. His achievments in the Northwest have been overlooked. By long odds he is the best politician and administrator in the Conservative party, having no rival in any other province nor in federal affairs.

Man's Most Critical Age.

Very often the vital resources are small at forty-two, but if not then, between fifty-seven and sixty-two years of age there is a strange slowing down and loss vitality. It is important that this transient period of decay should be checked; strength must be imparted to the tired brain, the weakened nerves must be fortified. The wise man will use Ferrozone whose potency is particularly applicable to these critical periods. Ferrozone quickens the whole being, imparts vigor and power, pushes back the onset of senility in a very manifest way. It's because Ferrozone gives strength, vitality and vigor that it is useful to old men. Try it. Price 50c.

"Olivette" Wednesday, November 30.

Burt Pearson left recently for B.C. points, and is now in Kaslo.

Mr. F. Fatt, our popular postmaster, has installed a National Cash Register in the Post Office.

D. T. Flavin and James Douglas returned last week from a ten day trip through Montana, Wyoming etc.

For the imformation of those who answered the advt. "A business chance" which appeared in the Times a few weeks ago, we beg to state that Mr. F. J. Weir has not yet arrived, and the replies are being held for him.

Mr. R. A. Darker, of Calgary, manager for the Canadian Life Assurance in the North West Territories was in town on Saturday to see Mr. Waldock the local manager on company business.

Betrothal Customs.

The Scandinavian bridegroom presents to his betrothed a prayer book and many other gifts, which usually include a goose. She in turn gives him, especially in Sweden, a shirt, and this he invariably wears on his wedding day. Afterward he puts it away, and under no circumstances will he wear it again while alive. But he wears it in his grave, and there are Swedes who earnestly believe not only in the resurrection of the body, but in the veritable resurrection of the betrothal shirts of such husbands as have never broken any of their marriage vows. The Swedish widower must destroy on the eve of his second marriage the bridal shirt which his first wife gave him.

To Boil Water Without a Kettle.

"My wife and I," says a traveling man, "were once in a hotel where we couldn't get any boiling water. After we had discussed the situation my wife asked me if I had an envelope in my satchel. I got one out, when she told me to fill it with water and hold it over the gas jet. I hesitated, but finally did it and expected to see the envelope blaze up every minute. But it didn't blaze. The envelope took on a little soot, but that was all. The water boiled in time, and the envelope was as good as ever when the experiment was at an end. I don't know the chemistry of the process, but try it yourself and see if it will not work."

The Oriental Amethyst.

The oriental amethyst is really a violet colored sapphire, which is an exceedingly rare gem and of brilliant luster. It is regarded as a sacred stone, and it is used to ornament the cross and the pastoral ring of Catholic bishops. The ancients often used the amethyst for cutting figures both in relief and intaglio, and there is in the national library of France a delicately wrought profile of Mæcenas, a Roman statesman of Octavius' time, engraved on amethyst by Dioscorides, one of the four celebrated engravers mentioned by Pliny.

Caught the Students.

There was formerly a barber in Harvard square who caught the university custom with this classic appeal which some friendly patron suggested:

Siste, viator,
Submitte collum tonsori
Et abi alter Adonis.

"Traveler, stay, submit your neck to the barber and depart a second Adonis."

Businesslike.

"Some people," said the caller with a slight sneer, "seem to think that signing checks is the most important thing in life."

"I know it," rejoined Senator Sorghum, "and it's a mistake, my boy; a sad mistake. Getting the money in bank in the first place is what counts."

A Bath at Tiflis.

To take a bath at Tiflis is to court a wonderful experience. Abundant springs of water, strongly impregnated with sulphureted hydrogen, supply the building, and in its vaulted chambers, far below the street, there is no sound but the splash of the fountain and the rolling echo of one's own voice. Henry Norman gives a description of the masseur who presides over the bath and makes its most eccentric feature.

"He is a Persian, who speaks but a word or two of Russian. His head is shaved, a rag is twisted round his waist, and his feet are dyed orange.

"First he rubs you, and then suddenly, as you lie face downward on the marble slab, he is upon your back, his feet dug into your spine, his hands grasping your shoulders, to increase the pressure. Slowly, with skillful appreciation of every muscle, his feet grind up and down your back. They encircle your neck. They are on your head.

"Then he vaults lightly off, and in a moment from a linen bag filled with soap he has squeezed clouds of perfumed bubbles, and you are hidden in them from head to foot as completely as if you had fallen into a snowdrift. You are not absolutely bruised, but you are clean."

Sweetness That Never Palls.

During a sleepless night the Vizier Mujjeduddin Kumija dispatched his slave, Bedruddin Ejas, to bring him sweets. The slave procured a copper kettle heaped with many kinds of fruits and sweets, and Mujjeduddin began to eat.

"You relish them, my master?" asked the slave.

The vizier shrugged his shoulders. "These fruits are sweet—for the moment," he said, "but show me a fruit the sweetness of which will endure even unto the judgment day."

"Such fruits there are, my master," cried the slave and hastened toward the Mesched Husa, where he awoke the starving orphans in the house of Allwin and led them forth and into the room of his master. Overjoyed, the famished children devoured the fruits.

"Look, oh, my master," said the slave. Here you see fruits the sweetness of which endures unto the judgment day."

Agreed on One Point.

"But I am so unworthy, darling," he murmured as he held the dear girl's hand in his.

"Oh, George," she sighed, "if you and papa agreed on every other point as you do on that how happy we could be!"

Superstitious.

"What! Did you let the examinations go by again, Carl?"

"I'll tell you, father. On the way to the college I met an old woman, and then I turned back again."—Fliegende Blatter.

Shortly before one o'clock on Saturday morning an alarm was sent in that there was a fire on North Ottawa St. The alarm proved to be correct the fire having occurred in a large new frame house just being completed by Mr. M. C. Sackrider for Mr. Lalonde. The work on this house, it may be stated has been rushed as the owner intended to move in on the 11th. of this month and one can well imagine the annoyance and inconvenience which the fire will occasion. How the fire occurred is not known as by the time it was discovered it had a good hold on the north-west corner of the building but, those who first saw it observed that only the verandah appeared to be on fire. It was discovered by Mr. J. McDermid who gave the alarm.

The fire-brigade were quickly out. It was a long haul but the boys soon got the hose playing on the flames and in a remarkably short time the fire was put completely out. It was an exceedingly cold night, a touch of winter, a snowfall and hard frost, having struck the district on Thursday, and we think the brigade deserve to be highly complimented upon their smart work.

We are indebted to Dr. Calder for the following interesting letter upon the subject.

When the C.P.R. whistle blew this morning for the fire I happened to be standing by the window in my room in my house on the hill overlooking the eastern end of the town. On account of the elevation I could see the fire very distinctly.

Whistle blew at	12.52½
On looking out of the window I saw the flames bursting through the front of the building	12.53
Fire bell rang	12.54½
Heard fire brigade rushing down Main Street	12.56¼
Flame bursting through the roof along the ridge, the front of the house enveloped in flame	12.56½
Water struck flames	1.01
All flame had disappeared	1.03
No fire visible from my place	1.05

The whole show lasted 12¼ minutes. This I consider pretty quick work considering the time of night and the extreme cold. I send you the time of each event thinking you would like to know.

STRONG, SOUND AND PROGRESSIVE IN THE WEST.

Like extreme poverty, extreme prosperity certainly corrupts the character of any man or any family, or any community, or any nation says the Post. The poorest specimens of the human race are at the equator and at the poles—where life is too easy and where life is too hard. In the hopeless idleness of the slums and the reckless idleness of the millionaires' quarter you find the same indifference to the fundamentals of orderly and progressive society. Whether you make a man rich with responsibility or deprive him of the hope of a steady or comfortable living, you produce the same result—you destroy his usefulness to society, his possibility of leading a sane and contented life. Where all the grown people have to work every day at some occupation that is consistent with self-respect, that forbids idleness, that makes the appetite good and the sleep sound, and that gives an increasing and reasonably certain return for labour—there you have a social organization which is strong and sound and progressive. There and nowhere else. That very place is here in Western Canada—the soundest, strongest and most progressive spot "out of doors."

EDUCATION OF BLIND CHILDREN

The attention of the Department of Education was recently called to the fact that there are a few blind children in the Territories, who are growing up without the advantage of an education. At the last session of the Legislative Assembly the matter was discussed and it was decided to place a sum in the estimates to defray the expenses of educating these children if satisfactory arrangements could be made with some institution. The Department now announces that such arrangements have been made with the Ontario authorities who have agreed to admit to the Institution to the Blind at Brantford our blind children. Parents and friends of these children who are interested in their education should notify the authorities at Regina in case they wish to have them enter the Brantford school.

CANADIAN GRAIN RATES.

The following article is reproduced from Farm Stock & Home, one of the ablest and most careful agricultural papers of the United States, published at Minneapolis.

QUESTION.

"A few of us farmers are thinking of going to the Canadian Northwest to settle, but we are told that if we get far from water transportation that rail rates will eat up the profits on wheat and other grains, since the rates are so much higher there than on our roads in the States. They say the Canadian Pacific, having no competition, can do as it pleases in charging, and is pleased to get very high rates as compared with ours, and they are high enough, the Lord knows."

Some N.D. Farmers.

ANSWER.

"The Canadian Pacific is no more monopolistic than our roads. Half a dozen constitute a monopoly as well as one, and a monopoly is what the various lines penetrating our North-West have ever maintained, especially as to local rates. But a few figures will answer your question.

The grain rates per 100 pounds from Winnipeg to Port Arthur, the nearest port, 431 miles, is 10 cents. This includes storage and insurance charges. A rate sheet of the Great Northern road lying before us shows us that it charges that much for a 140 mile haul. From Brandon to Port Arthur, 564 miles, the rate is 13 cents. The G.N. charges the same from Barnesville to Minneapolis, 218 miles, and for a 523 mile haul it charges 18 cents, from Minot to Minneapolis. The C.P.R. charge from Moose Jaw, 824 miles, is 18 cents, while the G.N. charge is 25 cents from Williston, 644 miles. The C.P.R. rate from Edmonton, the centre of a great wheat growing district is 28 cents, and the distance is 1493 miles. Many more comparisons could be given, but these are typical of all, and they apply to all of our North-western roads as well as to the Great Northern.

It requires no argument to convince one that our roads can afford to transport grain cheaper than the C.P.R. can, because they run through more thickly-settled regions, creating immensely more traffic each way.

It is not pleasant to give information of this kind, because it makes one feel it is encouraging the migration of our people to alien lands, but the Lord knows that this journal is not responsible for the situation, and maybe it will be well in the long run for the people to see who are, or what is responsible for at least one inducement to many to leave a country that they are supposed to rule and become the citizens of a kingdom."

Note and Comment

BY OBSERVER

The Saskatchewan is lower than it has been for some years, and many people on horseback have lately forded it both above and below the railway bridge.

* * * *

About ten days ago during the dry dusty spell a gang of men were put on the streets to shovel the dust into heaps. The real estate was afterwards carted away. Now, if we had a good sprinkler, all that shovelling and carting might have been avoided. The cost of this work would have paid the expenses of a street sprinkler for several days.

* * * *

It may not be amiss to suggest that if this operation is to be repeated, the men should be supplied with the proper implements. Brushes and scrapers would be more suitable tools that the little garden shovels they were handling Perhaps the road committee will make a note of this.

* * * *

Some people are blaming the Times for the fall of snow on Thursday. You see the Times "blew off" last week about the lovely weather we have had for weeks, aye, months, past. It should be mentioned that the change was good for business, and then we are pretty sure to have a beautiful chinook to take the snow all away. It would be hard to beat the Medicine Hat climate.

* * * *

When the new traffic bridge is built some nice residental sites will be opened up on the other side of the Saskatchewan. The building of that bridge should be kept constantly before the Dominion Government. "Continual dropping wearcth away a stone," and the Council and board of Trade should be urged to keep on agitating for the bridge.

* * * *

The interest in the Town Council elections is undoubted, and there is every prospect of a progressive Council for next year. It is a good augury for the future of the Hat.

* * * *

Some of the Fire Brigade may be likened to the British officers before the battle of Waterloo. That memorable night Wellington's officers were dancing at a ball at Brussels when the summons came, and some of our boys of the fire brigade were dancing at a party last Friday night when the call came that a fire was raging. Like the British officers they gallantly went forth and won the fight.

Important Ranching Case.

SPENCER BROS. VS. THE KING.

The Court of Exchequer convened on Thursday morning in the Court House Medicine Hat, when the case of Spencer Bros. vs. the King was commenced.

This was an action arising out of the seizure by the customs department of 587 head of cattle, the property of Spencer Bros., on which $3000 was deposited and forfeited. The suppliants now sought to obtain the return of that amount.

The case was heard before Judge Burbridge, of the Exchequer Court of Canada, Ottawa, the counsel engaged being:

For the suppliants (viz. Spencer Bros.) Messrs Philp & Kilgour, Barristers, Brandon:

For the Respondent (The King); C. R. Mitchell, Medicine Hat, and T. C. Johnstone K. C., Regina.

W. C. Harris acted as official shorthand writer to the court.

John Spencer, examined by Mr. Philp said:—I am one of the suppliants. Our present ranch is on Milk river. We went there in 1899 and obtained a lease from the Canadian Government of five townships. Prior to that time we were ranching in Montana, about 150 miles from the boundary. I ranged cattle there under brand J7 on left hip and thigh. I owned a ranch in Montana and own it now. I leased it a year ago last July. I came to Canada because the range conditions were poor in Montana. Sheep came in and eat all the grass. I could winter them but there was no summer feed. When we came to Canada, we sold 1000 head of beef and fetched our breeding stock over to Canada. Our American cattle were at that time running at large scattered 150 miles north and south and 150 miles east and west. They took a long time to gather up in the round up. Other American cattle, thousands and tens of thousands were running at large also. The range was better up north in the Sweet Grass hills for cattle. These hills about 40 or fifty miles long extending 12 to 20 miles north and south and about five miles from the boundary there is good pasture and water springs. Montana is all open range. The cattle drifted back and fore at will over the international boundary, as there is no fence, Canadian cattle went into Montana and American cattle came over here. I never heard the customs officers making objections to this. At the round ups the cattle would be got back. I have known this to be the case since 1896. I never heard of any customs officers along the line for the purpose of stopping the natural drift of cattle. Since 1900 I believe my cattle with others have drifted back and fore. I have had a man on this side to drive my cattle back. The conditions were such that we could not gather all our cattle when we moved to Canada. An entry was made on the 25th April 1900. Those cattle were taken from the J7 ranch and driven north and entered. I gave instructions to a man named Rice, Mr. Strong and two or three other men to take the cattle north to the Sweet Grass Hills, cut out all the calves or previous years calves, take the cows and calves to boundary, find Mr. Taylor at the boundary and have them entered, I don't know anything further than that about them. I did not accompany the cattle. The instructions were, I think, given to a young man named Nelson. In reference to the entry of April 20th, 1900, I think it was Nelson attended to that. None of our cattle were brought in to our knowledge by anybody without being properly entered. We never had in our possession or harbored any American cattle in Canada bearing an American brand only. When they came across the border they were branded with our Canadian brand. I was present on our Canadian ranch in the spring of 1902. The first intimation I had of any seizure was a notice not to disturb, handle, or move any cattle. That was in 1902 I think. That was at the time of the year we generally rounded up. The round up was about to go out. During the time the customs round up went out we did not interfere in any way. As I did not think we could get a fair deal with the men who were to round up I went to Ottawa and saw the Commissioner of Customs and Mr. McDougall and asked them to get a man who would be impartial to decide the ages of the cattle about to be seized or were seized. He suggested Captain Young, and I objected. I asked him to wire someone at Calgary to go down and see the matter straightened up. I said send any man who is a square man and will give us a good show, as cattle men like others have trouble among themselves. I had good reason to believe that some were hostile because we had taken a lease near the hue, their cattle were drifting in and we were trying to keep them out. They objected to our men working with them on the round-up. They did not brand our calves. An objection was laid against us in the fall of 1901 on the American side they tried to have them seized but after an inquiry it was decided in our favor. The information was laid, to the best of my knowledge, by Harris and Brown, two men who run cattle to the south of us. When I came back from Ottawa, I found the cattle entered. I gave a cheque to Mr. Bourinot for $10,000. The inspector of customs at Calgary had not to my knowledge made any examination. I did not see the cattle that had been seized. Our cattle are generally a cross of Herefords, they have a larger horn than the cattle of this country and on good pasture larger than usual. I could not tell the age of animal from horseback. We have to throw the animals and look at their teeth if there is a dispute. 224 calves were under 6 months, and 330 were over 6 and under 12 months. The government inspector unless he examined them would have to put it approximately. Even under six months we look at the teeth.

Mr. Johnston—Perhaps they would not have any teeth.

Witness—Yes, they would have their milk teeth. The ages given are, I take it, approximate.

The witness was examined as to the details of several entries of cattle, and proceeding, said that at the round-up of 1902 the customs seized steers, cows and calves, and scheduled their supposed ages. Witness did not believe they could, with the means at their command, state the ages of the cattle. The only means he knew of was to throw each one and examine the teeth. I was dissatisfied and protested. We had moved all our interest in here, paid large sums of money, and they picked upon us while there were hundreds of other American cattle drifted across the line at the same time that they singled us out for seizure. I have seen hundreds but never heard of any other seizure. This round-up could not round up ours without gathering in lots of the others. The cattle were scattered promiscuously over a distance of 70 miles east and west, and 20 miles north and south. These 587 head of cattle were not on our leasehold when gathered, but were found at large. In 1901 we had no representative on the American round-up, and our cattle would naturally drift to Canada. In June and in the fall of 1901 we brand ed the calves and turned them adrift, and we had no other round up again before the seizure. So it is not unnatural that the Custom's round-up should have found some American cattle, as there was no way to prevent it.

In the course of a long cross examination by Mr. Johnson, witness said we have been ranching 30 years. In 1899, the year we got the lease from the Dominion Government we did not have many cattle. I don't know how many that we represented that we had. I do not remember. I don't know how many we had on the Montana ranch. We might have had 1,500 or 2,000. I don't think I had 2,500. All were branded with my own brand J 7. My brother came into partnership with me in 1890. I don't know how many cattle he had. He might have had 2000. I couldn't tell if we had 4,000 head of cattle between us, but the man on the range would know more than I did. I only know of the three entries. In April and December, 1900, and April, 1901. I don't know where they were entered, but I gave instruction for them to be taken to Mr. Taylor. I gave instructions to John Rice to take the yearlings and calves. We made entry on 1230 head. I don't know how many more we had south of the line.

Mr. Johnston directed his examination so as to suggest that cows and calves were driven into Canada together, the calves entered, then the cows would be taken back, and turned adrift, when they might be expected to drift back into Canada after their calves.

The witness stated that the calves had been previously weaned. There was a higher duty on the older animals than on the calves. He did not know how many cattle they had at Milk River. They knew what they bought, but did not count them.

The court then adjourned. At the afternoon and evening sittings the evidence of Samuel Spencer was taken and also that of William Allen Taylor who holds an interest in the Spencers ranch, Arthur Strong, Nicholas Kunzi, and William Patterson, when the Court adjourned until Friday morning.

On the Court assembling on Friday morning John Nelson, John D. McLaughlin, Frank Saxon, Fred Gray, (N.S., R.N.W.M.P.), William Shaune Logkin, (Sergt. R.N.W.M.P.), Walter Buchvale, and James D. McGregor, were examined and the case for the Suppliants was closed.

The case for the Respondent was then commenced the first witness being John C. Bourinot, an officer of the Canadian Customs. Mr. Bourinot, as such officer, came out to the West in May 1902, for the purpose of investigating the charges preferred against Spencer Brothers. He proceeded to Lethbridge where he met Captain Deane, of the R.N.W.M. Police, and a round up was got together and proceeded to the range where they rounded up cattle bearing the brands of John and Samuel Spencer and of the Spencer Brothers. They drove something like 2000 head of cattle about 70 miles. Finally they counted out 1412 and afterwards cut out some strays found they held 1284 head of cattle all ages bearing the Spencers brand. Of these they cut out all under three years old and the final result was that they cut out 587, three years old and over, which they held, turning the others over to Mr. Taylor. Mr. Taylor raised objections on the grounds that many of the 587 were under three years but finally said he was satisfied and accepted the cattle, putting up the duty claimed and giving a receipt for the cattle. In the bunch of 587 cattle were found 135 bearing the American brand only.

At the afternoon sitting, William P. Turner, William Shaw Henry, William S. Playfair, Captain Deane, Peter Innes, Roy F. Clary, Arthur Hobbes were also examined, after which the Court again adjourned.

At the evening sitting, George Voice and John Henry G. Bray were called and several witnesses previously examined were recalled.

The question of appointing a Commissioner to take the evidence of two witnesses in Montana, who did not appear, came before the Court and counsel for respondent filed affidavits for such commissioner to be appointed either to sit here or to proceed to Montana to take the evidence there.

Counsel for suppliants not acceding the Judge refused the applications and the arguments were fixed for Saturday morning.

The Court then adjourned.

Subsequently, on the joint application of counsel for both parties, and by and with their consent, an enlargement of the case was granted and it was ordered that Mr. W. C. Harris be appointed commissioner for taking the evidence viva voce of John Rice and Mathew Shannon as witnesses in this case.

The arguments, therefore were not taken on Saturday and both the Judge and visiting counsel left by the train for the east on that morning.

A JAPANESE GARDEN.

Follow This Recipe and You Will Have One Complete.

The classical garden, like a sonnet, is governed by special laws of harmony and rhythm. It must have its five hills, its ten trees and its fourteen stones. You can get along without the hills, and you can get along without the trees, but you cannot get along without stones. Indeed the perfect type of the flat garden is nothing but an archipelago of rocks in a sea of white pebbles. The stones must be the foundation; the rest are mere accessories. Speaking stones are what is wahted—stones that suggest moods and passions—for the Japanese recognize that there are sermons in stones. Each stone has its name and relative place in the composition. There is the guardian stone in the center and opposite it the belieview stone. Across the cascade is the moonshade stone and so on.

The hills unmask each other by rule. The principal hill has its two foothills, its spur hills, its distant peak, seen through a valley, and the low hill that must stand on the opposite side of the lake.

As there are a principal stone and a principal hill, so must there be a "principal tree," the shojin boku, around which the Tree of Perfection, the Tree of Evil, the Tree of the Setting Sun, the Tree of Science and the Tree of Solitude bow their lesser heads.

These are the essentials. Now, add one pond, one island, two stone lanterns, three bridges and mix thoroughly, garnish with lotus and serve with goldfish and mandarin duck. There is a recipe for a Japanese garden.—William Verbeck in Country Life.

A SMALL LIBRARY.

The Principle of Selection on Which It Should Be Based.

I think that a limit of three books will usually allow a very fair representation of a novelist. For instance, Thackeray is very fairly represented by "Vanity Fair," "Henry Esmond" and "Pendennis" and Dickens by "Pickwick," "David Copperfield" and "Martin Chuzzlewit." Writer Scott would not suffer by one choosing "Ivanhoe," "The Bride of Lammermoor" and "The Heart of Midlothian." "Tom Jones" would suffice for Fielding and "Pride and Prejudice" for Jane Austen, "The Mill on the Floss" for George Eliot and "The Ordeal of Richard Feverel" for George Meredith. Taking only the great outstanding figures, Tolstoi need only be present with "Anna Karenina" and "War and Peace" and Emile Zola with, say, "Drink" and "The Dream." "The Three Musketeers" and "The Count of Monte-Christo" would suffice for Alexandre Dumas and "Les Miserables" and "Notre Dame de Paris" for Victor Hugo. It is harder to say of the vast mountain range of Balzac on what particular peaks our choice should fall, but probably here again the most popular books will prove the most typical—"Le Pere Goriot," "Eugenie Grandet" and "The Ass' Skin."

I am not, it must be understood, making a list of books "without which," as the booksellers say, "no gentleman's library is complete." I am only taking a few standard authors for the purpose of illustrating a principle of selection which must perforce operate in a small library. If our library does not or cannot contain the best books, it must certainly contain some of them, and, however idiosyncratic of its owner, it must bear the stamp of a general distinction.—Richard Le Gallienne in Success.

Foretells Death by Sense of Smell.

There's an old superstition that a howling dog in front of the house of an ill person portends death. One prominent physician believes absolutely in it. This physician has a wonderfully acute sense of smell. Frequently, he says, he can foretell the coming of death within forty-eight hours of a patient's demise. Within two days of death, he says, a peculiar earthy odor becomes noticeable about a person about to die. He tells of one case where he became aware of the peculiar odor while talking to an apparently healthy man. That night the man dropped dead of heart disease.

The physician is far from attributing the peculiar manifestation to other than physiological reasons. His own sense of smell is abnormally acute.

Hotel Bills in England.

The author of "Portugal Old and New" finds fault with English hotel keepers for using a printed form of bill on which the plain requirements of a simple traveler are lost amid a multitude of items. The result is that when a guest pays for a day's and a night's lodging he is positively almost ashamed at finding due registry of his having wanted neither liquors nor stationery nor warm baths nor douche baths nor shower baths nor pots of jam nor the hotel hairdresser and is apt to reflect what a poor shuffling impostor of a guest he is to have had so few requirements.

Slightly Different.

"Dat were a very excitin' jackpot I won las' night on a bluff," said Mr. Erastus Pinkley as he tilted his cigar and dropped his hat over his eye.

"Did you raise the opener?" asked Mr. James Colliflower.

"No, sah; I opened a razor."

She Helped.

"Did she help you to propose?"

"Welk rather! She asked how many boxes of candy would pay for an engagement ring."—Detroit Free Press.

Fourteen Years in Prison for Killing Alex. Reid.

Edmonton, Dec. 4.—Mariowski was adjudged guilty of manslaughter in the Leduc murder trial. The other two were acquitted. He admitted firing the fatal shot, but said he aimed in the air, and that the gun was accidentally discharged.

The prisoner was sentenced to fourteen years in the penitentiary.

Alex. Reid, a young business man, was the victim. He was shot during a Hallowe'en prank when, with other companion's he was near a blacksmith's shop owned by the convicted man. Reid had recently gone to Leduc to take charge of the business of the Great West Saddlery Company from Edmonton. He was popular and well-known. The three men charged with responsibility for his death are foreigners.

How Health Is Gained.

The story of a great deal of the unhappiness of women is a story of lost health. Women wonder how it is that little by little the form loses plumpness, the cheeks grow hollow and sallow, and they feel tired and worn-out all the time. In a large proportion of cases when women are weak, run-down and falling off in flesh and looks, the root of the trouble can be traced to womanly diseases which undermine the general health. The proof of this is that women who have been cured of painful womanly diseases by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription have recovered their general health, gained in flesh and in appearance.

$500 Reward for Women Who Cannot be Cured.

The proprietors and makers of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription now feel fully warranted in offering to pay $500 in legal money of the United States for any case of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb, which they cannot cure. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

"I suffered for three years with ovarian trouble," writes Mrs. Ann Quinn (Treasurer Woman's Athletic Club), of 602 Sycamore St., Milwaukee, Wis. "The treatment I took did not do me a particle of good, until a good neighbor who had been using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription advised me to give it a trial. The next day took my first dose, and it was my first step toward recovery. In nine weeks I was a different woman; my flesh which had been flabby became firm, complexion clear and my eyes bright. It was simply an indication of the great change within from pain and suffering to health and happiness."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate stomach, liver and bowels.

THE HOSPITAL BALL.

Sir,

The committee in charge of the Hospital Ball have been informed of a rumour which alleges that invitations were issued and sent to some of the expected patrons of the ball. It is desirable, for the success of the ball, that what has actually been done in this regard should be as well known as the rumour. The committee arranged to have fifty invitations printed with the idea of sending these to supporters of the Hospital living outside the town. The object being to show such supporters an easy method of further subscribing to the funds of the hospital. Thirty-six of such invitations were sent out a few being sent to some residents of the town who are as frequently in the country as in the town. Apart from these no invitations have been sent out, though the few mentioned are doubtless the foundation of the rumour. It might be mentioned that the invitation in question should have had the signature of the committee and not those of the President and Secretary of the Board. The Committee beg to thank you for the insertion of this letter and much regret that the cause of their having to trouble you should be such as it is. The one desire is to obtain as large an amount of money as possible, taking advantage of the annual offer of Messrs Marshall and of the generous assistance of the ladies. Had any one considered the matter for a moment he (or she) would have readily seen that the limiting of invitations would not gain the one end in view viz:- the raising of funds and would moreover have injured the hospital.

Yours obediently
THE COMMITTEE.

Government May Establish Agricultural Schools and Model Farms In West.

As an outcome of Sir Richard Cartwright's trip to western Canada this fall he became impressed with the desirability of establishing an agricultural school and model farms throughout Manitoba and the Territories as a means of spreading a knowledge of scientific agriculture on the prairies.

The minister of trade and commerce urges strongly that unless the farmers devote their time to something more than wheat raising alone, their lands will soon be exhausted as has already happened with many of the farmers to the south of the international border.

Grumbles of the Editor Man.

There is still much popular ignorance regarding the duties of an editor, says the Calgary Herald, notwithstanding the large amount of matter that has but recently been printed regarding newspaper offices and the personalities of the men who make their papers what they are. According to an Oklahoma editor, "all a fellow has to do to run a newspaper is to be able to write poems, discuss the money and tarriff questions, umpire a baseball game, report a wedding, saw wood, describe a fire so that the readers will shed their wraps, make a dollar do the work of ten, shine at a dance, measure calico, abuse the liquor habit, test whisky, subscribe to charity, go without meals, attack free silver, defend bimetallism, sneer at snobbery, wear diamonds, invent advertisements, overlook scandal, appraise babies, delight pumpkin raisers, minister to the afflicted, heal the disgruntled, fight to the finish, set type, mould opinions, sweep the office, speak at prayer meetings, stand in with everything and everybody."

Catarrh of The Head

Is very common, but awfully dangerous because it causes deafness and leads to consumption. Cure is as certain to follow the use of Catarrhozone as day is to follow night. You simply breathe the fragrant healing Catarrhozone which spreads through nasal passages, throat and lungs, driving out every vestige of catarrh. "I was cured of chronic catarrh of the nose and throat" writes Earnest M. Wilkinson of Laurenceton "after many years of misery by Catarrhozone which is a splendid remedy to keep the air passage from mucous. Catarrhozone relieved [illegible] been permanent; trial size 25c.

BUT HE WANTED IT.

It is recorded of Cornelius Vanderbilt that before he died he said to a friend—"I don't see what good it does me—all this money that you say is mine. I can't eat it, I can't spend it; in fact, I never saw it, and never had it in my hands for a moment. I dress no better than my private secretary, and cannot eat as much as my coachman. I live in a big servant's boarding house, am bothered to death by beggars, have dyspepsia, cannot drink champagne, and most of my money is in the hands of others who use it mainly for their own benefit."

A KISS.

A kiss is a peculiar proposition. Of no use to one, yet absolute bliss to two. The small boy gets it for nothing, the young man has to steal it, and the old man has to buy it. The baby's right, the lover's privilege, the hypocrite's mask. To a young girl, faith, to a married woman, hope, to an old maid charity.

Qualms, nausea, longing for food yet dreading to eat. You may have the real thing, but Ferrozone will cure you like it did S. D. Huntingdon of Hamilton, who says "I was frequently attacked with acute dyspepsia that I thought must be heart disease. I used Ferrozone and got relief. I kept on using Ferrozone and was cured. Mr. Thos. Tweed appeared before the council on behalf of the Medicine Hat Woolen Mill Co., and asked the Council to reconsider their decision to levy taxes on the mill this year. He had received a letter from the secretary of the company who said he expected the company would start work next year. They had hoped to have the mill running this fall but, as everybody knew, the woolen industry in the whole country had received a bad set-back, and they had been quite unable to do so. The company were aware they had not carried out their agreement with the town but it was due to circumstances over which they had no control, and they hoped the council would, therefore, remit the taxes.

The Mayor said that as he understood it, it was not now in the power of the council to remit the taxes. The company had agreed to do certain things within a specified time and they had not done so, and the council had no alternative but to tax the property. He spoke subject to the opinion of the town solicitor.

Mr. Mitchell said he thought the Mayor was correct, but there was another clause in the ordinance which might enable the Council to remit the taxes. If the application had been made before the assessment was made it would have been comparatively easy for the council to do so, but as it stood another by-law might be necessary. The clause he referred to said the Council could remit from taxes within the current year.

The Clerk thought the application should be made before the assessment.

Mr. Mitchell thought it implied that.

The Mayor asked how it affected the ten years exemption.

Mr. Mitchell—Well, it is at an end. They will have to get a by-law through now again to get fresh exemption.

Mr. Tweed—Well if you will talk it over and can do anything we shall be much obliged to you.

The Mayor—We are afraid we cannot do anything.

Mr. Tweed said that down east they did not hold companies so tight to agreements in a matter of this sort.

Mr. Mitchell said some ratepayers might start an action.

Mr. Tweed said in that case the company indemnify the town. There were prospects that the mill would start next year, but as no doubt the Council knew, the woolen industry had been put into bad shape and over 26 mills shut down this year. Perhaps after the house met the commission on the tariffs would grant some relief to the industry.

Mr. Tweed then retired.

A letter was read from Dr. C. E. Symth, resigning his position as Health Officer.

On the motion of Coun. Drinnan, seconded by Coun. Penhale, the resignation was accepted.

A letter was read from Mr. J. S. Dennis acknowledging the council's letter conveying the resolution passed last meeting.

A letter was read from G. A. Stinson stating that they hoped to dispose of the debentures within the specified time.

A letter was read from the publishers of "The World of Today" asking the council to advertise Medicine Hat district in their special western Canadian edition.

The foregoing were ordered to be filed.

The report of returning officer Blatchford giving results of election of Mayor, Councillors and School Trustees was read an ordered to be filed.

Coun. Drinnan reported for the Board of works committee that they had given Fleming and Johnston permission to erect a shed outside the rink to cover a boiler which could not be got into rink. The street is not used as yet so they gave permission.

The council endorsed the action of the committee.

The council next considered Mr. C. Cove's claim of $24 for four months rent of the Chapman's house.

It was stated that the council had paid the rent at first, but when $30 a month was granted to the family it was thought that would include the rent.

After a short conversation it was decided to pay the rent also.

Remainder of report crowded out.

ABOUT CHRISTMAS THINGS

It takes a lot of people to make a world, and it takes a whole lot of nice things to make a confectionery store. That is, a store where you can get pretty well all you want in that line at christmas time. Cook and Forster's store fills the bill in this respect, for you can be supplied with all you want for yourself and your friends. Is it nuts or figs, that you want? you can choose from Brazil nuts, walnuts, filberts, almonds, pecans, and even the humble pea-nut. You will find Webbs, Stuart and Paulin Chambers chocolates in great variety, put up in all fancy styles backed up with a great assortment of candies. Then the Santa Claus stockings. In our young days Santa expected us to provide the stockings. Now the children may wake up in the morning and find good old Father Christmas has brought pretty stockings as well as the beautiful toys and sweets. Then again, look at the bon bon crackers, the thing that delights the old, the young and middle aged. Why we might preach a sermon about them alone, they are so varied and so prettily put up, some so cleverly hidden in bouquets of roses as the Russian masked batteries at Port Arthur. Then again, it is the "Staff of Life" that you want, you will find fine samples of bread—12 varieties to choose from, in loaves, cream puffs, lemon, molasses, biscuits, etc. Then there are heaps of oranges, bananas, malaga grapes, lemons, apples, cranberries, jap oranges, all fresh, with a large supply of canned goods, including pine-apple, salmon, peaches, tomatoes, raspberries, strawberries, corn and beans. There is also a supply of cabbage, celery, and Lettuce, all fresh and crisp. Last, but not least, this is the store to get the cake if you want to get married. At present there is a five-story cake on the counter, ordered for a wedding to-morrow. The moral of all this is: call at Cook and Forster's, the best place in town for christmas goods.

TUESDAY. DECEMBER 20th. 1904

A MERRY XMAS.

We wish all our readers and all our advertisers, and all those who are going to be readers and advertisers A Merry Christmas.

There are several things we thought of writing up this week. We want to keep the matter of a drainage system for the town right in front of the people, we want to urge the provision of proper public buildings, and several other matters of equal importance, but we realise that it is Christmas time and no one will find fault if we push all these mundane matters aside and devote our editorial page to a talk about Christmas. "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy" The present is a season when good will should prevail; a season when no discordant notes should be struck and we, therefore push aside the ordinary topics and just give ourselves up to a contemplation of Christmas and all its jollities.

A Merry Christmas and a prosperous New Year! How pleasant is the old phrase to the ear! Let us pass it on to our neighbour. Let the world see that we have still left in us that modicum of kindly feeling which contributes so much to a better spirit in all the relationships of life. Let us all be optimists. There is need of optimism in Medicine Hat, there is need of optimism in Canada, to-day. Let us not talk of anything which might not have turned out quite so well as we expected. Let us look only on the bright side of life and be thankful for all the blessings which we enjoy. It is a terrible mistake to be looking on the black side of things. Let us look at the "silver lining" which the darkest cloud has ever around it, let us look beyond its dreary darkness and believe that the sun is still shining as it has ever done since the creation, right under the blackest cloud, and let us believe that the cloud will pass and the glorious sunshine be revealed to us again in all its fulness. Christmas is a time for gladness and rejoicing and no quarter of the earth has so much reason for giving of its best in thankfulness and praise as this Canada of ours.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS.

The good old Saxon word "merry" has by the custom of years, become indissolubly associated with the Christmas spirit. In their origin the celebrations which began on December 25th were due to rejoicing that the time of the shortening days was passed and the sun had again begun its northward course. We can perhaps hardly imagine with what anxiety primitive men in Northern latitudes regarded the decreasing power of the light and the growing power of darkness and cold. To their minds, unfamiliar with the abstractions called laws, these changes in the relative duration and power of the day time were conceived as struggles between two beings for mastery. Upon the success of the power of light and heat depended another harvest and the whole future of the race. It was no wonder then that the logs of the forest were fired to increase the volume of light and heat and help in the issue of the struggle. When after the weeks of gradually shortening daylight the process, about the 21st. of the month was arrested and the sun stood still, the critical period was reached. Then with the 25th the sun began to move northward and the days gradually to lengthen, and all the fear and anxiety of the past was turned at once into unbounded rejoicing. Light had won; the promise of a new spring time and a new harvest was already present. From the earliest times men and women gave gifts to each other on this occasion, but always was most attention given to the children. There was an appropriateness in singling out for special regard the children who represented the new life of the race, at the time when they celebrated the new life of the year. The incorporation in later years of the celebration of the birth of Christ into the ancient pagan festival, and the transformation of that festival from a purely natural into a largely religious event, yet left with the day, in a still deeper and wider sense, its sacredness to children. The natural light as the material source of life on this planet, the new life of the race in the children and the new moral and spiritual light and life that came into the world with Christ, all these ideas unite to make Christmas the time of unique rejoicing.

To Cure Fever Chills

And such complaints as "Shivers" and ague we recommend Nerviline very highly. Twenty drops of Nerviline taken in hot water with a little sugar three times daily not only stops the chills but knocks out the disease completely. Nerviline has a direct action on fever chills and removes the conditions causing them. In stomach and bowel troubles Nerviline never fails. It's pleasant to the taste, quick to relieve and always cures permanently. Get a 25c. bottle to-day.

THE FARMER'S CHRISTMAS.

Among the best things of 1904, we welcome the annual Christmas number of the weekly "Farmer's Advocate and Home Magazine," Winnipeg. Like the West itself, it grows better, and it grows better fast. The progressive Western is justly proud of so able an ally in his work and enterprise. To have produced so magnificent a number as a regular weekly issue, is a splendid tribute to the capabilities of the editors and business manager. Lovers of the horse and children will be sure to like the tasteful cover. The articles discussing the great problems of practiful interest to Western farmers and homemakers, as well as those of a more entertaining character, are both able and graphic, and the illustations are superb. To properly appreciate the number it must be seen and read, and like the regular issues, must go a long way to making the farmer's home happy and his business prosperous.

MIND OF MAID

"My, but she is ugly!" Mrs. Evans said, her accent distinctly one of relief. Bronson smiled covertly as he answered: "Don't be too sure of that. She has eyes."

"Eyes! Bah!" The ejaculation was almost a snort. Estelle heard it, although there was the breadth of the room between her and the irate matron. She looked plaintively across at Bronson, who answered her look with the faintest humorous nod. Then he strolled over to her and said in her ear: "It's too easy—quite too easy, Miss Mischief. I simply had to give that good soul a hint of warning."

"Traitor!" Estelle retorted, pretending to hiss the word high tragedy fashion, yet ending with a dimpling laugh. The laugh went far to redeem her face—so far that it set more than one beholder speculating that old Major Gilbert's stranger granddaughter would not really be so bad looking if she knew how to wear her clothes and do her heavy hair, this despite her wretched complexion, for she had a beautiful straight nose and good teeth, to say nothing of her handsome eyes. Her neck must be bad, else why was she swathed up to the ears? Her sleeves also quite swallowed her gloved hands, but her feet were as much in evidence as they well could be, incased in boots at least three sizes large.

With everybody else in party bibs and tuckers, such garmenting made her conspicuous, all the more that the gown she wore was grass green, with a bright pink stock and much dead white braiding. Spangles and beads also lurked amid the braid, so many that there was a color of reason for Estelle's whisper as she looked down at herself.

"Do you know, I feel like the court of King Solomon at the puppet show."

This made Bronson frown. "You'll give yourself away," he said severely. "For heaven's sake don't spoil sport just when it's getting so much better than a play."

"I won't," said Estelle contritely; then in a nervous aside: "When does Adonis come in? Do hurry him along! I shan't be easy until he comes. Suppose, after all, he should be color blind—able to see only gold and greenbacks and old yellow title deeds?"

"Suppose nothing so tragic. I told you in the beginning he was artistic or nothing," Bronson retorted. "Art is, indeed, his weak suit. Otherwise would he be in bonds to Miss Adela Evans?"

"She is so pretty," Estelle said fervently.

Bronson growled: "Yes; regular china baby beauty—blue eyes, pink and white complexion and hair always in the latest mode. Out in the lobby now, lying in wait for—Adonis. They'll be coming in together, the prettiest pair of puppets you ever saw."

"I hope he isn't too good looking," Estelle murmured reflectively.

Bronson scowled.

"You'll find him disgustingly so. Indeed, I've been half afraid all along that when you saw him you'd be sorry"—

"Indeed I shan't," Estelle interrupted cagerly. "How can I be sorry for anything that sets me free from that odious bond?"

Bronson did not answer. A stir about the door drew all eyes. Adonis, otherwise George Gilbert, Estelle's cousin, coheir and fiance, entered with Adela Evans clinging ostentatiously to his arm. She had such a habit of clinging there that the sports of Grasshope had been ready to give odds this last half year that she would ere this have written herself Mrs. George Gilbert but for Grandfather Gilbert's absurd will. This instrument decreed flatly whichever of his two descendants refused to marry the other thereby forfeited all claim to the big Gilbert fortune.

The boy and girl had been brought up half a continent apart. Estelle had come to Grasshope for the first time less than a week before. But tales of her had been rife there the last three years, how willful she was, also how sharp of speech and of temper. As to her looks there had been several opinions. Reed Bronson might have spoken authoritatively, but he chose to be silent. He had met Estelle two summers running at the seashore, and with each meeting he became more indifferent to Grasshope belles and their charms. He had known, first of all, that Estelle was coming to visit her mother's cousins, the Warrens. Mrs. Evans thought her bold for it. She did not need to marry George before she was twenty-two and might therefore well have left it to him to do the seeking.

What George thought about it nobody knew. He smiled down at Adela as they crossed to Estelle. When he got a good look at her his smile became for a breath's space quizzical, but it was kind and wholly cordial as he took both her hands, saying, "I know you all right, young lady—if you would never let me have your picture."

"Somebody's been telling," Estelle said solemnly, although her eyes danced. They had never rested upon a finer fellow than George. He had all the Gilbert look she so worshiped in her father's portrait. Covertly she glanced from him to Bronson. Bronson was big and honest looking and had withal an air of breeding, but still was not to be named beside her unwelcome betrothed. No doubt he had more brains, although as time passed she was forced to admit George carried things off very well indeed. And after supper, when the dancing began, Bronson, the luckless, went into complete eclipse. He hated dancing, as well he might, seeing that he danced so badly. George Gilbert, contrariwise, might have been wing footed, so lightly did he move in such perfect time and tune. Music, indeed, was in the Gilbert blood. Estelle danced, if anything, better. When they waltzed together other couples stopped to see. Indeed they kept on and on and on until they had the whole crowd staring as alone they whirled and wheeled over the waxed floor of the hall.

"Stop, Estelle!" Bronson implored in a loud whisper as the couple whirled past him. George smiled broadly. Estelle, dismayed, put a hand up to her face. As she took it away two pimples and half a dozen freckles came with it. George saw them and quickly guided her out of the light.

"Go wash your face!" he commanded imperatively. "And the next time you want to go masquerading let me help you make up. I know heaps of better disfigurement. Besides, grease paint is fearfully unreliable when one loves dancing as we do."

"I forgot—I ought not to have danced," Estelle said contritely; then with a swift change of mood, "But you wouldn't have known if I had been a little wiser."

"Indeed I would. I went 500 miles last summer just to see you," George half whispered. "So I understood the minute I looked at you tonight. You wanted to disgust me, to make me lose a wife and a fortune. I don't blame you. Women have to fight injustice with their own weapons. Still I wish you hadn't done it. You can say 'No' to me this minute if you like and get back more than all the money you lose by saying it tomorrow"—

"I see. You want to invest in Dresden china," Estelle interrupted audaciously. "So of course I don't want to say it—not now, at least."

"That must be quite as you please," George said, smiling over her head. "You will have to go straight home," he added masterfully. "Changing lovers would be nothing beside the scandal of changing countenances this way in the face of everybody."

"I know it," Estelle said sorrowfully. "Fate is playing me tricks—putting all the trumps in Adela's hands"—

"Not quite. You forget I shall make your excuses and take you and Mrs. Warren home," George said. "Don't keep me waiting either. I'm all impatience to see your real self."

* * * * * * * *

Grasshope had no end of sensations through the next six weeks. The first came when George Gilbert broke the prearranged engagement, the next when it was seen that he was disputing with Reed Bronson for first place in his cousin's regard, and the third and greatest was to find the strange Gilbert girl truly a beauty, with no end of fine feathers and a most enchanting way of wearing them. Adela Evans looked faded and insignificant beside her, although away from her she was easily the prettiest girl in town. But Adela was spiritless these days. She no longer had hopes of catching George. He was eagerly, desperately, in earnest about Estelle, although she had given him back, as in duty bound, rather more than half the money. Reed Bronson was no less earnest, so between them they kept public interest at fever heat.

Estelle was nobly impartial. At first she had thought herself really in love with Bronson. That was what had impelled her to the masquerading. But somehow George's grave, hurt face had made her very much ashamed, although she would have died rather than admit love at first sight. Then his freeing her and settling down to court her anew appealed to something in her of like fiber. Altogether she was hard put to it to decide.

The strain of it all bore hardest on Bronson. His temper, never sweet, became abrupt and uncertain. He was barely civil to other women. George, contrariwise, continued to be a butterfly among the social flowers.

Upon one of those spring days that seem made for love the three rode together through blossomy lanes. Bronson rode but clumsily, so when presently his mount bolted it was all he could do to keep his seat. George, a horseman born, was after the runaway in a minute, caught him and checked him so sharply that the mad creature reared, kicked savagely and at last fell backward, taking the other horse with it in a struggling, plunging heap. That anybody came out of it alive was little short of a miracle. But there was nothing worse for either than a broken arm. As Bronson stood ruefully nursing it he said, looking straight in Estelle's eyes: "You needn't take the trouble to tell me anything. I saw your face as we were going down. You found out whom you loved just then—George."

"Yes, George," Estelle said, flushing like a rose.

A Peculiar Fish.

"There is a species of fish in the Indian ocean which have a very remarkable peculiarity," said a naturalist. "This fish is provided with a short snout, which it uses very much as a sportsman uses a gun. Swimming close beneath the surface of the water, it watches the flies flitting about directly overhead, and having selected one to its fancy suddenly thrusts its head out of the water and with unerring marksmanship discharges several drops of water at its victim. Confused, and with its wings drenched and rendered temporarily useless by the watery projectiles, the insect drops to the surface of the water, where it is immediately gobbled up by its voracious enemy. These fish are said to be able to bring down a fly in this manner from the height of two or three feet."

An Ironing Hint.

When necessary to iron a rough dry garment at once try this method: Dampen, roll tight, wrap in a cloth and then in paper and put into the oven while the irons are heating. Evaporation will cause it to be thoroughly dampened in time, but care must be taken that the oven is not hot enough to burn the goods.

For Firm Flesh.

It is a fortunate thing that the best remedies are the simplest, though women are more likely to refuse these and try those no better and harder to prepare. If one's body is flabby it may be made firm by slapping with a folded towel dipped in cold water.

If you break the gall bag in drawing poultry soak the bird half an hour in cold water in which a little soda has been dissolved, and the bitter taste will disappear.

Two umbrella ribs tied at one end, the other ends ran through a cork to form a fork, make a fine long fork to toast bread on.

TWO QUEENS

By KEITH GORDON

Copyright, 1905, by Keith Gordon

It was apparent that their visit to the art museum had nothing to do with art. It was equally plain that their feeling for each other could not be described as platonic. Bettina, to be sure, affected unconsciousness as she sauntered through the lofty rooms where the marble figures flashed coldly into view, exciting one to a new love of mere flesh and blood, but all the time she knew that to the man at her side she was queen of the world; also it was evident enough from the look of discontent on the man's face that her loyal subject was not altogether happy.

"Your place is right here on a pedestal along with the other statues," was what he was saying to her. "The trouble with you is, Betty, that you won't listen to your heart. I might as well plead with this marble figure!"

The queen, with well feigned reluctance, brought her glance back from the headless "Victory" that seemed forever on the point of flight to the youth at her side, who was glowering at her with an odd mixture of rebellion and adoration in his face.

"Really, Steve," she replied at last, "I'm ashamed of you. It's not my heart that's at fault; it's your purse. You know that perfectly well." And, with her chin at an angle beautifully eloquent of injured innocence, she pretended to study the sculptured figures about her. In reality she watched him—felt him straining at his chains—with an exultant sense of the charm of being queen.

Her words and glance made him savage. It was hard enough to bear her delay in putting their love affair on that practical basis which points like an index finger to matrimony, but so long as it had seemed to him an honest hesitation he had borne it with what grace he could summon.

His lips set in an inflexible line, and without a word his hand closed firmly upon her arm, and with more determination than gentleness he guided her to a bench near by.

"Well?" she questioned when she had settled herself in a corner of the seat and he had squared himself beside her. In truth, though she strove valiantly to conceal it, the queen was a trifle startled.

Her late obedient subject studied her for some moments in silence and with an expression rather too suggestive of flint to be entirely to the queen's taste. Then he spoke, and his words fell as crisply as icicles.

"It is about time that you understood me," he began at last. "You have played with me long enough. What I have to say now is just this: You may take me or leave me, precisely as you choose, but whichever you do must be done at once."

He paused a moment and then elaborated:

"I'm tired of playing the devoted subject, tired of being made to feel that my love is nothing and my lack of wealth everything. I have twelve hundred a year." He paused for a brief moment, conscious of a mad desire to make the matter as bad as possible, then added, "And there is no certainty that I'll ever have more."

Though he would have thrashed cheerfully any man who had dared to make such an assertion about him, to say it to her about himself at this particular moment afforded him a grim satisfaction.

"What I want—what I will have," he continued in a muffled voice without giving her a chance to speak, "is a definite, a final answer!" And then, before the queen had really caught her breath, he finished in a tone nothing short of command, "And I want it within five minutes!"

For one fleeting moment something like pale dismay showed in the girl's face. She had never counted on a moment like this. Then her eyes kindled royally, and a flush of anger overspread her face.

Almost unconsciously she rose, her companion following her example, and her eyes blazed their resentment into the cold determination of his for a full second before she addressed him.

"You may have your answer this moment!" she flung at him in a tone of dangerous clearness. "I only wonder that I could ever have hesitated! It is 'No'—a thousand times 'No!'"

She noticed with a cruel delight the sudden, still whiteness that overspread his face as, with an ironical bow, he turned and walked rapidly away. Then a new feeling suddenly clutched at her heart.

Had she not lately been a queen, with a loyal, faithful subject to whom she had turned an ear quite royally indifferent? Had not a revolution occurred in her small domain and a republic been proclaimed? Could she not understand now the sorrows of a Marie Antoinette or a Eugenie?

And so at last the latest of dethroned queens reached her own door trying to philosophize about the matter as, doubtless, her predecessors had before her. After all, it was for the best. She was poor, and Steve was poor—in possessions. But by some freakish operation of the law of compensation both were endowed with tastes of an unmistakable richness.

"Yes, it's all for the best," she said aloud as she closed the door of her room behind her. "It's all"—

The rest was lost in the pillow, for the ex-queen had thrown herself face downward on the bed and was indulging in the plebeian comfort of a good cry.

For days thereafter such interest as she felt in the dull, gray world was centered in the postman and such messenger boys as appeared from time to time in the street in which she lived.

Not that she repented that ringing "No" that she had given Steven on the day of their quarrel—by no means. Her heart, she told herself, was dead. She could not be poor. She would not! She would marry some good old soul to whom she could render the respect of a daughter—and the bills of a wife. That was all that a girl in her position could do. It was the fault of modern ideas.

It was after she heard about his attentions to the Folsom girl that she wept no more and became markedly indifferent to the coming of the postman. From this time, too, she conscientiously tried to tolerate old Mr. Fullerton and his flowers, the two ever arriving with an alternate regularity that was full of meaning.

She pictured herself as a queen again, and this time with all the outward semblance of one. But, perversely enough, she could not keep Steven Converse out of the scene. If she saw herself rolling down Fifth avenue in the Fullerton vehicle she as instantly evoked the image of Steve doffing his hat with cold politeness, while she nodded with the haughty nonchalance of a great lady.

And so the weeks lengthened into months, and the ex-queen assured herself that she was forgetting.

* * * * * * *

"Not going out, my dear?" protested her mother as she appeared in the hall one gloomy Sunday with mackintosh and umbrella.

"Yes, mother mine. It's a fine day for the art museum. No crowd, you know!"

She had never entered the place since that fateful afternoon, but now she was all a-tremble with eagerness to get there. Some inward barrier of pride had gone down, and she knew that she wanted to visit the scene once more just because there she could feel a little nearer to him.

The turnstile admitted her, with a click, not so much, it seemed to her, into the museum as into the atmosphere of that distant afternoon. Before the "Victory" she stopped for a mournful dedicatory moment. It was here that he had accused her of being no more than a statue herself, and then—then he had gripped her arm and made her sit down and listen.

With a little gulp, she turned away and wandered blindly onward. When the mist cleared from her vision she found herself in the Egyptian room. Great carved figures glared at her with stolid faces, and a ripple of interest stirred within her. With mournful eyes she read the inscriptions beside the mummy cases.

So this brown and moldering bundle had once been a queen! Through the raised lid of the case she could just catch a glimpse of the object now so dried and terrible, but once so splendidly human.

"Poor queen!" she murmured softly, as with her chin resting on her hand she gazed down at the gorgeously ornamented mummy case. "Poor queen!" And before she realized it a tear had splashed down on the glass.

Having been a queen, something of the sadness and futility of it all wrung her spirit. Somehow being rich or poor did not now seem to matter. Being happy seemed the greatest thing.

She was too absorbed in her thoughts to notice a young man who had been making his way nearer and nearer to her in a somewhat furtive manner. Suddenly, as if he could not longer resist the temptation, a few quick steps brought him to her side.

The ex-queen looked up in surprise and then put out both hands impulsively. But the proud, high look of mastery had not yet vanished from his face.

"Did you really mean it?" he demanded.

For an answer she lifted her eyes to his for one brief, full moment. Even queens must learn their lesson. She had had hers.

Outside the steady drip, drip, drip of the rain was only interrupted by the wailing of the wind, and the Egyptian room was very quiet and deserted.

As the newly enthroned queen turned to leave she looked down with a flushed, wistful face at the royal mummy. Then she murmured something softly.

"What's that?" asked her lover. But at her reply he looked slightly mystified.

"There's no use in telling you," she laughed. "Being only a man, you'll never understand, but I was saying goodby to the other queen."

The Mask of a Phrase.

The directness of the appeal in literary expression involves a complexity of revolt against old forms. The writer is more variously tempted than the speaker into indirections. The latter would never call the sun "the orb of day" or by the classic name of "Phoebus." Yet there was a period in English literature which lasted for a long time and is not even now wholly beyond the reach of our recollection when it seemed a breach of dignity for a writer to call anything by its right name. The concrete thing must be relieved of its vulgarity by the mask of a phrase. The horse was "the flier, courser," and all fruits were indiscriminately "Pomona's treasures." Qualities abstract enough in their common names were redeemed from the vice of particularity by personification. The processes of abstraction and generalization in the so called classic age of English literature uprooted all things and set them floating in the air; the mind was not simply a mirror reflecting things, but made composite photographs of the images themselves. Nature was seen as a bundle of these composites.—H. M. Alden in Harper's Magazine.

Parisian Mothers.

"Parisian mothers take their children about with them to a far greater extent than did English parents until quite recently," said an observant woman, "and the result seems to be wholly satisfactory. The little girls grow up as perfect little women of the world and are not plunged into an unknown sea when they come 'out.' Thus they do not have to waste one or two seasons in learning how to enjoy themselves and hold their own in the fashionable swim."

"Oh," said the mate, "she won't mind; her husband never wears trousers, and there is nothing she hates so much as a man who gives himself airs."

I am certain that if I had called upon Mrs. M——, I should have given myself airs. Such is society in the Solomons. When I have nothing better to do, I amuse myself by chopping up little bits of tobacco, and making dusky ladies dive for them. For four sticks of tobacco you may marry into the Royal family here.—Romilly's "Letters from the Western Pacific."

ANGEL CAKE.

How to Make It So That It Will Turn Out Moist and Tender.

A moist and tender angel cake is one of the best things in all the art of cookery. Too many housekeepers make this cake tough, dry and flavorless. An excellent recipe is as follows: Take the whites of nine large eggs. Add to them a pinch of salt and whip them lightly until they are partly stiff, then add half a teaspoonful of cream of tartar and whip them until very stiff. Fold in carefully one and one-fourth cups of granulated sugar that has been sifted three times. Sift one cupful of the best pastry flour seven times (if you want a perfect cake), and fold it into the sugar and whipped eggs lightly. Last of all add a teaspoonful of vanilla. Turn the cake into a large, unbuttered pan. Bake in a moderate oven from thirty-five to fifty minutes. Never open the oven door until you think the cake is done, as it falls very easily. On taking it from the oven turn it upside down in such a way that a current of air will pass under it until it is cold. When cold loosen the cake from the sides of the pan and lift it out. It should be so delicately baked that this will not be difficult. If you intend to ice it cover it with a soft uncooked icing made of powdered sugar, white of egg and a very little vanilla. Angel cake is generally better for being kept a day before serving. If it is a little tough place it in a stone jar and cover with a plate. Let it stand for two or three days in this way and it will become tender.

TOWEL RACK.

One You Can Make to Fit the Corner of the Bathroom.

A useful towel rack for a corner of the bathroom is made from four round sticks, or dowels, three-fourths of an inch in diameter and from twelve to twenty inches long, according to the room or space there may be in the corner to accommodate it. A pine or whitewood stick two inches square is sawed through its length to produce two triangular sticks, which should be about thirty inches long. These will be two inches wide on the sides forming the right angle, and the widest of the three sides is to fit against the wall. With a knife and small plane round off the top and bottom of each stick, and at corresponding spaces bore holes in each stick with a three-fourths of an inch bit to receive the ends of the dowels. No matter what length the dowels are cut, if the holes are bored straight the sides or angle strips will lie flat on the sides of the wall, as shown in the illustration, which is a view looking down upon the rack from a position directly over it. The ends of the dowels should be wet with glue, and a slim nail or screw passed through the stick and into the dowels will give additional strength. All the dowels should be sandpapered smooth and the woodwork given three or four thin coats of enamel paint in white or any desired shade.

A New Danger In Corsets.

Writing to the Lancet, Dr. R. C. Lucas adds a new count to the indictment against the corset—namely, that under certain circumstances it may be responsible for cancer. Three cases have come under the doctor's notice in which cancer in women started at a point where the edge of the corset crosses the edge of the big muscle of the chest. In describing two of them he says: "It occurred on the right side in each case, and in women whose occupations led them to undue use of the right arm, and in consequence to excessive friction of the upper edge of the corset. The friction of the corset at this spot is therefore the cause of a cancerous process developing in this situation, and to express this fact I have given it the name of corset cancer."

For the Kitchen.

A high wooden stool and a small three legged one are of great use in a kitchen. The former is a help to a tired person, who can often do as much when sitting at the kitchen table as when standing. A small stool is useful in many ways. Not only can one rest one's feet on it, but in reaching high shelves one often needs a stool to stand on. It is also convenient as a seat when one stoops down to arrange foods in a refrigerator and as a basket holder when one hangs out or irons clothes.

Arranging Flowers.

To make flowers stand up nicely in a vase get a piece of ordinary wire netting, roll it up into a ball and put it at the bottom of the vase. Stick the stalks into the netting, and the flowers will remain in the position you place them in, yet without the least appearance of stiffness.

Early Rising.

"To be forced to get up early," says a physician, "grinds the soul, curdles the blood, swells the spleen, destroys all good intentions and disturbs all day the mental activities. Criminals are always recruited from the early rising class."—London Chronicle.

A Merger.

"Colonel never resigned, did he?"

"No; he just merged into the office, an' to-this day they can't tell the difference 'twixt him an' the weather boardin'."

CLOTHES MANAGEMENT.

The Plan One Girl Follows to Insure Economical Dressing.

Perhaps my plan to manage my clothes on next to nothing a year may interest you and help some other girls. To begin with, let me tell you how one dress lasted me for three years at an average cost of $4 a year. I bought a soft dark india silk in the spring for a best street dress, for church and to wear now and then when I paid friendly calls. I made it very simply with tucks and a few stitched bands of taffeta, and then I wore with it separate stock collars of imitation Irish crochet lace and a fancy high girdle belt of taffeta. The next year, when the folds had lost their first luster, I covered the worn edges with very narrow black gimp braid, and I used this remodeled dress for a business suit. Of course I had to shorten the skirt. That was the only alteration I made. For my evening dresses I buy each year two new ones, one of lawn and one of silk muslin, using them in the summer for my best dresses, and I easily make them do for two years. I put all my capital into the material and not into extra trimmings, as these are not necessary on a simple dress, the task of trimming them being accomplished by the effective way in which they are put together and the arrangement of the tucks. I spend about $16 for these dresses. This includes the dressmaker's bill. In a case where a girl can make her own dresses it would bring the cost to about $5 for each dress.—Exchange.

WEDDING PRESENTS.

Linen Is Something That Is Always Sure to Be Appreciated.

A writer in the House Beautiful has many sensible things to say on the subject of wedding presents. Every married woman remembers a number of absolutely useless or worse than useless presents sent her by her well meaning friends. One bride recently received no less than eight clocks. Her modest little apartment boasting only six rooms, kitchen included, she had to put away some of them, and this is embarrassing when the donors call. In the articles mentioned it is wisely suggested that some account be taken of the plans of the prospective bride. If she is not going to keep house refrain from sending her cut glass and china. Furniture will be a nuisance in a boarding house. Make the gift a personal one. A bit of old jewelry, a piece of lace, books, etc.; Russian brass jars, candlesticks or a samovar is sure to be appreciated. There are many delightful bits of porcelain to be had. If silver is sent, better let it be knives and forks, for the simple reason that nearly every one else will send spoons. Best of all, choose odd pieces, little pitchers and sugar bowls, tea caddies, strainers, nut and bonbon dishes. Avoid sending pictures unless you know the taste of the recipients. Linen is sure to be appreciated. No bride ever has too much.

BEAUTY DON'TS.

Don't walk five miles one day and stay at home all the next.

Don't shut your bedroom window. Fresh air is necessary for health.

Don't eat your meals quickly. This causes indigestion and a red nose.

Don't wash your face in hot water. This encourages superfluous hair.

Don't read till midnight. One hour's sleep before 12 is worth five afterward.

Don't get in the habit of always smiling. It brings wrinkles round the mouth and eyes.

Don't expect physic and tonics to keep you well if you neglect the laws of health and hygiene.

Don't dry your face in a hurry. A quick, anyhow rub coarsens the skin and injures its beauty.

Don't experiment on your skin with different creams and powders. Find good ones and stick to them.

Children's Noses.

One of the most prominent physicians in town has been giving me a bit of homely advice for the benefit of mothers.

"If children were taught to blow their noses properly," says he, "the work ear specialists have to do would be reduced by half at least. Next to learning how to gargle the knowledge of how to blow the nose without injuring the ears is the most important thing a child can be taught. The violent blowing of the nose when a child has a cold is very likely to strain the drums of the ears and to set up painful troubles which frequently result in permanent deafness. Every child and every grown person, too, for that matter, should be taught to blow one nostril at a time only. In this way the ear drum is not endangered. It isn't an elegant thing to include in the infant curriculum, but the child who learns it will be spared a great deal of pain and will be far less likely to have its hearing impaired."—Washington Post.

Laundry Logic.

There are many substances which may be added to starch to help produce a luster. Among these substances are sugar, salt, borax, spermaceti and paraffin wax. I have found paraffin wax and salt very good. Make the starch in this manner: Mix one tablespoonful of starch with four tablespoonfuls of cold water and pour on this three quarts of boiling water. Boil for twenty minutes, then add one teaspoonful of salt and paraffin wax half the size of a nutmeg. Stir until the wax is dissolved, then cool and strain through cheesecloth. Have the table linen wrung dry and work well in the starch. Pass through the wringer and dry in the sun. When dry make very damp and roll in a damp cloth.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Women and Law.

Mrs. Mary Wood Swift, president of the American Council of Women, says there is one thing that is very important for all women who are left with property to do, and that is to acquire some knowledge of law. There is never a woman left with money that some hawk is not on the watch to get it away from her. Women are stripped of their means every day because of their ignorance of law and business conditions. They have got to realize that practical knowledge is necessary in this day and age.

CARE OF THE DAIRY.

Rules Suggested by the Vermont Dairymen's Association.

Stables should be well ventilated, lighted and drained; should have tight floors, walls and be plainly constructed.

No musty or dirty litter, no strong smelling material and no manure should remain in the stable longer than is absolutely necessary.

Keep only healthy cows. Promptly remove suspected animals. In particular add no cows to the herd unless it be certain that they are free from tuberculosis.

Do not excite the cows or expose them to stress of weather.

Feed a good cow liberally with fresh, palatable feeding stuffs. Do not change these suddenly. Provide water, pure, but not too cold, in abundance.

The milker should be clean and his clothes likewise.

Brush the udder just before milking and wipe with a clean cloth or sponge.

Milk quietly, quickly and thoroughly.

Throw away into the gutter the first few streams from each teat. This milk is very watery, of very little value and is quite apt to injure the remainder of the milk.

Remove the milk promptly from the stable to a clean, dry room where the air is pure and sweet.

Strain the milk through a clean flannel cloth or through two or three thicknesses of cheesecloth.

Aerate and cool the milk as soon as it is strained. The cooler it is the more is souring retarded. If covers are left off the cans, cover with cloths or mosquito netting.

Never mix fresh warm milk with that which has been cooled, nor close a can containing warm milk, nor allow it to freeze.

Wash all dairy utensils daily, thoroughly rinsing in boiling hot water and a little washing soda; scald and drain. Boil strainer cloths daily. After cleaning keep utensils inverted in pure air and sun, if possible, until wanted for use.

Importance of Testing Cows.

The Connecticut Storrs station has tested the cows of thirty-two different herds in the state of Connecticut. It reports that facts brought out by this study strongly emphasize the correctness of the claim that but little profit is derived from a cow that does not produce 5,000 pounds of milk per year, particularly if the milk is sold at the low price of a cent per pound. No stronger argument is needed in favor of the necessity of testing animals and thus learning their exact value and of the selection of dairy cows than is afforded by the above records. The average cost of keeping a cow a year has been variously estimated by experiment stations in different localities at from $30 to $45.

FEED FOR MILK COWS

A Texan dairyman in Farm and Ranch says: We have used these feeds with pleasant results in about the following proportions for a milk herd kept for butter production: Wheat bran, five pounds; cottonseed meal, three pounds; rice polish, three pounds; cotton hulls, twenty-two pounds—this for 1,000 pounds live weight. With feeds given you cannot use cottonseed meal freely without having an excess of protein and oil.

Feeding Cows In Illinois.

H. P. Purviance, who conducts a dairy farm of 100 head of cows in Logan county, Ill., and who makes a profit of $78 per cow a year, feeds the following: All the clover hay is fed during the winter, as much as the cows will eat, in addition to from a gallon to a gallon and a half of corn and cob meal mixed with wheat bran, the latter being one-third. Less bran is fed when the clover is extra good. More bran is used if timothy hay is fed. Less ground is used when on stalk feed.

Meals For Cows.

Corn and cob meal, when fed to cows at the Ohio station, produced more milk than whole corn. The difference, however, was very slight, and, as the percentage of fat in the milk was slightly less from the meal than from the corn, it is a question whether or not this difference should be considered at all. Strong, healthy, vigorous cows, which are not being fed to the limit, can take care of whole corn in good shape, particularly if the ears are of moderate size.—New England Homestead.

Grain Ration For Cows.

A mixture of 100 pounds each of bran, oilmeal and cottonseed meal will give a feed that will analyze 28.2 per cent protein, 31.5 per cent carbohydrates and 5 per cent fat, says H. G. Manchester in Rural New Yorker. The cows will eat up reasonably clean about twenty-five pounds of hay. A fair average would be five pounds of grain per day.

Little Food, Little Milk.

Speaking in a general way, it may be said that the food supplied to the dairy cow is designed to serve two purposes. The first and the one that always does and always must take precedence is the keeping up of the machinery of life. The animal heat must be maintained, and the constant wear and waste of the bones and tissues of the body must be replaced. All this must be done whether any milk is produced or not. If suitable material then remains it will be utilized for the second purpose of the food, which is the production of milk. The man who gives his cows but little food can obtain but little milk from them, simply because they have very little material from which to make it. This rule applies just as fully to the best cow in the country as it does to the poorest one.

Care of the Mouth.

To keep the mouth cleansed and free from injurious acids and bad tastes rinse several times a day with a mouthful or two of baking soda dissolved in water. This should not be a strong solution. A teaspoonful dissolved in a pint of water is the correct proportion. This may be kept in a closed vessel and used as occasion requires. A conscientious use of this excellent cure will not only keep the teeth from decaying so rapidly, but will tend to harden the gums and prevent irritation around defective teeth.

A Young Girl's Trust.

"Once in a Life."

"And now, about Miss — Miss Grey," said Felicia.

"I think a sight of her handwriting would help me." She did not say how, and Sir Terence, who was as unsuspecting as a child, especially with a woman, did not ask.

"Her handwriting?" he said. "Would it? I will ask Bernard to give me something she has written to him, some envelope or unimportant writing."

"You will not let him know, suspect even, you have told me anything?"

"No, no," he said. "Rely upon me."

After he had gone, she threw herself down on the sofa, with her hands tightly strained over her brow. She was going to play a dangerous game—a very dangerous game; and yet the prize was one which she considered well worth the risk.

Bernard Yorke was separated from Nance Grey. If she could still keep them apart, what more probable than that he should turn to her, Felicia, whom he already loved, after a fashion, and who could save him from ruin?

She remained at home that evening, waiting for a specimen of Nance's handwriting. Late at night Robson brought a note from Sir Terence.

She tore it open eagerly. There was no inclosure. Her heart sunk, anh she felt thwarted; but as she read the short note, her spirits rose again.

"I can not give you what you ask," it ran. "Strange as it may seem, Miss Grey has never written to Bernard. He has not a line of hers in his possession. He is very weak and upset, and, I fear, unless we can give him some definite information as to her whereabouts, he will have a relapse. The thought of it fills me with dread. My poor Bernard!

"Yours gratefully,
"TERENCE YORKE."

As Felicia Damerel crushed the note in her hand, her face flushed; and, with a little laugh of satisfaction, she exclaimed:

"I will do it! I will risk it!"

CHAPTER XXIX.

Day followed day, and neither Bernard nor Sir Terence could learn anything of Nance. Bernard recovered his strength, and set about searching for her with a grim persistence.

He could not go to the police, he could not employ a private detective, because he dared not tell them the whole story. He advertised in the daily papers, guardedly, of course; but no response came. He haunted Eden Place, in the vague hope that Nance might be drawn to visit the scene of the birth of their short happiness; but he never met her there.

He was a changed man in appearance and manner; his old light-heartedness had fled. Nance had taken with her all the joy and brightness of life. He and his father lived in Bernard's room, two grave and almost silent men.

If he had not been so absorbed in his own sorrow, he must have noticed Sir Terence's altered appearance and demeanor; but love is selfish, and he thought only of Nance, always of Nance.

One day, indeed, he did say to Sir Terence

"Father, why do you not go back to the Hall? I am quite well now; you can do nothing more for me. Why not go home and get some shooting?"

How could he tell Bernard that the dear old place was up for sale? No; he would wait until Felicia had bought it, and some arrangement had been made. It would be time enough to tell Bernard when the danger was past.

Some days Bernard went down to Long Ditton, for he still kept the rooms, hoping vaguely that Nance might write to Mrs. Johnson, or, perhaps, go and see her. On the day of the sale he was down at Long Ditton, wandering by the river-side, sitting in the garden, or pacing up and down the little sitting-room made sacred to him by the memory of his lost happiness.

He slept that night and the next at the cottage, if to lie awake hour after hour, or to fall into a dreaming dose, in which Nance appeared to him in all her spring-like beauty, can be called sleeping. The whole place was full of her presence—her dresses still hung in the wardrobe; a hundred trifles, a brush and comb on the table, her favorite books, a scrap of lace, the faint perfume of the wood-violet, of which she was fond, reminded him of her at every turn.

It was almost worse for him than if she were actually dead; for when our loved ones die, we know that they are gone from us forever, and that there is nothing left for us but resignation. But Nance was not dead; she was somewhere, perhaps near him. The thought brought the blood to his face. If he could only find her, get her within his arms, speak six words to her, all would be well.

He went back to London, arriving rather late. Sir Terence was sitting by the fire, for the autumn night was chilly.

"Well, Bernard?" he said, in a shaky voice, and with his hand half concealing his face.

"Have you any news for me?" asked Bernard.

Sir Terence started, then recovered himself.

"About—about her?" he asked.

"Yes," said Bernard, as if nothing else could be of any importance.

"No," said Sir Terence. "I—I have been down to the Hall."

His voice shook. Bernard did not notice it.

"Why did you come back?" he said, as he went to the mantel-shelf and took up his letters. "You are getting moped to death here. I am a selfish brute! For God's sake sir, go home and leave me to myself."

Sir Terence rose, putting both hands on Bernard's shoulders, and looked him steadily, sauly in the face.

"I can not go home, Bernie," he said.

Bernard looked at his father with dull surprise.

"Can not go home? Why not?"

"Because I have no home to go to but this. Bernard, the Hall is sold."

Bernard passed his hand over his brow and stared at his father. Had he taken leave of his senses?

"The—Hall—sold!" he exclaimed.

"Yes," said Sir Terence, with the calmness of despair, "the Hall, the land, everything, has gone from us."

Bernard sunk into a chair and continued to stare in amazement.

"Have you no word of reproach for me?" said Sir Terence. "Speak it, Bernard, I deserve anything—the worst you can say. I and my father before me—ay, and his father before him—have robbed you of your birthright."

The tears sprung to his eyes.

"The Hall sold!" said Bernard, almost to himself. It sounded ridiculous, absurd, impossible.

Now he noticed how haggard and worn his father looked; remembered trifling little words and expressions of Sir Terence's, which had seemed to have no significance when they were uttered, but which now were full of meaning.

He got up and leaned over Sir Terence's chair.

"For God's sake, don't cry, sir!" he said. "Reproach! I reproach you! Why, if it is as I think it must be, it is I who have helped to bring this about. I have lived a life of ease and selfishness; I have spent money like water. You have never refused to give me all I have asked for."

"Ah," said Sir Terence, with bitter self-reproach "it has all been my fault! If I had the courage to tell you the truth, the whole truth, things might have been better; but I was weak. I have always hoped that things would take a turn for the better, and, indeed I did not know that matters were so bad. We Yorkes were never men of business, and I had to deal with a man who was as cute as he was hard. Bernard, I'll tell you all about it, now it is too late."

Bernard got the cigars, carefully selected a good one, and put it in his father's hand, mixed a soda and whiskey, and placed it beside the old man.

Sir Terence looked up, his eyes full of tears.

"Why, Bernie," he said, "you ought to curse me, and you treat me like this!"

Bernard actually laughed. It was a sad laugh, but it was a laugh

"I couldn't curse you, sir, if I tried. What you call weakness, I know was just love for me. You say we are ruined, and that everything has gone. All right. At any rate, we are left to each other, and are here together." He let his hand fall on the old man's shoulder. "Besides, compared with this great trouble of mine, even the loss of a fortune, even the dear old home, doesn't seem to count. Forgive me! You needn't tell me to-night unless you like. You look tired."

"Yes," said Sir Terence; "I am tired—I thought I was heart-broken, but, somehow, I'm not. Anyhow, I'm alive, and I've got you, while Stephen Harwood is dead. You never heard his name. He is the man of whom I borrowed money, into whose hands I fell. He is dead."

"Then who has got the Hall?" asked Bernard, with surprise.

"His daughter—a young girl who has inherited all his immense wealth."

"The daughter of a money-lender at Rainford Hall!" said Bernard in a low voice.

But Sir Terence heard him.

"No, Bernard," he said. "In justice, I must say he was not that. He bore me a grudge. I married the woman he loved—your mother—and he plotted to get the Hall. It was his revenge. As for the girl, I know how you picture her—a vulgar parvenue, purse-proud and self-assertive. In common justice, I must tell you she is nothing of the kind."

"You have seen her, then?" said Bernard, with surprise.

"Yes," said Sir Terence, sadly. "I went down to the Hall."

"How could you do it, father!" exclaimed Bernard. "I could not have done so. I could not bear to look upon it again."

"It was hard," said Sir Terence. "But I thought of our people. They have always been like my own children more than tenants; I have always shared their sorrows and their joys. Some of them were behind-hand with their rent, always would be behind-hand. I, like you, thought Miss Harwood would be vulgar and purse-proud, and that she might be hard upon them; so—so I put my pride in my pocket, and forced myself to go down to the old place which we have lost forever. I found a beautiful, lady-like girl."

"Lady-like!" said Bernard.

"Yes, lady-like. I never saw a more refined-looking girl, or, in her way, a more beautiful one. There was something touching about the child, for she was little more." Sir Terence leaned back and gazed at the fire dreamily, and Bernard gazed at him in astonishment. He had expected his father to be full of resentment against this interloper, this girl who had turned them out of their ancestral home. "She seemed almost as sad as I was. She listened to me with more than patience, with respect and gentleness. She promised to be good to the poor people, and I know that she will keep her word, for there was truth in her voice. She has a very sweet voice. Such a sad little voice for so young a girl! I ought to have hated her; and yet, do you know, Bernard, I came away liking and pitying her."

"Pitying her?" said Bernard.

"Yes, pitying her. She looked such a small thing—though, by the way, she is not short, but slim and girlish. She seemed so—so all alone in that great place."

"Is she all alone?" asked Bernard.

"Well, no," replied Sir Terence. "A lady friend, the sister of her father's executor, is living with her, I believe; but she has no father or mother, or relation that I know of, and so one may say she is quite alone. Poor girl!"

"Poor girl!" echoed Bernard, with surprise and a slight bitterness. "Mistress of Rainford Hall, and with no need of money, you say?"

"Yes," said Sir Terence; "her father has left her an immense sum. While I have been spending, he had been making and saving, and it all comes to her."

Bernard sighed.

"It all seems like a dream," he said. "And we are quite ruined, sir. Is there nothing left?"

Sir Terence groaned.

"Only a very little, Bernie," he said. "Just enough to keep us decently. There would not have been so much, but Miss Harwood had to pay a very large sum for the estate—more than I owed."

"Why, how was that?" asked Bernard.

Sir Terence was silent for a moment.

"Well, you see, Bernie," he said, "a friend tried to buy it back for us, and bid very high; but Stephen Harwood had left instructions that the estate should be obtained for his daughter at any cost. You see, he wanted his revenge; he wanted to turn us out, and he has succeeded. The place is hers. Rainford Hall will know the Yorkes no more."

Bernard sighed and puffed at his cigar.

"But who was the friend?" he asked. "It must have been a very dear friend."

"Can you not guess?" asked Sir Terence.

Bernard stared moodily at the fire.

"No," he said at last.

"The friend was Miss Damerel," said Sir Terence in a low voice.

Bernard rose.

"Felicia Damerel?" he said.

"Yes," said Sir Terence, still in a low voice. "She knew of our trouble and she tried to help us, save us. It was not until she learned that Miss Harwood's lawyer was resolved to get the place at any price that she gave up bidding. I think she would have sacrificed her whole fortune, if it had been possible; but it was not."

"Felicia Damerel!" repeated Bernard, almost inaudibly. "Father, what can I say to her, how can I thank her?"

"She nursed you all through your illness; she would have saved the Hall for you. Bernard, she would have laid down her life for you; she loves you. Oh, my boy, if—if—"

Bernard paced the room, deeply agitated.

"It's of no use, father," he said; "it can not be. There is only one woman in the world for me, and I have lost her. Oh, Nance! Nance! Father, while there is hope of recovering her, I could not think of any other woman—I could not! You do not know how I love her. She is part and parcel of my very self. If it were not for Nance, I should have loved Felicia Damerel long ago. At one time I nearly asked her to be my wife; but now, while there is a hope, a faintest hope, of finding Nance, of getting her back, I can not—I can not! But my heart is full of gratitude to Felicia. Next to my Nance, she is closest to my heart."

"So beautiful!" murmured Sir Terence. "A woman any man might be proud of. And she loves you. Here is happiness within reach of your grasp. You have literally but to stretch out your hand, Bernie, and—Well, well, I can understand. I have been young myself. We Yorkes have always been the same; it is never half measures with us. But, oh, the pity of it!"

He got up and left the room.

Bernard sunk into a chair, with a sigh, began to open his letters. A great many of them were invitations, inquiries. He pitched them on the fire.

Presently he came to one, the handwriting of which he did not know. He opened it with dull curiosity.

It contained a single sheet of paper with these words written on it:

"Do not trouble to look for me any longer. I shall never—I can never come back. I am quite happy—at least, I should be, if I could forget the past. And I am learning to do so every day. I wish we had never met. But we have parted now, and I hope we shall never meet again; for it was all a very great mistake. I see that quite plainly now. I am with good friends, and want for nothing. Please do not try to find me. I shall have left England by the time you get this. If ever we should meet again, I shall ask you to treat me as a stranger.

"NANCE GREY."

He stared at the paper, motionless and in silence. As a matter of fact, he could not at first realize its existence His mind refused to grasp it. He examined the handwriting, the pointed and not particularly well-informed letters, with a dull mechanical scrutiny.

Then gradually, the sense of the words grew upon the brain, they forced themselves upon his consciousness. With a low cry, he rose to his full height, holding the letter at arm's-length.

The words rang in his ears, burned somewhere in the back of his brain. He had no need to read them again. he knew every word by heart.

Nance had of her own free will given him up! She had grown tired of him! Yes, it could bear no other meaning. She had grown tired of him! He remembered now, with hideous distinctness, how she had pressed him to leave her, to go to town; how, when he had shown reluctance, and even dislike of going, she had smilingly insisted upon his doing so.

He had always heard of the fickleness of women; but that Nance—his Nance!—should be so frail, so fickle, so incapable of a true and lasting love, seemed hideously incomprehensible.

But it was true. Here it was in her own handwriting—her own handwriting! He remembered that she had never written to him before. It was her first letter—her first letter!

He laughed bitterly, and raised his hand to fling the letter in the fire; but some feeling stayed him, and he thrust the single sheet of note-paper into his pocket.

It all seemed plain to him. She had grown tired of him! Some friends—new friends—had turned up. She had turned from him to them; not, perhaps, without a pang; very likely, with a slight feeling of regret on his account, but with none on her own.

God! it was hideous! He laughed again. Sir Terence must have heard him; for he came into the room hurriedly, and, with a look of alarm, asked what was the matter.

"Nothing—nothing in the world!" exclaimed Bernard, with a wild laugh

He recklessly poured himself out a glass of brandy, and drank it off then looked around for his hat and coat.

"Where are you going?" asked Sir Terence.

"Out for a little while," said Bernard. "The room is hot, stifling. Robson always makes up a fire like a furnace. Don't sit up for me; I may be late."

He was gone out of the room before Sir Terence could ask any further questions.

He strode along the streets, his face white, but his head burning. The words of the note rang mockingly in his ears, like a demoniac chorus. Every now and then he smiled the smile of a half-mad cynic. Nance's flight had been hard to bear, but this heartless letter of hers, coming after the weary days of terrible suspense and longing, simply maddened him.

He reached Felicia's house and rang the bell. The footman eyed him with scarcely concealed surprise.

"Is Miss Damerel in?" asked Bernard, quite oblivious of the lateness of the hour.

The man said he did not know; he would ask; but Bowden, crossing the hall, saw Bernard, and came toward him.

"My mistress is in, sir," she said. "She was to have gone to Lady Starbright's to-night, but she didn't. She is in her boudoir."

Bernard followed her up the stairs into a luxuriously furnished room lighted softly by a rose-shaded lamp.

A fire was burning, and before it, reclining in an amber-satin chair, was Felicia.

As he entered, Bowden discreetly closing the door behind him, Felicia turned her head languidly; then seeing who it was, rose and stood before him.

Her heart leaped; her face paled at sight of him; her eyes dilated on his white and haggard face; her heart shrunk with a sudden terror. He had discovered that the letter was a forgery; he had come to upbraid her, to denounce her! She felt at that moment as if he were going to strike her. Well, he might kill her, if he liked. Life was not worth having without his love. She had played a dangerous, a foolishly dangerous game, and he had discovered it!

All these thoughts, fears, emotions passed through her mind as he stood looking at her; but, saving that the beautiful face was rather pale, she gave no sign of them.

"How late you are!" she said, with a smile that cost her more than one can set down.

"I am," he said in a hoarse, dry voice; "but I am not too late, I hope, to thank you for all you have done and all you have tried to do for me."

Her heart gave a leap of relief; she sunk into the chair.

"Won't you sit down?" she said.

But he stood looking down at her. She was superbly dressed. Worth, if you pay him well, can display an art beyond the reach of a man's pen to describe. Her dress was composed of some soft, lace-like material in black. It fell in graceful folds. There were soft stars of silver shimmering on it. The priceless diamonds which Lady Winshire had left her glittered like fire-flies in her hair, sparkled on her white throat, scintillated from her arms. She looked like a siren, beautiful to the eye, fascinating to the senses.

And so, with a smile upon her beautiful face, she looked up at him and waited.

"I have come to thank you," he said; and his hoarse voice rang like a discordant note in the softly luxurious apartment. "My father has told me—I know— Felicia, you have been the truest friend, the most unselfish woman—Felicia, I have come to ask you to be my wife."

A profound silence reigned. The perfumed air beat upon his brain; the words of Nance's note rang in his ears. He looked, as through a dream, upon the beautiful woman lying back in the chair in the fire-light.

The color faded from her face, her lips quivered.

"Wait!" he said. "You know that I am ruined; that I am almost a beggar; that I have very little heart left to offer you. You know, or can guess, that there has been in my past life an incident, a history, which has dominated my whole being. But that past is past; it is all done with and dead. I know that you are rich, but that will not stop me. You know me well enough to know that I do not ask you to marry me because of your money. I care nothing for it. I care for nothing but the fact that you have been the truest friend to me and my father. Felicia, if you can take a ruined man for your husband, if you can love me a little, be my wife. Stop! Before Heaven, I will try to be a good husband to you! It will not be hard; you are beautiful. At one time I loved you. Before Heaven, I will love you still! I will devote myself, my life, to making you happy. Be my wife!"

Silence! The fire-light fell upon her face; it was pale to the lips; her heart seemed to stop beating.

Then she held out her arms—the bare, shapely arms. He fell on his knees beside her. The white arms closed round him and drew him toward her.

Her lips met his.

CHAPTER XXX.

Although one is supposed to very soon grow used to the changes and chances of this transitory life, Nance did not very rapidly grow accustomed to, or even quite realize, the wonderful transformation in her circumstances.

Mistress of Rainford Hall and half a million of money—more than half a million of money—she, who only a few weeks ago had been quite content to work hard for her modest livelihood!

The great change would have turned the heads of most girls—indeed, of most men or women—but on Nance the effect seemed to be very slight.

That strange quietness and self-absorption which Lady Dockitt had noticed and remarked upon to Mr. Graham still clung to her. Her whole manner was marked by a gentle sadness and restrained melancholy, which shone in her beautiful eyes and spoke in her soft, low voice.

She did not seem to care for the vast wealth which she had inherited. It really appeared as if she would have been quite content to have worn the simplest dress of black merino, unadorned by a single jewel; and it was Lady Dockitt who insisted upon procuring attire and jewelry suitable to so important a person as Miss Christine Harwood, of Rainford Hall.

But, though Christine did not seem to care for her money, she became rapidly very fond of the Hall. The romantic old place, with its air of old-world grandeur, exercised a strange influence over her.

She liked to wander through the vast rooms, with their oak carvings, tarnished gilding, time-dimmed pictures, and old-fashioned furniture.

She liked to dream, coiled up on an oak seat in a corner of the huge hall. And they were always dreams of Bernard, and he was always in some strange, inexplicable way mixed up with the late owners of the Hall.

She thought of Sir Terence often, and with pity. What she would have liked to have done would have been to give back to him and his son the old house and lands which had passed into her hands. But she knew that such a thing was impossible, that she had no right to run counter to her father's wishes, to disobey his dying command.

For the first few weeks she felt very unhappy at the Hall. She could not but be unconscious of the fact that everybody in it regarded her as an interloper and intruder. The servants, from the butler downward, treated her with perfect respect; but with the respect was mingled a kind of coldness and reserve, which reminded her, probably was intended to remind her, that she was a new-comer and usurper, and that they were always thinking of their beloved Yorkes.

At first, when she went for a walk, or a drive in the great, stately carriage, with its powdered footman, the village people, the tenants, the laborers, eyed her with sullen resentment and distrust. She could feel their cold glances as she walked or drove by. But, after a time—and, indeed, a very short time—the general ill-will grew less obtrusive and conspicuous.

As her maid, Sophie Wood, said, the young mistress was "so beautiful, so gentle, and so kind," that the hearts of even the Rainford Hall retainers were melted.

"After all," said Mr. Bulford, the butler, delivering his sentiments oracularly in the servants' hall, "she can't help being the mistress. If she hadn't had the Hall, somebody else would. Why, come to think of it, we might have had a Jew money-lender here, as has happened in other noble families. Miss Christine is a lady, anyhow; and that's something. Of course, she ain't like a Yorke, and it's very hard on us to have to lose Sir Terence and Mr. Bernard; but if they was to go, and somebody else was to step into their place, why, Miss Christine is as good as any one we could have had; and I, for one, ain't going to hold out against her any longer. In fact," he added, with a burst of candor, "she's so pleasant-spoken that I couldn't if I tried."

As, of course, the servants all took their cue from the butler, the whole household swung round from that day, and Nance, much to her relief, found a marked change in their treatment of her.

As it was with the servants, so it was with the villagers and the people on the estate. One day Nance, hearing that a child was sick at one of the cottages, summoned up courage and went to see it. She was received coldly enough at first. The mother had been an old servant at the Hall, and was devoted to the Yorkes; but Nance's beauty and pretty, gentle way soon won her over; and presently, when Nance had got the little one on her lap, the mother's heart melted completely.

"It's measles, you know, miss, I suppose?" she said. "You might catch it."

"I have had the measles," said Nance; "and if I had not, I should not be afraid. I am not afraid of catching anything. Please let me nurse her."

From that time scarcely a day passed but Nance found her way into some of the cottages, and very soon the cold looks which had at first greeted her were exchanged for words and smiles of welcome.

The hours spent among the sick and needy were her happiest ones, for it was only at such times she could forget her own sorrow.

The tenants were the hardest to win, but ultimately they came round like the rest, when they found that the new mistress of Rainford Hall was as likely to prove as lenient toward them as even the departed Yorkes had been—more lenient, in fact, and even more gracious. The steward was informed that no one who could not pay his rent was to be pressed, that all reasonable demands for improvements were to be granted, and that no one wishing to see her was to be denied.

All this was very satisfactory as far as it went, and Mr. Graham was delighted with the progress Nance had made.

"Of course," he said, "she was bound to win their hearts. Gad! who could resist her? Though, by the way, if she runs the estate on the principle of never exacting the rent and doing everything they ask her, the land won't pay two per cent."

"I don't think," said Lady Dockitt, "that Christine would care if the estate paid no percentage at all. She's utterly indifferent to money; her tastes are as simple as those of a—a dairy-maid; and as for amusement, she doesn't seem to care for it, or even need it. She likes walking about the gardens or driving an old pony and jingle which she herself found in a corner of the stable. At other times she coils herself up in the hall with a book, or sits in a chair beside the fire with her hands in her lap, thinking or dreaming. That sad look never leaves her face, even when she is smiling or laughing—and she does laugh sometimes—the look seems to come through, or haunt her eyes."

Cleaning Stoves.

When cleaning stoves add a little turpentine to the blacking, and the stove will polish much more easily. Only a very little turpentine should be used, as it will give a brown tinge to the grate.

Literary Vandals.

The Saracens burned the Alexandrian library and the great library of Matthew Corvinas, king of Hungary, which contained 400,000 volumes. When Granada was taken, Cardinal Ximes retorted in kind by destroying all the Korans and Moorish books to be found in the city.

HORSES SKILFULLY AVOID A BABY.

That the eleven-month-old child of Smith Morris, of Eldon, Mo., was not trampled to death by two big draft horses attached to a Swift a Company wagon, at Broadway and Lucas avenue, St. Louis, Thursday afternoon, when it was dropped by its grandfather directly in front of the horses, was due to the almost human intelligence of the animals in separating just as it seemed they would trample the little one to death. The big wagon also cleared the child because of the horses' movements, and a slight scalp wound sustained in falling on the granite street was its only injury.

MOUNTAIN SNAKE HAS TWO PERFECT HEADS.

A moccasin snake with two heads was brought to town by a farmer boy, says a Woodstock (Va.) telegram. The heads are set at right angles over a body eight inches long and two inches in diameter. One exactly like it was found in the same spot fifty years ago, and was preserved in a jar of alcohol. The snake was found on the north branch of the Shenandoah river, at the foot of Massanutten Mountains. The boy who found the snake captured it alive, as it seemed chilled by the cold. It is offered as a natural history museum prize.

A WISE PRECAUTION.

No matter whether the baby is sick or well, Baby's Own Tablets should always be in the house. They not only cure infantile disorders but they prevent them, and should be used whenever the little ones show the slightest signs of illness. No other medicine is so enthusiastically spoken of by mothers—no other medicine has done so much to make little ones healthy and good natured. Mrs. Albert Luddington, St. Mary's River, N. S., says: "I do not believe my baby would have been alive to-day had it not been for Baby's Own Tablets. Since using them he is growing nicely, is good natured and is getting fat." Good for the new born baby or growing child—and above all absolutely safe. You can get Baby's Own Tablets from your druggist, or by mail at 25 cents a box by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HIS HOME A TOMB.

Penman Damon was found sitting in a tomb at Holden, Mass., a few days ago, warming himself over a bonfire. When neighbors told him it was no place for him, he said the tomb belonged to his family, and as the last of his line he had a right to occupy it if he chose. Damon said it was warm and comfortable and saved paying rent. He is reputed to be wealthy.

Miss Enid Phelps, daughter of a wealthy lawyer and one of the smart set of Denver, Col., is to wed William H. Seip, who was a street car conductor when their acquaintance began. Since he fell in love Seip has invested the savings of nine years in a little grocery, and if he succeeds in business the wedding is to take place. He will not insist upon the fulfillment of the engagement if he fails, as he says he does not want to touch a penny of the girl's money. Miss Phelps first met Seip on his car about two years ago, while she was on her way to a music class at the Denver University. It is understood that her father has withdrawn objections to the match, as he was poor himself when he was young, and finds much to admire in the handsome young conductor.

From Rome comes the report that Pope Pius X is being kept busy trying to prevent his numerous relatives from leaving their rustic homes for the Eternal City. His holiness has more nephews and nieces than any pope before him, and since he has been made the head of the Roman Catholic church they are all eager to be near him. So far only two have succeeded. These are Signor Parolin and his sister, Signorina Anna Parolin, who formerly lived at Riese. Signorina Nina, who has become quite a grand lady since she came to live in this city, recently paid a visit to her native town, which turned out in full gala to do her honor. In a letter to her uncle, Pope Pius, she complained that the visitors do not leave her one moment's peace. They want her intercession for the most varied reasons, from blessing an infant which has been named for His holiness to procuring all sorts of positions in the Vatican for all kinds of people. She is kept busy all the day telling her townspeople how the Pope spends his day, how many hours he sleeps, what he eats, how he looks, what he says, whether he thinks of his townspeople once in a while. One thing which has pleased them more than all others is the news that "Our Pope" still declares that the dish of "polenta cogliose" (polenta with better than when cooked in his sister's kitchen.

SUFFERED TORTURE FOR FOUR YEARS.

Then Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Wm. Doeg's Rheumatism.

He was so Bad That He Could Not Lie Down, But Had to Sit Night and Day in a Chair.

Sundridge, Ont., Nov. 7.—(Special).—Mr. William Doeg of this place, now a hale, hearty man, tells of his almost miraculous cure of Rheumatism by using Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"For four years I suffered excruciating torture," says Mr. Doeg. "I was scarcely an hour free from pain. I could not lie down to take rest, but had to sit night and day in a chair.

"I was treated for Rheumatism by several doctors and also tried several medicines without receiving any benefit. Almost in despair I feared I never again would be free from pain. Then I read of some remarkable cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills. I procured a box and soon found they were doing me good, and before I had finished the second box I was entirely free from pain and a new man."

Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure Rheumatism by putting the Kidneys in shape to take the cause—Uric Acid—out of the blood.

SCIATICA CURED

Another Triumph For Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Mr Etsell, of Walkerton, Suffered for Months and Got no Relief Until he Began the Uso of These Pills.

Of the many employees of R. Truax & Co., Walkerton, Ont., none stands higher in the confidence of his employers than does Mr. Thos. J. Etsell. He is an excellent mechanic, and has been in the employ of this firm for upwards of ten years. But although Mr. Etsell now ranks among the few men who are never absent from their post of duty, the time was when he was as often absent as present, all because of his physical inability to perform his work. For years Mr. Etsell was a great sufferer from sciatica, and at times the suffering became so intense that for days he was unable to leave the house.

During these years, Mr. Etsell, as may readily be imagined, was continually on the lookout for some remedy that would rid him of the disease, but for a long time without success. Doctors were consulted and although he took the treatment prescribed, it did not help him. Then he tried electric treatment, but this also failed to give relief, and in despair he had about made up his mind that his case was hopeless and that he would be a suffering, helpless cripple to the end of his days. Then one day a neighbor advised him to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. At first he refused, believing they would prove like other medicines, but the neighbor was so insistent, having herself been greatly benefited by these pills, so that at last he consented. The remainder of the story may best be told in his own words:

"When I began taking these pills," said Mr. Etsell to a reporter of the Telescope, "I had been off work for three months. The cords of my right leg were all drawn up, and I could only limp about with the aid of my stick. The pain I suffered was terrible. I could not sleep at all during the night, and I was in misery both day and night. At first I thought the pills were doing me no good, but after I had taken six boxes I fancied I was feeling better, and was encouraged to continue the treatment. After that I got better every day, and by the time I had taken about fifteen boxes every vestige of pain had disappeared. For over a year," continued Mr. Etsell. "I have not had a twinge of pain, and although I am forty years of age I feel as well as when I was twenty. Pink Pills cured me, and I have no hesitation in announcing them the best medicine in the world for sciatica."

The cure of Mr. Etsell proves that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are not an ordinary medicine, and that their power to cure in all troubles of the blood or nerves places them beyond all other medicines. You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or direct by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. See that the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," is printed on the wrapper around every box.

GIPSY GIRL PLANS NOTABLE WEDDING.

A despatch from Akron, O., says: Somewhere near the Indiana line Minnie George, a young gypsy girl, is travelling by wagon to meet her suitor, Stephen Stanley, chief of the tribe of Stanley, who is in camp with his tribe at Blue Pond in this city. They met in Egypt, but because they were of different tribes relatives objected to their marriage until a few weeks ago, when the girl's grandmother, the chief opponent, died. When the girl arrives in Akron some time next week they will be married and the forty members of the George tribe, to which the girl belongs, will have a big celebration in Akron.

LOVES OF A PRINCE.

A cablegram from Vienna says: Princess Alice, who created a sensation some time ago by getting a divorce from her husband, the Prince of Schoenberg-Waldenberg, and who afterwards made up with him and started on a pilgrimage on foot to Rome, only to leave him for good, has again stirred up gossip by falling in love with an Italian, Lieut. del Peado. In spite of the furious opposition of her father, Don Carlos, the princess declares that she will marry the penniless officer in November, after the birth of her child which is expected to take place in the beginning of that month. At present she is busy writing a book describing her life, in which she promises to reveal many scandals at the German courts.

BULLDOG FIGHTS WITH COW IN PARLOR.

A bulldog and cow at Wooster, O., a few days ago, furnished a lively quarter of an hour at the home of John Swank, a railroad man, and when it was over Swank's best parlor furniture was a wreck. The dog and the cow are both owned by Mr. John Bowersox, a neighbor of Swank's. While the cow was being driven home from pasture it was attacked by the dog, which seized the animals's ear and hung on with such tenacity that the cow, crazed with pain, dashed from the road and plunged through a screen door into Swank's parlor. Mrs. Swank and her daughter fled. The cow, with the bulldog hanging to its ear, circled madly about the parlor, crashing over tables and chairs. When the frenzied cow, with blood dripping from its ear where the dog still hung, finally staggered out the front door, every piece of furniture in the room was smashed, the carpet was ruined and the wallpaper was torn and blood-streaked.

BIG CHANGE IN BRITISH ARMY

The British Army Council, says a cable from London, has issued an important order under which recruits instead of enlisting three years with the colors and nine in the reserve in fantry of the line, will in future enlist for nine years with the colors and three in the reserves, thus practically abolishing the short service system. War Secretary Arnold Forster's scheme shadowed this change in a speech last July, in which he declared that the existing system had proved a failure, because so few men volunteered to extend their service with the colors. Some critics, however, declare the existing difficulty in obtaining recruits will be greatly enhanced under the new order.

$600,000 SHIP ABANDONED CREW.

A Philadelphia despatch says: much excitement was caused in shipping circles Monday by a report ceived at the Maritime Exchange that the British steamship Kelvin bound from New York for Buenos Ayres and Montevideo, was put at sea 300 miles east of Cape Henteras, abandoned by her crew. Kelvin with her cargo is valued nearly $600,000, and is one of the most valuable prizes left adrift in recent years. Her cargo, which is made up of agricultural implements, machinery, hardware and merchandise is alone valued at $400,000. As a prize lies but a short distance from shore and directly in the track of vessels making their way to the United States from South America and West Indian ports, it is the opinion that she will be picked up by some lucky shipmaster and taken into a harbor on the southern coast of the United States. No particulars concerning the derelict craft other than the fact that she was put adrift abandoned and with a heavy list to starboard by the British steamship Hubert, at Barbados from New York, could be learned. Capt. Gow cabled that the Kelvin was sighted on October 7 in Latitude 35, longitude 70. Owing to a heavy sea running at the time it was impossible to board the ship. The Kelvin left New York October 3, under command of Captain McLennan. She is a steel craft, having been launched in Glasgow last February. The vessel registers 2,266 tons net and is 352 feet in length, 46 feet in breadth of beam and 23.4 feet in depth of

POPE TO SHUT THE VATICAN'S BIRD HOUSES.

The cardinals are becoming more and more dissatisfied with the way the Pope tried to cut down expenses, says a cablegram from Rome. Not only has he deprived them of a large part of their income, but he is doing away with all superfluous expenses in his own household, and says that he intends to keep in his service only such servants who are absolutely necessary, and the cardinals deem this a mistake, as the Italian people are very fond of display and are apt to lose their respect for a Pope who is too plain and simple in his ways. One of the Pope's latest acts was the discharge of the mounted escort of six men which used to accompany him in his walks through the Vatican grounds, declaring that not only were the services of those men superfluous, but that their presence made him feel ill at ease. Now he has turned his attention to the bird houses built in the Vatican grounds under the personal supervision of the late Leo XIII., and which are among the largest in the world and contain a number of rare birds received from all parts of the world. Pope Leo was very much interested in these avaries and often visited them, but his successor regards their maintenance as extravagance, and the birds will now be killed, stuffed and distributed among the various educational institutions in Rome.

$600,000 SHIP ABANDONED BY CREW.

A Philadelphia despatch says that much excitement was caused in shipping circles Monday by a report received at the Maritime Exchange, that the British steamship Kelvin, bound from New York for Buenos Ayres and Montevideo, was passed at sea 300 miles east of Cape Hatteras, abandoned by her crew. The Kelvin with her cargo is valued at nearly $600,000, and is one of the most valuable prizes left adrift in recent years. Her cargo, which is made up of agricultural implements, machinery, hardware and merchandise, is alone valued at $400,000. As this prize lies but a short distance off shore and directly in the track of vessels making their way to the United States from South American and West Indian ports, it is the opinion that she will be picked up by some lucky shipmaster and towed into a harbor on the southern coast of the United States. No particulars concerning the derelict craft other than the fact that she was passed abandoned and with a heavy list to starboard by the British steamship Hubert, at Barbados from New York, could be learned. Capt. Good cabled that the Kelvin was sighted on October 7 in latitude 35, longitude 70. Owing to a heavy sea running at the time it was impossible to board the ship. The Kelvin left New York October 3, under command of Captain McLennan. She is a new craft, having been launched in Glasgow last February. The vessel registers 2,266 tons net and is 352 feet in length, 46 feet in breadth of beam and 23.4 feet in depth of hold.

Superfluous Hair

Removed by the New Principle

De Miracle

It is better than electricity, because it does not scar or produce a new growth. Better than X-ray, because it does not burn, scar or paralyze the tissues under the skin. Better than depilatories, because it is not poisonous; therefore, it will not cause blood poisoning, or produce eczema, which is so common with depilatories, and does not break off the hair, thereby increasing its growth.

Electrolysis, X-ray or depilatories are offered you on the bare word of the operators and manufacturers. DE MIRACLE is not. It is the only method which is indorsed by physicians, surgeons, dermatologists, medical journals and prominent magazines.

DE MIRACLE will be mailed to any address, sealed in plain wrapper for $1. Your money back without question if it fails to do all that is claimed for it.

Our booklet — the most complete treatise on Superfluous Hair ever published—containing the testimonials of numerous physicians and surgeons and those of hundreds of others—will be sent free, in plain, sealed envelope, upon request. Write for it to-day to

THE SAND WASP.

Ingenious Manner In Which This Insect Uses a Hammer.

The deliberate use of a tool by a little sand wasp might well be supposed to indicate reasoning power, says an exchange. A well known naturalist, Dr. Peckham, watched a wasp dig a hole in the earth and deposit therein an egg, together with a spider which she had stung into paralysis to feed the grub which should be hatched in due course. Then she filled up the hole with sand or earth and jammed it down with her head.

When at last the filling was level with the ground she brought a quantity of fine grains of dirt to the spot, picked up a small pebble in her mandibles and used it as a hammer in pounding them down with rapid strokes, thus making this spot as hard and firm as the surrounding surface. Before we could recover from our astonishment at this performance she had dropped her stone and was bringing more earth. In a moment we saw her pick up the pebble and again pound the earth into place with it. Once more the whole process was repeated, and then the little creatures flew away.

"The whole of this performance," writes Sir Herbert Maxwell in "Memories of the Months," "is so unexpected that even Dr. Peckham's high reputation as a scrupulous observer might fail to convince skeptics that he had not been deceived, but similar behavior on the part of a wasp of the same species has been recorded independently by Dr. Williston of Kansas university."

"Why, John, what do you mean by burning our old love-letters?" "I have been reading them, my dear. After I die someone who wishes to contest my will might get hold of them and use them to prove that I was insane!"

Peter McKinzie, an old man, has appeared at Eddyville, Iowa, and made a startling claim, asking for $65,000 cash from the Masonic lodge for injuries received in an initiatory ceremony forty years ago. McKinzie says that while passing through Eddyville during the war he was induced to join the Masonic lodge. He asserts that the lodge goat was "loaded" for him, and that he was almost fatally injured. For three days, according to his story, he was unable to speak. The lodge was out of funds, and in lieu of other reparation for his injury, an agreement was made that he was to have $65,000 when he reached the age of 65. After a varied career covering forty years, he now returns to claim the modest stipend. The records of Masonic lodge, No. 74, reveal the name of McKinzie, but say nothing of the accident or a promise to pay.

A moccasin snake with two heads was brought to town by a farmer boy, says a Woodstock (Va.) telegram. The heads are set at right angles over a body eight inches long and two inches in diameter. KIDNEY DISEASE BAD CIRCULATION

A License Commissioner, Who Suffered Dreadfully from these Ailments, Entirely Cured by

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Bad circulation of the blood, the usual cause of the extremely painful and dangerous diseases, arises from defective action of the kidneys.

The blood cannot possibly be pure and in a fit condition to nourish the body when the kidneys are diseased and fail to filter from it the poisonous waste matter.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, by their direct and healthful action on the kidneys, not only overcome disease of the kidneys, but by doing so ensure a purifying of the blood.

Mr. William B. Best, License Commissioner for the County of Haldimand, and who lives in Cayuga, Ont., writes: "I have been troubled with cramps in my legs. I would awake from sleep in keen distress. The pain would seize me at the ankle and work up the leg almost to the body. "Believeing this trouble to arise from kidney derangements and bad circulation of the blood, I bought some of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills at W. J. Quinsey's drug store and began using them. They benefitted me from the very first, and by continuing their use I have been completely cured. I would recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to any suffering as I did. I was so bad that I would have to jump out of bed two or three times during the night."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

COL. M'BRIDE'S PET

By CYRUS DERICKSON

Copyright, 1908, by T. C. McClure

One day, while some of the officers of the Bengal lancers were tiger hunting, they found a baby tiger three months old and took it back to cantonments and presented it to their commanding officer, Colonel McBride. In due time the beast became full grown and was in and out of the bungalow like a favorite dog. He was apparently tame, but now and then he moped and snarled and betrayed the ferocity lying dormant in his nature, but on such occasions he was given the whip and always crouched in submission at his master's feet. Like the average dog, the tiger had his likes and dislikes of men. Some of the officers never laid hands on his head without being rewarded by a low, deep growl, while he was ready to welcome and make friends with others. Among the former was Major Swift. He had exchanged from an English cavalry regiment and been received cordially. He was a gay bachelor of forty, supposed to be possessed of a large income and a man who was first in society and sport of all kinds. That he had lived a fast life was known to all, but that fact was not permitted to count against him. His many friends boasted of his gains or losses on the race track or at cards and held him up as free handed and a good fellow.

There had just been a breath of scandal about the major at Allahabad. It had been softly whispered that he had run through his patrimony and was hard up and that his success at cards was not always due to luck alone. These whispers did not circulate far and were stamped as the result of spite and jealousy. No one but the major himself knew that they were founded on fact and that they were the sole reason for his exchange. He was tendered a farewell banquet by the officers of his late regiment, and the soldier or civilian who had dared to repeat the gossip of Allahabad would have been silenced very quickly. Had the major been a man to take any one into his confidence and reveal his true situation he would have been obliged to say:

"At forty years old I am without a pound I can call my own; my estate is mortgaged for its full value; I am in debt to the money lenders; my last two horses are not paid for; I owe my tailors and am being pressed for payment, and if I should lose £20 at cards tonight I should have to borrow the money to pay the debt of honor. I am simply living on my past reputation as a man of money, and I see no way to better my circumstances except to become a card sharp and fleece the officers at this cantonment."

That would have been the truth and only the truth, but the major would have sent a bullet through his head rather than make any such admission.

There was much sporting blood in the Bengal lancers, and the officers played for high stakes. The major did not have to encourage them to gamble; they were waiting for him, but they soon had cause to regret that he had appeared. His bets were high and his luck phenomenal. But for his continued extravagance he could have paid of much of his indebtedness with the money won during the first six weeks. Those not in the game praised his nerve and talked of his luck; those who always came out losers did a great deal of thinking, but were silent. At the end of two months whispers were heard again. No one could trace them to any authentic source, and they did not exactly charge the major with card sharping, but when they reached the colonel's ears he listened and planned. He himself had been a heavy and continuous loser and had not always been a philosopher as his gold changed hands. There had been games at his bungalow as well as elsewhere, and the first time that Major Swift made his appearance there those in his company had considerable curiosity to know how he would be received by the colonel's pet.

The tiger no sooner caught sight of the new officer than he ceased to frolic and became sulky and morose. There was no outbreak of temper, but he lay down and fastened his eyes on the major as if reading him through and through, and it was evident that there was dislike and distrust of the man. The beast continued his glare until the colonel's man was ordered to take him away and tie him up. The colonel had said nothing to any of the officers, but he had secretly determined to watch the major's play and discover if there was a cause for his winning the way he did. The major could have had no hint of it, and yet perhaps intuition had given him warning, and he was not himself at all. He played and won, but he also played and lost, and his losses were far greater than his gains. Seated at his right hand and taking no active part in the game was the colonel, and he never left his chair from first to last. The major came out loser by £200. On the next night he lost £75, on the third night £100. He made good his first two losses from his former gains, but when he rose from the third sitting he knew that he would have to borrow of a brother officer to pay his losses.

The officer had not been detected cheating, but he had been out of luck. The colonel may have put two and two together in his own mind, and so perhaps might one or two of the players, but the party broke up with the greatest apparent good feeling all around, and half an hour later the colonel was in bed. He was a sound sleeper, and it was partly for this reason that at night the tiger was given free range of the bungalow. There were no sentinels stationed outside the place, but a native watchman slept on the veranda. At 2 o'clock in the morning this man slept, and the colonel was in dreamland. The tiger was stretched on the floor, blinking and dozing, when he suddenly pricked up his ears and opened wide his eyes. He had heard a step on the earth outside. As he listened the step came nearer. It being in the heat of the summer, the doorways were guarded only by mats. Presently the animal saw one of these slightly move, and he got the scent of a stranger. He did not growl or spring up, but the fire in his eyes grew brighter, and his teeth began to show. The man, who slowly and carefully pushed the mat aside and crept into the room, which was one in which the guests had been entertained that night, ought to have caught the blaze of the tiger's eyes in the darkness, but he did not. With footfalls as gentle as a hare's he stole across the room to the colonel's desk. The desk had been carelessly left unlocked, and he took from it a bag containing the money to be given to the winning horses of the races to be held a week later. There was £600 in the bag, and the robber had just turned from the desk to make his stealthy escape when there was a roar and a bound, and he went down with a crash. It was hardly a minute before the colonel was at hand with a light, but the beast had done his work. A blow from his paw as he sprang had broken the man's neck, and teeth and claws were still at work. He was promptly shot, and then the colonel bent down and rolled the dead man over that he might see his face.

"Heavens, but it's the major!" he gasped out as he started back. "It's the major, and he has the bag of money clutched in his hand!"

Not Absolutely Helpless.

Some few persons still cherish the idea that all women are absolutely helpless in business matters and that they are so lacking in financial ability that they cannot safely be trusted to handle money.

Mr. Black belonged to this class. He had been in the habit of paying all the household bills at the end of each month, and his wife, although allowed unlimited credit, had never had an allowance. One day the Blacks happened to be passing the comparatively new building in which the bank was situated.

"Do you know, John," remarked Mrs. Black, "I have actually never been inside the bank since it was built more than two years ago?"

"You haven't!" exclaimed John. "If that's the case I guess I'd better give you a check this month and let you pay the bills. Do you think you'd know how to cash it?"

Mrs. Black received the check. That evening Mr. Black asked, not without sarcasm, if she had succeeded in indorsing it properly.

"Oh, yes!" returned Mrs. Black cheerfully.

"How many bills did you pay?"

"None. It seemed a pity to waste all that money paying bills."

"Then what in the world did you do with it?"

"Oh," returned the little woman serenely, "I just deposited it to my own account!"—Collier's Weekly.

This, says the correspondent who kindly sends us the foregoing, rather emphasizes in experience of my own in Munich, where a shopkeeper trying in English to excuse himself for not having in stock an appliance I needed said: "I have not. I am very disagreeable."—London Outlook.

The Polite Porter.

There is a large town on the Northern Counties railway which, it is said, boasts itself as possessing the most polite porters on the system. Everything is relative. Recently a lady having secured a porter at this station told him after her small luggage had been removed from the carriage to get the rest of it from the van.

He returned presently empty handed, with the observation: "Beg pardon, ma'am, but ye're a liar. There's nane o't in the van."

In the south a similar official would have said, "If it's in the world I'll get it for ye."—London Spectator.

Wifely Sympathy.

He—You are crying, darling, How is this? She—Because my friend, Frau Möller, has been presented by her husband with a valuable set of diamonds that must have cost 1,500 marks at the very least. He—And that is what makes you weep? She—Well, yes. I am sorry you will now have to spend such a lot of money when you can so ill afford it

FROM A LAND ACCURSED

WHY FINLANDERS ARE COMING IN THOUSANDS TO CANADA.

Characteristics of These New Colonists of the Dominion—Will Make Good Settlers in the Northern Zone of the American Continent—Finn Has a Passion for Freedom, But Joins Not With the Russian Nihilists.

Russia may have failed absolutely in Manchuria, but in Finland she is steadily subduing all opposition to her policy. By the thousands Finns are fleeing from their country as from a land accursed. A recent despatch announced that a great migration to Canada will take place in the Spring. In the past thousands of Finns have found new homes here. They have become good citizens, and Canada is glad enough to be the refuge for those who are to follow. The Finn makes an admirable settler, and is as freely assimilated by English-speaking communities as a German or a Frenchman. He is industrious, sober and peaceable invariably, and is mentally more active than the average Swede or Norwegian. He is not a fighting man, the Finn. If he were he would be in Helsingfors with his back to the wall, or plotting with the Nihilists in London. Yet he has a passion for freedom which equals in strength the intensity of that of Englishman, Irishman, Scotchman, or American. To tyranny and injustice he opposes passive resistance. This has failed with the Russian, whose stolidity equals that of the Finn, and who is supported by a ferocity unknown to the other. So it comes that the Finns are deserting their country by wholesale, seeking in Canada and the United States those commonplaces of justice and equality unknown in their own country.

Finland's Hopeless Cause.

For a moment, after Bobrikoff had paid with his life the penalty of his cruelty, it was hoped that a brighter day had dawned for Finland. The character of his successor speedily dissipated this delusion, and it became plain that the Russification of the country would continue along the lines followed with so much brutality by the assassinated Governor. It is not premature to say that Russia has won her campaign in Finland. The possibility of an armed rising of the Finns grows every day more remote, and there is no chance of "passive resistance" succeeding in the end. The outside world deeply sympathizes with the little country in the death grip of her huge neighbor, but the outside world has no thought of interposing in her behalf. Even were the Finns in arms making a brave fight for their national existence they could expect little from Britain, Germany or France or any other power. The great Christian countries stood idly by and saw Poland cruelly done to death. They have seen Jews slaughtered, the Armenians massacred, and public opinion has not been strong enough to make them interfere. In the past half century only one nation has undertaken a war from any such chivalrous inspiration, and singularly enough, that country was Russia, the master-robber of them all.

Finland's Race Problem.

To make the cause of Finland still more hopeless, the Finns themselves are torn with internal dissensions. They do not present a united front, even in the face of a common danger. In Finland, on a small scale, we have a duplication of the conditions which threaten the nominal federation as they have destroyed the actual unity of Austria and Hungary. There is in Finland a dual race problem. The "two great historic partics" are the Svekomans and the Fennomans. The latter have always been considered the pure, national party. Through all the years of Swedish supremacy the Fennomans stood out sturdily for the integrity of the old Finnish manners and traditions, and opposed (passively, of course) the increasing influence of Sweden, an influence which finally transformed Finland, and made it, in fact, as in politics, if part of the Swedish Kingdom, as the Svekomans desired. Thus was the country divided when Russia acquired Finland. As soon as it became apparent that the present Czar had no intention of maintaining the hoary constitution of Finland, despite his own oath and the oaths of his predecessors, the old party lines were, to some extent, blotted out, and the Finns took counsel together as brothers. An extreme body of the Fennomans, however, remained aloof, and nursed their ancient jealousies. It was supposed, however, that the estrangement would be short lived, and that soon the Old Fennomans would join the new Constitutional party, welded together in the furnace of Russian persecution.

Bobrikoff's Opportunity.

The crafty Bobrikoff, however, was keenly alive to the advantages the situation offered to the policy he represented. He lost no opportunity to embitter the Old Fennomans against the Svekomans, to keep open the old wounds, and to sow further dissensions. He succeeded admirably. About two years ago it became apparent that the famous Old Fennomans, under the leadership of the wily Yoje-Koskinir, were little better than the hireling agitators of Bobrikoff. They became too subservient, too slavishly Russified, to justify their claim to being the old, pure Finland party. They have been discovered by the Finns, and though much of their influence has been lost, they are still useful to Russia, if for no other reason than that they indicate to the rest of the world that there is a considerable body of Finns which approves of the Czar's Government and policy in Finland.

Clergy Bow to the Storm.

The boast is stronger when the status of many of the Old Fennomans is considered. A majority of the bishops and clergy is numbered among them, and, of course, most of the Finns who hold any office in the gift of the Russian Government. The secret of their apostasy is not hard to guess. After all, they may have chosen the wiser, if less heroic, course. They may only have realized earlier than their more patriotic fellow-countrymen the hopelessness of opposing the shambling march of the Bear. This much is sure—if a Finn wishes to live with comfort in his native land he must bow his neck to the Russian yoke. His alternative is emigration. Those thousands who will pour into Canada next Spring have chosen exile rather than submission.

THE MENNONITES.

Rev. S. Goudie Takes Up the Cudgels in Behalf of the Brethren.

Rev. S. Goudie, pastor of the Bethel Mennonite Mission in Toronto, thus writes to The Star whose article he criticizes we recently published:

My attention was drawn to an article in The Star under the caption of "The Drawbacks of the Mennonites," undersigned by J. P. McC., and possibly those who are not familiar with the Mennonites of Ontario would naturally think they were no better, so I beg leave to say a word in behalf of the Mennonites of Ontario through your paper. I do not wish to contradict the statements of your correspondent (J. P. McC.), nor do I wish to reflect on his character, though he is a stranger to me, but I do think it very unkind to use such statements as he used in writing of those people, and very unwise to speak of them as Mennonites, not making any distinction between them and other Mennonites, for there are many different bodies of Mennonites, and the people he is describing are Russian Mennonites, a people with which we Mennonites of Ontario have little in common. I would very much enjoy taking your correspondent or anyone who may be misled by his article to the different settlements of Mennonites of Ontario, such as you find in Markham township or across the lake between St. Catharines and Beamsville, or in Waterloo County, or any other Mennonite settlement I know of in Ontario, and prove to them that we are not a lot of filthy, tobacco-using, gormandizing, pool-playing people, that live in filthy homes, that live on the kind of beefsteak described by your correspondent. In fact, the Mennonites of Ontario compare with the best, cleanliest, and most enterprising people of our province, though they are a plain people. Hoping this may clear up this matter in the minds of any who do not know the difference between the several bodies of Mennonites, and thanking you, dear editor, for space in your paper for my small article.

Star's Note.—We accept and wish to endorse all that the Bethel pastor here says in praise of the Mennonites as we know them in Ontario. They are a cleanly and respected people. But J. P. McC. was writing from Winnipeg, Manitoba, about the Mennonite settlement there as he saw it. It was a race of people, not a form of religion, that came under his observation, but in order to identify them he had to describe them by the name they use.—Editor.

Soldiers' Friend Coming.

Miss Violet Brooke-Hunt, known throughout the British army as the soldiers' friend, will arrive in Canada about the middle of this month (October). She passed through Ontario on her way to Victoria, B. C., and on her trip east she will lecture at several places.

Her visit to Canada is, however, with the object of seeing the country, and is emphatically not a lecturing tour. Her engagements are being made at the instance of the Canadian military men.

In Toronto, Col. Otter is arranging for Miss Hunt to speak in Association Hall on Oct. 18. The lecture, which will concern itself with her philanthropic endeavor, will be under the auspices of the garrison officers, and the Daughters of the Empire.

Miss Hunt first earned her sobriquet in South Africa, though prior to the war she had taken an active interest in social, political and philanthropic work in Gloucestershire. At the age of 14 she was trained by her grandfather, W. P. Price, M.P., of Tilberton Court, Gloucestershire, to take an interest in forming schools and classes, libraries and kindred institutions as well as athletic clubs in the neighborhood.

Her special mission in life has been the carrying out of these schemes among the soldiers of the British army. In South Africa she drew the attention of Lord Roberts, who summoned her from Bloemfontein to Pretoria to start a soldiers' institution.

While in South Africa she met many of the colonial troops, and it was her brain that conceived the idea of establishing the Colonial Club in London at the time of the coronation, which proved so great a boon, supplying a much-needed rendezvous.

The Fall of Meteorites.

Recent falls of meteors in Canada renders the subject one of interest here. A total of 684 meteorites was known up to 1903, of which there were 182 irons and only 74 stones in the western hemisphere, and 299 stones and only 79 irons in the eastern hemisphere. The records show only the fall of 350 of these meteorites, dating back to the fifteenth century. Professor Berwerth, of Vienna, despite this small number of known specimens, calculates that 900 meteorites must fall to the earth each year, not counting shooting stars that disappear in the atmosphere, and that 55 of these at least should come under observation. Professor Berwerth finds that meteorites have been chiefly recorded in civilized countries, but that in many instances they are more numerous in thinly settled districts, and that they have an especial affinity for mountainous areas.

Limited Desire.

The Sunday school class was singing "I Want to Be an Angel," and the teacher said to one little fellow, "Why don't you sing louder, Johnny?"

"I'm singing just as loud as I want to be an angel," answered the incorrigible Johnny.

From Grain of Wheat.

The origin of all weights and measures in England was derived from a grain of wheat. According to the old statute, thirty-two grains, well dried, and gathered from the middle of the ear, were to make one pennyweight, twenty pennyweights one ounce. It was afterwards thought better to divide the pennyweights into twenty-four equal parts, called grains. William the Conqueror introduced into England what was called Troy Weight, from Troyes, a town in the Province of Champagne, in France. The English were dissatisfied with this weight, because the pound did not weigh so much as the pound in use at that time in England. Hence arose the term Avoir du pois, which was a medium between the French and the ancient English

NEVER A FAILURE SHEER.

To the man who has thrown and has lost, this word—
And, oh, that the word might cheer:
Press straightly forward, nor be deterred
By the failure recorded here;
For the past is past, and the future bears
No less its promise for you,
Oh, child of failure and ward of cares,
Though an ace and a deuce you threw.

To the man who has thrown and has lost, this word:
Who judges the things you do,
Or counts the tears that your eyes had blurred
Ere the dice of your fate you threw?
Who judges? I say, it is you and I,
And we are a sorry pair;
You, whom the Fates in their mirth defy,
And I, of all wisdom bare.

Who judges? I say. It is you and I,
And a billion of just our kind:
Knowing, not one, why we live or die;
Swaggering, pompous and—blind.
To-day our herd its judgment proclaims;
To-morrow gives it the lie.
To-day we prate of immortal names;
To-morrow their memories die.

To the man who has thrown and has lost, this word:
Mayhap in the final test
Supremest honor may be conferred
By the Judge who knoweth best
On the one whom the world in its folly proclaimed
A failure abject and sheer;
Mayhap he may stand with the chosen named
As the ones He holds most dear.

To the man who has thrown and has lost, this word:
There is never a failure sheer
Till the final word of them all is heard,
And the record is ended here;
And I hold this faith, and hold it true,
In the midst of life's clamors and dins;
'Tis the thrower's intent the while he threw,
Not the spots on the dice, that wins.

MODERN MANNERS.

Dr. Hodgins Reflects on Lack of Culture in Canadian Life.

In Dr. J. G. Hodgins' opinion Canadian manners in both public men and children are deteriorating. The Doctor ought to know. He has been in the Civil Service sixty years, and a man should be a judge of civility in that time.

This venerable educationist is 83 years old. He was born in Dublin, came to Canada in '53, and has been here ever since. He was for 32 years the close friend and deputy of Dr. Ryerson, whose portrait done in oil hangs in the library at 92 Pembroke street. Perhaps in all Toronto there is not so picturesque a patriarch of snowy hair and whiskers as Dr. Hodgins. He is still alert and active, and every morning, as he has done for 60 years, goes down to the Education Department.

Dr. Hodgins may be called the Father of the Education Department, for it was built on the Irish model, which he went to Dublin to study in 1845. He is best known to the public as the main author of Dr. Ryerson's "Story of My Life," of which Dr. Ryerson himself wrote but 60 pages. He is now engaged on documentary history of education in Canada.

"Was Dr. Ryerson an autocrat?" asked the reporter.

"Far from it," was the reply. "He was exceedingly humble-minded in his search for truth. But he was not a man of detail. He stood in the watch-tower and looked ahead. The rest of us worked out the particulars."

"You must have known most of the public men for two generations in Canada?" observed the reporter.

"All of them," he replied. "I well know Lord Elgin, in 1848. He helped us immensely in our struggle for free schools. He was after the Scotch parochial model. He made a beautiful speech at the laying of the corner-stone of the Education Department. The motto on his coat-of-arms was simply "Fuimus"—meaning that his ancestors were Kings, for he was descended from the Bruces. He was an ideal man of affairs and a man of wonderful courtesy."

"How do the public men of today compare with the former ones?" asked the reporter.

"Unfavorably. There is less chivalry and courtesy. I am afraid that begins in the schools, as well as in the home. In 1871 I drew up a series of twenty moral lessons, including such subjects as "reverence to superiors," which the teachers read and discussed on each Friday afternoon, which was made a sort of dies non. The results were extremely beneficial, but in 1876, when Mr. Crooks became Minister, these lessons were discarded and decadence set in. The complaint is well-founded, and it is only by some such means that it can be remedied."

"Do you think children's manners are degenerating?"

"I do. In the old days one never met a boy whom he know who did not touch his cap or a girl who would not make a slight curtsey."

Dr. Hodgins went on to refer to his efforts to have the school walls decorated with pictures and statues which would lead the scholars to think and to ask questions, for example, about the great men of the past. In this connection he met with an unexpected difficulty in procuring a photo of the statute of Sir John Colborne, founder of Upper Canada College. The only one in existence is in the Devenport Navy Yard at Plymouth, but the commandant absolutely refused to allow a photo to be taken. The statue was near the magazine, and the commandant seemed to think that some navy secret might be betrayed. It was only after his return from England and after correspondence as representative of the Government that the commandant relented.

"Business men complain that the children are already taught too many subjects, and are not taught the rudiments thoroughly."

"I agree with that," replied Dr. Hodgins, "but you know I am merely librarian now, and cannot be expected to criticize the Department."

A Gardener's Triumph.

By grafting and hybridizing by means of bees a Hamilton, Ontario, gardener has produced a plant that produces potatoes on the roots and tomatoes on the stalk.

Not Contrasting.

"Do you think Johnnie is contracting bad habits at school?" asked Mrs. Caution of her husband.

"No, dear, I don't; I think he is expanding them," was the reply.

Distressed.

"Madam, will you officiate at our church fair?"

"Dear me, I never did a dishonest thing in my life."

Perhaps one reason people go late to church is that they don't have to go early to get a seat.—Atchison Globe.

ANECDOTES OF TRAVEL.

Some Gathered From All Parts of the World by Lloyd's Weekly Newspaper of London.

In clubs small mistakes often break cherished friendships. A rather pompous gentleman informed an acquaintance in the smoke-room that he intended to spend his holidays in a circular tour.

"Ah," remarked the other, whose mind did not soar beyond the Underground Railway, "are you going to take the Inner or the Outer Circle?"

He cannot understand why his friend will not speak to him now.

Civilised Stink!

The tastes of Europeans and the "outer barbarians" vary in the strangest manner. In this connection there is a story told of old Lobengula's disgust when he came on Mr. Maguire's Eau de Cologne bottle.

"What's this?" asked the Matebele King. "It stinks!"

"Majesty," quoth a grovelling attendant, "the white men like the stink of that bottle."

"H'm!" rejoined Lo Ben, "that accounts for them smelling so vilely!"

Soul Saving.

A party were traveling in an Irish canal boat; it was Friday, a fast day. A fine boiled salmon was on the cabin table, and his reverence the priest was taking a very large helping of the fish, when one of the travelers called across the table:

"Will your rivrence plase to pass the fish? Do you think no one has a sowl to save but yourself?"

Chucked.

When the late Lord Russell of Killowen once visited the United States he joined Mr. Evarts, an American lawyer, in walking along the bank of a wide stream. They came to a point where Washington is alleged to have once thrown a dollar across the river, and the myth was duly related to the somewhat sceptical visitor.

"You don't believe it?" said the American. "But then, you know, a dollar went farther in those days than it does now."

"Ah," replied Russell; "it may have been easy enough for Washington, who threw a sovereign across the Atlantic!"

As Advertised.

A visitor to Marseilles, anxious to secure lodgings, had his attention attracted to a placard which, in addition to the usual announcement of rooms to let, gave the information, "Clock on every landing."

He entered the house, examined the rooms, but failed to discover the clocks. On appealing to the landlord, that functionary promptly replied, "Mercy, my dear sir, look out of the window." And there, sure enough, was a church clock, visible from every landing!

Ruling Passion.

An amusing incident happened during the troubles in the Argentine Republic, in 1890. While the Government and insurgent forces were face to face in a conflict, pouring deadly volleys of bullets into each other's ranks, a British tourist and his wife, arrayed in all the traditional equipments, pushed their way through General Roca's troops, and, taking their stand near the front, coolly levelled their field-glasses to survey the fight with the same sangfroid with which they would have witnessed a sham engagement at home.

Everyone looked at the bold travelers, and General Roca was so struck by their courage and inveterate love of sight-seeing at whatever risk, that, turning to an aide-de-camp, he remarked: "No wonder the British are the ruling race."

Thief Trapped.

A gentleman, who had been refreshing himself at one of the Paris boulevard cafes, hurriedly re-entered the establishment, and asked the waiter, "Did I leave behind me on the table a small parcel tied with a string?"

"No, sir," replied the waiter.

"By Jove, then, it's unlucky! I shouldn't like the parcel to get into strange hands, for it contained some valuable—"

"Jewels, sir?" suggested the waiter, smiling blandly.

"Good heavens! No, man; scorpions—some very rare and deadly scorpions!"

The waiter smiled no more. On the contrary, he turned deathly pale, and, sinking into the nearest chair, gasped as he pointed to his coat pocket: "They are there!"

Not Secret.

A well known Washington woman, doing the Cathedral cities of England last summer, wore a tiny American flag pinned to the waist of her traveling-dress. A good many of the English people whom she met did not understand, or pretended not to understand, what the flag represented.

"You belong to some secret society, I perceive," said an Englishwoman to whom she was introduced, pointing to the diminutive Stars and Stripes.

"Yes," responded the Washington woman, amiably, "there are, seventy millions of us!"

Scared Quaker.

The elder Booth, the American actor, once took the fancy to be an absolute vegetarian, and while possessed of this craze he was traveling on the Western steamboat, and happened to be placed at a table opposite a solemn Quaker, who had been attracted by the eloquent conversation of the great actor. The benevolent old Quaker, observing the lack of viands on Booth's plate, kindly asked:

"Friend, shall I not help thee to the breast of this chicken?"

"No, I thank you, friend," replied the actor.

"Then shall I not cut thee a slice of the ham?"

"No, friend, not any."

"Then thee must take a piece of the mutton; thy plate is empty," persisted the old Quaker.

"Friend," said Booth, in those deep stentorian tones, whose volume and power had so often electrified crowded audiences, "I never eat any flesh but human flesh, and I prefer that raw!"

The old Quaker was speechless, and his seat was changed to another table at the next meal.

All Up With Him.

"You had a high old time in Europe?"

"Yes," replied the returned tourist; "I had. I was done up at Monte Carlo, held up in the Apennines and laid up in Rome."

Insulting.

"If old Skynner doesn't take back what he said to me this morning I'll be hanged if I'll work for him any more."

"Insulting, was he?"

"I should say so. He said he thought he could get along without me."

THE TRUE SYMPATHY.

Mrs. Frank Leslie Tells of Friends Whose Light Touch Never Hurt the Wound They Healed.

Mrs. Frank Leslie writes:

Is Sympathy, with its pretentious great S, the most precious balm for a wounded heart?

Yes and no.

Far be it from me to deny that that there are forms and measures of sympathy that are indeed healing and sweet, but how seldom are they found! It must be unobtrusive to begin with. Like violets or lilies of the valley, it is to be known more by the subtle fragrance of its shy presence than, like the sunflower, by its breadth and insistence of form and color.

I have had friends whose very silence was the sweetest of sympathy—friends whose light touch never hurt the wound they healed; who never, by word or even look, suggested that there was a wound until I threw off the covering with which we all instinctively cloak our hurts from the common gaze.

A friend like this, a friend who is content to prove sympathy by silence until the sufferer invites speech, is far more likely to be admitted to the innermost chambers of the heart than the one who loudly knocks at the outer door, clamoring:

"Open, open! I have come to sympathize with you!"

To be pitied openly and avowedly and to hear it sweetly is probably the last test of a saint ripe for canonization, but I for one have no idea of how such a being may feel. It is not my metier, and I fully believe in at least one old and vulgar adage, "Cobbler, stick to your last!" So, not claiming saintship, present or prospective, I am free to confess that to be pitied frankly arouses the most murderous qualities of my nature, and, although the fetters of civilization may claim both my tongue and my hands, the pityist would probably be very much alarmed if she could see my heart.

That phrase "Tell me all about it!" is one that the acceptable sympathizer never uses. It is as fatal to the desired end as it is to throw open a window and hurl a handful of grain at a bird which you wish to lure to a cage it has deserted. The true way is to softly open the window, strew the grain inside where it is quite obvious, but may be taken or left, as the victim may choose, and then yourself retire out of sight. It is pretty sure that by this stratagem you will finally have your bird just where you want him, and in process of time he will warble out all the secrets of his heart to you. But rushing at him and shouting, "Now, tell me all about it!" is the very last way to win his confidence.

Another kind of sympathizer and a very offensive one is the person who essays to "keep up your spirits" in some season of bereavement and affliction. I once saw a friend of mine driven nearly mad by this sort of a Job's comforter. She came to the house of mourning to a stay of some days and apparently had laid in a stock of funny stories, society gossip and all sorts of conundrums, epigrams and frivolities generally. We never sat down at the table but this flood was loosed upon us, until one day my friend burst into tears and left the table, very greatly to the surprise of Mme. Malaprep, who inquired of everybody:

"Why what is the matter? Did anybody say anything to remind her? And I was trying so hard to keep up her spirits and all!"

A kindred spirit to this, but not so objectionable because she is not so funny, is the officious sympathizer, the person who insists upon distracting the mind of the sufferer by forcing all sorts of ordinary details upon it. If it is bereavement and the comforter is a woman, she insists upon discussing the mourning clothes and offering to run out and bring patterns, or send in some bonnets, or tell about the present mode of wearing a widow's veil. She discusses sleeves and has an opinion upon the new skirts and absolutely drags assents or dissents from the pale lips of the sufferer.

Time is not a healer. He is a destroyer. Time is the most heartless of sympathizer or comforter, for he brings no thought of comfort or self-justification. In fact, the harsh and bitter and cruel points of a great sorrow are those that time preserves and insists upon to the very last. Some kinds—nay, I will allow all kinds—of grief grow less poignant after awhile, but it is not because time has healed the wound, but because it has destroyed the sensibility and the memory and the environment of the sorrow.

The best of all the sympathizers this world has ever produced was that eastern sage who, being required by his king to produce a motto suited to every state of mind possible to humanity, enunciated, "This, too, will pass."

A School in the Woods.

The school in the woods, which was started this year near Berlin, Germany, for the benefit of weakly children, has proved very successful, says The London Standard. It was attended during the summer by 199 children who were allowed a free railway journey thither daily. They began their work at 7.45 o'clock with a wholesome meal of warm bread and milk and slices of bread and butter and jam. Lessons went on till 10, when they were again served with similar refreshment. After further lessons they had dinner at noon, consisting of meat, vegetables and potatoes. After an hour's siesta and further lessons they had bread and milk and bread and jam and at 6 o'clock warm soup, chocolate or cocoa. The children have been found to gain on an average of five pounds in weight. The school will be closed for the winter in November.

Pocket Mirrors For Men.

"Pocket mirrors for men?" repeated a wholesale notion man in response to an inquiry. "We sell hundreds of them every year. You will find them for sale on street corner stands and in some barber shops. I don't know who buys them. I can't even say I ever saw a man use a pocket mirror. But I know they are in constant demand in the trade. You can buy a very good one, metal, for 10 or 15 cents retail. Oval-shaped, flat mirrors for the vest pocket, made of celluloid, with a cover to protect the glass, cost 25 cents each."

THE STORE WINDOWS and What we saw in them.

"Buy from the fellow nearest home." A good all the year round motto.

This column is not intended to give a dry old inventory of everything in the Stores. We are just noting what our man saw as he passed with the crowd

E. Turner's confectionery store is profusely decorated, looks warm and inviting, and is crammed full of good things for Xmas. Chocolates in fancy boxes, Santa Claus stockings, a christmas tree, spicy apples, and luscious pears, form a tempting collection crowned with the motto "A Merry Christmas."

Mr A. M. Wright has a pretty display of silver articles suitable for Xmas presents. They represent all values and will suit all tastes.

A. Des Brisay's windows dispaly articles of Ladies' and Gent's wearing apparel to suit the season, and evidently every caller can be clothed as fancy dictates. The groceries are inside.

Mr Fatt, at the Post Office, keeps the depot for christmas greetings from everywhere. He has a fresh supply every day.

James Rae's hardware store is all a glitter with cutlery and the new granite ware. These make useful christmas presents, and are needed all the year round.

A. C. Hawthorne has a window full of goods which appeal especially to men and boys suits to suit all, with ties handkerchiefs, collars and cuffs, boots, and hats. He offers every inducement to be well dressed.

J. C. Beveridge's window has a fine display of very choice furniture, pictures, carpets, etc., all calculated to attract the attention of ladies bent on adding to their household belongings.

James Mitchell's meat market presents prime cuts of beef, with poultry and fish, looking very appetising.

B. E. Souch shows some dainty decorations which serve to show off the hundred and one things to be found in a Druggists and fancy goods department, supplemented with boxes of English bon-bons, etc.

The Medicine Hat Trading Company make a tempting display of apples, oranges, lemons, candies, etc., in their grocery department, which is prettily decorated, while their dry goods windows are filled with an elegant display of fancy things, too numerous to mention.

C. E. Neff, merchant tailor, is showing a lot of heavy winter goods and some fur coats.

J. E. Myer's window is full of photographs of local scenes and faces, all good looking.

C. S. Pingle displays the furnishings of a doll's house, with bedroom suite, hangings, etc., and several large, well-dressed dolls. At the back of these innumerable goods in the fancy line, Christmas and New Year's cards, views of the district, etc. The drugs are rigidly in the background just now, but you can buy physic by stepping inside.

McIntyre's feed and flour store on the corner, offers plenty of stuff from which the "staff of life" is made.

The W. B. Marshall Co. have a substantial looking display of everything one can possibly want in table silver and cutlery, etc., while the grocery department window is tastefully decorated and filled with oranges, nuts, figs, raisins, almonds, etc. etc., in boxes, just the sort of thing which makes it hard to pass by without stepping inside.

C. Brougham's windows are tasty looking, and with their great display of tobacco, cigars, pipes, form a regular smokers paridise.

W. J. Brotherton makes a splendid display of jewellery, and all sorts of pins, brooches, rings, watches and clocks, are there in endless variety, and apparently to suit all purchases.

Vic. Ready has a good show of tobaccos and smokers requisites.

W. M. Williamson has in his window some handsome stoves, suggesting that a "hot blast" is good now that winter is approaching. A lot of plated kitchen utensils make a bright show.

The Assiniboia Music store window is musical from top to bottom. Sheet music and musical instruments meet the eye at every turn, while the sounds floating out through the wide open door speak of gramaphones, organs, and pianos galore.

Stewart Clark & Co. are displaying some exceedingly pretty dress pieces, which are beyond our powers of description, and a lot of boy's suitings, and the fine arc light over the entrance adds much to the appearance of the store at night. Inside the visitor walks through lovely arcades decorated in the most artistic fashion, which must add much to the pleasure of shopping.

Turpin Brothers show a fine assortment of gent's furnishings designed to meet every taste and to suit every pocket. They can dress a man from top to toe, and make him feel "good."

Mrs Rowland's large windows are full of a great variety of millinery. Hats, and all sorts, trimmed and untrimmed, make a fine effect.

Moore and Moore are making a fine display of drawing room furniture, and other house furnishings.

Mrs E. W. Moore shows millinery in a bewildering assortment, which must be seen to be appreciated.

Miss McLeay has put millinery in the background just now and shows a lot of toys for the children.

Mrs A. E. Knapp shows some new and fashionable blouses, and all sorts of goods for ladies.

D. T. Flavin, (Medicine Hat Plumbing Company,) handles all sorts of articles required in hot water heating, gas fittings, etc.

Oswald Beeton has a splendid assortment of wall papers, in fact, as he says in his ad., "miles" of it.

A. E. Whiffin has his window full of artistic looking bottles containing various blends, which the disciples of Bacchus will doubtless sample during the christmas holidays.

Cook and Forster make a very fine show of confectionery, in the centre of which there is a large cake suggestive of cupids darts, and innumerable things in fancy bons bons and chocolates.

E. J. Hunt and Co. show great quantities of splendid beef, mutton and pork, supplemented by piles of turkeys, geese, ducks, and chickens, enough to make one wonder where it all goes to.

Carberry and Collier are displaying fine tailoring, and braces, ties, mufflers, gloves, silk handkerchiefs, etc., specially bought for the season's trade.

The Klondyke Restaurant exhibits pipes and tobaccos.

L. B. Cochran and Son make a pretty display of christmas fruits and groceries, together with many nice things in the dry goods department suitable for seasonable presents.

Miss Mitchell shows toys, books, magazines, etc.

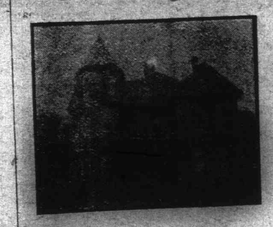
The Victoria Restaurant is strong in pipes and tobaccos.

Mr Bullivant says there's "nothing like leather." Home made boots are his speciality.

Kennedy and Co. have a fine show of fruits, groceries, canned goods, and seasonable looking garments ready-to-wear.

M. Leonard's window contains a great variety of chocolates, bon bons, and knick-knacks suitable for the season. It is smart looking and offers a great variety.

W. F. McEvans handles all the leading magazines and papers, and his window displays the christmas numbers, etc., and some pretty miniature Indian canoes, very suitable for presents.



Cawker's Pharmacy exhibit a lot of very beautiful brushes which should make elegant presents.

J. K. Drinnan makes a show of dry goods, groceries, etc., his west window is filled with christmas fruits prettily decorated.

The English Trading Company (Rimmer and McGowan) are showing special English goods. Mr. Rimmer established the English Club, and is the manager of the Medicine Hat Loan and Discount Company. Mr. Rimmer is one of the smartest men in town.

On the north side of the track—Geo. Mackie makes a fine display of beef, and poultry, fish, etc., with a good "christmassy" look about them.

A. B. LeBlanc has a great variety of seasonable looking goods in his windows, in the leading lines in grocery, hardware, and foot-wear. Toys for the children and lots of christmas fruits.

D. FLYNN DIES SUDDENLY.

(Peterborough Review)

A very sudden death took place this morning at the Royal Hotel, Hunter-st. Mr Daniel Flynn, brother of one of the proprietors of the hotel, died of heart failure. The deceased had been in good health until yesterday, when he complained of a sore throat. His condition was not considered serious, but this morning he grew considerably worse. About 9 o'clock he commenced to gasp for breath, and Dr. Coughlin was hurriedly summoned. Before he arrived, however, death had taken place. Dr. Coughlin says that death was caused by heart failure.

The deceased was thirty-six years of age and unmarried. For fourteen years he kept a hotel in Havelock. Then he spent eighteen months in Medicine Hat. He had been staying in town for the last two months with his brother Jas. Flynn, of the Royal Hotel. The above is a brother of Mrs H. Rice of Medicine Hat.

We are clubbing this year with the usual list of papers, Free Press, Telegram, Tribune, Family Herald, Nor-West Farmer, Farmer's Advocate, etc.

Building Record for 1904.

WE give below as full a report as possible of the building operations of the past year in Medicine Hat. The report may not be absolutely correct, yet we believe it may be accepted as a very close approximation, and it shows that a very substantial increase has taken place. We are very much indebted to the various contractors in town for reports which have enabled us to compile this article.

The result of the year's operations must be very gratifying to the people of the town, because the large amount of building done is not the result of a boom, but is the outcome of steady, substantial development, and all signs point to a continuation of this condition.

In reporting the building operations for 1904 the completion of the new round house and boiler house by the Canadian Pacific Railway stands pre-eminent, and is without doubt the most costly building of the year, and a great acquisition to Medicine Hat. This new round-house is a modern up-to-date structure built of brick, cement and iron, the roof being of cement in iron framing. There are 18 stalls for the accommodation of 18 locomotives, it is heated by hot air, is lighted by 30 windows through the day, and very soon it will be illuminated by natural gas lamps at night. The builders were the Wm. Grace Co., contractors, of Chicago, and the construction was under the management of Mr. J. E. Lussier, also of Chicago. The work cost $75,000.

The new Board School on Montreal Street north, is perhaps the building next in importance so far as cost is concerned, and the most important of all from other points of view. It is a splendid three storey building, built of red brick, and is a decided ornament to the town. It will afford accommodation for 320 scholars, and is planned and fitted in accordance with the most recent ideas upon the subject. The architect was Mr. G. G. Kerr, and the contractor R. A. Green, and the cost of the building when fully completed will be about $26,000.

The beautiful new church erected by our Baptist friends on Montreal Street North was fully described in our report of the opening services published in our last issue, so need not be repeated here. It will be sufficient to say that it has seating accommodation for about 350 people and cost close upon $7,000.

The Nurses' Home on Main Street, the foundation stone of which was laid on the 13th May last, is a splendid addition to the hospital buildings. It represents much hard work and self-sacrifice on the part of the citizens of the town, chiefly the Woman's Hospital Aid Society, and is proving a boon to the Nursing Staff. Its erection cost about $7,000 and the contractors were Morris & Trimble.

TOWN PROPERTY A SAFE INVESTMENT.

A large number of private residences were built, and these latter tend to show the confidence the citizens of the town have in the future. That Medicine Hat has a splendid future before it no one doubts. Placing money in town property of any kind is not viewed as a speculation, but as a sure and sound investment, which will make a good return, and may be easily realised.

THE GAS GUSHER.

The operations of the Town Council in the early part of the year in deep well drilling may, we think, fairly be included in the present article. The town possessed some half-dozen wells, which were all sunk to an almost uniform depth of 650 or 700 feet. These wells produced a certain quantity of gas but did not yield sufficient for the demands made upon them, and experience having shown that an increase in number did not appreciably increase the yield, the Council, last year, commissioned the sinking of a deeper well.

These operations were continued last spring, with the result that at a depth of about 1010 feet gas was struck in enormous quantities. So great was the flow, that the greatest difficulty was experienced in holding and conserving it, but this was successfully accomplished, and now the gas from that one well alone is supplying light and fuel for a host of private residences and for nearly all the stores and public buildings in the town, besides which it is now used exclusively for heating the boilers at the pumping station. Six months ago there were only 180 houses using the natural gas, now there are 400. Notwithstanding this great consumption the supply is still far in excess of the requirements. When the flow was first struck, it showed a pressure of over 400 pounds, and at the present time it is over 300 pounds. The well yields about 1,100,000 cubic feet per day. It is estimated that the revenue the town will derive from this supply will net about $10,000 a year. Medicine Hat, therefore, will be a town "living on its means," and will be a regular Utopia for people who grumble at having to pay rates. There is every prospect that the revenue from the corporation gas wells will pay all the running expenses of the town, and provide an overplus for local improvements. This is surely something for which the citizens may well return thanks during this Christmas season.

MISS ADA PALMER WALKER.

Miss Ada Palmer Walker who will be seen at the Opera House Monday December 16th in the musical comedy "Pretty Polly" is a celebrity in the musical world. Born in the old country she was brought up in Melborne Australia, and there began her musical career in St. Francis Church where Madame Melba was the leading soprano of the choir. She studied under Madame Chambers, Melba's instructress and on Melba leaving for Paris she was her successor. Later on she was secured by Australia's great impresarious, Williamson and Musgrove, and later made a couple of trips through India. Eight years ago thinking this continent a better field, Miss Walker came here and took up repertoire opera in the east where she scored great success and was later taken to San Francisco by the Trivoli management and is thought to have been one of the best favorites ever seen in this popular west coast playhouse. Two seasons ago she was secured by Mr. B. C. Whitney and starred in "Dolly Varden" as the successor of Miss Lulu Glaser. Miss Walker's latest vehicle is entitled "Pretty Polly" and comes from the States laden with the best press commendations. See advt.

We are asked by the Western Canadian Immigration Association to state that its second annual convention will be held in Winnipeg, on January 4th. It is pointed out in the letter that this locality should be represented at the convention in order to take part in electing of officers and shaping the policy of the Association for the coming year. Doubtless the Council and Board of Trade will take the matter up.

The Canada Life Company through their local agent Mr. J. G. Waldock, has distributed a very pretty wall calendar for 1905.

What Is Honest Trading?

"Honest Trading" requires that every article sold shall bear an equal share of the cost of doing business. Any article sold at a "sacrifice," at cost, or less than cost, does not bear this share of expense, and means that the expense must be made on other goods in additional profit. . . . . Which will you do? Pay cheap for a few things you may need, and pay dear for the things that you MUST have? Or buy honest goods at honest prices at all times and under all circumstances?

I study daily the reduction of the cost of doing business, buy in quantities, so as to secure lowest prices and cheapest freights, and have the assortment to meet your every need.

Soliciting a continuance of your esteemed patronage.

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 20th, 1904

CANADA'S CHRISTMAS.

This should be a merry Christmastide in Canada. No country under the sun has so great reason to celebrate the Christmas of 1904 as this great, rich prosperous Canada of ours. The year which is rapidly growing to a close has been one of progress and of plenty. Especially has this been so in Western Canada, where the Goddess of Plenty has poured down her benefits upon us and filled our barns and storehouses to overflowing. Our prairies have yielded their increase with an unstinted hand; our mountains have given us gold, iron, coal and timber in quantities which have only been limited by our desires and by our powers of production; our cattle are found in vast herds on "a thousand hills" among the magnificent ranges of the West, and our ships are carrying our surplus wealth across the seas to foreign lands. Our banks have multiplied in number and in wealth, and the coffers of the Government are full to bursting with the people's riches. New railroads are projected, new industries are cropping up on every hand, and such is the good opinion of the whole world that it may be said that at last Canada has come into her own. Therefore let us be merry, let us be thankful. There may have been some disappointments, we may have experienced some trouble somewhere, but these, are good for us and, compared with the good things which have been vouchsafed us, they sink into insignificance. Let us forget them and only remember the blessings we enjoy. Not least among those blessings may be counted the great harvest of new settlers the immigration season has produced. It is probable that over one hundred thousand souls have been added to the west this year, and the prospects for 1905 are even better than they were for 1904. With such a record behind us and such bright promise for the future, this should truly be a merry Christmastide. THE TIMES wishes its readers in every part of this continent and across the seas

A MERRY CHRISTMAS AND A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

THE CURFEW BELL

At the present time when so much discussion is taking place on the question of introducing a curfew ordinance, with a view of controlling certain of the juvenile population, we think a few particulars as to the origin of "The Curfew Bell" will prove of interest to our readers. William Andrews in his very interesting volume entitled "Old Church Lore," deals in an entertaining manner with the subject, and states that few points of national history have given rise to so much discussion as the facts and inferences connected with what is known as the curfew law. The testimony of the various writers on ancient jurisprudence differs widely as to the period at which the law originated, and yet more widely as to the object and intent on of those who imposed it upon the people of England. We will first briefly outline the regulation or custom as we find it under the Normans. At eight in the evening a bell was rung, the sound of which was the signal for everyone to put out; or rather cover their fires, extinguish all lights, and go to bed. This was the curfew law, which it has been the custom to regard as a repressive measure adopted by the tyrant Conqueror to prevent seditious meetings of the turbulent Saxons. We "find the name of curfew law employed as a by-word denoting the most odious tyranny, and historians, poets, and lawyers, speaking of it as the acme of despotism, levelled alone at the vanquished English." We will endeavor to show that, on the contrary, the law was in existence and force before the Normans trod the conquered fields of Angle-land, and that its intention was to cherish the good of the country by preventing the rise of conflagrations.

Throughout the north of Europe, in monastries and towns, a bell for covering of fires was in common use; a regulation which reason cannot but approve for most dwellings, even those of the higher classes, were built for the greater part of timber, the Saxon term for building being an expression to "make of wood." We read that London and other towns were frequently subject to fires. In England, the curfew law is said to have been made an established institution by King Alfred. When that monarch restored the University which had been founded at Oxford by St. Frideswide, he ordained among other thoughtful regulations, that a bell should be rung every night at eight, when all the inhabitants of Oxford should cover up their fires and go to bed. The intention was not that the fires should be put out, but merely deadened. As Mr Lomax observes "The old fires were made in the centre of an open hearth, and the accumulated ashes were swept to the back and sides. At the curfew, the large logs were removed, and the cold ashes raked over the fire so as to cover it. A fire so covered will often keep smouldering for days, and can be re-lighted by adding fuel and admitting air, a most important consideration in the days of tinder-boxes. The same custom is still pursued in the backwoods of America, in the Australian bush, and in our own 'black country,' where great coal fires are 'raked' in the old fashion nightly."

The word curfew is derived from the old French carre-feu or cerre-feu, which afterwards became couvre-feu, and lastly curfew. Each of these terms, meaning to cover fire, indicates the intention; and there was a utensil known as the couvre-feu, a kind of metal cover, somewhat resembling a shield in form, the use of which was to be thrust over the fire when the bell rang. This probably would only be found in the houses of the wealthy.

King Alfred the Great passed away, and all the line of Saxon and Danish monarchs after him; yet probably the curfew, under one or another of its ancient names, was kept up as a national observance in each of their reigns, with more or less laxity. At last the Conqueror came, and after the sanguinary struggle, which had to roughly pave the way for England's advancement, he set himself the task of governing the people he had overcome. Whether he found the law of the curfew still feebly kept up, or whether it had died out we cannot tell, but we know that two years after the battle of Hastings—in 1068—he ordered fires to be covered at the ringing of an eight o'clock bell, and the people to retire to rest. He had probably been accustomed to a similar regulation in Normandy; and it is evident the enactment, however more severely enforced than the Saxons had previously experienced, could not have been purposed as a suspicious and contemptuous safeguard against them, for the haughty robbers called nobles were as subject to the curfew as the meanest swineherds they owned. There seems to have been from an indefinitely early period, a religious service at eight in the evening. When William, after the injuries received by the plunging of his horse as it trod upon hot ashes, lay dying, the vesper bell of a neighbouring church aroused him from the stupor which had gathered round his sinking mind. He asked if he were in England, and if that were the curfew ringing, and on being told he was in "his own Normandy," and the bell was for evening prayer, he "charged them bid the monks pray for his soul, and remained awhile dull and heavy." Polydore Vergil tells us that William, to convert the native ferocity of the people to indolence, ordained that the head of each family, should retire to rest at eight in the evening, "having raked the ashes over the fire; and for this purpose a sign should be made through every village, which is even now preserved, and called in the Norman, cover-feu." Mr Hutchinson, in his "History of Durham," speaks of the curfew with great bitterness: he says that William "under severe penalties, prohibited the use of fire or candles when the curfew bell should ring, to prevent associations and conspiracies. This bell was heard by the English as the knell of their departed liberty, and a repeated testimony of slavery."

We learn from Du Cange, that the ringing of the couvre-feu, ignitegium, or peritegium bell, as it was called in mediæval low Latin, prevailed generally in Europe during the Middle Ages as a precaution against fire; and this fact is alone sufficient to justify William in reviving and extending the law in this country.

Voltaire, in his "Universal History" ridicules the notion of the curfew being a badge of degradation; he observes that "The law, far from being tyrannical was only an ancient police, established in almost all the towns of the north, and which had long been preserved in the convents." And he adds this reason for it: "That the houses were all built of wood, and the fear of fire was one of the most important objects of general police." Throughout the reigns of William I., and his son, William II., the curfew law was rigidly enforced, and however good its intentions were, the rigour of its administration rendered it increasingly obnoxious. The politic Henry I., in 1103, wisely repealed the enactment, modifying the law, which however, though not compulsory, "settled into a cherished custom." Though perhaps no longer as Thomson describes:

"The shiv'ring wretches at the curfew sound
Dejected sunk into their sordid beds,
And, through the mournful gloom of ancient times
Mus'd sad, or dreamt of better."

Yet the very yeomen would doubtless for a long time welcome the hour that heralded rest. Certainly the name lingered as a dividing period of the day.

Blackstone says (vol. iv., p. 420) that Henry "abolished the curfew, for though it is mentioned in our laws a full century afterwards, yet it is rather spoken of as a known time of night (so denominated from that abrogated usage) than as a still subsisting custom."

In the Middle Ages, so much regard was paid to ringing the couvre-feu, that land was occasionally left to pay for it.

Instances of land being given for the ringing of the bell are at Mapouder, Dorset, where land was given "to find a man to ring the morning and curfew bell throughout the year," and at Ibberton, in the same county, one acre of land was given for the ringing of the eight o'clock bell, and £4 for ringing the morning bell.

Macaulay, in 1791 says; "The custom of ringing curfew, which is still kept up at Claybrook, has probably obtained without intermission since the days of the Norman conqueror." In winter, and in flat and dangerous localities, the ringing of the bell in the evening has often been the means of safely guiding and sometimes saving the lives of travellers; and there are instances on record of persons so saved leaving a sum of money for ringing this bell. Such is the story told of a bride who, from an English village, stole out to hide, like another Ginevra, from her friends on the wedding day. The place was near a wide moor, and the girl hid among the furze. When she sought to return, to laugh merrily at the anxious groom and guests, she, alas! took a wrong path, and presently found herself lost on the waste. The shades of night and the shrouding snow fell fast, and the bride had well nigh given herself up to despair, when, hark! the curfew bell! Yes, it is the well-known curfew bell solemnly, and O, how sweetly, pealing from the grey old tower, that overshadowed her home. After being guided to that home by the blessed sound, she presented a chime of bells to the church, and upon her death, years after, it was found she had bequeathed money to keep up the ringing of the curfew bell for ever.

The curfew bell may now be said to be one of the things of the past. True, here and there a bell may ring in the evening from the powerful force of old custom, yet all the associations of the custom itself are lost; the bell summons us from home; not commands to retire to sleep; the couvre feu is a rare object of interest in our museums; and now only in the volumes of the poets shall we find that "The curfew tolls the knell of parting day."

THE DISEASES OF POULTRY

SOME COMMON TROUBLES, PREVENTION AND TREAMENT.

The Poultry Division, Ottawa, points out that the treatment of poultry diseases should concern the farmer. If the healthiest and most vigorous fowls are kept for breeding, if the chickens are reared under satisfactory conditions there will rarely be disease amongst them. When disease does appear it will usually be found more satisfactory to kill and bury the sick birds than to undertake to treat them. Some of the commonest poultry diseases are catarrh, roup, and leg weakness.

CATARRH. Catarrh in poultry closely resembles the common "cold in the head" of man. It is accompanied by sneezing, difficult breathing and watery discharge from the nostrils, and is apt to develop into roup. Among the causes are lack of ventilation, draughts, dampness, exposure, and improper care and feeding. The prevention and treatment are much the same as for roup.

ROUP. The following are some of the symptons of the various stages of this infectious disease—puffed or swollen eyelids, watery discharge from the eyes and nose, eyes swollen and closed by offensive cheesy matter, thick gelatinous discharge from the eyes and nose; frothy mucous in the mouth and throat, throat covered with thick cheesy matter.

In the early stages of the disease the inflammation can be reduced by bathing the eyes and face of the fowl with a mixture composed of equal parts of sweet oil and whiskey. The fowl should be removed from the flock and fed on soft food. If the disease has reached the offensive stage the fowl should be killed, and the house disinfected with sulphur fumes or a three per cent. solution of creolin to prevent the spread of the disease. If it is desired to save a valuable bird, it is a good plan to loosen the discharge in the nostrils and eyes, and immerse the head 20 or 30 seconds in a one or two per cent solution of permanganate of potash. The treatment should be given twice daily until all symtons have disappeared. Roup is most prevalent in draughty, over-crowded and dirty poultry houses. The inside of the house should be well cleaned, and the ventilation and lighting so arranged that the house will be perfectly dry and free from draughts.

GAPES. This disease usually affects young birds, and as its name indicates is characterised by the chick gaping—opening its mouth at frequent intervals to get breath. As the disease proceeds the breathing becomes very labored. Gapes result from the presence of worms in the windpipe. The windpipe becomes inflamed, and this, together with the worms, is apt to cause suffocation of the chicken. When the inflammation extends to the lungs death usually ensues.

The worms may be removed by the fumes of sulphur or coal tar, or by dropping one or two drops of turpentine or calicylate of soda into the windpipe. A fumigator can be made from an old barrel. The ends of the barrel should be removed, and the chickens to be treated placed on a grating inside the barrel. The top of the barrel may be covered with an old sack, and a plate of burning sulphur placed on the ground inside the barrel.

Instead of using sulphur, the inside of the barrel may be painted with a mixture of coal tar and coal oil of the same consistency as paint. The chickens should be watched while under treatment, and removed as they show signs of being overcome by the fumes. Three treatments usually suffice; they are given night and morning. The worms are killed, lose their hold upon the internal surface of the windpipe, and the chickens cough them up.

The ground around the pens should be ploughed or dug up and air-slaked lime scattered over it.

LEG WEAKNESS. This is found in chickens that are housed in badly constructed brooders, overfed with unsuitable food, or not allowed sufficient exercise on an earth floor. When affected, place them on ground covered with chaff, and feed animal food and small grain freely. One half the disease of poultry arise from lice and other parasites, for when affected with vermin they fall an easy prey to disease. To make them profitable they should be kept in clean and comfortable quarters and free from lice and mites.

If you read all the ads in this paper you will know that our local merchants are up-to-date and you need not send away east for a Christmas present.

Father Schulte will be leaving next month and will be succeeded by an English Father. Father Qu de Lanverzin, a French noble, is expected shortly to take duties at St. Patrick's Church.

There will be a midnight Mass in St. Patrick's Church on Saturday night the 24th December, and High Mass will be celebrated at 10-30 o'clock on Christmas morning. Vespers at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The distribution of prizes to the children with a Christmas tree will take place on Monday the 26th at o'clock.

The Town and the C.P.R., acting jointly, have made great improvements at the entrance to the railway depot. The old broken planking to which attention was drawn in this paper a few weeks ago, have been replaced with a broad well built platform which not only looks better but is safer for the general public.

Skating has been general on the Saskatchewan river during the last week or so and the reach over the bridge is crowded every afternoon and evening. The weather has been exceedingly mild and favorable to outdoor skating. On Monday afternoon Miss Nellie Colter was skating under the bridge when the ice broke and she went through. Some friends helped her out and she escaped with a slight wetting.

The conservative party have entered protests against six seats in Manitoba. The members against whom the petitions have been made are: D. W. Bole, Winnipeg; Hon. Thos. Greenway, Lisgar; Hon. Clifford Sifton, Brandon; J. E. Cyr, Provencher; S. J. Jackson, Selkirk; John Crawford, Portage la Prairie. General charges customary to such petitions are being made, and the petition ask that the election be declared null and void. Protests were filed next day against three conservative members for Manitoba, so that now every seat in Manitoba, except Dauphin, which went by acclamation, is under protest.

DO CHRISTMAS SHOPPING EARLY.

These are the days when the wise are doing their Christmas shopping. The unwise will wait until the 24th of December and they will buy unsuitable presents at great discomfort to themselver and others. If you are wise you will be more happy for there can be no real Christmas spirit without thought devoted to the things which are given. Think it out, and find out now, what it is that will please this or that dear friend, and go and get it.

CHRISTMAS DAY

Christmas Day falling this year on Sunday its observance was characterised principally by religious services in the churches. All of these were well attended and went to show that even though we of Medicine Hat are far removed from the larger centres of population, we were not in any way behind them in our observance of the nativity of the founder of our christianity. The churches made a special effort this year and we venture to assert that in no part of the world were services more cheerfully attended or religious exercises more devotionally observed than here in the centre of the Great Canadian West. The services, like hundreds of others in our new Western towns, were an exemplification of the beautiful words of the Te Deum, that "The holy church throughout ALL THE WORLD doth acknowledge Thee," and the record will show the east that the west is carrying the christian religion along in the forefront of the march into the prairie land.

ANGLICAN CHURCH

St. Barnabas Church was beautifully decorated for christmas day, and the various services were well attended. The services conducted by the Rev. W. Nicolls, were: Holy communion at 8-30; Morning service at 10 o'clock; Litany and celebration of the Holy communion at 11 o'clock; Evening service at 7 o'clock. The choir, augmented for the occasion, sang an anthem and rendered the canticles very acceptably, and at the evening service some carols were sung.

ST. PATRICKS

The Rev. Father Schulte, the resident priest, conducted the christmas service in the Roman Catholic church on christmas day, and there was a large attendance. There was a midnight Mass on Saturday night, High Mass was celebrated on Sunday morning, at 10-30, and Vespers at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Special music was sung at each service. The distribution of prizes to the children, with a christmas tree took place on Monday.

FREEMASONS AT THE METHODIST CHURCH

The members of Medicine Hat Lodge accompanied by a number of visiting brethren attended divine service on Sunday evening. About 40 members of the order assembled in the Lodgeroom at 6-30 p.m., and after the Lodge had been opened in due form they were called off, and forming in procession, wearing full regalia, marched in procession to the Methodist Church, where seats had been reserved for them in the front portion of the auditorium. The service was conducted by the pastor of the church, Rev. J. M. Harrison, who preached an excellent sermon, founded upon the words: "Sir, we would see Jesus, (St. John, 12 chap., part of 21st verse). The Rev. gentleman made reference both in the course of his sermon and in his prayers to the members of the organisation and invoked the divine blessing upon the well-known efforts of Freemasons in the cause of charity and brotherly love, in the alleviation of distressed brethren, and the helping of widows and orphans. The choir acquitted themselves well, and solos were sung by Mr. W. J. Brotherton and Mr Sullivan of Nelson.

Among the brethren present were: Bro. C. E. Smythe, W.M.; Bro. F. G. Forster, I.P.M.; Bro. O. W. Kealy, S.W.; Bro. T. E. Carberry, J.W.; R.W. Bro. W. H. Finlay, Treas.; Bro. H. W. Ireland, Secy.; M. Wor. Bro. Thos. Tweed, Chaplain; Bro. J. H. Binns, S.D.; Bro. W. N. Adsit, J.S.; Bro. C. E. Noble, Tyler; Bro. P. E. Breckenridge, Bro. W. J. Niblock, Bro. R. C. Becker, Bro. H. Morrow, Bro. B. O. Nason, Bro. H. H. Ross, Bro. W. Lowe, Bro. B. F. Souch, Bro. G. W. Evans, Bro. H. L. Tweed, Bro. P. Robertson, Bro. John Read, Bro. C. Calkins, Bro. P. McLeay, Bro. L. W. McBean, Bro. John Rutherford, all of Medicine Hat Lodge. The following were visiting brethren: Bro. Walter V. Sanders, Bro. J. C. Beveridge, Angonquin, No. 434; Bro. J. H. Wyatt, St. Thomas, No. 44; Bro. Jas. Morrison, Shetleston, St. John, No. 128; Bro. Geo. Mackie, St. Clemens, No. 688, Scotland; Bro. John McNeely, Orient, No. 339, Toronto; Bro. W. C. Chamberlain, Sorch, No. 254; Bro. W. C. Harris, Corinthian, No. 15.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The services in the Presbyterian Church on christmas day were conducted by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Morrow, and drew large congregations, morning and evening. The preacher selected texts and founded his discourses upon the origin of the great christian festival, and the choir sang music which had been specially prepared for the occasion, including the anthem "Arise and Shine," in which the solo was taken by Mr C. Stutfield. In the evening Miss Ada Palmer Walker assisted the choir and contributed the solo, winning golden enconiums both for her beautiful voice and her impressive rendering of the peice.

BAPTIST CHURCH

At the Baptist Church the services were specially arranged for the occasion, and were bright and hearty. The Rev. S. Everton, pastor, preached seasonable sermons, and the choir led special music appropriate to the occasion.

SENSATIONAL AFFAIR

Rancher shoots himself at the Royal Hotel,

The town was thrown into a state of intense excitement on Tuesday afternoon by a sensational affair which happened at the Royal Hotel about 3-30 o'clock. A well known rancher, named T. F. Teagarden, manager of the lower ranch of the Drowning Ford ranching company shot himself in one of the bedrooms and was taken to the hospital in a dying condition. The facts are these: Teagarden came to town on Monday at the invitation of Mr J. H. Spencer, to spend a day or two over christmas. On Tuesday he dined with Mr Spencer's family, but did not appear to be very well and could not eat much. He left there at 1-35. At about 3 o'c. he entered the Royal Hotel, went to the room as signed to him. Half-an-hour later a shot was heard and he was discovered shot through the head. The door was locked, but Mr J. Brown the landlord, opened the door with another key. Teagarden was found seated in a chair. His coat was off, and he was reclining on his right arm, which was resting on the dressing table, which was covered with his blood. He was not dead. The deed was committed with a heavy revolver marked "Bisley Model, 32." It was found under the bed, and contained three live cartridges and one empty shell. Dr. Smyth was quickly on the spot, and the poor fellow was placed on a stretcher and conveyed to the hospital. Mr H. W. Ireland, secretary of the ranch company was summoned and he identified him as T. F. Teagarden.

Mr W. Marshall interviewed by a Times representative said, I saw Teagarden come in, sign the register with a firm hand. Then he went up-stairs and in ten minutes I heard the shot.

Mr J. H. Spencer arrived shortly after and stated the facts given above as to his dining with him at mid-day.

Tom Howard, an employee of the Hotel, interviewed by the Times representative said: I was standing in the office, and was passing a joke with two of the girls who were halfway up the stairs, when I heard a shot upstairs, and rushing up I found Teagarden's door locked, and through the keyhole I could see him bleeding. Mr Brown came and opened the door and we went in and found him sitting in a chair, shot through the head.

On the dressing table were found two letters, one addressed to Mr J. H. Spencer, Town, and the other to Miss Lilian McTaggart, Lamberton, Minnesota, U.S. These were taken possession of by Dr. Smythe as coroner.

Coroner Smythe informs us that the poor fellow died about 8 o'clock in the evening. It was not possible to save his life, the bullet having passed through the brain. In the letters referred to above the deceased asked Mr Spencer to settle up his affairs, showing the case was one of suicide. The Miss McTaggart mentioned above is deceased's sister. It appears they lost their parents while very young, and being adopted by a family named McTaggart, the sister has always been known as McTaggart. There is no known cause for the terrible deed and we are sure the greatest sympathy is felt for his sister. The body will probably be shipped east for burial.

OVERHEARD AMONG THE CURLERS.

That the scratch matches on Monday brought out much latent skill.

That Deb is heart-broken because he has to say he beat the Cousin's rink.

That Skip Cousins says "it was a put-up-job" to save Deb's feelings.

That there was trouble with the ice.

That one skip sat down a good deal.

That three skips failed to beat a green rink.

That J. B. swore—that the top came off the sprinkler.

That all the other curlers swore that J. B. swore, the top came off the sprinkler.

That explanations were rife next morning.

That the losers said the ice was not right.

That the winners are fully satisfied the ice was in splendid condition.

RULE BRITANNIA.

NEW YEAR'S DAY.

The King of Light, father of aged Time,
Hath brought about that day, which is the prime
To the slow gliding months, when every eye
Wears symptoms of a sober jollity;
And every hand is ready to present
Some service in a real compliment.
Whilst some in golden letters write their love,
Some speak affection by a ring or glove,
Or pins and points (for ev'n the peasant may)
After his ruder fashion, be as gay
As the brisk courtly sir) and thinks that he Cannot, without a gross absurdity,
Be this day frugal, and not spare his friend
Some gift, to show his love finds not an end
With the deceased year.

POOLES ENG. PARNASSUS.

In the volumn of "Elia" an excellent paper begins with "Every man hath two birthdays: two days, at least, in every year, which set him upon revolving the lapse of time as it affects his mortal duration. The one is that which in an especial manner he termeth HIS In the gradual desuetude of old observances, this custom of solemnizing our proper birthday is passing away or is left to our children, but the birth of a new year is of interest too wide to be passed by without considerable notice being given to it. No one ever regarded the first of January with indifference. It is that from which all date their time, and count upon what is left. It is the nativity of our Common Adam."

The article, in part, says:

"Of all sounds of all bells—(bells, the music nighest bordering upon heaven)—most solemn and touching is the peal which rings out the old year. I never hear it without a gathering up of my mind to a concentration of all the images that have been diffused over the past twelvemonth; all I have done or suffered, performed or neglected in that regretted time. I begin to know its worth as when a person dies. It takes a personal colour; nor was it a poetical flight in a contemporary, when he exclaimed:

I saw the skirts of the departing year.

The elders with whom I was brought up were of a character not likely to let slip the sacred observance of any old institution; and the ringing out of the old year was kept by them with circumstances of peculiar ceremony. In those days the sound of those midnight chimes, though it seemed to raise hilarity in all around me, never failed to bring a train of pensive imagery into my fancy. Yet I then scarce conceived what it meant, or thought of it as a reckoning that concerned me. Not childhood alone, but the young man till thirty, never feels practically that he is mortal."

Ringing out the old and ringing in the new year with a "merry new year! a happy new year to you!" on new year's day, were greetings that moved sceptred pride and humble labour to smiles and kind feelings in former times; and why should they be unfashionable in our own?

We wish all our friends far and near a very Happy and Prosperous New Year. May 1905 be "THE BEST YET."

GOING INTO DEBT

Men are often warned not to go into debt, and as a general rule it is good advice. On the other hand there are plenty of men in the west to-day who would never have been worth a dollar if they had not gone into debt. Recently an editor in the Western States of America deplored the fact that many young men are putting their savings into land, stating that he believes the practice is bad, although in most cases the indebtedness is small and the deferred payments are easy.

We hold that this editor is wrong. Good real estate bought at the right price is the best and surest kind of investment. The rapid filling up of the Canadian west, the demand for farm homes, the productive capacity of all our good soils, render a permanent slump of land values well nigh impossible. The men who bought land 20 years ago in Manitoba and Assiniboia from $3 to $6 an acre and kept it have become comparatively rich through the great increase that has taken place in the value of the land. The young man who to-day buys land in Western Canada for $4 to $8, or $10, an acre will as certainly realise as great, if not a greater profit on the investment as did his father before him. It is, of course, almost needless to add, that the young man should use judgment, and buy good land. It cannot be denied that although we have millions of acres of splendid land yet awaiting the plough, there are poor patches here and there, and of these the investor should stear clear.

Our increasing population must be fed, the rapidly-developing manufacturing interests supported from the soil. All other countries of the world are looking to the United States and Canada to make good their deficient food supply. There will always be a market for our soil products at remunerative prices. This is as certain as anything can be in this world, and will result in a continued increase in land values. So that any young man in fair circumstances, with even a moderate income, can, with the utmost confidence buy land, making a small payment down and making the final payments in accordance with his income. In such a case going into debt is justifiable and a wise thing to do.

MAKING THE BEST.

We may, if we choose, make the worst of one another. Every one has his weak points; everyone has his faults; we may make the worst of these; we may fix our attention constantly upon them. But we may also make the best of one another. We may forgive, even as we hope to be forgiven. We may put ourselves in the place of others, and ask what we should wish to be done to us, and thought of us, were we in their place. By loving whatever is loveable in those around us, love will flow back from them to us, and life will become a pleasure instead of a pain, and earth will become like heaven; and we shall become not unworthy followers of Him whose name is Love.—Dean Stanley.

If Women Only Knew

That half their ills are due to impoverished blood, they would use Ferrozone and be saved lots of pain and suffering. Ferrozone is a perfect food for the blood and supplies the strengthening elements needed to maintain health and vigor. Ferrozone is a splendid tonic for weak nervous women and drives away those depressed feelings of dead weariness. You'll have strength, lots of it—your complexion will improve, you will feel ten years younger after a course of Ferrozone, which builds up the whole human organism; try it. Price 50c.

The Best Always.

It is said that the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal has more readers than any other five weekly papers in Canada combined. That it goes on increasing year after year is no wonder, for its marvellous circulation enables the publishers to spend more and more and more money each succeeding year to keep the Family Herald ahead of all competitors. This year we are told their premium picture, which is given to all who subscribe, cost more money than any two former premiums. "The Princess at Work" is the title of this year's picture, and it is a perfect beauty. One dollar seems a small amount to purchase such a picture, and a year's subscription to that big weekly. We learn that the Family Herald is having a phenomenal increase in the number of new readers this year.

All along the line there are cranks. Every town has them, and indeed the towns would really be less interesting without them, so don't let us be too hard on them. It is safe to say that every town in the west can boast of a few cranks amongst its valued citizens, and it would not be a difficult undertaking for anyone on a very short acquaintance, to pick out those given to sprightly and fantastic projects. The Shagginappi Club was formed in this town early in the year, and all "old timers" who were here in 1883 are eligible for membership. Nearly, if not all of these have been enrolled. Now, according to this arrangement, the club will gradually die out, and I am going to suggest to the club to take steps to prevent that, and to perpetuate the club for all time. It can be done in this way. In 1904 they admitted persons who came here in 1883. In 1905 let the club admit all who came here in 1884; in 1906 admit all who came here in 1885, and so on. This makes a 21 year's residence the qualification for membership. By this means the club would be popularised and would be kept up instead of dying out like a certain Indian tribe with "the last of the Mohicans."

To have a water pipe burst and flood your kitchen and cellar at any time is bad but to have it occur on a holiday, when plumbers are enjoying themselves is worse. Such was the experience of a north side family on Monday afternoon and the cut off tap in the cellar was broken because in the hurry it was twisted the wrong way. For thirty minutes, the water came down as it did at "Ladore." Paterfamilias was described by his youngest daughter as being "wild, wet and waxy."

Some people seem to think it is all right to burn natural gas in a stove without having a vent for escape of the burnt gas. This seems to be a mistake and has caused some trouble. One has only to look at the chimney of a house where gas is properly handled and to be convinced that to bottle up the burnt gas in a room must be wrong.

TROUBLE OVER BEAUPRE'S BODY

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 22.—A warrant was issued to-day for the arrest of Davidson, proprietor of an anatomical amusement booth, charging him with violating the law concerning traffic in dead bodies by exhibiting the remains of Edward Beaupre, known as the "Canadian Giant," who died early in July, while exhibited at a concession near the Pike.

The complaining witness is Dr. H. C. Robinson, of 5083 Westminster place, who alleges that Davidson has the embalmed corpse of Beaupre on exhibition at the museum. Davidson is said to defend the exhibit upon the ground that he has the permission of Beaupre's father, Gaspard Beaupre, of Winnipeg. In this connection a telegram is exhibited. It purports to have been sent from Winnipeg, July 6th, and reads: "Do what you please with the body of Edward."

It will take at least three years before they will be able to report to another conference.

PROPOSED BURNS CELEBRATION

The Scotchmen of Medicine Hat are talking of celebrating Burns' birthday, on the 25th January, by fore-gathering on that date and dining together. A suggestion to form a St. Andrew's Society has also been made. The occasion of a Burns celebration would be an excellent opportunity of starting a St. Andrew's Society which could then be got in working order by the time St. Andrew's day 1905 comes round.

WHAT BRANDING MEANS.

How the Horse Feels During the Maddening Process.

Now, most steers and all horses object to the branding process, says Sewell Ford in "Horses Nine." Even the spiritless little Indian ponies, accustomed to many ingenious kinds of abuse, rebel at this. A meek eyed mule, on whom humility rests as an all covering robe, must be properly roped before submitting.

In branding they first get a rope over your neck and shut off your wind. Then they trip your feet by roping your fore legs while you are on the jump. This brings you down hard and with much abruptness. A cowboy sits on your head while others pin you to the ground from various vantage points. Next some one holds a redhot iron on your rump until it has sunk deep into your skin. That is branding.

The burn of a branding iron is supposed to heal almost immediately. Cowboys will tell you that a horse is always more frightened than hurt during the operation and that the day after he feels none the worse. All this you need not credit. A burn is a burn, whether made purposely with a branding iron or by accident in any other way. The scorched flesh puckers and smarts. It hurts every time a leg is moved. It seems as if a thousand needles were playing a tattoo on the exposed surface.

Neither is this the worst of the business. To a high strung animal the roping, throwing and burning are a tremendous nervous shock. For days after branding a horse will jump and start, quivering with expectant agony, at the slightest cause.

A Life Saving Order.

Many years ago the American warship Delaware came near foundering off the coast of Sardinia while luffing through a heavy squall during a morning watch. The "unauthorized letting go of the fore sheet" alone saved the ship from going down with 1,100 souls on board. The first lieutenant, afterward Commodore Thomas W. Wyman, with difficult climbing succeeded in reaching the quarter deck, where, snatching the trumpet from the officer in charge, his first order, given in a voice heard distinctly fore and aft, was "Keep clear of the paint work!" This command to hundreds of human beings packed in the ice scuppers like sardines in a box instantly restored them to order and prevented a panic, they naturally feeling that if at such a time, with a line of battle ship on her beam ends, clean paint work was of paramount importance their condition could not be a serious one.

Origin of "Canard."

Here is a newspaper derivation of the word "canard." A canard means, in French, a duck; in English it has come to mean a hoax or fabricated newspaper story. Its origin is amusing. Many years ago a French journalist contributed to the French press an experiment of which he declared himself to have been the author. Twenty ducks were placed together, and one of them, having been cut up into very small pieces, was gluttonously gobbled up by the other nineteen. Another bird was then sacrificed for the remainder and so on until one duck was left, which thus contained in its inside the other nineteen! This the journalist ate. The story caught on and was copied into all the newspapers of Europe. And thus the "canard" became immortalized.

The Eyes of the Musk Ox.

The skull of the bull musk ox is remarkable for the development of the eye orbits, which project sufficiently beyond the plane of the frontal bones to compensate for the interruption the horns would otherwise make in the range of vision. The musk ox, however, does not seem to rely greatly on keenness of sight, far less on acuteness of hearing, for the ears are of small dimensions and are completely covered by the heavy growth of fur about them. The organs of scent are evidently more highly developed, and they exact of the hunter his greatest cunning.

Safe From Poisonous Serpents.

A physician, who spent some time in the countries bordering on the gulf of Mexico, found a curious body of men among the natives called curados de calebra, or the safe from vipers. Having been inoculated with the poison of the serpents they were proof against their venomous bites. The inoculation was made with the venom tooth of a viper and the bulb of a native plant called mano del sapo (toad's hand). The preventive inoculation has been an old custom among the natives of that region.

A Suggested Cure.

"Your son," said the phrenologist to the anxious parents, "will become a poet some day."

Here the father interrupted with an air of deep concern. "But don't you think we could cure him now if we could whack the poetical bump with a sledgehammer or something like that?"

A Disgrace to His Race.

"Will I go r-round an' shake hands with th' prizefighter?" he repeated. "Niver! He's an frishman an' a disgrace to his native land; no liss."

"How is that?"

"He won't fight ixcipt f'r money."

Land Poor.

Hassit—It's strange you're so hard up, old man. I thought you owned half of Swamphurst and had lots to sell.

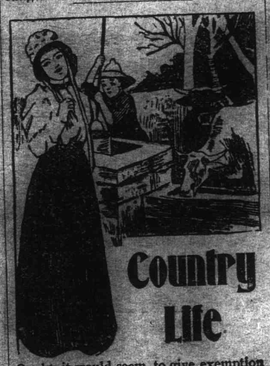
Haddit—I have, but what I want is lots to eat.

What a man sees only in his best moments as truth is truth in all moments.—Cook.

THE YEAR IN BEEF CATTLE.

Asked by a Free Press representative what he thought of the cattle trade of 1903, Mr H. A. Mullins said:

"In reviewing the condition of the cattle trade for the past season, there are a few points of importance to which attention should be given. The first point to which I wish to call attention is the situation from the standpoint of the rancher and producer. These men have no doubt been up against a bad combination of circumstances. The first blow to their interests came in the hard winter which was experienced in a great many sections of the west—a winter which resulted in losses ranging from ten to twenty per cent. in the range districts and which left the cattle in poor shape in the spring. Then the summer season was not a favorable one for fattening, and the breaking out of mange necessitating dipping, and handling the cattle proved to be an additional hardship.



"When there is added to these troubles of the producer of beef cattle, the extremely low prices which have prevailed during the season in Britain, then we must acknowledge that the beef producer in this country has had a fight against great odds. While it is true that a few ranchers in the west who shipped their beef cattle got good returns, still the exports as a whole, both to the producer and exporter, have been far from satisfactory.

"There were several factors which had a tendency to keep prices low, in Great Britain. The first and most important of these was the large number of inferior and half-finished cattle which found their way on to the British market. If conditions in Great Britain had been at all favorable this fact in itself would not have resulted so seriously; but when we also take into consideration the unfavorable labor conditions and the large number of unemployed working men who are the backbone of the consumption of our colonial meats, we are not surprised at prices reaching so low a level.

"The strike in Chicago market also had its effects on the trade and heavy runs of inferior cattle were dumped on that market, and for these an outlet had to be found, and a large percentage was placed on the British market. The supply of British fed cattle was also unusually large, and, coming into competition with the cattle from this country, had a tendency to keep prices low.

"As a whole the trade of beef cattle this year has been one of the worst on record, but with the improvement of labor conditions in Great Britain, and the favorable weather for the stock on the ranges in the west we look for a decided improvement in the trade for another season.

"I am leaving on Saturday for Montreal and go direct to Liverpool and Glasgow to perfect my arrangements for the next season's operations. We have during the past season handled the output from most of the leading ranges."

Country Life

Ought, it would seem, to give exemption from the diseases which prey upon the residents of thickly populated cities. But there is no exemption from disease, and in the country, as in the city, one may see the cheeks grow hollow and the eyes grow dull while the frame wastes away with that terrible disease, consumption.

Weak lungs are made strong by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures obstinate and stubborn coughs, bronchitis, bleeding of the lungs and other symptoms which, if neglected or unskillfully treated, terminate fatally in consumption. The action of Golden Medical Discovery in the curing of wasting diseases is entirely philosophic. Emaciation, and consequent loss of weight, are among the most striking symptoms of what are known as wasting diseases. The body is not being adequately nourished, and the cause of this lack of nourishment is not lack of food but lack of ability in the stomach and the other organs of digestion and nutrition to prepare the food for the assimilation and nutrition of the body. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and the organs of digestion and nutrition, and so enables the body to be nourished back to strength, in the only way by which strength can come; that is, by food perfectly digested and assimilated.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a temperance medicine. It contains no alcohol, neither opium, cocaine or any other narcotic.

Accept no substitute for "Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for you, though many things may pay the dealer a larger profit.

CAUGHT COLD.

"The first day of this year," writes Mrs. Kate Schey, of 776 St. Paul Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., "I caught a heavy cold, which settled on my lungs and brought on a hemorrhage. From that time on until the first of April I bled from my lungs five different times. I was so weak and undone I could only do the lightest work. The doctor told me I was going into consumption. My breath was short and at times I could hardly get my breath at all. This is the state I was in when I began to take Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. After the first bottle I was much better, and I could walk two or three blocks without trouble. My breath was not so short and I was much improved. After taking four bottles I could work all day, and I never felt better in my life. I think your medicine the best in the world and I recommend it to all who are troubled as I was."

WILL MAKE AFFIDAVIT.

"I was sick for about three months, had chills, fever, and coughed a great deal," writes Mr. W. L. Brown, of McDearman, Jackson Co., Tenn. "Most of my neighbors and friends thought I had consumption. I was reduced in flesh, and was very weak—only weighed 110 pounds; my physician thought there was little hope for my recovery.

"My wife went to the store to get some anti-febrin, quinine, etc., for me and a friend of mine (Mr. W. W. McDearman), who had been taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery recommended this medicine for me. Finally I decided to use it, after my physician told me that it would be good for me. I sent and got one bottle and before all was taken I weighed 140 pounds—a gain of 30 pounds. I am still taking the Golden Medical Discovery, have taken nearly two bottles, and now weigh 163 pounds, which is more than I ever weighed. I am still gaining strength and taking the Discovery. I wish to say that this is a recent recovery, that only two months ago I only weighed about 110 pounds.

"I can and will make affidavit to this full statement any time. If you wish to use this or a testimonial do so, and I will answer all letters from inquiring sufferers."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, containing 1008 pages, and over 700 illustrations, is sent free on receipt of stamps to defray expense of customs and mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the book in paper covers, or 50 cents for the book in cloth binding. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

H. H. ROSS IS HERE.

Captain H. H. Ross, the owner of the Assiniboia Hotel, and one of our most popular former residents arrived in town on Friday night from the north. The genial captain is looking well notwithstanding that he spends his time hundreds of miles north. He left his boat in winter quarters at Cedar Lake, and travelled 150 miles by dog-train to the most northerly point on the C.N.R., where he took train for Winnipeg, and then came West. He brought a huge sturgeon for Mr H. C. Yuill. Captain Ross is pleased to see how well Medicine Hat is progressing.

FUR TRAPPERS.

The Kind of Life They Lead Up In the Wilds of Canada.

"You admire furs," commented an old trapper as he sat contentedly smoking his pipe. "You should go where we get them. Ah, that is the life—pure air, plain, wholesome food and then after the season's work that brigade of fur loaded canoes going off down the lakes. Every canoe is loaded, you know, almost to the gunwale, and they string out one behind the other, a long line of them. They usually start out early in the morning and paddle, paddle, paddle, hour after hour down this stream, through that lake and so into civilization.

"But they don't forget to eat—oh, no! About noon they go ashore. They 'snub' the canoes to overhanging trees and hunt around for a good flat rock on which to start their fire. But those fellows don't take an hour for luncheon. Time is too valuable to them. They take a drink of tea, a bite of pork. That is about all. Then they are off again. The men spell each other at the paddles, and occasionally the canoes are bunched by steersmen for a good smoke.

"When night comes, the brigade goes ashore and pitches its camp. Tents are put up, campfires lighted and the supper prepared, great clouds of black flies and mosquitoes hovering around. Some of the men busy themselves preparing the great brown flapjacks for the next day, while others dry their moccasins or get their blankets ready to bunk in. Perhaps a canoe has to be patched the next morning before the start can be made.

"Oh, it is a great life up there in the wilds of Canada, where they get the furs. You should try it."

The "Tom o' Bedlams."

In the old days, when the supply of lunatics exceeded their accommodation at Bethlehem hospital, the difficulty was not met by the building of temporary annexes, but by the admission of outdoor patients, who went by the name of Tom o' Bedlams. As an old chronicle tells us: "They had on their left arm an armilla of tin about four inches long. They wore about their necks a great horn of an ox in a string or bawdry, which when they came to a house for alms they did wind, and they did put the drink given them into this horn, whereto they did put a stopple." It was found, however, "that several vagrant persons do wander about the city of London and countries, pretending themselves to be lunatics under cure in the hospital of Bethleem, with brass plates about their arms and inscriptions thereon," and these occasional patients had in consequence to be abolished in 1675.

A Brave Woman Sailor.

There are any number of instances on record of women sailing ships into port single handed when compelled thereto by some exceptional stress of circumstances. A typical case is that of the brigantine Moorburg, cholera stricken in the autumn of 1877 while on a voyage from China to Australia. The only one that escaped the pestilence was the captain's wife, and she was handicapped by having a baby in arms to suckle and attend to. Nevertheless she navigated the vessel into Brisbane, a voyage of some seven weeks' duration, reefing, steering and generally performing the work of a full crew, while tenderly nursing the sick during her spare moments.

A Large Order.

The proprietor of a certain restaurant had "leased" the reverse side of his bill of fare to a carriage manufacturer, who prints advertisements thereon.

The other day a customer in a great hurry ran into the restaurant, sat at a table and was handed a bill wrong side up by the flurried waiter.

The customer put on his pince-nez, curled his mustache with his left hand and shouted in a voice of thunder:

"Bring me a fly, a landau, two victorias and a dogcart! Got any wheelbarrows?"

The waiter fled.—London Answers.

Dressing It Up.

A Jasper county farmer paid a high tribute to the literary talents of a Carthage real estate agent the other day. He decided to sell his place and got a real estate agent to write a notice. When the agent read the notice to him, he said, "Read that again." After the second reading he said: "I believe I'll not sell. I've been looking for a place of that kind all my life and didn't know I had it until you described it to me."

Amateur Might Do as Well.

"Tell the truth, now. You are a professional beggar, are you not?" said the keen faced individual who had been approached.

"I used to think I was," replied the weary wayfarer, "but since 13 cents is all I have to show for a day's work I am forced to the conclusion that I am merely an amateur."—Stray Stories.

A Jerrold Retort.

When Albert Smith grew tired of being the butt of Douglas Jerrold's wit, he one day plaintively remarked, "After all, Jerrold, we row in the same boat."

"Yes," answered the clever playwright, like a flash of lightning, "but not with the same skulls."

Human Nature.

"What are the respective ages of the father and the son?"

"Well, I judge that the former is over fifty, because I notice he likes to be called 'my boy,' and that the latter is under twenty-five, for the reason that it pleases him to be addressed as 'old man.'"—Smart Set.

The Medicine Hat heating and plumbing Co., are placing upon the market a new gas burner, which they claim to be "best yet," and judging from the results of some experiments they have conducted, there are good grounds for making the claim. The burner is the invention of Messrs. Flavin, Nicolls, and Bradshaw, and it is intended to call it the F. N. & B. burner. Its inventers are prepared to pit it against any other burner on the market. It economises the consumption of gas and costs a third the price of other burners of a similar make.

Miss McNeely, daughter of Mr John McNeely, of the Medicine Hat Milling Company, arrived home on Sunday night, having finished her graduating course at Toronto Western Hospital, where she has been for the last three years. The friends of Miss McNeely will rejoice to hear that she was successful in winning the gold medal given by the Hospital for the greatest number of marks obtained in the final examination. The Times joins Miss McNeely's many friends in offering her congratulations upon her great success. This is her first trip west and we hope Miss McNeely will remain amongst us, as the west can appreciate talent as well as the east and we are certain that a short residence will convince her that West is best.

What Is Honest Trading?

"Honest Trading" requires that every article sold shall bear an equal share of the cost of doing business. Any article sold at a "sacrifice," at cost, or less than cost, does not bear this share of expense, and means that the expense must be made on other goods in additional profit. . . . . Which will you do? Pay cheap for a few things you may need, and pay dear for the things that you MUST have? Or buy honest goods at honest prices at all times and under all circumstances?

I study daily the reduction of the cost of doing business, buy in quantities, so as to secure lowest prices and cheapest freights, and have the assortment to meet your every need.

Soliciting a continuance of your esteemed patronage.

Methodist Christmas Tree.

The annual Christmas Tree and Sunday School Concert was held on Monday in the Methodist Church. Mr. W. J. Avery represented Santa Claus, and the numerous presents he distributed from the tree delighted the hearts of the youngsters. The concert programme was given by the Sunday scholars, and there was a well-rendered solo by Mr. Sullivan, of Nelson. The programme also included two hymns sung by four Chinese scholars, both of which were encored. The drill and the daisy drill given by a number of small girls, were very well done, and drew well-merited applause.

Notwithstanding counter attractions the church was crowded. The proceedings were very successful. Mr. J. Kennedy made an excellent chairman.

Great credit is due the committee who had the programme in hand.

Mrs H. D. R. Stewart will receive on the 3rd and 4th January.

FARM AND RANCH.

Good care of dairy cows pays.

A case which demonstrates forcibly the value of good care recently came under my observation, says L. O. Folle, Minnesota, in the Orange Judd Farmer. A neighbouring dairyman who sells milk direct to the city customers, owns 43 cows. Some time ago the average yield was 60 gallons of milk per day. For some reason the owner discharged his helper and secured a new man. To his surprise the cows began to gain in milk the increase finally amounting to 80 quarts, at which it remained practically constant. This increase was more surprising from the fact that the cows received exactly the same amount and quality of feed. The difference was brought about by more careful attention to details, kind treatment of animals, etc.

The new man's method of operation was about as follows: About 4 o'clock in the morning the cows were given as much clover hay as they would eat in an hour, after which they were milked and fed brewers' grain, about all they would consume without overfeeding. This latter point was carefully guarded against. Some of the cows would consume much larger amounts than others. They were gradually fed up to the maximum amount and carefully watched. If any cow showed signs of eating too much, her ration was promptly reduced. After the brewers' grain was consumed the cows were watered in the barn. The barn was then cleaned and the feeding floor swept. This work was concluded about 11 o'clock in the morning. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon the cows were again watered, fed grain consisting of corn meal and shorts, mixed in proportion of two to one. They were given six or eight pounds of this feed, according to the capacity of the cow. Corn fodder was then given and the cows allowed two hours for eating it. They were milked about 4 o'clock.

Much of the increase in yield seemed to be brought about by the difference in character of the two men who looked after the cows. The first had a sullen temper, hardly speaking except to answer questions. He had but little experience in taking care of dairy cows. He paid little or no attention to the different feeding capacity of individuals. He was not punctual about feeding and watering. The second man, while he did not have much experience, took special pride in doing his best and seemed to have a liking for the work. He fed each cow according to her capacity, and being of a quiet disposition caused no unnecessary disturbance when milking, feeding or handling the cows. He was very prompt, giving the feed and milking the cows at the same time each day. As the dairyman sold his milk for 5 cents per quart, the actual gain by changing men was $4 per day. This probably does not show all the gain, as undoubtedly the cows will milk longer under his treatment and remain in better condition.

A dipping schute has been erected on the Blood reserve near St. Mary's coulee, in Alberta, for the purpose of dipping the cattle belonging to the Blood Indians. A unique feature of this dipping schute will be the two stone towers at either end of the water, some nine feet in height, upon which are placed two large galvanized iron tanks each seven feet in diameter, in which are prepared the ingredients composing the dip. The solution is heated to the proper temperature and then run off into the vat. A fireplace near the vat aids in heating and circulating the mixture. It is hardly probable that the vat will be put to use this season, the weather being too cold, but dipping will be commenced early next spring.

The Best Dollar Xmas Gift.

One of the very best Christmas gifts, and one that will be appreciated by all during 1905 is a year's subscription to the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal. It costs but a dollar a year, and includes the lovely premium picture entitled "The Princess at Work." The publishers of that great weekly are planning to give its readers bigger value than ever during 1905. A dollar cannot be better spent. It is said the staff of clerks employed in the Family Herald office entering up names alone of new subscribers is greater in number than the whole staff of any five papers in Canada.

Start the new year right by subscribing for the Times.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING.

(The following was crowded out last weeks' council meeting Report.)

Councillor Forster, made application for a special grant for the agricultural society and on the motion of councillor's Smith and Stewart a grant of $120 was made.

CURFEW.

The Curfew petition which was laid on the table at the last meeting was then taken up and read. There were about 60 signatures to it.

The Mayor said he had looked up the ordinance governing the matter, and found that such a request could only be granted by the council on the presentation of a petition signed by one half of the resident ratepayers.

Councillor Forster. It says ratepayers.

The Mayor. Yes, this is signed by all classes, principally women, I think.

Councillor Penhale. Will those half the people bear expenses, that's what I want to get at. In the first place, the bell is not loud enough. Some children will be hard of hearing, and I imagine it would take six policemen to support that.

The Mayor. My own opinion is, it is unworkable. However we are not dealing with that, as we shall have to refer it back to those who prepared it.

Councillor Drinnan. I move Secy. Treas. be instructed to notify Mr Everton and others of the reading of the ordinance, stating that through lack of signatures the council is powerless to act in the matter.

Councillor Stewart seconded and it was agreed to.

THE WOOLLEN MILL

The council considered the application of Mr Tweed for exemption for the woollen mill from rates.

The Mayor observed that he knew the council would do anything they could legally do to assist the company, but it appeared it was now out of their power to do anything. But they could recommend the new council that if the mill started next year, they should give a rebate.

A resolution in accordance with the spirit of the above suggestion was adopted on motion of councillors Drinnan and Penhale.

This concluded the business. A special meeting of the council will be held this week to close up the business of the year as far as possible.

Editor W. J. Black, appointed Deputy Minister of Agricultnre for Manitoba.

W. J. Black, B. S. A., has retired from the managing editorship of the Farmers' Advocate. Friends of the genini journalist and hustling scientific agriculturist, who are not in the secret, will be surprised and pained on receiving the news, but for their reassurance let it be said that great things are coming to pass in the life of the young man. Likewise he is not tc be lost to Western Canada. Mr Black goes east to Shelburne, Ont., where next week Miss Day will be united with him in the holy bonds of matrimony. This event takes place on the 28th December. After a brief sojourn in the east, Mr Black will return to Winhipeg, and will assume the responsibilities of deputy minister for the province of Manitoba, vice Mr McKellar resigned. It is understood that the new deputy will assume his duties in the department shortly after the new year, and has already planned a vigorous campaign of farmers' institute work for the province. Congratulations Bro. Black. Mr Black is a cousin of J. J. Hewitt, of the W. B. Marshall Company.

DRUDGERY OF BEING A WIFE

I have lived a good long time in the world. I have made acquaintances by the hundreds; friends—not so many. Looking back upon the people I have known, I can safely say that the number of unhappy marriages I have personally witnessed has been very small indeed, said the late Sir Walter Besant. By far the larger number of wives have accepted cheerfully the position of housekeeper and matron. They have kept house for the husband and children whose happiness is their own.

Many of them have kept house with the earnest intention of making a house beautiful, which became a continual feast for themselves; many of them have brought art into every part of the daily life, which has been a continual feast for themselves, as well as the other members of the house; for all these matrons the daily work has been a daily delight. Then as for drudgery and monotony; is there none in a man's work?

Think of the monotony and drudgery of a city clergyman's life when every day he has tramped around the unGrateful slums. Think of the monotony and drudgery of a solicitor, always drawing up endless documents in the hideous legal jargon. No. The monotony of life. I am quite sure, is pretty evenly ladled out to working man or wedded wife.

What I have said over and over again, and do most stoutly maintain, is the very simple copy-book maxim that without love marriage must be intolerable; but given love as an essential, then the woman who yields to the promptings of her heart and accepts the burdens—light or heavy—of marriage, leads the happiest life.—Ex.

The Hardest Pain to Endure

EXPENSIVE JOURNALISM

It is estimated to cost from $1 to $2 per word to collect, compile and transmit war news from Manchuria. As the expense is shared jointly by many papers all over the world, it bears lightly on all. The Herald, as a subscriber of the Associated Press telegrams yesterday received the following story over the wire from the scene of hostilities:

On the front line of Russian defence between Mukden, Nov. 22.—During a ride around the front from which the Associated Press correspondent has returned, was noted a row towards the front line of trenches that might have presaged a Japanese attack. From a Chinese hut rushed a half-grown pig of the Manchurian razor back variety. There was a Cossack in hot pursuit. Other Cossacks joined in the chase, but the pig escaped and headed for the Japanese line, less than 400 yards away. Reckless of the possible consequences, six cossaks dashed off in pursuit, with their long brown coats tucked about their waists. But the pig had the legs of them, and with ear piercing shrieks headed across the land dividing the two lines, and charged the Japanese position. The opposite hill had been to all appearances vacant and silent as the grave, but a hidden trench suddenly gave a party of Japanese, and away they went after the pig. The Cossacks stopped, and the Japanese headed the pig diagonally back towards the Russian lines. They did not catch it, but a fresh relay of Russians took up the chase. The pig veered over again to the Japanese lines. Not a shot was fired all this time, and the Japanese and Cossacks stood within a hundred paces of each other in the open, laughing at each other's non-success, and hurling maledictions at the pig. The last we saw of it, the pig was keeping strictly to the neutral strip between the two forces, and heading westward in the direction of the Liao river.

Imagine the wire being burdened with such an item from the other side of the earth, at $2 per word, total sum $200.

Contemplate the amazing idea of news that must prevail when a trained journalist from the theater of war is permitted to "fill in" with such matter!

If there is a scrub newspaper man on a backwoods weekly in Alberta that couldn't write more readable stuff about barber shop gossip, he should be ashamed to apply for membership in the Western Canada Press Association.—Calgary Herald.

THE HOME.

With all man's enterprise and ambition in the line of making money there is nothing which he gets which is of so much real value to him as his home. And there is this good thing about the home—that it does not take so very much money to make it a pleasant spot. A man may be rich as the world goes, have a big bank account, bonds and mortgages, have a fine house, and be envied by his fellows, but if he be mated to a wife with an ugly temper or have boys and girls who go wrong, he, with all his wealth, cannot know what home is. There are lots of fine houses and poor homes.—Ex.

WEATHER REPORT.

The Times has had a good deal to say about the splendid fall weather with which this district has as usual, been favored during the past three months, and now we give thermometer readings for every day during that period. The thermometer, like the camera, cannot lie, and shows that while many parts of this continent experienced very broken, and in some cases, severe weather, we in western Assiniboia the spot destined to become the garden of Canada, enjoyed a run of three months of calm, bright, balmy, delightful weather.

The climatic conditions of Medicine Hat district are all that can be desired, and to those who feel tired of the raw biting atmosphere of the east, we say come and try it.

FALL WHEAT TO BUILD UP THE WEST

Mr C. W. Peterson, erstwhile deputy Minister of Agriculture at Regina, has great faith in winter wheat as an important factor in building up the Western part of the Territories. This cereal has been successfully grown in Southern Alberta for the past 15 years, but no general interest has been taken in the matter until the large influx of farming population during the past few years. Mr Peterson is persuaded that the growing of winter wheat will cause the most important development of the west that the world has ever seen, and that the time will come when there will be as much wheat grown west of Swift Current as there is east of that point. He very recently completed a trip through the Pacific Coast States, making inquiry into the winter wheat question, and is fully satisfied that the growth of this cereal is to be the making of the western country.—Lethbridge News

CALGARY JUNIORS V. MEDICINE HAT JUNIORS

A fair crowd assembled at the Skating Rink on Monday afternoon to witness the first hockey match of the season. The contesting teams were Calgary juniors and Medicine Hat juniors. At 2.20 referee W. Finlay lined the teams up. The home team at once carried the puck up to the visitors goal with a rush, and after three minutes play Douglas scored the first goal with a long shot. For the next seven minutes, play see-sawed up and down the ice, when Jarrett sprained his wrist, and went off. Tweed going off to even up matters, the visitors not having a spare man. Play was resumed with six men aside and after about five minutes play Calgary registered their first tally. Three minutes later Medicine Hat scored again, and in about the same time Melrose beat the goal-keeper, again making it three-to-one in favor of the home team. Shortly after play was resumed Blair got a crack on the mouth with a stick, cutting his lip, but he kept going. Melrose scored two more for the Hat, and Henderson two for Calgary. Half-time was called with the score five to three in favor of the home team.

In the second half both teams worked hard, and hard checking was indulged in freely. The ice was very sticky and much combination almost impossible, was but at times good hockey was played. Melrose was sent off for three minutes, and came back with blood in his eye, got the rubber and went up the ice like a flash; he did'nt score, but collided with the goalkeeper and another player, and all three went down. Nothing could be seen but a medley of arms and legs. The straightening out of this tangle was a feat calling for much ingenuity on the part of the referee and the other players. Both teams notched three goals during this half, the final score being eight to six in favor of the home team.

The teams lined up as follows:

CALGARY		MEDICINE HAT

Blair	point	T. Tweed
Beal	cover point	Armstrong
H. Beal	rover	T. Finlay
W. Green	centre	Douglas
Henderson	r. wing	Melrose

COUNCIL MEETING

The first meeting of the new Council was held to-day. Present: Mayor Forster, Councillors Stewart, Penhale, Drinnan, Sissons, Smyth, DesBrisay.

The minutes of the last meeting and a special meeting were read and confirmed.

A declaration was received from Mr. Mitchell, Town Solicitor, stating that the new Mayor and Councillors had taken the usual oath of office.

The Mayor read the following:—

To the Members of the Council of the Town of Medicine Hat.

Gentlemen,—In opening the initial Council meeting of the Town of Medicine Hat for 1905, as Mayor it gives me great pleasure to welcome the members of the Council Board, and to congratulate the new members on their election as the choice of the ratepayers, to preside over the town's business along with those whose tenure of office had not yet expired and extended over 1905.

I trust that the Council of 1905 may work together for the general welfare of Medicine Hat, a town which has been steadily growing, and at present occupies the very distinctive place among Western towns as being, municipally, the most progressive and prosperous community in the North-west. There is considerable honor in serving in the Council of a town such as Medicine Hat, and it will also be found there is considerable work in the office, and the pay is of a very quest onable kind, being principally in the knowledge that, as a member of the Council the citizen has served his town and his fellow citizens to the best of his ability.

Municipally, Medicine Hat has made rapid progress since the time the town was incorporated, each succeeding year showing much progress and along very sound lines. There is every reason to believe that 1905 will be a progressive year for the town, and if such is to be the case, it means that the members of the Council Board must take a leading part in promoting what is for the general welfare.

I think the gas lighting for the streets has stood a good test of varied and severe weather and that the Council would be warranted in proceeding at once to install a general system, and could rely on the ratepayers voting the money on debentures a little later on to cover the entire cost, which would be less than $5000. General street lighting would be a great comfort these dark evenings.

The retiring Council left on record a message recommending the sinking of another deep gas well. This, I think will commend itself as the consideration of the Council of 1905 as a wise measure. It would be little short of a catastrophe to the town at present to have any accident happen the producing gas well, whereby the system would be interrupted. As a precautionary measure against accident another deep well is a necessity. It would cost the town from $4500 to $5000.

The water mains should be extended whenever there are services to warrant the expenditure. Water extensions are less expensive now that wooden pipes have been found to work satisfactorily. The same thing might be said of the gas mains. We have plenty of gas and it is for sale, and where customers are to be had the pipes should be laid.

The Fire, Water and Light Committee will find it necessary, in order to keep pace with the growth of the town, to much improve this branch of town service, and there is no way in which money can be expended to better advantage. The whole community is under obligation to the active members of the Fire Department, and where we have such a willing and efficient brigade it is necessary that the Council should meet them with modern equipment and plenty of it.

We who have met from time to time in this pokey little hole which we honor with the dignified name of Council Chamber, recognize the fact that the building has outgrown its use as municipal and fire department building. It was built to fill a temporary need as a temporary structure, and should be replaced by an up-to-date building designed to meet the present and future requirements, embodying municipal offices, council chamber, police office and cells, fire department with firemen's rooms and team accommodation, with hall for municipal gatherings, hose tower, etc. This work is something which the Council of 1905 should undertake.

The disposal of the trees in the town nursery and the replacing of them by young stock, is a matter which will engage the attention of the Council of 1905. The several thousand trees which are ready for transplanting, should, if planting and proper caring for is to be encouraged, be a start towards beautifying our town and making it attractive.

The town is growing large enough to give some consideration to the question of providing a market site and buildings.

There are two or three matters which the Council of 1905 receive as a legacy from the Council of 1904, and which the Council is under an obligation to meet—concluding the arrangements entered into with that portion of the town known as New Edinburgh, which will entail the submitting of a by-law to the ratepayers to raise the sum of $2600. The Council had also promised to submit to the ratepayers a proposition to acquire lands for park and athletic purposes as soon as the town was, financially, in a position to do so. The town is in this position now; there is also a question of the isolation hospital.

The Council of 1905 should adopt some definite basis upon which sidewalk construction could be carried out. I would suggest permanent granolithic sidewalks, built upon the frontage tax system, same as prevails elsewhere. Probably a basis upon which the town paid two-thirds of the cost and the property one-third spread over ten years, would meet the requirements, and in the town assuming two-thirds of the cost, it would give us a channel into which the gas surplus could be turned and made useful to the citizens as a whole.

Early this year I consider it the duty of the Council to engage the services of a first-class engineer on sewerage and have an estimate made as to the cost of a sewerage system for Medicine Hat, so that the Council and ratepayers may be in a position to intelligently consider the question. The expense incurred in getting such an estimate I consider advisable. Until such time as we can install a sewerage system, the town's public health, and nuisance, by-laws should be rigorously enforced.

Gentlemen, you will notice in the list of Standing Committees to be submitted that I have added a new one—a committee on new enterprises and advertising the resources of Medicine Hat. I consider that it is necessary, and that we are in a position to do something in the way of advertising our gas and the other resources and inviting the attention of capitalists and manufacturers. If Medicine Hat is to grow, it will be along manufacturing lines. The Council should adopt a uniform programme of treatment for all manufacturers, and advertise intelligently what we have to offer. To this end I will appoint such a committee and would ask the Council to vote from the gas surplus $250 to be placed to the credit of this committee. I believe we have something good to offer at Medicine Hat to manufacturers and I believe also we should make the fact known.

The beginning of 1905 finds the town's books opened on the double-entry system. The increase in the gas business and in the water business and the general growth of the town has made a corresponding increase in the work of the Secretary-Treasurer's office. At times during last year extra clerical help was necessary. The work of 1905 promises to be still further increased.

Gentlemen, I trust that our deliberations at the several meetings this year may be harmonious, and that while, no doubt we may not see eye to eye on all questions, where we may have differences of opinion, it will be as gentlemen, ready to express our opinions, and equally ready to submit to the will of the majority. If such a spirit permeates the Council there is no doubt but that our work during 1905 will redound to the good of Medicine Hat.

In the distribution of committees I have endeavored to give each Councillor a chairmanship over an active committee and to distribute the work in such a way that there will be an equal division of labor.

The Standing Committees are as follows, the course usually followed being to consider the first-named the chairman:

Finance Committee—Stewart, Drinnan, Smyth.

Fire, Water and Light—DesBrisay, Sissons, Penhale.

Public Works—Drinnan, DesBrisay, Sissons.

Health and Relief—Smyth, Sissons, Penhale.

License and Police—Sissons, Penhale, Stewart.

Assessment — Penhale, Stewart, Smyth.

Gas Commissioners— Drinnan, Smyth, Stewart.

Water Commissioners—Penhale, DesBrisay, Sissons.

Committee on new industries and advertising—Smyth, Penhale and the Mayor.

F. G. FORSTER,
Mayor.

The several letters received included two from Stimson & Co., re debentures, stating their client had been sick, and they had not been able to do anything as yet in regard to the debentures, but hoped yet to do so. On the motion of Coun. Stewart, seconded by Coun. Sissons, it was decided to extend the option until the 20th January. It was stated that Stimson & Co. had handled all the other debentures lately, and had done so very satisfactorily.

A letter was read from Charles Johnston, stating that there was a large amount of ice accumulated round the water barrel near his house, and melting made considerable mess.

After some conversation the matter was referred to the licence and police committee on the motion of Coun. Drinnan seconded by Coun. Smyth.

A letter was read from Mr. Wm. Cross asking the Council to supply him with natural gas for the purpose of burning lime, the gas to be charged at the rate of 7c. per bushel of lime burned.

Coun. Penhale—I propose it be referred to the gas committee.

Coun. Drinnan thought it would be well to discuss it first, as a charge of 10c. per buahel, which is now paid, is prohibitive, as lime can be shipped in for less money. If gas could be got at the 7c. rate, lime could be burned here, and a new industry built up.

Dr. Smyth—What is lime worth?

Coun. Drinnan—33c. I believe.

Coun. DesBrisay—What does a carload cost?

The Clerk—A carload costs them, I think, $300.

Dr. Smyth—What is that per bushel?

Coun. Drinnan—25 to 30 cents.

Coun. DesBrisay—By giving him the gas at 7c. per bushel we leave him a small margin, and encourage a new industry.

The Mayor—It means that $300 will be spent here instead of going out.

Coun. Penhale—I think they should be put on a meter. We can supply it as cheap as we like, and give them a cut price if we want to.

Coun. DesBrisay—He wants to know at once.

Coun. Stewart seconded the motion made by Coun. Penhale, and it was agreed it.

REPORTS.

The report of the Chief of Police was read and ordered to be filed.

The report of the Poundkeeper was read, stating that during the month 13 cows, 6 donkeys, and 2 horses had been impounded.

The report was ordered to be filed.

RANCHERS READ THIS.

Coun. Penhale asked what they were going to do with the team of horses.

Coun. Stewart—Turn them out and let them go home, I would say. They belong to some rancher.

Coun. Sissons—Someone told me they have been on the flats all the fall.

Coun. Drinnin—It is a hardship on the rancher if we sell them at short notice. He may know nothing about it.

Coun. DesBrisay—That is what I think.

Coun. Sissons—I doubt if the town has the right to do it.

Coun. Penhale—Should they be advertised in the Territorial Gazette?

The Clerk—No. The stock pounds do.

Dr. Smyth—I think it would be very

THE WOOLLEN MILL.

The woollen mill and the prospect of its being started this year has been the subject of a good deal of conversation lately and several people have expressed the opinion that the town should do something to get it started. Some suggest the Town Council taking it over and starting it, other consider the Council might take a block of shares on the proviso that the Mayor for the time being be a director. The general opinion seems to be in favor of the town doing something which will insure the place being set going during the present year, because as it stands it militates against the best interests of the town. For instance. why not offer free gas for a time? We all know there are pretty solid reasons why it is not going, but still the building is a commercial eyesore in its present state, and as it would further the interests of the town to have it going why should not the town, under proper safeguards, lend a helping hand. The great point to be remembered is that we must show the commercial world that we ourselves have confidence in the commercial utility of our splendid gas field.

LOOK AHEAD.

Health and prosperity are not forever. Don't forget there is a time ahead when you will not be the hustler you are today. There is too much discounting the future. You have a fine family, but don't depend too much on a corner in your son's house when he has the business. It may not be just what you have figured it out to be. Keep your mind on the time when you will have to lay down the burden and take a back seat. The man who does not look out for the "rainy day" is a fool. It is all very well to talk of Providence and "faith;" the kind of faith that tells is that which lays hold upon the present and makes the foundation for the future. There is some philosophy in the darkey's statement that having prayed for two weeks for a thanksgiving turkey, without success. he asked the Lord to send him after the bird, and got it the same night. God helps those who help themselves. "The ants are a people not strong yet they provide their meat in the summer." Look ahead.—Ex.

THE RETIRING MAYOR

Mayor Hutchinson has given up "the seals of office" and his successor has taken his place. While we have differed from the retiring Mayor on many points, we say freely that Mr. Hutchinson has proved a very capable chief officer of the corporation. We have had considerable experience of Town Councils, in various towns, and can say that as the presiding member of the Council he proved himself possessed of the right kind of make-up, and conducted the business with a promptness and decision worthy of the office. In other ways Mr. Hutchinson was also a very good Mayor. He was ready to take his place at all sorts of functions, in season or out of season, and we feel sure Medicine Hat has every reason to think and speak well of the retiring Mayor.

THE OLD COUNCIL.

Medicine Hat Town Council of 1904 has gone the way of its predecessors and we wish to place on record an appreciation of the way in which Mayor Hutchinson's Council served the town. We do this because we freely criticised the Council during the past few months, and we do not want to leave on the minds of anyone the impression that we think the Council of 1904 is a discredited Council. We should be the first to denounce sentiments of that kind. Our criticisms were directed almost entirely toward an effort to get the Councillors to do more in certain directions than they were doing, rather than condemnation of what they did. Their sins (it is a matter of opinion), were sins of omission rather than those of commission. The business of the town, so far as we are able to judge, was conducted in a sound and business-like manner, and we believe the interests of the people were well and conscientiously looked after.

THE NEW MAYOR.

Mr F. G. Forster has succeeded Mr. Thomas Hutchinson as chief executive and brings to the office an amount of knowledge of municipal matters, and experience of local circumstances which will doubtless serve him well and enable him to give good service to the town. The year upon which he has entered promises to be an important one. Many questions quite out of the ordinary routine will have to be dealt with, and, while we hold ourselves quite free to criticise, we shall endeavor to give the new Mayor a generous support in all that pertains to the welfare of Medicine Hat. In our view once a man is elected to any office, whether it be as member of Parliament or Mayor of a town, he is at once, not merely the representative of those who supported him with their votes, but of the whole constituency and the whole town, irrespective of cliques or parties. He, on his part, should work for the good of the whole and not for the benefit of any clique or party. In the matter of the election of a Mayor it almost seems a pity not to elect by acclammation, but the millenium has not yet dawned and therefore we cannct expect men to be always of one mind.

THE NEW COUNCIL.

It is a convenient form of expression to refer to the "old" Council and the "new" Council. The play is the same though there are certain changes in the cast. "The king is dead, long live the King," is surely applicable to the Council. As soon as the breath is out of the King's body his successor immediately becomes King, and so we have the saying that "the king never dies." Now this is the proper way in which to look at a Town Council and it is the only way in which a continuity of work and policy can be obtained. We hold that the work of a Town Council should go in unbroken succession. A few members retire, others take their places and the work continues. On this principle an act of the "old" Council, stands good unless the "new" one sees good reasons for cancelling it. The "new" Council therefore, would be bound by the doings of the "old" one and this is a sound principle to work upon. The new members who step into the places vacated by Messrs, Forster, Smith and Nelson, namely, Messrs. DesBrisay. Smyth and Sissons, are in every way well qualified to take up the work, and every effort they make to advance the interests of Medicine Hat will be hailed with the utmost satisfaction. The Council in 1905 have much greater powers than in 1904. The great point will be to use that power wisely and well.

THE POSSIBLE MAN

By KEITH GORDON

Miss Van Orden halted and regarded the display in the windows of Berg & Co. with kindling eyes. There was no excuse for her to linger at particular window, for Berg & Co. everybody knows, are haberdashers and Miss Van Orden was father's brotherless and unmarried.

"Talk about women's clothes," her thoughts as she reluctantly prepared to move onward. "Why, there isn't a window in town that compares with this for charm. Dresses—Ruffles, tucks, plaits, French knots and fussiness! But this—it's a poem! I imagine some big creature in that bathrobe or"—

With a silent laugh, she caught herself up between her teeth and moved down the street toward the dry goods shop. But the windows appeared cheap, overloaded and tawdry. Berg's store, with its display of masculine attire with severity sometimes verged just enough to softness and beauty to be fascinating, kept rising before her eyes and almost automatically she retraced her steps in that direction.

By the time she again reached Berg & Co.'s she had an idea that made her giggle, though her eyes were bright and her cheeks went pink. Some color she reflected, boarded china and silk others linen and still others old-fashioned mahogany against the day when "Jack and chance" should bring the man to whom they all confidently expected. She would depart from such well-traveled ways and do something entirely practical, though more unusual.

She entered the store rather timidly but the sight of a portly dowager behind one of the counters reassured her, and she was soon examining bathrobes with an ease and assurance that must have been acquired by years of shopping for masculine relatives.

"What size?" asked the clerk who, after much hesitation between a purple and a blue one, she had finally decided on the former.

At the question she stared at him in blank amazement. "That is, how large is he?" he went on, judging from the look that she failed to understand. Then she recovered herself.

"Six feet," she answered, with a nonchalant, you-should-have-taken-this-for-granted air. And then, remembering her preference in the matter, she added, "And broad—very broad indeed, you know." In a manner more liberate and composed that was the further question the clerk made out the check for "Mrs." E. Van [illegible] and solicitously begged her to look at their spring shirtings and the new cravats.

"I don't think he needs anything that line just now," she remarked with well assumed doubtfulness, as she languidly viewed the stock.

"Do they—would my husband have to be measured for these shirts?" she demanded. The clerk nodded.

"But we'll send a man up anyway, he explained, with a polite desire to accommodating. The lady shook her head.

"You see, that wouldn't do. He isn't here—yet! But couldn't I give you the collar measure and couldn't you somehow make them proportionately?"

The clerk thought they could, though they couldn't guarantee that under those circumstances, and his customer announced airily that it wouldn't make any difference if he were a trifle mystified.

Eloise meanwhile emerged into the street aglow with the eagerness of a rather bored young woman who has found a new and interesting occupation. Her grandmother Castle's legacy cheat would be the very place to get the things, and fortunately it stood in her room and had a good strong lock.

No one but the man, whoever he was, wherever he was, should ever know about this escapade of hers. She considered, after all, if men really wear bathrobes like that—pink, all wool, lined with thin silk and outrageously expensive. Then she abruptly chuckled aloud. What if the man should happen to have red hair in this world you never know who holds the key to your heart until he appears on the scene some fine day and—

Her meditations were cut short by the salutation of a man who was passing and whose glance carried a thing that arrested her attention. It was something indescribable, except as a quick, keen lighting up of his face at the sight of her, as instantly followed by the calm, passive glance of well bred acquaintance. But she had seen it—that strange, telltale look—and her heart beat more quickly because of it.

She had met him but twice—once at a dinner at Mrs. Lorimer's and once ward at the Bancker cotillon—and was the cousin of her dearest friend, and she had heard more or less about "Philip" for years.

When at last the little flutter of meeting had subsided she remarked to herself demurely a certain coincidence—namely, that Philip Hamilton was six feet tall, very broad shouldered and that black hair and gray eyes went well with pale pink.

Before her departure from the store the summer Eloise's carved chest contained many treasures of many wearing apparel. Among other things six shirts—it had taken her a few minutes to select them, and it had almost been her undoing—had joined the pile of robe.

It was really the "swagger" monogram on the sleeve that had consoled her that she could not be happy when she added them to his trousseau, she called it. She had decided on detail—that on the pale gray shirts monogram should be in dark blue, on the tan in dark brown, etc.—when the clerk, who had learned to know and whom she guiltily permitted to address her as "Mrs. Van [illegible]" paused, pencil suspended above the order book, as if waiting for some further instructions. She regarded him in surprise.

"That's all," she said at last.

"But Mr. Van Orden's initials, the monogram, you know," he [illegible] smilingly

With a silent laugh, she caught her lip between her teeth and moved down the street toward the dry goods shops. But the windows appeared cheap, overloaded and tawdry. Berg's store, with its display of masculine attire whose severity sometimes verged just near enough to softness and beauty to be fascinating, kept rising before her eyes, and almost automatically she retraced her steps in that direction.

By the time she again reached Berg & Co.'s she had an idea that made her giggle, though her eyes were bright and her checks went pink. Some girls, she reflected, hoarded china and silver, others linen and still others old mahogany against the day when "time and chance" should bring the man whom they all confidently expected. She would depart from such main traveled ways and do something equally practical, though more unusual.

She entered the store rather timidly, but the sight of a portly dowager at one of the counters reassured her, and she was soon examining bathrobes with an ease and assurance that might have been acquired by years of shopping for masculine relatives.

The clerk thought they might, though they couldn't guarantee the fit under those circumstances, and when his customer announced airily that that would'n't make any difference he looked a trifle mystified.

Eloise meanwhile emerged into the street aglow with the eagerness of a rather bored young woman who has found a new and interesting occupation. Her grandmother Castle's carved chest would be the very place to keep the things, and fortunately it stood in her room and had a good strong lock.

No one but the man, whoever and wherever he was, should ever know about this escapade of hers. She wondered, after all, if men really wore bathrobes like that—pink, all softest wool, lined with thin silk and shockingly expensive. Then she absolutely chuckled aloud. What if the man should happen to have red hair? In this world you never know who carries the key to your heart until he arrives on the scene some fine day and—

Her meditations were cut short by the salutation of a man who was passing and whose glance carried something that arrested her attention. It was something indescribable, elusive—a quick, keen lighting up of his face at the sight of her, as instantly vanishing in the calm, passive glance of a well bred acquaintance. But she had seen it—that strange, telltale look—and her heart beat more quickly because of it.

She had met him but twice—once at a dinner at Mrs. Lorimer's and afterward at the Hancker cotillon—but he was the cousin of her dearest friend, and she had heard more or less about "Philip" for years.

When at last the little flutter of the meeting had subsided she remarked to herself demurely a certain coincidence—namely, that Philip Hamilton was six feet tall, very broad shouldered, and that black hair and gray eyes go well with pale pink.

Before her departure from town for the summer Eloise's carved chest contained many treasures of masculine wearing apparel. Among other things six shirts—it had taken her a forenoon to select them, and it had almost been her undoing—had joined the pink bathrobe.

It was really the "swagger" monogram on the sleeve that had convinced her that she could not be happy until she added them to his trousseau, as she called it. She had decided every detail—that on the pale gray one the monogram should be in dark red, on the tan in dark brown, etc.—when the clerk, who had learned to know her and whom she guiltily permitted to address her as "Mrs. Van Orden," paused, pencil suspended above his order book, as if waiting for some further instructions. She regarded him in surprise.

"That's all," she said at last.

"But Mr. Van Orden's initials—for the monogram, you know," he prompted smilingly.

Eloise gasped. Never once had it occurred to her that in order to have that fascinating monogram on the left sleeve some initials would be required.

The floor showed no disposition to open and swallow her up, and the clerk sat watching her as if he might tap his forehead significantly to his fellow clerks once her back was turned and shake his head sadly. What should she say? The possible man—

"Oh, T. P. M.," she flung out with hysterical relief as a thought occurred to her.

"T. P. M.," the clerk repeated, eying her reproachfully.

"Right—er—they're not for Mr. Van Orden," she observed firmly, giving him look for look.

Neckties and scarfpins were added to her collection without difficulty, but when it came to the purchase of a waistcoat that lured her with its dash and style the question of size again cropped up. By this time, however, the clerk had learned to think of her as the "eccentric Mrs. Van Orden" and was prepared for the vagueness of her orders. Not even when she dreamily selected a pair of gray socks with dark red clocks, to match the gray shirt, and demanded them of a size to match a No. 16 collar did he make any demur.

The time for leaving town had arrived, and the contents of the carved chest were carefully arranged for the last time and then locked up with the sweet scented bags of lavender.

Eloise sighed at the thought of leaving the things, for they had come to have a sort of personality of their own. They were beautiful in themselves, and, besides, the one who was to wear them, should they ever be worn, would be for her the king of the world.

She sometimes tried to picture him, but his face eluded her. Yet the face of her dream often bore a startling resemblance to Philip Hamilton, and that gentleman himself was becoming a more and more prominent fact in her life.

More than once she had surprised a strange, tense question in his eyes—a speculative look that made her happy, yet afraid. She half wished that he was not going to his cousin's for the summer, since that would place them in the same little colony for the next three months.

But in the weeks that followed, when riding, golf and moonlit evenings on the broad piazzas brought them constantly together, her feelings underwent a change, and she was appalled at the desolation she felt when he ran up to town for a few days, as he did now and then.

It was on one of these occasions that she found herself alone on the porch one evening, when a brisk step sounded on the gravel.

She rose as Philip Hamilton sprang up the steps and came toward her in the soft moonlight, the tumultuous joy that she supposed hidden in her heart shining in her eyes and dancing on her lips.

He looked down at her for one moment with eyes before whose mastery her own wavered and fell. Then, with a low, contented laugh, he drew her to him, whispering, "There are some things, my darling, that one does not need to ask."

* * * * * * *

It was one rainy evening soon after the return from their wedding trip that Eloise told her husband the story of the trousseau it had amused her to provide—a tale that he listened to with a gust of laughter.

"Oh, my; oh, my!" he groaned as she held up the articles one after another. "You certainly have good taste, though, little girl," he added approvingly, "and I hope they'll fit!"

Then his face sobered, and he stared at the monogram on a shirt sleeve fixedly for a second and then looked up at her with puzzled eyes, while she watched him furtively, wishing that she could get that ridiculous, effeminate bathrobe out of sight without his catching a glimpse of it.

"T. P. M.," he said slowly. The words sounded like water dropping on a hot stove and eyes took on a steely light.

"I am waiting for you to explain," he said coldly.

Eloise made a little rush at him and hid her face on his shoulder. "Don't you see?" she murmured. "Why, you silly boy, 'T. P. M.' stands for 'The Possible Man,' and so, you see, it's your monogram!"

A great light broke over Philip's face, and as a penalty for the momentary clouding of his faith he wore the silk lined bathrobe like a martyr.

A Timely Prompt.

A Baltimore man tells of a dinner he attended upon one occasion when a clerical guest was requested to ask a blessing.

The reverend gentleman complied, but once started on his flow of invocation there seemed no indication that he ever intended to stop. On and on swept the stream of eloquence while the soup turned stone cold and the hostess looked appealingly at her husband.

Suddenly the host broke into the blessing with a fervent and final "Amen!"

The clergyman stopped and, with beaming eyes, ejaculated: "Oh, thank you, thank you. I could not think of the word 'amen' to save my life."—Baltimore Sun.

Easy to Be an Expert Pistol Shot.

"Any man with ordinary nerve can become a fair shot with a revolver from the saddle with a few weeks' practice. I believe in a short time a man can become sufficiently expert to make 95 out of 100 shots," said a regular army officer.

"You see, it is all in learning when to shoot. The aiming is a small part of pistol and revolver shooting. The aiming is just like pointing your finger. A man can naturally point his finger at an object accurately. If he can do that he can aim a gun by simply throwing it out in the same way. The reason an unpracticed marksman is no marksman at all is that he stops to aim and gets off the mark or becomes unsteady in pulling the trigger. He must learn his gun, so he will know just the exact instant when it goes off, just how much and how long a pull he must make to snap the trigger. When he learns so that it is second nature to shoot just as he points the gun, he will hit any ordinary mark within reasonable range."—Des Moines Register and Leader.

The Humbling Of Jane

By BELLE MANIATES

Copyright, 1904, by Belle Maniates

"Come, pa!" commanded Jane Tivy in bright, sharp tones.

Titus Tivy, a meek, undersized man, responded to the summons and stood unresistingly before his daughter while, in accordance with her biweekly custom, she prepared him for his trip to town. First she deftly folded a muffler about his neck, buttoned his great coat snugly over it and then put on his cap, tying the earlaps in place. She next handed him the memorandum for groceries and a letter to mail, with instructions to carry it in his hand all the way "lest he forget."

When he had taken his seat in the wagon amid the molasses jug, kerosene can and butter crocks, she put a soapstone at his feet and tucked about him a heavy blanket shawl in lieu of a lap robe, albeit the day was bright and sparkling.

When he had driven away she went serenely into the house to put the finishing touches to the toilet of her sister Rose, a girl of fourteen years. Rose did not submit to her costuming as meekly as her father had done. She pouted at the hanging braids of hair, bucked against the white apron and begged for a dip to her blouse. Jane authoritatively silenced and overruled these objections, and Rose went sullenly to school.

For five years, since the death of her mother, Jane had held a tight rein over the household, and its members were strictly under Jane rule. She was a woman of convictions. One of them was that her duty clearly lay in managing the affairs of others. People were afraid of Jane. They submitted to her domineering or avoided it. There lived a man on an adjoining farm, however, who was not afraid of Jane. For some time he had resolved to introduce her to her true self, and he had chosen this morning to do it. He appeared amid the pots and kettles and Jane.

"Drop your work, Jane, and sit down. I want to talk to you."

"Well, Joel, I guess you'll have to choose some other time for visiting. I'm no lady of leisure. This is my time to work."

"Jane," said Joel, with a new, quiet ring in his voice, "you are going to listen to me now. I have waited your convenience just as long as I am going to."

Jane's nostrils dilated dangerously, but her heart beat faster than it ever had before, although she had "kept company" with Joel for six years.

"Joel Dixon," she replied, snapping off her words as if she were biting thread, "that isn't the tone to take with me. It doesn't go! I have no time to listen to you now."

Joel's stock of patience had endured for six years. It was now exhausted. He recalled the vision he had encountered on his way hither of Titus Tivy driving to town. He gave a short laugh at the recollection, squared his shoulders for action and crossed the kitchen to Jane. He took the dishcloth from her, threw it on the floor and, taking her arm, marched her into the sitting room and seated her on the plush sofa.

"Now we'll talk business," he said decisively.

Jane was silent from sheer surprise, but into her being were inoculated the germs of fear, respect and liking for Joel—tiny germs, it is true, but destined to flourish.

"I have waited six years for you to name the day, Jane. If you don't do it, I shall. After your mother's death it was reasonable to expect to wait a year or maybe two, but I'll wait no longer."

Jane was returning to her normal condition.

"We must wait a year," she decreed. "The mortgage will be paid then. Rose will be through school."

"You'll marry me a month from today or not at all," he said composedly.

Jane jumped to her feet.

"Indeed! Well, I am not going to be forced or threatened by you. Joel Dixon, I'll not marry you until I see fit!"

"Jane," he replied coolly, "you are acting under the mistake of thinking you are necessary to your father and Rose. They'd get along a great deal better without you—or more to their liking anyway."

"What do you mean?" she cried in surprise.

"What I say. You haven't been so successful running things here as you think, and there's going to be no petticoat rule at my house. Today's Wednesday. You just think over what I have said, and Saturday about this time I'll come over again and prove up what I said."

Having thus spoken, Joel departed, and Jane returned to the abstracted washing of dishes with new food for thought.

When her father was unfolding the Wingville Weekly that afternoon she astonished him by saying:

"Pa, haven't I managed the house well and kept up things since ma died?"

Titus Tivy peered at her over his spectacles and paper. He did not answer with the alacrity she had expected.

"Well, Jane," he finally said, "I guess you're the best cook and housekeeper in these parts. There ain't a lazy bone in your body."

Jane was not satisfied.

"That is not what I mean. Haven't things been as you liked? I've always done what I thought was for the best."

"Why, Jane"—he hesitated—"your way may be the best, but folks don't always want the best way. They want their own way."

Jane said no more then, but when Rose came in from school she said to her:

"Rose, don't you wear the best clothes of any girl in school?"

"Maybe I do," replied Rose a little crossly. "But what's the pleasure in good clothes if you can't wear them as you want to?"

Again Jane was silenced.

"They say," continued Rose pertly, "that Joel Dixon's sweet on the new teacher."

A great fear smote Jane. Then she rallied. If Joel Dixon wanted a little, meek, clinging vine woman for a wife he could take Lucy Wicks and welcome. But Rose's speech rankled and lingered in her memory through the week, and she anxiously awaited what Saturday might bring forth.

It brought Joel just as she was starting her father for town. As Titus gathered up the reins Jane intercepted the exchange of winks between her father and her lover. This troubled her, and she was in a puzzled rather than an antagonistic mood when left alone with Joel.

"Come with me," he said, taking her by the arm and marching her out of the house. Surprised, she suffered herself to be led or rushed through the orchard, down the hill to where the road wound its way.

"Now, stand behind this tree and watch out," he said.

Wondering if he had gone crazy, she did as he directed. She saw her father drive jogging Fleetwood up to a zigzag corner of the rail fence, get out, take the soapstone, wrap it in the shawl and pitch it behind a stump. Then he unbuttoned his coat, threw his muffler under the cushion, took off his cap, doubled back the earlaps inside the crown, put the letter and memorandum in his pocket, got back in the buggy and drove away.

Jane looked at Joel, a light of new intelligence creeping into her eyes.

"Has he"—

"He has. For five years. He knows what he wants and has had his own way right along, only he thought it was easier to let you think you were having yours."

She turned back toward the house, Joel accompanying her.

"And has every one about here known it?" she asked faintly.

"Yes; they have thought it a good joke on you, and they liked your father too well to give him away."

She looked so utterly miserable that he almost but not quite relented.

"No, don't go in the house yet," he said. "There goes Rose down the road. When she's out of sight I want you to follow."

"I don't need to," replied Jane quietly. "I suppose she stops and remakes her toilet too."

"Yes, she hides her apron under a stone, perks up her front hair and jerks up the braid to meet it and pulls down her shirt waist."

She sat down on the steps.

"Then all these years," she said bitterly, "I've been a failure and a joke."

"No, Jane. You have simply made the mistake a great many competent women make—of wanting to boss."

She was silent. Joel thought he saw an effort to hide a tear and felt encouraged. He sat down beside her and put his arm about her.

"A month from last Wednesday, Jane."

She turned her head away.

"Oh, you'd better take Lucy Wicks. She'd never try to boss you. You need a woman with no will of her own."

"No, Jane," he said gently, turning her face toward him, "I need you."

A Fatal Oversight.

An American was showing an English friend about the capital.

"Our government is very economical," said the American. "When we've an extra thick fog, they suck it into a big cistern and convert it into paint for the warships and buildings."

"Really!" said the Britisher. "Talking about fogs reminds me that my brother invented a machine for compressing London fog into bricks, and one thick November day he turned out enough material to build a country house.

"Yes, he did. He moved into this new home the next April and was a happy man for two weeks, until one morning he found himself, also his family, lying out on the cold, damp ground, in company with some bits of furniture and miscellaneous joinery. The house had gone, but it was the thickest morning ever seen in those parts. Of course you can guess what had happened. In the night those fog bricks had somehow gone back into their original element."

"Well," drawled the Yankee, "I reckon yer rel'tive ought to have glazed them bricks."—Tit-Bits.

Sharp Point of Letters.

"If people must stick pins in their letters I wish they would cover up the points so they wouldn't push through," said a mail clerk whose hands were disfigured by tiny scratches. "I'll bet I get a hundred digs a day from pins that systematic folks use to hold their correspondence together. I never could make out anyway why so many letters need to be finished off with a pin.

"Of course I understand that about half of those written by women have a postscript in the shape of samples of dress goods or newspaper clippings, which perhaps require a pin or two to hold them in place, but even that habit cannot account for the large number of letters that come through the postoffice with a pin sticking out of one corner.

"I have come to the conclusion that many writers so mail their manuscript with malicious intent. It may not be us fellows in the postal service against whom they hold a grudge, but we are the ones that usually get the benefit of those pins."—New York Times.

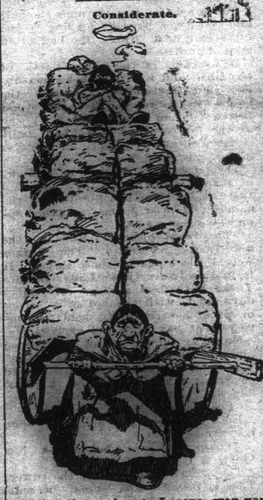
"Poor Pay, Good Tenant."

"It isn't always the tenant who pays his rent on the first of the month who is most desirable," said a householder the other day. "Your prompt tenant is likely to hold you his debtor for that virtue and feel perfectly free to ask for numerous improvements. My best paying property is leased to a man who is always two or three months behind in his rent. Of course I lose the interest on my money for that time, but that is all. In the three years in which he has rented of me he has not had the nerve to ask me even to paper a room for him. I haven't done it, either. In one instance he had some plumbing done at his own expense when he should have charged it to me. I am constantly afraid that he will get prosperous some day and want to pay me on time. Just as sure as he does I will have to spend several hundred dollars on the house."

Intolerable Suspicion Caused Him to Quit

THE caretaker of a secondary school in England tendered his resignation to the committee and remarked in the course of his letter that the suspicion upon him was unbearable.



He was called before the managers for an explanation.

"Well, gents," he said, "I am honest, and I won't stand being suspected. If I find anything about the school when I am sweeping I always return it. Every now and again the teacher or some one that is too cowardly to face me gives me a slur.

"Why, a little while ago I read on the blackboard, 'Find the least common multiple.' Well, I looked all over the school for that, and I shouldn't know the thing if I met it in the street.

"Last night in big writing on the blackboard it said, 'Find the greatest common divisor.' 'Well,' says I to myself, 'both of them things are lost now, and I'll be accused of stealing 'em, so I'll quit!'"

Her Brushes Did the Work.

Ethel's father is an artist, and he often permits his little daughter to stay in the studio with him and paint. Ethel has some brushes and paint all her own, and she is very fond of playing artist. One day a visitor called at the studio, and Ethel eagerly showed him one of the pictures.

"Did you paint this?" asked the visitor in surprise.

"Yes, sir," said Ethel.

The Happy Schoolboy.

Bill Shakespeare tells a little tale
About a boy who always whined
When school time came, and whom a snail
In speed could leave a block behind;
Who'd rather stay at home and play
And sit around and mope and dream.
But, then, you know, in William's day,
They didn't have a football team.

Now days the boys look forward to
The morning when the bell disturbs
The autumn air; there's no boohoo
At thought of parsing Latin verbs.
J. Caesar's bridge can't make them fret
Nor crafty Euclid's hardest scheme,
For after school will they not get
A chance to make the football team?

Vacation time is full of joy,
But Jim's not sorry it has passed.
This year he's not a little boy;
He's twelve pounds heavier than last.
With snail-like speed does he approach
The school? Not much; he's full of steam.
Perhaps he can persuade the coach
To put him on the football team.

Georgiana's Lenten Duties

By RUBY DOUGLAS

Copyright, 1904, by T. C. McClure

Eaton's well marked brows were drawn closely together in a frown. The letter he had just finished reading obviously did not please him. He returned the delicately scented missive to its envelope and leaned back in his chair.

"Hang the new minister!" he commented mentally. "Hang Lent, too!" he added aloud.

"'Faithfully yours, Georgiana,'" he repeated. "And she signs herself that way because the new minister always uses that form, does she? Isn't it fascinating?' she asks in her inevitable postscript. No, I cannot agree with Georgiana. It has no fascination to me, inasmuch as she has always signed herself, 'Lovingly, Georgie.'"

Eaton began to pace the room, and as he thought over Georgiana's letter he grew more disturbed in mind. It was all about Lent and sewing bees and flower guilds and parish aid societies and the new minister. The pastor said purple was the proper Lenten color, and she had a new gown of that shade in which she looked "perfectly stunning." Aside from purple being the penitential color, the new minister adored it, of course, after his college colors, orange and black. He was a Princeton man.

"A Princeton cad, probably!" thought Eaton as he continued to make a circuit of his room every half minute. "Girls are silly over the cloth and brass buttons. One is as bad as the other." All the prejudices Eaton ever had against ministers and girls and humanity in general came trooping into his ruffled thoughts.

He and Georgiana, although they were not definitely engaged, had more or less of an understanding as to their future, and since he had been in Boston Georgiana's letters had been a continual source of comfort to him. And now, because it was Lent, she said—because of the new minister, Eaton believed—she would have to deprive herself of the pleasure of writing to him so often. She would save the stamp pennies for her contribution box. The new minister was so enthusiastic about having a large Easter offering, and she was going to help him. It was only right that one should deny oneself the greatest pleasures one had in life during Lent.

"JACK CARELTON!" SAID EATON AFTER A MINUTE.

"It must be a great pleasure," mused Eaton sarcastically.

One of the first things he did after receiving Georgiana's letter was to send her a book of stamps, with the request that she continue her letters to him and not convert the stamps into money for her—her contribution box. Eaton wanted to use some impolite adjectives before writing contribution box, but, in deference to Georgiana, he refrained.

The stamps failed in their purpose, for Georgiana did not write often, and her letters were brief and devoted to a recital of her Lenten duties. Once she condescended to become personal and tell him how lovely she looked in that royal purple gown and to express a wish that he might see her in it. Eaton echoed a portion of her wish only. He longed to see Georgiana, but the dress could remain out of his vision, always, if fate so willed it.

The second week before Easter Georgiana said that she would not be able to write at all during holy week, as there was so much to do. There was a litany service every day; there were Good Friday preparations and the three hour service; she was helping the minister with his confirmation class and with his Easter sermons, which was a great undertaking for so young a man. "However," she went on to say, "we will expect you, as we have planned, for Easter." The minister would dine with them too, and she did want Eaton to meet him. He was so helpful.

"She is crazy—clear crazy—on the subject," thought poor Eaton when he had finished this letter. Queer little hopeless feelings entered his heart and pulled at the strings which heretofore had been so free from knots and tangles. Would he go and see Georgiana once more or would he remain in Boston and let her religious fever lead her into the sea of matrimony with the new minister?

Holy Saturday found him on his way to New York and Georgiana. It was late when he reached the Carelton home that night, and, to his surprise, he was told that Miss Georgiana was in the study.

"With the 'new minister,'" he thought, as he waited for her. His heart dropped deeper and deeper into the despair that had been drawing it down for weeks. Could she not save one evening for him when she had not seen him for months?

All smiling and radiant and, if Eaton could only have detected it, with a wicked little twinkle in her eyes, Georgiana appeared in the doorway.

"Gordon!" she cried and held out both her hands. Eaton took them in his own, but he was formal in his manner.

"Georgiana," was all he said.

"We're just rehearsing the sermon," she said wickedly. "Come on in." And she dragged him unwillingly from the room.

This was more than he had expected, but Georgiana left him no alternative but to follow her. She even held on to his hand. Was she going to enter the presence of the new minister in this fashion?

"He's so anxious to see you, Gordon," said Georgiana as they crossed the hall. Eaton wished he had not come.

Georgiana opened the study door. "Jack," she said to the young man under the green lamp, "Gordon's come."

And then she stood in the middle of the floor and watched the two men grasp hands.

"Jack Carelton," said Eaton after a minute. "What the—that is—Georgiana, why didn't you tell me?"

Georgiana laughed and sat down in the big leather chair under the light. "I wanted to get some fun out of Lent when Jack made me work so hard to help him in his new parish. And this was such fun! Your letters—oh, I did laugh so!"

"Yes," added Carelton, "Georgiana's a trump of a sister for a rising young curate." He was not ministerial in his manner of talking to his sister.

"Well, I say, Carelton, suppose you go now and study up on the marriage service," said Eaton hintfully.

And when Carelton looked back as he left the study he decided to take Eaton's advice.

The Fisherman's Regret.

They had a fishing club in one of the middle states; the keeper and factotum of the club was "Old Sammy." Despite his healthful occupation, age grew on him, and unable longer to "watch" the river, there was only one place for the lone old man—the county house. Here, as the end was surely coming, the pastor of the church was asked to see him. To meet the Great Proprietor with a vast accumulation of debt is an ordeal that every wise man may well dread and seek to prepare for. The man with the gospel, trying to induce Sam to see the prime necessity of climbing the cliff to touch the place of blood, was leading him to admit his bankrupt condition, that he might claim mercy of him whose "property is to have mercy and to forgive." "Sammy, I expect you've done many things you wish you hadn't done; haven't you, now?" But Sammy was noncommittal. "Well, now," pursued his visitor, "if you had your life to live over again, wouldn't you do differently in some respects?" "Maybe I would," was the cautious rejoinder. "Well, now, suppose you had the chance of living all these years over again, in what particular would you do differently?" After a minute's silence, the old man, true to the ruling spirit, strong even in death, replied: "Well, if I had my life to live over again, I'd fish more with bait than with fly."—Outlook.

"The Lamb Gourd."

The Duke of Holstein, in his "Travels In Muscovy and Persia" (1636), gives a full account of a wonderful vegetable growing in the neighborhood of the city of Samara, Russia, and known as the "lamb or sheep gourd." The duke says: "It most resembles a lamb in all its members and on that account is called 'the lamb gourd.' It changes place in growing as far as the vine or stalk will reach, and wherever it turns the grass withers. When it ripens the stalk withers and the outward rind is covered with a kind of hair, which the Muscovites use instead of fur. They showed us some of these skins, which were covered with soft wool, not unlike that of a lamb newly weaned."

Scaliger also speaks of the "lamb gourd" in his works. In one chapter he says that the queer vegetable continues to grow as long as grass is plentiful, but that when the grass fails the "pore creetyr dyes frome lac of nourishment." He also says that the wolf is the only animal that will feed upon it.

Former Elephants.

The great northern elephant perished as a species in the prime of life. It had lived under most prosperous conditions. Its enemies were few and comparatively impotent. Alone among other contemporary animals, the saber toothed tiger occasionally perhaps got the better of an antagonist which must have been less sensitive to the flint tipped arrows of mere human assailants than Ship Surgeon Gulliver was to the multitudinous pricks of Lilliputian missiles.

Inexhaustible supplies of food, too, were furnished by the forests and swamps of the vast European continent to the terrestrial leviathan, which accordingly multiplied and throve exceedingly. Then was the culminating epoch of the proboscidean family. Thick hided animals with tusks and trunks attained a larger size, ranged over a wider area of the earth's surface and existed more numerously and in greater variety than ever before or since.—Edinburgh Review.

A Young Girl's Trust.

He got out of the little cart and stood with his hand on the rail. "This is my home," he said. "My name is St. John Lisle." He hesitated a moment. "Will you tell me whom I have to thank for so kindly giving me a drive? I should have been very tired if you had not come to my assistance."

He looked up at her face with eager expectancy. He wanted to know the name of this beautiful girl with the soft voice and deep, tender eyes very badly.

Nance looked straight before her. "My name is Christine Harwood," she said.

His hands gripped the rail of the cart tightly, the color left his face, and he stood regarding her, aghast and in silence, for a moment.

"Of Rainford Hall?" he said at last.

"Yes," said Nance. "I am the daughter of the man—he is dead—who turned your friends, the Yorkes, out of their home."

He caught his under-lip in his teeth, bewildered by the suddenness of the attack.

"What can I say?" he said. "I did not know; how could I know? If I had guessed—"

"You would not have said what you did, but you would still have thought as hardly of my—my father and of me. It does not matter. Good-day."

"Stop," he said. "You must not go—I can not let you go; you must wait and let me say how sorry I am." He faltered in his eagerness and anxiety. "Miss Harwood, I was unjust; I see it now. I saw it when you said what you did on behalf of your father. Won't you forgive me?"

His lips trembled. His humility, the earnestness of his plea for forgiveness, touched her. Nance was never very hard-hearted.

"I forgive you," she said. "But isn't it too big a word for so slight an offense?"

"It was not a slight offense," he said. "I must have wounded you cruelly; you, if any wrong had been done, must have been quite innocent. Miss Harwood, we are close neighbors. If you forgive me, can we not be—friends?"

Nance made no response.

"See, now," he said, bending forward, his eyes fixed earnestly on her face. "How can I believe in the reality of your forgiveness, if we part now only to meet again as strangers?"

"I forgive you with all my heart," said Nance. "But—but I have no friends. I know no one here. I live quite alone. Good-bye."

He held out his hand.

"Will you not shake hands with me?" he said, his pleading voice almost as soft as a woman's.

He held it, his face flushing, his eyes still fixed on her, but gratefully now.

"Thank you," he said. "You have been very good to me, Miss Harwood. I shall never forget. Good-bye."

He stood in the road looking after her until Nance had driven round the corner of the lane that led to the Hall; then he took off his hat and passed his hand across his brow. He felt confused, bewildered by a sensation which was a subtle mixture of pleasure and of pain. The liquid tones of her voice rang in his ears, the deep violet eyes, with their expression of sad gentleness, still looked upon him; her face, in its frame of auburn gold, floated mystically before him. He felt that he was trembling. From an aching void in his heart there rose a voice crying—for what he knew not.

He went slowly up the broad gravel drive, level and smooth as granite, and bordered by noble elms, and entering Lisle Court, passed through the hall and up the broad stairs to his mother's boudoir.

The countess, handsome woman of little more than middle age, sat writing at a table. She looked up as he entered, and greeted him with a smile of deep affection.

This only son of hers was the joy of her life, the apple of her eye.

"You have come back then, St. John?" she said, "Sinjen," the familiar pronounciation of "St. John," was full of tenderness. "Are you tired? How pale you look! You should not walk so far. I shall have finished my letter directly, and will read to you, if you like, or we will go for a drive."

"I am not tired, mother," he said, in an absorbed, pre-occupied tone, which the countess could not fail to notice. "I did not walk back from Rainborough; I rode. A lady gave me a lift." He sunk into a chair.

"Yes, dear?" said the countess. "Mrs. Thurtell, I suppose." Mrs. Thurtell was the rector's wife.

"No, mother," he said. "It was not Mrs. Thurtell; it was a very different lady. It was Miss Harwood."

"Harwood?" said the countess. "Harwood? Oh, the young person who has got Rainford Hall? My dear St. John, how ever did you come to make her acquaintance? How very unpleasant!"

"She was in difficulties with her pony; I was fortunate enough to be able to render her some slight assistance; she brought me home."

"Oh, dear!" said the countess.

"Mother," he said, "I want you to call upon her."

The countess turned slowly in her chair gazed upon him with astonishment.

"Call upon her!" she exclaimed. "Why should I?"

"Why should you not?" he demanded, quietly, but with an earnestness that was all the more emphatic for its quietude.

"My dear St. John, I know nothing about her," she said. "At least, all I know is to her disadvantage. She is a mere nobody—the daughter of a man who got the poor Yorkes into his clutches and robbed them of the Hall—a vulgar parvenue, and quite—quite unpresentable—"

"On the contrary, mother, a lady in appearance, in thought and word. Indeed, indeed you do not know her. I want you to call upon her, that you may know her better. Wait, mother"—as the countess opened her lips for another remonstrance—"this poor girl is a neighbor of ours. She is quite alone; she has no friends; she told me so. Have we done our duty to her? Have we been just—even just to her? Put yourself in her place, mother."

"My dear St. John, I could not!" said the countess, with a simplicity which was the sublimity of pride and hauteur.

"I suppose not," he said; "but try. Mother, I want you to call upon her."

"I will think it over; I will speak to your father," said the countess, looking at his pale, earnest face intently. "I can't understand why you should ask me to do this. No one has called upon her; I had not the least intention of doing so. What has come to you St. John?"

"I don't know, mother," he said. "Perhaps I have only just realized how unjustly we are treating Miss Harwood—and that we are treating her unjustly, you will be the first to admit when you have seen her, spoken to her, and heard her speak."

He rose and put his arm round her neck.

"I want you to call upon her this afternoon, mother. I will go with you, if you will let me."

If she should have resisted his verbal appeal, she could not have resisted his touch.

"Very well, St. John," she said, with a sigh, "But I—"

He bent his head and kissed her.

"Thank you, mother," he said. "We will go after lunch." Then, without another word, he left the room.

Soon after lunch the carriage was ordered, and the countess and St. John proceeded to Reinford Hall.

The countess had told her husband, the earl, and had gone through the form of asking his permission. It was a mere form, for the earl was one of those mea who believe their wives can do no wrong. He was as devoted to her as she was to their only son, and if she had proposed calling upon the wife of the village sweep, Lord Lisle would have said, "Certainly, my dear, certainly; by all means," and would have trudged off to an inspection of the pigs at the home farm, with a comfortable assurance that she was doing quite the right thing.

The countess and St. John spoke very little on their way to the Hall. She was wondering how this unknown Miss Harwood had produced such an impression on her son, and he—well, he was lost in dreaming of the beautiful girl with the violet eyes and the musical voice.

Nance was alone in her room when the cards were brought to her; Lady Dockitt had gone for a drive.

She gazed at the little slips of pasteboard in surprise and with deep thought for a moment.

Why should the great Countess of Lisle call upon her? Should she see her? Why should she? She did not want to know Lady Lisle. She wanted to be left alone, to lead her quiet life undisturbed by outside influence, to dwell apart from the world, wrapped in her sad remembrance of the past.

"Tell her ladyship," she said to Sophie, "that I am not at home."

"I am very sorry, miss," said Sophie; "but Mr. Bulford said you were, and the Countess and Lord St. John are in the drawing-room."

"Very well," said Nance; and she went down.

She was so little awed or disturbed by the grand visitors that she did not even turn to the glass to smooth her hair or arrange her ribbons, with that deft touch that most women consider necessary on such occasions.

As she entered the drawing-room she saw a stately, handsome woman, looking every inch a countess, who regarded her at first with cold, reserved scrutiny, which, as Nance came forward, changed subtly to an expression of surprise and admiration, which as rapidly was effaced by one of conventional politeness.

As a matter of fact, the countess was considerably astonished. She had expected to see an ordinary girl of the middle class, afflicted by all the ordinary awkwardness and embarrassment, with the shifting eyes and uneasy smile which are characteristics of that class. It amazed her that this girl should not only be so beautiful, but should be so beautiful in so refined a fashion, and that she should come into her, the countess's, presence with so calm and self-possessed a demeanor. The girl secmed grace, refinement themselves.

The countess, without knowing it, had meant to be blandly patronizing, coldly polite. She felt instantly, with the instinctive acuteness of her class, that patronage was not the game to play; that it would be quite thrown away upon this girl, who, marvelous to say, bore herself with the dignity and graceful ease which, the countess felt, should be the exclusive property of the aristocracy.

"How do you do, Miss Harwood?" she said; and before she knew it she had actually commenced to apologize for not calling before. "I have so much to do, and my son has just come home, and takes up so much of my time"—she smiled at St. John, who sat gazing at Nance, with all his heart in his eyes—"that I have had no time lately for calling. He tells me that he has already made your acquaintance. I am afraid he was very troublesome. But it was very kind of you to drive him home."

What she meant was that it was very kind of St. John to allow himself to be driven.

"On the contrary," said Nance, "Lord St. John was very kind to me."

The countess listened to the musical voice with a fresh sensation of surprise. Really, the girl was wonderful!

She and Nance continued talking the usual small-talk; but, as the countess remembered afterward, it was she who talked, and Nance who listened.

The footman brought in the tea, which Nance distributed as gracefully and as easily as if she had been accustomed to the function all her life.

The countess noticed her white and shapely hands. St. John noticed them too, and thrilled as, by chance, one of them touched it. He sat with his tea-cup in his hand, almost silent for a time; but presently he said, as if he had been paying little or no attention to his mother's small-talk:

"Miss Harwood, we were speaking of the Hall this morning, and I presumptuously wished that I could show it to you. It is some years since I was here. Will you let me see the west tower? You know its history, I suppose?"

Nance turned to him gravely.

"No," she said. "You forget that I am quite a newcomer."

The words were spoken without a single sign of embarrassment, and the countess could not withhold her mental tribute to "the girl's" admirable self-possession.

"Will you come, Lady Lisle?" said Nance to her.

"Thank you," said the countess. "But I am afraid St. John is giving you some trouble."

Nance led the way through the hall and down the passage leading to the historical west tower. She had often visited it herself.

It was one of the oldest parts of the Hall, and its rough-hewn masonry, had fortunately escaped the hands of the renovator. It stood just as it had stood when a Yorke of the fourteenth century had built it, as a means of defence for the rest of his ancestral home.

The tower was reached by a flight of many steps. As they ascended these, Lord St. John pointed to the names and inscriptions scratched upon the stone walls.

"They kept prisoners here in the old times," he said. "The Yorkes were little kings in those days. It is in this tower that Lady Bernice Yorke withatood a siege of thirty days, and, with the aid of a score or so of her retainers, held the besiegers at bay until aid arrived."

Half-way up the stairs he stopped and leaned heavily upon his stick. Nance, who could never have helped assisting a tired child or a lame dog, held out her hand.

"Let me help you," she said.

Lord St. John put his hand upon her arm.

"Thank you," he said in a low voice.

They reached the top of the tower. The countess sunk upon a seat. Nance and Lord St. John went to the edge of the battlements.

He pointed out the various places of interest in the magnificent view, and told her, in brief, the history of the houses that rose from among the trees dotting the plain.

Nance listened in silence. His eyes dwelt upon her face. His own face was flushed; his voice thrilled with an earnestness quite new to it.

He could have stayed there beside this beautiful girl for the rest of the day; but the countess had no such inclination.

"St. John," she said quietly, "we must be going. We have stayed an unconscionable time, and are keeping Miss Harwood."

St. John tore himself away with evident reluctance, and Nance took leave of her visitors with the same ease and self-possession which had so astonished the countess.

The carriage drove away, St. John sinking back against the cushions with a profound sigh.

"She seems a very nice girl, this Miss Harwood," said the countess. "I am not surprised at your sudden liking for her."

Lord St. John was silent for a moment; then he turned his eyes upon his mother, and, with a sudden pallor, said:

"Mother, I love her!"

CHAPTER XXXII.

"You love her! My dear St. John, it is—it is impossible!" exclaimed the countess, staring at him in amazement.

"That which has happened can not be impossible, mother," he said, quietly, gazing before him intently. "I love her—I love her as deeply, as passionately as if I had known her for months, years. It is love at first sight, if you like; but it is a real, a true and a lasting love; it will last me all my life."

"But—but," said the countess, actually faltering in her astonishment and bewilderment, "we know nothing about her. She is not one of ourselves; she is—oh, no one knows who!—the daughter of a nobody! She may have, probably has, relations who are quite—quite unpresentable—people it would be quite impossible to know."

"God did not make the world for 'ourselves' only," said St. John, with the slightest of smiles. "Mother, don't be angry; but do we not, our class, get too much into the way of thinking that no good thing can exist outside our own little set; that to be outside the imaginary pale we have drawn round our exclusiveness is to be utterly unworthy of existence? Tell me—tell me candidly—do you know, among the Lisles and De Veres, the Chichesters and Somersets, a sweeter, purer-looking girl than Miss Harwood? Is there one of my innumerable cousins who moves more gracefully, speaks with truer refinement?"

The countess was silent. She was a clever woman. She adored her son; he was the only child—the heir to the old title, the great wealth of the Lisles. There were few sacrifices she would not have made to secure his happiness. But marry Miss Harwood—a nobody! yes, worse than a nobody—the daughter of the money-lender who had "stolen" Rainford Hall from the Yorkes!

She said no more, and in silence the two reached home. The countess went straight to the earl's "study"—a den in which he kept his rods and gun, pipes, tobacco, "The Housekeepers' Guide," and "The Farmers' Manual."

He was cleaning a pipe with a feather, and, in his knickerbocker suit and leather gaiters, would have looked like an ordinary farmer, but for his face. That, with its delicate sentour, its hooked nose, and clear, commanding eyes, was the face of an aristocrat. "My lord, the earl," looked from every feature of it.

"Well, Agnes?" he said, seeing that something was the matter. "Back? Tea ready? Where have you been? Ah, yes, to the Hall! Well?"

"Talbot," said the countess, looking round for a chair that was not dusty or lumbered up, and failing to find one, he swept one clear of its litter, and placed it for her, with the courtesy of a lover. He might look like a farmer, but his manners were those of a grand seigneur—"Talbot," she said, as she sunk into the chair, "I am in trouble. Yes, I have been to the Hall, and—and—I wish that I had not gone."

He nodded, and patiently put down his pipe.

"Girl quite too bad for anything, I suppose?" he said, philosophically. "Never mind. It can end there."

"No," said the countess; "she is quite too good."

He looked at her expectantly.

"She is—yes; she is really beautiful, lovely," she went on, reluctantly; "and her manners"—she sighed—"they are perfect. She is as quiet as a mouse and as graceful as a fawn."

The earl laughed.

"You seem to have fallen in love with her," he said, with evident amusement.

The countess colored.

"No, I have not," she said; "but St. John has."

He stared at her, all the amusement vanished from his face.

"What! Are you serious, Agnes?"

"Quite serious," she responded. "He has fallen in love with her. He has told me so, in so many words, quite plainly."

The earl put his lips into a whistling form, but refrained from the actual sound.

"Why, he only saw her this morning!" he exclaimed.

"I know," assented the countess, desparingly. "It is madness, of course; but—but I do not know what to do. It is evident that she has made a deep impression upon him. I never saw or heard of anything like it—so sudden, so grave! What is to be done, Talbot? I—I have spoken to him, and reminded him that she is quite unknown to us, that—that all her antecedents, relations, may be, probably are, common and—and unacceptable; but he retorted with some radical socialistic nonsense. Where do the young men learn it all—at college—where? Oh, dear!"

The earl pursed his lips and stared at the faded carpet.

"St. John is no fool," he said. "And for all his gentle, womanish ways and appearance, he has—well, I was going to say your strength of will. I won't say obstinacy, Agnes;" and he made her a little smile and bow.

"Thank you, Talbot."

"You remember how, as a boy, he generally managed to get his own way, by sheer mulishness—gentle mulishness, if you like. If he has fallen in love with this girl—well, I don't know what is to be done."

"But," almost wailed the countess, "she is—we don't know what or who she is. Her people—think what they may be, Talbot!"

"St. John wouldn't marry her people," said the earl, thoughtfully. "Look here, Agnes; it is time St. John married. I was married, thank God"—and he looked at the handsome face tenderly—"before his age. It is absolutely necessary that he should marry. He is our only son. Don't forget that."

"Do you think that I forgot it?" she responded in a low voice.

"He might do worse. You say the girl is perfect."

"No; I said—"

She faltered and stopped.

"Quite so, my dear. And he thinks that she is perfect, notwithstanding that she is a nobdy. Well"—he raised his head with a pride that was too proud to be called pride—"he has birth, and blood, and position enough for them both."

"Then you give in at once!" exclaimed the countess, aggrievedly.

"No, I don't," he said, rubbing his thin, grizzled hair. "What I should advise— But fancy my venturing to advise you, Agnes!" and he smiled. "I should ask her—But, of course, she will return your call quickly?"

"I am not so sure," said the countess, pensively. "She did not seem at all delighted or overcome by our visit; rather, as I thought, to regret it. I don't know that she will call soon. I got the idea that she did not—did not very much wish to make our acquaintance. At any rate, she did not jump at us."

"All this is amazing," he said. "But you'd better get her here, and let me see her. If you don't you may be sure that St. John will make opportunities of meeting her. You see, I remember what I was at his age. Do you remember how I used to follow a certain young lady about?"

The countess colored.

"We are not talking about our own young days, Talbot," she said, softly, "but about poor St. John. Well, I'll have her there, and you shall see her. Will you speak to St. John?"

"Not if I know it," said the earl, with emphatic promptness. "I've never entered into an argument with him without getting beaten; besides, he would only smile at me with that look of yours in his eyes, and in the gentlest way possible let me know that he intended doing as he liked. St. John is a fraud; he looks as easy and soft as a girl, and is as 'damned obstinate—' Oh, I beg your pardon, Agnes; it was a quotation."

The countess sighed.

"You never will help me, Talbot," she said; but she uttered the plaint in the tone which acknowledges its injustice; and the earl, not at all offended, smiled as he courteously opened the door for her.

When Lady Dockitt came home and heard that the Countess of Lisle had called, she was delighted; but a certain unresponsiveness in Nance's face caused her to restrain any expression of her delight and satisfaction.

"How strange your meeting Lord St. John in that way—quite romantic! And how very nice of the countess to call so quickly. I hear that she is a very pleasant woman—when you know her, and not nearly so proud as they give her credit for being. And Lord St. John, is he nice?"

Procrastination.

"I think so, too," replied the young married woman. "I don't see the sense of putting off your golden wedding anniversary till you are sixty or seventy years old."

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

There are some men who would rather pay a debt than to owe it, even though they must work to do so.

There are some men not color blind who could not give more than a vague guess at the color of a hundred dollar bill.

To cure some men of the habit of smoking the surest way is to run over them with a train of cars.

Achievements of the man behind various things should often be credited to the woman behind the man.

When a woman is in doubt she consults her friends and then takes the opposite course from the one they advise.

A man is presumed innocent by the law until he is proved guilty, but not as a general thing by the neighbors.

It is the little things that annoy—for instance, the small boy.

It sometimes helps a lot for a child to know that there is a strap in the closet.

You couldn't make the Igorrotes believe that the yellow dog was not made for a useful purpose.

In Autumn.

Serene the sky with autumn hues;
The distant hills are blue;
The maples mark the passing days
With leaves of brilliant hue,
The only bit of color gay
Amid the somber scene and gray.

The orchard, gnarled and bent and torn
With burdens soon to fall
And leave it lonely and forlorn
And desolate withal,
Now stands a brave and tempting sight
As though its future held no night.

Its children sweet and rosy cheeked,
Retiring, modest, shy,
In piles with gold and yellow streaked
Blush at the passerby
And beg him not to take his leave
As those that tempted Mother Eve.

With yawning arms the older mill
Serenely waits its prey,
And through the trickling russet rill
Our vision floats away
To pipe and apple jack and book
On winter eve in chimney nook.

Couldn't Fail.

"Out in our country we don't know what a wheat failure is like."

"Must be a wonderful country."

"It is. We raise nothing but corn."

Getting Even.

"Why does he insist on her singing when he knows she can't?"

"He asked her to marry him once, and she turned him down."

Fable of the Dog.

A dog was strolling out one night
And clearly looking for a fight.
A brindle cat sat by a tree.
The dog said, "Here's a chance for me!"
The cat proceeded to go hence
And landed on a high board fence.
And then these animals for fair
Made music on the midnight air.
A man who'd just laid down to snooze
Jumped up and shouted: "What's the news?
Is this Port Arthur or some trick?"
And then he grabbed a painted brick.
The cat, possessed of subtle wit,
Dodged down, and doggie fielded it.
And while he doubled up with pain.
The cat said: "Ha! ha! Drunk again!"

The moral of this tale is pat:
Don't be a dog; just be a cat.

Presence of Mind.

"In a fit of temper he threw a clock at her."

"I suppose she remained calm and remarked sweetly, 'How time flies.'"

Why She Stayed.

"Somehow my wife cannot keep a cook. I wish you would tell me how you manage to do it."

"We pay her once a week."

As Bad as That.

"I notice that Jenkins has taken to writing poetry for the magazines."

"Well, that fellow would always do anything for money."

Carried the Evidence

"He is a self made man."

"I notice he is carrying an original line of self made grammar."

Described.

"The X. Y. Z. railroad has dismissed all of its lady stenographers."

"Canned peaches, hey?"

A Common Interest.

"To what extent is he interested in mines?"

"Only as an investor."

A Poacher's Ruse.

A poacher, writing in the Country Gentleman of London, says: "When I left home at night to go poaching I always left an end of a candle burning in a saucer of water in my bedroom. This was arranged so that it would splutter out about 10 o'clock, just as if I had extinguished it and retired for the night. This I did because I discovered that the keepers were given to watching my house for signs of my leaving, and it was a long time before they found that a candle could go out without human agency."

NEWS IN GENERAL

STRANGE DISAPPEARANCE OF NEW YORK BOY.

Another of those strange disappearances, which from time to time baffle every source of inquiry, is now engaging the police of New York city and of the whole country. On Sept. 6 16-year-old Leo Fleischman, the son of well-to-do parents and a student of the city college, left his home to take a lesson with his private tutor nearby. From the time he bade his mother good-bye, no word of the lad has been received. He disappeared without leaving a trace, and while every resource known to the police, private detective agencies and newspaper energies has been utilized, the mystery is uncleared. Leo is about 5 feet 5 inches in height, of fair complexion and weighs about 140 pounds. His parents have given up their home and live in an hotel, devoting their energies and their means to a search for the missing boy.

TROTTERS ARE WANTED.

A. P. Hexamer, of Hoboken, N. J., last week, consigned to Vienna, to G. Witzmann, sixteen thoroughbred trotters, each horse having a record. Mr. Hexamer says that the market in Europe for horses is picking up again. Last year there was no sale at all for American horses, but during the last few months there has been a healthy demand for them. The animals especially desired are trotters. The trotter Wisdom, which was sold for $8,000, was shipped to Germany for the Emperor's stable.

BLOTCHY SKINS.

A Trouble Due to Impure Blood Easily Remedied.

Bad blood is the one great cause of bad complexion and blotchy skins. This is why you must attack the trouble through the blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. All blotches, boils, ulcers, pimples and paleness are the direct, unmistakable result of weak blood loaded with impurities. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills conquer the poison; they drive out all the impurities; they actually make new, rich red blood; they strike right at the root of all complexion troubles; they are a positive and permanent cure for all virulent skin diseases like eczema, scrofula, pimples and erysipelas. They give you a clear, clean soft skin, free from all blemish and full of rosy health. Mr. Matthew Cook, Lamerton, N. W. T., tells how Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured him of erysipelas after other medicines had failed. He says: "My skin was inflamed; my flesh tender and sore; my head ached; my tongue was coated; I had chills and thought I was taking fever. I tried several medicines, but nothing helped me until I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and drove the trouble from my system, and I am now in the best of health. I think these pills the best medicine in the world for blood troubles."

It is an every day record of cures like this that has given Dr. Williams' Pink Pills their world-wide prominence. They cure when other medicines fail, but you must get the genuine with the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," on the wrapper around every box. You can get these pills at all druggists, or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FINED 10 CENTS DAILY FOR NEXT TWO YEARS.

Judge Algernon T. Sweeney, in the first criminal court at Newark, N.J., one day last week imposed upon Mrs. Buela McCarton, convicted before him of professional mendicancy, a sentence that is said to have no parallel in the annals of Jersey justice. "The sentence of the court is, Mrs. McCarton," announced the judge, "that you shall pay a fine of 10 cents daily for a period of two years, and that you shall appear in this court each day and make payment as the court directs."

TRAGIC DEATH OF ISADORE RUSH.

Miss Isadore Rush, the actress, died on Monday at San Diego, Cal., of heart failure while bathing in the surf. The shock was caused by an immense wave which carried her into deep water. Half a dozen members of her theatrical company were in the surf, and assistance was at once hurried to her. She was unconscious when brought to shore, and physicians worked over her for an hour in vain. Another member of the company, Milton Heriot, who endeavored to rescue Miss Rush, was rendered unconscious, but was revived after vigorous treatment. While in public life she was known as Isadore Rush, her real name was Mrs. Roland Reed, her husband being a well-known comedian, now deceased.

Dodd's Kidney Pills Cure W. N. Baskin's Pains.

Well-Known Norwood Contractor Always Has a Good Word for Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Norwood, Ont., Nov. 21.—(Special.)—Mr. W. N. Baskin, the well known lumberman and railroad contractor, here, is one of those who never fail to say a good word for Dodd's Kidney Pills. Mr. Baskin gives the reason why as follows:

"For two years I was laid up with Lumbago and Kidney Disease. At times I would become very weak and would have to give up work. I did work on the C. P. R. and the Parry Sound R. R., and people all know how sick I was.

"Reading of wonderful cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills led me to try them, and I can say I have not had any pains since I used them. It just took three boxes to cure me completely."

Lumbago is one of the results of Kidney Disease. Cure your Kidneys with Dodd's Kidney Pills and you will cure Lumbago.

ANSWERED MATRIMONIAL ADVERTISEMENTS.

A despatch from Fergus Falls, Minn., says: When the criminal calendar was taken up a few days ago, John Amundson, of Mentor, pleaded guilty to the charge of using the mails for fraudulent purposes. The accused conducted a matrimonial bureau at Mentor, answering advertisements and signing his wife's name. His letter which led to his arrest was sent to a bachelor in California, who had advertised for a wife, and to whom Amundson represented himself as a handsome widow owning a large farm in the vicinity of Mentor. He said that he was tired of single life and running the farm, and wished to go to a milder climate. He asked the Los Angeles man to send him $31 to pay his fare, and the money was duly forwarded. When the trusting bachelor found that it was not even acknowledged he became suspicious and finally turned the letter over to the postoffice inspectors. When arraigned in court Amundson admitted writing the letter, and told a pitiful story of poverty and sickness which finally drove him to resort to fraudulent means to gain a livelihood. He was sentenced to six months' jail in Crookston and to pay a fine of $50.

HEALTH FOR BABY

Babies that are well, sleep well, eat well, and play well. A child that is not lively, rosy-cheeked and playful, needs immediate attention, or the results may be serious. Give an unwell child Baby's Own Tablets and you will be astonished how soon he will be bright and playful. For diarrhoea, constipation, simple fever, indigestion, colic and teething irritation these tablets have absolutely no equal. They do not stupefy the child as poisonous "soothing" medicines do—they go to the seat of the trouble and cure him. Mrs. E. Bancroft, Deerwood, Man., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for stomach and bowel troubles, for simple fevers and teething and I think them the best medicine in the world." You can get these Tablets at any drug store, or by mail at 25 cents a box by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. Wise mothers always keep the Tablets in the house to guard against a sudden illness of little ones.

M. V. Millard, a well known archaeologist, now a resident of Minneapolis, declared the other day that he had discovered the place where Noah's ark was built. He has been engaged in making excavations in many places on the Nile and especially at Gizeh. "I have discovered during the last three years," he said, "just where Noah lived, where the ark was built, and that Noah built the grey pyramid of Khoni known as the pyramid of Gizeh. "Noah was a millionaire. The biblical account of the flood gives no clew as to where Noah lived or where his ship carpenters were at work for 120 years constructing the ark. Noah was 600 years old when the flood came. It is evident that he must have been a millionaire and a man of great authority. He built the ark at his own expense. Such a boat in these times would cost more than half a million dollars. He must have been in a position to force vast multitudes to work for him regardless of their interest in him or in his work or of their own personal inclinations. Noah built the great pyramid during the earlier part of the fourth Egyptian dynasty and not more than 1,200 years after God had expelled Adam and Eve from the garden of Eden."

Mr. Walpole Murdoch.

MR. WALPOLE MURDOCH,
Editor and Proprietor of the Hartney Star.

The proprietor and editor of the Hartney Star is a newspaper man of two decades of western experience. He was but a lad when he started the Birtle Observer—the parent of the present Eyewitness. This was in 1884, when the northwestern town confidently anticipated that it would be on the main line of the C. P. R., and be a centre second in importance to but few in the province. For years Mr. Murdoch stayed at the pretty little town on the banks of the Bird Tail. But the Observer did not observe much progress made by the ambitious and once hopeful little burg. The population of the town decreased instead of growing, and its importance as a trade centre grew less instead of greater. All that a newspaper could do to stem the falling fortunes of the place the Observer did. Issue after issue it pointed out the wealth of the rich agricultural section of which Birtle is the centre, and enlarged on the success that awaited those who properly tilled its fertile soil. But it was of but small avail. The number of settlers steadily decreased, as it did in many other parts of the West at the time. This is in no sense remarkable when the conditions are known. The original settlers of the district came in with little or no means. As soon as they had performed their homestead duties and secured their patents a majority of them mortgaged their farms, and abandoned them to the mortgage companies. With the money thus raised they moved to a newer district, took up a second homestead, as they were then enabled to do under the law, and with much larger capital were able to make a fresh start on a larger and more successful scale. While the individual settler so doing was benefited by this, it is obvious that the district must suffer thereby, and in fact the country around Birtle was, for some years dotted with idle farms owned by mortgage companies.

The Observer, as conducted by Mr. Murdoch, was in many respects a model local paper. None of the country papers of those early days were mechanically faultless. The conditions under which they were produced prevented that. But few, if any, could compare in point of typographical neatness with the one of which Mr. Murdoch was editor. Conscientiousness and thoroughness are the keynotes of Mr. Murdoch's character. No detail is too trivial for his attention, if that detail is necessary for the completion of what he has in hand. Typographical excellence is gained only by careful attention to numerous trifles, and that this attention was given by Mr. Murdoch the files of the Observer bear witness.

In due course Mr. Murdoch determined to change his location. He disposed of the Observer plant, and moved to Pilot Mound, where he established the Sentinel. This paper he made a conspicuous success, and one of the most looked-for among the growing list of provincial exchanges. Four years ago Mr. Murdoch disposed of the Sentinel, and acquired the Hartney Star, of which he is today the editor and proprietor.

The Star is housed in one of the best offices of any country weekly in the West. Its equipment is one of the most modern in the province, and in the range of its job type, and the taste displayed in its selection, it has perhaps no rival in any town of similar size in the West. Like all Mr. Murdoch's newspaper ventures, particular care is given to the typographical appearance and display, and the neatness of the Star's advertisements have almost passed into a proverb among the craft.

Mr. Murdoch's personal equipment for conducting a country paper is widely recognized by his fellow newspaper men. He has a fine mental poise. His temperament is calm and judicial. Partizanship or extremeness of belief are naturally foreign to his disposition. He is a practical believer and example of the old Oriental proverb, which says that there is no stick so short or so crooked but that it has two ends. Mr. Murdoch always wants to see all sides of a question before coming to conclusions. Naturally, therefore, he seldom makes up his mind as to policies hurriedly. As is equally natural too, his mind once made up, he seldom has occasion to change his opinion. It is this finality and fairness in his arguments and reasonings that make his published opinions carry weighty. Few editorial expressions carry so far as those of the Hartney Star, and the reason is to be found in the thoughtful personality who's ideas they reflect.

While all Mr. Murdoch's newspapers have been remarkable for this sanity and fairmindedness, there is another

Four years ago Mr. Murdoch disposed of the Sentinel, and acquired the Hartney Star, of which he is today the editor and proprietor.

The Star is housed in one of the best offices of any country weekly in the West. Its equipment is one of the most modern in the province, and in the range of its job type, and the taste displayed in its selection, it has perhaps no rival in any town of similar size in the West. Like all Mr. Murdoch's newspaper ventures, particular care is given to the typographical appearance and display, and the neatness of the Star's advertisements have almost passed into a proverb among the craft.

Mr. Murdoch's personal equipment for conducting a country paper is widely recognized by his fellow newspaper men. He has a fine mental poise. His temperament is calm and judicial. Partizanship or extremeness of belief are naturally foreign to his disposition. He is a practically believer and example of the old Oriental proverb, which says that there is no stick so short or so crooked but that it has two ends. Mr. Murdoch always wants to see all sides of a question before coming to conclusions. Naturally, therefore, he seldom makes up his mind as to policies hurriedly. As is equally natural, too, his mind once made up, he seldom has occasion to change his opinion. It is this finality and fairness in his arguments and reasonings that make his published opinfons so weighty. Few editorial expressions carry so far as those of the Hartney Star, and the reason is to be found in the thoughtful personality whose ideas they reflect.

While all Mr. Murdoch's newspapers have been remarkable for this sanity and fairmindedness, there is another characteristic they have all shared in common to which reference ought here to be made—their keen observance of the world of nature. With Mr. Murdoch natural history amounts almost to a passion—not a bird or a beast or a flower of the prairie to which he is not a friend, and of whose habits of life he is not a storehouse of knowledge. His little articles on natural history are widely read and much quoted. In these days of the hurly burly of federal, provincial or municipal politics, and of the gossip and comings of people, the reporting of whose movements constitutes too often the bulk of the news of a local paper, it is a refreshment to pick up the Star, and read therein some little article on the coming of the wild goose, the habits of the muskrat, the blooming of the anemone, or a description of some rare and beautiful mirage. Few among the busy workers in the West take the necessary time to familiarize themselves with nature. The fact that one of the western editors gives frequently the results of his own communion with the various forms of nature is, therefore, all the more appreciated. Many of his subscribers would doubtless notice the omission of some item of local news, but among those who from week to week look for the Hartney Star as one of the few exchanges for whose arrival they look with eagerness, the little nature talks that from time to time appear are always the first things sought for. Whatever modifications may from time to time be made in the Star, they hope this will remain a permanent feature.

Mr. Walpole Murdoch stands for and represents much of the very best in western journalism. His high personal principle in both private and public life, his keen observation, his fairness in discussion, his breadth of view and judicial temperament, together with his industry and progressiveness, make him a man of mark in his profession. The ranks of newspaper men in the West would be bettered if more men of Mr. Murdoch's type were found therein.

The Bogy Man.—"Isn't there any way of rousing this community?" said the discouraged spellbinder, whose meetings had been attended by beggarly audiences. "I reckon there is," said the prominent citizen. "Come into town some day when we're not expecting you, and make a noise like Lincoln Steffens."

As a precaution against a sudden drop in the temperature, says an authority, it is well to be provided with a copy of a reputable newspaper, which should be folded to the proper size and thrust under the vest as a back warmer. Now is the time to subscribe.

Looking Ahead.—"How are you going to feed these birds and animals after we leave the ark," inquired Mrs Noah, "and while we are waiting for another crop of vegetation to grow?" "I prefer," said Noah, guardedly, "to leave that question for the commentators to wrangle over."

Later Discoveries in Mythology.—Pegasus had made his first flight to the summit of Mount Olympus. "Still," he whinnied, "inasmuch as I am not a machine, I suppose it would be of no use for me to claim that $100,000 offered by the St. Louis world's fair people!" Bursting into a horse laugh, he looked around for something to browse upon.

60 Specialists on the Case. In the ordinary run of medical practice a greater number than this have treated cases of chronic dyspepsia and have failed to cure—but Dr. Von Stan's Pineapple Tablets (60 in a box at 35 cents cost) have made the cure, giving relief in one day. These little "specialists" have proven their real merit.—72

"If I was you," said the girl's mother, "I'd try to get some flesh on my bones, and quit being so skinny before I did so much of that Del Sarte business." "Yes," said the daughter, "but I have adopted as my motto, 'Grace before meat.'"

'TIS A MARVELLOUS THING.—When the cures effected by Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil are considered, the speedy and permanent relief it has brought to the suffering wherever it has been used, it must be regarded as a marvelous thing that so potent a medicine should result from the six simple ingredients which enter into its composition. A trial will convince the most skeptical of its healing virtues.

Roses Old as the World.

Rose culture's beginning goes back beyond records. The flower is mentioned in the earliest Coptic manuscripts. India's traditions take the rose to the times of the gods on earth. Egypt had roses, wild and tame, before the Roman occupation made it, in a way, Rome's commercial rose garden. Yet, curiously enough, there is no reference to the flower in painting, sculpture or hieroglyphics. Japan in our time parallels Egypt. Roses flourish there, but do not serve as a motif for artists. There is this further likeness—neither Egypt nor Japan has a rose song or a love song proper.

Rough on Grover.—The story is told of Esther Cleveland that when she first heard her father telephone from Chicago to the White House her expression changed to wonder and then to fear. "Oh, mamma, mamma," she sobbed, "how can we ever get papa out of that little hole?"

De Miracle

It is better than electricity, because it does not scar or produce a new growth. Better than X-ray, because it does not burn, scar or paralyze the tissues under the skin. Better than depilatories, because it is not poisonous; therefore, it will not cause blood poisoning, or produce eczema, which is so common with depilateries, and does not break off the hair, thereby increasing its growth.

Electrolysis, X-ray or depilatories are offered you on the bare word of the operators and manufacturers. DE MIRACLE is not. It is the only method which is indorsed by physicians, surgeons, dermatologists, medical journals and prominent magazines.

DESPERATE AFFRAY WITH CATTLE THIEVES.

One outlaw is dead and another is in jail seriously wounded, as the result of a desperate battle between cattle thieves and officers near Deeth, Nev., says a despatch from Salt Lake City, Utah. Sheriff Clark and the deputy of Elko county caught James McKelvy and Charles Winslow in the act of skinning a steer of the Graham brand. When called upon to surrender they dropped behind the carcass of the animal and began firing at the officers. The latter sought shelter, and for twenty minutes a duel continued. Finally McKelvy sprang to his feet and fired. The shot was returned and McKelvy dropped dead. A few minutes later Winslow surrendered and was found to be mortally wounded.

INDESCRIBABLE PAINS STONE IN BLADDER.

An Exceptionally Severe Case in Which a Helpless Sufferer Was Restored by

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Gravel or stone in bladder is about the most painful ailment that ever afflicted mankind. It is the result of deranged kidneys, the uric acid forming into hard substances, which lodge in the kidney and bladder. The horrible disease is prevented and cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. Daniel Brown, English River, Ont., writes: "For three years I suffered from urinary troubles, partaking of the nature of stone in the bladder or gravel, and the pain which I endured can scarcely be described. I was unable to do any work, and frequently discharged blood. Though I spent hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills I received no relief, and at last decided that I would never be able to work again.

"While in this condition I was advised to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and though I had no faith in them or in anything else I decided to give them a fair trial. After using one box I felt a decided change for the better, and after taking five boxes I feel like a new man. I am entirely out of pain, and have no more discharge of blood. I can honestly recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to any fellow sufferer, and will cheerfully verify this statement to anyone writing me."

Mr. W. Bowen, Postmaster and station agent at English River, Ont., writes: "I have interviewed Mr. Daniel Brown of this place in regard to his long illness and cure, and hereby certify that the testimonial as given by him is correct."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

TESTED BY TIME.—In his justly celebrated Pills Dr. Parmelee has given to the world one of the most unique medicines offered to the public in late years. Prepared to meet the want for a pill which could be taken without nausea, and that would purge without pain, it has met all requirements in that direction, and it is in general use not only because of these two qualities, but because it is known to possess alterative and curative powers which place it in the front rank of medicines.

In a Parlor Car

By M. LOUISE CUMMINS

Copyright, 1901, by M. Louise Cummins

"Goodby."

"Goodby."

"Win the polo match."

"Sure."

Hallett raised himself lazily in his chair as the above conversation struck his ears and, turning slowly, looked across the aisle of the parlor car.

At the open window opposite a girl was bending forward. The knot of dark hair under her wide hat and the graceful shoulders in their silk shirt waist suit were sufficiently attractive to make him rise farther to see whom she thus urged to victory.

Scarcely had he done so than he sprang across the moving car and waved his hand frantically to the young man who stood, hat in hand, seeing the girl off.

"Why, hello, Hall!" the latter shouted surprisedly. Then he ran beside the train.

"Grace, allow me to introduce my chum, Hallett—there behind you. Hallett—Miss Kennard."

The two people thus hastily thrust into acquaintanceship looked at each other for a moment in rather a constrained silence. Then the girl laughed.

"Why, you must be 'the' Mr. Hallett," she said frankly.

"Why that distinguishing 'the?'"

"Oh, hasn't any man who was once stroke of the Harvard eight a claim to distinction?"

"But that was in the remote past, quite three years ago. I presume I am talking to 'the' Miss Kennard?"

The girl looked at him sharply.

"Jack wrote me of his engagement two weeks ago," he explained. "It is beginning to dawn upon me that my letter of congratulation was tame."

Her glance drooped. A demure smile lifted the corners of her lip. It might mean assent or denial. Hallett glanced in quick uncertainty at her left hand, but it was covered by a tan colored traveling glove. Underneath, he supposed, blazed her engagement diamond.

"I think," she said, looking up and surprising his inspection of her, "that my stay in New York is to be with a friend of yours as well as mine—Miss Gierhart."

"Oh, Dorothy; yes, indeed," he said heartily.

"We nearly fell out for life when Yale won, she was so anxious you should come off victorious."

"And you were not?"

"Well, you see, I did not know you then."

She gave him a shy glance.

"I wonder if she is a flirt." Hallett speculated and almost felt sorry for his friend in spite of the girl's unusual beauty. Presently he rose.

"I am afraid I shall have to leave you for a moment," he apologized. "My fox terrier Clip is in the baggage car, and I have to let him have a sniff at me once in awhile to keep him from tearing things to pieces generally."

"Oh, let me go too!" The girl jumped up. "I love fox terriers."

Hallett's brow drew together slightly. He had his own ideas about girls, and this rather too free young woman did not quite fit in with them. Nevertheless he helped her through the swaying train.

She went into ecstasies over Clip, stroking his velvet brown head while he frantically licked his master's hand.

"I think his collar is much too tight," she said authoritatively.

Hallett smiled.

"I took it in a notch on purpose to prevent his pulling his head through," he replied quietly.

She looked the dog over with the eye of a connoisseur, and Hallett watched her narrowly. By the time they left the baggage car he had about concluded that Miss Kennard belonged to that objectionable class of young woman who could tell the good points of a horse or dog, but was decidedly lacking in the more tender and womanly qualities.

In their zigzag way through the day coach she paused suddenly. The car was crowded almost to the point of suffocation. In one seat a fragile looking woman with a boy of four on her lap sat wedged close to the window by a stout man with a handkerchief tucked round his collar, who fanned himself vigorously with a large hat.

"That woman will faint if she remains here," Grace Kennard said decidedly. "She is almost gone now."

"What can we do?" Hallett asked, with a hopeless look around them at the crowded seats.

"I will give her my place in the parlor car."

"You?" His surprise was hardly complimentary.

"Yes, I, Mr. Hallett." Her eyes challenged his for an instant. "If you will help the mother I will take the child," she added coldly.

"Then I insist on your having my chair," he temporized.

"And I will take it—for the boy! Don't you see that he is too heavy for that delicate woman to hold? Oh, what does it matter about me?" she went on impatiently. "I am strong. Let me get them out of this while the mother is able to walk."

While the woman lay gasping her relief in a comfortable armchair and purer air Grace Kennard retired to the narrow seat at the rear of the car usually used by the conductor when sorting his tickets. Hallett went off to arrange things with that worthy, and, returning successful, stood beside her.

"Do you know, I think I owe you an apology?" he said slowly.

Her eyebrows and shoulders raised themselves imperceptibly, as though the subject was not worth pursuing.

"Perhaps you could find a seat in the smoking car," she suggested coldly.

"Does that mean that I am dismissed?"

"No."

He watched the softly flushed face. How tender, how beautiful it had looked as the older and weaker woman leaned upon Miss Kennard's young strength. Hallett looked away from her quickly. Was he forgetting his friend, he who had always prided himself upon being the soul of honor?

Again his glance traveled to her hands.

"Do you always wear gloves when traveling?" he said abruptly.

"What a question!"

"But do you?"

"Of course. Every well bred woman does."

"Would you think it very impertinent if I asked you to remove them?"

"Mr. Hallett," she said hurriedly, "will you kindly bring me my traveling bag? I want to get some violet water for that poor woman. I'm sure her head aches."

With a baffled sigh he started to obey. As he returned she slowly and deliberately withdrew her gloves.

Hallett watched the white, ringless hands like one fascinated, while she fumbled among the dainty contents of the bag.

"I thought"— he stammered. "Surely"—

"Please take this to our friend." She held out a filigree silver bottle.

He took both hand and ornament in a steady clasp.

"Not until you tell me," he said firmly.

"Mr. Hallett!" But something else struggled with the displeasure in her eyes.

"Please tell me?"

"Well, if you must know, I am not the Miss Kennard. Jack in the hurry of his introduction failed to make that clear. It is my older sister, Margaret, to whom he is engaged."

"Whew! Then, I may"— Hallett wanted to fling his hat to the roof of the car.

"You do not deserve to be told," she pouted resentfully. "During the first half hour of our acquaintance your opinion of me was anything but flattering."

He bent over her, turning suddenly grave.

"Some day I hope to know you well enough to tell you my opinion," he said earnestly.

She rose hurriedly, for the train was pulling into the Grand Central.

"Goodby," she said, holding out her hand. "Dorothy will be here to meet me."

"Then I shall see you safely into her keeping, and"—he still held the ringless hand in his—"I shall begin tonight to pay my large debt of calls to Dorothy. Will you forgive my saying that life for me has only begun today?"

Earthworms.

Darwin says in "The Formation of Vegetable Mold:" "If a man had to plug up a small cylindrical hole with such objects as leaves, petioles or twigs he would drag or push them in by their pointed ends, but if these objects were very thin relatively to the size of the hole he would probably insert some by their thicker or broader end. The guide in his case would be intelligence." He then goes on to show by reports of actual experiments that this is the method pursued by earthworms. Not only do they adapt the leaves of the trees of their own country to their needs, but the leaves of foreign trees are dealt with in a similar way. The following words of Mr. Darwin are remarkable: "If worms are able to judge, either before drawing or after having drawn an object close to the mouths of their burrows, how best to drag it in, they must acquire some notion of its general shape. This they probably acquire by touching it in many places with the anterior extremity of their bodies, which serves as a tactile organ.

"It may be well to remember how perfect the sense of touch becomes in a man when born blind and deaf, as are worms. If worms have the power of acquiring some notion, however rude, of the shape of an object and of their burrows, as seems to be the case, they deserve to be called intelligent, for they then act in nearly the same manner as would a man under similar circumstances."

A Japanese Story.

In one of his stories Lafcadio Hearn deals with a singular superstition in Japan. A woman had, according to a very common custom in Japan, given her mirror to go into the melting pot to make a bell for a Buddhist temple. After she had given it she remembered that it had been her mother's and her grandmother's and that it must have reflected a good many happy smiles. So she regretted giving it. She longed for the chance of stealing it back, but it never came. As the mirror was given grudgingly it would not melt. She was sure that everybody must know who had done such a dreadful thing as to grudge a gift to a temple, so she drowned herself, leaving a farewell letter containing these words: "When I am dead it will not be difficult to melt the mirror and to cast the bell. But to the person who breaks that bell by ringing it great wealth will be given by the ghost of me." This was a magnificently effective curse, because everybody tried to ring the bell till it should break. The priests were driven to the verge of madness by the ringing and threw it into a swamp, so that nobody could ring it any more.

Liberty will not descend to a people; a people must raise themselves to liberty.—Colton.

The Sewing Room.

One should purchase for the sewing room an excellent cutting table, with measurements, and see that the chair used when cutting is of the proper height to fit it. There should also be low and comfortable sewing chairs and a footstool or two to afford rest by a change of position. All the furniture of this room should be of solid wood so far as possible. Certainly no tufted pieces should be found here to catch threads or dust. The sewing machine is, of course, the central piece of furniture, and its position should be such that the best light possible may fall upon it. There should be a small clock in the room and, if practicable, a shelf, with hooks on its underside, where skirts in process of construction may be hung overnight. The shelf should contain conveniences for pressing, a large and a small iron, a well covered, small ironing board.—Ellen Judith Gould in House Beautiful.

The Messenger Of Cupid

Ogden Patterson Trevor, with innumerable letters of the alphabet attached to his name and fellowships in innumerable dignified societies on both sides of the Atlantic, sat on the top rider of a rickety rail fence, a seraphic smile on his intellectual countenance and a disreputable brier pipe between his teeth. Before him stretched a vista of sloping fields and level meadow lands already taking on a hopeful green in the mellow warmth of the early spring sunshine.

O. P. Trevor was enjoying it all immensely. The air was soft and balmy; the sunshine warmed his blood, and, best of all, he was possessed of the pleasing sense of duty done, for the last corrected proof sheets of his latest technical work on antennae had been returned to the publishers, and at present there was nothing to do but idle on this rickety fence and drink in the glories of the day.

It had created considerable stir in this little community when the eminent young naturalist had decided to tarry here awhile and rest from his arduous labors on antennae. A number of women socially ambitious had arranged a round of receptions and teas in his honor, but these delicate attentions he deftly and politely evaded by quoting his physician's orders for absolute rest. It was a happy thought to armor himself thus with physician's orders before setting out. He smiled grimly as he pulled his battered old hat over his eyes. Rather a clever bit of strategy, he concluded. It effectually did away with the lionizing and left him free to dally in the courts of his beloved nature. He blew a great cloud of smoke and watched it trail away indolently.

Suddenly his whole bearing changed from one of idle repose to alert attention. He pushed up the hat; he took the pipe from his mouth; he leaned forward perilously on the fence and listened eagerly.

"No," he muttered, frowning in perplexity the while. "No, it can't be."

Then he listened again.

"It is," he declared. "As I'm a living sinner, that's a scarlet tanager. Phenomenal—most phenomenal. What on earth is the little beggar doing as far north as this?"

The plaintive, piping notes came from a clump of trees far down the field, and that his eyes might prove the theorem his ears had suggested Ogden Patterson Trevor slid from the fence and started cautiously forward to investigate. He had traversed scarce half the distance to the trees when a small bird rose from the branches and flew to another tree some distance away.

"Amazingly like a scarlet tanager," the pursuer ejaculated, "amazingly so!" And, being a man of some determination, O. P. settled down to the chase.

And the chase was a merry one. The man would be almost near enough to the bird's latest resting place to determine surely whether or not it was a tanager, when away the provoking bit of feathers would fly, with Ogden Patterson Trevor and his innumerable alphabetical distinctions in hot pursuit. He followed the flight across the open fields and through the brambly underbrush of a clump of woods; he wallowed through an alder swamp full of hummocks, and one of the hummocks was treacherous and sent him sprawling into a pool of muddy water. He lost his pipe and tore the rim half off the battered hat, but with unflagging zeal he followed the flight of the elusive bird.

Now, on the other side of the swamp was a sloping garden back of a substantial house, and in the garden was a pear tree, and in the pear tree the bird alighted. The tired, perspiring, disheveled naturalist saw the bird light on the branch, and he started cautiously thither, worming his way up the slope flat on his stomach. Carefully he worked himself to within a few rods of the pear tree where the bird was still perched. He lifted his head from the surrounding grass, took a long look in the direction of the pear tree and smiled beatifically.

"It is a scarlet tanager!" he exclaimed, with unbounded satisfaction.

"I've found you at last! So that's how you do it, eh?" exclaimed a triumphant voice close at hand. "Get up and stand just where you are."

Still smiling beatitudes, O. P. turned. Near another pear tree stood a girl—a charming girl, despite the cold gleam in her eyes and the tight lines about her mouth. In her hand and pointed at the man of science was a long barreled revolver.

O. P. Trevor did as he was bidden. He rose in a stupefied manner and stood before her—a ridiculous, mud stained figure.

"Is it loaded, madam?" he asked, with nervous dignity.

"If you attempt to take a step in any direction you'll find out," said the girl grimly.

"I don't understand," Trevor began.

"Neither did we understand where the lettuce and radishes from our hotbed went to, but we do now," she said significantly. "Oh, such contemptible business!" she burst out. "Of all thieves a sneak thief is the lowest and meanest. If you were hungry, why didn't you come to the kitchen? You'd have been fed for the asking."

Trevor drew himself up. "I wasn't after your garden truck," he said hotly.

"I suppose," said the girl, with cutting sarcasm, "you were taking a stroll for your health and that your manner of approach is your usual method of taking a constitutional."

"I was following a bird," said he, with a dignity that his appearance rendered futile.

The girl's merry laughter rang out at this. She held her side with one hand, and the revolver wabbled about absurdly in the other.

"Following a bird?" she tittered. "For that choice bit of originality I've half a mind to let you go. So poetic too! I suppose you follow birds the year round."

Trevor flashed in his pockets and by good luck came across a card, a card with the full alphabetical display after his name.

"Your surmise is quite correct," he said coldly and scaled the card so that it fell at her feet.

She picked up the card and read it. Trevor saw her start and heard her little exclamation of dismay. She glanced quickly at the man standing before her. Something in his face and bearing confirmed the bit of pasteboard in her hands. Her face went scarlet, and she dropped the revolver.

"Oh," she gasped—"oh!"

She turned and fled toward the house, with Trevor following her and shouting:

"I say! Oh, but I say!"

* * * * * * *

Ogden Patterson Trevor, with innumerable letters of the alphabet attached to his name and possessed of fellowships in innumerable dignified societies on both sides of the Atlantic, sat on the top rider of the same rickety fence. Beside him sat his bride. A seraphic smile lighted his intellectual face as he put out his arm and drew the girl to him.

"It was here the chase began," he explained.

He looked thoughtfully across the vista of sloping fields and level meadow lands.

"And to think I should have mistaken it for a scarlet tanager when it was the messenger of Cupid!" he chuckled.

"Speak For Yourself."

Lord Leicester of Holkham nearly a hundred years ago was a widower and in the latter part of his life nearly blind. He enjoyed an intimate friendship with his neighbor, Lord Albemarle, and had in his own mind selected Lady Anne, one of Lord Albemarle's daughters, as the future wife of his nephew and the mistress of Holkham.

One day Lady Anne came along to join his morning ride, and Lord Leicester seized the opportunity of asking her:

"Anne, my dear, how should you like to be mistress of Holkham?"

"There is nothing I should like better," answered Lady Anne, drawing herself up in her saddle.

"Then I shall send my nephew William to court you."

Lady Anne drew herself up still more and, tightening her rein, replied calmly, but very gravely:

"I shall not be mistress of Holkham on those terms."

It was then the old gentleman's turn to rein in his horse. He looked his companion hard in the face and asked her: "Why, you don't mean to say you would marry me?"

"Yes, indeed I would. And there is nothing I should wish more."

This was a wooing that was not "long a-doing," and it led to a most happy marriage.

Cracking of Trees.

The catalpa never shows the sear and yellow leaf in autumn like the sumac, hard maple, etc., for the reason that its leaves are caught in a green, unripened state by the first severe frosts. In one night their bright green is turned to a dingy black. This sudden check gorges the cambium layer and new wood of the stem with water. An excess of water swells the protoplasm of the cells to such an extent as to rupture the inelastic bark, and in trees where the cell structure of the wood is not ripe the crack will extend into the wood often with a noise like an explosion. This often occurs in the fall when it is not cold enough to stop plowing. Sometimes there is much loss in nursery in this way with varieties not fully ripe when the first frosts come. Sometimes, indeed, it injures very hardy varieties. In such cases the swelling of the protoplasm comes from the water absorbed at the ground surface when combined wet and cold come together in autumn. The cracking of cherries and pears comes from the same cause—that is, by absorbing water on wet days, causing an expansion of the protoplasm. With trees the best treatment is to cover the rupture with moist clay and then wrap to exclude the air as much as possible.

Believing, He Got Ready to Dodge.

A Hudson river steamboat captain extended the hospitalities of his snug wheelhouse to a clergyman who could not find a seat on the crowded upper deck. The visitor was chatty, and when he had piled the man at the wheel with sundry questions concerning his spiritual welfare the skipper asked the reverend gentleman:

"Do you believe in predestination?"

"Of course I do," was the emphatic reply.

"Then you believe that whatever is to be will be?"

"Certainly."

"Well, I'm glad to hear it."

"Why?"

"Because I'm going to pass that boat ahead in just fifteen minutes if there is any virtue in hard coal and safety valves. So don't be alarmed. If the boilers are not going to burst they won't, that's all."

The divine arose, put on his hat and was leaving the wheelhouse when the captain observed:

"I thought you believed in predestination?"

"So I do, but, my good man, I prefer being a little nearer the stern when it takes place."—New York Press.

To Boil Potatoes.

Some housewives believe that potatoes can be boiled almost any way. This is true, but there are ways better than others. Peel the potatoes, cover them with cold water and let them remain for at least thirty minutes. Let the paring be very thin. The starchy part of the potato lies near the skin. After remaining in cold water drop them into unsalted boiling water and boil gently until they can be pierced with a fork. Drain off the water, dust the potatoes over with salt and shake them dry over the fire. This makes them white. A wire basket which can be plunged into the boiling water and removed from the kettle when the potatoes are done is worth its cost. The arms and hands are thus protected from the steam burns which are so common. Potatoes should always be served in an uncovered dish.—Exchange.

If I Can Live.

If I can live
To make some pale face brighter, and to give
A second luster to some tear-dimmed eye,
Or e'en impart
One throb of comfort to an aching heart,
Or cheer some wayworn soul in passing by;

If I can lend
A strong hand to the fallen, or defend
The right against a single envious strain,
My life, though here,
Perhaps of much that so-much dear and fair
To us on earth, will not have been in vain.

The purest joy,
Most near to heaven, far from earth's alloy,
Is dudding clouds give way to sun and shine,
And 'twill be well
If on that day of days the angels tell
Of me: "She did her best for one of thine."

THE DUKE OF NORFOLK.

His Unassuming Manners Often Mislead Strangers As to His Rank.

The Duke of Norfolk, the premier Duke of England, is noted for his unpretentious manners and characteristic kindnesses to those about him. A correspondent who has been staying near the Duke's Sussex home states that he recently heard many instances of these traits. When he arrives by himself at Arundel Railway Station from town the Duke rarely troubles his coachman to meet him with the carriage, but prefers to walk up to the castle. His unassuming manners often mislead strangers as to his Ducal rank. On one occasion he was passing through Arundel when a butcher's boy who had sustained a puncture to his bicycle demanded the Duke's assistance. "Hi! mister," the lad called, "give us a hand with this bicycle." Without demur, the Earl-Marshal went to the boy's assistance, and held the machine while the latter repaired the puncture.

At another time the Duke, the correspondent says, was driving to an appointment at Littlehampton, when he overtook an old woman laden with a bundle. Stopping his carriage, he invited her to ride with him. Glad for a lift, and unaware of his identity, she entered the carriage. "Which way are you going?" the Duke asked her, and found that her home branched off in a different direction from his own after they had covered a considerable distance. Therefore, getting down at the nearest point to his own destination, he walked the remainder of the way and sent the coachman and the carriage to convey the old woman to her home!—Westminster Gazette.

An Expert Opinion.

The contention among business men that a college degree does not necessarily fit a young man for a successful career has had support from an unexpected source.

Sir William Ramsay is a scientist of great distinction in his own country. He is a member of the faculty of the University of London, where he occupies the chair of chemistry. Moreover, he has won renown as an investigator. In a recent lecture in New York he is reported to have said:

"And now let us discuss a question which has not given difficulty in America, I understand, but which has greatly retarded the advance of knowledge and research in England. I refer to examinations. I have often seen men whose circumstances or whose character or whose deliberate choice has led them to abstain from taking a degree, and who are none the less most successful investigators and who have proved most inspiriting teachers.

"On the other hand, I have perhaps more frequently come in contact with graduates whose only claim to recognition is a parrotlike ability to repeat what has been told them and a knack of gauging the idiosyncrasies of the examiner. The older I get, the less I believe in the university degrees as a test of capacity."

It would seem that a man without a degree is better than a degree without a man.

A Loyal Blacksmith.

When Charles I. was dethroned the Commonwealth ordered the destruction of the quaint statue of His Majesty now standing in front of Trafalgar Square, and a blacksmith offered to make knives and small articles out of the iron if he were allowed to break it up. His request was granted, and soon after numerous medals purporting to have been struck from this iron, and bearing the King's head, were distributed to devotees of the unfortunate monarch. At the time of the Restoration the delight of the Royalists was unbounded when the blacksmith proudly made known that the statue was still preserved intact, and he dug it up from his garden, where it had lain during the troublous times. In appearance the medals he made are little iron discs about one and one-half inches in diameter, stamped with the head of Charles I., and it is needless to say, remarks London Opinion, that, owing to their unique associations, they are greatly prized by collectors who are fortunate enough to secure a specimen.—St. James' Gazette.

Curious Calendars.

Ancient time-keeping has received new light from two remarkable stones lately unearthed by the German explorers on the site of the old Ionic port of Miletus. These stones are the remains of calendars, of which one is shown to date from 109 A.D. The year was divided into twelve zodiacal signs, and against each month the motion of the remaining signs was given, with a note predicting the weather. On the left side were thirty holes, a wooden peg being moved forward one hole each day, thus giving the astronomical date. This new find has made clear the meaning of parapegma, or peg-calendar, a name by which other stones have been rather mysteriously known.

His Sense of Touch.

"Some men have the sense of touch developed to an extent that is little short of phenomenal."

"Yes, indeed! There's Closeboy, for instance. I've known him to say he hadn't a cent before I opened my lips."

Cruel.

Grayce—Maud tells me that Ferdy kissed her hand last night. Now, what do you think of that? Edythe—Well, I suppose the poor man had to do something and couldn't go her face.

FOR HONOR'S SAKE

By CATHERINE LEWIS

Copyright, 1901, by C. B. Lewis

There was a buzz of talk at the Three Star ranch, at the Four X ranch, at the road house between them and at the three or four scattered cabins along Whip Snake creek. There had been a clash between Dave Henderson of the Three Stars and Guillo Humayun of the Four X's. It had been expected for long weeks, and finally shots had been exchanged, and Guillo had been slightly wounded. Men had interfered then, but not until a duel to the death on horseback had been arranged to come off a week later.

The widow who had come to act as landlady at the road house a year before was to blame—the widow Huber and her daughter Viola, the latter a girl of eighteen. Their place was a house of call for travelers and was well patronized, although there was no bar and no liquor was sold.

If the seventy-five cowboys employed on the three contiguous ranches were a unit in declaring Viola Huber to be the handsomest, cutest, jolliest girl ever seen on the grazing grounds of the west, there was no one to dispute. If half the number fell in love at first sight, that was only to be expected.

Let it be said, however, that the girl was not a coquette and that the adoration and adulation were entirely unsought for. Nor must one jump to the conclusion that thirty or forty cowboys rode down to the roadhouse and offered marriage in succession. On the contrary, few of them ever passed a word with the girl or got more than a glimpse of her. They simply loved in the abstract. Perhaps ten of the lot in the course of a year had opportunities for conversation, although only two of them dared to flatter her or speak of love. One was Dave Henderson, credited with being one of the smartest of the Anglo-Saxon cowboys, and the other was Guillo Humayun, a Mexican who could trace his ancestry back to kings. All other Mexicans on the ranches were spoken of as greasers. Guillo was always referred to as senor. It was a compliment to his aristocratic face, to his daredevil riding and to his well known courage. He had flattered the Senorita Huber, as he called her. He had looked at her in a languishing way and had spoken soft words of love, but he had been met by a dignity and a coldness that froze him out.

THERE WAS A FLASH, A REPORT AND GUILLO TUMBLED TO THE GROUND.

In the end the field had been left to Dave Henderson, and, while the girl's choice had brought to others humiliation and chagrin, it had also been tacitly approved by the majority of the unfortunates. Dave was smart. He was a good fellow. He was on the road to secure an interest in the big Three Stars. Guillo alone was chagrined and vengeful, and it soon became patent that he was biding his time to provoke an affray and to use his guns. It must be brought about diplomatically. It must come in such a way as to present an appearance of fairness or he would be wiped out by Dave's friends. To this purpose he bent all his mental energies. When the clash finally came "the senor," too, had his backing, and when he demanded a duel on horseback he was announced to be within his rights.

Then came a single whisper. Given no attention, it soon became a buzzing. It was said, even by some of Dave's friends, that he had shown a touch of the white feather in the first encounter, and they doubted if he would do the Three Stars credit on the day of the duel.

These whispers reached his ears, and he simply replied, "Wait."

They reached the ears of the girl, and she set forth on her broncho and tried to trace them to their source. Men shook their heads in a dubious way and refused to give her honest answers, and at the end of three days she asked Dave Henderson himself:

"You must know what is being said of you in connection with the duel?"

He nodded his head.

"And what do you mean to do?"

"Kill Guillo!" he curtly replied.

The words were plain enough, but there was something in the lover's general demeanor that sent a chill to the girl's heart. Something—perhaps intuition—told her that the man was either a coward at heart or he was a brave man who realized his danger and was a bit nervous over it.

"Tomorrow forenoon at 10 o'clock," he said the night before the duel, "I shall ride forth from the cottonwoods over there to meet Guillo as he comes out from behind the bluffs, and I shall do my best to kill him. We will not say goodby. I hope to be here at this same hour tomorrow night."

For the first time since the duel was talked about the girl was satisfied. There was no bragging, no vaporing, but a quiet, grim determination.

Only the cowboys were to witness the cowboy duel, and they from points afar off. Not a word was dropped to the stare passengers who stopped for breakfast at 8 o'clock in the morning after an all night ride.

At 9 Viola stood in the doorway at the lean-to, gazing with eyes, narrowed to a mere slit—out—out across the endless stretch of sagebrush. Behind her ran the cottonwood line which marked the river's course, and beyond, the bluffs. But the Three Stars men must come from the prairie road.

Suddenly Viola started. There was a black speck amid the gray tones of the sagebrush. The speck grew and elongated. Then she realized that the upper part of the figure swayed uncertainly. It was the movement of a cowboy sodden drunk in his saddle. Viola's lips set firmly and her cheeks blanched, for the pony beneath the figure was the calico colored broncho of Dave Henderson.

The broncho cantered unerringly to where the girl stood, and as it stopped, the figure of Dave Henderson slid limply from saddle to ground. His eyes were bloodshot, his lips torn where his teeth had shut tight upon them. One arm—the right—hung useless at his side and the dull tan of his "chaps" was stained with crimson.

Henderson clutched at his saddle pommel and missed it. He swung around in a half circle and caught at the door jamb.

"The bunch on the Alameda arroya stampeded last night. Mighty—queer—business. And—I—got—this"— He tried to raise the uninjured arm, but failed. "Treachery—treach"—

Then he lurched through the doorway, and lay at her feet, inert.

"The Alameda arroya! And he has ridden from there to be on time—with his arm like that!"

Something hard and hot rose in the girl's throat, and for a minute she could not move, could not even go to the aid of the man she loved. The primeval instinct of motherhood was hot within her. The light love of the girl was smothered by the stronger emotion.

She called to her mother, and they carried him into the girl's own room and closed the door.

Ten minutes later the Widow Huber was working over the injured cowboy, but the tears rolling down her cheeks were not for the man, for darting toward the grove of cottonwoods the calico pony of Dave Henderson carried a figure that tried to sit up as straight and stiff as the broncho's owner ever had.

The cowboys, grouped on the mesa, watched the calico pony come out of the grove, and the sturdy little gray broncho invariably ridden by Guillo danced gingerly from behind the bluffs. The two horsemen circled around each other with spirited tactics, and then Guillo raised his pistol and shot in the air. But before the cowboys could give vent to their amazement the figure on the calico pony seemed to rise from the saddle, an arm darted forth, there was a flash, a report, and Guillo tumbled to the ground.

With an angry roar at such dishonorable action on the part of a member of their own band the white cowboys tore down the incline, while from the bluff rushed the stream of Mexican retainers.

The two bands reached the spot simultaneously, and their leaders stopped short, for the hat pushed back from the figure on the calico pony showed the face of Viola Huber.

Guillo raised himself on the elbows.

"Señor Henderson," he sneered, "was afraid. The senorita would save his honor. I do not fight the duello with women!"

The girl turned upon the men with flashing eyes.

"He lies with his last breath! Dave Henderson was shot before he ever reached the dueling ground. Ask him about the midnight assault on Alameda arroya."

Without another glance in the direction of the dying man she sprang into the saddle, and the groups parted to let her pass.

Recently one of the regular passengers got on the car at Powell street. He settled himself in a corner of the car and closed his eyes. He aroused just as the car was turning from O'Farrell street into Devisadero and peered out into the darkness. The car was going at such a rapid rate that he could not locate himself, so he turned to Pat and said, "What street is this?"

Pat looked at him and smiled. So did all the passengers. Then Pat reached up and gave the bell cord a vigorous pull. As the car stopped his grin became almost a laugh, and, leaning over toward the passenger, he said:

"It's the strate where you get off."—San Francisco Call.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING.

A special meeting of the Council was held on Wednesday evening. Present—Mayor Hutchinson, in the chair, and Councillors Drinnan, Stewart, Forster, and Nelson, and W. N. Adsit, Town Clerk.

The minutes having been read and confirmed, a report was read from Mr. W. E. Porter, Superintendent of Public Works, stating that all through the cold weather the gas pressure on the new well did not drop below 250 lbs., and every gas consumer in town got a good service. He suggested that an additional regulator put on somewhere on the system would be a great advantage and relieve the pressure on the low, which was 14-10. The report was dated the 28th December, and on that night the pressure at the new well was 330 lbs., and on the low 8-10.

The following accounts were presented:—

The above were referred to the Finance Committee with power to act.

Mr. G. Percy Blythe reported on the matter of changing the town's system of bookkeeping to double entry:—

Gentlemen,—I have the honour to submit to you the balance sheets for the gas permanent and water permanent accounts to the 27th December, 1904, and to report that the town general account has been placed upon the double entry system up to the 1st Jan. of this year, and that the books for each account have been opened in a proper manner.

I am pleased to report that the information necessary to complete this work has been readily accessible from the vouchers and cash books kept by the Secy.-Treas., and the same have been found correct; but there has been a great deal of labour involved in distributing the expenditures into their proper accounts, as there had been no ledgers kept for the same, nor had the accounts been distributed in any continuity. It was therefore necessary to take the vouchers from the year 1901 to the present date and practically place each expenditure into the accounts to which it was properly liable under the headings as you now find them, which makes it clear what the exact cost of the various undertakings have been, and this information is now readily accessible when required.

I would recommend strongly that in future when it is necessary to obtain funds for expenditure in either the gas or the water permanent accounts apart from the amounts raised by debentures that the sums required from time to time should be raised either by notes of those accounts or be paid directly by a cheque of the town general account to the credit of the permanent account requiring the money and the expenditure can then be made in the proper manner into the cash book and the different accounts debited with the expenditure. In this manner no money expended can be lost sight of.

It will be noticed that the Town of Medicine Hat has been credited with the debenture issues for the permanent accounts. This is the correct method, as the assessable property of the whole town is actually liable until these debentures have been paid off.

I would recommend that at the expiration of this year the town general account should take over all tools bought through the permanent accounts, and a sufficient sum charged to them each year for the use of same.

You will notice I have charged water maintenance with the sum of $336.55 for repairs to pumping machinery, as this expenditure has not added to the value of same.

I am, gentleman,
Your obedient servant,
G. P. BLYTHE.

The report of the Finance Committee recommending payment of accounts presented at the last meeting was read and adopted.

The Mayor suggested that it would strengthen the hands of the new council for the present meeting to place on the books a resolution in favour of sinking another deep gas well, and on the motion of Coun. Drinnan seconded by Coun. Forster, a resolution to that effect was carried. The resolution read:—

"That the council of 1904 strongly recommend the council of 1905 to at once take up the question of sinking an additional deep gas well as a precautionary measure in case of accident."

The Mayor then thanked the council for the support they had given him during the past year, and expressed himself well satisfied with the work done by the Council during the year.

Coun. Drinnan moved, and Coun. Stewart seconded, a very hearty vote of thanks to the Mayor for his able services during the past year.

The Mayor having acknowledged the vote, the Council rose.

It is to be hoped that the new Town Council will realise the importance of advertising Medicine Hat in every possible way during the present year. If the town is to get "business" the people should remember Barnum's words: "printers ink made me."

* * * * *

An old country paper furished the following newspaper motto: "Lie, Steal, Drink and Swear. When you lie, let it be down to pleasant dreams; when you steal, let it be away from immoral associates: when you drink, let it be pure water; when you swear, let it be that you will patronize your home paper, pay your subscription and not send your job work away from home."

Is this January or is it April? That is the question which agitated the minds of two citizens a day or two ago. They came to the conclusion that unless the world had slept for three months, like the gophers, it is January and being so the extreme mildness of the weather was astonishing, and certainly very delightful. A "chinook" wind took away all the snow on Friday, and the air has been warm and balmy ever since, so much so that many people are wearing summer clothes all day.

A Medicine Hat man received a letter from a friend in the old country in which the remark occurred; "At first I thought there was some mistake, or that Medicine Hat was a nickname. It's a very funny name. What sort of a place is it and how did it get that name?" There you are. If this town bore the name of some man who happened to have owned the land in which it is built, such as Jonesville or Thomasburg, no one would feel a bit curious about it. But Medicine Hat! Why, at once people have a hundred questions to ask about it, and that is what we want. Medicine Hat is a name to conjure with.

One of the first things to be done by the new Council is to get expert opinion upon a sewerage scheme. The cesspool system should be put to a stop to at the earlist possible date.

ANSWERS WANTED.

Mr. W. R. Gilbert is in receipt of a letter from the Editor of the Montreal Star who says a subscriber has asked the following questions about Medicine Hat.

1 What is the climate?
2 When does spring end and fall begin.
3 When do agricultural operations begin in spring.
4 How are cattle wintered.

What reader of the Times will send in answers to these questions? We should be glad to receive and print a number of replies because the above are standard questions in the east and in the old country and the evidence most likely to be accepted is that written by residents in the district. Many a man and woman in this town and country could, by writing plain answers to the above questions, do a great deal toward advertising our splendid climate and the many advantages the district offers. We shall be very glad indeed to publish answers in the interests of the district.

CORONERS INQUEST.

An inquest was held at the Court House on Friday evening, before Dr. Smyth, Coroner, and a jury, touching the death of Thomas F. Teagarden, whose death by shooting was reported in our last issue.

The following jury was sworn: John Benson (foreman), W. J. Reid, A. Des-Brisay, Robt. Nelson, T. J. Flaeger, C. Lean, I. Cosens, L. B. Cockran, J. H. Kerr, James Rae, J. W. Farr, J. K. Drinnan,

The jury then proceeded to view the body, which lay at the undertaking rooms of Moore & Moore, after which the following evidence was taken.

Jno. H. Spencer sworn, deposed: I am a rancher, and reside in Medicine Hat. I knew the deceased. He had worked for me since about June last. I last saw him alive previous to his being shot at 1.30 p.m. on the 27th December. He was in my house. He appeared much in his usual state of health, but he was quieter than usual, and complained of his head. He was a sober man and a good worker, not addicted to drink. I never saw him take a drink. He always attended to his work. He left my house at 1.30, and made a remark that if he got out in the fresh air he would feel better. I told him not to go out to the ranch if he did not feel very well, but to stay till next day.

By Mr. Flaeger—He was in the habit of carrying a revolver on account of there being wolves about. I advised him to do it. He always carried it into town with him.

By a Juror—He received letters lately. There were three from his sister.

By Mr. Drinnan—He did not seem disturbed about anything in the letter. He was with us all the day before, and he went with a friend to the show in the evening. On the day of the shooting he was with us as stated, and went out at 1.30.

By the forman—I never saw anything which would make me think he was of unsound mind. We once talked of suicides, and he said if he wanted to kill himself, he would not give it a second thought.

The letter left by deceased for witness was read, and in this he asked Mr. Spencer to sell his outfit and send the money to his sister. He enclosed a cheque for $176.50. He also said someone had better be sent out to the ranch, as there was one of the horses in the stable.

Witness—I recognise that as his handwriting.

By Mr. Drinnan—He was always in good health except on one occasion, when he was at Cranbrook.

Harry J. Lawrence, deposed: I live at Medicine Hat. I know Thomas F. Teagarden. I last saw him alive and well on Tuesday, 27th, at about half-past 1 to 2 o'clock. He came in to our stable and sat down. He asked me for his gun which he left with me the day before When he gave me his gun it was loaded. I unloaded it, and when I returned it to him I gave him the cartridges as well. He put it in his pocket, and then took it out again and loaded it. He said he was going to the hotel to rest, and went out. The gun produced is the one.

J. L. Brown said: I am an hotel proprietor. I know the deceased. On the 27th I met him as I was going to the bar. He was coming out. He came with me to the office and registered, and said he wanted a room to himself, and would pay for bed and breakfast. I gave him a room, and he paid for it, and he asked for stationery, pen and ink. I gave them to him, and he took them to his room. He went up alone. About half an hour afterwards I heard a shot. I went up and found the door of deceased's room locked. I got another key, and opened the door and went in. Deceased was sitting in a chair with his head resting on the dresser, the drawer of which was open, and his elbow in it. The revolver was under the bed. As far as I know, the gun produced is the one. He was breathing but unconscious. There was a wound in his head, and he was bleeding. There were two letters on the table. He was breathing, but did not speak.

By a Juror—He did not have anything to drink in the bar, so far as I know.

George Harry Sanders said: I am a clerk in the Royal Hotel. I remember T. F. Teagarden coming into the bar and asking for a drink. I don't remember what he took. It was about 4 o'clock. He asked me to give him a room, and I took him to the office, Mr. Brown being there, and he gave him a room.

By a Juror: I think he drank alone. There was a crowd there at the time.

John H. G. Bray, sworn, said—I am stock inspector. I knew deceased. I saw him two or three times on the 27th. I saw him again in his room No. 3 at the Royal. It was about half-past 4 o'clock. I was there when the door was opened. There was no one else in the room with deceased. As to the other particulars, he corroborated the previous witness.

Dr. Smith deposed that he made an examination of the body of deceased that afternoon, and found on the right side of the head about an inch and a half above the ear a punctured wound. On the left side of the head there was another wound of a like description a little above. He raised the scalp and found a large quantity of clotted blood beneath, and on further examination he found a circular perforation of the skull on the right side, and an extensive fracture of the skull on the left side. There had been a destruction of the brain tissue. In his opinion death was due to laceration of the brain. The wound was such as would be produced by a bullet fired at close range.

The Coroner informed the jury of his having been called, and described how he found the deceased, and had him removed to the hospital, where he died at 8 o'clock the same evening. He took possession of the two letters. In the one to his sister deceased enclosed a cheque for $600 and made no reference to any intention to kill himself, but he added "Forgive Me." The letter received the day before by deceased was from his sister, and contained nothing to disturb his mind in any way.

The jury then retired, and after an absence of ten minutes returned with a verdict "That deceased came to his death by a shot fired from a revolver by his own hand."

POSSIBILITIES OF THE POSTAL SYSTEM.

Cheap Mail Facilities One of the Chief Factors in Our Prosperity and Progress.

"Common is the commonplace." The most valuable of civil benefits is such a commonplace matter, that we scarcely give it a thought. It would take a writer on a whaler nipped in an ice floe to make us truly appreciate of the worth of the postal service. What a wonderful thing it is! Wonderful in its organization, with its vast machinery for the collection and distribution of letters, its railway mail cars, its route riders, the unfailing order and precision of its methods. Wonderful it is too in its results. It knits together families widely separated. It carries across the sea some tender lover's message or perhaps a little flower picked from the daisied grave of an English churchyard. Every hour of every day the mail bag is packed with words which waken love and laughter, and words which deepen the furrow in the cheek and dim the failing sight with bitter tears.

But with all this there is going on through the mail service a dissemination of human knowledge, a reaching out of human help which is one of the crowning blessings of our century. The correspondence schools led by Chautauqua, are sending to every village and hamlet the broader knowledge which is so eagerly craved by many who are shut in to the homely duties of a humble life. Without the mail system this plan of education would be impracticable.

Every mail, too, carries from the great centers, the advice of great physicians, which it would be impossible for the distant public to obtain were it not for the mails. Few people realize how many thousand people depend on the mail service for medical treatment. Not long ago when some postal affairs were being discussed in connection with the erection of the new postoffice building in Buffalo, N. Y., some light was thrown on this subject by the statement that the mail by Dr. R. V. Pierce amounted daily to something over 1,500 pieces. Of course this is not a common case, because Dr. Pierce's relation as chief consulting physician to Buffalo's famous institution, The Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, makes his advice and that of his staff of nearly a score of skilled and experienced specialists much sought after, especially by women, to the treatment and cure of whose special diseases Dr. Pierce has devoted over thirty years of almost constant labor. But though this example is out of the ordinary, it may serve as an evidence of the amazing benefits reaped by the public from the mail service. It puts every outlying hamlet in touch with the most advanced medical specialism of the day. It gives at a cost of a two-cent stamp, the skill and experience that it has taken years to acquire. Literally at the cost of a two-cent stamp, since Dr. Pierce invites sick women to consult him by letter without charge. And this would seem to be one of the most remarkable services rendered by the postal system, perhaps the supreme service of all. For while it is a splendid thing to be able to shop in New York while living in Kansas, and a grand thing to be able to command the learning of great professors while working in the Michigan woods, it is a still grander thing that by means of this cheaply supplied service, men like Dr. Pierce, who have the disposition to be helpful, are enabled to place their skill and knowledge at the disposal of those who are being dragged down by disease, without the possibility of help from those about them. When one contemplates the vast and far reaching benefits of the mail service, so briefly touched upon in this article, it makes the familiar gray uniform of the postman the most glorious of all uniforms, for it is worn by the soldiers of the army of peace. It makes one feel like taking his hat off to the on-rushing mail train, and cheering the work and wisdom of Uncle Sam.

Discussing Details for Autonomy.

A message from Ottawa, dated 28th December, says—Premier Haultain and Minister Bulyea, of Regina, are here to carry on the negotiations with the Dominion Government relative to conferring provincial autonomy on the Territorities.

The first question to be determined will be that relative to the number of provinces. It is said a very strong feeling is developing in favour of taking a portion of the eastern section for Manitoba and enlarging the central portion and the western into one, or perhaps two provinces. The press of the eastern provinces seem to take it for granted that a part of the Territories would be best served by this scheme, and Manitoba is clamoring for this arrangement. It is pointed out that if the Territories are formed into one province with the present rate of increase in population, the province will be too large to handle in a few years, and the great difficulty will then be to secure a division, once this plan is completed for a single province.

W.C.T.U. CORNER.

[CONDUCTED BY A MEMBER.]

At the public school closing physiolgy and temperance was the subject and the effects of alcohol as it mingles with the blood and other parts of the body was plainly shown. As the instructor went on to show the effects and harm done to the body by strong liquors he illustrated his discourse with the following story.

"Once a hunter went out on the prairie to hunt wolves. He went out alone, but having a good gun and plenty of ammunition thought he could surely protect himself. But he did not consider that one wolf is easily killed but not so with twenty, he climbed up a tree and commenced to fire but the wolves soon saw what it meant when a shot was fired, so kept out of reach. However he kept them at bay for two whole days but the third day his strength gave out, also his ammunition, when he fell from the tree and the wolves soon had him devoured. When a search party went out they found only a gun, a watch and chain with some clothing."

So it is with men who say they only take a social glass. From one it grows to twenty and not only is his appetite for strong drink grown strong but the company he once loved has seemed to change. The change is not in the people but in the man for he has lost his courage, his money and his desire for Christ's blessed teaching.

The teaching of temperance are purity and love which seek to save not only this life, but that through the Saviour they may also be saved to eternal life.

MARRIAGE.

JACKSON—HORNER.

An interesting event took place on Wednesday evening December 21st. at the home of Mr. Jas. Horner, Medicine Hat, when his daughter Margaret J. was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. G. T. Jackson C.P.R. agent at Innisfail, Alta. The ceremony, which took place at 4 p.m., was performed by the Rev. J. S. Ferguson, of Didsbury, Alta., in the presence of a number of the relatives and immediate friends of the contracting parties. The bride who was given away by her father looked charming in a dainty dress of cream silk voille, with a drop yoke of silk insertion and chiffon and carried a beautiful bouquet of cream roses and ferns. her travelling costume was of blue ladies cloth with white plush hat. She was attended by Miss Queenie Hargrave of Medicine Hat, who was becomingly attired in Nile green cashmere trimmed pretty handmade lace and carried a bouquet of carnations and ferns. The groom was ably assisted by his brother Mr. Oliver Jackson, of Edmonton. The flower girl was little Miss Eva Horner, sister of the bride, and was daintily attired in a dress of pale blue cashmere. Mendellsohns wedding march was played by Miss Melrose Hargrave, who wore a pretty dress of cream cashmere, with lace trimmings.

After the ceremony, the guests, numbering about twenty-five, sat down to a sumptuous repast, the bride assisted by her bridesmaid, following the old custom cutting the cake. Supper being over, the evening was spent in songs and music until about 9.30 p.m. when the happy young couple left on No 1. for their home in Innisfail amid showers of rice and the good wishes of all present, in which THE TIMES joins heartily. The groom's presents to the bride were a handsome leather travelling case, and gold jewel case, to the bridesmaid, a gold sunburst of pearls, and to the groomsman a pair of gold cuff links. A large number of beautiful presents were received from Medicine Hat, Parker, Ont., Ingersoll, Toronto, Michel, B.C., Edmonton, Calgary, Revelstoke, Banff, Innisfail, Red Deer, Carstairs, Didsbury, Stair, Bowell, Suffield, Leduc and several other places.

A HORSE AT THE SHOW.

Story of a Ribbon Winning Horse an Equine Viewpoint.

One of the popular features of the annual horse show in New York is the squad of park police horses that is always entered. The winning of a blue ribbon by one of these police horses is told in "Horses Nine," by Sewell Ford, from the viewpoint of the horse. The author says:

So it happened that one morning Skipper heard the sergeant tell Reddy that he had been detailed for the horse show squad. Reddy had saluted and said nothing at the time, but when they were once out on post he told Skipper all about it.

"Sure an' it's app'arin' before all the swells in town ye'll be, me b'y. Phat do ye think of that, eh? An' mebbe ye'll be gettin' a blue ribbon, Skipper, me lad, an' mebbe Mr. Patrick Martin will have a roundsman's berth an' chevrons on his sleeves afore the year's out."

The horse show was all that Reddy had promised, and more. The light almost dazzled Skipper. The sounds and the smells confused him, but he felt Reddy on his back, heard him chirrup softly and soon felt at ease on the tanbark.

Then there was a great crash of noise, and Skipper, with some fifty of his friends on the force, began to move around the circle. First it was fours abreast, then by twos, and then a rush to troop front, when, in a long line, they swept around as if they had been harnessed to a beam by traces of equal length.

After some more evolutions a half dozen were picked out and put through their paces. Skipper was one of these. Then three of the six were sent to join the rest of the squad. Only Skipper and two others remained in the center of the ring. Men in queer clothes, wearing tall, black hats, showing much white shirt front and carrying long whips, came and looked them over carefully.

Skipper showed these men how he could waltz in time to the music, and the people who banked the circle as far up as Skipper could see shouted and clapped their hands until it seemed as if a thunderstorm had broken loose. At last one of the men in tall hats tied a blue ribbon on Skipper's bridle.

When Reddy got him into the stable, he fed him four big red apples, one after the other. Next day Skipper knew that he was a famous horse. Reddy showed him their pictures in the paper.

SUNDAY SCHOOL RALLY

There was a Sunday School Rally in the Methodist Church last Sunday morning, when about 200 children with their teachers assembled, and a very profitable time was spent. The children occupied the body of the large auditorium, and the side seats were filled by grown-ups, who by their presence gave approval and support to the movement. The chair was taken by the Rev. J. M. Harrison, and addresses were delivered by the Rev. S. Everton, Mr Thomas Tweed and Rev. J. W. Morrow. Rev. S. Everton spoke upon the words "Come unto me." Mr Tweed directed his remarks to patriotism and good citizenship, and urged the scholars to value the efforts of their teachers in their behalf. He also gave a short history of church work in the Territories. Mr Morrow spoke on the "Life of Jesus Christ." Needless to say the subjects were all well handled. At the conclusion each child was presented with a bag of candies and nuts. The promoters and the other people present were satisfied that the gathering will probably become an annual event.

This represented the sales of the Real Estate and Improvement Company chiefly. The Evening Record (Windsor, Ont)., of December 17th. contained excellent photos of Messrs A. E. and W. T. Williams, Architects, of that city, together with a biographical notice and an account of the important works these gentlemen planned and carried out during 1904. Mr W. T. Williams came West in September last in search of a mild climate, and finding it here at Medicine Hat, has settled down here to stay. His professional card appears on page 2. Mr Williams was for some time head draughtman in the C.P.R. drafting department at Montreal, which he left to form a partnership with his brother at Windsor. Together they have planned many schools, churches, and other public and private buildings, all of which the Record says, are ornaments to the city and a credit to the firm.

unwise to sell a rancher's horses that come into town.

The Mayor—I think the best thing is to extend the time two weeks or so.

The matter was referred to committee

A report was read from Mr. Porter, stating the gas tapping machine is broken and cannot be repaired, and the matter was referred to the gas committee with power to act.

Mr Porter also reported that the stock of gas meters was again low, and applications were coming in every day.

Coun Penhale said he had heard complaints about the meters. If a meter registered ten thousand and only five thousand had been burned it was all right for the town but bad for the consumer. He thought they should buy a meter tester and test each meter.

On the motion of Coun. Drinnan, seconded by Coun. DesBrisay, the matter was referred to gas committee with power to act.

A report was read from Mr Porter to the committee stating that he had only eight feet of lead pipe in stock, and recommending that 2000 feet should be ordered together with other things required.

The report was referred to the water committee with power to act.

APPOINTMENTS

The Mayor said it would be necessary to put two by laws through, one for the appointment of the Secretary-Treasurer and the other to arrange with the Merchants Bank for money to carry them on until the taxes came in.

A discussion took place as to the salary and duties of the Secretary-Treasurer, and it was stated that he was paid $400 as such, and received additional salary as clerk of the waterworks, and clerk of the gas account. The total salary was $900 a year, and during the past year certain sums had been paid by the council for assistance. The council appeared unanimously in favor of increasing the salary to cover everything, the clerk then to pay for any assistance required.

The council then went into committee of the whole and a by-law was put through in the usual way, and on resuming, Mr Adsit was re-appointed at a salary of $1,200 a year. A by law was also passed authorising the raising of $15,000, in sums as may be required, to carry on the business.

The following resolutions were passed without discussion:

Drinnan—DesBrissay. That Dr. Smith be appointed Health officer at the same salary as paid heretofore.

Penhale—Stewart. That C. R. Mitchell be re-appointed town solicitor at same salary as last year, $200.

Stewart—Penhale. That Chief Markwick be re-appointed on same terms as heretofore, the question of salary to be referred to the police council to consider the matter and recommend to next meeting.

A desultory discussion ensued as to the salaries and duties of the police and the services rendered the town. No motion was made, but the whole matter will come up before the license and police committee, who will report to next meeting.

Smyth—Drinnan. That Mr Markwick be re-appointed License Inspector. Carried.

Stewart—Drinnan. That the office of clerk to water works, and clerk of the gas be abolished, and that these duties be included in those of the secretary-treasurer, and that the secretary-treasurer may employ an assistant approved by the council, to be paid by himself. Carried.

On the motion of Coun. Drinnan it was resolved that the question of amending the fees for the public weigh scales be referred to the license and police committee, to report upon.

MOVING FORWARD.

Coun. DesBrisay raised the question of obtaining expert help. He had nothing to say against the present staff, but he thought the public works required an engineer at the head of it.

Dr. Smyth also thought the town now required the services of a civil engineer.

Coun. Drinnan thought that at the present stage of the town an engineer would be a very expensive luxury. When they should go into sewerage they must have an engineer. The work was being done satisfactorily but he knew Mr Porter could not be everywhere at once, and there was a great difficulty in getting a reliable working foreman.

Coun. DesBrisay—I do not say things have not been done right but this is a question of great importance when we are embarking into great expenditure, what would an engineer cost us?

A member replied about $150, and someone else suggested $200.

Dr. Smyth took it that they would still require the services a man like Mr Porter.

Coun. Penhale said if they got plans and specifications, a foreman could work to them. He went on to mention mistakes by the engineers in connection with levels at the pumping station.

Coun. DesBrisay—It seems the foreman must have gone wrong there then.

Coun. Pentale—It was the engineers.

Coun. DesBrisay—Well, if the engineer had been here watching the work, it would have gone right.

Coun. Sissons.—If we have an engineer and a foreman, we shall have what we want.

The Mayor thought they should get the opinion of the best man, but the town could not pay the price for a man regularly.

A Member—Our gas brought us in $2,000 for December.

Coun. Sissons—Is it the intention of the council to go on with a sewerage scheme and granolithic walks this year? If so we had better do something at once.

After some further discussion

Dr. Smyth proposed the Council write Mr. Galt C.E., and Mr. Chipman C.E., both of whom are carrying out similar works at Regina, Moose Jaw, Lethbridge and Edmonton, stating that Medicine Hat propose to take up the question of sewerage and asking them for terms for complete plans and specifications.

Coun. Drinnan seconded and it was agreed to nem. con.

Coun. Drinnan mentioned the desirability of taking up the question of a new city hall, with council chamber, police cells etc.

Dr. Smyth moved for a copy of the auditor's report to be supplied to the members, together with a statement of how the town stands financially.

Coun. DesBrisay seconded and it was agreed to.

Coun. Drinnan said they should at once take up the question of completing the street lighting system.

Every member agreed that this should be done at once and the whole town lighted thoroughly. It was agreed to write the makers of lamps for prices of their very latest street lamps.

In reply to a question it was stated that the street lamps cost only four cents each per night.

The Mayor invited the Council to discuss the question of advertising the town and making an appropriation for that purpose.

Coun. Sissons—We want a better room than this. The public want to attend.

It was decided that the advertising question should come up next meeting, and the Council rose shortly before 11 o'clock.

MEDICINE HAT AGRIGULTURAL SOCIETY

The 18th Annual Meeting of the Medicine Hat Agricultural Society was held in the Court House on Friday afternoon. Present—President Forster (in the chair) Messrs. W. Cousins, Major Hollinger, B. McCutcheon, W. H. Hunt, T. Littleford, W. Houghton, A. Tinning, John Ellis, W. C. Harris, J. H. G. Bray, Secretary-Treasurer.

The Secretary read the minutes of the last meeting.

Proposed by Mr Cousins, seconded by Mr Littleford, that they be adopted as read.

The President and Secretary read their annual reports as follows:

To the members of the Medicine Hat Agricultural Society.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

In meeting the eighteenth annual gathering of the members of the Medicine Hat Agricultural Society, it is very gratifying to me to be able to place before you very satisfactory reports of the work for 1904, and of the condition of the Society's affairs.

The reports which will be presented to you by the Secretary-Treasurer will show that the finances of the society are in a very healthy condition. The society closes the year with a cash balance on hand of $194.77, and a surplus of assets over liabilities of $263.37, after meeting all the accounts which are outstanding.

It is also a pleasure to note that the Medicine Hat Agricultural Society, although we make no very pretentious claims to greatness, ranks in sixth place among the north west agricultural societies. In 1904 we paid in prizes $674.50. This amount was exceeded by the Calgary, the Edmonton, the Central Assiniboia, the Regina, and the Moose Mountain Exhibitions. Four of these exhibitions are an amalgamation of societies, joining a district exhibition, and make their exhibitions widely advertised attractions.

There was a great deal of interest taken in the stock-judging schools held last February under the auspices of the Agricultural Society, through the co-operation of the Department of Agriculture, Regina. The schools were largely attended and were a source of instruction, and the ranchers and farmers would like to see this feature of the society developed to a greater extent.

The feature of the exhibition for the past two or three years has been the horse show. The opinion expressed by the live stock judges is that our exhibition is one of the finest in the west, and that as a result of the competition arranged by the exhibition, the quality of the horse exhibit is increasing from year to year, and the indoor exhibition this year was also very creditable. The fact that Medicine Hat grows apples, crab-apples, and plums, which were on exhibit this year, makes a new era in western capabilities and development, showing that we can produce the larger as well as the smaller fruits.

There are two or three features in connection with the exhibition and the society's work which I wish to point out, and in doing so I will be frank: (1) The cattle exhibit is not what it should be in a district where we boast of being a stock country; if the prizes are not sufficient to attract more competition, we think the breeders should go to a little trouble and inconvenience to make this feature of the show improve; a good cattle show would be an advertisement for the district and an advertisement for the breeders; the idea should be, if you have anything fit to show, bring it in.

(2) The work of the exhibition falls upon too few shoulders to bear; a large directorate is elected but the work as a rule falls upon a few. Some of the largest prize winners take no direct interest in the exhibition at all. In such an institution there is room for the work of all who will give it.

(3) It is plainly evident that we will have to get away from the present way of doing business. The town and the district are both growing, and those who have been close in touch with the society know that there is a growing sentiment for something better in the way of an exhibition. I think the time has come when we should join interests with the Turf Association and other institutions, and combine exhibition, races and sports into a week's attraction in the fall of the year, uniting rather than dividing interests, and aim to make Medicine Hat for that week the attracting point of the west. This year the agricultural society put up $1300 one way and another, the Turf Club put up $1500. Combine these two and you have the funds for an attractive week of races, show and sport. To carry such a proposal into effect it would be necessary to procure land close to the town on which a half mile track could be built, exhibition buildings and stables, and accommodation for sports of all kinds. I would suggest that this meeting to-day appoint a committee to act, and pass a resolution inviting the Turf Association and the Athlete Association to take such a movement into consideration. The fall of the year I believe is the proper time to hold an exhibition which is meant to be an example of the resources and capabilities of the district. A week's attraction might combine exhibition, races, sporting events, roping contests, stock parades and perhaps a stock sale or exchange at the end of the show, and it would attract visitors to Medicine Hat and be a money maker for our business men. I feel sure that this is the natural outcome which awaits these several institutions, and the sooner the proposition is approached in a business like manner the better for all interests.

I desire to thank the Board of Directors for the assistance and co-operation of the past year.

F. G. FORSTER,
President

SECRETARY TREASURERS REPORT.

To the members of the Medicine Hat Agricultural Society.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

In making this eighteenth annual report of the society, the Directors wish to thank you for your liberal donations and support during the year 1904. It has been the earnest endeavor of the officers to use the funds of the society to the best advantage, improving what was thought would be in the best interests of the whole community. The exhibition of 1904 was a much greater success than in former years. The horse exhibit was considered particularly fine. The question of acquiring lands for the use of the society for suitable buildings, to be erected has been discussed at various meetings, but nothing definate has been accomplished. The building occupied by the society for its annual exhibition is fairly suitable and can, we believe be used for some years to come.

But not so with the grounds for exhibiting horses, as in the last exhibition this had to be done on the public streets.

During the year the Board of Directors held meetings which were well attended and conducted in the most orderly manner.

The usual reports will be laid before you for your consideration. The amount of prizes offered by the society for 1904 was $1553, and the total prizes awarded was $694.50, which was distributed as follows:

Horses, $287; Cattle, $91; Swine, $28; Poultry, $26; Grain, $14; Roots and Vegetables, $91; Dairy Products, $29; Miscellanious, $14; Ladies Work, $69; Fine Arts, $16; Childrens Work, $13; Indian Work, $3; Plants, Flowers, and Fruits, $14—Total $694.

The annual exhibition was held in the Skating Rink on Wednesday and Thursday, the 28th and 29th days of September, and was well attended. The exhibits were very good and tastefully displayed, and the work of the judges gave general satisfaction.

The Horticulture exhibit was exceptionally fine.

The past season was not at all favorable for growing crops owing to scarcity of rain, the following being about the average yields in the district: Wheat, 20 bushels per acre; Barley, 50 bushels; Oats, 45 bushels; Potatoes 90 bushels.

Roots crops were generally good.

Hay was a good crop, and more than usual was secured.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Audited and found correct by W. N. Adsit, T. C. Blatchford.

On motion of Mr McCutcheon, seconded by Major Hollinger, the reports and the financial statements were adopted.

Mr Cousins thought it too bad that there was such a small meeting present to discuss these matters.

The president said that after the exhibition was over all interest seemed to die out until another year.

Mr Harris suggested that they might adopt some sort of a drawing card to get members to attend. An agricultural society with which he had formerly been connected used to hold quarterly meetings, and at each one there was a dinner. The membership fee included the dinner, so members generally attended, for whether they were there or not they knew they paid for the dinner. Then when they were all together round the social board there was a good chance of getting things discussed.

Mr Cousins thought that was an excellent to adopt.

The President thought so too, but in the past few years the club had always been in debt. He would like an expression of opinion on the points he had raised in regard to having a committee to meet the Turf and Athletic Associations. He was sorry to say local subscriptions had fallen off from $700 to $400. Some of the people seemed to think they were subscribing to something for which they got no proper return.

Mr Cousins said there was a feeling of that kind. They said the Agricultural show is got up and the money distributed to people who took no interest in it. There was nothing done in connection with it to help the town, so it was harder every year to get subscriptions. He agreed that they should make the step suggested by the President.

The following resolutions were duly passed:

Moved by Messrs Littleford and Harris that a cheque for $30 be forwarded from the Society to the Agricultural and Exhibition Company, in payment of Rent for use of Skating Rink for Fall Exhibitions of the Society for the years 1903 and 1904.—Carried.

Moved by Messrs Cousins and Littleford that a Banquet be held by the Agricultural Society on the date of the annual meeting in 1905.—Carried.

Moved by Messrs Hollinger and Harris that a committee be appointed to confer with the Turf Association and the Athletic Club with a view of amalgamating their interests in procuring suitable grounds for their several purposes.—Carried.

Correspondence from the Department of Agriculture, Regina, re Agricultural Libraries was then read at the meeting, and the matter fully discussed, when it was moved by Messrs McCutcheon and Ellis that the society purchase the books recommended by the Department of Agriculture, Regina.—Carried.

Correspondence having been read to the meeting re stock-judging schools, it was moved by Messrs Cousins and Houghton that the secretary be instructed to write the Department of Agriculture, Regina, and state that the Medicine Hat Agricultural Society approves very highly of the proposed holding Live Stock Judging Schools, and would beg that dates be arranged for Medicine Hat.—Carried.

Moved by Messrs Littleford and McCutcheon that the Committee re Gas Piping be asked to report.—Carried.

Moved by Messrs Houghton and Hunt that the secretary treasurer be instructed to forward a cheque for Five Dollars to Messrs Adsit and Blatchford, Auditors, for their services for 1904.—Carried.

Moved by Messrs Littleford and Hunt that a vote of thanks be tendered to the Canadian Bank of Commerce for their donation of Silver Medals to the society.—Carried.

Moved by Messrs Cousins and McCutcheon that a vote of thanks be tendered to the gentlemen who donated to the society for the year 1904.—Carried.

Moved by Messrs Ellis and Houghton that the President appoint a committee to interview the Turf Association and the Athletic Club on the question of procuring grounds.—Carried.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows:

President, F. G. Forster, re-elected
1st Vice " John Ellis, "
2nd " " R. McCutcheon " Sec'y Treas. J. H. G. Bray "

DIRECTORS:

W. Cousins	James Rae

W. T. Finlay	W. H. Hunt
W. Houghton	J. W. Alcock
J. K. Drinnan	Alex Middleton
J. McNeely

Auditors, W. N. Adsit, T. C. Blatchford

On the motion of Messrs Ellis and Hunt the meeting then adjourned, subject to the call of the president.

CENTURY CLUB.

(contributed)

A very pleasant evening of music intervened by speeches was given under the auspices of the Century Club, in the basement of the Methodist Church, on Thursday the 12th inst. Rev. J. M. Harrison presided in his usual very able manner. After a few remarks touching on the success of the club. A duet was very ably rendered by Mrs J. Horner and Miss M. Cooper. The audience was then favored with a recitation by Miss Rowland in her usual pleasing and effective manner. The musical part of the program was then lulled for a few moments by the intervention of a speech by Mr T. H. Rhodes. Although Mr Rhodes wandered away from his subject and carried us by his scotch humor far over the ocean to the sturdy scotsmen, we are pleased that we can rely on someone to help us out at any time. This eloquent part of the program was followed by a trio by Mrs J. Horner, and Misses Cooper and Morrison. Although this was an impromptu call, yet these ladies readily responded to it, and deserve much credit for it. We were then favored by an instrumental solo by Prof. Hyde, of the Assiniboia Music Co. It is needless to commeut on his ability, as it is already very widely known. Miss Harrison then gave us an exceedingly fine selection of music on the violin, which was followed by an instrumental solo by Mrs Souch, which called forth our love of harmony. Again the air was filled by the strains of music, this time from instruments not made by human hands, it being a duet by Mrs J. Horner and Miss Morrison. This ended the musical part of the program.

The president then made a few remarks on the project of the club, and the success with which it was meeting. He also thanked the ladies on behalf of the club, for their valuable assistance.

Mr F. S. Pingle, the new leader of the opposition, then gave us a short address in which he tried to impress the young men of the necessity of availing themselves of the opportunity of learning to speak in public by taking part in the mock parliament. Our worthy Speaker was then called upon. In his few remarks he sanctioned Mr Pingle's remarks regarding the value and good the mock parliament is to young people to teach them, "to say what they have to say and then sit down." This, however, did not end the evening's entertainment, for a very dainty lunch was served by the ladies, who always do their part, this line particularly well and satisfactory to all.

We closed by singing the national anthem,

By the audience that was present, it is plainly shown that the aim and efforts of the Century Club are in accordance with the people. We are very glad indeed, to know this, as it encourages us in our efforts. We have had a very hard struggle to get to our present standing, but through the efforts and determination of our worthy president, who has led us on through thick and thin till victory is in sight. Young men, it is for your good, let us rally round our leader, and make this a victory that will vanquish all hopes of our opposers. Come to the mock parliament on Thursday night, or come to the club rooms, and enjoy a sociable evening, any evening you can. You are all welcome.

Editor of the Times,

Dear Sir,

I had just finished reading the extract below last week:

"It is proposed to crowd the Senatorial boneyard at Ottawa with thirteen additional stiffs. The West—everything is for the West nowadays, if you hear the politicians tell it—is not sufficiently represented in the political morgue, and the Senate must be be enlarged. This is the new way of reforming the useless Second Chamber with every orthodox Grit despised till it became a favorite winter hotel for the campaigners of their own sort who could no more get elected, but insisted upon staying in politics and Ottawa. It would seem better to give the North-West autonomy and proper representation in the Commons, and choke off thirteen of the oldest and most useless Tory senators left over from the days of Confederation, as beginning of the much-promised and much needed reform of our House O! Lords. The proposition is preposterous."

and then took up the the Medicine Hat News, the first thing my eye lit on was the Editorial. Ranchers should be represented in the Senate, which winds up by saying Medicine Hat will soon be able to take off its Honorable. If our would-be moulder of public opinion is so anxious for us to take off our hat to the distinguished rancher who is fortunate or unfortunate enough to become possessed of the little Honorable earned in the way mentioned, what would be expect us to do in the event of our discovering here a new ballot box with a false bottom. Nothing short of getting down on our marrow bones would be good enough for the fortunate individual (who would do this worthy deed?) would be so inconvenient, don't you know, particularly on the kind of sidewalks we have at present.

THE WATERWORKS.

While there is every reason to be satisfied with the water service, for it is both good and plentiful, the question naturally arises, Why not build a reservoir on the highest point south east of town so as to have a reserve in case of any accident at the pumping station and also to supply the houses situated at a high level. We not pretend to possess knowledge as to whether this is praticable but there seems to be no reason why it should not be so. A reservoir on the hill would be a saving of power at the pumping station. All the high levels at any rate could be supplied by gravitation and this would obviate the necessity of providing an increased power as the town grows up the side of the hill. We throw out these hints with a view to foster discussion on the point.

MAKES FUEL OUT OF STRAW.

The people of Manitoba and the Northwest will give more than passing attention to a machine which the Canadian Straw Fuel Machine Company, Limited, contemplate putting upon the market. The question of fuel is one which more directly concerns the people of the prairies than almost any other. The introduction of such a machine as this, which at the noninal cost of somewhere about fifty cents, will compress the straw which our farmers are burning year after year as a waste product, into what is called "straw wood," a fuel which it is claimed will give out as much heat as the best maple or beech, ought to be the long desired event for which the west has been looking.

The fact that the farmer finds his large stacks of straw of no real marketable value, whilst every winter finds him face to face with the pressing problem of replenishing his fuel supply, should command this machine especially to his notice. The machine itself is very simple of construction, is very easily handled, having no very complicated mechanism to get out of order; and is mounted upon trucks so that it can be taken anywhere that horses can be driven. The machine practically makes straw into cordwood; the loose straw being fed into one end and coming out at the other to all intents and purposes as a hard straw-fuel and in ordinary cordwood lengths.

The same company also contemplates producing a sheaf and hay loader. The device will be attached to a wagon and load a shock of grain at once; it is claimed that the machine will do the work of twenty men.

THE NATIONAL CHARACTER.

It has been observed that in every country the national character of the people takes its shades of color from the first inhabitants. This being the case it becomes interesting to look into the future and if possible discover some of the peculiarities by which the people of the Northwest may in after years be distinguished. Had the inhabitants of this country been cautious or timid, or without self-reliance they would not have come here, and had they not been vigorous and persevering they would not have remained. It was their ambition, love of novelty, change and independence which caused the settlers to make their homes in a land, which in the eyes of the world, was a most undesirable place and which is yet undervalued by many. It will be thus noticed that the people of the Northwest were all possessed of strong minds, original thought and vigorous bodies and this full development of mind and person enjoyed by the people is likly to be further increased by the unlimited abundance of good food which the country affords and which is possessed by everyone alike, while in other countries a large portion of the people are restricted both in quantity and quality of their sustenance.

Note and Comment

By OBSERVER

So many people in the East, and in deed, no furthur away than Manitoba and Eastern Assiniboia are constantly looking for a spot where they can find a more kindly winter weather, that it is well to keep ever before them the fact that Medicine Hat possesses a winter climate unexcelled east of the Rockies. Just consider that during the first few days of January the weather was simply splendid.

* * * *

An overcoat was scarcely necessary some time, except when driving on the prairie, the roads were dry, the air serene.

* * * *

The following week it was colder, but several degrees above the temperature of the east, with little or no rawness in the air.

* * * *

Then again, how is it possible to say too much about the natural gas supply. Public institutions and the public streets are heated and lighted by it; private residents use it in their furnaces, cooking stoves, and for lighting, and find it very clean and also very cheap. Many use it for power purposes. The press that prints the Times is driven by a gasoline engine which derives its power from the natural gas instead of gasoline, at a very cheap rate, and the gas is used for brickmaking and lime-burning. What more do people want?

* * * *

Harvey Herald says: A story is told of a shock received by a Devils Lake pastor after the service the other evening. He makes it a point to welcome any strangers cordially and that evening after the completion of the service, he hurried down the aisle to station himself at the door. A Swedish girl was one of the strangers in the congregation. She is employed as a domestic in one of the fashionable homes, and the minister, noting she was a stranger, stretched out his hand. He welcomed her to the church, and expressed the hope that she would be a regular attendant. Finally he said that if she would be at home some evening during the week he would call. "Thank you," she bashfully murmured, "but ay have a faller."

* * * *

Up to the time of writing I have heard nothing more about the proposed traffic bridge across the Saskatchewan. I hope our member will keep pegging away at the Ottawa Government until we get it.

* * * *

The proposed Hudson's Bay route to Old Country is of vast importance to the West, and is attracting much attention. A railway from Medicine Hat to the Bay would be the making of this town and would open up a comparatively short communication between the whole of the ranching country, the great Crow's Nest country, and the British markets. Trade between Britian and the White sea has been carried on for years, and if we can furnish trade via the Hudson Bay ships will be found to carry it. This would prove a great boon to the West as a comparison of distance will show. From Fort Churchill is only 123 miles further from Quebec; from Regina to Fort Churchill is 43 miles less than Fort William, and from Medicine Hat to Liverpool via Quebec is almost 1,000 miles longer than via Fort Churchill. This means much to the West. At one half cent a ton per mile it means 15c saved on each bushel on the whole trip. A crop of 60,000,000 bushels for export means $9,000,000 saved. There is a clear route 20 to 30 miles wide at Fort Churchill and I hope that in a few years the channel will be as well cleared and lighted as that of the St. Lawrence.

Slight Sprains Grow Worse

Unless promptly treated. The great strength of Nerviline enables it to quickly cure all manner of sprains and strains. "I spained my wrist," writes Leonard E. Milford, of Rockland, "while working in the mill, but had to lay off it became so painful and swelled. I rubbed my wrist thoroughly with Nerviline twice a day, and put on a bandage. The pain soon went away and frequent rubbing with Nerviline soon cured. Nerviline is undoubtedly an excellent liniment, and the best pain reliever I ever used." Nerviline certainly is extra good. When Harper Formed a Club

By HENRY ALDEN

Copyright, 1904, by K. M. Whitehead

It was Mrs. Anderson who first suggested the society, and thereby she hoped to attain national fame, for in the first blush of enthusiasm she predicted that the Provident Home club would in time extend from New York to San Francisco, with the Carson club as the parent organization.

The P. H. C. was simple enough. It consisted of nearly all the marriageable girls in Carson, who, fired by the enthusiasm of Mrs. Anderson, pledged themselves not to marry until their future spouse had provided a home and a bank account, thus making ample provision for the inevitable rainy day.

The young men had no share in this enthusiastic admiration for Mrs. Anderson. Indeed, Frank Harper had had his first quarrel with Rose Wilder because he had happened to hint that Mrs. Anderson's enthusiasm might be somewhat less were she not comfortably married.

"Jack Anderson has plenty of money," he growled, "but old man Anderson married when his sole capital was a railroad ticket west, and he never saved up enough to bring his wife out to their new home until after the second summer."

"Do you dare to say that she is not sincere?" demanded Rose hotly. She was one of Mrs. Anderson's strongest partisans.

"She is sincere," admitted Harper, "but if Jack was as poor as his father was and she loved him I'll bet the P. H. C. would never have been formed."

In the end Harper went home with a heavy heart, carrying the little ring that had been the pledge of their love. Rose had declared that he must pay off the mortgage upon his farm before they were married and have at least $5,000 in the bank.

It took Harper exactly a week to pull himself together. Then he inaugurated retaliatory methods. The ladies of the Methodist church were to have a fair for the purpose of lifting the mortgage from the church property. Some time before Mrs. Anderson had declared that the church should stand free of debt within a year, and it was believed that this fair would provide the last $200.

"DON'T YOU WANT TO BUY THIS, FRANK?"

The day before the fair opened the young men of Carson came out with small badges, bearing the letters G. S. C., but the mystic import of these characters could not be learned. The only information elicited was that Frank Harper was its president and that it would make its object known in good time.

The fair was duly opened. Half a dozen local celebrities made speeches, and two or three dozen married men made purchases from their wives and daughters, who were standing behind the stalls. Then there seemed to come a lull. It was Mrs. Anderson who made the discovery that there was not an unmarried man in the room. Every young girl in Carson was present either as a saleswoman or visitor, but there was not a bachelor in sight. The married men turned to manfully and bought what they could afford, but by half past 9 most of the crowd had gone, and the receipts counted up $17.50.

The next morning various young gentlemen solemnly expressed regret that they had been unable to attend and promised to get around that evening if they could. Evidently they found it difficult, for the second night of the fair was even duller than the first. Many of the married men had stayed home, and in desperation Mrs. Anderson commanded her husband to see if he could not find some of the young men and induce them to come over. It was not long before Anderson was back, his face wreathed in smiles.

"Most of the boys are in the vacant store next to the postoffice," he reported. "They are having a meeting of the G. S. club to discuss certain important matters."

"Did you tell them to come over?" she demanded.

"I did, but they declined the invitation."

"Well," said Mrs. Anderson, with a tightening of her lips that Anderson knew full well, "I am going over there to tell the boys what I think of them for breaking up my fair."

"I think," said Anderson, with a gravity of tone which his twinkling eyes belied, "that they would be very glad to see you. It is not in any sense a secret society."

Ten minutes later she was being welcomed by the G. S. C. with elaborate courtesy.

"It is with especial pleasure," said Frank Harper in his capacity as president, "that we welcome you to our meeting. We feel that it is to you we owe our very existence."

"To me?" said Mrs. Anderson helplessly. "I'm sure I never heard of the club until just the other day."

"None the less," continued Harper, while Jack Anderson tried to get as far behind his pretty wife as he could that she might not see his telltale face—"none the less, it is to you that the honor of forming the club really belongs.

"It was your idea that the young women of Carson should pledge each other not to marry until the prospective husband had a home and $5,000 in the bank. While it is not probable that under such conditions many of us can afford to marry before we are fifty, we recognize the brilliancy of your idea, which you yourself have declared is destined to reach from the Atlantic to the Pacific. We feel that the eyes of the country will shortly be turned toward Carson, and we have organized, supplementary to your society, the Get Something club. Our members are pledged to attend no entertainment, to spend no money foolishly, until we have each saved up by this means the $5,000 and the home demanded by your disciples."

"But," interrupted Mrs. Anderson half tearfully, "I want you to come over to the fair and help make it a success."

"Madam," declared the president impressively, "we have thirty-seven names on our roll. Each might have spent from $5 to $10, so we shall hold meetings of the club every evening during the fair to keep out of temptation. That means at least $185 saved toward the $185,000 we shall have to accumulate to follow out your admirable ideas. We feel that this duty"—

Unable to restrain himself longer, Jack Anderson interrupted the speech with a shout of laughter, in which even his wife had to join. She turned to Harper.

"See here, Frank Harper," she said energetically, "you disband this club, come over and make the fair a success, and I'll disband the Provident Home club tomorrow."

She was true to her word, but more than one pledge was broken that very night. Even Rose Wilder, who was presiding at the household table, pointed to an attractive tea set, saying, "Don't you want to buy this, Frank?"

"What's the use?" he protested. "I have no wife to give it to!"

Rose blushed very prettily. "You might have the wife if you bought the set. I take back all I said, and I'll take back the ring if you will let me."

That night on the way home Mrs. Anderson was struck by an idea.

"'Get Something' was a funny name for the title of that club."

"I think," said Anderson, "that the 'something' they were to get was to get square."

The Tailor's Argument.

In "Thrums" lived a merchant tailor who ordered from a friend, a book agent, a complete set of an encyclopedia which was being published in monthly parts. All went well till the delivery of the last volume, which proved to be about one-half larger than any of the others. Delivery was refused on the ground that the volume was not according to sample and broke the uniformity of the set. Mr. Comrie Thompson was then acting sheriff substitute for Forfarshire, and the resulting case came before him. The plaintiff stated his case, and Mr. Thompson then advised the defendant to take delivery, adding:

"Now, Mr. ——, don't be foolish. If the book is larger, they don't propose to charge you anything extra, and you ought to consider you are having a bargain."

"Well," pleaded the defendant, "I'm a tailor, and if your lordship were to order a coat from me, and I quoted a price and afterward delivered the coat a half size bigger than you wanted it, you would, I have no doubt, refuse delivery. And I might then say: 'Don't be foolish, sheriff. The coat, it's true, is much larger than you want, but the cloth is the same, and I won't make any extra charge. You ought to consider you are having a bargain.'"

This rather tickled the court, which expressed its appreciation of the point somewhat noisily. Verdict for the plaintiff, with costs.—London Tit-Bits.

Patches and Politics.

In Lord Lytton's novel, "Devereux," the hero says to Lady Hasselton, "Why, you have moved all your patches, one, two, three, six, eight, as I am a gentleman, from the left side of your cheek to the right. What is the reason of so sudden an emigration?" The reply is: "I have changed my politics, count, that is all, and have resolved to lose no time in proclaiming the change." A note reminds the reader that at that time Whig ladies patched on one side of the cheek, Tories on the other. Addison, too, has an amusing Spectator paper on the same subject, relating how he went to the theater and observed two parties of ladies in opposite boxes, the faces on one hand being spotted on the right side of the forehead and those upon the other on the left. He adds: "I am informed that some of them adhere so steadfastly to their party and are so far from sacrificing their zeal for the public to their passion for any particular person that in a late draft of marriage articles a lady has stipulated with her husband that, whatever his opinions are, she shall be at liberty to patch on which side she pleases."

It is a blessing for the happy home that husbands and wives do not always know exactly what each thinks of the other.

How It Struck Him.

A writer in the Chicago Record-Herald tells of a city automobile on a rampage that slipped the sidewalk and took a header into a basement, turning a few somersaults and finally stopping with its wheels in the air revolving and sputtering. The old cobbler was found jammed into a corner of the shop, unhurt, but dazed. "What did you think it was?" his rescuers asked. "I t'ought," he gasped, "dot vas a customer vat vas mad apout hees shoes!"

Pressed For Money.

"Oh, Henry," exclaimed his wife as she threw her arms rapturously about his neck, "I do love you so! Don't forget to leave me $10 when you go to town this morning, will you, dear?"

"And this," muttered Henry, softly disengaging himself from her fond embrace—"this is what you might call being hard pressed for money."

From Over The Sea

By KATE M. CLEARY

Copyright, 1904, by Kate M. Cleary

A resplendent mid-March morning; overhead a turquoise sky, across which shallops of pearl raced in radiant rivalry. The trees that bordered the broad avenues of the residence district were murmurously important, each having harbored secrets of the coming summer to confide.

Bertram Hale approached a charming residence set back from the street. It was a new house, all gables and gargoyles and jutting windows and varnished shingles. The windows glittered goldenly in the morning sunshine.

"Mr. Hale!"

A shadow crossed the broad, kindly face of the Swedish maid who opened the door to him.

"I—I am sorry, but"—

She faltered. It was easy enough to utter the falsehood sanctioned by convention to any other caller, but to him who had always been so gay, so courteous, so truly the kind of lover that all the world perforce must love, she found it impossible to speak the sentence with which he was to be greeted.

"That's all right, Lena," he said quite as cordially as though she had held the door wide for him in the old fashion instead of standing stolidly on the threshold. "I know Miss Ruth wished you to say she was not at home to me, but—she is at home—if not to me. I want you to take her this box, Lena." He extended a square parcel as he spoke. "There are pansies in it. Pansies, you know, stand for kind thoughts."

"LENA," CRIED THE GIRL, "TELL ME WHAT IS WRONG!"

"I will try," Lena assured him, with friendly willingness. "Come into the hall—the parlor."

"No; I'll wait here," young Hale decided and sat down on the ledge of the porch.

Ruth Seldon looked up from her desk.

"Come!" she called.

Lena, her flat, muscular figure gowned in trim blue and white, her girth of body encircled by the strings of a snowy apron, and a bit of a cap adjusted stiffly on her sandy hair, advanced, parcel in hand.

"Mr. Hale," she said coaxingly, "he says will you come down to see him just one little minute."

Ruth Seldon was not a beauty, although Bertram Hale would have disputed this assertion. But she was a mighty attractive looking girl. The kimono of silvery silk which she wore, with its shell pink lining and loosely knotted, gold fringed girdle, was just the thing to bring out the fresh tints of her skin and the clear luster of her blue, black lashed eyes.

"Take it back, Lena!" she commanded. "Say to Mr. Hale that I cannot receive him. Tell him that he will be handed a—a package from me this afternoon."

Lena knew well what that package would contain, for on the desk were letters—many letters. On the shelf over the desk a photograph frame still stood, but the handsome face that used to smile forth from it so sunnily was there no longer. A tiny leather box topped the letters. Lena could not be positive what the box contained, but she did notice that no ring with one white flaming stone sparkled, as formerly, on the hand of her young mistress.

"He does look that sad, miss!" Lena remarked, lingering. "I—I think maybe he is sick," she insinuated.

Ruth flushed and her lips parted irresolutely. The next instant she turned back to her desk.

"Take him back the flowers—I suppose they are flowers—and the message at once!"

Lena's sigh seemed to be drawn from the very soles of her low shoes, but she went away—an obedient laggard. Hale saw her descending and stood up.

"Never mind, Lena!" he said gently. "Leave the flowers on the hall table. She may change her mind. And here's something to buy a pair of gloves for your trouble."

"Thank you, sir. I hope so, sir. Young folks do make mistakes sometimes!"

He walked down the path and off up the avenue. The maid went back to her work. And Ruth, the package with all her love letters and little love tokens tied neatly up and ready to return, sat looking with a feeling of strange desolation at the frame which had held the picture of Bertram Hale.

She wondered as the glorious spring day wore away how it would seem to go on and on without him through all the days to come. She was right to break with him. He had been wrong to show Mabel Harvey so much attention, even if she was his cousin and here on a visit. He had almost forgotten one of the dances she had promised him because he had been showing Mabel the family portraits. But how strange it would seem not to look forward to his approval whenever she donned a new dress or learned a new song or chanced on some beautiful thought or story!

Yes, it would be all very strange—and sad—but doubtless she would become used to the separation. Only—

A quick shriek startled her. It came from below stairs. It was such a choked cry of horror as she fancied might be uttered by one suddenly assailed—stabbed!

She sprang up, ran to the door and down the stairs.

The front door stood ajar. Ruth could see the gray clad form of the postman crossing the street from their house. Lena, ghastly white, an open letter in her rough hand, was leaning against the banister. She had received some terrible shock.

"Lena," cried the girl, "tell me what is wrong!"

Mutely the peasant woman held out the letter.

"I cannot read it," Ruth cried. "It is in your language. Tell me! You have had bad news?"

"De worst news—de, worst!" she panted. Her stricken face was uplifted. Its pathetic hopelessness, its bitter abandonment, went straight to the heart of the girl beside her.

"It is my lover, Miss Ruth! He vas to be my man, but I did get angry and sail away with mine own people, and say no, I would not marry him. But he did write to me, and I vas sorry, and I did answer and say to him to come. But now he is dead—he is dead!" Her voice rose into a pitiful wail. "He is dead, and he can nefer come any more at all—not efer any more!"

Then there was no sound save her broken, desolate sobbing. Ruth Seldon put her arms around the broad shoulders. She kissed the wet cheeks and soothed the coarse, yellow hair.

"Poor Lena!" she whispered. "Poor Lena! Come and lie down. No, never mind the work! Come!"

She shut the door and drew the maid away up to her own room.

"I said I did not lofe him, but I did! I vas angry, and I say vot vas not true. Now he will nefer know that I did lofe him always; that I will never have no other man in all my life, for he vas the only vun for me!"

When she had quieted the suffering creature, Ruth left her and went back to her desk. She looked at the package, at the frame from which the picture was absent. It seemed as though this news that had been sent from over the sea had come directly to her. What if the message had been of Bertram? Would she be angry now, resentful? Bit by bit she went over their little dissension. Was it worth a heartache when all was said? Could she ever love any other as she loved him? Her heart gave prompt reply.

Mechanically she untied the package and replaced the picture in the frame, the letters in the drawer, the other treasures each in its accustomed place. Then she opened the tiny box and took out a ring that sparkled like a star of promise and slipped it on her finger.

"For he vas de only vun for me!"

"Poor Lena!" said the girl, who, with shining eyes and rose red cheeks, went downstairs to the telephone. On the way she paused to open the little box on the hall table and to fasten the pansies over her heart.

Polite Conversation.

In the days when conversation ranked as an elegant art to be cultivated with care exception might have been taken to Miss Janet Miller's application of the word. Miss Miller, however, had her own ideas as to what constituted conversation in Brambleville.

Miss Miller was entertaining the sewing circle on the day when Mrs. Gregory, a summer resident, made her first appearance as a helpful member, and Miss Miller greeted her with great cordiality.

"You've come a mite late," she said cheerfully, "but that's no matter. The folks are in the full tide of conversation, two groups of 'em, you see, and I'll introduce you round soon as you choose which you'd rather join and I can hand you your work. I circ'late from one group to the other.

"Those six ladies over in the bay window are hemming, and their subject o' conversation just now is dish mops. Those out in the back room are cutting and basting, and they are conversing about gas stoves. So you just name your choice, either one."

Advantage of Deaf Mute Husband.

At a social gathering some time ago a number of deaf mutes were present. Refreshments were served during the evening, and in handing a glass to one of the guests a deaf mute gentleman happened to spill a few drops of the contents on his wife's skirt. The wife is also a deaf mute, and it was evident that she took the mishap in a rather irritable way. She wrinkled up her forehead and at once made a series of remarkably swift movements with her nimble fingers. The husband, looking exceedingly apologetic, made a few motions in return.

One of the guests, who had noticed this little byplay, slyly slipped out a bit of paper and, penciling something on it, handed it to a friend. This is what the latter read:

No matter how badly afflicted, woman can still scold.

The friend scribbled this in return:

Yes, but in the present case the husband is luckier than the average. He doesn't have to look.

"Knockout Drops" In a Ring.

"A knockout ring," said the detective. "Look at it well. It belonged to Jimmy the Kid. He was notorious."

The ring was of gold, and it contained a huge dark blue stone.

"Now, watch the stone," continued the detective. And he pressed with his thumb a spring, smaller than a pinhead, on the gold loop opposite the setting.

Instantly the middle of the stone slipped back like a sliding door, and out of the opening three or four drops of fluid fell. When the detective ceased to press the spring the stone closed up again.

"See how it works?" he said. "I sit with you, and there are two glasses of liquor before us. Talking away, I draw the hand with the ring on it across your glass, and with my thumb I press the spring. Then into your glass there falls enough chloral to put you out of business."

"BREATHLESS WE STRIVE."

Breathless we strive, contending for success,
According to the standards of our day.
What is success? Is it to find a way
Wealth out of all proportion to possess?
Is it to care for simple pleasures less
(While grasping at a more extended sway),
And sacrificing to our gods of clay,
Submerge the soul, at last, in worldliness?

By Grasmere stands a cottage small and poor;
The Dove was once its emblem, and the sign
That marked it as a wayside inn obscure;
But, frugal, dwelt high consecration here,
And gratitude still guards it as a shrine,
Hallowed by that success which time but makes more dear!

CANADIAN READING CAMPS.

An Association Which Endeavors to Educate Laborers in Camps.

The fourth annual report of the Canadian Reading Camp Association has just been published and contains much interesting matter concerning the illiterate conditions of the laborers in the temporary lumbering, mining and railway construction camps.

The causes of this illiteracy are first, the foreign element, and secondly the fact that this class of labor is chiefly recruited from the newer settlements.

The practicability of manual laborers in the older settlements and towns acquiring an education or improving what they have in spare moments has often been demonstrated.

It is only within the last decade that the feasability of educating the men in the frontier camps, before mentioned, has been proven. Correspondence schools have established the fact that the men who have already an elementary education can improve it by studying during spare moments.

In the last four years the Canadian Reading Camp Association has shown it to be possible to acquire even the rudiments of an education in these camps, a field which correspondence schools have not entered.

The Ontario Department of Education has assisted the Association by starting a system of camp libraries, and giving a small grant for the maintenance of reading camp instructors.

The Y. M. C. A. sends men and tents to the militia camps which only last a few weeks. The need at the camps is not so great as at the isolated mining, lumbering and railway construction camps.

Last season 25 buildings were operated by the Canadian Reading Camp Association, most of which were closed during the summer months. The first club house built was at Copper Cliff by the Canada Copper Co., and its employes. This club house is fitted up with baths, parlor, reading rooms, etc.

The majority of mining men and quite a few lumbermen have already made provisions for these camps. Last year ten fully qualified teachers were employed, of whom two were doctors. The doctors practiced medicine in the camps and one of the teachers acted as clerk, while the others engaged in manual labor. Each man earned over one-half of his salary, the association paying the rest.

Treasurer for Half a Century.

It is indeed a rare occurrence when a man occupies any public office continuously for half a century, but such is the record that Thomas Crawford, Treasurer of Bosanquet township, has made, having recently completed fifty continuous years in that position. During all of that long period he has retained the fullest confidence of the officials and people of the township, and of other communities with whom his business brought him in contact, and there has passed through his hands without the loss of a cent the sum of over $730,000. When he assumed the office a great majority of the present residents of the township had not yet been born. While Mr. Crawford was going on in the even tenor of his way, faithfully discharging year after year the duties of his comparatively humble position, some of the most important events in modern history were transpiring elsewhere.

Governors-General, Premiers and other public men have come and gone, but the Treasurer of Bosanquet, now in his 82nd year, is to all appearances as hale and hearty as he was twenty years ago. Mr. Crawford's farm homestead, on lot 13, con. 1, Bosanquet, ranks among the best of the many fine homes in the township. Mr. Crawford, who was born in the north of Ireland, came to this country when a young lad, and lived with relatives some years at Markham. When about 27 years of age he came to Bosanquet, accompanied by his mother. On July 15, 1862, he was married to Miss Elizabeth Crone, daughter of Francis Crone, now of Forest. . . There are seven children living, viz., Mrs. John D. Boyes of Lesmahagow, Scotland; Mrs. Jackson, in Manitoba; Dr. D. T. Crawford of Innisfail, Alta; Frank Crawford, Township Councillor, Warwick; Dr. J. Crawford, L.D.S., in Michigan, and McKenzie Crawford, at home.—Forest Free Press.

Presbyterian Statistics.

The estimates of the Presbyterian Church, western section, call for $400,000 this current year. For home missions alone $120,000 are asked. For foreign missions, $152,365, of which $59,365 is expected from the Women's Foreign Society. The other items are: Augmentation of stipends, $30,000; French evangelization (including Pointe-aux-Trembles Schools), $33,000; theological colleges, viz., Knox, $12,000; Queen's, $5,500; Montreal, $5,000; Manitoba (exclusive of amount from Synod of Manitoba and British Columbia) $2,600; Ministers' Widows and Orphans' Fund (over and above ministers' rates and interests from investments), $15,000; aged and infirm ministers' fund (over and above ministers' rates and interest from investments), $14,000; assembly fund, $7,500.

A Futile Protest.

The Most Healthful Trade.

The best and healthiest trade in the world is that of dyemaking from coal tar. Tar and the smell of it are the best of all tonics and tissue builders. The average life of a tar worker is eighty-six years. The mortality is 80 per cent lower than in any other factory trade.

TWO BUTTERFLIES

By LOWELL O. REESE

Copyright, 1904, by Lowell O. Reese

A saint would have been driven frantic by the girl. I threw up my hands, figuratively, groaned literally and with an expletive not at all in harmony with the best ethics of polite society declared to my tortured soul that she had the sphinx beaten a mile.

The same not being an elegant thing to do, I excuse it only on the ground that I was worried to the point of irresponsibility. I swore by all the gods, from the little mud god of the Digger Indian to the war god Thor, never to have anything more to say to her. Fifteen minutes later I was back on the hotel veranda watching that tantalizing, inscrutable glint in her eye. For I was human, and she was very dear to me.

And the worst of it was she knew it. Once let a girl know you love her and you are lost.

"And you don't wish me to go out with Mr. Blakeslee?" she said with provoking mildness. "And why, please?"

"First," I broke out, "because you're going to marry me, and that in itself ought"—

"Indeed! And will you kindly tell me just when I promised to marry you, Mr. Jack Weston?"

She wasn't angry. I had not even that satisfaction. But I was both angry and in love.

"You—well, you know it's as good as settled," I began, but she interrupted me.

"As—good—as—settled!" she murmured dreamily. "Watch me now!" she said. She lifted her hand toward a brilliant butterfly which had alighted upon a rose at the edge of the porch. Her fingers opened. "See!" she said breathlessly, "I reach my hand—my fingers nearly touch him. Have I got him, though? It seems all I have to do is to close my fingers so—ah!" The gaudy creature eluded her just as her fingers brushed his striped wings. "I didn't get him!" she sighed. "And I was so sure of him!"

She jumped up, gave me a teasing smile and ran down the steps. Presently I saw her with Blakeslee going toward the boat landing. A little later they were moving briskly up the river, and then I saw—

It made my heart stop. Blakeslee palpably was the rawest dub in a canoe, and a canoe with an unskillful hand on the paddle is about as dangerous as a powder mill with a live coal knocking about in it.

I started involuntarily toward the boat landing where my own canoe lay. Then I turned on my heel and stamped back. Not to save a thousand lives—my own included—would I be seen following them. They and all the rest of the world would attribute it to jealousy, and—

And deep down in my poor, aching, bedeviled heart I knew it would be the truth.

I dug up my pipe and polluted the sweet summer air for rods around. I determined to be a pessimist and a cynic and spend the rest of my life sneering at everything I used to like. I jeered at the idea of human felicity and wished I'd never been born. I had what is technically known as the mollygrubs. And then—

Suddenly a great light broke over me, and I saw where I had been playing the fool instead of the wise general. I had been giving her all the advantage, and as I reviewed my case I grew utterly and thoroughly ashamed of myself. The spectacle of a great six foot grownup man toddling around, beseeching a small girl to love him! How could she, when I was so devoid of stamina as that?

And then I determined that, come what might, I would do so no more. It might break my heart, but I was determined. Then, too, my heart was all crushed to frazzles anyway, so a little more breaking would be a mere incident not worth considering.

A mutter of thunder in the west, and I glanced up in apprehension. A black cloud was rolling up through the pines, and already the wind was beginning to sway the tree tops. I rose and looked up the river. No canoe was in sight. Filled with alarm I climbed into my canoe, a tiny thing, and paddled furiously up the stream ahead of the rising wind.

Half a mile up the river, and no sign of the canoeists. The wind swept down and almost instantly the water was beaten into whitecaps, and the little shell bobbed like a cork, but I held it straight ahead and watched it with the instinct of one trained to the paddle. And then the rain came!

As I rounded a bend in the channel I saw them. They were huddled under a heavy pine near the water's edge. The waves were trying to drag the canoe away from the bank, and Blakeslee, the picture of woe, was struggling to get it ashore.

I ran my canoe close in and sprang upon the bank before they saw me. It was growing dark, what with the storm and the lateness of the hour. Miss Milwood turned and gave a glad cry.

"Oh, Jack," she said piteously, "I'm so glad! We've been unable to get home! Our canoe was beaten back by the storm, and it upset and we were thrown into the water, and it was a mercy it was near the shore, else we'd have drowned!"

"How did you escape?" I asked stiffly.

"We—we waded! And I'm chilling to death, Jack!" Her lips were blue with cold, and she shivered miserably. Poor Blakeslee was in no better plight.

I hastened to right the other canoe with Blakeslee's help. Then I put the luckless boatman aboard, paddled him across to the mainland and bade him sprint for the hotel and get a roaring fire ready. I then recrossed the river, lifted the terrified girl into the large canoe, tied the other behind and set out in the teeth of the storm. Doggedly and steadily, keeping as much as possible in the lea of the shore, we crept down the angry sheet of water. Miss Milwood, strangely quiet, huddled in the bottom of the canoe and said not a word. But I could hear her teeth chattering and I felt love and pity struggling hard with my new resolution to be grimly firm and uncompromising.

My muscles were aching and my heart throbbing as though it would burst when at last we drew into the shelter of the boathouse. I fastened the canoes and lifted the wet figure ashore.

"Oh, Jack," she quavered, "I should have died if you hadn't"—

"I beg you won't mention it, Miss Milwood," I said with exaggerated politeness. It was a mean thing to say, I realized it at the time, but it was necessary if I was to crush the fierce longing to take her in my arms.

I hurried her up to the hotel. From time to time she pushed back her wet hair and gazed at me with a pathetic wistfulness which I affected not to see. The storm had blown swiftly away, and the big white moon was sailing through the sky dotted with scudding cloud drift.

I resigned her to the care of the solicitous Mrs. Kerens, who was all sympathy and bustling motherliness. Blakeslee was there in an agony of contrition. I went away, changed my wet clothing and sat down within the half lighted library, gloomily watching the pine logs in the wide fireplace.

After about an hour a timid hand parted the curtains, and I knew without turning my head who it was. She came in slowly.

"Jack," she said tremulously.

I sprang to my feet and offered her a chair. She refused to notice it. She held out her hands. I in turn refused to notice them.

"Jack," she whispered, "are you angry?"

"Not at all, Miss Milwood!" I rejoined, still excessively polite and proper. "I am merely going to reform."

She knew.

For a moment she stood silent with her head bent down. I stood gazing over her head with eyes which dared not look for a moment at hers, else all were lost. Then I heard her sob.

"It was a bad day for butterflies," I muttered huskily.

She glanced up, and I saw her eyes filled with tears. "This butterfly is tired, Jack—dear Jack!" she whispered. "It doesn't want to fly!"

"Never—for always?"

"Never—for always!"

It was good—all that wretchedness and anxiety of long months, when she lay tight against my breast and I kissed the perverse red lips—meek now and sweetly submissive. Perverse no more, for the butterfly was caught!

A Once Famous City.

Caerleon of Roman times and of the days of King Arthur still exists. The famous city that was once the garrison of the Second Augustan legion, the capital of South Wales and the seat of an archbishopric is now a sleepy little town lying between the industrial centers of Pontypool and Newport, but is far enough away from both to have maintained the dignity and pathos of its isolation. Here are to be seen the ruins of a Roman amphitheater, a great oval bank of earth called Arthur's Round Table and an enormous mound once fortified by the Romans. The officers and men of the crack Roman regiment and their wives and families left many remains of their occupation—tombstones, fragments of household utensils, needles and fibulae, remains of villas and baths, lamps, glass and enamel ornaments, carvings, rings, seals and the like, to be gazed upon in the cases of the local museum. The whole place, with its combination of hill and winding river, with low lying houses nestling in abundant trees, forms a picture which many a painter has sought to portray on canvas.

Well Prepared For Dinner.

"Very well," said Nance. "But you must promise to tell me if I am too much trouble."

"I make that promise most solemnly," he responded.

They went back to the house through a shrubbery which wound in and out maze-fashion, and so gave him more of her society than if they had gone straight across the lawn. He tried to talk, to play the host and amuse her, but Love held him spell-bound and silence his generally ready tongue. He was in Paradise while she was by his side; but his joy was dashed by the thought that, in a short time, she would be gone from him. It was only the prospect of to-morrow that sustained him and enabled him to talk at all.

When they regained the house they found the countess with the tea-table before her. And, strange to relate, the earl was with the ladies, for he seldom put in an appearance in the drawing-room at that hour.

"Miss Harwood has been with me to the stable, sir," said Lord St. John.

Lord Lisle shook his head.

"Scarcely fair, St. John," he said. "I wanted to take Miss Harwood to the home farm to see the pigs. I hope you like pigs, Miss Harwood? They are the only really satisfactory members of the four-footed order. You must promise to come and see mine at your next visit."

"Do nothing of the kind," said the countess. "You will be bored to to death; besides, once he has got you as far as the pigs—"

—"My father will lure you on to the cows, and from the cows to the sheep, and from the sheep to the turkeys," put in St. John. "We know your wicked ways, sir, and feel it our duty to warn Miss Harwood."

There was a flush on his face; he had got as near to Nance as he could, was holding her bread-and-butter plate, looking down at her as if she were a queen or a goddess, and he her slave or devotee. His father and mother exchanged significant glances. But Nance looked, as indeed she was, quite innocent and unconscious of the young lord's attentions, even when he persuaded her to go with him into the hall to see some rare antiquities—china, chain armor, ancient weapons—she did not suspect, and rose and accompanied him, inspecting the curios and listening to his almost whispered information respecting them, with simple, child-like interest.

She looked so child-like, so innocent, indeed, that St. John almost despaired. How should he ever dare approach this sweet, virginal, heavenly creature in the guise of a mortal woman, with words of love? How dared he, a mere man, to love her?

The countess and the earl were kind, unaffectedly kind, to the last; and when they were alone—St. John having gone to put the two ladies into the jingle, to snatch another chance of touching Nance's hand, of looking into her eyes and saying, sighing another good-bye—the countess said:

"Well?"

"Well, you were right," he responded. "She is as perfect as she can be. Poor St. John! he is quite hopelessly smitten. And, upon my word, Agnes, I am not surprised. There is something in addition to her beauty, and she is as lovely as a painter's dream."

The countess shrugged her shoulders.

"You need not rave about her, Talbot," she said. "She is a very nice girl, I admit that; but—but—"

St. John came in before she could finish.

"Miss Harwood has kindly promised to let me try and teach her to ride," he said. "We go for our first lesson to-morrow. Polly will be the best mount for her, will she not, sir?"

The earl smiled, the countess stared.

"Do you mean that you and Miss Harwood are going alone, St. John?" she asked, with not unnatural surprise.

"No, mother; there will be the grooms," he said.

"The grooms? I never heard of such a dream!" she said. "I had better send for Ermyntrude." She was one of the cousins who lived with her parents at a reachable distance.

"No, thanks, mother," he said, with his gentle firmness. "Why should you? Miss Harwood will not allow me to run away with her."

"Worse luck," put in the earl, dryly.

St. John turned to him with an almost girlish blush.

"Is she not beautiful, sir?" he said.

"Not if I know it, St. John," retorted the earl, making for the door. "Not in my department. Discuss it with your mother;" and, man-like, he bolted.

When St. John saw Nance the next morning, standing on the steps in the habit which Lady Dockitt, with commendable foresight, had had made for her before they left London, he thought that, if possible, she looked more beautiful in the close-fitting black cloth than she had done in the dove-colored dress; but what struck him, even more than her grace and beauty, was her complete unconsciousness of them.

She received him with a sweet gravity and serene self-possession, and they started as free from embarrassment as if they were boy and girl, brother and sister.

And soon St. John experienced another surprise, for the delicately beautiful girl, who looked as fragile as a rare piece of china, seemed without fear. As a rule, a lady is apt to display some nervousness during her first lesson in equitation; but Nance did not show a tremor, and as they rode on through the lanes and over the commons, St. John's love for her and pride in her grew and swelled in his bosom.

"You will learn in no time," he said. "I never knew any one so—so fearless, so free from nervousness. All my cousins were frightened to death when they cantered the first time; but you—" His admiration was too great for expression.

Nance smiled.

"I am not very frightened," she said. "The horse seems so quiet and friendly, and"—naively—"it is not so very far to fall, after all."

"Fall!" he exclaimed. "You won't fall. In a week I will undertake that you shall ride really well; that is," glancing at her eagerly, "if you can come out every day."

"Oh, yes," said Nance, placidly and unsuspectingly. "I have very little to do, and I shall like it; it is delightful. Shall we canter again? But can you spare the time?"

"Oh, yes!" he said, with prompt assurance. "I have absolutely nothing to do, and—well, you see, it will be conferring a favor upon me, because if I hadn't some inducement, I shouldn't ride; and—yes, we'll canter again. But put your hand in the front of the saddle. It's all very well to joke about your falling off, but if you did, I—I should never forgive myself."

"That would be rather unjust," Nance said; "because you can not very well hold me on all the time."

They rode every day, and every day St. John declined the offer which the countess made of Cousin Ermyntrude's company.

"Let her alone, mother," he said, almost sadly. "I am happy. Let me be happy while it lasts."

The countess looked at him inquiringly.

"Do you mean—do you think—"

He knew what she meant.

"I mean that she does not know, does not guess, how I feel," he said, with a mixture of bitterness and melancholy. "She is as innocent as a child, as—as frank as a sister. Yes, that is just it. I might be her brother—just her brother. She treats me with perfect frankness. When I come, she gives me her hand and smiles at me; but—but—there is no blush on her face; her eyes meet mine without a waver. It is I who change color, I whom can scarcely speak, who can scarcely lift my eyes to her face, lest she should see how I love her."

The countess laid her hand on his head. He had sunk into the seat beside her, and leaned his head on his hands.

"Have patience, St. John," he said. "Remember that she has scarcely known you more than a week."

"Is that all?" he said. "It seems a year. Mother, if I do not win her, if she will not love me—" he said, his face grown haggard.

"Be patient," said the countess again. "And—and even if—if you can not get what you want—well, St. John, you will not forget that you are a Lisle, and that the Lisles are not given to wearing the willow, or going about with their hearts on their sleeves, for daws to peck at."

"I can not understand it," she said, later in the day, to the earl. "Innocent and unworldly as the girl seems, she can't be ignorant of the fact that a marriage with St. John would be an excellent thing for her."

The earl was silent for a moment.

"It seems to me, Agnes," he said, "that St. John has found that rara avis, a girl who is insensible to the advantages of a good parti. She ought to be caught and put in a museum."

Incredible as it seemed, not only to the earl and countess, but to Lady Dockitt, Nance was quite unsuspicious and unconscious. She had done with love. It seemed to her that, in some way, every one who saw her, though ignorant of her terrible past, must see that she was not as other women, and that love and marriage were not for her.

In her own eyes she was as one apart from the rest of womankind, as far removed from love as if she had entered a nunnery, or—terrible thought!—were infected with moral leprosy.

She liked St. John. His friendship—she never for a moment suspected anything warmer—was very welcome to her. She talked more freely to him than even to Lady Dockitt; and when she did not talk, could ride or walk beside him in a silence that was perfectly serene and unembarrassed. She did not know that, when he was near her, every fiber of his body called aloud for her; that his heart ached with longing for her, and that when he was away from her his waking times were spent in thinking of her, his sleeping ones in dreams in which she was always the central figure.

He grew pale, at times he was excited, fluent, at others silent and gloomy, but always her slave, and attentive to her lightest wish. But she did not notice these moods. She liked him as a brother, a friend, nothing more.

He was with her a great deal. When they were not riding he found some excuse for coming up to the Hall. Nearly every day he was in the drawing-room at tea-time; sometimes with a book to lend her, sometimes coming to borrow one. When the weather was fine he would entice her on to the terrace or into the garden, would fetch her hat and jacket from their hook in the hall, would carry her sun-shade or book, always hanging upon her smile, her lightest word. When it was wet, he would seat himself at her feet and read to her, or would gaze at the fire, listening to her soft, regular breathing, as if it were the music of the spheres.

But all the time his heart was consuming with a high-minded man's love, which burns, and burns, pure as the flame may be.

One afternoon they were sitting thus. Nance, by chance, wore the dove-colored dress which he loved better than any other of hers. She sat with her hands clasped on her lap, her eyes fixed on the fire.

She was thinking of Bernard. If St. John could only have known it! and she started slightly when he said:

"Shall we go for our ride to-morrow? It will be fine, I think; the glass is going up."

"To-morrow? Yes— Oh, but I forgot! We are going up to London."

"To London!" He looked up at her with as much dismay as if she and said she was going to Timbuctoo.

"Yes." She had not looked at him, or the change in his face must have startled her. "Lady Dockitt has been wanting to go for some time past. She says that we want some more dresses. I am sure I don't know why; I seem to have more than I can wear already."

"When—when are you coming back?" he asked in a voice he tried to keep steady. To lose her for even a day was almost unendurable.

"I don't know," said Nance. "In a week or two, I suppose. You must feel quite glad to be relieved of your responsibility. If ever a riding-master deserved a holiday, you do, Lord St. John."

It was more than he could bear.

"Miss Harwood—Christine," broke from him, and he caught her hand and held it in both his, his face turned up to hers.

Nance started. She was too startled to withdraw her hand, and her eyes, wide open and innocent, gazed down upon him.

"Christine, don't you know?" he panted. "You must know! I love you! I love you! I can not bear to lose you for a single day. I can not, I can not! I love you! Oh, speak to me!" for her face now was as white as his own, and she looked at him with a slowly gathering horror in her eyes. "Speak to me! Why do you—you look at me like this? Are you so angry, so—shocked? I can not help it! I love you! I can hide it no longer! I must tell you! Speak to me!"

She drew her hands from his grasp, and, rising, shrunk, actually shrunk from him, putting out her hands as if to keep him from her.

He rose and drew nearer, his eyes melting with love's prayer, his lips quivering.

"Don't—don't touch me!" she gasped. "Don't—don't say another word. No, no!" for disobeying her, he sought to take her hands again; she clasped them above her head with a gesture of tragic despair.

"Christine!" he cried, "what does it mean? Why do you shrink from me as if—as if you hated me, as if I were a leper? For God's sake, tell me!"

CHAPTER XXXIV.

Nance stood with her hands clasped, beyond St. John's reach, above her head, the look of horror in her eyes, as if incapable of speech.

"Christine!" he pleaded. "What is it? Are you angry because I love you? I can not help it! I have loved you ever since the day we met. My heart went out to you even then. All my life since has been one thought of you, one longing for you! You are all the world to me, all that is good and beautiful and worth living for. Christine, I can not live without you, I can not! To lose you, even for a day, is an agony for me. Ah, do not be angry with me, do not shrink from me! No one could love you better than I do! No one!"

Still she was silent, her breath coming slowly, painfully.

"Is it—is it because"—his voice grew very low and faltered—"because I am lame?" He clasped his hands eagerly. "I am not a cripple. I shall get better—stronger; I do get better every day. My love for you has helped to strengthen me. Is it because of that?"

She made a gesture of denial, but still stood regarding him with the expression of horror and dread in her eyes.

"What is it then?" he asked, imploringly. "Is it because—because because you do not love me? Perhaps that is it," he went on after a moment's pause; "but—but you would not shrink from me, you would not look at me as you do, if it were only that. You do not positively hate me, Christine?"

"No," she said, at last, and her voice came painfully. "I—I do not hate you. No, no! But—I do not love you!"

Something like hope shone in his earnest eyes.

"Thank God that you do not hate me!" he said. "But—but if you do not love me now—and I did not expect, ask for that, Christine! Why should I dare to ask so much, and so soon—but I may be able to win your love, you may learn to care for me! Such love as mine must conquer in time—if you do not quite dislike me! Give me time; let me try and soften your heart; let me try to show you how deeply, how truly I love you, and want you. If you will do that, if you will let me be near you, as I have been, I shall not despair of winning you! Let me try, Christine, and—and I shall hope, even yet, to win you for my wife!"

"Oh, no, no! Never, never!" she breathed. "Lord St. John, it never could be! I can not be your wife!"

His face went white—the flush of hope died out of it—and he hung his head.

"But why?" he pleaded. "You are not like some women, hard and cold-hearted. Every day I have seen how tender-hearted and loving you can be to the poor, to the children. You can love them, Christine; will you not try and spare a little love for me?"

With her head turned away from his ardent, imploring eyes, she sought for some answer which should serve once and for all, which should show him that no hope was possible.

"The poor, the children," she faltered. "They are different, Lord St. John. You—you forget what I am —that I am not a fit wife for you!"

"You—not fit?" he exclaimed.

"No," she went on. "You are a nobleman, you are the son of a great earl, I am only Christine Harwood. You know, in your heart, your people must have told you if they know that you—you care for me—that you ought not to ask me to be your wife; that I am beneath you in rank, in birth—"

Remedy For Burns.

For a dry burn, carron oil. Shake the bottle, saturate a soft cloth with the mixture and lay over the burn. Then cover closely with cotton batting or flannel to keep out every bit of air and secure the whole with a light bandage. Burns may also be treated by a thick application of any bland oil, vaseline, sweet oil, castor oil, butter, cold cream or any fat not rancid, excepting glycerin, which is too irritating. Soft powders may also be dusted on—flour, laundry or corn starch. For a burn by scald or steam apply a dressing of saturated soda

NO MORE CRISP NOTES.

Uncle Sam's New Paper Money Is to Be Soft and Velvety.

The days of the crisp bank note are numbered. Instead of being crisp the money which the government bureau of engraving and printing will hereafter turn out will be soft and velvety, if important experiments which are now being conducted in the presence of treasury officers for the purpose of demonstrating the advantage of a novel chemical treatment for paper prove satisfactory. The result of the adoption of the new secret process will be to revolutionize a portion of the work connected with the printing of paper money in the United States. Under the new process it will take just sixty days less time to manufacture a bank note than under the present method. The chemical solution not only renders the paper soft and velvety, but it also makes it nonshrinkable. By applying it to a Japanese napkin that article becomes as soft and pliable as a tissue of silk. The chemical preparation acts as an antiseptic and preservative. When applied to old documents it seems to knit the fiber together and prevent further decay. Under the present process of printing paper money the paper has to be thoroughly soaked in water. While it is in this soaked condition one side of the paper is printed. The sheet is then placed in a steam room and kept under a high temperature for thirty days, the time necessary for the ink to dry. The sheet is again soaked as in the first instance and the reverse side of the bill printed. The thirty day drying process then has to be repeated. In cases where a third impression on the bill is necessary, which is required when the printing is done in two colors, the wetting and drying process has to be repeated for a third time, and another month is thus consumed in its production. Besides the delay of this process the wetting and drying rot the fiber of the paper, and, although it is "starched" to give it the crisp appearance, the starch soon wears out and the bill becomes limp and worn. In printing bills on paper that has been treated by the new process no wetting is necessary. The ink loses none of its luster when applied to the paper, as under the old process, and is thoroughly dry within forty-eight hours after the printing is done.

HOW TO STAY YOUNG.

Will Power a Large Factor In Keeping Away Decrepitude.

How old are you? The adage says that women are as old as they look and men as old as they feel. That's wrong. A man and woman are as old as they take themselves to be.

Growing old is largely a habit of the mind. "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he." If he begins shortly after middle age to imagine himself growing old he will be old.

To keep oneself from decrepitude is somewhat a matter of will power. The fates are kind to the man who hangs on to life with both hands. He who lets go will go. Death is slow only to tackle the tenacious.

Ponce de Leon searched in the wrong place for the fountain of youth. It is in oneself. One must keep oneself young inside, so that while "the outer man perisheth the inner man is renewed day by day."

When the human mind ceases to exert itself, when there is no longer an active interest in the affairs of this life, when the human stops reading and thinking and doing, the man, like a blasted tree, begins to die at the top.

You are as old as you think you are. Keep the harness on. Your job is not done.

BUNYAN'S TOMB.

Burial Place In England of the Author of "Pilgrim's Progress."

John Bunyan's tomb is in the vast burial ground of Bunhill fields, originally called "Bonehill fields," probably from the quantity of bones which, as Maitland tells us, were transported thither in 1540. This is now closed as a cemetery, but the forest of tombs shaded by young trees is a green oasis in a black part of London.

Near the center of the "Puritan Necropolis," a white figure, lying upon a high modern altar tomb, marks the grave of John Bunyan. He died at Snow hill from a cold taken on a missionary excursion Aug. 31, 1688, aged sixty.

Macaulay in one of his essays says: "The spot where Bunyan lies is still regarded by the Nonconformists with a feeling which seems scarcely in harmony with the stern spirit of theology. Many Puritans, to whom the respect paid by Roman Catholics to the tombs of their saints seems childish and sinful, are said to have begged with their dying breath that their coffins might be placed as near as possible to that of the author of 'Pilgrim's Progress.'"—London Mail.

THE DANGER OF ANAEMIA

Its Victims Are Defenseless When Disease Strikes—The Blood Should Be Kept Rich and Pure.

Anaemic people—people with watery blood—are without defense when disease threatens. The strongest weapon against disease is a plentiful supply of rich, red blood. A robust person may catch cold, but quickly throws it off. But a cold lingers with the anaemic one, goes to the chest and the first signs of consumption appear. It is the anaemic one who suffers from headache and dizziness, who cannot climb a stair without resting, whose heart flutters and palpitates wildly at the least exertion. Such people can only be be saved by a supply of new, rich, red blood, and Dr. Williams Pink Pills is the only medicine that actually makes rich, red blood with every dose. Ordinary medicines only touch the symptoms of disease—Dr. Williams Pink Pills go right straight to the root of the trouble and drive it out. That is why these pills have a larger sale than any other medicine in the world, and that is why thousands and thousands of people praise them so highly. Miss Florence G. Marryett, Chester, N. S., says: "I have used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for several months, and I am happy to say they have restored me to health after all other means had failed. I was suffering from anaemia in its most severe form. The least exertion would leave me breathless and worn out. I had no appetite and suffered greatly with nervous headaches I was pale and seemed to be going into decline. I had medical attendance, but it did me no good. Then a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and in a few weeks I found they were helping me. I continued their use for several months, and am again enjoying good health. I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will make every weak and ailing girl strong and healthy."

You can get these pills from any dealer in medicine, but you should be careful to see that the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," is on the wrapper around each box. If in doubt write the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and the pills will be sent at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50.

MAJOR DELMAR SOLD FOR BIG SUM.

Major Delmar, the world's champion trotting gelding, with an unpaced trotting record of 2.01¾ and a paced trotting record of 1.59½, was sold at Madison Square Garden, New York, for $15,000. The purchaser was C. G. Billings, owner of Lou Dillon. It was announced that Mr. Billings would race Major Delmar and Lou Dillon in an effort to break the world's record. Major Delmar was consigned by Mr. Smathers, who bought him last year for $40,000. The record price at the sale was paid for Sadie Mac, another of Smathers' string, who was bought by Miss Wilks, of Galt, Ont., for $15,400. Miss Wilks is the owner of Oro Wilks and of several horses that won blue ribbons at the last horse show in New York. Prince Alert, the world's champion pacing gelding, with a world's record of 1.59½, and a record of 1.57 with a wind shield, was sold to Edward Mitchell, of New York, for $2,600. Grace Bond, the champion three-year-old trotter of 1904, consigned to James Gatcomb, was sold to Alonzo Maynard, of New York, for $13,000.

The Canadian Pacific Railway have announced excursion rates from Manitoba and the Northwest Territories to Vancouver, Victoria, Kamloops, Vernon, Peachland and Summerland. Tickets will be issued December 1st and 2nd, 15th and 16th, and January 5th and 6th; good to return within three months. The rate for the round trip will be single first-class fare.

MAY EVEN STOP POKER GAME.

An ordinance which has just been passed by the New York board of aldermen having for its object the prevention of six-day bicycle racing is quite broad in its provisions, so much so that it might be interpreted to stop many popular games. It forbids any person in a contest of "speed, skill or endurance" from remaining in the contest for more than three hours out of any twenty-four. Under strict application the new ordinance as signed by the mayor might affect golf, bowling and even the time-honored poker game.

$40 TO EASTERN CANADA.

Tickets will be on sale November 28th to December 31st at rate of $40 as far east as Montreal; proportionately higher rates beyond, and will be good for return three months from date of sale. Special arrangements will be made to make travelling a pleasure on any of the four trains departing from Minneapolis and St. Paul every day. The finest of high back seat coaches, free reclinig chair cars and sleepers make these trains most popular with travelers to Eastern Canada. Special pamphlet giving time of trains, etc., or any other information will be gladly furnished upon addressing Geo. A. Lee, Travelling Agent Northwestern Line, 339 Main street, Winnipeg.

SECURES NEW FIRE INSURANCE AGENCY.

Messrs. Christie and Heubach Get the City Agency of the Manitoba Assurance Company.

Quite recently it was announced that the Liverpool & London & Globe Insurance Company had secured the control and business of the Manitoba Assurance Company.

This new arrangement regarding the Manitoba places it in the front rank amongst the fire insurance companies of Canada, worked as it is now under a Dominion charter, the policies being guaranteed by the Liverpool, London and Globe, whose available assets are over sixty millions of dollars, is a feature that will certainly commend itself to the business men of our community.

The city agency under the new arrangement regarding the Manitoba has been secured by the well known firm of Christie & Heubach, who intend devoting special attention to this department of their business. The arrangement should be a good one for the Manitoba, as the firm of Christie & Heubach's closely identified with many of the leading financial institutions in the city and is well known to the business men of Winnipeg, a connection which should be of material assistance to them in securing valuable insurance patronage.

W. J. Christie has been long identified with real estate interests in Winnipeg, having for the past fifteen years been well known in these circles. His opinion upon matters in connection with real estate is highly valued, his knowledge enabling him to speak with authority.

F. W. Heubach is also one of the best known men around town, and his activity and ability were never more displayed than in connection with the recent Dominion exhibition. Since the formation of the partnership of Christie & Heubach, his large and varied general knowledge has stood him in good stead, and it is safe to say that there is no real estate or financial firm in the city which more merits the confidence of the investing public than that of Christe & Heubach, who are being congratulated upon the latest addition to their business operations.

The Western territory is under the supervision of Mr. Fred W. Pace, the Superintendent of the "Liverpool & London & Globe."

Occasionally a man meets a woman and marries her, but more often she overtakes him.

HOLIDAY EXCURSIONS.

The extremely low rates granted by the railway companies for Holiday Excursions during the month of December makes it possible for residents of the Northweest to spend the winter in the east at a comparatively small expense. The new fast trains from Winnipeg to St. Paul makes the route via St. Paul and Chicago more popular than ever. The Burlington Route which runs along the banks of the Mississippi river for three hundred miles is one of the most popular lines, as it gives passengers an all day ride through the famous Mississippi River Valley, the most picturesque and delightful in America. The route is through a prosperous terest to the traveller. The Burlington and well settled country all the way, towns and cities are numerous, and every mile presents something of infloute have issued a very attractive and interesting descriptive folder which gives the time of trains, and a map via all routes from the Northwest to Eastern Canada, a copy of which will be sent on application to A. L. Fidlemiller, Travelling Passenger Agent Burlington Route, who will make the Clarendon Hotel, Winnipeg, his headquarters during December.

THE STORY OF A SUCCESSFUL MAN

HE FOUND HIS LOST HEALTH IN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Leading Business Man of Welland Gives His Experience with the Great Canadian Kidney Cure.

Welland, Ont., Dec. 5.—(Special).—There is no better known or more highly respected man in Welland than Mr. J. J. Yokom. Born and brought up in the neighboring township of Crowland, by his own industry and sterling honesty he has grown to be one of Welland's leading merchants. Consequently when Mr. Yokom comes out with a statement that he was cured of a serious illness by Dodd's Kidney Pills, everybody knows it must be so.

"For a year or more I had Kidney Trouble in all its worst symptoms," says Mr. Yokom, "My head was bad, I had no appetite and I lost weight fast. At times I was entirely incapacitated. I doctored with a physician of vast experience but got no good results.

"I became despondent of ever being well again, when by good luck I chanced to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and from the first day they seemed to suit my case. Five boxes cured me completely."

A QUEER ANIMAL.

The Ermine Is One Thing In Summer and Another In Winter.

The ermine is a queer animal. It is one thing in winter and another thing in summer. That is a strange statement, but it is true, for in winter the animal's fur is as white as snow and is called the ermine. In summer its fur turns reddish brown on the upper part of the body and a light yellow on the lower part. The animal is then known as the stoat.

This change is quite familiar to naturalists, but not to unscientific people, and the ermine and the stoat are therefore generally regarded as distinct animals.

The fur of the ermine is much valued and is in great request. At one time it was a mark of great royalty, and the state robes of judges and magistrates were lined with it as an emblem of purity.

The ermine is so cunning in its ways that it is almost as difficult to catch as it is to "catch a weasel asleep." In fact, about the only way to capture it is to mark its course from its home and then strew mud in its pathway. When the dainty, fastidious little animal reaches the point in its path where the mud is strewn it will lie down and subject itself to capture and death rather than smirch one of its snow white hairs.

THE STORY OF A SUCCESSFUL MAN

HE FOUND HIS LOST HEALTH IN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Leading Business Man of Welland Gives His Experience with the Great Canadian Kidney Cure.

Welland, Ont., Dec. 5.—(Special).—There is no better known or more highly respected man in Welland than Mr. J. J. Yokom. Born and brought up in the neighboring township of Crowland, by his own industry and sterling honesty he has grown to be one of Welland's leading merchants. Consequently when Mr. Yokom comes out with a statement that he was cured of a serious illness by Dodd's Kidney Pills, everybody knows it must be so.

"For a year or more I had Kidney Trouble in all its worst symptoms," says Mr. Yokom, "My head was bad, I had no appetite and I lost weight fast. At times I was entirely incapacitated. I doctored with a physician of vast experience but got no good results.

"I became despondent of ever being well again, when by good luck I chanced to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and from the first day they seemed to suit my case. Five boxes cured me completely."

A QUEER ANIMAL.

The Ermine Is One Thing In Summer and Another In Winter.

The ermine is a queer animal. It is one thing in winter and another thing in summer. That is a strange statement, but it is true, for in winter the animal's fur is as white as snow and is called the ermine. In summer its fur turns reddish brown on the upper part of the body and a light yellow on the lower part. The animal is then known as the stoat.

This change is quite familiar to naturalists, but not to unscientific people, and the ermine and the stoat are therefore generally regarded as distinct animals.

The fur of the ermine is much valued and is in great request. At one time it was a mark of great royalty, and the state robes of judges and magistrates were lined with it as an emblem of purity.

The ermine is so cunning in its ways that it is almost as difficult to catch as it is to "catch a weasel asleep." In fact, about the only way to capture it is to mark its course from its home and then strew mud in its pathway. When the dainty, fastidious little animal reaches the point in its path where the mud is strewn it will lie down and subject itself to capture and death rather than smirch one of its snow white hairs.

WESTERN CANADIAN EDITORS.

A series of articles describing their lives, their aims and their influence.

No. 12.

Victor C. French.

VICTOR C. FRENCH.
Editor and Proprietor of the Wetaskiwin Times.

The Canadian West, it has often been said, is the land of opportunity. This is true not only of those portions of its vast area that have been developed to a comparative extent, and where the possession of a moderate amount of capital ensures returns much greater than is possible in the older communities in the East, but also, and to an even greater extent, in the large and naturally wealthy districts being continually opened up as the march of progress and development, due to the steady inflow of population, goes on. These developments are as remarkable for their permanence as for their rapidity. One season sees the prairie grasses waving in the wind, and far as the eye can see there is no sign or vestige of human habitation. Ere a year has passed, the railway has penetrated the prairies, and the beginnings of a busy town appear. And, almost with the pioneer storekeeper comes the country publisher, sets up his Washington—or, if his capital approximates his ambition, his cylinder press—issues his first copy of a six-column folio, and starts out on that career of public-spirited publicity that makes the paper a weekly blessing to the merchants, the farmers, and every other class of the new community.

Many of the best country weekly and semi-weekly properties of the Canadian West had the humblest beginnings. But, with the unerring instinct and the deep-seated faith of the pioneer publisher, the men who risked every cent of their modest capital, and incurred obligations that in the event of non-success would permanently cripple their finances, went ahead in their enterprise, confident in the field that they had selected, and satisfied that time would vindicate their judgment. And, in the vast majority of instances, they have "won out." In many cases two or three years has seen such changes and growths in a western Canadian weekly that would surprise one not familiar with the speed at which things move in the West. It should not, however, surprise anybody who knows that the country which can raise fullfledged towns in a year can also produce full-grown and ably conducted newspapers in the same space of time.

A fine illustration of this rapidity of development is afforded by the Wetaskiwin Times. It is some three and a half years old, it having been established and first issued on March 22nd., 1901. Its beginnings were most modest. It appeared as a six-column folio. But, within the limits of its space, the Times even at that early date, was a newspaper. It gave the news. It was public-spirited, believed in its own town. It had its opinions, and expressed them. In every way it identified itself with the progress and prosperity of the district in which it was published. The Wetaskiwin people recognized that they had a live newspaper—one that could be depended on to back up the efforts of its citizens to make their town a place of importance. As a natural consequence they were a unit in supporting it. Also as a consequence, it did not take long before the two-column folio was too small for the increased importance of both the town and the paper. Soon it had to be enlarged to a seven column, and, after another interval of continuous growth, two additional pages had to be added. From two pages of six columns to six pages of seven columns, and all in the space of three and a half years! Need there be any further commentary than the mere recital of facts as to whether or not the Canadian West is the land of opportunity for the properly qualified newspaper publisher, as well as for the farmer, the rancher, the merchant, and the investor?

On the mechanical side of his training, few men are better equipped than Mr. Victor C. French, the editor and proprietor of the Wetaskiwin Times. He is not yet thirty years of age, having been born near Oshawa, Ont., in 1875. He was educated at the Exeter schools, completing his education with a term at Toronto College. Deciding to learn the printing business, he was apprenticed to John White & Son, of the Exeter Times. After completing his term he accepted the foremanship of the Mitchell Recorder, holding the position for nearly three years, when he went to Toronto and obtained employment in the well-known job office of the Monetary Times. Later he accepted a position in the office of McLean Bros., the well-known trade journalists. In 1898 he was offered the foremanship of the Clinton New Era, one of the best papers in western Ontario, and held the position till the fall of 1901, when he came west to Alberta, and after a few months of prospecting, decided to locate at Wetaskiwin, and established the Times. As may be imagined from the success of his venture, Mr. French has never had occasion to regret the call that bade him come west.

To any one who realizes and appreciates the rapid strides that all parts of the West has made within the past few years, it seems certain that the measure of success that has attended Mr. French in his newspaper venture in the past will be surpassed by its future growth. The district served by the Calgary & Edmonton line is one of the best in the West, and Wetaskiwin is evidently destined to be one of the most important centres along the line. The Times, under its present management, is amply able to keep pace with its future growth. Already it is regarded as among the most influential papers of the Territories. It is ably edited and carefully printed. Its advertising patronage is large, and as a news medium it is one of the very best in Western Canada. The present position of the Times is the best possible proof of the progressiveness and ability of its proprietor, who is generally recognized as among the most efficient of the newspaper men of the West.

De Miracle

It is better than electricity, because it does not scar or produce a new growth. Better than X-ray, because it does not burn, scar or paralyze the tissues under the skin. Better than depilatories, because it is not poisonous; therefore, it will not cause blood poisoning, or produce eczema, which is so common with depilatories, and does not break off the hair, thereby increasing its growth.

Electrolysis, X-ray or depilatories are offered you on the bare word of the operators and manufacturers. DE MIRACLE is not. It is the only method which is indorsed by physicians, surgeons, dermatologists, medical journals and prominent magazines.

THE FROG'S SKIN.

Remarkable Manner In Which It Absorbs Air and Water.

The frog's skin is a breathing machine. The supply of air is a necessary addition to that taken in by ordinary breathing. The skin is most remarkable for its powerful absorption of water, due to the numberless minute pores. He can soak up half his weight of water in an hour.

As the skin perspires quite as freely as it absorbs, we can comprehend why contact with moisture is necessary. Besides the loss from evaporation there is the stopping of skin breathing also, because the skin must be kept moist and soft to absorb fresh air and give off used air from the system. You have noticed the cold, clammy feeling of the skin of the frog when you have handled him. The soaking of water is the cause. If you put a redhot iron on a frog's flesh he will not feel it, simply because of the cold water in his skin, which the heat turns into vapor, escaping under the iron, but if hot water be dropped upon him he will instantly jump from pain, as it immediately strikes into the skin.

This moisture is a safeguard against drying up, and there is still another, which is an interior sack for storing water. Like the camel, it thus keeps a supply which carries the amphibian over many a dry place when it would otherwise lose all its moisture and die.

ORIGIN OF A PHRASE.

"Getting Into a Scrape" Comes to Us From the Game of Golf.

Not till quite recently has the true explanation of the phrase, "getting into a scrape," been popularly known. It has long puzzled dictionary makers, one suggesting that it is a corruption of escapade, another connecting it with a Swedish word skrap, to draw into difficulties.

Golf, the royal and ancient game at one time peculiar to Scotland, has of late become such a worldwide amusement that the mystery of this phrase has practically disappeared. In Scotland many of the golf courses are laid out on sandy downs bordering on the sea. These are the very places where rabbits abound.

One of the perpetual troubles of a golfer was that his ball constantly found a lodgment in these rabbit "scrapes," from which it was difficult to drive it with accuracy; hence special rules were framed at St. Andrew's, the Mecca of golf, fixing what was to be done when one got into a scrape. The phrase thus started from the golfers in the north and spread southward without its practical bearing being known.—London Chronicle.

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

The Great Specific for Liver and Kidney Diseases.

It is the liver that is largely responsible for indigestion and constipation—derangements that are a constant source of trouble.

The bile, which, when left in the blood, is a poison to the system, causing biliousness, headache and muddy complexion, becomes of priceless value when passed into the intestines to aid digestion and ensure regular action of the bowels.

The healthy liver separates bile from the blood and sends it into the intestines.

IF YOU FIND YOUR LIVER SLUGGISH AND TORPID IN ACTION DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS WILL BRING RELIEF AND CURE MORE PROMPTLY THAN ANY TREATMENT YOU COULD FIND.

By enlivening the action of the liver they remove the cause of biliousness, headache, indigestion, constipation and other accompanying symptoms.

The specific action of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills on the liver is what makes them of so great worth as a family medicine and ensures them a resting place in the home.

Mis Julia Langlois, Manor, Assa., writes: "For a long time I suffered from liver complaint and biliousness, and could find nothing to help me until I used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I have recommended these pills to many of my friends, and they have all been well satisfied with the results. You can use this letter for the benefit of women who are suffering as I did."

One pill a dose at bedtime and Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will ensure healthful, regular action of the kidneys, liver and bowels; 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. The portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

HUMOR

HE PAID HER FARE.

Now Mrs. Standish Is Wondering Who the Gentleman Was.

When the conductor came through he stopped before Mrs. Standish and said, "Faur-us-urs, please."

Mrs. Standish swallowed a peppermint lozenge whole and said:

"I have no money. My husband will pay for me."

The conductor looked around on the serried ranks of femininity doubtfully. "Where is 'e?" he asked.

"Out on the back platform. He stayed out there to smoke."

"There are a dozen men out there," was the reply. "How am I to know which one belongs to you? What kind of looking man is he?"

"Handsome. He is tall, he wears a blue suit, and he's got the nicest black mustache and the kindest brown eyes you ever saw."

The conductor went away, only to return a moment later, presenting a lugubrious cast of countenance.

"Say," he said, "he won't pay. He says you ain't his wife. He says he ain't got any wife—says he ain't never been married."

"Well, what do you think of that?" gasped Mrs. Standish. "You must have asked the wrong man."

"That's what I thought. To make sure I got the right one I asked every man out there. They all swore to the same thing. They're all single."

Mrs. Standish blushed deeply. "This is outrageous," she said. "I can appreciate a joke as well as anybody, but this is carrying it a little too far. Oh, dear, I wish the car wasn't so crowded so I could get out there! Tell him, please—the dark eyed man—that I don't want to make a scene, but that if he doesn't quit playing the fool and pay my fare I'll be obliged to come out there in a minute and say something."

"Yes, ma'am," said the conductor.

Again he retired to the rear of the car. When he came through the next time he nodded at Mrs. Standish encouragingly. "It's all right," he said. "He paid up."

After awhile the car stopped at Mrs. Standish's street. She went out the front way and waited for Standish to join her. But the car passed, and he did not appear.

"How very careless he is," said Mrs. Standish, "to allow himself to be carried past his street! There is really no excuse for such inattention."

She stood at the corner, looking anxiously up and down the street. Soon another car stopped, and Standish got off.

"You needn't say a word," he said. "It's your own fault. A truck got in the way, and I couldn't catch that car you got in to save my neck. I called to you to get off, but you didn't hear. I worried all the way uptown. I knew you'd be hopping mad because I didn't come inside."

"Oh," said Mrs. Standish, "I'm not thinking of that. I am wondering who that man was that paid my car fare."—New York Press.

The wooden harmonicon is one of the most ancient instruments. It is at present found in a very primitive form all over Africa and in many parts of Asia and Oceania.

Favorite Names In England.

An English paper took a ballot on the subject of favorite names for boys and girls and received 4,000 replies. A list of thirty-one boys and thirty-three girls' names was submitted, and the voting showed Harold and Dorothy to be the two most popular appellations.

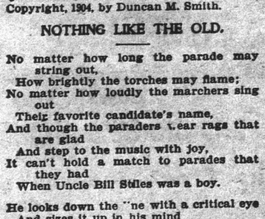
NOTHING LIKE THE OLD.

No matter how long the parade may string out,
How brightly the torches may flame;
No matter how loudly the marchers sing out
Their favorite candidate's name,
And though the paraders wear rags that are glad
And step to the music with joy,
It can't hold a match to parades that they had
When Uncle Bill Stiles was a boy.

He looks down the line with a critical eye
And sizes it up in his mind
And says the parade is a mile or two shy
Of the regular old fashioned kind.
The torches they carried in that ancient date
Made lamps of the moderns a toy
Compared with the others, he'd beg leave to state,
When Uncle Bill Stiles was a boy.

Oh, yes, the processions they had in those days
Were really a soul stirring sight—
Just think of the miles upon miles of displays
And the long shouting columns of light!
The straggling, half hearted parades that we meet
Now serve but to fret and annoy
Compared with the masses that moved down the street
When Uncle Bill Stiles was a boy.

Self Confidence.



A certain amount of self confidence is necessary to success in life. For instance, if a man thinks he can't ride a bronco he can't, whereas if he springs into the saddle with no misgivings he is liable to remain there all of a minute and a half before investigating the neighboring cactus plant to see if it is composed of good material for a sofa pillow.

If a man does not think that a girl will marry him, she will not unless it is leap year, and perhaps not then if she has any one else in sight.

But hubby dear does not get sore,
For she can buy better ones down where they trade
At the up to date bakery store.

"She takes no interest in politics and hardly knows when an election is being held."

"Doesn't her husband stay downtown all night to get the returns?"

Getting Mixed.

"She has been twenty-two now for five seasons that I know about."

"If she keeps that up much longer she will be posing as her own granddaughter."

Seasonable.

The summer is ended; we shift from Maud Miller
To some of the others in stock,
For when it is autumn we then make a killer
With the frost on the brown fodder shock.

Sounded That Way.

"What is the matter with the baby next door?"

"As near as I can judge from listening it has swallowed a phonograph."

Taking a Chance.

"He is writing for posterity."

"Do you think posterity will ever find it out?"

RUSSIA IN DEFEAT.

At the Close of the Crimean War Her Weakness Stood Revealed.

Despite the suppression of most of the foreign journals and the blotting out of page after page of the newspapers allowed to enter the empire, despite all that the secret police could do in repressing unfavorable comment, it became generally known that all was going wrong in the Crimea. News came of reverse after reverse, of the defeats of the Alma and Inkerman and as a climax the loss of Sevastopol and the destruction of the Russian fleet.

In the midst of it all, as is ever the case in Russian wars, came utter collapse in the commissariat department. Everywhere one heard hints and finally detailed stories of scoundrelism in high places, of money which ought to have been appropriated to army supplies, but which had been expended at the gambling tables of Homburg or in the Breda quarter of Paris.

Then it was that there was borne in upon me the conviction that Russia, powerful as she seems when viewed from the outside, is anything but strong when viewed from the inside. To say nothing of the thousand evident weaknesses resulting from autocracy—the theory that one man, and he generally not one of the most highly endowed, can do the thinking for a hundred millions of people—there was nowhere the slightest sign of any uprising of a great nation, as, for instance, of the French against Europe in 1792, of the Germans against France in 1813 and in 1870, of Italy against Austria in 1859 and afterward and of the Americans in the civil war of 1861.

There were certainly many noble characters in Russia, and these must have felt deeply the condition of things. But, there being no great middle class and the lower class having been long kept in besotted ignorance, there seemed no force on which patriotism could take hold.—Andrew D. White in Century.

New Life For Typewriter Ribbons.

Typewriter ribbons appear to follow the law of most other inanimate things—namely, that it is possible to rest them so that when apparently about worn out they can be revived. This is on the testimony of a man who uses a machine for all his work, which amounts to very considerable. He says that when his ribbon gets very pale he reels it off on a spool, wraps it in oiled paper and puts it away in a damp, cool place. By the time his next ribbon begins to show the same signs of wear he takes the ribbon that he had put away and uses it again.

It is about as good as new; but, of course, its second life is not so long as its first one. The explanation of this phenomenon is that the colored matter in the tiny spots all over the ribbon which have escaped the striking of the keys is softened by the moisture and spreads throughout the fabric to the portions which have been exhausted. The method here described is said to be much better than that of steaming an old ribbon, because time permits the coloring matter to diffuse itself more evenly.

Oldest Coin In the World.

An archaeological find of the greatest interest has just been made by Pastor Lohman, chairman of the German Society For Scientific Research in Anatolio. During his recent journey in north Syria a coin of pure silver, excellently preserved, was offered to him, which on examination proved to bear a perfect Aramean inscription of Panammu Bar Rerub, king of Schamol, who reigned 800 years before Christ. It is the oldest known coin in the world. Up to the present the Lydians have always been regarded as the inventors of money, but this new find shows that the Semitic Arameans, who lived two centuries before the Lydians, are the oldest known coiners of money. Apart from this discovery, Pastor Lohman found several new Hittite bas-reliefs at Marash.

The Matter With France.

Most people will hear with surprise, on the authority of a member of the commission appointed by the French government to investigate the causes of the decrease in the population in France, that it is not diminishing birth rate, but an increasing death rate, which is responsible for the trouble. Dr. Lowenthal is an authority of European reputation, and we have no choice but to accept his statement that tuberculosis and the other infectious and semi-infectious diseases which are decreasing in all other civilized countries remain at a high average in France and that some of them are even showing a tendency to increase. Smallpox, for instance, which is almost dead in England, still kills thousands every year in France.—London Globe.

Telephones and Horse Thieves.

"Telephones are coming in handy to catch horse thieves," said George C. French. "They have not been used so much in Milwaukee as in the smaller cities of this and other states. There when the robbery of a horse is reported the sheriff telephones to the farmers on every road, and so many farmers have phones now that this is practicable. After every farmer has been given a description of the stolen horse it is pretty difficult for the thief to escape, for he must pass out of the city over some country road, and many captures have been made in this way."

Future Foods.

"Man will eat 200 or 300 more foods in the year 2000 than he eats now," said a chemist. "A movement is on foot among the world's governments to increase the varieties of our foods, and every week from somewhere or other a new vegetable or fruit or nut is added to the international bill of fare."

Sleep.

The immediate cause of sleep is diminished circulation of blood in the brain. During natural sleep the nerve cells are gradually restored to their normal condition.

Carbolic Acid.

When it is required to use carbolic acid as a disinfectant it should be mixed with boiling water. This promptly overcomes the usual antagonism between the acid and the water and converts them into a permanent solution, which will keep for weeks.

He Was a Wise Young Man and Got It All

OLD man Bryson, who was stricken with mortal sickness, called in his only son and heir to advise with him concerning the disposition of his large estate. Young Bryson had just come of age. Said the old man to his son:

"My boy, I will have $75,000 in all to leave to you when I'm gone. I thought I would make you the sole beneficiary, but in order to protect you against fraud and possible mismanagement I have been thinking of making my good friend, Lawyer Anderson, the executor of the estate. He has always been friendly to me, and I think he will deal justly by you. What do you think of it?"

The young man thought awhile and then replied:

"Well, father, you know I have never opposed you in anything. I have always tried to do whatever you have thought best, but it occurs to me that it would be much more satisfactory to me if you would just leave the $75,000 to Mr. Anderson and make me his executor."

"I bound for you, Thad," said old man Bryson. "If you understand that much about it, my boy, I suppose I'll just leave the entire estate to you without any executor."—Lippincott's Magazine.

At the Time Appointed.

"Yes, you may go," the mistress replied. "Whose funeral is it, Pink?"

"Ole Unc' Abe Jacksin's wife, Aunt Cindy," Pink informed.

Late Tuesday evening Mrs. Reed remembered her promise and that Pink had been hard at work all day. "Pink," she called, "why didn't you go to the funeral today?"

"Law, Miss Molly," Pink grinned broadly, "Aunt Cindy disapp'inted us all. She ain't daid yit."—New Orleans Picayune.

FARM HYGIENE.

Unsanitary Closets—The Dry Earth System—No Farmer Can Find Reasonable Excuse for Not Adopting It.

Attention was recently called to the fact that out of some 100 to 200 samples of water from farm wells analysed annually by Prof. Shutt, Chemist of the Dominion Experimental Farm, not one-fifth are found safe and wholesome. By far the greater number have to be utterly condemned, and it seems very evident that a great improvement in our water supplies is necessary. This dangerous condition of many farm wells is undoubtedly due to pollution by unsanitary closets. There is no reason why we should have our farm houses to-day in the semi-barnacle condition in which so many of them are, with their closets and privies a menace to public health. We may talk about bacteriology, sanitation, and so on, but all that and a great deal more is included in what we understand by "cleanliness." The lack of cleanliness is primarily a matter of ignorance, and secondarily a matter of laziness.

An Ontario editor, who is a member of the Board of Health in his town and familiar with sanitary conditions in his section, says in effect: Perhaps the farmers of this district are worse than elsewhere, but of all the farms I have visited during the past few years, I have yet to learn of one closet kept with a regard to common decency, not to speak of hygienic laws. This state of affairs is utterly inexcusable. In the towns the closets are inspected by order of the Boards of Health, and the people are gradually being persuaded to adopt the dry earth system. Very few pits are left and no new ones are being dug. Inspection by county and townships boards of health may be impracticable, but the self-respect of farmers and their families ought to mean something in this respect, if regard for health means nothing.

Ordinary shallow wells in the vicinity of the old-fashioned privy pits are almost certain to become contaminated by seepage. The soil is an excellent filtering and cleansing agent, oxidizing organic matter rapidly, and tending to check the development of many of the common putrefactive bacteria. But the soil is only able to dispose of a certain amount of contaminating material, and such disposal takes time, so that by heavy rains the contaminating matter may be carried far into the earth below the true purifying layer, and thus soak unchanged into the wells. An old pit which has been closed and covered with earth is almost equally dangerous, as the decomposition of the large mass of excreta contained therein is a matter of years, unless hastened by the proximity of trees whose roots reach the pit. The contents should be removed and spread upon a field, and the pit left open long enough to permit the decomposition of any organic matter remaining.

If farmers once took time to think of these matters, there would undoubtedly be a great improvement. Windmills are now both cheap and common, and there is no reason why well-to-do farmers should not have a water system in their houses, with all the conveniences and advantages which residents in the cities enjoy from the water works systems there established.

Though not quite so convenient, the dry earth closet is so cheap and so satisfactory from the sanitary point of view that no farmer can discover a reasonable excuse for refusing to adopt it. A well laid cement concrete floor will be found by far the easiest to keep in a clean and wholesome condition. A stout box suitable size, mounted on runners and with a strong hook at one end to which a horse may be attached, makes a receptable that can be conveniently drawn to the field or barnyard to be emptied. This box may be made wholly or in part of sheet iron, and if the bottom be semi-circular in form a kettle of hot water will be found sufficient to loosen the frozen contents in winter. Galvanized iron buckets, larger at the top than at the bottom, are also easy to empty in winter. The nature of the receptable is largely a matter of convenience; the essential features of the system are the storing and use of a plentiful supply of dry earth and the emptying of the receptable regularly. If the contents be spread thinly over the surface of a field, they will be decomposed in a very few days with no danger to the public health.

Ashes should not be used as a substitute for earth, and road dust is very little better. The surface soil of a field or garden that has been frequently cultivated will be found just the thing. If a little coarse or lumpy it may be run through a gravel screen. It is always advisable to keep a good supply on hand, as it becomes drier and better with age when stored in a bin.

If the man who has hitherto been careless in this particular will adopt and maintain a proper sanitary system in connection with his closet, he will find himself gaining largely, not only in self-respect, but in the respect of his family and of the strangers within his gates. Furthermore, he may thereby escape the ravages of such diseases as typhoid fever, which are so frequently traced to the use of contaminated water.

Cut Hay for Breeding Horses.

If a stallion in the stud gets the right amount of cut hay in his grain ration he does not need loose hay during the day, says Breeder's Gazette. Only the best quality of hay should be fed to breeding horses. Oats or wheat cut when in the milk makes the best hay for such animals if cured properly, as such has less dust and dirt and usually comes on to be cut and made at a dry season of the year. The man who makes a business of keeping breeding stallions will find it to his advantage to make enough such hay to last them the year around.

Giant Caterpillars.

Caterpillars from six inches to a foot long are common in the vicinity of the Darling river, Australia.

Oleo on the Decline.

The manufacture of oleomargarine has steadily decreased under the present law, which requires the colored product to pay a tax of 10 cents a pound. During the fiscal year ended June 30 the make was only 48,071,000 pounds against 126,316,000 pounds for the year 1901-02, before the present law was in force.

PROGRESS OF THE WEST.

Hon. A. G. Blair, Chairman of Railway Commission, Greatly Surprised at Marked Advancement in Evidence.

Hon. A. G. Blair, Chairman of the Railway Commission, recently returned to the capital after an absence, in company with his colleague, Dr. Mills, of nearly two months in the Northwest and British Columbia. "I certainly was very greatly surprised," said Mr. Blair, "at the progress which has been made in the west during the last two years. I saw almost all the towns, with the exception of those off the main line, and all had grown in population and business. There were none that failed to show evidences of prosperity. It goes without saying that Winnipeg's progress has been phenomenal. Some of the officials there told me that no less than 700 new buildings were now in course of erection. One very noteworthy fact is that all the eastern wholesale houses have established branches in Winnipeg. They are not scattered through the city, but whole blocks of them, five or six storied structures of brick or stone, are to be seen, and those previously located are adding to and extending their accommodation. In my opinion there is a great future in store for Winnipeg. It is the conduit through which the business originating in the vast area north of Winnipeg and westward as far as the Rockies must pass. The C. P. R. have acquired the necessary property and are now establishing yards which are claimed to be the largest of any railway in the world, consisting of 70 miles of tracks. They are erecting a new station and an enormous hotel. The sum of their expenditures in Winnipeg amounts to about $3,000,000.

"There has been very marked progress in Regina. The country north of it, which is tributary to the Regina, Qu'Appelle & Long Lake Railway, is absorbing quite a number of settlers. Prince Albert is improving and his excellent prospects of becoming a very fine town. Calgary has grown immensely, and has a very promising future before it. The C. P. R. have made substantial progress with irrigation works in the vicinity of Calgary, which are intended to serve a million and a half of acres. I saw a 55-foot cutting in connection with the main irrigation canal, and the soil was a fine rich loam. How much deeper that rich soil goes I cannot tell. There will be three secondary canals aggregating in distance 115 miles, in addition to the main channel. Then there will be distributing canals, comprising a total length of 900 miles. The area of land to be served by the irrigation works will support, it is computed, a farming population of 250,000 souls.

"Subsidiary to the area watered by the irrigation works are another million and a half of grazing lands of the best quality. I ran up from Calgary to Edmonton. The latter is steadily growing in importance. All along the intervening distance are established towns and settlements that are rapidly growing in importance. There is a numerous settlement of Galicians extending eastward from Edmonton, and comprising perhaps about 15,000 souls. The other settlers speak very highly of them. They are hard working, thrifty, and have a well-to-do appearance. A number of roller mills have been sent into the country north of Edmonton, one of them for the Hudson's Bay Company. I took the trouble when in Winnipeg to inquire of Governor Chipman of the Hudson's Bay Company as to the truth of this statement. He said they had erected a mill at Dunvegan, 1,200 miles northwest of Edmonton, and were grinding wheat raised in the locality and meeting the wants of the people there. That I consider a remarkable fact.

"Between Red Deer and McLeod we noticed from the train thousands of cattle on the ranges. They were simply rolling in fat. The C. P. R. this year transported 60,000 head of cattle from that district alone for exportation to Europe, as compared with 30,000 in the previous season. The ranchmen south of the international boundary line, I am told, when they take their cattle off the ranges have to fatten them on corn for five or six weeks. In the Territories, grazing on the ranges suffices. What impressed us in traveling through British Columbia, was the possibilities of fruit-growing in some sections. Fruits of excellent quality are raised at Yale, and also at Nelson, on Kootenay Lake. At Vernon there are some splendid orchards, including those of the Earl of Aberdeen. All along the Okanagan Lake orchards are strung out where pears, apples, peaches, plums and grapes are grown. The growth of business in British Columbia is perhaps not quite so pronounced as in the Northwest, but still there are very considerable evidences of prosperity. We gathered the impression that British Columbia, by means of its lumber, minerals, fish and fruits, has a great outlook in store for it.

"In the west we heard a great many complaints of discrimination in railway rates in favor of some localities as compared with others. We have taken a good deal of evidence on that subject, but I would not care to express any opinion with respect to the complaints at the present stage. During my stay in the west I talked with a number of grain men from the republic to the south, and they seemed to think the price of wheat would be maintained, in fact, some of them thought it would go as high as $1.50 or $2.00."

Quin, the old time English actor, complained to Beau Nash of the exorbitant charges made at Bath. Nash said they were acting on truly Christian principals. "How so?" asked Quin. "Why," answered Nash, "you were a stranger, and they took you in." "Aye," replied Quin, "but they fleeced me instead of clothing me."

PROGRESS OF THE WEST.

Hon. A. G. Blair, Chairman of Railway Commission, Greatly Surprised at Marked Advancement in Evidence.

Hon. A. G. Blair, Chairman of the Railway Commission, recently returned to the capital after an absence, in company with his colleague, Dr. Mills, of nearly two months in the Northwest and British Columbia. "I certainly was very greatly surprised," said Mr. Blair, "at the progress which has been made in the west during the last two years. I saw almost all the towns, with the exception of those off the main line, and all had grown in population and business. There were none that failed to show evidences of prosperity. It goes without saying that Winnipeg's progress has been phenomenal. Some of the officials there told me that no less than 700 new buildings were now in course of erection. One very noteworthy fact is that all the eastern wholesale houses have established branches in Winnipeg. They are not scattered through the city, but whole blocks of them, five or six storied structures of brick or stone, are to be seen, and those previously located are adding to and extending their accommodation. In my opinion there is a great future in store for Winnipeg. It is the conduit through which the business originating in the vast area north of Winnipeg and westward as far as the Rockies must pass. The C. P. R. have acquired the necessary property and are now establishing yards which are claimed to be the largest of any railway in the world, consisting of 70 miles of tracks. They are erecting a new station and an enormous hotel. The sum of their expenditures in Winnipeg amounts to about $9,000,000.

"There has been very marked progress in Regina. The country north of it, which is tributary to the Regina, Qu'Appelle & Long Lake Railway, is absorbing quite a number of settlers. Prince Albert is improving and his excellent prospects of becoming a very fine town. Calgary has grown immensely, and has a very promising future before it. The C. P. R. have made substantial progress with irrigation works in the vicinity of Calgary, which are intended to serve a million and a half of acres. I saw a 35-foot cutting in connection with the main irrigation canal, and the soil was a fine rich loam. How much deeper that rich soil goes I cannot tell. There will be three secondary canals aggregating in distance 115 miles, in addition to the main channel. Then there will be distributing canals, comprising a total length of 900 miles. The area of land to be served by the irrigation works will support, it is computed, a farming population of 250,000 souls.

"Subsidiary to the area watered by the irrigation works are another million and a half of grazing lands of the best quality. I ran up from Calgary to Edmonton. The latter is steadily growing in importance. All along the intervening distance are established towns and settlements that are rapidly growing in importance. There is a numerous settlement of Galicians extending eastward from Edmonton, and comprising perhaps about 15,000 souls. The other settlers speak very highly of them. They are hard working, thrifty, and have a well-to-do appearance. A number of roller mills have been sent into the country north of Edmonton, one of them for the Hudson's Bay Company. I took the trouble when in Winnipeg to inquire of Governor Chipman of the Hudson's Bay Company as to the truth of this statement. He said they had erected a mill at Dunvegan, 1,200 miles northwest of Edmonton, and were grinding wheat raised in the locality and meeting the wants of the people there. That I consider a remarkable fact.

ANNUAL MEETING — OF THE — BOARD OF TRADE.

The annual meeting of the Board of Trade was held in the commercial room of the Assiniboia Hotel, on Thursday night. Present, Messrs. D. Milne, (President), White, Hawthorne, Cousins, Desbrisay, Forster, Harlow, Kealy, Williamson and G. P. Blythe, the acting secretary. The minutes of the last general meeting were read and adopted.

The President then read the following report:

President's address to the Medicine Hat Board of Trade at the general meeting, held 12th January, 1905.

Gentlemen,

I have the honor to present you the financial statement for the past year, which shows a balance on hand on the 31st December of $23.84.

We started the year with a balance on hand of $49.10, and have collected from members for subscriptions the sum of $72.50, making the total receipts for the year $121.60. This has been expended in the following manner, we have spent on printing and advertising $91.01; commission on the collection of subscriptions $3.25; blue prints of the town plan $3; cotton for a sign for the exhibition 50c.; and we have a balance on hand at the Merchants Bank of $23.84, making a total of $121.60.

The Board during the past year has consisted of thirty members which shows a falling off from the previous year, and I would urge upon the members the importance to this town and district of an intelligent and progressive interest being taken in this Board, as more good can be accomplished, and the many advantages of our town and district be placed before the public, by the opinions expressed by a Board of Trade constituted as we are, than by separate and individual efforts.

We have taken up the question of the increase of Mounted Police Force at this point with the Mounted Police authorities, and I am pleased to be able to state that we now have an inspector permanently stationed here, with a sergeant and two constables, and when we consider the enormous expanse of country covered by the police from this point your council has reason to be gratified that their efforts have been so far successful; but the cattle and horse raising industry needs increased protection which the force at the disposal of the officer commanding here is not sufficient to meet, and I would recommend that the council of the Board for the coming year should take up this question and endeavor to get it satisfactorily disposed of.

Owing to the increase in the traffic crossing the river your council has been agitating for increased ferry accomodation, and we would suggest to the council of the present year that the question of a new cable should be taken up, and a ferry put on capable of handling the existing traffic.

We have also by a strong and numerous signed petition, as well as by the representations of your council brought to the notice of the Dominion authorities the absolute necessity of a traffic bridge across the South Saskatchewan river at this point, and we have been so far rewarded that the government has sent an engineer to make surveys and report on the matter. He has reported that a bridge across the river can be built at a cost approximately of $85,000: and I think that if the agitation for this public work, which is becoming more and more of a necessity to this town and district, is kept up and the question prominently put before the Dominion authorities, that we shall at last get our wishes in this matter carried out.

Recently the question has been taken up by your council with regard to building a branch line to connect Medicine Hat with the Grand Trunk Pacific railway system. The railway committee of the Board of Trade has been in correspondence with Mr Wainwright, and pointed out to him the advantage which would be gained by that railway by building a branch line to Medicine Hat, and also the fact that they would have running rights over the Crow's Nest railway. This, I think, is a question of great importance to the future development of this town and district, and seeing that other towns both to the east and west of us are keenly alive to the advantages that would be gained, I would suggest that this question should be kept well to the front during the coming year.

There has been some discussion as to the prospect of the Dominion government placing an experimental farm in this western country, to test the capabilities of the West for fall wheat raising, and the more scientific finishing off of the range cattle for export. The ranching industry this year has had a large surplus of butcher cattle for disposal, and which have been sold for the most part at unremunerative prices, whilst if there had been on hand export cattle in good finished shape, the ranchers would not now be complaining of the dullness of the cattle market and the difficulty of disposing of their beef. Alfalfa has been successfully grown in this district, and if the cultivation of this valuable fodder can only become general, the question of finishing off the beef will in a great measure be solved.

I would like also to point out that during the past year the flour mill here has purchased 15,000 bushels of spring wheat grown in this district; and seeing the success that has attended the growth of fall wheat in the country to the south-east of us it might be advisable to bring this question prominently to the notice of intending immigrants, as we have an enormous territory of the best agricultural land lying close to this town that can be filled with prosperous and progressive farmers.

The committee on public buildings has brought the question of adequate public buildings before the authorities at Ottawa, and I am pleased to be able to announce that a sum of money has been appropriated at Ottawa for this purpose. We have had an inspector from the Department here who has gone over the ground and I think we shall not see this year go by without a public building being built which shall be suitable to and a credit to our growing town.

Your committee, acting in conjunction with the council of this town, sent Mr W. Cousins as a commissioner to the Winnipeg exhibition, and I think that the exhibit that he took with him and the literature concerning our district which he distributed has had the good effect of bringing our many advantages to the quarters where it will do most good. We have already had several enquiries as to the suitability of this town from a manufacturing standpoint.

The question of the exclusion of American currency was discussed by your council and upon the advice of the sub-committee who had the subject in hand it was held in abeyance pending the action of the Board of Trade convention at Calgary, which was held last June.

Nothing definite has been done on this question, and owing to the amount of the American currency in circulation in this town having decreased, I think that no convenience is occuring to the business here.

I have to thank the committee and the various sub-committees for the trouble which they have given to, and the time they have spent on the questions that have been placed in their hands, and I hope that the various questions that we hand over to the council of this year will be handled in as business-like a manner. I would suggest to the coming council that an effort be made to raise sufficient funds to enable them to set apart, a sum that would secure the services of a secretary-treasurer, who could devote a sufficient time to following the correspondence, and keep the resources and advantages of this town and district well before the public.

I trust that we shall have before us a prosperous year, and that we shall see the same increase in growth of our town that we have had during the past four years.

I have the honor to be,
Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
D. MILNE

NEW BUSINESS

Mr F. G. Forster brought up the matter of the appointment of additional police at Medicine Hat, and the giving of fuller power to the officer commanding at this point, and after some discussion it was moved by F. G. Forster and seconded by R. J. Harlow that

Whereas this Board of Trade has several times drawn the attention of the R. N. W. M. P. authorities to the fact that a police patrol is necessary in the Red Deer ranching district, and has also asked for the appointment of a police officer to be located at Medicine Hat,

The Board desires to express its appreciation at the appointment of an inspector to this post.

And draws the attention of the R. N. W. M. P. authorities to the fact that this Board considers that it would be in the interests of the stockmen and others in this district if the officer in command at Medicine Hat was given an additional number of men in order that he could cover the district with still further benefit to the ranching industry.

Some discussion then took place as to the best methods of advertising the town and district.

ASSINIBOIA V. C.P.R.

On Tuesday night the above teams clashed in the second league game of the series. The Assiniboia had a big advantage in weight, the C.P.R. being mostly juniors, but they were game to the finish, and kept the big fellows hustling all the way and deserve great credit for the game they put up. Their weakest spot was point, Boulter who was in that position not showing up very well. At one time the C.P.R. were simply bombarding the Assiniboia goal, but good work by the goal-keeper, Kerr, and the defense generally prevented much score. Glen Turnbull at centre was the shining light on the Assiniboia attack, once he took the puck from goal to goal and scored. Melrose and Bray ably supported him, the former figured in some pretty rushes, and is a dangerous shot. The defense did good work. For the C.P.R. Dan Barker in goal made great stops. Armstrong at cover point played a great game, he broke up many rushes that looked like ending in a goal, and found time to put in a few shots on his own account. T. Finlay who played rover was always in the game and is evidently a comer, he notched three of the four goals. Douglas played centre, and did good work, he is fast and uses his body freely, but got bumped himself on some occasions. Jack Porter right wing, played a good game, but was too light for his check. Day, the other wing man, put in some good shots when he got time to do it. Glen Turnbull notched the first goal of the evening and was responsible for another which Melrose got in about 50 seconds. The C.P.R. rose got in about 50 seconds. The C.P.R. then carried the puck down and gave Kerr something to do, he stopped a couple of hot ones from close in before Armstrong beat him with a long shot. Turnbull did the necessary again for the Assiniboias, he got the rubber right behind his own goal and went through the bunch and scored. Before long Finlay beat Kerr and made the score 3-2 in the Assiniboia's favor, but Turnbull and Melrose soon scored one each, and after some minutes hard work Finlay tallied for the C.P.R., leaving the score at half-time 5-3 in Assiniboia's favor. The second half was if anything faster than the first, the C.P.R. boys worked very hard, but only succeeded in getting one to their opponents two, the final score being 7-4 in favor of the Assiniboia.

The teams were as follows:

Assiniboia		C.P.R.
Kerr	goal	Barker
Campbell	point	Boniler
O'Reilly	cover point	Armstrong
Melrose	rover	T. Finlay
Turnbull	centre	Douglas
H. Bray	right wing	Day
Morrison	left wing	Porter

At Montreal on January 10th judgement was given against the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway in the case tried by a special jury, arising out of a train wreck at Richmond. The widow of Fred Heckett, express messenger, who was killed was awarded $10,000 and the two children $3,000.

BAD STOMACH MAKES BAD BLOOD.

You can't make sweet butter in a foul churn: Every farmer's wife knows this. Your stomach churns and digests the food you eat, and if foul, torpid or out of order, your whole system suffers from blood poisoning. You will have foul breath, coated tongue, bad taste, poor appetite and a whole train of disagreeable symptoms. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which is not a beverage composed of whisky or alcohol, being entirely free from intoxicants, is a great regulator and invigorator of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

"About a year ago I was ill with blood poisoning," writes Miss Eveline Louis, of 89 Walter Street, Buffalo, N. Y. "I had what seemed to be a small cold sore on my lip. It became very angry in appearance and began to spread until it nearly covered my face. I was a frightful sight and could not go outside the house because of my appearance. I used a blood medicine which did not give me any relief. Then I began to take your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I was greatly benefited with the first bottle and after taking the second bottle was completely cured. The erysipelatous eruption disappeared and my blood was cleansed. My complexion is clear and fresh and I have felt better this year than I did for some time before. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is certainly a most remarkable medicine."

Don't accept a substitute for a medicine which performs such cures and which has a uniformly successful record of nearly forty years to its credit. It's an insult to your intelligence for a dealer to try by over-persuasion to palm off upon you in its stead some inferior article with no record to back it up. You know what you want; it is his business to meet that want.

$50,000 GIVEN AWAY, in copies of The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, a book that sold to the extent of 500,000 copies a few years ago, at $1.50 per copy. Last year we gave away $50,000 worth of these invaluable books. This year we shall give away $50,000 worth of them. Will YOU share in this benefit? If so, send only 21 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only for book in stiff paper covers, or 50 stamps for cloth-bound. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Constipation although a little ill begets big ones if neglected. Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure constipation.

HOCKEY.

COSMOPOLITAN VS. C.P.R.

On Thursday night the "Cos" and the C.P.R. came together in the third match of the season. A fair crowd gathered in the rink, and though at times they saw good hockey, the game was marred by one or two regretable occurrences.

Glen Turnbull was chosen as referee, and appeared to be filling his duties in an impartial manner, but did not satisfy a bunch of C.P.R. supporters, who evidently thought he was favoring the Cosmopolitan.

About half-way through the first half the puck was carried down to the Hotelmen's goal, and Watkin's lifted it out. It hit the rafters, and came down in front of Ray Turnbull, who took it, ran down, and scored. The C.P.R. protested against the goal being allowed, claiming, rightly, we think, it was scored from an offside, but the referee did'nt see it, and allowed the goal. The C.P.R. boys appeared to be willing to go ahead, but some spectators persuaded them to go off the ice, and after about ten minutes of valuable time had been wasted, the game was restarted with Vic Ready as referee. This created bad feeling among the players, and consequently the game had a tendency to become rough.

The C.P.R. boys, who were the ones who had the kick, were game to stay with it, and would have had they been left alone. Lack of space forbids a detailed report of the game. The following will give some idea how it went.

At about ten minutes past seven Referee Trunbull placed the puck between Douglas and Ray Turnbull's sticks and the "Cos" jumped into the game with a rush and Turnbull sent in a hot shot but missed from an offside in front of the C.P.R. goal, Barker lifted it down and Douglas tried a shot but there was nothing doing. Turnbull secured it rushed and beat Barker with a fine shot. From the face off the Hotel boys rushed again and gave Barker something to do. Armstrong went down the ice in good style but lost the puck and Turnbull took it back, offside by C.P.R. goal. Roche secured and shot but Barker made a fine stop and it was sent back. Then Turnbull and Davies made a nice run from which Turnbull scored making the score 2-0 in favor of the Cosmopolitan.

Hay broke up a nice rush and Armstrong took it down but F. Charboneau sent it back, Finlay tried a lift. F. Charboneau and Hay exchanged lifts. Turnbull secured and made a fine run, and shot wide, but he secured the puck again behind the goal, and knocked it through under the net. Hay swiped at it and knocked it back into his own goal. Score 3-0.

The C.P.R. then took a hand and gave Watkins something to keep him warm, he lifted the puck to the rafters and Ray Turnbull secured rushed and scored. Right here the trouble referred to above began, which ended in the C.P.R. going off the ice and the changing of tue referee. A short time after the game re-started, and after rushes by Armstrong, Turnbull, Finlay and O'Donnell Finlay shot, it was blocked but Porter secured and put it through 4-1. Armstrong shoots, missess, offside by C.P.R. goal and Roche secured and scored again for the "Cos" 5-1. Davis missed a couple of shots and Barker relieved half time was called without further score.

In the second half the C.P.R. boys worked hard and for about ten minutes appeared to have their opponents going, but couldn't quite manage to score. Watkins made some record stops and saved what looked certain goals. During this half the Cosmopolitan notched two. Douglas secured one for the C.P.R. leaving the final score 7-2.

The C.P.R. boys played a great game but the "Cos" were too heavy for them.

The teams lined up as follows:

COSMOPOLITAN VS. BANKERS.

A fair crowd gathered on Friday night to witness the hockey match between the Bankers and the Cosmopolitan, and they saw one of the best matches of the season. The teams were well matched as regards weight and speed but the Bankers proved better stick handlers. The game was clean and fast and there was something doing all the time. The Bankers presented a different line up, than when they played the Fire Brigade. Binning replaced Gigot in goal, A. Taylor took Fleming's place at point and Vic Ready played left wing in place of Binning. The change was for the good and as represented last night the Bankers have one of the strongest teams in the league. For the Cosmopolitan Benny Watkins, in goal played a great game and stopped shot after shot. R. Turnbull was the most effective on the forward line. Charboneau Bros. on the defence did good work. Earl Porter, Vic Ready and Webster were stars for the Bankers, while the rest of the bunch worked all they knew to win. C. Krauss made a very efficient and impartial referee.

The game:

The "Cos" rushed from the face off but Webster relieved, it was sent back and Taylor lifted it out and Porter got it but was offside. The puck was faced of in front of the Bankers goal. Webster took it down and for a minute the Bank made it hot for the opposing defence but Turnbull rushed it down; he was stopped and there was a hot scrimmage about three feet from the Bankers goal, and in spite of their efforts was finally landed in the net. First blood for the "Cos." The puck was once more faced off and Porter securing, made a nice run, but lost it, face off by "Cos" goal. Ready secured, and made a good rush, but E. Charboneau lifted the rubber down and Webster returned it. The Cosmopolitan now pressed and Turnbull shot, but missed and Webster sent it down the ice. Porter secured and got clean through the defence and scored. A fine run. The "Cos" carried the puck down from the face off, but Webster relieved and White tried a shot. E. Charboneau lifted to one of his own men who took it, offside.

Porter made a good run, lost it, and tried a shot but missed. Porter shot wide, and Davies rushed, but Webster relieved him of the puck, and lifted it right into the net, putting the Bankers one to the good. Shortly after this, and after some up and down play, Vic Ready beatthe defense, and scored the fourth goal of the game. Bankers, 3; Cos, 1. Half-time.

The game was started again, and the Cos scored in about 1 minute by some good combination work.

The Bankers went to work with a will after this, and Pingle rushed and just missed a good shot. Turnbull carried it back and shot, but missed. Ready and Webster combined in a good run, Webster shooting wide. It was sent back, but Taylor came down with it, and Pingle tried another shot. The Cos. now pressed, and made things live ly for the Bankers, but the defence was too strong for them to penetrate. Porter rushed, put in a hot shot that glanced off E. Charboneau's pads to the corner. It was passed out, and Ready got it and scored with a fine side shot. Charboneau was ruled off, and Porter scored again. 5-2. Time was nearly up, but the Bankers continued to press, and Watkins stopped some hot ones off Pingle and Porter, and time was called with play in the centre of the ice. Final score: Bankers, 5; Cosmopolitans, 2.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted.

The following accounts were presented:

On the motion of Messrs Drinnan and Sissons they were referred to the finance committee.

THE GAS WELLS

Mr J. A. Grant said he understood the council intended to sink another deep gas well, or deepen one of the existing wells, and if so, he would like to talk terms for doing this work. He would soon be through with the C.P.R. well, and would be moving his drilling plant to another part of the country, but if he could make an arrangement with the council, he would like to take up the work here before moving the drill away. He would make a contract to drill a new well, or would hire his men and plant to the council at so much per day, but he would not care to contract for deepening either of the existing wells, but would do it by day work or hire the plant.

In reply to Councillor Drinnan he said he would rent the outfit for $20 per day.

Replying to Dr. Smyth, he said there was great uncertainty in lifting the casing from existing wells, and his experience in that direction had been expensive.

The Mayor promised that the council would consider the matter, and let Mr Grant know in about a week what they proposed to do.

THE WOOLLEN MILL

A letter read from the Woollen Mills company complaining that they thought the council was not treating them fairly in taxing the property this year. The ex mayor and town solicitor had informed them that every consideration would be shown them. They would not be treated so in the East, and the town was not encouraging the establishment of new industries.

The Mayor said he thought the company had misunderstood the action of the council in the matter.

Councillor Penhale said he thought they mentioned to Mr Tweed that if the company began next year, there would be no difficulty about the taxes.

Dr. Smyth urged that the council should do all they could to help the mill to start by dealing generously with them.

Eventually the letter was referred to the committee on new industries.

TELEPHONES

A letter was read from Mayor Urquhart, Toronto, enclosing a petition in favor of amending all charters granted to telephone companies, so as to provide that all poles of such companies shall not hereafter be erected, or conduits constructed on any road or street in a municipality without the consent of the council, and another petition asking parliament to take over the long distance telephone business, and operate the same in a manner similar to that in which the postal service is now being carried on.

It was proposed by Dr. Smyth that the council endorse the petition, and the Mayor and Secretary-treasurer be empowered to sign and seal the same, and this was agreed to.

A COMPLAINT AS TO AN ASSESSMENT

A letter was read from Jas. T. Bridge complaining his assessment was too high.

The secretary-treasurer said the council could do nothing in the matter, as Mr Bridge did not take advantage of the Revision court.

On the motion of Councillor Drinnan and Penhale, the letter was referred to the assessment committee to report upon.

A letter from Dr. Smith accepting the position of health officer, was ordered to be filed.

A letter and telegram were read from George Stimson & Co., stating they had sold town debentures at par.

A letter was read from Constable Miniszewsky asking for a new suit of clothes, or compensation for wearing his own, or an increase of salary. The letter was dealt with later on.

A letter was read from Alf. Keonig, asking for the position to look after the town herd next spring. It was referred to the licensing committee.

A letter was read from the secretary of the Fire Brigade asking for an increased rate of pay, the present pay of $1 per hour for the first two hours at a fire and 50c. for each succeeding hour being less than any other volunteer brigade is paid. Several other things required were stated, and it was suggested that a syren whistle be placed at the power house.

On the motion of Messrs Stewart and Smith it was referred to the fire, water and light committee with power to act.

The Secretary-Treasurer reported that subject to the approval of the Council, he had appointed Mr. Nicholas Charlton as his assistant.

On the motion of Messrs Drinnan and DesBrisay it was referred to the finance committee to report.

A report from the gas committee stated that they had ordered a tapping machine. The action of the committee was endorsed, and the report adopted.

STREET LIGHTING.

The committee recommended the council to borrow $2000 to purchase 40 additional street lamps to complete the street lighting, and to submit a bylaw for that purpose. Fifty lamps had been estimated for, 14 were in operation, and an additional 40 would light the town thoroughly, and leave four in hand.

On the motion of Messrs DesBrisay and Sissons the recommendation of the committee was adopted.

The gas committee reported re Mr Cross's application for gas to burn lime, recommending he be supplied with gas at 7c. per bushel of lime burned, that he be supplied preferably fram the Hord well, as there were no buildings there, and on condition that economical burners be used. If Mr Cross wished to be supplied by meter a special rate to be made.

On the motion of Messrs. Penhale and Drinnan the report was adopted.

The committee also recommend the purchase of a meter tester, and that no more meters be bought until both kinds had been tested.

Coun. Drinnan said there were objections to both kinds, and he moved that the report be adopted. This was seconded by Coun. Penhale and agreed to.

A letter was read from the Equitable Meter Co. re meters, and asking for information as to action of gas in cold weather. It was ordered that Clerk give necessary information.

A letter was read from the Western Canadian Immigration Association, Minneapolis, suggesting that the Council advertise the town through the Secretary of the Association, who was handling, without commission, the advertising of several towns.

NEW CITY HALL.

The report of the Public Works Committee recommended the Council to build a municipal building, of either brick or cement blocks, for the purposes of a town hall, fire hall, etc. etc., at a cost of $18,000, plans to be advertised for only the plan accepted to be paid for.

Coun. Smyth moved the adoption of the report and that the Public Works Committee have power in the matter of advertising for plans.

Coun. Stewart seconded and it was agreed to.

SIDEWALKS.

The Public Works Committee having raised the question of sidewalks it was moved by Coun. Smyth, seconded by Coun. Stewart and carried that the committee look into the matter and make a report to the next meeting.

SEWERAGE SCHEME.

The report of the Committee re preliminary plans for a sewerage scheme, was read. Mr. Jno. Galt, C. E., had been in town and after a casual look over the place had said he thought $35000 would cover the cost.

A letter was read from Mr. Chipman, C. E., saying his terms for making all necessary surveys, taking levels and preparing a tpographical plan $150.00 For designing the sewer system and preparing a general report, an additional $250. If the Council preferred a local engineer to take the levels etc., under his directions, the charge would $250. He could send his assistant from Regina to do this next month.

A letter was read from Mr. John Galt C.E., stating he would undertake all the necessary engineering work, obtain levels and other data from which to make reports with preliminary plans and estimates of cost for a fee of $200. In the event of construction going on, this amount to be deducted from his regular fee, which would be 5 per cent on total cost of construction. This would include the placing of a competent engineer in charge under his direction at his own expense coupled with periodical visits from himself.

After some conversation Coun. Stewart proposed that Mr. Galt's offer be accepted and he be asked to make an estimate on the terms of his letter.

Coun. Drinnan seconded and it was carried.

The Police Committe recommended an increase in the salary of the chief and constable Miniszwsky, $5 per month in each case, the latter being re-appointed as night man and to be under the supervision of the chief.

Coun. Smyth raised a discussion as to whether people had a right to erect buildings where they pleased without inspection or control, and it was decided to consult the town solicitor as to the powers the inspector (Mr. Porter) possesses in the matter, and with a view to frame an amended by-law on the subject.

Coun. Drinnan gave notice to introduce a by-law to borrow $2000 for street lighting purposes.

On motion of Coun. Smyth, Coun. Sissons was appointed to look into the position of affairs as to the drill hall to be built here, and report to next meeting.

MAYORESS ENTERTAINS.

A letter was read from Mrs. Forster, inviting the council and press to refreshments at her house. The gentlemen invited accordingly adjourned to the Mayor's residence where they gathered around the festive board, and spent a very pleasant time, speeches being made by Messrs. Abbott, McMann, Penhale, Drinnan, DesBrisay, Smyth, Sissons, Harris and Tyrrell.

THE SPENCER CATTLE CASE

The Commissioner appointed to take evidence in this case, (W. C. Harris, Medicine Hat), held a sitting at the Park Hotel, Great Falls, Montana, U.S., last Friday, when the two witnesses, John Rice and Mathew Shannon, who failed to appear before Judge Burbridge, of the Exchequer Court here, were duly examined and cross-examined by the counsel engaged, and this closed the case so far as the taking of evidence was concerned.

Mr C. R. Mitchell, Medicine Hat, and Mr T. C. Johnstone, K.C., Regina, appeared for the Respondent (The King), and Mr A. E. Philp, Brandon, represented the suppliants (Spencer Brothers) Mr W. A. Taylor, of Coutts, manager of the Canadian Ranch, was also present.

The Commissioner will report and Counsel will submit arguments, to Ottawa, by the 31st January.

The editor of the Eye Opener, at Calgary, must surely have been hoaxed by someone, for, in the last issue of that paper, a very erroneous resume of the case appeared, together with the statement that the action was concluded on 12th December. It is almost needless to add that the decision of the Judge will not be received for some time.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING.

A regular meeting of the council was held last evening. Present—F. G. Forster, Mayor, (presiding,) councillors J. K. Drinnan, H. Stewart, A. DesBrisay, C. E. Smyth; W. N. Adsit, town clerk; C. R. Mitchell, town solicitor.

The minutes of the last regular meeting and of a special meeting were read and confirmed.

DEPUTATIONS

A deputation from the board of trade consisting of Messrs W. Cousins, president, W. T. Finlay, M.L.A., F. L. Crawford, and David Milne, appeared before the council to ask them to make some concession to the Woollen Mill to assist the company in starting the concern this year.

Mr Cousins introduced the party and explained the object of the delegation and said that Mr Tweed had been expected to head the deputation and be the spokesman, and as he knew most about the subject, the delegation were at a disadvantage because, unfortunately, Mr Tweed has not been able to attend. Mr Finlay would, however, state the case.

Mr Finlay said that he spoke from the citizens standpoint, and was there to ask the council to make some concession to the Woollen Mill either in the way of exemption from taxes or free gas. This is a new company, and he believed the people of the town, he had conversed with a great many on the subject, were fully in favor of the council doing all they could to help to start this, their first industry. He would suggest a flat rate of say $200 a year for gas. The company intended to put in electric light for lighting, so it would only be a matter of letting them have gas for heating for say five years, and if it would be the means of starting the industry it would be a very great thing for the town and neighbourhood.

Mr Milne explained fully the difficulties which a young company in a new country had to contend with, and especially the woollen industry at the present time, and he urged the council to assist in the effort to get this company started. There was a general sentiment around town that something should be done to move it in some shape or form.

Mr Crawford thought it very manifest that the woollen mill standing as it is, was a monument of non-success, especially in a town possessing such natural advantages as Medicine Hat. He thought the no-bonus clause in the town charter should be struck out. Bonusing was sometimes a bad thing but a clause such as they had was a worse thing, and accounted for the town not having gone ahead as fast as it might.

Mr Cousins said the town was in sympathy with the objects of the deputation.

Mr Finlay, you are talking about advertising the town, you could get no better advertisement than by supporting this industry and running it by natural gas. That would give the town an advertisement worth thousands of dollars.

The Mayor said he thought he could promise the delegation that the council would give the matter every consideration.

The point was raised as to whether the council had not distrained on some of the machinery for rates.

The Mayor and Mr Drinnan were understood to say it was done as a matter of form to protect the council, and if the mill started the council would not proceed any further with it.

Another deputation attended to ask the council for a low rate on gas from the new well to a company being started to manufacture pressed brick. It was explained that the deputation appeared on behalf of certain clients to ask a small consideration of the council for the purpose of holding out a little inducement to a company wishing to establish themselves in this town for the purpose of manufacturing pressed brick. They had had the clay tested and found it very satisfactory for the purpose. This company would go ahead immediately. They had the clay and the market for the manufactured article. The company, he might say, possessed a splendid up-to-date plant at present in Manitoba, but the clay they had there was not satisfactory, and the plant would be at once moved to the west and would be put down here if some concessions could be got. It would be located about half a mile outside the town limits. They would certainly come in here if they could be sure of the gas, and while starting with brick making, they intended to go into other articles, such as sewer pipe, tiling, etc. If the council would grant them gas for five or ten years it would be the means of starting an industry that would employ 50 to 75 hands.

Mr. Drinnan—What would be the cost of piping the gas?

The deputation could not say. They did no figuring on that. The company were willing to pay all the cost of piping it. They would like a lease of the new well which will only be required by the town in case of emergency, and they would be willing for the town to cut them off at any time if the gas was required by the town.

Mr Drinnan thought the new well would be required for the town next winter. The present one was taxed all it could do.

The deputation said the brick company would only require it in the summer.

The Mayor said the Council would like something in writing, and they would have to consult the town solicitor as to whether they could supply a company outside the town limits.

Mr Stewart thought a company like this would have a right to look for as good treatment as the woollen mill or any other.

The question was referred to the new industries committee.

CORRESPONDENCE AND REPORTS.

Various letters and reports were read, but none of them contained anything of much public interest except those from Mr. W. E. Porter on the gas. He stated they were again out of meters, and as applications for gas connections were continually coming in he asked for 75 more meters.

The gas committee reported a contract with Mr. J. A. Grant for the sinking of another deep gas well.

The new industries committee recommended sending a deputation to Ottawa re Capital.

All reports were adopted.

BYELAWS.

Mr. Drinnan introduced Byelaw No. 88, to raise money for extension of natural gas system, and it was read a first and second time.

Mr Stewart introduced byelaw No. 89, in regard to purchase of New Edisburgh gas works, etc., and it was given a first and second reading.

Mr Drinnan drew attention to the bylaw re cleaning up the town, and said the health committee should at once enforce it fully. He would also draw attention to question of putting up the names of the streets and numbering of houses, at the next meeting.

The following accounts were presented:—

G. Percy Blythe, revising and re-arranging and opening up the books of Medicine Hat	$125.00
W. S. Gilbert, half year's salary as auditor	25.00
C. S. Pingle	1.25
James Rae	53.35
Gas Supplies & Constrtion Co.	26.65
W. B. Marshall Co.	4.20
Do.	2.54

On motion of Stewart and Smyth they were referred to the finance committee.

AUDITORS' REPORT

The report of the town auditors, Mr. G. Percy Blythe and Mr. W. R. Gilbert, was read, from which it appeared the books had been put in order on the double entry system, and statements were presented showing the financial position of the town at the present time.

Mr Drinnan—There is one item which I think we should discuss in committee of the whole.

It was resolved accordingly, and all but members of the council retired. On being re-admitted half-an-hour later,

Mr Drinnan, chairman of the finance committee, said—The audit of the books shows, according to the report, a deficit in the cash on hand of $433.53, and we would like an explanation from the auditors and Mr Adsit if they can throw any light upon it.

Mr Blythe—Gentlemen, as far as the audit is concerned, I may state right away at once I made no actual audit at the end of June, for one reason was I was not appointed until the end of July. I placed the books upon the double entry system. Mr Gilbert checked over the additions and went through the books at that time, but whether he actually counted the cash on that particular date I don't know. I went to work to re-write the books and that took me practically until the end of June. At the end of December there was an actual count taken of the cash on hand. Then the books were thoroughly audited and we went over them again. The books were not handed over until the second checking had been made. I would say that there has been no attempt on Mr. Adsit's part to conceal or to alter the books in any way. It is simply that there is a deficit, and it was not attempted to be covered in any way How it arose under the system in which the cash book was kept, it is impossible to tell. The cash from two sources of revenue would not be posted sometimes until a month after received, and some portions of it paid into the bank. To place it, the deficit, into any particular month or day is not possible.

Mr DesBrisay—Is there any possibility of your having paid out any money for freight and not marked it down.

Mr Adsit—No. I don't think so. The freight bill would have to get lost. I would have to forget to put it down and the bill would have to get lost, both. That would be a co-incidence. I would sometimes pay freight and not make a cheque until afterwards.

Mr DesBrisay—Did you always issue a cheque.

THE "CAPITAL" QUESTION.

Calgary and Edmonton are making supreme efforts to be made capital of the new Western Province and the former bases her claim chiefly upon the fact that she has the larger population in and around the city. If population governed such matters why is it that Montreal is not the Dominion capital; or if not Montreal, why is not Toronto, or Quebec? Each in regard to population outnumbers Ottawa many times yet Ottawa is the capital! There is no reason whatever why Medicine Hat should not be the new Western capital and there are a dozen reasons why this place should be selected in preference to either Calgary or Edmonton.

Protect Ranching Interests.

It is important to ranchers that the western boundary of the new province should not be placed so far west that it will cut up the ranching country, and every effort should be made to get this point driven home at Ottawa. Unfortunately eastern members, who will have such a large voice in settling this matter, have very little idea of western conditions and requirements. Much will, therefore, depend upon the western members in this respect and they are a good deal divided no doubt and may forget the welfare of the country as a whole, in their anxiety to serve their own constituents. We would draw their attention particularly to the statement at the beginning of this article and strongly urge that the ranching interests of the West should not be sacrificed as they will be to a large extent if the ranching country is cut up into two parts by a divisional line running through the heart of it. The Medicine Hat Board of Trade have sent an urgent message to the member for East Assiniboia upon the subject and we hope Mr. Scott will use his powerful influence on this very point and secure the ranching country intact for the western province.

FOR A WATER CART.

Now that the spring is approaching and the dust will soon be blowing we want to urge the Council not to forget the question of providing a water cart for sprinkling the streets. The Council have very important matters under consideration, we know, and we are just giving them this reminder lest the subject be forgotton or lost sight of among more weighty matters.

C.P.R. CLAIMS DEPARMENT.

The claims department of the C.P.R., has lately been entirely remodelled and the changes made are designed for the more rapid handling of all and every claim preferred against the Company. Hitherto all claims arising between Fort William and the coast were, we believe, dealth with at Winnipeg, and this often led to delays which although sometimes unavoidable, were not appreciated by the claimants. Now there will be several divisions and Mr. W. H. D'Arcy, who was at the head of the department at Winnipeg has become general claims agent, with jurisdiction from Winnipeg to the coast. Being relieved of much local detail he will be able to give attendance at any point specially requiring his attention, and the new arrangement cannot but work toward the quicker dispatch of all legitimate claims, to the advantage of both the Company and the public.

A Hero All the Same.

There are many to be found who would brand the brave defenders of Port Arthur as cowards, but it is unfair to view the Russians who held the fort the best part of a year as anything but brave men. That General Stossel was well surrounded may be guessed by his statement that he knew nothing of Kuropatkin's defeats and retreats since October 6th, in fact he insists that his forces were supported by the hope of relief from Kuropatkin and his army. It seems almost incredible that the Port Arthur garrison should have been kept in such ignorance of the progress of the war, but such was the condition. The Japs did their work well and thoroughly and though the defence was stubborn the result was inevitable.

Will Russia Stoop.

Rumours of peace proposals have been current during the past week, and at the same time came reports of great preparations on the part of the opposing armies for another great battle, and another Russian fleet is said to have been dispatched for the seat of war. But internal troubles may force the Russians to consider peace proposals. The home troubles are by no means small and the indications point to radical changes. The bolder tone of the opponents of tyranny, the resignation of high officials and the conciliatory tone of the Czar, all point to change Whether the concessions to be granted will satisfy the masses is doubtful, as the latter, conscious of the weakening of the bureaucraticrule, may press formore thorough reforms than the rulers feel disposed to grant. If Russia stoops to terms with Japan, it will be, it is thought, because of desiring a freer hand in dealing with internal difficulties.

Note and Comment

By OBSERVER

A country farmer, visiting at a market town was pestered by the agent of a bicycle dealer to buy a machine "I'd rather spend my money on a cow," said the farmer. "But what an idiot you would look riding to town on a cow," urged the agent, "Perhaps so," replied the farmer "but not half such an idiot as I'd look trying to milk a bicycle."

I hear that the C.P.R., will utilise their splendid flow of natural gas to the full and will probably extend their shops at this point. It would be surprising if they did not. The C.P.R., officials know a good thing when they see it and they well know the value of the gas for power purposes. Their well properly utilised is worth more than half a million dollars to the Company. I hear one of the uses they will put it to will be the firing of the engines in the yards. Instead of using wood for kindling they will turn on the gas through a hose, set a light to it, and so start the engine fires quickly and cheaply.

It is stated that the C.P.R., use fifty tons of coal per day in their shops. The cost of this and the labor and expense of handling so much coal can all be saved by using the gas.

Medicine Hat asks to be made the capital of the new western province and given fair play, it has as good a chance as either Calgary or Edmonton. One thing, however, is certain and that is that the friends of other western towns will endeavor to have the eastern boundary as near Medicine Hat as they can so that we may not be able to lay any claim to being a central point. The eastern boundary line should be not further West than Swift Current so that the ranching country may be preserved intact in one province.

* * * *

If Calgary wants to be fair towards Edmonton, says the Regina Standard, why do not the Board of Trade ask to have the provisional capital of the Albertan province placed at Red Deer, and thereby allow an even start in the great tug-of-war? Why did they choose the mountain fastness of British Columbia boundary as neutral ground?

The late Sir John A. Macdonald when importuned by a delegation from Strathroy, where the majority had presistently opposed him, asked: "What the —— has Strathroy done for me?"

What Sir Wilfred may say to the Calgary delegation remains to be heard.

The Germs of Catarrh

Not only attack the passages of the head and throat but finally reach the lungs and cause consumption. Nothing destroys catarrh so quickly as fragrant healing Catarrhozone which relieves the cough, stops the discharge, takes all soreness from the throat. "I consider Catarrhozone has no equal as a cure for catarrh and lung trouble" writes Jas. D. Wetherell of Brighton. "It cured me after many good doctors failed to even relieve my trouble. Catarrhozone can't fail to cure—it is guaranteed. Two months treatment $1.00; trial size 25c.

A PRACTICAL JOKE.

Good Trick With a Hat Which Will Raise a Laugh.

Practical joking, as a rule, is objectionable and not to be encouraged, but in the following no evil results can possibly accrue, and the "victim" often enjoys the joke as much as those who planned it. You might try it on your papa some time, but don't under any circumstances use your mamma's hat, for you might disarrange the trimming, and that might be a bad thing for both you and the hat. The trick is performed as follows:

THE HAT AND STICK TRICK.

Take an old brush and saw off some six inches of its handle. Into the shorter piece insert a needle headforemost and, placing the hat centrally between the two pieces, press the needle well home. Now, apparently, the handle passes through the crown of the hat, the needle keeping all securely in position. Place in a corner or elsewhere and await results.

Another way of playing the same trick is to take any piece of stick, roughly paint one end, saw through the middle and fix "through" a hat with a needle exactly as before. Hang this on a peg, as shown in our illustration. The victim, thinking his hat ruined, will be most angry at first, but as soon as he tries to release his hat the trick is discovered, and his frown is certain to give place to a smile.—Exchange.

A GAME FOR BOYS.

The Way the "Master of the Drawbridge" Is Played.

The "master of the drawbridge" is a game for boys that requires little preparation.

With a sharp stick a piece of ground about nine feet wide and about twenty feet long is marked off. This represents the drawbridge of the castle of Sir Montgomery of Skye. One of the players is the warden of the castle gate. He stands on the bridge. At the other end of it stand the players, who represent foemen desiring to enter the castle.

They can only go on the bridge one by one. The foemen wheel their imaginary steeds and gallop up and down, making feints at charging to bewilder the warder until suddenly one of them spurts and races up the bridge. Once he is there he must not run off the bridge again, but he may dodge the warder in any way he pleases so long as he stays on the bridge. He may run zigzag or retreat or duck or do anything else that may enable him to slip past the guardian of the castle.

The warder must touch the foeman three times before he can claim that he has made a capture. If he does it the captured foe becomes warder and the old warder joins the besiegers.

Big Name For Little Doll.

The children of the Passamaquoddy tribe of Indians play with a doll not more than a couple of inches high. In fact, it is smaller than the word which means doll, for this word is "amskudahekanek." One had almost rather go without make believe babies than to be obliged to call them by such an outlandish name. Don't you think so? Just fancy a wee papoose crying, "I want a amskudahekanek!"

A Clever Dog.

Rags, a dog owned by a bookkeeper in a tannery at Middletown, N. Y., daily carries the deposits to the bank, allowing no one but his master and the bank officials to handle the purse. Although friendly and playful with everybody at other times, the moment he gets the passbook he forgets all play and attends strictly to business.

Curious Tree of Tibet.

In Tibet there is a most curious tree known as the tree of the thousand images. Its leaves are covered with well defined characters of the Tibetan alphabet.

A Certain Boy.

He doesn't like to go to bed,
And getting up is worse;
To washing, too, I've heard it said,
He's just as much averse.

And as for school and studying
When he would rather roam,
He hates it more than anything
But doing jobs at home.

I must admit that it is true,
Though 'tis a sorry boast,
Whatever he is told to do
Is what he hates the most.

I do suppose that if he chose
What he should do all day
He'd play and eat awhile, and then
He'd eat awhile and play.

—Ann Fitzhugh Maclean in Men and Women.

German Teaches Welsh.

It is a notable fact that the best Welsh grammar is written in German, by Dr Sattler.

A Perfect Altruist.

Charles Kingsley was once talking of his wife to the mother of Canon Tetley of Bristol cathedral.

"She is the sweetest, kindest hearted woman in the world," he said enthusiastically. "Why, Mrs. Tetley, if my wife were going to be executed her first anxiety would be that any one who wished to see it might get a good place."

JAPAN'S WAR RESOURCES.

Can Call 1,500,000 Men Into Military Service on Short Notice.

Jihei Hashiguchi, writing about Japan's fitness for a long struggle, describes her military resources as follows:

"Outsiders are not able to form an accurate opinion of the real condition of the military resources of Japan. Even the sympathetic people of the west are in the dark on the subject. I have been informed by an intimate friend, who has been in the service of the Japanese army for three years, that Japan can call into service at short notice 1,500,000 men of strong physique, besides the large national guard, for, according to his information, 539,282 men—which was the number eligible for conscription in 1901—had no objectionable physical defect and belonged to the first class, as shown by physical examination. The men who belonged to the second class had merely slight defects in the eyes or in some other bodily function. As for the naval force, 27,865 men, the total number of seamen in the active and the first and second reserve services, are of the best physique. In case of necessity more than double this number can be recruited from the merchant marine as well as from the eager applicants for admission to the service. One million five hundred thousand is a large number, but it is a small portion of 8,034,093, which is the number of males from seventeen to forty who were available for conscription service in 1898.

"Foreigners are apt to suppose that the flower of the Japanese soldiers and sailors are necessarily the young men of the samurai class, on whom too much eulogy has been already lavished. True, the samurai class have long been the flower of Japanese fighters, and, indeed, most of the generals and admirals and other high officers are still of the samurai class, but the rank and file of the army and of the navy to-day are composed more of the plebeians than of the patrician samurai class. It is undeniable that the flower of the Japanese fighters are now at the front. Among the dead in the battles of Yalu, Nanshau, Telissu, Port Arthur and Liaoyang are included some of the best men in the service. Japan can ill afford to lose these men at the front.

"If the slaughter at Liaoyang be repeated in many other battles the effective strength of the Japanese army will be greatly lessened. But, in the opinion of many eminent authorities, assuming Japan's continued success, the active warfare will not last much longer after Harbin falls into the hands of the Japanese, although minor details of the war may continue to make slight troubles. Then Japan will not need to maintain such an enormous force at the front. A greater part of the army will be withdrawn, leaving a sufficient force to guard the frontiers of Manchuria, while China, to which Manchuria will be returned, will send her own troops to supersede the Japanese soldiers."

Noted French Diplomat.

M. Theophile Delcasse, French Minister of Foreign Affairs, to whose diplomacy, it is asserted, a clash between Great Britain and Russia over the North Sea incident was averted, is one of the most brilliant and successful diplomats of Europe. It was M. Delcasse who brought about the Anglo-Franco entente cordiale, the most important diplomatic feat of the twentieth century.

M. THEOPHILE DELCASSE.

M. Delcasse began his career as a political journalist and was for awhile attached to the staff of La Republique Francaise under Gambetta. He then became secretary to a Deputy and on his employer's death married the widow and succeeded to the representation of the constituency. Since that date his advancement has been rapid.

In politics M. Delcasse has been described as an "enlightened opportunist." Since entering the French Chamber in 1889 he has made his power felt in that body. M. Delcasse is in his fifty-third year.

Sailing the Air.

Air sailing may be only a dream, but it is a very persistent one, and it can be said that steady progress is being made. While the interest of the general public in the tests made is centred in the spectacular features, the inventors and manipulators of airships take a serious view of the matter and improve upon their failures.

Belgium's Public House Record.

Belgium, where public libraries are almost unknown, enjoy 190,000 public houses. That means one public house for thirty-six inhabitants or one public house for twelve men above seventeen years of age, the publican included. During the last fifty years the population has increased 50 per cent. and the number of public houses 258 per cent.

Humor and Philosophy

GETTING THE WORST OF IT.

This is a world of pain and wrath
And everything but money,
For disappointments line our path
As thick as flies in honey.
Around the corner, like as not,
Is some misfortune lurking;
We drop a nickel in the slot
And find it isn't working.

And that's the way it is through life;
In spite of all our dreaming
And cogitating with our wife
And sitting up and scheming.
Our plans like country eggs are laid
Just where the soil seems fertile,
But at the finish I'm afraid
They vanish or turn turtle.

The careful plans by which we try
To gather in much treasure
Turn out about six inches shy
And hardly cut to measure.
Knocks patter on our heads like rain,
We wonder for a minute
If there is no such word as gain,
And we are never in it.

But everything does not fall through,
For it is this way, brothers,
We take the good things as our due
And grumble at the others.
The favors that come down the pike,
We never see them double;
It's sort of natural to like
To linger o'er the trouble.

What Could He Say?

When the governor of North Carolina said to the governor of South Carolina, "Governor, it is a long time between irrigation congresses," history does not record what the governor of South Carolina said in reply.

He may have made some offhand remark about the weather or have turned the conversation into the dry old tariff channel for all that we know from the records. One man's guess as to what he said is as good as another's. All that a curious person can do is to put himself in the place of the governor of South Carolina and think what he would have said. It doesn't seem like much of a problem, still we can imagine the predicament of the governor of South Carolina if he happened to be out of change and was not on friendly terms with the bartender.

Oh, the Change!

When election is o'er, and we know the fate
Of the man who ran as a candidate,
No longer he welcomes you then from afar
And comes with the deadly campaign cigar
For a grasp of your hand, to inquire once again
For the health of the children and Mary Jane.
Now when he meets you perhaps he stops,
But he's lost all interest in your crops
And the size of your hogs and the price of hay,
But he makes an excuse to get away.
As the days pass on in a steady flow
More distant and haughty these gentlemen grow,
And when the snow begins to fly
They never speak as they pass by.

If it is the first drink that causes all the trouble, a wise man will cut it out and start in on the second.

And she did. She marked it down from twenty-eight to twenty-two.

UP TO DATE MODES

Reads the Latest Hat Trimming—A Development in Ceintures.

A very curious fashion which has made its appearance of late is that of wearing a ceinture of black taffeta with a colored costume. To accompany it there is usually a rosette of black taffeta worn on one side of the corsage, and sometimes the same is repeated on the sleeves. The effect is not always of the happiest, especially when the gown is trimmed with different colored material. It is doubtful whether this rosette vogue will be of long duration.

Beads are perhaps the most important millinery novelty seen lately, and they are to be found encircling the crowns of some smart hats in roped effects. These ropes are of different colored beads, each bead about the size of a large pearl and designed in every and any color that harmonizes with the hat. Some of the ropes in bright colors are too garish to be in really good taste, but a pretty example is found in the shape of a brown hat pointed in front and composed of gathered tulle adorned with a single string of brown pearls wound around the crown. This wreath is decorative without being at all eccentric.

The chic toque illustrated is of chestnut brown taffeta and velvet. The silk makes the draped crown, and the velvet is maneuvered into corded puffings about the brim. A green velvet drapery is arranged feather fashion at one side.

Things Which Are Needed by the Woman Who Motors.

Although everybody is not the happy possessor of a motor car, there are few women in these progressive days who do not number among their friends or relatives some one more blessed than themselves by fate, so that it has become almost a necessity to include garments suitable to this pursuit among the items of a well equipped wardrobe.

The new motor coats are made of tweed, cloth and even leather. Indeed leather as a decorative feature is a great deal used on motor garments in the form of pipings, buttons, collar and cuffs. Sometimes it is applied in scroll designs, in which case the leather is embossed or cut into conventional patterns. For winter wear some loose fur lined sack coats are made which represent the acme of comfort.

The cut of the motoring coat does not vary much from any ordinary long wrap except in the sleeves, which should always be large, with closely buttoned wrists, which are far more preferable than any other style, while a flapping cape is an abomination.

The matter of headgear is an important one and the veil a supreme requirement of the woman who motors.

The most sensible and comfortable hat is a light cloth peaked cap arranged with an inside brim for the purpose of holding the long pins in position, or a neat canotier of felt may be worn if securely fastened on the head.

A simple veil is one of crepe de chine gathered on a firm round disk, which fits on the crown of the hat and is drawn tight around the throat and tied in a bow under the chin.

The illustration represents a coat most useful to a woman who does not need the services of a motor wrap pure and simple. This coat is well adapted for ordinary driving and traveling. It is made of navy blue cloth stitched with red and trimmed with red buttons. It would be charming carried out in brown or fawn broadcloth or tweed.

PUZZLING "PI."

A Story About the Original John Walter of the London Times.

A story about the original John Walter of the London Times when beset by a strike of compositors and pressmen is told in London Opinion. On a certain day the "copy" fell short by half a column. There was none at hand ready to fill up with, and time passed. With the inspiration of genius Mr. Walter laid hold of a column of printer's "pie" and prepared it in the most expeditious way, so that it might pass muster for an article in a foreign tongue. He popped it in with a few lines of introduction, declaring this incomprehensible mass to be a paper in some Hindoostanee dialect, translation of which would follow in the course of a few days. No "translation" ever appeared. Ten years after Mr. Walter was on a visit to a noble earl in Cheshire, where he was introduced to a most learned pundit and oriental scholar. "Ah," said the latter, "I have long and ardently wished to solve the problem which has puzzled me for the last ten years!" And drawing from his pocket a tattered old copy of the Times he pointed out to the embarrassed proprietor of that journal the alleged Hindoostanee article, which, he confessed, had baffled his most strenuous and assiduous efforts to make anything of, although he had tried every known dialect of the language. How Mr. Walter explained the matter is not recorded.

HOUSES IN MOROCCO.

They Are Seldom Wholly Finished and Never Repaired.

In Morocco they build and make, and they do both things beautifully and well, according to one who has been there. But they seldom finish. "In a house dainty with fountains and arabesques and colored tiles," he says, "you will still find a corner uncompleted, a pillar which lacks the delicate fluting of the other pillars, an embrasure for a clock half ornamented with gold filigree and half left plain. And if they seldom finish they never by any chance repair. The mansion is built and decorated within. Artists fit the tiles together in a mosaic of cool colors and carve and gild and paint the little pieces of cedar wood and glue them into the light and pointed arches. The rich curtains are hung, and the master enters into his possession. There follows the procession of the generations. The tiles crack, the woodwork of the arches splits and falls, and the walls break and crumble. The householder sits indifferent, and the whole house corrodes. So in the narrow streets holes gap and the water wears a channel where it will and the mud lies thick and slippery on the rounded stones. The streets run steeply up and down the hills, wind abruptly round corners and dive into tunnels."

CONTROL THE UNIVERSE.

Opposite Forces of Nature That Hold All Things In Balance.

Gravitation, if considered as a force of attraction only, is a force which balances its opposite, repulsion. The attraction of the sun balances the momentum which would otherwise project the earth on a straight line into space. This balance holds the earth steadily in its course around the sun. Opposite forces of attraction and repulsion, centripetence and centrifugence, exist in the world in its greatest and smallest parts, alike in constellations and in atoms. Science is compelled to recognize repulsion as being as universal as attraction. To account for these contrary forces has so far baffled investigation, Newton's great discovery accounting only in part. Science knows only this—that these forces exist, that they meet, offset, neutralize and regulate each other, sometimes mildly or imperceptibly, sometimes violently and with fearful convulsions, and that in their influences, contacts, struggles and wars they hold all things in balance.—From "Balance: The Fundamental Verity," by Orlando J. Smith.

Why Men Hunt and Fish.

It has been said that every man has within him something of the savage, indicated by longings to return at times to primal conditions of life. Certainly to many there come irresistible yearnings for the haunts of nature, for the searching of forest and stream for the dainty food, depending on one's prowess for his dinner. In the gratification of this desire there is a zest which makes of a vacation a rejuvenation. If the appetite for this sort of thing be lacking or dormant it should be cultivated or aroused.—Senator William P. Frye in Independent.

Bow Bells.

To be born within the sound of Bow Bells has been a distinction for centuries. The famous old bells which have rung so long over London, it may not be generally known, are situated in Cheapside, where they may still be seen and heard. The street which passes beneath them is today the busiest in all London and is wholly given over to business, so that few people today are actually born within the sound of the famous bells.

Married to a Dead Tiger.

A curious custom obtains among the Coorgs. When one of them kills a tiger or a panther, he is married to the dead animal, regardless of its sex. Propped upon a framework of wood or bamboo, the animal is carried in procession, and the marriage ritual is strictly observed, while lavish hospitality is dispensed.

DRESSMAKING POINTERS.

Some Timely Hints For the Home-made Negligee and Tea Gown.

Every woman who knows what real comfort is would prefer to go without an extra hat or gown rather than do without a comfortable lounging frock, one that may do duty either as a dressing or tea gown to slip into in the "off" moments when resting. A satisfactory gown of this sort is not really easy to procure ready made at a moderate price. It is true there are plenty of cheap dressing gowns to be had, but as a rule they are far from smart. The same may still purchase better material, and if your own handiwork goes into the making you have a most presentable possession.

CASHMERE DRESSING GOWN.

With regard to the fabric used, there are any number of veilings, cashmeres and wash flannels that are very suitable, but if it is to be worn as a home tea gown velveteen in some delicate art shade would be a more imposing material.

The gown illustrated is carried out in one of the new spotted cashmeres which are now so modish. This robe may be easily cut by using a well fitting waist pattern as a guide. The gown itself is cut with a back piece seamed down the center and gored to give a spring at the hem. This back piece has a shoulder seam, which is carried out to the edge of the armhole. Side pieces are laid on under the back and extend toward the front, where they are arranged in gathers, where a front piece is carried down the fronts to match the back. The sleeve lining has frills of lace or silk attached to the lower part, and the wing-like oversleeve, edged with the same, is arranged to fall over this. Openings are placed under the overgown at the sides to allow a waistband of velvet or satin ribbon to be passed through and fastened on the left side, leaving the front free to hang loose from the figure. The bands are of plain silk, either stitched by machine or worked in a fancy feather stitch. JUDIC CHOLLET.

White cloth continues to take the lead among the dressy types of tailor built garments such as are worn on smart occasions. One of the favorite trimmings for a frock of this kind are strappings of soft ivory suede.

HOBO STEW.

A Culinary Triumph That Is Dear to the Tramp.

The professional hobo generally travels and operates alone, but if upon arriving at some large town or city he happens to meet other congenial members of his profession a pooling of interests is sometimes undertaken, a hobo camp set up, and the town is systematically worked. The spot or a camp usually chosen is in the outskirts on some wooded tract not too far from the railroad. Here the profits are divided and the different territories allotted. At nightfall all congregate to this point with the spoils and supplies, and over the "hobo stew" incidents of the day are discussed. "Hobo stew" is a triumph of culinary art that these gentry have a particular weakness for. A large iron pot is purchased, begged or stolen and half filled with water. Into this are thrown pieces of beef, pork, chicken (from some robbed henroost), bread, potatoes, carrots, onions and, in fact, everything edible that has been or can be secured. When the savory mess is sufficiently boiled it is eaten with much gusto by the tramp. These camps are never kept in existence long, however, because the hobo realizes that the danger of detection and a roundup is an ever present one when a large number remain long together in any one camp. Professional tramps, like the birds, have regular migratory seasons. From April to September this tide of immigration is toward the northern and eastern states and the region of the middle west. From November on through the winter his peregrinations take him south, southwest and to the southern Pacific coast.—Pilgrim.

FRUIT MYSTERIES.

The Banana Is Seedless, Though Nobody Knows Why.

The banana is seedless, or nearly so, and has been for centuries, though nobody knows why. It is propagated by suckers and possibly had no seeds when it was first found in its wild state. The banana is a modified berry. Cutting the fruit through the middle you will sometimes see a few little brown spots, which are the rudimentary seeds. Occasionally the banana does actually produce a few seeds.

The pineapple is seedless, being propagated likewise from suckers and from slips. The eggplant, which is a fruit, botanically speaking, is occasionally seedless. This plant is able to produce developed fruit whether the blossom is fertilized or not. Horticulturists are endeavoring at the same time to rid fruit plants of thorns. Some oranges and lemons are very thorny—for example, the high priced King orange, which is the best of the mandarins. The first trees were brought to the United States from Cochin China. In Florida its thorniness has been reduced by selecting buds from the branches with the fewest thorns. Thorns are objectionable because they puncture the oranges and lemons when the branches are blown about by the wind. Efforts are being made to get rid of the thorns on raspberry and blackberry plants simply for convenience in picking the fruit. The thorns are meant by nature to protect the plant from animals. Cultivators select those plants which happen to be thornless or nearly so.

Laugh.

Learn to laugh. A good laugh is better than medicine. Learn how to tell a story. A well told story is as welcome as a sunbeam in a sickroom. Learn to keep your own troubles to yourself. The world is too busy to care for your ills and sorrows. Learn to stop croaking. If you cannot see any good in the world keep the bad to yourself. Learn to hide your pains and aches under a pleasant smile. No one cares to hear whether you have the earache, headache or rheumatism. Don't cry. Tears do well enough in novels, but they are out of place in real life. Learn to meet your friends with a smile. The good humored man or woman is always welcome, but the dyspeptic or hypochondriac is not wanted anywhere and is a nuisance as well.

Gorgeous Japanese Robes.

In number the diaphanous robes worn by a Japanese woman of high rank of the eleventh or twelfth century were seldom less than twenty, while on great occasions even more might be necessary. Thus at a great palace fete it is said that "some" wore as many as twenty-five suits, showing glimpses of purple, of crimson, of grass green, of wild rose yellow and of sapanwood brown, their sleeves and skirts decorated with golden designs, while others, by subtle commingling of willow sprays and cherry blossoms and by embroidered patterns picked out with gems, represented the poem of the jewels and the flowers."

Fathers and Sons.

Observers are struck with the camaraderie carried to the verge of equality which obtains between fathers and their schoolboy sons, so that their mutual companionship is a source of unfeigned pleasure to both and should prove a safeguard against many evils in the future. This is essentially a modern development and stands to the credit of the fathers of the present day.—London Spectator.

"Once in a Life."

It did not seem possible that Nance Grey, the lace-girl she succeeded in saving Bernard from, could be there —there at Grandison House; still more impossible that she should be seated beside the countess herself, an honored, markedly honored, guest.

But as she looked she saw that it was not merely a coincidental resemblance; she saw that it was Nance Grey herself.

With a faint cry, she half rose, then sunk back into her seat, and clutching its arms, whispered:

"Who is it? Who is it?"

Some one close behind her spoke softly. She started and looked round, and met Lord Stoyle's light eyes regarding her with an evil smile.

She shrunk back, looking at him sideways.

"You!" she said in a low voice. "Where—where is Sir Terence and Bernard—Mr. Yorke?"

"Mr. Yorke has left," he said, fingering his chin and looking down at her with pitiless enjoyment of her agitation. "I heard him tell Sir Terence that he had just remembered an important engagement. He has left the house. You were asking who some one was. Can I assist you? Who was it?"

She tried to turn from him, with a glance of cold contempt and defiance; but she could not remove her eyes from his mocking ones.

"Is it that young lady seated beside the countess?" he went on, bending a little lower, and speaking in the soft, languid tones which he always used when he was going to indict a wound on man or woman. "She is very lovely, isn't she? They are saying already that she will be the beauty of the season, and she will. There is so fresh, so modest, so—"

She breathed hard, her lips quivering with her excitement and anxiety.

"Tell me—her name!" she said, as if the question were forced from her.

"Do you not know it? You must be the only person in the room who is ignorant of it. Every one is talking of her; every one is watching her. You don't know her? And yet it was Sir Terence who introduced her and her guardian here. It is her first entrance into society. What a triumphant debut, isn't it? She is Miss Harwood."

"Miss—Harwood!" echoed Felicia Damerel.

"Yes; the lady who bought, stole, seized, Rainford Hall—the place that ought to have belonged to your future husband, and to you, Miss Damerel."

She gazed from him to Nance, as if she could not credit her ears.

"It is false!" she said. "She is not Miss Harwood! She is—"

He laid a finger on her arm—only a finger.

"Be quiet!" he said in a low voice of command. "People will hear you. She is Miss Harwood. Ask Sir Terence, who is coming now. You mistake her for some one else. Be silent! Yes, it is very warm," he went on aloud, for the benefit of Sir Terence, who, all smiles at Christine's success, was making his way toward them—"very warm. But you really must stay and hear Madame Gomez and Lloyd in this new duet."

Felicia, who had risen as if she meant to leave the hall—she scarcely knew what she was doing—sunk back, and concealed her face behind her fan, and Lord Stoyle languidly went to his own seat a few rows off.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

It was raining and blowing hard as Bernard left Grandison House, but he strode along the streets headless of the storm, his hands thrust into his pockets, his head bent.

A wilder storm than that of the night was raging within his heart. He had seen, spoken with Nance. And Nance was "Miss Harwood," the girl who had gained possession of Rainford Hall!

It seemed incredible to him, a fable too preposterous and far-fetched to be true. But, indeed, this part of the case did not trouble him much. It was the meeting with Nance, her indignant denial of treachery and desertion, her scornful accusation against him of deserting her, that bewildered him. His love for her, which had never died, but had only been stifled and kept down by his sense of honor and duty to Felicia, rose and throbbed through every vein of him.

She was more beautiful than ever; her eyes, her voice, had still the power to move him as no other woman had ever, or could ever, move him. And she was his wife—in all save the short marriage ceremony. She was his—his!

Alast not his any longer. For was he not pledged to marry Felicia Damerel, who loved him, who, he knew, loved him?

Why had Nance left him? As he wandered about the deserted squares, wet to the skin and buffeted by the wind, he kept asking himself the question.

Nance false, fickle, mercenary!

It seemed impossible to him as he thought of the sweet face, the pure, thoughtful eyes—as he remembered Nance, herself!

Her face rose before him in the mist of rain, her voice rang softly in his ears; his heart ached with love for her; a voice within him called aloud:

"She is mine—she is mine!"

He forgot Felicia Damerel—forgot everything but Nance, until, having tired himself out, he turned homeward. Then, as he went slowly up to his rooms, he remembered and realised the situation.

He had found Nance, but she was Nance Grey no longer. She was Miss Harwood, of Rainford Hall, the heiress, the society beauty of the coming season, and his no longer! And he was pledged to marry Felicia Damerel!

Sir Terence was sitting up for him.

"Great Heaven! Bernard, where have you been?" he exclaimed, eyeing the wet figure and haggard face with consternation and alarm. "My dear Bernard, you are wet through! Where have you been? It's awfully risky. It's dangerous—dangerous!"

Bernard summoned Robson to help him pull off the saturated clothes, and came back to the room in dry ones and a dressing-gown.

"I have been—to the club," he said, drawing a chair to the fire, and shivering a little. "How long have you been home? What time is it?" and he glanced confusedly at the clock on the mantel-piece.

"An hour quite," said Sir Terence. "I am going to mix you some grog. But I insist!"

"It—it was a good concert," said Bernard, absently taking the glass of steaming grog, which he loathed. He longed to ask for news of Nance, but could not open the subject.

"Yes, yes; the people were loath to leave, and remained talking about it—and Miss Harwood. Are you warm now? Let Robson make up the fire."

"No, no; I am burning hot. Miss Harwood?"

"Yes; she has had a great success —very great. I felt sure she would; and you must admit that I have had some experience. Dear, dear! how many debutantes I have known. But not one, so far as I can remember, ever made so great a sensation, as Miss Harwood. You saw her? I wish you had remained, that I might have introduced her to you," he went on, as if Nance belonged to him, was his protegee. "I am sure—quite sure you would have liked her. She is—irresistible! Yes, that is the word—irresistible! One's heart goes out to her at once. By the way, speaking of that, it is evident that young St. John is hard hit."

Bernard reached for his pipe.

"I saw her," he said in a low voice.

"And don't you think her very beautiful?" asked Sir Terence, eagerly.

Bernard nodded. He could not trust himself to speak.

"Of course you are prejudiced against her," said Sir Terence shaking his head. "It is only natural. I ought to be, too, I suppose; but—well, wait until you know her."

"You took Felicia home?" said Bernard, after a pause.

"Yes," replied Sir Terence. "Yes. She was surprised at your leaving so early—surprised and—er—a little hurt, I think."

Bernard made no comment, and Sir Terence, glancing at him apprehensively, went on in a lower tone:

"Bernard, I—I sometimes fear that you are not happy."

"Who is happy?" retorted Bernard, cynically. "Find the man—show him to me. I should like to see him!"

"You ought to be that man," said Sir Terence. "Bernard, sometimes, of late, I have had a suspicion that —that—I don't like to think it, still less to say it, my boy—that I have had a suspicion that your heart is not in this marriage."

Bernard puffed hard at his pipe.

"For God's sake, say no more, sir!" he said, hoarsely. "Whether I am or not, doesn't matter. It is all settled; my word is pledged; my honor, our honor— Say no more; no more can—must be said!"

Sir Terence sighed, and there was a minute or two of silence. Bernard said, in a dry, almost harsh voice:

"This Miss Harwood'—he paused and relighted his pipe—"do you know anything of her past life, prior to her going to the Hall? You knew her father? You had seen her?"

"No," said Sir Terence; "she did not live with him. Her mother and he had separated, and lived apart. She was brought up with her mother or her uncle—the latter, I think. I fancy the lawyers told me that Stephen Harwood only received and acknowledged his daughter just before his death."

"What was her mother's name?" Bernard asked, staring at the fire.

Sir Terence thought for awhile.

"It was the name of a color," he said; "but I forget which. Black—Grey— Ah, yes; that was it—Grey!"

Bernard was silent. He understood that Mr. Grey was the brother of Nance's mother. He saw now how it had come to pass that Nance had become Christine Harwood; but the greater, more momentous problem still remained: why had she flown from Myrtle Cottage? why had she deserted him? Because of her sudden wealth? His heart, his reason, based upon his knowledge of her, rejected the solution. And yet, what other was there? She had left the cottage before his engagement to Felicia, of that there could be no doubt.

Sir Terence touched him gently on the shoulder.

"Are you worried about anything to-night, Bernie?" he asked. "Won't you go to bed?"

"Presently—when my pipe is finished," said Bernard, wearily. "You go now."

Sir Terence left him, and Bernard got up and paced the room. Then he heard the street-door bell ring. He knew that all the servants were in bed, and he threw up the window and looked down. St. John was standing on the steps. He went down and opened the door.

"Come upstairs," he said; and St. John followed him up.

"It is very late, Bernard," he said; "but—but I felt that I must see you. I have been walking about, thinking —thinking until I am almost mad!"

"And quite wet through," said Bernard, calmly. "Take off your coat; come nearer the fire. I expected you; if not to-night, to-morrow."

"I could not wait until to-morrow," said St. John.

He was pale, but two bright hectic spots burned in his cheeks, and there were dark marks under his eyes.

Bernard stirred the fire into a blaze.

"Come nearer," he said, grimly. "Well, what is it?"

"It is—it is about Christine—Miss Harwood," said St. John, looking at him steadily. "I am in misery, Bernard. I must know, you must tell me the meaning of the scene I saw."

"Why 'must?'" asked Bernard, curtly.

"Because I love her," he answered, firmly though gently, "and love gives me the right to demand an explanation. I love her, and I believe—yes, I believe that but for you I should have won her for my wife!"

"But for me! Why do I stand in a the way?" demanded Bernard, in a low voice, but with eyes fixed on St. John's.

It was like a duel—it was a duel, and he was on his guard. He had to protect Nance's secret at all costs.

"You are in the way because you have met her before, because— Bernard, be frank, be honest with me. It is a matter of life and death with me. It means the happiness or misery of my life. You have met her before. You—you and she—yes, I will tell you this—she admitted that there has been some man who —whom she loved"—Bernard's lips came close together, but he made no other sign—"and that—that he had not been worthy of her; that he had —how shall I put it so that it may not seem derogatory to her?—that he had jilted her? It is a hateful word, but I know no other."

"And she told you that?" said Bernard, breathing hard.

"Not in so many words; but it was the only conclusion I could draw."

"And you think it was I?"

St. John looked at him for a moment before answering, then he said, sternly:

"I am sure that it was you. Deny it, oh, deny it if you can! Bernard, remember our old friendship; remember that to me you have always been all that was noble and honorable—my model."

"And if I do not deny it?" said Bernard.

"Then"—St. John's face grew grave and somber, and he panted—"then I tell you that you are a coward and a scoundrel!"

Bernard's eyes flashed and his brows darkened. He seemed incapable of speech for a time.

"A few years ago, St. John," he said, slowly, "such words as these would have been paid at the sword's point. We don't fight duels nowadays; did you forget that when you insulted me?"

"No," said St. John; "I forget nothing. I am ready to go with you where we can fight. I am ready to answer for my words anywhere, and in any way."

Bernard gripped him by the shoulders, and looked down at him with a gaze half fierce, half sad.

"By God," he breathed, "you are worthy of her! Yes, you are worthy of her!"

St. John's eyes flashed, and he shook his head.

"No; no one is worthy of her," he said in a low voice. "Bernard, I am sorry I called you what I did. I did not come here to-night to do so; I came to beg you to—to go back to her. I know—my love has made me keen to read her mind, and I saw that moment I came upon you in the arbor that she still loved you." Bernard withdrew his hands hastily and fell to pacing the room. "Go back to her, Bernard. You are neither a coward nor a scoundrel. God forgive me for calling you so! Act as your honor and your heart dictate—for yes, you still love her, Bernard, I know it—act as your heart dictates, and make your peace with her. I plead for her and for yourself, your higher, better self. Go to her, Bernard!"

Bernard was terribly moved. He stood with his back to St. John, that the lad might not see his face.

"And you—you love her?" he said in a low voice.

St. John was silent a moment.

"It is because I love her," he said, simply. "I would lay down my life to secure her happiness."

"You forget that—that I am pledged to another woman."

"No, I do not forget," said St. John; "but I know that two wrongs do not make a right; that a marriage without love—and it is Christine, not Miss Damerel, whom you love."

"Who told you so?" broke in Bernard, hoarsely.

"I know it by your manner toward Christine. I know it by your face, your voice now. I know it by your manner when you are in Miss Damerel's presence. Bernard, if I seem presumptuous, impertinent, forgive me, bear with me. Christine's happiness is the object of my life. I would risk the loss of even your friendship to secure it."

Bernard laid his hand on St. John's shoulder.

"Go away now, dear laddie!" he said, almost inaudibly; "you don't know all. You will never know. No, never! Your words cut me like a knife. I may have seemed to you a scoundrel and a coward, but—but I am not. There is a mystery connected with this story of my—my friendship with Nan—with Miss Harwood, which may never be unveiled. Let it remain as it is. You can do nothing—but fight me." He smiled grimly. "I leave you the right to that yet, if you like. Go now."

St. John still hesitated, and Bernard turned upon him almost fiercely.

"Man, man, can't you see that I am almost mad with grief and despair!" he exclaimed. "Do you think you are the only one who has a heart that can suffer? For God's sake, leave me to myself!"

St. John, without another word, left him.

That night Nance lay awake trying to realize that all that had happened at Lady Grandison's had really occurred.

She had seen Cyril again, and he was Bernard Yorke, whom she had turned out of the Hall! It seemed almost too wonderful to be true; but what was still more wonderful was the fact that he should upbraid her with deserting him—he who had left her for another woman, Felicia Damerel.

As she lay with her flushed and burning face tossing restlessly from side to side on the pillow, she felt that at all costs she must avoid another meeting with him. This one, the sight of his face, the sound of his voice, had tortured her. She could not run the risk of meeting him again and again. The sight of him not only awakened the old love, but awakened also the old shame.

To-night, as Lady Dockitt had told her exultingly, and as she herself felt, she had made a great "success." She was to be famous, a popular beauty, one of the women whom other women envy, and men run after and worship.

Suppose some one of the brilliant crowd which went to make up "society" discovered the truth, told the story of that time at Myrtle Cottage, the story of her shame? There was not a woman, however bad she might be, who would not shrink from her and point the finger of scorn at her.

"I must go away—a long way off; I must go abroad," she murmured, feverishly.

And as she told herself so, she felt that she must fly, not so much to drown the chance of discovery, but to escape from Cyril.

"I could not bear it! I could not bear it!" she moaned. "To meet him, to have to speak to him, and to remember that—that—"

She hid her eyes even from the darkness.

Felicia lay awake also that night. Fear held her, too, in thrall. Bernard and Nance Grey had met again; and she was no longer the friendless, helpless, unprotected lace-girl, but the mistress of Rainford Hall and half a million of money.

At any moment there might be an explanation between them, and—and — She shuddered as she completed the sentence in her mind. She knew that Bernard did not love her; she felt that he still loved "Nance Grey."

And there was Lord Stoyle—Lord Stoyle, who knew her secret. How much did he know? And he was her foe. She had felt the menace in his soft voice, his light-gray eyes, as they had rested mockingly on her face while he pointed Nance Grey out to her.

There was only one hope for her; she must hurry on the marriage. Once married to Bernard, she could set this girl, Lord Stoyle, all the world, at defiance.

Yes, there was one other thing left for her; she could denounce Miss Harwood, denounce her as Bernard's former mistress, and so ruin her at a word.

"And I will do it!" she said to herself, as she paced her room in the gray dawn.

She longed yet feared to see Bernard, and she waited in all the morning; but he did not come.

By the afternoon the fever of dread, suspense, burned in her veins like a fire.

As the clock struck five she heard a ring. Her heart leaped. It must be Bernard at last.

Trembling half with fear and half with longing, she posed herself upon a sofa and took up a book. The door opened and Lord Stoyle was announced.

She sprung to her feet, her face white, her eyes flashing, disappointment and hate and fear in her bosom.

"You!" she said.

Lord Stoyle bowed and smiled, a slow smile of conscious power.

"Yes, it is I," he said—drawled, rather.

"Why—why have you come?" she demanded.

"Can you not guess?" he replied, still smiling. "Last time I had the pleasure of seeing you in this room you had your innings. Perhaps you thought the game was over. But it wasn't—it wasn't. It is my innings now, and I have come to take them—Felicia!"

CHAPTER XL.

"I have come for my innings," said Lord Stoyle in the softest of voices, and with the smile for which, perhaps without knowing it, most people hated him.

Felicia Damerel mechanically motioned him to a chair, and sat looking at him, her brows drawn straight, her lips tightly compressed. A vague fear was in her heart, but her handsome eyes regarded him steadily.

"I—I don't understand you," she said at last.

"No?" he retorted, almost pleasantly. "The last time I had the pleasure of being here, you won; you set me at defiance. In fact, you gave me my conge as unceremoniously as the victor gives the death-blow to the vanquished. But I'm not the man to die easily. I'm one of those fellows who wait—and win in the end."

"Still, I don't understand you," she repeated, coldly, and keeping her eyes upon him. "You talk like the hero or villain in a melodrama. It would be interesting and amusing, if I happened to be in the humor to be interested and amused; but I am not."

"You will be presently," he said, with a smile, "Felicia—"

Her eyes flashed upon him.

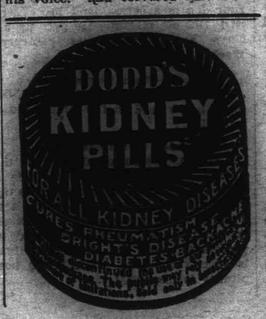
"Be good enough to leave my Christian name alone, Lord Stoyle. It is not the first time you have offended in that way."

"Pardon! It shall be Miss Damerel for the present. Last time I was here you were good enough to repudiate a bargain we made between us, and 'cried off,' most unfairly, as I thought, and think still. I have come to remind you that a contract once made must be carried out, unless it should be canceled by mutual consent. You promised to be my wife, Miss Damerel."

She forced a laugh.

"Promised, perhaps! But the promise was obtained on false pretenses. Whatever I may have said—promised—it has been withdrawn long ago. You must be aware that I am going to marry Mr. Bernard Yorke, Lord Stoyle."

"Were, not are," he said, blandly. "You are going to marry me, Felicia."



She half rose, then sunk back and looked at him with defiance and scorn in her magnificent eyes.

"I would rather die!" she said, with suppressed fierceness. "But I can not take you seriously. Perhaps you do not wish me to, Lord Stoyle. This is a little comedy played for your own amusement."

THE LAST BUFFALO HUNT ON THE SOURIS PLAINS

(Walpole Murdoch, Hartney, in Winnipeg Free Press.)

The last great buffalo hunt enjoyed in the west took place forty years ago and nearly all the half breed population then in Manitoba engaged in the chase. Some of those who took part in that wild raid on the buffalo are now residing in Alberta and delight to recall the remembrance of the great hunt with the various adventures connected with the occasion. In the fall of 1864 the buffaloes had congregated in immense numbers, south of the Turtle mountains on the great plains east of the Souris river. The hunting party was large and consisted of men, women and children, with nearly a thousand carts and hundreds of Indian ponies. As the hostile Sioux were abroad the party had to keep well together while outriders were stationed at different points for the purpose of watching the movements of the buffalo herds and to give notice if danger should appear.

The buffalo hunter of the plains possessed a peculiar character; he was a skilful rider, a good shot, hardy, strong and watchful and courageous. He usually rode a horse possessed of speed, strength and wind. Like his master, the horse enjoyed the excitement of the chase and would strain every nerve to bring his master alongside of the buffalo. In those days the buffalo hunter was usually armed with a smooth bore muzzle loading gun. His supply of powder was contained in a horn that hung from the shoulders by a strap. The hunter kept several bullets in his mouth for the sake of expedition in loading. When a drove of buffalo were to be approached the advance was made by hunters in the greatest of silence, the leader of the party a little in advance, his chief duty was that of restraining the impetuosity of the more impatient hunters and get his band as near the buffaloes as possible. At length when the buffaloes commenced to move, the uneasiness would increase and the herd started, the leader would shout and then every horse would spring forward. All had to start, for no horse could be restrained; bridles were let go, guns were brought into position and the wild cavalry bore down on the flying herd. After the first shots had been delivered, the hunter loaded his gun while his horse was at full speed and in firing care was taken not to raise the breach higher than the muzzle lest the ball should roll out, but, as the rider was generally only a few feet from the animal that he wished to shoot there was no such need to raise the gun to the shoulder. Sometimes a single hunter would shoot four or five buffaloes during the chase made on a good herd. The larger the drove the better chance there was for the hunter as the animals in advance retarded the progress of those in the rear where the attack was taking place. Cows and young bulls were not killed unless by accident or when game was scarce. On the occasion of the great hunt the carts were loaded with pemmican, tongues and skins of buffaloes. When a hunter had dropped a buffalo at some distance from his companions, or from camp, the horse was tied to the head of the animal while its master was engaged in skinning the beast that had been captured. During the continuance of the great hunt on the Souris plains which lasted for many weeks, the food of the hunters was meat and nothing else. The next season the buffalo herds had moved far to the west and never again returned in great numbers so near the Red river.

A MOTHER'S PRECAUTION

There is no telling when a medicine may be needed in homes where there are young children, and the failure to have a reliable medicine at hand may mean much suffering, and perhaps, the loss of a priceless life. Every mother should always keep a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the house. This medicine acts promptly and speedily, cures such ills as stomach and bowel troubles, teething troubles, simple fevers, colds, worms, and other little ills. And the mother has a guarantee that the Tablets contain no opiate or harmful drug. One wise mother, Mrs. Geo. Hardy, Fourchu, N.S., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets and find them a blessing to children. I am not satisfied without a box in the house at all times." If your dealer does not keep these Tablets in stock send 25 cents to The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and you will get a box by mail postpaid.

MEN DRESSMAKERS.

Paris Artisans Who Affect the Language and Walk of Women.

The originator of the man dressmaker idea was a genius, says Frances Keyzer, writing from Paris to the London King. He had a thorough knowledge of women, made a fortune out of them and left his name to his sons. Strange stories are told of the reign of this worthy man over petticoat land, of his tyranny and his sway. His sons are lightly picking their way where he trod. Times have changed.

The modern dressmaker is a hybrid creature. He has the external appearance of a man, dresses in the frock coat and complementary parts of masculine attire and has the language and walk of a woman. He talks of mousseline de soie and emplecements, volants en forme and gored skirts and dreams of combinations of color and material. He is surrounded from morning till night with women, lives like a sultan among them and is naturally impregnated by their ideas.

His study is a sanctum of elegance. Eighteenth century engravings ornament the walls. The chairs and couches are covered with old silks in exquisite faintness. It is here he passes his fingers through his hair and composes. Such is popular tradition. In plain unvarnished fact he composes nothing. The embroiderer embroiders, the weaver weaves, and the season's wares are brought before him. He selects the best patterns and makes them his property. Those he rejects find their way into the magasins des nouveautes. Then commences the work of his army of women. They design for these materials, and he selects again, taking perhaps a sleeve from one, a skirt from another, and thus he builds the models that the world comes to buy.

His vanity is passing strong. Is it his fault if he considers himself a god? He is the god of fashion, a sort of Buddha with twelve heads—the immortal twelve, as they are worthy of being called. For are they of much less use to the country than the members of that august institution, the French academy? The head of each firm is flattered and favored beyond the wildest imagination of the ordinary man. A minister or the president of the republic is more easily approached than the man dressmaker in his temple of art. I often think as I watch M. Jean and M. Jacques in the midst of their workers how I should like to see them at home.

Memory Joggers.

Vienna has a society to aid persons with short memories. A card is issued, upon which the purchaser writes the date of an engagement and posts to the society's office. By the first post on the day of his engagement the card is received by the purchaser.

Russian Circumlocution.

A correspondent at Kieff tells a story of the censor's department. Vassali Yaruishkin, a brilliant graduate of Moscow university, has just died there in poverty at the age of fifty. Twenty-three years ago Yaruishkin wrote a work on physiology, embodying a number of remarkable discoveries he had made. His scientific friends pronounced it epochmaking. The manuscript went to the censor in 1883. It never came back. Again and again the author applied for permission to print and for the return of his manuscript. He accumulated a drawerful of formal replies, saying that the matter would receive attention. Soured and disappointed, M. Yaruishkin never undertook other work, and a week ago he died. On the morning of the funeral a packet of manuscript arrived at the house where he died with the stereotyped approval of the censor expressed in a formal note.—St. James' Gazette.

An Imperial Pawnshop.

The public pawnshop at Vienna, which was closed for some time while necessary enlargement was made, has been reopened. The managers of the institution, besides advancing money on articles, undertake the sale by auction of any goods or stocks of merchandise submitted. Those desirous of disposing of their effects must notify the managers three days previous to the sale. The new metropolitan institution when completed will contain no fewer than twelve auction halls. The authorities claim no more than 5 per cent of the sum realized at the auction, which charge includes all the auctioneering expenses.

Lucky Boy.

An eleven-year-old boy of Hamilton, Ont., recently wrote to the czar asking for a collection of Russian postage stamps. His majesty was pleased to accede to the request, and the boy has received a handsome album containing a complete set of all the stamps issued by the Russian postoffice. The covers of the album are of embossed Russian leather. On the front is emblazoned in gold the Russian escutcheon and on the back the imperial monogram, surmounted by a crown, while the flyleaf displays the czar's autograph. The collection of stamps is estimated to be worth several hundred dollars.

J. W. JAMESON

J. W. JAMESON

Editor and Proprietor of Dufferin Leader, Carman

Among all the newspapermen of the Canadian West, few are better known or more widely respected than J. W. Jameson, editor and proprietor of the Dufferin Leader. Both for his personal and professional qualities Mr. Jameson is deserving of the esteem with which he is generally regarded. His aims and ideals as an editor and newspaper proprietor are the reflection and counterpart of those of his personal life. Thoroughness, reliability, solidity, impartiality, integrity—these are his dominating characteristics as a man, and these are the distinguishing characteristics of his paper.

In some respects Mr. Jameson is not a typical Western editor. Caution and deliberation enter more largely into his mental make-up than is the case of most of his confreres Of enterprise he has no lack, but in every case it is subordinate to accuracy and reliability. Change for mere change sake offers no attraction to his mind. Before Mr. Jameson goes ahead, he wants to be sure that he is right. His sense of responsibility to the public is great and ever-present and every editorial judgment he pronounces is made with constant reference to its possible effect, not merely on the fortunes of the political party to which the Leader gives independent allegiance, but to the whole public welfare, and to the future of the country. Mr. Jameson has the habit of regarding every public and political question as involving more or less of a moral issue, and, as the ultimate test of their advisability, all are tested by this touchstone. The things that make for civic and political righteousness, the things that are of good report, that are of virtue and praise—these are the things to which Mr. Jameson holds, both as an editor and as a man.

Mr. Jameson is a firm believer in the saving sense and wisdom of the great Canadian democracy. His faith in the common people is deep and abiding. He banks on the deep-seated sense of right existent in their hearts and, though they make mistakes due to skilful and wilful misrepresentation of facts and issues, they are learning thereby, and slowly educating themselves to a realization of their needs and of the means by which they can be attained. Believing thus, it is no wonder that Mr. Jameson gives firm adherence to Liberal principles and general support to the Liberal party. His habits of thoroughness and going to the root of matters, makes him dissatisfied with any discussion that does not go back to cardinal principles, and hence his editorial opinions are of a ripeness and weight such as are seldom found among Western weeklies. The same habits of reliability charcterizes the Leader's news columns, which show from week to week a careful sifting, arrangement and presentation of the local happenings. Typographically the Leader enjoys a high position among Mr. Jameson's contemporaries. Taste and care are apparent on every page of each issue. That the Carman business men appreciate the local paper is evidenced by the space they take to announce their store news. Taken all in all the Leader is a local paper of which any district might well be proud, an important factor in the dissemination of the principles and policy of the political party it supports, a powerful influence in local and muncipal affairs, an enterprising and reliable newsgatherer, and an altogether mechanically excellent newspaper.

Mr. Jameson is an example of what can be done in a new and strange occupation by a man who brings to it ability, industry and common sense. He was 45 years of age when he entered the publishing business and had no previous experience in the mechanics of printing when he set out to publish the Leader. Carman already had a good local paper, the Standard, strongly entrenched in local favor, and the prospect of entering the field against so formidable a rival might well have deterred one of much more experience in the publishing business than Mr. Jameson could boast.

Mr. Jameson, like the majority of Western newspapermen, is an Ontarian by birth, his place of nativity being Etobicoke township, in Peel County. He was born in 1858, and is thus 51 years of age. When a mere child his parents removed to Bruce County, which shares with Huron the distinction of having furnished to Manitoba the bulk of her Ontario settlers. Mr. Jameson received a sound course of training in the public schools of his county, and at the completion of his school education, being of a marked artistic nature, he took up painting and decorating as his chosen calling, devoting his time and abilities thereto until 1893, when, largely as the result of too close attention to his work, his health failed, compelling him to consider change of climate and occupation. It was then that the voice of the Great West called Mr. Jameson, and hearkening to it he decided to try what the pure, bracing atmosphere of the prairies would do for his health. He came to Carman and embarked in the book and stationery business, which he still conducts in conjunction with his newspaper, and which has grown to considerable proportions. In 1898, as before stated, he embarked on his career as editor, establishing the Leader, Carman's second newspaper, and, without prejudice to any other members of the Western newspaper fraternity, it may be said that he has in the interval made an enviable reputation and that his newspaper is the best evidence of his merit as a newspaperman.

Mr. Jameson's face and figure are among those most familiar at the conventions of the Western Canada Press association, at which he is one of the most earnest workers. It is not too much to say that such gatherings would hardly seem complete were he absent and the members deprived thereby of his measured speech and placid wisdom, and the benefit of his experience as a printer, editor and publisher. In the ranks of newspaper workers in the West there are many men who could better be spared in this, the formative period of its life, than can Editor Jameson. He stands for and illustrates those principles and practices that, whether in the life of a newspaper, a man, or a country, tend to the best development along lines of both material and moral progress. The personal success that comes thereby is not by any means principal, though undoubtedly it is a desirable, result. This success Mr. Jameson has deservedly reaped, but his true value to Western newspaperdom is in the principles for which he contends, and the influence he exerts.

LAWS ON EATING.

Meals at One Time Were Regulated by Statute in England.

On Nov. 2, 1336, a law came into force in England for the regulation of meals and continued to have a place on the statute book until 1857. It was designed to check the evils resulting from an excessive use of costly meats and enacted that no one should partake at any place or time (except on specified festivals and holidays to the number of sixteen days a year) of more than two courses, each not consisting of more than two sorts of victuals, either flesh or fish, with the common sorts of pottage, and inexpensive sauce. On named feast days three courses were allowed.

This law was an extension of an ordinance issued by Edward II. in 1315 regulating the meals of his nobles, the greater of whom were allowed in addition to two courses of two kinds of meat a side dish of one sort.

An act of 1363 enacts that servants, artisans and laborers "shall be served to eat and drink once a day of flesh or fish and remnant of other victuals, as of butter, milk and cheese, according to their station in life."—London Telegraph.

A Striking Individuality.

It does not pay to be too striking in one's individuality unless that characteristic is the outspringing of one's own nature. Directly little eccentricities are assumed criticism is invited. We become conspicuous, and the unconventional beauty which we wish to achieve turns to gall and wormwood in what the world calls only "queerness." Unless you can be artistically out of the ordinary do not try to be other than commonplace. It does not pay to bring down reproach and sarcasm upon your unprotected head for the sake of winning notoriety. Better by far to pursue the even tenor of your way, exactly as thousands of other mortals do, than to strike out into new paths which lead only into the jungle of ridicule and condemnation.

The Wish He Doesn't Gratify.

"Well?" replied her husband rather curtly.

"Well, I wish I was single again."

MONKEY PRANKS.

The Way One Cunning Ape Served Thieving Crow.

Recently a monkey got the better of the common enemy, the carrion crow, by feigning illness. He was fastened to a bamboo pole with a running ring When he was on his perch the crows annoyed him by stealing from his porringer on the ground.

One morning they had been specially disagreeable. He closed his eyes and feigned a bad illness. When his day's food was brought him the crows descended upon it, and he had scarcely strength to defend it. By good acting he managed to capture one of the crows. To pluck it alive was the obvious course. Then, instead of pulling it to pieces, like the king monkey whom Kipling and Sir Edward Buck watched enjoying a similar triumph at Simla, this monkey tossed the crow into the air, where its own companions fell upon it and killed it.

Monkeys certainly have a sense of fun. Darwin used to spend hours watching a young female orang outang in the zoological gardens and was sure that she had the comic sentiment. She delighted to put upon her head, like a cap, a peculiar shaped bowl, which had a droll effect, and she was sensitive to the effect which her joke produced upon the spectators.

The Finest Mosaics.

The mosaics in the Church of St. Mark in Venice are the finest in the world. They cover 40,000 square feet of the upper walls, ceilings and cupolas and are all laid on a gold ground.

Ingenious Ants.

The green ants of Australia make nests by bending leaves together and uniting them with a kind of natural glue. Cook saw hundreds at a time on one leaf drawing it to the ground, while an equal number waited to receive hold and fasten it.

The Krooboys.

The Krooboys, a tribe of aborigines which inhabit the seacoast of Liberia, as is well known in the shipping world, are the west coast seamen. They are the stevedores and longshoremen of Africa.

Assuredly Not

Women

Oh the neatness of their neatness
when they're neat,
And the sweetness of their sweetness
when they're sweet,
Oh, the gladness of their gladness
when they're glad,
And the sadness of their sadness
when they're sad!
And their neatness and their sweetness,
And their gladness and their sadness
Are as nothing to their madness when they're mad.

Cholera and all summer complaints are so quick in their action that the cold hand of death is upon the victims before they are aware that danger is near. If attacked, do not delay in getting the proper medicine. Try a dose of Dr. Kellogg's Dysentary Cordial, and you will get immediate relief. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to effect a cure.

The international committee of the Young Men's Christian association, which has the oversight of the association in North America, gives some astonishingly large figures in its review of the year's work. The associations now number 1,815, their membership is 373,502, and their receipts and expenditures in the year balanced at $3,856,328.

Equal Distance

A traveling man who drove across the country to a little town in western Kansas the other day met a farmer hauling a wagonload of water.

"Where do you get water?" he asked.

"Up the road about seven miles," the farmer replied.

"And you haul your water seven miles for your family and stock?"

"Yep."

"Why, in the name of sense, don't you dig a well?" asked the traveller.

"Because it is just as far one way as the other, stranger."

A Russian has devised a means for preserving dead bodies by embalming them in glass. The body is first covered with a thin coating of liquid glass. It is then placed in a mould and melted glass poured round it. The body thus becomes enclosed in an air-tight, solid and transparent mass of glass, and would be preserved indefinitely.

Ignorance Is a Curse.—"Know thyself" is a good admonition, whether referring to one's physical condition or moral habitudes. The man who is acquainted with himself will know how to act when any derangement in his condition manifests itself. Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil is a cheap and simple remedy for the eradication of pain from the system and for the cure of all bronchial troubles.

Died Happy

Representative Fitzgerald of Boston has a story of an Irish couple in that city who, despite a comparatively happy life, were wont to have violent misunderstandings. Nevertheless, the pair were devoted to each other, and when the husband died not long ago the widow was inconsolable.

Shortly after the funeral a friend who had dropped in to see how Mrs. Milligan was getting on chanced to remark:

"Well, there's one blessing, Maggie, for they do say that poor Mike died happy."

"Indade he did," responded the widow, "The dear lad! The lasht thing he done was to crack me over the head wid a medicine bottle."

NEW VIGOR FOR THE NERVES

NEW POWER AND STRENGTH FOR EVERY ORGAN OF THE BODY IN THE USE OF

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Good digestion, ruddy complexion, splendid circulation, clear brain, steady nerves, sound, restful sleep, better health and greater strength of mind and body is what you may expect from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Not in any mysterious way but from the hard fact that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is composed of the elements of nature which go to form new, red corpuscles in the blood, or, in other words, make the blood rich, in the nutritive principle which creates nerve force—the power which runs the machinery of the body.

WITH THE VITALITY OF THE BODY THUS BROUGHT TO HIGH WATER MARK WEAKNESS AND DISEASE GIVE PLACE TO HEALTH AND HAPPINESS.

Impaired digestion, irregular action of the feminine organism, weakness of heart, lungs or other bodily organs, pains and aches and all the annoying consequences of weak nerves and blood disappear because the cause of their existence is removed.

By noting your increase in weight you can prove that new, firm flesh and tissue are being added by this great restorative.

Mrs. W. R. Sutherland, St. Andrews, Man., writes: "In February, 1903, I was stricken with paralysis, fell helplessly on the floor and had to be carried tor bed. The docto pronounced it a bad case as I had no power in my tongue and left leg. I remained in that condition for six months without obtaining benefit from the doctor's prescriptions or other medicines.

"My husband advised me to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and by the use of this treatment all symptoms of the disease disappeared. I can now talk plainly, my leg is all right and I can do my housework. How grateful I am to be cured by so wonderful a remedy."

MAN AND THE HORSE.

Animal Conquest Marked One of the Epochs in Civilization.

The conquest of the horse by man and its final utilization for all purposes which are discharged by steam and electricity today marked one of the great turning points in the history of civilization. In the great earth and sand pregiacial deposits of Europe the true wild horse is as widespread, though not as varied, as in America. It is not at this stage associated with the remains of man, because no pregiacial man except the pithecanthropus or trinil man of Java has been found. In the interglacial or postglacial period the remains of man and the horse are first found together. The first association occurs in the middle of the paleolithic or rough noplement period. The discovery of all the possible uses of the horse came very gradually, however, for there is abundant proof that man first hunted and ate, then drove and finally rode the animal.

The prevailing drawings of the paleolithic horse represent him as hog maned, with no forelock to conceal the low bred Roman nose. A second type in the Mouthe cave, a bearded horse with long, bristling mane, long ears and convex forehead, is regarded by M. Riviere as another species. But it is not clear to my mind that these drawings represent more than the summer and winter coats of the same animal. Besides these Roman nosed types, to which Ewart traces the modern cart horse, there are others with small heads and flat noses, which Ewart associates with the Celtic pony and possibly with the origin of the thoroughbred. Other cave drawings, reproduced by M. Capitan, leave little doubt that the ass was known in Europe. It is also certain from abundant evidence in the caves of France that there was a larger horse toward the south perhaps, while the smaller breeds may have frequented the colder northern regions.—Century.

Fatal Stupor.

"He is gone!" she wailed. "He is gone forever!"

"Don't be downcast," her friend urged. "He may come back."

TESTIMONIAL from the late SIR SAMUEL BAKER, the famous Nile Explorer. "Newton Abbot, Devon. Dear Sirs—I have delayed my thanks as I wished to test the effect of Blair's Pills by a sufficient interval of time.

Forgiveness is a very poor foundation for friendship.

Going visiting is like borrowing from the neighbors—you have to pay back.

Which would be wiser for a man past fifty to do—marry a trained nurse or a good cook?

There is need of a never-find-fault-with-your-meals club. Digestion would be better and the family happier.

If a secret is kept a secret this is one sign that it was not considered important enough to tell.

One thing about an idle woman—she does not stand on the street and bore people with her "views," as an idle man does.

Speaking of superfluous words, is it necessary to say in telling that a woman has gone visiting that she is visiting "friends?"

Old Time Controversies.

Old time controversies were often vigorous in language. In a controversy with Milton concerning the divine right of kings Salmasius called his opponent a puny piece of a man, a homunculus, a dwarf not having a human figure, a bloodless being, a creature of skin and bones, a contemptible pedagogue fit only to flog boys, a rhinoceros, a hangdog looking fellow. The great English poet not only answered in kind, but entered into an extensive correspondence with people in Holland to obtain petty gossip and scandalous anecdotes concerning his opponent.

Better Than Stealing.

Many years ago a newly arrived highlander was being shown the sights of Glasgow by a fellow countryman. As they crossed a street they saw in the distance a dense crowd of people, and the newcomer asked what it meant. He was told that there was a man being hanged. He then inquired what they were hanging him for, and he was told it was for sheep stealing. He looked aghast at this news and at last exclaimed: "Ochan, Ochan; hanging a man for stealing sheeps! Could he no' ha bocht them and then no' peyed for them?"—"Reminiscences of Sir Archibald Geikie."

"My daughter, when she was 5 years old, was troubled with a very bad cold for over six months.

She was short of breath, and seemed to be choked up all the time.

"The doctor said it was catarrh of the head and throat, and gave her medicine for it, but it gave no relief. Very Likely

A very stout farmer and his equally stout wife drove out to call on the minister. The one sat in the front of the trap and the other behind. They had to cross a pretty deep ford on the way.

Arrived at the manse the farmer was greeted by the minister, who said:

"But why did you not bring Mrs. Brown with you?"

"She's there—in the trap behind."

"No, she is certainly not there."

"Weel, she was when we left home. Guidness gracious! that must hae been the splash I heard."

Not a Nauseating Pill.—The excipient of a pill is the substance which enfolds the ingredients and makes up the pill mass. That of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills is so compounded as to preserve their moisture, and they can be carried into any latitude without impairing their strength. Many pills, in order to keep them from adhering, are rolled in powders, which prove nauseating to the taste. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are so prepared that they are agreeable to the most delicate.

Here is a tale from Los Angeles, where divorce is remarkable easy. Two children met at a dancing school. Said the little girl: "So you have a new father at your house, I hear." A Small Pill, but Powerful.—They that judge of the powers of a pill by it's size would consider Parmelee's Vegetable Pills to be lacking. It is a little wonder among pills. Sudden

Ian Maclaren recounted this story in a lecture on Scottish humor: In a dull Scottish village, on a dull morning, one neighbor called at another's house. "Can I see him?" "Na." "But a wanted tae see him." "Ay, but ye canna see him. John's deid." "Deid?" "Ay." "Sudden?" "Ay." "Verra sudden?" "Ay, verra sudden." A FOOL AND HIS MONEY

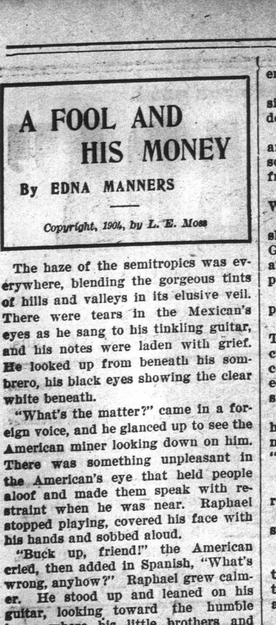
By EDNA MANNERS

Copyright, 1904, by L. E. Moss

The haze of the semitropics was everywhere, blending the gorgeous tints of hills and valleys in its elusive veil. There were tears in the Mexican's eyes as he sang to his tinkling guitar, and his notes were laden with grief. He looked up from beneath his sombrero, his black eyes showing the clear white beneath.



"What's the matter?" came in a foreign voice, and he glanced up to see the American miner looking down on him. There was something unpleasant in the American's eye that held people aloof and made them speak with restraint when he was near. Raphael stopped playing, covered his face with his hands and sobbed aloud.

"Buck up, friend!" the American cried, then added in Spanish, "What's wrong, anyhow?" Raphael grew calmer. He stood up and leaned on his guitar, looking toward the humble home where his little brothers and sisters were at play.

"Oh, senor," he cried in confiding dejection, "'tis the beautiful Senorita Anita! Senor, they have shut her up, and I shall never see her any more. I die of love for her."

"No, you won't," muttered the American, turning away to hide a cynical gleam. The dam of Raphael's grief was loosened, and the contents of his soul poured into listening ears. And this was the tale he told: He loved the Senorita Anita, a bewitching damsel far above him; was dying of love for her. Many times they had met on the plaza, and she had glanced shyly from beneath her mantilla and smiled at him. Yes, he could swear she smiled. She was beautiful and good. He had had no glimpse of her since except from behind the bars of her window. He could neither eat nor sleep.

The American turned away, while his lips curled unpleasantly. Raphael amused him. He was an exceptional Spaniard. He had scraped together a kind of education for himself and was something of a genius in music. Under more favorable conditions he might have made a way for himself in the world.

"HERE'S A PURSE FOR YOU AND YOUR GIRL."

The cynicism faded from the American's eye as he asked where the senorita lived and who her family were.

* * * * * * *

Anita lay asleep. The moonlight came through the roses at the window, and all was still. Suddenly through the darkness came a single sweet note. The girl sat up to listen. She pushed back her hair and listened again. Her eyes shone, her cheeks flushed, and her little heart beat fast. She stole to the window, holding her mantilla close about her chin. Beneath the orange tree stood a man. Her heart fluttered faster, and the hot southern passion shone in her eyes. It was the rich Senor Americano. Several times he had passed the house, after the custom of the Mexican lover. The maid clapped her hands softly in acknowledgment that she accepted the tribute. The notes grew more pleading still.

"Senorita."

This was going beyond the bounds of the serenading lover, but Anita leaned out and waited.

"Senorita."

"Senor, I am here," whispered the girl and then drew back coyly.

"Fair one, listen." Then he poured into her ears a tale of love.

"One," said he, "loves thee senorita, loves thee unto death, but he cannot marry thee in this country. Will you leave sunny Mexico and go to America with your lover—as his wife?"

The little senorita giggled. She had "been in love ever since she could talk," her mother complained. This one and that one she had flirted with and had even been shut up as punishment for making eyes at Raphael, a common youth on the plaza. Lately her mother had noticed the Senor Americano passing the house, and she was well content that he should pay court to her pretty daughter and end all the trouble.

"Senor," came in soft Mexican Spanish, "has he money to buy the wedding clothes?"

"He has enough to buy the finest any bride could wish."

"And does he loves me well, senor?"

"To distraction, oh, divine one!"

She drew back and shivered a little, but the dimples played in her cheeks. Anita must love and be loved and would make a good, true little wife for any man who would only love her enough.

"Senor." She leaned far out into the silver night, pulled a rose and threw it down to him. "Senor, when?"

He picked up the flower, kissed it and pressed it to his heart. He was so coldly, artificially Mexican. It frightened and attracted her.

"Now," he answered. "Now, Anita. Will you come with me now?"

The realization came to her like a shock. Leave her father and mother? Go with this man? To America? Love and romance were her guiding stars, poor little soul. Yes, she would go.

"In two minutes, senor," she whispered.

A victoria sped away from the house. The girl kept up a soft giggle as the carriage bumped over the stones that covered the street, but as they reached the outskirts of the city she turned silent.

"Senorita," that was the first word her strange lover had spoken. He now leaned forward in the darkness. "Senorita, are you afraid?"

His gaze was cold and steady.

"Are you afraid, gentle senorita?" he repeated, as she did not answer.

"No-o, senor. But why are you so—so still? You do not love me?"

Her voice shook.

"Senorita, I have loved many beautiful ladies. I am—bah"—he seemed to be talking to himself—"tired of it all."

"Tired of love?" A cold hand knocked at the door of her heart. The carriage was on a lonely, white country road now.

"Senorita, I cannot—I—er—well, you see, I cannot marry you—I"—

"You cannot marry me? Then why did you bring me here?"

"Wait, senorita. Do you love me?"

She was dazed by the sudden, practical question; then she shuddered and answered: "No, I hate you, I hate you, senor! Oh, take me back to my mother! Take me home!"

"Have you ever loved any man? Ever truly loved?" he asked without heeding her.

In her heart arose the vision of a pair of faithful, gentle eyes that had sought hers on the plaza and a form that bent over the guitar at twilight. She burst into tears. "Oh, yes," she moaned. "Raphael, dear Raphael!"

The carriage stopped. The lover climbed out; then, leaning on the window ledge, he whispered, "If you are wise, keep still."

And she obeyed. The horses stirred, the coachman dozed and the time grew long. Then the night quiet was broken by the twangy voice of the American, mingled with the soft tones of her native tongue. The carriage door opened, and there before her stood Raphael.

"Now," said the American, "if you want to go home I'll take you back. If you want to go with your lover, go."

For answer she threw herself into Raphael's arms, and caste and propriety were forgotten in the bliss of a first kiss of love gratified.

"Here's a purse for you and your girl, Raphael. Hope you'll like married life."

He told the driver to drive to the station with the pair and stood watching them disappear down the white road. Then he took out a cigar, bit off the end and laughed as he said aloud: "I always thought Miles Standish was a fool. Half my mine gone too. 'The fool and his money are soon parted.' Well, it's the only fun I'll ever get out of it."

Then he went down the road toward the city alone.

Old Scotch Apprentice Laws.

A newspaper of Dundee, Scotland, publishes the regulations established for apprentices in that town several hundred years ago. Here is one which deals with the custom of apprentices drinking at night: "It is statute that forasmeikle as the gryt abuse among the prentisses and anent the many complaints given in to the deacons and maisters declaring that they debore at night by visiting and drinking, neglecting their due time to come to their wark, and rise early in the morning for entering thereto, intollerable to be sufferit in ane civil burgh. For remeid thereof it is condescendit that like servant and prentiss of the craftes keep their ordinar dyet of intermediate and go to their beyds at ten hours at night, and wha bees drinking or walgering in other men's houses or in the streets of the get aifter ten hours night sall pay to the crafts box, servants, three shillings and eightpence, and prentisses, six shillings and fourpence, and if he have not monies, to be punisht at the will of the deacon and maisters."

Ruin For Rats.

A farmer tells the Sedalia Capital that he rid his farm of rats in the following manner: "On a very large number of pieces of old shingles I put about half a teaspoonful of molasses and on that with my pocketknife I scraped a small amount of concentrated lye and then placed the old shingles around under the stable floors and under the cribs. The next morning I found forty dead rats, and the rest had left for parts unknown. I have cleared many farms of the pests in the same way and have never known it to fail."

Some modification of this scheme will drive mice out of your house or apartment.

THE ROUND ROBIN.

Its Origin, It Is Said, Can Be Traced Back to Ancient Greece.

According to British naval documents of the years 1638 and 1659, it was the custom of seamen of that day to use the round robin as a safe and effective means of bringing their grievances before the authorities. A similar practice existed in France, but the alleged origin of the term "round robin" from rond ruban, a circular band used in the French petitions, is probably fallacious.

The term existed in England long before, with wholly different meaning. Thus in Devonshire a "round robin" was a small round pancake, and the sacramental wafer was called a "round robin" by Latimer, 1536.

Dr. Timbs says that the idea of the round robin has been traced back to a Greek conspiracy against the tyranny of the Pisistratidae. The Romans had a similar custom of writing the names of their guests or friends in a circle when anxious not to indicate any individual preferences.—London Standard.

WOMAN'S WORLD

POTTERY BY A WOMAN.

Miss M. L. McLaughlin's Remarkable Success In Porcelain.

With the varied and beautiful art pottery that has developed and is being produced in different parts of this country both by potteries and by individuals the public is more or less familiar; but, while it is a matter for national pride and is known and fully acknowledged by artists at home and abroad, comparatively few are acquainted with the interesting fact that an exquisite porcelain is being made in the United States and that from first to last it is the result of a woman's genius.

This ware is a hard paste porcelain called Losanti and is the production of Miss M. Louise McLaughlin of Cincinnati. It is her second triumph in the field of ceramics, for it was she who in

MISS M. LOUISE M'LAUGHLIN.

1877 discovered the secret of underglaze decoration of the Limoges faience and a year lated produced and exhibited at the Paris exposition pieces of true faience with successful underglaze decoration. Her first piece of this ware is now in the Barbee collection of the Pennsylvania Museum of Fine Arts.

One of her finished pieces of this ware and style of decoration, which is called by the French "pate-sur-pate," technically termed "slip" decoration, was made about the year 1880 and is now in the Cincinnati Fine Art museum. It is well known to amateurs under the name of Ali Baba vase and is considered by expert authorities as destined to have a historic value as marking a stage in the development of American ceramics.

In view of this what shall be said of the second achievement of this ardent potter, who, not content with the first glory, plans and accomplishes a greater and far more difficult feat by producing an absolutely new porcelain, the formula for which is the result of her own unaided experiments continued through a number of years?

An authority on art pottery says: "Before definitely fixing the composition of this highly original ware Miss McLaughlin experimented with eighteen different bodies and some forty-five glazes. The recipe now employed gives its maker perfect satisfaction, her work for the future lying in the development of color effects and in the perfecting of details such as translucence, openwork employed in an orginal way, designs with or without inlays of glaze and inlays used in the body. Among these details the one most striking to the lay observer is the openwork, which appears in spots and never in the jacket form, as in the Sevres or in the round perforations of the 'eyelet' china. Miss McLaughlin's openwork effects, like everything to which she touches her hand, are original with her."

It is well for the world and for art that women of means and of leisure should be seized with the spirit of initiative which leads to creations of this character. Here is a woman who has discovered, created and produced. —Chicago Record-Herald.

The Selfish Girl.

No matter how attractive a girl may be in face and figure, if she is thoroughly selfish all prudent people will shun her. No careful person is likely to be charmed with the girl—

Who never thinks of any one but herself.

Who never makes an effort to oblige others and yet expects to be waited on hand and foot herself.

Who never will own that another girl is pretty, but who endeavors instead to find some defect in her to point out to others.

Who never does a stroke of housework, but selfishly indulges in gayety and amusement, while her mother slaves to keep affairs in order.

Who never takes any notice of children, but considers them "little nuisances," "plagues," who ought never to leave the nursery.

Who never confesses she is in the wrong, but sticks to her point through everything.

Who spends all her money on dress, sweets or some luxury for herself.

Who never bestows a kind word on those beneath her in position.

Who never, above all, could love or seriously consider the comfort of any other person but herself.—Gentlewoman.

Cooking a Tough Chicken.

A touch chicken is made into a delicious dish when cooked after this recipe: Cut up the fowl and remove the skin and the large bones. Brown the pieces in oil or drippings, taking care that they do not scorch. They should be delicately browned, and only cooked enough to preserve the juices. Make a sauce with a tablespoonful each of flour and butter, adding slowly a quart of white stock or broth. Season the sauce with salt, cayenne and enough kitchen bouquet to give it piquancy. A little sherry is sometimes liked. Cut up a little bacon into cubes, add a small onion sliced and put them into the casserole. Put in the chicken, pour the sauce over it and cook for two hours or more if the fowl is very tough in a very moderate oven. About half an hour before serving take off the lid and add half a can of button mushrooms. If these are not at hand substitute a few blanched oysters.

Character and Independence.

Every self respecting woman holds herself in proper esteem and believes that she is an independent entity, with rights and privileges which others are bound to recognize. She conducts herself as if she was a force and factor in life and occupies a prominent place in the world. This self respect is essential to the success of all. It is only when carried to the extent of making one unduly conceited that it should be frowned upon. We like to see a self respecting man or woman going through life as if every action was ordered by a clear, intelligent mind of some particular purpose. If the person did not show this power of self importance and assurance nobody else would show respect or esteem.—Household Ledger.

Cleaning Curtains.

Pin a sheet on the carpet and scatter over it dry Indian meal and borax mixed in the proportion of one cupful of meal to one teaspoonful of powdered borax. Over the sheet pin a curtain, and over the curtain scatter more of the mixture, then another curtain, then more mixture, until all the curtains are pinned down and all strewn with the meal and borax. Now pull out all the pins and roll up in a compact roll, so that the sheet shall cover all. Lay this roll away to season for two or three weeks, and then shake out your curtains, when you will find them snow white.

Clothes Hangers.

Skirt or bodice arms or hangers for hanging one's clothes in the wardrobe are easily made thus: Get a good size barrel hoop and cut or saw it into three equal parts. In the center of each part bore a hole. Rub down any rough edges with sandpaper or a file, then cover by binding with strips of sateen or silk or ribbon. Put a loop of ribbon through the hole bored in the center to hang by and tie a piece of scented pumice stone at each end of the arm, and your garments will possess a delicate, elusive odor.

Children and Money.

Training in responsibility and judgment in the use of money is within the reach of every family, even the poorest. I have never seen children so poor as not to have spending money. To be given the responsibility for the spending, saving and giving away of this money in increasing amounts, according to the age of the boy and the circumstances of the family, is one of the most educative of experiences. — Professor W. L. Hervey in Chautauquan.

"Keeping Company."

Here is a bit of advice recently given his parishioners by a New York clergyman: "A young woman should not allow a young man to call upon her longer than six months. If he does not propose marriage at the end of that time she should dismiss him, or if she fails to do so her parents should. Too long acquaintance and 'keeping company' prejudice the interests of a girl. It gives her friends a chance to talk about her and prejudice her morals."

Face Wrinkles.

The lines and wrinkles on the face should be massaged nightly if permanent good would be done. Where the massage is given one night and forgotten or neglected for a week the lines are given an opportunity to return and deepen. Constant care and vigilance are the price one must pay to keep away wrinkles.

Ending a Letter.

It is almost inexcusable to end a letter "Sincerely," "Faithfully," "Cordially," or the like, though many educated women make this mistake. The wording should be, of course, "Sincerely yours" or "Faithfully yours." Otherwise the writer shows abruptness and lack of courtesy to her correspondent. —Harper's Bazar.

The Eyelashes.

Do not clip your eyelashes with the idea of improving them. By this treatment they are often made stubby and coarse. You should also be careful, if you wear glasses, that they do not press against the lashes and so stunt their growth.

After a severe, long illness a woman's hair often becomes dreadfully matted and for this reason is sometimes cut off. It is said that if bathed with alcohol the tangles can be easily cleaned out.

A bad figure and a poor carriage are often due to laziness. Walk with the shoulders back, the chest elevated and the hips back if a good carriage is desired.

Thin people who wish to gain flesh should eat a light lunch before retiring. An empty stomach feeds upon the flesh of the body.

"Where light and air cannot come the doctor must," is more true than most people suppose.

Divorce Laws In Sweden.

The divorce laws of Sweden are elastic. When the incompatibility of temper reaches the culminating point one of the parties proceeds to Copenhagen, the nearest foreign town, which is only twelve hours distant, and remains there for fourteen days, notifying the Swedish consulate, which circumstances are regarded as legal evidence of desertion and sufficient ground for divorce.

When the Horse Is Tired.

Young horses sometimes come in from the morning's work tired out and will not eat a fair sized meal in the time of the ordinary noon rest. It is especially important in such a case that water, not too cold, be allowed before feeding. This will freshen up the colt a great deal.

An Effective Disguise.

Church—Did you say the man was a Chicago man in disguise? Gotham—That's just what he was. Church—How was he disguised? Gotham—He had put on a clean collar just before reaching New York.—Sketchy Bits.

LADY WITH THE LAMP.

Florence Nightingale Still With Us in the Twentieth Century, Fifty Years After Beginning Her Great Work.

Oct. 21 is not only Trafalgar Day. It is also on another account a day "worthy of a white stone." Fifty years ago Florence Nightingale and her band of thirty-eight nurses set forth on their mission to the Crimea. The immediate result was the conversion of the Great Barrack Hospital at Scutari from "a hell on earth," where, as Sir William Russell wrote: "The sick appear to be tended by the sick, and the dying by the dying," into "a model of all that a hospital should be." But in effect the one action was as the grain of mustard-seed—from it sprang consequences which are seen and felt throughout the world to-day, in the wonderful municipal hospitals, the quiet cottage hospitals, the neat and deft trained nurse; while inwardly a power for good works side by side with external cleanliness and comfort. Hospital reform has not only achieved fewer deaths per thousands, less individual suffering, but it has also proved a powerful moral agent for good.

Within hospital walls are gathered a large percentage of men, women and children to whom dirt, disorder and ugliness are the chief factors of life. The hospital reveals to them a world of exquisite cleanliness, shining opaline walls, gleaming firelight, soft voices, gentle hands, flowers. On a certain number of these patients these new influences exercise a lasting impression. This testimony every sister will give. There are always many to decry hospital work—to dwell on the faults of the system and to depreciate the virtues, but some will find more cause for rejoicing over one Eastender who has learned to appreciate, however faintly, the joys of fair and pure surroundings, than over a class of hungry guttersnipes who have mastered a French verb and the Rule of Three.

The Lady with the Lamp—as Longfellow called her in memory of the long nights, when, lamp in hand, she passed along the Scutari wards—is still among us in this feverish twenty century world of ours. She has so strenuously avoided publicity, since she returned broken in health from her labors in the Crimea, that few realize her presence, save those who have profited by her advice and experience in the management and arrangement of our great institutions.

Yet, in spite of her retirement, public interest flames at the mere mention of her name. There clings about her—apart from the practical value of her great work—a halo of pure romance. Nothing that has been said or sung in praise of woman can rival the words, written by one of the many soldiers whom she tendered: "She would speak to one and another, and nod and smile to many more; but she could not do it to all, you know, for we lay there by hundreds, but we could kiss her shadow as it fell and lay our heads on our pillows again content." Save for a few women, born to the purple, Florence Nightingale has achieved the chief place in woman's roll of fame. In days, moreover, when "the frivolous work of polished idleness" was deemed all-sufficient for her sex.

Prince Eddie's Pointer to the King.

Among the numerous birthday presents received by King Edward none interested or amused him more than a little book from Prince Eddie of Wales, his future successor. It appears that the King on a recent occasion was unable to inform Eddie how the leopard gets its spots, and in this book was a puzzle which explained all about it.

The Prince of Wales' second son presented his grandfather with a perfect mechanical torpedo-boat. Consuelo, Duchess of Marlborough, gave him a beautiful cigar casket formed of alternative lines of pink and green enamel, separated by rows of brilliants, with the royal crown and cipher in the centre in high relief, and full of the King's favorite cigars. Mrs. George Cornwallis West, who was one of the Sandringham house party, gave him a diamond and ruby bell-push for his writing table, but Mrs. George Keppel's present was probably the most novel of all. It was a beautiful little gold box studded with jewels, and containing a clock of marvelous workmanship, out of which every hour springs a dainty humming bird which for one minute pours forth a flood of melody. It is a copy of a famous eighteenth century trifle. Countess Torby sent a pair of long leather motoring gloves lined with the finest Russian sable, and especially made for him in Moscow.

Encounter With Nine Lions.

Colonel Colin Harding, C.M.G., the commandant of the Barotseland Native Police, who accompanied chief Lewanika to England for the King's coronation, has had an exciting adventure with a number of lions.

While traveling from Mumbwa (the headquarters of the Kafue district commissioner) to Kalomo (the capital of Northwestern Rhodesia) he came across no fewer than nine lions all in a group. Quickly he wounded two, and he was following up one of the pair when a lioness sprang at him and knocked him over. Luckily he retained his rifle and was able to fire, and at the noise of the weapon the brute made off.

In the meantime the mules had bolted with the cart, leaving the colonel in a perilous position in the event of the lions returning. After they had gone some distance, the driver, who had kept his seat all the time, succeeded in stopping and turning the frightened animals. Colonel Harding was conveyed back to Mumbwa, about twelve miles, and medical examination showed him to be suffering from a broken shoulder and a torn thigh. He is now progressing favorably. One of the lions was found dead.

The Gospel of another life gives life to this one.

A Natural Inference.

They were discussing the couple in the next flat. The husband is silent and reserved, while the wife is a gossip and the most inveterate borrower. Food of all kinds, articles of clothing, money and everything that is capable of being borrowed she endeavors to get from the neighbors on one pretense or another. Some surprise was expressed that her husband should have chosen her as a partner for life when a little girl who was listening created considerable amusement by exclaiming:

"Perhaps she borrowed him too."

QUEEN ANNE BOLEYN'S WELL AT CARSHALTON, SURREY, ENGLAND.

Romantic Associations of That Section of the Old Land—Charming Story From Which the Well Derives Its Name—Queen's Steed Striking Its Hoof Into the Ground Caused a Spring to Burst Forth.

Few country villages have such pretty and romantic associations connected with it as Carshalton, in Surrey. Just opposite the picturesque bridge which crosses the Wandle is "Anne Boleyn's Well," which derives its name from a charming little story that runs as follows: One day the very much-married monarch Henry VIII. was riding with Anne Boleyn from Nonesuch Palace, Ewell, to visit Sir Nicholas Carew at Beddington Park. On reaching Carshalton Church the Queen's steed commenced prancing about, and by striking its hoof into the ground caused a spring to burst forth. To perpetuate this event the parishioners had a stone dome erected over, and a neat iron railing placed around it. Formerly a bowl was attached for thirsty pilgrims to drink to the memory of Anne Boleyn, but this has disappeared, although water can still be found in the well, and, in the early part of the year, the narcissus, periwinkle, and other spring flowers come up in rapid succession to embellish this little shrine.

ANNE BOLEYN'S WELL.

A stone is placed in front outside the railing, and engraved upon it is her name: "Anne Boleyn." There are some verses on the subject in Dr. Brightling's "History of Carshalton," from which we quote the first three and the last three stanzas:

'A well there is at Carshalton,
And a neater one never was seen;
There is not a maid in Carshalton
But has heard of the well of Boleyne.

It stands near the rustic churchyard,
Not far from the village green:
And the villagers show with rustic pride
The quaint old well of Boleyne.

They tell that the hapless beauty,
With a gay and noble train,
In the heyday of her grandeur
To Carshalton village came.
* * * * * *
But, ah! little they thought as they saw the maid,
That she was their future queen,
And that a token of her visit
Should stand near their village green.

But so it was, at her steed rushed by,
One spot where its hoof had been,
To the joy of the gaping rustics,
Gushed out in a bubbling stream.

In grateful love they marked the spot,
And to this day is seen
The quaint old well, with its dome of stone,
Named after fair Anne Boleyne.

AUTOMOBILES IN INDIA.

Eight Day Reliability Run for Prizes Planned for Yuletide Week.

An automobile reliability run of over 800 miles in India will be the last important automobile competition of the present year. It is the first time that such an ambitious plan to show what automobiles can do in that country has ever been attempted in India. The run will begin on Monday, Dec. 26, and continue for eight days, closing on Monday, Jan. 2. The total distance to be traveled will be 883 miles. The start will be made from Delhi and will end at Bombay.

The reliability run has been well planned. Speed will not be taken into consideration, except that the minimum speed must not be less than twelve miles and the maximum speed not over thirty miles. The main purpose of the reliability run is to determine if possible what make of car is best adapted for the roads of India, as there are many long stretches unconnected by railroad, and also to ascertain what car has the least complicated machinery, so that, if it should get out of order, it could be easily fixed by the driver without the necessity of sending it many miles perhaps to an automobile shop. A number of the leading French and English manufacturers are preparing to send out some of their best cars.

A number of prizes have been given for different classes of automobiles, the chief trophy being the gift of the Gaekwar of Baroda, one of the wealthy native princes. This will be the first automobile event of importance ever held in India, and it forms another illustration of the world-wide popularity of the automobile.

Lucky Laborer.

A laborer has picked up what is believed to be a genuine "Strad" at a sale at Holme Eden, near Carlisle. Stringless, bridgeless, pegless and covered with dust and cobwebs, it was knocked down to him for 6 shillings. He knew something of the value of fiddles, however, and disposed of his purchase to a dealer for £600. The dealer, it is said, has now sold the fiddle for £1,600. The violin is believed to be a "Strad" which has been missing for at least a century and has at different times been thought to be in London, France, Germany and America.

Couldn't Stand the Pressure.

The Mayor of Stuhlweissenburg, in Hungary, became so excited over preparations for a public ball at which an Archduchess was to appear as patroness that he wore his dress clothes day and night and had to be sent to a lunatic asylum.

Many Varieties of Sausage.

A sausage exhibition is to be held in Berne next spring. The Berne butchers have offered a prize for a popular sausage which must be "nourishing, strengthening and cheap." It is stated that 1,785 varieties of sausage will be shown at the exhibition.

The Professer.

"Certainly," observed the doctor in reply to a question, "tight lacing, habitually practiced, often causes red noses."

"But light tasting, habitually practiced, causes more of them," replied the professor.

THE FORCE OF FEAR.

Fright Was the Cause of the Death of Frederick I. of Prussia.

There are several well authenticated cases where fright was the cause of death. An English surgeon tells of a drummer in India across whose legs a harmless lizard crawled while he was half asleep. He was sure that a cobra had bitten him, and it was too much for his nerves, and he died.

Frederick I. of Prussia was killed by fear. His wife was insane, and one day she escaped from her keeper and, dabbling her clothes with blood, rushed upon her husband while he was dozing in his chair. King Frederick imagined her to be the white lady whose ghost was believed to invariably appear whenever the death of a member of the royal family was to occur, and he was thrown into a fever and died in six weeks.

But perhaps the most remarkable death from fear was that of the Dutch painter Pentman, who lived in the seventeenth century. One day he went into a room full of anatomical subjects to sketch some skulls and bones for a picture he intended to paint. The weather was very sultry, and while sketching he fell asleep. He was aroused by bones dancing around him and the skeletons suspended from the ceiling clashing together. In a fit of horror he threw himself out of the window. Though he sustained no serious injury and was informed that a slight earthquake had caused the commotion among the ghostly surroundings, he died of nervous tremor.

THE WREN BUSH.

An Old Custom Still Observed In Ireland at Christmas.

Among the many odd customs still observed in Ireland at Christmas few are more curious than the practice of carrying about "the wren bush" on St. Stephen's day, and antiquaries are puzzled to explain why the poor little "king of all birds" should be put to death on the festival of the first martyr.

The most probable explanation is that the wren was sacred to the Druids and was used by them in divination and other pagan rites at the festival of the winter solstice, which almost coincided with Christmas, and consequently the clergy urged their converts to destroy the birds which were associated with such unholy rites, just as St. Patrick's relentless destruction of the images of serpents, used in the ancient pagan worship of Ireland, gave rise to the legend that he—

Gave the snakes and toads a twist
And banished them all forever!

This seems the more likely, because "dream," the old Irish name for "wren," also means "a Druid," and old folk still call "Jenny" the "Druid bird" and say that she has the gift of prophecy and that those who can interpret her twitterings as she hovers about a house or flies from bush to bush can read the future. In the library of Trinity college, Dublin, there is a curious document describing how to interpret the notes of the wren.—Maud E. Sargent in Longman's Magazine.

Lawyers and the Law.

I expeck it 'd be only a poor lawyer couldn't argue a tack into a cow—'n' out of her again, too, f'r that matter—'n' Mr. Weskin ain't no poor lawyer. He's fine 's they make. Of cqurse a good deal of the time no one knows what he means, but that ain't nothin' ag'in him, f'r I think with a lawyer you generally don't. It's a part of their business not to let no one know what they mean, f'r 'f law was simple no one 'd ever get fooled.

It takes another lawyer to see what a lawyer is doin', anyhow. When a lawyer says anything is so to me I never take no time to disbelieve him, 'cause he'd never got to be in the law a tall if he wan't able to prove the truth of his own lyin'.—"Susan Clegg and Her Friend, Mrs. Lathrop," by Anne Warner.

Not Very Crazy.

A nobleman against whom insanity was imputed by his relatives was asked during examination by Lord Loughborough, "How many legs has a sheep?"

"Does your lordship mean a live or a dead sheep?" asked the nobleman.

"Is it not the same thing?" said the chancellor.

"No, my lord, there is much difference. A live sheep has four legs, a dead sheep but two. The others are shoulders."

A Town For Men Only.

On the borders between China and Russia, in Asia, almost due south of Lake Baikal, is a good sized town known as Maimatchin, which is exclusively inhabited by men. The place has a considerable trade and is also a military post. An old law forbids women to live in this territory, and they cannot pass the great wall of Kalkan nor enter Mongolia at all.

Her Rest.

"So Mrs. Gadderly took the rest cure?"

"Yes."

"Did it cure her?"

"No, it didn't do her a bit of good. She's just as anxious to rest as she always was."

A New Danger.

"I see they are talking of making clothes now out of some sort of wood."

"Gee whiz! Then I guess we'll find woodpeckers and squirrels in our clothes hereafter instead of moths."—Exchange.

Mean Thing.

Mrs. Ferguson—George, dear, how do you like my new hat? Mr. Ferguson—Do you want my real opinion of it, Laura? Mrs. Ferguson—No, I don't, you mean thing.

Anaemia.

The word anaemia is of modern origin. It was first mentioned by Albert Michel in 1732 in a thesis entitled "De Anaemia." However, if the nomenclature is new, the morbid condition indicated by the word was at all times well known. Hippocrates devoted several pages to a description of this particular condition, but Halle was the first to apply the term to a malady which was prevalent in 1802 among the miners of Anzin, in the north of France, and of which he gave a detailed description.

HOSPITAL BAZAAR

The annual Bazaar and Supper in aid of the Medicine Hat General Hospital took place in the Opera House, on Tuesday. The affair was held under the auspices of the Woman's Hospital Aid and proved, as usual, very successful. The supper tables were several times filled, and the proceeds amount to about $162. Mr J. Nicholson, and Mr F. J. Fewings undertook the onerous duties of carvers, and were happy in being kept busy for an hour and a half. The menu was a very good one, and all who partook of the good things provided were well pleased. A great deal of the refreshments was supplied by friends of the hospital, and so bountiful were these gifts that the ladies put aside sufficient for a luncheon next day, to which school children were invited at a nominal charge. A good sum (about $230) was thus realised.

Mrs Nicholson, president, and all the members of the Aid are to be congratulated upon the success of the undertaking.

We append a list of the stall-holders, to:

ARNER WILSON LEAVING

It is with genuine regret that the people of Medicine Hat learned a few days ago that Mr Abner T. Wilson, rancher, would be leaving the district to-day. Mr Wilson is one of "our cousins" from down south, and during his two years residence amongst us has proved up to the hilt that he is made of sterling stuff, in fact, he is of the "all wool and a yard wide" class. Indeed we cannot say a word too much in praise of Abner Wilson as a business man, and a friend and neighbor. As Mr Crawford, manager of the Bank of Commerce here, remarked, he is the sterling article, "a man whose word is his bond."

On Saturday morning some friends hurriedly got together and arranged for a little presentation, and in the evening a meeting was held, presided over by the Mayor, at the Cypress Club, when Mr Wilson was presented with an address and a purse containing gold pieces of the value of $150. The address was as follows:

To Abner Wilson Esq.,
Medicine Hat, N.W.T.

Having learned with regret of your intended departure from amongst us, to take up your residence in your former home, we, your fellow citizens and friends take this opportunity of conveying to you our expressions of regret on your removal.

We feel that Medicine Hat is losing a worthy citizen, and the Stock Association, of which you were an active and energetic member, a good adviser. Particularly in their meetings the Association will miss the ideas and views of one who has always been ready to give them the benefit of a mature and experienced judgment.

We trust that in your new sphere your operations may be attended with the success you so well deserve, and that prosperity and health will follow you and your family, and that in the not distant future you may see your way clear to take up your residence with us again.

The accompanying gift is tendered you as a token of appreciation on our part of your sterling qualities as a citizen and a friend.

F. G. Forster, F. L. Crawford, W. Cousins, C. R. Mitchell, A. J. Day, W. S. Mussett, W. J. Wilkinson, A. P. Day, Walter Huckvale, J. P. Laird, A. Desbrisay, C. S. Pingle, D. G. White, R. J. Harlow, T. Hutchinson, W. Crawford, D. Milne, A. C. Hawthorne, E. K. Strathy, W. B. Marshall, James Rae, F. F. Fatt, T. F. Carberry, L. B. Cochran, H. E. Beatty, J. K. Drinnan, J. Wright, C. F. Smith, W. M. Williamson, J. H. Binns, H. Stewart, T. Tweed, J. B. McIntyre, T. C. Blatchford, W. N. Adsit, W. S. Curry, W. T. Finlay, Jas. Fleming, C. E. Smyth, E. J. Fewings.

Mr Wilson made a feeling reply, thanking all for their kindness and good wishes.

Speeches were made by Messrs. W. T. Finlay, M.L.A., T. Tweed, Wm. Cousins, Walter Huckvale, F. L. Crawford, Tony Day, Bud Wilkinson, Adison Day, and C. R. Mitchell.

"He's a jolly good fellow" and "Auld Lang Syne" were sung, and everybody wished the guest of the evening "all sorts of good luck," and hoped he might some day return and again settle among us.

TRAGIC WORK IN RUSSIA

The Grand Duke Sergius, uncle of the Czar, was on Friday blown up by a bomb, thrown under his carriage by a man in workman's attire. The Grand Duke was blown to pieces, the coachman and horses killed. The murderer man has been called by the Nihilists "Russia's evil genius." The murderer was arrested.

CURLING

Medicine Hat at the Winnipeg Bonspiel

F. S. Pingle's rink won their way as far as the eights in the Tetley Tea Trophy. They won three games in this competition and were put out of the running in their fourth game, losing to Eade of Winnipeg 12 to 10.

In the McMillan Cup competition, he also got as far as the eights, then Hunter of Indian Head, doubled the score on Fred and put him out of business by 16 to 8.

On Wednesday afternoon a friendly match was arranged between the east and west, of which the Free Press had the following to say:

EAST v. WEST

A friendly match was played at the Granite yesterday afternoon between the extreme east and the furthest west, as represented in the Bonspiel by Medicine Hat and Montreal, and it was replete with interesting features from start to finish. It is true there were some curious raises and other mix-ups that were perhaps not quite according to Hoyle; but, on the whole, the game was well fought. In the end the effete east managed to beat the woolly west by just one shot.

Montreal—J. Currie, P. D. L. Lyall, W. R. J. Hughes, W. Lyall, skip.

Medicine Hat—John Benson, W. Cousins, F. O. Sissons, F. S. Pingle, skip.

HOCKEY

On Wednesday last, the much talked of match between Married Ladies and Bachelor Girls came off. The Bachelors proved one too many for the Benedicts, winning out by a score of 1-0. The game drew one of the largest crowds of the season, and they got their money's worth. Play was fierce from beginning to end, and at no stage of the game did things drag. The shooting and lifting powers of the ladies were a revelation to some of the spectators. Mr Vic Ready refereed the game and acquitted himself nobly. Miss Mary Taylor was unfortunate enough to sustain a nasty cut under the eye right at the start of the game, which necessitated a couple of stitches being put in, her place on the team was taken by Miss Fitzpatrick. Miss Gilbert who played a fine game at rover for the married ladies, was also hurt by a severe body check, but pluckily continued the game. The Bachelor Girls put the puck into the net once in the first half, Miss Whyte doing the necessary, but it was offside. After 13 minutes play in the second half, Miss Whyte again put the rubber through, and this time it counted.

The teams lined up as follows:

Married Ladies	Bachelor Girls
Mrs Geo. Bell goal	Miss I. Walton
Mrs R. D. Smith point	Miss Robertson
Mrs J. Alcock c. point	Miss G. Hawk
Miss Gilbert rover	Miss M. Taylor
Forwards:
Mrs Platt	Miss White
Mrs Binns	Miss K. Hayward
Miss McLean	Miss Taylor

W.C.T.U. CORNER.

(Conducted by a member)

How great a tree can grow from a very tiny seed, and how many a great blessing comes from a very small effort.

Joshua with Caleb in the name of the Lord won a great possession of land for the wandering Israelites, for it was the faith and truth of these two men the Lord blessed and honored. So God is blessing the White Ribbon band, as can be seen from the work the Japanese W.C.T.U. has been doing in the war. It is an old saying that it is an "Ill wind that blows nobody any good" and it is with thankfulness that we read that a number of Japanese soldiers have joined the temperance side, as after many tests, both by using strong liquor and abstaining from it, they have proved that to last through hardships, that must come to every soldier, they need to be abstainers. The officer who made the test with the men, in his report says, that the man who abstains is quicker to escape from danger that is on every side in the battle field, while the man under the influence of liquor was dull, stupid and slow. So it is often the case with men who say "Oh, I can take a glass and leave it alone," but the habit of drinking grows like a plant and the longer it is left to grow the harder it is to uproot.

WILL IT CURE ME?

That's the personal question a woman asks herself when she reads of the cures of womanly diseases by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Why shouldn't it cure her?

Is it a complicated case? Thousands of such cases have been cured by "Favorite Prescription." Is it a condition which local doctors have declared incurable? Among the hundreds of thousands of sick women cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription there are a great many who were pronounced incurable by local doctors. Wonders have been worked by "Favorite Prescription" in the cure of irregularity, weakening drains, inflammation, ulceration and female weakness. It always helps. It almost always cures.

"I commenced taking your medicine, 'Favorite Prescription,' nearly a year ago for chronic inflammation of womb, and can truly say it is the only thing that ever did me any good," writes Mrs. L. C. Warner, of 125 Edwin Street, Toronto, Ontario, Canada. "I could not walk any distance before using it. After taking six bottles of your 'Favorite Prescription' I find I can walk without difficulty and am greatly benefited in general health. Would advise all suffering women to use Dr. Pierce's medicine."

Pierce's Pleasant Pellets These are the Original Little Liver Pills, first put up over 40 years ago, by old Dr. R. V. Pierce. They've been much imitated but never equaled. Smallest, easiest to take and best. They're tiny, sugar-coated, anti-bilious granules, a compound of refined and concentrated vegetable extracts. Without disturbance or trouble, constipation, indigestion, bilious attacks, sick and bilious headaches, and all derangements of the liver, stomach, and bowels are prevented, relieved, and cured. Permanently cured, too. By their mild and natural action, these little Pellets gently lead the system into natural ways again. Their influence lasts.

Magistrate Gilbert had a man before him on Thursday evening for annoying a young lady, the daughter of one of our residents, in the street, and fined him $12. Later, while drunk, the man got a gun and fired two shots in the vicinity of Mr Gray's house, and one charge went through the front window. His first shot narrowly escaped a lad passing down the street. The man was arrested and sentenced to three months hard labor and fined $30, and in default of payment another three months.

Mr Adsit—Yes, but sometimes freight would come in and I could not get the Mayor to sign a cheque, and I had authority to pay out any cash and put the cheque in as cash. Sometimes I would pay but I could not lose track of it very well without losing the freight bill, and I do not think I could do that. I usually made a cheque out at once, and put it in the pigeon hole with the things for the council.

Mr DesBrisay—What is your explanation as to how this shortage occurred?

Mr Adsit—Well. I don't know, Councillor DesBrisay. After we found the shortage I was as much surprised as anybody. I was thunderstruck. At first I thought I must have entered some receipt up twice for a month or part of a month for water or something like that, and it struck me after I was convinced that it was really a shortage that it must have been pilfered.

Mr DesBrisay—You do not know if the shortage occurred after June?

Mr Blythe—No. If there had been a thorough audit 1st of June it would have pinned it to a certain period, but under the method of keeping the books you cannot place it to any particular period of the year. The only method then was to count the cash at a particular date.

Mr DesBrisay—If it happened that the audit was not correct at the end of 1903 would that make any difference?

Mr. Blythe—Mr. Adsit told me the auditors were very particular on this point.

Mr. Stewart—Irrespective of the audit, Mr. Adsit, did you count your own cash.

Mr. Adsit—Yes I counted it and made a slip at the end of September, but somehow it got displaced and I could not find it when I wanted it.

Mr Stewart—You relied upon the audit to show if your cash was kept correct during the year.

Mr Adsit—In other years when there was not so much of it, I kept track of it, but this year I could not.

Mr DesBrisay—How often did you bank.

Mr Adsit—As often as I could, every day when there was lots of money coming in.

Mr DesBrisay—Did you ever leave the drawer of the safe open.

Mr Adsit—Yes, but the safe would be kept shut. I would put the combination part on.

Dr. Smyth—In the balance you struck in September, how did that turn out.

Mr Adsit—It was not in September either, because the list I made was the 1st September. I balanced it up a little after the middle of the year, and it came out nearly right, but afterwards I found I had omitted to put in a payment which the C.P.R. had made of 400 and some odd dollars. I put this in and it came out nearly right.

Mr Drinnan—According to that the deficit occurred in the first half.

Mr Adsit—Yes, I think according to that.

Mr Stewart—In the meantime you have given your personal cheque for the amount of the deficit.

Mr Adsit—Yes.

In reply to further questions Mr Adsit said he was sure his own money was not mixed up with the town money. He had never missed any cash that he knew of. He did not think it was a clerical error as the auditors had been carefully over it. He would like to have kept it quiet a little longer to try and find out further. He had spent every hour with the auditors and worked hard. He had been through the books time and time again.

Mr Blythe—We have checked it over and over again both ways, and it is an absolutely correct audit. As the books are now, they can be balanced every night.

Mr Drinnan paid a high tribute to the excellent way in which Mr Blythe had done his work.

Mr Adsit—I hope people will not think I have taken the money and used it for my own purposes.

Mr Drinnan—No, I do not think anyone will question your honesty. We are all assured of that.

Mr Adsit—Thank you.

Mr Drinnan—But it is best to make it public.

Mr Adsit—I suppose if there has been an error this will be refunded to me.

Mr Drinnan—Oh yes.

It was resolved to let the Auditors' report lie on the table until next meeting, and the council rose about 12 o'clock.

MILLIONAIRE IN OVERALLS.

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT AS HE WORKS IN HIS MACHINE SHOP.

Few wage earners work any harder than does young millionaire Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr. Unlike some other young men who have come into the inheritance of vast wealth, Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., is a man of strong principles and a firm believer in the nobility of labor.

After his graduation from Yale university the young man decided to equip himself with a thorough practical knowledge of every branch of railroad work. Donning a pair of overalls and jumper, he worked side by side with ordinary mechanics, spending two years' time in the motive power and civil engineering department of the New York Central Railway.

He is an expert mechanic, and has already perfected several inventions which have come into use as improvements in railway equippage. One of these inventions is a device for use on locomotives which has the effect of facilitating the removal of the fire box from an engine, thus expediting the work of cleaning the fire box.

In this picture Mr. Vanderbilt has on one of Fincks "Detroit-Special" No. 755 Coats and Fincks "Detroit-Special" No. 15 Reversible Overall. All other "wage earners" are now asking for Finck's "Detroit-Special" Reversible Overalls, Union Made, made in Detroit. For sale by all the leading dealers throughout the country.

THESE WORDS

OF THE

APOSTLE PAUL

"Prove all things. Hold fast that which is good."

(I Thess., Verse 21.)

When Paul wrote these words, wild beasts were tearing human beings to pieces in the Coliseum at Rome. This Coliseum now stands a ruin, its walls crumbled; trees, vines and rubbish now hover over where once emperors, senators and women, with screams of delight, watched the blood flow. It is a mere monument, a glorious monument, for it reminds every visitor and child of the fact that humanity has progressed beyond voluntary brutality, deliberate torture and horror as the amusement of the greatest city of the civilized race.

Paul was a great man, a brave Christian, and an inspired man. He did not say to men that they must believe without understanding, or accept without questioning, things as they are. But he said "Prove all things, and after these things are proven, hold fast that which is good." But the trouble, however, with nine out of ten, is their narrow-mindedness, their lack of capacity to accept new truths or at least to consider them fairly. Every man who has a plan to help his fellows knows what it is to have his spirit quenched. Every man who has been able to look into the future to see better conditions and to urge their realization, knows how much humanity is in need of good things. The first men that talked against slavery had their spirits quenched with a vengeance. Often they were beaten and jilted, and their prophesy despised, but slavery is gone. Every man who has been capable of seeing the world's future development and who has told about them in advance, has been persecuted for his pains. In the old days he was persecuted vigorously with sticks, stones and the rack of fire.

Modernism is the plan. The days have passed when the superstitious, the wide-mouthed jealous hypocrite and the pretended adviser is of consequence. Lawyers, doctors, merchants and all, have advanced along new lines and have brought forth new ideas. They venture into the world to assert their effectiveness and to prove things, and to hold fast that which is good. The doctor with a specialty, announcing to the world a cure for this, a remedy for that, or a plan by which he has mastered a certain disease and proven to the world this fact, and has held to this fact, who has discarded the old fogey ideas and laid aside the old-time code of medical ethics, is the doctor to wear a crown and reap the reward. The jealous adversary is jealous because some other doctor stands higher or knows more than he does. One hundred years ago we had no railways, we had no electric lights, we had no automobiles, we had no fast trans-Atlantic liners running from continent to continent within six days, we had no flying machines, we had no machine that would weave cloth that one woman could operate and do as much as ten thousand women. We had no modern law of chemistry, we had no doctors to perform operations for appendicitus, for ovariotomy, abdominal sections, apparatuses for artificial breathing, and a thousand and one other things. Do you realize what has been done in the past? Can you realize what will be done in the future? Perhaps more wonders to follow than has been in the past.

A few years ago there appeared in the north-western leading dailies annenucements of a comparatively unknown physician—Dr. J. F. Landry. These announcements set forth the names of certain ailments which were incurable in the past, curable by him. Some looked on him favorably, others unfavorably. His cures, however, soon began to count. His practice, then moderate, continued to grow. It has still continued to grow and extends from sea to sea. This Dr. Landry has out-grown the old ideas of fogyism. He has made wonderful discoveries in medicines, he has cured thousands of patients. He has proven many things. He holds fast to that which is good.

Some remarkable cures that Dr. Landry has made:

W. H Hatch, Winnipeg, Can., was quickly cured of persistent throat troubles.

Herman Mass, Garfield, Minn., had been a sufferer from dyspepsia and liver and bowel troubles for many years. He was entirely cured after a few months' treatment.

Christ Erickson, Tenstrike, Minn., had been afflicted with skin and blood disease. Under treatment all troubles quickly disappeared.

Gust Horton, Tenstrike, Minn., was suffering from a complication of blood and skin troubles. They were entirely removed by the treatment which he received.

Mrs Ole Bredeson, Wheaton, Minn., was cured of rheumatism and female troubles.

Albert Johnson, Crookston, Minn., has been cured of a disease of the blood and of the nerves from which he has suffered for many years.

John Hegg, Northome, Minn., has been speedily cured of a loss of vitality, anemia, and nervous troubles.

Robert Shafer, Fosston, Minn., has been cured of rheumatism and catarrh, which has caused him to suffer for a long time.

Mrs J. A. Hole, McIntosh, Minn., has been cured of a dyspepsia of many years' duration, after having vainly sought relief elsewhere.

Mrs R. R. Findlay, Oak Lake, Man., suffered from ulcers in stomach and female troubles. She was cured in a few months after other physicians had pronounced her case incurable.

Mrs T. W. Thompson, Winnipeg, Man., had been suffering from catarrh and from female troubles. The treatment that she took brought a cure in a short time.

Herman Kirkpatrick, Winnipeg, Man., has been a victim of catarrhal troubles. A treatment of a few months restored him to health.

James Johnson, Brown's Valley, Minn., suffering from rheumatism in his back and neck and limbs. He became unable to do hard work. After a couple of treatments his pains have disappeared, his strength has returned and he can work better than before.

Miss Mary Fjeldahl, Hector, Minn., was afflicted with severe and constant headache, accompanied by debility and nervouseness. Her cure was complete after two treatments.

Mrs Wm. Hanlon, Osakis, Minn., was greatly afflicted by epileptic attacks, coming frequently and leaving her in a nervous and weakened condition. She was also dyspeptic and had a poor appetite. The attack disappeared after her first treatment. Her digestion improved immediately and she is now restored to health.

John A. Tyndall, Fosston, Minn., was afflicted with catarrh and dyspepsia As a result he was weak and run down. After a few months' treatment he is now healthy and strong.

Herman Kreger, Perham, Minn., was cured by a short treatment from dyspepsia and other digestive troubles which had caused him annoyance and anxiety.

Herman Mass, Garfield, Minn., an invalid for years, was cured of severe stomach troubles after a few treatments.

R. F. Juneau, of Langor, Minn., was afflicted with serious liver and bowel complaints, and could not find much relief. He is now entirely cured and feels grateful to Dr. Landry for his treatment.

Carl Lehn, Brandon, Minn., was suffering from chronic pleurisy, which made him unable to work. The treatment restored his health and he now feels as well as ever.

Herbert Johnson, Evansville, Minn., was cured of a severe case of inflammatory rheumatism affecting the heart which had rendered him incapable of work.

Peter Dahmen, Barnesville, Minn., had eczema on one leg. That affection was tenacious and previous treatment did not seem to do any good. Under special treatment the disease disappeared and the skin became healthy once more.

John Fachant, Annandale, Minn., had a ringworm on his hand and that was constantly increasing. Was cured in one treatment.

HOCKEY.

Assiniboia v. All Stars.

The Assiniboias and All Stars met on Friday night, and one of the fastest games of the season resulted. The game was late in starting, so it lasted little more than half-an-hour. The All Stars won out to the tune of 5-3, but had to extend themselves, as the Assiniboia put up a great game. The checking was hard and close, and there were sore spots on many of the boys when they came off the ice. The All Stars started off with a rush and gave Benny Watkins three to stop in the first half-minute, but the Assiniboia soon took a hand in, and when Webster was decorating the fence, Harry Bray scored the first goal. The All Stars came back with a vim and the shots started to hum about Watkins' ears, and he stopped some hot ones from Finlay, and Adsit, before Ray Turnbull beat him, evening the score. It did not take Adsit long to duplicate Turnbull's performance, and placed the All Stars one up with a neat shot. O'Reilly was the next man to do the necessary. Webster rushed the puck down the ice but lost it, and it was sent back, O'Reilly secured near centre ice, ran down and scored making it 2-2. Not to be outdone Adsit secured and making a pretty run, landed the puck in the net, but not before Watkins got in the way of some hot ones. Ray Turnbull thought it was his turn now, and tallied two more. After some exceptionally hard work by both sides, Melrose decided he could'nt go off the ice without a goal to his credit, so he rushed and scored on a fine long shot, making the final score, All Stars 5, Assiniboia 3. It kept Watkins busy getting in the road of the puck, and he made grand stops, notably one from Ray Turnbull from about three feet out. Another time Webster lifted from cover point and no one saw the puck till it hit Benny's stick. (It is a question who was the most surprised, Benny or the puck). Mr Vic Ready refereed the game in his usual impartial manner, and kept his peepers peeled for offsides in great style. The teams were:

All Stars		Assiniboia
W. Turnbull	goal	R. B. Watkins
Irwin	point	Campbell
Webster	cover point	G. Turnbull
E. Porter	rover	A. Melrose
R. Turnbull	centre	H. Bray
T. Adsit	left wing	L. O'Reilly
W. Finlay	right wing	D. Davis

Communications.

The Editor is not responsible for the opinions of his correspondents, nor does he always agree with them.

Sir,

Regarding your articles on appointment of Stipendiary Magistrate, there is one side of the question, I venture to think, you have overlooked, viz: that of the commercial side. I have been given to understand that towns bearing the cost of administration of the law obtain payment over from the Department of Justice of all fines inflicted. It is possible that were the matter properly taken up, (and not settled in the off-hand manner of one of the councillors,) it would be found that besides paying for the administration of the law in the form of wages and the Stipendiary's salary, a respectable balance would be left.

Yours obediently,
Mountain Dew

Sir,

I with many others have read and heard all manner of talk relative to Provincial Autonomy, but are we not in danger of being told by our clever eastern fellow citizens that our present agitation tends to show an incapacity to govern ourselves properly? I allude to the by-question of "the Capital." The question of autonomy just now seems centred in "where will the capital be." How many of us are concerned as to where the dividing line will be, and how few are studying the question. It is a matter of intense importance, not so much to any particular town, but to the country as a whole. If, for instance, the line is run near Medicine Hat, which dear old Calgary is anxious for, the small block of ranching land between Medicine Hat and Moose Jaw would feel very lonely when it became attached to the farming district east. On the other hand, if the line consisted of the third meridian, the province to the west of that would be a genuine ranching province, and that to the east a farming. A question of this kind is of far greater importance to the country as a whole than the question of a capital. Medicine Hat has such strong arguments in its favor for the capital that its people might well afford to use some of their time in watching this question of the dividing line. It is impossible for our legislators, when settling the question of the capital, to overlook the fact that our gas will lower the cost of government very considerably, and that Medicine Hat is the divisional point of the Crows Nest, and eventually of the only American road running into the western province.

And then again we should not allow this question of capital to overshadow the school question, but let us make it clearly understood that we will brook no interference with our schools except it be to strike that objectionable word "Protestant" from our Statute book, and have the schools called exactly what they are, viz: public schools.

I hope that you will continue fighting on the lines you commenced in your issue of the 14th.

Yours obediently,
Non time crede tantum

Medicine Hat as a Winter Residential Town.

As a place of winter residence Medicine Hat is hard to beat. The winter weather is a decided contrast to that of the east and of Manitoba, for the "cold spell" here lasted less than two weeks and during that time the weather was never once severe according to the easterners idea of severe weather. The absence of raw winds is a feature of the climate the year round. Fall weather prevailed until after Christmas, and old residents predict open weather from now on. The air is at all times mild, but with just enough crispness in it to make everyone feel inclined to be up and doing. All the winter sports, such as curling, hockey, etc., can be enjoyed without the discomfort experienced where the thermometer is "away below" all the time.

The labour of housekeeping is reduced to a minimum in most of the houses, for the natural gas is used as fuel, both for heating and cooking, and also for lighting. The cleanliness and cheapness of the gas astonishes every visitor to the town.

For healthfulness of situation Medicine Hat has no superior in the west. The strongest recommendation of all is undoubtedly the fact that among the business men of the town there is an absence of any scramble to "get rich quick and get out." Men who have done well here are building beautiful residences, with the evident intention of ending their days here. Can any town offer more to prove its claims as a desirable place of residence?

Mr. Scott Denies that he Favors Calgary for Capital.

At a meeting of the Council of the Medicine Hat Board of Trade held on Thursday afternoon, a letter was read from Mr. Walter Scott, M.P., showing that he is much interested in Medicine Hat's claim to be made capital of the Western Province.

Attention was drawn to a statement in the Calgary Herald under the caption "Scott Favors Calgary," "Western Assiniboia Member says Calgary should have Capital."

A wire had been sent Mr. Scott asking if he had made a statement to warrant the Herald's observations, and a reply was read from him stating he had not expressed such an opinion.

On the motion of Messrs. Pingle and Healy, it was Resolved that the Secretary communicate with the Calgary, Winnipeg, Regina, Lethbridge and MacLeod papers, correcting the statement that Mr. Scott favored Calgary as the capital in preference to Medicine Hat, and stating that this Board has Mr. Scotts authority that he has made no statement such as the Herald reported him to have made.

Medicine Hat,

As "She is Spoke" and as She Speaks for Herself.

There appears to be many erroneous notions and fanciful halucinations percolating, along with other liquids, through the brains of certain American editors regarding the prosperous town of Medicine Hat. Recently one of these facetious gentry alluded to the town in question as a "small stock camp near the Canadian frontier," another as the "birthplace of blizzards."

In order to show that both of these statements are absolutely, entirely and utterly false, we invite the individuals in question to make a peregrination through Western Canada, and thus obtain a forcible ocular demonstration of the indisputable fact that Medicine Hat is THE town of the North-west Territories, or digest the following pungent pointers:

Population—5,000
53 Stores
4 Lumber Yards
6 Churches
2 Large Public Schools and 1 Private School
3 Chartered Banks
4 Hotels
3 Social Clubs
3 Brickyards
1 Up-to-date Flour Mill
1 Planing Mill
1 Woollen Mill
2 Cement Building Block Manufacturers
2 Newspapers
10 Restaurants
4 Real Estate Firms
2 Lime Manufacturers
3 Hospitals, including General, Maternity, and Nurses' Home

The town is most beautifully situated on the banks of the noble Saskatchewan river.

It is a divisional point on the main line of the C.P.R., and the terminus of the Crow's Nest Pass Railway.

The town owns a complete up-to-date waterworks system, a sewerage scheme and has telephone system. In addition to the foregoing, the town owns 5 natural gas wells, one of which has, perhaps, a larger flow than any other well in existence, namely, 1,250,000 cubic feet per day. This gas well yields a revenue to the town of $2,500 per month. The expenses of running it are practically nothing. The citizens have in this alone an asset worth about three-quarters of a million dollars.

It is estimated that in five year's time instead of the town collecting taxes from property owners the property owners will be receiving dividends.

The Canadian Pacific Railway Company recently put down a gas well and struck a magnificent flow, the yield being about 1,500,000 feet per day.

The cheapness of this gas for power purposes is almost beyond conception. From different tests made it has been proved that the actual cost of one horse power per day of 10 hours is 3¼ cents. This fact together with its railway facilities makes Medicine Hat the most desirable spot on earth for manufacturing purposes.

As regards weather the climate is unparalleled in any part of the American continent. There is neither the extreme heat of summer nor extreme cold in winter. Blizzards are absolutely unknown. Cattle, sheep, and horses range throughout the entire winter, and come out fat in the spring, large shipments being often made in the month of March.

If any respected contemporary on the other side of the line wishes any further practical demonstration of the truth of our statements, let him come and see for himself, and thus prove the truth of the old adage that seeing is believing.

Here's Another.

Like sheep, those eastern newspaper men follow the lead given them by Uncle Sam, and blindly libel the best portion of their own country. Fancy the Toronto Daily Star publishing such stuff as the following! Why, they would rave themselves black in the face if Kipling said half as much about Toronto. There is only one remark applicable, and that is: "Where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise."

LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

AT MEDICINE HAT.

'Tis true the weather's frigid in the country round just now,
But still it's not as bad round here as elsewhere, we allow,
It is so cold, for instance, away out at Medicine Hat,
That the hapless chaps who live there don't know really where they're at.
They say that out there 'tis so cold you cannot get your breath,
You have to thaw the atmosphere or else you choke to death;
It's useless quite for any man to try to take a smoke.
It freezes when he blows it out. How is that for a joke?
You cannot cuss the weather there, for, lo, just in a trice,
The very words you try to say congeal to chunks of ice;
You cannot get a drink of booze, no chance to have a drunk,
Unless your teeth are good and strong and you bite off a chunk.
We've heard some other things beside but we have said enough
To prove to you that though we think our weather pretty tough,
There is a place that's colder far, more frigid and all that,
We mean that Western prairie town that's known as Medicine Hat.

Toronto Daily Star, Feby. 7, '05.

The resident who called our attention to the above has also handed us the following:

Some people make fun of the weather that we get at Medicine Hat,
But Easterners who write about it don't know really what they're at;
For though out here in the glorious west the mercury sometimes goes low,
We are never completely buried by ten feet or more of snow.
One reads in the Eastern papers about trains being stalled on the line,
And the passengers stuck for hours, and can't get out to dine;
While 'way out here in Medicine Hat we think that we're in luck's way,
If we get enough of the beautiful to make good roads for the sleigh.
Away down in old Ontario the atmosphere's so wet,
That when one takes a drink of rye no water does he get;
For kind nature supplies the chaser that usual follows the drink,
And you simply inhale a draught of air before to sit down to think.
And then you'll conclude that the climate of this western prairie town,
Although it works the mercury sometimes up and then away down,
Has got its charms and its delights, and you would be glad living at
That lively, active pushing town that's known as Medicine Hat.

JAMES TURPIN.

People who have lived here twenty years don't want to go down south or back east. Medicine Hat is good enough for them.

Old Timer's Ball.

A TREMENDOUS SUCCESS.

The Ball given by the members of the Shaginappi Club (the "Old Timers") in the Opera House on Thursday evening was the greatest social event of the season. The crowd was the biggest and the jolliest, the dancing was the liveliest and the general spirit of the whole gathering was the friendliest of anything ever seen at Medicine Hat. About 550 invitations had been issued, and there must have been about 500 people present. The Opera House, large as it is, was taxed to its utmost capacity. At one time we counted 20 sets, 160 persons, in a square dance, while every one of the 150 chairs around the room was occupied by "wallflowers" of both sexes, who could not find standing room, and at the same time the hallway and platform were filled with spectators. Nothing like it has ever been seen at Medicine Hat, and it was a fitting compliment to the Pioneers of the West that their invitations were so largely accepted. The Times' representative was told more than once that to get a complete list of names of those present was an impossible task, and much as we would like to record the names of everyone present we fear we cannot hope to succeed perfectly. Some people suggested that if we announced that "all Medicine Hat and surrounding district were present" we should express the matter well. There were many present from remote country districts who seldom come to town, and about ten couples were up from Maple Creek, and no one in the room footed it better than these.

There were no programmes, the Old Timers disdaining to use an article unknown in the west at the time they came up, when the Indian and the buffalo were sole possessors of these fertile prairies, and the dances were "called off" by "Cap." Johnston, W. Moorhead, Geo. Calder and L. and S. Hay, in turn in the good old style.

This was a decided novelty to many present, and we must compliment the "callers" on the way in which they did the work.

Cap. Johnson took the platform at the opening of the proceeding, and in the name of the club gave everybody a very hearty welcome. The dancing started about 9 o'clock, with Circassian circles (there were two, one within the other), to the strains of Mr. J. Lemaire's excellent orchestra, and was kept up with much zest until about 4 o'clock. The musicians were worked pretty hard, and a good many extras were contributed during the supper time by some volunteer players, which gave the orchestra a much needed breathing space. The buffet was well supplied, a good estimate of the possible attendance having been made. It was under the able management of Mr. E. Turner.

The musical programme was of the old time sort, and included plenty of square dances, Varzoviena, Highland Scottische, Highland Reel, Red River Jig, and a Highland Fling was finely danced by Mr Malcolm Morrison.

We congratulate the committee of management upon the huge success which crowned their efforts, and we echo the sentiments of everybody when we say all will look forward with pleasure to "the next merry meeting."

The arrangements were in the hands of the following:

President, W. R. Johnston; Vice President, Robt. McCutcheon; Secretary-Treasurer, J. H. G. Bray; Executive Committee, Messrs. William Cousins, James F. Fisher, Lawrence Hay, A. E. Whiffen, W. T. Finlay, M.L.A., H. L. Tweed, Walter Huckvale, L. B. Cochran, J. C. Richard.

Government Changes Front

News received from Ottawa this morning states that the objectionable school clause in the autonomy bill has been withdrawn.

Medicine Hat to Have Strathcona Horse.

The statement we made last week on Captain Sissons' authority is verified, as we hear certain parties in town have inside knowledge that the Strathcona Horse will be located at Medicine Hat.

Mr Tom Allen, Moose Jaw, was here on Wednesday, with some stock, and from statements made by him Medicine Hat will shortly be visited by a couple of Moose Jaw gentlemen with a view to interest stockmen here in a movement to establish stockyard sales at Moose Jaw. It is intended to form a company similar to that at Calgary, and handle all kinds of stock in and out of the Territories.

The prospectus of "The Big Four Gold Mines Co." is to hand. The "Big Four" lies close to the famous Le Roi mines, from which so much gold has been taken, and present developments tend to show that the Big Four is on the road to success. The Le Roi produced an average monthly profit of $100,000 in the past year, and the Big Four Company expect great things from their mines very shortly. Their ad. appears in this issue.

The regular large auction sales of horses at the Stock Yards, Calgary, commence on the 15th, 16th and 17th March. Persons wanting to buy or sell horses should attend this sale. Actual entries of over 362 horses have been received comprising all kinds broken and unbroken range horses, heavy and light draft, general purpose horses, and saddle ponies. Very large entries of heavy draught horses have been made, and persons looking for this class of horse should not miss the sale.

THE HERALD FORGETS.

The Calgary Herald in its issue of Thursday last announced that it will be absolutely independent in local politics, and will stand out squarely for non-partisan government for the new province of Alberta. It will recognise neither Grit nor Tory, and will fight only for the fair province of Alberta—first last and all the time." The exact words are: "The Herald declares itself emphatically against the formation of political party lines in the provincial legislature of Alberta." The Herald forgets. The forgoing is all right so far as the Herald is concerned but it must not take to itself the right to make or unmake the policy of the Conservative party in Alberta. The Conservative policy was adopted in convention (at which, by the way the proprietor of the Herald was present), and therefore the "formation" has already taken place. Only those who made the policy for the party can unmake it, and as the matter stands the Conservatives are pledged to party lines.

THE CAPITAL.

The question of where the capital of the new province of Alberta is to be is one in which everyone in the country is deeply interested. It is not the most important question by any means, but it is one which must be kept in view. Medicine Hat's chances of getting it are rather slim and the people of this district must naturally ask themselves at what other point they would prefer the capital if we cannot get it for ourselves. So far as we judge Calgary is certainly the point. We say then that we should as a district support Calgary in perference to the more northerly town of Edmonton. What the outcome will be is hard to say, but we believe the fight for capital honors will be a hard one and may come out a very even thing. While reserving to ourselves the right to push our chance, if we have any? we should as an alternative support Calgary.

THE SCHOOL QUESTION.

The West has had a rude awakening. Until a few days ago everybody believed the act creating two provinces here would no interfere with the school question, but Sir Wilfred Laurier's government has added a clause to the bill which, if not promptly withdrawn, will raise such a storm in the Territories that may take years to subside. The best the West will get out of it will not compensate for the fearful disturbance it will occasion. The old provinces appear responsible for this dread controversy which threatens the West, and coming at a time when the men of the West want peace and tranquility to develop the wonderful resources of the country must suffer and suffer badly as a consequence. New settlers coming in, should be greeted by a united people having but one object, namely the development of the country, not hideous dissension over educational matters. Words are too weak to express the indignation and regret which must be felt by all true lovers of the Western country.

THE SITE OF THE NEW STATION

Nothing has been heard in regard to the new station for Medicine Hat for some time but it is to be hoped the matter will soon be taken up and a modern station erected here in the near future. The difficulty seems to be the site. The town wants to keep Main Street open and to have Toronto Street opened while the company are desirous of closing Main Street with a view to placing the new structure where the old one stands. There is little doubt, however in the minds of most people that the best possible site for the station is the spot where the C.P.R. store house stands on the north side of the track. If the company adopt that site they would have plenty of room in an easterly direction for a station and a platform long enough for all their purposes and it would be quite satisfactory to the town. Everything points to that site as the most suitable and we hope the company will go ahead and give us a $30,000 station there right away.

FIRE INSURANCE.

One of the insurance companies doing business in this town announced recently that as we have such a splendid water system here they would reduce the fire premiums. Now, this is something worth noting and should not be allowed to pass without comment. We have certainly got a first class water supply and a fire brigade equal to anything on earth for willingness and smartness. Why then should the people of this town pay high insurance rates? We should be at the bottom notch in this matter. The other day it was stated that Marshall and Hunter would have to close the Opera House because the insurance premiums had been increased upon their stock, which is in the same building, and the increase was so much that it would pay them best to close the hall. Surely there must have been some mistake there on the part of the insurance men. The Opera House is one of the best in the West and the town cannot afford to have it closed. Theatrical managers who come here all speak in high terms of it. Everybody here knows its value for all sorts of meetings and its proprietors treat everyone so liberally, that it is to be hoped nothing will interfere with its being kept going.

Picturesque and Poetical Names.

The Westminister Gazette man must be something of a humorist. He begged the Finance Minister to give new names to the North-West "provinces." "Don't you think," he said, "it might be advantageous from the point of view of commerce to keep the present names there for local consumption, and call the new provinces by names less difficult to pronounce and write than Saskatchewar, Assiniboia, and Athabasca?" The difficulty would not readily occur to a Canadian, and for our part we do not believe that it will occur to any but the most hopelessly blinkered Englishman. It is rather a pleasure to come across names a little less flat-footed than those to which the stay-at-home Englishman is accustomed. Compare London with Ottawa, or Manchester with Calgary, for sound; it is discord versus music. There is, as Mr. Fielding said, a touch of the picturesque and poetical in Canadian names of Indian origin, and we may hope they may never be altered. Canadian Gazette.

What Is Catarrh?

It is an inflammation of the mucous lining of the throat, bronchial tubes and nasal passages excited by germs that can only be destroyed by fragrant healing Catarrhozone which is breathed direct to the seat of the disease, and has never yet failed to cure. Pleasant to use, absolutely certain to cure, Catarrhozone always gives satisfaction. "I suffered from nasal catarrh so badly that I couldn't breathe through my nostrils," writes G. K. Wilmot of Meriden. "I used Catarrhozone for a few minutes and was relieved. It cured in a short time." No other remedy just like Catarrhozone,—it's the best. Two months' treatment $1.00; trial size 25c.

Note and Comment

BY OBSERVER

Go it, Councillor Drinnan, and get the names on the street corners. There seems to be a whole lot of people here who "don't know where to find 'em." Considering we went so far east to get the names we might take a little trouble about them.

Senator Scott, leading the senate down east on his eightieth birthday no doubt thinks that young chap Osler a trifle hasty.

When Dr Osler points out that the best years are between 25 and 40 it is very evident that Ontario's 32-year-in-the-saddle Government was cut off in the very midst of its usefulness.

To have had only the provisional capital here would have meant some thousands of dollars to Medicine Hat. But it was not to be. Never mind, we have the gas yet.

The strangest theft ever perpetrated is surely that which occurred on the Rossbud Indian agency lands, recently thrown open to settlement in South Dakota. One Hans Oslen, and his family went to bed locked up securely in their little one storey house last Sunday night. A gang of thieves who no doubt thought the house was unoccupied stole it during the night without awakening the inmates, got the little building on bob sleds and drove off some miles out in the prairie without awakening Oslen or his family. Then they started to open up the house. This aroused the people, and the thieves fled. This certainly must be regarded as a record theft.

Fred proved himself a thorough diplomat in that curling game between Montreal for the East and Medicine Hat for the West. The west was winning until Fred said "Let them have it boys." "Why, no," said the rink, "we want to win." "No, no," said the wily skip, "let them win. If we win they will go home and never a word will be said about it. If they win they will talk about it all the way to Montreal, and see what an ad. that will be for Medicine Hat." And lo! it came to pass even as Fred had foretold.

THE AUTONOMY BILL

MEDICINE HAT PROTESTS.

A public meeting was held in the Opera House, on Friday evening, to discuss the terms of the Autonomy Bill now before the Dominion House, and also to consider the advisability of raising the town to the status of a City, by obtaining a City Charter, and other matters affecting the welfare of the town in general.

There was a good attendance of ratepayers.

Mayor Forster called the meeting to order at 8.30, and said that as he wished to address the meeting later on, he moved that Mr John Benson be chairman. Mr Cousins seconded, and the motion being carried Mr Benson took the chair.

The chairman suggested the appointment of a secretary, and Mr H. W. Ireland was appointed to the position.

The chairman next announced that he would begin by taking the second matter first, viz: That steps be taken to apply to the first meeting of the Legislative Assembly to make Medicine Hat a City. He asked someone to move the resolution. He supposed the promoters of the meeting were ready with one.

Mr W. Cousins went to the platform, and, as president of the Board of Trade, explained that the meeting had been called at the instigation of the council of the board. It was thought the present was a time when the people should make themselves heard upon the Provincial Autonomy Bill, and it was decided to ask the Mayor to call a public meeting, it was thought the meeting would afford a good opportunity to discuss the question of a city charter. Personally he had not gone into the matter, but Dr. Smyth was present, and he would give the meeting some reasons in favor of moving for a City Charter. He might say, however, that no resolution had been prepared for, as it would appear to them all, the matter had not been discussed and no one was prepared to get the length of submitting a resolution. The idea was to open the matter to the people and let it go to the Town Council for discussion, and possibly submission to the town solicitor. As to Provincial Autonomy the Rev. Mr Harrison, Mr Tweed and others had promised to speak, and four resolutions had been prepared for submission to the meeting. (applause).

Dr Smyth then went to the platform, and said that the question of getting a city charter had been given undue prominence at the meeting. He thought the other questions would have been taken first, as being the most important. However, he would present his ideas with a view to bring the whole matter up for discussion. Incidentaly he might observe that there was, in his opinion, too little public discussion by the citizens. He believed it was good for the citizens to come together, and public dispassionate discussions, such as they would, he believed, have at this meeting, were good for the public and public affairs. (apps). Coming to the question of the proposed charter he believed it would be a good thing to have a city charter for the following reasons. His first idea on was important though it might be called a sentimental one, and that was that when you use the term "town" it did not carry the same weight or idea of importance as if the place were spoken of as a City. People spoke of the city of Calgary, city of Regina, city of Edmonton, but only the town of Medicine Hat, which is perhaps the greatest of them all. (hear hear). At any rate it was a town of greater potentialities. (applause). They should have a city charter if for no other reason. Another reason is that the town as a city would possess more borrowing powers. Probably not first now, but they might at any time require it. Not that increased borrowing powers should be abused. Every question of expenditure would have to be submitted to the people in the form of a by-law, and they could rely upon the wisdom of the people to deal with every question fairly upon its merits. In connection with this the question of bonusing would undoubtedly come up. There is a great difference upon the point. At the present time they had an anti-bonusing clause in the Town Charter. That was a good thing in the abstract principle. As an abstract principle he did not believe in bonusing, but when one town is allowed to do it, another that is not, might find itself at a great disadvantage, and the people be unable to get what they want. Another reason why they should have a city charter is that Medicine Hat no longer has to deal simply with the small everyday matters which the small town has to attend, to such as levying taxes, building sidewalks. The town owned a large waterworks system, and a very big natural gas system, and had gone into the business of supplying householders and others with gas on a large scale. The town limits should be extended, and nearly all the property now contiguous to the town should be included. People now outside should be brought inside by extending the line so that they might enjoy the advantages of gas, the water and sewerage scheme. These were his reasons for suggesting that a city charter should be obtained. He had great faith in the future of Western Canada, and great faith in the future of Medicine Hat. It was going to be a great city, and would out-distance all its rivals in the Northwest Territories. (loud applause).

The chairman suggested that a motion should be made.

Dr Smyth had no intention of doing so, but to put the matter in order he would move that steps be taken to obtain a city charter; and this was seconded from the body of the hall.

Mayor Forster submitted some figures showing the present financial position of the town. The Auditors' statement for last year showed the debentures account as follows:

Waterworks.....	$52,137
Gas.....	46,378
General	4,221
Total.....	$102,736

That was at the beginning of the year. Allowing for repayments the debenture debt at the end of the present year should be $96,000. The total assessment of the town was $1,250,000. Under the increased powers obtained by the town during the past year, they could now borrow up to 20 per cent on that sum, which enabled them to borrow up to $260,000. The speaker was understood to indicate that these were all the powers needed, and that he was not in favor for a city charter. At any rate not now. The town had a debt of $96,000, and had an asset of $1.25 for every dollar it was in debt, and was making money every day out of that asset. He showed a plan, and agreed with the remarks as to extension of town limits, but thought it should be by mutual arrangement between the council and the people outside. He then proceeded to show the extent of the public improvements contemplated by the council during the present year, and said the sewerage scheme would be pushed on and possibly completed this year. The cost would be about $10,000 per mile, and they would probably require five miles of sewerage. The water and gas system would be extended wherever it was wanted and street lighting would be completed within a month. The health by-laws would be strictly enforced and a system of public scavenging to cost $1,700 or $1,800 a year would be instituted. The council intended to make Medicine Hat a model town. They would offer every inducement to manufacturers. Considerable had been done already to advertise the town and get eastern firms to locate here. The woollen mill, he was assured by letter from the secretary, would be started this season. (Applause). The council were endeavoring to get the headquarters of the Strathcona Horse here, and believed it would be done. If so, 120 men would be stationed here. They had asked Mr Scott if it would be well to send a deputation to Ottawa on the subject, and he said no, because it was purely a military consideration. Captain Sissons had talked the matter over with Colonel Evans at Winnipeg, and it was expected that here, where the government had buildings and a large manouvering ground, the force would be placed. They had congratulated the C.P.R. on their splendid find of gas, and offered any assistance, and had received very friendly replies from Sir Wm. Van Horne, Mr Whyte, Mr Dennis, and Mr Jamieson. By-laws would shortly be submitted to the people to provide about $40,000 to $50,000 for a sewerage scheme; $30,000 for municipal building; $12,000 for the new gas well, and completion of street lighting; $10,000 for waterworks extensions; $2,000 to pay for taking over the property in New Edinburgh, lately added to town; probably $2,000 or $3,000 for athletic grounds or a park as close to town as possible. The gas receipts for January were $2,864, and for February $2,500. His personal estimate of the total income from gas for the year was $17,000. The taxes last year were $17,000 or $18,000, and he thought the rate of taxation for the coming year would not exceed 12 mills on the dollar. (hear hear). The council intended to encourage the planting of trees and making lawns, and would be liberal in the way of granting water. In a few years they would have Medicine Hat the most attractive town in the Northwest Territories. (applause).

On a show of hands being taken the motion was defeated by a slight majority.

THE AUTONOMY BILL

The next question discussed was that of the Autonomy Bill.

Mr Thomas Tweed took the ground that it was a question which liberals and conservatives should meet and discuss as Western Canadians, and not as party politicians. The question of autonomy was an old one now, having been under discussion when he was a member of the local Legislative in 1888. From that time to this it had been before the people and the members of the local house laid aside political leanings whenever they dealt with it. The bill now before the house contained many controversial points. Those he would not discuss that night, but there were several clauses which should not be placed on the Statute books. One was the question of the boundary lines, and he gave reasons why it should be placed at the third and not the fourth meridian. The principal reason was that it divides the ranching country. He took exception to clause 6 of the bill which would perpetuate the present method of conducting Dominion elections in the Territories. The late government had a Dominion franchise, but it was found to be very cumbersome and expensive. The liberal government agreed to do away with it and accept the provincial lists for the elections. That is now the course followed in other provinces, but in the Northwest Territories the lists are prepared by enumerators. The bill will perpetuate that system. He strongly objected to it, and claimed that as a matter of provincial rights the new western provinces should be placed in an equal footing in this respect with the other provinces, (hear hear). The next question he wished to discuss was a very delicate one. It was a question on education. He proceeded to read the provisions of section 93 of the British North America Act, 1867. The clause in the bill which had raised so much controversy and led to the resignation of the Minister of the Interior was a new one and it read as follows:

3.—In the appropriation of public moneys by the legislature in aid of education, and in the distribution of any moneys paid to the government of the said province arising from the school fund established by the Dominion Land Act, there shall be no discrimination between the public schools and the separate schools, and such moneys shall be applied to the support of public and separate schools in equitable share or proportion.

Proceeding the speaker said he did not believe the people of the Northwest Territories were at all dissatisfied with the way in which the act is administered at Regina. They have made wise regulations in accordance with the spirit of the B.N.A., Act Protestant and Roman Catholic was treated alike. Why then introduce this new clause? He was discussing it purely from the standpoint of Provincial Rights, and claimed for the people of the Territories the right to handle this subject. They wanted all that was coming to them, but did not want a clause which would give rise to trouble as this clause undoubtedly would, (hear hear). The next question was that of the financial arrangement made for the government of the country. The source of revenue was to be two fold. First would be local revenue to be raised by direct taxation. The second source was money from federal sources, divided into four parts as follows:

Grant for civil government	$50,000
Capitation grant, 80 cents per head on 250,000 up to 800,000.....	200,000
Debt allowance.....	405,375
Lands valued at $1.50 per acre, 1 per cent. on 25,000,000 acres.....	375,000
Total.....	$1,030,000

Now he claimed that this way of dealing with the land question was not a just one. He claimed as a matter of provincial rights that the people of the Northwest Territories should have the administration of these lands. Referring to the question of values, he quoted Mr Sifton as saying when the G.T.P. bill was under discussion, that the government would have 50,000,000 acres to sell, and they were worth at least $3 per acre. It might be said the government purchased these western lands from the H. B. Company, but it was not so. The Hudson Bay Company had certain rights in the land, and the government bought those rights for $300,000. The lands as a matter of fact belong to the Crown, not the Dominion government, and as subjects of the Crown, the people of the West have rights in those lands. The people here can better administer those lands than can people living 2,000 miles away. He appealed to all not to deal with this as a political question, but as one of Provincial Rights. Touching upon the question of the boundaries of Manitoba, he believed the request of that province for extension north was a reasonable one, (appause).

"Not If It Costs Ten Dollars

A bottle would I be without Polson's Nerviline" writes J. A. Ruth, a farmer living near Trenton, Ont. "Nerviline is the best household liniment I know. We use it for stomach troubles, indigestion, headache and summer complaint. I know of nothing better to take in hot water to break up a cold, or to rub on for rheumatism or neuralgia." Every farmer should keep a few bottles of Nerviline handy and have smaller doctor bills. Large bottles 25c. at druggists.

EXPERTS PREFER NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING.

(From New York Herald.)

The two greatest circus proprietors in the world, Barnum & Bailey and Ringling Bros. have decided that this year they will spend no money on bill-board advertising, but will rely entirely on newspaper advertising. They claim that the newspaper, going as it does, into the homes of the people, is the best advertising medium, and they intend henceforth to spend the money they have put in expensive lithographs and large bills into newspaper publicity.

"Shut your eyes, open your mouth and see what luck will bring you."

Many a woman is weak and sick, nervous and discouraged. She suffers from headache, backache and other ills. She wants to be well, but all she does is to shut her eyes and open her mouth for medicine and trust to luck for results. She "doctors" month after month, often year after year, in this same blind, hap-hazard fashion, and receives no permanent benefit.

Women take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription with their eyes open to the fact that it cures womanly ills. It cures irregularity. It dries debilitating drains. It heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. There is no trusting to luck by those who use "Favorite Prescription."

"In the year 1903 my health was poor," writes Mrs. J. Back, of 242 Broadway, Buffalo, N. Y. "I suffered from falling of womb, a disagreeable discharge, painful monthly periods, headache, backache and pains in the limbs. Every month was confined to bed for two or three days. Was weak, nervous and hysterical; life was a burden to myself and I made every one in the family unhappy because I was so irritable. My husband got me four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and before I had taken the first bottle I was feeling some relief. The medicine made me well and strong, free from nervousness, aches and pain, and I felt like a new woman. Before I used the 'Favorite Prescription' I had been taking another physician's medicine for nearly three months, but had received no benefit. Your medicine is certainly the best in the world."

A man or woman who neglects constipation suffers from slow poisoning. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. One little "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic. Don't let a selfish seller over-persuade you to accept a substitute for these Original Little Liver Pills, first put up by old Dr. R. V. Pierce over 40 years ago. Each imitator but never equaled.

In accordance with the usual custom the above were referred to the finance committee for report.

The pound-keeper reports having impounded 22 animals, viz: 17 cattle and 5 horses during the month of February. The report was received and filed.

The monthly report of the chief of police was read, giving account of police court cases, etc., for February, and it was received and filed.

The licence and police committee reported re T. Morrey's bill for $11, recommending that $4 be allowed. The report was adopted.

The same committee recommended an addition of $5 per month to the pound-keepers salary for increased duty in connection with impounding stray dogs. The report was adopted.

The report of the gas committee was read and adopted.

The mayor said the sample gas post was not ready. 25 new meters had been ordered.

The question of putting names of the streets on the corners was deferred until Coun. Drinnan's return.

The health and relief fund committee reported having granted relief to the amount of $8.0 to a destitute family, and the action was approved.

The report of the finance committee was read recommending several bills for payment.

The report of the water committee was read recommending various extensions at a cost of $2,916. On the motion of Mr Stewart seconded by Dr Smyth the report was adopted and an additional 1,000 feet of 6 inch pipe and 1000 feet of 4 inch pipe ordered for contingencies, tenders to be asked for.

A report of the committee on new enterprises was read and the council took up the question of supplying gas in large quantities to manufacturers, with special reference to the brick making proposition.

A lengthy conversation ensued and there was a general feeling in favor of making a special rate for consumers of large quantities, as it was considered that the council should do everything possible to encourage the establishment of manufactures.

Eventually Coun. Smyth gave notice to move at next meeting that a rate be struck; first 100,000 per month, schedule rate; second 100,000 per month, 12½ cents per 1,000 feet; exceeding 300,000 feet per month 5 cents per 1,000 feet.

The auditors report was lifted from the table and adopted.

The letter from the Board of Trade "tabled" last meeting was lifted and filed.

Coun. DesBrisay introduced bylaw No. 90 for the purpose of extending the water works system. Itwas read a first and second time.

Coun. DesBrisay asked what was to be done in the matter of range cattle straying into town.

Coun. Penhale thought the pound-keeper should hand them over to the Stock Association instead of holding them in the pound, if the association would take the matter up.

The question was referred to the license and police committee.

The Mayor reminded the council it was time to advertise for an assessor.

Coun. Smyth gave notice to introduce a motion re scavinging, but said it must be understood, people must first clean up their premises according to the bylaw.

Coun. Penhale asked what about a street sprinkler?

The Mayor said Coun. Drinnan intended to look into the matter while he was in Winnipeg with a view to get a large up-to-date sprinkler.

This was all the business.

Communications.

The Editor is not responsible for the opinions of his correspondents, nor does he always agree with them.

To the Editor of the Times.

Dear Sir,—Judging from your remarks about the erection of a municipal building and increased fire protection, I presume the council are open for suggestions, and I beg to make one regarding horses for taking the hose reel, etc., to fires.

I think that the present arrangement is sufficient during business hours (6 to 18 o'clock) on week days, as there are always plenty of horses available during that time; and I would suggest that our firehall and stables be so arranged and proper fire-team harness provided, so that the team at present owned by the town would be available for nights and Sundays. This would save the town the expense of buying and keeping another team, as well as the wages of a man to look after and exercise them. The present team, through being worked every day, would also be in better shape to make a hard run than one that stood in the stable most of the time. As to the team being suitable, I think that any person who has seen them give an exhibition of speed, as they were in the habit of doing before our present driver took charge, will back them against all comers in getting over the ground in quick time. In fact, if the council were putting on a special fire team, I would suggest that they take the present team for the fire team, and get another team for the street work. Thanking you for the space, I am, yours sincerely,

RATEPAYER.

MILLIONAIRE IN OVERALLS.

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT AS HE WORKS IN HIS MACHINE SHOP.

Few wage earners work any harder than does young millionaire Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr. Unlike some other young men who have come into the inheritance of vast wealth, Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., is a man of strong principles and a firm believer in the nobility of labor.

After his graduation from Yale university the young man decided to equip himself with a thorough practical knowledge of every branch of railroad work. Donning a pair of overalls and jumper, he worked side by side with ordinary mechanics, spending two years' time in the motive power and civil engineering department of the New York Central Railway.

He is an expert mechanic, and has already perfected several inventions which have come into use as improvements in railway equipage. One of these inventions is a device for use on locomotives which has the effect of facilitating the removal of the fire box from an engine, thus expediting the work of cleaning the fire box.

In this picture Mr. Vanderbilt has on one of Fincks "Detroit-Special" No. 75 Coats and Fincks "Detroit-Special" No. 15 Reversible Overall. All other "wage earners" are now asking for Fincks "Detroit-Special" Reversible Overalls, Union Made, made in Detroit. For sale by all the leading dealers throughout the country.

PUBLIC MEETING.

In the course of his remarks the Reverend gentlemen said it simply devolved upon him to move that the question of the education be left to the people of the country affected by the bill. Some of the eastern papers and also those at Winnipeg, had taken up the cause of the West on this subject, and it was time for the people of the West to rise and act in order to have this threatened injustice removed. He had been through a similar contest in Manitoba. Why were eastern papers taking up this Western question? Because they remembered what happened in Manitoba, when the Dominion rose in her might and overturned the party which thought fit to make such a law in Manitoba. It was something of an anomaly that the same gentlemen who took such strong grounds then in overturning the party then in power, should now be found introducing this measure to fasten the same iniquitous scheme upon the Territories This was not a question of party politics. It was a political question but not party politics, and he noticed that the Hon. Clifford Sifton had resigned because of the obnoxious clause. If he had not done so he could not be the honest man they had always known him to be. That was the dangerous clause facing them to day. He would not enter into the merits of separate or public schools. He was heartily in sympathy with their present national public school system; therefore he moved the resolution because the inserted clause was an invasion of provincial rights. In matters of education every province should be free to legislate for themselves. The people of the West should stand for the platform of provincial rights, and demand rights equal to those enjoyed by other provinces. For himself he wanted all to understand that he was a Canadian first, last, and all the time, and everything that touched his country and his citizenship, he proposed to oppose with all his might. (Loud appause).

The motion was seconded by Mr Cousins.

The resolution read

That the dealing with the Education question be left to the people of the country affected by the bill.

Mr Finlay was the next speaker. He congratulated Mr Tweed for the reasonable way in which he handled the subject. For himself he would say he was a National school man. Several very important points to be looked into, Governments should not be condemned until their acts were thoroughly looked into. In the British North America Act it says that any Territory or part of the Dominion that may hereafter come into the state of a province, and wish legislation granting separate schools, those separate schools shall be granted them. If the B.N.A. contains that expression how can any government bring in a bill cutting it out. Mr Harrison had mentioned Manitaba, well, it was a different thing altogether. Here it is whether we will have separate schools or not. In Manitoba ten or twelve years ago legislation was passed to do away with separate schools. That was brought in by Mr Joseph Martin and carried in the Local House. They had separate schools, and that act did away with them. The Dominion government failed to nullify it within a year and it became law. But the matter was taken to the Privy Council in England, and the Act of the Manitoba Legislation was law as it had not been cancelled by the Dominion government.

Mr Tweed.—Did they not also say that the remedy lay with the Dominion government.

Mr Finlay.—Certainly, but Mr Laurier said that rather than coerce the people of Manitoba he would let it go. The Act is still in force. It brings us back to this, that Sir Wilfred reckons that the B.N.A. rules here. If it is not so, he is right, if it is not so, he is wrong. This matter should be dealt with as a matter appertaining to the Territories, and not an issue to be judged by the good or bad qualities of any person. Unity should be our watchword in this western country of ours just entering Provincial Status. (Loud applause).

A show of hands being taken, the motion was carried by a large majority,

Mr Cousins proposed and Mr Tweed seconded the following:

That the lands should be in the hands of the Provincial Governments for their administration; or at least that they should be retained by the Dominion Government for only a small term of years, and that the minerals, forests, and swamp lands belong to the Provinces from the 1st of July.

Mr Finlay argued that it would be madness for a young country to take the matter out of the hands of the Dominion Government, for they would have no efficient machinery for securing immigrants. The Dominion government could do immigration work far better than the province could. Look at B.C., they had their lands and could not get immigrants.

Mr Tweed in reply to this acknowledged the Dominion government had an energetic immigration policy, but if the West had their lands, they would also adopt an immigration policy. As to B.C., it did not need many immigrants, because they had very little lands. They had their lumber and minerals, and were exploiting them. He strongly criticised the clause in the autonomy bill, and said the provinces should get 50,000,000 acres of land. They would enter into the business of selling it and get at least $3.00 per acre.

At this stage of the meeting the audience began to take a little fun out of the matter, and every man who opened his mouth was greeted with shouts of "platform" As a good many wanted a say there was a constant procession to and from the platform. Mr Finlay and Mr Tweed made the journey several times. R. J. Harlow and a speaker in the Salvation Army uniform had a turn.

Mr Harlow considered Mr Tweed quite right. They should send down a strong resolution. If they did not get their lands now they would never get them.

Mr J. Hole, (S.A.), made a perigrination to the platform, and said he agreed with Mr Finlay.

The resolution was then put and carried with one dissentient.

Mr Cousins and Mr Tweed proposed and seconded the next resolution as to elections:

That freedom regarding elections existing in older provinces should obtain in proposed provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta without any restriction.

Mr Finlay said until the provinces were created there would be no one to make election regulations but the Dominion government. The power would then be handed to the Province.

Mr Tweed was'nt willing to take any chances on the point.

The resolution was put and carried with about three dissentients.

Mr Cousins and Mr Tweed then moved the following:

That the placing of the dividing line at the 4th meridian is a great hardship to the ranching industry, in that the laws governing a province consisting of a farming country will conflict with the laws required in a ranching country.

We would respectfully suggest that the Government appoint a commission to enquire fully into all the circumstances, and that a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the principal newspapers in the country, the Premier, and Leader of the Opposition, also the Premier of the Northwest Territories, and W. Scott, M.P.

Ex-Mayor Hutchinson journeyed to the platform, and asked—Can the mover and seconder give us a scheme whereby the present Province can be divided up into equal portions without including farm and ranching country?

Mr Cousins mounting the steps—If we are not satisfied we can ask for a commission.

Mr C. R. Mitchell.—Have you any suggestion to make as to when the commission shall report,

Mr Cousins.—No, nor as to whether you or any of your friends should be on the commission. (Roars of laughter).

Mr Mitchell.—Well, I would see that the dividing line would deal fairly with both interests. (hear hear).

The motion was then put and carried unanimously.

Three cheers for the chairman concluded the meeting.

OBITUARY

James Fyfe, aged 36 years, who has been working for Mr Geo. Mackie on his ranch near Irvine, died at the Medicine Hat Hospital about 10 o'clock on Monday night. The cause of death was appendicitis. The deceased was a native of Chapleton, Arbroath, Scotland, and had been in this country about two years, previous to which he had worked for Mr Mackie and others in the vicinity of Great Falls for abcut eight years. He was a first-class ranch hand, thoroughly trustworthy in every way, and great regret is felt at his untimely end.

It appears Mr Mackie went out to his ranch on Thursday, and finding the young fellow had been ill a couple of days determined on bringing him to the hospital. He accordingly brought him in on Friday evening, but the case had gone too far, and the poor fellow died as stated. The funeral will take place to morrow, (Wednesday,) from the Presbyterian Church, at 2 o'clock. All friends are invited.

J. K. DRINNAN TALKS TO THE FREE PRESS

J. K. Drinnan, general merchant of Medicine Hat, is in the city, a guest at the Empire. Concerning the report of the utilization of natural gas at Medicine Hat by the C.P.R., Mr Drinnan said "It is expected that the C.P.R. will establish large repair shops at our town. They have at the present the usual shops connected with a divisional point and have used natural gas in working them, from a shallow well which was sunk some 700 feet and abandoned. Another which is a 1,000 feet is being connected with the shops. The first well demonstrated fully the value of gas as a fuel in a car repair shop and effected a saving of fifty to seventy five dollars per day. It is very convenient in setting tires or engine wheels; a ring of gas pipe is made the size of the tire and punctured at close intervals. On being lighted the effect is a quick and even heat which does better work, with a great saving of time, over any other method.

"The town controls its own gas system and sells to customers at 17 1-2 per 1,000 cubic feet, which means a cheaper fuel than coal, and much cheaper lighting than electricity. The streets are being very successfully lighted by it, indeed very much better than those of Calgary or Lethbridge. It is unnecessary to state that every person uses it for both heating and cooking.

"I may say that several manufacturing concerns are thinking of establishing themselves in the town and are now negotiating with the council. A large woollen mill is being fitted up to be completed and in operation in August. This mill being in operation will stimulate the production of wool all through the west. There is quite a large number of sheep raised in the vicinity of Medicine Hat just now and the numbers will vastly increase.

"It is expected that one of our manufactories will be that of pressed brick, tiles, sewer-pipe, etc.

"The supply of gas is practically unlimited. The geologists tells us that the gas bearing formation runs for a hundred miles west and then branches, one branch running south west to the Crow's Nest Pass, and the other running northerly to the Peace River country. The flow of gas from the main wells is enormous, the pressure it vents being 600 lbs. to the square inch, about six times the pressure on the ordinary steam boiler. The flow of gas per day in the town is one million, and in the C.P.R. two million cubic feet, so you see we have all we require at the present time. To illustrate one of the numerous uses to which natural gas is put, it may be mentioned that it is now used to light the fires in locomotives. As a usual thing it takes half a cord of wood to light a locomotive fire, but now they fill the fire box with coal and turn on the gas; saving in time and money.

"It is the intention of the municipality to bore another hole in case anything happens the one we have. There is great danger of the casing breaking with such enormous pressure, and were it to do so and no other fuel in the town the situation would be awkward. It is also the town's intention to grant special rates to manufactories.

"The ranchers are looking forward to good times this coming summer, the past winter being a very favorable one, there being practically no loss.—Free Press.

NEW STATION FOR MEDICINE HAT IN SIGHT NOW.

TENDERS CALLED FOR

The people of Medicine Hat may shake hands with one another and salute the C.P.R. on the strength of an announcement contained in an advertisement which appears in another column of this issue, calling for tenders for a new station to be built for this town. The structure will be of brick and stone. The advertisement does not say says nothing as to the location of the building, but we do not anticipate any difficulty on that score, as between the town and the C.P.R.

While we do not wish to be presumptious enough to try to tell the company what they ought to do, we may perhaps be permitted to repeat the hope expressed in our last issue, namely, that the C.P.R. will give our growing town a $30,000 station at least. We have every confidence, however, that the company will not build merely for the present, but will provide for the increased demands of the future.

HOCKEY

STANLEY CUP STAYS EAST

The Stanley Cup will be east for another year. The Rat Portage Thistles failed in their attempt to lift it, but they have the satisfaction of knowing that they gave the Ottawa's the hardest run for it of any team that has yet met them.

Captain Tom Phillips and his men have every reason to feel proud of their performance. They were up against perhaps the finest bunch of hockey players in Canada, on strange ice. The first game went to Rat Portage by the large score of 9-3. The score was very even till the last of the second half, then the Thistles piled in 5 goals in short order. The Ottawas were without the services of McGee and Gilmour in this match, and Shore and Gaul who replaced them were not in the same class, McGee and Gilmour turned out for the second match and their presence just turned the scales in the Ottawas favor. The ice was flooded at six o'clock on Thursday, three hours before the match. This placed the Thistles with their fine-bladed McCullock skates at a great disadvantage, there being water on the ice when the game started. After a fierce game Rat Portage lost by 4 goals to 2.

The third and deciding game on Saturday night was one of the hardest fought games played for the possession of the much coveted mug. During the first half the Western system of having a judge of play was used, and in the last half only the referee. The score see sawed the whole of this game. The Thistles were the first to find the net, Phillips doing the necessary. Ottawa evened up, and then Phillips scored again, the score at half time being: Rat Portage 2, Ottawa 1. Ottawa again evened matters in the second half. Then Phillips put the Thistles one ahead, 3-2. Ottawa then scored two, placing them one ahead, but Phillips again evened up, and then Pulford the big point man scored the winning goal for Ottawa, one minute before time was called.

Conductor Dalton, of Calgary, (late of Medicine Hat,) has received a telegram from St. John, N.B., announcing the death of his mother in that city. Mr Dalton visited St John about a month ago being summoned down on account of Mrs Dalton's serious illness. Before he left there was a marked improvement and although the aged lady had passed through the three score and seven limit no immediate fears were entertained The telegraphic news therefore came as a surprise. Mr Dalton's father is still living at the ripe age of 76, and three years ago he and Mrs Dalton celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding.

The Dog Pound.

The doings at the dog pound since the erection of that structure have given rise to a good deal of discussion in town. It was freely asserted that the police acting under the orders of the Council (i.e., the bylaw in that behalf made and provided), were collaring dogs indiscriminately, putting them in the pound, and killing them off without regard to the ownership. Further, it was stated that the dogs were being barbariously clubbed to death, instead of being poisoned or shot. The Times interviewed Chief Markwick upon the point, and from the Chief's statements we are able to say that the reports were much exaggerated. It is true the first dog impounded, and for which no owner could be found, was clubbed to death, but those impounded since were put out of the way by means of a dose of poison. The Chief states that all these were canines that have been around the town for months past, and no one, even their supposed owners, were willing to pay for them, so, being practically ownerless, homeless, hopeless strays, and mongrels at that, they were corralled, kept 72 hours the reputed owners notified, and as a last resource they were done away with. We make this explanation to allay public feeling by presenting the facts of the case. We do not see what other course could be followed. We can quite see however, that it is a subject upon which people will get hot in double quick time. Cruelty to animals at any tiime will rouse public sympathy, but cruelty to a dog will rouse it quickest of all. The dog is peculiarly man's close companion, and a most faithful and intelligent one he is. In many a family circle the dog is almost as much a member of the family as the child, and those owning dogs have been alarmed for their pets safety. We are assured that the police will not interfere with a dog having a tag on his collar showing the tax has been paid, so that owners who think enough of their dog to pay the tax need not fear interference by the police.

Farming a Business.

People are beginning to realise more and more that farming is a business, and the success of the man in it depends very largely upon the extent to which he observes business principles. If a merchants learns that there is a demand for any certain thing that he does not carry, and that he could handle as well as not, he promptly sends for a stock. It seems that many farmers do not act with this spirit, even when they know their land is suitable for more profitable crops. Some plant about the same things every year, without a thought of making any changes, because experience has shown that certain crops pay well on the average. Taking year in and year out the man who follows this plan makes a living at it, but at the end of 10 years is not so much ahead as the man who keeps up closer with the times. While constant change and speculative crops are not to be recommended, the man who is alert, and marches with the front rank is generally speaking, and if he exercises good judgment, the progressive business farmer who secures the best pecuniary results. This is what all are looking for.

Why Not a Sugar Factory?

Farmers in this district would do well to break away from some of the traditions they brought with them from the old homes, and while giving attention to the standard crops of wheat and oats, they should certainly endeavour to raise something else. There seems to be no good reason why they should not grow good crops of corn and sugar beets. They will find corn the best possible feed for much of the farm stock, and good crops of corn would enable them to go largely into hog raising and feeding, which would be a paying investment. We know one or two farmers who intend to grow sugar beet this year, and we suggest that when the time comes the Town should take steps to collect good samples and send them to a sugar factory to be tested. We believe beet would do well here, and once that point is established it would be easy to get a beet sugar factory established here in Medicine Hat. The great point is for the farmers to demonstrate their ability and willingness to raise the crop.

Several of the farming papers coming to our desk contain interesting articles from the pen of Mr W. R. Gilbert of this town. In the Kentucky Stock Farm Mr Gilbert has a lengthy article on "Obscure Lameness in Horses," including a learned disquisition headed "Out of condition." Mr Gilbert also has a very readable article in The Journal of Agriculture and Horticulture, under the caption "Why Bare Walls?" in which the writer advocates the growing of ivy, virginia creeper, or jessamine to cover bare walls of houses, etc. The article is a seasonable one, and most interesting to every lover of the home beautiful. Mr Gilbert evidently possesses a versatile pen. He contributed to the January number of Wool Markets and Sheep, an article of much practical value. Kimball's Dairy Farmer for March also contains an article from the same facile pen, and it is very evident W. R. Gilbert is a pretty busy man.

The awful fatality at Maxville, Ontario last week should cause those who take an active interest in the game of hockey to devote some time to a careful revision of the rules with a view to lessening the danger of the repetition of such occurrences. This is the third hockey player killed while playing the game this season One young man named Fraser lost his life at Pembroke, and another named McLean at Woodstock, N.B. No one can reasonably entertain the opinion that young Loney struck the blow with any intention of inflicting serious injury. But blows are too frequent in contests of such a strenuous character, and there must be a stop to it if the game is to continue to hold its popularity with the public. The fatalities referred to above all occurred in the east, and we think it reflects much credit upon the West, still called by some the "wild and woolly" that the play from the lakes to the mountains has had no such lamentable results as those above referred to.

Lord Salisbury knew well what he was about when he took Great Britain out of her position of "splendid isolation" to form an alliance with Japan."

The only victory which Russia seems to have gained since the war began is the one where she killed a few hundreds of starving revolutionists in St. Petersburg.

Father Cruise, Ottawa, recently asked the question "Does it not look like 'straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel' to be appalled at the sight of a child with a cigarette in his mouth, and yet to be indifferent whether such a child knows the ten commandments or not?" It certainly does, and what we have to do is put out the cigarette and put in the commandments.

Rider Haggard, the famous author, has been appointed by the British Government to make a study of Canadian methods of colonisation and will make a visit to the North-West. It is the intention of the British Colonial Office to apply the scheme to the colonisation of South Africa.

Some of the British newspayers are giving us a most fantastic interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine. Canada need not fear an attack from an enemy, they say, because the United States would regard an invasion as contrary to the Munroe Doctrine. Canada will only be attacked by a European power as a possession of Great Britain. In any war in which Great Britain may be engaged the people of this country will be engaged in also. It would be preposterous for the United States to permit us to send aid to Britain and yet prevent Britain's foes from endeavoring to puuish us for doing so. Our American neighbors would have to take one position or the other. They would either have to prevent us aiding Britain or suffer us to take whatever knocks were being given in the contest. If they tried to prevent us aiding Britain they would be interfering in something with which they have no business. Canadians do not need or do not ask for protection from the United States. We do not recognise the Monroe Doctrine as applying to Canada. This was a British country before ever there was a Monroe Doctrine or a United States to announce it.—Canadian Magazine.

Do the people of the new provinces wish to be free or enslaved? We want no compromise, but the fullest liberty to deal with our own educational matters "In and for each province the legislature may exclusively make laws in relation to education."—British North America Act. This is what the new provinces want and nothing less. No modification of the educational clause in the autonomy bills will be satisfactory. The new provinces want the clause struck out entirely, and the fullest freedom given to the provinces.—The West.

Pneumonia is filling the Hospitals

Every day we hear of someone being taken pneumonia. The only preventive is to get strong and keep your body healthy. Take Ferrozone which makes the rich red blood that nourishes and stimulates the entire system. "I was all run down and an apt subject for pneumonia writes A. B. Charters of Burlington, when I tried Ferrozone. I did'nt believe it was possible for Ferrozone to build me up so quickly. In a few days my appetite improved, color came into my cheeks, and I felt stronger. I gained eight pounds and regained my old time vigor through using Ferrozone." Try Ferrozone, it assures health. Price 25c.

MOISTURE AND SOILS

The amount of water which a soil may retain after a rain largey influences the crop. An English scientist gave years of study to the absorption and retention of moisture by plants, and found that more depended upon the knowledge of the soil on the part of the farmer and of the conditions affecting crops, so far as each particular crop was concerned, than upon anything else, as no two fields are exactly alike. When rain reaches the ground it makes its way into the space between the particles of soil and expels the air as it fills the spaces.

The rain is warmed by its passage through the air, thus brings warmth to the soil, while more warmth is brought by the air. The rain disolves the soluble substances of the soil, carries the plant foods down to the roots and regulates the mineral matters that may have a tendency to rise to the surface. When the land becomes very dry the plant foods are concentrated. There are some substances in the soil, that are, to a certain extent, injurious to plants, and when there is a copious rain these substances are diluted and rendered less harmful, or the rain carries them off altogether beyond the influence of the plant The rain also brings down the nitrates, ammonia and other substances existing in the atmosphere, which becomes food for plants in the soil. The farmer who knows something of the amount of moisture which falls upon his land during every month of the year, and who can also form some idea of the retentive capacity of his soil, better understands which crops will thrive thereon to advantage. The amount of rain which passes through a soil depends upon the amount of rainfall, the physical conditions of the soil and the amount of evaporation which occurs. The evaporation will depend greatly upon the temperature of the soil, the temperature of the air, and whether the land is bare or occupied by a crop. The requirements of a crop depend upon its various stages of growth. When the production of vegetable tissue is proceeding with the greatest vigor the demand for water is greatest. This period is more or less determined by the quantity of water supplied and the moisture or dryness of the season.

The charming weather we have had in this district has to some extent been shared by other places, and while there is no reason to grudge Winnipeg her share, I must take exception to the following which appeared in The Telegram of the 5th inst.:—

"Violets in full bloom were gathered from a flower bed on the lawn of A. Shields' residence at 463 William Avenue last week, an indication that Manitoba weather is this spring making the Canadian record."

* * * *

The last part of the sentence is what I take exception to, and at the same time claim for Medicine Hat the honor of making "the Canadian record." In support of this I quote the following weather report from the same paper on the same date.

	Temperature Highest	Lowest	Rain
Edmonton, fair	38	30	0.00
Calgary, cloudy	48	32	trace
Prince Albert, cl'dy	30	28	0.00
Battleford, cloudy	30	28	trace
Medicine Hat, cloudy	54	30	trace
Swift Current, cl'dy	40	20	0.00
Minnedosa, snow,	28	16	0.14
Qu'Appelle, cloudy	32	20	0.02
Winnipeg, cloudy	18	12	0.00
Port Arthur, clear	22	14	0.00

Medicine Hat leads them all.

"The ice was as smooth as glass." That is Ottawa, and was descriptive of conditions under which the first hockey match between the Rat Portage and the Ottawa teams was played, and we in the west, says the Albertan, have not seen ice for the last few weeks except the ice that is brought around by the iceman. We are playing baseball when Ontario is playing hockey. We are using plows to cultivate the land when in Ontario they are using plows to dig paths through the snow. There is a climate in the far west that is an everlasting delight, yet they who know it not listen with the doubting ear and fix an Ananias stare upon us.

* * * *

While everybody must feel glad to see the town workmen cleaning up the sides of the street and gravelling the centre of the road, they must "view with alarm" (this is the preamble) the depth of the ditches being made in some places. The gutter, ditch is the better name, on fourth avenue is deep enough to upset an ordinary conveyance on a sudden jolt into it. All the Councillors and all the employees of the town, might easily be packed into that ditch and still there would be room for the surplus water to run away. It should be made one continuous culvert from Toronto Street to River Street. If someone gets hurt the council may have a damage suit on their hands.

* * * *

The Town Council sometimes are "up against it" when the poundkeeper has corralled range cattle and horses that have strayed into town. The pound keeper is quite right when he impounds them, but the Council might, and do, hesitate to give an order to have them sold at the end of a couple of weeks to defray expenses. The suggestion to try and arrange with the Stock Association to take charge of them is a good one. If the Council sell the animals it looks like a hostile act, but, of course, the town cannot be expected to hold them for an indefinite period. If the Stock Association would take the matter up they might arrange to have a pound, and range cattle straying into town could be handed over to the Association official who, being conversant with the brands, would be in a position to notify the owners.

* * * *

It was once suggested that after keeping the animals for a while in the town pound they should be turned loose again I doubt if that would be justifiable in law. According to what I have heard of the law upon such points, a person who once takes charge of stray animals becomes responsible, to a reasonable extent, for their safe keeping, and to turn them loose after once impounding them is an offence against the law. I write this subject to correction by any "limb of the law" who may think it worth while to put me right if the foregoing should happen to be wrong.

* * * *

Whether anything is being done to forward the proposition for a new Post Office at Medicine Hat I don't know, but I want to say a word upon the matter. The Ottawa Government appear to be willing to set aside the magnificent sum of fifteen thousand dollars for a building in this town to serve the purpose of Post Office, Custom House and Land Office. Well, now, if that is not "liberal" may I be put on "short commons" for a month. Just fancy it! $15,000 for a building to serve these three important Government purposes! Why, such magnificent liberality is enough to make Calgary and Edmonton green with envy! And Medicine Hat has a population variously estimated at 4,000 to 5,000 people, and increasing all the time!

* * * *

Prince Albert has been granted $80,000 for the same purpose, and it a scarcely so large a town as Medicine Hat, with nothing like its possibilities. But there, Prince Albert is a "city," and we are only a "town." This, however, will be remedied ere long, I believe. The arguments for it are strong and convincing, and I believe the people will soon recognise the wisdom of applying for a city charter. But I am discussing the Post Office building now and must stick to my text, I suppose. However, some progress has been made. That $15,000 has appeared at least twice in the annual estimates! Now if the Government meant to add the second one to the first and so on I would say wait a little longer and let it grow. But "it the same dog, the same piece of string."

* * * *

The mention of "dog" reminds me of a joke a travelling theatrical man got off in the Opera House at the expense of our post office. He said he had a dog that only wagged his tail up and down. The reason for this peculiarity was that he was reared in Medicine Hat Post Office and there was no room to wag sideways.

She went upon her knees. He gave no single sign of heeding; although he saw and heard, he sat and calmly went on reading. She humbly knelt! Strange sounds arose, as if for pity pleading; but mailed in steel of self he sat, and calmly kept on reading reports, reviews, the foreign news, accounts of crimes appalling. She wiped her brow, the cloth she wrung till drops were falling. And still she staid upon her knees, and he was all unheeding. When the squaw scrubbed his office floor he calmly kept on reading.

Fools Use Washes and Snuffs

Thinking perhaps they will cure catarrh—but no one ever heard of a genuine cure following such senseless treatments. There is just one prompt and thorough cure for Catarrh and it is fragrant healing Catarrhozone which goes right to the root of the trouble. It destroys the germs, heals their flamed membranes and cures any case no matter how obstinate or long standing. "I experimented for years with Catarrh remedies but found Catarrhozone the most rational and satisfactory" writes W. J. MacEachern of Waterville. "It cured me for all time." For a cure use only Catarrhozone, Complete outfit, $1.00; trial size 25c.

TRAGIC ENDING OF POLICEMAN'S TASK.

Some weeks ago Constable Pedly, who is stationed in the Peace river country, was called upon to undertake a task which was trying and decidedly unpleasant, and which had most tragic results.

He brought down from Chippewa an insane man. The journey was of the most hazardous kind. The unfortunate man was young and very strong. Pedley was assisted by a couple of breeds and by them alone. He himself had to be on guard night and day and on two or three occasions the imprisoned one made his escape in the night, but on account of the vigilance of Pedley he was brought back. After three weeks of this work Pedley arrived with his prisoner at Edmonton. The prisoner was then brought to Calgary and is now located at the barracks.

Pedley started back on his lonely journey. He had not arrived at his destination when it was noticed by those with him that he showed signs of insanity. These signs became more and more evident until he became violently deranged, and the constable was lodged at the barracks beside the same victim for whose safety he had risked his life and lost his reason.—Albertan.

THE BEEF TRUST

Washington, March 8.—Although the U.S. attorney general declines to discuss the subject, it is known that the report of the department of labor and commerce on the beef industry published last week will have no effect upon the investigation now being conducted by the department of justice to ascertain whether the injunction issued against beef combine in Chicago is being observed. This investigation will proceed as originally planned.

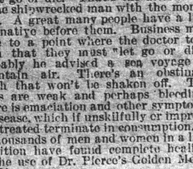
Try some of Kennedy's cream on your porridge.

Let go or die. That's the alternative of the shipwrecked man with the money bags. A great many people have a like alternative before them. Business men come to a point where the doctor tells them that they must "let go or die." Probably he advised a sea voyage or mountain air. There's an obstinate cough that won't be shaken off. The lungs are weak and perhaps bleeding. There is emaciation and other symptoms of disease, which if unskilfully or improperly treated terminate in consumption.

Thousands of men and women in a like condition have found complete healing by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

"It gives me pleasure to send you this testimonial so that some other poor sufferer may be saved, as I was, by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery," writes Geo. A. Thompson, of Sheldon Ave., Chatham, Ont., Canada. "I had a cough for years, expectorated a great deal, and was slowly falling. Was losing flesh every day. Lost in weight from 150 pounds down to 122. My flesh got soft and I had no strength. Did not say anything to anyone but made up my mind that the end was not far off. One day my wife was reading in the 'Common Sense Medical Adviser' about Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and I said, that sounds more like common sense than anything else that I had heard. I at once bought a bottle of your famous remedy and before I had taken half of one bottle I felt better. Took thirteen bottles and it made a new man of me. I gained sixteen pounds and never have had a cough since. I feel splendid and give all the credit to your medicine."

Given away. The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. The book contains 1008 pages, over 700 illustrations and several colored plates. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the paper-bound book, or 50 stamps for the cloth bound. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.



Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure biliousness, foul stomach and constipation and so help to cure nearly every disease of mankind. They regulate, tone up and invigorate Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

LACROSSE

Two junior lacrosse teams named, respectively, Victorias and Shamrocks played the first game of the season on Wednesday last. The game was very interesting, and the teams proved very evenly matched. The Vics. however proved to be a little too strong for their opponents and won out by one goal. At half-time they were four goals to the good, but the Shamrocks ran them hard in the second half, and nearly won out. The final score was Victorias 7, Shamrocks 6. Ernie Charboneau refereed the game, and the teams were:

Victorias		Shamrocks
A. DesBrisay	goal	P. Yeo
B. Porter	point	N. Porter
W. Turnbull	c. point	C. Cunliffe
A. Collier	1st defence	G. Reber

H. Pingle	2nd "

T. Finlay	outside "	J. Barreau
J. Porter	inside "	P. Borradaile

Victorias 5 Shamrocks 3

On Saturday afternoon the Victorias and Shamrocks met for their second game. The Vics. succeeded in again winning out, but had to go all the way. C. E. Brougham handled the whistle and made the boys play lacrosse. The play was very even and though the Shamrocks lost, they kept the Victoria goal keeper, A. DesBrisay, busy at times, and his good work saved the goal time after time. Percy Yeo at the other end got in the road of some hot shots, and it took a good one to beat him. Jack Porter scored four out of five goals for his side, Finlay getting the other. Bob Porter played a star game at point for the Vics. Lyman was too many for Cunliffe at centre, Bell and Pingle also did fine work. For the Shamrocks Alex Robertson and McLean played a good defence game, while G. DesBrisay was the best man on the home, though N. Porter, Ellis and P. Borradaile did good work. The teams lined up as follows:

Victorias		Shamrocks
A. DesBrisay	goal	P. Yeo
N. Porter	point	M. McLean
D. Borradaile	cover point	A. Robertson

MILLIONAIRE IN OVERALLS.

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT AS HE WORKS IN HIS MACHINE SHOP.

Few wage earners work any harder than does young millionaire Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr. Unlike some other young men who have come into the inheritance of vast wealth. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., is a man of strong principles and a firm believer in the nobility of labor.

After his graduation from Yale university the young man decided to equip himself with a thorough practical knowledge of every branch of railroad work. Donning a pair of overalls and jumper, he worked side by side with ordinary mechanics, spending two years' time in the motive power and civil engineering department of the New York Central Railway.

He is an expert mechanic, and has already perfected several inventions which have come into use as improvements in railway equippage. One of these inventions is a device for use on locomotives which has the effect of facilitating the removal of the fire box from an engine, thus expediting the work of cleaning the fire box.

In this picture Mr. Vanderbilt has on one of Fincks "Detroit-Special" No. 755 Coats and Finck's "Detroit-Special" No. 15 Reversible Overall. All other "wage earners" are now asking for Finck's "Detroit-Special" Reversible Overalls, Union Made, made in Detroit. For sale by all the leading dealers throughout the country.

PRESENTATION TO LAWRENCE O'REILLY.

There was a gathering of Mr Lawrence O'Reily's friends at the Assiniboia parlor on Thursday evening, the object of which was to give him a "send off" as he was leaving for Portland, Oregon, on Friday. Mr H. W. Ireland occupied the chair and presented Mr O'Reilly with an address and a purse of money as a token of the high esteem in which he has been held during his three years residence in the town.

To Lawrence O'Reilly Esq. Medicine Hat, Assa.

Dear Lawrence,—Having learnt with regret of your intended departure from town we desire to express to you our keen appreciation of your many good qualities which have revealed themselves during our acquaintance with you.

We are indeed sorry to lose such a genial spirit from our midst, as whatever we have taken up in the past we have always felt that we could count on you for your energetic support.

As a very small indication of our high esteem for you we trust that you will accept the accompanying purse with the best wishes of your many friends in Medicine Hat.

Wishing you every success.—G. P. Sanderson, A. Bining, E. M. Cawker, H. L. Tweed, A. J. Day, D. G. White, F. Webster, W. A. Taylor, H. Muir, C. S. Pingle, J. L. Brown, E. Charbonneau, W. E. Crompton, C. R. Mitchell, J. Leonard, J. B. White, G. A. Krauss, H. W. Hetchell, H. C. Powley, J. Fleming, W. B. Finlay, W. J. McLean, H. W. Ireland, W. C. Harris, C. Stuffield, W. F. Alexander, F. W. Gilroy, H. P. Philp, Harry Bray, A. B. Irvine, Yee Gong, F. G. Forster, J. E. McClellan, T. Adsit, A. E. Whiffin, J. R. Fisher.

Short speeches were made by Fred Gilroy, C. Stuffield, W. E. Crompton, H. L. Tweed, F. G. Forster, W. C. Harris.

The speakers all bore testimony to the real worth of the guest of the evening who by his obliging manners and kindly disposition has made a host of friends, and all agreed that his removal would be a distinct loss to the hockey league, of which Mr O'Reiley was an active supporter.

Songs were sung by Messrs, Gilroy, Stuffield and Crompton.

The singing of Auld Lang Syne concluded a very pleasent evening.

The Times joins Mr O'Reilly's many friends in wishing him good luck wherever he may be.

HOW TO PLANT TREES

The ground is plowed and the holes dug in the fall. The action of the frost puts the ground in the best possible condition for the trees in the spring. In digging the holes a spade-length of the surface soil is first removed and piled on one side, the loose dirt being thrown out with a shovel. The hole is then dug another spade-length deeper and the dirt piled on the other side of the hole. The loose dirt that remains after this spading is left in the bottom of the hole. This makes the latter about 18 inches deep, 30 inches across at the top, and 20 inches at the bottom.

The difference of opinion that exists regarding the proper size of a hole in which to plant a tree reminds me of Lincoln's answer when asked to settle a dispute as to the proper length to a man's legs. "In my judgment," said Lincoln, "a man's legs should be long enough to reach from his body to the ground." So, in my judgment, a hole should be large enough to accommodate the roots of the tree. This can not be determined when the holes are dug before the trees are obtained, but the above dimensions have been found about right.

When received from the nursery the trees are "heeled in" in trenches about eighteen inches deep, two feet wide, and as long as needed. The bunches of trees are opened and the dirt, thrown between and over the roots, the tops leaning to the south.

The earliest planted trees make the best growth. The best time for planting is on a cloudy day soon after the rain, but not so soon as to leave the ground wet enough to be sticky. No water need be used in planting, for there is no drying sun or dry clods to bother roots.

The roots of the trees are puddled, or "grouted," as the nurseryman calls it, by dipping them into a thin mortar of surface soil, which has been previously mixed in a hole about ten inches deep and twenty inches across. A half dozen trees are taken from the trench where they are "heeled in," the roots puddled, and then distributed along the holes.

A line of stakes is set in the row, and while one man holds the tree in position another sights from the tree last set to the stakes in front, thus keeping the trees in a straight line. A tree six inches out of line makes a great deal of trouble in cultivating.

Bruised and broken roots are trimmed off and the remaining ones straightened out in the position in which they grew. One man throws in the dirt while another holds the tree in position and works the soil in among the roots, tramping it as solid as possible. There is no danger of getting it too solid, if the ground is not wet enough to be sticky, and if the ground is not tramped very solid the wind will work the tree loose. The top soil is thrown in first.

The trees are set a few inches deeper than they grew in the nursery and the side having the most limbs and roots is placed to the south. The limbs are cut back to about half their former length to correspond with the pruning which the roots received in digging, and also to properly shape the trees.—W. Barnhill, Montana.

ONE COUNTRY AND ONE NAME

The majority of foreigners who come into western Canada are very sensible people and easily assimulated. Occasionally, however, an individual is found who is never so pleased as when referring to the superiority of the country from which he has emigrated. There has been some talk in Calgary lately of organizing an "American Canadian" club, and from another source comes the suggestion that a "French Canadian" organization is the thing.

There is no place in Western Canada or any other part of the Dominion for anything but Canadian organizations. The Irish-Canadian, Scotch Canadian, French-Canadian, and American-Canadian business may be all very well as a matter of sentiment, to cherish as a memory, but to be eternally flourishing it before the public is folly. A man who is not satisfied to be known as a Canadian, without any hyphen to indicate the country of his nativity, is not the best type of naturalized citizen, and the sooner he is impressed with the fact the better off the West will be.—Calgary Herald. And so say all of us.

BIDDING FOR GOVERNORSHIP

The creation of two new provinces from July 1 next is producing a crop of applicants for the position of lieutenant-governor. It is understood, however, that Lieutenant-Governor Forget, who was given a second term as Territorial governor last fall, will receive a new commission as lieutenant-governor of Saskatchewan. For the gubernatorial office in Alberta, Dr. Lafferty, of Calgary, a stalwart western Liberal, is being boomed by his political friends. The Nova Scotia contingent is pressing strongly for the reappointment of Fred Congdon as Lieutenant-Governor of the Yukon, but Lieutenant-Colonel Andrew Thompson, ex M.P. for Haldiman, has still hopes of landing the plum.—Telegram.

RIFLE SHOOTING.

Sir Frederick Borden's statement at the Dominion Rifle Association meeting in Ottawa recently that he hoped to see the day when there would be a rifle range for every corps in the country, may alarm some of the timid citizens of the Dominion. It does not appear how ever that the remarks were uttered in a jingoistic strain, but rather with a true appreciation of the benefits of rifle shooting. Every regular soldier and every militiaman in Canada ought, of course, to be a good rifle shot, and every civilian who can shoot well adds to the defensive strength of his country. All that is admitted, and perhaps military men are inclined to look upon rifle shooting almost exclusively from the military point of view.

But, apart from military considerations, it would be harder to find a cleaner, a more fascinating sport, or one more conducive to health. There are some "pot-hunters" among riflemen as in every other class of sport and athletics, but the great majority of men who indulge in rifle shooting follow it for pleasure. There is something exhilarating in the ability to shoot to the mark against contrary winds, lights, or atmosphere conditions, or in knowing how to take advantage of all these when they are favorable. There is no sport where the opportunities to cheat, even if the inclinations were there, are so few, and hardly any other sport comprises in the ranks of its votaries so many men of such varied ages and occupations. This applies to both the military and civilian rifle associations, and the truth of it may be attested at any rifle range on any shooting day during the long season.

Unfortunately in lacrosse, hockey, and other kindred Canadian sports, there has developed during the past few years a regrettable spirit of roughness and unfairness. Do the columns of the newspapers ever contain reports of free fights among the competitors at the rifle ranges, or attacks on the range officers and markers, who may be said to correspond to the referees and umpires of the lacrosse fields and hockey arenas? One can hardly recall such an occurrence on any Canadian rifle range, for to be a successful shot self-control is an essential requirement. The parents whose boys develop a foundness for rifle shooting need not fear for them. Accidents on the ranges are less frequent than those on other fields of sport. The younger men, particularly those who show promise, are invariably under the eye of men who by oral advice and physical example are constantly preaching the doctrine of a sound body and steady nerves, and who are keen to check tendencies to unfairness.—Toronto Globe.

SALVATION ARMY WEDDING

(Contributed.)

On Thursday evening, March 9th, in the Opera House of Medicine Hat, a large number gathered to witness a very pretty Salvation Army Wedding.

The Barracks being too small for such an occasion it was decided to hold the interesting event in the Opera House, when Mr J. Jones, a soldier of the corps was married to Cadet Pettit.

Brigadier Burditt of Winnipeg, who knows how to handle right things in the right way was the officiating party.

After the opening songs and prayer, the Brigadier called upon Sergeant-major Kyle to speak on married life. Lieutenant Harris spoke on single blessedness.

The former who had taken the step only a few months ago, advised all who were thinking of getting married to do so immediately, as it was a good thing, and said he was sorry he had not done so years ago. On the other hand Lieut. Harris wished to inform all present that she wasn't sorry it was not her, as she was perfectly satisfied with single life.

The bride was attired in uniform of blue and white sash, which was very becoming. She was attended by Lieut. Harris, assisting officer of the corp, who was attired in similar uniform. Mr J. Searle acted as best man.

Little Miss Eva Taylor, niece of the bride, in costume of white was flower girl.

Immediately after the ceremony a wedding banquet was held in the Salvation Army barracks, for which a large number gathered to partake of the good things provided by the many friends and soldiers of the local corp. Mrs Jones is well known in Medicine Hat, having assisted her sister Mrs Captain Taylor, who with her husband have carried on the Salvation Army forces here for some eighteen months.

Mr Jones is one of the well-known firemen of the C.P.R.

Many pretty and useful presents were given to the bride, showing the high esteem in which she is held among the people.

They will take up their residence in Medicine Hat, and many wishes for a long and happy life are extended to them, in which the Times heartily joins.

Bonaparte and the Violets.

Bonaparte having on his departure for the island of Elba promised his confidential friends to return in the violet season, his adherents adopted the above simple flower as a rallying signal. "Corporal Violet" became their favorite toast, and each was distinguished by a gold ring with a violet in enamel and the motto, "Elle reparaitra au printemps!" (It will appear again in spring.) As soon as it became generally known that he had landed at Frejus a multitude of the women of Paris were seen with baskets full of these flowers, which were purchased and worn by his friends without exciting the least suspicion. It was customary on meeting any one thus decorated to ask, "Aimez vous la violette?" (Do you like the violet?) when, if they answered, "Oui" (yes), it was certain the party was not a confederate. But if the reply was "Eh bien" (well) they recognized an adherent and completed the sentence, "Elle reparaitra au printemps!"

Path Breaker For Lightning.

In the "Annalen der Physik" there is a paper by Herr Walter on the genesis of lightning in which he shows that lightning flashes are preceded by minor flashes, which, as it were, feel the way and mark the course for the major flash or flashes. Something of the kind is also observed in electric sparks. The path, once marked, is utilized for further discharges; hence photographs of lightning taken with a moving camera may show more than one flash. One picture shows three main flashes at intervals of .0177 and .0489 parts of a second between. Of course to the eye they seemed one flash. Another picture showed five flashes lasting altogether a quarter of a second. Although signs of an alternating discharge were seen on one picture, it may be taken for granted that as a rule lightning is a series of continuous discharges from cloud to earth.

Had No Money to Burn.

"I worked for John D. Rockefeller once," says a Boston landscape gardener. "One morning I was out in the ground doing some work among the plants and flowers, and as I worked I smoked. Pretty soon the old man strolled out that way and when he came up to where I was said in a quiet way, 'I never had any money to burn.' I didn't tumble for a second, and he stood there looking at me. 'I have managed to put away a few dollars,' he continued, 'but I never had any money to burn.' It came to me all at once what he meant, and I threw the cigar away. Next morning when he came around there I wasn't smoking. He came up with a smile on his face and said, 'Well, the stove isn't going today.'"

W.C.T.U. CORNER.

Conducted by a friend.

The regular meeting of the W.C.T.U. was held in the Sunday School room of the Baptist Church on Monday afternoon, March 6th. The attendance was fair. The meeting was opened with the singing of a hymn, and prayer, after which the minutes of last meeting were read and approved of.

The hope was expressed that every parent would see the good that would come to their children if they tried to have them keep regular hours, so that when our city council should see proper to approve of a curfew bell, every mother would do her share in keeping the law.

The correspondence committee read a letter from headquarters asking the local branch to vote where the next convention should be held. The flower and sick committee reported good work and hoped all the White Ribbon band would help in this particular work.

It was reported that in Ontario, a young men's anti bar room league was trying to gain an entrance in every christian congregation, and the hope was expressed that the church would stand solidly for the league's principles of truth, purity, love, virtue and temperance.

"This is what a wife wrote to her ligerdly husband:
I'm vexed indeed, Adolphus John,
Your stingy ways to see,
We wed "for better or for worse;"
Much worse it's been for me.
You grudge me every trifling thing,
Yet bid me dress in style;
And when I've nothing fit to wear,
You'd have me wear a smile.

Neuralgic Headache is Usually

Attended with blinding pain, but relief comes quickly when Nerviline is applied, for it is the strongest pain-reliever in the world. "I consider Nerviline a most magical remedy for neuralgia. I am subject to violent attacks writes Mrs E. G. Harriss of Baltimore, but never worry if Nerviline is in the house. The prompt relief that Nerviline brings makes it priceless to me. A few applications never yet failed to kill the pain. I can also recommend Nerviline for stiffness in the joints and rheumatism." Try Nerviline yourself. Price 25c.

A young gentlemen living on the south side of the track, took his little sister with him while calling the other evening at a house where he is a regular visitor. The little girl made herself quite at home, and showed great fondness for one of the young ladies, hugging her heartily. "How very affectionate she is!" said the lady of the house. Yes; so like her brother" responded the young lady unthinkingly.

TRIP ROUND THE WORLD

Of the lecture to be given by the Rev. John McNeill, at Medicine Hat, on March 23rd, other papers have the following to say: In the lecture entitled "All's Well," Mr McNeill in a bright, interesting, dramatic way told of some of the things he saw and some of the impressions he received during his trip round the world. The title of the lecture All's Well," was suggested by the cry of the lookouts on the ships in which he travelled during his journey.

Winnipeg Tribune—The lecture by Rev. J. McNeill, of Winnipeg, was a rare treat indeed. His imaginative and descriptive powers did duty with grand and convincing effect.

Moosomin Spectator.—Mr McNeill is a clear, forcible, and entertaining speaker, a keen observer of events, capable of grasping large questions and of apprehending the Divine purpose in worldly affairs.

Neepawa Press.—It is not over estimated to state that the lecture was preeminently the rarest treat yet afforded to a Gladstone audience. The hall was filled to overflowing with an appreciative audience that gave the closest attention to the flowing eloquence of the gifted speaker.

Do not miss hearing this lecture next Thursday evening in the Baptist Church. The Lyric Quartette will sing.

The New Station.

Mr J. S. Dennis and Mr Jameson, of the C.P.R. arrived here on a special car on Monday morning, and met a committee of the Town Council re the new station, etc. In the course of a discussion which took place it was intimated that the company wish to place the new station on the north side of the track between the storehouse and the cold storeage building, with a long platform reaching to Main street, which it is proposed to declare a public crossing. The company wish to keep Toronto and Montreal streets closed, and they asked the council to join them in placing this proposal before the Railway Commission

The Council offered no objection to the proposed station site, but being bound by the resolution at the public meeting held in Decemcer, it will be necessary to call another public meeting to consider the modified plan.

The representatives of the company said it was proposed to make Medicine Hat the terminus for both passengers and freight for the Crow's Nest railway, instead of Dunmore, Furthermore, it was stated that Medicine Hat will doubtless soon be made a junction of the St. Paul and Spokane railway.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY CONCERT.

That the St. Patrick's Day concert would be a big success seems to have been a foregone conclusion by the way the tickets sold. A large and appreciative audience filled the Hall, and that they were not disappointed in the excellence of the programme was proved by the generous applause with which the various numbers were greeted. Experimental Farms and their Work.

In view of the agitation for an experimental farm for this district, which is a proposition the whole town and country should heartily support, it may be interesting briefly to quote Dr. Fletcher, the Domonion botanist and entymologist, has to say of the good work the farms already established have done in various portions of the Dominion. Speaking a short time ago on the subject at Ottawa, he said, that when first started, the idea was looked upon with distrust by many people and there are still some who view the experimental farms with disfavor Nevertheless, he contended, a very great deal had been done in the way of development both in Manitoba and the North West, as a result of the establishment of these Goverment Farms. Great care had been bestowed on the improvement of wheat with the result showing that whereas the ordinary farmer raises only fifty bushels per acre, up to seventy bushels had been grown on the experimental farms. By this means an increase of twenty million dollars in revenue was gained to the people of Canada.

The changed conditions in this district positively demand that there should be an experimental farm here and we hope the Medicine Hat Town Council, backed up by the Board of Trade and the district generally will not cease in their efforts to secure it. Hundreds of Americans and Germans and some Englishmen, are investing money here in farming lands and they are entitled to as much support and help in this way, as the farmers of Manitoba and East Assiniboia.

If You Mean Business.

The above words are very familiar with most business or professional men, I says Business and Finance, but familiarity with them does not remove the feeling of irritation they produce. How common it is when dealing with some correspondent on some business matter to find him winding up a long descriptive letter with the words, "If you mean business." The term is peculiarly obnoxious to the man who does mean business for it is practically an insult, because it directly questions his motive in dealing with you. It reveals a lack of the God-given quality unfortunately rare amongst some people in business. It is a useless phrase because it offends without helping. If a man does NOT mean business he will not do business anyway. If he DOES mean business he is very likely to resent the implication conveyed, and refuse to do business with you. If you have ever used this offensive phrase make a resolution never to do so again.

How To Drive.

In a new country like this there are naturally a lot of people handling horses and driving conveyances who never had any training in the work and so a few remarks on the subject may prove interesting and profitable. It is painful to see some people behind a good horse who, from want of knowledge, simply spoil the animal, if he has been previously well handled, through sheer ignorance of the proper way to hold the reins and drive the horse. Circumstances, of course, alter cases and the following remarks would not altogether apply in winter time in Manitoba where the driver has to wear "mitts," but it applies even there during the greater part of the year and almost all the year round here in the west. One cannot drive without sitting down, and that position should, from the first, be correct, easy, and firm, says Country Life in America. Sit squarely down on your seat or cushion; not on the end of your spine with your feet stuck far out in front as if rowing a boat, but upright, and with the legs forming an angle at the base of the spine, which will make you for comfort's sake hollow your back; and which position in turn will give you a "feel" to wrist, forearm and hand which you never knew before. The reins are held in the left hand, the left or nigh rein coming over the first finger and thence through the palm; the right or off rein coming between the second and third fingers, and thence through the palm, thus separating the reins by the width of two fingers, and enabling quite a wide change in direction to be be made by merely turning the hand and wrist. Do not tug at a horse's mouth, but always drive as if any sudden pull or sharp jerk might break the reins. However dull he may be, always have enough feeling of the bit to have him under control, and keep him up to it to that extent. At any hole, gutter or sudden elevation be sure your hand and arm freely "follow" his mouth, and do not let them administer a sudden jerk to it as the vehicle drops or rises. When starting, just feel your steed's mouth an instant before you start, as a signal to him that you are about to require of him motion, and this should be dond whether you mean to go forward or backward; it enables him to tighten his muscles and collect himself, physically and mentally, to obey your instructions.

NO COMPROMISE.

There is much talk of a compromise in the School clauss in the Autonomy Bill, but no compromise that can be offered can be satisfactory to the West. The spirit of the West to-day is dead against any sort of interference with the existing conditions as regards the schools. At present there is peace between all parties on this point. The existing system is satisfactory to all, and all that the West asks, is to be left alone to work out her own destiny in this matter. Sir Wilfred's added clause, if carried into effect, would raise a storm of discord where there is now complete harmony. There is but one way to avoid it, and that is the withdrawal of the clause. The West wants no "compromise education clause."

In all that has occured in regard to this question, one thing is perfectly clear, namely, that Sir Wilfred Laurier has blundered, in that he has raised this extreme issue without the support of his own following in the House, and now having raised the storm Sir Wilfred calmly assumes the part of pacifier and adjuster. The Winnipeg Telegram says this is "the incendiary posing as chief of the fire brigade."

The educational clause is by no means the only objectionable part of the bill The West has every reason to protest in the strongest possible manner to the wording of the elections clause, and should demand absolute freedom regarding elections, the same as exist in the older provinces. On this point also the battle cry should be, "no compromise!"

We have on more than one occasion stated the opinion that the public lands in the West should be administered by the new Western Provinces, and we cannot do better than repeat here the resolution passed at a mass meeting in this town, namely:

That the lands should be in the hands of the Provincial Governments for administration; or at least that they should be retained by the Dominion Government for only a small term of years, and that the minerals, forests, and swamp lands belong to the Provinces from the 1st July next.

Open Letter to Sir Wilfred Laurier by Mr. Haultain.

The Hon. F. W. G. Haultain, premier of the Northwest Territories, has addressed an open letter to Sir Wilfred Laurier on the subject of the two new provinces which are to be created in the west. Mr Haultain objects most emphatically to the proposed legislation regarding education. He declares that he and his colleagues had no chance to discuss this question, and he holds that the Dominion cannot do anything regarding education except what is allowed by the British North America act, and, therefore, the three clauses in the bill are ultra vires of the Dominion. He also expresses a perference for one province instead of two, objects to Dominion control of lands, and critizes mildly the financial terms.

THE LETTER

The letter says in part: "To the Right Honorable Sir Wilfrid Laurier, G.C.M.G. president of the privy council, Ottawa.

Sir,

The somewhat hurried termination of the conference to which you were good enough to invite representatives of the North-west government, and the introduction of the Alberta and Saskatchewan bills, call for a final statement on the subject. In this statement I shall confine my remarks to some of the important provisions of the bills, leaving a number of minor matters to less formal mention.

FAVOURS ONE PROVINCE

"The first question which suggests itself is the question of the necessity for the creation of two provinces instead of one. After careful consideration I am more convinced than ever that there is no necessity for dividing the country into two provinces, with consequent duplication of machinery and institutions. The provincial machinery is elaborate and expensive, and is more suitable to large areas and large populations. The new territories have for a number of years been under one government and legislature, performing most of the duties and exercising many of the more important powers of provincial government and legislatures. There has never been any suggestion that the territorial machinery was in any way inadequate for the purposes for which it was created. Our laws and institutions are admittedly efficient and satisfactory. Under them the people of the Territories have acquired a political individuality and identity as distinct as that of the people of any province. Up to June 30th next this will continue to be the case, and there does not seem to be any reason based on necessity or convenience why, the first day of July, they should be suddenly divided in two, separated by a purely arbitrary line, and obliged to do with two sets of machinery and institutions what they to a great extent have been doing quite satisfactorily and efficiently with one. I must, however, frankly state that this opinion is by no means unanimously shared in the Territories, and that the proposed action of the government will not call forth much hostile criticism.

"I must also state my opinion that the dividing line between the two provinces should have been placed at least seventy-five miles further east.

THE EDUCATIONAL CLAUSE

"I must take strong exception to the way in which the subject of education has been treated, both in the conferences and in the bills. I must remind you of the fact that your proposition was not laid before my colleague or myself until noon of the day upon which you introduced the bills. Up to that time the question had not received any attention beyond a casual reference to it on the previous Friday, and I certainly believed that we should have an opportunity of discussing it and our proposals before 12 o'clock on the day the bills received their first reading.

BOUND BY B.N.A. ACT

"With regard to the question of education generally, you are no doubt aware that the position taken by us was that the provinces should be left with the subject exclusively, subject to the provisions of the British North America Act, thus putting them on the same footing in this regard, as all the other provinces in the Dominion, except Ontario and Quebec. I submit that parliament is bound by the provisions of the British North America Act of 1867, in passing legislation of this kind.

POWERS RESTRICTED

The power of the King-in-council, exercising in effect the legislative functions of the parliament of the United Kingdom under the authority of Section 146, of the British North America Act, 1867, is restricted by the words: 'subject to the provisions of this act.' This restriction must equally apply to parliament exercising the powers conferred on it by the British North America Act, 1871, which by section 3, of the British North America Act, 1886, must be construed together with the British North America Act, 1867. If the King in council is bound by the provisions of the act in admitting an independent and consenting colony into the union, it can hardly be contended that parliament has the power to create an unwilling, inferior and imperfect organization.

ONLY JURISDICTION

"The only jurisdiction possessed by parliament in this respect is the remedial jurisdiction conferred by subsection 4, of section 93, of the British North America Act, 1867. The proposed attempt to legislate in advance on this subject is beyond the power of parliament and is an unwarrantable and unconstitutional anticipation of the remedial jurisdiction. It has, further, the effect of petrifying the positive law of the province with regard to a subject coming within its exclusive jurisdiction and necessitating requests for imperial legislation whenever the rapidly changing conditions of a new country may require them. On July 15th, 1870, the North-west Territories were 'admitted into the union' in the express terms of section 146, of the British North America Act, 1867. To speak of the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan being admitted in the union on July 1st, 1905, is an improper and indefensible use of the expression. The territory included within the boundaries of these proposed provinces was 'admitted into the union' on July 15th, 1870, and immediately upon the creation of these provisions of section 93 of the British North America Act, 1867, became as a matter of indefeasible right, a part of their constitution. On the creation of the provinces the term 'province' in that section interprets itself and the term 'union' bears the unmistakable meaning which is given to it with regard to the area included in the provinces by the actual language of section 146.

CONTRARY TO PRINCIPLE

"The first sub-section of section 16 of the bill is drawn in direct contradiction to this principle. It is an attempt to create a province retro-actively. It declares Territorial school laws, passed under the restrictions imposed by the North-west Territories act, to be provincial school laws. It clothes laws imposed by the federal parliament with all the attributes of laws voluntarily made by a free province. It ignores Territorial limitations and conditions. It denies facts and abolishes time. It declares what was not, to have been, and seeks to perpetuate as existing what never was nor is.

"I therefore most respectfully demand on behalf of the Territories that the same terms and no others, imposed by the Queen-in-council, on the admission of Prince Edward Island and British Columbia, be prescribed in this instance.

"The fact that since the acquisition of the North-west Territories parliament has passed certain laws affecting those territories, does not involve the principle that these laws must be perpetuated in the constitution of the proposed provinces. In this respect laws relating to education do not differ from laws relating to any other subject. To state that the law passed in 1875, with regard to a very important provincial right, must remain, involves the theory that parliament might practically take away all the jurisdiction of a province and leave it shorn of every power which it is supposed to possess under the constitution.

QUESTION PURELY CONSTITUTIONAL

"I wish to lay great stress on the fact that this is a purely constitutional question and is not concerned in any sense with discussion of the relative merits of any system of education. The question is one of provincial rights. It is not a question of the rights of a religious minority, which must be properly and be safely left to the provincial legislatures to deal with, subject to the normal constitutional provisions in that regard. It is the question of the right of a minority of Canadians in the wider area of the Dominion to the same rights and the same privileges, the same power and the same constitution, as are enjoyed by the rest of their fellow citizens, and which they claim to be their inalienable possession under the one and only Canadian charter, the British North America Act.

SCHOOL LANDS

"The first observation I have to make upon sub-section 3 of section 16 is that it is in direct interference by parliament with the right of the province to do as it seems to it best with its own.

RECOGNIZES NO POWER

"I recognize no power for the provinces in contravention of the letter and spirit of the British North America Act. Further, I recognize neither right nor justice in the attempt to dictate to the provinces of Alberta or Saskatchewan in the manner it does. I regret that it is necessary to give this turn to this discussion. I trust you will believe it is in no sense from a desire of my own to introduce an inharmonious note into these comments. The new provinces have their own futures to work out, and I deplore the possibility that they may commence their careers torn with dissension upon such a subject as this. It seems to me that a great deal of this trouble might have been avoided had we been afforded an opportunity of discussing these proposals, and I feel that I must place on record the fact that we are not responsible for the situation.

OWNERS OF CROWN DOMAIN

"Sections 19 and 20 provide that the public domain in each province shall be administered by the government of Canada for the purposes of Canada, an annual grant being made based upon certain varying rates of interest upon the capitalization of the 25,000,000 acres of land at $1.50. Then again I have to express my dissent from the action taken. By anology and by acknowledgment of the principle of compensation contained in section 19, we claim that the provinces are entitled to be recognized as the owners of the crown domain, and as such that their right to administer their own property for themselves is one that should not be taken away without their consent. As to whether or not the terms offered are fair or sufficiently large, I am not in a position to judge, having no material at hand to enable an estimate to be formed. I have one fact in mind, in this connection, and it is contained in the statement of the Hon. Clifford Sifton, speaking as minister of the interior, when he said that in a portion of the west alone the construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific railway would make some 50,000,000 acres of land available for settlers, the value of which was not less than $3 an acre, in which manner he pointed out that the whole cost of the construction of the road might be provided for. This was only in one section of the country. But I am not unwilling to admit that an immediate income increasing with population and certain in amount, may in the long run prove quite as satisfactory as any probable net income resulting from local administration of the public domain.

LACROSSE

The Victorias and Shamrocks lacrosse teams met for their third match on Saturday. The Victorias again succeeded in winning from the Shamrocks. Owing to several of the players being unable to turn out, the teams were some men short, this seemed to have effect on the game, as it was not as good an exhibition as the preceding games.

W.C.T.U. CORNER

Conducted by a member.

What a good time is spring time even if it does bring strong winds, for a good strong wind helps us to clean up, then we must put out efforts that dust may be kept in place. For there is a place for everything and the guide book of God tells us that whatsoever a man sows he must reap. But what good results sowing of a right kind brings.

C. M. Sheldon in the Christian Herald tells us that when Luther first tried to sow free Salvation to every true repentant soul, Luther was then laughed to scorn, but truth is truth, and right grew from such good sowing. Just think what the results from sowing evil habits brings. One friend asks another to have a glass of whiskey, some other friend meets the two friends in the bar-room, they all have glasses of drink three times, thus one hours time gone, one or more dollars spent, the men are not as sober as when they first met, and time and money wasted for what has harmed them.

So in the story of Gulliver's travels we have the story of binding with thread that grew to be rope. Think when you are asked to take a social glass, what is the result to be, not only hurt yourself, but also home and friend. May each one then say, God helping me, I will sow good, that at the reaping day the reward may be everlasting peace, love, and life.

Unhappy Women!

No woman can be happy when her health is undermined. No woman can have good health while she suffers from female weakness, inflammation, ulceration or any disease of the delicate womanly organs. Nervous, sleepless, fretful, suffering in body and mind, she does not live but only exists.

More than a half a million such women have found a perfect and permanent cure for their diseased condition in the use of Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Women cured by this remedy say it is a "wonderful medicine," so perfectly does it restore them to health and comeliness.

There is no alcohol in "Favorite Prescription," neither does it contain opium, cocaine, nor any other harmful drug. It is in the strictest sense, an honest, temperance medicine. Its ingredients are purely vegetable, and it will agree with the most delicate constitution.

Don't be hypnotized, or over persuaded into accepting a substitute. This medicine has a record that's worth far more than any difference in price.

Sick and ailing women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, either personally or by letter, absolutely without charge or fee, thus avoiding the unpleasant questionings, offensive examinations and obnoxious local treatments considered necessary by many local practitioners. All correspondence treated as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Write without fear and without fee to Dr. R. V. Pierce, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets These tiny, sugar-coated anti-bilious granules regulate Stomach, Liver and Bowels, cure Constipation and Bad Stomach, attended by foul breath. One or two for laxative, three or four for cathartic.

An Old Song

There are certain songs like "The Swannee River" or "The Last Rose of Summer" so winning and sweet that they always please. Our song has been "The Sale of the Stock." We thought we had warbled it for the last time, but "There's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip," and circumstances compel us to blossom forth with the Spring, singing the same old song, "The Sale of the Stock," set to a little livelier music and with a little more swing and go to it.

Here's the Position.

We have placed this business in the hands of brokers for sale, and until they or we dispose of it, it will be carried on as formerly. New lines for Spring and sorting are now on the way, and our Stock and Values will be found

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING.

Last night the council had a busy session, sitting up till midnight.

Present: Mayor Forster, Councillors J. K. Drinnan, F. O. Sissons, H. Stewart, A. DesBrisay. Dr Smyth reported later on in the evening.

Minutes of previous meeting were read and adopted.

The following accounts were duly presented:

J. B. McIntyre	$22.75
W. B. Marshall & Co.	2.05
" "	1.10
Williamson & Hay	29.00
G. P. Blythe	25.00
C.P.R. for freight rubber goods	4.75
Equitable Meter Co.	176.75
C.P.R. for freight lamps	95.47
Customs duty—lamps	111.90
W. B. Marshall & Co.	30.00

On motion of Councillor Drinnan and seconded by Councillor DesBrisay the accounts were referred to the Finance committee.

Communications were read from A. C. Hawthorne, re better sidewalks on Toronto st.; from T. R. Billett, Winnipeg, re cement; from Canadian Pipe Co., re hydrants; from T. Green & Co., Leeds, re machinery for road work; from Lacombe Sewer Pipe Co., Illinois, re sewer pipe; from Martin Electric and Supply Co., re natural gas burners; from H. Bissett, Winnipeg, asking to be allowed to tender for installation of sewer system; telegram from R. R. Jamieson, fixing date to meet members of town council on Monday, March 20th, at Medicine Hat; from Fred Thompson & Co., Montreal, re electrical machinery and re repairs; from Forestry Branch, Ottawa, re shipping of 6,000 trees; from Western Supply and Equipment Co., Winnipeg, re supplies, etc.; from Deavit, Trimble & Co., re debentures and bonds; from W. F. Lee, Winnipeg, re tenders for sewer system; from the Medicine Hat Woollen Mills Co.

Drinnan—Stewart—That communication of A. E. Hawthorne be referred to Public Works committee for action.

Stewart—DesBrisay—That other communications re sewer tenders, machinery, and supplies be filed.

Drinnan—Stewart—That telegram from R. R. Jamieson, of Calgary, be laid on table for report which would be in later in the evening.

Drinnan—Sissons—That letter from Forestry department be acknowledged thanking that department for trees.

The communication of the Medicine Hat Woollen Mills Company was next taken up. The company asked the council to

1. Give the company an exemption from taxation for a period of ten years.

2. Sell gas to the company at the proposed rates for manufacturers.

3. Extension of waterworks to the mill.

4. Make a loan to the company of $15,000 for a term of 15 years, the company to pay the same rate of interest as the town pays, and to secure the amount so loaned by a mortgage on their building. After an hour's discussion on the several requests the council was agreed to grant all requests, but they did not think the power of loaning was allowed, Mr Wheelen was present, and each councillor questioned him regarding the financial standing of the new woollen enterprise.

Mr Wheelen stated that western capital had been subscribed to the extent of $7,400, and that 50 per cent of western stock subscribed for had been paid. The capital stock subscribed in the east was $30,000, and $24,000 paid up. He further stated that the new concern would open up about next September, when 25 or 30 hands would be employed, the output of the new enterprise would be to manufacture blankets principally. Wages were estimated to cost 20 per cent more than was paid in the east.

Councillor Sissons asked what plant would be worth when machinery was installed. The answer was between $50,000 and $52,000.

After a thorough discussion of the communication it was moved by Councillor Stewart and seconded by Councillor DesBrisay that the communication be referred to the Solicitor for an opinion as to the legality of loan by the town.

Mr R. J. Harlow was present at the meeting, regarding a supply of gas for a new enterprise that was sure to open up at once providing the town council would agree with them to supply the gas required. If the gas could not be applied soon the company could not commence operations this summer. Mr Harlow stated that the new concern would require 75 million feet of gas during the summer. Mr Harlow presented an agreement which he thought would get over the difficulty, but the Mayor was not prepared to sign an agreement. The council seemed unanimous in allowing Mr Harlow's company to have the gas providing there was plenty to sell at the usual price to be paid by manufacturers, and Mr Harlow stated that his company were willing to lay the pipe or deposit a cheque to cover cost of pipe in case the company did not carry out its part of the agreement. Mr Harlow made out a strong case on behalf of his company, but the council laid the matter over, to be dealt with at a special meeting which will be held next week.

The reports of committees were next taken up.

Finance committee recommended payment of all accounts presented at last meeting upon motion of Councillors Drinnan and Sissons.

Several reports were read from Superintendent Porter, re parks, tree planting, gas main extensions, ditches, hydrants, etc. The superintendant was taken to task by the council for proceeding with works before the proper committee had given him authority, and in future it was decided that he should wait for instructions from the proper head of each committee, and he was not to purchase supplies without a proper order signed by one of the Councillors.

A report from License and Police committee was read over and filed.

The question of planting trees was the next one and a hot discussion took place. It was stated that a gentleman in town without authority had taken from the park nearly 50 "Caragana" trees without any permission from any Councillor or Superintendent Porter. This was a special tree, and the council did not think that any citizen should take 50 trees from the park without obtaining authority to do so. Regulations were drawn up by Mayor Forster regarding the number of trees to be allowed to ratepayers, and a form upon which a ratepayer was to have in his possession before a tree could be taken from the park. It was thought that superintendent Porter was in charge of the park, and that he should not have allowed anyone to remove trees from the park, and if he could not have managed the matter, the town police were at his disposal to deal with the question.

Dr. Smyth, who had been out of town, arrived at the meeting very late, and his motion to adopt manufacturers scale of prices for gas was passed. The resolution, as passed, reads as follows:

"On a gas consumption exceeding 100,000 feet per month—first 100,000 feet at present schedule rates; second 100,000 feet at 12½c. per 1,000 feet; third 100,000 at 10c. per 1,000; beyond 300,000 feet per month to manufacturers investing in Medicine Hat $25,000 or more, and employing ten or more men, a rate of 5c. per 1,000."

This concluded the business.

COMMENTS

We want to add a word by way of comment upon the "manufacturers rate" for gas. It is, we understand, the intention of the council to interpret the rate to mean that even if a manufacturer uses, say, 500,000 feet of gas in a month he will have to pay full rate for the first 100,000; 12½c. for the second 100,000; 10c. for the third 100,000, and the last 200,000 at the reduced rate of 5c. per 1,000. Now, this is no inducement at all to manufacturers, and although it seems a fair construction to place upon the resolution, still we venture to assert that this was not Dr. Smyth's intention when he submitted the resolution. He, and others, intended any manufacturer who would use half-a-million feet of gas per month should have it at the 5c. rate throughout. We submit to the people and the council that the matter should not be permitted to rest there, but the rate should be forthwith amended so as to offer a real, not imaginary inducement and benefit.

Note and Comment

By OBSERVER

A party of boys have been committing depredations at the Curling Rink which may get them into serious trouble. It seems the curlers left all their parapher nalia securely locked up, but on Mr Walter Huckvale visiting the rink last week he found a number of boys in possession. The curling stones had been removed from the boxes, and several were damaged. The handles of about three pair were spoiled. This sort of thing should certainly be stopped. Boys who committ wilful damage to property should be birched. It is about the only thing to make them behave.

Premier Haultain attended the Parliamentary press dinner at Ottawa. In his speech Mr. Haultain said he had asked for one province, and had got twins.

* * * *

From a conversation among some ranchers last week it appears that there is a decided feeling that the Stock Association should take some steps to take care of any range cattle that may stray within the town limits and come under the attention of the poundkeeper. If they stray into town it is a hundred to one that Thomas Morrey gets them in durance vile in double quick time, and then the expenses begin. The brands are not easily distinguishable upon some of the animals, and indeed, it sometimes requires an expert to read them. It would, therefore, seem a good plan for the town to get the co-operation of the Stock Association in the matter.

* * * *

An exchange says:—A printer in a nearby town was given the following copy for an auction bill; "Whereas, I haf my farm got to sell, I makes offer to sell a load of corn, oats, and several tons oder stuff too previous to mention. Al so yet von pull heifers, fresh milk, gows steers, and hogs, a big fat sow and pigs by me, J. Smeer. Derms, gash, if you got him, if not, notes segured by somepody."

* * * *

There is a very decided feeling against the use of barbed wire for fences within the town. People believe that plain wire is just as good in town as the barbed and not dangerous. It is, therefore, to be regretted that the Council are using barbed wire around the plots of ground near the river. A great many people expected the Council to pass a bylaw against its use in town, but I presume it is hopeless to expect that now.

* * * *

We all think we are away ahead of the old countries, and perhaps we are in some things; but there are many matters in which we are away behind. Take for instance, the question of cheap insurance for travellers as it is worked in Britain.

* * * *

For a trifling sum—2 cents, for every $500—the person who buys a railroad ticket receives a ticket entitling his heirs to insurance money in case he should be killed on the journey. The other day a workman insured his life for $2,500 in this way, and his widow received the money. Now there is a great rush for such insurance.

* * * *

"Tipping" is almost unknown in Western Canada. Employes are pretty well paid, and there is such a "one-man's-as-good-as-another-and-better-too" feeling prevailing that "tips" are not looked for. The word has a curious history, however, and originated in the old English coffee house. At the door of these coffee houses was a box usually made of brass, with lock and key. It had engraved upon it the letters "T.I.P." —to insure promptness. Customers as they passed out, dropped a coin in for the waiters. Hence the word "tip."

The eyes of the whole world are on Japan, which has well been named the "Britain of the East." Her achievements against Russian arms have been simply marvellous for such a comparatively small country. Japan's population reaches a total of at least 5,000,000 more that Great Britain. With Formosa and the other annexation the Japanese people numbered 46,000,000 six years ago, and they were then increasing at the rate of 500,000 a year. Japan has also some very big towns. Tokio has a population of about 1,500,000, Osaka between 800,000 and 900,000, and there are 20 others with a population of more than 50,000 each.

The Toronto Globe very properly remarks that "Any Mormon who is known to have in Canada two wives to whom he has been married in the United States must be prosecuted for bigamy, whether he live with both wives or not. He must be made to understand that the 'crime' of bigamy consists in having two wives, not in living with them. He may have deserted them both and be as amenable to conviction as if he lived with both. The sooner men in this position leave Canada the better for themselves and the country."

There might be some doubt whether a prosecution for bigamy would stand, as the Mormon marriage is not a recognised marriage in either the United States or Canada. Fortunately, however, the late Sir John Thompson seemed to have thought of everything in the wonderful Criminal Code he was instrumental in giving to Canada. The subject of Mormonism will there be found to be dealt with in a most unequivocal manner, and the penalty is severe enough to have a decidedly restraining influence.

A man sentenced in Ontario to imprisonment for life and seventy-five lashes for a brutal crime has hanged himself. Obviously he would have been better pleased if he had been sentenced to be hanged. There is a hint there for the law-makers and the judges. Capital punishment is not for some men the worst sentence possible. Life imprisonment, punctuated with flogging, strikes their imagination with more terror; and there are some crimes for which the punishment should be made as terrifying as modern standards will allow.

In Belgium the death sentences are never carried out, because King Leopold promised his mother as she was dying that he would never sign his name to a death warrant. Consequently, although his statute prescribes the extreme penalty, it is only carried out constructively. The condemned person is regarded as dead in the eyes of the law. In place of his personal appearance on the scaffold, the executioner substitutes a broad sheet bearing his name and sentence, posts this where it may be read by the people, and so leaves it, while the criminal is put in prison, to stay there for the term of his life.

New inventions are always interesting sometimes startling and wonderful, and occasionally useful. One of the latest is a marvellous clock. Richard Strutt, a son of Lord Rayleigh has invented a clock that will run for 2,000 years. The motive power is a small piece of gold leaf, which is electrified by means of a small quantity of radium salt. The gold leaf bends away from the metal substance and keeps moving under this influence until it touches the side of the containing vessel. At the moment of contact it loses its electrical charge, and then springs back and is again electrified, and the process is repeated. It is thought that a thoroughly reliable clock could be made with the use of radium salt for $1,000.

Even monks do not spend all their time in fasting and prayer. I read the other day that the monks at the Hospital of St. Jean de Dieu at Ghent, have found a new use for postage stamps. They have in their leisure moments decorated the walls with gorgeous landscapes, glowing with color and full of life, formed entirely by means of the postage stamps of all nations of the world. Palaces, forests, streams and mountains are represented, butterflies flit about in the air, birds of beautiful plumage perch on branches, snakes and lizards glide about, and innumerable animals find places here and there. The pictures are most artistic, in the style of Chinese landscape gardening, and already between nine and ten millions of stamps have been used.

VISITORS BANQUETED

Banquet tendered by members of Medicine Hat L.O.L., 1549, to visiting delegates.

On Tuesday evening the visiting delegates and officers were entertained at the Cosmopolitan Hotel. The tables, under Mrs Bassett's careful supervision, presented a most delightful sight laden with fruit, well provisioned and beautifully decorated, and at 10 o'clock the members of the L.O.L., 1549, the visiting brethren and a few citizens took their seats. After the good things had been partaken of the following toast list was gone through:

The King.
The Governor-General and House of Commons.
The Supreme Grand Lodge and Provincial Grand Lodge, County and Primary Lodges.
Legislative Assembly.
Our Town.
Learned Professions.
The Press.
The Ladies.
Host and Hostess.
God Save the King.

J. Plumley, Master of Lodge 1549, presided as chairman, with Mr E. H. Crandell on his left and Mr T. J. Ashley-Banner on his right. At 11 o'clock the glasses were all charged with the purest of pure drinks, the crystal beverage that does not intoxicate the brain—water. The chairman proposed the health of His Majesty King Edward the VII. After His Majesty's health had been loyally drank all joined in the National Anthem.

The next toast was the Governor-General and House of Commons coupled with the name of Bro. T. J. Ashley-Banner, of Maple Creek. Bro. Ashley-Banner in a neat speech felt that a great honor had been done him in asking to reply to such an important toast, and after a few complimentary remarks regarding the high office of the Governor-General, the speaker then dealt with legislative matters and the House of Commons. He said it was a fact that any of us might rise to be a member of the House while it was impossible to reach the high office of that of Governor-General. It was at this juncture that the speaker made mention of the one and all absorbent and burning question "Separate Schools." The matter had received consideration by the L.O.L. gathered at Medicine Hat and by all other Lodges throughout the Dominion. He thought the views of our western people on this question were well known, and a Resolution had been passed on the school question at the meeting to day, (which will be found in another column of this issue.)

The speaker mentioned the fact that a similar resolution had been sent from the L.O.L. of Maple Creek to the representative of Western Assiniboia, (Mr Walter Scott), praying that he should fight the school question as a Western man, etc., and the reply received from Mr Walter Scott was read over by the speaker, which we intend to publish in this paper at a later date, as it is right that everyone should know the stand that our member takes on this most important question. The speaker was sorry that he could not agree with Mr Walter Scott on the stand he took. Mr Ashley-Banner made an eloquent speech and took his seat amid cheers.

The vice-chairman, Grand Master Mills, of Strathcona, proposed the toast of the Supreme Grand Lodge, and coupled with it the names of Mr E. H. Crandell of Calgary, and Mr J. A. Armstrong. Mr Crandell made the speech of the evening, waxing eloquent at times, and at times serious when handling important matters. It gave him pleasure to meet the Mayor of Medicine Hat, and he was surprised to find that Medicine Hat had such wonderful natural possibilities. He was also pleased to see Mr W. T. Finlay, M.L.A. present. He referred to our great natural gas system, which was a wonderful heating as well as a good illuminating gas, and he only wished he could have it removed to the city of Calgary. Medicine Hat's possibilities were yet unknown, and there was no telling of how great a city we would possess here in years to come. He touched on the provincial question and the education clause connected with the Bill. In closing he asked the Mayor and citizens of Medicine Hat to support the city of Calgary for the Capital, and we would be repaid after the Capital had been established at that point.

Mr Armstrong made a few remarks and resumed his seat amid cheers.

The next toast was County and Primary Lodges. The speakers were Mr McIntosh, Mr J. H. Collier and Mr W. G. Niblock. Mr Collier in his speech brought old reminiscences back to a few of those present, and told a story about the meeting of the American and Canadian Grand Orange Lodges at Niagra Falls, where a number of silver-toned American orators had spoken and said what a grand country the Americans lived in, etc., but, gentlemen, when Mr E. H. Crandell got on his feet to reply to the toast of Canada, and although a small man, he told them in his usual eloquence that they could put the whole of the United States in a small portion of Western Canada, and then they would have lots of room to drive around them. (Laughter).

Mr Niblock spoke on the educational clauses of the Autonomy Bill, and made a stirring address.

The Chairman proposed the toast of the Legislative Assembly, coupling with it the name of Mr W. T. Finlay, M.L.A. Mr Finlay went back to the early history of this august body from its early council days up to the present time, dealing with many important questions. He spoke on constitutional questions and the North-west Territories Act. Mr Finlay's address was marked by the way attention was shown, and he took his seat amid cheers.

The toast of the town of Medicine Hat was next proposed, and His Worship Mayor Forster left nothing unsaid regarding our town. He dwelt on the government of the town, its many good features, the question of natural gas, our water works and the proposed sewer plant. The Mayor presented a case of clear solid facts and showed most clearly the benefits to be had by residing in Medicine Hat to that of other towns. The Mayor was pleased to see, meet with and welcome the visitors of the L.O.L., and he hoped it would not be the last time that such a fine Order of men would meet at this place to discuss important questions of the day. (Cheers).

The toast of the Learned Professions was responded to by Grand Master Mills, Dr. C. E. Smyth, and the Rev. S. Everton. Mr Mills in opening referred in most fitting terms to the splendid spread that had just been partaken of. From a lawyer's stand-point of view he went into the constitutional points regarding the educational clauses in the Autonomy Bill, showing most clearly that the North-west Territories Act re the clauses left to the education question entirely to the new provinces to deal with. He referred to Confederation and the creation of several of the younger provinces which entered confederation granting them the power to deal with their land and education etc. His explanation on the educational matters was a strong one, and was delivered as only a lawyer could deliver it.

Dr Smyth and the Rev. Mr Everton, made good speeches.

The Press was responded to by Mr F. S. Pingle, on behalf of the Times, and Mr R. Collier for the News. Mr Pingle regretted that Mr W. C. Harris could not attend this evening's banquet, and expressed his regrets. He felt honored in speaking to one of the most important toasts of the evening, as the press was a strong arm of our country, and he believed it was the Press by their strong argumentative statements publicly and boldly announced by the western periodicals that stayed the Autonomy Bill in the House of Commons. Speaking as a young Scotch-Canadian who had resided in Assiniboia since early in 1882, he felt that other important features needed amendment before this country was created into provinces. He thought that the people of the West would be foolish to accept autonomy without their public lands, and that no restrictions should be made but we should be given everything that the North-west Territories Act entitled us to receive. He was in favor of one province with the capital at Medicine Hat, its most central point, and was of the opinion that there is no necessity for two provinces as it would only be a waste of money and a duplication of unnecessary expenditures. The present government machinery under the able supervision of Premier Haultain, had proved adequate and satisfactory, and he hoped and desired all young Canadians would stand out for our public domain and one province instead of two, which would be the largest and the most powerful province in the great and most glorious country attached to the mightiest Empire the world has ever seen.

Mr Collier spoke on behalf of the News and drew attention that we had two splendid newspapers in this town nearly equal, if not superior to the best in the country. (Cheers).

The toast to the ladies was well looked after by complimentary remarks from Mr J. Horner, Mr W. J. Reid, and Mr J. Hole.

The toast to the host and hostess was well received, and Mr T. A. Bassett made the reply, but owing to the lateness of the evening would have little to say, as it was not in his line. He thanked the visitors and members of Lodge 1549 for the hearty way the toast had been drank. (Cheers).

God Save the King brought a most pleasant evening to a close.

The Greatest Family Remedy.

And one well known in most Canadian homes is Nerviline, a perfect panacea for all internal and external pain. Mrs M. L. Cartwright, of Morris, says:—I couldn't think of being without Nerviline. When I get toothache Nerviline stops it. If I get a sick headache, have a trouble with my stomach or bowels I can rely on Nerviline to cure me promptly. To break up a cold or rub on for rheumatism or neuralgia Nerviline has no equal. It's priceless in any family. Nerviline is king over all pain and costs 25c.

Medicine Hat Resolutions Quoted in Parliament.

The Member for Calgary (Mr. M. S. McCarthy) speaking in the House of Commons on the Autonomy Bill, on the 15th inst., referred in the following terms to the resolutions passed by the public meeting at Medicine Hat:

The right hon. leader of the Government has stated that no complaints have come in from that country, with the exception of a complaint with regard to the educational clauses of the bill. I may say that if that statement had not been made I would not have troubled the house this afternoon. I have here a resolution passed at Medicine Hat three weeks ago. I may say, explaining it, that it objects to the attempt of the federal administration to retain the lands. It also objects to the proposed legislation in respect to education, and it goes further, and declares that the placing of the dividing line on the 4th meridian is a great hardship to the ranching industry, in that the laws governing a farming country would conflict with the laws governing a ranching country. Further on it says: "We would respectfully suggest that the government appoint a commissioner to inquire fully into all the circumstances, and that a copy of the resolutions be forwarded to the principal newspapers in the country, the premier and leader of opposition, also to the Premier of the Northwest Territories, and W. Scott, M.P." When the right hon. leader of the government says that no other objections were taken to this Bill, either he had not received a copy of that resolution, or the information which was communicated to the hon member for West Assiniboia (Mr Scott) could not have been made known to him, or no attention was paid to the resolution by either gentlemen. I say that there are complaints coming in, and that they are coming in all forms from all parts of the country in respect to the educational question, in respect to the boundaries of the new provinces, and as to the advisability of including in these provinces that great northern country. There is where the difficulty lies; the people of the West to-day have no person through whom they can communicate with the government, because there is no Minister of the Interior. They can communicate with their representatives, as the people of Medicine Hat did with the hon. member for West Assiniboia; but, apparantly, if their representations do not meet the party views of these gentlemen, they will not take the trouble to lay the matter before the government. Therefore, the situation we have to day is that the people of the Northwest Territories have no channel of communication with the government because there is no Minister of the Interior in the House of Commons. Taking up these resolutions that have been passed at Medicine Hat, which, I may say, is one of the most prosperous and flourishtowns in the Northwest Territories, and which is practically on the line which divides the proposed provinces in two; while I do not propose to go at any length into the suggested dividing line, in view of what the right hon. gentleman has suggested to the House to-day, I feel that I would be remiss in my duty if I did not point out some of the objections that are coming from that country in regard to this proposed dividing line. This line, I may say, is placed right in the heart of the ranching country. I have in my mind a map published by the Department of the Interior, and on which the ranching country in the Northwest Territories is shown, and from which it can be seen but that a very small portion of the ranching country is to be placed in the eastern province of Saskatchewan. The objection to that division is that the ranching country in that province will have SUCH SMALL REPRESENTATION IN THE LOCAL HOUSE THAT ITS DEMANDS AND ITS NEEDS MAY NOT RECEIVE THE RECOGNITION WHICH THEY DESERVE. The people inhabiting that district have realized this, and so they sent their resolution of protest down to their representative in this house. Another objection which may seem of small concern to the people of the east, but which is very important to the people of the west, is that by placing a portion of the ranching territory in the eastern province, there is a possibility that there will be a conflict in the branding laws, which will undoubtedly lead to great inconvenience.—Hansard.

Presentation to Mr. Phipps.

Calgary was crowded with railway men on Friday and Saturday, the reason being a banquet given in honour of Master Mechanic Phipps, who is leaving for Vancouver. A large delegation went up from Medicine Hat comprising:—J. Nicholson, chairman; W. Guinlan, W. Venables, R. McNeill, W. Smith, H. Cave, P. Robertson, G. L. Ripley, H. Munyon, R Wjslon, M. Morrison,

The men from Medicine Hat presented the following address:

To Samuel Phipps, Esq.

Dear Sir,—We, the engineers and fireman of the Canadian Pacific Railway at Medicine Hat, take this opportunity of expressing to you our sincere regret at your removal from this division.

Many of us have known you for quite a number of years in connection with railway work, and others for shorter periods, but the experience of all has been that while you were strict in seeing the companys work carried out as it should be, you were fair to all, and showed favoritism to none, thereby securing the respect and good wishes of all who worked under you here.

While addressing you these few words of regret at your leaving, we would ask you to accept the accompanying present of silverware as a tangible expression of our best wishes for the future health and happiness of yourself, Mrs Phipps, and family, and we will feel doubly repaid if, when enjoying the comforts of your new home further west, it may at times bring to mind the many friends you have in Medicine Hat.

Signed, on behalf of the Medicine Hat engineers and firemen
J. NICHOLSON,
W. SMITH,
R. McNEILL.

At the banquet, W. Pillar was chairman, and J. Nicholson was vice-chairman.

The Sewerage Scheme.

THE TIMES has been so active and persistent in urging progress in all public works that for us to sound any other note may almost seem like backing down. Yet we intend to change our key somewhat at the present juncture. The Council have done well in so quickly bringing the sewerage question to a head, but now they should proceed cautiously and well consider every step they take. The scheme is a large one and if carried out in its entirety will prove costly. That is to say it involves a very large sum of money. It is, however, a complete, comprehensive scheme and, apparently, speaking without pretence to technical knowledge of the matter, is well suited to the present and future needs of the town.

The points now to be considered are, how much of the present scheme should be carried out at once and in what manner should the tax be levied upon the people. The portion which is urgently needed is that part of the town where the business houses are situated. If that, and possibly two or three streets along the river front, were done immediately that should be sufficient for this year and other portions could be added as circumstances require it.

The next important point is the question of how the tax is to be levied upon the people. The Council may proceed to carry out all or the bulk of the scheme and tax the whole town for the work. This is the simplest way and where all the people who would thus have to pay taxes could be assured of full and equal benefits, it would be the best way, but that is a point to be considered. The other plan is levy a special to frontage assessment upon property The term "special frontage assessment" means a rate charged according to the lineal measure along the front of the several lands fronting on the street or place whereon or wherein the improvement is to be made. The rate is computed by dividing the total charge to be provided by the number of lineal feet frontage of such lands on the street or place where the local improvement is to be made. This frontage assessment appears to us to be the most equitable plan as it makes sure that those who reap the most benefit will pay the bulk at least of the cost. Other residents, benefitting indirectly would, after construction of the works have to contribute toward the improvement in the way of repairs and cost of maintenance which would be met out of the general tax.

The foregoing are very important points and must be carefully approached by the Council and the people, for whatever course is adopted now will have to stand during the life of the works.

No Appointment by Tender.

It has been the custom, we believe, for the Council to ask for tenders for the duties of auditors, poll tax collector and assessor. Certainly they have done so in the latter case. Yet clause 92 of the Municipal Ordinance says: No Municipal Council shall make any appointment to office or arrangement for the discharge of the duties thereof by tender or to applicants at the lowest remuneration." It might be well to refer the point to the Town solicitor who has been so much in request lately.

Tree Planting.

The Town Council propose to give four trees to every owner of property who wish to have them to plant on the "boulevards" this year, the owner to plant and care for them. It would be difficult to imagine any proposal more crude than to give trees to be planted on the sides of the streets in this way, and we venture to predict that the scheme, if carried out, will be a failure. There is but one way to have good boulevards and that is for the Corporation to properly lay out, plant, sod and take care of them. We don't want patchy looking streets and that is what we shall soon have if the present suggestions are carried out. It is all right to give citizens trees to plant on their lawns and gardens but the Council should go no further than that at the present stage of the town's development. The planting of boulevards should be postponed until it can be taken in hand properly. If the Council are wise they will set apart a sufficient number of trees for street planting throughout the whole town, have them transplanted in the nursery this spring and let them grow there for one or two seasons before putting one of them on the streets. Then, after the sewerage scheme is well under way the Council should take the sidewalks and boulevards in hand by which time they would have trees big enough and strong enough to be put out along the streets and if the trees are then properly protected and looked after as to watering etc., there will be a reasonable chance of the boulevard being a success. The present proposal is crude and villagy in its conception and should be quashed.

The Autonomy Bill.

We have read with the utmost astonishment the article in our contemporary "The News" headed "The School Clauses." It commences with an incorrect assertion and ends with humbug pure and simple. We are prepared to support our assertion that the amended educational clause is to all intents and purposes the original one having one difference but arriving at the same end. The difference is that the original clause positively gives part of the public school money to the separate schools and the amendment states that in distributing the school money the local house shall not discriminate against the separate schools. We challenge The News to show that the amendment is in any way along the lines claimed by the principal speakers at the Medicine Hat public meeting. The tenure of all the speeches made was "Provincial Rights". Relative to the School question the fact is that under the B.N.A. Act Provinces have exclusive control of Education, subject to proper regard being had to separate schools The clause is Section 93 "In and for each Province the Legislature may exclusively make laws in relation to Education subject and according to the following provisions.—

(1) Nothing in any such law shall prejudically affect any right or privilege with respect to denominational schools which any class of persons have by law in the Province at the Union."

The provisions in the Manitoba Act are, Section 22:

"In and for the Province the said Legislature may exclusively make laws in relation to education subject and according to following provisions:—

(1) Nothing in any such law shall prejudicially affect any right or privilege with respect to denominational schools which any class of persons have by law or practice in the Province at the union."

In these two sections of the two acts wherein lies the difference? We claim and insist on behalf of these Territories that if we are to have Provincial Rights we must have them on conditions on all fours with the other Provinces without any legal subterfuges but in plain English. This is what the public meeting claimed neither more nor less. The Territories, as such are under the direct government of the Dominion House which house was good enough to enact regarding education and import in such enactment the expressions "Roman Catholic" and Protestant". As citizens we do not know these terms; many people dispute as to the meaning of "Protestant". We claim that the original term "denominational" should be used in which event any questions of particular sect or sects would not arise. It is this enactment which the Government is endeavoring to make permanent. As in this so in the election clause. The Government's present intention is that the law, for election of members to the Dominion House, applicable to the Territories shall be made a permanent one for the new Provinces. If the proposed section becomes law we then have the present laws, put into being by the Dominion for the Territories, made permanent and compulsory for the new Territories. The plain and simple question is why should the new Provinces be more restricted in these matters than the older Provinces?

The Moosomin World describes the change in the school clause as: "The hand of Esau but the voice of Jacob." Nothing could be better put.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING.

A meeting of the Council was held on Tuesday, when there were present: F. G. Forster, mayor, presiding, Councillors A. DesBrisay, H. Stewart, F. O. Sissons, J. K. Drinnan, C. F. Smyth, and W. N. Adsit, clerk.

WATER EXTENSIONS.

Letters were read from the City Coast Pipe Company, Vancouver, and the Canadian Pipe Company, Vancouver, giving prices for water pipes for the extension of the water system.

On motion of Coun. Stewart, seconded by Coun. DesBrisay, the letters were referred to the water committee with power to accept the tender of the Canadian Pipe Company.

Coun. Drinnan—Has it been decided as to what streets you will extend on?

The Mayor—There was a list of the streets and the quantities of piping for each submitted at the last meeting and passed, and we decided to order one thousand feet more for contingencies. (He read the list.)

ASSESSOR.

The Mayor—Gentlemen, there is the matter of the Assessor. We have only one application in.

Coun. Stewart—It is time he was got to work, is it not?

The Clerk—Yes. He should have been before this time. The roll must be completed by the first of May.

The letter of application, which proved to be from R. G. Wetmon, was then read. Mr. Wetmon offered to do the work for $175.

Coun. Stewart—I move the application be referred to the Assessment Committee.

Coun. Drinnan—Would it not be wise to give them power to act in the matter either to accept the application in hand or ask for others, as an assessor should be appointed right away. If you do that I will second the motion.

Coun. Stewart added the words "with power to act," and the motion was agreed to.

NIBBLING AT THE SPRINKLER.

The question of providing a street sprinkler for the town was introduced by Councillor Drinnan, who said—When in Winnipeg I went to the Implement houses there, but could not find anything about a sprinkler. They had none in stock, and do not keep them in their catalogues. I have talked over the matter with Coun. Stewart and Coun. Smyth, and we think the wisest way will be to have one made here in the town. We can use one of our own wagons and have a tank made or purchase one and have a sprinkler attachment made. It would take some two months at least to get one from the east. One fitted here may not be so good as one from the east, but would do to experiment with.

Coun. DesBrisay—We had one at New Westminster, and the sprinkler was just a piece of perforated gas pipe, and it did all right.

Coun. Sissons—There was one up here at one time.

Coun. DesBrisay—Pete Watson was going to start one, but then the wet season came. It may be a good thing to get one for it may bring us another wet season.

Coun. Drinnan—I think we can fit one up here which will be all right, and if we want to purchase one afterwards this would be all right as a secondary one.

Coun. DesBrisay—But if the one we make here should turn out no good it would be so much time and money lost.

Coun. Stewart—Well, the season will be advanced.

Coun. DesBrisay—We should be able to get one here in a month. Is anyone getting a car of implements in?

Coun. Drinnan—No, that's the difficulty.

Coun. DesBrisay—Well, it's all right if it turns out well. If it is a failure we shall be so much out.

Coun. Sissons—In Portage la Prairie they made their own sprinkler.

Coun. Stewart—Well, if we can have the tank made here and in operation in a few days it will be an advantage.

The Mayor thought they could leave it to the Committee.

Coun. Drinnan—Well, there's the question of how it's to be handled. I shall be in favor of handling it as a town affair. If only the business portion of the town is sprinkled it will be a benefit to everybody concerned.

Coun. DesBrisay—If I remember the stores offered to pay that portion, and it was only a small amount.

Coun. Sissons—I think it would be a good idea if the town paid say two-thirds of the cost and the other one-third. The business men will stores would be the ones getting the most advantage from it.

Coun. DesBrisay—That may be, but there's a great cry here that people have to pay high prices for goods. Everyone will benefit by a sprinkler, even the lawyers. Mr Kealey or Mr Mitchell walking to their offices would be benefited by the streets being sprinkled.

Coun. Stewart—Everybody who goes for mail would have the advantage of it.

Coun. Sissons—Business men would derive most of the benefit.

Coun. DesBrisay—Well, I grant that, if there's less dust.

Coun. Drinnan—Well, how are we going to do it? Are we going to pass a by-law compelling all property owners to pay?

Coun. DesBrisay—Your idea is for the town to do it all?

Coun. Drinnan—Well, if I were not a merchant in the town I would advocate it. It is the simplest way, unless we can take it up as a business man's proposition.

The Mayor—Yes, and the water can be given free.

Coun. DesBrisay—Well, then, it would not be very costly, as there would be only three streets to sprinkle.

Coun. Sissons—I don't think that would be worth while.

Coun. Stewart—I don't think you will find many people against running it as a town affair, but if there is a moiety borne by the business men it will look better.

Coun. Drinnan—Well, as we are three business merchants here I think we had better start it as a business men's affair. Let us put in an application for water and form ourselves into a committee to take it up.

Coun. Sissons—Dave Williamson spoke to me about it. He is willing to take up the work.

Coun. Stewart—Suppose Mr DesBrisay takes it in hand to get up $50 per month.

Coun. DesBrisay—That's easy. I am willing, but let some liveryman take it up.

Eventually Councillors Drinnan, DesBrisay and Stewart formed themselves into a committee, wrote an application for free water, and handed it to the Clerk.

Coun. Sissons proposed and Coun. Stewart seconded that the application be granted, and the motion was agreed to.

The Mayor—Who will take it in hand to see it carried out?

Coun. Drinnan—The committee will do it.

HIGH LEVEL STANDPIPES.

Coun. DesBrisay asked if the Council contemplated putting a standpipe on the hill to supply the houses on the higher level with water, and had the Council any property in that part of the town?

Councillor Drinnan replied that the matter came before the Council last year, and negotiations had been opened with Mr. Pewings for the purchase of a suitable site. It would be necessary to have an engineer's opinion as to the subsoil, etc., but it would be well to take the matter up now, and he moved that the matter of the selection of suitable plots for standing pipes be referred to the water committee with power to obtain options on two or three sites.

Coun. Sissons seconded and it was agreed to.

THE WOOLLEN MILL.

A letter was read from Mr. Mitchell, Town Solicitor, giving his opinion as to the legality of the Council granting the application of the Woollen Mill company for a loan of $15,000 on the security of the property. Mr. Mitchell was of the opinion that the Council could not do so, being prevented by the no-bonus clause in the Town Charter.

The Mayor said perhaps Mr Whelan who was present could suggest something.

Mr Whelan said the Ontario legislature passed a special law prohibiting bonusing, but the municipalities now grant loans instead, without interest.

The Council agreed that Mr Mitchell take farther opinion upon the matter.

Mr Whelan said the only other way, if the Council were anxious to help the mill, would be to purchase the property and lease it to the company for a term of years, the latter to pay interest and buy it back again at so much per year, or pay in full at the end of the term the amount the Council paid for it.

MANUFACTURER'S RATE FOR GAS.

The Mayor brought up by-law No. 91, relating to rates for gas to manufacturers, and said it was rushed through on the previous evening, and was not quite what was intended. It was the intention that any manufacturer fulfilling the other conditions and using over 300,000 feet of gas per month should be supplied at the 5c. per 1000 rate right through.

After a short conversation the clause was amended accordingly, and finally accepted.

THE SEWERAGE SCHEME.

The report of Mr. John Galt, C.E. with complete plans of the proposed sewerage scheme, and detailed estimate of the cost, was received and discussed at considerable length. Mr Galt divided the plans into three parts, viz., the upper district comprising the part lying south of the track; the intermediate, being the portion between the railway track and the town limits on the north; and the low levels consisting of the district of the Johnson estate, north of the town limits, and the total estimate was $48,000 for the upper district, and $27,000 for the intermediate district.

Coun. Sissons thought it a big scheme to carry out all at once.

It was stated that the plans embraced portions of the town where at present there were no buildings, so that the whole scheme need not be carried out in the first contract.

Several members were of opinion that the portion which should be gone into would cost about $60,000.

Coun. Stewart was of opinion that they should go on with that much.

A question was raised as to whether the estimate included digging and filling up as well as the cost of piping, so it was resolved to take no chances, but to wire Mr Galt on the point.

Coun. Sissons said he would be in favor of doing the part between Montreal street and the river and the intermediate part.

Dr. Smyth thought it would be cheaper to take up the whole scheme, and fairer to the whole town, unless they were going to do it on the frontage assessment plan.

Coun. Stewart considered it would be a saving to do as Dr. Smyth suggested.

Dr. Smyth asked if the town's borrowing powers would stand it, and was assured it would, and a good deal more.

Dr. Smyth—Now, could not the Council take up the matter of making regulations for houses to be connected under proper provisions?

The Mayor—As soon as the sewerage is in.

Dr. Smyth—They have had much trouble in Winnipeg through so many different kinds of connections having been put in. We want the right way here from the start.

Coun. DesBrisay—If we have an engineer here he will see that the proper connection are put in.

The Mayor—That's what you engage Mr Galt for.

Coun. DesBrisay—Would he look after the house connections?

The Mayor—It's up to the town. Provision will be made at every prospective house for future connections.

Coun. Sissons—Will the sewer be in the centre of the street?

The Mayor—He proposes the centre of the street.

After further discussion,

Dr Smyth moved that the town undertake the sewerage system for the upper and middle districts, omitting certain outlying portions for the present where there are no houses.

Coun. Stewart seconded.

Coun. Sissons—Well, I am of the opinion that it would be better to do a part of it this year. I don't think we could get through it all this year anyway.

The Mayor could not see why they could not.

Coun. Sissons wanted a portion of the sewerage system this year and a little in granolithic sidewalks as well.

Dr. Smyth's motion was put and carried, and it was decided to call a meeting of ratepayers soon, and submit the whole question to the people.

The Mayor reported that a committee had met Mr Jamieson of the C.P.R. on Monday morning, re the location of the new station.

On the motion of Coun. Sissons, seconded by Coun. Stewart, it was resolved that this proposal should also be submitted to the public meeting.

MR HARLOW'S APPLICATION.

The Council next took up Mr. R. J. Harlow's application for gas for a proposed brickyard company being formed. Mr Harlow asked for a contract that he could show his company. The company would lay pipes, or he said that, if necessary, he would deposit a cheque to cover the expense of laying the pipe to the town limits if the Council preferred to do the work.

In the course of a long discussion the Mayor opposed a contract being made, and questioned the power of the Council to make a contract to sell gas to be used out of the town limits.

It was decided to take the town solicitor's opinion on the matter, and the meeting adjourned until next day.

An adjourned meeting of the Council was held on Wednesday afternoon, when Mr. Harlow's application was discussed at considerable length. The Council, with one exception, appeared to be favorable to passing a resolution to make a contract with Mr. Harlow under certain limitations. The exception was the Mayor, who stoutly opposed a resolution to make a contract. Solicitor's opinion had been taken. Councillor Sissons drew up a motion to the effect that the town enter into a contract to supply the gas at the new schedule rates for manufacturers, subject to its being cut off or reduced if it interfered with domestic requirements. The wording of this was objected to, and finally the solicitor drafted the following:—

"That the Secretary write Mr Harlow that the Council is prepared to enter into negotiations with Mr. Harlow or his company to be organised, with a view to enter into a contract for the sale of gas to himself or to his company on terms, conditions and instructions to be then arranged and agreed upon, and to be satisfactory to the town. And it shall be one of the provisions, among others in said contract, that the town will supply the gas required according to the present gas bylaw and regulations up to December 31st, 1905. And provided that the town shall have the right to restrict the quantity of gas to be supplied from time to time to said Harlow or company, in order to prevent any reduction of pressure below what the town considers reasonable and necessary to enable it to properly supply its other customers or its own system. This offer does not restrict the town in the making of the said contract except as above set forth."

On the motion of Coun. Sissons and Drinnan, the motion was agreed to.

Coun. Drinnan gave notice to move at the next meeting for a bylaw to provide funds for a new municipal building.

Messrs G. Percy Blyth and W. R. Gilbert were re-appointed auditors.

A report of the Chief of Police was read as follows:

March 22, 1905.

To Chairman and Members of Licence and Police Committee, Medicine Hat.

Gentlemen,—I have the honor to report as follows:

Some time ago I noticed a pipe threading machine missing from the town work shop. On inquiring, I found that it was in possession of Mr. Flavin, who told me he had purchased the same from Councillor Penhale and Superintendent Porter. I see now that the machine is again in the Town workshop, and this morning I asked Mr Flavin where the machine was, and he replied that he had lent it to the town to do some work with. He stated further that he had purchased the machine from the parties mentioned above for $65.

Not having noticed anything in minutes of the Council meetings relative to the sale of this machine, I considered it my duty to report the circumstances.

I notice that in the minutes of the last regular meeting a decision relative to trees taken without permission from the Town Park. I beg to report that I am in a position to prove who took these trees, and will wait your instructions.

I have the honor to be,
Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
G. H. MARKWICK,
Chief of Police.

A member said that some time ago Mr Porter recommended its being sold, and a larger one purchased, as it was not equal to all the requirements.

The Clerk said that Mr Porter told him some few weeks ago that Mr Flavin had the machine from the office, and afterwards said he had bought it from Mr Penhale.

Mr Stewart—Did he tender the money for it?

The Clerk—Last week Mr Flavin's book-keeper came in here with a cheque for $65. I said I could not receive it, not knowing anything about it. She left the cheque, and asked for a receipt, and she went away and left it. At that time the machine was in our shop. I told Mr Porter that he should report the matter to the Council.

Coun. DesBrisay—How would it do to refer it to the license and police committee for investigation and report. I propose that.

Coun. Drinnan seconded, and it was agreed to.

FROM HEAD TO FOOT

you feel the good that's done by Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cleanses, regulates and invigorates Stomach, Liver and Bowels and so purifies the blood. And through the blood, it cleanses, repairs, and invigorates the whole system.

In recovering from "grippe," or in convalescence from pneumonia, fevers, or other exhausting diseases, nothing can equal it as an appetizing, restorative tonic to build up needful flesh and strength. It tones every organ into natural action, promotes all the bodily functions, and restores health and vigor.

For every disease that comes from foul or Weak Stomach, a torpid Liver or impure Blood, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, and the most stubborn Skin, Scalp, or Scrofulous affections, the "Discovery" is a sovereign remedy. Don't be hypnotized, wheedled, or over persuaded into accepting a substitute only that some selfish medicine seller may make a greater profit on the inferior article. The "Discovery" has a great record of nearly forty years with thousands of cures behind it.

Dear Sir—Several years ago my blood became impoverished and I became run down in health. I had no appetite, could not sleep, and was practically pestered for work. Suffered from innumerable boils and was in bad shape. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery relieved me of my wretched condition. The medicine built up my system and restored me to a normal condition of health. I can speak most highly also of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, as it has been used in my family for years in cases of female trouble.

Special to the Times.—Two weeks ago Medicine Hat News had a par in their paper headed "Lost on the Prairie." SPECIAL COUNCIL MEETING

A special meeting of the council was held yesterday afternoon.

Present—F. G. Forster, Mayor, (presiding), Councillors Drinnan, Smyth, Sissons and Stewart; W. N. Adsit, town clerk.

The meeting had been called by the Mayor in response to a requisition from Mr Harlow, who wished to meet the council in reference to the proposed contract for supplying gas to a company for the manufacture of brick.

Mr Harlow attended, accompanied by T. P. Day, Dr. Smith, and D. G. White, representing the company. A long conversation took place as to the granting of a contract, and the terms upon which the gas would be conveyed from the town system to the boundary line whence it is to be piped to the company's works. It was generally held that the council should lay the pipes to the boundary. Mr Harlow or company putting up a cheque to cover cost to the town, the town solicitor having given it as his opinion that the council could not give permission to anyone to lay piping on the public streets.

The Mayor held to his previous opinion that no contract should be given. He could see no necessity for it. The gas was here, and the company had only to buy it like anybody else.

The representatives of the company said they must press for an agreement for a definite time.

Councillor Drinnan saw no objection to an agreement on the terms proposed. The interests of the town would be safeguarded, and it would cost the town nothing.

Councillors Smyth, Sissons and Stewart agreed.

Councillor Sissons moved that the town solicitor be instructed to meet the solicitor of the company to draw up an agreement between the town and the company, regarding the supply of gas to the company.

Councillor Drinnan seconded, and it was carried

Councillor Drinnan asked when the council proposed to distribute the trees to citizens. It was time to start as they were budding out.

The Mayor thought they might leave it until the 1st of April when the government inspector would be here, and they might get him to give an address in the Opera House on Friday evening on how to plant trees.

It was agreed to leave the matter until Friday.

REAL ESTATE

LECTURE BY THE REV. JOHN McNEILL

On Thursday evening last, the Medicine Hat Baptist Church was packed with a large and representative audience, which included the Mayor and many prominent men of the town, to hear the lecture entitled "All's Well" delivered by the Rev. John McNeill, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Winnipeg. The Rev. S. Everton, in introducing the lecturer, assured the audience of the good treat in store, and did not have any fears but that everybody would be held spellbound for the next two hours. This proved to be no exaggeration, as from 8.30 until 10.30, Mr McNeill lectured without intermission to an audience of whose appreciation it would be hard to find an equal. The lecture was based on a seven months' trip Mr McNeill took round the world, and the title "All's Well" arose from the well known cry made by the look-out at the masthead of vessels.

The Lyric Quartette very kindly and ably rendered their assistance to the evening's entertainment.

The proceeds of the lecture will be devoted to the Baptist Church Building Fund.

The Man Who Works Hard.

Perseverance and will-power he must have, but whether he has strength and vigor is another consideration. Hard working men usually have irritable nerves and should fortify their systems with a course of Ferrozone, a tonic that rebuilds and revitalizes beyond all telling. It's just wonderful the strength that Ferrozone imparts to brokendown men. It forms new blood, supplies the system with abundant nourishment, and where formerly there was tiredness and lassitude Ferrozone establishes a reserve of energy and vim. TUESDAY, MARCH 28th. 1905.

Thousands of Americans Coming.

We have received the following from Col. G. C. Porter, Editor of the Calgary Herald, who is at present taking a holiday through his native States.

Ottumwa, Iowa, March 18.

"So much cash has been drawn out of the country banks of some sections of Iowa by farmers for investment in North West Canada that interest has advanced one per cent in that state during the past year."

This was the magnificent tribute to immigration movement paid by W. T. M. Towne, president of the First National Bank of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, in a conversation with the writer to-day. Following the statement the banker asserted that there could be no question that the funds so heavily withdrawn during the past year had been taken out of the country northward for that purpose.

From the volume of immigration already started northward it would appear that the largest loss Iowa has yet suffered will be charged this year to the fertile lands of North-Western Canada.

A. W. Lee, one of the chief newspaper publishers of Iowa, and director of metropolitan dailies in Ottumwa, Davenport and Oskaloosa, alluding to the subject to-day, said that he was satisfied that thousands of Iowa farmers would go into Alberta and Assiniboia this year to settle on the cheap lands.

"What better way could the wealthy farmers of Iowa and Nebraska invest their enormous surplus, derived from their big farms of these states than in land for their sons in the Dominion?" Mr Lee inquired, following up the suggestion.

To appreciate the interest taken by part of the central west in the development of Canada, one has but to visit the hotels, depots and business houses. It is the subject of general conversation, and the writer heard Governor Cumins of the great state of Iowa to-day casually remark that while he knew much wealth and many of the finest settlers in the west were moving into Canada, he saw no cause for alarm, and did not believe the movement northward will be viewed with any hostility. This is a conspicuous illustration of the friendly feeling displayed on all sides towards the movement. The fear expressed in some quarters that the central states will suffer because of the migration to British territory is not shared by the thoughtful business men of Iowa.

This is the centre of the district that is and has been sending so many young farmers to Western Canada. The writer asked the ticket agent of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad this morning what was the fare to Calgary, Alberta. Without turning his head he called over to a clerk: "Jack, here's another man for Calgary," and a clerk came forward. Almost instantly, without consulting a guide, he replied that the first class rate was $42, and the second class $38. When asked how he happened to be so familiar with the rate to such a remote point, he replied that he had sold five tickets that day to Calgary, and for the past month had been selling many tickets to the North West Territories. He said he sold more one-way tickets that he did return transportation.

Ottumwa is the metropolis of one of the wealthiest agricultural districts of the state, and the farms are owned by very wealthy men. Most of them are in excess of 160 acres, and very few are tilled by renters. These Iowa farmers are great land owners, and their sons have acquired that passion for obtaining land in large quantities. That is the secret of the migration towards Western Canada from this region.

Through Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri and Illinois there is as much interest in Western Canada as here in Iowa. Any man from the Northwest is an object of interest here, and the newspaper reporters seek interviews from any hotel guest registered from Canada. But the people are very well informed in this section about Western Canada, and discussions about the relative value of land in southern and northern Alberta, as compared with that in Assiniboia can be heard in railroad trains and hotels here hourly. The real estate men all over these states are in touch with land agents in Canada, and are declared to be reaping rich commissions in business indirectly handled. In the larger cities the real estate agents display prominently maps of Western Canada with big red lines showing the probable course of the Grand Trunk Pacific. Literature by the ton can be secured on application from any of them, and the railroads of the states are transmitting maps and charts of the Canadian lines to-day, something they have steadfastly refused to do in the past. Apparantly, if there was an unfriendly disposition at first towards this business on the part of the big roads of the states, it has long since disappeared in the general hustle for business towards the north. The bureau organised two years ago in St. Louis to divert traffic from the north west towards the south west, and heavily subsidised by the huge railroad corporations is still doing business, but it is not interfering with the Canadian traffic. The general opinion in this sectionis that the spring migration will be more than double that of last year and the year previously.

G. C. PORTER.

ROSS' DEFEAT KILLED HIM.

Shock Proves too Much for an Aged Donkey—A Unique Case.

Who ever saw a dead donkey or heard of one dying?

They are like Dickens' post boys, who disappeared off the face of the earth without anyone knowing what had become of them. A bona fide case of a donkey dying has, however, been run down at last, says a Toronto paper, though in this instances the poor animal had a good excuse for giving up his last breath in public.

He died on the night of the 25th of January, just as the returns showed conclusively that the Liberal Government had been irretrievably swamped by the votes of an indignant proletariat, and, as he had been reared in a hot bed of Liberalism, his owners and their friends not unreasonably assumed that the deathknell of Liberalism in Ontario had been too much for him.

This donkey was brought out from the Old Country about the year 1870 and was then so old that no one remembered when he was born. He fell into the hands of Mr M. Woods, of Mallon & Woods, in 1872, and that gentlemen's nephews and neices played with him during their childhood. When they grew to old they passed him on to their juniors, and he has been the playmate evidently, of successive generations of youngsters from time immemorial. He was grey and bald when he first arrived in America, and no one would hazard a guess as to his age.

He didn't die of old age, however, of that Mr Woods is sure, and he can find no other reason for such a singular event than the overthrow of the Ross administration. Sudden and poignant grief must have made him neglect the mysterious mode which donkeys effect in shuffling off this mortal coil.

Jimmy Woods, (nephew of the above named M. Woods), bar tender at the Royal Hotel, Medicine Hat, is grief-stricken over the death of the above poor moke. When Jimmy was a boy in Ontario he used to ride that old donkey and on the back of that now famous steed received his first equestrian exercises. The Times offers sincere condolences to all the Woods family.

Sniffling and Sneezing Colds.

Can be stopped in a few minutes and permanently cured in one hour by inhaling fragrant healing Catarrhozone. No remedy compares with Catarrhozone for cold in the head and nasal catarrh. It soothes and heals the inflamed mucous membranes, prevents sneezing and coughing, clears away the "stuffed up" feeling in the forehead. If you haven't used Catarrhozone get it to-day and stop it on your next cold. You'll be surprised at the efficiency of this delightful inhaler treatment which pleases everyone because it cures so quickly. Complete outfit $1.00; trial size, 25c.

CHARACTERISTIC LETTER FROM MR. WM. COUSINS.

March 18th, 1905.

Well, old Times, I promised I would write to you, and so here goes. I am now riding in the chair car of a St. P.M. and O.R. Railway train. I hope my creditors won't get to think I am blowing myself—I know the conductor on this car.

I met Bill Bryan—not Bill Bailey—otherwise called old 16 to 1, and by others William Jennings Bryan. He is going to Black Falls to night to deliver a speech. If he falls on them as he did on his breakfast this morning they will soon know there is something doing. I had quite a long conversation with him. He was telling me principally that down in Nebraska they catch black bass with a club, and run down gophers on horseback. I tried to get his views on the Autonomy Bill, but he was'nt up on it to any great extent, but knows enough about it to say that the worst feature of the bill is the fact that the Dominion Government want to keep control of the elections and the lands, and he can't see why they want to multiply trouble by making two provinces when one will make enough. He says, of course, the office holders have always to be considered, but his experience is that they usually get all the consideration, and everything else that's going, so we shouldn't worry about them. I tried to get him to say what he thought we in the territories should do about it, but he would'nt. He started to talk about old times—not The Times—and mentioned that they once had trouble down at Boston about some tea, when there wouldn't have been any trouble if fellows in high places hadn't had swelled head. He said the Civil war in the States was a bad piece of business, and his general talk made me feel as if I wanted to sing "Britons never never shall," etc., etc. However, as this has nothing to do with the weather—it's raining just horrid—or the Autonomy Bill, you won't be interested. While talking to Bill I thought to tell him about our natural gas here, but on looking at him closely, came to the conclusion that I wouldn't, seeing that he has gas of his own, and is trying to interest the people of Black Falls with it to-night.

It's hard writing this stuff here on the train, for just as you are going to dot an I or cross a T you get a swing that makes you think of what Mayor Abbot, of Maple Creek, said the Creek would be if the dividing line of the provinces should be placed near Swift Current.

So I will conclude and try this on you. if it takes, will write again when I havn't had so much to take myself.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING.

A regular meeting of the Council was held last night. Present, F. G. Forster, Mayor (presid.ng), J. K. Drinnan, F. O. Sessons, H. Stewart, A. Des Brisay.

W. N. Adsit, Clerk.

The Minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

A letter was read from the C. P. R. claims agent stating the Council's claim for $8.00 for broken lamp would receive attention.

Two letters were read from the Clary Company, Winnipeg, quoting on enamelled street signs, and stating samples had been sent.

The Canadian Pipe Company had written the Council re shipments of water works material.

A letter was read from G. Percy Blythe stating that the Board of Trade had appointed F. L. Crawford, W. C. Harris and himself to act with the Council in one or two matters affecting town development and asking the Council if they would also appoint a Committee to act jointly. At a later stage of the proceedings the question was left to the Mayor who appointed the new enterprises committee to act in the matter.

A petition signed by Messrs. R. Dunn, W. Cross, Geo. Hunt, S. Hayward, E. J. Hunt, J. Calkins, T. J. Taylor, J. E. Milligan, J. Benson, D. G. White, F. S. Pingle, and W. R. Gilbert, was received asking the Council to convey the water to their property. It was referred to the water committee.

A letter was read from J. R. Johnson asking for gas from the Park well to burn lime.

Mr Drinnan said he had caused a letter to be written with the sanction of the gas committee, stating the council could not accede to the request, and this action was now approved by the Council.

The School Board wrote asking the Council to give them as favourable rate as possible for water for the Montreal School. It was referred to the water committee with power to act.

A petition was read from W. B. Marshall, Thos. Hutchings, J. P. Laird, Bros. W. J. Brotherton and others re new paving for the east side of Toronto Street and it was referred to the building and works committee.

PROPOSED ATHLETIC GROUND.

A deputation consisting of Messrs. W. F. Finlay, W. B. Marshall, A. C. Hawthorne, D. G. White and C. S. Pingle was present to interview the Council and bring before them the desirability of taking steps to provide a public park and athletic grounds. They represented the Board of Trade and Lacrosse club.

Mr. Finlay introduced the deputation and stated the object in view. The young men should be encouraged as they gave a good deal of their time to athletic pursuits and their visits to other towns and the success they met with has always tended to advertise Medicine Hat. The Board of Trade, he might say, had heartily endorsed the movement and he hoped for a favourable consideration by the Council.

Mr. Hawthorne urged that something should be done now as the longer it was put off the more difficult it would be to secure suitable grounds.

Mr White endorsed the proposition on behalf of the Board of Trade.

Mr Pingle said most western towns have parks and athletic grounds, and he thought we should provide one if only to help outdoor sports.

Mr Marshall said there was a strong feeling now in favor of the town getting an athletic ground, and he asked the council to appoint a committee to take the matter up.

A conversation ensued as to the various sites which had been offered, and each member of the council spoke in favor of the proposition.

The Mayor observed that it was a good argument in its favor when three ex-mayors of the town came to advocate it.

The deputation then retired.

Later in the evening the council took the subject up.

Mr. DesBrisay—How much ground will be required?

The Mayor—15 or 20 acres.

Mr Stewart—Have we any prices quoted?

The Mayor—Last year we were offered land on the Johnson, Yuill and Cousins estates at $200 per acre, and by the Land Improvement Company at $250 per acre.

Mr Sissons—How much shall we spend upon it?

The Mayor—It would cost about $5000 for I should like to see a half or three quarter mile track made. If we purchase now the property will be sure to increase in value, as this has, where this building stands, which has more than doubled.

Mr Drinnan—Well, it would be all right from a financial point of view, as it will be sure to increase in value. I am in favor of purchasing a good piece of ground.

The Mayor—Yes, and agricultural shows, races and everything of that kind can be held there if we have it near enough to town.

Mr Stewart—Would it not be well to appoint a committee?

The Mayor—Yes, and for someone to give notice of a bylaw, and give it a first reading. We can then submit it the same time as the sewerage bylaw.

Mr Stewart—I move that the Mayor appoint a committee to get prices of land suitable for a half-mile track.

Mr. DesBrisay—I second that.

The motion was carried.

The Mayor—I appoint Councillors Stewart, Drinnan as and Sissons the committee.

Mr Stewart then gave notice to move for leave to introduce a bylaw to raise money by debentures for the purpose of a park and athletic ground.

THE MUNICIPAL BUILDING.

Mr Drinnan moved that the public works committee be authorised to advertise for tenders for competitive plans for a municipal building to cost not more than $30,000. The idea is to give all the architects a chance of competing.

Mr DesBrisay seconded, and it was carried.

Accounts were read as follows:

Jno. Lawrence, load of hay	$ 7 00
Freight and customs on gas meters	87 56
Globe Ptg. Co., advertising	16 50

The above were referred to the finance committee.

Mr A. E. Whiffen interviewed the council re loan of the hoisting engine to the Calgary Brewing Co., and said Mr Penhale told him he would attend the council and explain that the apparatus could be loaned without any risk or inconvenience.

Mr Drinnan said Mr Penhale did not appear to understand the position. It would be awkward if anything happened to the gas well to have this appliance out of town.

Mr Whiffin—Mr Penhale told me it would be a good thing to sell it.

Mr Drinnan—It happens to be under the gas committee at the present time, and Mr Penhale is not on that committee. The council would like to oblige you, Mr Whiffin, or your company, but in the public interest we really cannot do it. We are sorry but we can't sell or lend it.

Mr Whiffin then withdrew.

Mr Drinnan—We have given instructions for nothing belonging to the town to be loaned by anyone.

REPORTS.

The water committee reported having given J. M. Rae permission to tap the water pipe at his father's residence, and lay to his house, at his own expense.

The gas committee reported result of tests made with cement lamp posts.

The public works committee reported that Mr Porter had undertaken a lot of work which they considered unnecessary and worse than useless without the consent of the committee. They also reported that the street sprinkler was ready, and had cost less than $150. The committee also reported that they would be pleased to rent a room in the new municipal building for a school board office.

The committee on new enterprises reported the receipt of 250 enquiries as the result of their advertising the town.

The gas committee reported Mr Porter had not carried out their instructions in several particulars, and in others had undertaken much work without consulting the committee. This had led to unnecessary expense. Mr Drinnan explained at length what had occurred, from which it appeared Mr Porter had not given proper instructions to the men under him, and had not superintended their work. In one or two instances this had led to the work being contrary to the committee's wishes and instructions, especially with regard to the lamp posts on river street. His engagement of men was also unsatisfactory to the committee.

The Mayor informed Mr. Porter about three weeks ago not to undertake any new work without authority from the heads of committees.

Mr. Drinnan. If we are to make our municipal franchise a success we must insist upon having good service. I think Mr. Porter is a good man to look after repairs but he does not seem to have a grasp of handling the men and work.

The reports were received and filed.

Mr. Drinnan gave notice to amend the gas bye-law and the Mayor said he would suggest the same rate (17½ cents per M) to private consumers in summer as well as in winter, and to this all the councillors assented.

Mr. Des Brisay renewed his notice of motion to make owners instead of tenants responsible for the water rate.

Mr. Sissons renewed notice of motion re granolithic sidewalks, and said he believed good granolithic sidewalks would do more to draw attention to the town and improve its appearance than anything else they were doing. They ought to put some down this year.

The Mayor reported that a committee had met the Medicine Hat Development Company who had agreed to make application in the ordinary way for gas.

On motion of Mr. Drinnan the public works committee are empowered to have the two parks planted with potatoes in order to prepare the ground for planting of trees, etc. next season.

Mr. Drinnan said he had consulted Mr. Charlesworth as to making grades in new streets and bench posts would be placed at corners of blocks to indicate the levels.

Mr. Sissons moved that the Clerk obtain prices of automatic safety gas valves and this was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. Stewart it was agreed to employ a watchman to look after the wooden pipes as, being covered with straw, they were in danger of fire.

THE TOWN'S POWERS.

April 9 1905.

W. N. Adsit Esq.

Dear Sir

Re Sewerage and Frontage Tax. In order to enable the Town to impose a special frontage tax in connection with the Sewerage Deventures, as recently proposed, the town would have to obtain power from the legislature, owing to the fact that the present Ordinance does not give the Town the necessary powers.

Yours truly,
C. R. MITCHELL,
Solicitor.

Mr J. Taylor, of Jaffray, B.C., formerly of Oak Lake, Man., arrived in town on Sunday, and will probably make his stay a permanent one if he can see something to suit him.

Dr. Laidlaw, of Georgetown, Ont., is in town, calling upon Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Cook. He is an old friend of Mrs. Cook's family.

TUESDAY, APRIL 18th 1905.

Advance, Medicine Hat.

The Bylaws which will be submitted to a vote of the people on the 5th May, are published in this issue of the Times. These bylaws authorise an expenditure of $54,600 and every dollar is intended to mark the progress of the town. We predict that when the day of balloting arrives the people will be almost a unit in favor of passing them, which means confirming New Edinburgh as a suburb of the town, the extension of the water and gas systems, and the erection of a muuicipal building of an up-to-date character.

The Sewerage Scheme.

The sewerage scheme is still the subject of much discussion, and, if we can guage public opinion, the proposal to spend $60,000 in the first section is not the most popular idea. A large number of people have objections to it, and many believe an expenditure of half, or a trifle more than half that amount, will give the town ample sewerage for some years to come. What is wanted, they say, is to put in the main outlets and sewer the business section and the portion of the town where the public institutions, such as the Hospitals and the Schools, are placed. We are aware against this it can be argued that this must include the main outlets, which are the expensive parts of the scheme, and that it will cost more to sewer the town in sections. Well, but supposing it does, the plan has its advantages. One of the principal ones is this, that if the work be let in smaller contracts and spread over a longer period, it will do most good to the town. If the council give out a contract for $60,000 worth of work and rush it some big contractor will gobble it all, bring in a staff of men, rush the work through, and carry the money away to spend at some other point; whereas, by the alternative plan, our local men will have a chance of handling the work, and the money may be retained to be turned over in the town. We say by all means let it be so arranged that our local hardware men, plumbers and contractors may have a fair chance of getting the work. The longer the period of construction the more money will be retained to help to build up the town. This principle has been followed in establishing the water and gas systems of the town, and has worked well. Let it also be followed in the matter of the sewerage.

A Point to be Considered.

Our readers may find useful information in the following extract from the Municipal Ordinance:—Sec. 223. The Municipal Council of any town may pass bylaws:

1. For ascertaining and finally determining what portion, if any, of the cost of any local improvement should be borne by the municipality at large;

2. For assessing, by way of a special frontage assessment, the cost, or a portion of the cost, of any local improvement upon the lands fronting upon the street o place wherein or whereon the local improvement is to be made, and for laying such cost or portion thereof by a special rate upon such lands.

Sec 234. No assessment or levy shall be made under any bylaw passed under clause 2 of sec. 233 of this Ordinance except upon petition to the Council of at least two-thirds in number of the persons registered or assessed as owners of the lands fronting on the street or place whereon or wherein the improvement is proposed to be made, representing at least one half of the value of such land excluding improvements thereon."

There is one important question, however, in connection with this matter which seems to be overlooked. It is this: Does the Council possess sufficient powers at the present time to proceed in the matter? As there appears to be some doubt upon the point we suggest to the council to inquire in the proper quarter, and make sure of their ground. If they have to acquire further powers to be in a position to carry the scheme to a successful issue why not at once take steps to obtain a city charter under which they could acquire all the powers they want. The one expense would be sufficient.

The Petition re the Woollen Mill.

At the time of writing a petition is being taken round, and is being signed by a large number of people, in connection with the Woollen Mill Company's application for a loan of $15,000 from the town. We discussed the proposition very fully last week, and need not repeat what we then said, but it might be stated by way of explanation, that this petition is to authorise the Council to take steps to submit a bylaw to the people. If this petition is sufficiently signed, then the Council will proceed to obtain powers to loan $15,000 to the Company. The petition must be signed by not less than one half the resident rateyayers before the Council will be authorised to make any move in the matter. If one half the resident ratepayers sign the Council will, we presume, proceed in the matter, but before they can grant the loan they must submit a bylaw to the people, and in order to carry this bylaw, two-thirds the number of votes polled must be cast in its favor. The company say if this petition be well supported they will feel reasonably sure of the loan, and will at once go ahead putting in their machinery, and will be on the market as buyers of wool. We hold no brief for the company, and have no axe to grind in this matter save the interest of the town, and, as we believe the interests of the town will be well served if we can get the mill going, we would like to see the petition well signed. Provided the company then go right ahead, we see no objection to granting the loan under proper security.

Sackrider wants you to call and see him if you think of building this year.

Remember that we will be making Hot Cross Buns for Good Friday leave your orders early at Cook & Forsters.

HON. FRANK OLIVER MINISTER OF INTERIOR.

Frank Oliver, M.P., Edmonton, was sworn in as Minister of the Interior last week and left at once for the west to stand for re-election. He was accompanied by his wife and daughter.

Nomination is expected to take place on April 25, and the election a week later.

Frank Oliver, the new Minister of the Interior, is one of the best known pioneers of the Canadian West. He was born in Peel County, Ont., in 1853, and went to the Northwest at an early period of his career, becoming a member of the Northwest Council in 1883. He was elected to the Legislative Assembly at Regina, which succeeded the council with wider powers, at each election, from 1881 to 1896. He was first elected to the House of Comnions at the general election of 1896 and at the two succeeding elections. His majorities have been 784, 1,400 and 1,900 in the three elections, defeating in turn Messrs Cochrane, Bennett and R. Secord. He publishes the Edmonton Bulletin. In 1881 Mr Oliver married Harriet, daughter of Thos. Dunlop of Prairie Grove, Mar. He is a brother-in-law of Mr Alex. Dunlop, editor of the Press, Neepawa.

PETITION TO SIR WILFRID LAURIER

South African Veterans Ask for Grants of Land.

To the Right Honorable Sir Wilfred Laurier, Prime Minister of the Dominion of Canada.

The petition of the undersigned, members of the contingents contributed by the North-West Territories to the Canadian troops serving in the Boer War in South Africa, and the citizens of Medicine Hat, shows as follows:

That at a meeting of the Association of South African veterans and of the citizens of Pincher Creek, held at Pincher Creek in the district of Alberta, it was unanimously resolved as follows:

That whereas, the North West Territories contributed a large number of Volunteers to the various contingents raised by the Government of the Dominion of Canada, for service in the late Boer War in South Africa, being the Canadian Mounted Rifles, the Strathcona Horse, and other regiments; and whereas all those Volunteers from the Provinces of Canada who served in the said Boer War have been granted by their respective Provinces land bounties in recognition of their services to Canada and the Empire; and whereas, the Volunteers from the North-West Territories having never received any such grant or recognition from the Dominion Government, (the Territorial Government, though willing, not having any power to deal with public lands in the said Territories) and whereas, it has been the custom of the Dominion Government in the past to make land grants to those who have served and fought for Canada, as in the case of the Red River Expedition and the Riel Rebellion, from out of the public lands of the North-West Territories; and whereas the gallant conduct and good service of the men from the North-West Territories, in common with that of all other Canadians in the Boer War, brought Canada into the position she now holds as the premier colony of Great Britain, and caused her to be recognised as a sister nation to the Old Country, and the most closely bound in ties of love and loyalty to England, resulting in not only tightening the bonds of sentiment, but being greatly to the commercial benefit of our Dominion;

Be it resolved that a petition be circulated, addressed to the Right Honorable Sir Wilfred Laurier, as Prime Minister of the Dominion of Canada, praying that he would deal with the subject, and be pleased to procure the issuance of military bounty warrants, entitling each man from the North-West Territories who served in any Canadian troops in South Africa to such an area of land as the said Sir Wilfred Laurier and his Government may deem fit.

Therefore, in the pursuance of the said resolutions, we, the members of such contingents, and the citizens of Medicine Hat and district do pray that you will accede to their request and procure from your Government such grants as desired, as a recognition of the services of the North-Western members of such contingents to Canada and Empire.

And your petitioners will ever pray.

Note and Comment

By OBSERVER

It is wonderful how many things a patent medicine will cure, but when a canvasser tried to convince a Medicine Hat lady last week that it "would cure a ham" she set the dog on him.

* * * *

The editor of an exchange desires his subscribers to pay up, as he wishes to play a similar joke upon his creditors.

* * * *

The town council have to obtain special powers to deal with the Woollen Mill application. Why not make one thing of it and get a city charter embodying all the powers for this and other matters.

* * * *

It is said that the town has plenty of borrowing powers. I am inclined to doubt it. The proposals now before the town will run matters to a finer point than some people think, and they have only estimates to go upon. Actual expenditures have a knack of soaring away up above estimates.

* * * *

The loose paper nuisance on the streets continues as bad as ever. Where do the papers come from? There must be a lot of careless people here, who simply throw them on vacant lots, and so they get blown everywhere. The council will have to set a watch, catch and make an example of somebody.

* * * *

How would it be for the town, instead of spending $75,000 on sewerage just now, to put $35000 on sewerage and $20000 or even $25,000 on a traffic bridge over the Saskatchewan River? An offer by the town to contribute a portion, say a third of the cost, might induce the Dominion government to go ahead with the bridge which is as much needed for the development of the town as for the convenience of the ranchers right up to Red Deer.

* * * *

If the town really took this view of it I suggest the municipality on the north side should be asked to join in and bear a share of the expense, and a portion should be added to the town so as to contribute towards the cost. A sewerage scheme for the business portion of the town, the schools and hospitals, could be put in in a year. Then we could have some granolithic side-walks and these with a bridge over the river and a tax-contributing suburb on the other side might all be had for the total we now propose to put under ground. This plan would increase business and make Medicine Hat the prettiest and most desirable residential town in all the west. However, I am only suggesting and won't try to ram my opinions on this down anybody's throat.

* * * *

There is not going to be perfect unanimity over the sewerage scheme, and it is not to be expected. It is a big proposition, and the council ought to make sure of their ground at every step. It is doubtful if they have powers at present to compel people to connect their houses and until they have it will be better to get everything in order before starting the work. As there is a difference of opinion as to the amount that should be undertaken just now, I throw out the bridge suggestion for public consideration.

* * * *

I believe the real position is this, (1) A good number of people believe sewerage unnecessary yet. Of the other portion, (2) The larger number, are in favor of a scheme to embrace the business portion of the town and public institutions, on a frontage tax assessment. (3) A fair number believe in sewering the upper and intermediate part, while (4) A very small minority believe in sewering the whole town on a general municipal, rate. I believe that all the parties could be got to agree to scheme number 2.

* * * *

So the town sprinkler did'nt come out after all on the day appointed. Well now, wasn't that too bad, but there was a sprinkle from above, so the town sprinkler missed its first opportunity. When it makes its debut everybody will hail it with acclamation, and I predict the dust will do homage, and bow down before it.

* * * *

I hope the pleasures of realisation will not be less than the pleasurers of anticipation.

* * * *

The column now running in the Free Press entitled "Twenty years ago today" gives us an insight into the state of terror which prevailed at that time, and it almost seems incredible that it is only 20 years since this western country was overrun and overawed by Riel and his followers. What wonders have been wrought in those 20 years. Railways, telegraphs, telephones; towns and cities cross and dot the prairie, and fear of the Indians is about the last thing to enter any settler's head. The red man has come to look upon the white man as his friend and example and to govern himself accordingly.

* * * *

The plainly manifest civil zeal in towns all over the west—from Lake Superior to the mountains—is a noticeable feature of the recent years of very active development. A few years ago little was heard of the installation of public telephone systems, of water works, of electric plants, of sewer systems, or other such undertakings by incorporated cities and towns on the prairies. To-day it is a common occurrence to read in the morning newspapers the result of some vote to determine the wish of the ratepayers regarding the making of extensive improvements. A street car service in Edmonton, a sewer system at the Hat or an electric lighting plant at Prince Albert, are all marks of progress of a substantial character.

Steps like these cannot but lead the outside world to believe in the fact that our broad plains will eventually be studded with cities possessed of all modern conveniences. Evidences of civic development, as those referred to, are only of comparatively recent origin. They succeeded a period of municipal effort, characterised by few more ambitious projects that the bonusing of a grist mill. The West's wildness is rapidly passing under the dominion of towns and cities whose corporate existence is marked with enterprises indicative of permanence and greater things yet to be. The magnitude of the work being done by municipalities throughout Western Canada is not realised by the public.

HIS STRONGEST CHARACTER.

Harold Nelson to be seen as "Richelieu" With a New and Elaborate Production.

"Harold Nelson was a scholarly 'Hamlet,' he was superb as 'Paul Kauvar,' but in Richelieu,' his favorite character, he closely attains to greatness." This was what a Winnipeg critic wrote after witnessing Mr. Nelson's splendid production of "Richelieu," which is to be seen here on Monday April 24th. Mr. Nelson has made almost a life long study of the character of "Richelieu," and his convincing portrayal of the clever, crafty Cardinal reveal the student as well as the actor. It is a drama telling a story of absorbing interest, indeed develops in strength as the plot unfolds until a powerful climax is reached. Mr. Nelson has never before played "Richelieu" under the same favorable circumstances as this season, for his manager, Mr. C. P. Walker, has furnished him with a scenic production of metropolitan completeness. The costuming is both elaborate and historically accurate, indeed no detail has been overlooked. Those who go to see Mr. Nelson and his well balanced company in "Richelieu" may confidently anticipate an excellent performance.

Sir James Watson's Opinion

He says that the commonest of all disorders, and one from which few escape is catarrh. Sir James firmly believes in local treatment which is best supplied by catarrhozone. No case of Catarrh can exist where Catarrhozone is used it is a miracle worker, relieves almost instantly and cures after other remedies fail. Other treatments can't reach the diseased parts like Catarrhozone because it goes to the source of the trouble along with the air you breathe. Catarrhozone is free from cocaine, it leaves no bad after-effects, it is simply natures own cure. Accept no substitute for Catarrhozone which alone can cure Catarrah.

Bishop Grisdale at St. Barnabas Church.

The Bishop of the Diocese of Qu'Appelle arrived in Medicine Hat on Friday evening and on Saturday met the Church Vestry at which various matters connected with the welfare and progress of St Barnabas parish were discussed. On Sunday morning his lordship delivered an address, and administed the rite of confirmation to eleven candidates, and in the evening preached to a packed congregation. On Monday evening the Bishop lectured in the parish room on the history of the Church of England in Canada, the attendance again being very large. While here, his Lordship was the guest of the vicar of the parish, the Rev. W. Nicolls.

Harold Nelson in the Opera House on Monday night.

When life's autumn comes, women, worn out by the burdens of motherhood, yet shrink from that second "change of life" which will banish these burdens forever. They fear a change in form, in feature, in personal attractiveness. Such fears are largely warranted by the effects which this change produces in many women. But no woman need let these fears fret her.

Those who have used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription do not suffer from the change of life either in face, form or feelings as do other women. This fact is due to the intimate connection of the general health with the health of the organs peculiarly feminine. By preserving the health of these organs, and relieving the system from the debilitating drains, ulcers and inflammations which sap its health, "Favorite Prescription" paves the way for this natural change to come in Nature's way, without the loss of capacity to please others or personal inability to enjoy life.

"Your 'Favorite Prescription' brought me safely through that difficult period, called 'change of life,'" writes Mrs. Mary Ensminger, of 34 E. Ankeny St., Portland, Oregon. "This change made a very unpleasant disturbance through my entire system. I had hot and cold flashes, sick headaches, became excited, flustrated, nervous and irritable. My appetite was fitful and for days I was unable to eat a fair meal. My aunt recommended me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it made a great change for the better. Within two weeks the unpleasant feelings had disappeared. I have a husband and eight children so have the care of a large family but was able to attend to my household duties without any difficulty and passed the period without any more trouble. I can recommend your 'Favorite Prescription' as a grand medicine for women."

You may be willing that somebody else shall say that their baby is "just as good" as yours, but you don't want that baby substituted for yours. Let dealers say what they like about other medicines being "just as good" but don't let them substitute anything for "Favorite Prescription." It is absolutely uncqualed.

Mrs R. Irwin and Master Harry have arrived in town from Medicine Hat, and are the guests of Mrs Gallagher, 666 Furley Street.—Free Press. We may add that Mrs Irwin went to Winnipeg on account of the illness of her sister, Mrs Savage, of William Avenue, but was pleased to find her improving.

Remember that we will be making Hot Cross Buns for Good Friday leave your orders early at Cook & Forsters.

A letter received from Natal by Miss Dougherty from the late J. D. Kisch's sister gives an account of the sad end of our one-time crack rifle shot. He was carried from the vessel in semi-conscious state to the hospital where his sister was a nurse and he died two days after without recognising anyone. Another sister, a nurse at Johannesberg, and his widowed mother arrived half an hour after his death.

The Times on Sunday morning received from Mr. Wm. Cousins a copy of the Cunard Daily Bulletin, printed and published on the high seas on March 30. It is an interesting production and contains news messages received on the ship by Marconigrams direct to the ship. In the list of saloon passengers we notice the names of Mr. and Mrs. Cousins, Mrs. Alan Parker, and Miss Alanie Parker. The Bulletin was mailed from Queenstown, Ireland.

W.C.T.U.

(Contributed by a member).

The Ladies of the Medicine Hat W.C.T.U. held a social in the school room of the Baptist Church on Friday evening, when there was quite a large gathering both of members and friends. The meeting was opened by singing a hymn after which each member read a part of an educational programme relative to scientific temperance which showed the bad effects alcohol had on the human system. A number of good recitations and songs were rendered and the president gave a very interesting account of a girl who fell a victim to strong drink. Refreshments were served and the meeting closed with singing and benediction.

LACROSSE

The Annual Meeting of the supporters of the Lacrosse Club was held in the Opera House on Tuesday night last. The President, Mr. A. W. Green occupied the chair, and announced that through the sale of the dressing room and several contributions being received the club's indebtedness had been reduced to about $20). He attributed the deficit last year to the fact that though the large crowds attended the games, a lot of people came in without paying admission, owing to there being no fence round the grounds. He said it was estimated that about 1000 people witnessed the game with Lethbridge on July 1, but the gate receipts amounted to only $91. Mr. W. T. Finlay, M.L.A. was the next speaker. He regretted very much the state of affairs, but was glad the blame did not be with the management of the club. The Lacrosse club had brought the name of Medicine Hat very prominently before the people of the Territories, through winning the Territorial championship, and he thought the people should support the team better. He wished them success in the coming season and said he hoped the town would secure proper recreation grounds this year. Mr. Finlay resumed his seat amid applause.

The following officers were chosen for the coming season:—

Patron	W. T. Finlay M.L.A.
President	W. B. Marshall.
Vice President	J. P. Laird.
2 " "	F. J. Forster.
3 " "	A. P. Day.
Sec. Treas.	C. E. Brougham.

Executive Committee, Messrs. A. W. Green, V. Ready and W. B. Finlay.

Mr. Finlay thanked the meeting for the honour they had done him in re-electing him patron and promised to do all in his power to further the interests of the club.

Mr. W. B. Marshall also thanked the meeting for his election as president, and said that lacrosse was about the only sport he took much interest in and he would do all in his power to help the Lacrosse Club.

Messrs. W. T. Finlay and W. B. Marshall were appointed a committee to interview the Board of Trade and Town Council in regard to securing proper recreation grounds. Mayor Foster on being asked as to the chances of securing grounds, said he would do all he could in support of the proposition.

After considerable discussion it was decided to leave the membership fee at $1.00 as in former years. The meeting then adjourned.

GROS VENTRE NOTES.

Then there is Short Billy of the McFadden ranch, another victim of single blessedness. He has being going around for the last few weeks with such a load of la grippe that he scarce knew whether he was afoot or horseback.

SCIENTISTS HOPE TO EVOLVE FLYING MACHINES FROM THEM.

The Kite-Flying Contests at St. Louis—Major Baden-Powell and Prof. Bell—The Latter's Experiments in Kite Flying—Some of Them Look Large Enough to Be Floating Houses.

Kite-flying, which used to be mere child's play, has now been taken up as a serious study by scientific men. It is their expectation that the kite can be evolved into the flying machine by patient study of the problems involved and experiments in kite-flying.

Encouragement to experiments along this line has been given by the world's fair aeronautic contests. The management of the fair, besides offering a grand prize of $100,000 for the winner of the airship contests, provided valuable prizes for the winners of subsidiary aerial competitions including kite-flying. Among those participating in the experimental flights at St. Louis were such eminent and scientific kite-fliers as Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the Bell telephone; William E. Eddy, inventor of the Eddy kite, and Major R. F. Baden-Powell of England. It so happened that the prize was won not by a scientist, but by a sixteen-year-old boy, J. B. Wardwell, of Stamford, Conn.

Major Baden-Powell is a brave soldier as well as a scientific kite-flier, but he should not be confused with Major-General Robert S. S. Baden-Powell, the defender of Mafeking in the South African war. Major Baden-Powell also fought and won distinction in the war against the Boers. He is a younger and lesser known officer than the major-general of the same name, however. Major Baden-Powell is an officer of the Scots Guards, has written much on scientific subjects and is the founder and proprietor of The Illustrated Scientific News.

When a man who has made such a success in both business and science as Professor Bell takes up kite-flying it makes people think there must be something more than boy's play in it. Professor Bell has explained in The National Geographic Magazine the principles of his tetrahedral kite. A tetrahedral kite is one having four equal triangular sides or it may be composed of a number of such structures. He says that a properly constructed flying machine should be capable of being flown as a kite, and, conversely, a properly constructed kite should be capable of use as a flying machine, when driven by its own propellers. He adds: "Given a kite so shaped as to be suitable for the body of a flying machine and so efficient that it will fly well in a good breeze (say twenty miles an hour) when loaded with a weight equivalent to that of a man and engine, then it seems to me that this same kite, provided with an actual engine and a man in place of the load and driven by its own propellers at the rate of twenty miles an hour, should be sustained in calm air as a flying machine. So far as the pressure of the air is concerned it is surely immaterial whether the air moves against the kite or the kite against the air."

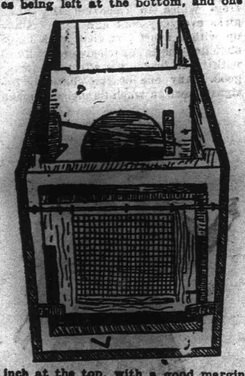
Professor Bell's kites are composed of various combinations of tetrahedrons, some of the kites looking large enough to be floating houses.

The sense of touch is the dullest on the back.

Boys like to do as they see their elders do, but where in the world do they learn to tell lies?

No one is as contented as the farmer except the man who has a first mortgage on his farm.



Just because an engine can go on a toot and be bright and fresh next day is no sign that a man can.

Regardless of whether it is right or wrong, Japan has the mapmakers pulling for it.

A CERTAIN TRAP NEST.

Description and Specifications of the One in Use at the Maine Experimental Station—The Materials.

The nest which we use is original with us, says the poultry director of the Maine Experiment Station. It is very simple, inexpensive, easy to attend and certain in its action. It is a box-like structure without front end or cover, 28 inches long, 13 inches wide and 16 inches deep, inside measure. A divisi board with a circular opening 7½ inches in diameter is placed across the box, 12 inches from the rear end and 15 inches from the front end. The rear section is the nest proper. Instead of a close made door at the entrance, a light frame of 1 by 1½ inch stuff is covered with wire netting of one-inch mesh. The door is 10 inches wide by 10 inches high, and does not fill the entire entrance, a space of two inches being left at the bottom, and one inch at the top, with a good margin at each side, to avoid friction. It is hinged at the top and opens up into the box. The hinges are placed on the front of the door rather than at the centre or rear, the better to secure complete closing action. The trap consists of one piece of stiff wire about three-sixteenths of an inch in diameter and 22 inches long. This piece of wire is shaped so that a section of it, 11 inches long, rests directly across the circular opening in the division board and is held in place by two clamps, one on either side of the circular opening. The clamps fit loosely and the slots are long enough to allow the wire to work up and down about three inches, without much friction. The next section of the wire is eight inches long and it is bent so that it is at right angles with the eleven-inch section. It passes along the side of the box eleven inches above the floor, back toward the entrance door and is fastened strongly to the wall by staples, but yet loosely enough so that the wire can roll easily. The remaining section of the wire, which is three inches long, is bent toward the centre of the box, with an upward inclination, so that it supports the door when it is open and rests upon it. The end of the wire is turned over smoothly, forming a notch into which the door may slip when opened.

As the hen passes in under the open door and then through the circular opening to the nest, she raises herself so that her keel may pass over the lower part of the division board, and her back presses against the horizontal wire, as she passes it, and lifts it enough, so that the end supporting the door slides from under it, and the door swings down and passes a wire spring, near the bottom of the box, at the entrance, which locks it and prevents the hen from escaping, and others from entering.

The double box with nest in rear is necessary, as when a hen has laid and desires to leave the nest, she steps out into the front space and remains there, generally trying to escape, until she is released. With one section only she would be very likely to crush her egg by stepping upon it and learn the pernicious habit of egg-eating.

The boxes are placed four in a block, and slide in and out like drawers and can be carried away for cleansing when necessary. Four nests in a pen have accommodated twenty hens, by the attendant going through the pens once an hour, or a little oftener, during that part of the day when the hens are busiest. Earlier and later in the day his visits have not been so frequent. To remove a hen, the nest is pulled part way out and as it has no cover, she is readily lifted up, and the number on her leg band is noted on the record sheet, that is tacked up, close at hand. After having been taken off a few times they do not object to being handled, the most of them remaining quiet, apparently expecting to be picked up.

Before commencing the use of trap nests, it was thought that some hens might be irritated by the trapping operation and object to the noise incident to it, but we have not found an individual that appeared to be annoyed by it, and we have used Leghorns, Brahmas, Wyandottes and Plymouth Rocks. The amount of time required in caring for the trap nests, so far as our work goes, can

Corn For Chickens.

The fact that corn for hens is largely opposed by a number of writers and breeders is simply a mere fad. Corn is pre-eminently the feed for fowl during midsummer, and especially during the molting period. It is very true that corn must be intelligently fed with a balanced ration. But where the breeder leaves this great cereal out of the ration entirely and substitutes "expert ration," recommended by some theorist, he must necessarily substitute a ration largely without science or good common sense.—Indiana Farmer.

Dairy and Creamery

Nearly all farmers have cows. Their collective possessions in the bovine line comprehend every kind of cow from the poorest to the best—pure bred, cross bred and "any old bred." A farmer's cow is a cow which belongs to a farmer, and that is about the only general definition of the term. "A farmer's cow" is not any particular breed of cow or type of cow. Nevertheless the expression has been so long applied to any sort of cow that no one else will have that it becomes suggestive of a second rate scrub. Why such a cow should be dubbed a "farmer's cow" any more than some other body's cow is the result of the notion that the farmer only needs a cow that will drop a big calf, give a little milk a little while, then get fat and be made into bad beef.

Scrubs of all breeds have been found proficient in this performance and sold to farmers as dual purpose cows. It does not follow that because a cow belongs to a farmer she is a scrub, but when you hear the expression "farmer's cow" a scrub comes to mind. It is a misnomer. The farmer wants as good a cow as any one else, and if among the various breeds he cannot find a type to suit him we cannot imagine what he wants. The farmer's cow should be a pure bred or a grade of some pure breed and, being a pure bred, should be called by her breed name, not lose her identity and reputation in the questionable epithet, "farmer's cow."

We notice that the managers of a big show contemplate offering a thousand dollar prize for "farmer's cows." Just what kind of cow or what breed or what type is not stated—just a "farmer's cow," as though a cow for a farmer must be selected from outside the pedigree breeds which already have prize money. It is a backwoods notion. It has been fostered somewhat of late under the dual purpose disguise, but the "farmer's cow" has become a thing of the past—and a bad past. It is a backward step to encourage the breeding of scrubs and mongrels by offering prizes on what are currently understood as "farmer's cows."—Jersey Bulletin.

Dairying on High Priced Land.

It is a truism that that branch of agriculture which requires the most painstaking work is the most profitable when the work is well done.

Dairying in any of its branches belongs to that class of farming, as does truck farming. These two branches are about the only ones which can be successfully conducted on the high priced lands in many sections. We do not often find the owner or renter of land valued at $100 or $150 per acre depending on corn, hogs or beef for his income, but we can find the dairyman doing business on land valued at these high prices. If the dairyman can make a profit on land so high priced that the beef man cannot do business, how much more profitable would it be on land so low in price that the beef man can afford to farm it?

Reduced Export of Cheese.

In cheese exports the United States is going backward. In 1900 we exported nearly 50,000,000 pounds of cheese and only 30,000,000 pounds in 1901. This decline in exports is attributed to the development of cheese-making in Canada, where cheesemakers from Europe have settled to increase domestic demand, and to the filled cheese swindle of some years ago. Our exports of cheese in 1901 were 30 per cent less than in 1870, whereas Canadian exports in the same time increased 300 per cent, says an exchange.

Scours In Cows.

At an institute meeting in New York the question was asked through the inquiry box as to what caused scours in cows and what would cure them. Mr. Cook, one of the instructors, replied:

"It would almost seem that this is a case of indigestion. I would give a light physic. Follow this with a tonic, some powdered gentian, to build up the system. A preparation made as follows is as good as anything you can buy and costs but little: One hundred pounds of linseed meal, 10 pounds of epsom salts, 4 pounds of saltpeter, 5 pounds of powdered charcoal, 4 pounds of gentian, 5 pounds of common salt, 3 pounds of fenugreek, a little allspice. This mixture will not cost more than $5."

Milwaukee Gets It.

The executive committee of the National Creamery Butter Makers' association has finally decided to hold the tenth annual convention in the city of Milwaukee. The claims of the various cities that bid for the convention have been carefully considered, and, although Milwaukee's offer is not quite so large in a financial way, the committee yielded to the sentiment of the members and decided to accept it. Milwaukee gives $2,000 in cash to the premium fund, free halls, entertainment for the officers, etc., amounting in all to about $3,000. The exact dates will be announced later, as they will have to conform with local engagements for halls, etc.

England's Envelopes.

Over 3,000,000,000,000 envelopes are manufactured in England annually.

Cull the Flock.

Begin to cull out the poor quality and select the good quality pullets for winter layers, says Country Gentleman. It pays to have the best early hatched pullets for winter layers. They are the money makers through filling the egg basket when eggs are scarce and high. The late or after June hatched pullets are not likely to lay before March.

LIGHTING A ROOM.

The Way to Get the Best and Most Effective Results.

It pays to know how to light a room well. Nothing shows up the blemishes of age in a woman more harshly than too bright a light or one badly placed. Each needs to be shaded with a color, moreover, and high hung lights should never be used. All should be placed in the walls, not in the ceilings.

Five feet six inches is the height interior decorators call proper for the lights in a house of ordinary size. This brings them to the level of most persons' faces and prevents a flood of searching light from above. Side lights give the shadows a chance to play, and a little shadow is a good thing for even the prettiest feminine face.

Chandeliers are badly out of fashion, and we are trying to forget them. Lights nowadays must look as little like the fixtures that they are a part of as possible. Wall lights are kept as close to the wall as they can be placed. One form is an electric light bulb hidden behind an opaque glass shell.

Not all women can get rid of chandeliers and brackets, but for these there are several kinds of small shades that can be made and used on electric lights to soften their brilliancy. Some of the shades can be adapted to gas burners, too, and are almost as much of an improvement on them, for gaslight, while less piercing, is by no means the best illuminant for the face. In fact, everything but the glare of candles shows too cruelly the wrinkles, blemishes and defects of color which mar the good looks of most women of thirty years and older.

Light that is softened by a shade of silk or paper is nearly as mellow as that of candles. It makes a woman look years younger, as any may see who seats herself before a wall mirror and views herself under both lights.—New York Telegram.

A WRITING DESK.

How to Transform a Simple Table at Little Cost.

Any one possessing a table of useful size can convert it into a writing desk to satisfy the most fastidious by adding a back such as is shown in our illustration.

A packing case must be found of exactly the same length as the table. The width need not take up a corresponding amount of space on the table if the case is supported from behind, overlapping only just enough to keep it steady. The height and width of the fitment are optional and should be determined by the amount and size of the things to be stored therein.

The case is planed smooth and stained to match the table, and it is then fitted with shelves, one long, one divided into compartments, as the sketch shows, being about the best arrangement. The shelves may be finished with an edging of stamped leather, and all is complete.

It is scarcely necessary to point out that the cost of this invaluable fitment would be next to nothing.

Wavy Hair.

It is no use for those who think they know to declare that the waving of the hair is no longer a modish idea. Women will have their heads waved till doomsday, and the hairdressers have such a pretty way of coaxing the hair into waves to peculiarly suit the profile. Once upon a time the hairdresser just made straight waves down the side of the head, but nowadays a more sophisticated idea prevails—as, for instance, over the ear the hair will be set in a wave that curves right round to coincide with the curve of the ear; it is wonderfully becoming and positively transforms a profile not perfect. Pure classic features can, of course, stand any hairdressing, but if the nose and chin don't just perfectly balance or there are other little matters lacking perfection this waving the hair does wonders in producing that quality of charm which we will all appreciate so much.

Girls and Courtesy.

There is nothing so pretty in the manner of a young girl as courtesy toward the aged. It may be pleasanter to turn and listen to the giddy remark of some girl of your own age rather than to that of some elderly woman, but it does not put your disposition in anything like so becoming a light. Do not neglect the elderly guest in your home. If you only knew how much the delicate attentions of youth particularly are appreciated by age you would be no niggard in bestowing them. You will, too, always be the gainer by such thoughtfulness—the gainer in wisdom, love and above all that greatest attraction in a girl's disposition, unselfishness.

A Music Hint.

When I have a particularly difficult piece of music to learn I always begin with the very last measure. I thoroughly master that and then take the next to the last, and so on. By the time I have reached the first measure I have the whole piece not only at my fingers' ends, but my memory as well, and all I have then to do is to study the proper expression. Try it, but conquer as you go.—Good Housekeeping.

Corrected Himself.

A downtown teacher was having the boys of her room take the different words in a sentence and compose a sentence of their own containing one of the words. Every one had succeeded in making the sentence correct in every manner save one boy, who had the word driving to operate on. This is what he said:

"The little boy was 'drivin' the horse to the water trough."

At this point the teacher said:

"Sammy, don't forget your 'g's."

"Gee," said Sammy, "the little boy was drivin' the horse to the water trough"—Philadelphia Press

WINTER COLOR SCHEME.

The Smart Autumn Petticoat—A Suggestion In Economy.

The colors to be most in vogue during the coming winter are what might be called indefinite tints, although the new colors are a little more pronounced in tone than the pastel shades. The fact is that strong definite colors wear themselves out too quickly by their insistence, whereas these softer shades compensate in virtue by trying the eye less.

For the woman who is obliged to study economy and has to make one frock do the duty of several a dress of inconspicuous indefinite color is a boon.

Black, brown and champagne colored silk petticoats are to be very fashionable this year. With the autumn tailored suits the brown and champagne skirts are quite a feature. The champagne petticoat is fashioned with two wide pinked out frills headed by rows of graduated brown velvet ribbon.

The woman who is going to invest in two tailor made costumes this fall should select one of the gowns in blue or green cloth and the other in white.

Pastel blue liberty silk fashions the dainty theater blouse herewith pictured. It is oddly made with the waist gathered around an emplecement of the silk adorned at intervals with groups of small gold buttons. These buttons also trim the center plait, which stops a little above the bust line. The puffed sleeves terminate in ruffles of lace. JUDIC CHOLLET.

MODES IN SLEEVES.

What the Fashionable Woman Will Wear on Her Arms.

Sleeves will receive an unusual amount of attention in the winter modes and will form the most important portion of the season's bodice. Styles are so varied that it is not necessary to have any two sleeves alike, no matter how many gowns are included in the wardrobe. Very few plain sleeves are seen, even the bishop's models being tucked at the top to form fitted caps and around the arm near the cuff to increase the apparent size at that point.

Sleeves made in two or three sections are not uncommon. They have fitted caps, from which depend deep flounces or ruffles of material. These flare out widely over an undersleeve of lace or tucking.

Some of the new sleeves have flounces gathered into a band that reach to a point half way between elbow and wrist, giving the impression of a three sectioned sleeve.

Accordion plaited sleeves are a new mode somewhat on the order of the popular "angel" variety. These are slashed from shoulder to hem on top and fall loosely to each side, displaying a closely fitted undersleeve of net or lace.

The attractive frock illustrated is of tan mousseline silk. The long, graceful skirt is elaborately trimmed at the bottom with a tan silk spotted with rings of a darker shade between other bands of brown velvet and cream lace insertion. The full blouse front and puffed sleeves of the bodice are of the spotted ring silk. The sleeves are banded with velvet, and about the upper part of the waist are fitted emplecements of the same material between insertions of lace. The high folded girdle is also of the velvet. Three graduated tabs of lace ornament each side of the bloused front.

A HARD BED.

Its Use Will Make the Flesh Firmer and Improve the Form.

"No matter how comfortable a soft bed and large, soft pillows may be," said Dr. A. S. Barnes, Jr., "they are not healthy, and women especially would do well to avoid them, for they assist materially in injuring her physical appearance. When the body sinks down in a soft bed a portion of her skin is robbed of its proper ventilation and the circulation is interfered with. It also helps to make the muscles flabby. A hard bed will make the flesh firmer, and the form must therefore appear somewhat better as a result. The large pillows are not good to sleep on because the head is too high when it rests on them, and this prevents that deep, regular breathing which gives good lungs and in consequence a better appearance to the bust and shoulders.

"One ought always to sleep on the left side, and preferably with the arms at the back. This may be a little awkward at first, but as soon as one becomes accustomed to it he will find it not only the most restful and easy, but the position in sleep is more easily conduced. The pillow ought to, of course, be small and the bed hard, or at least firm. The body is then in the correct position for sleeping and for helping the physical appearance of the person while at rest. The arms at the back throw the chest forward, make the shoulders broader and the back straighter, so that material assistance toward a good carriage is thus obtained. When one lies on his back, even though the pillow is small, it has a tendency to crook the shoulders."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

SHE MADE A FORTUNE.

Showing How a Woman With Gumption Can Make Her Way.

A Massachusetts woman who was trying to introduce an American invention found herself left alone in London by her husband's sudden death, says the Youth's Companion. She had $250 after the funeral expenses were paid, and rather than go home to be dependent she resolved to seek fortune on the spot. For a time she cast about for a promising opening, some occupation for which she was personally fitted and which would pay her enough to live on. At length the chance remark of a fellow countrywoman gave her an idea. She sent most of her money to the United States to pay for a supply of beans and cranberries, set up a cook stove in her room and mailed cards to American residents in London stating that after a certain date she would supply them with baked beans and brown bread on Wednesdays and Saturdays and cranberry pies every day. Orders came before she was fairly ready. She supplied food that "tasted like home." In three months she moved to larger quarters and employed five assistants, and at the end of a year she opened a regular shop, where she sold not only beans and cranberry pies, but every American thing the exile longs for, from shoes to confectionery, not omitting ice cream soda, which had been unknown in London. She is now a rich woman.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Olive oil should be put into a dark corner of the cellar where light never penetrates.

Don't use a galvanized iron lemon squeezer. When brought in contact with the lemon it forms a poisonous salt.

Dry powdered whiting put thickly over an oil stain on a wood floor and left for twelve hours will absorb all the grease.

To clean nickel scour with pulverized borax, use hot water and very little soap. Rinse in hot water and rub dry with clean cloth.

Soap ruins the appearance of painted or varnished woodwork. It may be necessary to use it occasionally, but it should be done quickly and lightly and be well rinsed off.

Potato water is a thing that the most economical housewife throws away, yet it has its use. After scraping the potatoes allow the water to settle and then strain it. This liquid sponges dirt out of silk.

Pumice Stone For the Teeth.

Once a week the teeth should be cleaned with the finest pumice stone. Take a little of the very finely powdered pumice and place it on the tooth brush. Brush the teeth lightly and remember that while pumice is good in its way it will take off the enamel if used too vigorously. Just how much of the pumice to use is a question of judgment, but women who lightly touch the teeth with it once a week are never in need of having the teeth cleaned at the dentist's.

Children's Feet.

The feet of small children should be attended to more solicitously. Remember that the cuticle is more sensitive and provide your little ones with fine hosiery, which they should not wear badly mended, for roughness and unevenness of the darns will cause corns and blisters, says the Gentlewoman. Every mother should personally supervise the cutting of her children's toe nails in order to avoid ingrowing nails.

A Dainty Workbag.

Such pretty little workbags can be made on a foundation of basket work with a piece of dainty silk! The little flat trays to be found in all sizes at Japanese shops are chosen and the silk sewed on the inside rim. The basket is first lined and slightly padded with satchet if desired. The silk is gathered in bag fashion at the top, making a pretty and a substantial receptacle for sewing materials or embroidery.

FASHIONS AND FANCIES.

Attractive Originality In Furs — A Melange of Materials.

Fascinating originalities give uncommon attractiveness to the furs of the season. For a few years past manufacturers have vied with one another in introducing striking novelties in materials and making all sorts of innovations in cut, garnitures and the combination of different kinds of pelts until fur fashions are no longer the simple matter they were once, when such heresies as the mingling of lace and buttons with fur were unheard of and the audacious mixing of totally unlike skins would have been looked at aghast. Who would then have dreamed of so fascinating a confection as this chic little sack bolero of mink, with picturesque wing sleeves that melt into a mass of lace and chiffon far from ruffles? Pendent lines of brown velvet fall on either side of the front and are held by large and particularly lovely green buttons veiled in a filigree of gold and strass. And chief among the features of the model is a handsome turnover collar of cloth of gold heavily embroidered in high relief.

Beaver and golden otter are talked of as popular furs of the season. These pretty furs have been revived and will be manipulated in many pleasing ways. Beaver forms extremely effective corsage and sleeve decorations on numerous cloth and velvet gowns. White caracal mantle coats trimmed with beaver represent luxurious theater or driving wraps for the winter.

Ermine and chinchilla both remain popular, and either beaver or sable makes a good combination with the former.

Lace is much used on fur, its most common application being as a plaiting beneath the sleeves or shoulder cape. Silk cords and braids and motifs of embroidered cloth and of velvet also contribute to the somewhat fantastic array of elaborate embellishments now allowable on fur garments. Among autumn fancies a delicate gray suede coat with dull orange cloth collars and facings gives a striking yet pleasing effect.

The long basque is to play a part in furs as well as in cloth. Dyed moleskin has been used in the making of some of these long skirted coats that are warm and light and mold themselves very becomingly to the figure.

A Good Style For Small Boys.

Of all styles invented for the benefit of small boys about three or four years old there is none more popular than the belted tunic. The above design shows a most useful variation of it, and, carried out (tunic and knickers as well) in any of the usual materials, it will be found to be much appreciated by those who have to provide for a small boy's apparel. Needless to say, the tunic can be worn over any knickers and would appear to great advantage embellished with a pretty lace collar for best occasions.

Ostrich and paradise plumes are as costly and as beautiful as ever in new winter colors. The paradise plume no longer curves and droops upon the old lines, but is made to stand up more in aigret form, only it is more flaring and has been somewhat shortened.

A FORBIDDEN MARRIAGE

BY LAURA JEAN LIBBEY

Author of "When Lovely Maiden Stoops to Folly," "A Cruel Revenge," "The Heiress of Cameron Hall," "Ione," "Parted at the Altar," Etc.

A moment more and the library door opened and closed again, and she knew that her lover was ushered into her father's presence.

Oh, how her heart beat! She would have given the world to have known what was passing between them. How slowly the moments dragged themselves by.

"Would her father call her down?" she wondered.

With trembling hands she re-arranged the white lace at her dainty throat, and the wood violets that nestled on her breast, for the twentieth time; but no summons came for her.

She could hear the indistinct hum of voices in the library, and she knew by that that Waldemar was still with her father.

You and I will go back a little, reader, and witness the meeting between General Hastings and his daughter's suitor.

Waldemar Waldron had walked boldly up the marble steps, and rang the bell with a firm touch.

"Take this to General Hastings," he said to the servant who answered the summons, producing his card. "Tell him I wish to see him on a very particular errand, and I trust he will courteously grant me a few moments' time."

The general read the name engraved upon the bit of pasteboard in astonishment.

"What can Waldemar Waldron want of me?" he wondered, impatiently.

He received the young man coldly, indicating a seat, and after a few brief words of formal greeting, the general inquired what Mr. Waldron's business was with him.

It all came out then, and words are weak to describe the general's intense anger and dismay.

"I have told you everything now, sir," said Waldemar Waldron, calmly, "and I come to you to sue for the dear hand of your daughter, Reine."

He had made his plea, and waited for the answer. He had expected anger, but he was wholly unprepared for the terrible burst of passion to which the old lawyer gave way. No hurricane could have been fiercer. The storm burst, and he began in a voice of such withering scorn and bitter contempt that the young man looked in wonder and alarm at the general, who shook with such furious rage, and whose face was fairly livid. There was little to be hoped from Reine's father, and there was nothing for it but to sit there quietly while the tempest he had evoked raged on.

"You ask for my daughter—you!" he cried—"a New York roue and villain of the deepest dye! I know all about you. Why, man, you are mad to think I would give you my lovely young daughter!"

"It is a very common madness, sir," responded Waldemar Waldron, striving to keep back his anger at the bitter epithets the exasperated old millionaire hurled at him. "I love your daughter, and I ask you to give her to me."

"And I refuse!" roared the general. "I would rather see her dead and buried than wedded to you—yes, dead! with her blue eyes closed, and her little white hands crossed over her pure breast. You were a dastard to creep into her innocent heart through letters smuggled to her without my knowledge and consent. I understand you. You dared not boldly present yourself here as my daughter's wooer; and your motive, too, in laying siege to her heart is clear to me. Love! Bah! such a man as you are has forgotten the meaning of pure, innocent love years ago. You had an eye to my poor child's prospective wealth."

"I am poor, compared to what your daughter is worth, I admit; but it is not her money I want, sir, it is herself. I can work for my wife," replied Waldemar Waldron, haughtily.

"You work!—You!" cried the general, scornfully. "Not while money can be made by any other means. Now listen to me, young man, and heed well my words," cried the old millionaire, his anger increasing with every word: "If my daughter were to marry you, I would cut her off without a shilling. She should never have one cent of my money, not even if she were starving! Do you hear—starving! I tell you, you would wed a penniless girl—for penniless she would be, for all of me, until the day she died; this I swear to you, and men of my race never break an oath. Let us end this, Mr. Waldemar Waldron. I refuse you my daughter. Never dare to see her or write to her again. Let this be the winding up of this so-called love affair."

Waldemar Waldron looked fixedly at the enraged general.

"Have you thought what parting us might mean for your daughter as well as myself? Remember she loves me—to whom she has plighted her troth—loves me with all her tender heart."

"Do not dare to stand there and tell me that!" cried the general, clutching at his cravat as if to tear it to give himself more room to breathe. "Do not dare to say it—you madden me!"

"But she does—indeed she does, sir," persisted the young man. "Send for her here and now, and she will tell you that she loves me!"

"I will not believe it," exclaimed the old man, bluntly. "Your face may have fascinated her, but she could not love you; after you have been separated from her six months she will have forgotten all about you. You have broken the heart of many a trusting young girl, but you shall never break my Reine's. Go, now, Mr. Waldron; please consider this very unpleasant interview at an end."

"I will go, sir," said Waldemar Waldron, "but the time may come when you will perhaps recall me. Fathers have done more than that before now to save a beloved daughter's heart from breaking."

"Better die of a broken heart than live as your wife," said the general, sternly; but his face whitened under the young man's words.

The general pointed to the door.

"Leave my house," he said, passionately, "and if you are wise you will leave the neighborhood. I know that about you which would make your stay in this neighborhood disagreeably unsafe. I will give you twenty-four hours to leave it. If I find you are still here at the expiration of that time, I will telegraph on to New York and ask if Waldemar Waldron is wanted there. One broken-hearted girl would find an answer to that."

"As you will it," returned Waldemar Waldron, with defiant haughtiness. "It seems useless for me to attempt to refute the charges you insist upon bringing against me. I leave your house and the neighborhood. It has little enough attractions for me now. But, if at any time you should ever want to recall me, I leave you my address. I am going west, to Cincinnati. A line to my bankers there will reach me at any time."

He placed another card upon the table, bearing the address of a Western banking firm. His own name was written beneath it.

"I shall have no use for it," said the general, sweeping it into his waste-basket.

Waldemar Waldron lifted his hat, and with a mocking smile on his fair, handsome face, turned on his heel and quitted the house.

He glanced eagerly up at Reine's window as he passed out of the grounds, but he did not see Reine.

She was pacing restlessly up and down in her room, and had not heard the hall door open and close with a bang on the retreating form of her chagrined, vanquished lover.

He had gone some time ere she noticed that the hum of voices had ceased in the library. She listened intently for more than half an hour. All was still as death below.

She could bear the suspense no longer; and, blushing and hesitating with girlish confusion and expectancy, she glided down to the corridor below and timidly entered the library.

The general sat there alone before his desk, his gray head bent heavily on his hands.

His daughter stole timidly up to him.

"Papa," she cried out, nervously, "where is my lover? What have you done with him?"

Ah, how should he answer her?

CHAPTER VI.

General Hastings raised his head slowly and looked with emotion too great for words at the beautiful young daughter who knelt at his feet. He had faced the foe on the battle-field, boldly charging forward, with shot and shell falling like hail around him, and he had felt no fear; but his heart failed him at the ordeal he must pass through now. He nerved himself for it, however.

"Where is he, papa?" repeated Reine. "My lover was here to ask you to give me to him. Tell me what answer you made him?"

Her intense, pitiful eagerness overcame the coy, girlish bashfulness that was her usual wont, as she looked up into his face.

The general's answer must be spoken sooner or later. He took the little, white, trembling hands in his own strong ones.

"I sent him away, Reine," he answered, steadily. "He will never come back again—never. You must learn to forget him, my child. Would to God that you knew that man as he is: a profligate and a villain. It was your wealth he wanted, Reine, not yourself. And I have told him that which will cause him to look elsewhere for a wealthy bride. He will cross your path nevermore. You must learn to forget him."

Reine Hastings rose slowly to her feet, facing her father with a white, awful face. He could scarcely recognize in the passionate, angry girl that stood before him his loving, tender Reine, the child of his heart, the daughter of his old age.

"You have sent him away—parted two hearts that Heaven intended for each other: I could sooner die than give him up! Oh, papa! papa! let him come back to me!"

The words ended in a wail of anguish that wrung the old man's heart to the very core.

"It can never be, my Reine," said her father, tenderly. "I know best, dear. The time will come when you will thank me for saving you from your own folly. You are infatuated with the villain. This is not love, such as will come to you when you are older and wiser."

"Is it not real love when I would die for him?—when I would welcome death rather than live through the weary days without him? It is not your wealth he wants; you misjudge him cruelly. Recall him and give me to him, and you will see that we can get along without help from you. Oh, papa! you must!"

"Would you give me up for this man if you knew that I should cast you off forevermore from my heart and home for making such a choice?" he asked, huskily.

His lovely young daughter crept up to him and knelt down at his feet.

"My mother gave up everything for you," she said.

A sudden idea came to the general. "We will compromise matters," he said, slowly. "If your lover is really in earnest in his wooing he will come to me again to urge his suit: he will not be satisfied with 'No' for an answer, and when he comes I may reconsider my decision."

It was pitiful to see the joy that broke over Reine's face, and to see how she threw her white arms around his neck and thanked him with smiles and tears. She would send a note to Waldemar that very night, and on the morrow he would be sure to call on her father again; then all would be well. In a moment she was his own imperious, wilful Reine again, smiling and blushing by turns.

"I am sorry for what occurred in the library last night," she whispered, softly; "but, oh, papa! I thought it was Waldemar whom you meant all along. I never dreamed that Mr. Chesleigh cared for me; he is so old and grave, you know. You must tell him just how matters are."

"Heaven help poor Chesleigh! He loves you with a true and noble love, Reine. Some day you may be better able to judge between solid gold and glittering tinsel."

She kissed him, and ran lightly up to her own room, and sitting down to her writing-desk, penned a hasty note to her lover, telling him of her interview with her father, and of the promise he had made at the close of it.

This she hurriedly sealed, and throwing a lace scarf over her golden curls, took it herself to the old oak tree, where Waldemar would be sure to come in search of a line from her, or with a heart-broken note, telling her all that had passed between the general and himself.

How the sun shone on the ivy-covered walls and on the bright-hued flowers as she sped along! No one saw her as she approached the old trysting-place.

She was about to place her letter in the usual receptacle when she observed with joy that a letter was already there for her, from Waldemar.

She drew it forth with trembling hands and hurriedly broke the seal. There were but a few brief lines, and read as follows:

"My Dear Reine,—All is over between us, it seems, as you are probably aware by this time from the old gent. I came and saw; but, instead of conquering—was vanquished. I am off in a deuce of a hurry, having barely time to scribble these few lines to you. Keep your heart warm toward me. More anon.

"Yours in the greatest of haste,

"WALDEMAR WALDRON."

Slowly the girl read it through—once—twice—the letters fairly burning themselves upon her dazed brain; then it slipped from her nerveless fingers and fluttered down unheeded among the blue harebells at her feet.

Gone! and without as much as a word for her! Gone! Left her in darkness and in gloom, to die of a broken heart. Was it true? Had he gone away? Had he taken her father at his word and left her forever?

"Waldemar!" she whispered.

The very winds among the trees seemed to mock her, and murmur in their fitful rustling that he had gone.

She leaned back heavily against the old oak tree for an hour or more. She did not cry out, or utter any moan, but stood there like a marble statue. She could almost feel the beating heart in her bosom slowly parting in twain.

It was a wonder that the careless tone of the note did not jar upon her keen sensibilities; but it did not.

At that very moment, in the library, General Hastings was recounting all that had transpired to Bernard Chesleigh. It was like a death warrant to the young man, but he bore the terrible shock bravely.

Reine, whom he had worshipped so blindly, loved another, and that other, Waldemar Waldron. It was a severe blow to him. Had it been a noble and honorable man to whom Reine had given the love of her tender young heart he could have borne it better.

"Tell her, General, to forgive my presumption that she could ever love one as old and grave as myself. A sedate man of twenty-nine must seem a very patriarch to a gay, fun-loving girl of sixteen. She shall never be grieved by hearing more of this subject from me."

He turned and walked slowly out into the grounds that skirted the villa, attempting to find momentary solace in his companionable cigar.

The general looked after him thoughtfully.

"He is one of nature's true noblemen," he sighed. "Would to Heaven that Reine had given her heart into the keeping of such a man."

Then a hopeful smile crept about his bearded lips.

When Reine had learned to forget Waldron, and had time to realize her folly, she might look more kindly upon Bernard Chesleigh, and, appreciating him, learn to care for him. That was the future the fond old father mapped out for her.

In turning a bend in the path Bernard Chesleigh had come face to face with Reine. He started back in confusion. The girl scarcely stirred. The dead whiteness of her face startled and alarmed him. She hardly appeared to note his presence.

"Reine," he said, kindly, advancing toward her, "your father told me all. Forget the words I have spoken; look upon me hereafter as a kind and loving brother, one who would lay down his life for you, asking no reward but that you may ever be happy."

He stopped abruptly, for at that moment his eyes fell upon the slip of paper that lay at her feet, and, before he was scarcely aware of what he was doing, his glance had traversed quickly over those few lines. Then he held the key to the girl's death-white face, and the great purple shadows that lay in her eyes that gazed past him into vacancy. She knew that her lover had gone, and her heart was breaking.

How his heart bled for her—beautiful, gay little Reine, whose life he would have made so happy; every heart pang that she endured hurt him cruelly, too.

He put away his own great sorrow and sought in vain to comfort her.

"It is warm for you here, Reine," he said. "Come with me into the house."

He drew her hand within his arm and led her unresistingly down the sunlit path. A party of young people enjoying a canter through the glade had come to call for Reine to accompany them. She saw them dismounting at the entrance gate.

She clung to Bernard with hot, trembling hands.

"Send them away!" she cried, piteously. "I cannot see them! I could not hear their laughter and jests! I could not endure it."

He led her round by a new path, and they entered the house unobserved.

Reine crept up to her own room, and threw herself, face downward, on the white couch; and her wild sobbing reached the general as he sat in the library below.

His heart ached for her, but he comforted himself with the thought, the fiercer the storm of grief raged the quicker it would wear itself out.

Bernard Chesleigh would have left Fairlawn Villa that day, but the general urged him so earnestly to stay that he allowed himself to be persuaded, especially when by remaining he was near Reine.

Day after day Reine hurried to the old trysting-place watching eagerly for a letter from Waldemar Waldron, but she never found one there. He seemed to have passed out of her life completely, and day after day, as she crept weeping back to the house, she drooped and faded, falling into a dull apathy of despair.

The summer sunshine was a mockery to her; the singing birds were cruel; the flowers had lost their beauty for her.

In vain Reine's wondering companions sought to rouse and cheer her, asking themselves what had come over beautiful, wilful Reine Hastings, who had always been the merriest girl among them.

Bernard Chesleigh was more than kind to her. His devotion would have touched any other heart save Reine's. The old general trembled in keenest alarm as he watched her from day to day, and the words Waldemar Waldron uttered came back to him:

"Many a father has recalled a lover to save his daughter's life." Would the prophecy prove true?

CHAPTER VII.

A deep gloom had fallen over Fairlawn Villa. The old corridors and spacious rooms no longer rang with gay songs in a merry young voice that gladdened the hearts of those who heard it.

Reine went about quietly enough now. She never complained, but the gaze of the reproachful eyes that met the general's hurt him more than any words could have done.

Once he attempted to talk with her upon the subject, but she turned from him with piteous entreaty.

"Remember it was you who parted us, papa," she sobbed. "Do not refer to it."

Day by day, as he watched her, he could not help but note how she drooped; he could not help but see that she was suffering a living death. Matters could not go on in this way much longer.

Must he, to save Reine's life, give her to a man who would make that life a curse to her?

The general proposed a trip to Europe, or a season at Long Branch. The gayety was at its height there, and it might arouse her. She shook her golden head, refusing to leave Fairlawn.

They were at a loss to know what to do with her. She never complained. The name of the lover from whom she had been parted never once crossed her lips. She was only a spoiled, wilful child; her life seemed to have passed into her love, and, now that love was taken from her, her life went with it.

The hope from day to day that Waldemar Waldron would come back to her settled into dull despair.

The summer days came and went; the flowers died under the chill breath of autumn; the song birds had long since sought their sunny southern home among the orange groves. Six months had passed and at the end of that time an event happened which changed the whole current of Reine's life. The general had been stricken with a malady which threatened to prove fatal. Reine rarely left his bedside. She was the most faithful of nurses.

Bernard Chesleigh, too, was in constant attendance upon the sufferer.

It was at her father's bedside that Reine first noticed how attached the general was to him.

"I am afraid that it will be all over with me soon, Reine," he said, slowly; "but the thought of death is not so hard for me to bear as the knowledge that you will be left all alone in the world; that is the bitterest drop in my cup of sorrow.

"Do not weep so, my Reine," he went on, weakly. "We must all bow sooner or later to the inevitable.

"Ah, Reine, my child," he continued, thoughtfully, "how great a joy and comfort it would have been to me had it pleased Heaven that you could have loved Bernard Chesleigh. As you did not, I never attempted to urge it upon you; but, oh, my Reine, if the thought had been mine that you would be forever shielded from the world's pitiless storms—by his strong arms—I could have died content. He has loved you so long and so well. Ah, Reine, he loves you so fondly yet."

The slender figure, kneeling beside the general's couch, shook with emotion. The little hands that clasped his feverish one, trembled.

"Reine," he said, slowly, "if in the future Bernard Chesleigh should ask the same question of you that he asked once before, do you think you could answer him differently?"

Only Heaven knew the bitter struggle that lasted for one brief moment in the girl's heart. After all, what did it matter what became of her life; love was over for her forevermore. If Bernard Chesleigh loved her still, and it would please her father, why hold out against them longer?

"Would you really wish me to give him a different answer, papa?" she asked, faintly, great tears starting to her blue eyes, and falling unheeded.

He answered "Yes" so fervently that it startled her.

"Then it may as well be as you wish, papa," she said, wearily.

She was standing listlessly by the lace-draped window half an hour later, in the dusky glow of the twilight, when hurried footsteps startled her. They were Bernard Chesleigh's.

He crossed over to where she stood, his grave, handsome face radiant with emotion.

"The general has told me, my little Reine," he said, huskily, "and I can scarcely credit it. I must hear it from your own lips. This great happiness he promises me seems too bright to be real. Is it true, Reine, my little darling, that you will indeed be my wife?"

"I will be your wife if you want me, Mr. Chesleigh," she said simply.

"Want you, Reine!" he repeated. "I want you with all my heart. Words fail me in expressing how much I want you. My great happiness overpowers me, I cannot utter all that is in my heart. I will make you a true and loving husband, Reine. Your will shall be my law. I will surround you with everything love can suggest or money procure. I will devote my life to you. You shall never regret the choice you have made."

He attempted to draw her toward him, but she shrank from his embrace, and he was too true a gentleman to repeat the caress when he saw that it was distasteful to her.

She had promised to be his wife, and he must be content with that for the present. He would do his best to win her love in the golden future. He was grateful that Heaven had rewarded his great patience and devotion by giving him Reine at last.

The news of Reine's engagement to Bernard Chesleigh was received with great satisfaction by all who knew them.

He Got the License He Was Fishing For

A GOOD natured German located in a certain Pennsylvania town a few years ago and apparently had no definite business. Every morning regularly he would go to the creek that ran through the town and fish for black bass. The first mess that he caught was given to the minister of the village church.

Some one, seeing the German on the bank, said to him, "What are you doing?"

"Oh," he remarked, "I'm fishing for a license."

The following day six fine trout were delivered at the home of the schoolteacher. The day after that the leading banker received a fine supply of fish, and so it went for nearly a year. He caught fish every day and as regularly turned them over to the leading citizens.

When the spring term of court came around he put in an application for a liquor license. Under the rules of that court it was necessary for twenty citizens to sign a protest to kill an application for a license. The protest was taken around, but to the amazement of the messenger he could get no signers. The clergyman was much opposed to the proposed license, but could not find it in his heart to attach his name to the paper. When the court announced its decision the German received a license, and he blandly remarked:

"I've been fishing for a license. I got it."—New York Tribune.

Domestic Scholarship.

Little Nell was struggling with the alphabet. Now it happened that the cook, whose Christian name was Emma, was called M, for short, and that M had a daughter Sue, who was her facsimile save in point of size.

So when in the journey down the line the letter M was reached and Nell's memory failed her, mother prompted her by asking:

"What is cook's name?"

"M.," came the answer.

"Well, this letter is M. Now look at the next one. See, it is very much like M, only smaller. Can't you tell me what it is?"

"Sue," promptly and confidently responded Nell.—Lippincott's Magazine.

A Sharp Answer.

"Gaggers' jokes always bore me."
"Funny! They never have a point."

Two Kinds of Dairying.

John Smith and Tom Jones are both in dairying somewhat. They don't both dairy alike, although both seem to be doing quite well. Smith keeps cows expressly for milk. He sells his calves at $4 to $6 per head, pours his separated milk to his hogs and churns his cream into butter, which he ships to some eastern market.

Jones doesn't sell his calves but buys Smith's calves. He doesn't feed his separated milk to the hogs; he feeds it to the calves, including what he bought of Smith and others till he averages about two calves per cow. He supplements it with oats, oil meal, corn meal, etc., and the fall after they are yearlings they weigh 700 to 800 pounds, while he is churning and selling his butter much after the manner of Smith. Some may say this is a dream, but Jones actually does it here in Iowa, on land worth $35 an acre.

I still think that for most country dairymen the dual purpose cow pays. Even, if she shouldn't much more than pay her keep in butter, the calves at an average of $6 or more per cow with about $16 off for feed, will figure the balance on the right side. But a little pains will get a herd of cows that will bring both milk and calves in paying veins. Smith says it doesn't pay to raise cows. He can buy good, young grade cows with calf at side for $30 to $60. What if one happens to prove a poor milker? He turns her dry and converts her into another cow.—Correspondent American Agriculturist.

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

Simplicity Is to Be the Keynote of Winter Fashions.

Just now is a busy time of the year for the mother of a young family, and the commencement of the cold season nearly always finds her unprepared to meet the demand for new gowns and coats. It is the child of ten or eleven who has an uncomfortable habit of outgrowing in a few months everything it possesses. Boys and girls are much alike in this respect, but as the boy's outfit is generally bought at a shop the girls are the hardest to provide with the necessary wardrobe.

Simplicity is the keynote of the small girl's gowns, and as children always look best and feel best in plain clothes mothers will be thankful for the present modes which approve of them.

Blue serge is a serviceable material from which to construct the small girl's everyday coat and skirt. Made up with a short box coat, with triple shoulder capes stitched or trimmed with black braid, the effect is always good. Any one of the charming designs shown in wash flannel will make a dainty accompanying blouse worn with a linen collar, black silk tie and leather belt.

A neat Breton sailor trimmed with a scarf and quill or a tricorne adorned with ribbon rosettes is a very suitable hat.

Plaids make up into wonderfully attractive and stylish gowns for a girl over eight, and the dress illustrated is of Scotch tartan in dull tones of greens and blues plaided with a line of red. The skirt is cut on the bias and laid in rather deep plaits at the waist, commencing with a box plait in the center of the front. The waist is plaited from the shoulder and blouses slightly over a belt of green velvet fastened with a dull gold buckle. The vest is of white cloth ornamented with tiny gold bullet buttons. The chemisette is of the cloth and has a Dutch neck effect.

SMALL THINGS OF FASHION.

A Few of the New Ideas In Fringes and Galloons.

Galloons and fringes are enjoying extended vogue, and the former are worked in several shades of a color with fine silver or gold thread cleverly concealed. Solid gold or silver strips of narrow braid produce the smart military effect which is so popular this season.

At the shops are to be found bands of matched embroideries running from one to six inches in width. These are often done by hand and show charming examples of artistic needlework. Flower foliage and small fruit are exactly reproduced. Gooseberries and maidenhair fern, with their delicate green shadings, are used on white or pink to trim dark gowns, while the richer tones are shown in cherries or currants embroidered on ecru or blue.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS CURED ROBT. BOND OF BRIGHT'S DISEASE.

His Doctor who said there was no Hope for Him, now Pronounces Him Well —He Tells his own story.

Mt. Brydges, Ont., Mar. 6.—(Special).—Among the many people in this neighborhood who tell of the great work Dodd's Kidney Pills are doing, none is more emphatic than that old and respected citizen, Mr. Robt. Bond.

"I believe I owe my life to Dodd's Kidney Pills," Mr. Bond says. "My attending physician said I was in the last stages of Bright's Disease and that there was no hope for me. Then I commenced to take Dodd's Kidney Pills and used in all twenty boxes. Now I eat well, sleep well, and my doctor says I am well. Dodd's Kidney Pills and nothing else cured me. Do you wonder I am always ready to say a good word for Dodd's Kidney Pills?"

What will cure Bright's Disease will easily cure any other form of Kidney Disease. Dodd's Kidney Pills will always cure Bright's Disease. They are the only remedy that will cure Bright's Disease. Be sure you get Dodd's.

Practical and beautiful are words that apply to the dainty vest pocket map of Manitoba, published at Winnipeg by the Stovel Company. It is the first map to be produced in Canada by what is known as the "cerotype" process, a method of engraving in a way that produces the clearest cut outlines and legible and beautiful lettering. This map is printed in eight colors, has a handy alphabetical index of every post office and railway station in Manitoba, and sells at fifteen cents.

A new idea in fringe has the straight top band of heavy metal galloon, with silk fringe and an occasional brilliant thread to match the top. Others have bands of lace at the top and small medallions falling over the fringe at intervals.

The smart shirt blouse illustrated is of pale yellow faille adorned with stitched plaits and set on shoulder pieces. Box plaits border the front. Stitched straps are also on the waistcoat. The buttons are of steel. The crossed strap about the neck and the narrow turned back cuffs are edged with lilac velvet. The collar piece is of white lace. JUDIC CHOLLET.

IN CASE OF FIRE.

Rules Which Every Member of the Family Should Memorize.

In most well ordered households there hangs in a convenient position a card containing instructions as to what to do in case of accidents, hints as to first aid and many other useful matters of service in daily emergencies.

This is a set of rules issued for public use with a view of preventing the occurrence of fire.

The first rule given is, "On the appearance of flame shut doors and windows," which, it is safe to say, is about the last thing an uninstructed householder would do. Secondly, we are told to pull down surrounding inflammable material, and, thirdly, to use only a limited supply of water very carefully close to the base of the flame.

In these days, when electric light is frequently used in private houses, it is well to know that should the wires fuse and emit flame the emergency may best be dealt with by covering the outbreak with earth or sand.

In order to escape from fire the first rule to be observed is to put on one's boots. Then, if there is much smoke, a wetted silk handkerchief should be tied tightly over the mouth and eyes. In order to pass through the flame the contents of a water jug should be poured on the bed and the upper part of the body covered with one of the wetted blankets. Further, we are informed that breathing is frequently possible on the hands and knees when to stand upright would mean suffocation.—London Express.

LAUNDRY LINES.

Table salt in the starch will help in the ironing.

Put a teaspoonful of powdered borax in cold starch. It gives extra stiffness to the linen.

Handkerchiefs may be given a pleasingly delicate scent of violets by boiling them in water to which a little piece of orris root has been added.

To remove stains from the table linen use borax when washing. Do not boil, but bleach in the sun, wetting the spots occasionally with a weak solution of borax.

A small piece of asbestus cloth is an invaluable addition to one's ironing outfit. Place it under the strip of paper on which you test and rub the irons. Sometimes a hot iron will burn through a wad of paper to the white sheet beneath, leaving an unsightly scorch.

E. J. McMILLAN

Editor and Proprietor of the Treherne Times.

One of the peculiarities of Western Canadian journalism is the fact that towns—as they are by courtesy called in a country as yet sparsely populated, though elsewhere they would be deemed pretentious if they ranked themselves as villages—with but a hundred or two people, publish good newspapers. To one whose knowledge of newspaper work is derived from acquaintance with British or even Eastern cities, no fact is more notable or remarkable than this. In those older communities a dense population is a sine quo non for any publishing enterprise. A man would be considered ill-advised and rash indeed who undertook to establish a paper in any place the population of which could be represented by less than four figures. To start a paper in a little village of two or three hundred was to merely invite contingent and certain financial disaster, and to jeopardise any reputation for business sagacity the promoter might heretofore have possessed, but to forfeit all sympathy when the inevitable failure came, since, among all who had any pretensions to knowledge, the failure would be the certain reward of business folly in starting a venture in which success was impossible. But Western Canada is proverbially a country where all signs fail. It is not safe to predicate with certainty that because a thing has failed everywhere else it will therefore of necessity fail in the West. Indeed, it would sometimes seem that the exact converse is the case. From methods of farming to methods of fishing the West is a law unto itself, and what is true in many other lines of activity is equally true in the newspaper business. The Canadian West can point to many examples of successful and flourishing newspapers, which give good livings to their publishers, which wield considerable influence, and that not alone in their immediate locality, which are conducted with marked ability, and which are published in prosperous little towns and villages of less than three hundred population. And, of this numerous class of country papers, few are more representative and successful than the Treherne Times, and few better known than its founder, publisher, editor and proprietor, Mr. Ernest J. McMillan.

Mr. McMillan comes of a well-known family. Every knight o' the besom an' stane in the Dominion knows, by repute at least, his father, William McMillan. Under his pen-name of "Hayseed" his curling songs have been quoted and sung wherever the cry of "scoop 'er up!" is sounded, whether on the indoor rinks of Canada or the ice-covered loch of the Land o' Cakes. And his sketches and comments on current events, tinged with shrewd sense, panky humor and homely philosophy, are remembered yet by many Westerners, who regret that for some few years they have been discontinued. While Mr. McMillan's father is a well known and outstanding figure, his brothers are almost equally so, though in different phases of activity. A sketch of his brother Adam has already appeared in this series. He was then the editor and proprietor of the Virden Advance, and before going into journalism had had a distinguished professional and military career, he and his brother serving with such distinction through the South African war as to be rewarded with commissions.

The editor of the Treherne Times has had no such record. It is not given to every member of a family to be famous, and perhaps the fact that his father and his elder brothers were to a certain extent "under the limelight" militated somewhat against Ernest, if, indeed he had any ambitions in that direction. Some one has said that those lives are happiest in which there is the least to record. Judged by this standard, Mr. McMillan's has been a fortunate career. All the landmarks of his past have been connected with business changes and developments. All, that is, except one—his marriage, which took place early last November, the fortunate lady being Miss Annie O. Buchbach, also of Treherne. But, apart from this epoch-marking event, Mr. McMillan has pursued the even tenor of his way, moving hither and thither, gaining experience, until, when but twenty years of age, he blossomed out as a proprietor of his own paper.

He was born at Cedar Grove, near Markham, Ont., in September, '78, and when at the age of four was brought to the West, his parents settling at Melbourne, on the main line of the C. P. R. Melbourne at that time had ambitions. It hoped to be, if not as big as Winnipeg, at least the rival of Portage la Prairie. Its dreams of civic greatness never came within measurable distance of fulfilment. It never passed the way-station phase of development. Today it has an elevator or two, a post office, and a watertank, and it is doubtful if ever it will have more. But in the early eighties Melbourne, as said before, had ambitions. It was the nucleus of the present town of Carberry. The town moved on, after a brief and strenuous nativity, some miles west, and called itself De Winton. After another period of strenuosity De Winton did as Melbourne—it died. The citizens moved on and founded Carberry, and, overshadowed by its prosperous successor, Melbourne has ever since been an example of arrested development.

The McMillans moved with the town, and, naturally, in due time became citizens of Carberry. Here the future editor attended school, and, school days over, started "devilling" in the office of the Carberry News. Mr. W. G. Rogers was at that time the editor, and gave the youngster much of kindly advice and encouragement. All accounts agree that Mr. McMillan was wonderfully adept at the craft of printing. No further testimony as to this is needed but the fact that at the age of fifteen he was made foreman of the News. After a year of this responsibility he left for Winnipeg. He worked on the old "Saturday Night," then published by McIntyre Bros., and from there went to the news room of the Free Press. In 1896 he went to Neepawa for a summer, and then came back to Carberry, working for a while on the Carberry Express. In a little while he went back to the Carberry News, the paper he had joined after leaving school. It was then owned by Mr. J. Ridlington, and was regarded as one of the foremost weeklies of Manitoba. Under Mr. McMillan's superintendence the News became, typographically, one of the best papers published in the West. It was while he was foreman on the News that Mr. McMillan began to qualify for editorial work, at which he proved as adept as he had in the mechanical departments of the newspaper business.

In September, 1899, he determined to start for himself, and he selected Treherne as the centre of his field of operations. He was then but 20 years of age. These were the days of small things. But the business had in it possibilities, and these the boy editor saw. The business grew. Increases to the plant drove Mr. McMillan to a bigger and better building. The Times is now housed in its own 2½-story home; 20x37, the office being below and the residence above. It has a good range of body and display type, large power presses (with engine to drive them), and a live circulation of over 800. Moreover, it is a power in the land. It discusses things from a local point of view, takes keen interest in municipal topics, and never lets slip an item of news. The Times is a live paper, Mr. McMillan is no "scissors and paste pot" editor, but one who realises that his opportunities and responsibilities, and does his honest best to live up to them.

Mechanically, he is master of his craft. He has the genuine instinct as to what constitutes news, and five years of training has developed his inherited gifts for expressing his thoughts tersely and vigorously. He is as yet young, and has proved his ability to achieve success on the business side of newspaper work. It seems unreasonable, therefore, to expect that Mr. McMillan will long continue to personally conduct the Treherne Times. The probabilities are that that bright little paper will be at some future time disposed of, and that its founder will move into a larger field, there to duplicate the success he has already made.

PSYCHINE (PRONOUNCED SI-KEEN)

"PSYCHINE IS A WONDERFUL TONIC," —Says Mr. Pratt.

Mr. George Pratt, a farmer, Clarkson, Ont. writes:

"PSYCHINE is indeed a wonderful tonic. Two years ago my son Wilbert was run down, thin and emaciated. We thought he was going into decline, and we feared for his safety during the winter months. Often I thought he'd never see twenty-one. He suffered much with Coughs and Colds and Pains in the Lungs. Fortunately I procured PSYCHINE for him, and with the usual good results. To-day my son works hard with us on the farm, and if anything is more able for it than any of us.

FANNY CROSBY.

There still lives in Bridgeport, Connecticut, at a ripe age, a lady who has brought joy into hundreds of homes throughout the English-speaking world. All classes of people sing Miss Crosby's secular and sacred songs. The children in the public schools use "There's Music in the Air"; their parents know and love "Hazel Dell," "Rosalie, the Prairie Flower," and others, which were immensely popular twenty-five years ago. But Fanny Crosby is best known by her hymns, such as "Rescue the Perishing," "I am Thine, O Lord," "Nearer the Cross," "Pass Me Not, O Gentle Savior," "Blessed Assurance" and "Some Day the Silver Cord will Break." The first of her hymns was written in 1864, and since that date she has composed over eight thousand, under various nomsde-plume.

The gifted singer has been blind since she was six years old, but through marvellous difficulties has overcome great obstacles. For twenty-three years she was a pupil and teacher in the New York Institution for the Blind. There she met and knew Henry Clay, General Scott, James K. Polk, Governor Seward, and ex-President Cleveland, who has been her firm friend for fifty years. Miss Crosby has known many of the greatest musical and literary men and women, including all the famous composers of sacred music. Recently she has written up the entire story of her life into an autobiography, which promised to be widely read when it is published.

Miss Crosby has a wonderful memory. She composes an entire hymn before having any of it written down on paper. Once she wrote forty songs before having any of them recorded; and at the end she could recall every one of them.

On March 26 the churches of America propose to build Miss Crosby a monument of gratitude, which will be more enduring than any marble shaft. They propose to honor her life-work while she still lives; and is able to appreciate the kind thought of those who sing and love her songs. Hundreds of churches are preparing special programs of song to use for that purpose; and a unique feature of the plan is a large gift of honor as a testimonial to Miss Crosby's public service. They thus hope to recognize in a fitting manner her eighty-fifth birthday.

HEALTHY LUNGS

Depend upon Rich, Red Blood—Poor Blood Means Weak Lungs and Fatal Consumption.

Every drop of blood in the body must go through the lungs. That is why the lungs are helped and healed, and strengthened with the great blood-builder, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They fill the veins with pure, rich red blood that gives health and vigor to weak lungs. That is the way Dr. Williams' Pink Pills brace the lungs to throw off bronchitis and heavy colds. That is the way Dr. Williams' Pink Pills build up the lungs after an attack of la grippe or pneumonia. That is the way Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have saved hundreds in Canada from consumptives' graves. No other medicine does this work so speedily and so well. Mrs. Jane A. Kennedy, Douglastown, Que., says:—"My sister, a young and delicate girl, took a severe cold when about seventeen years old. Nothing we did for her seemed to do any good, and we feared she was going into consumption. Often after a bad night I would get up early to see if she had spit blood during the night. A friend strongly urged me to give her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and within a month from the time she had begun their use, she had almost recovered her health. Under the continued use of the Pills she is now well and strong.'

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills not only make weak lungs strong, but they cure all troubles arising from a poor or deficient blood supply, such as anaemia, indigestion, rheumatism, neuralgia, general weakness, St. Vitus dance, headaches and backaches, kidney troubles, palpitation of the heart, and the special secret ailments of young girls and women. WHY THE JAPS DO NOT TAKE MUKDEN.

Many newspapers throughout the world, since the fall of Port Arthur, have criticised the Japanese for having used up so much energy in capturing that stronghold contending that it would have been more advantageous, from a military standpoint, to have taken Mukden, the capital of Manchuria, and the centre of the theatre of the war. There is no doubt that the capture of Mukden would have been greater as a victory than the taking of Port Arthur, but the Japanese reason for not doing so is somewhat peculiar, if not startling. Mukden is a sacred city, in the eyes of the Chinese, and if in the whirlwind of the war, it should be despoiled the curse and possibly the vengeance of the Chinese would be upon the nation responsible for it. Mukden is identified with all that is great and glorious in the records of the Manchuria emperors, and within its precincts rest the bodies of the Manchu fathers. It is well known that their dynasty is the oldest in the world. The Manchurians have become so intermingled with the Chinese that the veneration of the city is a matter of considerable moment. In such sacred regard has the city been held that the Siberian railroad, which enters so many of the other important cities in Manchuria, makes a wide detour as it aproaches Mukden. The Chinese railway from Shan-hai-Kwan, instead of being continued to Mukden, has as its terminus Sing-min-Tung, a small town about thirty miles west of the capital. The city stands in the middle of an alluvial plain, and the soil for miles around is rich and highly cultivated.—Success Magazine.

CHEWED THEIR WAY THROUGH BARBED WIRE.

We were to perform a famous feat in crawling on all fours for many meters. Our ambition was not exactly to attract attention of the Russians and receive their applause from their quick-firers. All sorts of fireworks seemed to help the work of their searchlights. We made slow progress, always on fours. We reached the second netting of barbed wire, and this we hacked away without very much trouble. In front of us was the final fence. We had had a happy run of luck so far. We did not wish to spoil it by a touch of carelessness or too much daring. Cautiously, therefore, we went on our stomachs to make the distance between the second and the first barbed-wire entanglements. All this distance was a surprise to us; it was covered with many things evincive of the skill and thoughtfulness of the Russian engineers. It was about one hundred meters in length. The ground was sloping. It was filled with pitfalls and mines innumerable. For a second these mines made us forget the first line of wire fence toward which we were making our way. First of all, we had to dispose of the mines. We had reason to suspect that they were electric mines, and, in fact, the Russian engineers, with all their thoughtfulness, did not always take the trouble to burry the conductors. We discovered and cut as many as four conductors, which were just about the size of my thumb. They were wrapped in a rubber coating, and within the rubber coating we found over twenty-four small wires. I carried no scissors about me. These electric wires were a neat surprise to us. The severe usage to which it had been put had dulled the edge of my axe almost as blunt as the edge of my palm. It cound not cut the rubber-wrapped wires on soft earth. Time was pressing. We were in danger of being discovered before we could get at the first line of barbed-wire fence, which was the last goal of our efforts; moreover, we were somewhat impatient. So all of us fell upon those electric wires, and with our teeth we bit them off. I fear we may have been somewhat excited. We did some damage to our teeth by this work. When a man tells you that he did not know when his teeth were being broken, you would not believe him. That man might be telling the truth, under some circumstances, however.'

He laughed a laugh innocent and childlike, and in the laughter you could see more than two broken teeth in his mouth. Nothing else could drive home the conviction quite so powerfully as those broken teeth of his.—Adachi Kinnosuke in Success Magazine.

MOTHER'S ADVICE.

"I would advise mothers to stop dosing their little ones with nauseous castor oil and soothing stuffs, and use only "Baby's Own Tablets." This is the advice of Mrs. Joseph E. Harley, of Worthington, Ont., who has proved the Tablets the best medicine in the world for the troubles that afflict young children. Mrs. Harley adds:—"My little one has had no other medicine but the Tablets since she was two months old, and they have kept her the picture of good health." These Tablets are good for children of every age, and speedily cure all stomach and bowel troubles, break up colds, prevent croup, expel worms and allay the irritation of teething. And you have a solemn guarantee that there is not a particle of opiate or harmful drug in this medicine. The United States Government is quite justified in asking the Russian Government to send back to San Francisco three Russian officers who broke their parole and went home. They were part of the crew of a war vessel which is to lie at San Francisco till after the close of the war. The breach of parole is not merely an insult to the United States Government, but an injury to all prisoners of war, whose lot is frequently ameliorated by being allowed freedom on giving their word of honor not to escape.

A Wide Sphere of Usefulness.—The consumption of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil has grown to great proportions. It is beneficial in all countries, and wherever introduced fresh supplies are constantly asked for.

THE PRINCESS CECILIA

TALENTED YOUNG WOMAN WHO WILL WED CROWN PRINCE WILLIAM.

The Future Empress of the German Fatherland Speaks Four Languages and Is Fond of Horses—The Love Affairs of Her Future Husband and the Anxiety He Has Caused His Imperial Father.

Crown Prince Frederick William of Germany, who is to wed Princess Cecilia Augusta Marie, sister of the reigning Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, has long led the match-making mammas of European royalty a merry dance and has also caused the Kaiser and Kaiserin many wakeful nights. A great many people envy a Crown Prince, and it is true that in a number of respects his lot seems to be a happy one, but his relations with little Dan Cupid are far from satisfactory. The humblest peasant may marry the woman he loves provided he can gain her consent, but a Crown Prince either has a wife selected for him by his royal papa or is limited in his choice to a few princesses who would be merely "also rans" in the first heat of a beauty show. In the case of Frederick William every available princess on the continent and in England had been considered. One positively refused to marry him, several others were not at all to his fancy, and still others were not considered desirable for reasons of State.

A story is told to the effect that one day the Kaiser ordered the Crown Prince to marry Princess Thyra of Denmark. The young man refused.

"It is my will that you shall enter into this contract," said the Emperor.

"Not for the whole German Empire," was the younger man's retort.

"But I command you," persisted the Emperor.

"No bargain can be made to sell me to a woman I do not love," shouted the Prince.

At one time or another Frederick William has been reported in love with fair women who were not of royal blood. One of the divinities was Miss Geraldine Farrar, an American singer; another was Miss Gladys Deacon, formerly of Boston.

The Crown Prince is twenty-two years of age and is four years older than Princess Cecilia. He is a clever, young man, daring and impetuous, a splendid horseman and a crack shot. Not long ago he made such reckless and dangerous jumps with his favorite horse that he was severely reprimanded by the Kaiser for needlessly risking his life. He is amiable and modest and is the idol of the army.

The Emperor has thoroughly trained him in statecraft, and he is said to be well posted concerning Governmental affairs.

Princess Cecilia, the future Empress of Germany, is a brown-eyed blonde, tall and slender, with the rosy tint of health in her cheeks. She speaks German, French and English fluently, and is quite proficient in Russian. Like the Crown Prince she is exceedingly fond of horses and rides with ease and grace. Strong dynastic reasons for the marriage exist. Only once during the last century, in the case of Frederick III., has a Prussian King taken a wife except from a German princely house.

The Emperor desires to bring the Cumberland, Danish and Netherlands courts into closer relations with the German court. The Princess Cecilia's brother, the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, married last June the Princess Alexandra, second daughter of the Duke of Cumberland, a sister of the future Queen of Denmark. The Princess Cecilia is also a niece by marriage of the Prince Consort of Holland.

The fortune teller who knows her business tells every woman caller that she would make a great hit on the stage.

VENTILATING A HOUSE.

Don't Be Afraid to Open Wide All the Windows Every Day.

The thought of opening every window in the house, top and bottom, is very shocking, of course. It is intended that it should be. Many people who think that they are really very fond of fresh air need a shock of some kind—a shock that will make them realize what a well aired house really is.

"I always sleep with my window open," they will tell you. Yes, but how wide do they open it? Perhaps only six inches, and that only at the bottom, and only one window, so that there is no circulation through the room at all.

If that is your way of "having lots of fresh air in the house" then you need a shock of some kind—one that is hard enough to jar the windows wide open. Of course it is not possible to keep all the windows open all day and all night all the year round, but it is possible to always have a little circulation across every room in the house at all times. And it is possible to have all the windows wide open during a good part of the day and night.

Do not be content with a house that is not actually ill smelling. Have the air in the house just as fresh as the air out of doors.

This takes constant thought, but the results pay.

Another thing that nervous women need to do is to hire some one to do their reading of foolish novels for them, and their embroidery work or most of it, and in place of these they need to take up the study of food values and the study of common sense ventilation.—Maxwell's Talisman.

HER OWN CORNER.

A Cozy Nook With Her Favorite Books and Belongings.

When a woman cannot have the luxury of an entire room for herself, it is at least fair for her to have a corner of the family sitting room or her own bedroom set apart for her own special use. A cozy nook, with her favorite books within reach, a comfortable lounging chair and perhaps a little table—at any rate, a place for her fancy work or writing materials—all this is very delightful and not altogether impossible for a small outlay of money and brains. Where there is a bow window or a corner turret the rest is easily arranged.

Perhaps the most satisfactory corner may be evolved where the windows meet at right angles, as in the sketch. Here the curtains hang from a valance that follows the angles of the corner, the low shelves are filled with books, while the top of the bookcase is a stand for plants in quaint Dutch or Trentham ware pots. If the shelves are to contain anything but books they might have small curtains to correspond with the other draperies.

Such a corner is indeed conducive to a lazy afternoon or a pleasant hour to be spent among one's favorite authors and flowers.

The draperies of such a corner must, of course, be chosen to accord well with the rest of the apartment.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Only Master Carpentress.

The only woman ever admitted to the Master Carpenters' association is Miss Louise Catherine Hinck of Montclair, N. J. Miss Hinck received her preliminary education at Hanover, Germany, and graduated from Vassar college with high standing, completing her collegiate course at the New York university law school, from which she has received several degrees. Although admitted to the bar as attorney and counselor at law, Miss Hinck prefers conducting a real estate business in Montclair, though her greater interest is in designing and building houses. Some twenty of the most attractive and convenient houses in her home town bear testimony of her great success in this unusual occupation for women and confirm the opinion of the owners that a woman can do such work better than a man. Miss Hinck has several buildings under construction and finds her broad education of immeasurable assistance to her.—Pilgrim.

A Dainty Hand.

A dainty, well groomed hand indicates refinement to all observers and often produces the impression of general beauty. Soft white hands are not so difficult to obtain as is supposed, though beauty of shape is the gift of nature. Gloves which are too small or fasten too tightly are likely to engender redness or a puffy condition. A comfortable size should be selected, so that the blood may circulate freely, and the hands exposed as little as possible to the sun or wind. Great care should be observed in the selection of toilet soaps, and the avoidance of common, ill made creams and lotions cannot be too strongly urged, as these produce a leathery appearance of skin as well as roughness.

Dairy and Creamery

J. R. Danko in an address delivered before the Wisconsin dairymen's convention said:

As to the care of the dairy cow, one of the best general rules to observe is to keep the cow as comfortable and contented as possible. If the cow is not comfortable and contented the owner will always be the loser. If the cows are allowed to stand out in the cold during severe weather a certain amount of food will be required to keep the body warm, which had she been in a warm stable would have been transformed into milk and butter.

In order to succeed as a dairyman a person must be in sympathy with his cattle. He must be a keen observer and thorough with his work even to the smallest detail and have a love for his stock that will cause him to work from early in the morning until late at night if need be in ministering to the wants of his cattle, so that they may be comfortable and contented.

During the winter they should be kept in comfortable stalls in a warm, well ventilated stable and let out for a short time on pleasant days for exercise. If it is necessary to turn them out for water a tank heater should be used to keep the ice from gathering on the trough, and the cows should be put back into the stable as soon as possible when the weather is severe or stormy.

Improving the Dairy Herd.

A good cow is a good cow, no matter what her breed may be. Therefore let the farmer choose the dairy breed that he considers best suited to his conditions and stick to it. This is the opinion expressed by W. A. Clemons in Farmers' Advocate. Let him breed his selected cows to the best available bull of that breed and continue to grade up his herd to a higher degree of excellence year by year.

The practice followed by some farmers of using bulls, first of one breed and then of another, is fatal to all plans for building up a uniform, handsome and profitable herd of grade cows, and that is just what most farmers require. It was breeding with a purpose in view that enabled the late E. D. Tillson of Ontario to build up a working herd of dairy cows that was probably unequaled in Canada. One of his grade cows produced 20,132 pounds of milk in a year, five others gave from 13,000 to 16,582 pounds, and the whole herd of sixty-five cows made a yearly average of nearly 10,000 pounds.

EARL KORNDYKE DE KOL.

2,050 pounds. He is perfectly kind and gentle and bids fair to maintain his vigor for many years. This bull was formerly owned by Cornell university, Ithaca, N. Y., and Professor Wing in a recent letter made the statement that every heifer sired by Earl Korndyke de Kol of milking age had qualified for advanced registry, including a pair of twin heifers. This bull's dam is the famous Belle Korndyke, so well known among Holstein breeders.

Cows Need a Rest.

An Ontario correspondent of Farming writes as follows: I milk my cows nine and a half months of the year. I have had considerable experience along this line. I have heard many a man say that if a cow was well cared for and well fed she could be milked eleven months as well as nine or ten. I wish to say right here I don't believe it. I had two cows that would give 10,000 pounds of milk in nine and a half months. I gave one two and a half months' rest. The other I gave but one month. The next year the cow that got two and a half months' rest gave 3,000 pounds more than the other. I had another cow that had a record of fifty-five pounds of milk per day. She was milked eleven months, and the next year the highest record I could get from her was thirty-five pounds. This convinced me beyond a doubt that a cow needs reasonable rest to get the best results from her.

The Good Milker.

Very few dairymen realize the importance of having good milkers, says American Agriculturist. In fact, in this country it is difficult to find a man who is a good milker and at the same time knows how to treat cows kindly, keep the animals in the best condition and feed them as they should be. When a man of this kind is secured he should be retained.

Men and Cattle.

The cattle on every farm, in every state and over the entire country are just what the ideas of the farmers who bred them have made them. Back of good cattle are good, sound ideas of cattle breeding. Back of the scrub cattle are the loose, no purpose, scrub ideas of the men who are responsible for their breeding.—Holstein-Friesian Register.

There is some talk of lengthening the president's term, when really it should be shortened to about forty minutes to give all of the good boys who start out after the job a chance to land it.

It isn't fair to judge a dog by the company he keeps. He is not responsible for his ownership.

The man who thinks that every youth should sow a few acres of wild oats gets over that notion as soon as he has boys of his own.

WHAT IS WORN.

Picturesque Millinery the Rule. Wide Tucks Fashionable.

The millinery of the moment is without doubt picturesque, and the Romney hat, with its high crown and spreading brim drooping gracefully over the face, is quite the smartest shape of all. In purple chip with blue trimmings or in tobacco brown with roses of a deep orange tint it is very distinguished and uncommon. The daintiest aspect, however, is in white chip trimmed with a twist of white tulle or pale blue. The "soup plate" shape is charming in all tints, wreathed with berries and odd looking leaves, or for outing wear it is simply trimmed with spotted or striped ribbon, while a veil measuring two and a half to three yards is arranged on a drawstring about the hat and the ends brought around in front.

BLUE MUSLIN GOWN.

Tucks are always fashionable, but the wide ones are by far the smartest. They are often cut in the godet style, folded and stitched on separately. Some gowns are entirely trimmed in this fashion.

In the picture we have a pale blue muslin gown. The odd skirt ruffle has three shirred headings. The sleeves are laid in six puffs of the material and lace. The hat is draped with a lace scarf.

DRESSY FROCKS.

Chantilly Gowns Very Popular. Bright Colors Worn.

Evening reception gowns are particularly gorgeous. There is a fancy for the finest black chantilly lace over softest white satin or taffeta. Then, too, the embroideries are really beautiful. A toilet in black and white seen recently was of the lightest chantilly over satin messaline. It was looped up on the hips Dolly Varden style and decorated with great choux of black velvet with pailletted centers. Two more choux were worn, one in the hair, the other on the shoulder. Over the bodice of draped chantilly was a bertha of point d'alencon, and on this were appliqued motifs of the black chantilly.

A good deal of lavender silk, satin and peau de soie are being worn for afternoon occasions, and these shades will be seen in the fall combined with touches of cream white lace.

Strong colors are still worn in the evening, but the craze for the darker blues seems to be fading. Mulberry color is worn a good deal. A very bright shade is chosen, as a rule, and it is relieved with lace.

Evening dresses of painted chiffon, with little medallions, are still in vogue. They are made in fluffy style with a Marie Antoinette bodice. The newest bodices fasten behind.

Nothing is prettier for the young girl than accordion plaited chiffon, and lace and white costumes of this description are all the rage.

The picture shows a dark red tailor made costume having a vest of lighter red. It is trimmed with straps of deep red peau de soie. The hat is of shaded red straw and ribbon.

"Indeed! How?"

"I would advise him," said Senator Borghum, "to avoid asking advice. It gives too many people an idea of what you are intending to do."—Washington Star.

HOUSE FURNISHING.

ARTISTIC AND PRACTICAL POINTS IN THE HEATING ARRANGEMENTS.

The Fire on the Hearth—The Modern Franklin and Other Stoves—Heating With Hot Air, Hot Water and Steam—Decoration of Radiators.

With all of these well defined steps of improvement in house heating it is a curious fact that not one of them has been discarded. The fire on the hearth, supplemented by other heating, is still a popular, important feature in the house. Modern Franklins are on the market. Stoves continue in use in many places, and the hot air furnace is retained in many of our small dwellings.

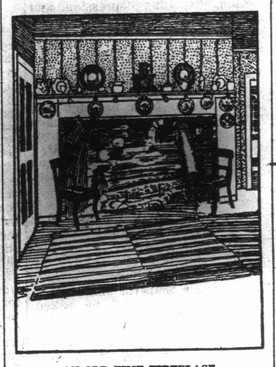
Heating by hot water and steam has been carried to a high plane of excellence by various ingenious mechanical contrivances. For hot water the radiator must necessarily be larger than for steam, and with the latter a room can attain a high temperature more rapidly than when hot water is the medium. In the steam heated room the dry atmosphere may be moistened by keeping fresh water in an open basin on the top of the radiator, and scientific housewives say that adding a little ammonia to the water increases its efficiency.

A way of combining direct and indirect heating is also gaining favor. By this method a radiator with a ventilating box for its base is placed under or in front of a window, and the fresh air from out of doors is warmed before it is distributed in the apartment. The advantage of the system consists in the purity of the air.



Among the improvements in the construction of boilers for steam or hot water heating is the adoption of cast iron in place of steel or wrought iron, thus preventing them from rusting when not in use. For the older style of packing the joints a better way has been substituted in introducing lathe turned joints that prevent leakage.

The radiator of ordinary shape is well known, but the variations made upon the general plan to suit buildings of irregular construction are numberless.

Curved walls, rounding windows, crooked stairways, corners and angles of all types are fitted with radiators to suit their eccentricity of line. In bathrooms or tiny halls where space on the floor must be economized the clever designer of radiators has made some that can be suspended against the wall on brackets.

In the dining room the radiator may be selected not only for making the room comfortable in winter, but for warming dishes for the table. A radiator for the butler's pantry is made of steam or hot water pipes, giving a gentle warmth for food waiting to be served for the meals.

The position of the radiator is a serious problem to the housebuilder, increasing in difficulty when the rooms are contracted in size. The proper time for a consideration of this matter is before the home is really built, when architect and heating engineer can consult for the best advantage of each.

AN OLD TIME FIREPLACE.

The covering of the radiator is no longer limited to gold and silver paint. Oftentimes a delicate color scheme requires a radiator in pure white, or with woodwork and walls somber in tone the radiator looks best in deep colors. Two kinds of metallic paint combined make an artistic covering for a radiator when applied with skill.

Marble slabs in pink, white, brown or gray may be fitted to the top of a radiator to continue its usefulness as a pedestal or table when its heating properties are discontinued.—Delineator.

ner Glove.

A little glove lay on the floor
Beside a chair.
He halted just inside the door
And saw it there.

He picked it up and looked around
With anxious eyes
And kissed the treasure he had found—
He knew her size.

With leaping heart he heard a stir.
The curtain swayed.
He turned to tell his love to her,
The splendid maid.

Her mother, beaming on him there,
Said anxiously:
"I've lost my glove. I wonder where
The thing can be?"

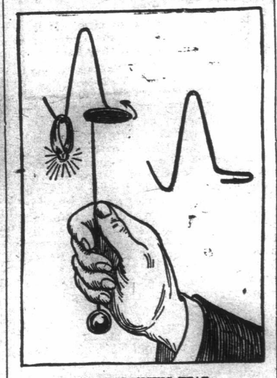
FOR YOUNG FOLKS



BALANCING FEAT.

An Ingenious Trick With a Hairpin, Coin, Ring and Hatpin.

Here is an ingenious balancing trick which is performed with a silver half dollar, a large wire hairpin, a heavy ring and a long hatpin or "stickpin."

Bend the hairpin into the shape shown in the picture. Force the half dollar into the hook on one end of the hairpin, which hook you have pinched well together so that it will grip the coin tightly, and hang the ring on the other more open book. Now balance the coin at a point near its edge and in line with the two books on the point of the hatpin, which you hold vertically in your left hand.

You can nearly always make it balance on some point, but to make the trick more effective the pin should be very near the edge of the coin, so if the ring is not very heavy you may have to borrow another one and slip it in the book beside the first, or you can use a light ring and substitute a quarter for the half dollar.

Now, if you blow against the ring the whole thing will turn on its pivot, and by giving a good puff every time the ring comes round you can make it spin very fast and keep on spinning a long time. If the hatpin is very sharp and of very hard steel it will gradually bore a hole in the coin. Indeed it is possible to bore clear through a soft coin in this way.

THE FEET OF A FLY.

Why This Little Insect Is Able to Walk on the Ceiling.

Few people probably know what it is that enables flies to walk on the ceiling. It has been supposed that their ability to do so was due to the fact that each of their feet is a miniature air pump. This theory was found to be unsound, and it was then explained that it was made possible by means of a viscous substance which exuded from the hairs on their feet. This theory also was abandoned as being only partly accountable for the facts, and the preferred explanation is that flies are enabled to walk upside down on smooth substances by the help of capillary adhesion. An investigator has found by a series of nice calculations, such as the weighing and measuring of hairs, that a fly would be upheld by capillary attraction were it four-ninths as heavy again as it is. Each fly is supposed to be furnished with from 10,000 to 12,000 foot hairs. These exude an oily fluid, and it is because of the repulsion between a watery surface and this oily liquid that a fly finds it difficult to mount a dampened glass.—Harper's Weekly.

Spiders That Form Colonies.

As everybody knows, spiders usually fight to the end if one happens to enter the web of another. Yet there are spiders that live together in peace. In South America one variety of spider forms colonies of several hundred members. These build a joint nest, almost as big as a hat. It hangs from high branches, and a silken strand, sometimes ninety feet long, dangles from its lower end to serve as a ladder for the inmates. In Venezuela there is a spider which joins with hundreds of others in the manufacture of a giant web. Often they weave a web big enough to cover a whole coffee shrub. Inside this web is divided into cells, and the spiders not only agree perfectly, but often help each other kill particularly large insects.

Dynamite Bait For Sharks.

In the British navy the engineers have a curious way of killing sharks. They seal up a dynamite cartridge in an empty can and put the can inside a lump of pork. The pork is thrown overboard on a wire which has been connected with an electric battery. When the shark takes the bait the engineer presses a button which explodes the cartridge and kills the fish.

A Curious Fish.

Many deep sea fish carry searchlights. One species, called the chiasmodon, emits a strong white light; another glows with a rich golden light, like a small incandescent lamp, while yet another carries a lantern on its head that emits bright green rays.

Rarest United States Coin.

The rarest coin of the United States is not, as many suppose, the silver dollar of 1804, but the double eagle of 1849, of which there is only one in existence, and that belongs to the cabinet of the United States mint. It cannot be bought.

FANCIES IN PLUMES.

Feathers Dispose Themselves In a Different Fashion This Season.

The fashion in feathers—that is, in the arrangement of ostrich plumes on smart hats—has undergone a change. Instead of trailing over a chapeau, as they were wont to do, the up to date hat has them bunched high up on the crown.

But there are exceptions to all rules, and the new lyre feather is this exception. It is formed by turning an ostrich plume, as it were, inside out and then putting it under a tight curling process. These lyre feathers are then trained around the crown or placed under the brim.

This year a definite stand is extremely difficult to adopt in costumes, owing to the prevailing diversity of styles. Gowns and wraps have such essentially opposite points of interest. It is well to keep in mind that a complete change of style is contemplated in the skirt, which must be either ample and gracefully clinging or plain to a degree of tailor severity. Still, as a compromise, there are the intermediate modes whose skirts have shapely tucks or triple flounces.

For smart evening wraps there are two new materials, champanz and silk burlap. Both of these fabrics require the addition of eastern embroideries as trimming accessories.

A favorite length for an evening wrap is ten inches from the ground, although the three-quarter length is still very much seen.

The swagger gown illustrated is of a new shade—eglantine, a gray blue, with the blue tint predominating. This costume is carried out in chiffon cloth. The skirt is trimmed with ruffles of the same, put on with slight fullness. The severity of the long coat is dissipated by a natty little vest of tan suede and a braid trimmed bolero and wide revers. The sleeves are cut up in a novel fashion to disclose ruffles of suede.

more artistically constructed than it used to be when it took first rank among the fashionable wraps.

Ostrich feathers will be in great demand this winter, and the large straight brimmed hats carry a perfect forest of these naturally shaded feathers. These hats are worn at a dariing angle.

Panne velvet hats will be very much worn, and this variety of velvet employed upon shapes where shirring and drapery are most effective. The ordinary velvet is more attractive when drawn plain over crowns and brims.

Anything on the strictly tailored sleeve line will be avoided on even wraps or more elaborate coats, the omission being supplied by a cape effect. On visiting costumes, however, the sleeve will be large and loose, designed in three puffs to the elbow or a little beyond.

Quite original is the smart waist shown in the cut, with its "off the shoulder" yoke outlined with folds and a braided design. The fullness falls in gathers from this yoke and is ornamented down the front with a wide band of oriental embroidery.
